ATTEMPTS TO PREVENT FIGHT PROVE FUTILE

Hopes of Those Who Seek to Prevent Dempsey-Tunney Fight Go Aglimmering.

By United Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Two attempts to prevent the Dempsey-Tunney fight Thursday failed today. Hopes that Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney would face each other in federal court proved fruitless when they ignored subpoenas requiring them to appear to answer an injunction petition presented by the Rev. Elmer Williams. Williams contended the bout would be a "prize fight instead of a boxing bout."

Eastland Women Will Profit By Cooking School

An attraction that will prove of such importance to the women of Eastland and surrounding territory, is the coming cooking school to be conducted at the city hall auditorium, under the auspices of the Eastland Telegram. It will open Monday, Sept. 26 and will continue each afternoon from 2 to 4, closing with the session Friday afternoon.

Every woman who can possibly attend this school will want to do so. It is designed to be for all women the greatest treat of the year and will have many new methods of making home attractive and the kitchen, the greatest place on earth.

There may be some who will say "the old ways are good enough for me," but those who have thought the same in times past have changed their minds, being willing and, in fact, anxious to try the newer methods. There are many new ideas in kitchen and dining room management that have never been thought of before.

Home-making and home-keeping have become glorified by the many modern tools and equipment and the new ways of preparing food which has eliminated much of the hard work and drudgery of older times. Every home is a budget in itself, where expenses should be governed in accordance with the income. Lack of system in this matter as well as lack of knowledge on the part of the housewife has disrupted many homes.

Ways and means of overcoming many of these obstacles will be explained by Mrs. Chitwood, who has had wide experience in matters of this kind.

Ways of decorating simple dishes and of preparing the table for formal affairs will be given by Mrs. Chitwood who knows and understands how all women like to entertain and how many other special ways of making the home attractive will be demonstrated and thoroughly discussed by Mrs. Chitwood.

The entire weeks course will be given free of any costs to the women of Eastland and surrounding territory.

Discovers He Is American Boy, Is Seeking Parents

EL PASO, Sept. 20.—Harold John McKibbin, 21, who has learned that he is an American and not a Mexican, citizen, is here searching for his parents who abandoned him when he was a baby.

McKibbin said he fought with Pancho Villa in Mexican revolutions. He learned of his true nationality when he told his foster father, Manuel Gomez Chavez wealthy Parral, Chihuahua rancher, that he wanted to enter Mexican politics. Chavez told him that he could not hold office in Mexico because he was an American.

His foster father gave him papers filed in El Paso courts which set out that the boy at the age of four was abandoned in El Paso in 1910 by his father and step-mother. He was declared a public charge and Chavez adopted him.

COOLIDGE WON'T CALL SPECIAL SESSION NOW

Thinks Flood Relief Funds Will Be Available; Abandons Idea of Session.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—President Coolidge has abandoned any idea of calling a special session of congress as a whole or the senate alone, it was officially announced at the white house today. He has decided that there is no occasion for a special session. He believes that sufficient money to care for flood relief will be available until Jan. 1. The army engineers will be unable to complete their investigation of flood control problems until Nov. 15.

Mr. Coolidge is advised that the senate will take up purely senatorial matters, including election contest cases as soon as the general congress convenes in December. By the time the Christmas recess is concluded the president expects these matters will have been disposed of and that flood legislation and perhaps a tax reduction bill may have been passed by the house final action in senate.

REPORTS SAY MEXICO HAS APPROVED CHOICE

Selection Is College Mate Of President, Member Morgan Firm

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey, has been chosen by President Coolidge as American Ambassador to Mexico, succeeding James R. Sheffield, the white house indicated today.

It was indicated the Mexican government has informally approved the choice though the appointment has not been yet made formal according to the white house.

Morrow is one of the partners of the house of Morgan, New York, was a college mate of the president and has been a close unofficial white house advisor during the Coolidge administration. Morrow has informed the president he will retire from his firm and is expected to leave for his post within a few days.

Mr. Coolidge is glad that Morrow is willing to make a sacrifice and abandon his business to take what president considers one of the most important foreign missions.

He considers Morrow a valuable man for the Mexican post which is not being sought after as European missions are. It is understood that the president in sending Morrow was influenced largely by the nature of the oil and laws dispute which has strained the relations between Mexico City and Washington.

ESCAPES AS CAPTORS STEAL CAR

Brown County Officer Held All Night Makes Get Away About Dawn

By United Press.

BROWNWOOD, Sept. 20.—Captive of four armed men all night, Sheriff Fred White of Brown county outwitted his captors when they attempted to steal an automobile and made his escape at 5:30 a. m. today. White was kidnapped when he went to a vacant house 15 miles north of here last night after farmers had found four armed men with a quantity of merchandise in the house. White was kidnapped by the men.

More than 500 armed men searched throughout the night for the sheriff, believing he had been shot and left to die in some secluded spot.

Early this morning three of the men went to steal a car to further the escape, leaving a companion to guard Sheriff White. White, his hands tied, outwitted his captor and made his escape returning to Brownwood where he recruited an armed posse to go in search of the men. Sheriff White described his captors as white youths ranging from 22 to 25 years in age.

