A long, long ride to fight cancer

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

When 19 - year - old Mike Hirschfeld first told his father he planned to ride his bicycle halfway across the country to raise money for cancer research, the immediate response was "this is crazy."

It took Mike about 10 minutes to convince him that the trip was for real.

"Within my family, I'm known to do things that aren't really normal," Mike explained, adding that a 2,800 mile bicycle trip from Arizona to Connecticut is probably the most unusual thing he's done.

"Some of them flop and some of them don't. He was just a little apprehensive that this was one of the floppers."

Mike, who turned 20 Saturday and rewarded himself with a day off in Canyon, left Mesa, Ariz., Nov. 16, and arrived in Pampa to spend the night Sunday. He hopes to pedal onto the New Haven, Conn., green sometime before Christmas.

Along the way he is collecting pledges and donations for cancer research, a trip inspired by two close acquaintances recently stricken with cancer. First it was the father of his former high school roommate at St. Paul's Prep School in New Hampshire who was diagnosed as having cancer of the lung and brain.

"I don't know — it bothered me because the guy wasn't that old and seemed to be in relatively good condition," Mike said.

Then in mid - October, Mike learned his brother's wife had a form of cancer in her knee. That was enough to spur him into action.

"I guess I was just tired of wishing them well and kind of having a passive say in the whole thing," he said.

The result is "Ride Down Cancer With Mike" an effort coordinated by the New Haven chapter of the American Cancer Society. For Mike it means pedaling an average of 90 to 100 miles or spending six to eight hours on the road each day on a Schwinn 18 - speed mountain bike. From Pampa, it was on to Elk City, Okla., this morning.

Before his trip started, Mike had never ridden much above a 60 or 70 mile day trip on his bicycle. He said bicycling is "pretty new" to him. He chose a bicycle trip because he felt it would be the most practical way to raise money.

"If I went across in a pickup truck, I don't think I could've raised that much money," he joked.

Mike trained "a little" for the trip, riding the 10 miles or so to work in Mesa every day and taking day trips on the weekends. He admits that may not have been enough to prepare him for stretches of 100 miles or more on his odyssey to Connecticut.

"It's been a little rough," he said. "I've been a little sore."

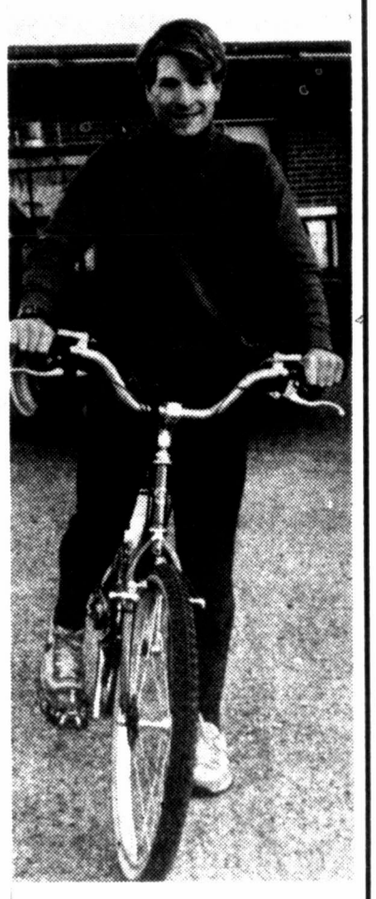

So far, the weather has not presented too great a problem. He said temperatures on the Texas Panhandle have been warmer than he expected.

The worst weather came right at the start of his trip when he pedalled for three hours through a snowstorm in Salt River Canyon, Ariz. But for the most part, Mike said, mornings have been cold but the afternoons have warmed up.

"My body's alright in the cold. It's just my feet that freeze," he said. "I wear these sneakers that just don't do it."

But the biggest battle Mike faces is loneliness. He is

At least 46 killed as plane stormed

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Terrorists cornered by commandos storming a hijacked Egyptian jet lobbed grenades inside the cabin, and at least 46 trapped passengers were killed in the fiery explosions and gunfire, Maltese authorities said today.

But government spokesman Paul Mifsud, who reported the death toll to reporters, said there were "still some corpses aboard" the Boeing 737, which became a bloodbath when Egyptian soldiers blew in two doors and surged aboard Sunday.

An American woman shot dead by the hijackers shortly after the plane landed in Malta Saturday night was the only person killed before the rescue attempt, Mifsud said.

The two other American passengers were wounded and thrown from the Egyptair plane before the assault, said U.S. Embassy deputy chief Joel Levy. Mifsud said 30 people were being treated in Malta hospitals.

The pilot, Capt. Hani Galal, described the hijackers as "first-class killers" and said the ringleader had singled out Americans and Israelis "for execution."

Gilbert Briard, a 36-year-old Frenchman injured in the raid, told Europe 1 radio in Paris that the hijackers called the Americans "and tied their hands behind their backs. They first shot the boy, then waited about an hour to shoot the second person and then ... shot the third."

Levy said initial reports indicated all of the hijackers, said to number at least four, were killed. But the state-run Egyptian newspaper al-Ahram, without giving sources, reported today that one of the sky pirates was wounded and recovering in a Valletta hospital.

Mifsud said the hijackers threw the grenades when they realized they were being attacked, and that the victims "were trapped inside and couldn't get out." All eight children aboard the jetliner were killed, the pilot said.

Charred remains of luggage and puddles of water were beneath the airliner, parked on a tarmac runway. Some passenger windows and those in the cockpit were smashed and burn marks were etched on the emergency exits and the rear cargo door.

Malta's state-run television said about 80 people were aboard the jetliner when the commandos attacked.

On Sunday, Misfud said seven people injured before the raid were already undergoing treatment after being released or thrown onto the runway, and 11 women were released unharmed by the sky pirates early Sunday.

The plane was hijacked while on a Saturday evening flight from Athens, Greece, to Cairo, Egypt, and forced to land on Malta, a Mediterranean island. In radio conversations, one of the sky pirates said they were members of the group "Egypt's Revolutionaries."

Egyptian aviation authorities said "Egypt's Revolutionaries" is an extremist group opposed to Egypt's 1979 peace pact with Israel.

A group using a similar name — "Egypt's Revolution" — claimed responsibility for the Aug. 20 assassination of an Israeli diplomat in Cairo.

Mifsud quoted Galal as saying the hijack leader, who never identified himself, was "a madman" who sang and danced each time he shot a hostage.

The pilot, his head bandaged and his uniform bloodstained, told a news conference about three hours after the raid that when the commando assault began, the leader of the hijacking, who had been guarding him, tossed a grenade into the cabin from the cockpit.

The hijacker then spun around and shot at the pilot. But Galal, whose skull was grazed by the shot, said he grabbed a fire ax and struck his attacker, apparently killing him.

Tony Lyons, a 46-year-old Australian hijack survivor who spoke from his hospital bed on Britain's TV-AM morning news show, claimed the commandos shot passengers as well as the hijackers.

Pinkerton execution delayed indefinitely

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Supreme Court today indefinitely delayed the scheduled execution early Tuesday of Texas Death Row inmate Jay Kelly Pinkerton.

Pinkerton, 23, would have been the youngest person executed since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume in 1976. In August, he came within 26 minutes of dying before Justice Byron White issued a stay.

White also issued today's stay, saying in a brief order that the Pinkerton execution would be halted "pending the filing of a formal appeal."

Pinkerton's attorney, Dean Roper of Amarillo, filed an appeal this morning challenging the exclusion of people opposed to the death penalty from juries in capital murder cases.

Within the past month, the high court has stayed two other executions on those grounds while it considers the matter in an Arkansas case.

"The systematic exclusion of jurors that have scruples against the death penalty denies a defendant of a right to a trial by a cross representation of the community in which he resides, which is guaranteed by the 6th Amendment to the Constitution," Roper said today.

Roper also had a written request prepared for Gov. Mark White, asking for a 30-day reprieve. In previous executions, however, White never has granted such a request.

The baby-faced Pinkerton, an apprentice meat cutter, faces lethal injection for the 1979 mutilation death of Sarah Donn Lawrence. He also was convicted of the similar slaying five months later of Sherry Welch.

Pinkerton was 17 at the time of the Lawrence killing.

"I hate thinking about it — and him," says Virginia Royer, whose daughter, Sarah, was raped, stabbed more than 30 times, had her throat slashed and body mutilated during the burglary of her home Oct. 26, 1979. "There will be a certain amount of relief when it's over."

"I just wish people knew how hard it hurts us — day after day after day," says Joe Hales, whose daughter, Sherry, was slain in a similar attack five months later.

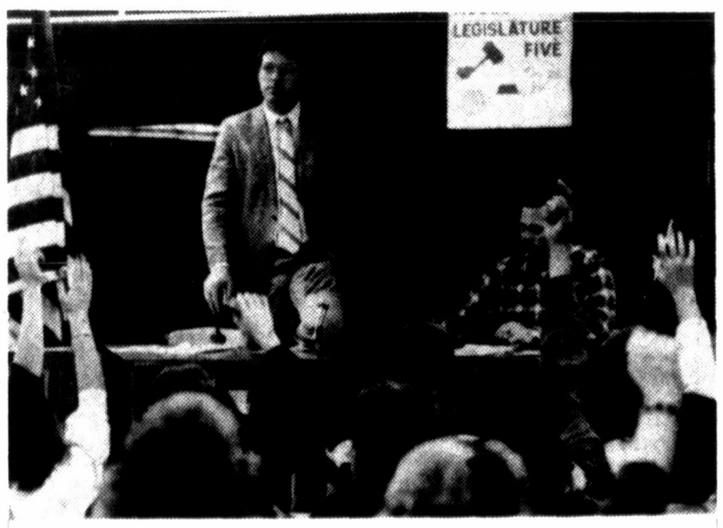

"I can honestly say I grew up in prison," Pinkerton says. "I've been incarcerated for five years. I've established a life in prison."

Pinkerton dodged the lethal needle on Aug. 14, when the Supreme Court spared his life just 26 minutes before he was to be executed. The court, however, subsequently refused to consider his appeal and the new death date — his third — was set.

"I think this time I'm going to do much better," Pinkerton said last week, telling reporters he was working around the clock on a 30-page appeal he was sending to the high court.

ALL IN FAVOR - State Rep. Chip Staniswallis of Amarillo, standing, counts the votes of student representatives voting on a bill Saturday morning during Model Legislature V in the Pampa High School library. Recording the vote totals is Pampa police officer John Goes, who came up with the idea for the student model legislatures in 1971. Student legislature amends 'no pass'

"These students make more sense with their arguments than what I hear in Austin at the real Legislature," said State Rep. Foster Whaley after presiding over the Senate at Model Legislature V held Saturday at Pampa High School.

More than 100 students convened as the House of Representatives and Senate. They heard witnesses for and against the proposed legislation and then wrote new "laws" for Texas in the morning sessions.

In the afternoon they debated the bills in a manner similar to that used by the Texas Legislature.

State Rep. Chip Staniswallis of Amarillo served as Speaker of the House. State Sen. Bill Sarpalius of Canyon was on hand in the morning to testify before student committees.

The students surprisingly approved the concept of "no pass, no play" but exempted students with learning disabilities as well as mentally retarded students which the current law exempts.

The bill hit a snag in the House as a point of order that the chairman of the committee had not signed the bill held up consideration. Supporters hurriedly corrected the oversight so that debate could continue.

The students reduced the time a student is penalized for failing grades from six weeks to a week - by - week schedule. They required that a student have an overall grade average of 70 or above and not be failing more than one course in order to be eligible to participate in sports and other extracurricular activities.

Supporters of the mandatory seat belt law were unable to convince students of the lives the law will and they voted to repeal the law.

An uproar over the bill to forbid location of nuclear waste dumps in Texas resulted when the House approved the prohibition. However, the committee chairman, who was a member of the Senate, withdrew the measure from consideration.

Students of both houses approved a bill which would prohibit a student with AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) from attending public schools except through homebound and special education programs.

Debate on the bill indicated students thought AIDS students would be taught in their own homes. However, the language of the bill would not actually limit the instruction to the homes.

Governor of the Day Shannon Churchman, president of the student body, vetoed the bill, pointing out the deficiency in the bill. The students then were faced with a procedural quandary. They could either override the veto and enact their flawed bill into law or have the entire measure go without a new law because of the veto.

They were not allowed to adopt the amendment proposed by Churchman. They responded by overriding her veto with a two-thirds vote of both houses.

A bill to lower the drinking age to 18 failed to get out of the committee which heard witnesses for and against the measure. After several tries, supporters were able to get the bill considered by both houses, where the measure passed by amending the age to 19.

After being besieged by students both for and against and after being advised that the bill was unconstitutional because of a flawed caption, Gov. Churchman opted to pocket veto the bill. She simply did not sign it, allowing the Model Legislature to run out without any further opportunity by students to override her veto.

Students voted in favor of raising the speed limit back to 70

Joy Turner named Realtor of Year

Cooperation was the theme of Colorado broker Hal Walter's speech at the 1985 Pampa Board of Realtors Installation Banquet Saturday, and that's just what was stressed to the board's 1986 slate of officers.

