OPEC ministers delay production debate

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC oil ministers trying to shore up falling world oil prices avoided a fight over production levels today. The group's president said they delayed that debate to a later meeting.

Less than two hours after the meeting began in a Geneva hotel, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto — the OPEC president — told reporters the 13 ministers would convene a special meeting later in the year to discuss production levels.

Sources said the decision was prompted by requests from Ecuador, Iraq, Qatar and Gabon that they be given a bigger share of total OPEC sales and urging by others that there be an overall cut in production. The sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

Shortly before the meeting began, Iraqi Oil Minister Qassim Taki al-Oraibi told reporters his country wanted its quota doubled to 2.4 million barrels a day. The group's self-imposed overall production limit stands at 16 million barrels a day.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, said as he left the morning session that he expected a special meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to be convened in the autumn to consider any changes in production quotas.

Yamani also reiterated that he was pressing for an unspecified cut in the price of OPEC's lower-quality crudes. Iran said it would firmly oppose any price reduction.

OPEC prices currently range from $28 per 42-gallon barrel to $26.50.

Subroto said in an opening address to the group that it was facing perhaps the severest test in its 25 years of existance.

"We are all facing a dilemma," Subroto said. "On the one hand, we all appreciate the importance of maintaining solidarity in the face of the current threat to our source of livelihood and even survival. On the other, we cannot view our steeply plunging oil revenues with equanimity."

Subroto said OPEC no longer could afford to lose sales to non-OPEC competitors such as Britain and Mexico.

"We want to make it quite clear that we are not here with the express purpose of cutting prices or reducing production," Subroto said. "We are here to initiate measures that will lead us to regain control of the market."

Other ministers made it clear, however, that a cut in the price of at least some OPEC crudes was likely.

"We have to follow market realities," said Fernando Santos Alvite, the deputy Ecuadoran oil minister who was acting as head of his country's delegation. Santos and other ministers met briefly with reporters.

In the open market, where OPEC has no control over prices, top-grade crudes are selling for at least $1 a barrel less than the $28 charged by OPEC. Lower-quality oils are at least $2 a barrel below the $26.50 that OPEC demands.

Sharp cutbacks in Saudi Arabian output have pushed OPEC production down to 14.5 million barrels daily, Subroto said. That is the lowest level in nearly two decades.

A pair of explosions in Copenhagen this morning destroyed the Danish headquarters of Northwest Airlines, above, — the only American air carrier with offices in Denmark's capital city — and damaged a Jewish synagogue, right, near the city's center. About 15 persons were injured, three seriously.

Bomb blasts shake Copenhagen

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Bombs today destroyed the downtown office of a U.S. airline and damaged a synagogue and Jewish home for the elderly, injuring 23 people, at least three seriously.

Three Americans were among those suffering minor injuries, the U.S. Embassy reported.

Later today, the shadowy Islamic Jihad terrorist group called The Associated Press in Beirut, Lebanon, and claimed responsibility for the bombings. An anonymous caller said they were in retaliation for Israeli raids on South Lebanese villages Sunday. The call could not be authenticated.

The bombs at the Northwest Orient Airlines ticket office and the synagogue-nursing home area several blocks away exploded within about four minutes of each other. First reports from police and witnesses had said at least two people were killed, but hospital officials later said there were no fatalities.

The bombings were the most serious acts of terrorism in recent memory in Denmark.

The first bomb ripped open the Northwest Orient office, the only American airline office in the Danish capital.

At least one other device was set off in a passageway bordering the synagogue and home for the elderly, in a narrow street deeper in the central city. The heavy wooden doors of the synagogue were blown down.

Some passersby told Danish Radio of hearing a second explosion at the synagogue, but there was no immediate confirmation from Copenhagen police or fire officials that a second bomb exploded there.

Eno Jacobsen, a worker at the old-age home, said at least seven of its residents were injured but none were believed seriously hurt.

Copenhagen's chief rabbi, Bent Melchior, called the bombing "a sinful act" but said there were no activities in the synagogue at the time of the blasts. A morning prayer service involving some 20 people had finished two hours earlier.

Ray H. Burson, press officer at the U.S. Embassy, said the three injured Americans had been released after treatment for minor injuries. One had been near the synagogue and the other two at the airline office.

Harald Ruetz, a Northwest Orient Airlines manager, told The Associated Press that the blast appeared to have come from a device outside the ticket office, which was occupied by one employee and two customers.

He said the employee was slightly injured and he did not know the condition of the two customers.

"Everything was black and there were huge tongues of fire" at the instant of the explosion, said Morten Ebbersen, a desk worker at the Hotel Imperial near the airline office.

Ebbersen said the hotel and other buildings near the explosion site were evacuated.

NTSB to probe local bus wreck that killed four

From Staff and Wire Reports

BIG SPRING — As family members and friends of four victims of a weekend church bus accident deal with their grief, federal inspectors today were due in town to investigate the crash.

National Transportation Safety Board inspectors will look into the causes of the Saturday night accident on U.S. 87 near Ackerly, about 25 miles northwest of Big Spring, state troopers said.

Trooper Wayne Whiteaker of Lamesa said his own report on the accident, which killed four and injured 37, points to possible speeding in rainy conditions.

"I'm not going to file any charges, but I think the bus was running too fast for the conditions," Whiteaker said Sunday night.

The driver of the bus, Robert Scott, 48, of Big Spring lost his wife, Anita, 41, in the accident. Also killed were Clyde Clark Jr., 3, and Sheila Albert, 15, both of Big Spring, and Darlene Hammork, 41, of San Angelo.

"I came up on a long stretch of water, and it felt like the bus lifted up and turned sideways," Scott said.

The bus was carrying 54 people, said Whiteaker, who said he got a list of all those on board. The bus was designed to carry only 45 people, he said, although he wasn't sure if a violation was involved since several of those were small children sitting in their parents' laps.

The passengers were from Church of God in Christ congregations in Big Spring, San Angelo and the Wayside Church of God in Christ, 1311 Cherry Lane, in Midland. The group reportedly was on their way to a choir gathering in Lubbock that preceded a weeklong regional meeting now under way.

Of the 37 injured, only four remained in a Big Spring hospital. The victims, Charles H. Wright, 3, and Lillie Wright, 35, both of Midland, and Verna Allen, 35, and Jacqueline Allen, 11, both of San Angelo, all were listed early today in satisfactory condition, according to hospital spokeswoman.

The Rev. Frank Nelson, pastor of the Power House Church of God in Christ in Big Spring, said Scott was an experienced driver who works for Howard County as a driver of large vehicles.

Nelson, his wife and two children were following the bus at the time of the accident. Both Nelson and his wife said they didn't think Scott should be blamed for the tragedy.

Sunday night, Nelson held a brief prayer service for members of his church who wanted to share their grief. Three of the four accident victims attended the Big Spring church.

Only eight of the 35 to 40 adult members of the church showed up at the little stucco church on a dirt road on Big Spring's north side. The 31-year-old minister urged them to "come together to give each other strength. Not only family members, but all of us have suffered a loss," he said.

The weekend bus accident was the second such tragedy for the church. Last fall, a van it operated wrecked in Midland, killing the niece of Nelson's wife, Gail.

Scott was not the driver of the van, which was carrying youngsters to a church youth meeting.

Nelson and his wife said they saw the bus turn sharply across the road, overturn 2½ times and come to rest in a cotton field.

Mrs. Nelson said the bus fell on its side, bounced upright and fell back back on its side, crushing four of the passengers.

Some of the children on the bus, occupied mostly by young adults, also had been on the van involved in last year's fatal accident, Nelson said.

"They were pretty brave," Nelson said of the children.

Many of those on the bus were related.

"It had been raining real bad," but was just drizzling when the bus "hit a water spot in the road and the driver lost control," said Debra Fowler of San Angelo, who was on the bus.

House to act on funding; Agreement with Senate lagging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House plans to act on major money bills this week even though negotiations with the Senate have failed to produce a budget to control spending.

With both houses of Congress unable to agree on a budget, President Reagan, just back from his hospital surgery for cancer of the colon, began making a series of phone calls Sunday to pressure Congress to get moving on deficit reduction.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said there is "a likelihood" Congress will not be able to agree on a budget for the coming fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Appearing Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," Dole said, "I wouldn't want to indicate today that we're very optimistic. I think we're less than 50-50."

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said in an interview brodcast Sunday on the Mutual Radio Network: "I'd say our chances have moved from 50-50 to unfortunately 65-35 to have a budget at all."

Dole said Senate Republicans now are counting on Reagan's help to resolve the budget impasse or finally bring the issue to a head. "My view is that the president can sort of step into the breach now (that he is) home from the hospital and maybe put it together, if he does it very quickly," Dole said.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Peter Roussel said Sunday, "The president this afternoon has initiated some calls to members of the Senate, asking them to allow a vote on the line-item veto,"

The line-item veto would allow the president to delete individual items from spending bills without throwing out the entire bills.

Opponents of the line-item veto, which faces the threat of a continued filibuster, claim it would subvert the balance of power in the Constitution, taking away from Congress the power of the purse. Filibuster leader Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., calls it "constitutional madness" that would give the president overwhelming power.

Dole has set for Tuesday a second attempt to choke off the filibuster. Last Thursday, he fell three votes short of the 60 needed to end the filibuster — despite a written appeal from the bedridden president.

The filibuster can block other important legislation from coming to the floor and Dole may be forced to give up if he fails to get the debate-limiting motion approved on Tuesday. Other important legislation is starting to back up — and that could soon include a farm bill dear to Dole's Kansas heart.

Dole has vowed to have a farm bill passed before the August recess.

"We're going to vote on something before we get out of here August 2," Dole said, despite the doubts of Democrats who feel the bill is being rushed through committee.

The key hangup has been in finding a way to reduce the cost of crop subsidy programs while not hurting farmers.

113 arrested in South African 'emergency'

New York Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South African police, acting with near-absolute powers bestowed by a new state of emergency, said Sunday that they had detained 113 people since midnight, when the emergency came into force.

Reflecting newly imposed limits on the access of reporters to information about such actions, a police spokesman declined to identify those detained or to say where they had been seized.

Under the powers, any member of South Africa's security forces — the police, the military, the railway police or prison officers — may order anyone detained without trial for 14 days. Thereafter, the government may extend the detention indefinitely.

The state of emergency, ordered by President P.W. Botha in response to months of widening violence in black townships, applies to 36 magisterial districts in and around Johannesburg and in the troubled Eastern Cape region centered on Port Elizabeth.

The new emergency seemed to have made little immediate impact on township violence. The police said that in continued unrest in several areas, a black man was shot dead during the night by police in Kwazakele township using shotguns loaded with birdshot. Kwazakele is one of a cluster of black residential areas outside Port Elizabeth.

Four black people were killed Sunday, the police spokesman said, when police opened fire with shotguns on crowds of up to 400 demonstrators in a black township called Tumahole outside the town of Parys, south of Johannesburg. A black woman was reported killed near Port Elizabeth.

In KwaThema township, east of Johannesburg, witnesses said army troops and policemen sealed off the area early Sunday in what seemed to be one of the first security operations since the state of emergency was proclaimed. Troops have been deployed alongside police in black townships since late last year.

ARRESTS

In a separate incident, 22 people among 60 on a bus returning home from a funeral were detained in Johannesburg early Sunday, according to a spokesman for the Detainees Parents Support Committee, a group that monitors detentions. The police acknowledged that some people on the bus had been held, but declined to give further details.

The Detainees Parents Support Committee said the 113 detained included four white activists.

The state of emergency was announced Saturday by Botha, the first action of its kind in South Africa in 25 years. The move drew varied reaction from political groups in South Africa.

Frederick Van Zyl Slabbert, leader of the Progressive Federal Party, the official opposition in the white chamber of South Africa's racially segregated Parliament, said: "What was supposed to be an era of negotiation and consensus has seen us drift steadily into the present state of emergency." But Dr. Andries Treurnicht, head of the Conservative Party, a breakaway group that stands to Botha's right, said, "Stronger action should have come earlier."

"The awful bloodbath long prophesied is upon us," commented the Rev. Beyers Naude, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, which opposes apartheid.

The comments reflected a profound polarization in South African society that has deepened since Botha embarked last year on what he termed reforms. These offer junior status in Parliament to people of mixed and Indian racial descent, but ignore the black majority.

Township unrest took root in the country last September, but the emergency powers were proclaimed only after it reached Soweto, Johannesburg's vast black satellite, last week.

The suggestion seemed to be that unrest so close to the commercial heart of the country had alarmed the authorities, whose police force has been widely stretched by the unpredictable and widespread unrest. Brig. Johann Coetzee, the commissioner of police, said Saturday: "I do not foresee that more personnel will be used than at present. We don't need more men but more legal provision."

The state of emergency protects the police and other security personnel against legal reprisals for their actions in the 36 districts and bypasses court and other proceedings previously required for detentions and searches.

Some commentators have suggested that the emergency is intended, in part, to reassure South Africa's 4.5 million whites that the government is not weakening in the face of the black township unrest that has taken around 500 lives since last September.

"Although the precise measures that have been or will be implemented will not be made known at present," a police spokesman said Sunday, "it must be emphasized that the security forces are determined to bring about an end to the lawlessness that led to the announcement" of the emergency.

White nervousness, particularly in remote rural areas, was evident Saturday in the Eastern Cape town of Cradock when tens of thousands of blacks attended the funeral of four slain activists in the nearby township of Lingelihle. White residents of the town said they had armed themselves in case unrest spilled into areas set aside by law for white occupation.

Military armored personnel carriers patrolled the white areas of town and police mounted guard with shotguns at street corners in a move apparently designed to bolster white confidence. At a roadblock just south of Cradock, a white policeman who stopped a car driven by another white was asked how he thought the emergency would change his job.

"It'll be like 1976," he said, referring to unrest that started in Soweto that year. "If they bend down to tie their shoelaces," he said in apparent reference to blacks, "we'll just blow them away."

Administration blames apartheid for much South African violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today blamed the South African system of apartheid for being "largely responsible for the current violence" in South Africa and called on the white-led government "to exercise its responsbilities in a scrupulous manner."

In a statement that carefully avoided criticizing the government's declaration of a state of emergency giving it extraordinary police powers, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The South African government bears a considerable responsbility at this time."

"It says it seeks to restore law and order, and that is understandable," Speakes said, "but we look to the South African government to exercise its responsibilities in a scrupulous manner."

Asked if that could be interpreted as a criticism of the emergency declaration, the spokesman repeated his statement, saying, "We look to them to exercise their repsponsiblities in a scrupulous manner."

Dole ready for Reagan to push budget compromise

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate majority leader, Bob Dole, said on Sunday that he hoped President Reagan, now that he was home from the hospital, would "step into the breach" and help the Senate and House reach a compromise on the budget and on a plan to cut the federal deficit.

"The president's got to be a player," said Dole, a Kansas Republican. He added that the Republicans would make a "serious, credible counteroffer" on the budget to House Democrats this week.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said in an interview that Republicans were preparing "a number of components to a package" for discussion "separately or in toto" by Senate Republicans.

Dole, however, said he was still pessimistic about reaching an agreement. Dole made his comments on the NBC News program "Meet the Press."

Congressional negotiations on the budget all but collapsed after the president dropped his support two weeks ago of the Senate's proposal to eliminate the cost-of-living increase in Social Security payments without getting the House negotiators to agree to a comparable amount in other spending cuts.

Senate members of a conference committee, infuriated by Reagan's action, rejected the latest budget offer from the House Democrats last week.

The effort by Dole to bring Reagan into the negotiations appeared to be a last-ditch effort by Republicans to reach an agreement on the budget. Dole said the president's radio address on Saturday, which criticized House Democrats for not cutting spending enough, was "a signal that he wants to be active on the budget process."

"You know we can use Ronald Reagan," Dole continued, in what appeared to be a bid to get the president to publicly back the Senate counteroffer when it is made to the House Democrats.

Some Senate Republicans, however, are expected to be leery of any help from the president since he gave in to the House on Social Security.

Reagan on Sunday spent his first full day at the White House after eight days in Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he underwent surgery for removal of a cancerous polyp in his colon. White House aides said that Reagan was reviewing briefing papers and looking forward to resuming work. It is expected that his schedule will be lightened for a time to accommodate his recuperation.

Congressional sources, referring to the budget components mentioned by Domenici, said the Senate Republicans' staff members were working on as many as 13 packages, from which the senators were expected to pick their counterproposal for the budget. The packages range from $200 billion in projected budget savings over three years to as much as $330 billion over three years, they said.

The most likely alternative, said some Republican sources, would include almost all the reductions and terminations in non-military domestic programs the Senate proposed earlier. These would affect the Small Business Administration, Urban Development Action Grants, mass transit, agriculture, Medicare, and the Export-Import Bank.

Domenici and Dole both said one of the options involved some reduction in the cost-of-living increase for Social Security benefits combined with a matching restraint on the way income tax brackets are now adjusted for inflation.

Dole, in his television appearance, said: "I don't see that happening, but it's an idea." And Domenici said, "none of them have been chosen."

The latest offer from the House added $24 billion in domestic savings over three years to its previous offer, bringing the House Democratic package to savings of $272.7 billion over three years.

Republicans and Democrats in the Senate rejected the House offer as inadequate although its projected savings were not far below the $295 billion over three years in the original Senate plan, which included a one-year freeze on cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other federal pension and benefit programs.

The Republicans objected to the proposal, they said, because it did not include enough reductions in popular domestic spending programs and, in addtion, was not enough to make up for dropping the Social Security freeze.

Dole said the outlook for an agreement was still less than 50-50. "We're to a choice of finding the other item or items, or having no budget at all," he said. "We're looking for that $28 billion to $30 billion replacement item," he said referring to the amount the freeze on Social Security and other pension programs would have saved, "and that's where the president can be helpful."

Dole said the House deserves the "courtesy" of "another serious, credible counteroffer,"

"And if the president supports that effort," Dole said, "then I think we've sort of reached showdown time. My view is that the president can sort of step into the breach now, home from the hospital, and maybe put it together, if he does it very quickly."

The majority leader said one of the first tests of the president's willingness to captialize on public and congressional sympathy after his cancer surgery would be the upcoming Senate vote on the line item veto. The measure, long sought by the administration, would permit the president to veto portions of a bill he found unacceptable without having to kill the entire piece of legislation.

White House officials said Reagan on Sunday made about half a dozen telephone calls to senators urging them to permit the line item veto proposal to come to a vote on the floor. A vote is now being blocked by a filibuster led by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Peter Roussel, a White House spokesman, said that Reagan might at some later point make telephone calls to members of Congress on the budget issue or possibly invite members to the White House to discuss the budget, but that nothing was currently scheduled.

Dole reflected the Senate's still simmering anger over the White House switch on Social Security when he said Republicans wanted the president "to indicate that this is it, that the Senate efforts were appreciated, that we've made a valiant effort, we're not going to give up"

He said some Senate Republicans felt the president had let them down, and they continued to criticize Donald T. Regan.

Newly spotted galactic string biggest structure in universe

By ROBERT FURLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers in New Mexico say they've identified the biggest known structure in the universe, an enormous string of galaxies that offers tantalizing hints about the origin and possible fate of the universe itself.

The "filament" of galaxies and clusters of galaxies stretches more than one billion light years, or about six trillion billion miles, according to the astronomers who reported their findings this past week to the National Science Foundation here.

In a telephone interview, Dr. Jack Burns, associate astronomy professor at the University of New Mexico, said the identification that he and graduate student David Batuski made provides new evidence there is much more to the universe than the stars and other visible matter.

It also is a new indication that galaxies such as our own Milky Way were formed through condensation and fragmentation from enormous-size clouds of gas, rather than the other way around, he said.

Without much more than the visible matter, there simply wouldn't be enough mass, enough gravitational force, to hold such a huge supercluster of galaxies together, he theorized.

Growing evidence of the existence of greater amounts of gravitational force also lends support to theories that the "end of the world" may well come when gravity causes the universe to stop expanding and begin to collapse.

"That's probably the biggest unanswered question in astronomy," he said: whether the universe will keep expanding or whether "the entire universe in a number of billions of years will begin contracting down into what some people have called a 'big crunch.'"

Although the newly identified filament is the largest yet identified, it isn't the first. Astronomers using radio telescopes in West Virginia and Puerto Rico identified one about 700 million light years long three years ago, and other smaller ones have also been discovered.

Burns said that in light of the existence of such superclusters, "we must postulate the existence of a dominant component of the universe consisting of non-luminous matter."

He said no one really knows what that is, though he suggested it might consist of "some form of dark or unseen matter such as exotic particles predicted recently by high energy physicists."

It is even possible, he said, that all matter in the universe is connected "much like a giant sponge with quite large holes in it. That view isn't necessarily inconsistent with our findings."

But he said much work remained to be done in a field that is still very new in astronomy.

He said he and his colleague identified the supercluster on which they're reporting from among the first three target areas they focused on. It is in the direction of the constellations Perseus and Pegasus and lies between 200 million and one billion light years from Earth.

The discovery, he said, "may have been dumb luck. We don't know if something like this is common or rare."

As recently as a decade ago, he said, technology wasn't advanced enough to track the three-dimensional size of supercluster filaments. In addition to telescopic photos, he used a sophisticated "electronic spectrograph," which uses a color-spectrum breakdown of light.

Rains end California's wildfires

Associated Press

A three-week siege of fire in northern California ended Sunday after a weekend of rain, and federal officials set up a toll-free hotline to help victims of the blazes that burned 200 homes and more than 375,000 acres of brush and timber.

Elsewhere, a 900-acre range fire in Washington state was contained, and e two-week fire in Idaho's Payette National Forest was nearly contained. An 8,000-acre range fire that began Thursday in Nevada was almost extinguished.

In Canada, a 2,500-acre forest fire that forced the evacuation of more than 200 people in the British Columbia town of North Bend no longer posed a danger to the community, but there were fears a new new blaze could threaten the town.

Rain all day Saturday and early Sunday helped douse the California fires, said Jerry Partain of the state Department of Forestry.

"We've put them out," Partain said.

Showers helped firefighters put out a blaze that destroyed three homes and $1.5 million worth of timberland near Redding, and another in Jamestown, about 150 miles southeast of San Francisco, where two buildings were destroyed and third was damaged, Partain said. Thunderstorms also cooled crews who were finishing work on a 1,620-acre fire near the Shasta-Trinity National Forest.

The aid hotline in Los Angeles, which begins Monday and will operate from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Saturday, will provide information on federal and state assistance programs, said Ernest Medeiros, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

It was set up to aid fire victims in Los Angeles and the counties of San Diego, Ventura, San Luis Obispo, Monterey, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz, which on July 18 were declared federal disaster areas by President Reagan.

The weather worked against firefighters in Washington state. A 900-acre range fire that erupted near Yakima on Saturday was fanned by winds over the steep Sedge Ridge and jumped fire lines Sunday morning.

BUS

Ms. Fowler's aunt was Ms. Hammork, one of the victims.

Ms. Hammork attended Deliverance Tabernacle Church of God in Christ in San Angelo, which is pastored by Mrs. Nelson's brother, the Rev. Kenneth Weatherspoon.

Weatherspoon, also pastor of the Wayside Church of God in Christ at Midland, was aboard the bus when the accident occurred. He said, "I realy don't know what happened. I was sitting in a seat and had fallen asleep. When I woke up the bus was in a skid."

Weatherspoon, who was treated and released with minor injuries, said neither he nor the members of his congregation, believe anyone is to blame for the crash. "It was an accident. It could have happened to anyone."

Nelson said he does not think his church members are bitter toward God because of the accident.

"I don't think there's any explanation (for what happened). We believe in the Lord and the work he wants us to do," Nelson said.

Added Mrs. Nelson, "It was just their time. When God gets ready, there's nothing anyone can do."

Jewish terrorists get life in prison

By ALLYN FISHER

JERUSALEM (AP) — Three members of a Jewish terror ring which attacked Palestinians in the occupied West Bank were sentenced to life in prison today after being convicted of murder, ending one of the most divisive trials in Israel's history.

The settlers, who were greeted with loud applause when they arrived at the packed courtroom, were convicted July 10 of killing three Palestinian students during a shooting spree at the Islamic University in Hebron in 1983 which also wounded 33 people.

Twelve other Israelis received lesser prison terms ranging from four months to 10 years for conducting a four-year campaign of terrorism against West Bank Palestinians. They were convicted of conspiring to blow up the Dome of the Rock Moslem shrine, crippling two Palestinian mayors in 1980 and planting explosives on five Arab-owned buses in 1984.

The convicted settlers listened to the sentences in silence. Supporters shook their hands before they were led from the courtroom to prison.

The three sentenced to life are Menachem Livni, 35, accused of being the planner and ringleader of the Hebron attack, Shaul Nir, 31, and Uzi Sharbaf, 25, both of whom were named in the charges as gunmen in the assault.

"Justice was not done here. Law and justice don't always go hand in hand," Livni told reporters after the sentencing.

The 15 are part of a 25-member underground which was exposed by Israeli security forces in April 1984 after a plot to blow up Palestinian buses was foiled.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and leading members of his right-wing Likud Bloc have already said they would seek presidential pardons for the accused. President Chaim Herzog has said he would examine individual clemency appeals on merit after the sentencings.

Victims of dam break buried in mass grave

STAVA, Italy (AP) — Many of the victims of the Stava dam break are being buried in a mass grave today, officials said, as engineers begin their inspections to determine what caused the collapse. More than 200 people were killed when a wall of water and mud slammed into the village.

Sanitation authorities have ordered local residents to drink only boiled or bottled water because of possible contamination.

Soldiers and volunteers, digging through the mud, had recovered 196 bodies so far, 65 of them still unidentified. With little hope left for finding more survivors, civil defense officials estimated late Sunday that the final death toll would be 214.

Rescue officials said a 130-foot common grave was prepared at the San Leonardo Cemetery in nearby Tesero for many of the villagers. About 70 of the dead in this popular tourist area were local people.

A report from the engineers surveying the area is not expected to be made public for days, officials said.

Officials said 18 people were still missing and presumed dead after Friday's dam break, which unleashed a torrent of dirt, water and debris into the tranquil valley, flattening three hotels and Stava's 20 houses.

