In Brief

Explosions

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Explosions rocked the basement of a 41-story state office building Friday, triggering a brief fire, injuring four people and forcing the evacuation of about 3,100 people.

The explosions occurred in an underground room that houses electrical equipment for the Office of General Services building, the tallest building between New York City and Montreal.

At first authorities thought an electrical transformer had blown up. But they said later they weren't sure what caused the initial explosion shortly after 10 a.m. and another one shortly afterward.

Escapee captured

A 16-year-old juvenile from Snyder was apprehended Friday, six-and-a-half hours after bolting from his Midland parole officer outside of Scurry County Courthouse.

According to reports, the youth was on parole from the Texas Youth Commission but was picked up in Midland on a burglary charge. The subject was brought back to Snyder for a parole revocation hearing, which was to be held Friday.

Scurry County Sheriff Keith Collier said the youth apparently bolted from his Midland parole officer as they were entering the courthouse about 1:30 p.m. and escaped to the southside of the building.

Collier said the subject's hands were cuffed in front.

Law enforcement officals began an immediate search but did not locate the youth until almost 8 p.m. He was taken into custody by Snyder police officers at a residence in the 1800 block of Avenue T.

Tropical storm...

Arlene building near Texas coast

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Arlene, the first named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, developed Saturday in the Gulf of Mexico and threatened the Texas coast with thunderstorms and heavy rain.

Arlene was expected to come ashore late Saturday along the southern to middle Texas coast and storm warnings were posted from Brownsville to Matagorda, the National Hurricane Center said. It nearly covered the entire gulf with clouds.

Air reconnaissance, satellite images, radar and buoy readings helped verify the storm had strengthened this morning from a tropical depression, said hurricane center specialist Bob Ebaugh.

"They're getting a better view of it so it is a rather well defined tropical storm," Ebaugh said.

At 7 a.m. CDT, the storm's center was at 26 north latitude and 96 west longitude, or about 85 miles east of Brownsville.

Arlene was moving to the northwest at 8 mph with sustained wind speeds near 40 mph, and storm force wind extended up to 140 miles from the center.

The storm was expected to keep the same track and speed all day, sending it ashore by late Saturday.

Heavy thunderstorms developed on the storm's northern edge.

With wind relatively light, the point of landfall probably "won't be affected very much. But most of the showers and squalls will be to the north of that. That's where the heavy rain is," said hurricane specialist Lixion Avila.

Rainfall could total 5 to 10 inches along the storm's northern edge once it comes ashore.

Group claims Carriker is top lawmaker

State Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, Friday was named "Legislator of the Year" for his efforts to improve health care in Texas.

The announcement was made Friday by the Texas Association of Health Centers. The top lawmaker designation came on the heels of a dubious honor from the magazine Texas Monthly which listed Carriker and State Rep. David Counts, D-Knox City, among the Top 10 Worst Legislators following the 73rd Session.

Also honored Friday by the health organization was State Rep. Hugo Berlanga of Corpus Christi.

Carriker and Berlanga were recognized for sponsoring a bill that sought to increase the number of primary care physicians in Texas.

The legislation, which failed to pass, would have increased the number of primary care doctors graduating from Texas medical schools.

The association said 227 of the state's 254 counties are designated as medically underserved areas. The group said Texas has more publicly-funded medical schools than any state, but it also has the largest shortage of primary care practitioners.

Carriker and Berlanga will be honored at the association's annual conference in Austin in October.

Contract to house area felons among county's agenda items

Scurry County commissioners will consider a contract for housing jail inmates, four budget amendments and advertise for bids for refurbishing rural fire trucks, when they meet Monday at 10 a.m.

According to Scurry County Sheriff Keith Collier, the contract for housing jail inmates is a routine contract. He said the county is currently housing nine inmates from other counties, two from Taylor and seven from Howard.

"The contract basically states that we will house and feed the inmates for $35 a day and that the other county will pay all medical costs," Collier said.

The court will also consider budget amendments from the Precinct 1 constable, building maintenance, county welfare and fire equipment.

Commissioners are also expected to approve advertising for bids to paint and refurbish two rural fire trucks.

Other items include a line item transfer on Scurry County Health Unit's budget, and appointment of someone from the county to attend the Texas Association of Counties meeting.

Routine items include approval of reports and minutes of various county committees and boards, approval of minutes and payment of bills.

For June...

Sales tax rebates jump 57%

June sales rebate checks for the City of Snyder totaled $97,792, an increase of 57.40 percent over the $62,128 received a year ago.

According to the State Comptroller's monthly report, the year-to-date total for Snyder is $671,930, an increase of 47.33 percent.

The high percentage of increase comes as a result of a ½ -cent tax increase, ¼ of which was implemented in July of 1992 and ¼ in October of 1992.

Scurry County's sales tax rebates totaled $40,573, down 3.26 percent from the $41,573 received in June of 1992.

State Comptroller John Sharp delivered a total of $109.4 million in June sales tax rebates to 917 cities and 108 counties, a 3.5 percent increase over the payments of one year ago.

Texas cities received $98.1 million in sales tax payments, up 3.4 percent from the $94.9 million received last June. Counties received $11.2 million, a 4.9 percent increase over the June 1992 rebates of $10.6 million.

"Sales tax rebates this month were a mixed bag," Sharp said. "While payments were up in many Texas cities and counties, other parts of the state continue to feel the 'drag' of a sluggish national economy."

This month's sales tax rebates include taxes collected on April sales and reported to the comptroller in May by businesses filing monthly tax returns.

June rebates for area cities include:

•Abilene received $1,209,984, up 2.45 percent from the $1,181,051 received last year at this time.

•Andrews received $48,942, up 37.68 percent from the $35,547 rebate check received in June 1992.

•Big Spring received $198,526, up 3.30 percent from the $192,191 received last June.

•Colorado City received $26,503, down 0.45 percent from the $26,622 received in June of 1992.

•Lamesa received $33,559, down 8.15 percent from the $36,537 taken in last June.

•Lubbock received $1,171,519, up 4.53 percent from the $1,120,701 received last year at this time.

•Midland received $67,710, up 5.32 percent from the $576,988 received June 1992.

•Odessa received $529,908, up 11.10 percent from the $476,946 taken in last June.

•Post received $13,160, up 4.29 percent from the $12,619 received June of last year.

The application period will run through noon on July 8. Dates for the class, designated 28A, are Sept. 7 through Sept. 30.

Those who successfully complete the class are certified by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice for employment in the state prison system.

WTC has administered 27 COT classes and certified 1,017 potential correctional officers.

College officials also announced four upcoming COT classes. Those dates are:

—Class scheduled Nov. 1, 1993; application deadline Sept 24, 1993.

—Class scheduled Jan. 10, 1994; application deadline Oct. 29, 1993.

—Class scheduled March 7, 1994; application deadline Jan. 14, 1994.

—Class scheduled May 9, 1994; application deadline March 25, 1994.

Applications are available at Western Texas College.

According to TDCJ officials, there is currently a five- to seven-month wait between certification and employment. That time is expected to decrease by end the of the year, however.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Happy Father's Day."

---

A woman by the name of Sonora Dodd, who lived in Spokane, Wash., is responsible for the observance of Father's Day.

She was motivated by listening to a sermon on Mother's Day. She wanted to honor her father whose wife died in 1898 and who had raised six children by himself.

That was in 1910. With the help of the Spokane Ministerial Association and the local YMCA, Spokane celebrated the first Father's Day.

Over the years, numerous resolutions to make it an official national holiday were introduced. Finally, in 1972, President Richard Nixon signed Father's Day into law.

---

Fathers it seems, unlike mothers, are not quite so mushy about their special day — at least not openly.

We once heard about a preacher who chose the subject of risk taking to spice up his traditional Father's Day lesson for his men's class.

He used a long I-beam as a prop to make his point. He asked one class member if he would walk across that I-beam for $20.

The guy said that he certainly would.

Asked if he would cross the I-beam for the same $20 if were between two buildings, high above the street, the answer was an emphatic "No."

The teacher continued. "Suppose I'm on top of one of those buildings and dangling one of your kids over the edge. Would you come after him?"

One father in the audience hesitated, then asked: "Which kid have you got?"

Return to missionary work endorsed

HOUSTON (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention often has been the site of fierce power battles between conservatives and moderates, but delegates to this year's gathering focused much of their wrath on the outside world.

More than 17,000 delegates attended the conservative-led convention this week in Houston. They overwhelmingly passed resolutions against abortion and homosexuality, particularly gays in the military.

They also singled out a fellow Southern Baptist, President Clinton, for condemnation because he has supported both abortion and gay rights.

Both issues have been discussed — and denounced — at past conventions.

"It was somewhat ridiculous, spending so much time on that," said Milton Cunningham, director of denomination ministries at Waco's Baylor University, a traditionally Southern Baptist school.

Such resolutions, he said, "have no way in the world of being measured or monitored."

The delegates, or messengers, also formally denounced Clinton for stands he has taken on abortion and gay rights. But some attending the event didn't see much point in publicly criticizing him.

"I doubt Mr. Clinton is going to lose any sleep over our resolution," said Grayson Glass, director of missions for the Southern Baptist Association for Galveston County.

Clinton and Vice President Al Gore are members of the Southern Baptists' moderate wing. Neither was invited to speak at the three-day convention that ended Thursday.

"I think a lot of people had the misconception that we could discipline certain individuals, including Mr. Clinton. The convention can't do that; that's left at the church level," Glass said.

One pastor tried to have the messengers of Clinton's church, Immanuel Baptist Church in Little Rock, Ark., unseated from the convention, but a committee overwhelmingly rejected the motion.

But there many other quarrels at the convention. The president's election has been the source of power battles at past conventions, but the outcome was a foregone conclusion this time.

The Rev. Ed Young of Houston was re-elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

During the convention, Young often preached a return to the church's roots of evangelism and missions to strengthen the church.

Glass said the convention hasn't really been able to focus on missions as much in recent years "because we've been too divided on other issues."

"Our attention and energies have been spent on trying to see who gets elected president and that sort of stuff rather than the focal theme of trying to reach around the world and spread the gospel of Christ," Glass said.

"I think we are coming to a place where we are re-emphasizing it (missions)," he said.

But Cunningham said he didn't think the convention stressed missions and evangelism enough.

"I felt this year they (messengers) left without a goal, without a sense of purpose, and with a reduced concern about missions," he said.

"I felt the convention really lacked. I think the words were there, but they weren't enough to motivate people."

Hutchison refuses TV appearance

by The Associated Press

An appearance by U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison on a nationally televised public affairs program was scrapped after she protested any mention of a grand jury investigation into her former Texas Treasury office.

"What it came down to was, I could not agree to having it off the table completely," John McLaughlin, host of One on One, told the Houston Post.

McLaughlin, whose show is syndicated over Public Broadcasting Service, said it was the first time he had ever been put in such a position by a politician.

The cancellation Friday came just minutes before the program was to tape and after Mrs. Hutchison learned the ongoing Travis County grand jury probe was to be mentioned in introductory clips to her interview.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican who defeated Democratic appointee Bob Krueger in a runoff on June 5, has said the investigation is political.

McLaughlin said he offered to delete mention of the probe from his set-up piece and to ask about the investigation only once during the interview. Mrs. Hutchison said that wouldn't do. He then offered to make only a passing mention of it without asking any questions, but she still refused.

McLaughlin then canceled her, deciding instead to air an interview with women political organizers this weekend.

Mrs. Hutchison spokesman David Beckwith said the situation was a misunderstanding. Beckwith said Mrs. Hutchison was initially told the interview would be about the budget debate.

The grand jury inquiry also focuses on claims that Mrs. Hutchison gave a job to a political opponent in exchange for an endorsement in her 1990 race.

Swimming classes continue at WTC

Swimming classes have been a hot item at Western Texas College this summer with over 115 individuals making a splash to date. Mike Harrison, instructor for all classes, has offered individuals of all ages the opportunity to improve their swimming abilities.

While most classes are closed out, spaces are still available in a few classes including the adult swimming class scheduled to meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning Tuesday.

Harrison will provide adult basic instruction in swimming, focusing on the front crawl and backstroke as well as floating techniques.

As 75 percent of all drownings happen to people who aren't planning to be in the water, learning to swim serves as more than a recreational benefit.

Commissioners eye Corpus Christi NAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal commission debating which military bases to recommend for closure spent nearly an hour Friday deliberating the merits of shutting down Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

The Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission last month added the Corpus Christi installation for comparison with a Mississippi base earlier recommended for closure by the Pentagon. Both facilities train Navy pilots.

The Corpus Christi base is one of six Texas sites being reviewed for closure or consolidation. The others are Kelly Air Force Base, Dallas Naval Air Station, Naval Station Ingleside, Naval Hospital Corpus Christi and Red River Army Depot.

The seven-member commission has a July 1 deadline to recommend to President Clinton which bases to close. The commission, which is expected to finalize its recommendations by June 26th, didn't discuss the other Texas bases Friday.

The commissioners had an ambitious agenda of bases to review, including Kelly AFB and its four sister Air Logistic Centers, but fell behind and pushed their review to Wednesday.

Texans have taken heart from the fact that the Navy wants to shut down Meridian Naval Air Station in Mississippi — not Corpus Christi NAS. But several commissioners focused much of their questioning Friday on Corpus Christi, not Meridian.

It appeared that comments made to the commission earlier in the week by Texas members of Congress might not have registered completely. At the earlier hearing, Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, and others took pains to stress Corpus Christi NAS's unique role as home to 47 tenant commands.

Other facilities occupying the naval air station — and sharing in its financial upkeep — are the Corpus Christi Army Depot, the Corpus Christi Naval Hospital and agencies of the U.S. Customs Service and U.S. Coast Guard.

"What's unique about Corpus that would make it difficult to close?" asked Commissioner Hansford Johnson, a retired Air Force general.

"I think the answer to that, General, is there's nothing unique that would keep it from closing," replied Rich Richardelli, a commission staffer briefing the panel.

Richardelli's comments throughout the hearing drew the ire of a retired Navy captain hired by Corpus Christi officials to help make their case before the commission.

"My read is it looks very much as if the staff wants to make the case to close Corpus Christi, to the extent they are giving the commission erroneous data," said Frank W. Ault.

"I can only hope they have enough people on the commission that know the facts," he added.

But Gary Bushell, a Corpus Christi official involved in the area's effort to save its bases, expressed hope that Texas officials could straighten out any misconceptions in meetings with commission staff before the panel begins voting.

The Pentagon wants to close Meridian and move its advanced pilot strike training to Kingsville NAS, near Corpus Christi. Meridian's intermediate training program would shift to NAS Pensacola in Florida.

One scenario the commission is examining would instead close down Corpus Christi and shift its maritime pilot training component to Pensacola and its primary pilot training to Whiting NAS, also in Florida.

Texas officials repeatedly have sought to make the point that their space over both Florida bases is much more congested than in South Texas.

Commissioner Rebecca Cox raised the air space issue. "When we were at Corpus talking to pilots at the base, they basically said they'd much rather be training at Corpus than Pensacola," she said.

"Is air encroachment a problem at Pensacola," asked Commissioner Harry McPherson.

"It's a busy area, but I don't consider air encroachment to be a factor," Richardelli replied.

Four-day drug conference set June 30-July 3

AMARILLO — Over 250 area junior high and high school students will gather at West Texas A&M University in Canyon (formerly West Texas State University) for the ninth annual Texans' War on Drugs Youth Leadership Conference, June 30-July 3.

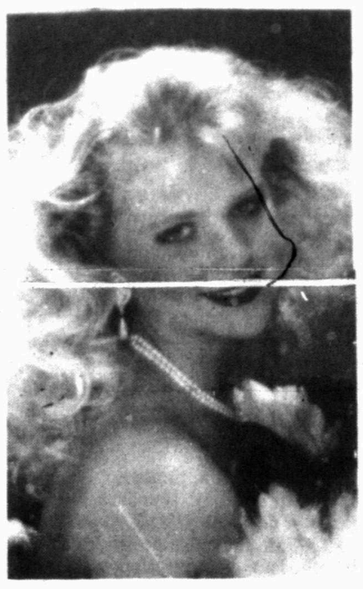

Students attending from Snyder will include Zackary Briseno, Brady Collier, Gabriella Lucero and Kim Northcutt.

Sponsored by Texans' War On Drugs, the four-day conference brings together groups of people concerned about their future in a world filled with drugs.

These young leaders participate in a variety of workshops and activities that provide information and training in the areas of drug prevention education, helping those with alcohol and other drug problems, starting drug-free youth groups, community action planning, decision making and leadership skills.

The Aztec Indians of Mexico founded their capital, Tenochtitlan, in the area that is now Mexico City. They were fine architects, and built elaborate temples to honor their religion. Human sacrifices required for their religion sometimes came from within their own tribes, but others who were offered up to Aztec deities were prisoners of war.

Phony ATF scam

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has issued a warning against an individual who is soliciting donations for the four agents killed in Waco Feb. 28.

The ATF office in Houston issued the warning Friday after learning about the scam.

According to a prepared release issued by the agency, an individual claiming to be an ATF agent is soliciting funds from businesses holding liquor licenses.

The individual has promised concessions to the businesses, such as a reduction in federal liquor taxes in exchange for the donations.

The individual tells business operators that the donations will be used for a memorial fund for the four dead agents.

Psychic faces charges

DALLAS (AP) — A psychic who is under investigation here for the mysterious deaths of 10 of her followers has been indicted on federal charges that she lied to a bankruptcy court, according to a broadcast report.

The four-count indictment announced Friday alleges that Terri Hoffman lied when she told a bankruptcy court she was broke. The FBI, which has been investigating Ms. Hoffman, told WFAA-TV she was accused of hiding $120,000 from the court.

The indictment also alleges that Ms. Hoffman made a deal with some individuals that if she sold her life story, she would give them 15 percent of the proceeds.

The housewife-turned-guru gained statewide attention three years ago when Dallas prosecutors began investigating the deaths of 10 of her followers.

Scurry County sends 3 to Texas Lions Camp

Three children living in Scurry County have recently attended the Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville.

They are Lori Lea Cain, 11, daughter of Terry and Linda Cain; Ellen Cardin, 13, daughter of Larry Dean Cardin; and Stephanie Salmon, 8, daughter of John and Carolyn Salmon.

Sponsored by the Snyder Lions Club, the campers rode horses, went swimming and camped out under the stars while enjoying fun and fellowship with other children.

Located on 500 acres of hill country, the camp serves children who are visually impaired or have physical disabilities, ages 7-16.

Camp programs are adapted, if necessary so that everyone may participate. A well-trained staff supervises each camp activity at a ratio of one counselor to two campers.

The Texas Lions Camp is a nonprofit organization funded by individuals interested in providing challenging programs for handicapped youth. This service is provided free of charge to all eligible students.

