Hundreds of French citizens arrived in Paris late Monday after leaving Baghdad on a flight to freedom following a three-month ordeal in which they had been held hostage in Iraq and occupied Kuwait on the orders of Saddam Hussein.

President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III warned the United States would be quick to attack Iraq if provoked. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Iraq would pay a "terrible price" if it tried to "lay a finger on Israel."

There was no indication whether the unusually hawkish remarks, in separate speeches Monday, were made in coordination or meant to respond to any specific threat from Iraq.

The U.N. Security Council voted to hold Iraq liable for damages caused by its takeover of Kuwait. Later, officers from the five permanent council members met to discuss the sanctions in one of the highest-level military meetings at the United Nations but the session ended without a statement.

In Paris, throngs of family members and journalists cheered as the chartered Iraqi Airways Boeing 747 carrying 263 French citizens and 19 other Westerners touched down at Paris' Charles de Gaulle-Roissy airport at midnight.

Among the Frenchmen were the last seven diplomats who endured an arduous siege of their embassy in Kuwait.

The Iraqi jetliner picked up more than 50 French evacuees in Kuwait City in the afternoon before flying to Baghdad,

Williams' campaign has spent $20 million

■ Democratic candidate Ann Richards is close to matching the previous record of $12 million spent by Gov. Clements in the 1986 campaign.

■ Williams endorsed by local police organization/1B

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Clayton Williams Monday reported he topped $20 million in spending this past month in his record-breaking Republican campaign for governor.

Ann Richards, who has lagged behind Willians in raising funds, still accounted for $11.9 million as her Democratic campaign approached Gov. Bill Clements' previous record of $12 million spent in 1986.

In campaign finance reports filed Monday with the Texas secretary of state for the month from Sept. 28 to Oct. 27, Williams reported he raised $3.75 million, including $1.6 million in loans, while his campaign spent $4.4 million.

Ms. Richards reported she raised $1.83 million, including $175,000 in loans, while her campaign spent $2.26 million for the month.

The Richards campaign, in a news release, said the campaign raised enough money from 7,919 individual donors over the past month to stay on TV during the final weeks of the campaign.

"Since this race has tightened, thousands of Texans have responded to Ann Richards' campaign effort," said Ms. Richards' campaign manager, Mary Beth Rogers. "It has been a terrific outpouring of support."

The Williams campaign has completed its purchase of TV and radio spots and has sent out its direct mail, spokesman Gordon Hensley said. "It leaves us in a very strong position," he said.

Hensley also noted that Ms. Richards has tapped out-of-state contributors more than Williams, who has raised approximately 5 percent of his money outside Texas.

"We believe this raises a legitimate question — who does Ann Richards seek to represent, out-of-state interest groups or the people of Texas?" said Hensley, who did not have a breakdown of Williams contributors.

The Richards campaign noted that 86 percent of Ms. Richards' contributors were from Texas, 71 percent gave $50 or less and 58 percent were women.

"We're not the big money campaign, but clearly we are the campaign of middle class and working people of Texas," Rogers said.

Combined with the money spent by defeated primary candidates, the governor's race has surpassed the record of $33 million spent when Clements ousted White in 1986.

Ms. Richards' top contributors included $25,000 each from Joseph D. Jamail, a Houston lawyer, Bernard Rapoport, a Waco insurance execeutive, the Texas State Teachers Association, Dr. Thomas Marvelli of Fort Worth and Rex Houston, a Henderson lawyer; and $20,000 each from Gilbert T. Adams, a Beaumont lawyer, and Standish Meacham, a University of Texas dean.

Ms. Richards also received $17,000 from the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees PAC of Washington, D.C.; $15,000 from Baldwin & Baldwin law firm of Marshall; and $9,500 from Don Henley, an entertainer from Beverly Hills, Calif.

Judge rules against Permian coaches

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — University Interscholastic League (UIL) officials are warning Odessa Permian football coaches not to press their case any further after a defeat in court Monday, but the coaches say they are appealing anyway.

State District Judge Pete Lowry Monday ruled against issuing a temporary injunction that would have permitted Permian High School to go to the playoffs this year, despite UIL sanctions against the school handed down Sept. 20.

Head Coach Tam Hollingshead shook off the loss Monday, saying he and 11 other Permian coaches, virtually the school's entire football staff, "are not going to give up on this season . . not going to give up on this team."

The UIL state executive committee on Sept. 20 found Permian had violated two league rules this past summer, agreeing unanimously that off-season practices at the school were more organized than the league allows.

The school's coaching staff and one student athlete, defensive letterman Chris McMillan, subsequently filed suit against the league, saying their rights to due process had been violated. Their suit also contends the UIL has threatened their future earning power and advancement possibilities.

UIL Executive Director Bailey Marshall said Monday the league will fight the suit at every juncture.

"We've lost sight of the fact this is athletics at the high school level," he said. "When it gets to be this important, something's wrong."

Said UIL attorney Lucius D. Bunton IV, "This thing needs to go to bed. It's over."

Bunton said the additional publicity of an appeal will work against the coaches. He said he will argue again that the staff knew the rules and broke them intentionally.

Abell-Hanger offers $600,000 over 3 years to UIL foundation

Staff Report

AUSTIN — The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland has issued a three-year $600,000 conditional matching grant to the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation.

Any new grants, or additional grants by a foundation or individual will be matched by the Abell-Hanger Foundation by up to $200,000 per year for three years, the University Interscholastic League (UIL) announced Monday.

"It's significant," said Paul Davis, a Midlander who serves on the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation Board of Trustees. "We're very excited about it."

The donation expands the foundation's endowment by almost 35 percent, Davis said.

He said the Abell-Hanger Foundation has been a major supporter for about eight years.

Ban on abortion advice to go before high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulations that bar the staffs of government-subsidized family planning clinics from discussing abortion with their clients are coming under Supreme Court scrutiny.

Although fueled by the continuing struggle over abortion, the legal dispute currently being argued before the court more directly involves free speech rights rather than women's right to end their pregnancies.

At stake is the information available to the 5 million low-income women who depend on family planning clinics and similar health care providers.

Several anti-abortion organizations are urging the justices to use the family clinic case to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

Justice Department lawyers, defending the regulations at issue, said the Bush administration still favors reversal of the 1973 decision. But they did not say this was the appropriate case for such court action.

Federal regulations imposed by the Reagan administration in 1988 called for the ban on counseling about abortion,

Smith led the Reagan administration's conservative shift on a number of issues affecting domestic policy, notably civil rights.

Under his influence, the administration took a more laissez-faire attitude toward antitrust law, even though it presided over the breakup of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

GULF: Hundreds still detained in Iraq

where hundreds of hostages celebrated with beer and whiskey as the plane landed.

About 60 French citizens believed to have been in Iraq and Kuwait did not leave. A French spokesman said some opted to stay behind and others may have managed to leave on their own.

Isabelle Renoir, the Foreign Ministry officer in charge of the hostage case, said one French citizen of Italian origin was prevented from leaving Iraq. She did not provide other details.

"I can say now that all French citizens who wanted to go home have gone home," French charge d'affaires Andre Janier said.

Hundreds of Westerners remain in Iraq and Kuwait, some detained at strategic sites as part of Saddam's "human shield" against attack by the U.S.-led multinational force. Some of the French citizens freed Monday had been part of the shield.

"The Iraqis constantly move hostages from one site to another," said freed hostage Patrick Moniodde, a director of the French perfume company Caron.

"There was no hygiene," he said. "Toilets were very dirty, but we always got medical care. Sure, Iraqis do not want to lose any hostages. We are free today, but it was terrible for others."

Baker also offered new insights on the treatment of Americans being held in Iraq and Kuwait.

"These Americans are forced to live on vermin-ridden concrete floors. They are kept in the dark during the day and move only at night. They have had their meals cut to two a day. ... Many are becoming sick as they endure a terrible ordeal," Baker said.

Baker is to travel to Saudi Arabia on Friday.

Moniodde said he met at least a dozen American and British hostages and noted they were "very depressed."

France will honor Iraq's demand to fill the jetliner with medicine for the return flight. Medicine is excluded from the U.N. embargo of Iraq and Kuwait.

President Bush said the United States would "have no hesitancy at all" to use military force if provoked by Iraq and indicated he feels no obligation to get Congress' approval.

But Bush said at a news conference in San Francisco he was "not preparing anybody for anything. I'm as determined as I've ever been that this aggression will not stand." More than 200,000 U.S. troops have been sent to the gulf.

Baker, in a speech released in Washington, said Iraq would suffer "the most severe consequences" if Saddam decides to use chemical or biological weapons.

"Let no one doubt: We will not rule out a possible use of force if Iraq continues to occupy Kuwait," he said.

The U.N. resolution, the 10th since Iraq overran Kuwait on Aug. 2, was approved by 13 nations. Cuba and Yemen abstained.

Abdul Amir al-Anbari, Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, said the resolution "will make it possible for those who advocate war, combat and aggression to explicitly say that they have exhausted all attempts to achieve peace, and that they have failed, and that the war option is the only option left."

In previous resolutions, the Security Council has isolated Iraq with an economic embargo and permitted U.N. member countries to use warships to enforce it. The council also has demanded Iraq withdraw from Kuwait and release all hostages.

The new resolution demands that Baghdad allow food, water and other supplies to be sent to Western diplomatic missions in Kuwait.

The United States and Britain are the only Western nations with embassies still open in Kuwait. In August, Iraq cut off water and electricity to all embassies that refused to close and relocate in Baghdad.

French President Francois Mitterrand welcomed the release of the hostages, saying: "I express the joy of all the French people to those coming home. But we will rejoice fully only when the other hostages can return to their own countries."

Mitterrand spoke at a news conference outside Paris with visiting Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Gorbachev said Saddam should not expect to split the international alliance opposed to his seizure of Kuwait.

"We must not permit the Iraqi regime to hope there will be a division, a weakening of positions," Gorbachev said, calling Iraq's use of hostages "amoral."

He said Arab nations might now be able to resolve the Persian Gulf crisis.

"It seems to me that the Iraqis could be ready for this," Gorbachev said. "If we were to have an inter-Arab meeting, this would be the quickest way to a settlement."

Gorbachev's Middle East troubleshooter, Yevgeny Primakov, met with Saddam on Sunday, and there was confusion about the success of his mission. Initial reports said Primakov made little progress, but on Monday Gorbachev said there were indications the Iraqi president was being more flexible.

Later Monday, however, in a CNN interview, Saddam said that while the meeting was "useful," he repeated he had no intention of ordering his forces to leave Kuwait.

Saddam also said he hoped war would not break out but that Iran and Iraq, which fought from 1980-88, were "the only armies with wide experience in fighting wars" in the region.

Crude oil rose $1.67 to $34.68 per barrel for December delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid concerns that Primakov's mission had failed.

Saddam also told the Cable News Network it would be wrong to say nothing was accomplished by Primakov's visit.

PERMIAN: Coaches plan to appeal ruling

(From 1A)

"If they're concerned about their future employment, it's best for them to non-sue," said Bunton, who is the son of Midland U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III and a 1970 Odessa High School graduate.

OHS head football coach Jerry Taylor originally brought the allegations against Permian to the school district's attention, but Bunton said he felt no particular loyalty to his old school or pleasure in opposing the Permian coaches in court.

"I only read the sports pages when I have a case pending," he said.

Jerry Treece, attorney for the Permian coaches and McMillan, said appeals documents would be filed with the Third Court of Appeals in Austin by late this afternoon.

Treece said he and Austin attorney David Minton also will file a motion to expedite the Third Court's decision before playoffs begin on Nov. 9, although he acknowledged that getting a positive decision before that date "is going to be hard."

"We're going to have to hit just right on this," he said.

Explaining Lowry's ruling, Treece said the judge apparently felt the wrong injured parties had filed for the injunction. Treece said he could have presented a stronger case to Lowry if PHS and Ector County Independent School District had acted as plaintiffs.

In a somewhat similar suit in 1988, Dallas Carter High School and the Dallas Independent School District successfully obtained a temporary injunction to allow that school to appear in the playoffs after one of its athletes was involved in a no-pass, no-play controversy.

Carter beat Permian in the state semifinals in Austin that year.

But Ector County schools could not join the Permian coaches as plaintiffs since Ector administrators originally found the staff guilty of the rules violations.

In fact, ECISD presented evidence of the coaches' guilt to the District 4-5A Executive Committee.

As a result, Treece and the coaches had to amend their suit to place ECISD among the defendants in an attempt to attack the district's credibility.

Treece said he will petition to remove the district from defendant status before the plaintiffs reach a stage of suing for damages, action he said will target only the UIL.

In addition to banning Permian from post-season play this year, the league's executive committee suspended Hollingshead and the school's junior varsity head football coach for two games and placed the entire staff on a year's probation.

The committee subsequently amended the last sanction to apply only to the four coaches that appeared before the committee in Austin.

Treece said he will continue to contend the two rules the coaches are alleged to have violated, which pertain to student athlete groupings and mandatory use of school facilities, were vaguely written.

In addition, the appeals court will consider a brief filed by the Texas Classroom Teachers Association (TCTA) on behalf of the coaches that contends they were denied the right to cross-examine witnesses and use legal rules of evidence, said TCTA attorney Dohn Larson.

Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joe Baressi said Monday Lowry's decision upholds previous findings by the Ector County school district, District 4-5A Executive Committee and State UIL Executive Committee.

"When you read the depositions involved, I think it's pretty clear that the rules were violated," said Baressi, a member of the District 4-5A committee. "However, I'm sorry for the (Permian) senior boys who were disqualified from the playoffs," he said.

Correction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported on Oct. 28 that family leave legislation, passed by Congress and vetoed by President Bush, would have guaranteed workers six weeks of paid leave for childbirth or family medical emergencies.

The bill would have guaranteed workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for the care of a new child or an ill child, parent or spouse.

COURT: Legal challenges have blocked enforcement

but court challenges have kept the rules from being enforced virtually everywhere.

A federal appeals court upheld the 1988 regulations, but other federal courts have ruled them an unconstitutional infringement on free speech rights.

The justices are expected to resolve the conflicting rulings by next July.

Last year, about 4,000 family planning clinics nationwide received about $140 million in federal assistance.

The family planning clinic program, enacted by Congress as Title X of the Public Health Service Act, pays for creating and operating the clinics. For most clinics, federal money accounts for only a portion — perhaps 10 percent — of their budgets.

Challengers of the regulations say they represent a kind of "viewpoint discrimination."

"Women who have come to rely on Title X for medically sound advice will be misled," they told the court in written briefs. "The silence of a trusted doctor on the subject of abortion will lead many women to believe that abortion is not an appropriate or medically indicated option for them."

But Bush administration lawyers argue that the government may choose to favor childbirth over abortion when deciding how to spend taxpayer money.

The clinics always have been banned from using federal money to perform abortions, but regulations originally let the clinic staffs — doctors and counselors — tell women about the abortion option and make referrals.

After those regulations drew criticism from anti-abortion groups, the Reagan administration said the clinics may not "encourage, promote or advocate abortion as a method of family planning" or distribute written materials about abortion.

Under the 1988 regulations, a woman who visited a federally funded family planning clinic and asked about abortion would have to be told that the clinic staff "does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning."

Staff members then could offer help in obtaining prenatal care.

The high court has not been the sole battlefield. Legislation to sweep away the counseling ban was introduced in Congress last week and is expected to be reintroduced when the new Congress convenes in January.

"I don't think this is so much a pro-choice or pro-life question," said Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., a sponsor of the House bill to lift the ban. "It's a question of counseling, of providing full information."

SPENDING: Richards' largest contributors listed

(From 1A)

Ms. Richards received loans of $100,000 from Robert Kugle of San Antonio and $50,000 from Suzanne Ahn of Dallas.

Her expenditures included $1.2 million for TV ads, $140,000 for direct mail and $55,000 to the Democratic Unity '90 campaign.

Williams' top contributors included $100,000 from Eddie Chiles, a Fort Worth oilman; $25,000 each from R. Ross Dinyari of Houston and Rod Dockery of Dallas; $20,000 from Locke, Burnell, Rain & Hurrell PAC of Dallas; $15,000 from Edward H. Leede of Engleside, Calif.; $12,500 from H. Ward Lay of Dallas; $11,000 from Merrill Lynch of New York and $10,000 each from Walter Mischer of Houston, T. Boone Pickens of Dallas, Lonnie "Bo" Pilgrim of Pittsburg and J.J. Matthews of Abilene.

Williams also got $10,000 from Jack McCall of Midland, Cyril Wagner of Midland and Bobby Cox of Odessa.

Gov. Clements gave Williams $10,500, while another former governor, John Connally, gave Williams $1,000. Connally's wife, Nellie, gave Williams $15.

Williams loaned himself $1.4 million Oct. 16 and borrowed $225,000 from Bank 1 in Dallas, with Pickens, Harold Simmons and Ronald Carter, all of Dallas, co-signing the loan.

Williams' expenditures included $2.8 million for TV ads and other media services.

In another statewide race, Rick Perry, Republican candidate for agriculture commissioner, reported $318,454 in contributions, which brought his total to $1.3 million. Most of his $523,859 in expenditures during the period were for TV ads.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, the Democratic incumbent, reported he raised $108,802 and spent $217,489.

Biotech firms losing waiting game on patents

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Tanox Biosystems has been waiting 3 1/2 years for a patent on a potentially trailblazing AIDS treatment.

And, provided the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office doesn't find a way to clone experienced biotech patent examiners, the small Houston biotechnology company's therapy isn't likely to receive a patent anytime soon.

"It will be unrealistic to think it's going to be issued any less than one year from today," said Eric Mirabel, patent attorney for Tanox.

Tanox has about 30 U.S. patents pending mostly in the immunology field, including several that make use of monoclonal antibodies to treat AIDS and allergies, Mirabel said. To help fund its increasingly long research projects, the nearly 4-year-old company has sold licenses to Ciba-Geigy giving the Swiss pharmaceutical giant the right to use patents covering its AIDS and allergy treatments.

Long waits are commonplace for biotech firms like Tanox that use gene cloning and other biological means to develop products that treat human ills or reshape farming and the environment.

While companies are making discoveries at a breakneck pace, winning final approval from the Food and Drug Administration or other regulators can take as much as a decade.

Earlier this month, a General Accounting Office study said the backlog for unexamined applications at the Patent and Trademark Office increased 33 percent over the past year to 8,213, partly because the patent office suffers from high turnover.

Some applicants are waiting four years for final action, the GAO said.

The growing patent backlog may delay new projects and potentially slow the development of life-saving drugs, industry experts said.

Biotech firms don't have legal ownership of an invention until the patent is granted. Delays impede these firms from attracting the funds necessary to finance their lengthy research and development projects.

"The big barrier for the industry is capital," said G. Steven Burrill, national director of high technology for Ernst & Young in San Francisco. "One of the big problems (in raising money) is companies can't show that they have property protection. It's a major deterrent to funding."

The patent office has little hope of reducing the backlog soon.

That's because the agency has been losing its experienced examiners to higher paying jobs at law, pharmaceutical and other private firms, said Charles Warren, acting deputy director of the biotechnology examining group in Washington, D.C.

For every step forward, the agency appears to take a step backward. For example, last fiscal year it hired 52 examiners, but at the same time 31 examiners left, Warren said.

"It takes about two years – at least – for an examiner to know what is going on, and it takes four or five years to become an experienced examiner," Warren said.

The agency, which plans to hire 60 examiners this fiscal year starting Oct. 1, has hired only one so far because of federal budget problems, he said.

Patent delays are a thorn for Houston's fledgling biotech industry.

The longer final action is delayed, the more skittish potential investors tend to be, said William Mullaney, managing general partner of Venture Medical Associates, a Houston venture capital firm.

Scott Albert, general partner of Criterion Venture Partners, another Houston venture capital firm, said it's difficult to know whether a biotech invention is unique.

Eighth area code to start in Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Texas will activate its eighth new area code Sunday, moving into a second-place tie with New York on the list of states with the most such numbers.

California tops the list with 10 area codes.

Southwestern Bell Telephone officials say the new 903 area code is needed to deal with an impending shortage of telephone numbers in North Texas.

About 600,000 customers north and east of Dallas will adopt the new area code. Dallas and bordering cities will retain the 214 code. Such cities include Grand Prairie, Plano, Garland, Farmers Branch and Irving.

The greatest impact will be to customers living along the Northeast Texas border in Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas. These residents frequently call businesses and residences in North Texas, Southwestern Bell spokesman Jim Patillo said.

The change will not affect rates, Patillo said, although long-distance carriers may charge a penny or two more for access charges.

Because some three-digit prefixes, such as 555, are reserved, there are about 7.9 million possible seven-digit phone numbers within each area code, Patillo said.

Citizen fights waste industry

WILMER, Texas (AP) — Listening to Lorrie Cotterill talk garbage is like listening to a preacher's most intense fire-and-brimstone sermon.

For more than five years, she has given the waste industry fits as it sought to build or expand landfills in southern Dallas County. Preaching an environmental gospel, she has galvanized her low-income neighbors into action and slowed the flow of trash into their world.

"The way I feel about it is that it's like a religion," says the 34-year-old homemaker and mother of four. "God put us here to be stewards of the land. We are just as guilty as the polluters if we don't try to stop them."

She has used such talk in scores of appearances at hearings before state panels, spending thousands of her own dollars and thousands more hours of her time.

Two of her biggest victories have come in the past two months: persuading state health officials to oppose expansion of landfills in Ferris and Hutchins. In both cases, the officials' opposition is likely to delay or kill the projects.

She also complained to the Texas Water Commission about the Pleasant Run Road landfill, into which Dallas-based Dal-Tile had been dumping toxic waste. The commission's executive director since has recommended a $2 million fine against the company.

Richard Gooding, a retired gunsmith who lives in Hutchins, credits Mrs. Cotterill for organizing an effort against the proposed expansion of the Browning-Ferris Industries landfill near him.

"She really brought the seriousness of the situation to my attention," Gooding said. "She was definitely the motivating force behind getting the residents to oppose it."

State officials and opponents acknowledge her as a formidable player in the trash game, though they wouldn't comment on her style. But it's clear she's ruffled some waste company feathers.

At a July hearing on expansion of the Browning-Ferris landfill, an attorney for the company asked that Mrs. Cotterill be barred from entering the dump site without authorization.

During the proceeding, she admitted to coming into the compound to take photographs. The hearing examiner later he said he did not have the authority to prohibit her from entering the landfill site.

State officials say she's earned respect by doing her homework.

"She's made a diligent effort to learn the system," said Wayne Lee, a health department branch chief. "I've seen her doing research here about once or twice a week for the past few months."