The last of 19 survivors was pulled from the mud Saturday morning, after being buried up to her neck for 18 hours.

Survivors spoke of earlier fears that the dam, which had held two artificial lakes used in mining operations, was unstable. An environmental group had denounced plans to expand the size of the pools, saying the terrain was not capable of holding the extra load of water and waste.

A private fluorite mining company used the water to separate waste material from the mineral, which is used in glassmaking.

Army officials supervising the rescue efforts said Sunday that one possible cause under investigation was whether too much sludge had accumulated in the two lakes.

Recent rains also could have contributed to the break.

Over the weekend, prosecutors questioned one of the owners of the mine and about 40 other people, including local government officials. Hundreds of documents were ordered taken as evidence in the investigation.

President Francesco Cossiga flew to the devastated area Sunday morning by helicopter and promised that an investigation would be pursued vigorously.

"I am convinced that the justice that must be carried out will be done so by the courts and the government," Cossiga told one of the survivors, Giorgina Balladio, who gripped his hand from her hospital bed.

The woman, in her 60s, from the nearby village of Tesero, told Cossiga: "We all knew that something would happen" to the dam.

Gianni Bazzanella, the assessor in charge of industry for the autonomous province of Trento, whose jurisdiction covered the dam, said he was not aware of any danger signs.

Bazzanella said the mining company also was processing material brought to it from other mines in the area in northeast Italy, not far from the Austrian border.

The environmental group Green Stripe wrote in a magazine article in November that it believed the lakes — one higher than the other, with the dam between them, and both above the level of the valley — could not support all the materials brought to the site from other mines.

Marco Faggioli, a Civil Protection Ministry official from Rome, told The Associated Press investigators would look into reports that a month ago some water leaked through the dam. Mayor Adriano Iellici of nearby Tesero said no one had notified government authorities about any such leak.

Gunbattles jolt central Beirut, Palestinian refugee camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunbattles jolted central Beirut and the Palestinian refugee camp of Chatilla early today, and attackers rocketed the transmitter of the state radio, causing a two-hour interruption of broadcasts, police said.

They reported three people were killed and 16 wounded in the latest hostilities.

Nabih Berri, the Shiite Moslem militia leader, condemned Israel's attack on two Shiite villages in southern Lebanon, vowing to escalate guerrilla warfare against Israel.

"Israel hasn't learned yet that such operations only increase our determination to continue the struggle until total liberation of our land," said Berri, who serves as justice minister and state minister for south Lebanon.

His statement published by all Beirut newspapers today followed Israeli raids Sunday on the southern Lebanese villages of Qabrikha and Sejoud in which at least three Lebanese were reported killed.

Witnesses said Israeli troops used helicopter gunships and armored personnel carriers to stage their first major ground assault in southern Lebanon since Israel withdrew most of its troops from Lebanon last month.

Christian and Moslem militiamen traded grenade-throwing forays overnight across the Green Line that bisects Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors, sparking a three-hour mortar duel, a police statement said.

The statement said two civilians were killed and six others wounded in shelling that hit residential neighborhoods on both sides of the 3-mile Green Line.

Police were unsure who attacked the Shiite-influenced state radio in Moslem west Beirut.

The fighting kept all crossings closed between the two halves of the capital as a Syrian-sponsored security plan to curb lawlessness in the Moslem sector and Beirut airport completed its first week.

A coordination committee in charge of overseeing the plan was due to meet today with six Syrian military observers to examine ways of cooling Green Line hostilities, the state radio reported.

The overnight fighting at west Beirut's Chatilla refugee camp pitted Palestinian guerrillas against Berri's Amal militia. Police said one combatant was killed and 10 were wounded.

The renewed hostilities were sparked by a spate of gunpoint kidnapping between the two sides. The coordination committee intervened, secured the release of the kidnap victims and brought the flare-up to an end before dawn, according to police.

Amal militiamen backed by the mainly Shiite 6th Brigade of the Lebanese army fought a month-long war to prevent the Palestine Liberation Organization from rebuilding its power base in the Beirut camps that was lost in Israel's 1982 invasion.

The war was halted by a Syrian-sponsored ceasefire June 18.

On Sunday, Israeli troops descended by helicopter on Qabrikha, and conducted a house-to-house search for civilians suspected of supporting anti-Israeli Moslem militias, Lebanon's state radio said. The radio said at least three villagers were killed.

Israeli military sources in Tel Aviv said one guerrilla was killed in a clash between Israeli troops and "a terrorist squad" at Qabrikha.

Qabrikha is on the edge of an Israeli buffer zone designated by Israel in southern Lebanon on the border between the two countries. Israel, which pulled most of its troops out of Lebanon last month, supports the South Lebanon Army militia in the area in an effort to protect its northern border and keeps several hundred Israelis in the zone to help the militia.

Conflict takes daily toll of war-weary Lebanese

By RIMA SALAMEH

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Conflict day in and day out not only takes its toll of dead — one in 40 of Lebanon's 4 million people in a decade — it also takes a heavy toll in the mental and physical well-being of those who survive.

Drug addiction, drunkenness, divorce and depression have reached record levels, experts say, as side effects of the tensions and traumas born out of the conflict that explodes in streets, neighborhoods and countryside villages.

Widespread drunkenness and alcoholism and an upsurge in divorce are accepted by sociologists and marriage counsellors as unfortunate but predictable results of prolonged stress.

On the basis of interviews with patients and studies in this capital, Dr. Adnan Sabbagh, a psychologist at the American University of Beirut, offers grim statistical pointers to the extent of other social ills:

— Thirty-five percent of newly delivered babies are born physically deformed or mentally retarded because their mothers "couldn't take it anymore" and turned to tranquilizers such as valium during pregnancy.

— About four-fifths of teen-agers smoke cigarettes as opposed to 2 percent before the outbreak of civil war in April 1975.

— Forty-five percent of adolescents regularly use heroin or other hard drugs, a fivefold increase in 10 years.

A professor of nutrition and pathology at the American University, who spoke only on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of his practice, told The Associated Press, "Many teen-agers, mostly (militia) fighters, came to me for treatment. These were really drug addicts. They were badly involved with strong stuff — heroin. Most of them were uneducated. I couldn't go into details (about their problems) with them."

But he noted that fewer cases reached him in the last year because some religious leaders, who frown on drink and drugs, have sought to transform Lebanon, whose population is 60 percent Moslem, into a fundamentalist Islamic state.

Militiamen needing rehabilition, he said, now fear that doctors will report them to their leaders. "If these people had come to us, they could have been treated," he said.

War psychosis cases include rich and poor, country peasants and urban professional people, Christians and Moslems, the experts say.

Mirvat Awada is typical of some Lebanese who suffered from war-induced unemployment, which is believed to have hit about half of the work force.

"My husband couldn't afford to rent a house," she said. "He couldn't find a job, so we slept at my family's home for a while, then at his parents' house until there was a time when he couldn't take it any more. He began drinking and became alcoholic. Thank God we don't have children."

She divorced him.

"I feel very sorry for both of us, but this is how the war has affected us all...And I'm not the only one."

For some young lovers marriage prospects are dashed.

"I had a job and planned to get married," said Wassim, 40, an engineer who lives in the southern port city of Tyre and, like others interviewed, asked not to be identified by his full name. "But my fiancee left the country in 1981. She couldn't take it any more. One day she and her family left for good to Egypt. That was the end of my plan to raise a family, to have a family of my own. I've never dated anyone else since."

Shamir hoping to meet Soviet foreign minister

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — As reports of a possible thaw in Israeli-Soviet relations circulated, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said today he hoped to meet with the Soviet foreign minister at the United Nations in September.

The comments on a possible meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze came a day after a radio report that Prime Minister Shimon Peres sent a message to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev saying he hoped the two countries could reach agreement on a wide range of subjects.

Peres reportedly conveyed the goodwill message through Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, who is scheduled to visit Moscow next month.

Shamir said a meeting with Shevardnadze had been planned before last week's leak of a discussion between the Israeli and Soviet ambassadors to Paris, which some media reports speculated might undermine the chances for the U.N. meeting.

Foreign ministers of the two countries have met frequently at the annual assembly in New York over the years, although the Soviets severed their ties with Israel 18 years ago, over the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Shamir also plans to meet with other country's foriegn ministers during the U.N. gathering.

"This was planned before and I hope to meet at the General Assembly with the Soviet foreign minister too," Shamir said in an Armed Forces Radio interview. "We've had meetings with senior Soviet representatives before and we intend to continue them."

Shamir said the leak Friday to Israel Radio about the meeting between Israeli Ambassador Ovadia Sofer and Soviet envoy Yuli Vorontsov "causes damage." He added that the leak was being investigated.

Portugese hero goes on trial for terrorism

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A hero of the 1974 armed forces revolution that freed Portugal from half a century of dictatorship went on trial today, accused of leading a left-wing terrorist group that plotted to overthrow the state.

Lt. Col. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho is one of 74 people being tried on terrorism charges in a specially built fortified courthouse. The Portuguese media call it "the trial of the century."

The hearing began with the selection process for eight jury members. Saraiva de Carvalho, wearing civilian clothes, sat on a front bench.

Saraiva de Carvalho masterminded Portugal's almost-bloodless 1974 "Revolution of the Carnations," during which people went into the streets with flowers to laud the soldiers who ended 48 years of fascism. He was a member of the powerful triumvirate that ruled briefly after the revolution.

Civil rights activists in Portugal and abroad have campaigned against Saraiva de Carvalho's 13 months of imprisonment without trial.

The hearing that could last a year has provoked a national dispute that goes far beyond the fate of the 48-year-old army officer commonly known simply as Otelo. Many who suffered for 48 years under a regime that used ruthless secret police to persecute opponents believe Saraiva de Carvalho is on trial for his leftist views rather than any crimes.

Fifty-seven others accused of membership in the April 25 Popular Forces, an urban guerrilla group known as the FP-25 named after the date of the coup, are standing trial alongside Saraiva de Carvalho. Another 16 will be tried in their absence.

Unprecedented security measures were tightened when a key prosecution witness, one of at least three so-called repentant defendants, was gunned down near his home Friday night in an attack claimed by the FP-25. He was in a critical condition today.

State prosecutors allege that Saraiva de Carvalho was the instigator of a series of FP-25 bomb attacks, shootings and bank robberies since 1980 that left at least six people dead.

Most of the assassinations were of industrialists involved in labor disputes. FP-25 actions after Saraiva de Carvalho's arrest in June 1984 included mortar attacks on the U.S. Embassy and NATO warships anchored in Lisbon harbor.

According to the indictment, FP-25 was the terrorist arm of a complex organization planning "the violent transformation of society" that used a small leftist party headed by Saraiva de Carvalho, the United People's Front Party, as a legal cover.

Saraiva de Carvalho and all but four of the accused deny the charges, which could result in jail sentences of up to 15 years. His defense lawyer, Romeu Frances, said: "Otelo has made it clear he would only condone violence if Portugal were under threat from a fascist takeover."

Saraiva de Carvalho was detained after documents were seized at the headquarters of the United People's Front during a nationwide police sweep against FP-25 suspects.

Some 200 political figures and academics from 20 countries bought space in the French newspaper Le Monde last week to express fears that the "political heritage" of Portugal's revolution was threatened by the case.

But the four state prosecutors and government officials who authorized the arrest of Saraiva de Carvalho are confident that 100 volumes of trial documents and other evidence, along with the testimony of some of the 533 listed witnesses, will be enough to convict him on charges of founding, leading and promoting a terrorist group.

The trial will be held in a $570,000 fortified courthouse constructed on the grounds of Lisbon's Monsanto Prison, where most of the defendants are held.

The trial comes against a background of government upheaval following the breakup of the ruling Socialist-Social Democrat coalition of Prime Minister Mario Soares.

Moslem women walk during Israeli's speech

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — About 70 delegates from Moslem countries walked out of the main meeting hall at the U.N. Decade for Women conference today as Israel's chief delegate began to address the assembly.

Sara Doron interrupted her prepared remarks as the walkout took place and said: "We come in peace, and some people aren't even willing to listen."

The delegates who walked out of the hall paraded through other parts of the Jomo Kenyatta International Conference Center shouting in unison, "Palestine is Arab, Lebanon is Arab."

A proposed resolution describing Palestinian women in Israeli-occupied territory as victims of oppression has become one of the most controversial issues at the July 15-26 conference, which was convened to mark the end of the U.N. Decade for Women.

About 3,000 official delegates are attending the conference, which is to review the past decade and many strategies for women to follow until the year 2000.

In her speech, Mrs. Doron said the Israelis "vigorously protest from this rostrum that out of all these tensions...the many areas of conflict in the world, only the Arab-Israel conflict has been singled out for special debate and resolutions at this conference."

The delegations that walked out included most of the Arab nations. Egypt — the only Arab nation to sign a peace treaty with Israel — remained in the hall.

Mrs. Doron referred to the 1979 signing of that peace treaty as "one of the great achievements of the past decade."

"We fervently hope that this peace process will continue unremittingly, and be followed by further peace agreements with all our Arab neighbors in the near future," she said.

She was applauded by many of the delegates remaining in the hall when she said, "Let us endorse in Nairobi the path of reconciliation and international dialogue."

During the past decade, she said, more progress had been made in resolving the Israeli-Arab conflict than any other major international dispute.

Men make their mark at women's conference

By JANIE HAMPTON

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — They were outnumbered by a ratio of perhaps 100-to-1, but men who attended the women's forum held here during the U.N. Decade for Women Conference felt their presence was needed and instructive.

"I feel that the one large contingent missing is men," said Professor Harold Feldman of Cornell University. "The need for more sex integration is apparent here. Like racial integration, we should all be working together."

Feldman, who said 42 years of marriage had made him a feminist, has been teaching a women's studies course at Cornell, in Ithaca, N.Y., since 1969.

"Men have a problem about their sex roles, too," he said in an interview this past week. "There should be a men's movement to help them understand and tackle fixed gender roles such as competitiveness, aggressiveness and always working hard."

Feldman was among the small contingent of men who attended Forum '85, a 10-day series of workshops and seminars that ended Friday and was staged in conjunction with the U.N. conference. Observers estimate that 1 percent of the of the 11,000 Forum '85 participants were men.

The U.N. meeting, with about 3,000 official delegates, ends next Friday.

Feldman said men as well as women need to be freed from stereotyped roles.

Men "are pressured into too much macho aggressiveness," he said. "The world needs less masculinity and more femininity."

"Unfortunately," he said, "many women who succeed are mimicking the sexual stereotypes of men."

At the official U.N. conference, the committee assigned to deal with political matters is composed largely of men. Baroness Young of Farnworth, head of the British delegation, said that committee had been arguing more and taking much longer over decisions than the other main committee, made up mostly of women.

The second committee has been dealing with less controversial issues, including education and health.

Thomas Ryan, a student from Boston, was traveling through Kenya and decided to stay on for the forum.

"At first the whole thing seemed chaotic and grossly political," he said. "But after a few days I realized that politics forms the substructure of life."

"I've attended several very informative and balanced workshops," Ryan said. "Without any pressure the discussions always slip toward the political reasons for a woman's situation."

He said American women at the forum "can be very egocentric and assume every women thinks like they do. But by the end of the second week the Third World women were fighting back. The American chairperson of one meeting was so dominating that eventually she was deposed and sent out into the corridor."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Heavy rains end drought as new crops planted

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Heavy rains have ended the drought in southwestern Sudan and Sudanese are harvesting corn and groundnuts and planting seeds for new crops, a Western aid source in Khartoum said Sunday.

A few weeks ago, the rains seriously disrupted the transportation of relief food to about 500,000 malnourished Sudanese in the southwestern lakes district, and to at least 1.5 million refugees from neighboring Ethiopia, Chad, Zaire and Uganda in camps in eastern and western Sudan.

"The famine has broken in the lakes district as they have started to harvest maize (corn) and groundnuts," said the source, who insisted on not being further identified for diplomatic reasons. He was reached from Cairo.

"Everyone is now planting like mad, and the south would seem to be over the worst," he said. "I expect a super harvest if rains continue through August."

The source said southern Sudanese, affected by the drought and the civil war in the south, had been in desperate need of relief grain.

Ship's explosion probed

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Three New Zealand detectives flew to New Caledonia on Sunday to pursue this nation's probe of a possible French connection with the bombing that sank the Greenpeace vessel Rainbow Warrior.

Investigators said the detectives want to interview three Frenchmen in the French western Pacific territory who were on a yacht at Auckland harbor when the Rainbow Warrior blew up July 11, killing a crewman.

"We're still interested in the crew of that yacht," said Detective Superintendent Allan Galbraith.

Investigations also center on a French-speaking couple arrested in New Zealand last week with false passports. The pair, who claim to be Swiss, are to appear in a New Zealand court Thursday on immigration charges.

The Rainbow Warrior, a converted Scottish trawler, was the flagship of the London-based Greenpeace environmental group. It sailed to New Zealand to take on supplies and was to have led a flotilla to French Polynesia to protest French nuclear testing at Mururoa atoll.

Jet's crash still mystery

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A week after they began evaluating flight recorders retrieved from the ocean, experts were unable to say what caused the Air-India jetliner to crash into the Atlantic last month with the loss of 329 lives.

Indian officials have said they believe the June 23 crash was caused by a bomb. But Judge B.N. Kirpal, who heads the inquiry into the disaster, told reporters Friday in Bombay that the cockpit voice recorder and the one that monitored the Boeing 747's flight instruments "neither prove nor disprove" the sabotage theory.

U.S. and Indian investigators say they will now focus on the wreckage and on voice tapes recorded by air controllers at Ireland's Shannon International Airport who were in contact with the jetliner when it crashed off the Irish coast.

Aerial survey finds forts

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — An aerial survey of Scotland has led to the discovery of four Roman forts and hundreds of other unrecorded ancient structures, the Scottish Office announced in a statement today.

The buried edifices showed up in aerial photographs because the exceptionally dry summer weather in certain regions had sharpened the contrasts in height and color of vegetation at the outlines of the structures, the statement said.

The Romans came to Britain in 43 A.D. and pulled out some 400 years later.

Recovering Reagan tries light schedule

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's "eager to get back to work" after cancer surgery but White House aides are restricting his schedule to a half-hour's worth of meetings today and have booked no appointments beyond Tuesday's abbreviated appearance with President Li Xiannian of China.

The 74-year-old Reagan, who looked remarkably fit as he returned to the White House on Saturday, is working and resting in the family quarters. White House aides say he may make a brief appearance in the Oval Office before week's end.

Today's schedule called for a 20-minute meeting with Vice President George Bush and White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, followed by a 10-minute session with Robert C. McFarlane, the national security adviser.

A haircut also was on the agenda.

Aides said Reagan will be on a light duty schedule as he gradually builds up strength from major abdominal surgery nine days ago. Doctors have said it will take up to eight weeks before the president is back in top form.

"He's looking forward to resuming his schedule," White House deputy press secretary Peter Roussel said Sunday.

Before checking out of his $452-a-night suite at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Reagan delivered his weekly radio address, saying "I'm feeling great but I'm getting a little restless...I'm eager to get back to work."

In his first full day back at the White House, the president spent a quiet Sunday with his wife, Nancy, and reviewed some paperwork, Roussel said. He quoted the president as saying, "It's sure nice to be back home."

No appointments are on Reagan's schedule after Tuesday, when he greets Li, who is making a state visit to Washington. The arrival ceremony and Reagan's participation in the state dinner that night will be abbreviated, and the president's meeting with the Chinese leader will be conducted in the mansion instead of the West Wing working office, aides said.

In planning Reagan's agenda after Tuesday, Roussel said, "We'll take it a day at a time. You'll see him gradually working into a regular schedule."

Later Sunday, Roussel said Reagan had begun making a series of phone calls from the White House to members of Congress in an effort to urge progress on deficit reduction and breaking of the impasse over the federal budget.

"The president this afternoon has initiated some phone calls to members of the Senate, asking them to allow a vote on the line-item veto," Roussel said. The line-item veto is an administration-endorsed measure that opponents say would increase the president's budgetary powers and which subsequently faces the threat of a continued filibuster.

The president may make some telephone calls to members of Congress in an effort to break the impasse over the federal budget, Roussel said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan lost less than five pounds during the hospital stay. During most of that time, he did not eat solid food.

Doctors who removed a two-inch, cancerous growth from the president's colon said there was no sign it had spread and that chances were better than 50 percent he was completely cured and would not suffer a recurrence.

However, Reagan is more likely to develop the disease again than someone who has never had a cancerous tumor, according to experts.

Unemployed farmworker wins $1 million at track

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — An unemployed farmworker who won Hollywood Park's $1 million Handicapping Jackpot said he didn't realize he was in the running until the eighth of nine races, because he couldn't remember which horses he had submitted on a form.

"I forgot to write them down," Rodolfo Sahagun, 47, said at a news conference after the ninth race Sunday.

Track spokesman Jerry Wilcox described the odds of picking winners in all nine races as astronomical, but said there were 29 people with a shot at the prize going into the eighth race because "all the favorites were winning."

But a 13-to-1 longshot, Padua, won the ninth race, the $150,000 Swaps Stakes. Only Sahagun picked that horse.

Wilcox said Sahagun would receive $50,000 a year for the next 20 years.

He said the prize is subject to approval by Hollywood Park's insurance company, which may want to take a closer look at alterations on Sahagun's form. But Wilcox said the track was satisfied that the form was valid.

He said Sahagun's wife, Concepcion, had filled out the nine-race form at the start of the day, but Sahagun had erased five of them and written in his own choices before dropping the form in the proper bin.

"The park has no problem with that," Wilcox said. "It was clear what his choices were."

Republicans offer black leaders civil rights deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Republican leadership has quietly appealed for political help from top black leaders, stressing in a private meeting that many GOP senators have not followed the Reagan administration's civil rights policies.

The unpublicized luncheon meeting, arranged by Majority Leader Robert Dole last Wednesday, was marked by its bluntness and candor, according to participants.

The black leaders pitched for support of affirmative action and job programs. Republicans sought black support for Senate candidates facing election next year.

"The Republicans in the Senate, based on the record, can be trusted to do what is right when it comes to civil rights," Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said he told the black leaders. "We said that when we haven't agreed with the position of the president, we've done something about it."

The meeting paid immediate dividends for the black leaders, representing the nation's most prominent civil rights organizations.

Only hours after the luncheon plates were collected in Dole's office, the Kansas Republican announced he was abandoning the nomination of William Bradford Reynolds as associate attorney general.

The blacks leaders had told the senators they could begin demonstrating their sincerity by dropping support for promotion of the Justice Department's civil rights chief, who remains in his current post. To civil rights groups, Reynolds symbolized everything that was wrong with the Reagan administration's civil rights policies.

Dole's announcement "might not have been coincidental," said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who attended the meeting and was a public opponent of Reynolds.

"I think our meeting had a lot to do with that (abandoning Reynolds)," said John E. Jacob, another participant and president of the national Urban League. "We convinced them that affirmative action was the litmus test of civil rights and Brad Reynolds symbolized opposition to that basic component of the civil rights struggle."

Reflecting the candor of the meeting, Heinz acknowledged in an interview, "The administration, at the White House level, has not done a good job of consulting and meeting with black leaders."

But he said the GOP members "pointed out that it was Republican senators" who provided crucial support to win extension of the Voting Rights Act; who fought in the Finance Committee against tax breaks for colleges that discriminate; and who guided the Martin Luther King national holiday legislation through the Senate.

Heinz is chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, which is trying to maintain GOP control of the Senate. With the margin currently a slim 53-47, there are 22 Republican and only 12 Democratic seats up for election next year.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, made clear that the black leaders aren't yet convinced that Republican senators are their allies.

"We told them that 'Reaganism and Republicanism' right now were almost synonymous," Lowery said.

Reagan action denounced by Urban League

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying a "philosophy of selfishness and meanness" has taken over the country, the National Urban League president denounced Reagan administration efforts to scrap affirmative action goals and cut social programs.

Administration policies are driving more black Americans into poverty and onto the unemployment rolls while erasing the gains blacks have made on civil rights, John E. Jacob said Sunday night.

"In recent years, virtually every civil rights enforcement effort was cut back, every new civil rights bill opposed, every federal civil rights agency badly weakened," he said in a keynote speech to the Urban League annual conference.

"The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights became the longest-running vaudeville act in Washington's history. And the Department of Justice was turned into a strike force against affirmative action," he said.

He called affirmative action "the litmus test of civil rights" and termed as "vicious" Justice Department efforts to overturn consent degrees in which municipalities agreed to hire and promote more minority group members.

"Race-conscious remedies are needed to correct the evils of a race-conscious past," Jacob said. "No one can look at the history of discrimination without a sense of shame, and no one can suppose we can correct that history without aggressive affirmative action programs."

The administration's view of affirmative action and its efforts to cut social programs are part of a "meanness" evident in America today, he said.

"In recent years, a philosophy of selfishness and meanness has taken hold instead of the philosophy of caring and sharing that our nation needs."

Jacob blamed "runaway defense spending" and the administration's tax cuts for creating a huge deficit that is undercutting social programs.

He called for creation of a Joint Congressional Select Committee to "examine the defense program from top to bottom and to come up with a rational, affordable defense program that enhances our security and gets the Pentagon off the backs of the American people."

Jacob said relations between blacks and the administration have reached a new low.

"The administration can't continue to operate as if black people don't exist," he said, adding that the Republican Party can't afford to alienate black voters.

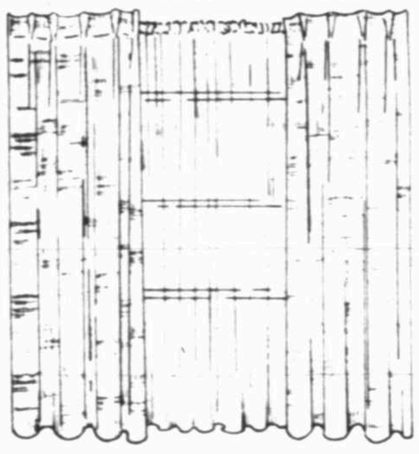

He called for a new relationship with the administration, which he said should include "regular, ongoing channels that allow black leadership access to the people who run the programs that affect our constituents."