For more information, or if you know of someone who can benefit from these programs, call your local Lions Club or write: Texas Lions Camp, P.O. Box 247, Kerrville, Tex. 78029-0247; or call (512) 896-8500.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

I have a difficult time imagining the discomfort and embarrassment that was caused by the concept of "psychosomatic" diseases. The theory that diseases were the result of psychological stress reached its apotheosis in the 1950s and 1960s. Millions of patients, who could not obtain reliable treatment for their afflictions, were told by perfectly well-meaning and ethical physicians that the disorders were "all in their heads."

Peptic ulcer is the prime example. At one time believed due solely to stress, patients underwent psychotherapy, while they dutifully guzzled milk and cream diets, used antacids and rued the day they were born. Now, based on modern studies, many (if not all) ulcer patients are known to suffer from a bacterial infection in the stomach and small intestine. More and more doctors are treating peptic ulcers with antibiotics and the results are astoundingly successful.

Once believed caused by a repressed cry for their mothers to drop dead, asthma is no longer considered to be a psychosomatic ailment. Although its causes are complex, the basic problem faced by most asthmatics is bronchial inflammation. Therefore, today's doctors treat the disease with cortisone, antibiotics and drugs to dilate the bronchial passageways, rather than relying on epinephrine injections and long sessions with a psychiatrist. Needless to say, up-to-date therapy is far more efficient.

Colitis, too, is now known to be caused by an inflammation, not — as previously thought — by emotional tension. Even depression, traditionally a "mental" illness, is now known to be caused (in many cases) by a biochemical imbalance within the brain. In fact, every year many diseases are newly discovered to have a genetic or biochemical basis. Some of these diseases are so rare that they are unfamiliar to the average physician.

Here is a partial list of disorders that are due to abnormalities of chromosomes, the tiny proteins in the genes that determine our characteristics: hemophilia, glucose 6-PD deficiency, von Hippel-Lindau syndrome, Huntington's disease, muscular dystrophy, familial polyposis, spinocerebellar ataxia, cystic fibrosis, Friedreich's ataxia, tuberous sclerosis, multiple endocrine neoplasia, Wilms' tumor, ataxia-telangiectasia, retinoblastoma and Wilson's disease.

Others include Marfan syndrome, polycystic kidney disease, Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease, neurofibromatosis, early-onset breast cancer, myotonic dystrophy, diabetes (certain forms), amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (one form), Alzheimer's disease (one form), acoustic neuroma, Kallmann syndrome, chronic granulomatous disease, Duchenne muscular dystrophy, Norrie's disease, Wiskott-Aldrich syndrome, agammaglobulinemia, hereditary nephritis, Lowe syndrome, fragile X syndrome, adrenoleukodystrophy, XY gonadal dysgenesis and X-linked lactic acidosis.

Further genetic diseases are testicular feminization, phosphoglycerate kinase deficiency, thyroxin-binding globulin deficiency, Fabry's disease, Lesch-Nyhan syndrome, Hunter syndrome, spinal and bulbar muscular atrophy, retinitis pigmentosa, X-linked severe combined immunodeficiency, X-linked growth hormone deficiency, X-linked lymphoproliferative syndrome, and X-linked skeletal dysplasia and mental retardation.

This daunting list is growing annually. The striking genetic influences on disease have prompted some scientists to hypothesize that common afflictions, such as cancer and heart disease, may have genetic causes. If so, they may someday be prevented by chromosome rearrangement. Truly, the days of the psychosomatic ailment are long gone. Or — to paraphrase Shakespeare — the fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars ... but in our genes.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a victim of post-polio syndrome. After a series of tests, both before and after physical exercise, I was told I could not expect to increase the strength of my muscles. My understanding is that the loss of strength is due to deterioration of the nerve/muscular interaction — that rebuilding of muscle after exercise does not occur as it does with normal people. Hence, I can best retard deterioration of strength by avoiding exhaustion. Do you feel physical therapy might be helpful or that exercise is inappropriate?

DEAR READER: The doctors are correct that you should avoid exercising to the point of exhaustion. This is not to say that you shouldn't exercise at all, however. An individualized program of physical therapy, during which the level of activity is closely monitored, would be entirely appropriate and should help strengthen your remaining muscles.

I believe you ought to be under the care of a physiatrist, a specialist in rehabilitation medicine. Moderate exercise is good for you, as it is for healthy people, too.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In 1988 I was scheduled for prostatectomy that was never accomplished because a biopsy revealed lymph node involvement. My doctor discussed a five- to 15-year survival rate and no further treatment. I then went to a San Diego clinic and was placed on Lupron and Eulexin. I've been using the combined therapy with excellent results; however, I have experienced considerable muscle loss. I'm not willing to watch my body deteriorate from hormones. Any suggestions?

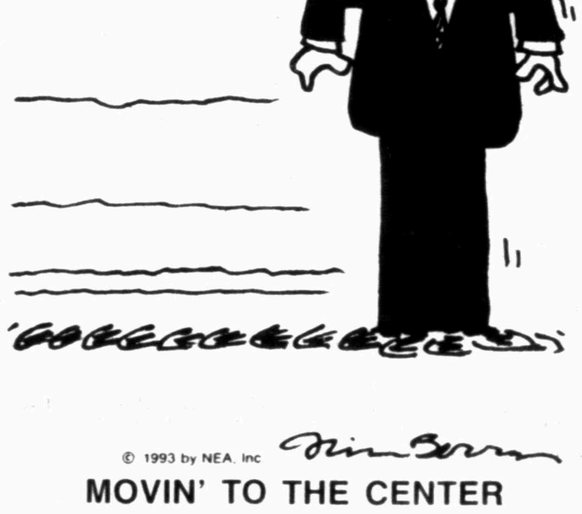

DEAR READER: I'm afraid you're caught between a rock and a hard place. Evidently, you have prostate cancer that has spread to the lymph nodes. Quite correctly, the specialists have advised hormone therapy: Lupron suppresses the natural production of male hormone; Eulexin prevents the remaining hormone from stimulating the cancer. Neither compound commonly causes loss of muscle tissue, although both may make you feel "blah."

I suspect that your muscle loss may be a direct consequence of the cancer itself. Ask your doctor about this. In any case, you will need the therapy, even if it were to affect your muscles. Question your doctor about the possibility of a graded exercise program, in conjunction with a high-protein, high-carbohydrate diet. Perhaps this combination might help you regain some of your lost fitness.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Hispanics get AIDS faster

MIAMI (AP) — Hispanics make up 17 percent of the nation's AIDS cases and are contracting the deadly disease faster than any other ethnic group, the nation's top doctor said Friday.

Twenty percent of women and 25 percent of children with the disease are Hispanic, said U.S. Surgeon General Antonia Novello in releasing the first general AIDS report since one prepared by former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop in 1986.

Financial Focus

Dividends, which reward shareholders for their investment by sharing part of the company's profits with them, are an important reason to buy stocks. In fact, dividends are the only regular payments made to shareholders. Although dividends are not guaranteed, most corporations make every effort to pay them regularly.

The most popular types of dividends are (1) cash dividends, (2) stock dividends and (3) stock splits.

Cash dividends are the most common of the three. The corporation's board of directors decides on the amount of each dividend and typically pays it quarterly. The amount of the dividend generally reflects the profitability of the company.

Stock dividends and stock splits are different from cash dividends. A stock dividend is the distribution of additional shares instead of cash. For example, if you own 100 shares of XYZ Corporation, a 2 percent stock dividend would give you two additional shares. The value of each share of outstanding stock is then reduced proportionally by the number of shares distributed so that there is no change in value, only in number of shares owned.

When a stock dividend equals more than 25 percent, it typically becomes a stock split. For example, a 2-for-1 stock split means the owner of 100 shares now owns 200 shares. This is also called a 100 percent stock dividend. Of course, each share would be worth half as much, so there is no real increase in the value of your investment. It is like exchanging a dollar bill for two half-dollars. Alternatively, if a stock split is accompanied by an increase in dividends, the value of your investment would increase.

Investors tend to prefer stocks that trade within a range of about $20 to $100 a share. When share prices approach or exceed $100, directors often declare splits to create more public interest in their stock.

How can you make sure you receive all the dividends to which you are entitled? First, the payment of any dividend requires the new shareholder to be registered as holder-of-record. Because there is a necessary delay between the time a stock is bought and the time the new owner is recorded on the company's books, a stock must be purchased five business days before record date to receive that dividend. To avoid confusion, the company and the exchange on which the stock is traded report the ex-dividend date. Any shares purchased prior to the "ex-date" are entitled to a dividend; any shares purchased on or after the "ex-date" are not.

Directors pay particular attention to the dividend policy. They must be confident that they can maintain a dividend increase if it is declared. A sure way to erode confidence in a company's leadership and stability is to lower or eliminate the regular dividend. For these reasons, dividends can be one of the most stable and predictable ways to evaluate a company.

Your Birthday

Sunday, June 20, 1993

Improvements are indicated in your long range financial projections for the year ahead. Try to be patient, however, because you might not get everything you want immediately. Time is your ally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be kind and considerate today of the one you love, but be careful not to overindulge his/her every whim. Your excesses could hurt more than help. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is more than one type of opportunity around you today, so don't be single minded. The more seeds you plant, the greater your variety of potential benefits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be optimistic today, but also be realistic and logical. All of these ingredients must be operative in order to bring your hopes and expectations into being.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial conditions appear to be a bit mixed for you today. Your chances for acquisition look reasonable, but you might suffer a loss through a careless involvement with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Loyal friends will be willing to pinch hit for you today, but don't count on them to blast the ball out of the park. They may get you only to first base.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't make hasty judgments today, because what you perceive at first glance might not be representative of the true picture. Take a long, hard second look.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you have something good going for you at this time, it's best to keep it to yourself rather than talking about it with pals. Speaking out of turn could hurt your arrangement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Should you feel a need for advice today regarding your work or career, seek out persons who will tell you the truth and not just what you want to hear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today if you have to choose between work or play, you're likely to select the latter hoping your responsibilities will take care of themselves. Unfortunately, they won't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Left to your own devices today you should be able to work things out to a satisfactory conclusion. However, if others get involved, they could drive you off course.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're rather amicable today and easy to get along with. This is commendable, but be careful you do not make compromises or concessions you'll be unable to honor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Co-workers upon whom you can usually rely might not be available today. If you want something done quick and done right, do it yourself instead of waiting for the calvary to save you.

Your Birthday

Monday, June 21, 1993

Your influence over your present peer group could increase appreciably over the coming months. In the year ahead the standards you set for yourself will be the ones your pals will also follow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you might put your mate in an awkward position where he/she has to make a decision in an area where in the past your spouse has previously used poor judgment. Don't let history repeat itself. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph. c/o this newspaper P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163 Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before taking on new duties today, try to finish what is already demanded of you. If you attempt to do more, this could lead to frustrations and poorer productivity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's extremely important today you treat all of your friends equally. If you play favorites or show partiality, you may loose on both ends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Ambitions that are focused on achieving material gains have good chances for being fulfilled today. You might not score equally as high where your social interests are concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today it behooves you to be more of a listener than a talker. While you're telling others about something you already know, someone might be trying to tell you something you don't know.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Joint endeavors appear to be quite "iffy" today, especially if yo u're involved with a person or persons with whom past endeavors didn't work out too well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In partnership arrangements today, subdue your assertiveness. Your chart indicates your counterpart may be better equipped to handle things than you are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a productive day for you, provided you work with tested methods and procedures. Experimenting with the unknown might set your whole operation back a day.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against inclinations today to gamble on persons or things about which you know little. Lady Luck is only apt to be friendly to you on familiar turf.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Family matters should be given top priority today. Only after these have been dealt with satisfactorily can you switch your focus to your other interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you might have to make a choice regarding a combination of unusual circumstances. Some are benefic, some are counterproductive, but all are intermingled.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Before taking on new responsibilities today, clean up your present circumstances. If you feel required to make a choice, don't add new woes to the unfinished.

Thornburg ordered to pay up

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal court decision ordering former U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to pay nearly $300,000 in back campaign debts is long overdue, says a former Thornburgh political consultant.

Texas political consultant Karl Rove had sued the former attorney general, his campaign committee and campaign treasurer Raymond Dimuzio for debts from Thornburgh's failed 1991 U.S. Senate race in Pennsylvania.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks ruled Friday that Thornburgh and his campaign committee are responsible for the debt. The judge excused Dimuzio from the judgment.

"Thornburgh's argument was essentially that running a campaign was like betting on the stock market — if the candidate loses, you lose your investment in the campaign," said Rove. "That's not the way it goes. The candidate has to make every effort to pay off his debts."

Thornburgh could not be reached for comment Friday by The Associated Press. His Washington, D.C., residence has an unpublished phone number.

However, the former attorney general had said in court his campaign committee — not himself — was liable for the debt.

Rove sued for $175,000 in direct mailing services he provided in the Senate race.

[illegible] judgment by Sparks includes more than $50,000 in interest on the principal of the debt and $75,000 for Rove's attorney's fees.

"The court finds from a preponderance of the evidence Richard Thornburgh did assent to the Sept. 18, 1991, contract between Rove and the committee ... and is personally liable for the debt owed by the committee to Rove," Sparks said in his opinion.

Thornburgh was defeated in the Senate race by Democrat Harris Wofford. Federal Election Commission reports showed Thornburgh at the time of the April court case had $32,000 in the bank and $377,000 in debts.

"I made no commitment to anyone, ever, to expose myself to the liability of the conduct of my election committee in the 1991 U.S. Senate race," he testified in April.

Thornburgh had said he was still trying to raise money to help [illegible] stint as United Nations undersecretary-general, which ended in March, prevented him from raising money.

In the final six months of 1992, the committee listed $122 in contributions.

Thornburgh had contended a verdict against him would have a chilling effect on the election process.

"If the law held that candidates be made personally liable for their campaign debt, I think a lot of people would be extremely wary about subjecting themselves or their families to that," he said.

Rove, who says he has helped run political campaigns in 31 states, disagreed.

"This is no big new cutting edge of the law," he said. "Candidates have always had the responsibility to run their campaign in a responsible manner and pay off their debts. Most everyone tries to raise money to pay them off."

Helicopter interdiction plan in Mexico did not work out

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. plan to provide Mexico with helicopters to catch drug traffickers never got off the ground. And when authorities sent planes after the smugglers, they simply spread their operations to other parts of the country.

Still, the $39 million Operation Halcon has chalked up some notable successes, seizing almost 29 metric tons of cocaine last year, says the General Accounting Office.

And the Northern Border Response Force program also picked up 17 aircraft and 62 vehicles, arrested 96 suspected traffickers and killed seven others, the GAO reported to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The operation began in 1990 after South American cocaine traffickers started landing their aircraft on the Mexican side of the border and smuggling drugs in via land routes.

The U.S. plan: lease Mexico 21 U.S. Army UH-1H helicopters to operate from seven mobile bases. But there were delays — drawn-out military aid negotiations and a four-month grounding of the choppers after one crashed.

But Mexico was putting up planes under a pilot project that led to the seizure of more than 8 metric tons of cocaine. However, the traffickers caught on quickly. They moved their operations out of range to central and southern Mexico, said the GAO.

As a result, the response force became responsible for interdicting narcotics shipments throughout Mexico — a country three times the size of Texas — under a plan designed for a limited, well-defined area along the U.S.-Mexican border.

The concept of having mobile bases that could be moved wherever the traffickers were sounded good, but it also had flaws, Andres Ramirez, assistant director of the GAO for international affairs issues, said Friday in an interview.

"You're not going to move around Mexico secretly when you've got these big trucks and helicopters going different places," Ramirez said. "When you move them, people are going to know it, and I'm sure the traffickers would be informed."

However, other aspects of the Northern Border Response Force program have boosted drug seizures. For example, U.S. agents are helping Mexican officials spot traffickers' planes.

IS CHURCH ATTENDANCE NECESSARY?

By Homer Anderson

God's inspired word commands us, "Not forsaking our own assembling together, as is the habit of some, but encouraging one another, and all the more, as you see the day drawing near" (Hebrews 10:25 NASB). Why is attendance so important? "For this reason we must pay much closer attention to what we have heard, lest we drift away from it" (Hebrews 2:1).

As important as attendance is, it is not enough by itself. Contrary to the practice of some, we must really worship God from our hearts when we attend. "But thanks be to God that though you were slaves of sin, you became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching to which you were committed" (Romans 6:17). "God is spirit; and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth" (John 4:24). In addition to attendance and acceptable worship, Christians must daily practice pure religion. "This is pure and undefiled religion in the sight of our God and Father, to visit orphans and widows in their distress, and to keep oneself unstained by the world" (James 1:27).

Those who have carelessly drifted away from the joys of Christian service should prayerfully read Luke chapter 15 and see God pictured as a Father who will run to meet His children when they turn away from sin and come back home (verse 20). Won't you come home to God this Lord's day?

Jurors find man not guilty in rampage

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man on Friday was found innocent, by reason of insanity, in last year's shooting rampage at an elementary school where two law officers were wounded.

Jurors returned the verdict for 45-year-old Calvin Bell after deliberating nearly two days.

Bell was charged with two counts of aggravated assault on a police officer in the Sept. 18 attack.

Bell had armed himself with a 9mm pistol and Mace when he entered his son's school, Piney Point Elementary, in southwest Houston. He was confronted by two Houston police officers. Both were shot, but were not killed.

Bell never denied he was the man responsible.

S'water knocks off Indians

SWEETWATER — Host Sweetwater used a 14-strikeout performance from Jason Sepeda to knock off the Snyder Indians in the championship game of the County Little League Baseball Tournament Friday.

Sepeda went six innings, walked six and gave up just three hits in the winning effort.

The Sweetwater hurler also led the offensive charge for the hosts, slapping a 2-RBI double and scoring twice.

Teammate Grant Cherry also doubled.

The Indians' hits came from Sonny Cumbie, who hammered a two-sacker, and Chris Fields, who singled twice.

Johnny Pena was the losing pitcher. Pena lasted five frames, scattered six hits, walked six and struck out six.

The Tribe winds up the season with a 17-2 record and the Snyder Little League championship.

Cowboys set for CNFR finals

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The Western Texas College Rodeo team, as well as the rest of the field at the College National Finals Rodeo, are preparing for today's last runs in the second go-round.

The rodeo, held on the campus of Montana State University, will wind up with Sunday's finals, featuring the top 10 qualifiers in each event.

Following the finals, national champions will be named in each event, as well as in men's and women's team competition.

The Westerners NIRA Southwest Regional champions, had one sure bet for the finals heading into Saturday's performance.

Sophomore Benji Fontenot had accumulated 134 points for third place in bull riding. He scored 73 in the first go-round, then added a 61 Thursday for his total. Fontenot also carries a fourth-place 134 in bareback riding, is in sixth place in bull riding, and ninth in saddle bronc riding.

Bareback rider Eric Mouton also has a better-than-average shot at the finals, carrying an 81 from the first go-round into Saturday's final performance.

Saddle bronc rider Fletcher Tigner, who scored a first-round 68, didn't place in the go-round Friday, getting a 66 from the judges. However, he is resting in fourth in the average with a 134 total.

