PAMPA — Eligible voters have until next Tuesday at 5 p.m. to have their request for a mailed ballot in the county clerk's office.

Disabled or ill persons and those over 65 years old qualify for a mailed ballot, said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Carter said the requests must be mailed to her office and received, not postmarked, before the deadline. No requests can be taken in person.

Through Wednesday, Carter said, 1,128 early votes have been cast and 184 ballots have been mailed out.

Early voting ends Friday, Nov. 1.

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The estimated jackpot was $12 million.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 3, 15, 23, 27, 28 and 48.

One-hundred and thirty-one tickets were purchased matching five of the six numbers, with a prize of $1,477 each. Matching four of six numbers were 6,946, winning $101 each.

Lottery officials estimate Saturday's jackpot will be worth $30 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of American workers filing first-time claims for jobless benefits unexpectedly fell by 22,000 last week to the lowest level in nearly two months.

The Labor Department said today that new applications for unemployment insurance totaled a seasonally adjusted 320,000, the smallest since 317,000 during the week ended Aug. 31.

The decline was the largest since claims dropped by 27,000 during the week ended July 27.

Despite the Columbus Day holiday, which left fewer days for laid-off workers to apply for benefits, many analysts had expected little change in the number of new claims last week.

Some predicted the total would continue to reflect the ripple effect in the United States of a Canadian autoworkers strike against General Motors Corp. that has been settled.

Others contended slower job growth would keep the number from moderating appreciably.

The 342,000 new claims during the week ended Oct. 12 also was 2,000 more than originally estimated.

Critics: Students urged to become eco-activists

WASHINGTON (AP) – Third graders at Mason Elementary School in Texas thought selling T-shirts to help save the rain forest was a neat extracurricular project, but it irked a parent, Bruce Lehmberg.

Like other critics, he thought students were being made unwitting pawns of the environmental left. He said materials accompanying the save-the-rain-forest project gave one-sided views about deforestation, global warming and depletion of the ozone layer.

"This did not give a balanced approach," Lehmberg said. "I'm not down on the school, but I don't want our teachers or students used as pawns."

Conservative organizations are convinced that some environmental education materials being used in the nation's schools are attempts to turn students into eco-activists. They want lessons on ecology, forestry, waste management and the like based on science, not emotional environmental campaigns urging political action.

"I don't mind saving the rain forests or endangered species," said political scientist Michael Sanera, a leading critic of environmental education. "I want the kids to have their facts straight."

He cites textbooks that he says distort population growth and global warming or give one-sided accounts of managing waste accumulation or protecting threatened species of plants and animals.

Environmental educators admit to isolated cases of teachers using poor materials or urging students to promote pet causes. But they insist that most materials used in schools are balanced.

"There are award-winning programs all over the country," said Rick Wilke, associate dean and professor of environmental education at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. "Recent attacks on environmental education are overstated and politically motivated."

Critics are demanding balance. From Wilke's perspective, however, some conservative groups that failed to weaken environmental regulation in Congress and elsewhere are involved in a long-term campaign to quell environmental instruction.

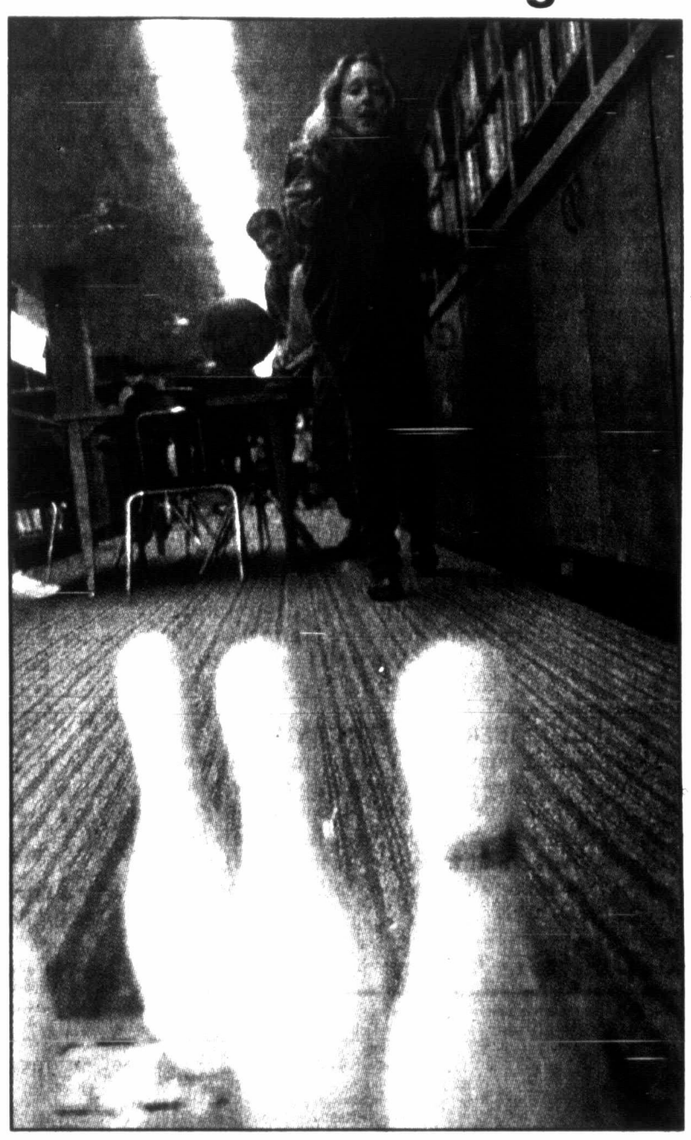

Wilke is past president of the North American Association for Environmental Education, which will release new environmental teaching standards within two weeks. Reviewed by 1,000 educators and experts, the standards are to help teachers choose materials free of bias, scientifically accurate and with balanced viewpoints.

Next spring, the association is releasing guidelines on what fourth-, eighth- and 12th-graders need to know to be "environmentally literate," Ed McCrea, the group's executive director, said.

In Washington, a conservative science and public-policy research group, the George C. Marshall Institute, has appointed an independent commission to examine teaching materials and determine whether environmental issues are presented objectively.

What leading environmental educators know and practice often differs from what goes on in many school classrooms, where teachers of the science sometimes aren't even trained in it, said Jo Kwong, environmental researcher at George Mason University.

A round of 'moleing'

Rachel Laycock goes for a strike playing "moleing" during a celebration of Mole Day at Pampa High School Wednesday evening. The day was set aside to encourage enthusiasm in chemistry and celebrates the mole, a unit of chemical measurement. Punnishly named activities included a "mole-in-one" putting contest, "Twist-a-Mole" game based on Twister and the "mole stroll" race. Students earned "mole bucks" in the contests which can be exchanged for extra credit in their chemistry classes.

Congressional candidates discuss Medicare, Social Security issues

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Candidates for 13th Congressional district seats promoted their records and issued their promises during a pair of stumping speeches this morning at the Hoechst Celanese Pampa plant.

Republican incumbent Mac Thornberry and Democratic challenger Samuel Brown Silverman gave brief campaign speeches and fielded questions from Celanese employees, focusing mainly on Medicare, Social Security and the economy.

Congress has "a stake to make sure (Medicare) doesn't go bankrupt," Thornberry told the audience of about 70. Congressional measures in the past two years will make sure Medicare spending increase two times the rate of inflation rather than three times.

That will prevent Medicare from going bankrupt in the year 2000, Thornberry said, instead stalling that danger another 12-15 years.

Silverman agreed that Medicare needed to be reformed but said seniors in the district expect the changes to be "done fairly."

He cited the $270 million in Medicare reforms done by the Republican-controlled Congress and a proposed $245 million "special-interest" tax cut that "doesn't strike many people as fair."

Thornberry said Congress must prove to citizens that it can responsibly reform an entitlement through Medicare efforts before it tackles Social Security.

Silverman, responding to a question from Fran Kludt, conceeded that there is no acutal money in a Social Security trust fund, merely a "collection of IOU's."

Both parties have raided the fund in the past 25 years, he said, advocating putting a stop to the raiding, placing the trust fund on firm financial ground and restoring what has been taken away.

That wouldn't necessarily mean an increase in Social Security taxes, he said. Silverman said he would promote applying the same tax level to all income levels.

Today's forum was the latest in a series sponsored by Celanese's responsible citizen committee for the plant's employees.

The candidates also addressed issues including illegal drugs, gun control, education and welfare reform.

Dole insists there's still time to win presidency

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) – Bob Dole said today he is frustrated that his campaign has failed to cut into President Clinton's lead in polls but insisted there was still time to win. "Wake up, America!" he exhorted.

Returning to his charge that Clinton can't be trusted, Dole urged a rally at Pensacola Junior College not to believe "the liberal media" and polls showing the president with a double-digit national lead.

"The media will not decide the winner of this election. You'll decide the winner of this election," Dole said in a fiery speech. "Don't believe what you read. Believe what you feel."

He acknowledged that it has been difficult for him to gain any ground, and he's not sure why.

"Everybody gets frustrated. I get frustrated, and I'm the most optimistic man in America. I wonder what people are thinking about, or if they're thinking at all," Dole said.

Dole then referred Clinton's comments in an MTV interview that he would inhale marijuana if he had another chance, the subject of a hard-hitting Dole campaign ad. "Who do you want in the White House? Who do you want speaking for your children?"

"Wake up, America! You're about to do yourselves an injustice if you vote for Bill Clinton," he said.

This late in the campaign, Dole is still working safe Republican territory in part to overcome the damage done by a barrage of negative TV ads casting the GOP as the enemy of Medicare and other social programs.

Dole today was continuing his Southern swing in the Florida Panhandle, Alabama and Louisiana before ending the day in Texas. Polls suggest the campaign is struggling in some of these states, which should be reliably Republican.