Jacob also announced plans for a massive demonstration Tuesday at the South African Embassy to protest Pretoria's apartheid policy.

Friends in space

At a time when budgetary considerations are making just about everybody in Washington, D.C., fidgety, the suggestion put forward last week by Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, that the United States and Soviet Union consider joining forces to send manned space flights to Mars might be viewed by some as no more than wishful thinking.

To put it bluntly, we don't agree. In fact, in the good senator's far-reaching vision we can see practical benefits for right here on old terra firma. Like reaching for the stars instead of building weapons of war.

U.S.-Soviet cooperation in space hasn't been exactly stellar over the decades, but there are examples of how joint projects can prove mutually beneficial and noteworthy. One of the best known is the Apollo-Soyuz link-up 10 years ago.

Without a doubt, manned flights to Mars would be expensive, dangerous and time-consuming. Flying to Mars is not quite as simple as making a quick "grocery store" run to the Moon. But they would push to the limit mankind's current capabilities while expanding his technological genius. In so doing, modern man would reap the full benefits from such an undertaking.

One would hope those benefits would include a greater understanding of each people's hopes, dreams and aspirations. A by-product of that understanding should be greater willingness to overlook transgressions and peculiarities. That would benefit the peace process.

Of course, with Russian and American attention focused on reaching Mars, perhaps the current hostility would be lessened and the escalation in arms development would be forsaken for space exploration.

The cost of such a venture would be borne by both nations, which immediately makes it much more feasible. But that still would not relieve domestic demands here on Earth. And manned flights to Mars would still be staggeringly costly. The figure now being tossed around is $30 billion and that kind of money is not spent casually.

We think the senator's proposal is well worth considering. It could bring far more benefits than can now be imagined.

Shoe tax not answer

President Reagan must decide by late August whether to impose lower quotas on imported shoes, a move that could raise the prices of imported shoes and cost consumers more than $1.3 billion a year. In light of the adverse effects higher quotas would have upon the consumer, we would hope he will resist pressure from the International Trade Commission and domestic shoe manufacturers and reject the higher tariffs.

The U.S. shoe industry has been plagued by stiff competition from Taiwan, South Korea and Brazil. Shoe companies have asked for protection. At stake are more than 26,000 jobs, which U.S. shoe manufacturers say will be lost unless President Reagan approves a quota hike.

In recent months, President Reagan has slapped the European market with higher tariffs on clothing, food and machinery. We hope he won't continue to cave in to pressure from U.S. protectionists.

If he does, it will make it harder to persuade other countries to drop their barriers against U.S. exports.

Protecting our shoe manufacturers from cheap foreign labor won't solve our ills. It will only bite the consumer in the wallet and invite a trade war with other countries.

Another View:

Baseball's losing play

There will be lots of hard feelings if major league baseball players strike on Aug. 6. More than the owners and players will be affected.

The fans are fed up with high-salaried athletes — all sports, not just baseball — and maybe sports will get its first taste of frustrated fans.

Based on precedent, that will not be the case, but we can hope.

There have been two strikes in professional baseball, 1972 and 1981. Fans came back slowly in the "second half" of the 1981 season, but since then attendance records have been set. Maybe this time things will be different.

We suspect fans, whose ticket prices keep climbing, have reached a boiling point. In 1981 the dispute was seen as "rich owners vs. rich players."

Baseball will not be the issue. The core point will be professional athletes. Their salaries are in no relation to their value to society.

The average fan is tired of paying $7-$15 for a ticket, $2 for a beer, $2.25 for a hot dog and $5 for parking. Some of the highest paid players don't even produce after receiving those multi-million-dollar contracts. Fans have come to expect perfection for that kind of money and that is not realistic in sports.

Baseball could receive the brunt of sports fans' anger. The blame can be spread to football, basketball and other sports, but baseball is on the hot seat. Baseball players will be walking out at the wrong time.

The public sentiment in this labor dispute apparently has swung toward management. Baseball is simply a business. The players and their representatives do not seem to realize that the pendulum of public opinion has gone away from them.

The attitude of fans now is, "Let them strike, let them go without pay, end the season. We don't care."

Timing does not favor the players. NFL teams are opening their preseason camp. The NFL season opener is in early September.

Fans will have football to occupy their attention.

There could be some repercussions from a baseball strike, but we doubt it. The fans aren't organized. There will be bellyaching, but no boycotting.

The fans will back the owners if they stick to their guns in this dispute. Perhaps the only answer is to end the season if the players strike. Let them go without pay until next spring.

All professional sports might gain from that action.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 22, the 203rd day of 1985. There are 162 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 22, 1934, bank robber John Dillinger was shot to death by federal agents outside Chicago's Biograph Theater, where he had just seen the movie "Manhattan Melodrama," starring Clark Gable. Dillinger's death ended a 14-month crime spree that had captured the imaginations of many during the Great Depression.

On this date:

In 1587, a second English colony, also fated to vanish under mysterious circumstances, was established on Roanoke Island off North Carolina.

In 1796, Cleveland, Ohio, was founded by Gen. Moses Cleaveland.

In 1812, English troops under the Duke of Wellington defeated the French at the Battle of Salamanca in Spain.

Drugs destroying lives of young

WASHINGTON — America's greatest resource is our children. Yet more and more of them are being destroyed by alcohol and drugs.

The average age at which a child starts using drugs is now 11, and 8-year-old pot smokers are no longer rare. In addition to the personal tragedy for the addicts and their families, the social and economic cost to the nation is enormous. Most of the youngsters who get hooked on drugs and liquor have to steal to support their expensive habits. When they're caught, the cost of rehabilitation or institutionalization is a continuing drain on the taxpayers.

Jack Anderson

The total annual cost to the country: About $120 billion a year in lost production, accidents, crime and treatment.

But perhaps the greatest dollars-and-cents loss is in wasted lives. These youngsters pursue drugs instead of education, crime rather than careers. There is no way to estimate the price of these precious formative years.

We have exposed the drug traffickers, who corrupt politicians, compromise citizens, exploit children and often murder those who get in their way. We were responsible for breaking up a drug ring that was operating right on Capitol Hill. The ringleaders were arrested, and a quarter-million-dollars worth of high-grade cocaine was seized.

We have also appealed to the entertainment industry to stop glamorizing drugs and alcohol. We support the Entertainment Industries Council, which is trying to force the movie industry to rate movies that show drug and alcohol abuse in a favorable light.

How can you tell if your child is likely to become one of the millions of junior-high and high-school students who are shuffling zombielike through life under the influence of alcohol and drugs? You might start with a good hard look in the mirror.

Experts told our associate Vicki Warren that the evidence is undeniable that children whose parents abuse alcohol or drugs are more likely than other youngsters to develop the same self-destructive habits. It's not just the example the parents set, and the availability of addictive substances around the house. There is another factor: Parents who have lost control of themselves have a poor chance of controlling their children.

Kids in such homes are often on their own for hours at a time, which is dangerous enough. But if they are physically or psychologically abused, or ignored to the point where they feel rejected and unloved, they may turn to drugs for solace, for companionship or out of resentment against their parents. Doctors who have studied teenage addiction have found that most of the young people have problems at home before they turn to drugs.

Much more needs to be learned about the causes of child drug-addiction, but one thing is already becoming clear: Chemically dependent kids grow up to be chemically dependent adults, and pass their infirmity along to their children.

OUTRAGE OF THE WEEK: An electrical engineer working for a National Security Agency contractor has complained about the weird polygraph test she was required to take for a security clearance. She said the examiner asked about her sexual preferences, then suddenly jumped up, threw his pen on the table and fired a series of explicit, sex-oriented questions at her. She was then told she was a homosexual, and that if she valued her job she should go home and think about the answers she had given. A knowledgeable Pentagon source told us polygraphs can't determine a person's sexual tendencies. NSA refused comment.

UNFUNNY COINCIDENCE: Retired asbestos worker Bill Scheele had a surprise reunion with an old enemy at the National Institutes of Health recently. He showed up at the 50-building NIH complex outside Washington to take part in a study of insulation material that has been linked to cancer. Just a few doors down the hall from the laboratory where Scheele was being tested, he spotted asbestos-covered water pipes above the heads of pharmacy employees. The pipes were exposed during work on nearby communications lines. Asbestos still covers many pipes at the aging NIH complex, a spokesman said.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The United Nations conference in Nairobi, Kenya, marking the end of the "Decade for Women" is over — and not a moment too soon. Third World delegates' determination to flog peripheral issues like Zionism, Palestine, apartheid and trade threatened to make a travesty of the conference, which was supposed to encourage the emergence of the world's women into the 20th century. We commend the U.S. delegation, headed by an unlikely "Nairobi Trio" of Maureen Reagan, writer Betty Friedan and former congresswoman Bella Abzug, for their heroic efforts to keep the conference's focus where it belonged: on women's issues.

EVANS & NOVAK

Regan's moves getting scrutiny

WASHINGTON — Triumphantly astride the White House-centered Reagan empire over which he presides without equals, Don Regan is being subtly made aware that he is under intense though not yet hostile study by Republicans of all political shades, as the president's illness heightens his power.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Absentee keepers of the Ronald Reagan flame no longer present in the White House and congressional Reaganites are the major source of this study. Their insurance plan for the months ahead, with Regan's power now eclipsing that of all former presidential advisers save Edith, the wife of the stricken Woodrow Wilson, is to reinstate Lyn Nofziger as White House political director when Edward Rollins resigns.

But it would be uncharacteristic for Regan to promise Nofziger the automatic access to the Oval Office, without which he will not return to the White House. If Regan says no, the quiet study many Republican politicians are now giving the chief of staff's unprecedented consolidation of power will turn overt and hostile.

Regan, the former Wall Street CEO, is a firm believer that only centralized power structures can move bureaucracies and make the right things happen. That is why he zealously guards entry to the Oval Office (and without audible protest from the president). That is why he is stripping the independent power core out of David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and converting it into a numbers-crunching appendage of his own. That explains, early in his tour, his seizure of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Centralized power from the top probably explains some of his sharp disputes with national security aide Robert McFarlane, now quiescent but ready to flare up again. Hard-line Reaganites worried about the effect of the president's illness on his summit with Mikhail Gorbachev, combined with State Department detentist aspirations, say Regan wants a piece of McFarlane's turf on grounds it would shore up the president.

Even Vice President George Bush's relative invisibility during the early stages of Reagan's cancer crisis is credited to Don Regan's idea, not Bush's, of how best to serve the president during a crisis.

It is natural, then, that Regan's handling of Nofziger's prospective return to the White House political office is closely watched as a signpost to longer-run intentions in exercising his rising power as staff chief to a partially disabled president.

Two weeks before Reagan's cancer surgery, Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee were treated to a stunning example of Don Regan's exercise of power. Sitting at one end of the long Cabinet table directly across from Treasury Secretary James Baker III, Regan, not Baker, dominated the entire discussion of the president's tax reform. "He was like a teacher handling his students in the classroom," one of those present told us, controlling who spoke and asking for rebuttals.

Regan's quick moves truncating the post-Stockman OMB show his strength in tailoring the White House to his own design. He let it be known at once that no longer would OMB be allowed to house an independent political power as director with his own agenda on Capitol Hill, his own protectors in the press and his own public policy. Policy would move in its entirety to Regan's office.

Only after that word spread did Regan talk to Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and former transportation secretary Drew Lewis, both of whom, as he must have known, turned thumbs-down on the job: The celebrated Stockman job no longer existed, wiped out by Don Regan.

Both Baldrige and Lewis say privately that Regan's skinnied-down OMB is exactly what should have happened. But some Regan-watchers holding mid-level jobs inside the White House believe he may next turn his attention to the Reagan Cabinet. During his convalescence, the president will obviously not be seeing nearly as much of his Cabinet as he has over the past four years. That offers a wedge to set a pattern of fewer cozy sessions between the president and his Cabinet. The pattern might be continued for the balance of the term.

By itself, Nofziger's possible re-entry to the White House he left in 1982 is not a large matter in the vast world of centralized power Regan is constructing. But in the view of Reaganite Republicans who have the chief of staff under scrutiny, how Regan handles it is a vital clue for their own future; they view Nofziger as a symbol of themselves.

CHARLEY REESE

America needs help of people

The United States, because of selfishness, is in danger of becoming the intellectual equivalent of Lebanon — a collection of warring factions but not a nation.

Charley Reese

The Congress will not balance the budget. Why not? To do so would be good for the country, but it would be bad for a number of factions which benefit from the status quo. Since the factions are organized and the country itself has no spokesman, the country's interests are sacrificed to those of the factions.

Never mind that when the country collapses, the factions will be buried under the rubble. A characteristic of selfishness is shortsightedness.

I am weary of women, men, Democrats, Republicans, conservatives, liberals, libertarians, socialists, communists, the elderly, the young, the black, the white, the hispanic, Jews, Christians, humanists, union people, non-union people, urban people, rural people, retirees, blue-collar workers, white-collar workers, high-tech workers, professionals, and all the rest. Henceforth, I shall communicate only with Americans about American issues.

We who love the country can be guided by Tom Jefferson's advice to a young man: love your neighbor as yourself and love your country more than yourself.

Our beloved country is in trouble. The monetary system is controlled by the New York bankers who, like the cartoon character, General Bullmoose, believe that what's good for them is good for the country. When the bankers thought Mexico was going to default on its loans, they persuaded the Reagan Administration to give Mexico about $2 billion of the American people's money. Later they persuaded the Congress to give $8 billion of the people's money to the International Monetary Fund to hand out to the bank's debtors so they could make another interest payment on their loans. Since the debtor nations needed above all to sell their exports, the bankers arranged for the dollar to go up and the U.S. was flooded with imports.

At the same time, many of our fellow citizens have been thrown out of work because corporations whose loyalty is only to their bank accounts have moved American jobs overseas to cheap labor countries. To cover their tracks, they have persuaded their hired hands in the Congress to make Japan a scapegoat. They are trying to convince the American people that it's Japan, not them, which is putting Americans out of work.

Japan, however, is not at fault. Look closely at products bearing an American brand name. You will find many of them are made in Japan, Taiwan, Korea, Mexico, and Hong Kong. A great percentage of our imports, are imports of "American" products the corporations manufacture overseas with cheap labor. That's why so much of big business is for free trade. Don't be conned into blaming foreigners for what American money interests are doing to you. There's not much left for Japan to buy which it is not already buying from us.

It's all a con game. American steelworkers who make $25 an hour including fringe benefits in an obsolete steel mill are being called unproductive because they can't compete with Koreans making $3 an hour in a new steel mill built with American capital. American textile workers are called unproductive because they can't make cloth cheaper than the slave labor in the totalitarian gulag called China.

One thing those of us who love the country must demand is that our tax dollars not be used to finance factories overseas, the products of which will be used to put American taxpayers out of work. South Africa is being used as a red herring. What Congress ought to do is bar loans and investments in those slave labor nations which are hostile and threatening to the United States.

An American who loves his country must be outraged that a communist government in China or the Soviet Union can obtain loans from the U.S. at cheaper interest rates than an American businessman or a young couple wishing to buy a home. You should know that about the same time Chrysler was being turned down by U.S. banks, some American banks were financing the world's largest truck factory in the Soviet Union.

Get mad, Americans. Be ruthless in driving out of every public office every single individual you find who puts anything, anybody, or any other country ahead of the interests of America.

America needs help. Are there any Americans out there still?

Visit by Chinese president signals 'mature' relations

By R. Gregory Nokes
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The visit of Chinese President Li Xiannian to Washington this week will help seal what Reagan administration officials say has become a mature relationship, meaning the two nations remain friends despite numerous differences.

They want the focus of the four-day visit, which begins Tuesday, to be on positive aspects of the relationship, such as trade and economic cooperation, and not on such differences as Taiwan and China's abortion policy, although these will likely come up.

Li arrived Sunday at Niagara Falls., N.Y., after a week in Canada. He was traveling to Washington today and will meet with President Reagan on Tuesday. Aides say Reagan is recovered enough from his surgery to meet with Li and host an official banquet Tuesday night at the White House.

The visit by Li, who is 76, is the first ever by a president of the communist government of China. It probably will be followed sometime during the coming year by a visit by Hu Yaobang, the head of China's Communist Party.

Reagan invited both Li and Hu to the United States during his visit to China last year.

Ironically, the chief accomplishment of the Li visit is likely to be the same accomplishment of Reagan's visit to China. This is a nuclear cooperation agreement, initialled during Reagan's trip, but never signed.

The agreement was shelved because of intelligence information that China may have assisted Pakistan in its efforts to develop a nuclear weapons capability, even though both countries denied it.

Administration officials say they now have the necessary assurances from China that it won't help other nations acquire a nuclear capability, and the accord probably will receive final approval during Li's visit. It will provide the framework for sales of American reactors and other nuclear technology to the Chinese.

A cultural exchange agreement and a fisheries agreement — preparing the way for Chinese to fish in American waters — also will be signed during Li's visit.

Trade issues will be on the agenda as well. U.S.-Chinese two-way trade is at a record $6 billion pace so far this year, although the Chinese have slowed their purchases of American grains. But American investment is up, and the way has recently been cleared for increased sales of advanced technology, such as computers. The United States is now the largest foreign investor in China.

An analysis

But some of the things that American officials thought would happen in the U.S.-Chinese relationship haven't happened. The administration has given up on the idea, fashionable early in the administration, of a Sino-American strategic relationship directed at the Soviet Union.

Peking has sought instead to improve its frigid relations with Moscow, and only in recent weeks signed a economic agreement that provides for expanded trade and Soviet industrial assistance.

The improvements in Chinese-Soviet ties may also explain why China hasn't yet agreed to a single significant weapons purchase from the United States, although arms sales to China were high on the Reagan agenda at one time.

A senior State Department official said in an interview that six years after diplomatic relations were established, some of the euphoria has gone out of the relationship, and this is probably a good thing.

"They are very much a communist system and they are very proud of that fact," said the official, who was interviewed on condition he not be identified by name. "People who think they are suddenly about to become a capitalist country are making a big mistake."

"Our general approach is to recognize that, yes, there are a number of areas where we have problems," he said. "Taiwan is maybe the most common and best-known one, but certainly is not the only one. But there are a lot of areas where we have very strong agreement on things, and it is important to move forward in areas where we are in agreement."

The frictions are mounting, however. U.S. arms sales and the relationship with Taiwan top the list. Also on the list is a proposed halt in aid for China's population control program — an action denounced by Li as an "absolutely unacceptable" inteference in China's internal affairs.

An article in the Peking Review recently accused the Reagan administration of acting like the "world's overlords." And plans for three American destroyers to visit Shanghai last month were postponed in a dispute over whether they could carry nuclear arms.

Nevertheless, Li said before leaving China he expected "positive results" from his trip.

Wallace set for surgery

DENVER (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace says he'll conduct some official business from his hospital room here while awaiting spinal surgery that he hopes will end the pain that has plagued him since a 1972 assassination attempt.

The shooting attack left him paralyzed from the waist down.

The 65-year-old Wallace appeared pale and weary after he arrived at Denver's Craig Hospital on Sunday with his wife, Lisa.

Asked if he would continue to control the state of Alabama from his hospital room, the governor noted that he had his top advisors with him.

"There's some work for me to do tomorrow and the next day," before Wednesday's surgery, Wallace said at a brief news conference.

The surgery will take place in an operating room at Swedish Medical Center adjacent to Craig. Dr. Robert Edgar, a Denver neurosurgeon, will perform the relatively new surgical procedure.

Edgar said that 80 percent of his patients are virtually pain-free after undergoing the operation, known as dorsal root entry zone microcoagulation.

Wallace was shot by Arthur Bremer in Laurel, Md., while campaigning in the 1972 Democratic presidential primary. One of the five bullets struck his spinal cord.

According to one of his Birmingham doctors, Sam Stover, the operation involves inserting 30 to 40 stainless steel electrodes into Wallace's spinal cord above and below where he was shot. The electrodes would carry radio-frequency currents into the spinal cord to deaden the section, he said.

Treasure hunters unearth fortune

Hundreds of bars of silver found in Florida lobster bed

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — It's "the richest lobster bed in the world" — the reef of silver bars five feet high found in the Florida Straits where a Spanish galleon sank in a hurricane in 1622.

Until divers found the cargo hold of the Nuestra Senora de Atocha on Saturday, the Florida lobsters and tropical fish had the riches to themselves for over three centuries.

Treasure hunter Mel Fisher, who heads Treasure Salvors, paid a visit Sunday to the site, 40 miles west of here.

On the decks of three of his salvage boats were piled some of the 200 or so 75-pound bars of pure silver that divers have brought up since the main wreckage of the Atocha was found Saturday.

"I'm a millionaire," said Don Kincaid, with tears of happiness. Kincaid, a vice president in Fisher's company, has spent years looking for pieces of the three-master that went down after leaving Havana Sept. 5, 1622, en route to Spain.

"You can't put a price on this. It's fantabulous," Fisher said Sunday, sporting around his neck an 8-foot-long, 12-pound chain of pure gold retrieved years ago from bits of wreckage scattered across the ocean bottom.

The Atocha and a sister ship, the Santa Margarita, sank less than three miles apart in 50 feet of water. But another storm ended salvage efforts a month later by smashing the two vessels on the ocean bottom and scattering debris and riches over an 8-square-mile area.

Fisher's group has already recovered millions of dollars worth of treasure from the wreckage of the Atocha and the Santa Margarita, but Saturday's discovery was the high point of a 16-year effort filled with work to trace the wreckage, court battles, money problems and death.

One of Fisher's sons and a daughter-in-law died when a salvage boat overturned in a storm 10 years ago.

"There's a wall of silver bars down there at least five feet high," Kincaid said. Copper ingots, ballast stones, thousand of coins and the silver bars were buried under several feet of sand, silt and mud.

The Atocha's manifest, found in archives in Spain, indicated 1,200 bars of silver had been loaded in the ship's hold, said Bleth McHaley, another Fisher associate. However, she added that some of the passengers aboard the 600-ton vessel were carrying their personal wealth back to Spain.

Twelve-hundred silver bars weighing about 75 pounds each would be worth more than $6 million at today's silver prices of about $6 per Troy ounce, without considering their value as archeological artifacts.

Estimates of the value of the cargo that was on both ships, at today's rates, have been put at around $400 million.

Back at Fisher's headquarters at an old two-story Navy warehouse, preparations were under way to beef up security.

Fisher's wife, Dolores, said that when the treasure is divided she might buy a new car to replace the 1964 convertible she has driven for years.

Fisher, 63, battled with the state for years over the right to keep the treasure. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1982 that Treasure Salvors would be the rightful owner of any ancient riches its divers found on the Atocha site.

In 1973, Fisher ran into trouble with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission when he was accused of selling unregistered securities. The SEC said Fisher tried to raise money for his operations by forming a number of satellite corporations that sold stock to the public and then funneled the funds back to Treasure Salvors.

The suit was settled when Fisher — without admitting or denying guilt — signed a consent decree agreeing to cease sales.

NATION IN BRIEF

Baby Boomlet shown; fertility rate down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The children of the postwar Baby Boom are having children, creating a national Baby Boomlet, but statisticians say the upward population trend will reverse if current fertility rates continue.

The nation's population was 237,839,000 as of Jan. 1 this year, the Census Bureau reported Sunday.

Births were up in 1984, with 3,690,000 newborns, compared to 3,618,000 in 1983 and 3,681,000 in 1982. There were 2,046,000 deaths in 1984, up from 2,014,000 in 1983, the bureau said in its first report since 1979 that analyzes population change.

Immigration last year also helped boost the population, although the estimated 523,000 people entering the country was down from 539,000 immigrants in 1983, the Census Bureau said.

Census officials said the increase in births did not reflect a higher fertility rate, but rather the fact that there are so many people of childbearing age. The children born in the post World War II Baby Boom of the 1950s and early 1960s are having babies themselves.

In fact, the nation's total fertility rate for 1984 was 1,819 births per 1,000 women, which is below the level needed to keep the population constant.

Nixon considered bomb

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon said he seriously considered using the atomic bomb four times during his presidency, in Vietnam, the Middle East, China and Pakistan, according to a published report.

Time magazine, in its July 21 issue, quoted Nixon as saying he considered and rejected the use of nuclear weapons during the Vietnam War.

"I ruled out bombing the dikes and the nuclear option. I rejected the bombing of the dikes, which would have drowned 1 million people, for the same reason that I rejected the nuclear option. Because the targets presented were not military targets," he said.

Nixon said he also considered using nuclear weapons in China when there were border conflicts with the Soviet Union.

Another occasion came in 1971 during the India-Pakistan war, Nixon told Time during two interviews conducted in early July.

He said the fourth occasion involved the Middle East during the 1973 war, when Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev "threatened to intervene unilaterally in the Mideast. We could not allow Israel to go down the tube. We could not allow the Soviets to have a predominant position in the region."

Death at Onassis home

GAY HEAD, Mass. (AP) — A man fell to his death from a seaside cliff, in an apparent accident, after attending a party at the home of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis on Martha's Vineyard, state police said Sunday.

George B. Cook, 31, of Gay Head, fell 18 to 22 feet onto rocks in a private area about 100 feet from the property of Mrs. Onassis, wife of the late President John F. Kennedy, said state Trooper Daniel A. Flynn.

Cook had attended a birthday party for a member of Mrs. Onassis' staff Saturday night, said Flynn. The trooper said Mrs. Onassis was not home at the time. He did not know the name of worker being feted.

Cook's body was found at 8:20 a.m. Sunday by a passerby, said Flynn. He said the dead man was familiar with the area.

GOP concentrates on Southern Democrats

Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — At a midsummer cookout of the Orange County Republican Party here, the name tags came in three colors: blue for longtime Republicans, green for recent converts, red for Democrats.

Normally, ecumenism does not get dished out alongside the hot dogs and beans at such party shindigs. But the loyal Republicans of this 350-year-old community outside Durham have some missionary work to do this summer.

With a frank eye on public relations, the Republican National Committee has launched "Operation Open Door," an off-season voter-registration program designed to convert 100,000 Democrats into Republicans in four states — North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Florida and Louisiana — by Aug. 15.

To meet their county quotas, local party activists in each of the states are hosting "switcher" bashes, manning registration desks at shopping malls and sometimes trekking door to door.