Representing Western Texas College in Saturday's performance will be bareback rider Travis Whiteside and Thad Little, entered in saddle broncs and steer wrestling.

Whiteside scored a first-go 68 and could get to the finals with a ride of 70 or better on Saturday.

Little, who missed his steer in the first go-round, and was bucked off his saddle bronc, will be going for points in the go-round.

Woodson is focal point of Oil Bowl

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — When it comes to football, people from Texas and Oklahoma rarely agree on anything.

But the head coaches for Saturday's Oil Bowl both say the key to the game is Adrian Woodson, the quarterback who guided Temple to the Class 5A Division II state championship in Texas last season.

"The big key for us defensively is to keep their quarterback from killing us," said Oklahoma head coach Charles Cooper of Tahlequah. "He's a very good athlete, not a one-dimensional player."

The charity football game, in its 56th year, matches high school all-stars from Texas and Oklahoma. Texas leads the series 33-12-1, including a 24-7 win last year.

Fleming cuffs Rangers in 3-2 Mariners victory

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Fleming had his second straight impressive start and the Seattle Mariners made it five victories in six games with a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers on Friday night.

Seattle beat Texas for the second straight time in the Kingdome after losing 13 in a row to the Rangers dating back to 1991.

The Mariners scored the winning run in the seventh when Rich Amaral singled, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice by Omar Vizquel and came home on Mackey Sasser's sacrifice fly.

Fleming (2-1), making his sixth start of the season after being sidelined with tendinitis in his left elbow, beat Roger Pavlik (3-3). Fleming walked one and struck out one in 7 2-3 innings. Norm Charlton pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

The Rangers tied the score at 2 and ended Fleming's shutout string at 18 consecutive innings when Dean Palmer hit his 16th homer of the season in the seventh inning with Juan Gonzalez on first.

Jay Buhner gave the Mariners a 2-0 lead when he homered off Pavlik in the second. It came after Pete O'Brien walked to lead off the inning.

Texas lost for the seventh time in 10 games. The Rangers were coming off an 18-2 victory Thursday in California.

Pavlik pitched seven innings and gave up eight hits and three runs while striking out three and walking five.

Giants blank Houston 5-0

HOUSTON (AP) — The starting pitching that San Francisco worried about at the start of the season came through again on Friday night.

Black pitched 7 1-3 shutout innings and Darren Lewis went 4-for-5, leading the Giants past the Houston Astros 5-0. The first-place Giants have won nine of their last 11 games.

Black (6-1) allowed six hits, while striking out four and walking two. Mike Jackson finished.

"It was up there among the best," Black said of his start. "Obviously anytime you hold a team down and throw all zeroes you must be doing something right. I've had some rough games against these guys before."

Doug Drabek (5-7) was the loser, going six innings and giving up four runs, three earned, on eight hits.

"Black was too good," Astros manager Art Howe said. "It looked like he had an outstanding breaking ball. It was really biting and we didn't get too many good swings at it. He pitched a fine game."

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the first after Lewis led off with a single and moved to second when left fielder Casey Candaele mishandled the ball for an error. Lewis went to third on a sacrifice by Robby Thompson and scored when Will Clark grounded out to second.

The Giants made it 4-0 in the sixth on Royce Clayton's two-run single and Kirt Manwaring's RBI single. San Francisco added a run in the seventh on Dave Martinez's run-scoring single.

"It was a great outing for Bud, especially considering he's pitching on eight days' rest," manager Dusty Baker said. "He's one of the best pitchers in the league as far as getting out of trouble and knowing what to do in tight situations."

This year's U.S. Open golf championship is being played at Baltusrol in Springfield, N.J. It marks the seventh time that the golf club has hosted the prestigious grand slam event. Its links have been the site of two of the four lowest 72-hole scores ever to be turned in at the U.S. Open — both by Jack Nicklaus. It was also the site of the sixth highest winning score: Willie Anderson's 307 in 1903.

Series heads back to Phoenix

Suns down Chicago 108-98 in Game 5 to extend NBA Finals

CHICAGO (AP) — Cork the champagne, ship the trophy to Arizona and take down that plywood. The city of Chicago is safe again even if their Bulls are in more danger.

Shopkeepers boarded up their windows in fear of destructive mobs celebrating the Bulls third straight NBA title. It turned out to be unnecessary as the Phoenix Suns stayed alive with a 108-98 victory Friday night in Game 5.

"It was our goal to save Chicago. We've had a really nice week," Suns coach Paul Westphal said. "We didn't want to see it burn."

Quiet streets, warm bubbly and a trophy still to be awarded were the latest unexpected twists in a series with so many sudden shifts that little is predictable now. The best-of-7 battle continues Sunday night with the Bulls still ahead 3-2 but the rest of the series in Phoenix.

Suns rookie Richard Dumas had more points than Michael Jordan late in the third quarter Friday night, one game after Jordan scored 55.

Bulls forward Horace Grant had what he called "one of the worst games and days of my life." He had just one point and seven rebounds after piling up 17 points and 16 rebounds in Wednesday night's fourth-game victory.

Four of the five games have been won by road teams. The Suns took two of three in Chicago after falling behind 2-0 on their home court.

The Suns went from a poor defensive performance, in which they let Jordan drive to the basket at will, to an outstanding one. Jordan scored 41 points and Scottie Pippen scored 22, but the other three starters totaled just 10.

Phoenix dominated the boards 45-35 after being outrebounded in the previous three games and made 51 percent of its shots, the first time it hit more than half of them in the series.

If five games of facts, statistics and conflicting evidence doesn't help pick a winner, Charles Barkley says there's another reason his Suns should succeed — he told Jordan it was Phoenix's destiny.

Jordan's response?

"He said he read a different Bible than I did," said Barkley, as relaxed after the game as he was while playing to keep his season alive.

"He's been telling me that crap ever since he's been here," Jordan said. "We're destined to win as much as he's destined to win, and right now we're a game up.

"We're here to say his destiny should be to have a long summer thinking about what he would have or should have done."

Barkley did plenty Friday night. He scored 24 points, one less than Dumas, who hit 12 of 14 shots, and Kevin Johnson, who got 11 points in the final quarter.

Barkley scored 18 points in the first half against single coverage. When Chicago finally double-teamed him in the second half, he passed to teammates for open shots.

"Ain't no one player can guard me," Barkley said. "You all can write that down."

The Suns led 31-15 late in the first quarter, 54-49 at halftime and 80-73 after three quarters. They hadn't trailed since 3:42 remaining in the second quarter.

They even built an 84-73 lead with 9:42 left in the game. But these were the same Bulls who trailed Portland by 15 points going into the fourth quarter of last year's Game 6, then charged to a 33-14 final period that gave them their second straight championship.

Chicago still had a chance when Jordan's short bank shot made the score 99-92 with 2:07 remaining. Then Johnson drove for a three-point play before Jordan sank two free throws.

But Johnson's layup and Danny Ainge's foul shot gave Phoenix a 105-94 lead with 38 seconds to go, keeping alive their chances to become the first team to overcome a 3-1 deficit in the Finals.

Phoenix followed a seven-point run that cut its lead to 33-28 with a five-point spurt. When Chicago took its first lead during a 7-0 surge that made the score 45-42, Phoenix followed with nine straight points.

With Grant boxed out much of the game, guard Dan Majerle led the Suns with 12 rebounds.

Janzen boasts 2-shot margin halfway through U.S. Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Lee Janzen's second consecutive 67 tied a scoring record and gave him a two-stroke lead over two former champions Friday at the halfway point of the U.S. Open.

Janzen, 28, a fourth-year touring pro who has never won a major, completed 36 holes over Baltusrol in 134, 6 under par, matching the tournament record set by Jack Nicklaus on the same course in 1980 and tied by T.C. Chen in 1985.

Janzen, who won at Phoenix earlier this season, was two shots ahead of former Open winners Tom Watson and Payne Stewart and eliminated the defending champion from weekend play.

Watson and Stewart each used their own brand of psychology in shooting 66s that left them tied for second at 136. Watson, 43, lectured to himself in the early part of his 4-under-par effort, and Stewart focused on his game and away from the moon-shot blasts of his playing partner, John Daly.

PGA champion Nick Price of Zimbabwe, with a 66, and Corey Pavin, with a 69, were one stroke back of Watson and Stewart at 137. Scott Hoch, who shared the first-round lead, was at 138 after a 72, and Paul Azinger, Billy Andrade and Mike Standly followed at 139. Azinger shot 68, Andrade 67 and Standly 69.

Daly used a driver and 1-iron to become the first man ever to reach the uphill, 630-yard, par-5 17th hole in two.

"I'd been playing so badly that I told my caddy that if I reach 17, at least I'll make history," Daly said.

He also made birdie and went on to a 68. At 140, he was even par for two rounds and very much in contention.

Tom Kite, however, was out of the tournament, his reign as Open champion over. He birdied the last hole for a 70, but at 145 failed by a stroke to qualify for the final two rounds.

With the 10-shot rule in effect, Kite was among some two dozen players eliminated by Janzen's record-matching effort late in the afternoon.

Others out at 145 included Bernhard Langer of Germany, the Masters champion; Vijay Singh, winner last week at Westchester, and Joey Sindelar, who shared the first-round lead but then shot 79. Greg Norman, who had two practice rounds in the 60s, was at 147.

The other first-round leaders also backed away. Hoch, who predicted that a low score at Baltusrol "is a one-time thing; you can't do it two days in a row," proved to be a prophet after a 72, and Australian Craig Parry had a 74 for 140.

The anticipated European challenge failed to materialize. Joining Langer on the sidelines were Spaniards Seve Ballesteros and Jose Maria Olazabal, both at 148.

Barely making it was British Open champion Nick Faldo of England. He hit a spectator, a tree limb and a bunker on successive shots in scoring a 7 on the par-4 sixth hole, shot 74 and was at 144.

Janzen, 28, who has improved in each of his four years on the PGA Tour, had missed the cut in three previous U.S. Open starts.

But this time he put his name in the record books with a round spiced with three consecutive birdies beginning on the 11th.

The first two came on putts of about 20 feet and the last with an 8-iron approach to about 6 feet.

Watson, who won the Open in 1982 but nothing at all in the last six years, made use of his psychology degree from Stanford and an on-course practice putting session to work his way up the leaderboard.

Watson yipped a 3-foot par putt on the second hole.

After two-putting from 40 feet for par on the sixth hole, he got in a little practice. Practice during a round isn't allowed on the PGA Tour, but the U.S. Golf Association stipulates only that practice not delay players hitting to the green.

He birdied the seventh from 20 feet and the eighth from about 10. Perhaps more importantly, he made a 3-foot second putt on the 10th, then dropped 6-foot par putts on the next two holes.

Aikman to undergo surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Troy Aikman will undergo weekend surgery in Los Angeles for what the team late Friday called a "disc problem" in his back.

Dr. Bob Watkins, a Los Angeles-based neurosurgeon, will perform the surgery Saturday morning at Centinela Hospital in Inglewood, Calif., the team said. Aikman left Friday for Los Angeles to consult with Watkins.

Cowboys' spokesman Rich Dalrymple said the procedure is considered to be "relatively minor in nature and should have no effect on Aikman's ability to play in 1993."

Dalrymple, in a prepared statement, said the surgical procedure is called a microlumbar discectomy.

Team owner and general manager Jerry Jones said Aikman had been consulting with doctors regarding his back condition for several weeks. He said the surgery was scheduled now to ensure Aikman would be healthy for the upcoming season.

"Troy has, throughout his career, experienced different levels of back pain. His recent discomfort made us more visibly aware of the situation and encouraged us to seek a procedure that would correct any future threat of physical problem," Jones said.

Aikman injured his back several weeks ago while lifting weights. He had been told to discontinue workouts until mid-July, when training camp begins.

Aikman, the Super Bowl MVP, helped the Cowboys to a 52-17 rout of the Buffalo Bills with the youngest team in the National Football League. He was 61 of 89 with eight touchdowns and no interceptions in three playoff games.

There are six different ways to score in a rugby match in which each team has 13 players.

Sampras may skip Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pete Sampras, the world's top-ranked player and No. 1 seed for Wimbledon, revealed that a shoulder injury may prevent him from playing when the tournament starts next week.

The shoulder becomes the latest in a list of pre-Wimbledon ailments that includes Steffi Graf's foot, Andre Agassi's shoulder and Monica Seles' back.

The 21-year-old American underwent MRI tests to examine the shoulder and determine how best to treat the injury.

New state treasurer promises efficiency

AUSTIN (AP) — Longview Mayor Martha Whitehead accepted appointment as the new state treasurer Friday, promising to make the agency more efficient and saying she would run for the office in 1994.

Ms. Whitehead, 52, a Democrat, was named by Gov. Ann Richards to succeed Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison. Mrs. Hutchison was elected June 5 to the U.S. Senate.

"She is a dynamic leader," Richards said. "As the mayor of Longview, she has proven that she knows how to make government work."

Ms. Whitehead has been mayor since 1991. She was elected to the Longview City Council in 1987 and 1990.

In accepting the appointment, Ms. Whitehead pledged to streamline Treasury operations.

"I intend to work to protect the financial strength of this state and maximize its earnings for the taxpayers of Texas," she said. "I have learned that government must do more with less if we are truly to serve our people."

She stopped short, however, of endorsing Comptroller John Sharp's recent suggestion that the agency be abolished.

"I believe that cost-cutting measures can be enacted, duplication of services can be eliminated and greater efficiencies can be achieved. But I believe the treasurer has a valid role to play in state government," she said.

Ms. Whitehead said she had talked with Sharp "and asked for his input in my efforts to make the Treasury a model of efficiency."

A native of Pittsburg, Texas, Ms. Whitehead is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Southern Methodist University with a master's degree from East Texas State.

She is vice president of the Good Shepherd Medical Center, and has served on the East Texas State board of regents and the Texas Municipal League board. She and her husband, lawyer R. Laughton Whitehead Jr., have three children.

Ms. Whitehead's appointment gives Democrats six of the seven top statewide offices.

She said she would seek election to a full, four-year term as treasurer next year, but that running wasn't a requirement for receiving the appointment.

"The governor did not place any conditions on my taking the job," she said.

The governor, who served two terms as treasurer herself, said she told Ms. Whitehead what to expect in a statewide office.

"I wanted somebody that I knew was going to be high-energy. I knew that Martha would do that. I explained to her what it takes. It takes a total commitment of all your time," Richards said.

As for the upcoming campaign, she said, "I wanted someone who could hit the ground running and who literally would be all over this state. Martha's got a selling job to do. She has to be good over at the treasury, and she also has to be good on the (campaign) trail. I think she will be."

Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle agreed, calling Ms. Whitehead "a great candidate."

Admiral ponders carriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon proposal to cut the Navy to 10 aircraft carriers could lead to longer deployments for sailors or a lack of U.S. military presence in certain areas of the world, the Navy's top admiral warned on Friday.

Adm. Frank Kelso II, the Navy's chief of naval operations, refused to criticize the proposal directly, offering instead a staunch defense of the service's reasoning for holding the line at a dozen of the powerful warships.

"I want to stay at 12," Kelso told reporters at a session with defense writers. "I'm not saying it's a dumb idea. I'm saying I prefer to stay at 12."

The proposal is one of the options being put forward in Defense Secretary Les Aspin's "bottom up review," which is also looking at cuts in other services, such as 10 active Army divisions instead of 12, and 20 Air Force aircraft wings instead of 26.5.

Kelso pointed to no-fly zones in operation over Bosnia, as well as that continuing over Iraq, as evidence that America will be called upon more and more to police far-flung areas of the world.

"We're going to be more involved in peacekeeping in the days ahead. To me, it's an issue of emloyment in peace as much as anything else," Kelso said.

The four-star admiral said "nine-month deployments ... over an extended period of time will get you poor retention. ... We've had that in the past, and we will have to adjust our operating patterns."

If the number of carriers is cut to 10, he said, "you will reduce the amount of forward presence in the world with carriers, or you will increase the lengths of deployments. And the increase in lengths of deployments will be difficult for people."

There are 14 active Navy carriers.

The center's Sunshine Choir will go to Snyder Oaks Care Center for a program at 10 a.m. Friday. The choir will be leading a patriotic program in the center on July 2. The choir will go on summer vacation after July 2 and resume rehearsals and performances in September. The Kitchen Band has scheduled a vacation for the month of July.

The Senior Center is coordinating patterns and material for a "United States Quilt" to be made up of one block per state. Volunteers who would piece at least one block for the quilt are being sought, and anyone interested is invited to contact Mrs. Fenton for details. She may be reached at the center Monday through Friday or by calling the office at 573-4035.

Special program

NEW YORK (AP) — Kenny G kicked off a special scholarship program for music and literature students by serenading more than 1,000 fans at City Hall Park. He told the Friday lunch crowd that he started his career by simply "playing the saxophone," but now found himself able "to encourage students to express themselves."

The six scholarships, worth $60,000, will be given by Betelsmann, the worldwide media concern, to seniors in the city's public high schools.

Media's role in Pepsi scare studied

SEATTLE (AP) — Had it been anything other than a syringe in that first can of Diet Pepsi — a nail or bolt or even a mouse — Seattle's KIRO-TV might have passed on the story.

"Unusual is one of the criteria for news, and this certainly was unusual," said news anchor Gary Justice. "Because it caught our attention, we thought it would catch the attention of people watching, too."

It certainly did.

Federal officials and some media watchdogs now blame news accounts for helping spread this week's wave of phony Pepsi tamperings nationwide. And journalists are re-examining their role — trying to warn the public without encouraging hoaxes.

"Journalists should be concerned about their impact. There are too many crazy people out there," said Jack Cox, director of the Foundation for American Communications in Los Angeles.

His nonprofit organization, which runs seminars for journalists, started focusing on coverage of tampering cases in 1986, when news accounts of tampering incidents were followed immediately by more reported tamperings.

Since then, the pattern has been repeated.

"It's pretty clear that there is a direct correlation between publicity and tampering," Cox said.

That seems true of the Pepsi-tampering story, which started June 9 when Earl and Mary Triplett, an elderly couple in Tacoma, told their lawyer they had found a syringe in a can of Pepsi.

Lawyer Frank Ladenburg says he wrote a letter to the county health department and faxed letters to the bottler and distributor, telling them of the Tripletts' account.

Then he called reporters.

"The Tripletts were trying to report something that seemed dangerous, bizarre. With all the tampering events that have happened, you wouldn't want to sit back and not report it," Ladenburg said Friday.

KIRO and other area TV stations went with the story the night of June 10.

The fact that the story originated with the Tripletts' attorney raised eyebrows among reporters, but Justice said the Tripletts appeared credible.

The story merited attention because genuine cases of product-tampering do occur, including a Sudafed tampering in 1991 that killed two Seattle-area residents, the anchorman said. Having a syringe involved, evoking fear of AIDS, also made it newsworthy, he said.

Roger Lowell, district director of the Food and Drug Administration, said he wished reporters had come to him before going public.