Guatemala candidate in Houston hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Alfonso Cabrera Hidalgo, Guatemalan presidential candidate for the Christian Democrat Party, is being treated for pancreatitis at Methodist Hospital in Houston.

Cabrera arrived in Houston Sunday for specialized treatment after being hospitalized since Oct. 25 in Guatemala.

Michelle Smith, spokeswoman for Methodist Hospital, said Cabrera requested that no information on his condition be released.

The Christian Democrat Party said Sunday Cabrera would continue his medical treatment in the United States after being airlifted from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Guatemala.

His mother, Izabel Hidalgo de Cabrera, said the candidate was being treated for acute pancreatitis.

Lack of funds for S&L bailout will add to costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' refusal to provide more money for savings and loan bailouts will delay the closing of failed institutions for months and add millions, or even billions, of dollars to taxpayers' costs, analysts said Monday.

Legislators' election-year squeeze left the Resolution Trust Corp., the bailout agency created last year, without the funds needed to close more than 300 insolvent or near-insolvent thrift associations.

That means the institutions will continue to run losses, funding themselves with high-interest deposits. That in turn weakens healthy competitors by forcing them to raise their deposit rates, raising the specter of additional failures.

"It's going to cost us additional money. We're going to have to slow up the resolution of failed thrifts," L. William Seidman, chairman of the trust corporation, said in a telephone interview.

He estimated the cost of a three-month delay at $250 million to $300 million. The Congressional Budget Office put it at $300 million to $400 million, while Bert Ely, a private analyst in Alexandria, Va., estimated it at $2 billion to $2.5 billion.

The added costs, although spread over the life of the bailout program, will make it even harder for the government to meet the $500 billion deficit-reduction goal in the five-year program adopted over the weekend.

The trust corporation, which had handled 287 failed thrifts through the end of September, has enough money left to pay acquirers to take over an additional 65 to 75 small institutions by the end of this year, according to spokesman Steven Katsanos.

But that would still leave it with more than 100 S&Ls to handle on top of several hundred others judged to be near failure.

Also, financing disruptions tend to discourage potential bidders and make it more difficult for the agency to hire the outside experts it needs, he said.

"The private sector doesn't adapt well to uncertainty about whether the bill is going to be paid," he said.

The agency has already been forced to delay seeking acquirers for 18 large institutions until its funding is secure, Katsanos said.

Congress' Sunday morning revolt against further spending left Bush administration officials and Democrats blaming each other for the expected consequences.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady's refusal to testify in support of the administration's request "created an unfortunate atmosphere" for approval of more money.

"They've got to get out of that bunker over there in the Treasury and come over here and join the people," Gonzalez said in a telephone interview.

However, Desiree Tucker-Sorini, deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury, said, "The need for action and the consequences for failing to act were spelled out in great detail over a period of months by the (Treasury) secretary and others."

Private analysts were unimpressed by both sides' arguments and likened the situation to 1988 and 1986 when political wrangling left the RTC's predecessor, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., short of money.

"It's a very sad comment on politics. ... It's a very lame excuse," said Ohio State University professor Edward J. Kane.

"They were playing a game of chicken to see who blinks at the last minute," Ely said. "The House wanted Brady to come up and bow and scrape and he refused. ... Nobody blinked, so we ended up with a delay. A costly one."

Brady told Congress by letter that the administration needed $40 billion to cover S&L losses through September 1991, in addition to the $50 billion provided by last year's S&L law.

The Senate early Sunday had adopted a measure that would have provided $10 billion to the trust corporation, enough to keep it going until after Congress' scheduled return in January.

However, the House adjourned without acting on a similar bill after Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., raised procedural objections that would have required adoption by a two-thirds vote.

"He just felt that bringing it up after midnight on the final night of the session was not the time to sneak ... new funding through," said Curtis Prins, staff director of Annunzio's House Banking financial institutions subcommittee.

Gonzalez pledged speedy action by his committee when Congress returns. Until then, he said the administration could take advantage of a drafting error in last year's law which would permit it to borrow, short-term, an additional $18.8 billion. Treasury officials earlier hinted that they would borrow the additional money and were meeting Monday to discuss the option.

Minnesota Republicans scramble for new candidate

AP Laserphoto

Arne Carlson, the runner-up in the Sept. 11 Republican primary, tells a news conference Monday that he and his running mate Joanell Dyrstad should be on the ballot for the Nov. 6 general election. The primary winner, Jon Grunseth, withdrew from the race Sunday.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A sharply divided state Republican Party scrambled Monday to pick a new gubernatorial candidate after Jon Grunseth stepped down because of allegations of sexual misconduct.

With just eight days before the election, Sept. 11 primary runner-up Arne Carlson hopes to parlay his week-old write-in campaign into the GOP ballot spot. Leaders of the party's ruling conservative faction balk at that, believing that Carlson is too liberal.

But with time so short, some in the anti-Carlson camp agree their options are limited in their effort to unseat Democratic Gov. Rudy Perpich.

"Pressure is really mounting to go with Arne," said Frank Graves, a member of the Republican National Committee and one of Carlson's biggest critics.

"The thing that really worries me the most is with two liberals on the ticket (Perpich and Carlson) I'm afraid a lot of conservatives are going to stay home," Graves said. "If they stay home it hurts our candidates for constitutional offices and our legislative candidates."

Grunseth withdrew Sunday night, citing "enormous pressure" from allegations that he encouraged teen-age girls to swim nude with him nine years ago and had an affair during both of his marriages. He has denied the pool-party claims and said the affair ended before he married his second wife in 1984.

An Oct. 19-21 poll, conducted after the pool-party allegations, showed Carlson leading Perpich 51 percent to 41 percent. But Graves said Monday it's far from a sure thing that Carlson could win a head-on race against Perpich on Nov. 6.

Neither Perpich nor his spokesman, Ray Bohn, returned a call seeking comment Monday. Perpich declined to comment Sunday about Grunseth's withdrawal.

A leader of the Republican party's conservative faction, 3rd Congressional District Chairman Jim Mullin, said a "certain number" of anti-abortion Republicans will vote for Perpich because Carlson supports legalized abortions and Perpich does not.

Further complicating the question is the fact that party officials themselves aren't sure what procedure to use in naming a replacement for Grunseth. The party's 14-member executive committee is to meet Tuesday evening to decide whether it has the power to name a successor.

Secretary of State Joan Growe, the state's chief election officer, said that if the party concludes there is no legal machinery to pick a new candidate so soon before the election, state law calls for the primary runner-up — Carlson — to go on the ballot.

Graves said he wants the executive committee to name a candidate, regardless of what legal advice party leaders receive.

"I would recommend that we reject any notion of not doing anything, of not taking any action," he said. "My position is that the state executive committee should name someone, even if it's Carlson."

But Graves said he will push to have a conservative candidate named.

In August, Graves termed Carlson "not a Republican" but rather "an opportunist who changes his views to fit the latest public opinion polls."

"What I said then was the truth and it remains the truth," Graves said Monday. "Probably the only thing that has changed is that I probably would prefer to have Arne Carlson in there than than Rudy Perpich."

State GOP Chairwoman Barb Sykora said she's concluded that "the only sensible option is the option that looks like we are legally bound to: Support Arne Carlson to the best of our ability and beat Rudy Perpich."

Homosexuals welcome change in legislation

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The status of homosexuals took a significant step forward when Congress revoked a 1950s-vintage law that kept gays and lesbians from entering the United States, gay leaders said Monday.

During a whirlwind weekend in which lawmakers agreed on a $492 billion deficit reduction package, Congress also wiped out restrictive immigration policies dating back to the McCarran-Walters Act of 1952.

"The (new) immigration bill was one of the best pieces of legislation passed in the 101st Congress for lesbians and gay men," said Timothy McFeeley, executive director of the Human Rights Campaign Fund, a gay rights lobby. "It reflects the public's fairness and the movement toward including gay and lesbian Americans into the economic and social life of this country."

The Bush administration has announced support of the immigration revision package, which creates new standards for admitting up to 700,000 legal immigrants by 1994.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) had used the old legislation to prevent gays, leftists and other controversial figures from visiting or immigrating to the United States.

The McCarran-Walters Act was the product of a post-World War II political climate dominated by the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., in which leftwingers and nonconformists came under concerted attack.

Gay activists said that although the INS used sexual orientation to exclude or deport foreign-born gays, it made exceptions and allowed homosexual celebrities — including British Shakespearian actor Ian McKellan and rock stars Andy Bell and Jimmy Sommerville — to enter the country freely.

Under the measure passed last weekend, homosexuality no longer will be grounds for excluding anyone who wants to visit the United States. And the INS no longer can use homosexuality as grounds to deport any individual.

"Hundreds of thousands" of foreign gays have "lived in shadows because of the (McCarran-Walters) statute," said Tom Stoddard, executive director of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York. "Those people can now live free lives. That's the greatest part of revoking the statute."

Robert Bray, spokesman for the National Gay & Lesbian Task Force, another gay rights lobbying group, said: "What this does is remove one of the last three final institutional discriminations against gay people."

The other two, Bray said, are the 1986 Supreme Court decision in Bowers v. Hardwick, which upheld the rights of states to enforce anti-sodomy laws, and the Defense Department's ban on gays in uniform.

The Pentagon policy is "probably the one we'll target next," Bray said.

Retired Justice Lewis F. Powell, the swing vote in the 1986 decision, said last week at a forum for law students in New York that the 5-to-4 decision had been a "mistake."

Lawyers for gay organizations say they have shifted their strategy for challenging Bowers v. Hardwick away from federal courts. Rather, they are pursuing cases in state courts, challenging state anti-sodomy statutes as violations of privacy statutes guaranteed in state constitutions.

A trial court judge in Michigan recently struck down that state's anti-sodomy law, Stoddard said. A similar challenge is underway in Texas, with cases before state trial courts in Austin and Dallas, he added.

Gay leaders also hailed the decision of Congress to let the Bush administration decide whether AIDS- or HIV-infected persons should be barred from the United States.

Harvard slates AIDS meeting

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University said Monday it will sponsor the annual international AIDS conference in 1992, four months after threatening to cancel the forum unless the United States removed travel restrictions on people infected with AIDS.

The conference, the principle forum for presenting scientific information on the fight against the disease, will go ahead in the last week of May 1992, school officials said.

In June, the Harvard AIDS Institute threatened to withdraw as sponsor and cancel the conference to protest a U.S. policy making AIDS infection one of several contagious diseases for which foreigners could be barred from the country.

But under a revised immigration bill passed by Congress over the weekend, Health Secretary Louis Sullivan would have the authority to remove AIDS and other diseases from the medical list for which a person may be denied entry.

Sullivan has repeatedly said there is no reason to exclude people with AIDS, because the disease is not passed casually, but only by exchanges of blood or body fluids or by sexual contact.

The measure went to President Bush, who has indicated he will sign it as early as this week.

The conference is expected to attract about 15,000 researchers, policy makers, community organizers and AIDS patients, Harvard officials said.

Teacher, students held

CHARLESTOWN, Ind. (AP) — A 17-year-old high school student held a teacher and six students at gunpoint in a classroom Monday, gradually freeing them before surrending to police eight hours later.

The student, Eli Dean, made no demands and fired no shots, and negotiators communicated with him over the school's intercom system during the standoff, said state police Sgt. Marvin Jenkins.

Dean, a senior, had been suspended from school twice during the past two weeks. He returned to the school late Monday morning with a handgun, officials said.

The rest of the 643-student school was evacuated onto the school football field.

Police said Dean surrendered about 7:20 p.m. EST after releasing his final hostage, believed to be a male cousin.

Hostage negotiators were at the school, and two state police chaplains were flown in. Members of Dean's family also were present, including his father, Robin, a civilian employee of the state police.

Jenkins said snipers had been positioned around the school.

Dean let his teacher leave first, and then freed the students, nearly all of them individually.

The youth's stepfather, Rocky Williams of Charlestown, said he believed Dean had taken his .44-calibre pistol to the school. State police said they did not know what type of weapon the boy had.

Williams said his stepson was suspended about two weeks ago after he accidentally set off a fire alarm. He was suspended again last week for breaking a window, Williams said.

Catfish cargo salvaged

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A food bank salvaged at least a ton of frozen catfish that spilled after a refrigerated truck crashed.

"It's a blessing," said Joyce Rothermel, executive director of the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank. "Donations that are high in protein, like fish, are very rare."

The cab came to rest beside the wall, but the truck's trailer toppled into the park below, crushing two trees and littering the grass with frozen fish.

Ms. Rothermel heard about the accident and called Delta Pride Catfish Co. of Indianola, Miss., which owned the cargo. The company gave her permission to take fish that Department of Agriculture officials considered salvageable.

Ms. Rothermel estimated she salvaged about $4,000 to $5,000 worth of fish.

The food bank, located in nearby McKeesport, is a food distribution center for 310 charities.

Plane shot in flight

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — A woman shot a hole in the fuel tank of a small airplane that was flying over her property, authorities said.

Lt. Art Voortman said pilot Bill Yandell and a passenger smelled fuel Sunday afternoon as they flew at an elevation of 800 to 1,000 feet. After landing, they found a bullet hole in the left wing fuel tank only 12 inches from the cockpit.

Voortman said investigators went to the home of Jondee Scruggs, 48, because she allegedly had threatened to shoot any plane that flew over her land, about 90 miles east of San Francisco. A recently fired .22-caliber rifle was found at the residence, and Scruggs was booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon.

Amtrak begins fast train

BOSTON (AP) — Amtrak has initiated a faster passenger train between Boston and New York, the New England Express, that is intended to make the 230-mile trip in under four hours.

"Not bad for a first try," said Clifford Black, an Amtrak spokesman.

The trip has taken about four hours and 40 minutes in the past, for an average speed of about 45 mph.

By comparison, Japan's "bullet" trains travel at about 130 mph, and France's high-speed trains hit about 200 mph. Both have exclusive use of all-new tracks.

Amtrak officials have saved some time on all lines by making track and bridge repairs. The New England Express, scheduled for 12 trips a week each way, also skips some stops included in other rides.

To shorten the ride even more, Amtrak officials want to electrify the entire Boston to New York route. At present, the route is electrified only from New York to New Haven, Conn., where trains must switch from diesel to electric power, or vice versa.

Congress has proposed spending $125 million to begin work on electrifying the entire line. Amtrak officials estimate the cost of completing the job will be about $400 million.

The ultimate time goal is a trip under three hours.

The New England Express requires reservations, but the fare remains the same as other scheduled service: $90 round trip for coach and $154 for first class.

Court upholds black voters' rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday let stand a ruling involving black voters' rights that forces Norfolk, Va., to change the way city council members are elected.

The court, without comment, rejected an appeal by city officials on a ruling that the at-large system used since 1918 in city council elections violates black voters' rights.

At the same time, the justices left intact the way Sagauche County, Colo., elects its governing board despite claims by Hispanic residents who say their political clout is being blunted illegally.

The court also asked the Bush administration for its views of an appeal by a rural Arkansas county's black voters who say the election system used in party primaries and countywide general elections is racially biased.

A similar system is in effect in several Southern states, including Texas, the court was told.

In the Norfolk case, a federal appeals court panel ordered the city to switch to a single-district election system that will "remedy the vote dilution arising out of the at-large election system."

The Norfolk City Council has seven members, elected to staggered four-year terms. Elections for three or four of the council seats are held every two years. Candidates with the most votes citywide win, and do not need a majority of the votes cast.

A group of black voters and the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sued in 1983, contending that the at-large system illegally blunted the political clout of black voters.

Norfolk, one of Virginia's largest cities, is 35 percent black in population. Blacks also comprise 35 percent of the city's registered voters.

The city council did not have a black member until 1968, and since then has had one black member most years.

The NAACP and black voters who sued said if city council members were elected from seven single-member districts, black voters would be in the majority in three of the seven districts.

The Colorado case centered on how Saguache County's three commissioners are elected. No Hispanic has ever won a contested election in the county even though Hispanics comprise 41 percent of the population.

The three commissioners must reside in different districts, but elections are countywide and not confined to the district in which a candidate resides.

The still-pending Arkansas case involves a law under which a candidate for a political party's nomination or for a countywide office must get a majority of the votes cast.

If no candidate wins an outright majority, a runoff election is held two weeks later between the top two vote-getters.

The justices were told that Arkansas is one of 10 states employing such a system, "all of them in the South and all of them with a long history of purposeful racial vote dilution."

The other states were identified as Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Oklahoma.

The runoff system, as it operates in Phillips County, Ark., was challenged as illegal by black voters who say their voting power is being diluted.

Blacks comprise 47 percent of the voting-age population in Phillips County, but no black candidate in modern times has received the Democratic or Republican nomination for, or been elected to, any countywide office.

Report accuses Defense Department of drawing negative conclusion on MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government documents cast serious doubt on the U.S. contention that no Americans who fought in Southeast Asia are still held there, says a report by the Republican staff of a Senate Committee.

The interim report, released Monday, accuses the Defense Department of reaching a negative conclusion about missing Americans and then undermining contrary evidence.

Defense intelligence discredited — often in error — live-sighting reports about U.S. personnel from hundreds of thousands of refugees fleeing Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos during the 1970s and 1980s, the report said, making an accusation of "analytical bias."

It also contended that some witnesses may have been intimidated and that information was dismissed on technicalities.

The government has contended that there is no evidence that American prisoners are still alive in Southeast Asia — or that any were left behind alive after U.S. prisoners returned in 1973.

A Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Ken Satterfield, said the department had not received the new report and had no comment.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee's Republican staff said, "Classified, declassified and unclassified information all confirm one startling fact: That the Defense Department in April 1974 concluded beyond a doubt that several hundred living American POWs remained in captivity in Southeast Asia."

In addition, the information does not rule out the likelihood that Americans are still being held, the report said.

It said that information "uncovered during this inquiry provides enough corroboration to cast doubt upon the veracity of the U.S. government's conclusion."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., ranking GOP member on the Foreign Relations Committee and a critic of the improving relations between the United States and Vietnam, asked the panel's minority staff to conduct the study.

The government considers 2,103 personnel missing since U.S. forces withdrew from Southeast Asia nearly 20 years ago. More than 55,000 Americans died in the war.

The number of military personnel missing in action could be higher because the Defense Department's files on various covert actions during the war have not been opened and those who took part never identified, the report said.

Ruling allowed to stand on Kansas City schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand a ruling that boosted a federal judge's power to order predominantly white suburban schools to accept inner-city black students.

The justices, without comment, rejected an appeal by three Kansas City, Mo., suburban school districts facing such a desegregation order.

The case is an outgrowth of a longstanding court battle over desegregation of Kansas City's public schools.

The fight led last April to an important Supreme Court ruling that federal judges may order local officials to raise property taxes to help desegregate public schools.

That 5-4 ruling upheld key features of a 1985 decision by U.S. District Judge Russell Clark in a 1977 lawsuit by black parents seeking to reverse the decline of the city's predominantly black schools.

The case acted on today grew out of Clark's 1985 order that Missouri officials pay for transportation and tuition of black students in Kansas City who choose to transfer to predominantly white suburban schools.

Clark described the plan as voluntary on the part of the suburban schools and the black students.

But school officials in the suburban districts of North Kansas City, Lee's Summit and Independence said they are being coerced into accepting the black transfers.

They asked the high court to overturn a May ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that said Clark's 1985 order is being ignored unlawfully.

Since 1985, the appeals court said, "not a single suburban school district has admitted a single black student from (Kansas City) pursuant to a plan negotiated by the state and the suburban school districts. Further delay cannot be countenanced."

The appeals court noted that 134 black students from Kansas City applied for admission into the three suburban school districts in 1988. The appeals court said the suburban districts did not admit the students, apparently due to worries the state would not reimburse the costs.

After the black students were denied admission, they filed a new lawsuit that was assigned to U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr.

Stevens threw out the suit last year. But the 8th Circuit court, in its May ruling, reversed Stevens and reassigned the case to Clark with instructions to come up with a plan for transferring black students to the suburban schools.

The appeals court said the previous refusal of the suburban schools to admit the blacks raised questions about whether they were practicing unlawful racial bias.

In the appeal acted on today, the suburban school officials said their districts have no history of racial bias, and said it is unfair to use their refusal to admit students from another city as evidence of discrimination.

The appeals court is "using sheer force to impose its values" on public schools that have no record of racial bias, the officials said.

The Supreme Court in 1974 struck down a Detroit-area school desegregation plan that required students to be bused across city boundaries. The justices said such remedies are inappropriate unless all districts involved contributed to the segregation.

The case acted on today is Lee's Summit vs. Naylor, 90-391.

Italy communists next to change

Italy's Communist Party has long been the strongest Communist Party in the Western world, often winning more than a third of the popular vote. But the PCI has been denied even a share of power by a series of makeshift coalitions built around the Christian Democrats, who have ruled — or misruled — Italy since World War II. Now, with its popular support dwindling to around a quarter of the electorate, the Communist Party is giving itself a new name and, it hopes, a new image.

Ironically, this act of desperation could help to end the political paralysis that has gripped Italy since the fall of fascism. That paralysis derives from the fact that smaller parties, fearful of giving the highly disciplined communists a foothold in government, have instead given the Christian Democrats a virtual lock on power, and thus patronage. Over the decades, government has become increasingly corrupt and unresponsive to people's needs, reinforcing Italians' cynicism about officialdom.

The irony in the communists' attempt to reinvent themselves is that, if they succeed, voters may be less afraid of an alternative to the Christian Democrats. That could lead to a very different Italian political spectrum and a revolution in how the country is run.

That's much more easily said than done, however. It took the communist leadership a year to decide on a new name — Democratic Party of the Left. Moreover, an old-guard Stalinist faction bitterly opposes what it sees as a gimmick to turn a party with its roots in the long struggle against fascism into a moderate movement concerned with environmental and feminist issues. Hard-liners also are incensed about a proposed change in the party's symbol to a "tree of liberty" with the traditional hammer-and-sickle shrunken and entwined with the tree's roots.

Italy's political paralysis has not prevented it from achieving a high standard of living, somewhere above Britain and below France, or from being a reliable member of the European Community and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and a good friend of the United States, or from setting a courageous example for others by facing down a terrorist threat a decade or so ago. Now, if the greening of the Italian Communist Party spreads to other parts of a very backward political sector, a country often more respected for its food and its fashions may again remind the world that it's also the birthplace of modern politics.

Does the House need a tennis court?

WASHINGTON — During the grueling budget debate, members of Congress had a lot on their minds — like whether to cut medical care for the elderly or day care for infants, and, by the way, where to put their new tennis court.