Much of the damage was done this summer, when Dole had few means to reply. Now Dole is urging voters not to believe the ads, which he claims have cost the Democrats $91 million nationwide.

"Don't listen to those nasty ads. They're not true anyway," Dole told a noisy rally Wednesday night in a community college gymnasium in Panama City.

When someone in the audience yelled out, "Give 'em hell, Bob," Dole, paraphrasing Harry Truman, replied, "We will. We're going to tell the truth and they'll think it's hell."

The issue of Medicare is crucial to the big elderly population in Florida, which boasts 25 electoral votes and hasn't gone Democratic since Jimmy Carter won in 1976.

To illustrate the difficulties ahead, Texas Gov. George W. Bush said in April that "if Senator Dole has to campaign in Texas in October, it would be a sign we are in trouble."

The Medicare ads, which have aired heavily in Georgia and Florida, hammer Dole for supporting a balanced budget proposal that would slow projected growth in Medicare spending. The Democrats call that a cut, but Dole says his new plan to balance the budget would boost Medicare spending 39 percent by the year 2002.

"We do not touch Medicare," Dole told another rally in Jacksonville. "There will be no cuts in Medicare and no seniors will be forced off Medicare under our plan. Those are the facts."

Big jack-o-lantern

Sure, we've all heard tales and even seen photos of so-called giant pumpkins. But perhaps not this big. A large roll of hay in the 800 block of South Sumner has been decorated with a jack-o-lantern's face to indicate fall and the upcoming Halloween celebration on Oct. 31. The gentleman hanging around in the background had no comment on the display.

Woman leaves millions to organizations

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Not even her neighbors had any idea just how generous the very modest Agnes Plumb could be.

The 88-year-old woman, who died a year ago, surprised everyone who knew her by leaving behind a $98 million estate.

Officials disclosed Wednesday that Plumb, whose fortune came from Kellogg's stock she inherited from her father, donated her wealth to the Crippled Children's Society, Orthopaedic Hospital and the UCLA School of Medicine, all of Los Angeles, and the St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Each organization receives $22.5 million. That is the largest single gift ever for St. Jude's, Orthopaedic Hospital and the Crippled Children's Society and the second-largest for the UCLA medical school.

Plumb asked in her will that Orthopaedic Hospital use the money for "medical expenses and procedures for needy children." The Crippled Children's Society was to use its share for "needy children with birth defects."

Olympic bomb suspect wants FBI clearance

ATLANTA (AP) – Richard Jewell was described as a "former suspect" by a judge who ordered the FBI to make public its reasons for targeting the former security guard as a suspect in the Olympic bombing.

"The court concludes that the Jewell chapter of the Centennial Olympic Park bombing investigation has been closed," U.S. District Judge J. Owen Forrester ruled Wednesday. "Most of its details have now become merely a historical footnote to the ongoing investigation."

Jewell's attorneys said the ruling demonstrates his innocence, and they demanded that the FBI announce that it has cleared the Olympic Park security guard who helped evacuate the area where he had found a suspicious-looking knapsack before it exploded.

"We'll be glad to move from a headline to a footnote," Jewell lawyer Jack Martin said. "Judge Forrester is an experienced, well-respected voice at the courthouse and a former prosecutor. His instincts are worth paying attention to."

"The information about Richard Jewell is simply that he found the knapsack," attorney Lin Wood told CNN today. "There is no other evidence in any way that links Richard Jewell to this crime and it's time for the U.S. attorney's office and the FBI to acknowledge what Judge Forrester has said: The Richard Jewell investigation should be brought to a close. Publicly."

Forrester's ruling was a response to requests from news organizations to view the secret court affidavits the FBI used to gain permission to search Jewell's apartment.

The judge gave the FBI five days to make the documents public.

A lawyer for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and WSB-TV said he hoped the information would be available even sooner and that federal prosecutors would not appeal Forrester's ruling.

In Washington today, Attorney General Janet Reno would not comment on whether federal investigators were going to clear Jewell soon.

Boerne to press court in fight over church

BOERNE, Texas (AP) – A settlement hasn't been ruled out, but Boerne city leaders are gearing up for a U.S. Supreme Court battle with the Archdiocese of San Antonio over the future of a Catholic church.

"If that's what it takes to resolve it, let's get it on," City Councilman Ben Stafford said Wednesday.

The Archdiocese of San Antonio sued Boerne in 1994 over the city's refusal to allow the razing of most of St. Peter's Catholic Church because part of the 73-year-old church is in a historic preservation district.

The archdiocese wants to expand the church from 250 seats to 700 seats.

The council voted unanimously Tuesday to continue its legal fight after an outpouring of public support, including a pledge by St. Peter's parishioner Dub Smothers to raise $25,000 to help the city defend itself.

Smothers, 66, said he is siding with the city because of church officials' refusal to reach a compromise with the city.

"Boerne is defending the rule of law on behalf of every city in the United States," he said.

The church's lawsuit claims the city is violating the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, which says government must have a compelling reason before interfering with the practice of religion.

St. Peter's Church Rev. Tony Cummins maintains the city is illegally denying parishioners the opportunity to worship together.

But city officials say they are just enforcing their zoning ordinance.

Similar church-state disputes have arisen elsewhere over the 1993 law, and the Boerne conflict is seen as a test case with national repercussions for government regulation of religion.

Pope: Evolution theories OK if God given credit

VATICAN CITY (AP) – Pope John Paul II, continuing his reconciliation of science and faith, has told scientists that theories on evolution must take into account that creation was the work of God.

In a message to the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, which is meeting in Rome this week, John Paul recalled how one of his predecessors, Pope Pius XII, proclaimed in 1950 that evolutionary doctrine was a "serious hypothesis."

Charles Darwin's theory of evolution – that humankind was the product of a slow, evolutionary process from early forms of life – conflicts with the literal biblical account of creation, that the world, including humans, was created in six days.

Noting that the topic was on the scientists' agenda, John Paul called the subject of the origin of life and of evolution "an essential theme which interests the church very much."

The pope said since 1950, new knowledge has led to the recognition that evolution theory is "more than a hypothesis."

John Paul cautioned that the church and the faithful must remain firm on two points — that creation itself is the work of God, and human beings have another dimension beyond the physical.

In the message released Wednesday, the pope said evolution theory does not give enough weight to a person's spirit and was "incapable of establishing the dignity of man."

Throughout his papacy, John Paul has paid close attention to science. In 1992, at the end of 13 years of study by the Vatican, he declared that the church was wrong to condemn the astronomer, Galileo Galilei.

An Inquisition court condemned Galileo in 1633 for contending the Earth was not the center of the universe, as church teaching then held. The church accused him of heresy and forced him to renounce his astronomical beliefs.

Dole tries to convince Perot to abandon race, endorse his bid for the presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) – Hoping to shake up the presidential campaign in its closing days, Bob Dole tried to persuade Ross Perot to quit the race and endorse the GOP ticket. But a Perot aide says the Reform Party candidate "is in the race to stay."

With Dole's blessing, campaign manager Scott Reed traveled to Dallas on Wednesday to make the entreaty, according to several Republican sources in Washington, two senior Dole-Kemp campaign officials among them. The sources spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Dole repeatedly declined to answer questions on the matter, at one point telling reporters traveling with him in Florida, "You know I have a hearing problem."

Within the Dole campaign, there were deep divisions on the wisdom of the strategy. Some advisers suggested Dole had little choice but to seek a dramatic turn of events, while others said it was a fool's errand that would only encourage Perot to ridicule the Republican candidate.

Word of the entreaty stunned GOP operatives, including party chairman Haley Barbour.

Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman refused to confirm the meeting took place. But she said emphatically: "Mr. Perot has no intention of quitting the race, no intention whatsoever." Perot himself was to address the matter today at a National Press Club luncheon in Washington.

The appeal to Perot was evidence of the frustration within the Dole camp as the campaign entered the final twelve days with Clinton comfortably ahead in national polls and enjoying a similarly lopsided advantage in state-by-state electoral vote counts. A new NBC-Wall Street Journal poll, for example, had Clinton at 52 percent, Dole at 35 percent and Perot at six percent.

Dole has focused on conservative themes of late in an effort to rally GOP base voters. In Georgia on Wednesday, he promoted his support for balancing the budget and banning flag burning and late-term abortions. But Dole is facing stiff competition from Clinton on traditionally Republican turf. Both candidates were in Florida on Wednesday, for example, and are competing for votes in Alabama today.

And as he tries to shore up his Republican base, Dole also has profound problems with moderate women and others in the middle of the electorate, including independents alienated from both parties who might be inclined to support Perot, even if in protest.

In the view of some Dole advisers, a Perot endorsement could swing several states in Dole's favor, especially in the Mountain West. Texas and Florida are also two traditionally Republican states where Clinton and Dole are running neck-and-neck with Perot garnering roughly six percent in the polls.

"Any time you can pick up a few points here or there it's worth the effort," said Florida GOP Sen. Connie Mack.

More significantly, the GOP sources said that Dole's last hope was a dramatic development would throw what for months has been a remarkably stable race into sudden turmoil.

White House aides cast Reed's mission as proof of Dole's desperation, although their eagerness in asking how Perot responded underscored their desire to keep the closing days free of surprises.

Clinton campaign spokesman Joe Lockhart said Dole's poll deficit left him little choice but to "search out votes wherever he can find them." But he said, "We believe that on the issues that are most important to Mr. Perot – the deficit, campaign finance reform – we have a stronger record."

Ironically, it was Perot's decision to quit the 1992 race just before the Democratic convention that helped boost Clinton from third place to first. Perot later rejoined the race – after inviting officials from the Bush and Clinton campaigns to travel to Dallas to seek his endorsement.