"If I say there's an investigation going on and there doesn't appear to be any public risk and people don't need to be warned, I would hope the press would trust that," Lowell said.

The story stayed regional until Saturday, when FDA officials confirmed they were investigating a second Seattle-area tampering report and the head of the regional bottling company had gone on Seattle TV mentioning possible sabotage.

No recall was necessary, Lowell told reporters the next day, but he suggested that consumers in the bottler's four Northwestern state region should examine their cans of Diet Pepsi and pour the soda into a glass before drinking.

Cox criticizes the national attention for a story involving no deaths or injuries and in which the threat was regional. National publicity planted the idea of tampering in people's minds.

Some news organizations counter that argument.

"You could carry that to an extreme and say we shouldn't report on violent crime from one area of the country because it would give others the idea to copy it," said Darrell Christian, managing editor of The Associated Press.

"Pepsi is a nationally known product," Christian said. "Even if all such claims were isolated to Seattle, I think it's of interest to readers on the East Coast as well."

By Monday, the number of reported tamperings mushroomed, and by week's end, more than 50 cases of alleged tampering had been reported in at least 23 states. Yet FDA officials said Friday that not a single case had been confirmed as deliberate tampering at the plant.

By Wednesday, the first of several arrests were made for alleged false reports.

Church-school lines blurred by court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court further lowered the wall between church and state Friday by ruling that deaf parochial school students may be provided publicly funded sign-language interpreters.

Such aid benefits the child — not the religious school — and thus does not violate the constitutionally mandated separation of government and religion, the high court ruled 5-4 in an Arizona case.

"When the government offers a neutral service on the premises of a sectarian school as part of a general program that is in no way skewed towards religion ... that service does not offend the Establishment Clause," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

The Constitution's First Amendment bars the government from "establishment of religion."

The decision was the third this month in which the high court ruled against government bodies in disputes over their relationship with religion.

In one earlier case, the court ruled that religious groups must have the same access as other community groups to public schools during non-school hours. In another, it said a Florida religious group has a constitutional right to sacrifice animals during worship services, despite a community ban.

KKK grand dragon must talk

AUSTIN (AP) — A grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan must answer questions about charges that the white supremacist group used death threats and other tactics to stifle desegregation attempts in East Texas, a judge ruled Friday.

State District Judge John Dietz ordered Charles Lee, grand dragon of the White Camelia Knights of the KKK, to talk to prosecutors investigating claims of intimidation targeted at black residents who sought public housing in the mostly white community of Vidor.

Several Vidor residents who live in the public housing project have submitted sworn testimony that Klan members have threatened violence if blacks were allowed to move into the 2,000-unit project, said Bill Conover, an assistant state attorney general representing the Texas Commission on Human Rights.

Lee had declined to talk to state attorneys last month during a hearing into claims that the Klan violated the Texas Fair Housing Act. He invoked his constitutional right not to incriminate himself.

But Dietz said the state's civil case was compelling enough to force Lee to answer questions that would identify members of the KKK, the group's assets, financial records, memos, schedules, telephone records and any information about Klan activities in Vidor in late 1992.

Lee said he would not respond to any questions that might incriminate himself or other members of the Klan.

Sculley steps aside as CEO

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — John Sculley, one of the computer industry's most visible leaders, stepped aside Friday as chief executive officer of Apple Computer Inc. Analysts said the computer maker, struggling to boost flagging earnings, needed a change in top management.

Sculley will remain chairman of the nation's second-largest personal computer manufacturer and said he plans to focus on new business opportunities for Apple. Michael Spindler, president and chief operating officer, will become chief executive officer.

While Sculley downplayed the significance of the transition after 10 years as CEO, analysts said it shows the company is moving to shore up its core PC business, where profits have been in decline due to price cuts resulting from stiff competition.

"The company has been drifting," said Bruce Lupatkin, an analyst at Hambrecht & Quist, a research and investment firm in San Francisco. Lupatkin said Sculley has been detached and "does not show any interest in being involved in the day-to-day business of the company."

Sculley, however, said he had been grooming Spindler for several years.

"There are really no surprises in this announcement," he told reporters in a telephone conference call. "There is just too much for a single person to be able to do."

Citing lower PC prices, Apple last week forecast an earnings decline for the second half of its fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The company earned $110.9 million in its second fiscal quarter, a 17 percent drop from a year earlier.

At 5:14 p.m., employees of Skinny's on Coliseum Drive reported a gas drive-off.

Police were called to a domestic disturbance at 8:57 p.m. in the 900 block of 24th Street. A report for family violence was filed.

Croatian Serbs vote on Bosnian linkup

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbs and Muslims accused each other Saturday of violating a cease-fire, as fighting reignited around the Muslim-held enclave of Gorazde.

In neighboring Croatia, Serbs holding a third of that republic's territory voted on linking up with their Bosnian Serb brethren. If the majority votes yes, as expected, increased fighting in Croatia could result and the Croatian leadership could rethink its support of carving up Bosnia along ethnic lines.

In Belgrade, the capital of Serbia and Yugoslavia, riot police clashed with about 10,000 opposition demonstrators, beating some of them as they demanded the release of their jailed leader and the resignation of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

The cease-fire that went into force Friday was signed Tuesday by top military commanders of [illegible] previous nationwide truces in Bosnia's 15-month-old war have collapsed quickly.

Eastern Bosnia, gripped by weeks of battles between Serbs and Bosnian government troops, seemed relatively quiet Friday. But on Saturday, both sides accused each other of violations near Gorazde, the eastern Bosnian Muslim enclave that has endured nearly a month of intense Serb attack.

Sarajevo radio said eight Bosnian government soldiers were killed and 24 were wounded in Serb attacks on Gorazde, and spoke of "many casualties" among civilians.

Noose tightens around exiled fundamentalists

PARIS (AP) — Hunted in their own country, Algeria's Muslim fundamentalists now are being silenced in Europe, once a haven for militant foes of the military-backed regime.

The guerrilla-style war being waged by extremists in Algeria is lending credibility to the leaders of the North African nation. The stigma of the camouflaged coup that brought them to power is fading, along with Western reticence.

Germany, France and Belgium have all taken steps recently to stifle the fundamentalist extremist movement.

The arrests in Germany of Rabah Kebir, spokesman for the banned Islamic Salvation Front, on June 7 and of Oussama Madani, son of the group's jailed leader, Abbasi Madani, on May 26 were the biggest blows yet to the exiled movement. They were arrested on Interpol warrants.

The two were among 38 people sentenced to death by an anti-terrorism court in Algiers on May 26 for the August 1992 bombing of Algiers airport that killed nine people.

Interpol said six international arrest warrants were issued on behalf of Algeria in the bombing case.

Raymond Kendall, secretary-general of the international police agency, told a news conference in Algiers Monday that Algeria and Germany were negotiating the return of Kebir and Madani. The two countries have no extradition treaty.

Germany's Supreme Court is the final arbiter.

Many Salvation Front militants fled Algeria after a huge crackdown began in January 1992. The army created a ruling council to thwart an impending election victory by fundamentalists seeking to install an Islamic state.

The exiles and their sympathizers gradually organized a European network to promote their cause, while extremists waged a guerrilla-style war at home that has killed more than 800 people.

But the noose is tightening around the exiles.

In Belgium, police stepped up checks on fundamentalist activity this week following reports that exiled Salvation Front officials planned to meet June 12. No meeting took place.

French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe said at a meeting Friday with his Algerian counterpart, Redha Malek, that France "wants to help Algeria fight terrorism and extremism." It was the first time a French official clearly and publicly expressed Paris' intent to help the Algerian regime in its fight against the Salvation Front.

French authorities recently banned a weekly newsletter published by a group backing the Salvation Front. The Algerian Fraternity in France is widely viewed here as the Front's legal voice. The Front backs the Algerian violence, calling it a holy war.

The May 27 ban said the newsletter "posed dangers to public order because of its violently anti-Western and anti-French tone." The four-page newsletter, Le Critere, carried rundowns of the latest clashes, Koranic verses in Arabic and political commentary.

Elections will be called after no confidence vote in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — In a rare act of political rebellion, a group of governing party lawmakers turned against Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa on Friday and provided the key votes to pass a no-confidence measure.

A teary-eyed Miyazawa then dissolved parliament, clearing the way for early elections.

Miyazawa's political career appeared finished after the vote, which culminated a struggle over how to clean up Japan's corruption-ridden electoral system.

The prime minister must call elections within 40 days. Miyazawa's only other option would have been to resign. It was only the second time since 1955 that parliament has passed a no-confidence motion.

The vote also threatens to split Miyazawa's Liberal Democratic Party, which has ruled Japan for almost four decades.

As parliament was dissolved, some Miyazawa opponents raised their arms and shouted "Banzai!," a rallying cry meaning "long life."

Miyazawa frowned and his eyes welled with tears as opposition politicians took the podium in parliament's lower house to blast him for failing to introduce the political reforms he had promised.

"Liar," cried Social Democratic Party chairman Sadao Yamahana, who smiled as he took the podium. Shouting over heckling from Liberal Democrats loyal to Miyazawa and cries of encouragement from supporters, Yamahana called Miyazawa "irresponsible."

After the vote of no confidence passed 255-220 — aided by 35 members of Miyazawa's party — the prime minister stood up and bowed briskly.

That a breakaway Liberal Democratic faction openly sided with the opposition is extremely rare. Members of parliament tend to vote and act strictly along party lines.

Convicted murderer files lawsuit against judge and attorney

A former Snyder man, sentenced to life in prison for a 1992 murder, has filed suit in U.S. District Court against his court-appointed attorney, Mike Brown, and 132nd District Court Judge Gene Dulaney.

Judge Dulaney said Friday he would withhold any comment until he has been served with court papers. Brown could not be reached for comment Friday.

The suit was filed by Rosario "Roy" Antonio Carreon, who on March 16 of this year pled guilty to the October 1992 murder of Delbert Dean Ostrander. Carreon, 31, was sentenced to life in prison by a 132nd District Court jury.

Trial testimony indicated that Ostrander was shot outside the doorway to his apartment on the evening of Oct. 10, 1992. Carreon fled but later turned himself in to sheriff's deputies. Ostrander died 12 days later in a Lubbock Hospital.

Two-star general ordered to retire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force general who publicly called President Clinton a draft-dodger and womanizer will retire after accepting a fine and letter of reprimand.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill McPeak told a Pentagon news conference that despite the general's honorable 32-year career such comments were "wrong and cannot be tolerated."

Maj. Gen. Harold Campbell was found by an Air Force investigation to have made disrespectful comments about Clinton at a European awards dinner in May.

Newspaper reports and Pentagon sources have quoted the general as calling Clinton a "pot-smoking," "womanizing," and "draft-dodging" commander-in-chief, but McPeak said he could not specify the exact words Campbell used.

Campbell agreed to leave the service as of July 1 and will be fined "in the neighborhood of $7,000," the Air Force said in a statement.

The letter of reprimand, which was not disclosed, will remain in the permanent file of the 53-year-old general who flew 100 combat missions over North Vietnam.

McPeak said he had spoken briefly with Campbell and that the general "agreed he made a mistake."

"He deeply regrets that the incident occurred, and he realizes this is not the greatest thing that has happened to the Air Force," the four-star general said. "He is remorseful and fully understands he made a mistake."

But McPeak said the two-star general did not explain why he made the comments in the first place.

Asked why he was personally answering reporters' questions in this case, McPeak, who rarely appears in the Pentagon briefing room, replied, "I owe a personal apology on this matter to the American people."

In a letter to Defense Secretary Les Aspin, McPeak said the decision "will sustain integrity and respect for the chain of command."

At the White House, President Clinton said, "I think Gen. McPeak handled it in the appropriate fashion." Campbell could not be immediately reached for comment; messages were left at his home and office.

Under the military's justice system, an officer who displays contempt for the president and other national leaders could face a maximum punishment of dismissal, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and confinement for one year. Those penalties are available after conviction at a court-martial.

The general's comments came during an awards banquet speech for service members at Soesterberg Air Base in the Netherlands on May 24.

In his letter, McPeak said "people who heard the remarks were upset," and that reports of the two-star's generals comments prompted the Air Force to investigate the incident.

Ohio native member of shuttle crew

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio native will trade childhood memories of playing with cardboard space capsules for the real thing Sunday when she takes off aboard the space shuttle Endeavor.

Nancy Jane Sherlock, 34, who grew up in Troy, is a mission specialist on the seven-day mission.

"I'm really looking forward to it," she said in a taped interview from the Johnson Space Center in Houston. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration prohibits astronaut interviews for two months before a launch. "It's all of the best missions wrapped into one.

"I have tried to envision what it's going to be like to look out the window and see the Earth for the first time," she said. "It's going to be absolutely breathtaking, but there is no way I could adequately describe it preflight."

The mission includes experiments in a privately developed module that will carry commercial payloads on future missions, retrieval of a European satellite and a four-hour spacewalk to prepare for space station construction.

Ms. Sherlock will be responsible for operating the shuttle's mechanical arm while retrieving the satellite and during the spacewalk.

She decided at an early age that she wanted to be a military pilot, even though that was an exclusively male job at the time.

"My family, teachers and others around me never discouraged me," she said. "They never grabbed me and said, 'Hey, a young gal can't be in the military as a pilot right now.' I was really unaware that those opportunities were closed."

After graduating from Ohio State University in 1980 with a bachelor's degree in biological sciences, Ms. Sherlock was commissioned in the Army in 1981. She attended Army Aviation School before joining the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as a flight simulator engineer on the shuttle training aircraft in 1987.

Although Ms. Sherlock was selected as an astronaut in January 1990, her 6-year-old daughter Stephanie still is a little nervous about the journey.

"She's very concerned about being without mommy for an extended period of time, but I've tried to keep her well aware of what I'll be doing all the time in orbit," Ms. Sherlock said.

"I have taken her to the orbiter and shown her where we'll be sleeping, where they keep the food and how we go to the bathroom — all of the important questions a 6-year-old would have."

Partnership needed with states regarding health care proposal

WOODSTOCK, Vt. (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton guaranteed Democratic governors flexibility to design their own health care plans Friday, conceding the federal government doesn't have "all the answers."

Mrs. Clinton also said in strong terms that the White House won't let people get away with not having insurance any more.

"We're going to tell individuals who think they can get by without coverage because they're 25 and believe they're immortal ... that when they end up in the emergency room and stick us with the bill, that we're not going to let that go on anymore," the first lady told the Democratic Governors Association.

"There can't be any more free lunch," Mrs. Clinton said. "It is an absolutely critical part of this plan that people become responsible. It is at the root of what it means to be an American, and we're going to start insisting upon it."

Earlier, other aides to President Clinton, who will need the governors' help to sell health care, said the administration is bracing for a battle in Congress over health care that could take nine months once Clinton introduces the plan, probably in late July or early September.

Mrs. Clinton, who is leading the White House effort on health care reform, urged patience as well.

"There is no way we can wave a magic wand or even pass a piece of legislation that will overnight solve all of our problems," she said. "Too many changes in attitude and behavior are going to be needed."

Mrs. Clinton sought to assure the 10 governors gathered here for an issues conference that they would have leeway to tailor health care plans to their states.

The federal government will set up a basic package of benefits available to all Americans, standards for cost controls and insurance rules to cut bureaucracy, Mrs. Clinton said.

It will be up to states to develop their own plans for implementing the guidelines, Mrs. Clinton said, urging a federal-state "partnership" to solve the crisis.

In 1961, author Ernest Hemingway shot himself to death at his home in Ketchum, Idaho.

States may have to refund money

WASHINGTON (AP) — States that collected billions of dollars in unlawful taxes from retired federal workers must provide refunds if no other way to remedy that harm can be found, the Supreme Court ruled Friday.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, said its 1989 decision declaring such taxes unconstitutional must be applied retroactively.

As a result, Virginia now faces the possibility of having to refund nearly $500 million to 200,000 retired federal workers, many of them retired from the military, who paid an invalid state tax between 1985 and 1989.

A Virginia law, like one in Michigan struck down by the high court in 1989, taxed federal pensions while exempting the pensions of retired state and local government employees. The court said such differing tax treatment is unconstitutional.

Friday's decision left an escape hatch for Virginia and other states, but there was great disagreement — inside and outside the court — over the likelihood that any state could avoid refunds.

Justice Clarence Thomas wrote for the court that Virginia must provide wronged taxpayers "relief consistent with federal due-process principles."

He suggested the only relief necessary might be a showing that taxpayers were free to withhold payments while challenging the unlawful taxes.

Deborah Love-Bryant, a spokeswoman for the state attorney general's office, said, "Virginia has tremendous flexibility. No refunds were ordered. We can proceed to the next stage of the matter — what ... relief is appropriate."

But Bob Tobias, president of the National Treasury Employees Union, said Virginia and other states eventually will be forced to pay refunds.

The Virginia case now will return to the state's Supreme Court.

Groups urge end to priest celibacy rule

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A national black Catholic organization Friday urged Pope John Paul II to change the church rule requiring most priests to be celibate.

"We are in a critical crisis in the Roman Catholic Church with its inconsistencies, its hierarchy of conservatism and monarchy," said Dr. Earl Belle Smith, a board member of the National Office For Black Catholics.

The organization issued a 10-page letter in San Antonio and in Rome stating the reasons it believes priests should not have to be celibate.

The move coincided with the opening in San Antonio of the sixth annual meeting of the Corps of Reserve Priests United for Service, a national group that favors optional priesthood celibacy. CORPUS endorsed the black Catholics' group letter.

The letter asks the pope to "allow candidates for ordination in the Latin rite of Catholic Christianity to choose for themselves, in prayerful discernment, whether the Holy Spirit calls them to the holy gift of celibacy or to the holy gift of marriage."

Eastern rite priests in the Catholic Church and married Episcopal priests received into the Roman Catholic Church who are ordained as Catholic priests are permitted to be married.

Smith, a cancer surgeon in Pittsburgh who formerly worked at the Vatican, said he researched church history and interviewed numerous theologians before the National Office For Black Catholics decided to take this, its first formal stand on the issue.

All the apostles except St. John were married, Smith said, adding that priest celibacy is a rule developed not by God but by humans within the church.

From the 4th century to the 12th century, most priests were married, he said. Though there is no evidence of one particular pope instituting celibacy, Pope Gregory in the 12th century opposed abolishing it, perhaps for political and economic reasons, Smith said.

"We are dealing with 1993. Most of us know that man can change," Smith said. "The Roman Catholic Church is in a state of crisis. Something should be done."

He urged 10 million or more American Catholics to write to the pope to try to change his mind.

A statement by Smith's group said changing the celibacy rule is especially crucial because of recent church scandals involving sexual abuse and pedophilia and an increase in "priestless Sundays," a reference to parishes with no pastor.

CORPUS president Anthony Padovano said Vatican statistics show 43 percent of Catholic parishes worldwide have no pastor. Padovano contends the celibacy rule is the reason. Many of those parishes are led by lay people who cannot perform all the religious functions of priests.