Claudine Balch, who was installed as the 1986 President of the board, said that after her 10 years as a Realtor in Pampa she's "glad we still have the spirit of cooperation."

Other 1986 board members installed were vice president Dena Whisler, secretary Shirley Wooldridge, treasurer Joy Turner, three year director Mike Keagy, two year director Ruby Allen, one year director Neva Weeks.

The board honored Joy Turner's spirit of cooperation by naming her Realtor of the Year. Turner was presented a wall plaque by Whisler. Turner is entering her third year as board treasurer.

Whisler also presented plaques to 1985 president Janie Shedd, Multiple Listing Service Committee chairman Gary Meador, 1985 secretary Beulah Cox, membership chairman Norma Holder, Builder-Realtor Committee chairman Mike Keagy, Round-table chairman Evelyn Richardson, Private Property Week chairman Judi Edwards, Community Revitalization and Make America Better chairman Liz Connor.

Walter, a Realtor from Colorado Springs told the board about "The myths of competition." He refuted the claim by the late football coach Vince Lombardi's that "Winning isn't everything; it's the only thing."

"In order to compete effectively, you must cooperate," he said.

Shedd reflected the spirit of cooperation as she reviewed the 1985 sales year.

"The Board has a fine reputation as being a winner," she said, commending the 1985 officers and committee chairmen for their work.

First step toward annexation proceedings tops city agenda

Pampa city commissioners will consider initiation of annexation proceedings for tracts west of Price Road during their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

The commission will discuss authorizing the staff to initiate the annexation proceedings for land west of the city in the vicinity of Kentucky, Harvester and Decatur avenues.

At their work session on Nov. 5, the commissioners discussed possible annexation of an area west of the Price Road city limits to the west property line of the Kentucky Acre addition and north of Kentucky for half a mile.

Tuesday's action will involve only the initiation of proceedings, not any direct action on actual annexation at this time.

In other matters, the commission will consider on first reading an ordinance relative to establishing use and operations procedures for the M. K. Brown Memorial Civic Auditorium.

Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson had previously approached the commission for changes in the rates and fees charged for use of the auditorium facilities. But it was discovered that no official ordinance concerning the auditorium use existed.

The new ordinance will establish official policies, operations procedures and rates for the auditorium use.

Commissioners also will consider several zoning and city planning items.

Under old business, the commission will consider on second and final reading an ordinance annexing a tract of 1.5 acres east of the city and granting a zoning change from Agriculture District to Specific Use Permit. The tract is owned by the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

To be considered on first reading is an ordinance establishing a zoning change from Single Family 2 to Office District for a triangular tract at Perryton Parkway, Charles and 26th Ave. for an office building for Caprock Engineers.

The city commission will consider setting Dec. 10 as the date for a public hearing on a zoning change from Agriculture District to Specific Use Permit for a tract of land in the southwest quarter of Section 116, Block 3, I&GN RRC Survey. Bruce - Chisum Oil Co. is proposing to drill two oil wells north of Harvester and east of Price Road.

Commissioners also will consider approval of the final plat for the GLC Subdivision relative to the construction project for Pampa Lakeside Apartments in an area north of 25th Ave. and east of Hobart Street.

"I did not realize that we already have a 70 mph speed limit in Texas," Churchman said.

One of the witnesses, Paul Braden of the Texas Highway Patrol, brought a copy of the Texas law, indicating the state has a "temporary" 55 mph speed limit which will exist until the federal government repeals the act disallowing highway funds to states not having the 55 mph limit. The Governor has to sign the measure every 60 days to keep the temporary limit in effect.

A bill to define "oil" and "crude oil" to include "white oil" drew the most heated debate. Led by committee chairman Trent Sellers and vice chairman Scott Vanderburg, the committee approved the bill and succeeded in getting both houses to vote for the definition as a codification of prior Texas law.

However, Gov. Churchman made her second pocket veto on the measure and did not sign the proposed legislation.

Gov. Churchman also vetoed a bill which would legalize gambling in Texas, including a state lottery, parimutuel betting and bingo, estimated to raise $600 million as the state's 20 percent share of the gross. The legislative approval was conditioned upon approval by a majority in a statewide referendum ballot. Both houses overrode the veto, so the measure became "law."

Students approved a resolution calling for the national Congress to submit an amendment to the U.S. Constitution permitting prayer in public schools. The committee to consider raising tuition in public - supported colleges and universities approved the bill, but it failed in the House and was not considered in the Senate.

traveling alone and conceded that discouraging thoughts of "packing it in" are with him every day.

"I get pretty lonely and the cold doesn't help much," he said.

Whenever he feels himself getting discouraged, Mike said he thinks about his family and being home for Christmas. He also sings and talks to himself and remains inspired by thoughts of those that motivated the trip in the first place.

But the best encouragement, Mike said, comes when people honk their horns or stop to talk with him or offer pledges. In Socorro, N.M., he said, he stopped for a candy bar and a woman asked for his autograph.

"I love when people stop. It gives me the perfect excuse to kind of stop and take a break," he said. Mike is easily recognizable in a t - shirt reading "Help Mike Ride Down Cancer."

Mike estimates he has raised $4,000 in pledges since leaving Arizona. He said he feels confident he can raise $6,000 more.

His employer in Mesa, Monte Vista Travel Trailer Resort, has offered to match the first $5,000 he raises.

Geraldine Murphy, associate director of the ACS chapter in New Haven, advises all pledges should be sent to the chapter office at 8 Lunar Drive, Woodbridge, Conn. 06525.

City offices to close for holidays

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

I am not sure where the year has gone, but we now find ourselves moving into the holiday season.

City offices will be closed Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving. If you have any business to transact, please do so tomorrow or Wednesday.

The landfill will be closed all day Thursday (Thanksgiving Day). However, the landfill will be open during normal hours during 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The commercial sanitation collection trucks will not operate Thursday but will provide regular pickup service on Friday. Residential dumpsters will not be picked up Thursday or Friday. We are using back-up trucks during the early part of the week so that we can pick up all the dumpsters throughout the town during the first three days of the week.

Lovett Memorial Library will be closed Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

We are moving forward with our Main Street Program. We hope to annouce this week the hiring of a Main Street coordinator.

Additionally, we have received commitments from Citizens Bank and Trust, First National Bank, National Bank of Commerce, and Security Federal Savings and Loan Association to make available $30,000 each to establish a facade loan fund. This $120,000 will be available at 7.5 percent interest for reinvestment in the building facades of the central downtown district.

We are continuing to meet with officials from the state in scheduling the various activities and schedules for technical consultants for window displays, merchandising, trade area analysis, shopping patterns and such.

Linda Gail White, wife of Gov. Mark White, will be in town to formally initiate the program on either March 11 or March 13.

The city commission will soon begin considering appointments to the Main Street Advisory Board and the various committees associated with the project. The advisory board will be comprised of individuals representing the entire community.

We will be seeking individuals to represent the various retail markets such as the Pampa Mall, Coronado Center and the Hobart Street area as well as the downtown area. Additionally, we will be seeking out individuals who are associated with various organizations and activities that occur throughout the year.

If you are interested in having your name considered, please drop us a note or letter indicating your interest. I will hold these until our coordinator is on the job (Jan. 1) and he - she will follow up on your area of interest.

The appointments will be made by the commission in the latter part of January.

Have a Happy Thanksgiving.

Millions of pounds of toxic chemicals escaped into air

DALLAS (AP) — State records show mishaps at Texas chemical plants this year resulted in release of millions of pounds of dangerous substances, including almost 40 tons of known or suspected cancer-causing agents.

"Anything like this is of concern," said Herbert McKee, a former Texas Air Control Board member who now heads the environmental control divison of the Houston Health Department.

Records examined by the Dallas Morning News showed most of the emissions occured in the Houston area, the center of the state's huge petrochemical industry.

The chemicals ranged from more than 46 million pounds of carbon monoxide, a common air pollutant, to 45 pounds of hydrogen cyanide, which can be deadly in concentrations as low as one part per 10,000, according to the records from the Texas Air Control Board.

The newspaper reported in Sunday's editions that other chemicals including hydrochloric acid, sulfur dioxide, ammonia and chlorine escaped this year.

Texas could suffer a disastrous chemical leak such as the one at a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, that killed more than 2,000 people, or the pesticide leak at a Union Carbide plant in Institute, W. Va., in August that hospitalized more than 130, said McKee and other officials.

"I'm amazed, really, that we don't have more accidents like Bhopal or Institute," Jerry Crowder, an associate professor of environmental engineering at the University of Texas at Dallas, said. "But the potential is definitely there."

Air Control Board records show that some of the nation's largest oil and chemical companies — including units of Union Carbide, Dow Chemical Co., Shell Oil Co., Chevron Corp., Exxon Corp. and Diamond Shamrock Corp. — are among those responsible for the dangerous emissions.

The industry was defended by spokesmen for the companies and for the Chemical Manufacturer's Association. They said chemical manufacturers have an exemplary record.

"You can't eliminate the risk. Hazards are part of the chemical industry. But what we can do is reduce the risks," Ed Van Den Ameele, Union Carbide's manager of media relations, said.

Tim Scott, spokesman for Dow Chemical USA's plant in Freeport, the largest petrochemical complex in the nation, said emissions from the plant — which included 14,000 pounds of chlorinated hydrocarbons, suspected carcinogens — "have had no impact on the safety of our workers or the environment."

It is difficult to assess the health effects of toxic air emissions in Texas, said scientists.

"The chronic effects are our biggest worry," Bob Love, chief of the Air Control Board's emissions inventory system, said. "No one knows for sure what happens when humans are exposed to small amounts of these toxic substances over a long period of time.

"We know there are effects," Love said. "How severe they are, we don't know with any certainty. Therein may lie the biggest danger."

Efforts to regulate toxic emissions are in their infancy despite the concern of state officials.

Air Control Board agents have been empowered to fine companies that violate its regulations against accidental emissions only since Sept. 1. None have been fined yet, said board officials.

Reports filed by companies on accidental emissions have been on file in a computer for only a year. The computerized system allows air control officials to track the records of individual companies, specific chemicals or clearly defined areas of the state.

"Until last November, these reports would come in, and they'd gather in a pile each year," Love said. "Then a summer temporary employee would file away as many of them as he could for three months. Then they'd collect in a pile again until the next summer."

Emission reports filed by companies probably reveal only a fraction of the problem, said state officials.

Statue plucked off dome

AUSTIN (AP) — The Goddess of Liberty, back on solid ground after 97 years atop the Texas Capitol, is delighting onlookers as it stands on the Capitol lawn.

"How neat," said First Lady Linda Gale White, who checked out the 1½-ton zinc statue after watching the delicate airlift that plucked it off the Capitol dome early Sunday.

"She's beautiful. I think it's great to have her safely on the ground," Gov. Mark White added.

The Goddess, which has made the Texas Capitol three feet taller than the national Capitol in Washington, was lowered to the ground at 7:53 a.m. in a rain-swept operation that took only 10 minutes.

"Just another day at the office. No problem," said Lt. Col. Jim Looney, 41, of Hitchcock, who piloted the twin-rotor CH-47 "Chinook" helicopter with CWO Craig Roberts, 38, of League City.

"I was worried because of all the rigging around there and whether it would hold, whether or not they would be able to get it loose without banging it up against the dome," White said. "The National Guard helictoper and the crew did a magnificent job."

The nearly 16-foot statue, with an uplifted Lone Star in its left hand, was erected in 1888. Exactly how it was placed atop the 311-foot dome remains a mystery.

Capitol architect Roy Graham said time and the elements so severely cracked and corroded the Goddess that it must be replaced. A duplicate will be made for the dome, while the original will be displayed in the Capitol complex, Graham said.

Preparations for Sunday's airlift took weeks.

The weather-beaten Goddess' arms were removed. Mounts were loosened. A special harness and lifting plate were built so the statue could be raised off its perch.

Under low-hanging clouds that spit rain, the helicopter arrived at 7:45 a.m.

The aircraft hovered above the statue, as close as 4 to 5 feet at times, while a line was lowered to the harness.

The line was to draw the harness to the helicopter, where it would be attached to make the lift. The line was connected first at 7:48 a.m., but it snapped as the harness was being raised to the aircraft.

The harness dropped, and a crowd of some 700 spectators gasped.

Hearing impaired girl learns to communicate as teen-ager

San Angelo Standard-Times

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Patricia Haro pulled gently on her friend's sleeve in the hallway at San Angelo Central High School. She got a warm smile in return.

That's one way Miss Haro, who is deaf, communicates with her friends. Because she has never heard language sounds, she is mute, although she is learning to read lips and vocalize. She communicates with sign language, gestures and intense facial expressions.

Her life, though silent, seems similar to that of any teen-ager. With her friends, Miss Haro goes to movies, shops for clothes and talks about boys.

"It's as easy to talk to Patricia as anyone else," said Heather Dendy, her classmate. "We talk about guys and walk around campus. Besides, she's nice." Miss Dendy gave her friend a hug as she spoke.

