State Prison Re-Location Bill Is Passed In House Close Vote Expected On Debenture Plan Relief Bill

Checks On Ballots Favoring Measure Show Small Edge

Rolling Of Bill In Senate May Come Today Or Monday; Leaders Attempting To Halt Bill

ice-President May Be Called Upon To Break Tie In Balloting; Leaders Mustering Votes

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 3.—Senate leaders decided today that success or failure of the effort to locate the export debenture plan in a farm relief bill hinges on the number of senators physically able to be their seats when the vote is taken.

Checks made of the membership indicated that the outcome might be close that one or two votes would decide the proposal, opposed by President Hoover.

Two Are Doubtful.
Administration leaders found 12 Republicans certain to vote for the bill, with two doubtful.

They expect seven Democrats to vote against the plan but this is denied by the export debenture advocates, who also checked their support carefully.

Debtors supporters manifest concern over the fact that two senators whom they believe would vote with them will be unable to be present when the vote is taken.

The two are Shupert and Minnesota, on-farmer-labor member, and Kendrick of Wyoming, Democrat, both of whom are ill.

Not Successful.
Debtors leaders are seeking to gain "pairs" for these men so that their votes will make no difference in the result, but since all senators opposed to the plan are being counted to be in their seats, the effort so far has not been successful.

Roscoe Man Dies; To Change Charge

Amplifier To Face Charge Of Murder For Frost's Death; Larger Bond To Be Requested

(By Associated Press)
SWEETWATER, May 3.—Burton Roscoe, shot last night by L. P. amplifier as Frost was leaving the farmhouse here, died of his wounds today.

Immediately before the shooting, Frost had announced it was unable to reach a verdict in a case in which Roscoe was charged with assaulting amplifier's five year old daughter August 28.

A charge of assault to murder was filed against Wampler before Frost and his bond was set at $2,000. The district attorney said the charge would be changed to murder and a request for larger bond would be made.

Jury Disagreed.
Frost's trial started Monday, and the jury received the case late Wednesday. After deliberating 28 hours, announced disagreement. Frost was leaving the court house by the door when the shooting took place. Wampler surrendered.

The Wampler and Frost families are living next door to each other at Roscoe, near here, when the offense with which Frost was charged is alleged to have taken place.

Santone Baby Is Brutally Killed

SAN ANTONIO, May 3.—(P)—The head crushed and partially "scalped," the body of Katherine Mary Elizabeth Cooper, two year old daughter of Major and Mrs. W. E. Cooper, was found in the yard of the Cooper home today. Detectives, investigating offered no explanation of the child's death tonight.

A driver for a cleaning company noticed the body and Mrs. Cooper ran into the yard to find the baby lying in a pool of blood. Doctors at Fort Sam Houston army hospital, where Major Cooper was on duty, said the child was dead when the mother arrived with it there.

Katherine had been tied to the front porch with a long cord, that she might not wander into the street, Mrs. Cooper said.

Film Writer Admits Being Wife Of Masquerading Woman; Strange Marriage Of Couple Is Revealed

(By Associated Press)
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 3.—Beth Rowland, screen writer here, admitted today that she was the "wife" in the strange case of Peter Stratford, whose death in Oakland yesterday revealed a woman masquerading as a man for many years.

The writer said her first meeting with Stratford occurred several years ago in the Middle West when she was employed as secretary duties. A friendship of two years, she said, was followed by marriage, immediately after which Stratford left her, going to the Pacific coast in ill health. Later she followed and they were reunited at Niles, Cal.

Secret Sex Revealed.
The secret of her "husband's" sex was not revealed to her until a few months ago, the screen writer said, and at that time she left "him" and came here.

From a packet of letters, a marriage certificate and other papers found in a hotel room at Niles today was placed together a strange story of the mis-happen life.

The correspondence revealed the determination of a woman, apparently possessed of all the mental attributes of the opposite sex to become a man. Out of that determination, investigators said, was born "Peter Stratford," a person with a gift for literary criticism and a follower of the cult of Sud, an offshoot of an ancient Oriental religion.

Dereesty Morton Dies.
With the birth of Peter Stratford, the letters showed, died Dereesty Morton, a British subject.

Par-Optic Wizard Ready To Perform Blind Feats For City Throngs Today

Hayward Thompson, world renowned exponent of par-optic vision, is the attraction.

At one-thirty p. m. this famous young man will park in front of the Avalanch-Journal. From that time until two p. m. Hayward Thompson will pass among the crowd assembled, a light-imperious blindfold that will be used to obscure his normal means of perception.

"He'll See Through Skin"
He is going to drive that car alone and unaided over his route. He is going to do it after some disinterested spectator has applied the blindfold in front of the Avalanch-Journal building, 1211-13 Texas Avenue. He is going to give a demonstration, right at the start, right in the crowd assembled in front of the Avalanch-Journal, that it is possible for man to actually "see" through his skin!

Read the route of the drive carefully. Note the time of each demonstration. Be on hand and see for yourself that all the Avalanch-Journal has said of Hayward Thompson is true.

Aldermen Are To Decide On Suits

CHICAGO, May 3.—(P)—Charming young women in one-piece bathing suits are going to parade in the staid chambers of Chicago's city council Monday, and the councilmen are going to watch them closely—strictly as a matter of duty to flag and censure.

So, the girls are to hand their garments on a clothes tree Monday and see how much—or how little—the council will sanction this summer.

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON MAY 4, 1929

General Topic: The Bible in National Life. Scripture Lesson: 2 Chronicles 34:14-16, 29-33.

14. And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of Jehovah, Hilkiah the priest found the book of the law of Jehovah given by Moses.

15. And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of Jehovah. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16. And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and moreover brought back word to the king, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they are doing.

17. Then the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

18. And the king went up to the house of Jehovah, and all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, both great and small: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of Jehovah.

19. And the king stood in his place, and made a covenant before Jehovah, to walk after Jehovah, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant that were written in this book.

20. And he caused all that were found in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

21. And Josiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel and made all that were found in Israel to serve, even to serve Jehovah, his God. All his days they departed not from following Jehovah, the God of their fathers.

Time: Josiah born (Beecher), B. C. 640. Becomes king, B. C. 638. Begins his reforms B. C. 627. His great reformation, B. C. 622.

Place: Jerusalem. Golden Text: Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my path.—Ps. 119:105.

Introduction. "It is dreary reading about most of these later kings of Israel. Four-fifths of them, were equally deficient in brains and morals—a combination of wickedness and folly, with nothing of the king about them but the name. But here and there you come upon a man amidst all these royal puppets. It is like finding a garden in a desert, or a jewel in a heap of sham trinkets and dirty stage finery. Josiah breaks a long monotonous series of absolutely worthless monarchs. Before and behind him are moral waste and darkness. He stands out a figure worth looking at and loving."