Anderson

The Senate already has a tennis court in the Dirksen Senate Office Building. But the poor members of the House don't have any place to practice their ground strokes on the taxpayer's dime.

Apparently a few members of Congress decided it was time to remedy the situation. They have ordered the architect of the Capitol to draw up plans for a House tennis court, either in the courtyard of one building in the Capitol complex or on the roof of another.

Congressional sources told us that Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., led the pack. A spokesman for Solarz confirmed that the congressman had been involved in meetings about the tennis court. "All through this there has been a general assumption that if they went ahead with this, no public funds would be used," the spokesman said. But Solarz's office offered no explanation of whose pockets Congress would dip into for this little gift, if not the taxpayers'.

Maybe they expected a donation from a generous corporate constituent — no strings attached, of course. Then they could hang a plaque with the donor's name right next to the requisite buzzer system that would summon the players from the court to the House floor for a vote.

Solarz may not have planned to stick the taxpayers with the bill, but public money has already been spent on the project — design time in the office of the Capitol architect George White.

White acknowledged that his staff has done some "informal sketches" at the request of some members of the House. The tennis court, which would have to be approved by the House leadership, could go in the courtyard of the Cannon House Office Building, or on the roof of the Madison Building of the Library of Congress.

The Cannon building is close to the Capitol and conveniently accessible to all the House offices by a network of underground tunnels, but the sound of balls being lobbed back and forth could be distracting to office workers. The Madison roof would be more spacious, but then the architect would have to deal with the problem of balls flying off the roof.

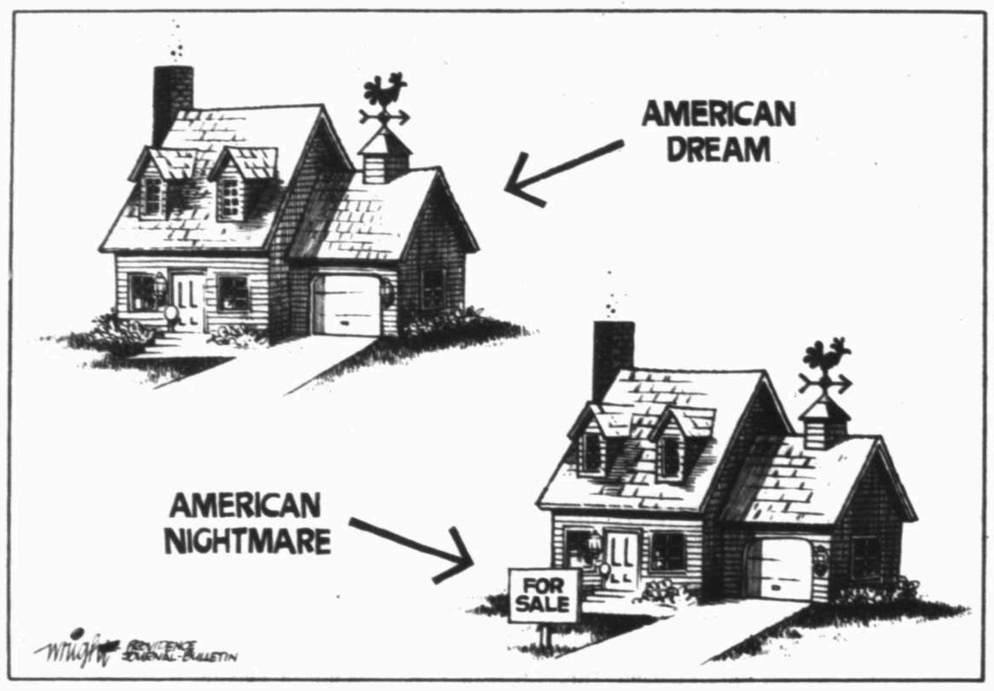
Sources on Capitol Hill told our associate Tim Warner that meetings with White about the tennis courts occurred during the tortured budget negotiations.

White, whose full-time job for the last 20 years has been keeping up with renovation and new construction in the Capitol complex, told us the tennis court isn't the first controversial order he has received. He is obligated to respond with designs when members of Congress make suggestions. Then it is up to Congress whether to fund the notion.

White characterized the tennis court as "the pipe dream of a few tennis players."

Solarz has a history of mixing business and tennis. In 1983 we obtained State Department cables explaining to U.S. Embassies how Solarz expected to be treated on a trip to Latin America. "Tennis courts are an important plus ... Solarz would like to play tennis every day if possible ... assistance in arranging court and securing high-quality tennis opponents will be appreciated," one cable said.

White hasn't generated cost figures yet on Solarz latest request, so we asked a tennis court builder for a guesstimate. A basic asphalt court would cost about $28,000. If the members want a soft touch to their step, they could add padding for another $4,000. And for those late-night sessions, it would cost another $8,000 to light the court. Putting the court on the roof of a building adds unknown costs depending on how much work the roof would need to support the court.



MINI-EDITORIAL — Saddam Hussein claims that the Islamic prophet Mohammed came to him in a dream last week and told him his missiles were pointed in the wrong direction. Even Wall Street took that as a signal that Saddam was looking for a graceful way to withdraw from Kuwait. It's too bad Saddam is a recently born-again Moslem. Had he been listening to Mohammed before the invasion, he might have saved himself some time and money.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Why such incivility over Rebel cause?

PBS' touted series "The Civil War" has quickened interest in the heroism and exploits of the Blue and the Gray. Alas, Confederate-bashing — increasingly one of the political left's favorite pastimes — proceeds as though nothing had happened.

Murchison

U.S. Grant never worked over the Rebs the way leaders of, ahem, enlightened opinion go at it today.

Rebel-bashing — the attempt to make Southern whites sorry and ashamed of their Confederate antecedents — is widespread among whites and blacks alike. I point with sorrow merely to a few things going on in my home state of Texas.

A high school in suburban Fort Worth — whose team name is the Rebels — is under ideological siege. Four students with Confederate flags on their T-shirts were escorted off the campus, the school board having banned display of the flag and the playing of "Dixie." A change in the team name is presently under consideration.

In Dallas, we learn that the alleged North Carolina bank doing business here, NCNB, needs renaming. It should henceforth be called NYCNB — for New York City National Bank. No self-respecting Southern-based bank would have asked the State Fair of Texas to desist from broadcasting "Dixie."

"Dixie" is part of the NCNB Laser Show at the Cotton Bowl.

Some NCNB scalawag took fright at what the bank itself described as "just a handful of complaints" about the grand old song's part in the program.

The command came down: Axe "Dixie." No corresponding objection, I gather, was lodged against the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which in the program is paired with "Dixie." Meanwhile, University of Texas leftists pout over the presence on the UT Main Mall of statues of Confederate heroes like Gen. Robert E. Lee. Lee, in the agreeable discourse the dispute has engendered, is commonly branded a racist.

What is striking about reaction to the Civil War series is the near-unanimity of the view that the Confederate soldier, the Yankee soldier — each was a heck of a fellow. You'd have to be a heck of a fellow, wouldn't you, to charge a belching, blazing line of riflery and artillery because of what you believed?

What the men of 1861-65 believed is plain enough. What do yuppie bankers believe? What do flinty-eyed campus "intellectuals" believe? In perpetually rising P/E ratios, in free love and social revolution?

Let us grant that "The War" was a great tragedy, whose scars the whole nation still bears: the North as well as the South. Let us grant that, even if the war was not entirely about slavery, the freeing of the slaves was a moral plus for the United States, a thing long overdue.

Let it be said, at the same time, that the celebration of the South's Confederate heritage is not a celebration of chattel slavery, as liberal whites and angry blacks arrogantly submit. It is a celebration of guts and valor and enduringness in a hopeless (and by no means evil) cause.

Confederate-bashing is bigotry of a kind we seldom read about in the mass media. It dishonors the dead and spits in the faces of the living. It should stop at once.

But it doesn't look as though it's going to.

CHARLEY REESE

When winning becomes a mark of shame

The recession already begun will be severe and the reason is there is no margin this time.

If the national government were in a strong financial position, it could offset the recession in traditional ways by increasing its spending. But it is in about the same shape as a Third World country financially.

Reese

If the private sector were strong, then even though the government is in a weak position, we could do okay, but this time both individual consumers and corporations are loaded down with debt. We know the savings and loans are dying; we know the real estate market is weak; we also know that commercial banks are on shaky ground, too, and possibly some of the insurance companies.

We've all been living on the cuff and we've run out of cuff. As revenues for business decline, many companies won't be able to meet their debt payments. Ditto with individuals as they lose their jobs. Lenders will be forced to call loans and the whole pyramid of debt will start to collapse.

I'm not trying to scare you. Believe me, whatever suffering occurs I'll share. There's no pot of gold buried in my backyard. But there's no use trying to fool ourselves. We've been doing that long enough.

It's funny in a bitter sort of way how many times reality forces us to recognize the old wisdom. There's no free lunch. There's no formula for sure prosperity except the ancient one of hard work, frugality, and savings. Every time we think we can evade reality by building prosperity on credit, the consequences of evading reality smack us right in the face.

The only thing to do now is grit our teeth, survive, and learn from the experience.

One thing I hope we learn is that government, despite its unlimited power to tax, is no more free of the rules of sound financial planning than are individuals and businesses. Just look at the mess in Washington. Neither Congress nor the president really know how to get out of it. They can't cut interest rates because they are desperate to attract foreigners to finance the debt. Without cutting interest rates, they will never catch up to the compound interest on the $3 trillion public debt. It is adding to the burden second by second, minute by minute, hour by hour, round the clock, seven days a week.

The total debt of our government, ourselves, and our corporations now exceeds two years of the gross national product. Interest on some corporate debt is running as high as 25 percent of gross income.

I've often referred to an old purple-nosed banker — he loved martinis — who sardonically said to me, "Son, there's only two kinds of people in this world — those who pay interest and those who collect it."

Well, I guess us non-economist types can describe an out-of-balance economy as one in which the many are paying too much and the few are collecting too much interest.

We ought also to learn from this pain the truth that Thomas Jefferson spoke so many years ago. "I sincerely believe...that banking establishments are more dangerous than standing armies and that the principle of spending money to be paid by posterity, under the name of funding, is but swindling futurity on a large scale."

The U.S. government should never have turned over its monetary policy as well as its constitutional authority to create money and regulate its value to the commercial banking industry. If we don't learn this lesson from the coming pain, we'll just do it to ourselves all over again.

The most important lesson to be learned is that when you sink, make sure you take the architects of your sinking with you. Let us reach up from the waves this November 6 and snatch every incumbent out of his comfortable lifeboat. They have overpaid, overperked, overpensioned, overstaffed themselves while gutting a once proud nation.

We ought to consider every incumbent who survives Nov. 6 as a mark of shame.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

The deer rules of the hunt must change

Deer hunting season began Saturday. According to an article I read, there'll be more guys with guns in the woods in my environs just on Saturday than there are American troops in Saudi Arabia.

Grizzard

I'll sleep well tonight knowing I'm not only safe from Saddam Hussein, but from the ferocious deer as well.

There was some other deer news in the papers. A jury in Maine brought back an innocent verdict against a deer hunter charged with manslaughter.

He's out in the woods of Maine and he sees something white, so he takes a couple of shots.

What he saw was a young mother of infant twins, who was in her back yard wearing white mittens. She died from the gunshots.

In her back yard!

A portion of the hunter's defense, I read, was that the dead woman wasn't a native of Maine and didn't know about all the hunting that went on and should not have been in her back yard wearing white mittens.

I'm really not against deer hunting, per se, but I've said all along it could be a much fairer sport (if killing anything can be called a sport) if they would just change some of the rules of the game.

So I have put some great thought into this and can now offer you Grizzard's Revised Rules of Hunting Down Deer and Blowing Them Away:

RULE NO. 1: If you kill a deer, you have to eat it. None of this trophy killing or shooting a deer for the sheer thrill of seeing it fall.

An addendum to Rule No. 1 is you have to eat the entire deer if you kill it. OK, you don't have to eat the pancreas or the large intestines, but whatever's edible you've got to eat it all.

RULE NO. 2: You have to hunt in the nude. The deer aren't dressed, are they? All that camouflage is nothing but trickery and should not be allowed if this thing is to be truly fair. I realize you might get a little nippy out there, and there's all those briars and barbed wire fences, but, hey, this ain't no Easter egg hunt.

RULE NO. 3: Forget Uzis and bazookas. You can have only one bullet when you go hunting.

RULE NO. 4: If you do happen to shoot another person by mistake, it would be quite tacky to ask the family of the departed to allow you to have the head of the victim to put on the wall in the den. Except in Maine, where it's sort of expected.

RULE NO. 5: You cannot at any time say you hunt deer because you (1) are doing the deer a favor by killing them because if you don't there'll be too many deer and a lot of them will starve; or (2) it's your way of communing with nature.

If you're worried about the deer starving, why not take some food into the woods and feed the poor things instead of killing them?

And if all you want to do is commune with nature, get a pair of binoculars and go watch birds. That way if you spot a redheaded, three-toed, black-billed ratbird, there are no rules you have to eat the darn thing, as there are in deer hunting.

RULE NO. 6: If you do not follow Rules 1 through 5, the next time you're in the woods, may Smokey the Bear eat you for your hat, which is what he's been doing to Boy Scouts for years.

Two Israeli border policemen stand outside the main tourist shopping center in Bethlehem Sunday. Almost all shops in the occupied territories are closed most of the time because of recent violent incidents.

Israel bars certain Arabs from entering

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel Monday barred Palestinians with a criminal or anti-Israeli past from entering Israel from the occupied territories. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said "we shall build a wall of steel and love."

In other efforts to try to quell rising Arab-Israeli violence, the government outlawed a fundamentalist Moslem movement and restricted a pro-PLO Palestinian leader from leaving the country.

The measure would prevent travel by thousands of the 1.7 million Palestinians in the occupied territories, although the Defense Ministry gave no specific figures. More than 10,000 Palestinians have been jailed in the 34-month-old uprising against Israeli occupation.

"(Arabs) and those who incite them must understand that the days when they could attack Jews with impunity are over," Shamir said late Monday.

"We shall build a wall of steel and love around our people as we face threats ... and dangers."

The new border restrictions, formally approved by Defense Minister Moshe Arens, were expected after Israel Sunday lifted the four-day closure of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Tensions have been high since Israeli police killed 20 Arabs and injured 140 on the Temple Mount after stones were thrown at Jewish worshipers Oct. 8. Last week, three Jews were killed by Arabs in revenge attacks, prompting the four-day closure of the occupied territories.

Uprising leaders have repeatedly called for slayings of Israelis as revenge for the Temple Mount shootings.

Defense Ministry spokesman Dan Naveh said the new restrictions will "serve as an incentive to the population who knows that if they want the right to enter Israel they should not be involved in terrorism."

Naveh said Arabs released from prison sentences for anti-Israel or criminal acts had been allowed into Israel under the old regulations.

Up to 150,000 Palestinians in the occupied territories have jobs in Israel, mostly as blue-collar workers.

Israeli human rights group accuses panel of negligence

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — An Israeli human rights organization accused a government commission Monday of "extreme negligence" for failing to investigate thoroughly the use of live ammunition when Israeli police killed at least 19 Palestinians during a clash on Oct. 8.

"The central question — that of the opening of fire and the loss of human life — remains uninvestigated," the Israeli Information Center for Human Rights in the Occupied Territories said in its response to the government commission's report that was released Friday.

But the human rights group — known as B'tselem, which is Hebrew for "In the Image of..." — praised the government commission for "its bold conclusions" assailing police for failing to prevent or control the violence.

B'tselem charged that the three-man government panel conducted a skimpy and one-sided probe of the shootings that reveals "its distinct preference for the police version over other descriptions of the same events."

As a result, B'tselem reiterated its call for a legally empowered state commission of inquiry with subpoena power and headed by a judge to investigate the shootings.

B'tselem charged the government commission with making a "grave mistake" by not citing evidence and sources for its conclusions.

Without the ability to judge the quality of all the commission's conclusions, B'tselem said, "even sound decisions become suspect and unreliable, owing to the secretive dimension they acquire."

The government investigating commission, appointed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and given a limited mandate, had no subpoena power to investigate the Oct. 8 violence at the holy site that Jews call the Temple Mount.

The commission was headed by a former chief of the Mossad, Israel's top intelligence agency.

Non-communists win out in Georgia

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Non-Communist parties won elections in Georgia on a platform calling for independence from the Soviet Union, private ownership of land and a capitalist economy, officials said Monday.

"We are certainly going to have a majority in parliament," said Zviad Gamsakhurdia, leader of the victorious Round Table-Free Georgia bloc of political parties.

With about 90 percent of the regions reporting, Gamsakhurdia claimed victory in about 70 percent.

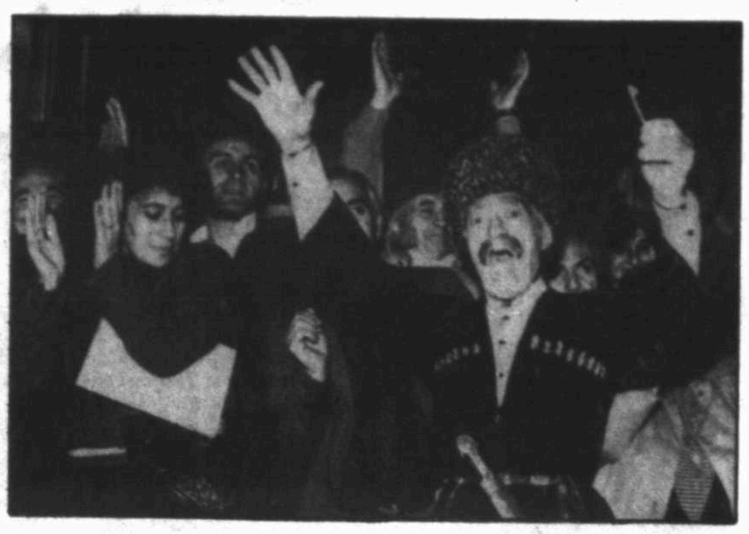
He protested what he called "gross violations" of the election law and said Communist authorities "terrorized the non-Georgian population" along the borders of the mountainous southern republic, which is dotted with pockets of Azerbaijani and other ethnic groups.

A member of the central election commission, Alexander Kobalia, said that preliminary results showed a slightly less sweeping victory for Gamsakhurdia's Round Table, with the bloc winning about 60 percent of the vote versus 30 percent for the Communist Party.

The final results will be ready today, and a runoff will be held for close races on Nov. 11, he said.

No date has been set yet for convening the Georgian Supreme Soviet legislature, which is expected to declare independence from the Soviet Union.

Among the 15 Soviet republics, all but Kirgizia have declared some form of sovereignty or independence.



AP Laserphoto

Members of the Round Table-Free Georgia bloc of political parties celebrate following their victory in elections in the southern Soviet republic of Georgia Monday. The bloc's platform called for independence from the Soviet Union, private ownership of land and a capitalist economy.

Gamsakhurdia said he was unable to specify what his first proposal would be in parliament. "I can't decide that alone," said Gamsakhurdia, an imposing 51-year-old with a history of arrests and opposition to Communist rule dating back to the 1950s.

Another Round Table spokesman, Georgi Makaridze, said the victory would translate into about 120 seats in the 250-member Supreme Soviet. "Along with other non-Communist parties, we will have a working majority in parliament," Makaridze said.

In a weekend interview, Gamsakhurdia predicted that Georgia's transition to independence would take about two years, and that the republic would maintain extensive economic relations with the Soviet Union. It also seemed likely that Georgia would rely on the Soviet Union in national security matters.

About 35 parties, most grouped by coalition, took part in Sunday's election, the first true multiparty vote in Soviet history.

Non-Communists have won elections in several cities and republics elsewhere in the Soviet Union, but the Georgian balloting was the first in which formal parties, created under new Soviet laws, were listed on the ballot.

Some politicians boycotted the election, claiming it was not democratic. One of them, the leader of the National Democratic Party, Gia Chanturia, was shot in the arm Friday as he left a political meeting.

Two National Democratic Party members, Gia Kobakhedze and Irakli Tsereteli, spoke on Georgian television and accused Gamsakhurdia of organizing the shooting on orders from Soviet authorities.

Gamsakhurdia denied responsibility for the shooting, and accused authorities in an interview Sunday of trying to sabotage the election by not telling people where to vote.

Under a complicated election system, each voter was given two ballots, one listing individual candidates and the other listing political parties and blocs.

Half the members of the legislature were to be chosen from the lists of individual candidates to represent various districts. The rest were to be chosen at large, in proportion to the number of votes cast for each party or bloc throughout Georgia.

Under the republic's election law, a party must get at least 4 percent of the republic-wide vote to gain representation in the legislature.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Sudan denies famine exists, refuses aid

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The chief government economist Monday angrily denied reports that millions of the African country's citizens face starvation, and said Sudan would refuse relief even if there was famine.

Col. Salah al-Deen Karar, chief of the ruling junta's economic affairs committee, told the official Sudan News Agency: "We will never accept any food assistance, even if famine is declared in Sudan."

Sunday, the military junta leader, Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan el-Bashir, charged that foreigners were spreading false warnings of famine to make the government look bad.

Karar charged that international relief agencies were "responsible to a great extent" for Sudan's current shortfall in grain supplies, because they have bought large quantities of Sudan's staple sorghum on the open market to feed refugees, he said.

This resulted in price increases for sorghum that put it beyond the means of many Sudanese who otherwise would have been able to buy food, Karrar said.

Witnesses testified in Congress last week that a horrendous drought is coming to Sudan, and urged the junta to announce a famine emergency so an international relief operation can proceed.

Hindus clash with police

AYODHYA, India (AP) — Hindu holy men clashed with police Monday and set a bus on fire in this curfew-bound city, the eye of a violent religious dispute between the country's Hindus and Moslems.

It was the first report of violence in Ayodhya in connection with the plan of fundamentalist Hindus to start building a temple over a 16th-century mosque on Tuesday.

The dispute has killed at least 104 people nationwide in the past week and brought Prime Minister V.P. Singh's government to the brink of collapse.

In Ayodhya, a town of about 40,000 people, a group of about 80 Hindu holy men threw stones at police and set a bus on fire when authorities attempted to arrest a local Hindu priest, a police inspector said.

Vandals slash pop art

PARIS (AP) — Vandals slashed two recent pop art works by Roy Lichtenstein and James Rosenquist on display at the International Contemporary Art Fair, organizers of the exhibition said Monday.

The vandals, shouting anti-imperialist slogans, mutilated the paintings Saturday with knives and dropped pamphlets before they were arrested.