At one level, the exercise seems a bit like trying to rearrange a desert one grain of sand at a time. Despite recent GOP political successes, this is still, by party registration, an overwhelmingly Democratic nation.

Last November, the edge was 36.6 million Democrats to 21.9 million Republicans in the 28 states that register voters by party. In North Carolina, the Democratic edge is an even more lopsided 2 1-2 to 1.

If Republicans can pull off a 49-state presidential landslide in the teeth of such a deficit, what's the point of investing $750,000 trying to switch a mere 100,000 voters?

Not for the numbers themselves, party strategists say, but for what the numbers deliver: post-election momentum to coax along the grassroots political realignment they fervently believe is taking place.

"The most important thing I'll do this year is recruit candidates to run for three legislative seats we ought to be able to pick up in 1986," explained Barbara Boyce, chairman of the Mecklenburg County (Charlotte) GOP. "When you're trying to get somebody to run and you can say, 'Look at how our registration is growing,' it makes it a whole lot easier."

To support local party efforts, the RNC is sending out 1.3 million pieces of mail to Democrats in the four states that the Reagan campaign identified as GOP supporters. It is also airing $350,000 worth of advertisements — a 30-second "positive-negative" spot that invites Democrats to leave the party of Walter F. Mondale and Edward M. Kennedy and join the party of President Reagan.

"It's smart politics," said Paul Tully, a Mondale campaign staff member who is now heading Kennedy's political action committee. "They're trying to connect Reagan with Republican, which is a good move because a lot of Democrats tend to see him as being above partisanship. They're also warming up in states that all have tough Senate races next year."

Despite that tip of the hat from the other side, Operation Open Door has had its share of early disappointments and doubters.

For starters, the RNC wanted its letter to go out over Reagan's signature, but that proposal was scotched by Max L. Friedersdorf, White House congressional lobbyist, who worried that Democratic congressmen would get ornery about supporting the president's legislative program if he was busy plucking their electoral base from under them.

Instead the letters have been signed by Republican governors or senators. To make up for the loss of Reagan's signature, the RNC increased the volume of mail by 30 percent.

As for the doubters, they argue that, when it comes to "realigning moments," 1985 is not what it is cracked up to be.

Conservative strategist Kevin Phillips, for instance, contends that realignment has been going on for 16 years at the presidential level, and its "big early juice" is already spent.

But Phillips' views would not go far at the Big Barn in Hillsborough, where 80 people gathered on a Saturday night in midsummer of an off-year to fuss about politics.

"Ten years ago, if we got 30 people at a party function in the heat of a campaign, that would be one hellacious turnout," marveled Monroe Knight, a lifelong Republican. "This is really amazing."

STATE

A Dallas man was killed by lightning during a summer storm that struck late Sunday afternoon, and four other people were shocked by a loose power line while riding horseback on a ranch near Lake Ray Hubbard east of the city, authorities said.

Doyle H. Shiverdecker, 64, was killed by a lightning bolt at 4:20 p.m. while he carried groceries from his pickup truck to his home in northwest Dallas.

Shiverdecker, a pawnshop sorker, was hit when lightning raced through a 40-foot tree he was walking by and struck him above the waist, relatives said.

"All of a sudden, I heard a crack of lightning, and I turned around and he was lying dead," Thomas Burritt, the husband of Shiverdecker's niece, told The Dallas Morning News.

About the same time, high winds were ripping roofs from buildings along and near Irving Boulevard, and several trucks were toppled. But no injuries were reported from those incidents.

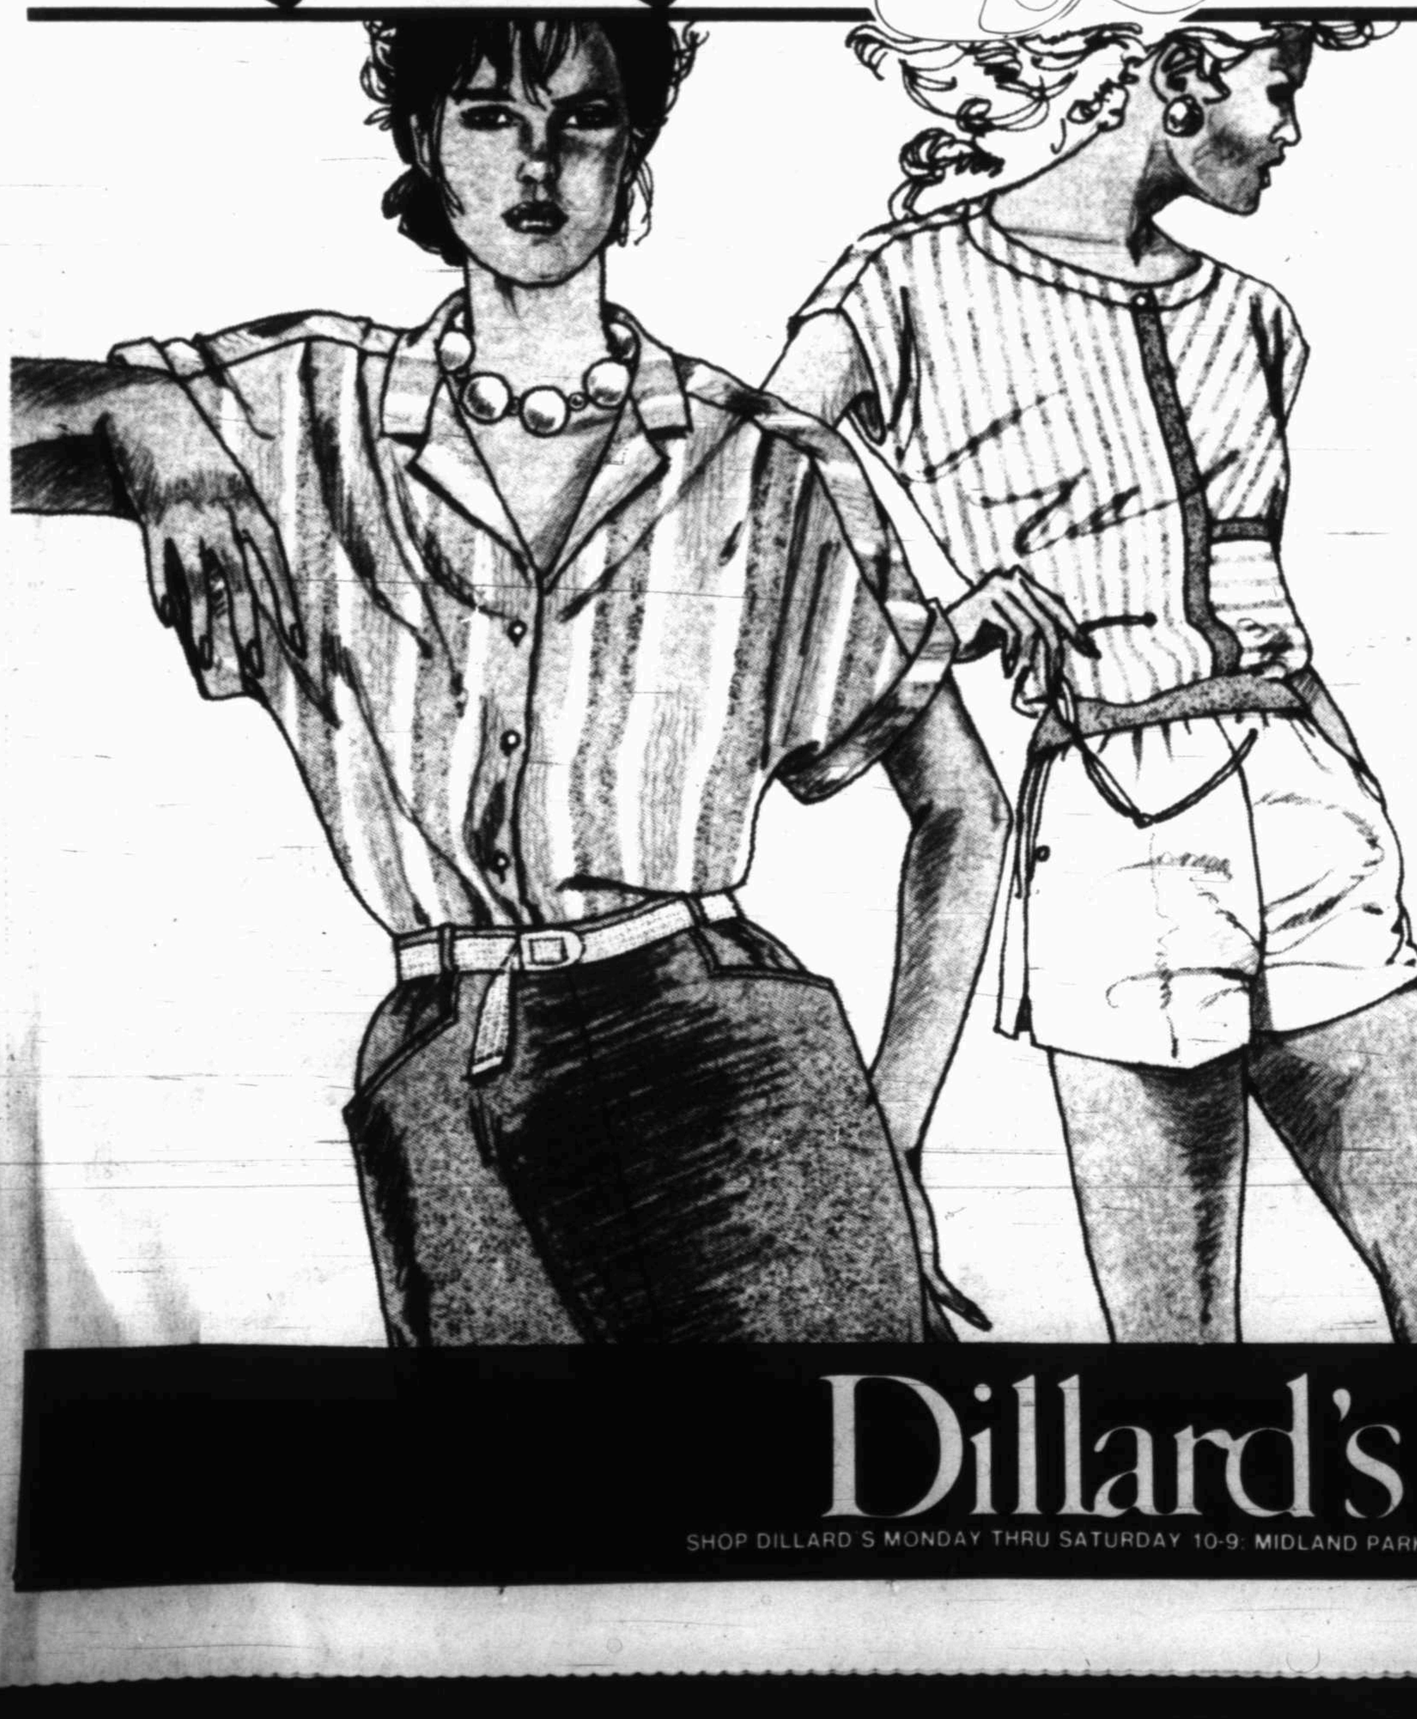

Several reports of tornadoes in Dallas came in to the National Weather Service after the storm hit, but weather officials said they were unable to confirm any of them.

The damage on Irving Boulevard, about five miles northwest of downtown Dallas, was caused by straight winds, the weather service said. The storm moved into the Dallas area from Wise and Denton counties to the northwest. Another heavy storm was in Navarro County about the same time.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms, some heavy, also were reported across much of East Texas, the South Plains and the Trans Pecos.

Earlier Sunday, very heavy rains over Eastland County produced street flooding in Cisco, about 45 miles east of Abilene.

British Open comes to streaking conclusion

Britain's Lyle survives bogey on 18 to claim title

By Barry Lorge
Copley News Service

SANDWICH, England — A naked man streaked onto the 18th green at the Royal St. George's Golf Club Sunday as Peter Jacobsen and Christy O'Connor Jr. were getting ready to putt, four twosomes from the finish of the 114th British Open. Jacobsen wrestled the intruder to the ground and two constables took him away, under the discreet cover of a strategically placed police helmet.

Several contenders tried to be as bold with their shots at the 18th, but they also came away more modestly than intended. This included Britain's Sandy Lyle, who went for the par 4 he thought he needed to avoid a playoff and took a bogey 5, but still wound up wearing the emperor's new clothes as ruler of the links.

Australian David Graham and Bernhard Langer of West Germany, who shared a three-shot lead over the rest of the field going into the final round, both staggered home with 5-over-par 75s, bogeying the 18th, where each needed a birdie 3 to tie Lyle. They finished in a four-way tie for third place with O'Connor of Ireland and Californian Mark O'Meara.

Texan Tom Kite, who took the lead with three birdies on the front nine, promptly gave it back by muffing two chips and a bunker shot for a disastrous double-bogey 6 on the 10th. He bumbled to bogeys on the 15th, 17th and 18th as well to finish at 285, 5 over par, in a tie for eighth.

Payne Stewart, who had a final-round 68 and wound up at 283, runner-up to Lyle by one shot, parred the last five holes. He never had the lead and challenged only by default as the men behind him dropped strokes at the 18th.

And so after four days of tricky winds that made the humps and hollows and sandhills of Royal St. George's treacherous terrain, Lyle — born and raised in England by Scottish parents — won this Battle of Britain. He also bogeyed the 18th for a final-round 70 that left him 2 over par for the tournament, about three strokes higher than what he thought would be needed to win.

LIKE LANGER at the Masters and Andy North at the U.S. Open, Lyle survived the final round, rather than strangled it, but at least he tried to grab it by the throat.

The 27-year-old Briton, winless in 13 tournaments in the United States and eight on the European tour this season, was tied with Graham for the halfway lead but fell three shots back with a disappointing 73 Saturday. Sunday he bogeyed the first hole, got it back with a birdie at the par-5 No. 7, seemed to lose his chance with a bogey at the 13th, then stormed back with birdies at the 14th and 15th.

The 14th — a testing 508-yard par-5 where out-of-bounds markers on the right side of the tee weigh on the driver's mind, hip-high rough looms on the left, and the "Suez Canal" cuts across the fairway two-thirds of the way to the green — was playing into the wind Sunday. Lyle, whose accurate driving and strong long-iron play made him think that Royal St. George's was his Open course, muscled a 2-iron tee shot 220 yards, and holed a 45-foot putt from the fringe for a splendid birdie. A driver, 6-iron and 12-foot putt gave him another bird on the 467-yard 15th.

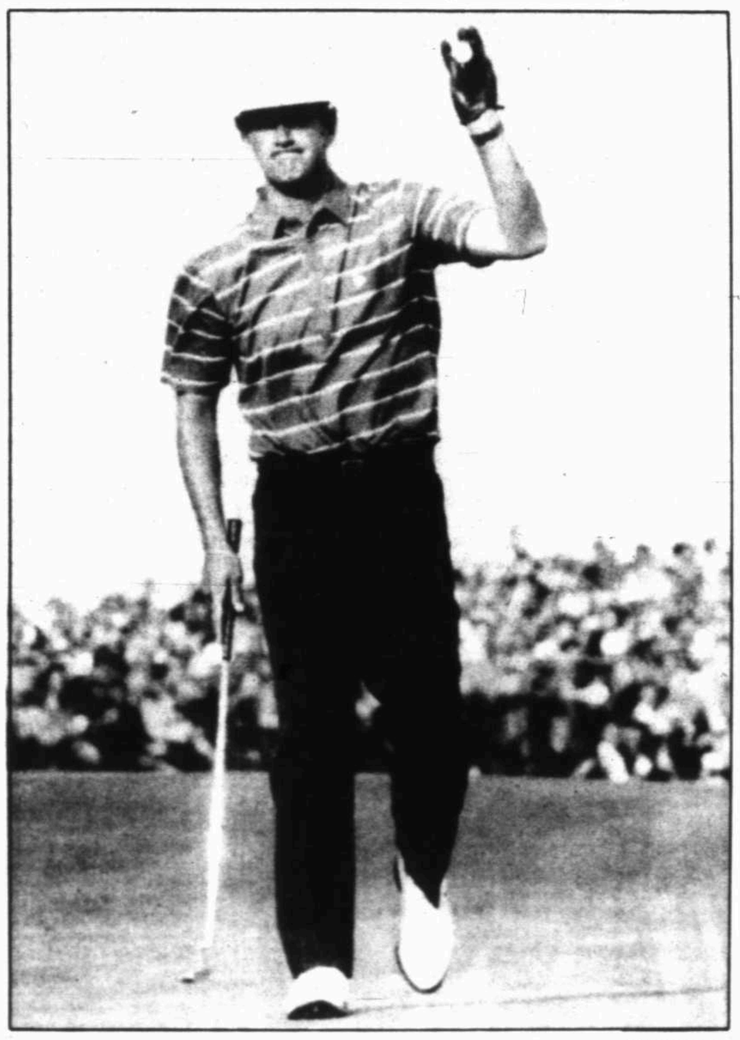

"I played solid golf virtually all the way around, but those two holes will be in my mind for a long time," he said.

Lyle went to the 18th — a 458-yard par-4 with a bunker to the right-front of the green and a hollow to the steeply banked left — not realizing that Graham and Langer had both bogeyed the 15th.

They were dawdling and had fallen two holes behind. Langer is always a deliberate player, and Graham — trying at age 39 to regain the championship touch that won him the 1979 PGA and the 1981 U.S. Open crowns — backed off shots repeatedly the last few holes, distracted by gusting winds.

"I thought I had to make a 4 to really clinch the tournament," said Lyle. "I thought if I took 5, there would probably be a playoff ...

"The first thing on my mind at the 18th tee was 'Is that streaker a female or male?' because I couldn't work it out from where I was." A bit of comic relief there, but Lyle was feeling confident: "My first impression was that I had made a good par at 17, I was driving well, so I felt pretty relaxed."

AP Laserphoto

Britain's Sandy Lyle walks off the 18th green as the 114th British Open champion.

He drove in the right rough and hit his 6-iron left, into tallish grass in what is called "Duncan's Hollow," because it was from this depression that Scotsman George Duncan failed to get down in two when he needed a 4 to tie Walter Hagen in the 1922 Open.

Lyle waved his visor to acknowledge a tumultuous reception from the throngs that lined the fairway and jammed the grandstand amphitheater behind the green, and decided to try a bold shot. Without much green to work with, he wanted to chip to the top of the bank where the pin was located and get close to the hole, rather than hit the shot harder and risk a long putt coming back.

He wanted to be at once brave and delicate, but he hit the chip weakly, and it didn't get to the top of the bank and rolled back down. Lyle fell to his knees in the rough and pounded the grass with his sand wedge like a man with an ax, distraught enough to use it on himself. He knew immediately what he had done and couldn't bear to watch.

"I was thinking, 'For Christ's sake, don't three-putt it now and take 6 and throw it all away from 15 yards,' " he said later. But he regrouped mentally, putted up the slope to 2½ feet and made a bogey.

"I thought, 'At least you had a go at it. It would have been easy to chicken out and hit it hard and go five or six yards past and three-putt from there,' " Lyle said. "I took the chance and it didn't pay off, but I was pleased with the 5. I figured I had to make it in two putts, and bingo, I did. About that time, I realized that Graham and Langer had both dropped a shot somewhere, and I felt a bit better then."

Now he could do nothing but wait.

"I went straight to the recorder's tent and signed my card and stayed there for about 10 minutes, looking at the scoreboard every few seconds," Lyle said. "Then I went to the tournament committee office for about 20 minutes of peace and quiet, watching television. I called my parents. They could hardly speak on the phone. They were choked up as well. I can't think of the words now, but it was very emotional."

FINALLY GRAHAM and Langer got to the 18th. Both had played rounds as uneven as the wind that frequently deceived them. Neither could make a putt. Graham had left four within two inches of the hole. Langer had lipped the cup three times from inside four feet. Both knew they needed a birdie on an unyielding hole to tie.

Langer drove on the right side of the fairway, and hit his second shot into the rough behind and right of the green. Graham drove into the light rough on the right of the fairway and knocked his approach into the severe bunker guarding the right front. Now it would take a miracle shot to deny Lyle the title, and some in the partisan crowd cheered the misadventures of the last challengers.

"I knew it wasn't close, and I knew I wasn't going to win the championship," said the disconsolate Graham, who couldn't see the flag from the bunker. He blasted out of the sand to 12 feet and missed the putt. "I was very, very disappointed."

That left Langer to try to chip out of the tall grass and down a slope. He only missed the flagstick by inches and slid four feet past.

Lyle, at once relieved and ecstatic, looked at his wife, Christine, who was holding their young son Stuart and her breath simultaneously. "She burst into tears when the final chip was played," he recalled later.

Langer lipped the cup again with his four-foot putt coming back. That left Stewart, who had finished more than an hour earlier, in sole possession of second place, worth $60,114.

Lyle, who was 33-1 in pre-tournament odds and 10-1 going into the final round, collected $90,870 and the priceless trophy.

His parents are both Scots. His father's family were farmers until they sold their land near Glasgow to be developed as a golf course. His father is a club pro at Hawkstone Park, in Shropshire. Sandy grew up a Shropshire lad but decided to represent Scotland when he turned pro in 1977.

He had finished second in two tournaments on the European circuit this year, and has played well since the Irish Open last month. There he picked up on the 18th fairway of the second round after hitting 90! Now he has won the oldest and most internationally cherished title, the first Briton to do so since Tony Jacklin in 1969, and the endorsement opportunities are sure to be worth millions.

"It's the best thing that's happened to me this year," understated Lyle. "I've been the bridesmaid in other tournaments, and this is the best one to be the bride."

Not even the streaker would disagree.

Tolleson lofts rare homer lift Rangers past Tigers

Associated Press

The last time Wayne Tolleson hit a home run was ... uh, well, when was it, anyway?

"I don't even remember my last home run," Tolleson said Sunday after hitting a two-run, upper-deck shot in the ninth inning that helped the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 7-5.

Texas trailed 5-4 going into the top of the ninth, but pinch-hitter Alan Bannister singled off reliever Bill Scherrer and was sacrificed to second. After Toby Harrah's pinch-single against Aurelio Lopez tied the score, Tolleson untied it by hitting his first homer since Aug. 17, 1983.

"Was I surprised? I was surprised that it went into the upper deck," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said. "And when he slid into second, I figured Wayne was surprised, too."

Tolleson's home run came on a 3-2 pitch and landed in the right-field seats at Tiger Stadium.

Lopez, 1-6, heard a chorus of boos from the 36,036 fans as he left the mound at the end of the inning, and he later countered with a few remarks.

"The fans need to learn to be behind the team," Lopez said. "They say these are the greatest fans in the world, but they only want one thing — to see our team winning. The team needs them to be behind us now."

Kirk Gibson had given Detroit its 5-4 lead with a three-run homer in the fifth inning. With two outs, Alan Trammell walked, Barbaro Garbey singled and Gibson connected for his 19th homer off Glen Cook.

Dave Schmidt, 4-3, the third Texas pitcher, got the victory.

Yankees 5, Twins 2

Phil Niekro scattered seven hits for his 293rd career victory and Dave Winfield hit a three-run homer in the first inning that carried 456 feet to pace the streaking Yankees to their 15th victory in 18 games this month.

New York has chopped five games off the first-place Blue Jays' lead in July and Niekro, for one, said he has never seen such confidence in the Yankee clubhouse.

"There is a fever in the clubhouse," he said. "Guys are walking around pumping everybody up before the game. It's like a nice disease. I don't think I've ever seen so much confidence in a team before a game."

Niekro, at age 46, was trying to surpass Satchel Paige and become the oldest pitcher to throw a shutout in major-league history. But Minnesota's Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to break up the bid by Niekro, 9-8.

"These guys (the writers) have been wanting to write about that for a month now," said Yankees Manager Billy Martin. "They have it all written up like an obituary."

Winfield teed off at the Metrodome against Frank Viola, 10-8. Rickey Henderson led off the game with the first of his four walks, and errors by first baseman Mike Stenhouse and shortstop Greg Gagne on a grounder by Don Mattingly set up Winfield's 13th homer.

Blue Jays 11, A's 4

Jesse Barfield drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and a triple, and Damaso Garcia's two-run single triggered a five-run uprising in the seventh inning as Toronto maintained its 1½-game lead over the Yankees in the AL East.

"We've got to try and open up some ground on the East teams before we start playing them again," said Barfield.

The Blue Jays, in the midst of a 22-game swing against the West, won for only the eighth time in the last 15 and don't face an East Division rival until they take on the Orioles in Baltimore on July 29.

Barfield's two-run double helped Toronto take a 4-1 lead in the first inning. After Oakland pulled within 4-3, Garcia's single in the seventh increased the Blue Jays' lead to three.

Garcia, a leadoff hitter who now has a career-high 47 RBIs this season, has driven in 43 of those runs with teammates in scoring position. In 83 at-bats this year with runners at either second or third, Garcia has hit at a .362 clip.

A sacrifice fly by George Bell, an RBI double by Barfield and Willie Upshaw's run-scoring single made it 9-3. Dennis Lamp improved his record to 6-0 with three innings of four-hit relief.

Dave Collins homered for the visiting A's.

Red Sox 8, Angels 4

Rich Gedman and Bill Buckner drove home three runs apiece, Dwight Evans belted his 11th home run and Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 24 games — longest in the majors this season — with an RBI double.

Gedman went 4-for-4, including his seventh homer and a triple. Buckner had two doubles, the first one a three-run blow that was the 400th two-base hit of his career.

Reggie Jackson hit his 16th home run of the season and the 519th of his career for California in the eighth. Doug DeCinces added four hits for the visiting Angels, who loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth before reliever Bob Stanley got Brain Downing to ground out.