Hezekiah's Wicked Son, Manasseh. Following the good King Hezekiah, Josiah's sovereign, came his son Manasseh, who had the long reign of fifty-five years. Manasseh was one of the worst kings of Judah. He went so far in idolatry as to sacrifice his own children on the blasphemous altar of Molech, sat up in the Valley of Hinnom, southwest of Jerusalem. Because of all this wickedness, and the large number of innocent persons that he slew, the Lord sent the Assyrian hosts upon Judah. Manasseh was captured, bound in chains, and fetters, and carried to Babylon. There he repented of his many sins, humbled himself before God, prayed earnestly to Jehovah, and was forgiven and restored to his throne. "Then," says the chronicler, "Manasseh knew that the Lord he was God."

The Mother of Josiah. Josiah was only eight years old when he came to the throne, but it was fortunate for him and for the country that he was not old enough to fall under the base influence of his father. We may conjecture that the boy's first character was due to the training he received from his mother. Her name was Jedidah, which means "Beloved," and she must have been a woman of piety and of rare ability.

Josiah's Early Piety. The chronicler records the date of Josiah's manifestation of personal piety. In the eighth year of his reign, when he was sixteen years old; and in the twelfth year of his reign when he was twenty years old and able to take active direction of affairs, his personal religion began to range itself in a national reformation.

The young reformer smashed the images of the bestial gods. Those that were of wood he burned, and strewn the ashes on the graves of their worshippers. Nor was his reformation confined to Judah. The walls and floors were broken down in many places, beams were sagging, curtains and furniture were in a disreputable condition.

The Levites, who had charge of the temple property, were sent out over the whole country to collect money for these repairs, going to the extreme north, and visiting thoroughly all parts of Israel and Judah. The funds so collected were placed in the honest hands of Hilkiah the high priest, and by him passed over to the superintendents of work, who in turn paid the laborers their wages.

"The Book of the Law" Found. v. 14. "Hilkiah the priest found the book of the law of Jehovah given by Moses." It was the tradition of the Rabbis that the precious manuscript was found under a heap of stones where it had been placed to keep it from being burned by the wicked king Ahas. Just what "this book of the law" was, has been a matter of keen controversy. Many Bible scholars believe that it was the Book of Deuteronomy, though hardly the whole of it. Others believe it was the Pentateuch, Deut. 5-26, with chapter 28, according to the Cambridge Bible. We may conclude that this "book of the law" was the entire Pentateuch.

"The words, 'the book of the law,' are really sufficient to decide the point; since, as Keil says, they 'cannot mean anything else, either grammatically or historically than the Mosaic book of the Law (the Pentateuch), which is so designated, as is generally admitted in the Chronicles, and the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah.'"—Rawlinson in The Pulpit Commentary.

Effect of This Bible Reading. The effect of this reading was instantaneous and startling. The law of God came to Josiah, as it always comes to any honest heart, with deep impressiveness. He saw as by a lightning flash the depths of iniquity into which his people had plunged. Over against the horrible sins which idolatry always brings in its train, Josiah now perceived the pure and majestic standard of the holy law ordained by God for his king, his people, and his land.

In obedience to the king's command, messengers sought out Huldah the prophetess. It is strange that they should have sought a woman, and not Jeremiah or Zephaniah, but the former lived at Anathoth and Zephaniah, who had been in the city, neither of them could have done better, however, than Huldah, whose earnest words confirmed the solemn curses of Deut. 27:11-26; 28:15-68; but the close of her prophecy was a tender message to the king, his servants, and his people, informing him that, because he had humbled himself before God, these curses would not fall upon him or his day, but he should be gathered to his grave in peace.

"Huldah is the type of the stern, uncompromising and conscientious woman who in every age has foretold the doom of transgressors. Such women as she may have lived among the Covenanters of Scotland and the Huguenots of France; such a woman may have inspired the Cavaliers when they fought the Stuart and Cromwell."—Margaret E. Sangster.

Luther, Wycliffe, Tyndale and Others. The Old picture of Martin Luther, standing before a copy of the Scriptures carefully chained to a wall in a crypt, is suggestive. The gospel then did not have free course. It was not only bound by iron, but it was sunken from the eyes of the common people in the inexplorable depths of the dead languages. Wycliffe, Tyndale, Erasmus, Beza, Luther, Melancthon, and the Westminster divines found the old Book in the temple, rescued it from an enormous rubbish heap of traditions and decrees, and restored it to the world through the magnificent translations which they made. The modern history began. With the beginning of the Sunday school, the church entered on an other era of Bible recovery. Societies were formed for its multiplication and distribution. Within one hundred years the British and Foreign Bible Society has issued a hundred and seventy-five million copies; and the American Society has issued a million a year for seventy-five years.

If the Bible Were Lost. Imagine that the world had lost 'the Book,' and had lost with it all that it has given to mankind. In the loss of the Bible and its fruits we should lose the knowledge of the true God. Blot out the Bible from the world's history, and we fall back by slow but sure gradations into the conditions of the most debased of African tribes. Serpents and monkeys become our deities. By the loss of the Scriptures we should lose, sooner or later, our institutions of benevolence, hospitals, asylums for the insane, widows, and the thousand kindred forms in which charity to the unfortunate and the poor has expressed itself in Christian lands.

are among the trophies of the Christian Scriptures. In the loss of the Bible we should suffer the loss of our institutions for popular education, a free press, free schools, public libraries, and free speech. By the loss of the Scriptures and their retractions for the fatherless, and for creations we should sooner or later part with our institutions of civil liberty, and become a land of slaves and tyrants; without courts and tribunals organized and managed in the interests of equal justice. The loss of the Bible and its fruit from the world would involve the destruction of peace and its attendant blessings; that war would become ultimately the chronic condition of society; that the modern idea of the family would be lost; that the institution of marriage, as we understand it, would cease to be; that woman would be reduced to servitude; that home would lose its holy meaning; and, in a word, that the tendencies of the human race to barbarism in its most brutal forms would be revived, and that its natural career would be towards its own extinction on this globe."—Condensed from Austin Phelps.

RUPTURE EXPERT HERE

C. F. Redlich, Minneapolis, Minnesota, famous Rupture Appliance Expert, will demonstrate without charge his unequalled method at the Lubbock Hotel, Lubbock, Monday and Tuesday, May 6 and 7 from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Mr. C. F. Redlich says: The "Perfect Retention Shields" hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief and contract the opening in a remarkably short time.