Lichtenstein's "Reflections on Senorita," (1990) estimated at $1 million, and Rosenquist's "Venturi Correction," (1990) estimated at $350,000, were on show at the booth of the Leo Castelli gallery in New York.

U.S. vote spurs action

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (NYT) — A senior officer stopped foreign journalists from going to the northeastern part of the country Saturday to cover a weekend memorial service for the victims of one the worst massacres in El Salvador's decade-old civil war, apparently in reprisal for the vote by the U.S. Congress to halve military aid.

The journalists had been invited by several organizations to cover a news conference and memorial service for about 1,000 people who were rounded up and slain by the army on Dec. 11, 1981. The killings occurred at El Mozote in the northeastern province of Morazan, which is largely controlled by leftist rebels.

Col. Oscar Alberto Leon Linares, the army commander of the region, allowed Salvadorans into the zone but stopped foreign journalists. He told some that they could not proceed because of combat in the area, but he informed Thomas Long, a part-time photographer and reporter for The New York Times, that the decision was a reprisal for the decision by Congress.

Tourists still waiting to leave island

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — Electrical power was restored to most of Hatteras Island Monday as the last of the tourists stranded by a bridge collapse endured freezing temperatures while waiting for ferry rides back to the mainland.

At least 300 vehicles queued up at the Ocracoke Island ferry slip Monday, but weary travelers maintained their composure.

"It's been quite an experience. It's the first time we've ever gone through soup lines," said Helen Barnes, 68, of Norfolk, Va.

Mrs. Barnes and her six sisters have spent a week every October since 1976 on Hatteras Island, which is sandwiched between the Atlantic Ocean and Pamlico Sound.

They were set to leave Friday, when a dredge slammed into the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge, severing the only road linking Hatteras and Ocracoke islands to the mainland.

The accident temporarily trapped hundreds of tourists and made life a brief misery for the islands' 5,650 residents, who lost electrical power.

Four ferries moving 150 cars every six hours are the only means off the islands. People have had to take one ferry for the mile trip to Ocracoke, then another 30 miles to the mainland. The complete trip takes about 3½ hours.

Mrs. Barnes took the ferry from Hatteras Sunday, but when she got to Ocracoke she waited six hours for her turn on the ferry before giving up for the time being.

"We had no electricity, no heat, no food. We've been sleeping in the same clothes for four nights. It was pretty disgusting," she said. "We just decided to get to a hotel and take nice hot showers."

More than 600 cars wait in line Sunday for the ferry that will take them off Ocracoke Island, off the coast of North Carolina. Many motorists spent Saturday and Sunday night stranded on the island after a 369-foot portion of the Herbert Bonner Bridge to Hatteras Island was taken out by a dredge Friday.

Family shows 250 carved pumpkins

"We do it just for the fun of it," Matilda Bruschi said Monday. "The kids all get together. We're family oriented."

Mrs. Bruschi, her husband, Walt, and their nine children first began displaying carved pumpkins 26 years ago. The number of pumpkins grew each year along with the pumpkin crop at the family's farm in nearby South Fayette.

In all, 20 to 25 family members work on the project, carving the pumpkins, placing them in the yard and on a steep hillside overlooking the house and lighting all the candles inside them as night falls.

This year, some of the pumpkins will be carved to look like Peanuts cartoon characters and various celebrities and monsters, Mrs. Bruschi said. The display will start at dusk today and Wednesday.

There was no display for the last three years. Thieves raided the pumpkin patch in 1987 and 1988, and last year the drought ruined the crop.

Trinity School senior aims for adventurous life

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

It is said that today's youngsters are America's future.

And if Peggy Coffey, 17, is an example, then the future looks very bright.

To Peggy, it is all just part of enjoying life.

"I like to be busy, have something to do, some place to be. I'm not out doing drugs or racing people up and down the street," Peggy said. "When you're involved you keep busy and keep out of trouble."

Involvement for Peggy means maintaining a straight A average as a senior at Trinity School, being an Explorer as well as president of the Explorers Officers Association in Midland, and being a member of Camp Fire and youth representative on the board.

In addition, she holds down a part-time job at a local eatery, "just enough to get some spending money."

Peggy also loves adventure.

As an Explorer, the co-ed division of the Boy Scouts, Peggy is a member of the High Adventure Post.

"One of our activities is scuba diving. I've been certified since April," she said.

But it doesn't stop there. As an Explorer, Peggy also goes rappelling, camping, bicycling, hiking and skiing.

"I love to go out and do things that are fun and adventurous ... and safe. It's challenging and fun doing something that not everyone's done," she said, adding that such activity "is just my nature."

When it comes to school, studying may not be as exciting as rappelling but it's just as intriguing for Peggy.

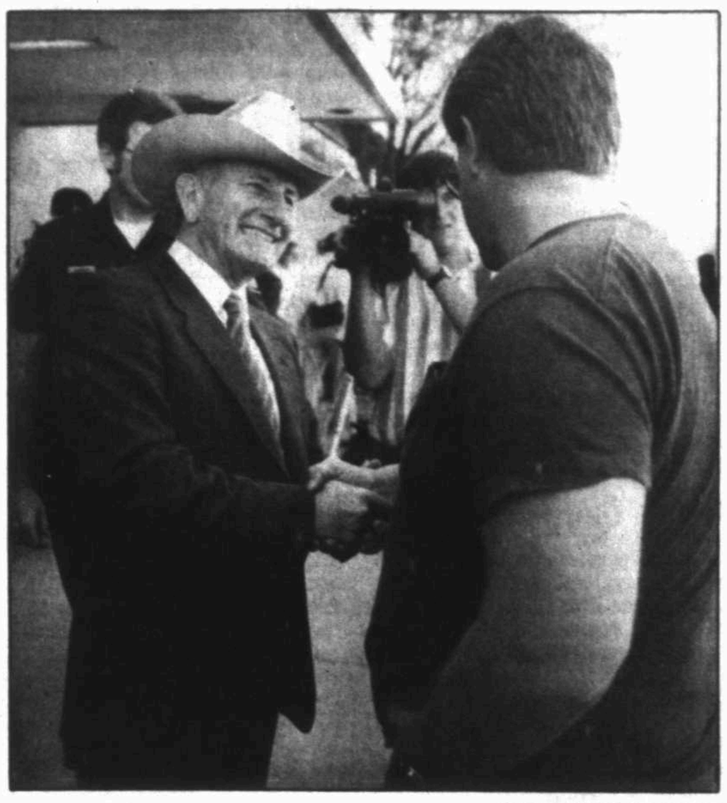
Local police group endorses Williams

■Williams says he is the only candidate that has put forward a comprehensive plan to fight drugs and fight violent crime.



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Midland Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) members cheered Monday as Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams reiterated his promise to add 60,000 beds to the Texas prison system.

The FOP, which has about 700 members statewide, announced its endorsement of Williams at a news conference on the steps of the Midland Police Department.

"I'm very proud of this," Williams said of the endorsement. He added that he is "the only candidate that has put forward a comprehensive plan to fight drugs and fight violent crime."

Williams claimed widespread support in the law enforcement community for his plans to expand prison capacity in Texas and institute a death penalty for child-killers.

He accused his opponent, Democrat Ann Richards, of "flip-flopping" on the issue of additional prison space and of proposing weak solutions to the problem of violent crime.

"Sixty-thousand prison units under the Williams plan, possibly 1,800 units under my liberal opponent's plan," Williams said. "It's the difference between fighting violent crime with a sledgehammer and a toy hammer."

Williams said he would fund his prison expansion plan out of money saved through $1.6 billion in proposed budget cuts.

But a Richards' spokesman said Williams' plan — which will cost an estimated $1.5 billion — is unrealistic.

"Anybody in the state of Texas who thinks you can build 60,000 beds without a tax increase must be expecting the tooth fairy to leave the money under their pillow," said Chuck McDonald, a Richards campaign press aide.

McDonald said Ms. Richards has always supported construction of additional prison space, but added that she wants to see more use of alternative forms of sentencing to

Former deputy pleads innocent to kidnapping, sexual assault

By David Morris
Staff Writer

An ex-Midland County sheriff's deputy who is accused of raping his estranged girlfriend after allegedly threatening to imprison her in a pit pleaded innocent Monday to aggravated kidnapping and sexual assault.

John Edward Hudson, 30, was arrested Jan. 11 in connection with the abduction of an Odessa woman with whom Hudson had once lived. Testimony in Hudson's trial began Monday in 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde.

The woman, 33, testified that around 7:45 p.m. on Jan. 9, Hudson approached her on foot as she and two of her sisters prepared to drive away from Travis Elementary School, 1400 S. Lee Ave.

She said Hudson — whom she had not seen in three months — told her and her sisters that his pickup's battery had died and asked them if they would give him a jump-start.

The woman, under questioning from Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty, said they agreed to the request. After picking up the woman's nephew at the Odessa Boys Club, she said, they drove Hudson to Barretts Avenue, where

AIDS service agency officially opens for business in Odessa

■ The office will provide case management services for individuals from initial diagnosis through progression of the disease.

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

ODESSA — The Permian Basin's first specifically designated AIDS service agency officially opened its doors Monday.

The Permian Basin AIDS Coalition office at 1522 N. Grandview is designed to be a focal point for individuals exposed to the human immuno-deficiency virus (HIV), which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

The PBAC office will provide case management services for individuals from initial diagnosis through the progression of the disease, said Carol Hale, who has been hired as director of the office.

Although Monday was the office's first official day, Ms. Hale said she and case manager Sherrie Wilson had already signed up "a couple of clients" before the doors were opened. Case management is vital to early intervention therapies that are proving effective in delaying the development of complications from the virus.

In addition to coordinating treatment plans for those initially finding out they are infected with HIV, Ms. Hale hopes PBAC will be able to create effective support groups for patients and their families during all stages of disease progression.

Groups sue to prevent at-large election of 11 district judges

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Minority organizations have filed suit in U.S. District Court to prevent what they believe to be the illegal election of 11 state district judges, court records indicate.

Rolando Rios, the plaintiffs' San Antonio attorney, said Monday the suit is another attempt to force the state to adopt single-member judicial election districts.

The suit, which was filed against the state of Texas on Oct. 26, seeks to enjoin the election of judges to district courts 363 through 377. Named as plaintiffs are the Mexican American Bar Association, the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) — including the Midland chapter — and several individuals.

The suit, filed in Midland, claims that the election of judges to district benches created since 1989 is illegal because those judgeships have not been "precleared" by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Also listed in the suit are the 200th and 201st District Courts in Travis County, which according to the suit were created in 1971.

GOP candidate denies racism charge

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Rick Perry, Republican candidate for Texas agriculture commissioner, Monday denied charges of racism leveled at him by Democratic opponent Jim Hightower.

Perry, who flew his airplane into Midland to attend a fund-raiser barbecue, said comments made by Hightower Sunday in Houston were out of line.

Responding to advertisements criticizing his support for the Rev. Jesse Jackson's presidential bid in 1988, Hightower called Perry a racist.

"We don't make our decisions on the basis of someone's skin," Perry said at a news conference at Midland Air Park. "We don't embrace Jesse Jackson's values. The guy is for everything mainstream Texans are against.

"To bring racism into it is nothing but a cheap shot by a two-bit politician. I expect an apology."

Despite being seriously behind in the polls, Perry expressed optimism that his campaign can close the gap in the final days before next Tuesday's election.

Perry said negative publicity surrounding the gubernatorial race — which recent polls have indicated is close — has not hurt his campaign.

"My campaign basically has a life of its own," he said. "We've run our own race. What's going on in the governor's race doesn't really affect us."

Perry, who earned an animal science degree from Texas A&M University, said it is time someone with an agricultural background took over as commissioner.

"It's been 40 years since there has been a person in that office who was a farmer or a rancher," Perry said. "It makes a lot of sense to have someone sitting there with that experience. When I go to a hospital I want to see a doctor."

He accused Hightower of being more interested in farfetched agricultural ideas than investments in the basics.

"He projects that the future of Texas is blueberries and Christmas trees," Perry said. "I'm going to focus the Department of Agriculture back on mainstream agriculture: cotton, cattle, wheat and feed grains."

He also said Hightower and the Texas Department of Agriculture have neglected to properly inspect gasoline station pumps statewide.

"I know gasoline pumps are apt to get out of calibration," he said. "I'm concerned about it."

Brigid Sheay, Hightower's press secretary, said Perry is grabbing at political straws.

"Hightower just blows Perry off the map (in the polls)," Ms. Sheay said.

She defended her candidate's attempts to diversify the Texas agricultural economy by introducing new crops such as grapes.

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to know that California has made buckets of money on grapes," Ms. Sheay said.

TRIAL: Woman testifies man threatened her

While her sisters and nephews stayed in the car, the woman said, she got out to talk to Hudson, who was attaching jumper cables to both vehicles. While her sisters' view was blocked by the car's open hood, the woman said, Hudson pulled out a small-caliber revolver and put it against her chin.

"He told me to get in the truck with him, don't ask any questions," said the woman, who testified that Hudson lived with her in Odessa from 1986 until 1988. "He said if I didn't, I was going to have two dead sisters and a dead nephew."

She testified that, with Hudson standing beside her, she told her sisters that she was going to leave with him. She said that before she entered his pickup, she managed to tell one of her sisters that Hudson had a gun and had threatened to use it.

Hudson drove her to his house in the 1100 block of Willeys Avenue in Midland, she said. Along the way, she said, he threatened to kill her, her boyfriend and members of her family. He also threatened to kill himself, she said.

Once inside Hudson's house, she testified, Hudson took her to a back room where he showed her a three-foot-deep hole beneath a closet floorboard.

"He told me if I tried to get away from him, he was going to put me in there," she told jurors.

She said Hudson produced a video camera, which he connected to a television set in the living room and apparently used to tape their conversation. He also threatened her with a Derringer-style pistol and said he had wired the house to explode, she testified.

Later, she said, Hudson handcuffed her to a chair and left to buy some cigarettes.

After returning with the cigarettes, she said, Hudson removed the handcuffs and talked with her a moment before saying he was leaving for Odessa to "get" her boyfriend.

She said she pleaded with Hudson not to hurt anyone and finally agreed to do "anything he wanted me to do" to protect her boyfriend and her family.

She said she then joined Hudson in the bedroom, where she submitted to sexual intercourse. Later, about 3:15 a.m. on Jan. 10, one of her sisters came to the house with the police and knocked on the door, she said. She said she escaped the house while Hudson, distracted by police-car lights, looked out a back window.

A Midland grand jury indicted Hudson in September on one count of aggravated sexual assault and one count of aggravated kidnapping. If convicted, he faces from five years to life in prison.

Hudson worked for the sheriff's department from 1983 until his resignation in 1986, officials reported.

SENIOR: Motivation pays off

(From 1B)

"I work hard academically. I love to learn things," she said.

So much so, she is even enrolled in a physics course at Midland College. "It gives me a chance to diversify (from what is offered in high school) a little bit."

Being a motivated student has paid off. Peggy is a National Merit Scholarship Semi-Finalist.

Aside from studying and outside involvements, she also takes part in extra-curricular activities at school, that include serving as vice-president of the Student Council, a reporter for the school newspaper and taking part in various sports.

Despite her ambitious schedule, she doesn't feel she stands out from a lot of other Midland students.

"I think there are a lot of high school students in Midland that are involved in a lot of things," she said.

Peggy said she dreams of attending the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., after graduation from high school.

"It is a challenge is the main reason," she said.

"It is a military school and is very demanding physically as well as academically. It is a very rigorous curriculum and they are training you to be the very best you can be," she said.

Peggy is very carreer-oriented and would like to be an engineer.

But the adventurer in Peggy will still be there.

"I'd love to be an astronaut, to go out and see what is beyond our world," she said.

AIDS: Odessa agency begins offering complete services about death and guilt," said. "I hope we can build support groups that can be constructive in helping people to learn coping mechanisms."

Working together, the two women hope the office can develop as their clients' "one voice" with doctors, health care professionals and social service agencies. Developing a proven working relationship on behalf of 30 or 40 clients could make a significant difference in the ease and quality of care and services available, Ms. Hale said.

Coming from New Orleans, where she also worked in an AIDS-related position, Ms. Hale said that the local response in terms of community groups and medical referrals to a few "pioneer" doctors in the area is typical.

"It's not that different here, it's just that West Texas doesn't have the quantity of patients that we saw in Louisiana — yet."

The creation of a permanent office — made possible by a Texas Department of Health grant — is a "dream come true" for members of OASIS, Odessa's community-based group which has struggled to provide help and support for several years.

Ms. Wilson's familiarity with the AIDS services situation in the 17-county area is unparalleled. She adminstered a state planning grant last year that helped lead to the establishment of the PBAC office.

Ms. Hale said she is encouraged by the degree of cooperation from health departments, care givers, social agencies — both public and private — and other professionals who helped in the planning grant study, who will continue to serve as an advisory board for the coalition.

She also hopes to soon initiate and advocacy training program to provide "buddies" for AIDS and HIV patients. These advocates can serve as an empathetic — yet detached — sounding board for a variety of issues.

"Maintaining a feeling of control and a sense of empowerment over decisions that have to be made eventually during the course of the disease, is important to the patient's well-being," she said.

A chamber of commerce ribbon-cutting ceremony has been set for Nov. 15, with an open house scheduled for two days later.

JUDGES: Lawsuit filed in Midland

(From 1B)

Rios said the Justice Department is unlikely to grant preclearance for the courts, which represent 13 counties, unless their judges are elected from single-member districts.

He cited the Justice Department's unwillingness to grant preclearance to new courts in Louisiana because judges there are elected at large.

The department's unwillingness comes "notwithstanding" the Sept. 28 U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling which held that at-large judicial elections do not violate the Voting Rights Act.

That decision overturned a ruling by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III in a 1988 LULAC lawsuit. Bunton's decision held that at-large elections illegally diluted minority voting strength.

Rios said the new suit was an attempt to achieve judicial districting by a different avenue.

He said he hoped the suit would either prevent or nullify the Nov. 6 election of judges to the courts in question, pending preclearance by the Justice Department.

The state has filed for preclearance for the disputed courts, according to the suit.

Odessa given designation as Urban Main Street City

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

ODESSA — The designation of Odessa as a 1991 Urban Main Street City by the Texas Historical Commission is a "threshold of change" in the revitalization of the city's downtown area, Mayor Lorraine Bonner said Monday.

The designation will give the city access to expertise and technical assistance in its economic development efforts focused on the under-utilized buildings and storefronts of the central business district.

"We need to change the saying from 'Good things come to those who wait,' to 'Good things come to those who 'go for it'," the mayor said in opening a press conference called to make the announcement.

A group of about 50 Odessans pulled the city's application together in a little over two weeks after Ms. Bonner first learned of the program at a Municipal League meeting in Lubbock.

Co-chaired by County Judge Jan Fisher and businessman Bill Elms, the Main Street task force lined up more than $330,000 in funding for the project over the next three years.

Almost half of the monies — $50,000 per year — have been committed by the City Council, in unified support of the project, she said.

The application was submitted jointly by the city and the Heritage of Odessa Foundation, Inc.

The program includes four elements: organization, promotion, design and economic development. The Main Street Department of the Texas Historical Society will provide training and supervision of local project staff as well as assistance in design, restoration, marketing, organization and recruitment.

A THC architect is expected in Odessa next week to begin a historical survey of the downtown area before deciding how to proceed with the revitalization project. The committee also expects to begin accepting applications for "the big hitter" necessary to lead the project, Ms. Bonner said.

Judge Fisher commended Ms. Bonner for her "contagious" attitude of enthusiasm and for the broad-based support that has come together behind the Main Street Porgram so quick.

Bands earn top ratings

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Lee High School Band, along with the Permian High Band, were selected to represent District 4-5A in the Region B Marching Contest this Saturday in Odessa.

Both the Lee High and Lee Freshman High bands earned Division I "Superior" ratings during Saturday's University Interscholastic League District VI Marching Contest.

Midland High and Midland Freshman bands each received Division II, "Excellent" ratings.

This year marked the 20th consecutive Division I rating by the Lee Band and if selected as the Region B representative this week, it would make nine of the last 10 years the Rebels have carried the banner for West Texas into Austin for the state competition, according to band booster information.

Music student scholarships set up at Midland College

Staff Report

Establishment of two new scholarships for music students was announced this week by Midland College.

The Gonzalez Scholarships are being provided by Roy Gonzalez of Midland in memory of his late wife, Ellen. She was secretary to the Fine Arts Division at Midland College for more than ten years until her death last summer. She also taught numerous dance courses through the college's Continuing Education Department.

The scholarships are in the amount of $300 cash per semester, renewable for two years. First recipients will receive the funds for the 1991 spring semester.

Applications are being received by Dr. Stan Jacobs, chairman, Fine Arts Division, through Nov. 7. A panel of three members of the college music faculty will review applications and recommend recipients. Their announcement is scheduled for Nov. 15.

Applicants will be required to provide a tape or live audition representative of their musical ability. Persons intending to enroll as full-time students with a music major are eligible to apply. Current students must have a minimum 3.0 grade point average. The letter of application should include two letters of reference as well as educational background, major music field, honors and awards, financial need, and educational and professional goals.

More information may be obtained from Dr. Jacobs by calling 685-4641 or making an appointment to visit with him.

CRIME: Williams gets police support reduce prison populations.

Alternative sentencing includes use of local halfway houses and restitution centers, house arrests and supervised probation for non-violent criminals, McDonald said.

"The cornerstone of her plan is no parole for violent offenders," said McDonald, who added that Ms. Richards has been endorsed by the Combined law Enforcement Associations of Texas and the Texas Conference of Police and Sheriffs.

Leonard Hendon, Midland FOP president, said his organization supports Williams because of his "better platform on law enforcement."

Odessan Larry Kiker, Texas FOP president, said Williams is sympathetic to the needs of police officers and will support their efforts to maintain pensions and benefits.

Williams, meanwhile, said campaign spending reports due to be released this week will show that he has spent more than $10 million on the general election, about $1.4 million of which was his own money. That brings to roughly $8 million the share of his personal fortune that Williams has spent on his gubernatorial campaign, he said.

Space technology used to study past

When he isn't studying printouts from space shuttle remote sensors, he is on the scene at archaeological sites in Guatemala, Costa Rica or New Mexico.

"I do nothing armchair," Sever said in an interview before a recent speech at Amarillo College.

Such technology as TIMS, a thermal infrared multi-spectral scanner, allows satellites or shuttle crews to capture images of earth that reveal more than humans ever have known about the planet's surface. Sever analyzes the data, searching for signs of previous civilizations and for what those early people might teach humanity of the 1990s.