Padovano said a Gallup poll last year revealed 75 percent of Catholics support a married priesthood.

Scurry County Folks By Shirley A. Gorman

A kidney transplant eight years ago in Lubbock gave Vickie Jones "a second chance on life," and she hasn't wasted a moment of it since. That's not unusual, because the Snyder native has a knack for doing ordinary things in an extraordinary way.

One of her most recent accomplishments includes breaching the typically male-dominated welding profession. Holding her own among male counterparts, she is currently working on a tank in Scurry County, applying some of the skills she has learned during three semesters at Western Texas College. She lacks the fourth and final semester, which she plans to complete this fall.

Taking the class and this physically demanding job has increased her self-esteem and confidence so much that she now believes, "If I can do this job, I can do anything."

The continued success of her transplant, bolstered by daily doses of prednisone which helps ward off rejection, has given Vickie renewed energy and zest for life which she began channeling into welding some 18 months ago.

The young wife and mother who moved to China Grove from Snyder 2½ years ago with her husband and three sons, never set out to blaze new trails. It just happened that way.

She originally wanted to enroll in one semester of welding with the idea that, "I could help my husband, Bobby (an electrician at WTC) around the house." But, after talking to Sam Walker, WTC welding instructor, Vickie decided to go for the two-year certificate.

"He was very encouraging and supporting. He made me feel that I could do anything, so I decided to try," Vickie said.

Vickie is not Walker's first female student, but she is the only one in recent years.

She soon discovered she liked welding a lot more than she ever thought she would. This surprised her because she had never lit a welding torch before enrolling in the WTC course.

During three semesters of welding, Vickie has learned many things, including acetlyne torch, arc welding, TIG, and MIG. An emphasis is put on safety, including wearing long-sleeved "leathers," safety hood for welding, and protective glasses.

Pursuing a certificate in welding has been quite a milestone for Vickie, who dropped out of school in the ninth grade and has worked for minimum wages ever since. Before enrolling at WTC, she earned her GED certificate.

Finding acceptance in a male-dominated profession has not been easy. She was "scared to death" and so nervous the first day of class that she managed to lock her keys in the car. She has come a long way since then.

Vickie's male counterparts may not have been too sure of her at first, but they have accepted her. For the past three semesters she has been the object of several good-natured, practical jokes, such as putting a notch in her acetylene torch's hose so the flame would go out.

Jokes aside, Vickie said they all band together in class and help each other because "we are all here to learn."

And Vickie has done just that. From never having lit an acetylene torch, she has progressed to getting a summer job as a helper, one who assists the welder. Occasionally, she also welds. It's tough, demanding and dirty work — 11 hours a day, including a 30-minute lunch, six days a week.

Being the only woman on the job has neither helped or hindered her. She was hired to do a job and that is what she does. She spent the first day grinding (smoothing and polishing) sections of the tank floor's hard surface. She was so tired after that first shift that she was ready to quit. But she didn't, and the job has gotten easier in the ensuing weeks.

When Vickie returned home that first day, two of her sons, Nicky, 11, and Brady, 9, greeted her on the porch with a well-deserved around of applause.

Vickie has discovered that she likes earning bigger weekly paychecks as much as she likes the work itself.

Nonetheless, she said she realizes that she does not have the body strength needed to do this work the year around. Instead, after she graduates from WTC, she would prefer to work in a welding shop.

While Vickie's family supports her, they did have to make a few adjustments in the beginning. They all pitched in to help get household tasks finished. The boys, including Casey, 18, who graduated from Snyder High School in May, also had to get used to seeing their mother in coveralls and boots, rather than dresses.

In past years, the boys have had to make other adjustments also. Moving to the country meant less time to engage in after-school activities. But, Vickie also noted that they spend their summer days fishing or just enjoying the outdoors, rather than sitting in front of the TV set.

When asked what advice she might give a woman contemplating studying welding, Vickie said, "Try it for a semester to see if you like it. You can learn a lot during a semester. And lighter jobs are available."

Millikin University's founder, philanthropist James Millikin, was so publicity-shy that he declined a place on the platform when President Theodore Roosevelt dedicated the new university in 1903. Millikin preferred to mingle with the crowd.

LADY ON THE JOB — Vickie Jones, enrolled in the two-year welding course at Western Texas College, has found summer employment as a helper with a tank crew in Scurry County. She spends much of her 11-hour workdays grinding (smoothing and polishing) hard surfaces. She also does some welding. The only woman on the job, Vickie works the same hours and follows the same regimen as her male counterparts. Lacking one semester, Vickie plans to complete certificate requirements this fall. ## Cheap foods in today's lifestyles

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

Cooking for your friends is still a sure way to impress them, but it's no longer necessary to cook with gourmet store ingredients to show off.

Cheap food, in fact, fits in with '90s concerns about both diet and pocketbooks. Less expensive ingredients often are the legumes and seasonal produce health authorities want everyone to eat more of.

Brooke Dojny and Melanie Barnard, authors of "Parties!," now have written "Cheap Eats" (HarperPerennial, $9.95), full of 44 menus for four for the cost of their book or less.

"Today ... people have come back to the delicious reality that a plate of perfectly cooked pasta with a garlicky clam sauce will win a lot more accolades than a tiny mound of fish eggs imported from halfway around the world," they write in the introduction.

The menus in "Cheap Eats" are organized by season, and among the spring choices are dilled salmon cakes, sauteed sugar snap peas with wine vinegar, roasted Parmesan potatoes and glazed strawberry shortcake tart.

The book includes lots of traditional favorites, too, such as chicken pot pie, macaroni and cheese jazzed up with chilies, oven-fried chicken and peanut butter cookies.

To accomplish their goal, Dojny and Barnard focused on seasonal produce and regional cuts of meat, shopping in volume, coupons and in-house brands. They shopped at several Connecticut supermarkets for their research, so food costs may vary in some regions.

Vitamin trouble

Vitamins are good, but too much of this particular good thing can be risky, warns Dr. Terri Barton, who heads the drug information service at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center in Oklahoma City.

Most people don't really need vitamin supplements, but if you do take them, practice moderation and be aware of the risks, Barton says. She notes these problems with specific vitamins:

— Vitamin A. Overdoses can lead to hyper vitaminosis A resulting in fatigue, abdominal upset, brittle nails and other adverse side affects.

— Vitamin D. Like vitamin A, it can accumulate in the body. "Some side affects can be quite serious, such as kidney failure and kidney stones. Symptoms indicating too much vitamin D include nausea, weakness, and widespread aches, usually prior to more serious problems."

— Vitamin C. While megadoses aren't necessarily toxic, they can cause stomach upset or diarrhea. "Unfortunately, for fans of this vitamin, it still has not been well substantiated that large doses do you much good, including fighting the common cold."

— Vitamin E. "There are legitimate medical uses for this vitamin. Once again, moderation is in order."

— The B Vitamins. "All sorts of claims have been made for these vitamins, especially B-12, and while toxic effects from megadoses are not common from this vitamin group, caution should be used when talking about megadoses."

Roberts, Green marry

Marriage vows were exchanged by Makala Dale Roberts and Terry Lynn Green at 3:30 p.m. on Feb. 14 in the East Side Church of Christ. Tom Holcomb, minister of the church, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Kenneth Roberts of Albuquerque, N.M., and Daisy Roberts of Elkhart, Kan., and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Green of Snyder.

Decorating the altar area were two potted plants, a pair of heart-shaped candelabras that were decorated with greenery, and the unity candle placed in the center.

Mindy Green of Big Spring, the groom's niece, and Carol Elaine Watson of Liberal, Kan., the bride's niece, were candlelighters.

The wedding music included a solo, "Wind Beneath My Wings" and "I Could Never Promise You," by Sterling Cave. Also, Ken Spoor and Miss Cave sang "There is Love" and "Masterpiece." Terry Bowden presented "Singles Desirata."

Vershel Smith, a friend of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a white lace-over-satin gown with a fitted princess bodice. It joined a double satin skirt which dropped to a full, graduated hemline and swirled to a point in the front that was lavishly beaded with a pearl and crystal applique. Her long fitted lace sleeves were closed with tiny satin covered buttons and her jeweled neckline came to a V in the back.

A delicate wreath of ornate silk fabric flowers and sprays of pearls held the fingertip veil that was edged in deep scalloped lace. The back of the veil featured beaded lace cut-outs. It was fashioned by Sallie Bailey.

Maid of honor was Janie Carter, friend of the groom's, and bridesmaids were Ynella Miller of Asotin, Wash., and Suzetta Watson of Liberal, Kan., sisters of the bride. Maid of honor's bouquet was a cluster of blue silk flowers and her gown was a jacquard print top and satin burgundy skirt. Other attendants carried small clusters of blue flowers and wore jacquard print dress top and royal blue satin skirts.

Flower girls were Kara Brumley, groom's niece, and Marquita Watson of Liberal, Kan., bride's niece.

Ring bearer was Erin Watson of Liberal, Kan., bride's niece.

Steve Green of Big Spring served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Steve Parker of Dallas and Tyson Cromeens. The groom wore a fulldress Christian Dior Parisian tuxedo and the groomsmen wore matching tuxedos. Ushers Jay Cromeens and Rick Brumley, both brothers-in-law of the groom, Luke Green of Big Spring, groom's nephew, and Bill Watson of Liberal, Kan., bride's brother-in-law, all wore suits and matching ties.

Janet Conaway registered guests.

A reception followed the ceremony in the multipurpose building of the church.

The reception, featuring a buffet, was held in the multipurpose building of the church following the ceremony. The bridal table was draped with a white, double lace skirt and an overlay which was poufed every 14 inches by large burgundy taffeta roses.

The table was centered with a large satin and lace heart, trimmed in pearls, which held the bride's arm bouquet of white flowers tied with white ribbon and lace. Two white doves adorned in pearls were nestled beneath the bouquet. Crystal candle holders held tall white tapers. The couple's pictures sat beside the centerpiece.

The table held a three tiered wedding cake, centered over a fountain of royal blue flowing water. Two satellite cakes were on either side, connected by filigree white stairways with flowers and greenery. The heart-shaped cakes were decorated with ruffles of frosting and shell borders. Pearls were draped around the entire sides of the cakes. Silk arrangements of burgundy and royal blue flowers were placed between each tier and on top of each satellite cake. The top cake was white; the center was carrot cake; and the bottom tier was Italian cream. The satellite cakes were strawberry. All were encircled with flowers and greenery.

Tropical fruit punch was served from a silver fountain. Nuts, mints and trail mix were served from American Fostoria crystal. Silver appointments completed the table.

The round groom's table was draped with a burgundy taffeta skirt and was covered with a royal blue overlay which had 14-inch poufs, gathered by large burgundy roses. The table was centered with a brass candlestick, holding burgundy tapers. Easels held awards from various organizations given to the groom for volunteer work. They were entwined with greenery. A large footed platter held the groom's banana nut cake. Coffee was served from a brass coffee service. Nuts, mints and trail mix on crystal dishes were also on the groom's table.

The buffet table was draped with a burgundy matching cloth. Large crystal footed platters held a variety of sandwiches. Vegetable and relish trays, dips, hot soups, heart-shaped corn bread and iced tea were also served.

The head table, covered with a white satin skirt and a lace overlay, was decorated with royal blue runners and crystal candle holders containing burgundy candles. Guest tables were covered with white lace print cloths and were decorated like the head table.

Serving the groom's table was Holly Brumley, sister of the groom.

Following the honeymoon to Abilene, the couple is at home in Snyder. The bride has a master's degree in psychology and is an associate school psychologist in Sweetwater. The bridegroom attended Western Texas College, majoring in journalism.

Fisherman's recipe for his catch

By ELIZABETH BRIGGS
For AP Special Features

My daughter, Ashley, is 9 years old. She is a "master angler" and can never catch enough fish! I can always picture her on a riverbank pleading, "just one more minute, Dad!"

I remember one afternoon when Ashley was 7 years old. She caught 19 trout while Dad only caught three. He had quite a time getting his little girl to understand what a "limit" was.

Ashley didn't want to throw any of her fish back. Finally, after close scrutiny, the chosen few were carefully gutted, washed and packed for the journey home, where father and daughter prepared their traditional evening meal.

Here are a few of my family's favorite recipes for your prized catch — whether it's a straight from the lake — or the fish market.

SAUTEED TROUT WITH MAPLE SOY GLAZE

1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds
3 pan-dressed trout
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon unsalted butter
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
3 tablespoons maple syrup
1 tablespoon reduced-sodium soy sauce

Heat a small skillet over medium heat. Add the sesame seeds and toast them over medium heat, swirling the pan constantly, until the seeds are golden brown. Immediately pour them out of the pan onto a plate and reserve.

Rinse the trout in cold water, rubbing the cavity well to remove any traces of blood. Pat the fish dry.

Combine the salt, pepper and flour in a pie dish; stir to blend evenly. Dredge the trout in the seasoned flour and shake off any excess.

Heat the butter and oil in a skillet over high heat until very hot. Add the trout; reduce the heat slightly. Saute without moving on the first side for about 4 minutes, or until golden brown. Turn the fish once and finish cooking on the second side for another 3 to 4 minutes.

Remove the trout from the skillet; add the maple syrup and soy sauce to the pan. Increase the heat to high; let the mixture reduce about 2 minutes, until thickened. Return the trout to the skillet; turn to coat evenly with the glaze. Place the trout on a heated platter or plates; scatter the toasted sesame seeds over the fish. Makes 3 servings.

Note: A pan-dressed trout has been cleaned, but usually has the head and tail intact. If you are cleaning your own trout, you may opt to remove the head and tail, or ask your fish-butcher to do it for you.

LEMON-HERBED RICE

1 teaspoon unsalted butter or vegetable oil
1 teaspoon grated lemon zest
1/2 cup minced onion
1/2 cup rice
1 cup chicken stock or broth
2 teaspoons chopped fresh chives
2 teaspoons chopped fresh basil
2 teaspoons chopped fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Heat the butter or oil in a saucepan over medium heat. Add the lemon zest; saute about 1 minute, or until there is a strong lemon aroma. Add the onion, stir well, and cover the saucepan. Cook over low heat for about 3 minutes, or until the onion is limp and translucent.

Add the rice; stir well to coat with the oil. Add the chicken stock or broth; bring it to a simmer. Stir the rice once with a fork and then cover the saucepan. Simmer the rice over low heat for about 20 minutes, or until the rice is tender to the bite. Remove the rice from the heat, remove the lid and stir in the chopped chives, basil and parsley, tossing with two forks. Add salt and pepper to taste. Makes 3 servings.

Vow's said by Irons, Jacobs

Emily Joanne Irons and Clay Sherman Jacobs pledged their marriage vows at 7 p.m., March 13 in Colonial Hill Baptist Church in a candlelight ceremony.

Dr. Lynn Pryor of Kirby Baptist Church in San Antonio, former associate pastor and minister of youth at Colonial Hill Baptist Church, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Johnny and Zelma Irons of Snyder are parents of the bride. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tomlinson of Lamesa. John and Nelda Jacobs of Lubbock are parents of the groom and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Murry of Petersburg, Tex., are his grandparents.

A large arrangement of peach flowers served as a backdrop for the couple's vows. On either side were two 15-branch rainbow candelabras. Large candlelight lace bows marked the family pews. Also in the altar area was the unity candle, decorated with peach flowers and greenery.

Cousins of the bride, Fealicia Ramirez of Cross Plains and Melanie Hollmann of Odessa, were candlelighters. They wore peach tea-length dresses with dropped waist and removable collars that were overlaid with bridal lace. They each wore wrist corsages of peach silk flowers.

Prelude music included "Reflections," "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us," "Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus," and "Clair de Lune." Grandparents and parents were escorted to their seats to "Wind Beneath My Wings." Bridesmaids entered to "Rigaudon," followed by traditional bridal chorus as the bride entered. Blaine Irons, the bride's brother, sang "I'll Still Be Loving You" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Triesta Lilly was pianist and Paula Howard was organist. They also performed "The Gift of Love" on flutes as the couple lighted the unity candle.

The bride's father presented her in marriage as she was attired in a candlelight gown of bridal satin. It had a drop-waist and a fitted bodice that was overlaid with embroidery and completed with a stand-up collar of lace. Her skirt was long and full, featuring a bow in the back.

The bride's elbow-length, tulle veil fell from a large bow of bridal satin. Streamers of iridescent and peach baby's breath fell from the knot in the bow. Her bouquet was cascading silk peach and white roses with antique lace woven within.

The bride's gown and veil were made by her grandmother, Mrs. Roy Tomlinson. She wore pearls belonging to her grandmother for "something borrowed." A handkerchief, belonging to the bride's great-grandmother and namesake, the late Mrs. Emily Velma Brown was "something old."

Maid of honor was Amy Armstrong of Waco. Bridesmaids were Shae Gowin of Snyder and the groom's sister, Melanie Songer of Lubbock. They wore dropped waist, tea-length green satin gowns, featuring lace collars. Cousin of the bride, Elizabeth Hollmann of Odessa, was junior bridesmaid. She wore a peach satin dress with a lace collar, designed like the maid of honor's.

All floral pieces were designed by the groom's mother.

Best man was Chester Campbell of Austin, and groomsman was Blaine Irons of Abilene, bride's brother. Joey Steakley of Snyder was junior groomsman.

The groom was attired in an after-six, black fulldress Milano tuxedo. It included a designer fashion fabric jacket with tails of black with satin notch lapels. The self-faced top collar and satin covered buttons completed the jacket. The trousers were pleated black, matching fabric. He wore a white wing shirt with black studs. To complete the attire, the groom chose a white three-button matching vest, white tie and boutonniere.

Other male attendants wore tuxedos matching the groom's with black cummerbunds and black ties.

Lori Unruh of Snyder presided at the registry table covered with a floor length, white satin cloth with an overlay of candlelight lace that adorned the bridal gown. The wedding book lay beside a bride's doll, belonging to the bride's mother.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall following the ceremony. The room was lavishly decorated with greenery and silk flowers. The focal point was the bride's table, an 18-foot serpentine table draped with wedding lace to the floor, overlaid with a white matching bridal lace. Poufs every 14 inches were accented with a rather large peach satin bow with long matching streamers. Each bow was handmade by Sallie Bailey of Snyder.

A white framed cross-stitched detailed arrangement of peach and green fowers included the names, "Clay" and "Emily" and the couple's wedding date. It was handmade by the bride's mother, Zelma Irons.

The special free-arm floating cake frame was entwined with emerald greenery, peach flowers, satin ribbon and fern. Between each layer, matching centerpieces completed the floral arrangements. The moist chiffon cake was frosted with real butter and cream cheese. The same frosting was repeated between the other layers. The entire cake was decorated with an Australian lace design. A reverse and forward shell border was used on both the top and bottom of all three tiers.

The top layer held a Precious Moments miniature bride and groom, surrounded with a satin lace heart that was intertwined with fern and silk flowers. The groom's mother arranged all the flowers for the cake and the table.