The secret of their success is in their simplicity. An expert adjusted device seals the opening without discomfort or detention from work. It is practically everlasting, sanitary, comfortable and actually holds ruptures which heretofore were considered uncontrollable.

"IF YOU WANT TO HAVE IT DONE RIGHT—SEE REDLICH."

Doctor J. W. Seaver, for many years in charge of the Physical Education of the students of Yale College, has recorded 75 percent cures with this system.

Mr. Redlich is internationally known and speaks English, German and Spanish.

Addicts Of Dope Stage Big Fight

(Special To The Avalanche)
HOUSTON, May 3.—A pitched battle between hospital attendants and narcotic thieves early today resulted in injuries to one attendant and at least two of the thieves and three patients at Jefferson Davis hospital into a panic. Melvin Crawford, 20, chief night orderly, was injured seriously. Crawford said he was sitting on the second floor when he noticed the shadow of a man pass one of the windows. Calling Johnny Nicholson, night telephone operator, he investigated. They saw the man running in the direction of the emergency room.

As Crawford ran through the clinic, several men, who had been hiding between chairs and benches, rushed out the door. Crawford knocked one man down with a soda water bottle and attempted to hit a second man when he was felled from behind by a blow.

Hearing the commotion, Miss K. Niebrose, night supervisor, called police and ambulance drivers. Cal Morgan and Earl Rudd, drivers, rushed toward the building and Morgan hit one of the men with a jack handle. The thieves rushed from the building and disappeared. Night-Watchman Tells How His Son Was Benefited By Thedford's
Black-Draught.

Greenville, Miss.—"I am a night-watchman, and so when I sleep in daytime, my habits are a little different than if I slept at night," says Mr. J. J. Cox of 706 Central Avenue, this city.

"If I get constipated, and wake up in the afternoon with a headache or indigestion, I have found that Black-Draught is very good for my complaint. I have used Black-Draught whenever I have needed a medicine of the kind for the last eight or ten years."

"Our little son had a bad spell of indigestion. It was terrible to see him so pale and short of breath. His skin was spotted with dark spots. He would play a little, and then come in and lie around the house, just worn out."

"So, one day we decided to give him Black-Draught. I gave him small doses after every meal. After a week or so he began to improve, his complexion cleared up, and he quit having those bad spells of indigestion. Now he is well and strong."

In 25-cent packages containing 25 doses. Sold everywhere.

Attempted Escape Helms' Son Nearly Succeeds In Try

DALLAS, May 3.—(P)—A jail break was accomplished, almost, at the Dallas county jail, and it was into corridor L-1, death row by a small boy.

Prisoners who face death in the electric chair live in the corridor which has an opening about six inches wide through which articles may be passed to the prisoners.

The small son of Henry Helms under sentence for the part he was alleged to have taken in the robbery of a bank in Eastland county, was visiting his father when one of the prisoners told the boy he would give him some candy if he would squeeze through the small opening.

Climbing up the bars, he had almost succeeded in getting through when stopped.

"I'm not scared," the little boy exclaimed, but he was not permitted to finish his jail break.

Poor Old John Bull—That Hagen Guy Again!

All set to make life miserable once more for British golfers, Walter Hagen, hard-hitting Yank, is on deck at Murfield, England, to attempt to knock off his fourth British open golf title. Wait wasn't so hot in the Ryder cup matches, but as far as Britons go that's no never mind. Last year Hagen took a fearful beating at the hands of Archie Compston, British ace, in a special match and came back to win the title.

Ohio Relays Are Hampered By Cold

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3. (P)—Cold, blustery weather denied success to attempts at record breaking performances in all but two events today as the sixth annual Ohio Relays opened.

Almost 2,000 athletes from 100 high schools and from 20 Ohio colleges fought futilely to place their marks on the record books.

Only Jack Keller and Lester Brown, two Columbus high school boys were remarkable where nationally known college stars and champions of the Penn Relays failed.

Keller twice dashed off the 120 yard low hurdles in 14.4, a performance believed to be a world record although the event is an unusual one and not listed.

Brown, negro, tied Keller's time in another semi-final but not in the same effortless manner.

Coiner Of Slang "Tad" To Be Given Private Burial

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Private funeral services for Thomas Aloysius (Tad) Dorgan, noted newspaper cartoonist, will be held next Monday.

Tad died in his sleep at his home in Great Neck, Long Island, yesterday from a heart ailment.

Although one of the most capable of sport critics, especially on boxing, "Tad's" clientele was by no means restricted to followers of the sports pages. As a coiner of slang, he had few, if any, equals.

Out of his fertile brain came "twenty-three, skidoo," "Yes, we have no bananas," "hard-boiled egg," "Dumb Dora," "Drug Store Cowboy," "Apple sauce," "cake eater," "the cat's meow," "nobody home," "the first 100 years are the hardest," "for crying out loud," "you tell 'em," and literally scores of other slang expressions.

MORE ABOUT PAVING

AN editorial in a contemporary newspaper expresses the thought that paved highways in the north and east are already much too narrow to accommodate the ever growing streams of traffic. The writer quotes traffic authorities in Pennsylvania to the effect that paved highways capable of handling two streams of traffic—one in each direction—should be eventually widened to accommodate four streams of two lines going each way.

The north and east, wealthier economically and having a far greater population than the southwest, is years ahead of us in the matter of paved highways. Networks of concrete roads criss-cross the country up that way while most of us are bumping along on inferior dirt highways. Doubtless good roads boosters in the north and east thought a few years ago that their highways of ordinary width would be sufficient to handle traffic for all time to come but already, with paved roads in their infancy, it is discovered that a greater expenditure must be made if the highways are to serve as they should.

The Avalanche believes in paved highways for Lubbock county. It would like to see every highway in West Texas paved—and paved right now. This newspaper believes most of the readers of this editorial will live to see the day when universal paving in West Texas will come to pass and when this section will discover the same thing the north and east has already discovered—namely, we not only need lots of paved roads but they must be wider than we originally thought.

Lubbock county continues to fiddle around—to use a commonplace expression in the matter of paved highways. Every day that we put off the passage of paving bonds is that much more time lost. We continue to trail behind the march of progress when we blind ourselves to an economic necessity which daily becomes more essential to every-day life.

The Avalanche has presented the highway problems of the north and east in an effort to contrast them with our own. We are in need of paved highways—not wider paved highways—to begin with. Doubtless we will find that we need the wider ones in the future.

INCOME

Gross income is no barometer of net profit. Corporations doing business in millions often count their losses in thousands. The busiest business is not always the most profitable.