"The purpose of archaeological applications is not to find out places that no one had found before, but our objective is to try to understand prehistoric environments in an attempt make some applications to modern-day environments and hopefully to future environments," said Sever, who has worked at the Stennis Space Center on the Mississippi Gulf Coast the past 10 years.

He said man is in the process of entering the most difficult habitat in history — space.

Sever said a project in an uncharted region of Guatemala has a direct application to the way people live today.

Remote sensing instruments on satellites, airplanes and even balloons allow Sever and others to map and study land characteristics that are not visible to the human eye and that uncover habits and patterns of past civilizations.

"We want to know how it is that millions of Maya lived in this delicate tropical forest environment for hundreds of years successfully when today a few hundred people can't live there two years without destroying the surface," he said.

"What we do today is go in and bulldoze or chain-saw the trees," Sever said, which exposes the soil to erosion, results in water runoff and leaves a salt surface.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can look forward to a busy and profitable schedule. Spiritual growth, as well as financial progress, is featured this coming winter. Your mental powers will be especially strong in February 1991. The business outlook shows steady improvement. Although marital relations could be somewhat strained next spring, patience and understanding will set things right again. Put partner's needs ahead of your own in early summer. By fall 1991, the two of you may be in perfect sync.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President John Adams, director Louis Malle, singer Grace Slick, actor Henry Winkler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family problem can be solved if you are patient. Discuss financial conditions with your mate or partner. A parent-child conflict requires a calmer approach. Romantic ties intensify.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Younger family members require more of your time and patience now. What they say may not be what they mean. Listen carefully and act lovingly. The missing pieces of a puzzle fall into place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be asked to submit your ideas on paper. Organize your thoughts in a written outline first, so as not to forget any vital points. Time is your best friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Discuss a business deal with a third party who has no interest in it. You need an unbiased opinion. An indirect approach is likely to bring the best results today. Romance blossoms.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family obligations may conflict with work priorities. Avoid making any new financial commitments. Heed the advice of a close friend. Now is the ideal time to travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A domestic misunderstanding could disrupt your plans. Someone's emotional demands on you may increase. A spiritual experience will help you make wise choices. Be true to your beliefs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not try to force an issue. A delay will work in your favor. Realize that you are not always right. A spirit of compromise helps promote domestic harmony.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): See things as they are but do not make hasty decisions. A financial situation will improve. A member of the opposite sex may distract you from your work. Postpone romance for a while.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Favorable results are easier to obtain now. Family members will support your ideas. Do not overdo it physically. A member of the opposite sex joins your team. Romance may be in your plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your energy will be at a peak today — making work a breeze. However, you could run out of steam by early evening. Bowing out of a social event tonight could be a smart move.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Although your financial responsibilities increase, a phone call provides new hope. Friends prove their loyalty in wonderful ways. Keep your tax receipts and checkbook in better order.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romance may have to wait while you take care of pressing private affairs. Be willing to give up a little fun in order to get important things done. Return phone calls promptly.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are true romantics, passionate and intense. They never forget a slight or a compliment and may brood when things go awry. Wise parents will help these youngsters control their strong emotions and focus on the positive instead of the negative. Although thrifty in their daily lives, these Scorpios can be amazingly generous to those they love. Medicine, police work and archaeology are excellent fields for these studious and thorough Scorpios.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣

At the World Olympiad in Geneva, Switzerland, two Australian declarers proved it is not as easy for the defenders to collect "sure" tricks as one might imagine. This deal came up in the Mixed Pair Championship.

We have only the auction at one table, but assume it followed similar lines at the other. The problem started when North chose to open an aceless wonder in first seat, and it is difficult to blame South for refusing to stay out of slam thereafter, since North rated to have some spade tolerance.

At one table West led the ace of clubs and then shifted to a diamond. It might seem declarer's chances of making the rest of the tricks are somewhat less than zero, but South enlisted the cooperation of the defense. After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer crossed to the king of clubs and led the queen. East elected to ruff. Unfortunately, East selected the four of trumps for this task. (A convincing argument can be made in favor of ruffing with the king: it would defeat the contract!) Declarer overruffed and banged out the ace of spades with highly satisfactory results.

At the other table declarer did even better! The lead there was a diamond, won perforce in the closed hand. South crossed to the king of hearts and tried the effect of leading the jack of trumps. East covered and great was the fall thereon. A club to the king won and, when declarer continued with a barrage of trumps, a flustered West discarded the ace of clubs to hold the guarded queen of hearts. As a result, declarer scored an overtrick!

Hall of fame to honor Byrds

NEW YORK (AP) — The Impressions, Ike and Tina Turner, Wilson Pickett, the Byrds and six others are being inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, officials announced Monday.

They will be inducted at a banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria on Jan. 16, said Ahmet Ertegun, head of Atlantic Records and chairman of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Foundation Inc.

Hooker

In the early-influences category, the single inductee is Howlin' Wolf, who died in 1976. Wolf wrote "Sitting on Top of the World," popularized by the group Cream.

Producers Dave Bartholomew and Ralph Bass will be inducted in the nonperforming category.

Pickett

Bartholomew headed the New Orleans rhythm and blues movement in the 1950s. He discovered Fats Domino and cowrote many of his hits. Bass discovered James Brown and helped to start the Platters on their career.

To be inducted in the artists category are:

■ The Impressions, whose songs included "Gypsy Woman" and "People Get Ready." Original members Curtis Mayfield and Jerry Butler went on to solo success.

■ Ike and Tina Turner, best remembered for the remake of "Proud Mary."

■ La Vern Baker, best known for a string of pop and rhythm and blues hits in the 1950s and 1960s.

■ The Byrds, a popular group of the 1960s that had such hits as 'Mr. Tambourine Man" and "Eight Miles High."

■ John Lee Hooker, an influential guitarist.

■ Wilson Pickett, who recorded "In the Midnight Hour."

■ Jimmy Reed, whose song "Baby What You Want Me to Do," was recorded by Elvis Presley.

More than $40 million has been raised to build the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland but groundbreaking has not yet begun. Some 300 recording industry workers voted for this year's inductees.

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Mickey Spillane knows exactly what he's going to say when he sits down to write his best-selling crime novels.

In three weeks, the job is done and he takes the rest of the year off. And Spillane, 72, said he doesn't care what the critics think.

"I'm a pro. If you sell, you're good. If you're satisfying a market, that's the barometer of good writing, if you are making money at it," he said Sunday night at the Second Annual Bartenders' Masquerade and Costume Ball. "If a book is good it will sell by itself."

"The Killing Man," Spillane's first Mike Hammer detective novel in 19 years, is now at bookstores.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mr. USO, Bob Hope, says he's set the date for a Christmas visit to troops in the Persian Gulf.

Hope

"I'm going over there about December the 20th. I want to be there for Christmas," the 87-year-old entertainer said Sunday.

"We're going to have a ball over there," Hope told about 15,000 people at the base. "I like what Bush is doing. He keeps sending troops over there because we've got to get the message through."

Hope made the announcement during festivities at Lackland Air Force Base, where a theater was renamed in his honor. Hope has entertained American troops overseas since 1941.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Mary Martin, who starred in such musicals as "Peter Pan," "The Sound of Music" and "South Pacific," has been hospitalized for tests, a spokesman said Monday.

Richard Grant, publicist for Miss Martin's son, actor Larry Hagman, refused to say where the actress was hospitalized or the reason for the tests.

"Miss Martin has been in the hospital for tests. That is all I will confirm," Grant said. "In this case we just don't choose to give out information."

Miss Martin, who grew up in Weatherford, Texas, west of Fort Worth, became a star of New York theater with her 1938 appearance in the musical "Leave It to Me." She also played nurse Nellie Forbush in "South Pacific" and Maria in a Broadway version of "The Sound of Music."

She first played Peter Pan on Broadway in 1954.

Miss Martin was seriously injured in a 1982 taxi-van collision that left her manager, Ben Washer, dead.

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS will recall some of its greatest moments with a one-hour special broadcast on William S. Paley, who built up CBS from a small chain of radio stations into a giant communications company, the network said Monday.

Paley, 89, died Friday. The special, "William S. Paley: Tribute to a Broadcasting Giant" will be anchored by Dan Rather and will include reports by Walter Cronkite, Charles Kuralt and Morley Safer.

The Wednesday night special will preempt the regularly scheduled broadcast of "48 Hours."

Victims of phone frustration reach out

By Suzanne Schlosberg
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Mona Mandel's relationship might have been doomed from the start.

But call-waiting didn't help.

Both Mandel and her boyfriend ordered the service for "convenience" — so friends and business associates wouldn't suffer the annoyance of a telephone busy signal.

As it turned out, they couldn't talk for two consecutive minutes without hearing the dreaded "click."

"We'd try to keep the relationship together, but it would always be, 'Hold on, honey. You know I need to take this call,' " said Mandel, a West Hills resident. "The minute we'd start talking, it's like the whole world needs to talk to him or me."

She tried ignoring the clicks, but that strategy failed. "People continue to call," she said. "They can't believe I won't pick up the phone."

It wasn't just the click that was disruptive; it was the aftermath. "When you get back on the phone," Mandel said, "you have to have this whole discussion about who called and what it was all about."

Eventually, the relationship fell apart.

Talk about frustration.

Actually, these days you can't talk about frustration — or anything else — because you get interrupted by a click or connected to a machine. With call-waiting, answering machines and voice mail, human-to-human telephone contact is becoming increasingly rare.

AND MORE than a few people are upset about it. The Daily News asked readers to share their experiences of torture by telephone technology. Two dozen people wrote in, explaining their frustration with modern conveniences that seemed to be just the opposite.

CNS Graphic

Many lost patience, some lost faith in businesses, and a few said their lives lost some mystery and excitement. But Mandel lost a relationship, and for that, the Daily News selected her as the winner of the Telephone Tales contest.

Mandel will receive a package of stationery and a supply of stamps for some good old-fashioned communication.

Clearly, many people welcome advances in telephone technology. Pacific Bell, for instance, reports that 37 percent of its customers have call-waiting, and that number is expected to increase.

In addition, a company spokeswoman said, more customers are taking advantage of other services, including three-way calling, speed calling, busy call-forwarding, delayed call-forwarding and call transfer.

Many people, however, just call it frustration.

"We're being defeated by our own technology," said Richard Saul Wurman, a New York communications consultant who is writing a book titled "Communication Anxiety."

Wurman, who owns several computers, said he doesn't oppose all technology. But, he said, people often use certain gadgets just because they're there — not because they're better.

EVENTUALLY, WURMAN predicts, communication will get so bad that companies will go back to the days when humans answered customer service calls.

"Human interaction will become a feature in five years," he said. "Things will become so depersonalized, that eventually they will become personalized again."

Eileen Kahn can't wait.

Kahn, a Mobil Oil credit card holder, wanted to take advantage of a discount offer for a desk calendar. Because the "enclosed postage-paid envelope" was not enclosed in her mail, Kahn tried calling Mobil to get the proper address.

She dialed three different numbers, each time reaching Mobil's "24-hour automated customer inquiry system." The recording gave her a choice of several buttons to push.

"If you want to know about your bill, push in the last four digits. If you want to know where the nearest Mobil station is, press this," said Kahn, an Agoura resident.

Finally, Kahn sent a letter to company headquarters in Missouri. "I said, 'If there's a human being working for Mobil Oil, have them call me.' "

That was in September. She has yet to receive a call.

Stacy Ball-Blodgett receives calls all day long, but, like Mandel, she's constantly put on hold by people with call-waiting. For Ball-Blodgett, however, there's more than a relationship at stake. There could be a life.

As a 911 operator for the Los Angeles Police Department, Ball-Blodgett gets calls about traffic accidents, shootings and domestic violence. Often, however, the caller is interrupted by a click.

"These people don't realize how important a call is," said Ball-Blodgett, a Simi Valley resident. "That one piece of information might be the key, and they say, 'Can you hold please' when you know there's a big crime going on."

Sometimes even victims get interrupted by call-waiting.

"The wife has just gotten beat up and she's telling you to hold on," Ball-Blodgett said.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

'Swirls' don't change taste of canned frosting

By Linda Anderson

There's an old, wise saying — something about having "nothing new under the sun" — that food manufacturers seem to keep trying to prove wrong.

Anderson

The other day we got a package that contained two boxes of Pillsbury Plus "pudding in the mix" cake mixes (one was yellow cake mix and the other was dark chocolate cake mix), and two containers of "New!" Pillsbury Swirl Frosting with Fudge Swirl (again, one was vanilla and one was chocolate).

The idea was that we would bake the cake mixes and top them with the frostings, and discover for ourselves how new this product (the swirl frosting) is. OK, no problem, I'm never reluctant to check out goodies, especially when they are free. The young taste-testers and I baked the cakes and spread the frosting — then they took over and applied the chocolate swirls to each cake.

Then everybody — young taste-testers and newsroom types and whoever else wandered into the office and wanted to — got to check out both cakes and both frostings (and of course, the chocolate swirls) for taste. Price and advertising accuracy I check all by myself.

Pillsbury cake mixes of various flavors usually cost between 99 cents and $1.19 depending on whether or not they are on sale. Packaged, ready-to-use Pillsbury frostings cost about $1.49.

I looked through the press release that accompanied the mixes and frosting, and found the following advertising claims: "...Pillsbury Swirl, a novel, new ready-to-spread frosting that makes everyday cakes special.

"Pillsbury Swirl flavors include milk chocolate and vanilla, America's two favorite frostings. Both flavors come with Fudge Swirl to help you easily create a special cake for any occasion."

And my personal favorite: "Ths is perhaps a first — a new kit that enables you to create art you can eat." Kind of like having your creativity and eating it too?

We baked and frosted both cakes, created chocolate art on the top of each and then taste-tested. Some testers liked the vanilla frosting better, some like the yellow cake better, but all agreed that both cakes and frosting tasted just like — boxed cake topped with ready-to-spread frosting.

One taste-tester wondered why food manufacturers can't seem to make canned frosting that tastes as good as homemade. "After all," she said, "it's not that difficult to make homemade frosting." And she's right.

The little testers had a great time creating the chocolate art for the tops of the cakes, but when all was said and done, chocolate swirls did not a "special cake" make.

The cakes were OK, but they'll never top homemade. Neither will canned chocolate swirls.

Alert buyers find deals on cellular telephones

By Leonard Sloane
N.Y. Times News Service

Purchases of cellular telephones continue to climb rapidly, and their prices are falling with almost equal speed. As what was once a luxury becomes affordable for many Americans, competition among manufacturers and among providers of service is becoming more intense.

Prices for the phones themselves have been slashed to as little as $50 in some cases. These lower prices are tempting more and more people to buy cellular phones. But there is more to think about than just the base price of the phone. It's not like making other electronic purchases, like a television set or a stereo.

In the first place there are three kinds of cellular phones to choose from: one for use only inside a car, a mobile phone; one for inside and outside a car, a transportable phone; and one for use only outside, a portable phone.

And as many as seven plans for buying cellular service may be offered by a single provider in a metropolitan area. There is also the question of insurance, which varies with the kind of phone.

Growth in sales of cellular phones has been astonishing. In 1989, the number of such phones in use soared by almost 74 percent, according to Dataquest Inc., a research concern based in San Jose, Calif.

The increase in 1990 is expected to be another 48 percent, bringing the total number of phones to almost 5 million.

Steve Sazegari, a Dataquest analyst, says he expects this cellular phone base to rise by another 34 percent next year.

"Prices could come down 20 to 30 percent over the next 4 to 5 years," he said.

Prices have already dropped since the advent of the phones in 1983. Consumers can still spend as much as $3,000 for a unit, but many models sell for $50 to $99.

Most phone sales are in the mobile category, says to the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association, the largest and most mature segment of the market.

But the lowest prices offered by dealers often carry various conditions, like a commitment to use a particular cellular telephone company for a minimum period. Thus the buyer could be locked in with one service provider and cannot change to another to get better service or a lower price until the period ends.

Because cellular phone owners pay for both incoming and outgoing calls, providers are offering a slew of service plans encompassing the monthly charge and the per-minute use charge to attract customers.

One plan combines a $35-a-month service charge with a use charge of 60 cents a minute in peak periods and 40 cents in off-peak periods. Another offers a $55-a-month charge and a use charge of 45 cents a minute at all times.

"Beware of come-ons," said Robert B. Miller, vice president of merchandising for Radio Shack. "There are a lot of gimmicks in the marketplace. You want to be sure of not entering into a five-year agreement with a carrier" that limits switching to a more attractive deal.

The Federal Communications Commission licenses two providers in each area.

Questions have been raised about exposure to the radiation that is emitted by cellular phones. Professor Theodore S. Rappaport of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg, said that in general the low power and relatively low UHF transmission frequency is not viewed as a health hazard. But he said it is an issue that requires further study, even though cellular phone emissions are a small part of the total radiation the average person encounters each day. Blacksburg is the director of the institute's mobile and portable radio research group.

DEAR ABBY

Women want to lose live-in

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I live at home with my mother (I'm 25), and a young man named "Bo" lives with us. (He's 21.) Bo has been here almost a year. We dated less than two months, when he stayed over one night. The next day, before I could take him home, his mother came and dumped all his belongings on my front lawn. Bo had no job and nowhere to go, so Mother and I took him in.

Van Buren

A year later, he still has no job. Last month, he was arrested for violation of probation. As part of the condition of his probation, he has to attend a group therapy class once a week. Since he has no driver's license, I have to drive him everywhere. (Group therapy is 30 miles each way.)

But here's the real problem: I was born and raised in a strict Baptist home. (My father was a minister.) When I met Bo, I went back on everything I ever believed in: no sex before marriage, no living together. My mother did the same. Last month, I decided to go back to my church. I refused to have sex with Bo, and he hit the ceiling. No matter what Scripture I showed him in the Bible, his answer was, "This is the '90s."

When I went back to church, I met a man I was drawn to immediately. I've only talked to him once, and that was when he was going around shaking hands. When his hand touched mine, sparks flew. He sings in the choir, and he stares at me the whole time. He is deeply religious, very handsome, polite and well-dressed. He is a beautiful, super person.

What am I going to do about Bo? I don't love him. I realize now that I never did love him. I feel sorry for him because if we make him leave, he will have nowhere to go. He can also get violent if he thinks someone has wronged him. I am trapped, Abby! What should I do? — MISERABLE IN THE BIBLE BELT

DEAR MISERABLE: Tell Bo clearly that you want him out of your house by a certain date — and stick to it. The arrangements will have to be up to him. Tell him he had better go back to his mother, because you have gone back to your church.

If he gives you and your mother any trouble, call his probation officer and explain it to him. Between the three of you, I'm sure you can get Bo to see the light.

DEAR ABBY: One of my doctors charges $95 for a 15-minute office call. When you leave the office, the lady at the desk says, "We'll take care of your Medicare form."

When I received the Medicare information, there was an indication of two surgeries during that office call, one for $50 and one for $45. I had no surgery.

I suppose he does this to get me a better reimbursement for my costs. However, it is hard for me not to consider it fraud.

On my second visit, the same thing happened, with the same amounts. Should I report this to Medicare? — PUZZLED IN PASADENA

DEAR PUZZLED: No. First, call your physician's office manager and ask for an explanation. It may be a matter of coding for Medicare. If you are not satisfied with the explanation, THEN report your physician, but first give him the chance to explain why Medicare was billed for two surgeries that were not performed.

AT WIT'S END

Rich, decadent cake fails to live up to its reputation

By Erma Bombeck

There are some people who believe that food is more important than sex.

I don't know either one of them personally. And I come from a family where gravy is considered a beverage.

Bombeck

But recently I was intrigued with a recipe in my local paper called Better Than Sex Cake.

The kitchen in my home has always been recognized as an experimental test site. Everyone acknowledges that. It was here that I broiled my first angel food birthday cake and tried to pass it off as a sheet cake. And I was burning fish to a crisp long before Prudhomme did it and christened it "Cajun."

What better place to test the Better Than Sex Cake, and what better audience than my grown, unmarried children, one of whom was celebrating a birthday?

I began with a box of German chocolate cake mix. When it was baked and slightly cooled, I poked little holes in the top of the cake with a pencil and dribbled in seven ounces of sweetened condensed milk and half a jar of caramel sauce and let it stand for an hour. After that, I buried the entire cake in a carton of Cool Wh'p, crushed eight Heath candy bars and sprinkled them over the top. I ran my fingers around the edge, licked them off — and gave it an NC-17 rating.

As I put the cake on a shelf in the refrigerator, I couldn't help scrutinizing it. Could this be the answer to safe sex? Was there a chance it could make a generation ignore their biological clocks? Was it possible for a cake to accomplish what Harry and Sally had failed to prove? That you don't need sex to have a relationship?

"I don't think I'm old enough to eat this," said one.

"Will I feel cheap in the morning?" asked the other one.

"Shut up and eat!" I commanded.

Slowly, they dipped their forks through the layers of rich, creamy chocolate caressed by whipped cream. No one breathed as the caramel stretched lazily in mid-air before falling on a chunk of candy. Lips clung hungrily to the moist crumbs so seductive on the plate.

I watched closely. Moans were made. Eyes rolled back in their heads. Shrieks of "Yes! Yes!"

"So, what do you guys think?" I asked. "Is there a future for the Better Than Sex Cake?"

They looked at one another. "Mom, it's just a cake. You do understand that, don't you? We worry about you. You're very sick."

As I cleared the table, all my dreams of having them go to Club Med and meet a nice dessert just went out the window.

Root depth debated

WOODLAND, Maine (AP) — How deep are a tree's roots? Not as deep as you may think. In most cases, 99 percent of a tree's roots are found in the top three feet of soil, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm.

Grand jury probes claims

EL PASO (AP) — A grand jury is investigating allegations of sexual harassment filed by a former secretary in the El Paso County district attorney's office against the county's first assistant district attorney.

The allegations stem from a complaint filed last year with the sheriff's department by Evangelina Villalobos, 23, concerning Gonzalo Garcia, 36, a first assistant in the office of District Attorney Steve Simmons.

Garcia was out of his office Monday when The Associated Press tried to reach him for comment. His attorney, Monty Stevens, called the allegations unfounded.

"I'm confident after the grand jury hears all the evidence the matter will be closed and everyone can go on with their lives. Unfortunately in a situation like this, Garcia will have to carry the scars of this forever," Stevens said.

A suit filed by Ms. Villalobos named Garcia and Simmons, who she said did nothing about Garcia's behavior, but it was dropped after she reached an out-of-court settlement. She sought $300,000. The El Paso Herald-Post quoted unidentified sources as saying she agreed to a $57,500 settlement.

Attorney Carol Pennock testified Thursday before the grand jury. In June 1986, when she was also an assistant district attorney, Garcia came to her home demanding to be let in and forced open a screen door and front door she had locked, she said.