The large posse searching for them centered the search west of here this afternoon, but no trace had been found.

One of three stolen automobiles found at the vacant house was identified this afternoon as having been stolen from Cisco. Most of the merchandise found in the house was believed to have been taken in a store robbery in Cisco several days ago.

Drive For Funds For Jubilee To Begin Tomorrow

Following breakfast at the Gholson hotel, at 7 o'clock in the morning, the finance committee of the Ranger Home-Coming Oil Jubilee and teams selected to work locally for funds for the event, a whirlwind canvass of the business district of the city will be made.

The drive for funds will therefore start right after "ham an" and will be participated in by groups of men, led by a group captain, all bent on getting the money.

The necessity for raising funds for the jubilee is obvious, as it will take a great deal of money to put the entertainment over in a manner that will reflect credit on Ranger and merchants of the city are asked to give the committee all the co-operation possible so as to expedite the matter.

Members of the committee and the various teams are asked to meet at the hotel at 7 o'clock and the following will find a place at the breakfast table and later be members of groups which will work the town:

Ed Maher, W. W. Housewright, E. H. Mills, Andy Anderson, J. V. Smith, M. Bendix, W. R. Clardy, S. P. Boon, Jno. Hassen, G. P. Boyd, F. P. Brasher, W. W. Paschall, H. O. Pope, C. E. Shields, C. E. SOUND AND PRACTICAL.

A Pacific coast bank in a state of less than 5,000,000 population, has built up greater resources than any bank outside of New York city.

How could this be done? Branch banking under a unique service plan is the answer.

Just as the customer and employee ownership idea of owning and financing electric light and power companies originated in California with the Pacific Gas & Electric company, so did the idea of applying this same method of ownership of banks and the establishment of branch banks owned by the people, originate in that state with the Bank of Italy.

Interconnection of power companies to utilize resources to the fullest and render the greatest service is a parallel of combining banking resources of various communities to diversify risk and distribute the load of borrowing.

Interconnection of electric companies has proven a great success.

That interconnection of banking resources has made the same strides is evidenced by the growth of the Bank of Italy. In 20 years its resources have increased from $285,000 to $675,716,000. It is owned by 15,000 California stockholders, and on June 27 of this year it had 1,140,394 depositors in 276 branches, exclusively in the state of California.

This is some record for a bank 3,000 miles from Wall street.

The greatest evidence of the strength and practicability of branch banking is found in the passage of the McFadden bill by congress. For the first time there appears in the laws of the country, legislative reference to and recognition of the branch banking system which applies the same principles to general banking that was successfully introduced on a nation-wide basis in the development of the Federal Reserve system of branches. The basic idea of diversification, unified direction and uniformity in banking practice, characterizes both organizations.

Criticism that branch banking, because of its possibilities for expansion, will develop a money trust, is as groundless as the charge that the building up of great power systems to serve the public need will develop a power trust.

Increasing size of banks and power companies causes them to be increasingly careful to keep their operations free from grounds for criticism. Mere size is no reason to attack industry or banking today. Service to the public is the measure by which to gauge the desirability of any institution. Public regulation and our present laws will prevent abuse of power by banks or electric companies.

The growth of the Bank of Italy is one of the greatest business romances in American history.

AND YET WE KICK AT A SECOND'S DELAY.

In England, the telephone system is owned by the government and is operated through the postal department. If anyone in London desires to talk across the channel, he must go to the central postoffice and make an application, possibly for the following day. He must then be on hand at the hour appointed to attend to the call.

What a contrast to our own privately owned telephone system! In our country anyone may place a call from his own home and in a few minutes talk with anyone in any part of the country, and even across the ocean to London in a few hours.

Just what play will be put on first has not yet been definitely decided upon, but the players are now working on that part of the program. JUNIOR NEW ERA CLUB HAS SCANT ATTENDANCE.

On account of the inclement weather the attendance at the first meeting of the Junior New Era club last night was quite scarce but the few who braved the elements enjoyed the evening, but could take no action for the lack of a quorum. It was decided that the club would be called to meet again next Monday night, which really is its regular meeting night.

The study of Browning during the winter was brought up as well as that of modern literature. That the club will arrange some study course for its members is certain and that course will be outlined at the next meeting.