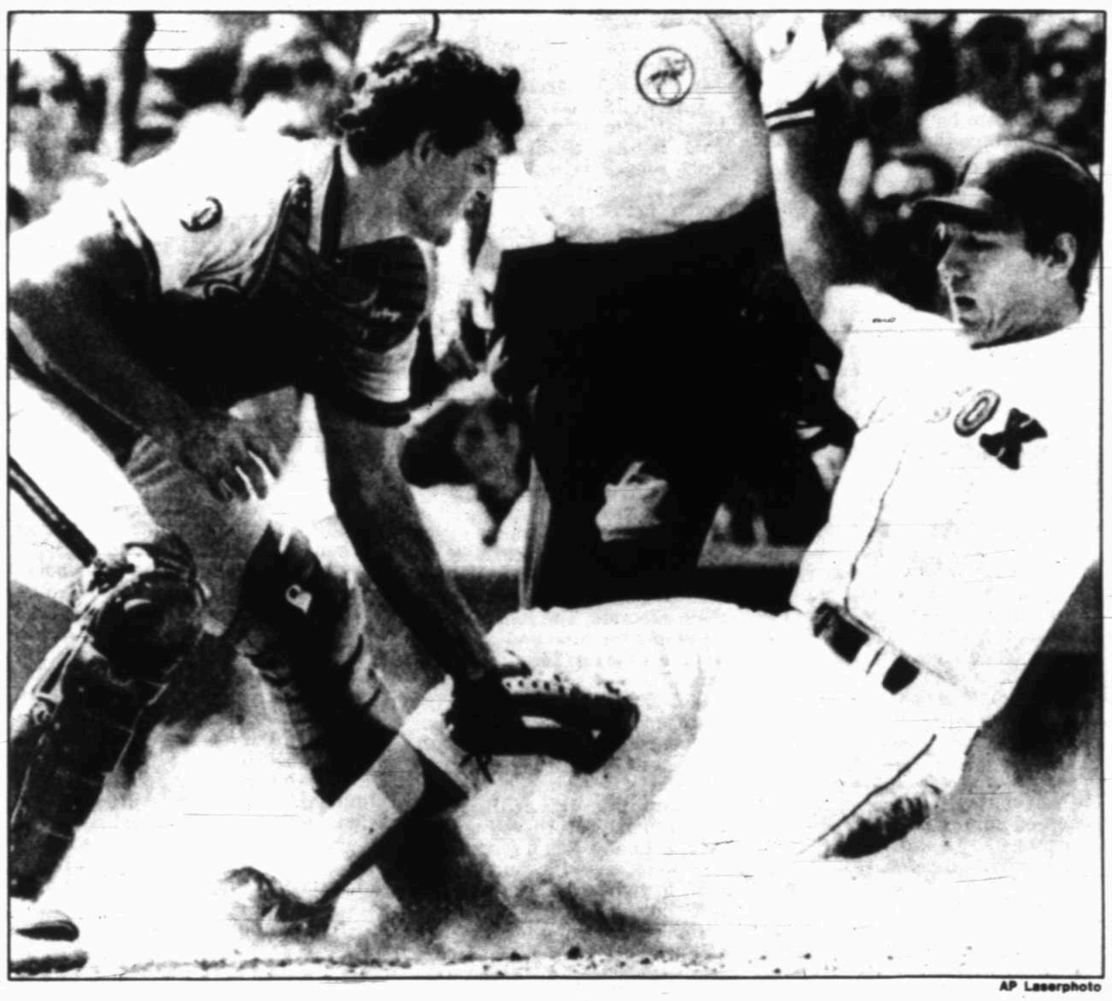

Orioles 6, Royals 4

Eddie Murray sliced a bases-loaded double into the left-field corner, driving home two runs in the seventh inning to break a 4-4 tie.

Murray's hit came off reliever Mike LaCoss and pinned the loss on Bud Black, 6-11, who has dropped eight of his last nine decisions.

Cowboy QBs square off for No. 1

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - The opposing sides in "The Great Dallas Cowboys Quarterback Controversy II" have made their opening statements and began training camp workouts today to back up their talk with action.

Danny White and Gary Hogeboom reported to training camp Sunday for a six-week duel that is supposed to decide the starter for the Cowboys' Sept. 9 National Football League opener against the Washington Redskins.

"I just hope that (Coach) Tom (Landry) will put the best players on the field and let them stay there," said White, who finished last season as the No. 1 quarterback and will open camp in the same spot.

A KEY player who did not report as scheduled on Sunday was running back Tony Dorsett, and Landry was less than pleased.

"He's got permission not to be here, but he's got to start getting his priorities in order," Landry said late Sunday night.

Technically, Dorsett has until Thursday to report, but Landry had asked all receivers, running backs and quarterbacks to be in camp by Sunday. Landry refused to disclose Dorsett's reason for reporting to camp late.

Hogeboom and White along with running backs and receivers were to work only briefly in shorts today. They played catch briefly Sunday after arriving on the 2½-hour flight from Dallas.

Landry recently said that the team is much more sympathetic toward White than at this time last year when Hogeboom was challenging for the job.

Hogeboom started the season as No. 1 but faltered after a brilliant opening game against the Los Angeles Rams.

"I hope training camp will be the same as last year when I got a shot at the starting job," said Hogeboom. "All I ask is a chance."

WHITE SAID "Right now all I want to do is get last year out of my mind. I have some things to prove. I hope I never have to go through a period of havoc like that again."

Third-tring quarterback Steve Pelluer continued his strong showing Sunday although the Cowboys fell to the Los Angeles Raiders, 12-6, in a rookie scrimmage at Oxnard.

Rookie Gary Wilkins, a free agent from Georgia Tech, scored the Cowboys' only touchdown on a four yard run.

"It was a good scrimmage, and I thought our first team offense looked good," Landry said. "Pelluer is really throwing the ball well. Norm Granger looked good running at halfback. He showed some quick feet."

Landry switched Granger from fullback to halfback for the scrimmage.

The two teams will scrimmage again on Tuesday in Thousand Oaks.

"It helps working against the Raiders," Landry said. "They do things differently, and it helps our team to go against them. The Raiders are also pretty close, so it's not a long drive."

They will also scrimmage the Los Angeles Rams in Fullerton on Thursday.

"We have some tough decisions to make, and we have to do it early because the rosters have been trimmed from 49 to 45," Landry said.

Mets on high side of sine curve, beat Braves 15-10

Associated Press

New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson likes the curves he is seeing, but it has nothing to do with pitching. Rather, it has to do with his team's hitting.

Johnson, who holds a degree in mathematics from Trinity University in San Antonio, says he is a "firm believer in the sine curve."

"And I know that if you have an extended down period, you'll eventually have a time when you stay on top for a while," Johnson says. "We're on the high side right now."

With a homer and five RBIs from George Foster, the Mets defeated Atlanta 15-10 Sunday to keep pace with divison-leading St. Louis in the National League East. The Cardinals got a pinch-hit homer from Steve Braun to pull out a 4-2, 10-inning victory at Los Angeles to hold onto a half-game lead over the Mets.

"We're in first place, and if we're going to stay there, we're going to have to use all 25 guys," said Braun, who hadn't homered since 1983.

Johnson pointed to the Mets' new propensity for scoring runs to prove his club was at the top of the hitting parabola. In their first 73 games this year, the Mets scored at an average of 3.4 runs per game. In their last 17 games — of which they have won 15 — they've scored seven runs per game.

Their victory Sunday gave the Mets 31 runs in two days. New York beat the Braves 16-4 Saturday and took the season series with Atlanta 10-2.

"We're just glad to get out of here," said Atlanta's Dale Murphy, who hit his 24th homer in the game. "It seemed like they hit every pitch we threw at them the last two days."

Atlanta starter Pascual Perez was victimized Sunday, reached for seven runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Foster went 3-for-3, including a two-run double, with two walks and scored three runs. Howard Johnson had a two-run homer and three RBIs, and Keith Hernandez doubled twice, singled and drove in two runs.

National League

Astros 5, Expos 4

The Astros ended a six-game losing streak by beating Montreal, aided by Glenn Davis' homer and RBI single. Houston had scored only one run in 43 innings entering the game.

"It sure was good to see us get some two-out hits for a change," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis. "We've been struggling so much lately, it would have been a shame to lose this one."

Mike Scott held the Expos to three hits and two runs through five innings. Mitch Webster homered in the Montreal ninth.

With two runners on base and one out in the final inning, Hubie Brooks nearly brought the Expos from behind with a long drive to left field that nearly got out of the ballpark. Instead, left-fielder Jose Cruz caught the ball and his relay turned it into a game-ending double play and reliever Dave Smith's 15th save.

Cardinals 4, Dodgers 2

Braun's homer, a two-run shot, broke a 2-2 tie in the top of the 10th. The Cardinals had lost the first three games of the series to the Dodgers.

"I want to stay on this ballteam, and I want to keep winning," Braun said. "We'd lost three in a row, we're fighting to stay in first place. It was a good time to hit one."

Twice, in the bottom of the ninth and 10th innings, the Dodgers had the bases loaded but failed to score. In the ninth, they filled the bases with just one out, but Pedro Guerrero struck out and Enos Cabell grounded into a forceout. They also had the bases full with two out in the 10th.

Pirates 5, Padres 2

Lee Tunnell won his first game in more than a year, and Pittsburgh broke a five-game losing streak by beating San Diego, which had won three in a row. The Padres did not score until Carmelo Martinez hit a two-run homer, his 13th, in the ninth inning off John Candelaria.

Tunnell worked the first six innings, holding San Diego scoreless on five hits to win his first game since June 2, 1984. He had lost 11 in the interim.

"It was just a matter of things going my way, I guess," Tunnell said. "But this doesn't mean I'm completely out of the woods yet."

Reds 7, Phillies 6

Dave Parker hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to erase a 6-5 Philadelphia lead. Parker's winning homer, No. 17 on the season, came after player-manager Pete Rose singled with two out. Parker already has one more homer than he had all of last season.

The home run also boosted Parker's game-winning RBI total for the season to 11 — two behind the Mets' Hernandez, the major-league leader.

The Phillies had taken a 6-5 lead in the top half of the inning on Glenn Wilson's ninth homer, a triple by Bo Diaz and John Russell's RBI single. Wilson has now driven in 64 runs — the fourth-best total in the NL — on just 89 hits.

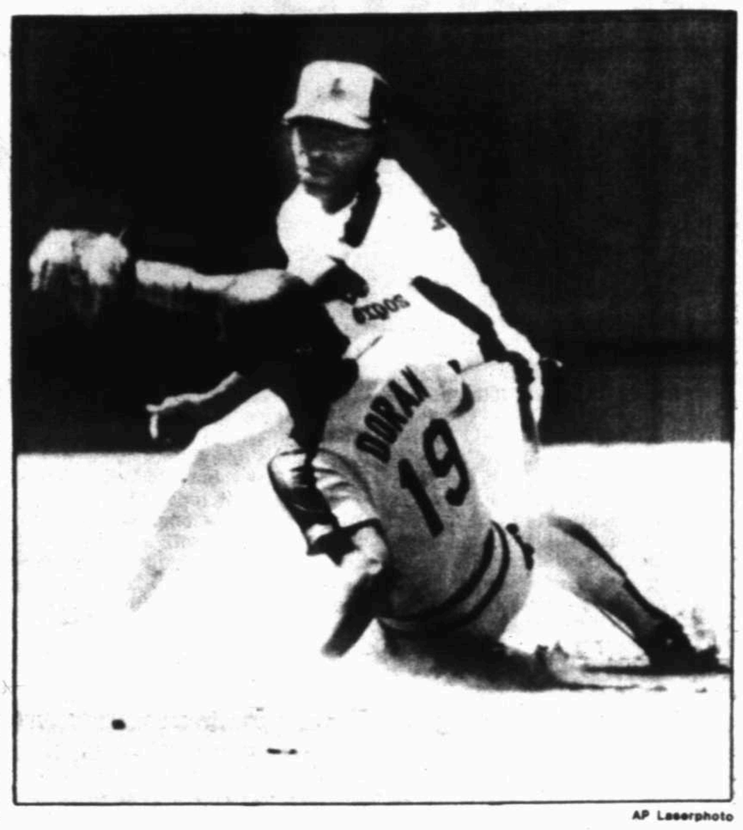

Ted Power got the last two outs of the game to notch his 17th save.

Rose had the one hit in the game to draw within 34 of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time record of 4,191 hits.

Giants 2, Cubs 1

Bill Laskey and Greg Minton combined to stop the Cubs on nine hits, and Jeff Leonard hit a solo homer to pace San Francisco.

Laskey took a six-hit shutout into the eighth when he allowed singles to Thad Bosley and Bob Dernier with none out. Minton then came in, giving up an RBI single to pinch-hitter Richie Hebner but then getting out of the inning on a fly ball and double-play grounder.

Brigand Silk runs fastest Rainbow Futurity ever

Associated Press

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Brigand Silk blew to a 1¼-length victory in the $588,000 Rainbow Futurity at Ruidoso Downs horse racetrack Sunday, stepping the fastest 400-yard clocking in the 39-year history of the track.

The grey colt went postward as the odds-on favorite to collect a winner's check of $240,968 after establishing a track record in final time trials for the Rainbow two weeks ago.

The Jack Dube trainee stopped the timer in 19.50 seconds that day.

Regular rider Jacky Martin trimmed that benchmark considerably on Sunday. Brigand Silk rocketed out of the gates to an early one-length lead on the field, gaining with each stride to post a widening 1¼-length win in 19.37 seconds — a 400-yard track record, and the second-fastest time recorded in the history of racing.

Quarter-horse specialist Alex Baldillez Jr. brought 13-1 Six Popper in for runner-up money of $110,157. And Sixarun, the 4-1 second choice for the Grade I dash, finished another half-lengh back for third and $56,455.

Brigand Silk now stands undefeated from six lifetime races. Owners Wichita Land & Cattle Co. and Jack Fletcher have earned $250,930 for the colt's efforts.

Brigand Silk is nominated to the $2.53 million All American Futurity, which offers a winner's purse of $1 million. First-round eliminations for that stake are scheduled Aug. 7, with final time trials on Aug. 21.

The final will be run Labor Day.

TENNIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — France's Yannick Noah, ending five years of frustration, defeated top-seeded Jimmy Connors Sunday night, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, to advance to the finals of the $200,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic.

Noah, seeded third, will face 11th-seeded Martin Jaite of Argentina, who outlasted countryman Marcelo Ingaramo earlier Sunday, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2. Noah, who earlier this year won the Italian Open on clay, will be vying for his second title of the year Monday night.

BASTAD, Sweden (AP) - Top-seeded Mats Wilander crushed fellow-Swede Stefan Edberg 6-1, 6-0 Sunday in the final of the Swedish Open Tennis Championships.

Wilander broke the fourth-seeded Edberg in the fourth game of the first set in a match that lasted just 59 minutes.

GOLF

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Dan Forsman, never before a PGA winner, Sunday fought off his own erratic front-nine golfing and a mid-round charge from Bob Tway to win the $300,000 Quad Cities Open.

Forsman, who had begun fourth-round action with a 1-stroke, 10-under-par lead, birdied six holes to make up for fourth-, fifth-and 18th-hole bogeys and finish with a 13-under 267 — a stroke in front of second-place Tway, 26, a PGA novice and the tourney leader at the halfway mark.

LAFAYETTE, N.Y. (AP) — Peter Thomson shot a 1-under-par 70 to capture the $202,000 MONY Greater Syracuse Seniors Pro Golf Classic Sunday at the La-Fayette Country Club.

The Australian finished the 54-hole tournament with a 9-under total of 204, two strokes better than defending champion Miller Barber and first-round leader Gene Littler, who finished Sunday with a 3-under 68.

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Judy Clark fought off a stiff challenge from Donna Caponi in Sunday's final round to win the Boston Five Classic by three strokes and notch her first victory in her eight years on the LPGA tour.

Clark, runner-up last Sunday in the U.S. Women's Open, had a 1-under-par 71 Sunday and finished the tournament at 8-under 280.

The outcome still was in doubt until Clark birdied the par 4, 321-yard 17th hole for the final three-stroke margin.

AUTO RACING

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — France's Alain Prost drove a McLaren-TAG-Porsche Sunday t0 his third victory of the year.

He finished a lap ahead of the field to move into second in the world championship standings with 35 points behind Italy's Michele Alboreto. The Italian added six points for a second-place finish in his Ferrari for a total of 37 points.

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan 500 Indy-car race was postponed Sunday after two cars spun out in practice runs Saturday.

Colombian driver Roberto Guerrero and record-setting pole-winner Bobby Rahal's accidents both were caused by sudden loss of air in right front tires supplied by Goodyear.

Goodyear announced it will withdraw its new radial race tires, which were being used on this fast high-banked, 2-mile track for the first time, and bring back the type of bias-ply tires used here in two Indy-car races in 1984.

Lightweight boxer Roberto Medina, AKA John Garcia, is escourted out of the arena by authorities after his loss to Meldrick Taylor. In 1982, Medina-Garcia escaped from Colorado State Prison.

Fighter arrested after losing lightweight bout

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Before becoming a tough lightweight boxer, John E. Garcia — alias Roberto Medina — was a heavyweight on the Colorado crime circuit, Denver police say.

Garcia lost a punishing, six-round fight here Saturday night to Olympic gold medalist Meldrick Taylor of Philadelphia. A few minutes later, he was arrested and escorted out of Scope coliseum in handcuffs after he changed into street clothes.

"He is listed as a career criminal in our Denver DA's office," said Denver Police Detective Dennis Cribari, who said Garcia has a record of 61 arrests since 1973 in the Colorado city and had escaped from prison in 1982.

Police say that since Garcia, 29, became a boxer after escaping from prison three years ago, he has scored nine knockouts.

His boxing biography describes him as "a strong aggressive infighter who loves to trade punches."

He was being held in the Norfolk City Jail pending an extradition hearing in General District Court today.

Cribari said he received a tip last week that Garcia, who escaped from the Colorado State Penitentiary in Canon City in 1982, had become a prizefighter living in St. Petersburg, Fla., and would be fighting in Norfolk.

He verified the tip by checking a report on the fight in the local newspaper, he said.

But the clincher came when Garcia stepped into the ring and shed his robe. Norfolk police who had been alerted by Denver noticed three characteristic tattoos on his body.

"We did not know if it was him for sure until we saw the tattoos," said Norfolk Police Lt. Curtis M. Todd Jr. The tattoos include a rose over Garcia's heart and a risque portrayal of a couple on his back.

Cribari said Garcia was last arrested in 1979 on seven felony charges of theft, auto theft and larceny. He said he is also wanted on charges of assault, conspiracy and escape in Glenwood Springs, Colo.

Garcia, who moved to St. Petersburg in September 1982, scored a second-round knockout in his first professional fight on March 15, 1984, in Tampa, Fla.

Richland wins ASA crown

From Staff Reports

It was a strange place for the Southwest Regional Girls under 12 Amateur Softball Association finals, especially since Dallas and Houston area teams were involved in the finals and the third and fourth place finishers were from South Texas.

But Richland's Wildcats went away happy with a 6-1 victory over the Cy Fair Fillies at Midland's Hogan Park Sunday in the championship final of the three-day tournament. Actually, both finalists went away happy, since the top two teams in the tournament qualify for the nationals in St. Louis Aug., 8-11.

The championship game was the third meeting between Richland and Cy Fair during the tournament.

In the winners bracket, Richland beat Cy Fair, 6-0. To stay alive, Cy Fair then had to beat the Alvin Bayou Babes, 11-7. That win put the Fillies back in the title running and they forced an ultimate game by beating Richland, 6-5.

In early Sunday games, the LaPort Lions beat the Irving Panthers, 13-2 and Alvin downed Texas City, 4-1. Alvin then beat LaPort 7-3 for third place.

Broyles claims Frank Key crown at RHCC by one shot

From Staff Reports

Favored Jake Broyles followed his first round 73 with a 74 Sunday to capture the Championship Flight title in the Frank Key Senior Golf Tournament at Ranchland Hills.

Broyles' two-day total of 147 nipped runner-up Fred Lawson who fired a 73 of his own Sunday to pull within one stroke of the titlist at 148.

John Carey pulled in at 151 for the 36-hole tournament after carding a 74 Sunday.

The first flight saw first-round leader Claude Mitchell mark the best two-round total with an 81 in the second round to take a 158, six-stroke edge over second-place finisher Charles Welton.

In the second flight, which teed off from the regular red men's tees rather than the championship blue tees of the first two flights, Joe Neal's six-stroke first round lead proved more than enough as he came in at 79 for a 151 two-day total. Neal's first round of 72 stood as the Frank Key tourney's best 18-hole score.

Other flight champions were: 3rd flight, Jolly Hartsell; 4th flight, Morris Howell; 5th flight, Barry Welton; 6th flight, E.H. Watkins; 7th flight, A.T. Fry; 8th flight, Dub Johnston and 9th flight, Clyde Payne.

Odessa's Allen runs away with Distance Festival 5K

From Staff Reports

Odessa's Pam Allen kept her 1985 record untarnished Saturday with a first-place finish in the 2nd Annual Women's Distance Festival 5K Run.

Allen has run seven races this year and won them all. Saturday, Allen beat defending champion Clair Hardy of Midland by 11 seconds with her time of 21:03.

The race was one of 85 distance festival races held across the country Saturday and was sponsored locally by the Permian Basin Road Runners Club. More than 25,000 runners participated across the nation with 117 entering the Midland run.

The five age group winners were Hardy in the 19 and under; Allen in the 20 to 29 and overall category; Donna Suchy (23:01) in the 30 to 39 group; Arlyne Ragen (24:12) in the 40 to 49 group and Donna Cherryhomes (27:50) in the over 50 age group. Sixty-two-year-old Audrey Smith was the oldest runner in Saturday's event, completing the three-mile course in 32:20.

Here are the top three age group finishers in the Women's Distance Festival 5K:

19 and under: 1. Claire Hardy 19:59 2. Mary Laird 21:26 3. Kelly Young, 21:26

20-29: 1. Pam Allen, 19:48 2. Debbie Morris 21:03 3. Robin Orchard, 21:49

30-39: 1. Donna Suchy, 23:01 2. Tony Whitley, 23:16 3.Michelle Carmony, 23:33

40-49: 1. Arlyne Ragen, 24:12 2. Johnnye Montgomery, 25:17. 3. Gayleen Ienatsch, 25:46

50 and over: 1. Donna Cherryhomes, 27:50 2. Alex Rose, 30:50 3. Audry Smith, 32:20

"Good hitters find a way to get base hits in that situation," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "If you send them up enough times, you'll see some damage."

George Brett hit a two-run homer, his 14th, for the Royals, while Mike Young hit a three-run shot, his 10th, for host Baltimore.

Indians 4, White Sox 3

Tony Bernazard connected for a two-out home run in the top of the 10th inning as Cleveland broke its 14-game losing streak in Comiskey Park.

The Indians, who had lost five straight games, had not won in Chicago since May 1983. The White Sox had won five straight overall.

Julio Franco drove in two runs for Cleveland off Bill Long, who was making his major-league debut.

"I had noodle legs going from the bullpen to the mound," said Long, who allowed seven hits and three earned runs in a five-inning stint. "After the first and second pitch and the first out, I settled down."

Chicago tied the score in the bottom of the ninth on Oscar Gamble's pinch-single.

Brewers 5, Mariners 4

Robin Yount and Ted Simmons homered while Ray Burris and Bob Gibson combined to hold off Seattle.

Yount, who also had a sacrifice fly, hit a two-run homer in the first inning, and Cecil Cooper followed with a double and scored on a single by Ben Oglivie.

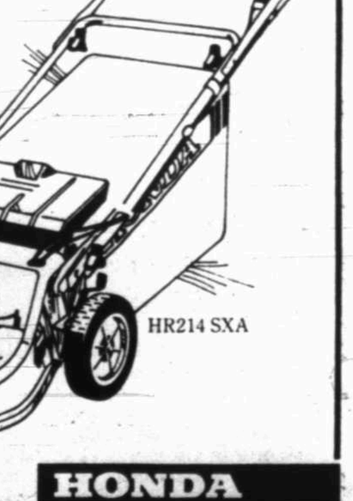

Simmons hit his sixth homer in the third inning to give Milwaukee a 4-2 lead.

Gorman Thomas hit his 17th homer, and Alvin Davis and Dave Henderson connected for their eighth homers for visiting Seattle.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Travel plays a major role in your life. You are energetic and unlikely to retire if you can avoid it. An unexpected windfall or change in a family trust arrangement gives you extra cash. Be careful not to fritter it away. A real estate deal can be finalized in the fall. A change in your priorities increases your chances for success. A family member gives you valuable financial advice. Romance soars to new heights. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Terry David of "Another World," Belinda Montgomery of "Miami Vice," Gloria DeHaven, baseball's Don Drysdale, Dodger great Peewee Reese, author Raymond Chandler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen to the pleas of an older person who is homebound and in need of assistance. Doing a good deed makes you feel great. A tip from a stockbroker pays off handsomely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stretch your imagination and you will come up with the answers you need. Someone from your past could cause your mate some problems. Be candid. What's done is done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay attention to your intuition. Diplomacy helps you deal with a difficult financial situation. An older person is eager to declare his or her affection. Play for time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An older person asks a special favor. Performing a special service puts you in line for a promotion or raise. Romantic partner could be feeling neglected. Spend more time together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look for ways to save money at both work and home. A change in diet could give you greater energy. Widen your social circle and you gain new business clients.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A diplomatic gesture or compromise averts a serious argument. Your ability to perform when "under fire" impresses someone influential. A raise or promotion is possible. Keep up the good work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Explain a broken promise to loved ones and, chances are, you will be forgiven. Extra personal effort is needed to salvage an important relationship. Move quickly to make amends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others are impressed by your ability to handle several important pieces of business at one time. Being well organized is the key to continuing success. Your charisma is at an all-time high.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A newcomer is eager to join your team. Wait until this person has proven his or her worth before making a commitment. Your professional reputation could be at stake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not take out your frustration on those who have done nothing to deserve your anger. Tackle routine work if a special project is temporarily stalled. A phone call brings welcome financial news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A lack of rest could lead to errors in judgment. An old friend does you a big favor by advising you to slow down. Pay attention. Postpone signing contracts and agreements.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A busy individual asks you to work overtime to meet an important deadline. Doing so could interfere with some very special plans. Explain the urgency of the situation and romantic partner will understand.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ102 ♡K76 ◇AK5 ♣AQ8
What is your opening bid?
A.—Your hand is too strong for one no trump but not quite good enough for two no trump by traditional standards. Your spade suit is certainly biddable, but to open one spade could make it difficult for partner to respond. In addition, should he respond one no trump, the wrong hand might declare the no trump game. Open one club—that makes it easy for partner to respond. Naturally, you will jump to two no trump unless partner responds one spade, in which case you will raise to four spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q765 ♡95 ◇832 ♣AK82
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♡	1 NT	Pass

What do you respond?
A.—Obviously, the alternatives are a raise to two no trump or a cue-bid of two hearts in an attempt to find a 4-4 spade fit. There are two drawbacks to the cue-bid. First, partner is unlikely to have a four-card spade holding since he did not make a takeout double of one heart. Secondly, if partner denies a spade suit by bidding two no trump, you won't know whether to pass or bid game. Be practical: raise to two no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10965 ♡A9 ◇AJ1065 ♣A4
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Since your two diamond response robbed partner of his bidding room, he might have been forced to rebid a relatively weak five-card suit. Therefore, we would do nothing precipitate. We would simply complete the description of our pattern by choosing two spades as our rebid.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠94 ♡Q76 ◇QJ103 ♣KJ82
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner has shown a strong, balanced hand with a five-card suit. You have enough strength for slam—it is simply a matter of whether you should bid six hearts or six no trump. Since you also have a balanced hand that could produce tricks in the minor suits, we prefer the no trump slam despite your ruffing value in spades. It should be a more flexible contract.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♡AKQ94 ◇AJ83 ♣1092
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an excellent five-card major suit, but that is not the salient feature of your hand. You have a two-suited, perhaps even three-suited, hand and you should bid it accordingly. Any rebid other than two diamonds earns a mild vote of censure.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK6 ♡K95 ◇9 ♣AK10952
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

What do you bid now?
A.—You certainly want to commit this hand to game. The question is where? To allow for an orderly investigation, we suggest that you start by announcing your strength with a cue-bid of two spades. A jump to three clubs is a pitiful underbid.