Garcia resigned from the district attorney's office after that incident, but later was rehired.

According to her suit, Garcia directed "lewd comments and questions" at Ms. Villalobos once and sometimes twice a day, three times a week, from late 1987 until mid-1988. Then in December 1988, Garcia entered her office with a sexual device, she claimed. On another occasion, he made a crude gesture and uttered lewd comments, she said.

On Nov. 20, 1987, Garcia "smelled of liquor and his behavior was bizarre. Mr. Garcia was acting obnoxious, and his gait was unsteady," Ms. Villalobos said in the suit. She said Garcia forced himself on top of her and fondled her. She said her supervisor had to pull Garcia off.

In early 1989, Garcia reported Villalobos for insubordination. Ms. Villalobos later received a poor job evaluation from Garcia.

Ms. Villalobos was fired April 13, 1989 for poor job performance.

Execution stay issued

CONROE (AP) — A Texas death row inmate scheduled to die early Tuesday for the 1986 slaying of a paramedic won a stay on Monday from a state judge.

State District Judge James Keeshan delayed Jesse D. Jacobs' execution date until Dec. 13 so he can continue to appeal his conviction.

Jacobs, a former Oklahoma auto mechanic, had been scheduled to die early Tuesday for the Feb. 21, 1986 kidnap-slaying of Etta Ann Urdiales, a 25-year-old paramedic.

He told investigators in a videotaped statement that he forced Ms. Urdiales from her apartment, shot and buried her in a remote area of Montgomery County.

Jacobs said in the statement that he did it for his sister, Bobbie Jean Hogan, who he said was in love with Ms. Urdiales' estranged husband and felt Ms. Urdiales was creating problems in a child custody dispute.

Jacobs later recanted his confession and said his sister shot Ms. Urdiales after he brought the woman to her.

Ms. Hogan, 42, also was tried for capital murder, but was convicted of the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter with a deadly weapon and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Court rejects appeal

Dogs protect territory

DALLAS (AP) — A dog's instinct to survive could mean danger for unsuspecting humans who believe their pets are completely domestic, experts say.

People who own aggressive breeds often don't realize that the animals, even having never shown signs of violence, can react without apparent provocation to seriously injure or kill humans, officials say.

Last week, a rural Collin County toddler was mauled to death by her family's pit bull terrier.

A dog's desire to protect its territory can be intensified if it's restricted to a small area by a chain, said Dr. Katherine Houpt, an animal behaviorist at New York State College of Veterinary Medicine.

"If a child is running, that can trigger behavior," Houpt said. "If a child reaches out to pet a dog, that could trigger dominance behavior. A third thing that can trigger an attack is a child going into the dog's territory."

Jessica Cole, 18-months-old, was killed in that Collin County incident.

Also last week, a 10-year-old Odessa boy, David Manual Ontiveros, was mauled by the family dog, a Doberman, while playing with it in the family's backyard. The dog was chained at the time of the attack, police said.

Seventeen others have been killed in dog attacks nationally, according to figures from the Humane Society of the United States.

Who owns gun?

The gun Jack Ruby used to kill Lee Harvey Oswald is at the center of a nearly 24-year-old dispute on the Probate Court docket this week in Dallas. A jury was selected Monday for a trial to determine distribution of Ruby's assets including the .38-caliber Colt Cobra revolver, displayed by a Texas Court of Appeals clerk in this 1965 photo from files.

Tyson in court

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson's latest bout began Monday in a courtroom where jurors considered claims that the former heavyweight champion assaulted a woman at a dance club.

Tyson

Tyson disputes all allegations in the $4.5 million civil lawsuit, which his attorney called a "stickup." The boxer is expected to testify in his defense.

The lawsuit, which went to trial in U.S. District Court, was filed by Sandra Miller, a 26-year-old Brooklyn woman, who claims Tyson "forcibly fondled" and cursed at her after she refused his advances at Bentley's Disco early Dec. 10, 1988.

"There is a victim here, it's Mike Tyson," Hirth said.

Philadelphia safety Wes Hopkins (48) sacks Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman Sunday as the entire NFL seems to be going backward in its parity move with 17 of the 28 teams playing at under .500 ball.

NFL parity means losses

■ Parity in the National Football League means that 17 of 28 teams are playing under a .500 pace.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The byword for the NFL has always been parity, but almost midway through the season the word has to be parody. Seventeen of the 28 NFL teams are UNDER .500. That's 17, as in SEVENTEEN!

Moreover, in the last three weeks, just two of the 36 games have matched teams with winning records — the two between the Giants and the Redskins. The next best was the 3-3 Steelers at the 6-0 49ers last week.

Why? Because so many of last year's playoff teams have fallen flat — the 1-6 Vikings, 3-4 Eagles, 2-4 Rams and 3-4 Broncos — and none of the up-and-coming teams have truly emerged.

So the 49ers and Giants are 7-0, and the Bears, Dolphins, Bills and Raiders are 6-1. The Bengals are 5-3, the Redskins and Chiefs 4-3.

And that's it.

On the NFC front, the 49ers lead the West by four games, the Giants lead the East by three and the Bears lead the Central by two. The three will spend the rest of the season playing for home-field advantage in the playoffs and to avoid being the division winner relegated to the wild-card round.

"We should win unless we do something stupid, and we don't plan on doing something stupid," Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor said after Sunday's 27-10 victory over the Redskins.

The AFC is better off, but just barely.

If the Raiders beat the Chiefs next Sunday, they'll have a three-game lead in the West.

In the Central, the Bengals (5-3) were horrible Sunday night in Atlanta, but they're coming off a five-game road trip and have six of their final eight games at home. Houston, which lost at home to the Jets on Sunday, is only a game behind but has five of its final eight games on the road.

So when is there an important game?

Maybe next week in Kansas City between the Raiders and Chiefs.

Or Nov. 19 in Miami, a Monday night game between the Raiders and Dolphins.

Which is a good lead-in to Dec. 3, when the 49ers and Giants meet at Candlestick.

More decent games?

Former Reb gets chance at Syracuse

■ Rodney Johnson finally gets a shot to run the Orangemen at quarterback and leads the team to a score.

By Ralph Vacchiano

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Looking back at Syracuse University's 42-0 win over Rutgers on Oct. 20, not many people will remember the performance of former Midland Lee standout Rodney Johnson.

After all, the junior quarterback had a minimal impact on the game. He did not step onto the field until 3:11 had gone by in the fourth quarter and SU built a 35-point lead. Johnson was in for just 15 plays — all runs. And his personal line read like this: no passes, one run, six yards.

But the impact on Johnson's career was tremendous. Just being able to finally quarterback the Syracuse offense after waiting three years for his chance, and to even be able to lead a touchdown drive — which he did when redshirt freshman Marcus Lee scored from 14 yards out — made everything worthwhile.

"It was a chance to fulfill a dream that I've always had — being a quarterback," Johnson said. "To lead a scoring drive on a Division I level was fun."

The Syracuse experience hasn't always been fun for Johnson. He came north out of Midland Lee with outstanding credentials. He was an all-district quarterback and led his team to the District 4-5A championship.

Despite his success, however, Johnson was not recruited as only a quarterback. Syracuse coaches discussed with him the possibilities of playing wide receiver or defensive back as well. But that didn't matter. Johnson wanted to play quarterback and the Syracuse staff was willing to give him a chance.

Greenwood gearing up playoff run

■ Sonora is a major hurdle the Rangers must clear if they are to return to the Class 3A state playoffs.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

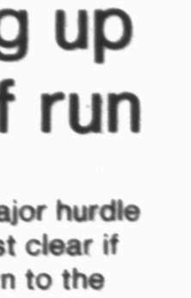
Short (5-7), stocky (165 pounds) and with a low center of gravity, Cumba has finally fought off the effects of a hyperextended left knee to become an integral part of the Greenwood Rangers' attack.

Cumba, who had played only sporadically on offense for several weeks, rushed for 101 yards on 17 carries to help the Rangers to a 34-6 wipeout of a weak Kermit team this past Friday. Alternate fullback Joe Kilgore added 91 yards on 11 trips, mostly in the second half.

The Ranger win, tainted as it may be by Kermit's ineptitude, keeps Coach Bob Purser's team in the hunt for a playoff berth going into this Friday's game with District 6-3A Sonora, which is tied for second with Greenwood at 2-1 on district play.



Cumba

If the Rangers get past Sonora and Colorado City, they would play District 5-3A champion Alpine in the bi-district playoffs — and they shot down the Fighting Bucks during the regular season.

Cumba got off to a good start Friday with a 19-yard gain on his first carry — the third play from scrimmage. The senior said that early success got him fired up.

"We had confidence (after the first play)," Cumba said. "We knew we would have a great game."

Greenwood scored on four of its first five possessions and rolled up 263 yards in the first half. The Rangers mixed option runs by Cody Mebane with fullback traps by Cumba in the first half.

Mebane

Mebane led all rushers with 138 yards on 14 carries, but the success of the outside game was predicated by Cumba's ability to scoot behind several blocks that are key to the success of "40" and "41 trap."

On 40 trap, right guard Bradford trap-blocks a defensive player. On 41, left guard Goff has the honors. Whichever way the play is run, Taggart, or Nolan Cox, has to block the tackle on the opposite side.

Cumba has rushed for 489 yards on 89 carries this season, after playing more defense as a junior. Kilgore, a move-in from Carlsbad, N.M., has added 371 yards on 69 trips.

Cumba, who also starts at weakside linebacker, perhaps epitomizes the 1990 Rangers — a group of determined athletes who find a way to win without an abundance of physical talent.

"Shan is extremely committed to football," Purser said. "He's a great leader

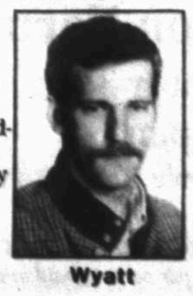
Pay-per-view in infancy, but its here

Question: What did the Douglas-Holyfield fight and Sunday evening's game between the Bengals and the Falcons have in common?

Answer: Pay-per-view.



Wyatt

Granted at nearly $40 a viewing, Thursday's bout for the heavyweight title was somewhat more expensive than Sunday's NFL broadcast. But cable TV is hardly free, and the purchase of same is the only way I knew to bring the game into my home.

The National Hockey League has long been exclusive to cable viewing, and Major League Baseball games and those of the National Basketball Association are more available on cable than they are on the "free" stations.

Pay-per-view, in one form or another, is here to stay. And like a toddler that can suddenly grasp things that once seemed unreachable, it's only just passed the stage of infancy.

If you shelled out nearly half-a-hundred to see Holyfield fell the Columbus Colossus, how much would you be willing to pay for the World Series or the Super Bowl?

Don't think for one minute that executives of all the major sports are not nibbling on caviar and asking themselves that very question.

Would two million households be willing to pay $20 for the Super Bowl? How about four million homes at $40 a pop?

It's a prospect that an enterprise like the NFL can't afford to ignore. Someone has to pay Joe Montana's salary, and that means us.

One of the many things I don't understand is why the blazer-and-tie look is fine for announcers of most nationally televised sporting events, but not for boxing, where half-naked men climb into a ring with the main purpose of inflicting pain on their opponents as tuxedo-clad experts call the action.

I can understand such glitter accompanying a steel-cage match for the World Wrestling Federation title. However, I do not see the need for the pretense of semiformal evening clothes at any legitimate sporting event, especially those where someone is awarded points for drawing blood from another's face.

Jerry Tarkanian's offer to forfeit $100,000 and not coach in postseason play in return for his UNLV Rebels' inclusion in the NCAA tournament is all very generous, but it is absurd.

The guy used the Nevada court system to stave off NCAA penalties for years, and by offering inducements to get his team reinstated in postseason play, the Tark is admitting that the penalties had foundation in the first place.

It's a shame that the student athletes at UNLV must suffer the consequences of events over which they had no control. But there were plenty of schools from which to choose when they signed letters of intent to play at UNLV, and few of those schools were locked in court battles with the ever-winning NCAA.

I hasten to add my hope that none of the student athletes in question are planning careers in the legal profession.

Louisville 'knighted' into AP's Top 25 rankings

■ Coach Howard Schnellenberger has his Cardinals ranked for the first time in 18 years.

Associated Press

"Hallelujah! That's like being knighted by the Queen of England," Schnellenberger said Monday after the Cardinals gained a ranking in The Associated Press college football poll for the first time in 18 years.

Louisville (7-1-1) moved up to 25th after beating Western Kentucky 41-7 Saturday. It is the Cardinals' first ranking since the final poll of the 1972 season, when they finished 18th with a 9-1 record.

Louisville went 2-9, 3-8 and 3-7-1 in Schnellenberger's first three seasons before turning it around. Since the start of the 1988 season, the Cardinals are 21-9-1.

"Five years ago, we were the worst football team in America," said Schnellenberger, who led Miami to the 1983 national championship. "It was a slow, uphill struggle to arrive at this position in time. . . . It is gratifying."

The Cardinals were snubbed by the bowls after going 8-3 in 1988, but that might change this year. They haven't made a postseason appearance since the 1977 Independence Bowl, a 24-14 loss to Louisiana Tech.

There is a cloud on the horizon, though. A communications professor is trying to get quarterback Browning Nagle removed from two classes, a move that would make him ineligible.

The professor claims that Nagle has shown a poor attitude in class. But Schnellenberger said he expects a university committee to rule in Nagle's favor this week.

Virginia, which did not play Saturday, remained No. 1 for the third straight week while unbeaten but unimpressive Auburn fell from second to fourth in the poll.

The Cavaliers (7-0), who meet Georgia Tech in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown Saturday, received 44 first-place votes and 1,462 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Notre Dame (6-1) climbed one to second after beating Pittsburgh 31-22, and Nebraska (8-0) rose a notch to third after downing Iowa State 45-13. The Irish received six first-place votes and 1,380 points, while Nebraska got five first-place votes and 1,350 points.

Auburn (6-0-1) lost support after edging Mississippi State 17-16 on a blocked extra point with 2¼ minutes left. The Tigers got two first-place votes and 1,284 points — a drop of two first-place votes and 86 points from the previous week. Although Auburn is one of six unbeaten teams, three of its last four victories have come by three points or less.

The next four positions remained the same, with Illinois (6-1) staying No. 5, followed by Houston (7-0), Washington (7-1) and Miami (5-2). Illinois beat Wisconsin 21-3, Houston overwhelmed Arkansas 62-28, Washington routed California 46-7 and Miami defeated Texas Tech 45-10.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Colorado (7-1-1) and Brigham Young (6-1). Colorado moved up one place to ninth after beating Oklahoma 32-23 and BYU dropped one spot to 10th after defeating New Mexico 55-31.

Tennessee, which did not play, is 11th, followed by Florida State, Iowa, Texas, Florida, Georgia Tech, Mississippi, Clemson, Wyoming, Michigan, Southern Cal, Oregon, Arizona, Penn State and Louisville.

Oklahoma, 22nd in last week's poll, and Texas Christian, 24th last week, fell out of the Top 25 and were replaced by Penn State and Louisville. Penn State, which has won five straight since starting 0-2, moved up to 24th after blanking Alabama 9-0.

McWilliams nervous, but not scared

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach David McWilliams of No. 14-ranked Texas said Monday he's nervous, but not scared, about playing this weekend at Texas Tech, the team that started the Longhorns' downfall last year.

Texas, which has not beaten Tech since 1987, was 4-2 last season when the Red Raiders scored on a 65-yard touchdown pass on third-and-26 to upset the Longhorns, 24-17, at Austin.

The Longhorns finished 5-6 for its second consecutive losing season, the first time that had happened in half a century.

This year, Texas is 3-0 in the Southwest Conference, 5-1 overall. Tech is 1-4 in the conference, 2-6 for the season.

"As far being nervous, sure every week you're nervous, you're always nervous about playing the game. But I'm not scared of getting ready to play this game or any other we've got this year," McWilliams told his weekly news conference.

Tech has lost its last two games, to Rice and Miami. McWilliams said "the big thing" going against Tech has been injuries to starters such as quarterback Jamie Gill, receivers Lloyd Hill and Rodney Blackshear; defensive back Sammy Walker; and nose guard Greg Burden, all of whom should be healthier Saturday.

Texas lost defensive backs Grady Cavness and Willie Mack Garza in walloping Southern Methodist, 52-3, Saturday, and their status is uncertain this weekend. Cavness had a severe foot bruise, and Garza a sprained ankle.

Also, offensive tackle Chuck Johnson sprained a knee; and linebacker Winfred Tubbs hurt his knee, which is swollen.

Kickoff is at 12:06 p.m., with the game to be regionally televised by Raycom Sports. A sellout crowd of more than 47,000 is expected.

Steelers thump Rams

■ Pittsburgh special teams make up for San Francisco debacle by sparking a 41-10 win over the Los Angeles Rams.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers' special teams overcame their own bungling and became something special Monday night.

Embarrassed a week ago at San Francisco when they allowed the 49ers to recover a kickoff at their own 5, and victimized Monday night by Gaston Green's 100-yard return of the opening kickoff, the Pittsburgh special teams made a 180-degree turn in helping the Steelers over the Los Angeles Rams 41-10.

The offense and defense certainly helped. Bubby Brister had four touchdown passes, two following interceptions, Merril Hoge had three touchdowns and Pittsburgh's league-leading pass defense limited Jim Everett to 15 completions in 34 attempts for 176 yards. But it was the special teams that set the tone.

Rod Woodson returned kickoffs 44 and 49 yards to set up two field goals by Gary Anderson. And Larry Griffin and Dwight Stone combined to stuff Rams punter Keith English, setting up a one-yard TD run by Hoge that opened up a 27-10 lead in the third quarter.

The victory improved Pittsburgh's record to 4-4. The Rams are 2-5 and in serious jeopardy of missing the playoff spot that had been virtually conceded to them before the season.

The Steelers' special teams were anything but special early, looking as bad on Green's 100-yard romp up the sideline as they did a week ago, when Barry Foster let a San Francisco kickoff drop untouched, contributing to a 49ers' touchdown.

Foster contributed Monday night with a 38-yard run that set up Pittsburgh's final score, a two-yard pass to Hoge from Brister, who completed 15 of 24 for 161 yards.

The Steelers bounced back from Green's kickoff return to tie the score on a 75-yard, eight-play drive, capped by a six-yard Brister-to-Hoge TD pass. Brister was 6-for-6 for 61 yards on the drive.

Late in the first period, David Johnson intercepted a pass by Everett and returned it 34 yards to the Rams' 17. On the next play, Brister hit Eric Green all alone in the end zone for the 275-pound rookie's sixth touchdown this season, a team record for a tight end.

Mike Lansford's 32-yard field goal 45 seconds into the second period cut it to 14-10.

But Woodson returned the kickoff 49 yards to the Rams' 39, setting up a 42-yarder by Anderson that made it 17-10 at halftime.

Woodson did it again on the second-half kickoff, which he brought back 45 yards to the Los Angeles 45. That set up another field goal, this one from 30 yards.

Then came the key play in Pittsburgh's biggest win since the opening game of 1985 season, a 45-3 victory over the Indianapolis Colts.

On fourth down from his own 22, English punted to the Pittsburgh 33. But the play was called back because Robert Del Pino was illegally downfield. When the Rams tried another punt, Griffin charged up the middle and prevented English from getting off the kick.

JOHNSON: Education key item for Lee grad

(From 1C)

Only that chance never came. Johnson's time in the Rutgers game was his first collegiate action. He has spent his career as a member of Syracuse's scout team, buried under a parade of quarterbacks — Don McPherson, Todd Philcox, Bill Scharr, Mark McDonald, and now, Marvin Graves.

So, prior to this season, in an attempt to gain more playing time, Johnson switched to defensive back.

"I came back in the fall and they asked me I wanted to switch," Johnson said. "I said, 'of course.' I felt like it would give me a better chance of getting on special teams as a defensive player, because you don't usually see quarterbacks on special teams."

But before he even got a chance to play one down as a defensive back, Graves, SU's newest quarterback star, was sidelined with an injury.

McDonald, a junior from Klein, was summoned to replace Graves and freshman Doug Womack, who led Aldine to the Class 5A state finals last year, was named the new backup. But that was it on the depth chart for the Orangemen. The coaches needed someone for the third string.

Re-enter Rodney Johnson.

"When Marvin went down, I was coming into the locker room from a class and everybody was saying, 'You're supposed to be in a quarterback meeting," Johnson said. "I didn't know what was going on, so I went in the meeting and they asked me if I would switch back to quarterback.

"I said, 'Yeah, anything to help the team.' I've always thought of myself as a team player."

So Johnson was back to square one — being a quarterback with little chance of seeing playing time. This time, however, was different. This time, Johnson finally got on the field.

"It worked out, and I got a chance to play, which is a dream of, I guess, every high school athlete coming into college," Johnson said proudly. "I got a chance to play and lead a scoring drive."

His drive was simple — 52 yards, eight running plays in 3:16 — but considering his goal was to not make a mistake, the drive was effective.

It was also the culmination of a long wait for Johnson. But as long as that wait was, while sitting on the bench for three-and-a-half years, he said he never regretted his decision to go to Syracuse.

"I never regretted it at all," Johnson said. "It's been a great experience. I did a lot of things that otherwise I wouldn't have been able to do. It's something I wouldn't change at all."

There were plenty of difficult times for Johnson. There were constant questions from friends at home wondering when he was going to play. But his family stayed supportive. He said they never questioned his playing time. To them, it wasn't important.

"At home, most of the people outside of the family are mostly concerned with playing," Johnson said. "With my family, they were more concerned with getting a degree and if an opportunity to play came, then that's the bonus. With their help, I couldn't lose."

Johnson said the SU coaching staff has been "very supportive" of him during his four years as an Orangeman. But coach Dick MacPherson said he hasn't dealt with Johnson all that much about playing time. He leaves that up to the players who play in Johnson's place.

"I think what happens is, the guys that play ahead of him have to make sure that he understands they're better than he is," MacPherson said. "We blame it on them."

With all the responsibility placed on his teammates, MacPherson said he never once had to confront Johnson and comfort him, telling him to be patient, someday he'd get his chance.

"I've had to confront Rodney and tell him he wouldn't get his chance," MacPherson said. "That was harder."

Sherrard faces knife again

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Mike Sherrard, the San Francisco's 49ers' tough-luck receiver, will undergo surgery Tuesday morning to insert a steel plate in his broken right leg.

Sherrard, who broke bones in his right leg in 1987 and 1988, will be lost to the team for the rest of the regular season but could return in time for the playoffs.