There is the case of the crew chief in the coal mines who draws a bank president's salary but has only a moderate wage left after he pays his helpers. Lawyers with incomes of $10,000 a year are not uncommon, but office overhead leaves them a net income much lower. Physicians afford a parallel instance.

But overhead is not foreign to the salaried worker and wage earner. The machinist's overhead is his tools and overalls. Expensive attire necessary to their employment is the business expense of others. The writer must buy books and travel and deduct their cost from the price for which he sells his work. The landlord has for profit on his investment what is left from rents after taxes are paid, repairs are made and depreciation is deducted. It is never safe to judge a man's means by his income.

A PROBLEM IN ETHICS

City officials of Gallup, N. M., resigned in a body the other day, because the district court learned they had been accepting protection money from operators of gambling halls.

That sounds like an ordinary story of graft. But there's more to it.

It develops that the protection money had been used to improve the city's street and lighting system. It had been most carefully accounted for; no city official had profited a penny at any stage of the game. And that raises a nice question in ethics. Are these officials to be condemned for taking protection money from the gamblers, or are they to be praised for finding a new source of city revenue which would ease the taxpayers' burden? Figure it out and see what you think the rights and wrongs of the case were.

ENDING A CRUEL CUSTOM

The state of New York now has a law which prohibits the clipping of dogs' ears unless it can be shown that such a measure is necessary for the dog's health. It is a good law, and more states ought to copy it. There is no real excuse for clipping dogs' ears. No real dog lover would dream of doing it. The dog owner who wants it done, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, is the man—or woman—who doesn't keep a dog because of any fondness for pets, but who simply wants an animal that looks snappy and up-to-date, in order to attract attention to its owner.

Clipping ears is a barbarous custom. The New York legislature is to be commended for putting an end to it.

A magazine writer asserts that if insanity continues at its present rate, in 200 years there will not be a sane man or woman in the United States. What! Only one person going nutty every year!

Legislator O. B. Whitaker of Missouri, who lost his voice recently and has found it an advantage to have to commit his sentiments to paper, thinks it might be better if all legislators were dumb. But you might think, from hearing them talk, that most of them were.

Because she didn't know anything about it, Senator Laura E. Naplin of the Minnesota legislature voted "no" on a bill. After she has been in the legislature a while longer she will learn, of course, that that was the wrong thing to do.

If all the telephone conversations in the United States were laid end to end it would be 5 o'clock and you would be trying to use that line to ask the wife if there was anything she wanted you to bring home for supper.

After all the tumult and shouting, wouldn't it be a rather sour joke on Mrs. Gann if Charlie decided to get married?

STEWART INVESTIGATES TROUBLE IN COTTON TEXTILE DISTRICTS

By CHARLES F. STEWART
Staff Writer for Central Press

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Trouble in the cotton textile industry on both sides of the western end of the line between North and South Carolina is attributed at American Federation of Labor headquarters in Washington to dissatisfaction on the workers' part which has been brewing for a long time, but the labor department refers to the recent introduction of "modern efficiency methods" as the outbreak's immediate cause.

The flare-up in the rayon industry at Elizabethton, in eastern Tennessee, though in the same approximate area, appears to be a distinct affair, which investigators lay exclusively to wage discontent among the mill hands.

The textile industry in the affected district is not a particularly new thing, but it has been of intensive development since the World war.

Most observers ascribe its southern trend to the spinners' desire to transfer their plants as near as possible to the source of their raw material; to the availability of cheap water power in the mountains of the Carolinas and Tennessee, and to hitherto untapped supply of labor, hitherto inexperienced in the ways of the industrial world and consequently easily contented with low wages.

Federation of Labor representatives, however, dispute all considerations but those of low wages, easy factory laws and few restrictions upon the employment of women and children.

The necessary quality of cotton, they say, must be brought from a distance in any event, and can be transported to New England as reasonably as to Tennessee and the Carolinas. Power, too, they assert, is as cheap in the former field as in the latter.

In any event, the most moderate estimates place the pay rate in the southern mills at least 20 per cent below the northern scale. In some southern plants the comparison is not even as favorable as this, the average falling under $12 weekly, in contrast with $25 to $30 for the same work in the north.

On all sides the labor is mentioned as of excellent quality and, at the outset, contented with a very low wage, because of the small incomes general among the mountain farmers, upon which the mills drew for their supply of hands.

With town life, a rising percentage of literacy, the return of many young men from war service, advancing living costs and the spread of organization in some localities, dissatisfaction with the old rate of pay began to grow.

The management of the rayon plant at Elizabethton, Tenn., is credited at Labor Federation headquarters with having wished, at first, to offer higher wages, but to have been discouraged by captains of neighboring industries from doing so, lest it aggravate their own workers' discontent.

It was at about this time that "speeding up" methods made their appearance on an increasing scale at such textile plants as those at Gastonia and Lexington, N. C., and Anderson, Greenville and Spartanburg, S. C.

The change did not involve a reduction in the number of hands employed, but it did increase the amount of labor per worker, without increased pay. It even, so the workers complained, added so much to their responsibilities as to result in occasional unavoidable mechanical complications which actually reduced the contents of their envelopes.

It was at this juncture that the Elizabethton rayon workers struck, on the ground that they and their families simply could not live on the money they were making.

A compromise, affected by the labor department's conciliatory service, failed to hold water long, because, as charged by the employees, of refusal on the bosses' part to keep all the terms of the agreement reached, and fresh negotiations were started by the labor department's representatives.

Meanwhile the adjustment of the then fully developed tie-up in the two Carolinas' mills had been rendered difficult by the presence of conflicting groups of labor representatives in the field.

Though the mill workers had been unionized in spots by the American Federation, they were in part unorganized until communistic leaders recently arrived from New England and New York, and with these the owners have refused to deal, the Federation's representatives at the same time holding aloof.

Absentee ownership of the mills further complicates the situation.

The textile plants are, indeed, to some extent in southern hands, but the best official estimate in Washington is that 70 per cent of their stock is held either in the north, or—though in small part—abroad. The Elizabethton rayon enterprise, established by German capital, alone is wholly, or almost wholly, owned outside the United States.

SUPERSTITION—BUT NOT SCIENCE—HAS MANY CURES FOR BALDNESS

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Experts say that in most instances baldness is idiopathic—which means that nobody knows the reason for it.

There are all sorts of superstitions about the hair, as about every other matter in which scientific knowledge still is lacking. Some people believe that the hair is full of sap and that the ends must be sealed by singeing or the sap will run out. The hair has no more sap than a buggy-whip. In most instances baldness is hereditary and because of the constitutional condition the hair is bound to fall out.