Appointments of silver were used on the bride's table. A large silver champagne fountain served a citrus fruit mixture of punch. Mixed nuts, buttermints and dried fruit trailmix were served from American Fostoria crystal. Emerald napkins, with the couple's names and wedding date engraved, were also displayed. The bride's wedding bouquet completed the table decorations.

The groom's table was draped with a satin floor-length cover, overlaid with lace, and then scalloped to match the bride's table. Bows and streamers completed the table that was also set with appointments of silver.

The groom's chocolate cake, was baked in two heart-shaped layers, in graduated sizes. The cake was filled with mocha chocolate and sat upon a large crystal platter, raised from the table surface by a matching 8-inch base. A design of chocolate Fleur-De-Lis accented the sides. Variegated shades of chocolate roses and leaves topped the cake. Reverse shell borders surrounded the cakes. A crystal-footed bowl held trail mix. Mixed nuts and mints were served from crystal, and coffee was served from a six-piece sterling silver service.

Individual tables for guests were covered with peach liners and overlaid with white lace. Each table had green runners in satin ribbon. Goblets on each table served dried fruit. A gift table was draped with a white satin and lace cloth which also held the rice bags.

The bride's and groom's cakes were baked and designed by Reta Graham's Cake Shop and the reception was catered by Reta's and hosted by the bride's parents.

The couple was honored with a rehearsal dinner the night before their wedding, hosted by the groom's parents. The entire wedding party and families attended the full barbecue buffet.

Serving at the bride's table were Kristi Tomlinson, Kenora Tomlinson, both of Lubbock, and Amber Slough of Irving. All are cousins of the bride.

Tena James of Snyder and Cathy Ramsey of Petersburg, the groom's aunt, served at the groom's table.

The couple's wedding trip was to San Antonio. They reside in Snyder where the bride is a graduate of Western Texas College and is currently employed by the county. Jacobs attended WTC and is employed by Wilson Motors.

The money of the moment

By Phillip Alder

We have all heard about the heat of the moment. At the bridge table, this sorts out the men from the boys. The men keep their eyes firmly on the cards and find the right plays. The boys work it out in the post-mortem after they have erred.

Today's deal comes from a rubber-bridge game in London, for the paltry stake of $3 per point. How do you think the play proceeded in three no-trump?

After an aggressive auction, West led the spade two, and East, confident South had the ace, made the expert play of the jack to find out who held the queen.

When only six clubs appeared in the dummy, declarer Howard Cohen realized that he stood no legitimate chance. Neither opponent was going to duck the heart ace, and a diamond switch would be automatic. Willing to gamble 50 points (and $150) in an effort to throw up a smokescreen, Cohen won the first trick with the spade ace.

In other circumstances, this would have been brilliant, but here it seemed to sacrifice his potential ninth trick. Watch what happened, though. Cohen led a low heart. Afraid declarer was trying to steal his ninth trick, West shot in with the heart ace. Then, instead of correctly switching to a diamond, he returned the spade 10.

Having been taken in at trick one, East thoughtlessly played low. Cohen scooped up the spade queen and soon claimed 11 tricks.

Afterward East apologized. If West had started with the Q-10 of spades, he would have led the queen, not the 10, at trick three. In the heat of the moment, East — and West — lost a lot of money.

Books for job hunting

NEW YORK (AP) — Many triumphs in job-hunting start with a trip to a library or local bookstore. At the library, check trade journals, local business publications and analysts' reports from brokerage firms.

Among the books recommended for job searches: Ron Fry's "Your First Job," Elizabeth Tenner's "The Smith College Guide: How to Find and Manage Your First Job," Jennifer Arnold Mast's "Job Seeker's Guide to 1,000 Top Employers," Betsy Sheldon's "Smart Woman's Guide to Resumes and Job Hunting" and "The Damn Good Resume Guide" by Yana Parker.

Regional "Job Bank" books by Bob Adams Inc. provide relevant information for job-hunters including percentage growth and a company's average number of entry-level hires made each year.

For those feeling adventuresome: "How to Get a Job in Europe" by Robert Sanborn and "Jobs in Paradise: The Definitive Guide to Exotic Jobs Everywhere" by Jeffrey Maltzman are two good sources of information.

Choosing eyeglasses

DALLAS (AP) — Choosing new eyeglasses can be a harrowing experience, and industry consultants advise selecting glasses that suit your face, coloring and personality.

Frame expert Del McNally, a vice president of Pearle Vision, suggests that for large faces, bigger frames work best, and smaller, lighter frames are most suitable for small faces.

Oval faces, the most common type, are regarded as "perfect" because virtually any frame style can be worn.

As a rule, says McNally, people with round faces shouldn't wear round lenses. Frames with sharp angles or dramatic shapes are preferable, he adds.

To make a square face appear longer, according to McNally, round or softly curved frames weighted at the top are best.

And to help "widen" a long or oblong face, the wearer should choose frames extending beyond the temples, he adds.

Inventor of shorthand

TROWBRIDGE, England (AP) — Sir Isaac Pitman, inventor of a system of shorthand, was born in Trowbridge in 1813.

After a period as a schoolmaster, Pitman developed his shorthand method, which soon became popular. He was awarded a knighthood in 1894.

Pitman published the Phonetic Journal from 1842 until his death in 1897.

Job market said faring better

NEW YORK (AP) — Economic forecasters say 1993 college graduates and other new entrants to the job market are likely to fare better than last year's jobhunters — but that doesn't mean finding a good position will be easy.

"The market was at its absolute worst last year, so anything's an improvement," said Tony Lee, editor of National Business Employment Weekly. "1993's going to be a little bit better, but nothing like the boom in the late '80s."

Since recession blues are going but not completely gone, young job-hunters can be successful — but they will have to put in more effort and creativity than would others in a time of great economic growth.

"The key to success is persistence," Lee said. "You've got to look at job-hunting as a job itself, spending 8 to 10 hours a day doing it."

Hiring increased by 7.7 percent this year, according to a survey by College Placement Council, a researcher for Dow Jones & Co. While service companies plan to boost recruiting by 12.5 percent, manufacturers expect to decrease offers by 5.4 percent.

Some recruiters and job placement counselors say applying to small and medium-sized firms is the best way to find a job because companies with growth are often those with 100 employees or less. Recruiters say graduates who are only interested in big, well-known companies are taking the wrong approach.

Sources on effective job hunting and directors at Columbia University's Office of Career Services offer some of these suggestions:

— Polish your resume. Use action verbs to sell your strengths, be concise and be obsessive about proofreading. Avoid repetition of words like duties and responsibilities. Use resume paper in a shade of white, beige, gray or ivory. List a high grade-point average or awards you have won, but limit or leave out a laundry list of extracurricular activities.

— Contacts, contacts, contacts. Some of the best jobs are found through networking. Many college placement offices keep lists of alumni contacts that may be useful in landing a job. Professors, personal or family contacts, former employers and summer internship supervisors may be helpful, too.

— Do your homework. Researching the employer before you send out your cover letter will enable you to write a much more focused, intelligent letter, and it will help prepare you for an interview. Read up on the organization by looking at news articles, annual reports or company brochures. Know the company's products, services and competitors. If possible, speak to present or former employees to get a sense of the employer's expectations, the general work atmosphere and whether the job would suit you.

— Think before you speak. Prepare for an interview by thinking about your strengths and weakness, what makes you different and more qualified than others, and what you have learned in school and in past jobs. Come with a few questions about the job or company; you'll usually be asked if you have any at the end of the interview.

— Never underestimate the value of temporary employment and internships. Some companies regularly make job offers to temps who do well because it is a cost-effective way to try out entry-level employees. At the same time, you can try out a few different positions within the company. Internships can also lead to jobs or contacts who lead to jobs.

Fisk, Donaldson marry in church

Sherry Kathleen Fisk became the bride of Christopher Don Donaldson, both of Snyder, in a candlelight ceremony at 6:30 p.m. on June 4 in Calvary Baptist Church.

Rev. Larry McAden, pastor, officiated the double-ring rites.

The bride's parents are Laura and Russell Fisk of Snyder and the groom's mother is Margie Sawtelle of Houston.

The altar was decorated with a brass arch adorned with white bows and burgundy roses, flanked by brass heart-shaped candelabras. Bows of white with burgundy lace marked pews.

Lighting candles were Jerry Burton and Matt Davis, both cousins of the bride.

Organist was Mrs. Kim Nolan. The taped song, "Wildest Dreams," by Marty Brown, was played.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown featuring a square neck trimmed with lace and pearls. Her leg-of-mutton sleeves were embellished with lace and pearls. A bow and bustle highlighted the gathered skirt back which fell into a long train.

She chose a headpiece of twisted pearls with flowers on either side of her head attaching a fingertip veil, gathered in back.

She carried a bouquet of white and burgundy roses assembled with greenery and bows of white and burgundy ribbon. For something old, she wore her grandmother's ring; something new was her dress; something borrowed were her mother-in-law's shoes; and something blue was her garter.

Bridesmaid was Nora Hernandez. She wore a dress of burgundy, blue and shades of pink flowers on ivory and carried a bouquet matching the bride's. Mother of the bride made the attendants' dresses.

Flower girl Shelley Fisk, sister of the bride, wore a dress matching the bridesmaid's.

Trake Lee, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer. He wore a black tuxedo, white shirt and burgundy tie. Best man was Timothy Davis, cousin of the bride. Ushers were Ray Burton, cousin of the bride, Chris Reed and Beau McLeod.

The groom wore a black suit, white shirt and a burgundy tie. Best man wore a dark suit with matching accessories.

Megan Lee, cousin of the bride, registered guests at a table covered with a white cloth and centered with a bouquet of burgundy roses adorned with a white bow.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church's fellowship hall. The bride's table was covered with a burgundy cloth and a lace overlay. It held white-engraved, burgundy napkins, burgundy slush punch, the wedding cake and the bride's bouquet.

The white four-layered wedding cake was decorated with roses in the bride's colors and topped with a heart-shaped arch trimmed with white roses encasing a miniature bride and groom. The cake was made by Carman Juarez, Serving were Shanna Fisk, sister of the bride, Velma Davis, aunt of the bride, and Carla Alexander.

The groom's table, attended by Melissa Davis, cousin of the bride, and Megan Lee, held a golf course-shaped cake complete with a flag and golf ball on a tee.

The honeymoon trip was to Las Vegas, a gift of Grandmother Wanda Lee.

The couple is at home in Snyder where the groom is employed at Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning and the bride works at McWilliams Pharmacy. She is a 1993 graduate of Snyder High School.

Piano pioneer

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Bartolommeo Cristofori (1655-1731), Italian harpsichord maker, is also the reputed originator of the piano.

After moving to Florence in 1687, he invented a hammer-action harpsichord that permitted variations in soft (piano) and loud (forte) tones.

His development of the pianoforte in 1710 or 1711 made Cristofori a pioneer in the development of the modern piano.

Koresh never signed will, according to his lawyer

HOUSTON (AP) — Cult leader David Koresh never signed the will that would have left all his assets to his children, his lawyer says.

Lawyer Dick DeGuerin said Thursday that the 18-page document contained no surprises or strange language and made no odd requests for burial or arrangements for his self-prophesied resurrection.

Koresh died with nearly 80 of his Branch Davidian followers April 19 when fire roared through their compound at the end of a 51-day standoff with federal agents. The standoff began Feb. 28 following a bloody shootout that left four federal agents and at least two Branch Davidians dead.

The Houston Post reviewed the will and reported Friday that it simply names his wife, Rachel, and the wife of his top lieutenant, Judy Schneider, as co-trustees until the children reach their 21st birthdays.

The list of children, who may have numbered as many as 19, was never filled in for a final draft, the newspaper reported.

DeGuerin said Koresh had read a draft of his will and asked for clerical revisions, but did not have a chance to sign a version before his death.

The will was among several documents DeGuerin drafted for Koresh as the world watched the attorney shuttle back and forth from FBI checkpoints to the compound.

Other documents included a living trust, under which Koresh apparently intended to give all his property to his children when he surrendered to authorities, DeGuerin said.

The living trust listed the same trustees and listed his worldly possession in an amendment.

Possessions listed included $65,000 to $75,000 in cash, any proceeds from book, TV, movie or music royalties, Vehicles, guitars, studio equipment and furnishings and real estate in Palestine, Texas, once used by Koresh and his followers.

The 77 acres at Mount Carmel are deeded to the General Association of Davidian Seventh-Day Adventists, with a complicated battle expected for ownership.

The fire destroyed the cash, guitars, studio and most furnishings.

Potential movie, TV and book rights, which were also to pay DeGuerin's attorney fees, were never negotiated and evaporated with Koresh's death.

Music royalties for songs Koresh penned and copyrighted may hold novelty value, but the bulk of the estate is likely to be a few motorcycles, trucks, tractors and Koresh's beloved Camaro, all of which survived the fire and have been impounded by McLennan County authorities, the newspaper reported.

DeGuerin said that because Koresh did not sign the documents and thus died without a will, his remaining estate will be available first to his surviving children under Texas law.

Although up to 17 children thought to be fathered by Koresh died at Mount Carmel, two are known to survive.

Koresh follower Robyn Bunds in California has a 6-year-old son, Shawn, and a Fort Worth-area woman has a 13-year-old daughter. Koresh fathered her with a teenage girlfriend when he was 20, but the teen's father forbade their marriage and prevented Koresh from ever seeing the child, DeGuerin said.

Although either child could claim the estate, neither is likely to do so, DeGuerin said.

The lawyer said that making a claim would bring publicity to the child and the estate is almost certain to be sued by families of those killed or injured in the Feb. 28 raid or April 19 fire.

Bonnie Haldeman, Koresh's mother, who would be next in line, would face the same legal problems, DeGuerin said.

"It's probably not worth claiming," DeGuerin said of the estate.

DeGuerin said Koresh's unsigned will shows that he was a lot more normal than federal authorities depicted him.

The living trust, suggested by Koresh and Wayne Martin, a devoted Davidian and attorney who died with Koresh, shows the cult leader loved his children, he said.

Texas escapee captured after mercantile stakeout

YAAK, Mont. (AP) — An escaped federal prisoner from Texas, known as the Ranger Bandit, has been captured peacefully in a remote corner of the Montana mountains.

U.S. marshals from Great Falls and Helena, masquerading as campers and fishermen, staked out the Yaak Mercantile last week. It has one of the few public phones in the remote Yaak Valley of northwestern Montana.

When Steven P. Benifiel walked out of the woods to use the phone last weekend, the marshals were waiting.

"He didn't say much of anything," U.S. Marshal Don Combs told the Great Falls Tribune. "We asked him if he was Steven Benifiel and he said, 'Yes I am.' We told him he was under arrest. We asked him if he knew what for and he said yes."

Benifiel was serving 12 years on federal drug charges in a South Dakota prison camp when he escaped in May. Combs said he apparently had been trying to make his way into Canada.

"He'd been living in a sleeping bag in the northern Yaak for about a week," Combs said, and at times had been camped within a couple of miles of the international boundary.

Combs said he and three deputies staked out the general store after Texas marshals told them Benifiel was believed to be in the Yaak area.

Gail Ewing, owner of the Yaak Mercantile, said Benifiel had been going by the name Steve Frye and already had made friends in the area.

"We loved him," she said. "We thought he was great. He was delightful, he was charming, he was smart. You couldn't find a guy you'd like better. We sat down and had lots of great conversations."

The magazine Texas Monthly depicted him differently, however, profiling him as a "defiant frontier anti-hero" who virtually controlled the town of Ranger, Texas, where he was known as the Ranger Bandit.

Short List for the '90s Goes Long Way Toward Civil Life

DEAR ABBY: Going about the daily routine in this '90s "me" generation, I've observed that too many of us have fogotten the Golden Rule and much of what we learned in kindergarten. Suggested here are a few rules adapted to '90s technology:

10 Rules for the '90s

(1) Be on time. This includes responding to RSVP invitations (except junk mail ones) and canceling appointments you aren't going to keep.

(2) Include your phone number when leaving a message on someone's answering machine, in case he's getting his messages from a car or pay phone.

(3) Ask: "May I have ...?" instead of telling people, "I need ..."

(4) Carry a pen or pencil so you don't have to borrow one.

(5) Don't call anyone at home before 9 a.m. or after 8 p.m. unless it's an emergency.

(6) If you have call waiting, don't make the person you were talking to first wait on "hold" if you get another call.

(7) Be quiet in libraries, in theaters after the movie starts, and in hotels and hallways after 8 p.m. and before 10 a.m.

(8) "Closed" means closed.

(9) Don't violate people's privacy by giving their name, address or phone number to salesmen or anyone else without each person's prior permission.

(10) You are responsibile for your children and their behavior.

ROBERT ALAN SOLTIS, ESQ.

DEAR ROBERT: May I add to your list: Remember to say "thank you" for each and every kindness.

DEAR ABBY: For some time now, it has been the practice in some doctors' offices to address individuals by their first names.

I am in my 70s, and resent it when someone comes into the waiting room and calls, "Richard!" Whatever happened to Mr., Mrs. or Ms.?

I have discussed this with others in my age group, and the consensus is that they don't like it either. When I asked about it in a doctor's office, I was told, "We're all on a first-name basis here." (That may have been the case, but the doctor was always called, "Dr. So-and-So.")

Another nurse's aide said that using the first name helped to avoid mistaken identity between patients in the waiting room. That explanation is just plain stupid. There would be a greater chance of finding another "Richard" in the waiting room than a "Mr. Larson."

Recently, when I bought something with my credit card, the clerk handed me my receipt and said, "Thank you, Richard." I asked why "Mr. Larson" wasn't good enough, and she replied, "The company policy requires us to personalize our comments." I asked to see the manager, who informed me that the employee was correct, and employees who did not do so would be subject to discipline!

Is this a legitimate gripe, or do you think I'm too cranky?

R.C. LARSON

DEAR MR. LARSON: You, cranky ... no way! You have a legitimate gripe.

DEAR READERS: Today is Father's Day, and although one's father may be deceased — as mine is — he lives on in the heart. My favorite column for this special day, a prayer in memory of a father (from the Hebrew Union Prayer Book), follows:

Thy memory, my dear father, fills my soul at this solemn hour. It revives in me thoughts of the love and friendliness which thou didst bestow upon me. The thought of thee inspires me to a life of virtue; and when my pilgrimage on earth is ended and I shall arrive at the throne of mercy, may I be worthy of thee in the sight of God and man. May our merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou has ever shown me; may He grant thee eternal peace. Amen.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were traveling through a tourist-trap town in Washington state when we wandered into this small novelty shop, cluttered with cheap-looking crockery and souvenirs.

An elderly gentleman, obviously another tourist, brushed by a counter and accidentally knocked a small plate off a wooden rack. It fell to the floor and broke into several pieces. There was no sign that said, "You break it and it's yours." A young woman rushed over and said, "You owe me $40 for that piece!"