Miss Haro is one of five hearing impaired students at Central who have been mainstreamed into regular classes. This is the first year the students have had the use of interpreters in their high school classes.

Through an interpreter, Miss Haro said she is more comfortable in a hearing world. "My friends understand me without talking. Besides, I can practice speech reading easier."

The 16-year-old's favorite activity is the high school pep squad. "They make a lot of noise," Miss Haro signed. She explained she is able to hear some sounds, such as the happy cheering of the pep squad, or the loud music of a band. She is also active in her church's youth group.

"She is very social and outgoing," said Lucy Dunn, who is the hearing impaired teacher at Central. "She has a good self-concept. Sometimes she gets frustrated when people don't understand her. She may be put out for the moment, but she goes on, she doesn't give up. She takes it in her stride."

The student recalled when she attended her first regular class in the seventh grade at John Glenn Junior High School. "I tried to look around the building. It was hard to find things. My mother helped me find the class."

The year was a hard one for Miss Haro. Her classmates didn't understand when she tried to communicate. "I wanted to try, try and try to get along," she said. Mostly, the students wrote notes to her, a last-ditch form of communication for the youngster who prefers to sign or use gestures. Her grades fell.

During that year, Miss Haro joined a sign language club. Some of her hearing classmates joined to be able to communicate, she said.

The eighth grade was easier, she said. Classmates attempted to talk to her without signing. Her grades improved.

Miss Haro has always attended public school and special classes. When it became time for school, her parents found there were no facilities for their daughter in Sonora where they lived. They could have sent her to a school for the hearing impaired in Austin or San Antonio. "But we wanted to be a family and stay together, so we moved here," Connie Haro said. Mrs. Haro is a teacher's aide in hearing impaired students' classes.

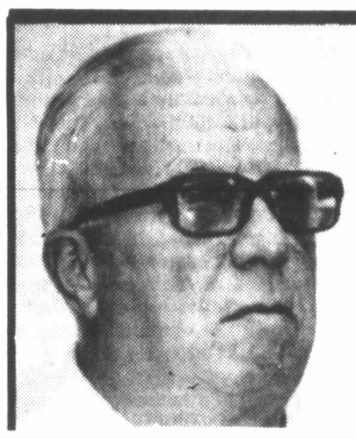

Once in a while, the Haro family has asked their daughter if she wanted to go to school in Austin. "She never wanted to go," Mrs. Haro said.

When Miss Haro was growing up her mother refused to protect her. "I let her ride bikes or go to the store to buy a soda."

There is a close relationship between the mother and daughter, according to Mrs. Haro.

The ultimate in adult toys

Some might call it envy.

Others would say the grass always seems greener on the other side of the fence.

Or maybe it's a case of keeping up with the Joneses.

I think I'll call it "comparanoia," the fear of a friend getting something you don't have, but want dearly.

Most of us, since we've been old enough to understand basic human concepts, have coveted another's possessions. What child hasn't wanted a plaything belonging to another youngster?

But the toys get bigger as we get older, and that little bit of childishness is hard to ignore.

For example, a friend recently bought a satellite dish for his backyard — after threatening for months to get one of the gadgets. He went for the whole nine yards — remote control to switch satellites and channels, stereo reception capability and enough sophisticated gadgetry to bring in a beautifiully sharp picture.

As a side note, I'll admit I'm a compulsive channel changer. Give me command of a remote control television in a crowded room and I'll be the object of the biggest collection of threats you've ever heard.

Naturally, I felt compelled to be on hand for a test run of the friend's new dish.

To be truthful, I lurked around the friend's residence and happened to be there when the installation was completed.

And, as luck would have it, I got the first crack at the new toy — a risk since my life wouldn't have been worth much if the dish had somehow toppled off its mount before the friend had a chance to play with it.

When the friend got his hands on the controls, after threatening to kick me out the front door, the fun really started. The guy is the type who wants to know everything there is to know about any given subject. That's why it took him months to make up his mind on what type of dish to buy.

We conducted a systematic search of every channel on every satellite, finding more stations than anyone would ever want to watch. Monthly listings are contained in a rather large magazine.

One of the first things we disicovered was a bunch of hockey — ice hockey, to be more accurate. Later, we'd find plenty of other programming was hockey, too — the slang kind.

Anyway, we picked up hockey with French commentators. We also discovered Golden Gloves boxing from New York, basketball from Detroit and baseball from all sorts of exotic spots. Alas, we missed lacrosse, sailboat racing and soccer, but they are available at times.

When it comes to football season, some type of game plan will be needed, since my friend's family roots for several different teams.

There is even a channel which carries the Canadian House of Commons proceedings.

We were overwhelmed by movies — some old, some new, some boring, some blue.

There were so many choices of entertainment, the friend suggested, rather pointedly that an antsy channel switcher might end up in a nursing home from the strain of it all. It came more in the form of a warning than an offhand comment.

During all of this testing, the thing did manage to go past its balance point and flop over. But, that was quickly repaired and the friend continues to enjoy aiming the dish at first one satellite and then another.

Despite its swan dive, I do believe the dish is the best toy I've seen to date. It beats anything I've got right now.

Wonder if he'd like to swap? I'll have to find out what I have he would be interested in.

Or, better yet — wonder if I've been good enough this year for Santa Claus to leave one at my house?

Thief steals car with child inside

HOUSTON (AP) — A 5-year-old Channelview girl is safe at home after getting away from the man who stole her mother's car with the child inside, officials say.

The parents of Elizabeth Ann Elzey had told their daughter to run and hide from strangers if anyone ever tried to kidnap or harm her. On Friday, Elizabeth did just that.

Her mother, Linda, left the family car running at a northeast Harris County gas station about 9 p.m. Friday while she phoned her husband. When Mrs. Elzey turned around a few minutes later, the car and her daughter were gone.

"I felt total panic. I didn't think about the car. I just thought somebody had taken my baby. Then I went into the middle of the parking lot and started screaming," Mrs. Elzey said.

The youngster "screamed and hollered because she was scared," said her father, Robert Elzey. "The guy slapped her and told her to shut up. He choked her and hit her."

About an hour later, Elizabeth saw her chance to escape when the car caught fire and the man stopped the vehicle.

"She jumped out of the car and hid," Elzey said. "She knew the car was on fire and jumped out and hid behind the bushes. He never looked for her."

Witnesses reported having seen a man jump from the car into a white pickup truck and speed away from the area.

The barefoot youngster wandered along the road for more than three hours until she got to the SDS Biotech Inc. chemical plant.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Marxist millenium delayed yet again

In a classic bit of understatement, the Soviet mmunist Party had gingerly conceded that the Soviet ion will neither overtake the United States nor achieve oure communist society in the near future. Such an knowledgement contrasts sharply with the bombast of mer General Secretary Nikita Khrushchev, who dged in 1961 that "the present generation of Soviet ople shall live in communism" and that the Soviet nion would bury the United States. Chairman rushchev boasted that by 1971 Soviet industrial oductivity would exceed that of the United States by ughly "100 percent." Today, Soviet industrial oductivity is little more than a third of the U.S. erage. He also promised a rapid increase in the output consumer goods. But shortages persist in the Soviet ion, and the Politburo has just called for a omprehensive program" to improve the quality and antity of consumer goods by the year 2000.

The 1961 party platform also promised that Soviet izens would be more prosperous than working persons the United States. A case in point is housing. proximately 20 percent of urban families in the Soviet nion share a kitchen and toilet facilities. An average viet citizen has one-third the living space of his erican counterpart.

The Soviet economic system has sputtered for more an half a century because of its mindless gimentation. Since 1917, Soviet leaders have imposed a ccession of five-year plans that have been heralded as harbinger of an economic renaissaince in Mother ssia. Most of these great expectations have been shed by a succession of ham-fosted policies that stifle griculture and breeed economic staganation.

Nevertheless, the Kremlin has embarked on yet other five-year plan designed to hasten the "inevitable umph" of communism at home and abroad. Soviet ader Mikhail Gorbachev carefully avoids specific netables, however. In fact, he cautions that the ansformation from socialism to communism will take nger than originally anticipated.

Given the Soviet Union's dismal tracl record, it is vious the Marxist millenium will be delayed definitely.

Whole AIDS story not told

WASHINGTON - Instead of getting better, the public-health horror story involving official handling of AIDS - the killer disease that attacks the immune defenses of the body - keeps getting worse.

Since this affliction is invariably fatal, you might suppose that people entrusted with protecting public health would make every effort to insure that air-tight measures are taken to guard against it. From the outset, however, the facts of the case have been the opposite. The custodians of our physical well-being have not only been slow in responding to the threat, but have constantly busied themselves with soothing reassurances that turn out to be mistaken.

The latest such assurance is a report from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) of the U.S. Public Health Service which tells us, once more, that there is no danger of getting AIDS through "casual contact," and that there is thus no reason to be concerned about catching the disease in the work-place. In addition, we are told that, "because AIDS is not transmitted through preparation or serving of food and beverages, these recommendations state that food-service workers known to be infected with AIDS should not be restricted from work..."

All very reassuring, right? But then we read the fine print of the CDC recommendations, and discover some things that don't fit in with the flat assertion about no danger through "casual contact," and the lack of concern about AIDS sufferers involved in preparing and handling food. We read, for instance, that the AIDS virus to date "has been isolated from blood, semen, saliva, tears, breast milk, and urine, and is likely to be isolated from some other body fluids, secretions, and excretions..."

In other words, the AIDS virus can show up in just about any body fluid imaginable. What does this suggest about common association in the work-place, schoolyard, or other such setting? The spread of contagious diseases in such places, involving close personal contact, sneezing, handling of common objects, use of common restroom facilities, water fountains and utensils, etc., is well-known. Yet we aren't supposed to worry about such things in the case of AIDS.

The implications in the case of food-handling are especially chilling. Under these guidelines, an AIDS sufferer could well be preparing or handling the food you eat in a restaurant. Quite apart from the chance of contamination through sneezing, etc., there is the possibility that such a food worker could have a nick or cut that would permit contamination through blood. Nothing to be concerned about, according to our public health officials.

The reason for this laid-back approach, we are told, is that so far there have been no known cases of AIDS being transmitted through such contact. Blood and sexual transmission have been the identified culprits to date - not "other body fluids." Therefore the possibility of getting AIDS to work-places or restaurants can be discounted. Again, however, this assurance is less than reassuring.

Reading still further in the latest missive from CDC, for instance, we find a series of guidelines for health-care workers to help them avoid catching AIDS from patients. These guidelines state, over and over, that such workers should avoid contact not only with the blood of AIDS patients, but with those "other body fluids" that supposedly aren't a danger to anybody. Here are some representative passages:

"When the possibility of exposure to blood or OTHER BODY FLUIDS exists, routinely recommended precautions should be followed. The anticipated exposure may require gloves alone, as in handling items soiled with blood or equipment contaminated with blood or OTHER BODY FLUIDS, or may also require gowns, masks and eye coverings when performing procedures involving more extensive contact with blood or POTENTIALLY INFECTIVE BODY FLUIDS...

"Because of the THEORETICAL RISK OF SALIVARY TRANSMISSION...during mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, special attention should be given to the use of disposable airway equipment or resuscitation bags and the wearing of gloves when in contact with blood of OTHER BODY FLUIDS. Resuscitation equipment and devices known OR SUSPECTED to be contaminated with blood or OTHER BODY FLUIDS should be used once and disposed of or be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected after each use."

All of this is recommended even though, to date, there has been no known case of health-care workers getting AIDS through "other body fluids." We aren't supposed to fret, however, about those other body fluids in the work-place, or in the handling of our food!

"Do we have a rule that says carry-on baggage must be accompanied by a passenger?"

Today in History

Today is Monday, Nov. 25, the 329th day of 1985. There are 36 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 25th, 1783, the British evacuated New York, their last military position in the United States during the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

Ten years ago: Paratroopers and other regiments went into open rebellion against the government of Portugal. Military leaders took strong action to crush the revolt.

Five years ago: Sugar Ray Leonard regained the World Boxing Council welterweight championship when Roberto Duran abruptly quit late in the eighth round of their fight at the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans. Duran cited stomach cramps as his reason for quitting.

One year ago: William Schroeder of Jasper, Indiana, became the second man in history to receive a Jarvik-7 artificial heart during a 6½-hour operation at Humana Hospital Audubon in Kentucky.

A boon or boondoggle?

Most of the mail I receive neatly categorizes itself for "action" or for "filing" or for "disposal."

But I never now what to do with letters from frustrated inventors who write that they are being ignored because they lack money or clout or because what they have invented is "too incredible" for their peers to believe or for the patent office to accept.

I try to forward these to somebody knowledgeable in each area of expertise though I remain haunted by the dread that I may thus have dead-ended some important medical breakthrough or some contraption which might benefit a lot of people.

What are we going to do with Joe Newman's Perpetual Motion Machine?

Joseph Westley Newman is a Lucedale, Miss., inventor whose manner is polite and whose credentials are impressive. He has invented and duly patented a plastic-coated barbell, a rain deflector for automobile windshield wipers and an orange picker that "sucks" the fruit off trees much in the manner of a milking machine.