Dole decided to go forward with the call on Perot despite the Texan's unpredictability and recent bad blood between the Dole and Perot camps. It was Dole's campaign that insisted Perot be excluded from the presidential debates, drawing sharp criticism from Perot and Reform Party running mate Pat Choate.

Lawyers play up character issue

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) – Playing the character card to the hilt and describing new evidence for jurors, lawyers called O.J. Simpson a "cold-blooded killer" lurking behind an amiable face adored by millions.

As Simpson rolled his eyes, shook his head and repeatedly mouthed the words "that's not true," opposition lawyers Wednesday promised a journey through his tortured soul and troubled marriage, to go along with a rehash of the criminal trial.

It was a carefully crafted groundwork for motive, which many believed was lost in the criminal trial because prosecutors relied so heavily on scientific evidence.

"The evidence and testimony will take you beneath the polished veneer to the sometimes dark, violent and frightening world of uncontrollable rage," plaintiff lawyer John Q. Kelly said.

He was to resume his opening statement today in the wrongful-death trial, followed by remarks from lead defense lawyer Robert Baker.

Simpson was acquitted last October in the 1994 slayings of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Ms. Simpson's estate and Goldman's family are suing Simpson for unspecified damages, claiming he is responsible for the deaths.

Parents wish to spread message about air bags

WASHINGTON (AP) – Parents whose children have been killed by automobile air bags say the public is not getting the word that children up to age twelve should ride in the back seat.

Officials at the government's highway safety agency, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, have repeatedly said that, but "the message isn't getting out," Ken German of Houston said Wednesday.

"Kids should be put in the back seat because passenger-side air bags kill children," said German, whose nine-year-old son was killed last year by an air bag.

"There are a lot of children out there that are still in front of these air bags," said Albert Ambrose, whose five-year-old daughter Frances was knocked unconscious last month by an air bag during a low-speed crash in Nashville, Tenn. She never woke up.

"Our life has been torn apart these past few weeks," said Ambrose, who is trying to buy a used car that does not have a passenger-side air bag.

The highway safety agency concluded in a report released Wednesday that Frances was properly using her lap and shoulder belt when she was killed by the force of a deploying air bag.

It was the first time an agency investigation showed that a child was correctly belted – and yet was killed by the force of the deploying bag.

At least 28 children and 19 adult drivers have been killed by air bags, according to NHTSA. But in previous accidents, the agency said the children appeared to be unbelted or improperly belted, or the evidence was inconclusive.

THE FACTS

Whoops! There he goes again.

It seems candidate Roach has started running some ads stating that District Attorney John Mann recommended probation in an assault case that involved one RON CARR (plaintiff). Once again the facts speak very clearly as to what REALLY occurred. The following is the transcript from that proceeding:

NO. 5205

THE STATE OF TEXAS) IN THE 31ST JUDICIAL

DEWAYNE RODNEY HILL) GRAY COUNTY, TEXAS
(defendant)

STATEMENT OF FACTS
VOLUME II OF II VOLUMES
JULY 19, 1994

THE COURT: Has counsel had time to review the presentence investigation report?

MR. MANN: State has, Your Honor.

DEFENSE: Defense has, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Closing by the State?

MR. MANN: Your Honor, the evidence in this case suggesting that probation would be an appropriate resolution in this matter is greatly out weighed to the contrary by the evidence. The State does not support the application for probation. In the event the Court elects to impose community supervision or probation, the State sincerely urges the Court to impose at least the maximum probation of bootcamp, but the evidence does not warrant probation in this case.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Indonesian funds look suspicious

In politics, it's often true that money talks, walks and even does handstands. That is why the sources of a candidate's campaign largess are everybody's business. Any cause-and-effect connection between a donor's philanthropy and the donee's public policies is fair grist for rhetoric on the hustings and table talk in the homes of voters.

So it is with the Yellow Brick Road of cash that has been discovered meandering from Indonesia right up to the back door of the Clinton campaign.

Now, we aren't among those who reflexively gasp at the prospect of foreigners contributing to American politicians. As long as the generosity is open and acknowledged, shouldn't it be left to voters to judge how relevant the donations are to the candidate's fitness?

The ties that bind Bill Clinton and the plutocratic Riady family of Indonesia might be all too relevant to the question of his fitness for another term. His administration has taken a notably indulgent line on the Indonesian regime's jackbooting in East Timor. Did Indonesian interests buy this muted U.S. response?

Sure, that's a stark way to put the issue, but the facts call for forthrightness, both in the questions that should be put to the president and in the answers he owes.

Members of the Riady clan and the U.S. subsidiaries of the family's company, Lippo Group, have showered more than $475,000 on the Democratic Party. A Riady organization gave a lucrative job to Clinton crony Webster Hubbell between his departure in disgrace from the Justice Department and his entry into jail for bilking his law firm.

And then there is the Indonesian landscape architect and his wife who, prior to their recent departure from the country, were living in modest quarters in the Washington, D.C., area, but were somehow able to shell out more than $400,000 in donations for the Democratic National Committee. The woman in question happens to be the daughter of a business associate of the Riadys. There are laws, if relatively porous ones, against foreign nationals bankrolling American politicians, so the question naturally arises: Did this couple merely act as couriers for some generous soul who preferred not to step from the shadows?

There is a larger issue, however, one that transcends the possibility that finance laws were bent or broken, and even the foreign connection that so titillates the pundits and the Republican partisans. What we have here, arguably, is just one more special interest dropping truckloads of dollars on politicians in a position, potentially, to provide favors in return. In that sense, the Indonesians' check writing is of a piece with the generosity, say, of the Archer Daniels Midland Co. marketers of ethanol and other government-subsidized boondoggles – to Bob Dole. As long as government is large enough and intrusive enough to give the big interests an incentive to play "Dollars for Influence," you can be confident they'll play away.

Berry's World

Orlando deserves the Heisman

Stephen Chapman

The Berlin Wall has fallen, Madonna has embraced motherhood and a Democratic president has proudly declared that "the era of big government is over." But not until Dec. 14 will we find out if truly radical progress is possible in this world. That's the day the Downtown Athletic Club of New York City will announce the winner of the 1996 Heisman Trophy for the best player in college football. If Orlando Pace wins, look out your window to see if pigs are flying by.

College football has changed a lot in the last 60 years. Single-wing formations, leather headgear and normal-sized men have all been long since consigned to misty memory. But one thing has remained unaltered. Since its creation in 1935, the Heisman has never gone to a player who was not a quarterback, a running back or a receiver – which disqualifies about 80% of the young scholars on the field. It's as if the Academy Award for best picture were given only to comedies with a West Coast setting released in the first four months of the year.

This year, however, serious people have contemplated the possibility that the Downtown Athletic Club might recognize the existence of players whose humble duties do not include personally transporting the football. Why? Because of Orlando Pace, the 320-pound Ohio State offensive tackle whose mission in life is making defenders dearly wish they'd opted for tennis. So dominant is he in the unheralded business of leveling defensive linemen that someone had to invent a new statistic for him: pancakes, which is what opposing players look like after he has made contact with them.

Running behind Pace is something Carolyn Besette-Kennedy could probably do, since it is not much harder than running behind an Abrams tank. In fact, Pace's pulverizing blocks have already won one Heisman. It was given last year to Eddie George, who gained 1,927 yards skipping through the interstate sized running lanes created by his Ohio State teammate. A measure of Pace's worth is that the Buckeyes lost four of last year's offensive stars to the NFL – George, a quarterback and two receivers – but, with Godzilla still anchoring the line, they are playing better this year.

No one really seems to doubt that Pace deserves the highest honor in his game. Sports Illustrated flatly calls him "the best college football player in the country." Having had an up-close view of professional linemen, George still says, "He's the best I've ever seen." Former Pro Bowl tackle Jim Lachey says Pace could more than hold his own in the NFL right now.

But talent isn't everything. Heisman voters traditionally regard linemen the way the average person regards landfills – necessary but not something to celebrate. They have an incurable weakness for jut-jawed quarterbacks, sleek runners and swift pass-catchers.

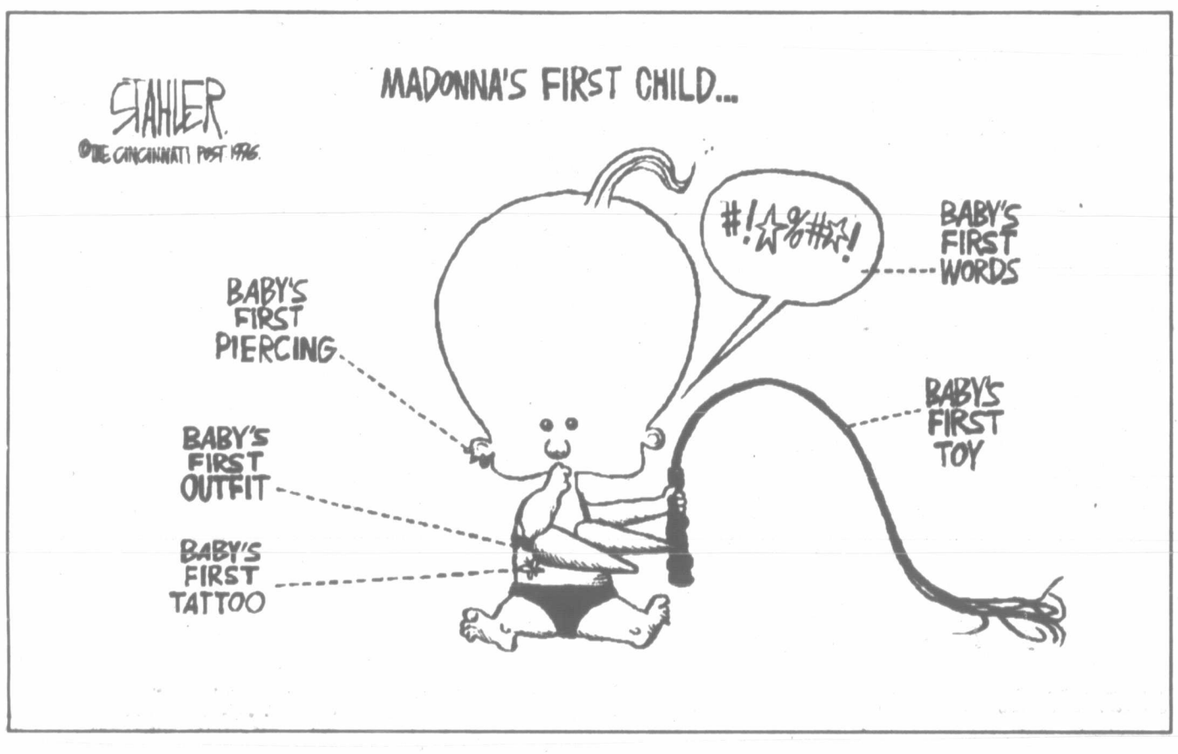

Grimy, bad-tempered behemoths shaped like petroleum storage tanks are not quite their taste. Linemen are supposed to be content with the Lombardi Award (won last year by Pace, the first sophomore to do so) and the Outland Trophy, which were created just for them.