Some people think that hair grows on parts of the body that need protection, at least from wind and weather. There may have been a time when hair on the chest was useful for this purpose. Nowadays women without hair on the chest keep the chest regularly exposed and men with a heavy growth of hair on the chest wear a vest, coat, shirt, overcoat and various quantities of underwear to protect the chest still further.

Another theory has it that hair remains on those portions of the body that were not reached by sunlight in that evolutionary stage when men walked on all fours. There seems to be plenty of evidence that sunlight is both good and bad for the hair. The evidence seems to depend on the dosage used and the head of the particular person concerned.

The promoters of cures for baldness that involve use of the trifoliate sun's rays, or ultraviolet rays, say that this method will cure baldness and cause a new growth of hair even on scalps thin as a billiard ball. Where, however, are the actual cases to prove their claims? Answer: Nowhere!

The experts in care of the hair recommend that the scalp be kept clean by washing as often as necessary with soap and water. If the scalp is unusually dry it should be greased lightly at least once each week with vaseline or with liquid petroleum.

The same effect is secured by using tonics with too much alcohol. In ancient Egypt the medicine men cured baldness by a grease that was made from the fat of six different animals: the lion, hippopotamus, crocodile, cat, snake and ibex. The idea was to get the strength and sagacity of the animals at the same time that grease was supplied. In early American days bears grease was used for the same purpose.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MILDRED LAWRENCE, stenographer at the Judson Hotel, has her fox fur snatched from her in a crowd, but STEPHEN ARMSTRONG catches the thief and returns the scarf. He asks to take her home. Not wishing to seem ungrateful, she invites him to dinner.

Their evening is spoiled when PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of Mildred's employer, phones her to return to duty. Stephen escorts her to the hotel where Pamela recognizes him as the salesman who had sold her a car. She snubs Mildred and tries to lure Stephen away by pretending she wants to buy another car from him. Then Pamela meets HUCK CONNOR, who tells her he is a broker from Chicago.

Stephen invites Mildred to the theater with him, and when Pamela learns that they are going she gets Huck to take her, hoping to outshine Mildred with her expensive clothes.

Stephen confides to Mildred that he is suspicious of Huck, but she thinks he is merely jealous of Pamela. After the show Mildred refuses to go to a night club party. And Pamela persuades her brother HAROLD to go. He admires Huck and confesses that he loves to gamble but has not been lucky. Huck suggests that he play the ponies and offers to give him tips.

And then, when Mildred had evaded him, he grew determined to see her.

She couldn't put him off either, although she told him she didn't feel like seeing anyone that night. Stephen was insistent.

"Oh, all right," Mildred gave in. "If you want to."

She thought her indifference might cause him to change his mind. She hoped he would stay away. At least she told herself she did, but her eyes already had grown brighter and the weariness that had lain like a film over her sensitive features was gone when she returned to the living room in its place was a look of transport that brought a glow to Harold's visage.

"Who was that? Jack Gilbert?" he said sarcastically. "Look out or you'll melt before he gets here."

Mildred went over to see if she could get more volume out of the radio.

"No one in particular, jealous," she said lightly, but the overtones of her voice were joyous in spite of her effort to keep it level.

In that case I suppose you won't leave that devilish invention in the next five minutes and rush off to change your dress while I sit here and twiddle my thumbs," Harold mocked.

Mildred turned with well-feigned surprise. "Why, how did you guess I'm just roasting to death in this jersey?" she asked innocently.

"I'm good at guessing," Harold told her. "But I don't have to guess now. You ought to learn to play poker. Mildred, your face is as open as a deck of marked cards."

Mildred walked over to a window and opened it. "But it is hot," she maintained naively.

"I'd give half my life if you would put on an expression like that for me," he burst out passionately.

He had buried his face in her hair and Mildred heard him sob.

"Oh, don't, don't," she cried, and put her arms around his neck.

They stood there like that, quietly, for a long moment. Then Harold lifted his face and smiled. The smile tore at Mildred's heart.

"Love's a damn fool thing," Harold said bitterly.

Mildred looked at him steadily and her eyes grew misty with tender sympathy. "I've an idea it might be very sweet," she said softly. "But I guess you and I won't find that out, Harold. We aren't lucky."

Harold uttered a harsh laugh. "What are you worrying about?" he jibed. "You burst out like a mid-summer garden of roses just because some guy telephones that he is coming up. Well, what do you suppose he's coming for? If you feel like that about him you've no need to worry over your luck."

"He's just coming because he lives in a hotel and misses his home," Mildred said, trying to deny both to Harold and to herself that Stephen's visit could have a portentous meaning.

"Do you believe it?" Harold declared warmly. "It's you he's coming for. Who's going to waste his time on parlor atmosphere unless there's a girl in it that he wants?"

Harold put his hands on her shoulders and held her firmly, though she had tried to move away. "I mean, Pamela," he said tensely. "don't let her worry you. She plays with every new man she meets. She's even putting the spell on Huck Connor."

Mildred's eyes blazed. "That's just it! She wants them all. But I should think that you, as her brother, would put a stop to her having anything to do with Mr. Connor. I tell you he isn't right!"

"You oughtn't to say that unless you know something against him," Harold objected. "He seems O. K. to me. Takes his drinks and his losses like a gentleman," as they used to say. Pretty decent sort with the girls, too. I watched Pamela work. She tried her damndest to make him start something, but he kept as cool as any man could."

"Oh, well..." Mildred despaired of convincing him that Huck was dangerous. He could have no conception of a man whose emotionalism was buried so deep that a pretty girl could not awaken it against his will, she realized.

"I suppose you'd like to ask me to go," Harold said as Mildred hesitated over warning him any further against Huck.

"Oh, no," she answered quickly. "please stay."

Harold scowled darkly. "What to play me against Armistage?" he asked suspiciously.

"Don't be so stupid," Mildred told him impatiently, hoping he wouldn't want to make an issue of the matter. She feared to have him go now, after the scene they'd been through, feared that his jealous, hopeless mood would lead him into dissipation. But she knew if he guessed what was on her mind he would go. "I tell you Mr. Armistage is nothing more than a mere acquaintance to me," she said earnestly.

"Then you might have told him you were just starting for China or Bagdad."

Mildred smiled. "Having no serious designs upon either you or Mr. Armistage, I didn't see why we could not have a party," she said sweetly. "Get busy and see if you can't bring in something amusing on our set while I change, will you? That's a dear."

"Dear enemy from now on," Harold grumbled. "I still think I'm a sap to stay."

"A fine friend you would be to leave," Mildred called back from the door. "Ste... Mr. Armistage might meet you on the way out and think I'd cleared the deck for him."