The gentleman looked shocked, but got out his wallet and started to count the few bills he had, when the woman with him said to "Ms. Manager," "You must be insured for this: The gentleman is living on his Social Security. Also, $40 is outrageous for that plate; it wasn't even marked!"

Well, Ms. Manager ran to the telephone, saying, "I'm calling the police!" The woman with the elderly gentleman led him from the store, and they were soon out of sight.

My husband and I stayed for half an hour, and no police came. Abby, how would you have handled this?

CURIOUS TRAVELER

DEAR CURIOUS: Such shops expect a certain amount of breakage, and pieces of value are seldom accessible for public handling, so the shop's loss was minor. Since no police arrived, Ms. Manager probably only pretended to call them, hoping to frighten the elderly man into paying the $40 she claimed was owed her.

I don't blame the gentleman's companion for refusing to pay. I would have given Ms. Manager a generous $5 bill and departed.

DEAR ABBY: What should I do with a husband who insists on keeping condoms? We do not use condoms, so I feel he has no need to keep them.

When I first discovered that he was keeping them in his drawer under his underwear, I confronted him and told him there was really no reason for him to keep them. He led me to believe that he would get rid of them, but I found that he only moved them.

Abby, I am not stupid. I figured out that the only reason a married man keeps condoms after his wife has had a hysterectomy is because he must be planning to use them with someone other than his wife. Am I wrong? And what do you think I should do about it?

UNTRUSTING WIFE

DEAR UNTRUSTING WIFE: You are not wrong. Your husband is obviously fooling around, in which case you should both be tested for sexually transmitted diseases. In addition, if you continue to have sex with him now that you know he can't be trusted, always use a condom.

I strongly urge you to seek counseling. If your husband refuses, go without him.

The responsibility for arts funding

By Joseph Perkins

The Los Angeles Philharmonic was in town recently. I had heard much about its brilliant young conductor, Esa-Pekka Salonen. As I followed his baton, I wondered if perhaps I might be observing a historic talent. Like visiting Picasso in his studio or watching Olivier on stage or hearing Caruso at a concert hall.

It never occurred to me that my artistic enrichment that evening should somehow be subsidized by the government. As it was I who personally derived value from attending the symphony, it seemed perfectly reasonable that I should pay for that pleasure.

But the arts crowd does not see it that way. They believe that orchestras and theaters and dance troupes and museums have some sort of entitlement to government funding. They seem to think the taxpayers should gladly spare some change for aspiring thespians and divas and sculptors and ballerinas.

It is that mind-set that brought a gaggle of artists and art administrators to a recent meeting of San Diego's City Council. The artists draped themselves in black to dramatize the "black eye" that the financially strapped city supposedly will suffer if the council follows through with its plan to trim arts funding.

This is the kind of protest that greets government officials not only at the local level, but also at the state and federal level who dare to suggest that arts funding should be in the private domain. To the minds of the arts crowd, the withdrawal of government support for the arts will inevitably lead to America's cultural decline.

Art advocates often point out that some of the greatest works in history — some of Beethoven's symphonies, some of da Vinci's canvasses, some of Shakespeare's plays — were sponsored by aesthetic-minded governments. But, then, much has changed over the last several centuries.

During the lifetimes of Beethoven, da Vinci and Shakespeare, wealth was concentrated in the hands of the few, mainly monarchs and nobles. Had it been left to the peasantry to financially support the arts, then artists truly would have starved.

By continuing in modern-day America the centuries-old tradition of government support of the arts, we actually do the average taxpayer an injustice. Go to the ballet or the symphony or the opera, attend a museum opening, check out a play or musical. Look over the audience. They are disproportionately affluent.

Government funding of the arts amounts to an income transfer from average working stiffs to the most well-off members of our society. If Joe Sixpack has to pay the full freight to catch a ballgame or a movie or rock concert, why should he be forced to subsidize the amusements of people who are earning far more than he?

There is another perverse aspect to public funding of the arts: Even as arts advocates in San Diego and certain other cities throughout the country lament cuts, certain segments of the art world are making huge sums of money. Broadway theatergoers, for instance, spent $327 million during the recent season, the highest total ever.

Art buyers dropped $146 million at Sotheby's and Christie's spring auctions on various contemporary, Impressionistic and modern paintings.

Altogether, the arts industry generates more than $300 billion a year in business, or roughly 6 percent of gross domestic product. An industry of this size should hardly need subsidy from the taxpayers.

But if government backs away from the arts, advocates say, what's to become of small local theaters or museums or repertory houses?

Well, some will survive, some will go under. That's the law of the marketplace. Art is a commodity like any other. Put a product out there that people value, and they will pay the going rate for it.

Americans can get used to paying for art the way they pay for entertainment. If museums and symphonies and dance companies operate more like profit-making businesses marketing their product to the art-consuming public and less like charities, they won't have to seek handouts from the government.

"Okay, now, you can turn right on red, if there's nobody com-- that's a Mack truck that's a Mack truck THAT'S A MACK TRUCK GET OUT OF THE WAY GET OUT OF THE WAY!!"

"I thought he was going to stop."

"WHY WOULD HE STOP HE'S GOT A GRFEN LIGHT!"

"Oh."

"Pull over here and park."

"Why?"

"Because I need to get my heart rate back to normal. Son, Mack trucks are not like normal people. They can't just come to polite little stops. They have to shift about fourteen gears and hit the clutch and the brakes and let the momentum of whatever they're hauling carry them an additional several hundred yards. THEN they can stop. Therefore, STAY OUT OF THE WAY OF MACK TRUCKS OR WE'LL WIND UP WITH A SUBURBAN SANDWICH! Now. You can go."

"Oh-oh."

"What?"

"I'm parked."

"Yes?"

"That means I have to back out."

"That's the usual procedure. What're you looking so helpless about? Check for traffic, then back out."

"Okay. I'm backing."

"Son, you need to do it a little faster than .0 miles per hour or THAT CAR'LL RUN INTO US!"

"Are you all right, Mom?"

"Nothing a little rest cure in the Mediterranean wouldn't fix."

"Do I turn now?"

"Yes, you can turn now. You can turn now. That's what the little green arrow means. YOU CAN TURN NOW."

"Gee, it's nice to be on the open road. I can go fast now."

"That's ten miles over the speed limit. Slow down."

"You drive ten miles over the speed limit."

"It's one of the many thrilling privileges of being a middle-aged driver. A speeding ticket wouldn't affect my car insurance rates near as much as it would yours. Now slow down and shut up."

"In driver's ed, they call this a roller coaster road. This is fun."

"Well, you have to slow down a little on the curves. I SAID SLOW DOWN A LITTLE ON THE CURVES! SLOW DOWN! SLOW DOWN!"

"Why are you grabbing the door handle?"

"I was entertaining fantasies of jumping out while I still had the chance."

"There's no dividing line on this road. It's hard to know where to put the car."

"One side or the other will be fine."

"I can't wait 'til I get my license."

"The driver's ed car has a brake on the passenger side, doesn't it?"

"Yeah."

"While we're out, let's just stop by the Chevrolet house. I need to have a little talk with them."

By Bill McClellan

Broadcast news and newsprint editorials are screaming.

Yes, these armchair quarterbacks say, President Clinton made a good choice in nominating federal Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg to replace Supreme Court Justice Byron White. But, they squeal, he left tv o fine men — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbit and Judge Stephen Breyer — open and defenseless.

Nobody said it was going to be fair, guys.

We Texans, known for messy situations both in and out of politics, should understand these things. Bill Clinton's handling of the nomination pales next to, say, Jimmy Jones' replacement of Cowboys' coaching legend Tom Landry.

You want brutal? THAT was brutal.

Jones made an insensitive blunder in tossing Tom out like a dirty sock, but as hard as it is for us to say, he picked the right person to replace him. Certainly Clinton did no worse, and with a lot more tact.

In truth, the President may be innocent of leaving Babbit and Breyer undefended, like wide receivers exposed on the 50 with Bill Bates and Ken Norton closing in. Were it not for sometimes overly-eager reporters and leaky-mouthed White House officials, no one might have known they were being considered to catch the ball.

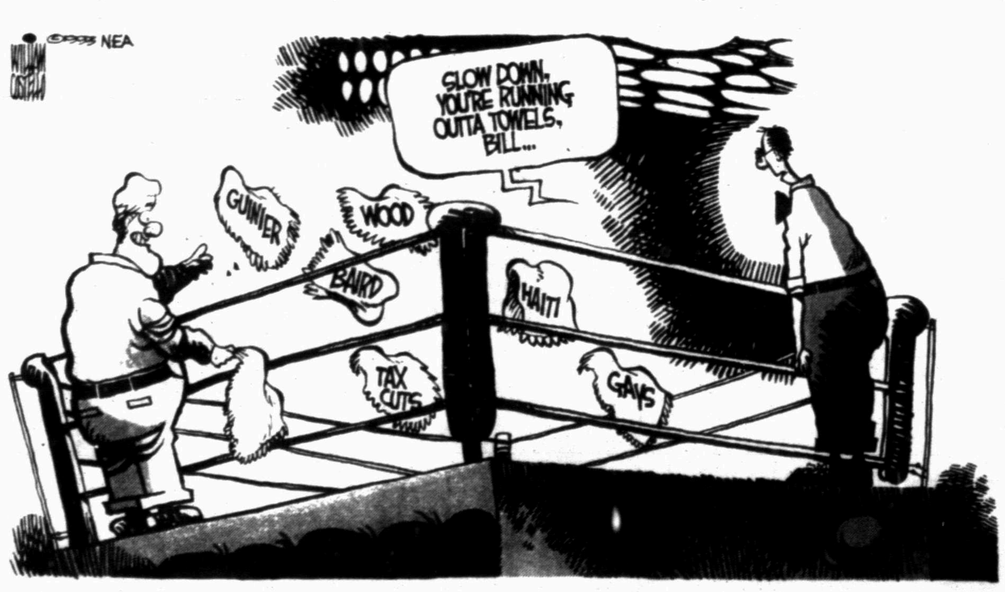

And even if Clinton were guilty of giving away the play, can he be blamed? After all, his last few nominations were greeted by the press and national lawmakers with all the enthusiasm of open field fumbles.

Come on, give the guy some credit.

As for Babbit and Breyer, having the spotlight turned on, then off, may be unnerving, but not too terribly unexpected. After all, this is Washington, and this is politics.

Compared to the wake the NCAA leaves when conducting its investigations into college athletic programs, Clinton's probe of possible nominees is a stretch on the bench.

As they learn in Texas, sometimes you throw a Hail Mary, and sometimes you punt. You just hope you make the right call at the right time.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I have listened to the letters of people praising the Snyder community over and over. I think it is time to voice my opinion.

First, our variety of TV station music has dwindled down to a twinkle of country. Why take away MTV and bring CMT? There are people who live in Snyder who do not focus their lives around CMT. Some actually like rock and roll. Before you took MTV away, you should have thought of those who wanted it.

Second, we have one movie theatre in Snyder. There was a controversy over the movie "Dracula" being shown in Snyder. There was a statement in the paper saying how the movie theatre owners just wanted family oriented films. Well, believe me, it shows.

I have four words for you. Get with the program. You can not make money just that way.

What is so wrong with listening to the opinion of your real audience? The younger generation.

Why haven't you brought the "Crying Game" or "Malcom X?" There is absolutely nothing wrong with these movies and they are popular.

The people who petitioned against "Dracula" are too old to realize a good movie when they see it. They threatened to boycott. Well, let me say that if the younger people would boycott, there would be no theatre.

It seems to me that the old "folk" of Snyder do not think that the "youngsters" have an opinion. Well, we do.

I don't want to drive 80 miles to get entertainment. I think it should be supplied right here. If there are people out there who agree with me, voice your opinion. Make it known how you feel.

Sincerely,
Tanya Gasaway
Rt. 2, Snyder

THE PEPSI GENERATION

Editorial Roundup

Corpus Christi Times on the school finance plan:

Recent Texas history is littered with failed school finance plans. Now, there's a reason to fear another one may be added to the wreckage. The current plan, crafted in the final days of the legislative session to avoid closing the schools, would leave many of the poor districts poorer. Its survival is beginning to look doubtful...

John O'Brien of the Legislature Budget Board said 80 percent of the state's school districts will lose under the plan...

The state relies too much on local property taxes to fund education, which creates the imbalance. The Legislature at some point will have to go back and rework the foundation. A new coat of paint won't do the job. It will have to increase the state's share of the cost of public education — from less than half now to somewhere around two-thirds or three-fourths. To do that, it should modernize the state's tax structure, which in itself is unfair and inefficient...

It's a form of collective denial by the Legislature to ignore the best options to fix this problem, but it has done that for five years now and has become so myopic on the subject that it seemingly can't see beyond the quick fixes.

SA Standard-Times on merging state offices:

Gov. Ann Richards has a tough decision to make in the coming weeks. She can start in motion a process that would save Texas taxpayers several million dollars a year — but the price would be abolishing the office that propelled her to national prominence and the Governor's Mansion.

State Comptroller John Sharp has recommended consolidating the treasury with his agency, reviving a suggestion made years ago by his predecessor, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

The timing for considering such a merger is right. With Kay Bailey Hutchison moving from the treasury to the U.S. Senate, the top spot is vacant. Politically, this may be the last time such a consolidation could happen, or even receive serious consideration, for decades...

The benefits seem considerable. Auditors who studied state government twice have recommended the consolidation because it would save much of the treasurer's office's $10.5 million annual budget by eliminating the need for about 75 percent of the treasury's 243 employees. Money also could be saved by reducing duplication, eliminating separate audits and hearing procedures and combining administrative duties...

This important change would deserve a full public debate, and we would expect legislators to consider all arguments carefully before sending to the voters a recommendation to abolish a state office. That debate will occur, though, only if the governor permits it.

Collection firms collect support monies

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Dad is a deadbeat.

That's what Donna Myers' two children will be thinking this Father's Day.

They haven't seen their father in several years and have watched their mother struggle without any financial help from Dad. While she worked three jobs to keep a roof over her children's heads, Dad left town, went back to college and earned a degree in psychotherapy.

Even though the couple's divorce decree ordered Mrs. Myers' ex-husband to pay $200 a month in child support, Mrs. Myers, who has since remarried, says he now owes her about $14,000 in back payments.

"He just forgot about us," Mrs. Myers says. "Now their father is driving a 1993 pickup, and the cost of that would probably pay all the back child support. If he can afford that, he can afford to pay his children's child support."

Unfortunately, Donna Myers and her children are not the only people left in the lurch by a delinquent dad. Nationwide, more than $23.8 billion dollars was owed in current and prior years child support for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1992 (according to the 16th annual Report to Congress on Child Support Enforcement).

Those billions are dollars that could help keep children off the streets, out of gangs and out of trouble.

"The change in our traditional family structure often leaves young children with but one parent at home," former U.S. Health and Human Services Director Louis Sullivan wrote in the congressional report. "Too often, that parent is distracted by the need to provide single-handedly for the financial needs of children, leaving their social and emotional needs at risk. Our children have the right to support from both parents."

Toni Gardner, deputy director of public affairs for the Texas attorney general's Child Support Enforcement Division, agrees.

"In this day and time, children are at risk for poverty, drugs, teen pregnancy and so many things," Ms. Gardner says. "If somebody is not paying their child support, it opens up an avenue for kids to fall easily into these things."

The AG's office receives federal and state funds to help track down deadbeat parents and make them pay. But the number of child support cases is staggering — 741,538 in Texas for the 1992 fiscal year, which ended in August 1992.

By April of this year, the AG's office already had 832,464 cases. By 1995, the number of cases is projected to hit one million. And these numbers don't include families who don't seek help from the state.

Even so, Texas is doing much better than the national average in collecting child support payments.

In fiscal 1991, Texas had a 64 percent total collection rate, compared with a national average of 22 percent, according to the congressional report. In 1992, the AG's office collected $301.7 million, Ms. Gardner says.

Often, the AG's office can secure payments within two or three months. But sometimes it can take up to a year and sometimes the effort is unsuccessful.

"We're not magicians here," Ms. Gardner says. "If your husband is in Timbuktu, his parents won't tell you where he is and cover for him, it's going to take a while to find him."

However, if the custodial parent has the deadbeat's drivers license and or Social Security number, there's a good chance the AG's parent locator service can track him by accessing records of such agencies as the Department of Public Safety, the Internal Revenue Service and the Texas Employment Commission.

Donna Myers tried using the state system, but ended up frustrated. The AG's office was able to help locate her ex-husband several times as he moved from state to state, and they even captured his federal income tax refund a couple of times. But in the end, Mrs. Myers still was not receiving monthly child support payments.

"I asked the lady at the attorney general's office why it takes so long, and she picked up a stack of applications and said 'because all of these people are in front of you,' " Mrs. Myers says. "I thought, they may never get to me!"

So she decided to seek the help of a private Abilene agency.

The Child Support Collection Agency's slogan is "We can't make them care, but we can make them pay." Owner Mike Farmer uses collection agency tactics to help parents recover child support payments.

Within one month, he got Mrs. Myers a child support check for $1,300.

"As a private agency, we are able to be more aggressive in tracking people and dealing with their relatives," Farmer says. "In this case, we got to his mother and that's how we made him pay.

"We can basically hound the guy, we can contact family, friends, employers. We can call these guys every morning at 2 a.m. if we want."

The theory is that, eventually, the parent will pay to get Farmer off his back. And Farmer has a great incentive to work. Each client pays an initial $95 administrative fee. After that, Farmer gets 25 percent of any child support he collects on his client's behalf.

In addition, Farmer says he has a personal interest in succeeding.

"I grew up under these same conditions back before there was an attorney general's office to help," says Farmer. "My mom couldn't afford to get a private attorney to collect, so she worked three jobs to raise three children. I watched her struggle and that's why I'm so passionate about this."

Farmer only works with parents who have a court order granting child support and he doesn't take clients who are now or have been on Aid to Families with Dependent Children payments.

"It's against the law for us to take clients if they're still on AFDC," Farmer says. "And if they've been on AFDC in the past, the government holds a lien on money that's owed and can take any money we reclaim to pay off AFDC."

Farmer claims the state gives priority to cases where the custodial parent is receiving AFDC and other public subsidies. That's because any money the state recovers from a deadbeat parent is first used to repay taxpayers for subsidies paid to his family.

Ms. Gardner denies that AFDC cases are given priority.

"In terms of AFDC cases and non-AFDC cases, we focus our customer service efforts, energies and resources to both of those customers," Ms. Gardner says.

And she says the AG's office welcomes help from the private sector.

"People are getting involved in trying to help in the child support war to insure that the children of Texas receive the money, shelter and basic necessities they need," Ms. Gardner says. "If someone wants to go into the business and help these children have a better future, we welcome it and we applaud it."

Shopping cart maker agrees to install child belts

AUSTIN (AP) — The nation's largest manufacturer of shopping carts has agreed to install child seat belts on all carts sold for use in Texas and New York.

The lawsuit and agreed final judgment, filed Thursday, is the first of its kind in the nation, Attorney General Dan Morales said.