Well, we all know separate is rarely equal. The Heisman is supposed to be for the best player, period, not the best player who looks good in a Speedo. Plenty of linemen have been deserving. When NFL teams have to put their money and their future on the line, they're nearly as likely to prefer a baby rhino as a matinee idol. In the last ten years, four of the first picks in the annual NFL draft – which represents the league's judgment of the best player available – were linemen or linebackers. Why is the Downtown Athletic Club less broadminded?

If they were attuned to the public pulse, Bob Dole and Bill Clinton would embrace the cause of stamping out this form of discrimination. Dole could compare himself to Pace – a hard working guy who has spent his career in the trenches getting the job done, while pretty boys like Bill Clinton get the credit. Clinton, on the other hand, could portray his party as the champion of ordinary Americans, trying to spread the wealth to the interior-linemen type people instead of letting those in touchdown scoring jobs hog it all.

In a country at peace, with a healthy economy, this could be just the issue needed to rouse some interest in the presidential campaign. Heck, ESPN would probably be willing to air the debates.

More important, it would encourage the Heisman voters to do the right thing. But maybe this year, they'll see the light on their own. After all, if Orlando Pace loses, who's going to tell him?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 24, the 298th day of 1996. There are 68 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 24, 1945, the United Nations officially came into existence as its charter took effect.

On this date:

In 1537, Jane Seymour, the third wife of England's King Henry VIII, died 12 days after giving birth to Prince Edward, later King Edward VI.

In 1648, the Peace of Westphalia ended the Thirty Years War and effectively destroyed the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1861, the first transcontinental telegraph message was sent as Justice Stephen J. Field of California transmitted a telegram to President Lincoln.

In 1901, Anna Edson Taylor, a 43-year-old widow, became the first person to survive going over Niagara Falls in a barrel.

Emperor Bill lies about Bosnia

Charley Reese

Emperor Bill Clinton said about a year ago he was absolutely certain U.S. forces would be out of Bosnia by Dec. 20.

Now, he says some U.S. forces will remain until next March.

In the International Herald Tribune, however, NATO officials are quoted as saying ground forces will have to be kept in Bosnia for at least two years. The story also quotes French officials as saying that if the U.S. ground troops are pulled out, the French and British will yank their troops, too.

Ergo, the famous mission creep is upon us, and in fact, Americans will be bogged down in Bosnia indefinitely as long as Emperor Bill and the other internationalists have their way.

Aside from costing billions, it is dangerous. The so called Dayton Accords, forced on the Bosnian Serbs, did not solve any real problems; rather they created a de facto separate state – the exact opposite of the agreement's claimed intention.

Serbs, Croats and Muslims continue to hate each other and show no sign of wishing to share a common country, much less a common government. The Serbs, for example, boycotted the opening of the new Bosnian government.

More to the point, there is no sane, rational reason why the existence or nonexistence of an artificially created little country in the middle of the Balkans with ethnically mixed populations who hate each other should in any way, shape, form or fashion be of interest to Americans, much less in their national interests.

The area has no strategic or economic resources. The inter-ethnic feuds do not threaten anyone except the feuders. If it is a problem for anyone but Serbs, Croats and Muslims, it is a problem for Europeans, not for Americans.

Nor can we justify our intervention on moral grounds. From the beginning, rather than being a disinterested mediator, the U.S. government – at the incitement of public relations firms, to its shame assumed a hostile attitude toward the Serbs and has consistently ignored atrocities committed against the Serbs by the other two parties to the conflict.

To maintain a moral stance, one must condemn all atrocities, not just those which suit one's larger political goals. Furthermore, the U.S. political position that Muslims and Croats deserve their own countries but that Serbs do not is nonsensical on its face. How contradictory can a U.S. policy be?

On the one hand, the government claims Bosnia must be and now is a united country; on the other hand, U.S. retired military, at taxpayers' expense, are training the Muslim army. In other words, while claiming to seek a united Bosnia, we are training and arming one faction of Bosnians so they can better kill another faction of Bosnians.

The lack of interest in and contempt for the American people by the imperial government in Washington is nowhere better illustrated than in foreign policy. American lives and billions of tax dollars are squandered overseas for obscure reasons while American politicians lie and obfuscate.

Billions go overseas while at home American children go to schools about to fall down around their ears and try to learn without the benefit of textbooks. The nation's capital is a bankrupt cesspool of corruption, but we spend $3 billion replacing one bad Haitian government with another bad Haitian government.

Much of the nation's infrastructure – bridges, roads, water systems, sewage plants – are failing from old age, but Congress finds more than $12 billion every year to give away to foreign countries to improve their infrastructure.

The problem with Emperor Bill is not what he says. The problem is his word is no good. He was, in my judgment, lying when he said the troops would be in Bosnia only a year. He is lying now when he says they will be there only until next March.

An example of free speech in action

Nat Hentoff

The faculty of California State University at Northridge was recently divided as to whether former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard David Duke should come to the campus for a debate on affirmative action. Journalism professor Cynthia Rawitch, a member of the faculty senate, pointed out during debate there, "We'd look foolish if we were the only part of the university that failed to support free speech since the students and the university president have already supported Duke's coming."

When she sat down, a young professor leaned forward and instructed her, "There is such a thing as too much free speech, you know."

"As a matter of fact," Rawitch told him, "there isn't. That's the point."

Rawitch's point was largely lost during preparations for the debate. A good many newspapers and columnists deplored the university's decision to have Duke come. ("Duke is beyond the pale of legitimate political discussion," said the San Francisco Examiner.) However, the Los Angeles Times, in an editorial, noted that "free speech is not the exclusive province of excellent messengers or even decent ones."

The subject of the debate was Proposition 209 – which will be on the state's ballot in November. It would prevent California from granting "preferential treatment as to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin in the operation of public employment, public education or public contracting."

Ward Connerly, chairman of the Proposition 209 campaign and a member of the state's Board of Regents, wrote Dr. Blenda Wilson, president of Northridge, saying he would accept a previous invitation to participate in the debate provided she would instruct Duke not to come, "unless, it is your choice to dishonor your university."

Dr. Wilson, former chancellor of the University of Michigan, Dearborn and Northridge's first black president, has made it clear she finds Duke's views repellent. She told Connerly that it was up to the students who invited Duke, not her, to rescind the invitation. But she emphasized that since Northridge is "a public, taxpayer-supported institution, it must always be an open place where all ideas are explored. If only one view is heard, there is no learning."

Later, Dr. Wilson said to me, "This debate about the debate is what I call 'a teaching moment.' I think the students will learn a lot about free speech."

California Gov. Pete Wilson emphatically disagreed. He insisted – as did Ward Connerly – that bringing Duke was a setup to discredit Proposition 209. Meanwhile, opponents of 209 were just as furious, predicting Duke would arouse the kinds of racial prejudices that might militate against Proposition 209.

Dr. Wilson remained calm and firm. "You know," she told me, "there is a 22-year-old black student who says he wants Duke to come because 'I've never heard a white racist out loud.' " Also wanting to hear and challenge Duke were leaders of some of the minority groups on campus, including the Black Student Union and the American Indian Student Association.

At last, on Sept. 25 the debate took place despite efforts of Proposition 209 officials to get a court to stop the dread arrival of David Duke. Opposing Duke in the debate was Joe Hicks, director of the Los Angeles Multicultural Collaborative. Some 800 diverse spectators peacefully listened to, and some participated in, the exchange of views. Outside, however, there were confrontations – some briefly violent but controlled by the police.

Prominent among the 250 protesters outside were members of a Berkeley based group, BAMN, who are dedicated to opposing Proposition 209 "By Any Means Necessary." At Northridge to disrupt the debate, they failed, and few Northridge students joined them.

Also on hand, as reported by Sarah Lubman of the San Jose Mercury News, was Susan Scheer, "one of 15 self-proclaimed communists." She shouted "No free speech for racists!" – and felt good.

Ward Connerly, exercising his own free speech, held a counter rally nearby.

During the melee in front of the Student Union while the debate was going on, an aging member of the Jewish Defense League was dressed in Klan-like white robes to express his acute distaste of David Duke. It had not occurred to him that others who shared his view would not recognize his disguise. As he was being attacked by haters of the former Grand Wizard, the Jewish protester was rescued by members of the Nation of Islam, who had come to observe the goings-on.

That was a true multicultural teaching moment.

Astronomers discover odd new planet

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) – Astronomers are baffled by a new planet that is locked into a strange egg-shaped orbit around a twin star some 70 light years from Earth.