Sherrard, a second-year free agent from UCLA, broke his right fibula when he was tackled following a 35-yard catch that set up the winning field goal in a 20-17 victory over the Cleveland Browns on Sunday at Candlestick Park.

"I talked to Dr. Michael Dillingham, and he told me that he would operate Tuesday morning and put a steel plate on that particular bone," 49ers coach George Seifert said. "If things work out all right, and we're in the playoffs, there's a possibility he would be able to play at that time."

This season Sherrard started against Atlanta on Sept. 23 and on Sunday against Cleveland.

Sul Ross honors Midlanders

Staff Report

ALPINE — Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller and Midland resident Erich Hardaway were among four recent inductees into the Sul Ross State University Athletic Hall of Honor.

Miller, a 1966 SRSU graduate, was a four-year letterman in football from 1962 to 1965. He was an all-Lone Star Conference linebacker in 1964 and 1965, and was a member of the Dallas Morning News all-Texas team both years.

He was named to the LSC all-decade team for the 1960s, and was inducted into the Top-of-Texas Football Hall of Fame in 1988.

Miller has won 75 percent of his games in three stops as a high school head coach.

Hardaway, a 1971 Sul Ross grad, was a three-time All-American in track and is still the career points leader for that sport. Also, he holds Sul Ross records in both the shot put (58-8) and the discus (186-7).

He won NAIA national shot put titles in the 1969 indoor meet and 1971 outdoor meet. He was third in the discus at the 1971 outdoor meet.

Also, Hardaway was selected for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and was named Man of the Year in 1971.

Prices climb

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices moved above $34 per barrel in light trading on the futures market Monday, amid concerns that a Soviet peace effort in the Persian Gulf had failed.

"It was perhaps one of the last-ditch efforts to get a peaceful resolution," said Christian Gohler, a vice president with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. "As a result, the market moved higher."

West Texas Intermediate rose $1.67 to $34.68 per barrel for December delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Contracts for later months also settled higher.

Insurance class

Staff Report

The business course begins at 9 a.m. Wednesday in the Allison Fine Arts building of Midland College. The advanced sales course will begin Friday at 9 a.m. and the personal course also begins Friday, at 1:30 p.m.

Participation in the seminar qualifies the Melsons to teach the Life insurance courses. More information can be obtained by calling 683-1485.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar settled mostly higher on world currency markets Monday, but traders complained that dealings were dull.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.9525 from $1.9555 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's rates, included: 1.5220 German marks, up from 1.5130; 1.2920 Swiss francs, up from 1.2810; 5.0930 French francs, up from 5.0870; 1,140.50 Italian lire, up from 1,134.00; and 1.1635 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1644.

Gold fell in London to a late bid of $372.75 a troy ounce from $373.75 late Friday. In Zurich, gold fell to $372.50 an ounce from $373.40.

On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.127 a troy ounce, up from $4.050 on Friday.

Another Valez lurking?

BATON ROUGE, La. — A catastrophe on the magnitude of the Alaskan oil spill "is right around the corner waiting to happen," a Coast Guard admiral said Monday.

The tendency of human nature is to believe that nothing like the Exxon Valdez spill can happen again because of vigilance of private business and the government, said Rear Adm. James Loy "because we'll be looking for it."

"We can't afford to have that line of thought," the 8th Coast Guard District commander added. "The volume of transportation, the density is such that the reality is that the possibility of such a spill is possible even as we speak here."

The spill of 11.6 million gallons of crude oil into the pristine environment of Alaska spurred passage of a federal oil spill pollution act.

The Coast Guard has been given an additional $54 million to draw contingency plans and beef up personnel to create special teams to deal with spills, Loy told a state task force.

7-Eleven stays open

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp., through a federal judge's order, can pay bills owed its suppliers and keep its 7-Eleven convenience store chain operating while it goes through bankruptcy reorganization.

The special order allows the Dallas-based Southland to pay $220 million to vendors for beer, chips, soft drinks and other supplies. Judge Harold Abramson approved the order Friday.

Southland incurred the debts before it filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act last Wednesday.

The judge approved a "deposit of payment" with the court in an amount equal to the outstanding debts, said Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Stubbs Norwood on Sunday.

Vendors in return agreed to continue offering Southland normal credit terms while the company struggles to emerge from reorganization.

Ms. Norwood said vendors can be forced to return payments to Southland if they refuse to offer customary credit terms in the future.

PBPA plans environment seminar

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A day long seminar on environmental issues of the Permian Basin has been scheduled for November 8 in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Sponsored by PBPA and the University of Texas System, the seminar will include a morning panel on civil and criminal liability for operators. Attorney Paul Bohanan, will address the civil side of the issue and Attorney Estella Wacherbarth, will provide input on criminal penalties.

A second morning panel will discuss ground water issues. Members of the panel include: Bill Sims, State Senator, Dist. 25; Tom Craddick, State Representative, District 76; Bill Lockey, Texas Water Commission; Mark Henkhaus, Texas Railroad Commission, District 8, and Mark Hoelscher, Martin County Underground Water Conservation District.

Ground water contamination by oilfield operations has emerged as a prime environmental issue in West Texas in recent months, according to Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Waste management issues and site restoration will be the topics for afternoon discussions. Michael Edmiston, Texas Department of Health will discuss landfill disposal, while Tom Baker, with Arco Oil & Gas will discuss waste management plans.

Tom Zapatka, Marathon Oil Co., will offer advice on site reclamation and Darrell Ueckert, with Texas A&M Research & Extension Center will discuss revegetation.

The seminar will be at Holiday Inn Convention Center, with the first session beginning at 8 a.m.

Fees for the seminar are $10 per person, prior to November 2 and $15 per person thereafter.

The annual meeting of PBPA gets underway Thursday, November 8 at the Holiday Inn Convention Center with Henson Moore, Deputy Secretary of Energy, and Martin Allday, Chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and Robert Parket, president of Parker Drilling Co. as principal speakers.

Topics to be covered at the annual meeting include Exploration of Venture Capital to be led by the NCNB Energy Banking Group and Trends and Projections for Natural Gas which will be led by George M. Yates, president Harvey E. Yates Co. of Roswell. A session on asset protection and mangement for the energy professional will also be conducted.

Amoco plans waterflood project

■ A pilot project to increase the ultimate recovery of a major West Texas oil field will be initiated by Amoco Production Co. later this month.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Amoco Production Co. has announced a second infill drilling project for the Permian Basin.

Amoco said Monday that it will drill 19 wells in its Cedar Lake Unit in Gaines County as part of a waterflood pilot project to determine new spacing in the field. Last month Amoco announced that it would drill a 37-well infill project in the Levelland Unit in Hockley County.

Amoco intends to drill seven oil wells and 12 water injection wells to determine the potential for converting the field from a 40-acre, five-spot waterflood pattern to a 20-acre line drive.

The latest pilot project is a followup to two infill drilling programs competed in 1987 and 1988, which involved the drilling of 118 new wells in the unit.

Discovered in 1939, the Cedar Lake field produced up to 7,300 barrels of oil per day until the early 1970s, before declining to 2,500. In 1988 the 118 new wells along with the conversion of 102 wells to injectors, brought the daily production back up to 6,200 barrels daily.

Amoco engineers say the current pilot project, which is located in the north central and southeastern portions of the 6,798-acre Cedar Lake Unit, will help them determine the optimum spacing pattern for the field. The unit currently has 135 producing wells and 167 water injection wells.

Drilling is expected to begin on the $5.9 million pilot project later this month and will be finaled by year end, according to Amoco. The average depth of the San Andres wells will be 4,900 feet.

TI to market lightweight laptop

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. is joining its competitors by marketing a lightweight laptop computer featuring an increasingly popular microprocessor.

The new notebook-size computer, called Travelmate 3000, costs less than one with a similar chip announced two weeks ago by Compaq Computer Corp.

The Texas Instruments machine has less memory than Compaq's LTE386s-20, but it's lighter at 5.7 pounds and has a bigger screen. In addition, the TI machine includes the DOS operating system, which costs extra on the Compaq model.

DOS is the operating system used on International Business Machines Corp. computers and compatible models. An operating system is the base layer of software that controls a computer's internal functions.

Dallas-based Texas Instruments will make the computer at its plant in Temple, about 130 miles south of Dallas. The company also announced production of new laser printers at the plant.

The brain of the new laptop, which will be available in November, is a less costly version of Intel's 386 microprocessor called the 386SX.

The computer measures 8.5 by 11 by 1.8 inches and has a 10-inch diagonal display and one floppy diskette drive. A unit with a 20-megabyte hard disk drive has a list price of $5,499, while one with a 40-megabyte hard disk drive lists for $5,999.

The comparable models made by Houston-based Compaq cost up to $6,999, and weigh 7.5 pounds. Epson America Inc. and the Grid division of Tandy Corp. also offer laptops based on the 386SX chip.

The Travelmate 3000 is the fourth laptop Texas Instruments has introduced since last November. The other three use an earlier Intel processor that doesn't compute as quickly.

The company in July introduced the Travelmate 2000, which weighs 4.4 pounds and has less memory.

The new laser printer, called microLaser XL, prints up to 16 pages per minute. Three models, priced from $3,449 to $4,499, are available.

The printer is built for IBM-compatible computers, but a $145 device will allow it to be used with Apple Computer Inc. machines.

JANE BRYANT QUINN

House, for most, still first-rate investment

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–Your house, you thought, was a piggy bank. Anytime you needed serious money–for a bigger house, college tuition, or for retirement–you just shook the bank and money fell out.

Quinn

Now we know that the 1970s were uncommon years, as were the high prices they carried into the early 1980s. Housing prices don't always make steady gains. We're getting back, to the mentality of the 1950s and 1960s: Maybe you'll make money on your housing investment and maybe you won't.

The majority of us will. Depending on the particular property, where you live and how long you live there, a house should still be a first-rate buy. But the critical word is "depending." If you're buying for investment values as well as for love, don't write a check without pondering the health of your local economy and whether the local population is growing–both of which signify higher housing prices.

Even in growing areas, sometimes it's smarter to invest your savings elsewhere and rent a house or apartment instead. Rent if:

- You have a comfortable rent-controlled apartment that's cheap. Your savings might buy you a second home.
- You're young and single, and don't know where life will take you next.
- You expect to move within two or three years, which is usually too short a time to make money. For example, take a $100,000 house with around $4,300 in net closing costs. If the price goes to $108,000 over two years (a 4 percent average annual gain) and you pay the real-estate agent 7 percent, you'll just about break even. Your investment would have earned more in the bank.

But if you expect to own the house for many years, the calculation changes. You can make good profits even in a mediocre market, thanks to the leverage you're allowed.

Leverage is the great advantage that home-owners hold over owners of bank accounts or stocks. Leverage means that you control a property by putting only 5 percent to 20 percent down.

Take a $150,000 house that rose 3 percent in value last year, for a $4,500 gain. If you bought that house for $30,000 down, the return on your money was a fat 15 percent. You actually made even more, adjusted for your tax deductions on mortgage interest and real-estate taxes.

The buying decision gets trickier as soon as you start to speculate–by which I mean trying to guess the right time to buy.

Take a young couple renting in New Orleans, where the median house price could drop 3.7 percent this year, according to John Savacool of the WEFA Group, a forecasting firm in Bala-Cynwyd, Pa. The couple might decide to wait for even lower prices, but that's a gamble they may lose. Of the 17 major housing markets where values are down, eight will bounce back in 1991, Savacool predicts, including New Orleans. (The other seven: Anaheim, Dallas-Ft. Worth, Los Angeles, Memphis, Orlando, Salt Lake City and San Antonio.)

On the other hand, it might pay Boston buyers to wait. Housing prices there are projected to slide 4 percent more in 1991.

But how can anyone know for sure? The National Association of Realtors reported a surge of buying in July in the Northeast, as consumers moved in on the bargains they found. If you're eager to own, and will hold the home for at least several years, the "right" time to buy is any time you can afford it.

If you fear that you're coming late to the party, you're misreading, badly, the decade just past. Aside from localized housing bubbles, there wasn't a party. Nationally, the inflation-adjusted price of homes was flat to slightly down. In 1989 dollars, you could buy the median-priced starter (or lower-valued) house for 4 percent less than it cost in 1979.

That's good news indeed. For years, rates of home-ownership among younger people have been dropping precipitously. Last year, however, home-ownership rates started moving up, for people under 25. The next generation is going to find it easier to own a home of their own.

Simon & Schuster survive bloodbath

N.Y. Times News Service

One publishing house has largely avoided the public bloodlettings that have wracked book publishing in recent years. Indeed, Simon & Schuster has been a model of relative publishing stability.

That low-profile approach seems to have paid off: with sales of $1.3 billion last year, six times those of 1983, Simon & Schuster is the largest book publisher in the United States.

With half its sales from textbooks and educational materials, Simon & Schuster is also the nation's leading educational publisher. And the company, a subsidiary of Paramount Communications Inc., is aggressively expanding its professional publishing, its investments in technology and its foreign publishing and distribution.

Yet because of Simon & Schuster's success, some industry executives wonder about the house's long-term commitment to publishing trade, or general interest, books, which has largely been ceded to Random House.

Simon & Schuster did not always have so low a profile. In the early 1980s, it seemed to revel in its reputation as a bare-knuckled competitor that also operated a corporate revolving door. But Simon & Schuster seems mostly to have avoided the type of management upheavals that occurred in the last year or so at Random House, Pantheon, Doubleday, New American Library/E.P. Dutton and Penguin USA. So what changed?

Some rival publishers say Richard E. Snyder, the combative chairman and chief executive of Simon & Schuster, has mellowed with age. (He is 53.) And a few people have even suggested that because Snyder is no longer locked in combat with Random House to be the leading publisher of trade books, his competitive fires have been banked.

But Howard Kaminsky, the chief executive of the Hearst Trade Book Group, rejects that notion.

"He and S&S are still formidable opponents," said Kaminsky, a former executive at Random House. "But the reason S&S doesn't seem as formidable to some people is that when the battle was between S&S and Random House, it was really everybody at Random House against Snyder. He was ably backed up, but he was the general who went into combat ahead of his troops."

Synder, however, has changed his role and says he now believes he has found the right combination of editors, managers and publishers to guide Simon & Schuster into the next century.

"After we acquired Prentice Hall in 1984, it was time for me to give up running the trade division on a day-to-day basis and devote 100 percent of my time to the assets of our company," Snyder said. "My job is to be the chief planner and evaluator of Simon & Schuster, as well as its cheerleader."

But that $710 million purchase of Prentice Hall, a leading publisher of educational and business information books, did more than give Snyder a new role. Together with the $180 million purchase earlier that year of Esquire Inc., another educational publisher, it set Simon & Schuster on an entirely new path.

At about that time, Simon & Schuster's parent company made a strategic decision to concentrate on entertainment, publishing and information. As a result of the new emphasis on educational publishing, Simon & Schuster's trade publishing, at one time its main business, currently accounts for only 6 percent to 7 percent of company revenues, while trade, paperback and reference combined account for about 23 percent.

The shrinking portion of trade publishing has led some industry executives to ask privately whether Simon & Schuster may eventually abandon trade publishing altogether.

That possibility is vehemently denied by Snyder and by Martin Davis, the chairman and chief executive of Paramount Communications.

Moreover, agents say Simon & Schuster, with 11 books on the current best-seller lists, remains a leading force in trade publishing.

Still, Ivan Obolensky, the senior vice president of research at Josephthal & Co., said that as Simon & Schuster becomes ever more successful in educational and informational publishing, it could weaken its trade operation.

"If the agents decided the house wasn't fully committed to trade publishing," he said, "they might decide to send their books somewhere else."

The decision to diversify first arose in February 1983, after the death of Charles G. Bluhdorn.

T-bills fall to lowest level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to their lowest level in more than two years.

The Treasury Department sold $9.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.12 percent, down from 7.20 percent last week. Another $9.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.13 percent, down from 7.16 percent.

The rates were the lowest since three-month bills sold for 7.05 percent on Aug. 15, 1988, and six-month bills averaged 7.09 percent on July 25, 1988.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.35 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,820.00, and 7.50 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,639.50.

Machine tool orders down

N.Y. Times News Service

Orders for American-made machine tools dipped 4.6 percent in September, from August's rate, according to an industry report to be released Monday. The decline is the second in as many months.

The report, which is being released by the Association for Manufacturing Technology, a trade association for the machine tool industry, said that machine tool orders fell to $264.2 million in September, from $276.8 million in August. The September figures represented a 12.7 percent decline from September 1989.

Despite the decline, executives of machine tool companies said there were some bright spots.

"There have been some healthy gains in new orders from the auto companies domestically and from foreign customers," said Richard O. Priebe, a spokesman for Cross & Trecker Corp., a leading machine tool maker, based in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. "In September, we had a strong month because of a couple of automotive orders: an assembly system and an engine block line."

Automobile makers typically account for more than a third of the nation's machine tool orders. Sluggishness in that industry has caused machine tool orders to slow in several months this year.

Machine tools are power-driven devices that cut or shape metal parts used in products ranging from appliances and vehicles to aircraft and construction materials.

Machine tool orders from domestic customers fell 9.1 percent in September, the report stated. Analysts said that figure pointed to the unwilingness of U.S. companies to invest more robustly in new equipment and modernization at a time when corporate profits have been weakened.

"The figures make it clear that industry still needs a tremendous amount of modernization," said James J. Paper, an analyst with Kirkpatrick, Pettis, Smith Inc., in Omaha. "There is a global reindustrialization that needs to take place."

Orders from foreign customers increased by 66.4 percent in September. Paper said the increase was more likely a result of a one-time placement of large orders by a foreign customer than a harbinger of increased sales from overseas machine tool buyers.

Orders from foreign customers, he and other analysts pointed out, declined 2.7 percent in August from July's level.

Albert W. Moore, president of the industry association, said the increase in orders from foreign customers served as "a good indication that America's machine tool builders are globally competitive."

"The need for process technology is growing, and so is the competition to fill that need," he said.

The strength of tool orders generally reflects the strength of industrial production, and economists consider patterns of machine tool sales to be important indicators of capital spending by manufacturers.

Shipments of machine tools increased 29 percent in September, compared with August's rate. While shipments to foreign customers were up 6.1 percent, shipments to domestic customers increased 33.1 percent in September, from the previous month's level.

Orders for metal-cutting tools, which include boring mills and lathes, dropped 8.6 percent.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 20 points in the early going, closed with a 5.94 loss at 2,430.20.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 481 up, 1,030 down and 453 unchanged.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 1.47 to 165.24.

Over the weekend the House and Senate approved a measure designed to curtail the government's budget deficit, which reached a near-record $220.4 billion in the fiscal year ended last month.

President Bush has said he would sign the bill, ending a prolonged period of wrangling.

With that uncertainty out of the way, talk has increased that the Federal Reserve might soon take steps toward at least a slight easing of its monetary policy.

But analysts noted that serious problems remain in the government's fiscal outlook. In addition, investors were confronted this morning with new increases in world oil prices.

Crude oil for December delivery climbed about $1.50 a barrel, to the neighborhood of $34.50 a barrel, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among actively traded blue chips, Boeing dropped ⅝ to 45½; International Business Machines ⅝ to 106; American Express ⅜ to 18¼, and Pepsico ⅜ to 23⅜.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.06 to 165.65. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.14 at 289.25.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Secondary CD' safe investment IF...

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have been contacted by a financial services firm about investing in a certificate of deposit. That firm promises to get the best interest rate possible.

Doyle

The CD the firm sells is called a "secondary CD" with federal deposit insurance. Is such an investment as safe as dealing directly with a bank or S&L?

A. It can be, if you don't pay more than face value for the CD. But that's a mighty big "IF:" in the situation you are considering.

Even though you have the terminology a bit mixed up, it's clear that financial service firm deals in the "secondary market." That's the term used to describe trading in financial instruments after they are issued and sold.

When you buy a new CD directly from a bank or S&L, you do so in the primary market. If you later sell that CD to some other investor, as can be done with some CDs, you do so in the secondary market. The price a previously issued CD fetches in the secondary market can vary, depending on its interest rate.

If the CD pays higher interest than the rates paid on CDs currently being issued, it might be available in the secondary market at a "premium" — a price above its face value. Assuming the bank or S&L that issued it has federal deposit insurance coverage, the CD's face value is rock-solid safe. If you buy that CD and the bank or S&L fails, you will receive the CD's face value.

But that is all you will receive. The premium you paid over the CD's face value is not covered by federal insurance. If the issuing bank or S&L fails, you will be out that money. Many of the high-interest CDs traded in the secondary market were issued by financially shaky S&Ls and banks, some of which have already gone belly up.

The lesson, here, is to pay no more than face value for any CD you purchase in the secondary market.

Q. When I went to my bank to renew my $10,000 CD, the supervisor advised me to change to a money market deposit certificate. I did. Is there any advantage in the money market deposit certificate over a CD? Is a money market deposit certificate insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.?

A. Whether or not the certificate you obtained is better than a CD depends on the provisions of your new certificate. You'll have to compare the interest rate on that certificate with the rate available on CDs of equal maturity. Your letter does not provide that information or any other details.

I suspect your money market deposit certificate is a CD with a fancy name. Banks and S&Ls can call CDs anything they please. Since it is called a "certificate," it does not seem to be a money market deposit account.

Just make sure your $10,000 is a deposit, so that it does have FDIC coverage. If that certificate turns out to be a note, debenture, repurchase agreement or some similar debt security, you could lose all that money in the case of bank failure.

Prepare your car for fall and winter driving with an oil change and car wash from Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, 2300 N. Big Spring.

Your car is one of your most valued possessions and you need to properly maintain it inside and out during the change of seasons.

You won't have to lift a finger when you drive in to Chaparral Wash and Lube Center. Just sit back and let the friendly, dedicated technicians pamper your car for a fresh, clean look for fall.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center offers the terrific combination of a quality quick oil and lube change and maintenance check with a free car wash.

Chaparral Wash and Lube has been well known for years for the best car wash Midland has to offer. Service and meticulous attention to detail are Chaparral trademarks.

Chaparral owner, Texas Tech graduate and Midland businessman Leon Jeffcoat invites you in to measure the difference that this centrally-located wash and lube center has to offer.

Jeffcoat recommends an oil change for your car every three months or 3,000 miles. If you can't remember the last time you had an oil change, then it's surely time to have one. A free car wash is offered with each oil change in the Chaparral lube center.

Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. Pennzoil, Quaker State, Havoline and other major brands of oil are available. For those who prefer using Mobil One, the price is $36.50.

You can count on more than just an oil change and lube in the Chaparral lube center. Technician C.C. Banks enjoys a reputation for being friendly, knowledgeable and able to trouble spot car problems. "C.C., in addition to being personable, has many years of experience in car maintenance," explained Jeffcoat.