Morales said the agreement with UNR Industries of Chicago resulted from a lawsuit filed in conjunction with one filed by New York's attorney general, Robert Abrams.

UNR's customers include major supermarket and discount chains.

The agreement also requires UNR to place warnings on every cart equipped with a child seat. They will say that children should wear the safety belt, should not be left unattended and should not be in the basket or ride elsewhere on the shopping cart.

Morales obtained a similar agreement in February from Toys R Us, requiring installation of seat belts and warnings on all shopping carts in the toy chain's Texas stores.

A recent federal report indicates that falls from shopping carts are among the leading causes of head and facial injuries to young children.

"UNR already provided seat belts to any customer who requested them," said Victor E. Grimm, the company's vice president and general counsel.

Grimm said the only change that results from this agreement is that in Texas and New York, the seat belts will be standard on all shopping carts sold in those states.

V-22 Osprey returns to flight status

FORT WORTH (AP) — Flight testing has resumed on the V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft, following design changes to make it safer, Bell Helicopter Textron said.

One of the aircraft lifted off at 1:15 p.m. Thursday from the company's flight research center in nearby Arlington. During a 16-minute shakedown flight, the aircraft hovered to check performing and handling characteristics.

Thursday's flight was the first for a V-22 since a V-22 crashed last year at Quantico Marine Corps Station in Virginia. Government investigators said the accident was caused by certain design deficiencies that allowed an unfortunate chain of events to occur.

All seven aboard died when the craft "basically dropped right into the Potomac River" during its final approach on a flight from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., officials said at the time.

The aircraft features tilting propeller units that allow it to fly like either and airplane or a helicopter. It was making the transition from horizontal to vertical flight when the crash occurred.

Won't file charges

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Prosecutors decided not to file sexual assault charges against Mario Lopez of the NBC teen comedy "Saved by the Bell."

Witnesses contradicted statements given by his 18-year-old accuser, who claimed she was raped April 28 while watching movies with the 19-year-old actor at his house, Deputy District Attorney Peter Longanbach said.

The prosecutor also said a physical examination showed no evidence of rape.

Investigator haunted by unidentified victim

AMARILLO (AP) — A homicide investigator is calling for a national program to help identify nameless victims found throughout the country each year.

Investigators are left at square one in solving a homicide when they have no way of knowing who the victim is, said Amarillo Police Sgt. Modeina Holmes, an investigator with the Potter-Randall Special Crimes unit.

One such case that plagues Amarillo police officers is that of Jane Doe 1983. Ms. Holmes, who works with the multi-agency task force that investigates homicides in Potter, Randall and Armstrong counties, has made discovering the identity of the young woman her life's work, she said.

"Every year I make a New Year's resolution and I say 'This year I'm going to find out who she is,' " Ms. Holmes said.

The body of Jane Doe 1983 was found by a passing motorcyclist 10 years ago Oct. 8, lying face down in a culvert about 17 miles north of Amarillo.

An investigation revealed the woman had been strangled with a rope or cord by someone standing behind her. The date of her death is estimated to be the night of Oct. 6 or the morning of Oct. 7.

Investigators at the scene saw lines in the dirt that indicated the woman had been dragged about 30 feet before being shoved head first into the culvert.

An array of information has been gleaned from the victim's body. Investigators described her as 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 120 to 140 pounds, with curled light brown or dark blonde hair and hazel or blue eyes. Holmes estimates the woman's age at between 16 and 20.

This woman and hundreds of other mysterious homicide victims found across the country each year might be identified if officials had a way of showing their photographs to the public nationwide, a police investigator says.

The victim's hands and fingernails were carefully groomed and her toenails had been painted with red fingernail polish, Ms. Holmes said.

Jane Doe was wearing three rings: a diamond friendship or promise ring, a size 7 wedding band that had been wrapped with a bandage to fit the victim's size 5 finger, and a red-colored garnet or ruby birthstone ring.

The victim also had a brown mole or birthmark on her left forearm and a birthmark under her right breast.

Holmes said one thing she noticed about the victim is that she had no tan lines.

"That's unusual for someone that age, being toward the end of the summer, unless she was from an area where sunbathing wasn't popular, such as a state up north."

Tests on the victim's type A-positive blood revealed that she had consumed very little or no alcohol before her death and was not a drug user.

Jane Doe's well-kept and well-groomed appearance was not typical of a transient, Ms. Holmes said. Information about the victim's contact lens prescription and unusual tooth structure was sent to eye and dental professionals nationwide.

The victim had a noticeable space between her two front teeth, and she had no upper right lateral incisor. The tooth had not been removed, but instead was a hereditary condition, Ms. Holmes said.

In many cases, bodies are badly decomposed and bones are scattered when they are discovered, often leaving few clues behind for investigators. But in Jane Doe 1983's case, the information police have is specific enough to identify the woman. Ms. Holmes believes the information is simply not getting to the right people.

"To me, she appears so young, and yet in 10 years, we haven't been able to identify her; we haven't made the right connection. And in all that time, nobody has come forward to identify her."

"The family might not have heard from her all these years, but think she's OK somewhere and haven't looked for her."

That's where national publicity would help in this and many other similar cases, Ms. Holmes said.

Information and a reconstructed photograph of the victim's face have been sent to several missing persons' organizations and law enforcement agencies across the country. But the public has only limited access to that information, Ms. Holmes said.

Nor are there any rewards posted for identifying the homicide victim, she said. Crime Stoppers will pay a reward if a suspect is found and convicted of the crime. And families of murder victims often post rewards for help in solving murders of their own family members, but rewards are rarely offered to get information about an unidentified body, she said.

The story has been turned down by national television shows such as "Unsolved Mysteries," mainly because there's no real story line that would make it interesting for the public, Ms. Holmes said.

"The only thing that will help us more than anything is to get her photograph on some kind of national system and get the public interested," she said. "We need her photograph exposed to the general public and not just law enforcement agencies.

"There's a lot of kids from infants to adults found by law enforcement agencies each year, but they are not identified because there's no national exposure. I would like to see a program specifically for that.

"We have found them. Now, who are they?"

Space station workers happy Clinton supports the project

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Workers in NASA Building 4708 don't care exactly what kind of space station President Clinton wants. They're happy just to know he wants one.

Clinton ended weeks of uncertainty Thursday by saying he backed continued construction of a manned space station, albeit a scaled-back version. He also endorsed the Texas super collider, the atom smasher scientists hope will help them unlock secrets about matter and energy.

The space station announcement was met with almost visible relief at northern Alabama's Marshall Space Flight Center. Engineers there are building final test versions of the station's living and working quarters.

"I'm just glad we've got work to do," a smiling Dan Roark said as he showed off a digital X-ray machine designed to inspect welds on the station's skin. "I hope we get to use this thing. It sounds like we will."

Roark works in Building 4708, where NASA engineers once did final quality checks on the Saturn rockets that blasted Americans to the moon. The building is now occupied by the Boeing Defense & Space Group, Roark's employer and the prime contractor for the station's pressurized modules.

The White House said Clinton's plan for a scaled-down, $16.5 billion space station would save between $8 billion and $9 billion by the year 2000, and $18 billion over the life of the project. He also called for staff cuts at NASA.

Engineers already have been working on the space station for nearly a decade, during which time the United States has spent $9 billion.

Clinton's announcement came after he ordered NASA to redesign the project for a third time to save money. The administration settled on a combination of two versions that were recommended by NASA and favored by European countries with a stake in the space station.

John B. Winch, a Boeing vice president, said Clinton's proposal would let NASA use equipment years in the making.

"We're not going to be starting over again. That's really good news," said George Hopson, manager of the space station office at Marshall.

It was great news in a city of 160,000 where some 4,400 people work on the project. About 2,400 of them are employed by Boeing, which stood to lose parts of its $2.6 billion contract had Clinton chosen a radically different design or killed the program outright.

Marshall director Jack Lee expressed hope that the cost savings, combined with a revamped management structure, would smooth the project's path in Congress.

Senate's campaign finance bill faces overhaul in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders are signaling they won't accept key parts of the Senate's campaign financing bill, including a ban on political action committee contributions to congressional races.

The Senate's provision for public financing also is unlikely to survive in the House and language applying the new rules to 1994 elections is expected to fare no better.

The Senate sent the bill to the House on Thursday by a 60-38 vote, but that is only the next stop in a journey that is certain to end up in a contentious House-Senate conference.

When House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., was asked about the ban on PACs before the Senate vote, he quickly rejected the idea.

"It is my personal position that they are appropriate, that they are one of the best ways to record campaign participation and sourcing, that they were a reform when they were brought in in 1972 to allow people to make small contributions," Foley said. "I reject rather wholly the argument that they are somehow an evil part of campaign financing."

Foley added there was "overwhelming, contrary opinion" in the House to the Senate provision making the new rules effective for 1994 elections.

"There are a lot of challengers out there that are announced that are raising money right at the moment," Foley said. "It is unfair to them, I think, to start effecting rules for their campaign reporting and activities that are under way already."

Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., who crafted the House bill, also said "public financing is in real trouble" in his chamber.

He said a decision by Senate Democrats to drop a broad public financing provision in favor of limited public funding — a deal made to win Republican support — "will harden those who oppose public financing."

The Senate bill features voluntary spending limits — based on a state's voting age population — aimed at helping challengers against incumbents.

And it would impose a tax on campaigns that exceed the ceilings, giving the money to those who stick by the limits.

The bill would bar lobbyists from contributing to any members they lobbied in the last year. And it would prohibit lobbyists from trying to influence any members to whom they contributed in the preceding 12 months.

Bishops create committee on sexual abuse by clergy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A panel report calling for urgent action by the nation's Roman Catholic bishops to stop priests from molesting youngsters was met by the formation of another committee to study the problem some more.

"We are met again with a barrage of wonderful sounding platitudes," said David Clohessy, national director of Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests. "It's long past time for action."

The bishops formed the new Ad Hoc Committee on Sexual Abuse on Thursday after hearing a report from a church-sponsored panel recommending, among other things, independent review boards to oversee the church's handling of abuse allegations and a ban on abusive priests working with youngsters again.

The report by a group of more than 30 experts on clergy sexual abuse also recommended establishing a national task force on child abuse and a national day of prayer and penance for victims.

"We must be pro-victim," the Rev. Canice Connors, the panel chairman, told the nation's bishops at their annual spring meeting.

Bishop John F. Kinney of Bismarck, N.D., chairman of the new committee, vowed to come up with more recommendations for "decisive action."

"I want to make sure that all of us bishops understand the depth and the seriousness, the pain and the agony of this problem and why it strikes at the very heart of the church's trust level and credibility level," he said.

The report and the new committee come against a backdrop of increasing allegations of clergy sex abuse around the country.

There has been no systematic study of clergy sex abuse, but author Jason Berry says more than 400 Catholic priests in North America have been reported for molesting children since 1984. Connors said from 2 percent to 4 percent of Catholic priests over the past 30 years may have been guilty of abuse.

Experts in child sexual abuse say the problem crosses religious and vocational lines, but the Catholic Church has come under criticism for not addressing the problem openly in the past. Several lawsuits brought by alleged victims accuse the church of quietly reassigning offenders to other parishes.

"We can only ask the patience of God's people," Archbishop William H. Keeler, president of the bishops' conference, said in announcing the formation of the new committee.

He said the committee would be charged with advising the bishops on how they can deal with abusive priests and help victims and their families.

Texas greyhound tracks: lotto slows profits

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Whether booming or struggling, all three greyhound racing tracks in Texas agree the year-old state lottery is hurting their business.

"It was regrettable that we didn't have at least a couple of years to establish a racing audience before the lottery came in," said Howard Hardegree, controller at Valley Greyhound Park.

Racing promoters say competition is fierce for the money people are willing to wager — whether legal or illegal, dogs or horses, lottery tickets or whatever else entices people to risk their cash.

In its first year, the Texas Lottery recorded $69 million in ticket sales in the two highest-population counties in Valley Greyhound's market, Cameron and Hidalgo. That's $107 for every person counted in the two counties by the 1990 U.S. Census.

Unless business picks up, the Harlingen track expects to lose between $750,000 and $1 million this year.

The bottom line has been in the red in some recent months at Corpus Christi Greyhound Race Track, which also opened in November 1990. But Marketing Director Vicki Warner said the numbers are picking up with the summer tourist season.

"We're hoping that will be strong enough to carry us through the lean months," she said.

Dave Freeman, executive director of the Texas Racing Commission, said daily attendance and handles have dropped 30 percent at the Harlingen track and 25 percent in Corpus Christi since the Texas Lottery began in May 1992.

Texas' three Class II horse racing tracks — near Austin, Fort Worth and San Antonio — also have declined in attendance and handles since the Lottery began, Freeman said.

Only Gulf Greyhound Park, north of Galveston, is hot.

"We're on track to hit 2.2 million people our first year," said Marketing Director Mike Levy.

Gulf Greyhound, touted as the world's biggest greyhound racing operation, opened in November 1992 and has achieved much higher than projected betting pools.

Levy said it was impossible to know how deeply lottery sales cut into betting at the new park because it opened after the lottery did.

"You can only assume that it has hurt, but we don't know because we can't see the difference," Levy said, adding that the lottery had much bigger advertising budgets and allow people 18 and older to play.

Pari-mutuel bettors must be at least 21.

Dan Martin says it's just an excuse for track promoters to complain about the lottery.

"They talk about unfair competition from the lottery," said Martin, who represents the anti-gambling group, Texans Who Care. "I think basically what they are learning is that people aren't all that interested in pari-mutuel."

The Texas Racing Commission last week granted Valley Greyhound a conditional permit to simulcast races from other tracks to increase its betting pool — the key to profits.

Hardegree said simulcasting might not be a permanent solution, "but it can make a significant dent in our problems," he said.

Gambling critics, however, liken track promoters to compulsive bettors who dig deeper into their pockets to get out of a hole.

I just think they will come back and want more and more and more and more," Martin said. "Have you ever known a gambler who was satisfied? That's just like these promoters. They always want more."

Martin said Valley Greyhound tried unsuccessfully to push a proposal for video gambling through the Texas Legislature this year, and he predicted other tracks will join the lobby if they sink into financial troubles.

Proposals for riverboat gambling or Indian casinos will keep popping up in Texas, pushing dog and horse tracks to try to offer more attractions, Martin said.

"Most gambling is a regressive tax that preys on the poor," he said.

The greyhound tracks in Corpus Christi and Galveston so far haven't asked for simulcasting at their tracks, Freeman said.

"I'm not going to speculate at what the other dog tracks will bring before the commission, but obviously we have seen simulcasting play a larger and larger role at the horse tracks," Freeman said.

He said the Houston-Galveston area was proving to be solid market for dog racing, but Corpus Christi and the Rio Grande Valley were tougher regions to maintain high betting pools.

"Population really is the key," he said.

Track officials in Harlingen and Corpus Christi said they were encouraged to see Gulf Greyhound doing so well, but they predict the market will drop even in the Houston-Galveston area.

"You traditionally have a falloff of 20 to 30 percent from the first year of business, just through general attrition," Hardegree said. "And the lottery, I think, cuts into it even more."

Police suspect serial killer seeks revenge

LONDON (AP) — A killer stalking London's homosexual community has phoned Scotland Yard after each of his five murders, giving police precise details of his crimes. And he has promised to keep killing a victim a week, news reports say.

The victims, aged 33 to 45, were all murdered in their own homes, between March 8 and Tuesday. Police said at least four were homosexuals and three carried the AIDS virus. One was an American.

In each case, the killer is believed to have struck up a casual acquaintance in a pub or club. All were killed in "intimate circumstances," said the Gay London Policing Group, a gay men's organization.

"It's hard to say whether it's a gay man himself who's committing the murders, or someone who needs to seek some kind of revenge or show hatred against gay men," said Paul Duffy, a spokesman for the group.

Detective Superintendent Albert Patrick told BBC-TV it was possible the killer was taking revenge on homosexual men after he had become infected with the AIDS virus.

The officer in charge of the investigation, Detective Chief Superintendent Kenneth John, appealed to the killer to give himself up.

"Enough is enough. Enough pain, enough anxiety, enough tragedy," John said Thursday at a news conference. "Give yourself up — your terms, whatever you dictate, whatever time, to me or my colleagues."

John confirmed that a man called the police, newspapers and "other agencies" with precise details about the murders. He denied newspaper reports that the calls were "baiting and mocking," but refused to discuss other details.

The Times of London and other newspapers quoted unidentified police sources as saying the caller claimed he would continue killing a man a week until he was caught.

The first victim, a 45-year-old theater director, was found tied up and dead in his London home March 8. The killer called The Sun, the sensational tabloid newspaper, after that killing and said, "It was my New Year's resolution to murder a human being."

American businessman Peter Bradley, 35, of Sulphur Springs, Texas, was the third victim. He was found naked, bound and strangled at his apartment June 4. Police said they had no evidence he was a homosexual, but he was linked with the other victims because of the way he died.

The fifth victim, from Malta, was found Tuesday night at his south London home after the killer called police to tell them of the murder.

Police then went public to warn homosexuals of a serial killer.

Houston woman faces possible hanging

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man says the U.S. State Department hasn't done anything to help his daughter who faces possible hanging for drug smuggling in Bangladesh.

Eliadah McCord, 20, was arrested in February 1992 after authorities at Dhaka's airport found nearly 9 pounds of heroin taped to her thighs and abdomen as she tried to board a flight to London.

Prosecutor Abdur Razzak Khan Thursday asked a Bangladeshi court to impose the death penalty against the Houston woman if she is convicted.

The prosecutor said there is no doubt about Ms. McCord's guilt. The court could hand down a life sentence, under which could be freed in 12 years.

Richard McCord, the woman's father, said Thursday that he has given up on getting help from the U.S. State Department.

A department official earlier told McCord the most they can do is make sure the woman receives adequate care, proper medical treatment and an attorney.

"When Americans travel abroad, they are subject to the laws of those countries they visit. They are also subject to their punishments. The American government can't do much," the official, who requested anonymity, told the Houston Chronicle.

"I don't believe this. But there's nothing I can do about this. I'm not Clinton, Bush or a Kennedy," Richard McCord told the newspaper. "If I were, I bet you my daughter would be out of there in a flash."

Richard McCord said he has received three letters from his daughter, including one he received about two weeks ago.

"She told me she was learning Bengali and learning how to write it. She's also studying the Koran and says she's learning their ways," he said. "She likes their philosophy on women, but she didn't go into it too much.

"The jail conditions are pretty bad. She wrote about these huge bugs that look like roaches and they fly all over the place. She said the prisoners just let them land, but she keeps swatting them off."

He added that his daughter has said she has lost a lot of weight and is depressed about the situation.

Eliadah McCord told police when she was arrested that she was offered $1,000 by African Robert Blankson, a citizen of Lesotho, to deliver a package to Zurich.

Blankson was later arrested at the Indian border and faces the same penalties, either death or a life sentence.

The trial is expected to continue through next week.