Astronomer William D. Cochran said Wednesday that the new planet has a roller-coaster like orbit that swoops down close to its central star and then swings far out into frigid fringes, a path through the heavens that is unlike any other known planet.

"We don't understand how it could have formed in such an orbit," said Cochran, who heads University of Texas team that discovered the planet at the same time that a group from San Francisco State found it independently.

The researchers presented their discovery at a national meeting of the American Astronomical Society's planetary division. The new planet is the latest in a series of bodies found in orbit of stars outside the solar system and is part of a quickening effort by astronomers to find distant worlds.

Cochran said the planet orbits the smaller of twin stars in the constellation Cygnus, a prominent stellar grouping known as the Northern Cross. The planet's star is called 16 Cygni B, and the larger companion star is 16 Cygni A.

"Of all the stars you might see in the sky, Cygni B is the most similar to our sun," Cochran said. It has the same mass and temperature as the sun, but the nearby twin star of Cygni B creates an entirely different type of environment.

Every 250,000 years, Cygni A and B pass within 65 billion miles of each other, a grazing passage by stellar standards. Cochran said the stars are so close, that the gravitational tug of Cygni A may have pulled the new planet into its wildly eccentric orbit.

It is unlikely that life exists on the new planet, said Cochran, because it probably is more like the gaseous planets, such as Jupiter or Saturn, than the rocky planets such as Earth or Mars.

Also, he said the wide-swinging orbit of the planet would cause extreme fluctuations in temperature.

During one part of its 804-day-long year, the planet would pass within 67 million miles of its sun. This would be the planet's summer, said Cochran. Then the planet would swing far out, reaching a point 158 million miles from the star. This would be its winter and it would last more than 500 days, the researcher said.

Most planets in our solar system have an almost circular orbit, like the Earth, and most theories about how planets form about stars are based on them settling into a circular orbit. The eccentric orbit of the new planet, said Cochran, adds a new dimension that astronomers will have to consider in theories about planetary formation.

Chador-clad doll is Iran's answer to Barbie

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Move over Barbie and Ken. Here come Sara in her floor-length chador and turban-wearing brother Dara.

The Iranian-made dolls are Tehran's latest attempt to resist unwanted Western influence.

"Barbie is an American woman who never wants to get pregnant and have babies. She never wants to look old and this contradicts our culture," Majid Ghaderi, who designed the new dolls, said in an interview Wednesday.

Ghaderi is director of the amusement department at the government sponsored Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults.

"Barbie is like a Trojan Horse," Ghaderi said. "Inside it, it carries its Western cultural influences, such as makeup and indecent clothes. Once it enters our society, it dumps these influences on our children."

Sara, dressed in Islam's traditional long flowing gown, the chador, will be introduced along with her brother Dara, clad in a long coat and a turban, the dress of a cleric, or mullah.

He said the project to design Sara and Dara began two years ago and the dolls were expected to hit the market next summer. The characters have long been used as educational characters in elementary schools.

Miss Canada faces assault charge for nasty right hook

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — The reigning Miss Canada International is talented, poised and accused of having a nasty right hook.

Police in St. John's have charged 20-year-old Danielle House with assault after a woman was hit in the face in a bar near St. John's Memorial University.

House, of Daniel's Harbor, Newfoundland, is preparing to represent Canada in the Miss World International pageant in Jamaica on Nov. 15.

Canadian pageant officials said there were no plans to take away her crown.

"We are totally behind her," said Mary Shute, coordinator of the Miss Newfoundland and Labrador pageant. "It's difficult to understand something like this happening to her. We feel she will rise above this and put it behind her."

House, a nursing student, is to appear in court on Friday.

The victim was treated in hospital for facial injuries and a chipped tooth.

The Miss World International pageant is separate from the better-known Miss World event, set for next month in India.

Safety belt survivors being sought

AMARILLO – The Safe Riders Program of the Texas Department of Health and the Texas Department of Transportation are conducting a search for survivors of motor vehicle crashes who attribute their survival to a safety belt, child safety seat or air bag.

The advertisements peope see on television stress these safety features – a family traveling along safe and sound in their new car, noted Tracy Tellman, traffic safety specialist. What about when all the shiny metal turns to crumpled metal? Is the family still safe and sound? Do these safety features really work and save lives?

The Safe Riders program provides public information on motor vehicle occupant protection, frequently receiving calls from legislators, educators and parents requesting information on the effectiveness of safety belts, safety seats and air bags, Tellman said.

"The best statistic is the name of someone in our area who is living proof of the effectiveness of these safety features. For this reason, we are extending an invitation to the people in this community to join the Texas Safety Belt Survivors' Club," Tellman said.

The club is a way for those who know first hand whether or not these safety devices work to tell their story. That story is much more effective in convincing others to buckle up than numbers with no name. Potential members may enroll by calling 1-800-8255.

For more information, call Tracy Tellman, traffic safety specialist at (806) 356-3295. Information about TxDOT is also available through the department's World Wide Web site (http://www.dot.state.tx.us).

Pampa United Way agency profile

This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1996 "Paint A Brighter Tomorrow" fund-raising campaign.

Linda Town, left, executive director of Tralee Crisis Center, visits with Mayor Bob Neslage on his proclamation of Domestic Violence Awareness Month in Pampa earlier this month.

Tralee Crisis Center provides services at no cost to victims of family violence, sexual assault and other crimes. Those services include safe shelter when home isn't safe, crisis counseling, legal and personal advocacy, a 24-hour hotline [669-1788], transportation, support groups for women and children, and transitional living arrangements.

In the past fiscal year, Tralee provided such help to 1,202 individual clients.

The greatest accomplishment for Tralee Crisis Center for Women Inc. in the past year has been the establishment of a plan of action with which to empower victims of family violence to further their education and become self-sufficient.

The agency, through its services to victims of spousal and family abuse, helps improve the quality of life in the community. Through a concentrated effort on inter-agency communication and collaboration, the quality and consistency of coordinated supportive services for family violence and sexual assault victims of crime have been improved.

As with other agencies receiving United Way funding assistance, the story lies not just in the number of clients served by the agency, but in the way in which those services can help the individual.

For example, for 18 years, Shawna (not her real name) had been living in an abusive relationship with her husband. The emotional and physical abuse she had endured was, in her own words, "something she had learned to accept as part of marriage."

But then Paul (not his real name) began to direct his verbal venom at their children and Shawna was able to see changes in their personalities, tension welling up inside them, that brought into focus how serious the situation had become. She couldn't stand the hurt they felt or their painful bewilderment when he lashed out at them and ridiculed their accomplishments.

Shawna called the Tralee Crisis Center Hotline, talked with staff members and, after careful consideration, decided to take her children and leave the home. She talked to Paul many times, telling him she did not wish to end the marriage but only wanted them to seek counseling. But Paul would not accept that he needed to change and eventually quit his job and moved away.

After their stay at the Tralee Shelter had expired, Shawna and her six children lived in a house on their own for four months while she and Paul tried to work things out over the phone.

One day Paul announced that he was receiving counseling and the future began to look brighter for them. By the time school was out, Shawna believed they could resume their marriage in a more loving atmosphere. They are still together as a family and things are much better. Shawna is grateful to Tralee for caring for her family and making a new beginning possible.

The continuing assistance of Pampa United Way enables the caring staff and volunteers of Tralee Crisis Center to help victims during their crises and educate the community about victims' needs and the resources available. Without United Way, it would be difficult to continue this vital agency's programs.

Your help is needed to continue the work of Pampa United Way and the agencies it supports. If a United Way volunteer has not called on you, call 669-1001 today to receive your pledge card. Don't delay please, give generously.

Prosecutors find witnesses uncooperative

FORT WORTH (AP) – Some witnesses aren't cooperating in the case alleging two former military cadets killed a 16-year-old girl to exact revenge for a brief sexual encounter, a prosecutor says.

As a result, grand jurors have been asked to help uncover evidence in the case, Assistant District Attorney Mike Parrish told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a defense attorney said he plans to file a motion this week seeking a bond reduction and evidentiary hearing for his client in an effort to learn more about the state's case.

Parrish said he has gone to the grand jury "a couple of times" to try to gain cooperation from unhelpful witnesses, who can be subpoenaed to appear before the panel.

"We're using the grand jury for what it was designed for, as an investigative tool," he said.

Parrish wouldn't say to whom he was referring or how many people he may have subpoenaed.

But the attorney for former Air Force Academy cadet David Graham said he assumes prosecutors are trying to get his client's fiancee and co-defendant, Diane Zamora, to testify.

"A suggestion by him (Parrish) that people aren't cooperating would lead me to believe that he is trying to get one of the targets to cooperate, and it's not my client, so by deduction it's Zamora," said attorney Dan Cogdell.

Zamora's attorney, John Linebarger, did not immediately return a call from the AP. A media consultant on the case, Mike Androvett, said he had no immediate comment.

Graham and Zamora, both 18, are charged with capital murder in the December death of Adrianne Jones of Mansfield, who reportedly had a sexual encounter with Graham. Police say the betrayal enraged Zamora, a former midshipman at the U.S. Naval Academy, who told Graham the only way for him to make it right was to kill Jones.

Study: Clot drugs, angioplasty both equally effective

BOSTON (AP) – A large head-to-head comparison of angioplasty and clot-dissolving drugs for heart attack victims has ended in a draw.

The study, performed on more than 3,000 patients, found no difference in the death rate after treatment with the rival approaches at ordinary community hospitals.

The issue of which is better has been a hot topic among the nation's heart specialists, and the latest report is unlikely to settle the debate.

During the past decade, clot-busting drugs such as TPA emerged as the front-line treatment for heart attacks, used on about 180,000 Americans at a cost of $350 million annually. If given soon enough, they can break up blockages in the heart's arteries, preventing death or permanent damage.