But for six years he has been unable to convince the Patent Office that his "Revolutionary Energy Machine" really can run forever, producing more energy than it consumes.

Mr. Newman is a persistent fellow, convinced that his energy machine will make inexpensive and abundant energy available to the world - and can be mass-produced within six months - if he can just get the Patent Office to hear him out.

He has persuaded Congressman Dan Burton of Indiana to seek legislation which would compel the Patent Office to capitulate.

He conducted a recent demonstration in New Orleans which spellbound a thousand spectators including engineers from the United States and Canada.

The Wall Street Journal concedes his non-polluting generator does "go on and on and on and on..."

Mr. Newman says it is adaptable to cars, refrigerators, air conditioners, aicraft, will render the internal combustion engine obsolete. He says, "With this machine within 30 years the average work week will be one hour."

How does it work? Copper wire and spinning magnets appear to effect a mechanical unification of the gravitational and nuclear fields.

His investors concede that this contradicts scientific principles which have been accepted for centuries; that it really does produce more energy than it consumes.

His machine has been examined by at least 30 engineers and physicists who arrived skeptical and departed willing to swear under oath that "it works."

The principal physicist for Sperry-Univac, Roger Hastings, says, "The future of the human race may be drastically uplifted by large-scale commercial development of this invention."

Some political lessons from Virginia

By Ben Wattenberg

A remarkable set of results in Virginia on Election Day should serve as a model political schoolroom for Democrats, for Republicans, for blacks, for all America — and may end up launching a new campaign for the presidency.

For Republicans, the lesson from the Virginia electoral schoolroom is this: If you abandon the political center for a spot on the far right, you are politically weakened.

The gubernatorial candidacy of Republican Wyatt Durette — who lost — was perceived to stand for a very conservative party. Republicans can win with that only when Democrats foolishly offer up candidates who can be painted as far-out liberals.

The Democrats didn't do that in Virginia. The lesson for them is clear: change the perceived direction of the Democratic Party, establish a tough but moderate image, go with a candidate who fits that image.

The tough-moderate image was established and burnished in Virginia by Charles Robb, the fiscally conservative, no-nonsense, progress-oriented governor, who has appointed a record number of qualified blacks and women to office. Robb's anointed heir was Gerald Baliles, a low-key candidate who fit the Robb-Democratic image. He won.

The Virginia schoolroom offered up some lessons for the black political community. Douglas Wilder — a black man, the grandson of a slave, a state senator — was elected lieutenant governor in a conservative Southern state. Blacks constitute only 17 percent of the Virginia electorate. Wilder won by getting 46 percent of the white vote. These results should bury forever Jesse Jackson's complaint that "whites won't vote for blacks." They do, when the candidate is capable and of the moderate middle, like Wilder.

For America, the Virginia lesson is obvious: The vaunted "Republican realignment" can be derailed if Democrats behave responsibly.

Who will be the standard-bearer of the Change-the-Direction Democrats? There are some good players already in the race. There may be more after the Virginia results are absorbed. And one of them, sooner or later, may be Chuck Robb, although he is officially "not seeking" any elected position.

This is one gutsy fellow. When he went off to combat in Vietnam, his father-in-law was President Lyndon Johnson. Robb knew that if captured he could be used by the enemy as a propaganda prize. He left a statement with Liz Carpenter (described in her book "Ruffles and Flourishes") to be used in the event of his imprisonment. He said in the statement that he thought he could withstand whatever pressure the enemy put him through, but if he couldn't, the statement should be used to publicly say that he supported American policy.

When, pretty much as an amateur, Robb ran for lieutenant governor in 1977, he reminded some observers of the old advertisement that had the headline, "They Laughed When I Sat Down to Play the Piano." But Robb had his own flinty vision of what a Democrat should be. He won that year and later for governor. This time, in a quiet way, he won as king-maker in just the part of the country that Democrats must carry if they are to succeed nationally.

Like another politician whose name begins with an "R", Robb should not be underestimated. He has shown he knows at least two things: how to win elections, and how to help other people win elections. Those aren't the only things you need to know to become president, but they are the first two.

How to nab the mice that come in from the cold

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you know absolutely nothing about the mouse problem that occurs in many homes this time of year, a new report by the Agriculture Department may offer enough information to squeak by.

"The small gray creature who flashes by in the kitchen of a cold winter's eve is probably a house mouse," the report said. "Mice often invade around the first frost because outside food is scarce then and the temperature too low for them."

Scientists named the house mouse Mus musculus, which originally meant "little thief" because of its sneaky eating habits. But the house mouse also has a long family history. Field mice are a different species.

"The house mouse can trace its family tree back to the Russian steppes, where its ancestors busily devoured weed seed," the report said. "House mice came to our shores with the Virginia colonists."

According to the report, included in a new quarterly issue of Food News For Consumers, there are ways to outsmart a mouse that has invaded the family premises.

First, check for signs such as droppings along routes favored by mice, such as behind canisters, or behind the stove. If the evidence is overwhelming, perhaps an exterminator should be called.

But if only a few droppings are present, clean the kitchen thoroughly, and put dry, paper-packaged foods in metal canisters, jars or a secure bread box. Also, garbage should be secured against rodent infestation.

Now, as to the actual apprehension and disposal of the house mouse.

"For most households, the standard mouse trap is probably the best and safest control," the report said. "Place traps at frequent intervals right next to the wall or cabinet tip in the mouse's runway."

A tip: Place the trap perpendicular to the wall so it snaps down as the mouse runs across. Also, keep toddlers and pets away from the traps.

"Good baits are bacon, nuts, hard sugar candy, gum drops and peanut butter," the report said. "Check your traps every morning, both to dispose of mice (use rubber gloves) and freshen bait. Mice don't like yukky bait."

Metal "catch" boxes also work well if placed in dark areas and covered with burlap or canvas, making sure the tunnel opening is not obscured.

Poison grain or tablets "are probably too dangerous for use around pets and young children" and can result in unpleasant after-effects.

"Mice typically find some inaccessible place to die, and the odor can be overwhelming," the report said. "With traps, you know how many you've caught, and you can dispose of the mouse immediately."

Senate's expensive farm bill may test Reagan's veto threat

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is taking a wary look at new farm policy carved out this weekend by the Senate. The measure contains major policy victories for the administration but at costs that threaten to make this year's record spending an annual event.

"Right now we're trying to figure out how to get the deficit down," White House chief of staff Donald Regan said Sunday. "And everyone in Congress is saying that, and yet they come in with a farm bill that will spend more than $50 billion over the next four years," he said.

"Now, that's an awful lot of money we're spending in that farm area, and the question is, is it wise?" Regan said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"This has some policy and some features that are good. It also has some that aren't so good," said Agriculture Secretary John Block, who attended many of the negotiating sessions that led to Saturday's 61-28 passage of the bill.

But Block declined to specifically endorse the measure, saying he regarded it more as a mechanism to get to a House-Senate conference than as a policy statement. "The bill's going to carry quite a bit of baggage that it doesn't need," he said.

When House and Senate negotiators get together early next month to work out the differences between their versions of the long-term policy plan, they will be compromising between the House draft, which the administration has labeled unacceptable, and the Senate bill, which it regards as closer to something President Reagan could sign.

Both bills accomplish a key administration goal: lower price-support levels for major crops like grains, cotton and rice that should help bring those commodities closer into line with world prices and enhance their attractiveness on overseas markets.

Also in both bills are administration-backed provisions to boost U.S. farm exports and to take highly erosion-prone land out of production.

But beyond those consensus issues lie sharp discrepancies on matters that are central and emotional concerns for both those who would move farming more toward market forces and those who would shield farmers from economic shocks.

The most contentious will be what to do about target prices, the income subsidies paid to wheat, corn, cotton and rice farmers to help guarantee a certain minimum return per bushel, bale or pound of their crops.

Another touchy area will be dairy price supports. The House wants to revive a program that ended earlier this year of paying dairy farmers not to produce milk, to be paid for through a farmer assessment.

White House weighs House committee's tax reform plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is analyzing a far-reaching tax bill produced by the House Ways and Means Committee, trying to determine if the president can provide the endorsement congressional leaders say is necessary to keep the tax-overhaul drive alive.

For the moment, says White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, "I'm not sure we can accept it," noting the comittee made major changes in the bill at the last minute before approving it Saturday morning.

"What does it do to investment, savings and incentives?" Regan asked Sunday on "Face the Nation" on CBS-TV. "We haven't had time to really examine that."

In announcing final approval, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, pleaded with Reagan not to make a harsh, snap judgment that could kill the bill. "Our bill is a victory of cooperation over confrontation," he told reporters. "It is a bipartisan measure."

Rep. John J. Duncan of Tennessee, senior Republican, added that while the committee and Rostenkowski did their best, GOP members "believe that our opportunity for real reform was lost in the process."

Several congressional leaders expect Reagan to urge House approval of the bill in hopes the Senate, where Republicans are in control, will do a better job.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who will control the bill if it gets to the Senate, said criticism from Reagan at this point "would be enough to kill tax reform in the House." That would dim the president's chances of winning the top legislative goal of his second term.

The Democratic-controlled House is expected to consider the bill the week of Dec. 8.

The Ways and Means Committee met for two months behind closed doors before reaching agreement on the bill — one that required compromise on several key elements in the plan that Reagan had sent to Congress last May.

Still, it would cut taxes for most people; produce the same revenue as present law, as Reagan demanded; reduce individual and corporate tax rates, though not as much as the president wants and increase the personal exemption and standard deductions. Also, it would crack down on well-to-do investors and profitable companies that use legal means to reduce their tax liability below the level paid by most middle-income families.

Altogether, the measure would represent the most sweeping revision of the income tax since it was enacted in 1913.

The bill would cut individual taxes by about $135 billion over five years — and shift that burden to corporations. It would reduce the average individual tax by 8.4 percent in 1987; the president's plan would have meant an average 10.5 percent cut.

The maximum individual tax rate would be 38 percent, compared to the present 50 percent; Reagan wanted a maximum 35 percent. Most Americans would pay a rate of 15 percent or 25 percent.

The bill raises the personal exemption to $2,000 for those who do not itemize deductions and to $1,500 for those who do. It boosts the standard deductions, which benefit those who don't itemize, to $4,800 for couples and $2,950 for single people.

Study: nuclear proliferation threat growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan is on the threshold of having atomic weapons and there is evidence that India may respond by building its own nuclear arsenal, according to a study released today.

Actions taken by both of the long-time enemies mean the threat of nuclear proliferation "in South Asia grew substantially during the past year, concluded the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The private, non-profit organization pointed to the India-Pakistan situation as one of the most threatening to the effort to stem the spread of nuclear weapons around the world.

The study was written by Leonard Spector, author of the group's first non-proliferation study issued in 1984 and a former Senate staffer who helped draft the 1978 U.S. law prohibiting American nuclear aid to countries which might use it to develop weapons.

There are five nations which have admitted possession of atomic weapons: the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain, and France. A sixth, India, exploded a single nuclear device in 1974 but has always maintained that it was for "peaceful" purposes.

Meanwhile, several other nations are widely considered to have or be near possessing nuclear weapons, including Pakistan, Israel and South Africa.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars since 1947 when the two nations were created out of the partitioning of the former British colony. After India exploded its device in 1974, Pakistan responded by starting an aggressive effort to develop a nuclear capability.

While Pakistan has since denied it is trying to develop weapons, it has taken a number of steps consistent with such a goal.

In the past year, the report noted, Pakistani President Zia ul-Haq has announced that his nation has succeeded in enriching uranium at its Kahuta enrichment plant outside the capital, Islamabad.

Pit bulldogs shot after mauling women

HOUSTON (AP) — A 43-year-old Houston woman underwent five hours of surgery and will require plastic surgery after being mauled in her front yard by two pit bulldogs, which were later shot by authorities, police said.

Raylene Smith was listed in good condition at Hermann Hospital following Saturday morning's incident at her northwest Houston home, a hospital spokesman said Sunday. She suffered bites to her arms, legs and thighs.

"It was a bloody massacre. There was blood everywhere," Houston Police Department Sgt. Craig Newman said. "I couldn't believe two dogs could do this much damage."

The dogs first attacked Frankie Trahan, 41, Ms. Smith's neighbor, when she went out to get her morning paper Saturday. She said she saw the two dogs attacking her cat in Ms. Smith's yard and as she turned to run inside, the dogs turned on her.

WHAT DOES LOVE COST?

Paul wrote, "Love must be sincere." If we see our relationships failing, maybe it's not because we've fallen out of love. Perhaps it's because we don't understand that we have to work harder to love than anything else in life.

Jesus said, "Love each other as I have loved you. Greater love has no one than this, that one lay down his life for his friends."

Love as the Master pictured it involves giving, sacrificing, working. The effort is hard, the reward is priceless.

Texas passenger of hijacked plane recovers from ordeal

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A 30-year-old Texas woman aboard a hijacked Egyptian plane underwent surgery after she was shot in the head by gunmen who then shoved her from the jetliner which was later stormed by authorities.