"Wouldn't that be too devastating?" Harold jeered, but Mildred was gone. "A mere acquaintance! A string of ha-ha's."

His sarcasm failed to ease the ache in his heart, however, and when Mildred came back, looking charming in the new dress she had bought to wear to the theater with Stephen, Harold cursed Stephen Armistage silently and fluently. Suddenly he knew that he couldn't stay and watch her being agreeable to him.

"I'm going to clear out," he said firmly.

Mildred vainly urged him to stay, but in her heart she knew she'd rather be alone with Stephen. Still, she worried over Harold until Stephen rang the doorbell, then she completely forgot him.

She opened the door herself, for her mother was busy with mending in her room. She said good evening just as she would to anyone at all who wasn't unwelcome, but Stephen saw something in her starry eyes and flushed cheeks that spoke a warmer welcome.

Mildred put out a hand and he took it. Then he kissed her. She did not utter a sound or squirm from his grasp, but when he released her she caught her breath and stood off from him in wordless confusion while she fought for calm.

Stephen looked at her questioningly. His impetuous act had surprised him as well as her. He had not planned to kiss her. She had looked irresistible, and he had not resisted. He expected anything then except what actually happened.

"I'm sorry you did that," Mildred said quietly, and Stephen had sense enough to know that she meant it. It made him feel awkward, and the awkwardness was uncomfortable. Being uncomfortable, he said the wrong thing.

"Didn't you like it?"

"Would it surprise you to know that I didn't?" Mildred retorted, not altogether truthfully.

The caress would lay sweet upon her lips as long as memory lasted, but back of the sweetness just now there was lighted the fire of outraged pride. He'd somehow managed to make her feel cheap. It might be his way to kiss every girl he knew, and Mildred told herself she would not be kissed by a man like that. She believed that kisses were only what you made them, cheap as dirt or priceless as pearls.

Stephen was nonplussed. He was not used to drama with his kisses. Mildred saw him glance at the door. She felt like telling him to go if he wanted to, but her mother chose that instant to step from her room into their presence.

France Presents Peaceful Front

GENEVA, May 3 (AP)—Count Maselli, French delegate, told the preparatory disarmament conference today that France would give way, necessary, on her proposal for limitation of land armaments through the budgetary system. In announcing this policy of concession, he defended the system for limiting war material by the amount of money to be spent on them rather than by number and quality, as the only sound and practicable method of limitation, which strikes the eye and which the public can easily understand. He urged the delegates to reflect on the problem after adjournment of the commission which he could not hope to complete its work at the present session and to make a compromise on the matter. He addressed a special appeal to Hugh S. Gibson, American representative, to help in this.

Thrilling Story Of Rescue Told

TOKYO, May 3 (AP)—A thrilling story of rescue of more than 400 persons from the Japanese steamer Goyo Maru was told in radio news today. The Goyo Maru, under charter for fishing, ran into a violent snow storm Wednesday night in the Kronotski gulf and was wrecked. The Hachiro was summoned by radio and reached the scene at 4 a. m., yesterday taking off 350 persons before rising seas and darkness compelled cessation of its efforts. Throughout a wild night it stood by and today took remainder of the vessel, 23 fishermen and 38 of the crew.

For having attended school eight years without missing a day, Robert Byrne, of Ballyvaughan, Ireland, has presented a gold medal.

IT IS ORDAINED BY THE CITY COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF LUBBOCK, TEXAS:

Section 1: That gas ordinance No. 360 heretofore passed by the City Commission of the City of Lubbock, Texas, be amended by adding thereto the following provisions:

Section 2: No refund of the annual license fee or any part thereof shall be made to anyone who ceases to do business during the year.

Section 3: Service pipe from main building must be one and one-half (1 1/2) inches inside diameter larger. No pipe less than one (1) inch inside diameter will be permitted on horizontal run for more than one opening. Use of 3-4 inch inside diameter pipe will be permitted on horizontal run for only one opening.

Section 4: Vertical pipes or risers in two and three story buildings must be 3-4 inch inside diameter for one opening and 1 inch inside diameter for two or more openings, depending on the number of openings. The use of street ell will be permitted at the meter loop only when street ell is placed on rising, then turning ell on street ell, making ell down from the property owner's lot of meter loop. Bushings or caps are prohibited.

Section 5: Unions and valves shall not be used in service lines, right and left hand coupling in service lines.

Section 6: In the Fire Limits no rubber tubing will be permitted, but all gas using appliances shall be connected up solid.

Section 7: Outside the Fire Limits the use of rubber tubing will be permitted, provided no cut off is used between the appliance and the gas meter, except no metal or rubber tubing will be permitted in connecting stoves used for cooking purposes connecting water heaters.

Section 8: In addition to the fees provided, a fee of 75c shall be charged for inspecting installation of water heaters for heating water by the use of gas. No person, corporation, shall install or connect such hot water heater unless same be provided with a metal vent pipe to which shall be connected a flexible ventilating pipe not less than the size of the heater opening. A solid pipe shall extend to a chimney flue or to the open air above the roof. Where vent pipes are through woodwork same shall be protected with metal vent chimneys. In case such ventilating pipe all extend to open air, it shall be fitted with a cap or cow, so as to prevent back draft.

Where hot water heaters are placed in closets, it will be necessary to have a local vent ten inches in diameter in the ceiling of the closet in addition to the vent pipe provided above, provided that in cases where it is impracticable to vent through the roof a vent 8 inches by 10 inches lower part of closet door will be permitted.

Section 9: Anyone violating any provision of this ordinance shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $100.

Section 10: This ordinance is intended as an amendment to and cumulative of gas ordinance No. 360, and no provision herein shall be construed as repealing any provision of said gas ordinance No. 360, except where there is a conflict, and in case of such conflict, the provisions of this ordinance shall control.

Section 11: The fact that the provisions of gas fitting, construction, maintenance is necessary to protect the public safety and health and prevent fire, creates an emergency requiring that this ordinance take effect from and after its passage, and it is so ordered.

Bulls Succeed In Pushing Stocks To Record Peaks

More Than Dozen Issues Go Up To Record Peaks: Call Is Renewed At 10 But Is Boosted To 11 Later

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer
NEW YORK, May 3. (P)—As a culmination of a succession of efforts this week to arouse the stock market from its April nap, the bull party today succeeded in pushing the general level of prices above the record heights reached just before the break in late March.

More than two dozen issues were elevated to record prices, which carried the Associated Press price index of 30 industrials up more than 3 points to a new peak at 234.2, nearly a point above the previous high record reached on March 18. The index of 20 utilities also mounted to a new high level, but the 20 rails lagged.