But more recently, an approach called primary angioplasty has challenged the dominance of these drugs. Angioplasty is already a mainstay of treatment for clogged heart arteries. Doctors push a catheter into the artery and inflate a tiny balloon that squeezes open the blockage to restore blood flow.

In its new application, some doctors are performing angioplasty as an emergency procedure within an hour or two after the heart attack patient arrives at the emergency room.

Small studies at hospitals that specialize in this approach found that heart attack patients who undergo angioplasty have a 40 percent lower death rate than those who receive clot busters. However, many experts wondered if it would work so well at hospitals where doctors do the procedure less often.

Honeymoon ends before it begins for co-defendants

LONGVIEW (AP) – The honeymoon ended before it started for Jimmy Mankins Jr. and his bride, who married by proxy earlier this week and face prison time for their roles in a May drug bust.

Justice of the Peace Sam Lawson married Mankins – once the prime suspect in the Kentucky Fried Chicken capital murder case – and Deborah Hicks, 42, of Longview on Monday. Standing in for the groom, who is in Smith County Jail awaiting sentencing, was Hicks' former nephew, Danny Rhodes.

It was Mankins' third marriage and Hicks' fourth.

"We were engaged before we were put in jail," Hicks told the Longview News-Journal. "We were going to get married in June."

Hicks reports to a women's prison Friday to serve a 27-month sentence for possession of methamphetamine. She was to have one visit with her husband, through a glass partition at the Smith County Jail, before beginning her sentence, a federal official said.

Mankins, the son of a former state lawmaker, pleaded guilty in August to one count of conspiracy to possess and distribute the drug.

Possible punishment for the 45-year-old Kilgore man remains in dispute as attorneys argue over how much methamphetamine was involved. That question directly affects sentencing. The government contends it was more than 100 grams; Mankins says it's no more than 93 grams.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tonda Grier said Wednesday that the sentencing issue has not been resolved.

But if the government proves its case, Mankins could face a minimum of ten years to life in federal prison. If Mankins prevails, sentencing would be no more than 30 years' imprisonment with no minimum punishment.

The charges resulted from a traffic stop in Kilgore. After obtaining consent to search the vehicle, an officer found the narcotics and arrested Mankins and Hicks.

The happy couple were not always on such good terms. At one point, Mankins' attorney filed court papers indicating a rift had developed between them, and that each was trying to blame the other for the drug violations.

In any case, Hicks is due to testify against Mankins in his sentencing as part of her plea agreement. Her prison term could be extended if she now tries to refuse, Grier said.

"She'd be foolish not to unless she's willing to go to jail for him," Grier said. "I don't understand why they would want to (get married), but I don't think it is going to affect in any way the outcome (of his sentencing)."

TxDOT announces new district engineer

AUSTIN – Mark E. Tomlinson will be the new district engineer in the Amarillo District of the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT), Executive Director Bill Burnett announced Wednesday.

Tomlinson has been director of transportation planning and development in TxDOT's San Angelo District since 1993.

Tomlinson's appointment fills a vacancy left when Amarillo District Engineer Billy Parks was assigned to head TxDOT's Corpus Christi District earlier this year. Tomlinson will assume the duties of Amarillo district engineer Nov. 1.

"I know that Mark will be missed in San Angelo," Burnett said. "His enthusiasm and professional expertise will continue the positive transportation program in the Amarillo District. I also want to express my appreciation to Martin Rodin, who has served as interim district engineer in Amarillo since September."

Rodin is the district's transportation planning director.

Tomlinson began working for TxDOT in 1980 as an engineering aide while earning a bachelor's degree in civil engineering at the University of Texas at Austin. Following graduation, he went to work for TxDOT's San Angelo District as an engineering assistant in 1983.

He was licensed as a professional engineer in 1987. Tomlinson served as the district's traffic engineer, assistant design engineer and design engineer before taking the job of director of transportation planning and development.

TxDOT's Amarillo District comprises the counties of Armstrong, Carson, Dallam, Deaf Smith, Gray, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Moore, Ochiltree, Oldham, Potter, Randall, Roberts and Sherman, a total of 17,868 square miles.

The district is responsible for 3,987 centerline miles of roadway.

Feds use protective suits to search North Texas ranch

POTTSBORO (AP) – What were they looking for?

That was the question of residents on Wednesday as officials from the Environmental Protection Agency used a backhoe and plastic protective "space suits" as they spent hours digging on a ranch near this town, about 70 miles north of Dallas.

Officials refused to comment about what they were doing, except that they were acting on a search warrant.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Robert Faulkner issued the search warrant, which is sealed. Agents from the EPA and Department of Defense arrived at the 137-acre ranch around 9 a.m. Wednesday to serve the warrant, Assistant U.S. Attorney H.S. "Bert" Garcia said.

"What gave it away was all the escort," one witness said. "At first there were some unmarked cars and a (Department of Public Safety) car. Then they brought in some trailers, rented trucks like the ones they used at the marina, and the excavator."

On July 8, agents from Internal Revenue Service, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Texas Department of Public Safety and U.S. Department of Defense raided Loe's Highport Marina at Lake Texoma with a federal search warrant. They took several boxes of business records, some of which were returned a few days later.

Lawyer David Stagner, who represents the marina, told reporters at the time that the agencies involved were "seeking documentation to verify whether Loe's was in compliance with the reporting and payment requirements of the various governmental entities with which it does business."

Garcia said he couldn't comment on whether Wednesday's warrant had anything to do with the July 8 raid. Furthermore, the Loe family said they didn't know why the EPA was digging on their ranch.

"We've been at work all day, so we don't know anything," Babo Loe said. "We would like to know."

Neighbors who watched as the workers lifted what appeared to be at least one 55-gallon drum out of the estimated 5-foot deep hole couldn't find out anything either.

They said the workers would dig, then stop and examine materials. They also said they appeared to test chemicals in the hole.

Parents Want To Reconcile Son's Amicable Divorce

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago, our son and his wife were divorced after 15 years of marriage. They have two young children. They always worked well together and seemed happy. We live 1,500 miles away and our visits were limited to two or three times a year, so we were unaware of their marital problems. They said very little about the reason for the divorce — but we have reason to believe that a poor sex life was the problem, and a brief try at counseling proved futile.

My son and his ex-wife are very involved with the children's school and sports, and they attend church together as a family every Sunday. We have visited them — together and separately — and have all laughed and reminisced over old times. They seem very comfortable together.

My husband and I are concerned about how difficult divorce is for the children. Since neither our son nor his ex-wife is involved in a new relationship, we feel strongly that they should try to get back together.

Should we arrange a dinner and tell them how we feel? Should we put our feelings into a letter? My husband thinks they both need a swift boot in the rear. We love them both and don't want to alienate either of them. Sometimes we think we should mind our own business. What do you think?

FRUSTRATED GRANDMA AND GRANDPA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: However well-meaning you may be, stay out of it. Your son and his ex-wife appear to be very mature. It is possible because of the good relationship they continue to enjoy, they may one day remarry. But the decision must be theirs.

Take comfort in the fact that despite the divorce, your grandchildren's needs are being put first.

***

DEAR ABBY: What can I do about someone who talks about her medical problems every time she sees me? I do feel empathy for her, but I don't need to hear about her ailments every time I'm with her.

I am not in the habit of sharing my medical history with her — or anybody else — and she's really getting on my nerves. She also brings up her financial situation, and that of her husband and their grown children.

I feel very uncomfortable listening to all this stuff that is none of my business. Besides, it is very boring. I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I've had about as much as I can tolerate. Any suggestions?

WONDERING IN WISCONSIN

DEAR WONDERING: Why not try the truth? You need not be brutal or even unkind. Simply tell her that you like her very much, but you are very uncomfortable when she dwells on her ailments. And when she launches into her financial report, tell her that her financial situation — and that of her family — is none of your business. Then change the subject.

Horoscope

Your Birthday

Friday, Oct. 25, 1996

In the year ahead, it looks as if the fruits of your labors will enable you to appreciate some of the finer things in life. You might also make some constructive changes at work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually it's best not to let emotion carry more weight than logic, but today you might be more accurate if you focus on how you feel about a certain issue. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not make snap judgments today in your commercial affairs. Before you make a move in any direction, be sure to understand all of the key points.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you have difficulty understanding why associates can't see your point of view today, re-evaluate your presentation. You must be explicit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Listen to your heart when dealing with family members today. Compassion will be more effective than criticism.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Personal desires can be gratified today, provided you want as much for others as you do for yourself. The more you give, the more you'll get.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might be enticed by a grandiose scheme that will look good on paper, but it will contain some flaws. Examine this proposal carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today, do not become involved with people whose ideals and standards are not on par with yours. You will be judged by the company you keep.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might find good fortune in an unlikely place today. Someone you don't know very well might be the source of this good luck.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A stressful situation might develop in a relationship today if you ignore an old, valued friend in order to pay more attention to someone new.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The objectives you've established for yourself in this cycle might look like pipe dreams to others, but they'll make sense to you. Pursue your present course with vigor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone you like might annoy you today, but if you overlook his faults and focus on your friend's virtues, his shortcomings won't matter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will be more likely to profit from collective endeavors than from independent efforts. Play the area with the greatest likelihood of success.

PAMPA — Despite last week's loss, Pampa stayed in front of Borger, but slipped from No. 44 to No. 56 in this week's Harris Rating System.

Borger, which edged Pampa, 17-14, last week, moved up seven spots to No. 64 in the Harris ratings. Among the other District 1-4A teams, Dumas is No. 69, Canyon No. 114, Randall No. 145, Hereford No. 164 and Amarillo Caprock No. 173

Corpus Christi Calallen is ranked No. 1 in Class 4A.