Jackie Nink Pflug was in good condition today at St. Luke's American Hospital in Valleta, Malta, said a family spokesman. But 40 to 50 other people aboard the plane perished after the Egyptair Flight 648 was stormed by commandos.

Spokesman Eric Beaver said from the family's Pasadena home that Ms. Pflug was shot in the back of the head, and that doctors removed bone fragments and a bullet Sunday night. Beaver said the woman was conscious and talking following surgery.

"They shot her in a kneeling position and threw her out of the airplane," the woman's father, Eugene Nink told Houston television station KPRC. "She landed on her face, busted her nose — broke her nose."

Her father said she was treated immediately by a doctor when rescuers reached her near the plane.

"They delivered some food to the plane and they took a doctor along and he determined that she was alive. They removed her and she's in the hospital now," said Nink.

"She can move all her limbs but she is having problems seeing out of her left eye," said Beaver, adding that the bullet entered just above her right ear.

"The important part is the next 36 hours to see if there are any complications," said Beaver.

The woman's sister, Gloria Nink, said the bullet was lodged in her skull but did not penetrate the brain.

Egyptian commandos stormed the plane Sunday night but explosions from hand grenades followed, said U.S. Embassy officials.

Hijackers "were trying to make the negotiators aware of what they were trying to prove; they wanted to kill a person every hour," said Beaver, adding the hijackers apparently thought she was dead. "Getting off the plane early is what saved her — before the commandos rushed the plane."

Ms. Pflug, a 1973 graduate of Deer Park High School, had traveled extensively in the Middle East. She was in Houston in August when she got married and had been in school in Cairo since September, Beaver said.

A special education teacher at Cairo American College, Ms. Pflug and her husband, Scott Pflug of Minneapolis, a coach at the college, had been in Athens for a volleyball game. Pflug was not on the flight, officials said.

Ms. Pflug was described by her father as having a bubbly personality.

"I always called her effervescent. She was always upbeat; always wanted to pa4ticipate in everything — played softball — and she just liked life, that's all," he said.

Two wounded Americans escape holocaust, third slain by hijacker

By The Associated Press

An American who was bound, forced to kneel, then shot in the head by the hijackers of an Egyptair jetliner survived because he was off the plane by the time commandos rushed it and another took a bullet and "played dead," rolling to the ground, where he lay in a pool of blood.

A third, shot and thrown to the tarmac at Malta's Luqa airport, died before the military assault that left about 50 people, including the terrorists who captured the Egyptian plane, dead.

Patrick Scott Baker, 28, of White Salmon, Wash., was taken by the hijackers to the door of the airplane, said his brother, Craig, 27.

"He was just real relaxed, and at the same time they pulled the trigger, he kind of ... slumped a little bit forward and the bullet just creased his head and he fell down and played dead," Craig Baker said.

"His head was bleeding obviously from the wound he'd got and when the terrorists walked away, or turned away or whatever, he rolled out the door and fell onto the ground and hid under the cowling of the airplane," he said.

Jackie Nink Pflug, 30, of Pasadena, Texas, a special education teacher in Cairo, Egypt, was shot in the back of the head and flung from the plane because the hijackers apparently thought she was dead, her family said Sunday.

Mrs. Pflug, who was returning to Cairo from a visit to her husband in Athens, Greece, was undergoing surgery in Malta late Sunday, her parents said. Her husband, Scott, of Minnetonka, Minn., was not aboard the flight.

"They shot her in a kneeling position and threw her out of the airplane. She landed on her face, broke her nose," Mrs. Pflug's father, Eugene Nink, said from his home.

A family friend, Eric Beaver, said Mrs. Pflug's hands were tied behind her back before she was shot. "Getting off the plane early is what saved her — before the commandos rushed the plane," he said.

Up to 50 people were killed Sunday when the hijackers aboard the hijacked Boeing 737 detonated hand grenades as Egyptian commandos assaulted the aircraft at Luqua airport. The jet was seized Saturday on a flight from Athens to Cairo.

Although there was no confirmation by early today, the dead American appeared to be Scarlett Rogenkamp, 38, who had been living in Athens for a year, but whose hometown was Oceanside, Calif.

Joel Levy, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Malta, told reporters there were three Americans on board the plane and that one was killed. Ms. Rogenkamp was the only one of 9he three not definitely known to be alive.

Ms. Rogenkamp's sister, Katherine Doris, 30, said from her home in Oceanside that the family had been told by the U.S. government that officials were seeking a copy of her sister's birth certificate to compare with a footprint of the slain woman.

Baker's mother said her son survived because a bullet grazed the back of his head and he feigned death.

"He slumped forward and pretended he was dead," Mrs. Baker said. "When they turned their backs, he rolled off of the plane somehow."

She said she and her husband, Jerry, spoke to their son Saturday when they telephoned him at a hospital on Malta. Her son, a graduate of Washington State University, has been traveling around the world for three years.

"We knew he was going on to Bangkok, but we didn't know which flight he was on until the State Department called last night," she said Sunday. "They told us that he was on the plane and had been shot, but that he was all right and wanted to talk to us."

Plane's captain strikes hijacker with fire ax

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — The blood on his jacket barely dry, the pilot of the hijacked Egyptair jet calmly told reporters today how he felled one of the sky pirates with a fire ax.

"It was hell," Capt. Hani Galal told a news conference hours after Egyptian commandos assaulted his plane, triggering a bloodbath in which up to 50 people died. "But our only hope was the storming."

0the Egyptian soldiers blew open two doors of the Boeing 737, on the ground at Valletta's Luqa airport, and swarmed inside. The cornered hijackers tossed grenades in the cabin, touching off fires that destroyed the cabin interior and killed trapped passengers.

"The hijackers were very desperate and bloodthirsty people," Galal said. In an even voice, he described the 22-hour hijacking and the bloody commando raid Sunday night that ended the standoff.

The hijackers' ringleader, never identifying himself, kept a revolver trained on Galal throughout the ordeal, joking and laughing after he shot passengers, the pilot said.

When the ringleader realized Sunday evening that Egyptian troops had attacked the plane in a bid to end the hijacking, he hurled a grenade into the passengers' cabin, Galal said.

The hijacker, remembering he had let the captain out of his sight momentarily, spun around and shot at him, but the bullet only grazed Galal's head.

Galal grabbed a fire ax and struck his captor, who fell to the floor. Galal said he thought the hijacker had been killed.

With bloodstains on his navy blue Egyptair pilot's jacket and a white bandage around his head, Galal, 39, told reporters that the hijackers took control of the plane about 10 minutes into the Saturday evening flight from Athens, Greece, to Cairo.

Shortly after the hijack began, a shootout in the cabin killed an Egyptian security guard and wounded two stewardesses and one of the hijackers, Galal said.

Worried that his fuel could run out, Galal said he decided to do as the hijackers demanded and land on Malta.

Galal said that the hijackers seemed to be Palestinians because of their accent. He said they told him if the plane was not refueled they would kill a passenger every 15 minutes.

"After the third execution I was prepared to do anything to prevent more killing," he said.

But a Maltese government spokesman said that after word came the hijackers had begun killing their captives, the government decided it would not give in to the demand for fuel.

Reports varied on the number of people injured or killed before the raid, with the Maltese government confirming only one death and injuries to seven people.

The hijackers, who Galal said numbered at least four, gathered all the passports and chose Israelis and Americans "for execution," the pilot quoted the leader as saying.

Galal, who has been a pilot for 15 years, defended the decision to storm the plane.

Enterprises that you originate or conduct independently should work out advantageously for you in the year ahead. Don't drag in partners if they don't have something special to contribute.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're a very optimistic and positive person, but today, when you analyze situations, you might put too much emphasis on the dark side. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against tendencies today to try to do more than time or your talents permit. Both have their limitations, so schedule tasks sensibly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Before committing yourself to attend a social gathering today, check the guest list to be sure it doesn't include a person you've been trying to avoid.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have a marvelous imagination, and this is a tremendous asset. However, don't use it today to worry about things that might never happen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you want accurate appraisals regarding a situation about which you're concerned, don't ask advice from a person who is a negative thinker.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be financially prudent and disciplined today. Keep current with your obligations, and don't lend what you can't afford.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might have to deal with someone today who is always insistent upon doing everything his way. Be careful how you handle this individual.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Duties and responsibilities must be attended to promptly today, not swept under the rug. Once you fall behind, it'll be difficult to catch up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before trying to control things for others today, be sure you first properly manage what you should be taking care of for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are going after something important today, be prepared for a struggle. Goals can be achieved, but you will require fortitude.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're not apt to have much patience with people who oppose your ideas today, even though, down deep, you'll know their points are well-taken.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) It's best not to take on any new long-range financial obligations today until you have all of your old ones cleared up. Don't put yourself in a bind.

Dear Abby

First Americans should be honored with holiday, too

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Now that Congress has approved Mule Appreciation Day, perhaps they will consider designating a day to honor the native American Indian.

On Jan. 12, 1983, Public Law 97-445 was enacted directing President Reagan to designate May 11, 1983, as "American Indian Day." On April 14, President Reagan did so. However, that was a one-time designation only!

I think there should be a national holiday every year to honor the American Indian instead of a one-day holiday.

Abby, you went to bat for a National Bachelor's Day; won't you please say a few words in behalf of the American Indian?

A PROUD SIOUX

DEAR PROUD SIOUX: A national holiday to honor our native American Indians is long overdue. If enough citizens get sufficiently fired up about it, perhaps we can send some smoke signals to Washington.

DEAR ABBY: "Ed P. in Richmond, Va." proposed we honor bachelors by having a National Bachelor's Day. And you said, "If Congress can approve Mule Appreciation Day, why not Bachelor's Day!"

Abby, what have bachelors done to deserve any form of homage or appreciation? They do not necessarily sow, nor do they reap. How can their accomplishments be compared to those of the mule?

The mule has justified its existence many times over. It has plowed our fields, provided us transportation (You wanna ride a bachelor?), pulled our borax ore, helped us through gold claims, and carried us down the deep slopes of the Grand Canyon.

I was amazed to learn that the bill was sponsored in Congress by Robert Garcia, who is not from an agricultural community—he's a Democrat from New York and lives in an apartment house in the Bronx.

BARRY V. IN CORAL SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR BARRY: Several of Rep. Garcia's constituents wrote to inform me that the Mule Appreciation Bill was not sponsored by Garcia.

I stand corrected. But since it was passed unanimously, it's safe to say that he did not oppose it.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know how Thomas Paine made your list of famous bachelors. He was married first on Sept. 27, 1763, to Mary Lambert in Sandwich, England, who died of pneumonia while expecting his only child.

Then on March 26, 1771, Paine married Elizabeth Ollive in Lewis, England. They were subsequently divorced.

DEATRA G.,
ALAMEDA, GA.

DEAR DEATRA: The definition of a bachelor is "an unmarried man." At the time this survey was taken, Thomas Paine was apparently between wives, hence he was classified as a bachelor.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Re "Bachelor's Day": It would certainly be a surprise to Andrew Carnegie's daughter, Margaret, to learn that her father was still a bachelor after marrying Louise Whitfield (Margaret's mother) in 1887.

JOHN A. CAMERON,
MASSAPEQUA, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column only as an appeasement to my wife of 43 years. You and Mr. Ed of Richmond may make light of Mule Appreciation Day to honor the hybrid who did man's bidding in the expansion of this country. But George Washington felt differently, no doubt, when he accepted a pair of jackasses as a gift from King Charles III on Oct. 27, 1785, and started breeding the mule.

I will gladly condone a National Wives' Day to honor women who work like a horse (especially mine), but what does a bachelor do besides avoid the responsibilities of marriage and a family?

Perhaps one day a year should be celebrated to recognize the importance of the jackass (four-legged and two), and that would cover everything.

Linville stars in Amarillo play

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Larry Linville is not anything like the Frank Burns character he portrayed in the television program, "M-A-S-H," for five years during the '70s. At first glance, you probably wouldn't recognize him at all. But as you spend time with him, you'll catch the occasional look or movement of the mouth that reminds you of Burns, the man everyone loved to hate before they knew South Fork ever existed.

The way Linville played Major Burns shows the extensiveness of the man's acting abilities — he's not anything like Burns; his deep voice isn't even like the high-pitched whine of Burns. Unlike the shallow, nerd-like character on M-A-S-H, Linville can be funny, charming, outrageous and deeply serious in a space of a few minutes. He appears to be a methodical man. As random as most of his actions and statements seem, they are more than likely carefully thought out.

Linville is to be appearing the next few weeks in the play "Lunch Hour," by Jean Kerr at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Amarillo. He plays a marriage counselor named Oliver, he says, "whose marriage is going to hell." "Lunch Hour" contains a blend of both comedy and drama, which appeals to Linville, he says. "It has some serious elements which a lot of dinner theatre (presentations) lack," he says. "It has human elements as well as outrageous comedy.