Call Renewed at 10.
Call loans renewed at 10 per cent, but the increasing demands of the market together with the week-end currency requirements sent the rate up to 11 in the afternoon. This brought some profit-taking, and prices sagged a little from their best levels of the day. For the most part, the liquidation taken up. Another indication of firm credit was an increase of 1-8 of one per cent in 30 bankers' acceptance rates.

The upturn was given a sharp impetus by increase of but $40,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokers' loans, as estimates had run as high as $100,000,000. Increases in gold and reserve holdings of gold and acceptance rates were also made bull capital, but bankers were of the opinion, however, that reserve officials would not permit additional gold to be used to expand credit. It was pointed out that the reserve came into tide over for a few days dealers whose portfolios were overloaded.

News Favorable.
The day's business and industrial news held favorable. Secretary Lamont's statement on general business conditions was particularly reassuring. The weekly business review reported little change in the generally favorable situation, although it was indicated that heavy rains in April had hurt retail trade. American Railway Express proposed a three-for-one split up, and Spig published an excellent earnings report.

Commodity markets followed diverse trends. Cotton closed about 50 cents a bale higher on reports of crop damage, while wheat lost about a cent a bushel on reports that Canadian railways would meet the freight cut agreed upon by American carriers. Corn sagged on better weather.

Foreign exchanges were dull, with little change in quotations. Sterling cables were unchanged at $4.95 5-16, while German marks were a shade lower at 32.70 1-2 cents.

MID-WESTERN LIVESTOCK
KANSAS CITY, May 3. (P) (U. S. D. A.)—Opening live trade around the 11 market circuit was at firm to 3c higher prices, but demand weakened as trade progressed and closing values at several markets were 10c to 25c lower than Thursday. Chicago had an early top of $11.80. Total offerings were around $9,700 as compared with $9,153 a week ago and $8,293 the corresponding day last year.

A curtailed sheep supply stimulated demand for fat lambs at several markets with prices steady to 25c higher. Agent stock, however, continued to slip toward lower levels, some centers reporting losses of 25c to 50c. Good to choice California springers in Chicago cleared at $17.75 while best fed wooled lambs at Omaha and St. Joseph made $13.50. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 30,100 a shortage of 18,700 from last Friday and 3,500 more than a year ago.

The cattle supply approximated 9,000 against 12,941 a week ago and 14,743 a year ago. Trade was generally a clean-up affair with no material price changes registered. Chicago realized $14.50 on a load of choice 1,341 pound fed steers. Supplies this week uncovered a few scattered shipments of grass steers and calves from South Texas. Grass steers are expected to start moving in limited numbers in the next few weeks. Demand for stocker and feeder steers eased off to a slight extent this week but prices on thin light weight stockers are still relatively high.

Prices Sell Well On Complaints Of Southern Prospect

NEW YORK, May 3. (P)—Early declines were not only recovered in cotton today but prices sold well above yesterday's closing quotations on more numerous southern crop complaints which appeared to stimulate covering. There was also a moderate trade and commission house demand. July contracts advanced from 18.51 to 18.86 and closed at 18.77, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 7 to 14 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 4 to 9 points, and the active months sold about 10 to 14 points net lower during the first few minutes under liquidation by some of yesterday's buyers who were evidently disappointed over the failure of the early weather map to show anticipated frosts in the belt.

Reports that recent weather conditions had necessitated replanting in parts of the belt were accompanied, in some instances, by claims that satisfactory seed was scarce. The latest storms in the eastern belt also seemed to make some impression on sentiment.

The market became decidedly firm with some indications of a broadening trade or commission house demand, as well as covering or rebuying recent sellers. Prices rallied about 3 points from the lowest on the average with May selling up from 19.25 to 19.59, while December advanced from 18.80 to 19.09, making net gains of about 13 to 23 points on the active positions. Closing prices showed reactions 7 or 8 points from the best under realizing.

Club Women Petition Moody For Post; Dean Is Sought

BROWNWOOD, May 3. (P)—Mrs. Greenleaf Pick of Abilene, former vice-president, was elected president of the sixth district convention here today. Coleman was chosen as the next convention city.

Other resolutions urged Governor Moody again to place a woman on the board of regents of the University of Texas at the expiration of the term of Mrs. H. J. O'Hair, of Coleman, and urged every Texas high school to appoint a dean of girls on the faculty.

Grass steers are expected to start moving in limited numbers in the next few weeks. TAHOKA, May 3.—Much interest is being manifested in Tahoka and Lynn county over the prospects for a good oil well since the Ash Snyder-Edwards have resumed drilling on the Edwards Ranch five miles west of here. Much of the land in the west and south part of Lynn county has been recently leased by a number of the large oil companies.

The well on the Edwards ranch was started with a standard rig, but a halt was taken a few weeks ago and drilling was suspended for several weeks, until a rotary rig could be installed.

Retire At Eighty-Five? Not With Twenty Years More Of Work Planned Ahead; Old Man Of The Sea, Captain Robert Dollar, Still Active With Shipping Of The World

AT TWENTY ROBERT DOLLAR EMIGRATED FROM SCOTLAND TO CANADA AND BECAME CHIEF BOY IN LUMBER CAMPS.

By PHILIP J. SINNOTT, NEA Service Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3.—Captain Robert Dollar, most colorful figure in the American merchant marine, is more active at 85 than most business men are at half that age.

Recently he celebrated a birthday anniversary. But the occasion didn't bring any talk of his retirement. He was at his desk at the Dollar Steamship company's office, as he is every day, and as he hopes to be the rest of his life.

Dollar actively heads a concern operating a fleet of 80 vessels in every part of the world. Twenty of these vessels are large "breakers" type steamers purchased from the government, operating on a regular round-the-world passenger-freight service, and also on comprehensive trans-Pacific schedules serving Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and all oriental ports.

"They've told me a man should retire between 60 and 70 years of age," Dollar chuckles. "Suppose I'd have done so. My, what a lot of business development I'd have missed! And what a lot of benefit my country would have lost by lack of this development!"

"My idea of living a full life is to do my day's work as usual on my last day on earth, and wake up the following morning to find myself in 'ternity'."

Dollar was 70 when the World War started in 1914. Since then new conditions resulting from war and peace have given tremendous impetus to the development of shipping—as well as at times placing the merchant marine in most precarious positions. And through it all, Captain Dollar has been actively at work straightening out the tangles and helping develop the Dollar Steamship company into one of the largest fleets in the world.

In his 80th year Captain Dollar inaugurated a plan he had long considered—a regular round-the-world passenger service. Five years later he sees his judgment more than justified—but instead of resting upon his laurels, the old shipmaster is at work with his sons, R. Stanley and J. Harold Dollar, on plans for a fleet of the biggest freight-passenger vessels on the Pacific, for a radio-telephone system connecting all Dollar vessels with the Dollar offices, and for many other improvements.