PACK A KNIT-TEX IN YOUR TRAVELING BAG

It Won't Wrinkle

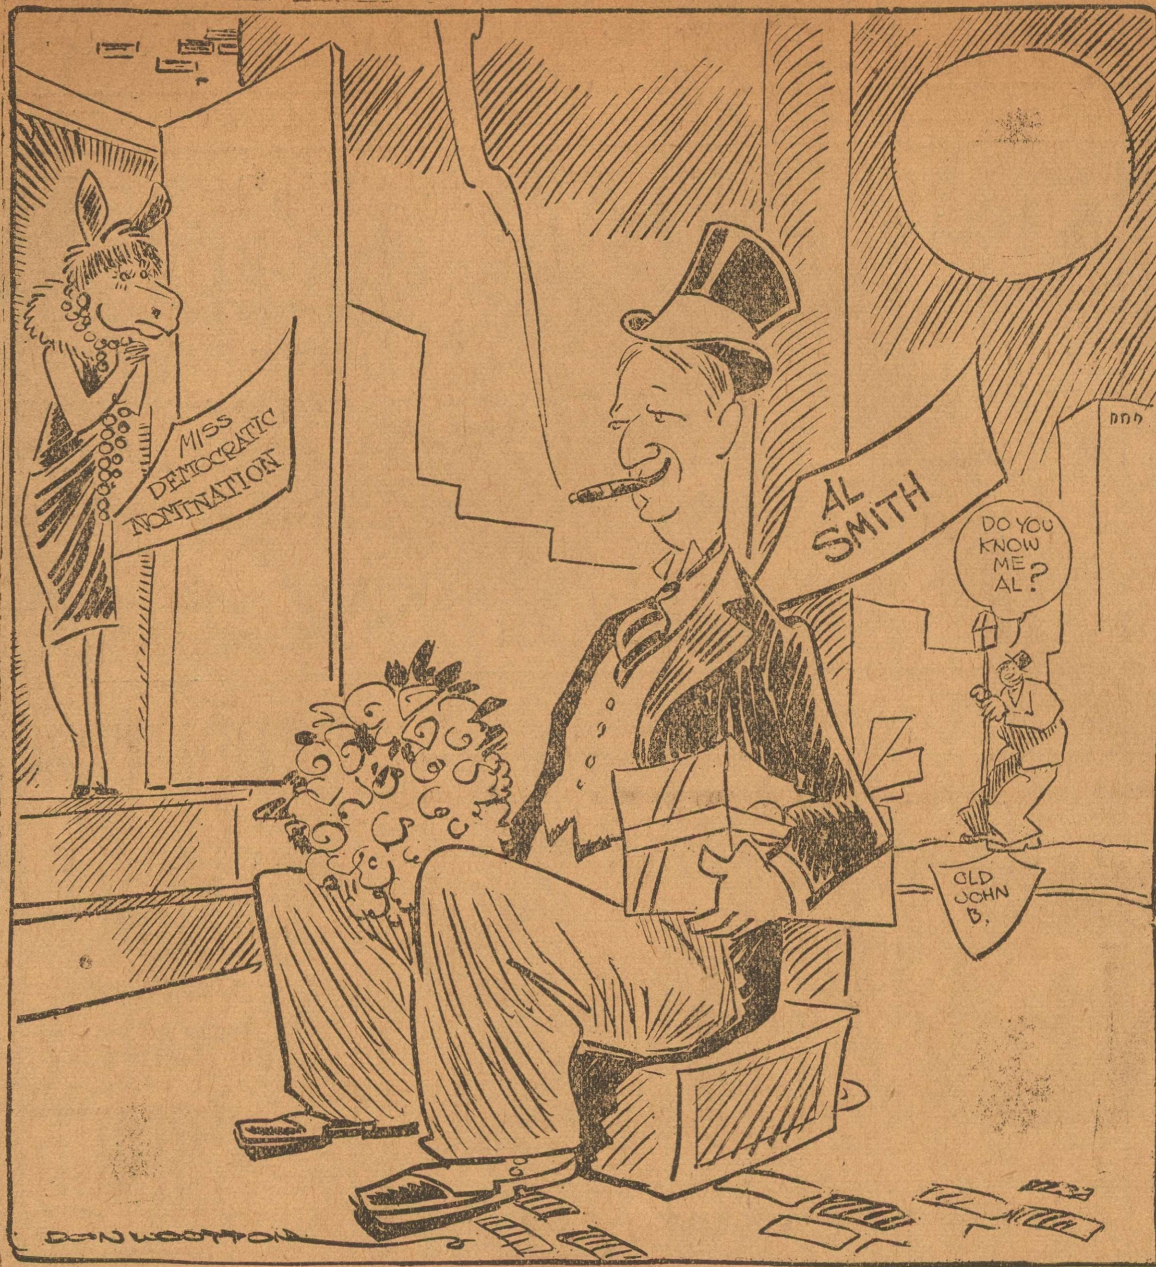

Knit-tex is the best traveling companion a man can have. When you go on a trip—or when you start for the country club—or even when you go to work in the morning you never know what's ahead of you in the way of weather. The Knit-tex Coat rolls up in a ball and packs up in a grip without wrinkling. It can be thrown in the back of a car and comes out smiling. It can be carried over the arm with perfect ease and comfort because it's so light weight. You will wear it 10 months in the year and you will like it better and better the longer you own it. It takes a long time to wear out a Knit-tex Coat.

You Never Can Tell

Gripings

By GUS

It would be highly uncomplimentary to your powers of perception, besides entirely superfluous, to call to your attention the fact that the street in front of the post office was dragged this morning and that you now may traverse the same with reckless abandon, whatever that is, and without fear of throwing the kids out of the rear seat.