"I had sheered off from the play several times," Linville says. He felt the play needed cutting and reshaping and it had an "oblique" ending. But he decided this time to go ahead with the play if the Country Squire would get director Jack Booch of New York. Between the two, Linville and Booch, they tightened the play up and rewrote the ending.

"It's a very difficult play, and yet its very smooth and very logical," Linville explains. "It's kind of like a spiral. Once it starts, it really goes."

They also set the play in a Christmas theme since it will be performed during the holiday season at the Amarillo dinner theatre.

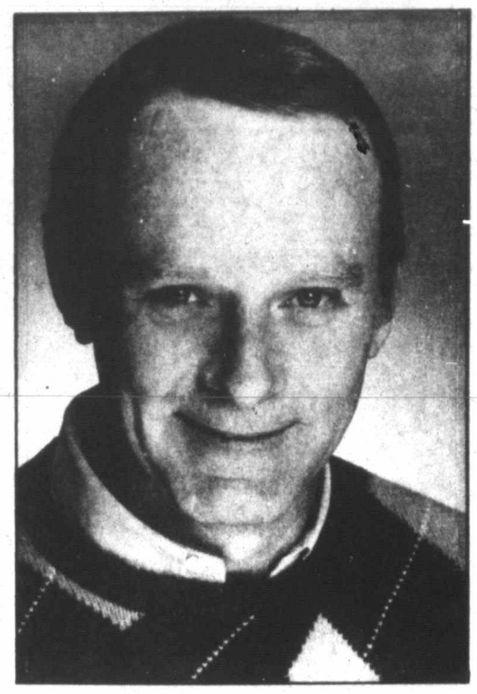

The cast of professional actors were ready to present the play in three days, Linville said. "We were determined that we were going to work like dogs and then enjoy the rest of the time," he added.

Guest starring with Linville are Viki Boyle who plays Carrie, a "mad girl," he described, "who is completely crazy and out of hand." William Lithgow plays Leo a friend, landlord and former patient of Oliver's, and Nora, Oliver's wife, played by Kathy Lichter. Rodney Rincon plays Peter, Carrie's husband and Nora's lover.

Some people may be surprised to know that Linville's serious acting start began in London at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. He's no stranger to Shakespeare. He attended the University of Colorado, and also played in high school productions prior to that.

Linville said playing "Lunch Hour" is a test of his acting abilities. Since the Country Squire is a theatre in the round, he says, "you have to act with your body and back and especially with your voice." He and Booch, he said, have had some fun spicing up the show with props such as a banana, a watch, goldfish, plants, and bells with hilarious results.

Opening night of the play was quite successful, Linville said with the director receiving "the finest compliment of all. He was told it was like peeking into someone's living room."

LARRY LINVILLE

Since Linville left M-A-S-H, he has played in theatres around the country, on several television programs, and has lectured on the college circuit.

Another television series about lawyers, created by the people who produce Hill Street Blues, is a possibility in the future, Linville said, as is a movie in the Phillipines. And he says he has two screen plays and a play in his head that he may start writing while in Amarillo.

Ring has many values to owner, buyer

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE — In 1970, I purchased a diamond ring for $415. I had it appraised in 1976, and the appraisal came in at $2,800.

I would now like to sell the ring. I took it to the jeweler who had appraised it at $2,800, and he offered me $350. When I asked him about the appraisal, he said that another member of the firm had appraised it, and while it might have been accurate then, it was not accurate today, and further, he was offering me the wholesale price and not the retail price that the appraisal indicated.

I'd like to sell the ring, but it is hard to understand how its value could have gone from $2,800 to $350 in nine years. Can you explain it? — I.L., LUBBOCK, TEXAS

DEAR I.L. — I seriously doubt that the ring has fallen from $2,800 to $350 in value. But I also doubt that the ring was ever worth anything in the neighborhood of $2,800.

You said you paid $415 for the ring in 1970. Its dollar value would be expected to rise because of the inflation we have experienced over the past 15 years. With jewelry, however, you pay retail when you buy, and are paid wholesale by the jeweler when you sell.

The jeweler is entitled to do this since he must make a profit when he resells the jewelry.

You should go out and have the ring appraised by at least two other reliable appraisers to get a good idea of its current market value. Once you have done this, you have three options: You can offer to sell it to a jeweler outright; you can offer it for sale in a local newspaper at its retail value; or you can take it to a jeweler and ask him if he will broker it for you.

The third option means that the jeweler will offer it for sale at retail in his establishment, and take a commission if he is successful in the sale. This type of sale ordinarily yields a bit more, but it takes considerably more time. If time is not a factor, you might want to give it some serious consideration.

DEAR BRUCE — Your statement that Louisiana is the only state in which a child cannot be disinherited was in error. I live in Louisiana, and I know there are ways to circumvent the law.

My father had a great deal of property. He deeded it all to my oldest brother, in spite of the fact that my mother, his wife for 50 years, was living.

At the present time, the property has been divided between two of my brothers, and my mother is on welfare and in a nursing home. (Her home has been given to the stepdaughter of the original inheritor.)

If you think this can't be done, you're mistaken. One of her sons-in-law got a lawyer and tried to do something, but he was unable to accomplish anything since the property was deeded over before my father's death.

Louisiana's Napoleonic laws are a nightmare. They contain more loopholes than laws. — V.D., ROSELAND, LA.

DEAR V.D. — In the column that you enclosed, I was dealing with wills rather than the transfer of property. That is the fulcrum of your situation, since your father deeded the property during his lifetime.

Both Napoleonic and English law allows people to dispose of their property in any way they wish during their lifetimes.

When it comes to a will, however, my statement still stands. You may disinherit your children in every state I know of except Louisiana.

I truly sympathize with the unfeeling way in which your father disposed of his estate and avoided his obligations to your mother. Perhaps even more sad is the neglect of your mother by her children.

Bed, breakfast hosts say it's like travel in reverse

By DAVID WEBB
Mid-Cities Daily News

HURST, Texas (AP) — Would you be interested in an alternative to hotel and motel lodgings when you travel?

Many people want to try something different, according to Bob and Blanche Goebel of Hurst. That's why they have opened their home to the "bed and breakfast" trade.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT-Blanche Goebel poses in the patio - breakfast area of her home in Hurst, where she and her husband are members of an association of Texas homeowners who provide overnight accommodations in their homes. They socialize with the guests before bedtime and serve breakfast in the morning. (AP Laserphoto)

The Goebels have joined an association of Texas homeowners who provide overnight accommodations in their homes. They socialize with the guests before bedtime and serve breakfast in the morning.

About 10 guests have stayed in the Goebel's home since they joined the association in April 1984.

"We could have had a lot more, but we travel a lot," Blanche Goebel said. "If you want to have them, you can; if you don't, you don't."

The reservations are made through Bed & Breakfast Texas Style, a Dallas-based agency that maintains a list of homeowners throughout Texas who want to share their homes with travelers. The costs range from $25 to $60 per night, and visits can be one night or longer.

The Goebels joined the association because they like to travel and meet new people. The experience is like traveling in reverse, Mrs. Goebel said.

"The people so far have been super," she said. "Most are here just for the night. They eat and leave."

Visitors from as far away as Sweden and Puerto Rico and as close as San Antonio have stayed with the Goebels. The proximity to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport makes the Goebel home a desirable location for travelers, she said.

For a small fee — much less than the $14 charged by taxis — the Goebels will pick up guests at the airport.

After their arrival, the guests are welcome to watch television in the Goebels' country-style living room and have refreshments. There is a hot tub in the back yard and a glassed-in garden room available for relaxing.

Sometimes, the guests want to go out to eat at one of the area's restaurants.

Recently a guest from Minnesota developed a Texas allergy, and Mrs. Goebel gave him a remedy to relieve his suffering.

"His wife asked, 'Where can you get that in a motel?'" Mrs. Goebel said.

Guests may have all the privacy they want, but most like to socialize with the hosts.

"If you don't want to talk, and you want to be alone, you better go to a hotel," Mrs. Goebel said. "The object of it is to be economical and friendly."

It is an atmosphere they enjoyed while traveling in Europe and wanted to create at their own home.

BUSINESS REVIEW & FORECAST

America's Favorites: Pontiac, Buick, GMC, Toyota

Pontiac Trans-Am

America's romance with the automobile is sparked again by the power, comfort, beauty, performance of the Pontiac, Buick, GMC and Toyota.

These new, exciting autos and trucks are at Nicky Britten Pontiac, Buick, GMC, Toyota, 833 W. Foster, 669-2571.

They feature energy and money saving electronic fuel-injection engines, more head and leg room, more luxurious interiors, more beautiful colors.

These cars and trucks are designed from the suggestions --- what the buyers want ---, the ideas of the engineers to give top performance for today's motorists.

Backing up his guarantees Nicky Britten has his service department staffed with skilled, experienced mechanics who have the tools and equipment to do your job right, and to do it quickly.

The Pontiac

The new Pontiacs - a new dimension - build excitement for '86. They reflect General Motor's commitment to innovative styling and engineering: advanced aerodynamics, tuned suspension systems, sophisticated engines.

The Grand AM is powered by the "Tech IV" 2.5 liter four cylinder engine with electronic fuel injection, engine with swirl-port combustion chambers and roller valve lifters. Ther's also an available 3 liter V8 with multi-port fuel injection for even more power.

The Fiero has the standard 5 speed gear box, rack and pinion steering, fully independent suspension, a spirited 2.5 liter 4-cylinder engine the framed "Tech IV". A multi-port fuel injected 2.8 liter V6 is available on the Fiero SE.

Firebird Trans AM: Lean, mean outrageously beautiful is raw power, sleek aerodynamics, rally tuned suspension, rear deck spoiler, body-color sport mirrors.

Pontiac 6000 STE: the shape is detailed. The feel aggresive yet sophisticated. The engineering superb. America's performance sedan.

The Sunbird GT: Fun in a new dimension. Aggressive, Distinctive. Powered by a 1.8 liter turbocharged 4 cylinder engine with multi-port fuel injection, matched to a 4 speed gear box.

The Sunbird: Standard are the 5 speed gear box and 1.8 liter engine.

Grand Prix L.E. offer a full range of standard features, including power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, a responsive V6 engine, plus a wide selection of interior, drive train and suspension options.

The Bonneville Brougham offers comfort for six with available features as full instrumental gages, deeply padded 55/45 hatchback seating, limited slip differential and 5.0 V8 engine.

Parisienne Brougham provides spacious comfort, the graceful ride of a luxury car, every thing you expect in full-size luxury.

Pontiac 1000: standard features include 1.6 liter, 4 cylinder engine with 4 speed manual gearbox. A 3 speed automatic is available.

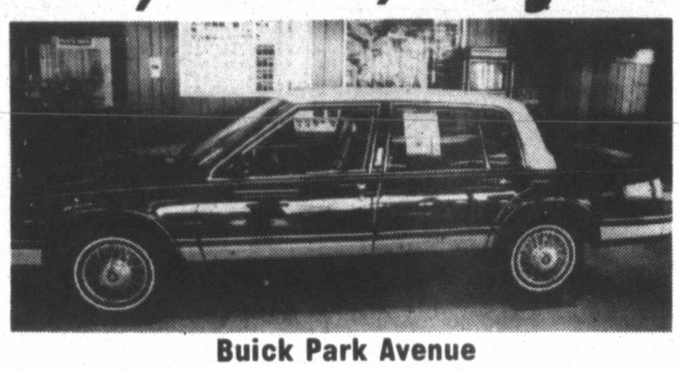

Pontiac Bonneville

The GMC

GMC Cargo Van: available with 1000 to 1700 payload rating, 189.9 cu. ft. cargo space. It is qualified as a commercial delivery of maintenance vehicle.

Safari Passenger Van is sized for today's needs. It can seat 8 adults, carry up to 1300 pounds, tow up to 5,000 pounds. Convenience equipment can be ordered to add to your comfort and pleasure.

GMC Pickups—S-15 built with quality and value. America's choice: roomy, comfortable for long jaunts. Either 2 or 4 wheel, long or short cargo box, regular or club cab. 2.5 liter Tech IV or 2.8 liter V8 engines. The S-15 uses an electronic fuel injection system. New standard 78 or 85 amp generators handle power demands.

Buick Park Avenue

The Buick

Today's Buicks have the look of purpose: Aerodynamics means better fuel economy, reduced wind noise, improved stability.

Electra T Type is equiped with the 3.8 litre V-6 engine with sequential-port fuel injection, one of the most efficient systems available.

The Electra /Park Avenue are equipped with front wheel drive, shortened length, tranverse-mounted V-6 engine with sequentialpost fuel injection coupled to a four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive.

The 1986 Buick LeSabre brings the features of front-wheel drive, transverse-mounted V-6 engines and aerodynamic styling to those who value the comfort. The Custom and Limited LeSabres were created using the latest aerodynamic advanced design procedures. The result: a sleeker car 400 pounds lighter than last year's LeSabre.

The Regal: T Type turbo charged V-6 power, a firm more "European" suspension and sporty interior.

The Century: New styling evokes the spirit of European road cars, exemplifies Buick's application of leading-edge technology to traditional values.