"The whole world is moving, everything is changing and shipping is a moving, too," Dollar says. "We're working to keep up with this program on the seas as we are in our office practices. We can see an era of great expansion ahead. We have plans finished for fleets of big vessels, trying to look far enough ahead so these will not be out of date 15 years from now."

This round-the-world service itself is a monument to a man's life-time. But it's just part of the day's work with Captain Dollar. It's a good sample of Dollar optimism and business methods. For years Dollar advocated a trade route going westward from the Pacific coast, and circling the globe. Many shippers declared the idea impracticable. This thing of ships going out of a port in one direction and never going back from the other direction.

But Dollar, despite his 80 years conferred with his wife—a life-long helpmate. They had made about 35 business trips to China, and they made five trips around the world to put over the globe-circling steamer system.

"Increasing commerce of the United States has been my aim, so I turned salesman on these trips," says Dollar. "Until this round-the-world service started, for instance, in the five years since the route started, American merchants have sold $20,000,000 worth of commodities there. We recently shipped a large cargo of apples to Alexandria, Egypt."

If 1,500 tons of freight are to be unloaded at Kobe, Shanghai or Manila, cables are sent the Dollar offices there, and freight to replace this is secured. By the time a vessel returns to its starting point, it has loaded and discharged three and a third cargoes.

"I visited the presidents of all competing companies, explained my plan, and said ours would be honest competition. We have never found a case of unjust competition against us," Dollar avers. "Only one policy succeeds, that is strict honesty. Trying to be decent and honest to all classes built our business in China. We have everywhere built confidence in our dependability."

"This we have carried to the point of educating importers to buy in smaller lots. This means smaller capital tied up by the merchant, a quicker turnover with replenishment from our frequent vessels—and more regular cargoes for us."

Dollar, born in Falkirk, Scotland in 1844, left school at 12 and worked in a machine shop. Soon after his mother died, his father began drinking, and the father and son sailed for Canada to start anew. The lad vowed he would never touch liquor, and he has religiously stuck to this.

He worked long hours for little money in a stove factory. Then he went into the Canadian woods as a lumberman. A few years later he and his brother, with a combined income of $36 a month, bought a farm.

While working as a logging camp cook, Dollar used his spare time to make up for his lack of education. Owners of the company, finding the lad figuring in an old cash book, gave him a better position the following year. In time, he became a camp foreman, and in 1872 he made his first business venture—losing all his savings and $5,000 more in a logging deal. He refused another partnership until he could pay off his indebtedness, which he did after three years' work. And there were adventures aplenty, too, in the northern woods of that early day.

Early in the '80s, Dollar moved to Michigan, where he bought and operated a sawmill in what became Dollarville. He bought all the government timberland he could finance, and reaped a great profit. Seeking new fields, Dollar, his family and his brother moved to California in 1887. They lumbered in different parts of the coast. And the shortage of ships to carry their lumber was the seed from which sprang the mighty, far-reaching Dollar Steamship Line of today.

The first vessel, bought 37 years ago, was the little schooner "New-boy." Dollar, before purchasing the craft, made a personal inspection of its engines, crawled through its boilers and by examining it from bow to stern assured himself it was in good shape. And until the last five years, that has been Captain Dollar's practice with every vessel line purchased.

"You see, we never have vessels laid up for repairs," he explains. "We get them in first class condition, and continually work to keep them so."

In 1901, the Dollar concern made its first venture into China trade with the steamer "Arab." The vessel carried over half a cargo of Dollar lumber, and Dollar saw there was need of an organization on both sides of the Pacific if there was to be any success. A year later, he and Mrs. Dollar made their first trip to the

Out to drum up business. That year, a steamer carried a load of Oregon firs to China—and a load of Japanese oak ties back for railroad building in Mexico. Dollar was getting things started.

Since then, the Dollar house flag has spread over every sea. Dollar Line offices have grown in every maritime country. The shipping business which started 37 years ago as an adjunct to lumbering, now has weekly sailings for oriental ports, regular round-the-world sailings, and complete coastal schedules.

Since he has passed his 70th birthday, Dollar has seen his lines enjoy their greatest expansion, and has helped in plans for their expansion for 20 or more years to come. Today, Dollar is an alert, shrewd Caledonian who looks closer to 60 than to 85. His plans are to work to the last. And then his sons, R. Stanley Dollar and J. Harold Dollar, will carry on above the lines father and sons have decided upon.

And as an exception to the adage that a man should retire from business by 70, Captain Robert Dollar points to the "round-the-world" service he started when 80, with forty-eight sailings from here to visit 21 world ports in 13 nations, covering 30,000 miles in 112 days.

Honesty, persistence, temperance and daily reading of the Bible, Captain Dollar declares, have been the greatest aids to success.

LAWDER TAKEN BACK

Man Caught With Silver Is To Serve More Time

HOUSTON, May 3. (P)—Carl Lawder, held in the Harris county jail more than two weeks in connection with the escape of Bob Silvers, was returned to Huntsville late yesterday by prison transfer agents.

Lawder was the center of an investigation by the prison commission of an alleged "escape ring" which aided in flight and prearranged discharge of convicts. He promised to reveal "inside" information of the operation of the alleged ring in return for a pardon, but officials have declined to comment on whether his terms had been accepted.

Lawder owes the state two years and eight months of a six year sentence from Fort Worth. Following his arrest here in company with Silvers, discovery was made that he had been discharged after having served two years of his term.

Vestris Officer Testifies Before British Inquiry

LONDON, May 3. (P)—Chief officer W. F. Johnson of the ill-fated liner Vestris, had instructions to be careful what he put in the book, he testified today at the board of trade inquiry into the sinking of the ship last November.

C. P. Langton, counsel for the owners of the Vestris, questioned Johnson as to a conversation a chief officer reported he had had with officer Anderson from whom he had taken over the duties as chief officer. In this conversation, Johnson had intimated, Anderson told him to be careful what he put in the log book.

Warned About Log. Johnson added Captain Carey, drowned master of the vessel, told him to be careful what he put in the log and that he had replied that Anderson had spoken to him about that already.

"You are seriously suggesting the Captain Carey meant for you to put a false draught in the official log," asked Langton.

"Yes," replied Johnson. Replying to questions by counsel for the board of trade, Johnson said he knew there was to be trouble about the draught from the beginning. The fact that she was in and that she had sailed below mark I knew would create a lot of trouble.

Johnson said he thought overlooking was one of the causes of the disaster.