In Harris picks this weekend, Borger is favored over Amarillo Caprock by 22; Canyon over Randall by 15 and Dumas over Hereford, by 18. Pampa has an open date.

In area predictions, its Wheeler over Shamrock by 6; Canadian over Boys Ranch by 7 and Quanah over White Deer by 7.

In Class 2A, Canadian is ranked No. 68 and White Deer No. 137. Alto is ranked No. 1 in 2A.

Wheeler in Class 1A is ranked No. 29.

PAMPA — Pampa played Hereford in middle school football action Tuesday.

In the 8th grade division, Hereford won the A game, 33-0, and the B game, 49-6.

Pampa fell to Hereford, 12-8, in the 7th grade A game. Orlando Madrid scored on a two-yard run and also ran across the conversion. The B game ended in a scoreless tie.

RUNNING

FORT WORTH — Pampa's Ryan Hansen, competing in the 8 & under age group, ran a 6:27 in the mile to win his age group last weekend at St. Vincent's 16th annual Chili Trot.

Chris Hansen, also of Pampa, competed in the 40-45 age group. He ran a 4:50, which was the overall winning time.

Approximately 600 runners participated in the event.

HOCKEY

DETROIT (AP) — Most of the Detroit Red Wings' season thus far has seen coach Scotty Bowman mixing and matching different line combinations.

Now it seems he's hit upon one line he can rely on.

Brendan Shanahan had his second straight two-goal game Wednesday night, ending Detroit's power-play drought in the process, as the Red Wings downed the Dallas Stars 4-1.

Greg Johnson and Kris Draper added goals and Steve Yzerman had two assists as Detroit (5-4) won its third straight and moved above .500 for the first time this season.

Wednesday marked the second straight game that the line of Shanahan, Yzerman and Johnson was productive. They provided all the scoring, with Shanahan netting two goals, in Monday's 3-0 win over Los Angeles.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Entering the season, pundits marveled at what Texas Tech's defense lost from last year. Seven games into the season, the focus shifted to what it has gained.

Minus three of its stars from 1995, including linebacker Zach Thomas — an NFL rookie of the year possibility for the Miami Dolphins — the unit that was supposed to be average often has played exceptionally this year.

"They're very aggressive on defense and don't give up a lot of plays. They cause you problems," said Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum, whose Aggies host the Red Raiders Saturday. "I thought they played the heck out of Nebraska last weekend."

The Raiders (4-3, 3-2 Big 12) lost to the Cornhuskers 24-10, but it was 10-10 at halftime, and Tech defenders forced five turnovers and held a normally dominant Nebraska offense to nearly half its usual production.

Yanks even series at two games each

ATLANTA (AP) — Let the great debate begin.

Should the Atlanta Braves have pitched to Bernie Williams, or was it better to intentionally walk him with third base open and load the bases for Wade Boggs?

Braves manager Bobby Cox took one of the biggest gambles in baseball history Wednesday night, and it cost him Game 4 of the World Series.

Boggs drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the 10th inning, forcing home the go-ahead run that gave the New York Yankees an 8-6 win and evened the Series at two games each.

In the longest game in Series play — 4 hours, 17 minutes — New York overcame a 6-0 deficit to win, ensuring the teams will return to Yankee Stadium this weekend.

The Braves had not blown a six-run lead this season, and the loss set up a pivotal matchup tonight in the last game ever to be played at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"We've been going over the destiny kind of thing and so far, it's getting kind of eerie," Boggs said. "The Twilight Zone is starting to evolve."

After losing two at home, the Yankees have won twice in Atlanta, making them 7-0 on the road in this postseason. Tonight, they'll try to make it three in a row when Andy Pettitte faces Braves ace John Smoltz.

The Yankees can thank a decision by Cox for putting them in position for one of their most glorious wins ever.

The score was 6-all in the 10th and New York did not seem to have much going when Jim Leyritz grounded out and reliever Graeme Lloyd, allowed to bat for the first time because manager Joe Torre was running out of players, also bounced out against Steve Avery.

But Tim Raines drew a walk and took second on a single by Derek Jeter. That brought up Williams, the MVP of the AL championship series and a home run hero the previous night. Cox went to the mound, telling Avery to intentionally walk him, even though it meant loading the bases.

"Smart thing to do," Cox insisted. "He's the best hitter they've got. He carried them through Texas, he carried them through Baltimore and he's knocked the living hell out of us."

Cox walked the bases loaded in big games before.

In Game 7 of the 1991 World Series against Minnesota, he ordered an intentional walk to Kirby Puckett with runners on first and third with one out in the eighth inning and the score 0-0. That strategy worked when Kent Hrbek lined into a double play, although Jack Morris and the Twins beat Atlanta 1-0 in the 10th.

This time, it didn't work so well.

Even though rookie Andy Fox was on deck, Cox knew Boggs was still left in the dugout, the only position player the Yankees had left.

Boggs has a bad back and is in a postseason slump that saw him sit the last two games against left-handers. But he has 2,697 career hits, along with one best eyes in baseball that has helped him 1,280 walks.

With no margin for a mistake, Avery got ahead of Boggs 1-2, then threw a pitch that was barely low. Another close pitch missed, and Avery's full-count delivery was clearly too high for Boggs' keen eye.

"It hasn't let me down in 15 years," Boggs said. "It's the biggest walk I've ever had."

"They weren't walking to get to me," he said. "They were walking to get to Andy Fox, and that was probably Bobby Cox's whole strategy."

Torre said Cox's move made sense to him.

"You don't want Bernie Williams to beat you," Torre said. "I don't think this was anything to second guess."

Avery, sidelined for two months this season because of muscle problem in his side, lost his spot in the rotation and is being used in relief.

"Not being able to throw another strike was disappointing, but there's still a long way to go," Avery said.

Brad Clontz relieved, and Ryan Klesko entered at first base in a double switch. That backfired, too, when Charlie Hayes followed with a pop that Klesko dropped for an error, allowing another run to score.

Lloyd, who has emerged as a postseason star for the Yankees, escaped a jam in the ninth, and was the winner. John Wetteland got two outs for a save.

The victory matched the second-biggest comeback in World Series history. The biggest was the Philadelphia Athletics' rally from an 8-0 deficit in a 10-8 win in Game 4 in 1929; there were two other comebacks from six-run deficits, Brooklyn in 1956 against the Yankees and Toronto in 1993 against Philadelphia.

The Yankees fell behind quickly with Kenny Rogers on the mound. Torre wanted to drop him from the rotation after two poor starts in the AL playoffs, but was forced to use him because of a rainout in Game 1.

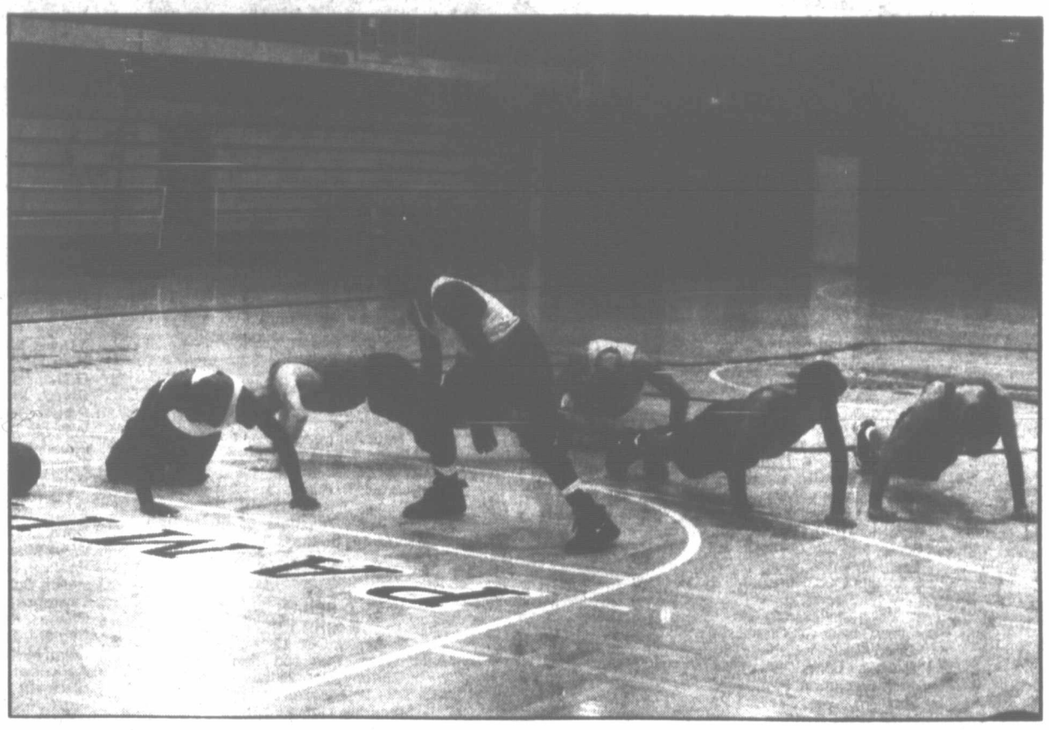

Fred McGriff's leadoff homer and a misplayed suicide-squeeze bunt by Jeff Blauser highlighted a four-run second inning, and Rogers left in the third as Atlanta made it 5-0.

An RBI single by Cecil Fielder that skipped past rookie right fielder Jermaine Dye for an error keyed a three-run sixth off Denny Neagle that brought the Yankees to 6-3.

Cox brought in relief ace Mark Wohlers to start the eighth, and he couldn't hold the lead.

Leyritz, who hit a 15th-inning home run last October that beat Seattle in the opening round of the playoffs, connected for a three-run shot that tied it.