The Somerset: A personal car that offers front-wheel drive, available V-6 power and aerodynamic styling.

The Skylark: Front-wheel drive Skylark available as a custom or limited sedan offers 5 passenger comfort and practicality.

The Skyhawk: Sedans are precise, front-wheel drive cars that have an air of purposeful practicality, Power for the T Type may be from the 1.8 litre, four cylinder engine with electronic fuel injection, or the available 1.8 litre turbocharged four capable of propeling the Skyhawk from zero to 60 in less than 9 seconds on the test track.

Electra Station Wagon: allows up to eight passengers to travel in comfort with a V-8 engine power.

LeSabre Estate Wagon: the traditional family-size space with luxury. A 5 litre V-8 and four speed automatic transmission with over-drive.

Century Wagon: features 2.5 litre four cylinder engine with fuel injection. Restyled front.

Skyhawk Wagons have power front disc brakes and precise rock-and-pinion steering. They contribute to the performance orinetated Skyhawk.

THE TOYOTA

From the sleek Celica GT-S to the rugged turbo-charged 4 Runner, Toyotas feature a car and truck for every taste.

The Celica has all-new aerodynamic exterior, front wheel drive, a 2 liter, twin-cam, 16 valve powerplant (GTmodels). Celicas have rounded profile, retractable headlamps, low roofline, deeply raked windshield, rounded C pillar design, a large rear spoiler.

The GT-S Model high revving 2 liter engine combined with the Toyota Variable Injection System and four wheel independent front suspension give this Celica a sporty, high performance feel.

The Camry family car has the 2 liter, four cylinder engine with 95 hp. The turbo-diesel engine has been retained in the Camry four-door sedan with an increase in displacement from 1.8 to 2 liters.

Toyota Vans enjoy new power and sleek lines. All '86 models receive 2.2 liter, 101 hp engines. The four cylinder, electronically fuel injected engines provide fuel economy expected from less powerful vehicles.

Toyota Trucks features the "HiT-rac" independent front suspension on the popular 4x4 models and the addition of a trubo gas 4 runner.

The 19 model lineup offers a 135 hp turbo gas engine, greater payload and towing capacities, interior refinements.

White excels; Cowboys enjoy early feast

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys looked like their old efficient 1971 Super Bowl champions on Sunday, not the scruffy outfit that had been humiliated 44-0 by the Cicago Bears a week earlier.

"We needed to bounce back on the positive side after last week," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It was a must win for us."

The Cowboys followed quarterback Danny White's sharpshooting to a 34-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles and remained tied with the New York Giants for the National Conference Eastern Division leadership.

"Right now, New York is the class of the East because they are playing on a high note and we are up and down each week," said Landry. "But now is the time to move forward. We have as good a chance as anybody if we play well."

The Cowboys' "redemption" victor over the Eagles came off White's three touchdown passes and a ballhawking secondary that picked off three Ron Jaworski tosses.

Jaworski had a career-high 380 yards against Dallas in a 16-14 victory in Philadelphia. But he came into the game here bothered by a bruised shoulder and connected on 23 of 42 pases for 285 yards.

White, who suffered a concussion and a jammed neck against the Bears, completed 75 per cent of his passes, hitting 20 of 28 shots for 243 yards.

He nailed tight end Doug Cosbie with a fourth and inches 2-yard scoring pass and found him again on a 23-yard scoring strike, all in the second period.

In the fourth quarter, Mike Renfro shagged a 19-yard touchdown pass over the middle.

"It was like night and day compared to last week," said White. "I haven't been 100 per cent physically all year but I got out with a headache today."

He added, "St. Louis will play us tough on Thursday. They always do."

Landry said, "We're very happy. It was a big game, a must game if we had a chance to get into the playoffs.

"We had to make some big plays. Danny was just excellent."

Landry continued, "This was a critical game. We had to bounce back on the positive side."

Dallas is 8-4 and the Eagles dropped to 6-6 in the division. The Cowboys play St. Louis Thanksgiving Day.

"We are in the stretch drive now," said Landry. "We have some tough teams to close with."

Almost lost in White's bombardment were Tony Dorsett's touchdown runs of two and 10 yards and his 86 yards rushing on 30 carries. Dorsett also broke the 1,000 yard rushing barrier for the eighth time in nine pro seasons.

The Eagles got a 74-yard scoring run from rookie Herman Hunter but the overhead game was limited to Jaworski's late 11-yard scoring pass to Mike Quick.

Eagles' Coach Marion Campbell was proud of Jaworski's effort.

"He hung in there all the way," said Campbell." He's a tough guy."

Campbell said the Eagles still had a playoff chance.

"We're not going to die because of this one," Campbell said. "We're going to keep trying our tails off. We've worked too hard to make ourselves a respectable football team."

Jaworski said, "The Cowboys played outstanding football. You have to give them credit. They had control of the game and took us out of our game plan."

Zendejas' kick propels Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The emotional roller coaster the Houston Oilers have ridden this season reached new highs Sunday.

"It's incredible how the emotions change from week to week in this locker room," Oilers wide receiver Tim Smith said. "We're lucky to be in the AFC Central where a two-game winning streak can put you back in the race."

The Oilers built a 17-0 first-half lead and then had to come from behind three times to defeat San Diego 37-35 on a 51-yard field goal by Tony Zendejas with two seconds left in regulation play.

In other games Sunday, it was the New York Jets 16, New England 13 (OT); Tampa Bay 19, Detroit 16 (OT); the Los Angeles Raiders 31, Denver 28 (OT); Miami 23, Buffalo 14; Cleveland 24, Cincinnati 6; New Orleans 30, Minnesota 23; the New York Giants 34, St. Louis 3; the Los Angeles Rams 34, Green Bay 13, and Kansas City 20, Indianapolis 7.

Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, starting for injured Warren Moon, dueled San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts score for score.

Luck drove the Oilers to the Charger 33 with seven seconds left to set up the game-winner by Zendejas, who earlier hit field goals of 47 and a career long 52 yarder.

"I don't think I've had a better game than this," Zendejas said. "When I lined it up, it looked between 50 and 51 yards. When I kick those in practice, they don't seem that far away. I just think the same way when I kick."

It was the second time in as many weeks that the Chargers had been struck down so suddenly.

They were lining up in overtime a week ago to kick a winning field goal against Denver. But the kick was blocked and then returned 60 yards for a winning touchdown.

The Chargers had more time to watch Sunday's time bomb.

Luck, starting his first game since 1983, hit a 24-yard pass to Drew Hill and completed a 25-yard pass to Smith to set up Zendejas' game winner.

Luck said the final seconds were fun.

"We'd had success moving the ball the whole game," he said. "I told the guys in the huddle, just because we had 22 seconds left doesn't mean we can't drive down and let Tony kick a field goal."

The Oilers faced second down and 15 yards to go at their own 42 when Luck admonished his offense, two plays before the big catch by Smith.

"We were scoring so much it opened the whole field," Smith said. "Everyone was having success and they realized they had to cover everyone."

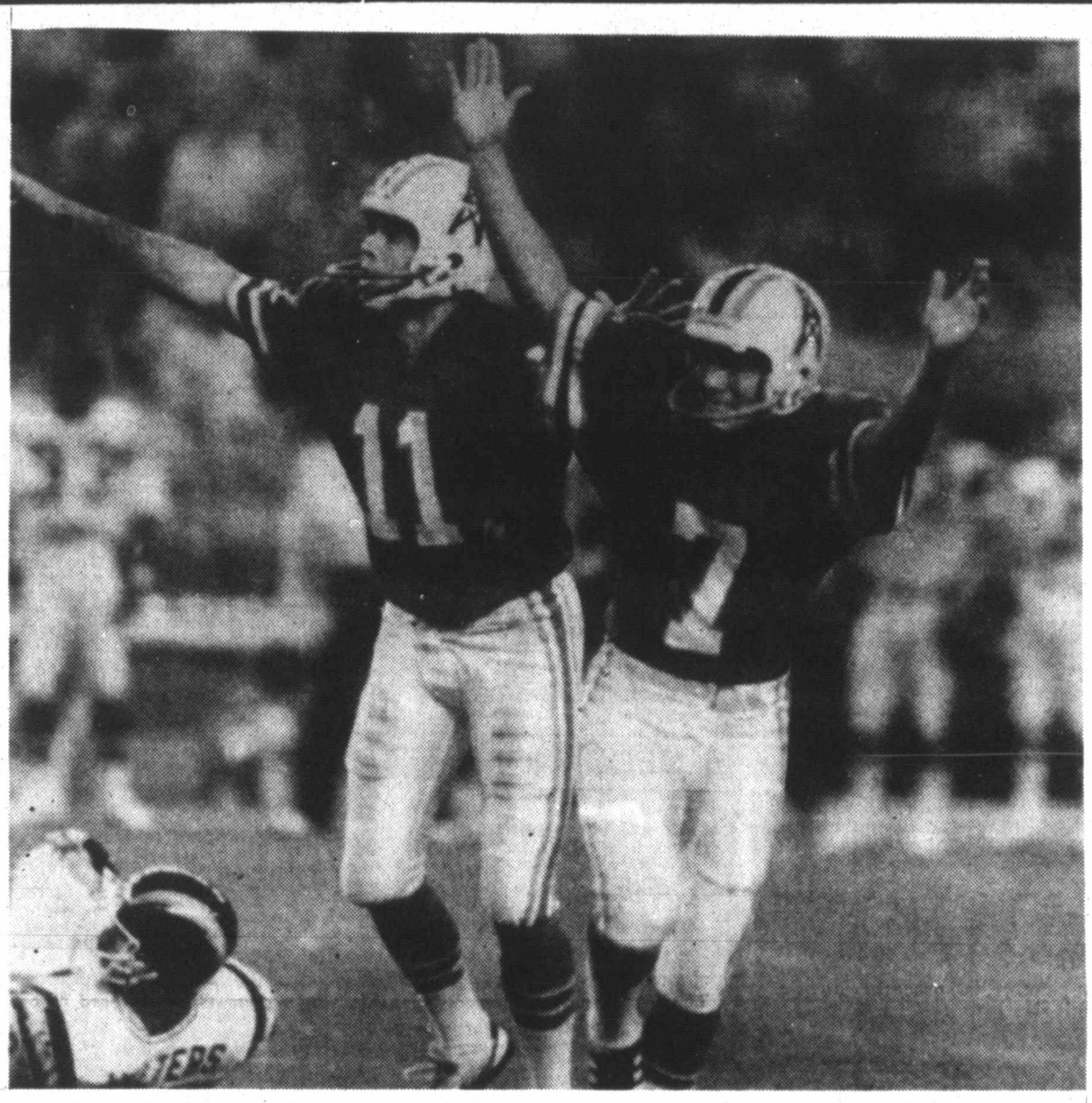

The Oilers built a 17-7 halftime lead on a 16-yard run by Larry Moriarty, Luck's 8-yard touchdown pass to Drew Hill and Zendejas' 47-yarder.

The Chargers started their comeback shortly before the half with a one-yard run by Tim pencer following an 11-yard interception return by cornerback John Hendy.

The offensive battle grew intense in the second half.

Fouts' 67-yard touchdown pass to Lionel James and a 2-yard run by Buford McGee gave San Diego it's first lead at 21-20 going into the fourth quarter following a 52-yard field goal by Zendejas.

Rozier had touchdowns of 3 and 2 yards and Tim Spencer ran 15 yards for a touchdown and Wes Chandler caught an 11-yard touchdown pass with 39 second to play to give the Chargers a 35-34 lead.

Georgia gets Sun Bowl bid with Arizona

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Georgia and the Arizona Wildcats have both accepted invitations to El Paso's Sun Bowl, with the Bulldogs one of two Southeastern Conference teams playing in Texas in a post-season game.

Bulldogs Head Coach Vince Dooley accepted the invitation from two Sun Bowl representatives in Atlanta on Saturday afternoon.

The University of Arizona's Wildcats on Saturday night stunned favored Arizona State 16-13 in Tempe, then accepted an invitation to the Dec. 28 classic.

Earlier Saturday, another Southeastern Conference team, Auburn, accepted a an invitation to play in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

The Sun Bowl contest will be the 52nd to be played at the West Texas stadium. The bowl previously was reserved for smaller conference football teams, but opened up to larger conferences when the stadium was expanded in 1963 to seat 50,000.

"We are exceptionally pleased to have the opportunity to play in the Sun Bowl," said Dooley. "Few people realize the Sun Bowl is the second oldest bowl in the country behind the Rose Bowl," he said.

Georgia has a season record of 7-2-1 and has one remaining game scheduled for next Saturday against Georgia Tech. Arizona has a Pacific 10 record of 8-3.

'Horns, Aggies to battle for Cotton bid

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

For the first time since 1943, the Texas Longhorns and Texas Aggies will collide with the Cotton Bowl on the line.

Thanksgiving night's nationally televised (ESPN at 6:45 p.m. CST) Southwest Conference battle between the two old rivals will determine the host team New Year's Day in the 50th Cotton Bowl Classic.