Launderer to stars isn't awed: 'Underwear is underwear'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sandra Hogan isn't overawed at being a launderer to the stars. "Basically," she notes, "underwear is underwear."

In the past five years, Ms. Hogan says she and her co-workers at Laundry Express have done clothes for Bruce Springsteen, Madonna, Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Charlie Daniels, Kenny Rogers, Gary Morris and Rick Springfield.

Springsteen

Nelson

"There's not a lot of places around that process laundry and the entertainers pass through this area on their way to Music Row," she said. "We've been doing it for years."

Cyndi Lauper once pulled up in a limousine to collect a load that included orange socks, bright yellow pants, a green dress and a black hat, said another laundry worker, Marie Rothman.

Kiss band members also had a memorable bundle, according to Ms. Hogan. "They had spikes on their gloves, black leather clothes, wild black leather socks, lots of leather and lace," she said.

Cuomo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Power, excellence and risk-taking sum up the secret of America's 10 sexiest men, ranging from New York Gov. Mario Cuomo to comedian John Candy, according to Playgirl magazine.

"Whether cerebral, artistic, political or athletic, power is a turn-on for today's woman," editor Tommi Lewis says in a news release accompanying the list, which appears in the magazine's September issue.

Candy

Completing the list were U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, TV actor Don Johnson of "Miami Vice," ABC-TV "Nightline" anchor Ted Koppel, New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, Indianapolis 500 winner Danny Sullivan, musician Quincy Jones, actor Aidan Quinn of "Desperately Seeking Susan" and dancer Alexander Godunov, who turned actor in the film "Witness."

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Orchestral music doesn't have to play second fiddle to jazz in New Orleans, says Maxim Shostakovich, the recently appointed conductor of the New Orleans Symphony.

"I want New Orleans to become not only the jazz capital but the capital for serious music as well," he told The Times-Picayune in an interview published Sunday.

Shostakovich, 46, will take over at New Orleans in the fall of 1986, when Philippe Entremont moves to the Denver symphony.

"My dream is to do some kind of festival of my father's music," said Shostakovich, son of the late composer Dmitri Shostakovich.

It is also possible that his son — a pianist also named Dmitri, now studying filmmaking at Columbia University — may play one of the Shostakovich concertos with his father conducting.

Maxim Shostakovich was principal conductor and artistic director of the USSR Radio and Television Symphony Orchestra for 10 years before emigrating from Russia in 1981, and made about 60 recordings in the Soviet Union.

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maureen Reagan, who headed the U.S. delegation to the U.N. Decade for Women conference in Africa while her father underwent surgery in Washington, said the experience has given her "a whole new understanding of the phrase, 'the show must go on.'"

"All I know is that the only better news I could have at this point is that there was no problem to start with," said Miss Reagan, who was interviewed in Nairobi Sunday on CBS News' "Face the Nation."

Doctors removed a cancerous growth from President's Reagan's colon July 13 and said there was no sign that it had spread.

Robinson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When television soap opera star Christopher Robinson goes home from work now, he won't be going to jail.

The 42-year-old Dr. Rick Webber of "General Hospital" had been moving from sound stage to federal halfway house almost every night for four months to serve his sentence on two misdemeanor counts of willful failure to file income tax returns.

Robinson's sentence ended at one minute past midnight Saturday.

"I walked in the door the first day and I decided I was in the wrong place," the actor said Thursday.

Robinson agreed to pay $382,835 in back taxes, interest and penalties for the years 1972 through 1983, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Hayman.

HYANNISPORT, Mass. (AP) — Dozens of members of one of the nation's most famous political families gathered at the Kennedy compound to celebrate the birthday of Rose Kennedy, who turns 95 today, a spokesman says.

"She's doing very, very well for a woman her age," said Brian Delaney, an aide to her son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., before the Sunday fete.

"She continues to improve from the stroke she suffered last spring. She's been to Mass at St. Francis, with assistance, and to the store a few blocks away."

In addition to Sen. Kennedy, Delaney said guests at the traditional private party included Rose Kennedy's daughter, Jean Kennedy Smith; Edward "Teddy" Kennedy Jr., said to be a possible candidate for the congressional seat to be vacated in 1986 by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill; and Ethel Kennedy, wife of assassinated Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the late President John F. Kennedy, suffered a stroke in April 1984 at her Palm Beach, Fla., home and spent last winter bedridden in Cape Cod.

"The best way to express the state of her health is that she has improved, she is more alert," said Dr. Robert D. Watt of Centerville, her personal physician. "She responds to the family, to me and to the nurses. I would say she has done very well."

Clay Henry, left, "world famous beer-drinking goat," tops off a cold brew outside his residence at the Lajitas Trading Post. Remnants of the past dominate the "ghost town" of Terlingua, at right, home of the annual Terlingua Chili Cookoff.

Wayne Walls rows downstream toward Lajitas on the international waters of the Rio Grande.

Lajitas

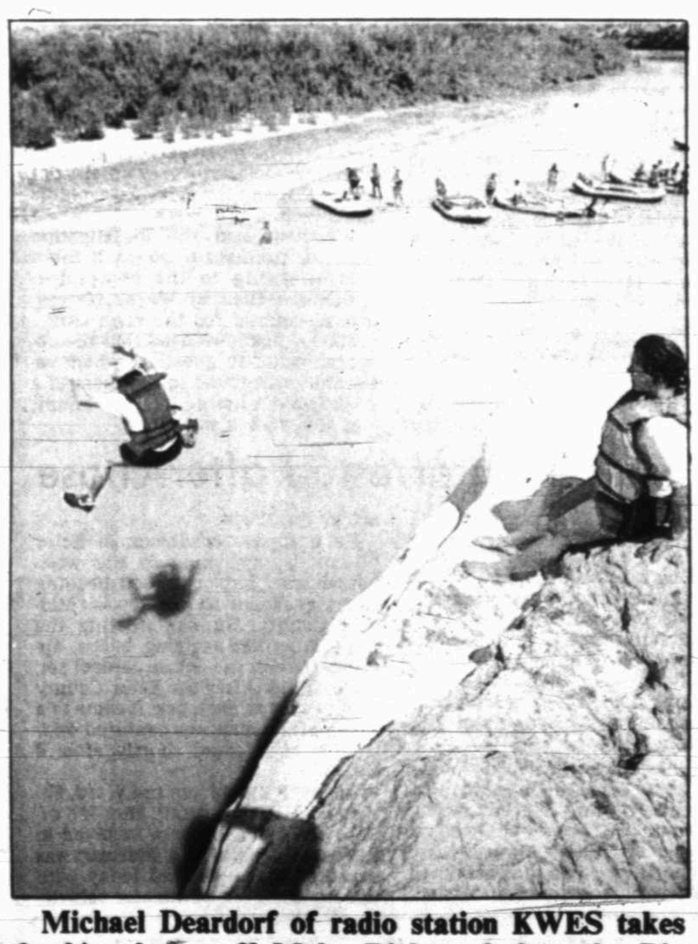

LAJITAS — It is located five hours from Midland and has a population of 111 people. But slowly the picturesque community of Lajitas is becoming a popular weekend get-away spot for local residents in search of outdoor activities.

South of Lajitas is Big Bend National Park. Northeast, a visitor will come across the old ghost town of Terlingua, made semi-famous (at least to Texas music fans) by a Jerry Jeff Walker album recorded in the early 1970s entitled "Viva Terlingua."

Old adobe shacks still stand on a hillside overlooking a graveyard which features tombstones dating back to the 1800s. An old church is being remodeled and restored to its original look.

Lajitas itself features buildings in the old-West style, including a saloon, a dance hall and an old Spanish church. Rowboats across the Rio Grande to the quaint Mexican village of Boquillas are only 25 cents day or night, and rafting tours down the river take travelers through such sights as Santa Elena Canyon (trips can take four hours or up to 10 days).

Lajitas offers water, old West atmosphere, and Clay Henry, a world-famous beer-swilling goat. It's a different West Texas alto-gether.

Michael Deardorf of radio station KWES takes the big plunge off Moby Dick rock into the Rio Grande.

Lajitas Museum and Gardens provides a refreshingly different view of the barren landscape with this experimental pond for raising plant species not native to the Big Bend region.

Good ol'country boy making his dream come true

Richardson concocts fish fry mix of cornmeal, spices, peppers

EVADALE, Texas (AP) — Back in 1954, a traveling milkshake mixer salesman in California took a deep breath, tossed caution aside and bought a hamburger joint. He was 52, his name was Ray Kroc, and he parlayed his investment into a global fast food chain called McDonalds.

That's a story Gilbert Bebee Richardson III needs to remember, especially when he's anxiously hunched over the account books, staring at row upon row of red ink.

Richardson, who lives here near the Evadale paper mill, is an entrepreneur, a man with a plan and a product to boot. But don't let the numbers on the end of his name throw you. He's no big city speedball come to East Texas to pry hard-earned dollars from sweat-stained country wallets.

Richardson, 51, is a good ol' Piney Woods boy, raised on greens and barbecued coon. He's as big as his dreams and smarter than a preacher on Sunday. He wears a white beard and blue overalls. He talks with a butterbean twang.

In short, Gilbert Bebee Richardson III is about as country as country boys come. He's the comfortable sort of man whom children, related or otherwise, call "uncle." But Uncle Gilbert wears jogging shoes because he's in a hurry.

That's where Ray Kroc and the red ink enter the story, which begins down the road at the paper mill. Richardson was chief of security there for 16 years. He and wife, Betty, raised three children on the steady paycheck. Their life seemed as predictable as the paper mill whistle. Strange as it sounds, what caused the problem was fried fish.

Every time supervisors at the mill threw a fish fry, Richardson cooked the fish because he did it best. Nobody fried fish like Uncle Gilbert. He used a special mixture of hot sauce and peppers. But after a couple of hours of handling the mixture, it raised blisters on his hands and arms. Powerful stuff, it was, before cooking.

So Richardson put on his wizard's cap and came up with a dry mixture of cornmeal, spices and peppers. "It worked great," he says. "I saw the potential in it right away." By "potential," of course, Richardson means money, as in profit. About the same time, a good friend in West Texas had a dream. In the dream, he saw a box of fish fry mix with Richardson's picture on it. The label read "Uncle Gilbert."

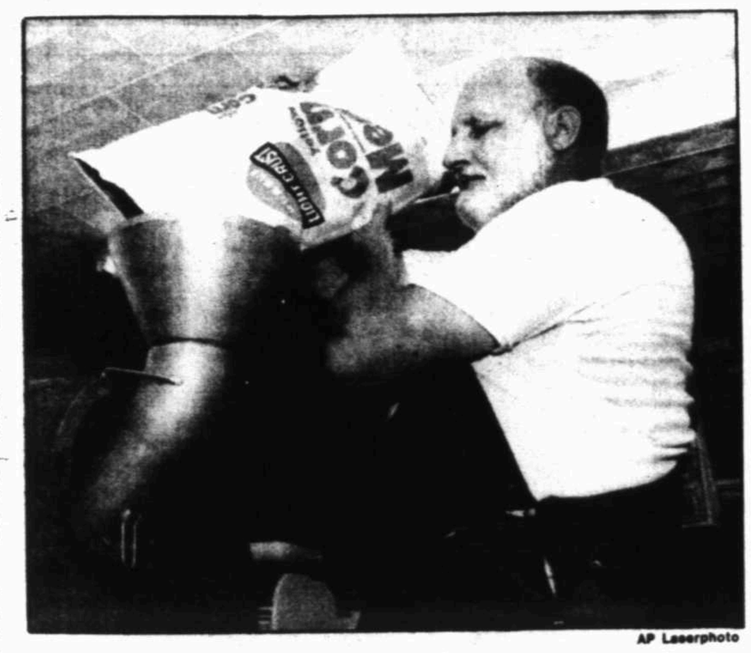

Naturally, the friend told Richardson about the dream. So naturally, Richardson quit his job at the paper mill. That was a year ago. Another friend, Hugh Terry, being savvy enough to smell a good thing cooking, pooled resources and joined forces. The two men started Uncle Gilbert's Inc., maker of Uncle Gilbert's Fish Fry Mix.

First, Richardson and Terry tested the market with 500 boxes of the mix in Buna and Evadale stores. Hot Cake City. Folks were drooling for more. So they built a mixing drum, put it in a portable aluminum building and bought 10,000 more boxes. Richardson hit the highways, and the mix started appearing on supermarket shelves across western Louisiana and Southeast Texas.

It looked like a non-stop express ride to the top. But then October arrived. No sales. The same in November and December. The red ink flowed. Richardson, out of desperation, bought some traps and began trapping coons in the creek bottoms. "It had been years since I'd walked those creek bottoms," he says. "And I didn't make enough to pay for the traps. But it gave me something to do." He also began a daily inspection of the help wanted ads. Then, just as suddenly, the holidays passed and sales began to climb.

The reason, occurring to Richardson and Terry only in retrospect, was that people don't fry fish much during the holiday season. So Uncle Gilbert ordered 20,000 more boxes, and the men put the mixing drum on cruise control and let it run. That's where it stands today. The stores are moving 25 cases a week and demand is building.

As for the future, Richardson confesses to expansion plans up his sleeve. But he isn't talking. The dog-eat-dog world of an entrepreneur is delicate. But don't be surprised if the next time you're kicking back in a Chicago motel room you see an Uncle Gilbert ad on the TV.

He was born Oct. 7, 1895, in the Indian Territory of Oklahoma, where he was reared. He attended the Sequah School in Tulsa. His family was a pioneer settler in Tulsa, opening the first mercantile store.

He was married to Ida Turner July 4, 1916, in Tulsa. In the early 1920s, he began working in the oil fields for Texaco, retiring in 1960. During this time they made their home in Lefors and Buchannan Dam, moving to Midland in 1978.

He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Ida; four sons, Richard Archer of Midland, John J. Archer of Bridgeport, Howard Archer of La Force and Joe Archer of Spearman; a daughter, Maxine Bland of Midland; a sister, Betty Eldridge of Tulsa; eight grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and 11 nieces and nephews.

Dallas board favors rail transit system

DALLAS (AP) — Plans to build a rail transit system to ease congestion along one of the city's most vital north-south freeways have received preliminary approval from the Dallas Area Rapid Transit Board.

According to the plan tentatively agreed to Saturday, a rail system planned along the Central Expressway corridor would be placed underground from Mockingbird Lane to downtown Dallas.

The rail line would run emerge and run above ground northward from Mockingbird, located in the vicinity of Southern Methodist University.

The board also tentatively chose a downtown subway plan that had been recommended by the DART staff. Final votes on the proposals are scheduled for Aug. 27.

Board members decided not to worry yet about financial projections that DART could fall $1.3 billion short of being able to finance construction of the $4 billion rail system, purchase of more than $700 million in buses and the billions more than would be needed to operate the system and pay off the system's debt.

Ted Tedesco, who begins work Sept. 3 as DART executive director, told the board that he expects to find the resources to pay for the system. He advised them not to delay a decision because of funding questions.

"I would encourage you to make your decision based on the technical and service requirements, and give the staff and consultants sufficient time to explore all those other options. I don't know any other way to do it," Tedesco said.

The downtown subway plan received a unanimous vote of approval, but the recommendation concerning the Central Expressway rain line received the bare two-thirds vote needed for approval.

While 16 voted for the plan, seven others, including six representatives from suburban cities and a Dallas County appointee, said they were troubled about the lack of a firm plan to pay for the improvements, as well as the possible delays a financial shortfall would cause for the rail lines to reach suburban cities.

"I think all of us are in favor of the tunnel if we could figure out how to afford it," said DART board Vice Chairman Dan Matkin of Irving.

The North Central Project and the North Central Task Force, which have been studying possible solutions to easing congestion along Central Expressway for about 10 months, already have recommended that Central have eight expressway lanes.

Frontage roads would be cantilevered over the edge of the expressway to minimize the adjoining property that would have to be taken.

Officials said a tunnel could be built and opened to rail traffic 2½ years faster than a rail line built along the expressway median, which would be $43 million to $96 million cheaper than the tunnel, according to estimates.

However, some DART officials said the time saved could pay back the higher cost of the tunnel. An above-ground rail line would have to be coordinated with the planned expansion of the expressway.

Aliens jailed in connection with missing girl

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Eight undocumented aliens remained in Tarrant County Jail today in connection with the disappearance of a 12-year-old girl whose uncle later rescued her from the men's trailer home, authorities say.

The seventh-grader was located Sunday afternoon, sheriff's officers said. She had been missing since she stepped outside her Southeast Tarrant County home to pick up the morning newspaper early Saturday.

The girl's father, a construction foreman, claimed she was sexually assaulted during the disappearance. Authorities alleged the eight men had held the girl overnight at their trailer house.

Sheriff Don Carpenter said two of the men were booked on suspicion of rape while the others were being held for immigration authorities. No bail has yet been set, Carpenter said.

The girl's home is in an unincorporated part of southeast Tarrant County between Kennedale and Forest Hill.

After a search, the uncle told authorities he located the girl in the trailer in which the men were staying. The father said he called his brother, who is police chief of a small town in Arkansas, to aid in the search.

Relatives said the 34-year-old chief made the seven-hour drive to Kennedale, arriving at 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

The uncle said he saw his niece draw aside a curtain and peer out a back window of the men's trailer about 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The uncle said he pushed his way into the trailer, grabbed the girl and carried her out as reporters watched.

The girl's father said he had to be restrained from attacking the occupants of the trailer.

"I made a dive for them, but before I could get my hands on them, (friends) grabbed me and held me," the father said. "I wanted to kill them all. I still want to."

The girl's father claimed his daughter said she was held in a back bedroom and given "a Coke that she said made her sleepy and feel funny."

He said an examination of his daughter at a Fort Worth hospital confirmed that she had been raped. Carpenter said the girl was examined but said he had not yet seen the report.

Man hijacks bus, leaves laughing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A gunman commandeered a VIA bus for a short ride, then walked away laughing, police said.

The bus driver, 21-year-old Maria Miles, said the man waved her down late Saturday.

There were no other passengers on the bus and the man sat down without paying his fare.

Ms. Miles told police he then came to the front as if to pay the 40-cent fare, but instead pulled out a small pistol from under his shirt.

The man told her to take him to Guadalupe Street. When she told him she did not know where the street was, the man pointed the pistol at her head and told her he would direct her.

Ms. Miles said she made several turns at his direction, but he did not harm or threaten her.

The gunman finally ordered her to halt the bus at a street intersection and he disembarked, laughing, Ms. Miles told police.

FBI investigating alleged fraud in special election

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI has begun a preliminary investigation of vote fraud allegations in the special election for the First Congressional District seat in Northeast Texas, U.S. Attorney Robert Wortham has confirmed.

The investigation is focused on allegations by the state Republican Party that volunteers for Democratic candidate Jim Chapman forged the name of at least one elderly Sulphur Springs resident on an application for an absentee ballot, GOP officials said Saturday.

Chapman said he did not believe any of his volunteers had broken the law.

"The Republicans are doing anything to try and divert attention from the real issues," Chapman said.

George Shipley, a campaign consultant for Chapman, called the allegation "political trash."

"No one in the Chapman campaign is involved," Shipley said.

Wortham told the Dallas Morning News that he received the complaint about the alleged forgery, referred it to the FBI and the agency started its investigation last week.

Wortham said the investigation was "too premature" to say if there was anything to the complaint, which was filed by Wayne Massey, special counsel for the state GOP.

Massey acknowledged that the absentee ballot in question, which reportedly was found in the room of a 95-year-old nursing home patient, was not mailed in.

Georgia man arrested after chase

From Staff Reports

A 36-year-old Decatur, Ga., man was being held in Ward County Jail in Monahans this morning after leading law-enforcement units on a 60-mile chase Sunday which ended on Interstate 20 in Midland County after an Ector County deputy emptied a shotgun at the man's tractor-trailer, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

The chase began in Ward County about 7 a.m. after the man was told by his co-driver he had been fired by their employer, Brown Transportation Corp. of Atlanta. According to DPS reports, the man then assaulted the co-driver, took his keys and took off in the truck.

He evaded a roadblock in Ector County by switching to the westbound lane, but continued heading east, traveling at 55 mph toward Midland County. He was steering the truck from the running board, apparently with the cruise control set, reports said. After the Ector County deputy shot at the truck, it came to a stop and the man was captured on I-20 east of Midland shortly after 8 a.m.

About 18 units from the Ward, Ector and Midland county sheriff's offices and the DPS were involved in the chase, reports said. The man was expected to be charged today with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Twirlers discover they have to be 'tough'

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — With ribbons and bows in their hair and pointed toes and fingertips they may look like delicate dolls — breakable to the touch.

But that outside appearance can be deceiving when it comes to these fast operators of shiny batons.

"You've got to be tough to be a twirler," said Missi Riley, an 11-year-old state champion twirler from Groves.

Missi, a champion in the twirling strut, said she twirls because "I just think it's fun. I like to practice. You have to want to practice."

But even with the practice, Missi and many twirlers like her find themselves nursing injuries.

"I've had a bloody nose, pulled muscles in my legs and bad knee problems — but I don't mind," she said.

Wendy Ronquille, 12, of Port Acres also knows the price paid for the trophies, medals and medallions won in twirling competitions.

Wendy, daughter of United States Twirling Association judge and twirling coach Colleen Ronquille, started twirling when she was 5 and has been competing on a state level since she was 6.

"One time I hit my nose with the baton and it started bleeding," she said. "And I've had bruised arms."

But bruises or not, a good performance can be rewarding to the twirlers.

Wendy, already a state champion in two-baton twirling, recently won the two-baton competition for her age group and division in a regional competition involving twirlers from Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Missi also reaped the rewards of long hours of practice by winning the regional title for her age group in the fancy strut and two-baton events.

Stephanie Terrell, a 7-year-old from Nederland, started twirling when she was only 3 and can now lay claim to state championship in solo and strut routines.

Heather Gibson, 9, of Vidor, is also one of the area's state champions in solo twirling.

The medals and trophies are just part of the fun associated with twirling, according to Wendy, who said she likes to twirl because of the traveling and the friendly competition.

"Missi gives up the slumber parties so she can twirl," said Mrs. Riley.

Mrs. Ronquille said the sport now requires more than just twirling. She said competitive twirling now combines the skills of gymnastics and dance.

The showmanship learned through twirling doesn't hurt either.

Missi has grown out of her shyness, and Wendy will be spending next football season as an Austin Middle School cheerleader.

"If you learn to twirl you can do just about anything," said Mrs. Ronquille.

Men jailed in alleged truck theft

From Staff Reports

Two men were being held in county jail this morning after sheriff's deputies stopped them Sunday night in an allegedly stolen tractor-trailer containing about $100,000 worth of computers and computer parts, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

The truck had been reported stolen from Warfield truck stop by Rick Shirey of Rome, Ga., about 11:25 p.m. Shortly after, sheriff's deputies stopped the truck on the south service road of Interstate 20 near Midkiff Road and arrested the two men. The truck, valued at $95,000, was owned by Fred Hull of Newron, Ga., according to reports.

In other reports, an Odessa man injured in a Saturday night accident at the M System parking lot in the 400 block of Midland Drive was listed in critical condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Teen girl's 'toy' can hit 100 mph

Copley News Service

EL CAJON, Calif. — Most girls have long relegated their toys to bedroom closets and boxes in the rafters above the garage by the time they turn 16. Not Tammy Sanders.

"Tammy's Toy," however, is no ordinary plaything. It's a pro class, D Pro-Comp, methanol-fueled sand dragster capable of hitting speeds exceeding 100 mph.

She also won the 1981 Junior Bracket three-wheel Super Nationals at Riverside Raceway.

"It's exciting," said Sanders, who will be a high school junior this fall. "I like speed."

And why not. She's been raised on it. When most kids were trying to overcome the complexities of bicycle training wheels, Sanders had been zipping around on a Honda 50cc since she was 3½ years old.

She began racing three-wheelers competitively at 9.

CNS Photo

Tammy Sander's "toy" is a methanol-fueled sand dragster capable of 100-mph speeds.

SANDERS, HOWEVER, hasn't raced since her dragster slammed head-on into a cement wall at 100 mph on Memorial Day 1984 at Hermison, south of San Francisco.

Sand dragsters are basically the same as asphalt cars, except they have ribbed rear tires for traction.

Lack of heart isn't what has kept Sanders off the track. She's had to wait until her father, Wayne, could get enough money to build another dragster.