Depend on the Chaparral technicians to examine your battery, tires, belts and hoses. Your vehicle is also checked for important proper fluid levels, including brake, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if your car needs it. For an additional charge, Chaparral can install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills. The friendly professionals at Chaparral Wash and Lube can help give your car the look and feel you want for one of your most valuable possessions.

Come by soon and pamper your car with some of the extra Chaparral services you can combine with your car wash. Check out the advantages of a professionally administered detail job from Chaparral. "We offer our service for a low price, in comparison to other businesses," commented Chaparral manager Steve Thompson.

A detail job includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, glazing, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices for this service range from $49 to $79, and a staff member can drive you back to work or home and pick you up when the job is complete.

A full service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Standard vans and Suburbans are just $2.00 extra. Each car is treated to a thorough wash down before it is cleaned gently by the brushes. Vacuuming, hand drying and window cleaning are included in the low price.

Save time while getting your car washed and have your car filled with Texaco gasoline and get a discount towards the wash. Fill up with more than 18 gallons and your wash is free.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center customers are return customers because the service is consistently professional and friendly. Stop by 2300 N. Big Spring for an oil change and a free car wash soon. From left are Chaparral owner Leon Jeffcoat, lube center technician C.C. Banks and Chaparral customer Dwayne Garnett.

Generally open on rainy days, Chaparral's lube center and gasoline pumps are at your service. With the purchase of gasoline or an oil change, if the clouds are threatening, you'll receive a rain check for your next car wash.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is conveniently located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer Drive. Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover cards are accepted. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for more information.

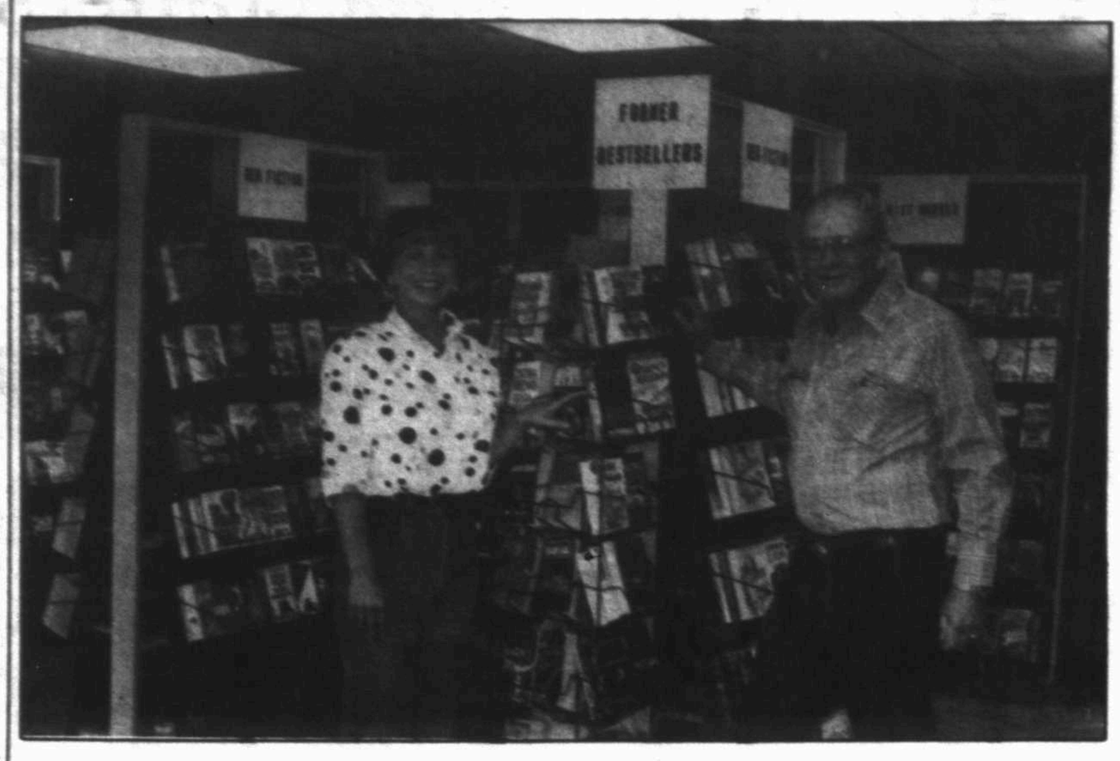
Paperback Shack stresses savings, convenience, variety



At The Paperback Shack, you can lower your reading costs and choose from more than 14,000 best selling and out of print books. Customer Meline Knago browses for books with the help of The Paperback Shack owner Jasper Fallis.

Where can you find more than 14,000 best selling and out of print books at budget prices? Look no further than The Paperback Shack, conveniently located at 4308-B Neely, just east of Midland Drive.

The Paperback Shack, owned by Jasper Fallis, specializes in the sale and trade of used paperback books. Also available are new maps of Midland and Odessa, Texas, New Mexico and the Central United States.

You'll find books from more than 20 categories of fiction and non fiction, including current and former best sellers, romance, mystery, children's and young adults, westerns, psychology, science fiction, true crime and horror.

Books are arranged alphabetically by author within each category, with the fronts of all books facing out. This makes it convenient for people in a hurry to find the books they want in a short time.

For those who like to browse, the spacious, well lighted arrangement and quiet atmosphere make shopping at The Paperback Shack a pleasure. Other features include easy access and plenty of parking space.

One of the most popular sections at The Paperback Shack is the best seller rack, full of current and former best selling titles. For example, you might enjoy reading The Joy Luck Club by Amy Tan, Blessings by Belva Plain, Almost Heaven by Judith McNaught, Clear and Present Danger by Tom Clancy, Creature by John Saul or perennial best-seller Lonesome Dove by Larry McMurtry.

It's easy to buy and trade paperbacks at The Paperback Shack. When buying paperbacks without trade-ins, you pay half of the original price. If you have paperbacks to trade-in, you are given credit for 60 percent of the original price of each book. Then when you purchase books, you pay one fourth of the original price in cash, and the trade credit is used to cover the remainder.

For additional savings, check out the sale and bargain racks, or browse through the Harlequin, Silhouette and miscellaneous romance room where all books are currently on sale for 35 cents each on cash sales and greatly reduced prices on trade sales.

The Paperback Shack also has available some of the classics which are required reading for the high school honors English classes.

Owner Fallis, a geophysicist by training, opened The Paperback Shack on July 5, 1989, and has been pleased with the response.

Recycle your paperback books at The Paperback Shack, 4308-B Neely or call 694-9624 for more information. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Friendly, professional service is a Comet Cleaners trademark, and owner Billie Jo Corbell has made yet another investment which will benefit her customers.

Bobby Waight, manager of Comet Cleaners at 2606 N. Midland Drive, recently graduated from a two-week-long dry cleaning technology school in Denton, Texas. Sponsored by the Texas Laundry and Dry Cleaning Association, the course content addressed major issues in the dry cleaning industry.

"The classes were great," said Waight, "with superb instructors such as Stan Caplan, who has been in the industry all of his life."

The school was conducted in a research institute setting and was highlighted by hands-on training as well as in-depth lectures.

In brief, the course covered topics in detail such as fabrics, dry cleaning, spotting techniques, problems associated with dry cleaning, finishing techniques, stain removal methods and the best products on the market today.

Hands-on experience covered such needs as learning about finishing, how to remove a stain without damaging the weaving, difficult stain removal, such as inks, and wool finishing.

Waight also emphasized that Comet Cleaners is now putting into practice everything he learned which would apply to the Midland locations. For example, great efforts are made to identify poor labels on garments, customers are asked to point out stains in the attempt to avoid moth damage later, wedding gowns can now be made whiter and brighter and dry cleaned and laundered sweaters keep their shape better with enhanced blocking techniques.

In shirt finishing, Waight brought back information on how to achieve a good shirt finish, what five chemicals should be used (Comet does not use bleach so your shirts last longer), equipment maintenance and inspection and button replacement.

"Since I attended the school, we have now expanded our wet cleaning department," Waight said. So save your time and bring in anything that you would normally wash by hand.

Comet Cleaners has a special solution for cleaning problem areas on such delicate fabrics as silk, taffeta, linen, men's ties, satin, wool and rayon. "Not many cleaners use this solution," noted Waight.

"We use the best chemicals and detergents available on the market, Waight stresses. "We also have weekly board meetings to train different sections of the company. Comet Cleaners is deeply committed to customer service and we do that through continuing education, quality chemicals and equipment and dedication to our jobs."

"The number one thing we do here," he added, "is stick by the label. We also love to give our customers advice. If they have a problem with their garments, we encourage them to bring the garments in for cleaning suggestions."

Eight years ago, on Sept. 3, 1982, Billie Jo opened her first Comet Cleaners at 2606 N. Midland Drive. That was the beginning of "Drop your pants" specials. After many years of Midlanders dropping their pants at Comet, there are now four locations to choose from.

Comet Cleaners dry cleans on Saturdays until 11 a.m. for your convenience and stays open until 5 p.m.

Other Comet Cleaners specials and services include:

- Handy drive through service at each location.

Owners Don and Liz Merckle came up with the concept earlier this year of involving the crafters of the Permian Basin together in a shared retailing effort. The "mall" idea turned into a successful venture which, so far, has attracted the talents of 110 different crafters.

Interestingly, the majority of these people live in Midland. Mrs. Merckle is a talented crafter, and you can see her silk flower designs, grapevine animals and sewing, such as a baby doll blanket basket, on display throughout the store.

At Craft Bazaar, you can shop for just about anyone on your holiday list because the variety of items is practically endless. Don't get Dad another tie this year or Mom another bottle of perfume. Those are thoughtful, of course, but now you can find a really unique, hand made gift item. In many cases, these items can be personalized for you later by the crafter.

Whimsical, decorative, practical and unique doesn't even begin to describe what is available at the Craft Bazaar booths.

As you wander at leisure throughout Craft Bazaar, notice the brightly painted T-shirts, jackets, sweat shirts, hairbows, rocking horses in many styles, ceramics, and oil paintings.

Take a look at the large variety in many booths of country style woodcraft, Southwestern decorating items, kitchen magnets, childrens' toys, shelves, dolls and reasonably priced quilts.

One booth is entirely devoted to school spirit and area schools are well represented in the form of festive sweatshirts, hairbows, corsages, mascot dolls and more. Don't overlook these reasonably priced items as teacher's gifts this Christmas, or at the end of the school year.

Just about all styles of artificial flowers are represented under one roof and seasonal wreaths and arrangements are in for Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas decorating needs. Arrangements suitable for year round designing and decorating are available in many of the booths.

Other gift ideas in many price ranges are Texas A&M gifts designed to give someone a chuckle (ask about the Aggie calculator and the Aggie flashlight!), brightly and cleverly decorated tuxedo shirts, Southwestern lamps, stained glass, dolls that look and feel just like a real baby, porcelain dolls and porcelain paintings, Amish dolls, handmade stuffed rabbits, dogs, cows and pigs (to name a few), stretched fabric over canvas prints, Victorian items, beautiful crochet work, popular rompers, quilt racks, cookie jars, nursing home bibs for the elderly and even a Bart Simpson doll.

Be sure to wander throughout and see the unique hair dryer and curling iron rack, oven rack pullers, Christmas rag collars, intricately "cut out" sweat shirts, a kitchen tool set for a lady, bubble sticks, button covers and custom designed car sunscreens which you can fold up and store out of the way, children's puzzles, rubber band guns and lots of children's toys.

As you can see, in 99 booths, the variety goes on and on. You'll just have to come in and see for yourself this showcase of area talent.

If you are a home crafter, you may want to consider leasing booth space at Craft Bazaar. A 4' x 4' space is $50 per month and many people lease multiple spaces. Each crafter works in the store one day per month or pays a $25 fee. Contact Don Merckle for details.

Layaways and special orders are welcome and gift wrapping is available. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays. Call 689-8852 for more information.

Don and Liz Merckle, owners of Craft Bazaar, invite you into the new arts and crafts mall, located at 3712 W. Wall. Shop now for Christmas from the many cleverly stocked booths ar Craft Bazaar.

Enhance your fall and winter wardrobe with stylish dresses, coordinates and accessories from Lou's, located in San Miquel Square at Midkiff and Wadley. Owner Lou Peters and her staff are at your service to help you look your very best this fall and holiday season. Layaway now in time for Christmas gift giving.

New merchandise for fall and winter continues to arrive and you won't want to miss out on Lou's top notch selections in a variety of sizes. Lou's carries dresses and coordinates in Missy sizes 2 to 18, Junior sizes 1 to 13 and Petite sizes 2 to 16.

"We carry one of the biggest selections of dresses in town," assessed Mrs. Peters. "We offer the hard-to-find size 1 clothes," she added, noting that designers are finally beginning to make more of the smaller sizes.

Lou's is an exclusive shop in Midland for such well-known brands of dresses as Brenner, Rebecca-B, and Executives for the Career Lady. Other often asked for brands at Lou's include Vicky Vaughn, Toni Todd, Seret, Eileen Scott and dressy Missy suits by Park Square.

At Lou's, you will find a beautiful selection of coordinating pieces such as skirts, jackets and blouses as well as accessories — jewelry, scarves, belts and purses.

Holiday fashions are stored in the back of the shop, so don't hesitate to ask the staff to find you that perfect Christmas party dress.

Shop now and take advantage of selected coordinates and dresses at markdown prices and a selected group of sweaters which would be great to give as Christmas gifts.

Lou said that one of the greatest looks which took hold last year and is still very popular this year is "liquid leather." This shop carries liquid leather by Pierre Lamonte in slacks, jackets and skirts in a rainbow of brights such as turquoise, pink, red, black, teal and white. "You just have to feel it to know it isn't leather," said Lou. "They wash and dry like a dream."

Also popular this season are rompers and jumpsuits, lined sweater jackets and the suede look. The JG Collection by Joyce feels like suede and looks like snakeskin.

Other fall and winter trends in the store include dresses and blouses with the continually popular shoulder pads, skirts of all different lengths, jackets with and without lapels and an abundance of purple dresses and coordinates. However, Lou's has everything from pastels to very bright and bold colors.

Mrs. Peters, who has owned Lou's in San Miguel Square for 12 years, has called Midland home for 34 years. She and her husband, Wayne, have three children and two grandsons. She is a professional in the retailing field, and Midlanders trust her to carry quality and up to date fashions.

Senior citizens are encouraged to shop at Lou's and to use their Midland Gold and Permian Gold cards for a 15 percent discount.

It's easy to shop at Lou's, where your Visa, Discover, MasterCard and 90 day layaway (payments may be made at your convenience) are welcomed. Gift certificates are available. Shop during the store hours of 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Call 694-2821 for more information.

Letters from Kuwait tell graphic stories

By Clifford Krauss
c.1990 N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — "We are completely surrounded by Iraqi troops, and we haven't been out of the house since the 18th of August. They are quartered in a house next door and in the field which is on two sides of us. We live in constant fear of discovery."

So wrote Eugene A. Hughes, 69, a man with a heart condition, on Oct. 14 to Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico. Hughes said that Iraqi forces occasionally knocked on the door of his house, but that he, his son and three other foreigners did not answer the door.

Hughes' note is one of several letters written by Americans who have eluded capture by the Iraqis, letters that have been smuggled out of occupied Kuwait in the last couple of weeks by Kuwaitis fighting the Iraqi occupiers.

The letters were released by Congress and Hill & Knowlton, the public relations house, which works for an exile group called Citizens for a Free Kuwait.

One of the letters said they were prepared at the request of Kuwaiti underground fighters, apparently as part of a campaign to persuade the Bush administration to approve military action against Iraq.

AP Laserphoto

The letters, several of which were written by five foreigners living in the same house, appear to have been written on the same typewriter or personal computer.

To his wife, Lucille, who lives in Albuquerque, N.M., Hughes complained of losing weight and growing a ragged beard that badly needs trimming, but he said he was keeping fit by walking up and down a staircase four times a day. Most discouraging for him, he wrote, is the political situation.

"Saddam says he is not going to pull out, and as near as we can tell or hear, the sanctions are not working," he wrote, referring to President Saddam Hussein.

Most of the letters released have been authenticated by telephone calls to relatives, or by the members of Congress who received them.

Several of the hostages pleaded for American military intervention, a call that a State Department official said is commonly found in the letters written by Americans still living in Kuwait, particularly those who had lived there for a long time before the invasion on Aug. 2.

State Department officials said they believed that fewer than half the 900 to 1,000 Americans trapped in Iraq and occupied Kuwait were in hiding. About 100 more are "human shields" being held at military and other strategic installations to deter attack from the allied forces based in Saudi Arabia.

Among the rest are women and children who are eligible to leave but have chosen not to leave their husbands. Tens of thousands of other foreigners from other countries are also held captive or are not being permitted to leave.

"Like hundreds of other hostages in Kuwait, I remain in hiding," Fritz Cameron, a teacher who has been a resident of Kuwait since 1983, wrote to Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania on Oct. 15. "I dare not venture outside. We sit and wait for an end to the suffering."

Shamir warns Iraq not to 'lay a finger on Israel'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned Iraq Monday not to "lay a finger on Israel" lest Saddam Hussein "pay a terrible price for his blunder."

Shamir told Jewish fund-raisers at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Jerusalem, "Our very presence in this region, thanks to our strong will and capacity, (has) been and continues to be a force for stability, a barrier that prevented many military adventures and much more violence."

He reassured the audience that Iraqi President Saddam's attempts to coax Israel into the conflict in the Persian Gulf would fail.

"Saddam Hussein must surely know that if he lays a finger on Israel he will pay a terrible price for such a blunder," Shamir said. "This attempt to drag us into the present conflict ... will not succeed."

Earlier, Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai announced economic reforms that included an additional military budget of a quarter-billion dollars in light of the gulf crisis, Israel army radio said.

Saddam has repeatedly threatened to torch Israel with binary chemical weapons. His first threat came in April when he said he would to use chemical weapons in answer to an Israeli nuclear attack. He later said an American attack would also lead to an attack on Israel.

The Israeli government has taken these threats seriously and has distributed gas mask kits to the general public.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said he does not expect to visit Israel on his trip to the Middle East and Europe starting Friday.

Baker, who will use the trip to consult on the gulf crisis, told a gathering in Los Angeles a stopover in Israel would leave the impresion there is a linkage between the Arab-Israeli conflict and the gulf crisis.

"We are very anxious that there not be a linkage," Baker said.

400 Fort Bliss soldiers deployed

EL PASO (AP) — The last large group of soldiers deployed from Fort Bliss to Saudi Arabia departed over the weekend.

Four hundred soldiers boarded a plane Saturday en route to the Persian Gulf for Operation Desert Shield.

They included 143 troops from the 978th Military Police Unit, 160 from the 11th Anti-Aircraft Brigade and 96 from the 62nd Transportation Company.

Sgt. Hugo De Billie, in charge of tropp deployment, said more troops would leave but he would not say how many or when.

Arabs' lust for war against Saddam fades with time

By Marcia Kunstel
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News Analysis

CAIRO — Lust for war among Arabs aligned with the United States in the stand-off against Iraq has lost its edge, as leaders tote up the potential costs in lives, destruction and political instability.

And as the war option becomes less popular, questions arise whether allies in the region will become more willing to make concessions to get Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait, which he seized in an Aug. 2 invasion.

So far, Saddam has given slight encouragement to growing hopes that the Gulf crisis can be resolved peacefully. Most recently, Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov characterized talks with Saddam Sunday as disappointing, even though Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Monday a shift in Iraqi thinking figured in the discussions.

With or without immediate, measurable progress on the diplomatic front, there is clearly an increasing willingness to give the economic embargo against Iraq more time to pinch hard enough to extract a compromise out of Saddam.

"This changing position toward war and peace is not limited to Egypt," said Osama al-Ghazali Harb, the acting director of the Al Ahram Center for Strategic and Political Studies, a leading Egyptian think tank with close government connections.

A reluctance to turn to arms is evident among the Gulf nations — which Monday announced they would begin a new diplomatic initiative — as well as in the Soviet Union, much of Europe and even the United States, he said.

"At first reaction, we thought war could happen easily. But we found it takes time to move troops and get prepared," Harb said in an interview Monday. "It's very easy to speak about war, but very difficult to make it. We are thinking in a more realistic way now."

Diplomats and analysts here are certain the Egyptian leadership never would back away from war if it were provoked by Iraq, but that leaders may be more cautious now and more interested in seeking a diplomatic solution than they were a month ago.

Both in the streets and among intellectuals, war fever has diminished from its high levels in August and September. Early predictions of a quick, clean war have been reassessed, and Arabs realize it is their soldiers on the front lines who stand to be killed.

"Saddam can inflict pain. The sky will not be his, the sea will not be his, but the land will be his," said Tahsin Bashir, a political analyst and former Egyptian diplomat. "If there is a land war in Kuwait, the Egyptians will pay heavily."

Questions also have been raised in the last month over the geographic scope a war with Iraq might cover, including the possible use of nuclear or chemical weapons.

Ahmad Yousef Ahmad, deputy director of Cairo University's Center for Political Research and Studies, cautioned that political fall-out from even a successful war could be troublesome.

Involvement by Israel on the side of the United States — and thus on the side of Egypt, Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations — would be virtually impossible for the Arab public to accept, he said.

"Or suppose the Americans destroy Iraq completely, the military and infrastructure," Ahmad said. "This would not sit well with the Egyptian public. It would be an embarrassment for (President Hosni) Mubarak."

Saddam unyielding in interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Monday his talks with a Soviet envoy were rewarding, but he has not changed his positions.

"Meetings are always useful," Saddam said in an interview with CNN correspondents in Baghdad.

He referred to his discussions with Yevgeny M. Primakov, Middle East adviser to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Primakov has been reported as saying his discussions with Saddam produced little movement, but Gorbachev has said there were signs of flexibility on Saddam's part.

Calling his discussions with Primakov "wide-ranging and very useful," Saddam declined to give specifics, saying only that Primakov would have to make the first statements.

"Not everything that was agreed will come out in the open," Saddam said.

As he has in the past, Saddam said his troops have no intention of leaving Kuwait, which they occupied on Aug. 2. Any fighting, he said, would be the result of what he called aggression by the United States, Britain or Israel.

Saddam also insisted that the Arab nations' problems be resolved as a whole, not piecemeal. He linked resolution of the Palestinian issue to the Kuwait crisis.

Had the United Nations responded to a proposal Saddam made Aug. 12 to link the two issues, the Iraqi president said, there could have been discussions on a possible solution.