The guest team will be Bo Jackson and the Auburn Tigers.

The Aggies haven't been to the Cotton Bowl since 1967.

Each team has one conference loss, and the meeting was set up by Texas' 17- 10 victory over Baylor and the Aggies' 53-6 triumph ovdr Texas Christian.

The loser will play in the Bluebonnet Bowl against the Air Force.

"This is what we've worked for all year," said Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "This is the reward."

Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker, who lost to both teams, said, "I'd have to select Texas A&M. They are on a roll and have a lot of talent."

Texas overcame three critical lost fumbles to keep alive a 34-year Memorial Stadium hex over the Bears. Baylor got a consolation prize — the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 27, probably against Louisiana State in Memphis, Tenn. LSU beat Notre Dame 10-7 on Saturday.

In other SWC games, Arkansas beat Southern Methodist 15-9, and Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore and his hard luck Red Raiders were snakebit again, losing 17-16 to Houston when a last minute two-point conversion failed.

Texas Coach Fred Akers said he hopes his team can heal from the Baylor bruises.

"The game is a big drain on us physically but we'll have to get ready in just four days to play the Aggies," said Akers. "Our team is really excited but we have some bruises and strains that will have to heal.

"I doubt that you have to remind our guys of last year's A&M game" when the Aggies won 37-12, Akers said.

The only other time Texas and A&M have met head-up for a Cotton Bowl berth was in 1943, with Texas winning 27-13.

"We played our best game of the year against Baylor. Our fumbles gave them 14 points but we made a great goal line stand," Akers said.

"It was a proud moment for our team."

He praised Baylor, saying "nobody wearing Orange (Texas colors) or Green could leave here today and not feel proud. It was two good football teams going at it."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said, "I'm not feeling good.

"We set our goal for the Cotton Bowl and when you don't get there, it hurts," he said. "We're proud and happy to be going to the Liberty Bowl. I've wanted to go to that bowl for a long time."

Texas' defense was led by James McKinney, who says the Longhorns will be ready for the Aggies.

"This was one of our best games, but we're saving the best for next Thursday," he said. "We were rated low at the start of the year and nobody has given us much of a chance. But we've got the biggest hearts of anybody."

Arkansas received a bid to play in San Diego's Holiday Bowl Dec. 22 against Arizona State.

Auburn still has a game left against Alabama.

"We're going to have two wars this week," said Auburn Coach Pat Dye. "There's going to be Texas-Texas A&M on Thursday night then Alabama-Auburn on Saturday."

Lady Harvesters felled by Tascosa

AMARILLO — Tascosa overcame a six-point deficit with two minutes to go to defeat the Pampa Lady Harvesters, 49-48, Saturday night here.

Tana Hanes, who led Tascosa with 12 points and 15 rebounds, hit five of six fouls shots in the fourth quarter to help her team pull out the victory. Tascosa hit eight foul shots in that turnabout fourth quarter while Pampa did not go to the foul line in the final eight minutes.

"We played like we were behind instead of ahead," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols. "We lost the game on mental breakdowns, not at the foul line. We also missed a lot of easy baskets and you can't do that in a close game."

The score was tied at 24-all at halftime, but the Lady Harvesters jumped ahead by six, 40-34, going into the fourth quarter.

Pampa sophomore Hope Henson, who sustained an ankle injury 30 seconds into the third quarter, led all scorers with 13 points.

"I think she's going to be all right, but I didn't want to take any chances with her," Nichols said. "We've got a lot of games left to play."

Jackie Reed chipped in 12 points for Pampa while Sandee Stokes and Rogena Fly had seven and six points respectively for Pampa. Melissa Nichols and Dana had four points each while Holly Hoganson had two. Nichols had 10 rebounds while Reed pulled down seven.

Angela Woods added 10 points for the winners.

Both teams are 1-1 for the season.

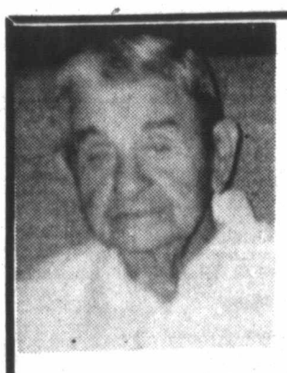

Pampa won the junior varsity game, 35-30, as Keitha Clark led all scorers with 17 points. Teammate Tacy Stoddard followed with 10.

Jame Templer scored nine points and Leslie Archer had seven for Tascosa JVs.

Pampa hosts Clayton Monday night with the junior varsity game starting at 6 p.m., followed by the varsity.

Four teams in national title race

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

The chase for the national championship is down to four teams and two of them could fall by the wayside before New Year's Day.

Meet college football's Final Four:

—Penn State, ranked No. 1 in the last two Associated Press polls, completed an 11-0 regular season by thumping Pitt 31-0. The Nittany Lions can wrap up their second national championship in four years if they win their Orange Bowl match with ...

—Oklahoma, the preseason choice for all the marbles and No. 5 last week but certain to move up following a 27-7 pasting of second-ranked Nebraska, which earned the Sooners a trip to the Orange Bowl. Oklahoma is one of only two teams to appear in the Top Ten every week this season. The other is ...

—Iowa, which captured its first outright Big Ten championship in 27 years by trimming Minnesota 31-9. The third-ranked Hawkeyes, who will meet UCLA in the Rose Bowl, are the only one of the four contenders never to have won a national championship. The most recent newcomer to that elite group is ...

—Miami of Florida, the only team to defeat Oklahoma ths season. The fourth-ranked Hurricanes, who turned back Colorado State 24-3, are seeking to become the fourth team in the last five years to win the national championship after not being ranked in the preseason poll. Miami's 1983 national champs were one of them.

Penn State and once-beaten Iowa, the first team in the school's history to win 10 games, are through until Jan. 1. Meanwhile, 9-1 Miami winds up against Notre Dame on Saturday and 8-1 Oklahoma has games remaining against Oklahoma State and Southern Methodist.

"We won't be No. 1 this week so we've got to tend to our business and win the next two weeks," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "We have the physical ability to win, but it will be up to the coaches to see that the players are mentally ready for those games.

"The Orange Bowl is not a cinch 1-2 situation, as it would have been if Nebraska had won, so our job is to take care of our situation the next two weeks."

It remains to be seen if Oklahoma can climb to No. 2 heading into the Orange Bowl, in which case Iowa and Miami would have to root for a tie.

While Oklahoma breezed past Nebraska, Miami struggled with Colorado State, which had the Hurricanes in a 3-3 dogfight as late as the third period.

"All the distractions, all the concerns bothered us," said Coach Jimmy Johnson. "The Sugar Bowl invitation, the game with Notre Dame coming up. We'll be sharp for Notre Dame."

Nebraska settled for a Fiesta Bowl date with sixth-ranked Michigan, which defeated No. 12 Ohio State 27-17. The loss sent the Buckeyes to the Florida Citrus Bowl against No. 11 Brigham Young, a 38-28 winner over Utah.

Seventh-ranked Oklahoma State blew its shot at the Orange Bowl by losing to Iowa State 15-10. The Cowboys will go to the Gator Bowl against No. 14 Florida State which didn't play. Alsi idle was ninth-ranke3 Florida, No. 10 Auburn (Cotton Bowl) and No. 20 Georgia, which meets Arizona in the Sun Bowl.

Arizona is responsible for UCLA's being in the Rose Bowl. The eighth-rankd Bruins were upset by Southern Cal 17-13 but backed into the Rose Bowl when Arizona State lost to Arizona 16-13 and Washington was edged by Washington State 21-20.

In the Second Ten:

—No. 13 Air Force held off Hawaii 27-20 and will go to the Bluebonnet Bowl against Thursday night's Texas-Texas A&M loser.

—No. 15 Baylor missed out on the Cotton Bowl by losing to Texas 17-10. The Texas-Texas A&M winner becomes the host team in Dallas while Baylor goes to the Liberty Bowl, probably against No. 17 LSU, a 10-7 winner over Notre Dame.

—No. 16 Tennessee smashed Kentucky 42-0 and needs only to beat Vanderbilt to represent the Southeastern Conference in the Sugar Bowl.

—No. 18 Arkansas edged SMU 15-9 and will meet Arizona State in the Holiday Bowl.

—No. 19 Texas A&M whipped Texas Christian 53-6, making its game with Texas a Cotton Bowl showdown for the first time since 1943.

Iowa, Oklahoma clinch titles

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifth-ranked Oklahoma and No. 3 Iowa clinched conference titles Saturday, almost finalizing the New Year's Day bowl situation.

Oklahoma, 8-1, upset No. 2 Nebraska to win the Big Eight title and a berth in the Orange Bowl while Iowa, 10-1, defeated Minnesota to win the Big Ten and a reservation in the Rose Bowl against eighth-ranked UCLA.

The Sooner's triumph set up a potential national championship showdown with top-ranked Penn St. in the Orange Bowl New Year's night. The Nittany Lions concluded a perfect 11-0 season Saturday night by slamming Pitt.

UCLA, meanwhile, backed into the Pacific-10 title and the subsequent Rose Bowl berth. Despite being upset by Southern Cal, the 8-2-1 Bruins clinched the crown when Arizona upset Arizona State Saturday night.

Other Jan. 1 bowl games will feature Miami, Fla. and the Southeastern Conference champ in the Sugar Bowl, Auburn and the Southwest Conference champ in the Cotton Bowl, and Nebraska and Michigan in the Fiesta Bowl.

Terrorists suspected of bombing U.S. installation; 35 are injured

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Leftist terrorists are believed responsible for the car bombing at a U.S. military shopping center that injured 35 people, mostly Americans, but no one has claimed responsibility, West German authorities said.

The blast at 3:20 p.m. Sunday shattered windows, damaged 42 cars in a parking lot behind the store and blew a gaping hole in the back wall of the shopping center.

"We suspect leftist terrorists because the attack was similar to the car bombing at the U.S. Air Force base in August," said Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for the West German federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe.

The Aug. 8 car bomb attack at the U.S. Air Force Rhein-Main Air Base killed two Americans and injured 20 people. A leftist terrorist group, the Red Army Faction, claimed responsibility for that attack.

Bill Swisher, a spokesman for the U.S. Army's 97th General Hospital in Frankfurt, said 34 injured people were treated at the hospital. He said 27 people had been released from the hospital by late Sunday evening, including a 3-year-old child.

The seven remaining in the hospital were listed in fair to good condition, Swisher said.

The 35th victim, a Polish national employed in the military store, was treated and released from a nearby Frankfurt hospital.

Police said they were looking for a man, described as having "Moroccan features," who is suspected of buying the silver-blue metallic BMW 525 sedan used in the bombing.

Police spokesman Kurt Kraus said the car was bought Saturday at a second-hand auto dealership near Frankfurt, where the car used in the August bombing was also purchased.

He said police were looking for witnesses who may have seen the car or the man since Saturday. The car was carrying West German license plates and disintegrated in the blast.

"It was a very powerful blast," said U.S. Army spokesman Christopher Chalko. The explosion shattered windows in buildings within a 100-yard radius and damaged a military laundromat and a car wash. Gasoline at a service station about 30 yards away did not ignite.

The injured, whose identities were not immediately available, included 19 U.S. military personnel, 11 American civilians, a West German civilian and a Filipino, Swisher said.

The bomb went off shortly before the post exchange was due to close at 4 p.m.

"There were not too many people in the store but the laundromat and the car wash were busy," said Maj. Cecil Green, another Army spokesman.

AIDS students don't infect classmates

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Although worried parents have voiced fears that their children might be infected with AIDS by classmates tith the disease, researchers now have convincing evidence such transmission does not occur.

A three-year study at a special boarding school for sick or handicapped children has shown that AIDS-infected children who live, eat and study with other students will not pass along the disease.

The study was done at a boarding school in western France where about 50 hemophiliac students — about half of whom were infected with the AIDS virus — shared living quarters and classrooms with 70 uninfected students, said Luc Montagnier, a virologist at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

He mentioned the unpublished study Saturday during a symposium on African AIDS. He said detailed results of the research would be published soon in a medical journal.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. AIDS, caused by a virus, was first identified in male homosexuals, hemophiliacs and intravenous drug abusers.

As of Nov. 18, AIDS had struck 14,862 people in the United States and claimed 7,628 lives since 1979.

Montagnier said he could not identify the school where the research was done, because school officials had requested confidentiality. The children were between 3 and 16 years old and had lived together for one to three years.

He said in a later interview that the children with AIDS were hemophiliacs who had contracted it from blood transfusions.

The disease is most often spread through sexual contact, shared needles or blood transfusions. Children with AIDS generally have acquired it either from blood transfusions or from their infected mothers at birth.

"None of the other children have been infected with the AIDS virus," said Montagnier, one of the discoverers of the virus and an internationally known AIDS researcher.

The conclusion that acquired immune deficiency syndrome cannot be spread among schoolchildren was reinforced by an additional finding. The hemophiliac students did pass hepatitis B to some healthy classmates, suggesting that an exchange of blood occurred between the students, probably through scratches on their hands, Montagnier said.