Basketball practice

(Pampa News photo)

Pampa Harvester basketball prospects go through some old-fashion pushups in preparation for the 1996-97 basketball season. Team members will be introduced to the fans during the third annual Midnight Madness event Friday night, starting at 7:30 in McNeely Fieldhouse. There will be an intrateam scrimmage, and many prizes will be given away throughout the night, including airfare and tickets to Pampa's season opener against Denison Nov. 12 at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

Pampa Blue team wins third annual Tiger League tourney

The Pampa Blue All-Stars won the 3rd Annual Tiger League Football Tournament held Oct. 19, at Harvester Field in Pampa. The all-star team defeated Booker 50-0 the first game, coming from behind to beat Perryton 16-8 in the final game.

In the game against Booker, Derrick Williams ran 40-yards for a touchdown before throwing a pass to Luis Gonzales for the two-point conversion. Later, Kirk Kelp ran it in from 13 yards out for a touchdown with Williams adding the two-point conversion. A twelve yard run by Jordan Klaus and a pass from Williams to Gonzales made the score 24-0 at the start of the second quarter. Hunter Craig made a four yard run for a touchdown with Williams adding a six yard run for a touchdown and Arron Simon adding the two-point conversion. Rufus Estrada finished the scoring for the Pampa All-Stars by running in from 17 yards out and intercepting a Booker pass, taking it all the way in from 25 yards out.

In the second game, the all-stars fell behind early as the Perryton team scored on the third play from scrimmage with a 75-yard run by quarterback Murry and A. Johnston adding the two-point conversion. The Pampa All-Stars defense stiffened up and held Perryton scoreless the rest of the game while Anthony Dunn scored from 20 yards out and a Williams to Gonzales pass tied the game at 8-8.

Carlos Solis Jr. added a five yard burst up the middle for a touchdown and Williams added the two-point conversion to make the score 16-8. Perryton made one last effort when Johnston broke lose for 40-yards and Estrada made a game saving tackle at Pampa's 15-yard line.

The all-stars will travel to Borger Oct. 26 to participate in a tournament.

Buffaloes take on league-leading Javelinas

CANYON — Two teams at the top and bottom of the Lone Star Conference meet on the football field this weekend.

West Texas A&M University visits Texas A&M-Kingsville on Saturday with the contest starting at 7 p.m. The Buffaloes are 1-5 overall and 0-3 in conference play while the Javelinas are 4-2 and 3-0. The Javelinas are all alone in first place in the LSC standings while the Buffs are in the cellar by themselves.

The Buffs will be trying to snap a four-game losing streak while the Javelinas have won three in a row. WT has lost its last five games to Texas A&M-Kingsville and trails 6-3-1 in the all-time series.

Last week, the Buffs were blanked by Texas A&M-Commerce, 31-0. The Javelinas beat Central Oklahoma, 35-7, last week.

Going into this weekend's game, Buffs' running back Norman White needs 234 yards to surpass Bo Robinson as WT's all-time rushing leader. Robinson finished his career with 3,542 yards rushing while Eugene "Mercury" Morris tallied 3,388 yards for second place. White needs 80 yards to pass Morris for second place. He needs 31 carries to break the school mark for rushing attempts.

Robert Mack, a junior who starts at cornerback for the Buffs, is the LSC leader in kickoff return average at 42.7. Teammate Cliff Douglas is close behind at 32.4 for third place. Douglas is also 10th in the league in all-purpose yards with 75.8 per game.

Freshman kicker Todd Finney of Pampa is 10th in kick scoring with 2.5 points per game for the Buffs.

WT's offense is averaging 195.5 yards per game while opponents are averaging 341.83. The Javelinas are averaging 340.5 yards on offense and giving up 223.0 yards on defense.

Tricks could be Johnson's strategy against Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys know nobody knows them like Jimmy Johnson.

They figure Johnson will work long and hard coming up with defensive schemes to try to confuse offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese when the Miami Dolphins play the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

They concede Johnson will find a way to do some things different in the Dan Marino-led offense. Johnson knows the Dallas defense like few do.

And tricks? The Cowboys know how Johnson, a psychology major at the University of Arkansas, can concoct tricks to be used on special teams at critical moments.

They've been with him when he ordered onsides kicks and fake punts. Once, against the Indianapolis Colts, he had field goal holder Jay Novacek take a direct snap. Novacek jumped to his feet and ran for a touchdown.

"We're sure Jimmy is going to spring something," center Dale Hellestrae said. "He'll do something. Jimmy always has something special for special games. We know how good it would make him feel for Jimmy to win this game and get under (owner) Jerry Jones' skin."

Offensive guard Nate Newton said Johnson wants to confound the Cowboys.

"There will be some onside kicks or crazy punts," Newton said. "He'll do anything he can to win this game. I kind of like his style."

Running back Emmitt Smith said he loved playing for Johnson, who was always trying to find an edge.

"I didn't want to see him leave as head coach," Smith said. "I know he wants to win this game very, very bad. I can imagine what will be said after the game if he does win. He'll do everything in his power to win. He won't be on the field making tackles, but he'll come up with something extra, something special. We'll just try not to be surprised."

Bill Bates, the star of the Cowboys special teams, said Johnson usually tries to have at least two or three surprises ready for big games.

"Sometimes we never used them and sometimes we did," Bates said. "But Jimmy is never afraid to gamble or take a chance. We'll have to be alert for tricks on the special teams. We'll really have to be ready. If he sees an opening, he'll try something."

Johnson says the Dolphins don't have enough talent to try to fool the Cowboys. But maybe, just maybe, they'll try anyway.

"My tricks bag is empty," Johnson said. "I don't know that tricks will be the answer. There's no telling what we're liable to do."

Canyon girls capture Class 4A playoff spot

VOLLEYBALL

Canyon wrapped up the third playoff berth behind Dumas and Hereford with a 15-1, 15-9 win over Pampa in District 4-4A volleyball action Tuesday night in Canyon.

Pampa is 15-11 for the season and 5-6 in district while Canyon is 16-8 and 8-3.

The Lady Harvesters close out the season Saturday against Amarillo Caprock in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Matches begin at 2 p.m. with the junior varsity followed by the varsity.

Pampa has clinched fourth place in the district standings.

Hereford and Dumas have both secured playoff spots. Hereford defeated Dumas, 15-11, 12-15, 15-10, Tuesday night. Hereford is 11-1 in district and 26-1 for the season with the Lady Whitefaces' only loss coming against Dumas.

Fort Elliott completed its district play with a 15-0, 15-4 victory over Lefors Tuesday night.

The Lady Cougars are 12-9 for the season and 2-0 in district. Lefors is 0-2 in district and 4-10 overall.

"It was a team effort (against Lefors). We didn't miss any serves and we were able to work on different parts of our game during the match," said Fort Elliott head coach Dave Johnson.

Only two teams, Fort Elliott and Lefors, are in District 1-1A.

The Lady Cougars have scheduled a non-district match against Class 3A Perryton on the home floor Saturday before the playoffs begin. Perryton is battling for the second-place playoff spot in District 1-3A behind River Road. The Rangerettes are 3-1 in district and 11-16 overall.

Dumas won the Pampa 7th grade tournament title last weekend.

Pampa's A team, which finished fourth, closed the season with a 4-8 record.

Pampa's 8th graders finished with 3-9 record while the B team was 7-6.

JUST BECAUSE YOUR KNEE INJURY DIDN'T HAPPEN IN THE SUPERBOWL, DOESN'T MEAN IT SHOULDN'T BE TREATED AS IF IT DID.

So you slipped in the shower instead. You still deserve the kind of care that's going to get you better fast. And that's what you'll find at West Texas Sports Medicine. It's the same kind of care the pros rely on. Only it's right here in Pampa. Call Dr. Cook today for a priority knee injury consultation.

Kevorkian attends forty-fourth assisted death

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — A woman with ovarian cancer became the 44th person known to have committed suicide with help from Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who was bruised in a tussle with police after dropping off the body at a hospital, his lawyer said.

Kevorkian left the body of Barbara A. Collins, 65, of Falmouth, Mass., at William Beaumont Hospital on Wednesday night, giving workers a card describing her illness, said hospital spokeswoman Colette Stimmell.

Four police officers wrestled Kevorkian to the ground as he tried to leave the hospital, and held him for two hours in a patrol car before releasing him, lawyer Geoffrey Fieger told The Detroit News.

Fieger said Kevorkian had bad bruises following the confrontation, and that police seized the retired pathologist's car.

Stimmell said Kevorkian did not seek treatment at the hospital. Royal Oak police declined comment.

Fieger did not say where or how Collins died. An autopsy was planned for today.

What's the latest in fashion jewelry?

CINCINNATI (AP) — What's new in the death business? Why, cremation jewelry.

That's just one of the products featured at the National Funeral Directors Association trade show.

There's a lot at stake. The nation's 22,000 funeral homes represent a $7-billion-a-year industry, according to the association, whose annual convention ends today.

Terry Dieterle, a funeral home owner from Aurora, Ill., was showing off his cremation jewelry Tuesday.

Each handcrafted pendant is hollow and can be filled with the cremated remains of the departed. The lockets are made of 14-carat gold and can be encrusted with diamonds. They cost up to $10,000.

CD pays off based on election outcome

DENVER (AP) — Political prognosticators looking for a payoff might want to check out a deal from a Colorado bank.

The Bank of Boulder is offering something called the Election CD: a certificate of deposit with an interest rate tied to the depositor's predictions in the November elections. The rates on the CDs go up 0.25 percent for each correct guess.

Some are easier than others.

"The first prediction is the president, and every poll says that's pretty much a slam-dunk," bank President Steve Bosley said.

But other questions are more demanding. For example, depositors are asked to predict the presidential vote within a tenth of a percent, guess the time of the loser's concession speech and predict the exact partisan composition of Congress.

The base rate is 6.4 percent for a three-year certificate. Lucky customers could receive a rate as high as 10.4 percent.