Wayne Hickey is scouting for somebody to meet Duke Trammel in a few rounds demonstrating manly art of self defense. It's a good chance to pick up a few dollars during the jubilee for some of you tough boys. If interested get in touch with Hickey.

This would be a good day for the shine boys to go up on the price. Anybody that would pay fifteen cents for a shine would pay a quarter just as quick.

It has been said that actions speak louder than words. This is true only where both are present, and when it's all words you naturally wouldn't expect action to roar above the din of verbosity, now would you? That little preliminary remark is merely a preface to the suggestion that the Wichita Falls and what-ever-you-call-it railroad fix up it's crossing at Hunt street before the jubilee.

By drawing upon your imagination slightly you can figure where Ranger can boast of a unique alley. Our alley is a part of the Main Street of the World. That's how modern our town is—the Main Street of the world goes up one of our alleys.

The deduction is obtained thus: passengers on the bus line that can read can see plenty of advertising down around Strawn which informs the world in general that the Strawn Merchandise company is on the old Main Drag thereof. Inferring, of course, that the Bankhead highway is the Main Street of the World and that it passes the Strawn Merchandise company.

Then when they pass a row of trash cans as they pull up to the rear of the Gholson, they naturally think that the aforementioned Main Drag runs through our alley.

Fifteen Hundred Cunning Kiddies To Invade Ranger

The Calumet Kids are coming to Ranger. They will be here fifteen hundred strong next Saturday, and will want to play with every kid in Ranger. And they know how to play too! They know lots of tricks, and the beauty of it is they never tire of playing. They are ready to go any time, and never lose their cheery smile.

But the best part of it all is, the Calumet Kids will be a pal to another kid or a whole group of kids and the cost for his companionship will be absolutely free.

Full details of the Calumet Kid idea will be given in the Times next Friday, and every boy and girl in Ranger will want to grab the paper early to see just how it is going to happen and where the kids may be met in Ranger. It will not be hard to find them. They will not only be at numerous places down town, but it will not even be necessary for the children in the resident section to come down town to take up company with the Calumet Kids. It may be that a bunch of the kids will be with in a block or two from most any home in town.

It is going to be a great party, and Ranger kiddies would not think of passing up such a thing as this.

Watch the Times Thursday, and then when the paper is delivered Friday get hold of a copy and spread the news, for you'll want all your little friends to know about it.

Fergusons Home After Long Tour North And East

Theodore Ferguson and wife have just returned from an extended tour of the northern and eastern states, and Canada and parts of southern states. They crossed the border at Niagara Falls, around Lake Ontario to Toronto and up the St. Lawrence river to Montreal.

Mr. Ferguson reports that 1927 is notable in the north for lack of summer weather. He says that practically all the hotels in that region had fires in mid-August.

While in Massachusetts Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson visited Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins who gave them a personally conducted tour of New England which was much enjoyed.

Mr. Ferguson says that their memory of New York is very pleasant because of the wonderful shows that were running at that time. Washington is regarded as the most beautiful city visited in the 7,000 miles.

Mr. Ferguson states that conditions through the South Atlantic states are much better than anticipated due to the increase in price of farm commodities.

Florida, which Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson visited after leaving the northern states, is very beautiful and favorably impresses the tourist with its flowers and good roads. However conditions in Florida are still rather sad as it is still suffering from the depression of the land boom.

Mr. Ferguson stated this morning that the only thing that overshadowed the trip was that of all the places they visited they could not find a state that could compare with Texas in general and Eastland county in particular. Mr. Ferguson also stated that the more he saw of other towns and cities the better he liked Eastland.

ABILENE, Sept. 20.—More than 10,000 school children of west Texas were guests of the West Texas fair at the opening of the fair here today. It was considered the largest assemblage of children ever held in Abilene.

Starting to school is an ordeal for most children. After a summer spent largely in the open, school means a radical change in the child's daily regime.

Not only does he miss the outdoors, but the freedom of following his own devices. He feels cramped up. His physical activities are repressed. He is made to study. His whole world is changed.

How may we prepare the child for this change and best adapt him to his new regime?

First, at the beginning of the school year, have your child examined by the family physician. This examination should be thorough, special attention being given to the eyes for possible defects of vision, the ears for impairment of hearing, the teeth for cavities or other conditions requiring dental care, and the nose and throat for diseased tonsils and adenoids. Mouth breathing, snoring, frequent colds, sore throats, and discharging ears may be due to infected tonsils and adenoids.

Posture should receive attention. Round shoulders, flat chest, spinal curvatures and flat feet should be noted and the necessary corrective measures begun.

The general condition of the child should be seriously and thoroughly studied. Departures from the normal in heart, lungs, or kidneys may thus be found.

Study your child and try to give your doctor an intelligent inventory which may help him materially in forming conclusions. Thus many defects and inelap diseases can be corrected early.

The school schedule is so crammed that too little time is allowed for open-air play. It is of the utmost importance that advantage be taken of every opportunity to be in the fresh air and sunlight. Poor appetite, constipation, irritability, and restless sleep are all frequent symptoms in the child who does not get outdoors enough.

Certain children who cannot easily adapt themselves to school, suffer considerable mental stress and strain. They may be so unhappy that they become nervous and morose and exhibit emotional outbursts. Every effort should be made to get at the bottom of such a condition so that it can be corrected before serious damage has been done.

Rest is essential, particularly with the undernourished. Lack of gain in weight is, in a great measure, due to insufficient rest. An over-tired child is irritable, prone to disturbed sleep, and does not want to eat. Ten minutes rest after lunch and a rest period before dinner is a great boon, especially to children who tire easily.

Rest should not only be physical, but mental. A quiet half hour might well be a part of every child's daily regime. Over-excitement is responsible for many mental and physical upsets.

Sleep is the most important form of rest. When there is unusual physical effort, cellular activity is increased, the organs function more rapidly, fatigue products are thrown off in increasing amount, and the individual tires. A child tires more quickly and needs more rest than an adult.

The boy or girl who follows a well-considered arrangement of the day, so that study, meals, outdoor play, rest and sleep each has its rightful place, bids fair to outshine the child with no such plan. This applies to all children, but with special force to the nervous or malnourished.

President Back In Washington Press Men Busy

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON.—President Coolidge's return to Washington means that the existence of Washington correspondents is again justified.

Mute testimony of the difference the Coolidge presence makes to journalism in this fair town was afforded by a glimpse into the White House press-room a few days in advance of the executive's return.

Empty as a candidate's promises. Not a soul in sight. The country's biggest news font was deserted. On a small table in the center of the little room lay a scattered and disheveled pack of cards, convincing proof that things were very dull indeed.

Now all will be changed. The press cubbyhole will be packed and on Tuesday and Friday scores of reporters will overflow into the lobby outside, waiting for the handclap which sends them dashing into the president's office to learn for the world what the president has on his mind which he is willing to confide.

About those cards. Gambling in the press room has been an intermittent affair, first tolerated and then forbidden. Everyone who comes to see the president must pass through the executive office entrance, right alongside the press room and it has been suggested that it didn't look quite nice for the president's guests, especially the strait-laced ones, to get a glimpse of a card game just as they stepped into the White House.

For a long time the card games had been banned on this premise. When the put-and-take top became popular a correspondent brought one in and the boys started spinning it for nickels or some such coinage.

This lasted for ten minutes before a White House cop ended the game.

The top incident was all that brightened a long tedious period of chess, the only game allowed. Then, recently, after congress had adjourned someone started a bridge game and it was allowed to proceed.

Bridge has been played ever since whenever a quorum was present and

Mothers of Large Families Need Help

Too often nowadays mothers, in their efforts to do for their families, find it a burden.

Thousands of these mothers are now, in the privacy of their own homes, and at small expense, using St. Joseph's G. F. P. to build them up and strengthen them.

Among these happy mothers is Mrs. Pauline Fowler, who lives at 1120 E. Quincy St., San Antonio, Texas.

Mrs. Fowler says, "I hadn't been feeling what you could call real good for some time and just recently I got so I felt tired out all the time, and couldn't walk more than thirty yards without feeling exhausted."

"I didn't know what to do to get back my strength until I began hearing my neighbors tell what G. F. P. is doing for them."

"I felt so much stronger by the time I had finished the first bottle, I kept right on using this medicine, and now I feel just as strong and healthy as I ever did."

Women have used will continue unless some reformer steps in. Only two can play chess—though not every two at that—and the job of correspondents who have the White House beat consists largely of waiting for news to develop and tagging occasional visitors to the president.

For Alphonso, in fact, was born king of Spain, his father having died six months before his birth. Queen Wilhelmina succeeded to the crown of Holland when she was only 10 years old.

ARCHANGEL.—Eight bodies found in the White sea revealed the fate of the soviet freighter Siriana, two weeks overdue and unreported. The bodies of the eight seamen furnished a clue which resulted in locating the hull of the freight ship four miles off the mouth of the Dvina river, in the White sea. The vessel had evidently struck a rock and gone to the bottom instantly, with all hands. There were members of the crew and three bodies are still not found.

U. S. INDUSTRIAL PLAN LIKED BY BRITISH LABOR

American Principle of Co-operation to be Given Trial There.

By J. W. T. MASON.
(Written for the United Press.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—British trades unionism, which has hitherto looked upon capitalism as its class enemy, is seeking ways of adopting a new conciliatory attitude toward employers which if successful, will mark the first important victory in Europe for the American principle of industrial co-operation.

Ever since the bolshevik revolution in Russia European workmen have been fluctuating between the extremes of Slav communism and American co-operation. The workers have hesitated to follow either lead. British labor leaders now indicate, however, that the American influence may become paramount in a reorganized trans-Atlantic economic system.

Not only socialists but also workmen members of the conservative European political parties have regarded class divisions as an inevitable accompaniment of modern industrialism. They have been unable to reconcile the interests of employers and employees, considering each class to be the hereditary enemy of the other. Employers, themselves, have had the same point of view. High wages have been looked upon by the employers as quite unnecessary for working men and if granted as being an inevitable cause of idleness. Working men have been considered as contented with their lot in life and interested in earning more money per day only so that they might reduce the number of days they would have to work.

Justify Criticism.
Employees, in many cases, have justified this criticism. The consequence has been antagonisms and hatreds between capital and labor, resulting in enormous losses of efficiency, and inevitable reductions in output and in wages. The high wages paid in the United States have been a source of European interest after the world war and Great Britain, especially, sent a number of commissions to America to study the reasons. Not only industrialists but also trades unionists sent investigators. All confirmed one another's findings that capital and labor in the United States met on an entirely different footing than prevailed in Europe.

That co-operation could exist between employers and employees was contrary to British economic principles and for a long time the working man of England refused to accept the reports brought back to them. They were loath to believe that American working men realized the only way to receive permanently high wages was to produce goods having a high value, especially by means of labor saving devices. In Europe, labor saving machines have never found favor with the working men who have considered them diabolical inventions to permit capitalism to discharge part of the workers and force the remainder to keep up the total output. This is also the belief of the Russian communists and the American and Russian principles thus found themselves rivals for the favor of the European working classes.

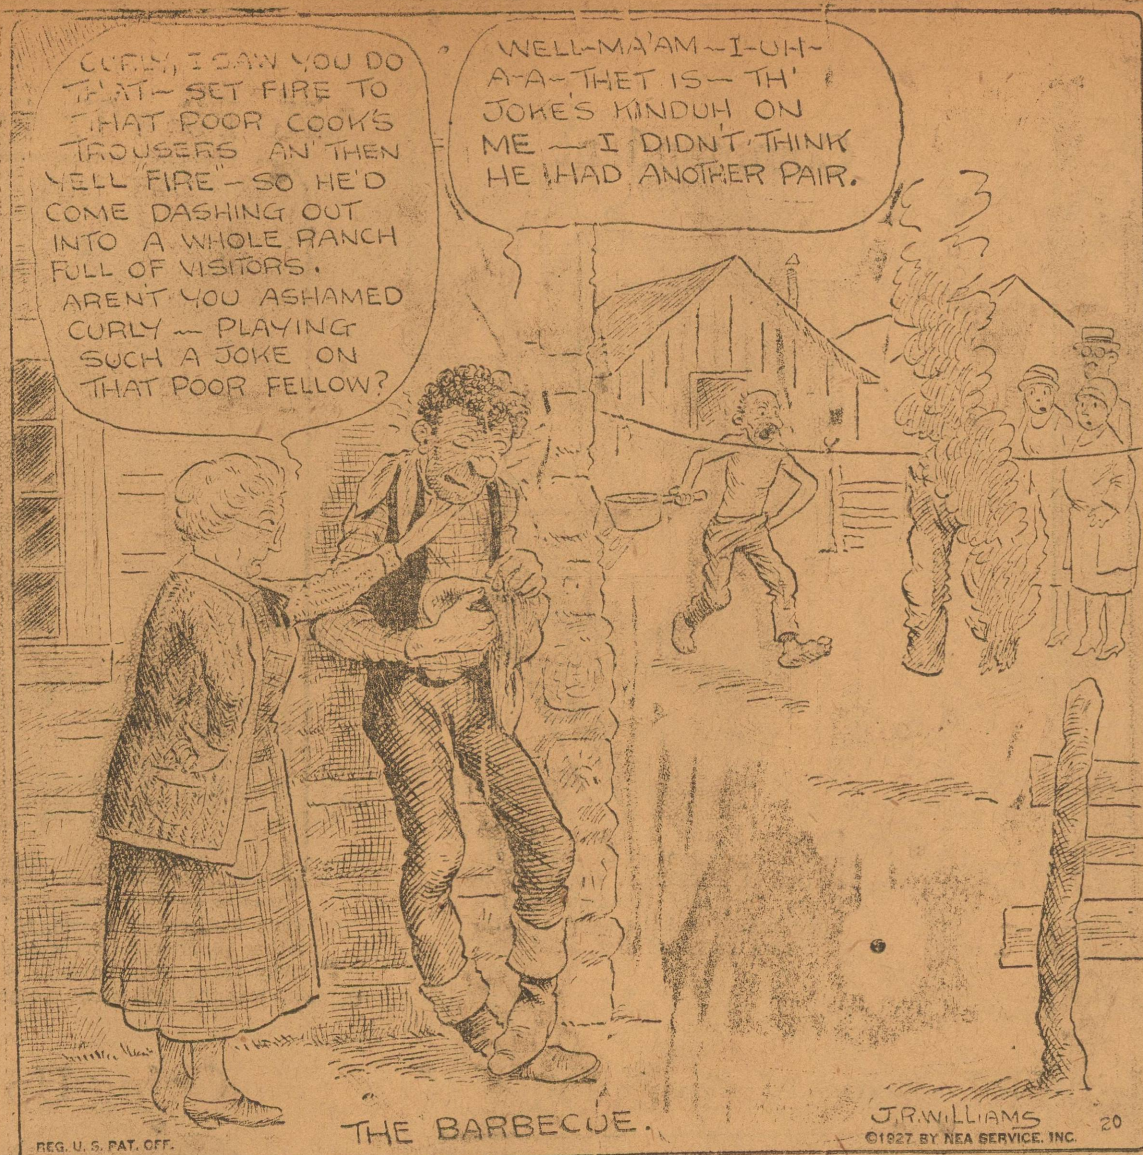

Abandon Old Idea.
The British trades unions, too, have always maintained that political victory was necessary at the polls before labor could obtain economic justice. This idea, which the bolsheviks carried to the extreme of a class revolution, was found by the British investigators in the United States to be repudiated by the American labor movement. That American working men had won their high standard of living without maintaining a labor party in congress shattered another cherished illusion of the Britons. The principle of class antagonism and political trades unionism were thus seen as having failed to benefit the European working men while the principle of co-operation and non-political trades unionism brought prosperity to American labor.

The stern reality of these facts has had to be faced by European economists, unable to reconcile their theories with the failure of Russian communism and the success of American co-operation. British labor leaders, after studying the conditions, have begun to make tentative suggestions that capitalists should be approached in the American way, and that working men should recognize unity as a better principle than discord in industry. This movement depends for its success, however, not only on the attitude of labor but also on the attitude of capitalism. It is as hard for European employers to overcome their own class of feeling of superiority as for the employees to overcome their feeling that they are permanently being exploited. Generations of tradition must be discarded before co-operation can be made a success. But, if the new spirit fails, European industry will fail likewise. Europeans are increasingly realizing this warning and therein lies the best chance for the Americanization of trans-Atlantic industry.

Football Game Is Scheduled With No Place to Play

There has been no definite place set for the Eastland-Gorman football game to be played Saturday, according to Supt. W. Z. Bates. Officials are under the impression that the Eastland athletic field will not be conditioned by Saturday and it is thought that the game will be played either in Ranger or Cisco as invitations have been received from both places. The field might have been ready to play on had it not rained in Eastland Monday. This delayed the work for a couple of three days. A definite place for the game will be decided on Wednesday morning.

Though Its Effects Are Felt It Has Been Badly Crippled Recently

By United Press.
PEKING.—Russian influence in China is at least badly bent and it may already virtually have broken under the strain to which it has been subjected in the last three months. This is the general opinion of informed foreign observers following the departure from Hankow of Michael Borodin, former chief advisor to the Wuhan regime in Hankow, and General Gallen, the chief military advisor of the southerners. General Chiang Kai-shek, leader of the Nanking regime, is given much of the credit for the decline in Russian power in the affairs of the Kuomintang. Chiang Kai-shek broke with the influence of Soviet Russia in China waned steadily. Japan sent troops into Shantung province "to protect the lives and property" of Japanese residents in that area, the successful Southern drive toward Peking virtually collapsed, and finally, according to Chinese Nationalist sources, Borodin and Gallen were forced to leave Hankow. Their whereabouts remained uncertain although Borodin was reliably reported at Kuling and Gallen presumably was with him.

Peking Quiet.
With this situation prevailing and Marshal-Generalissimo Chang Tso-lin firmly in the saddle in Peking and most of North China the ancient capital is the quietest it has been in months. Talk of Southern propaganda, communist plots, the possibility of military coups and other rumors of bloodshed and sudden death which were rampant here following the Nanking outrages, largely have disappeared. Even the Chinese, always find of disseminating the wildest rumors, are hard put to find a new daily thriller.

Whatever the eventual outcome may be—and no competent observer can be found in Peking who will forecast anything like an early solution of the so-called "China problem"—there can be doubt but that Soviet Russia has left an imprint upon Chinese life which never will be erased.

Russian advisors taught China a great deal of organization, they implanted a spirit into Chinese workers and farmers which is going to make hard-sledding for ambitious and selfish Chinese generals for years to come, and they showed the Chinese what is most dangerous of all, from the viewpoint of foreigners resident in this country, that many of the provisions in the treaties between the powers can be flouted with more or less impunity.

Propaganda, heretofore a rather minor force in China's wars, and politics, became a major weapon under Russian direction. It won thousands of miles of territory for the Nationalists, threw the scare of their lives into the northern military leaders, and taught young China, with graphic effectiveness the truth that the pen is mightier than the sword.

Adopt Methods.

Even Chang Tso-lin has been driven to the organization of a propaganda bureau by the example of the effective Russian methods.

Russians fostered the youth movement in China until it has reached a point where it is not likely to be downed; they furthered the beginnings of a feminist movement; they gave vast impetus to the formation of labor and proletarian organizations and they gave a vast push to the rising tide of Chinese nationalism which has placed the whole question of the relations between China and the powers on a new footing.

Just how much money and how many men Russia put into the China venture is uncertain. It probably was large, but not nearly as large as the die-hard press in the treaty ports would have the world believe. It is certain, however, that Russia did make a great effort and that whatever the future may bring she has failed largely in her major objectives.

The immediate future, many observers believe, the Russians may throw most of their support to Marshal Feng Yu-shiang, one time "Christian general" of China who has been close to Moscow ever since he held Peking some two and one half years ago. Feng's star, which seemed to be setting after his defeat at the Nankou Pass outside Peking by Marshal Chang Tso-lin a year ago, has been ascending again. The strength of his army, now scattered through Shensi and northern Honan is not known here and there is no apparent source for the military supplies he would have to have for any really big campaign; but if Russia throws the bulk of her support to him he may again become a major figure in the chaotic politico-military puzzle which is the China of today.

Marjorie Daw will play opposite Tim McCoy in "Spoilers of the West," the next Tim McCoy starring picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which W. S. Van Dyke will direct. The original story is by Madeline Ruthven and Ross Wills, who also wrote "The Frontiersman" and "Wyoming." McCoy's latest frontier dramas, which Van Dyke also directed. Miss Daw recently appeared with the Duncan sisters in "Topsy and Eva."

Warns Against Teaching The Darwin Theory

By A. W. V. KING

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
SYDNEY.—Attitude of Roman Catholic prelates in Australia to evolution of man theories has been defined by Archbishop Duhig of Brisbane, Queensland.

"Evolution," he said, "is one of those subjects which, imperfectly understood, are most likely to prejudice the mind against doctrines of religion which command our belief, as much as does the existence itself of a Creator. Evolution cannot account for the origin of organic life or supply an explanation of the origin of motion in the universe. It is not scientific to assume conclusions or to talk about spontaneous generation of living organisms. Any such theories are useless unless based on actual scientific results, and as regards the origin of man, theories of evolution must go to the scientific scrapheap."

"The conception of man," continued the archbishop, "as a rational being endowed with an immortal soul and made unto God's image and likeness, with the dignity, sonship and an eternal destiny, excludes all theories which would degrade him to the level of a mere evolutionized brute, whose ancestors roamed primeval forests, hung from the branches of trees, were known in one age as jabbering apes, and in the next as bipeds, shaping a dawning civilization, and in the course of millions of years, as the cultured Greeks and Romans."

Archbishop Duhig described Charles Darwin's "The Origin of Species" as "a natural selection theory, which ignored God and demanded altogether too much of nature." The Roman Catholic church, he said, had made no definite statement in regard to the body of the first man beyond holding the tradition interpretation of Genesis, according to which the first man, as to both body and soul, was immediately created by God. Even if evolution in certain forms became an established and indisputable doctrine with scientific proofs, it would yet neither disprove the existence of God, the existence of the human soul and its immortality, nor any of the doctrines of faith. The church had no fear that the truths of their faith would not prevail, but they were concerned about the moral effect of certain evolution theories on society.

"If, for instance, college students were free to believe that they were descended from apes, why would we bother them about culture and higher education, or why hide them from getting beyond bounds on their festive occasions? Why bother them about the moral effect of certain theories or the higher ideals of life? The choice before them as Christians was a choice of materialistic world with no moral sanction or a world based on principles taught by Christianity. "I need not describe," said the archbishop, "what society governed on purely materialistic principles would become. If you teach man that he is but an evolutionized animal and no more, you must be prepared to let him act as such, and society must be prepared to take the consequences."

King Vidor's next picture will likewise be Marion Davies' new starring vehicle when "The Patsy," a successful New York stage play, is transferred to the screen with the director of "The Big Parade," wielding the megaphone and Miss Davies in the principal role.

Postal Receipts

Good Increase

Postal receipts at the Ranger postoffice shows a gain of $510 for the month of August, 1927, over August 1926, postmaster Jesse E. Meroney stated today and explained that while August was preceded by two rather light months, the gain in August brought all three above the same three months of 1926.

While the postoffice receipts gained the postal savings account deposits dropped off, Mr. Meroney said.

RUPTURE

Expert and Authority
Here With The FAMOUS HUSTON TRUSS

Dr. Huston, of the Huston Truss Co., New York City, will personally be at Gholson Hotel, Ranger, Thursday only, Sept. 22, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and offers to the people of this section the Internationally known Huston Truss. This justly famous Truss is universally considered the one perfect and satisfactory instrument for the relief of all kinds of reducible rupture, producing remarkable results without the use of surgical operations or medical treatment of any kind. Instantaneous relief is apparent the moment it is placed in position—contraction of the opening is manifest in a few days and the rupture soon disappears permanently in the average case.

The pad on the Truss will hold any reducible rupture perfectly, and will not slip regardless of position or bodily strain of the subject.

SLEEP IN IT—BATHE IN IT
No under leg straps, elastic webbing or bulky pads are used in its construction. Nothing to wear out, clean and sanitary, moisture-proof and will not chafe. Can be put on or off in five seconds. No other instrument has ever met these demands with such universal endorsement. Guaranteed not to break.

WARNING—You are cautioned against wearing elastic webbing or the old style Leather Covered Truss, or under leg straps. Such Trusses press in the wrong place, often causing strangulation and death. OVER THIRTY-FIVE YEARS SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF RUPTURE WARRANTS THIS STATEMENT.

This Truss is not sold by mail as each part is selected, assembled and fitted by Dr. Huston especially for each individual case. No guess work, but a scientific fitting of a scientific Truss.