Sand dragsters, which weigh about 500 pounds, cost $75,000 or more.

"I was going to go right back after I crashed," she said. "I'm ready anytime they get it going."

Sanders suffered an injured rotator cuff in her right shoulder, a cut on her right knee and "a broken fingernail."

"We were trying a new injector system," Wayne said. "It froze; it couldn't come out of throttle. It jammed wide open."

The dragster then swerved and hit a sprinkler laying near the track, tearing out the car's steering.

"After she crashed, I ran out onto the track," Wayne said. "I asked, 'Can you move your head, arms and legs?' She said, 'Yes, Dad, but look at my car.'"

Wayne, an insurance froker, said the car was not insured but that Tammy was insured by Lloyd's of London, the only firm that would insure her.

ONE OF the reasons Sanders chose dragster racing was because of its safety.

"She had a pretty big crash on her three-wheeler," Wayne said. "I told her if she was going to continud racing, she would have to get a full cage around her."

Sanders has been racing sand dragsters since her 13th birthday. Wayne built the car for Tammy, but he told her that he'd race it until she felt she was ready.

"On the way to a race in Yuma, Ariz.," she said, 'Dad, I think I'm ready to take it,'" Wayne said.

It didn't take long for Sanders to get hooked.

"I told my dad after that first pass, I wanted to race," Sanders said.

Although a driver can't get a license until 16, Sanders had no trouble racing.

"All it would have taken is one protest," Wayne said.

"In sand drag racing, there's a lot of rapport," he said. "If you break down, your stiffest competitor will be the first one over to see if he can help you out."

There might be rapport, but nobody wants to get beaten — especially by a 13-year-old.

After one of her first races, a driver she beat came over to her crew and said he heard Sanders wasn't 16. One of her crew told him, 'Well, would you rather have it known you were beaten by a 13-year-old girl?'"

"SOME OF the guys said they didn't want to race against me," Sanders said. "But after I beat a few guys, they wanted to beat me."

An hour before her races, Sanders gets into her dragster and mentally prepares for the event.

"I sit in my car, and I think of how I have to go down the track," Sanders said.

"I get butterflies. It's there, but when you pull up — it's not there — it vanishes," she added.

Unfortunately the butterflies don't evaporate so easily for Tammy's mother, Linda, who spends most of her daughter's race "jumping up and down," according to the family.

Women tackle martial arts

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Joyce Gordon awoke feeling stiff and sore. It was her third day at camp and for the 38-year-old social-services counselor from Boulder, Colo., the physical activity was taking its toll.

A student of tae kwon do, a Korean style of karate, she said: "My back and my arms hurt and it was hard getting up in the morning. But once I'm moving, I don't think about it."

Aching muscles were a common enough concern among those who attended a four-day martial-arts training camp for women on the campus of Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, N.Y., June 13 through 16.

Since its inception in the early 70s, the camp has grown from a small gathering of martial-arts enthusiasts to a nationally recognized event that this year drew 410 women from 28 states and several foreign countries, among them West Germany, Canada and Haiti. The largest of its kind, the camp was endorsed by the National Women's Martial Arts Federation, a group that seeks to promote martial-arts training for women.

Each participant at Special Training '85, as it was called, was expected to sign up for up to six hours of workouts a day. The women could choose from among 45 exercises that were offered in a range of martial arts styles that included tae kwon do, kung fu, judo, karate, aikido and arnis, a Filipino stick-fighting routine.

Most of the women wore a white or black "gi," a loose-fitting martial-arts garment that consists of pants and a wraparound top tied at the waist with a belt. The belt indicates a practitioner's level of skill: white for beginners, black for the most skilled.

Organizers said that more than 100 women at the camp had earned black belts, which usually require five years or more of training. To be accepted at the camp, held annually at different sites (applicants can write to the federation care of Bobbi Snyder, 1724 Sillview Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15243), each woman had to have a minimum of 60 hours of training, the equivalent of three to six months of martial-arts lessons. The cost for the camp was $170 for room, board and classes.

"We've got an incredible mix here, everyone from homemakers to college professors to journeyman electricians," said Cassandra George, 35, the camp director and the holder of a third-degree black belt in shorin-ryu karate, an Okinawan routine.

She said that while many women initially become interested in martial arts for self-defense, they make long-term commitments for other ones. "It makes them feel stronger, they have more stamina and they feel better about themselves," she said.

Adventure trips not just for men

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

On many tours, adventure travel requires the physical abilities of the "macho male," says tour organizer Sharon Saari, so she decided to put together a package of adventure trips aimed at the "fitness level of a desk-bound woman."

That means: "No backpacks and no freeze-dried food. We're soft, those of us who sit in offices," says Saari, a Washington environmental consultant who operates her travel firm out of her Middleburg, Va., home.

Saari is convinced there is a potentially large market of professional women who are looking for the fun and excitement of an adventure trip that is not overly strenuous, and who also would prefer to avoid "the pressure of singles cruises" and other singles-oriented tours.

She named her firm — formed this year — "Dare You!" because the emphasis is on off-beat travel. "We dare you to do something different."

So far, Saari has sent off one group to ride horses for a week in Ireland, and she has planned a 17-day safari in Kenya for July and a one-week horseback riding and white-water rafting trip in Utah for August.

DEAR ABBY

Graduation invitation greedy gift grab

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Will you please, please discourage high school and college graduates from sending graduation invitations to every distant relative they and their parents ever heard of? We all know that sending "invitations" to people we hardly know is a flagrant, shameless bid for a gift. And if, in a moment of weakness, one does send a gift, a barrage of birth announcements and invitations to weddings, showers and more graduations is sure to follow.

I am a 75-year-old widow, living on Social Security and very little else. I just received a high school graduation invitation from the granddaughter of a third cousin whom I have not seen in so long I wouldn't even recognize her. (I have never even MET her granddaughter.)

I have many relatives in this town, but I never hear from them unless they are celebrating something that requires a gift. I have no car, yet they "invite" me to every imaginable event, knowing full well I can't possibly attend. This is just shameless begging.

I am not cheap. I just sent a generous graduation gift to a neighbor girl who used to stop by every day to bring in my mail and newspaper, and ask if I needed any errands run.

Don't suggest that I send "a nice card" to the relatives who send me invitations to events they know I can't attend. We both know a card is not what these spongers want. — SICK OF THEM IN IOWA CITY

DEAR SICK: Judging from my June mail, you speak for many. Don't blame the graduates. In most cases, their parents send those "invitations."

DEAR ABBY: My aunt is coming to visit my parents for a week. Seven years ago, my husband and I visited this aunt for two days, and while we were there she provided us with lovely home-cooked meals. After we got home, we sent her a nice gift and wrote to thank her for her hospitality.

This aunt will stay with my parents, but we want to entertain her. My husband and I both work, and there would be a lot of pressure on me if I had to get the house all fixed up and prepare a company dinner for her (I'm not the greatest cook), so we thought we'd take her sightseeing one afternoon and then to a good restaurant for dinner.

My mother is totally disapproving of this. She says I have to entertain in my home with a home-cooked meal.

Do I have to? — TIT FOR TAT (?)

DEAR T. FOR T.: No. Carry out your plan. You do not need your mother's approval to entertain the way you find more comfortable.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were fishing from a boat with some friends. My husband can't swim, but refused to wear a life jacket. You guessed it. He was clowning around, the boat tipped over, and he went under.

I was able to get to him and pull him into the boat, or he would have drowned for sure.

Luckily all he lost were his glasses, a wallet with $400 and a few fishing rods. You had better believe he will never get into a boat without a life jacket again.

I hope to see this in print. It may save a life. — LUCKY

DEAR LUCKY: Let's hope so. Thanks for a timely warning.

Two candidates in Congress' First District to meet in debate

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — Top "names" in both parties have come into the district in their behalfs, but Republican Edd Hargett and Democrat Jim Chapman appear together tonight in a debate for the first time in their battle to represent a 20-county Northeast Texas district in Congress.

At stake in an Aug. 3 runoff election is the First Congressional District seat that former Rep. Sam Hall, a Democrat, gave up to accept a federal judgeship.

The 30-minute debate will be broadcast live over television station KLTV in Tyler at 6:30 p.m. and re-broadcast at 10:35 p.m. The debate itself will take place at Van Cliburn Auditorium on the campus of Kilgore College.

Last week, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. Mark White came into the district at separate events to encourage support for Chapman, a former district attorney, while criticizing Republican policies.

Treasury Secretary James Baker was scheduled to be in Marshall today to campaign for Hargett, a former Texas A&M quarterback who was coaxed into the race by Sen. Phil Gramm, who moved into the GOP only last year.

It was Gramm, a former ally of Hall's in the conservative Democratic coalition known as the Boll Weevils, who appointed Hall for the judgeship and who now would like to see him replaced in Washington by a Republican.

Later this week, U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a possible 1988 GOP presidential candidate, will be in the district on Hargett's behalf.

While Chapman may have gotten a boost from the appearance by White and Bentsen, at least one longtime Democrat in the district has come out publicly for Hargett.

Hamp Atkinson, former state representative from Texarkana, said last week he is spearheading a group called "Conservative Democrats for Edd Hargett." Atkinson said he decided to support Hargett because of "his conservative conviction and his leadersh ability."

Tonight's debate represents the culmination of weeks of effort to get Chapman and Hargett into a debate format.

While neither the Tyler station originating the debate or the location in Kilgore are in the First Congressional district, supporters from both camps said the telecast still will be available to voters in a wide part of the district.

The Upshur County seat of Gilmer, which is in the district, was originally picked as the location for the debate, but KLTV officials said they had trouble getting a quality broadcast signal from there.

Several times during the race for the June 29 special election, Chapman challenged Hargett, an engineer by profession, to a debate on the issues.

Hargett declined Chapman's invitation, and other Democrats in the race indicated at the time that they felt Chapman was using the debate challenge in an attempt to single himself out as a front-runner in the eight-way race.

At least one of Chapman's fellow Democrats in the race at that time called Chapman's call for a debate between himself and Hargett, while ignoring the six other Democrats vying for the seat, "arrogant."

But after the June 29 special election, in which Hargett captured 42 percent of the vote while Chapman got 30 percent, debate challenges from both camps became public within a day of each other.

However, an agreement on the terms of the debate took some negotiation between backers of both sides at a meeting about two weeks ago in Mount Pleasant.

Neither candidate will be allowed to directly address his challenger during the debate.

Investigation targets 'escort services'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Beth Taylor, an assistant district attorney for Bexar County, said she was stunned at the grand jury testimony of more than a dozen attractive women who said they were paid up to $175 an hour by men who contacted them through "escort services."

"It's absolutely phenomenal that people in this town are willing to pay that much money for sex," Ms. Taylor said.

Ms. Taylor has worked since March with police officers, Texas Department of Public Safety officials and the Bexar County sheriff's investigators in one of the most extensive local prostitution sting operations ever conducted.

The investigation resulted in indictments against 14 people and brought to light a number of so-called "escort services" that provided prostitutes, authorities said.

Some of the services used luxury automobiles to deliver women to waiting clients, many of whom were well-paid businessmen, investigators said.

Unlike previous, random police raids when only prostitutes were arrested, authorities targeted the owners of escort services who ran thinly veiled ads in local newspapers.

A grand jury issued 22 indictments last week against 14 people following the investigation, which was aided by a former escort service employee.

The informant provided authorities with "accounting records" of one such service, including a pictorial roster of its employees, authorities said.

"No prostitutes or johns (customers) were indicted because we were concentrating on the people in management positions," Ms. Taylor said. "We went after the big people, the people making big money."

Assistant District Attorney Ron Mendoza described the prostitutes as "attractive women, dressed in expensive clothes who look like many other successful women who are able to blend in with any type of crowd."

Mendoza said about half of the women, who ranged in age from 16 to 30, reported they had some college education and had entered the business to pay burdening debts with the high salaries, some of which amounted to as much as $5,000 per month.

"Some girls made as much as $700 in one night," Mendoza said.

About 15 of the women appeared before the grand jury during the past four months and were granted immunity from prosecution on misdemeanor prostitution charges in exchange for testimony against their bosses.

Mendoza said some of the most successful escort services required the women to carry telephone beepers at all times so that they could respond to requests day or night.

According to the records confiscated by authorities, customers regularly were business and professional people who made a habit of requesting escort services.

Police Vice Lt. Odis Doyal said the factor in controlling prostitution is the realization that it cannot be eliminated.

"It (prostitution) has been here a long time, but so have crimes like burglary," he said. "We can't let it get out of hand, though, and get to situations where prostitutes are flagging down cars and rolling tourists on the streets."

Brian Zimmerman, 12-year-old mayor of Crabb, sits among the signs which urge residents to vote for incorporation of the tiny Fort Bend County town.

Abortion clinic leader: 'I can't be intimidated'

AP Laserphoto

Charlotte Taft, the director of a Dallas abortion clinic and a leader among pro-choice forces, describes herself as a "lightning rod" because she's not willing to be scared.

DALLAS (AP) — Charlotte Taft, the director of a Dallas abortion clinic and a leader among pro-choice forces, describes herself as a "lightning rod" because she's not willing to be scared.

"I can't be intimidated," she says. "And I know the issues. I even know what the Bible says."

Ms. Taft, the founder of the Dallas CHOICE organization, is a budding national spokeswoman for abortion rights and does not shrink from the spotlight, often holding news conferences and facing the leaders of the opposition.

One of her opponents, Dallas Right to Life President Bill Price, calls her "the undisputed leader of the pro-choice forces" in the Dallas region.

Ms. Taft, who persuaded the Dallas City Council last week to restrict the use of protesters' bullhorns near abortion clinics, has been consumed by abortion and women's rights issues since her days as a peace monitor in student demonstrations at Brown University.

Sixteen years ago, her mother let her in on a family secret.

At 4 a.m. one night in 1960, her mother, Sylvia Weaver, a woman raising six children while married to an unemployed real estate agent and boat salesman in Stamford, Conn., self-aborted with a knitting needle because she didn't believe the family could care for another child.

Last year, her mother detailed her experiences in a letter collected as part of a national "Abortion Rights: Silent No More" campaign sponsored by the National Abortion Rights Action League, of which Ms. Taft is a member.

"My mother's decision to share that grief was a terribly important thing for me," Ms. Taft told the Dallas Times Herald.

Ms. Taft said she decided to make her stand in Texas in 1975 after a one-week visit with friends. Three years after helping start a chapter of the National Organization for Women in Dallas, she helped found the Routh Street Women's Clinic and became its executive director in 1978.

> "I can't be intimidated. And I know the issues. I even know what the Bible says."
>
> — Charlotte Taft, abortion clinic director

Last year, she helped write the Democratic Party platform plank on abortion.

"She's their showcase," Price said. "She's slick. She presents herself well. She's not only the abortion operator in Dallas, but they've selected her as their spokesman because she presents herself so well."

But Price claims Ms. Taft is publicly "overdramatic" and gives "false and misleading information" on abortion and her motivating intent. Price also is critical of the abortion clinic, saying it is a "for-profit organization."

Ms. Taft said she receives $29,000 a year for operating the clinic, which is owned by two staff physicians and a Dallas lawyer.

"There's nothing else I receive," she said.

When Ms. Taft helped found the Routh Street center seven years ago, she said she was prepared to be an activist, yet much more eager to be a counselor. She said she has counseled hundreds of young women to ensure their decisions are their own.

Ms. Taft also said she's turned away clients who opposed abortion but still requested the procedure.

"We won't help a woman commit murder if she believes it's murder," she said.

Boy mayor works for incorporation

CRABB (AP) — Brian Zimmerman was only 10 years old when he ran for mayor of this small Fort Bend County community in 1983.

He promised to work to get the town incorporated, keeping Houston or other nearby towns from taking Crabb in by annexation, and voters took him at his word.

They elected him over two adult mayoral candidates in an unofficial election at his aunt's grocery store.

Now he's 12 and on the verge of fulfilling his campaign promise. An Aug. 10 election has been scheduled on the question of incorporation. Unfortunately for Brian, if the election passes, he'll lose his job. The Texas election code requires the mayor and aldermen of a village to be at least 18.

"I'll keep my word to the people even if it costs me my job for doing it," Brian said. "I'll be 13 years old on Aug. 20, so I'll have to wait five more years before I can be anything ever again," he said.

Brian has proposed the incorporation of a 2-square-mile area with a population of about 3,500. He is uncertain how many are eligible to vote.

The area includes a residential subdivision, a grocery store, a broom factory, a grain dryer facility and a shopping center, he said. Crabb is two miles southeast of Richmond on Farm Road 2749.

Brian said he has discussed the idea with a lot of people and they seem to like it.

"I've talked to quite a few people and I'm going to talk to a lot more," he said.

Dallas man dies when's he hit by lightning bolt

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say a Dallas man was killed by lightning during a rainstorm and four other people were shocked by a downed power line while riding horseback on a ranch near Lake Ray Hubbard east of the city.

Doyle H. Shiverdecker, 64, was killed by a lightning bolt at 4:20 p.m. Sunday while he carried groceries from his pickup truck to his home in northwest Dallas.

Relatives said Shiverdecker, a pawnshop sorker, was hit when lightning raced through a 40-foot tree he was walking by and struck him above the waist.

"All of a sudden, I heard a crack of lightning, and I turned around and he was lying dead," said Thomas Burritt, the husband of Shiverdecker's niece.

Officials said seven buildings in a four-block industrial district along and near Irving Boulevard had roof damage. Several trucks were toppled, but no injuries were reported from those incidents.

Winds sheared off most of the roof of Red Ball Center, throwing debris into the street.

The National Weather Service said several reports of tornadoes came in after the storm hit, but officials were unable to confirm any of them.

The weather service said damage on Irving Boulevard, about five miles northwest of downtown Dallas, was caused by straight winds. The storm moved into the Dallas area from Wise and Denton counties to the northwest. Another heavy storm was in Navarro County about the same time.

Woman released after killing son

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman who allegedly shot her 21-year-old son fatally after he threatened her with a BB gun was released without being charged, authorities said.

The shooting occurred as the 38-year-old woman and her son were arguing at about 11:30 a.m. Sunday in their northeast Houston home, police said.

Police Sgt. Ronnie Doyle said the man pointed the BB gun "in a threatening manner" at his mother, but apparently never fired the weapon. The mother then allegedly shot her son once in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun.

Berkshire Hills residents fighting towering problem

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

HAWLEY, Mass. — Between them, the towns of Hawley and Ashfield have fewer than 2,000 people. But together, those people sounded a hue and cry that brought the mighty U.S. Air Force to bay.

Their beloved Berkshire Hills, the locals said, would be scarred by the towering antennas of a proposed communications center, and now the Air Force is reconsidering.

Townspeople saw the Air Force plan as an unnecessary intrusion into their paradise of wetland and wildlife, songbirds and salamanders, which lured many of them here from large metropolises.

The proposal so disturbed some that they dreamed about it.

"I thought I was the only one who woke up in the middle of the night who had nightmares," said Micheline Dufau. "I talked to people and we are all going through the same trauma: 3 a.m! the towers! There are very few people who have not woken up in the middle of the night and haven't thought, 'Oh, my God, there are those towers looming over us.'"

THE AIR FORCE has chosen a 600-acre site in the Berkshires for a new outpost in the National Communications System, a military-civilian network spread across the country.

The proposed Northeast Regional Communications Facility would have 31 V-shaped and triangular antennas supported by towers as high as 300 feet. It was not designed to be inconspicuous: the Air Force says the Hawley-Ashfield site was the best of 13 considered in the Northeast because of its 1,800-foot elevation.

Riled residents say the project would destroy farms, slash property values, harm regional tourism and ruin a pastoral landscape of rural roads, stone walls and giant sugar maples that in places seems like a time warp into the 19th century.

Opponents also fear their health would be affected by microwaves from the towers. The Air Force says the microwave emissions would be below accepted standards and would pose no more serious a threat than the microwaves commonly used by telephone companies.

When the project was announced in mid-May, residents formed committees to research the potential impact of the towers and raise money to fight them. They enlisted the support of neighboring towns and state and federal politicians. They hired attorneys.

"It certainly is a David and Goliath issue," said Sheryl Margolis, a 32-year-old psychiatric social worker whose home looks out into thick woods. "We are two very small towns that the Air Force has chosen to impose this facility on.

"I don't think you get any bigger than trying to fight the military and you don't get any smaller than Hawley, Mass. We feel pretty powerless up against the big ones. The planning board budget in Hawley is $100. That's not a very large budget to fight the Air Force."

SOME RESIDENTS, like Ms. Dufau and Ed Kohn, are city transplants. Others, like Steve Lilly, are farmers with family trees stretching back four generations.

Ms. Dufau, 59, first came to the Berkshires with friends on Thanksgiving Day 1946. She was newly arrived from France, a graduate student at New York University.

"We arrived in the middle of the night. I didn't even know where Massachusetts was. In the morning, I looked out the window and saw this," she said, gesturing out over the wooded hills, "and it was love at first sight."

She said the lure of the Berkshires helped keep her in the United States.

"I had no idea there could be such beauty, and so I worked with the dream of coming back to live here," she said.

For 20 years she visited the hills while studying and teaching at NYU, hoping for an opening at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. When UMass expanded 20 years ago, she was hired and moved to Ashfield. Her home is less than a mile from the proposed antenna site.

For the last 10 years, Ms. Dufau has been head of the French Department. Now, on sabbatical to rewrite a textbook, she leads Ashfield's meetings against the antennas.

"I go back in September," she said. "Then I'll have to explain why my book isn't finished."

Ed Kohn, 55, and his wife, Ann, moved 18 months ago to Plainfield, five miles from the proposed site, from Minneapolis, where he was director of the Minnesota Zoological Garden for three years. Before that, he was with the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., for 20 years.

"I'm opening up a new life," he said. "The relationship of people to the land matters dearly to us.... You set foot on these hills and you fall in love with them. It doesn't matter how long your foot is planted here, whether it's been generations or whether it's been years. We're fighting to preserve what we believe and know is beautiful and unique. We are the custodians of this earth."

KOHN NOTED THAT the land was used by farmers, hunters, hikers and wildlife students.

"It's an extraordinary rich site," he said, that includes 176 acres of potato and rye fields, 40 acres of wild meadow and a wetland that feeds the trout-rich Deerfield and Westfield rivers.

The wildlife includes the carnivorous Northern Spring salamander, black bear, deer, porcupine, mink, bobcat, wild turkey, hawks, owls and 83 types of songbirds. Flowers and plants include the dwarf mistletoe, the white mandarin lily, and the lady's slipper orchid. All are on the Massachusetts endangered species list.

Bob Waryjasz has less interest in wildlife than in his way of life. He manages 176 acres of potato and rye fields on the proposed site for his father-in-law.

"This is my livelihood," he said. "I've got a young family coming up and I would like to have them farm it, too. There is a lot of blood, sweat and hard labor to clear this land to have them come in and just take it for towers."

The outcry against the $22.7 million tower proposal has drawn the attention of most of the state's big political guns, including Democratic Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry, Gov. Michael Dukakis and U.S. Rep. Silvio O. Conte, a Republican, whose district includes the proposed site.

Conte, the ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, told constituents earlier this month that he had enough votes to kill the proposal in committee.

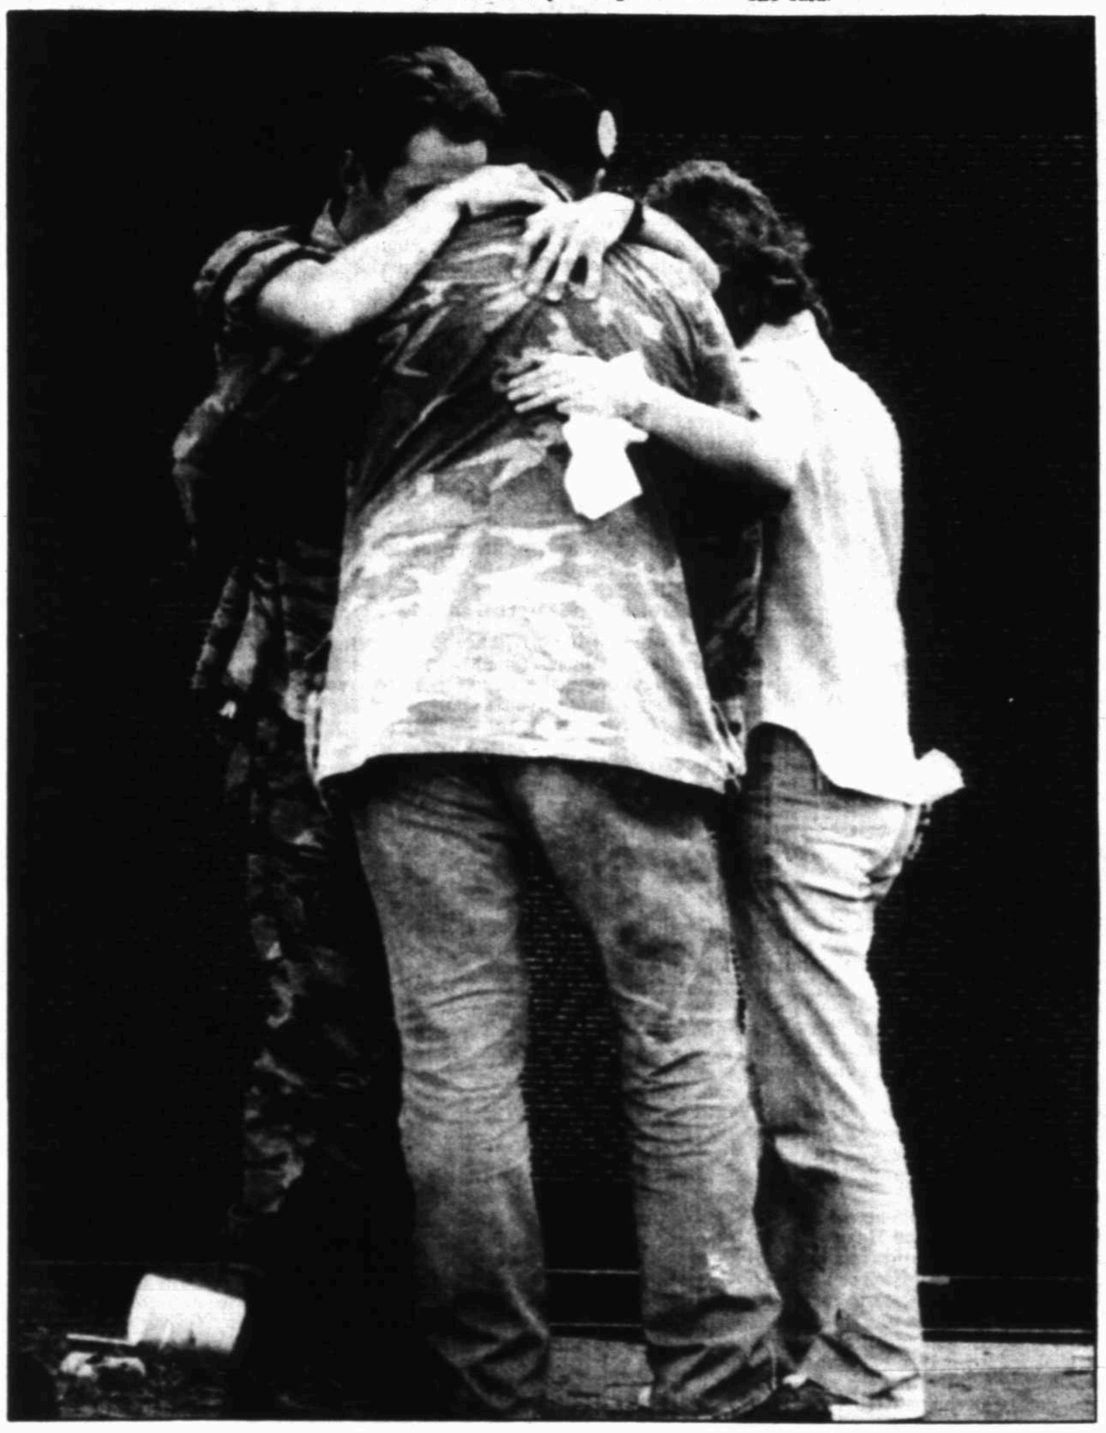

THE AIR FORCE told Kerry June 9 that it would reconsider the plan. On June 12, in a letter to Conte, the Air Force said it would proceed with the required environmental study while broadening its search for alternative sites.

Steve Lilly, 31, whose great-grandfather began dairy farming before the Civil War on land a quarter mile from the proposed site, has hunted and fished here for 25 years.

"I really enjoy getting up in the morning and being able to see the wildlife out my back window or crossing the roads," he said. "The thought of having them take 600 acres right out of the middle of that and putting a big 6- or 8-feet-high fence around it to control what comes in and out really appalls me."

Lilly's wife, Sandy, said that in view of Air Force statements to Kerry and Conte, some people believe their battle is won.

Just the same, opponents are being cautious.

Pentagon polygraphs may be result of recent spy scandals

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent spy cases have pushed a proposal halfway through Congress that could force the Pentagon to hire a battalion of polygraph operators and could cast doubt on the loyalty of thousands of innocent Americans.

Word of the Walker family spy case in which four men are charged with selling Navy secrets to the Soviets echoed around the House floor on June 26 when House members adopted, 333-71, a potentially sweeping polygraph program for the Defense Department.

But the Senate voted to authorize only an additional year for the Pentagon to complete 3,500 polygraph exams in a security screening test program. Later this month, House-Senate conferees will choose one version or a compromise.

On the House floor, opponents attributed the successful proposal by Rep. C.W. Bill Young, R-Fla., to "hysteria" spawned by the Walker case, but strong feelings are typically engendered by the polygraph.

Some polygraph operators call it a science; opponents call it a modern version of the Salem witch trials. Federal courts will not accept its results as evidence, and many professionals, including Attorney General Edwin Meese III and FBI Director William H. Webster, urge caution in the use of it and the claims made for it.

Its utility for identifying spies among large groups of people not already under suspicion remains very much open to debate.

No one can say exactly how many people the Young proposal would strap to a polygraph, and his legislation has no timetable for tests nor any money to pay for more operators or machines. But it goes well beyond a Reagan administration order that Congress, in a different mood, blocked last year.

That order contemplated 16,000 additional tests a year at the Pentagon with a start-up cost of $3.9 million plus $2 million a year. Congress insisted on the 3,500-exam test program first.

Young's bill requires random polygraphing for every civilian or military Pentagon employee and defense contractor with clearance to see "special access" information. There is no exact count of "special access" clearances but at the Pentagon alone they number more than 100,000.

Young also would allow random tests on any of the 4.3 million Pentagon and contractor employees with any security clearance.

But the Pentagon has only 152 polygraph operators. In 1983, they were able to give 18,000 tests. To complete 100,000 extra tests would require nearly six years if the operators dropped all other polygraph work. To do 100,000 more in one year would require hiring more than 800 polygraph operators — about the size of an Army battalion.

But the Army polygraph school at Fort McClellan, Ala., can only graduate 50 polygraph operators a year.

Meanwhile, the test results would be open to challenge. Last year, Norman Ainslie, head of National Security Agency polygraphing, told Congress that laboratory tests, on average, found the machine correct 93.6 percent of the time. But that means 6,400 out of every 100,000 people tested would be falsely suspected.

And David Raskin, a polygraph operator and University of Utah psychology professor, told Congress the machine's errors rise sharply when most of those tested are innocent, as would be the case at the Pentagon.

Raskin said up to 2,000 people might be falsely identified as deceptive in as few as 10,000 polygraph tests, necessitating expensive field investigations to resolve doubts. In 100,000 tests, suspicion could falsely be cast on as many as 20,000 people.

At the National Security Agency, 71 out of 1,770 employees tested in 1983 gave "suspicious" answers. After second and third polygraph tests and 30 additional investigations and evaluations, all were cleared of spying.

Two weeks ago, Meese avoided taking a stand on the Young proposal.

"Polygraphs can be useful in criminal investigations and in personnel screening, but you have to be careful not to overevaluate it," Meese said. "It's not a panacea and it's not a lie detector, as some people call it."

The machine measures how fast a person's heart is beating, how much the person is sweating and other physiological changes. The theory is that these signs change involuntarily when one is lying and that a trained operator can determine which changes stem from the stress of lying.

The Soviets, however, maintain a school to train communist agents how to beat the box.

On the House floor, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, pointed out that Karl Koecher, a CIA employee charged last year with spying for Czechoslovakia, passed CIA polygraphs when he worked there and an FBI polygraph during the investigation of him.

Contrary to a published report that a polygraph snared CIA clerk Susan Scranage, charged this month with spying for Ghana, government sources say suspicion of her developed from something she said or did during a standard debriefing before she was put on the machine.

Late last month, the Pentagon said that during the past three years the machine was the major factor in uncovering 22 security risks, including 15 persons who spied, knew spies or were recruited to spy. But in some cases, those individuals were suspected before the machine was used.

After nearly two years of study, Webster is still reviewing whether the FBI should adopt the CIA and National Security Agency practice of random tests for intelligence agents not otherwise under suspicion.

Veteran ready to build new image

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

A Vietnam veteran, tired of the negative image that still dogs his fellow veterans, is starting a news service that will stress their continuing contributions to the nation.

"We're not going to counteract it (the negative image) so much as present veterans in a more positive light," said retired Lt. Col. Chuck Allen of Fayetteville, N.C. "The human aspect doesn't always get picked up. It isn't all delayed stress syndrome."

Allen already publishes the National Vietnam Veterans Review, a monthly newspaper with a similar mission and about 4,000 subscribers around the nation. Its stories are by and about Vietnam veterans, who Allen believes have been wrongly portrayed elsewhere as unstable and violence-prone.

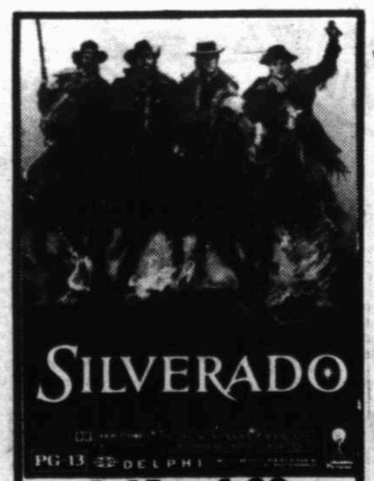

The Veterans Press Syndicate will encompass veterans from other wars as well, he said.

"Not all the issues going on involve only the Vietnam veteran," said Allen, who spent 24 years in the Army — including six in Vietnam. "Our Washington bureau will have three people, and they'll be going up the (Capitol) Hill, checking on veterans bills and the VA (Veterans Administration).

Dollar strenghens

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was generally higher in early European trading today as dealers reassessed the devaluation of the Italian lira. Gold bullion prices were slightly lower.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained more than two Japanese yen to close at 240.55 yen compared with 238.43 yen late Friday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates compared with late Friday's:

—2.9035 West German marks, up from 2.8805.

—2.36925 Swiss francs, down from 2.3700.

—8.7650 French francs, up from 8.7450.

—3.2820 Dutch guilders, up from 3.2450.

—1.34825 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3475.

Gold bullion prices drifted lower in very quiet trading.

"It's very dull, with people waiting for possible further developments at the OPEC oil price talks," said one London dealer. "Anything can happen in this market."

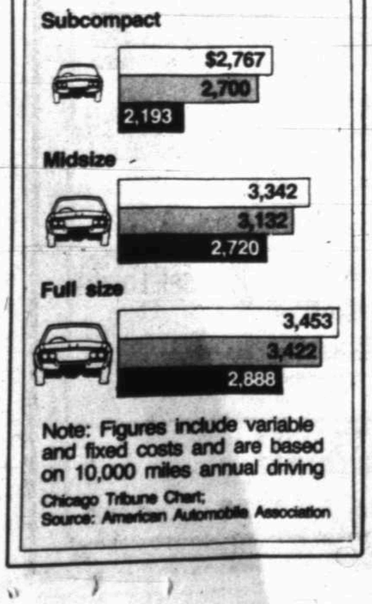

In London, gold opened at a bid price of $316.90 an ounce and the city's five major bullion dealers later fixed a recommended trading price of 317.40 dollars, slightly below Friday's closing bid of $317.50.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid $317.20, down from late Friday's closing bid of $319.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold dropped the equivalent of 71 cents to close at a bid of $317.58 compared to Saturday's $318.29.

Silver prices also fell on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid $6.11 an ounce compared with $6.17 late Friday.

Coast Guard trys to upright submerged rig

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — Currents in Bayou Chene were hampering efforts to haul upright a partly submerged drilling rig that flipped over two months ago, killing 11 crew members, said a Coast Guard spokesman.

"The lifting efforts (Sunday) were not successful," said the spokesman, Bob Acker.

Efforts were to resume Monday with workers planning to reposition the barges that are doing the lifting, Acker said Sunday.

On Friday, workers managed to raise the Tonkawa, which had been bottom-side up and stuck in the mud, so that the drilling rig was resting on its side, anchored by two cranes and a five-winch barge.

Three tugboats were guiding the multi-tiered, floating rig through Bayou Chene for Temple Drilling Co. of Houston when the rig toppled May 20.

The Tonkawa, which had a crew of 22 men, was built to drill in coastal bayous. The bottom is a barge that can be filled with water to hold the rig in place. With the water emptied, the rig could be floated from one drilling site to another.

Once the Tonkawa is upright, it can be pumped dry, floated, inspected and moved for salvage, Acker said.

Several lawsuits alleging negligence have been filed against Temple and Indian Marine Co., the tugboat company that was moving the rig.

Steelworkers man the picketline outside Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.'s Monessen, Pa. plant on Sunday. Some 8,200 members of the United Steelworkers Union walked out of the plants on Saturday and say they don't care what becomes of the company.

Strikers say they don't fear loss of Wheeling-Pittsburgh

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Grim-faced strikers are walking picket lines at steel plants all along the Ohio River, where once the skies were black from hard-working blast furnaces and local businesses grew rich on money from steelworkers.

But things have not been so prosperous in recent years, and when about 8,200 steelworkers struck nine Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. just after midnight Sunday company officials said it may mean the end for the nation's seventh-largest steel producer.

"I'd rather go bankrupt out here on the picket line than in there working," picket Albert Phillips said Sunday outside the Steubenville, Ohio, plant.

Workers at other plants said they could not make house and car payments or cover other household expenses if the company succeeded in attempts to cut labor costs over the next five years from the current $21.40 per hour per worker to $15.20.

Workers were off the job at Wheeling-Pittsburgh's plants in the Ohio and Monongahela river valleys of western Pennsylvania, northern West Virginia and southeastern Ohio.

In last-ditch talks Saturday, company vice president Joseph Scalise Jr. warned repeatedly that a strike could force Wheeling-Pittsburgh to liquidate its assets.

The company, with annual sales of about $1 billion, has been in reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws since April 16.

No talks were scheduled Sunday, but mediators said they might call the two sides together if neither requests a meeting.

The walkout was steel industry's first major strike since a 116-day nationwide stoppage in 1959. It halted production, and shipments and sales will stop whenever stockpiles of finished material are exhausted, which union members say might not happen for a month.

The leading issue is the size of wage and benefit concessions the union should grant to help the company overcome longstanding operating deficits and emerge from Chapter 11 as a profitable company.

Outside the company's plant at Beech Bottom north of here, pickets took shelter in their parked cars to avoid the rain that streaked the writing on their strike signs.

"I don't know that the strike will make Wheeling-Pitt go under," said Nelson Wagner, vice president of USW Local 2256 at the plant.

Trouble looms again for sinking Mexican peso

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

MEXICO CITY — When Mexicans reminisce about the good old days, some look no further than a year ago, when it appeared the hardest of times were coming to an end.

The country had come back from the brink of bankruptcy, successfully renegotiating its foreign debt on favorable terms and winning gushing praise from world bankers for strict austerity measures.

For the average Mexican citizen, the government's belt-tightening meant increased prices without corresponding wage increases, high inflation and a peso worth less each day.

Still, there was a feeling that the worst was over, that Mexico finally was turning the corner after a period of economic agony that began with near-total collapse in 1982.

Now the nightmare has returned. And in the turbulent world of Mexico's economy, troubled times are looming again.

"This whole year is going to be harder for Mexico," said Jose Carral, director of the Bank of America in Mexico. "It will be a difficult year."

REELING FROM A world oil glut, a staggering $95 billion foreign debt and a weak peso, Mexico again finds itself in the midst of a severe economic crisis. It is a crisis that promises more austerity for the country's largely poor population and threatens to unravel the carefully arranged international loan package that last year was hailed as a model for Third World debtor nations.

Although economists said the signs of trouble — notably sagging oil sales and an overvalued peso — were apparent as early as April, the government of President Miguel de la Madrid held off taking action until after the July 7 national elections.

But as soon as it was clear that Mexico's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party had swept the elections, the government acted quickly and decisively.

In the last 10 days, the government has moved to bolster the economy with several dramatic actions.

First, the country broke with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to lower the price of its two grades of crude, Maya heavy and Isthmus light. The move certainly will boost sales but at a lower price that will decrease overall oil revenues and make it more difficult for Mexico to maintain a world trade surplus.

Oil is Mexico's major source of foreign revenue, accounting for more than $16 billion last year, with nearly half its exports going to the United States.

ALTHOUGH MEXICO does not belong to OPEC, it generally has followed the cartel's pricing guidelines. Mexico's decision to cut the price of oil — the country is the world's fourth largest producer — was its most significant break with OPEC to date and threatened to trigger a global price war.

Next, the government eliminated the "free rate" of the Mexican peso in a de facto devaluation of almost 30 percent. Although this "free rate" affects only 20 percent of the currency market — the prices of imports and exports are still determined by an official "controlled rate" — the government hoped the move would ease speculation on the beleaguered peso, which has fluctuated wildly on world markets in the last month.

In addition, the government decreed that 90 percent of Mexico's bank deposits must go into legal reserves to shore up the dwindling dollar reserve account.

Government sources, cited in the respected economic daily El Financiero, said Mexico is not facing the prospect of insolvency as it did in 1982 but it is confronted with "some difficulties." Another major drop in the price of oil, they warned, would force the country to seek a renegotiation of its debt.

In a speech last week, de la Madrid indicated the government was preparing to take even stronger steps to control the economy, leading to speculation that a devaluation of the official "controlled rate" peso might be next.

MANUEL ALONSO, the president's press secretary, confirmed Friday that the government will announce a new set of strong economic measures. He would not elaborate.

The advantage of a cheaper peso, analysts say, would be that Mexico's non-oil products would become more competitive on the world market.

"We cannot adopt measures that are superficial, much less rash ones," the president said. "We don't want to take measures that could seem spectacular but that would not get to the bottom of the problems."

When the peso devaluation rate was eliminated 10 days ago, it closed at 246.77 pesos for those selling dollars and 248.27 for those buying dollars. At the end, the free rate had become obsolete because private exchange houses were buying dollars at a rate of 320-1.

China opening onshore areas for exploration

PEKING (AP) — China will open vast areas of the western interior to oil exploration by foreign firms, the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily reported Sunday.

It quoted General Manager Song Zhenming of the China Oil Development Corp. as saying 19 companies — not identified — from the United States, Britain, France, Italy, Japan, West Germany, the Netherlands and Romania have been invited to survey oil resources in Xinjiang, Shaanxi, Gansu, Ningxia and Sichuan provinces.

In March, the energy-hungry Chinese said they would allow foreign firms to explore for oil in 10 southern provinces.

China began allowing foreign firms to explore for offshore oil in 1980, but this has failed to produce the large quantities China expected.

China's crude oil output last year was 801.5 million barrels, far short of demand.

Aggressive expansion sends American profits soaring

DALLAS (AP) — Aggressive expansion that has included ordering scores of new jetliners, planning for two new hubs, renegotiating labor contracts and slashing excursion fares has put American Airlines on a roll.

The parent company of the nation's second-largest airline, AMR Corp., announced record-breaking net earnings last week for both the first six months of the year and the second quarter, and second-quarter profits were more than double the figures a year ago.

Industry observers say there's more to the airline's good fortune than the healthy business environment, lower fuel prices and a month-long strike at United Airlines that helped most carriers.

American Chairman Robert Crandall has been calling all the right plays, analysts say.

"There is no question that American Airlines is going to continue to be a leader in the industry," said airline analyst Robert Joedicke of Shearson-Lehman Brothers.

"I think they show they are a very well-managed company that understands long-range planning," Joedicke said.

In the first six months of 1985, company officials said, AMR earned more than it had in all of 1984 — $234.1 million, or $4.20 per common share.

For the second quarter, AMR reported net income of $173.9 million, or $2.98 a share, compared to $71.4 million, or $1.36 a share, for the similar period last year.

American officials credit a strong economy, discount fares and the United Airlines pilot strike for the rosy profit picture.

Analysts and competitors, such as Braniff Inc. Vice President Robert Fornaro, agree, and say Crandall's moves, such as an innovative two-tier wage structure that pays new employees less, have started to pay dividends.

"They are setting the pace. They are going to make the whole airline industry more efficient," Fornaro said. "Anybody who wants to survive will have to compete with American."

At United headquarters in Chicago, expansion also is the game plan. United, the nation's largest airline, is modernizing it fleet, acquiring a rental car company and taking over Pan American's Pacific routes.

"While American has been engaged in domestic expansion, our emphasis the first half of this year has been working on the Pan Am acquistion and the acquistion of Hertz," said United spokesman Joe Hopkins.

Hopkins also said United is taking delivery on 10 new aircraft this year and another 15 in the first part of 1986.

As for American, it placed the largest airliner order in U.S. history last year when it ordered 67 MD-80 jets from McDonnell Douglas Corp. and took an option on 100 more.

State of emergency implies failure of South African policy

An Analysis

By ALAN COWELL
New York Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A state of emergency came into force in the centers of South Africa's political turmoil Sunday, and with it came a sense that battle lines had hardened and any residual hope of dialogue had withered.

The proclamation, many South African academics and commentators said, implied an acknowledgment by President P.W. Botha that the country has failed to extend limited political changes beyond people of Indian and mixed racial descent to what he terms the moderate leaders of the 23 million blacks.

The message seemed to be that force, which has been used by South Africa beyond its borders to mold foreign policy, is now also accepted — welcomed by some whites — as the only vehicle of domestic control.

"It is an admission," said John Barratt of the South African Institute of International Affairs, "that the situation has got out of control."

For some black activists, that might seem a victory, since the unrest and defiance in black townships have provoked the authorities, from this perspective, into admitting a lack of ideas or willingness to meet the demands of black protest.

But the immediate odds are stacked against black defiance more heavily than before, while the months of protest have led to rivalries and retribution within some townships.

As Botha announced the state of emergency on Saturday, a young black woman in the township of Duduza, east of Johannesburg, was being burned to death by fellow blacks, kicked and beaten even as she sought to put out the flames. She was accused of collaborating with the authorities.

Such incidents, given coverage on South Africa's state-controlled television, make it easier for Botha to argue that his proclamation was designed to restore order rather than to subjugate those who will not accept his notions of limited political change — based, still, on the ideas of racial and ethnic separation that inspired apartheid's architects.

Yet editorial writers and commentators said Sunday that the state of emergency alone will not solve the country's problems, while its proclamation — involving a muzzling of the press and the bestowing of near-absolute power on individual members of the security forces — spreads damage beyond its evident black targets.

The authorities, according to The Sunday Times of Johannesburg, a pro-government newspaper, now have the power to impose "total censorship" in 36 magisterial districts in and around Johannesburg and in the restive Eastern Cape. The police, an editorial asserted, will be shielded from proper scrutiny, and rumor will replace news.

The twice-weekly City Press, which has a black readership, expressed its reaction differently. On the front page, under the headline "Comment," it left a blank space, then declared:

"Since the state of emergency severely restricts our right to comment on events in the areas affected by the state of emergency, you will never know what we had to say about it. This comment column is an indication of how press freedom has been restricted by the regulations."

That a crisis exists is not in dispute. According to political activists here, only 5 of 38 local black councils — established by Botha as a nascent form of black democracy — are still able to function. Last year 240 black officials, including 27 mayors, resigned amid accusations that they served a front for continued white domination. Black local government, some activists say, has virtually collapsed.

Explosion kills two near Paris

PARIS (AP) — A powerful explosion collapsed a building in the northern suburb of Le Bourget, killing two people and injuring nine, fire officials said.

Firemen from 10 stations rushed to the scene, quickly extinguishing a fire ignited by the 10:30 a.m. blast.

More than two hours later, they continued to search the ruins of the building, a two-story structure, for possible victims pinned by the debris.

Four men charged in conspiracy

KOROR, Palau (AP) — Four men, including the son of a state governor, were charged with conspiracy and murder today in the June 30 assassination of Haruo I. Remeliik, the first president of the Republic of Palau, officials said.

Philip Isaac, Palau's assistant attorney general, said the motive for the slaying was political.

"It was low-level discontent, I think, for the administration of President Remeliik," said Isaac, who would not comment further.

Isaac also refused to say what led authorities to suspect the four, and who was considered the gunman.

Remeliik won re-election to office last November by defeating Airai state Gov. Roman Tmetuchl and another candidate.

Isaac identified those charged as Tmetuchl's son, Melwert, who worked for his father; Leslie Tewid; Anghenio Sabino; and Francisco Gibbon. Each was charged with two counts of first-degree murder and one count of conspiracy to commit murder, Isaac said.

He said Tewid also is related to the governor, but he did not know the exact relationship.

The governor was not considered a suspect in the case, and no other suspects were being sought, Isaac said.

Bail for the younger Tmetuchl, Tewid and Sabino was set at $1 million each by Associate Justice Alan Lane, Isaac said. They were to be arraigned Friday.

The three were arrested over the weekend, while an arrest warrant was issued for Gibbon, the owner of a small grocery.

According to Saipan-based Trust Territory High Commissioner Janet McCoy, Gibbon traveled to Guam late last week to enter Guam Memorial Hospital.

Hospital Nursing Supervisor Juanita Magallanes said Gibbon, who was being treated for heart problems, had not been placed under arrest.

Guam police were unaware that an arrest warrant had been issued for Gibbon, according to police spokesman Ed Kabina. An FBI agent in Guam, who refused to give his name, said he had no knowledge of Gibbon.

The ages of the four suspects, their hometowns and the occupations of Tewid and Sabino were not immediately available.

Remeliik, who became Palau's first president in 1980, was shot to death in the driveway of his home.

Palau's national congress has set Aug. 28 as the date of a special election to select a new president.

Vice President Alfonso Oiterong, who was sworn in as president after the assassination, was the only announced candidate, she said.

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay like money market accounts! At the current rate—10.94%—you could double your money in less than seven years.

Just hold your Bonds five years or more and get the new higher variable rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more—but never less than 7½%. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

But some of the best things about Savings Bonds haven't changed. They're still as safe as ever. They're still exempt from state and local income taxes. And since Bonds cost as little as $25, they're as affordable as ever.

What's more, Savings Bonds remain a great way to keep our country strong.

You can purchase Bonds almost anywhere. At neighborhood banks, savings and loans and credit unions. Or easier still, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Today, more than 5.5 million Americans are saving the easy way—through Payroll Savings. Isn't it time you joined them? That's a sure way to appreciate how much Bonds have changed for the better.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Now paying 10.94%.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS
Paying Better Than Ever

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least 5 years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than 5 years earn lower interest.

ENVIRONMENTAL/ SAFETY MANAGER

GenCorp, formerly The General Tire & Rubber Company, is a broadly diversified international corporation. Here in Odessa we operate a major synthetic rubber plant, utilizing petrochemical processes.

You will draw upon your bachelor's degree and 5+ years of environmental/safety experience as you direct internal activities (monitoring systems, plant safety, training, reporting, etc.) while serving as primary contact with governmental agencies and corporate environmental/safety management. You must be thoroughly familiar with federal and state regulations, capable of implementing the programs and testing to assure compliance. You will represent the company on environmental/safety issues, and interpret the impact of new regulations.

This position offers a high level of activity and challenge, with opportunities for advancement. Salary commensurate with experience and competitive benefits accompany this position. Please send your resume and salary history in confidence to:
