Reagan demands Soviets share info

TOKYO (AP) — The Reagan administration Saturday demanded that the Kremlin share more information about the nuclear accident in the Ukraine and called for independent inspection of Soviet power plants to prevent another catastrophe.

President Reagan, opening his visit to Japan for the seven-nation economic summit that convenes on Sunday, made the nuclear mishap his first priority, saying it could hardly be called an internal Soviet affair because the radioactive fallout threatens the world community.

When Reagan called on Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, the summit host and chairman, the two leaders agreed it was essential to continue pressing the Soviets for more information about the disaster, U.S. and Japanese officials said.

The officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said Nakasone agreed to put the Soviet accident, as well as the subject of terrorism, on the agenda for discussion when the summit opens on Sunday.

In remarks to a U.S. Chamber of Commerce group here, Reagan did not mention the Soviet disaster, stressing instead the trade issues that will be before the summit when the leaders take up economic matters Monday morning.

While in Japan

Japanese officials, speaking privately, said Reagan and Nakasone made no headway in their talks on the yen-dollar upheaval that is battering Japan's export market.

The officials said Nakasone told Reagan that Japanese business has been hurt by the 40 percent appreciation of the yen against the dollar in the past six months and stressed the importance of stability in currency markets.

Reagan said he understood the difficulties created by the strong yen but also noted that currency fluctuations must also make an impact on "external balances," referring to Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, speaking to reporters in Tokyo, said the accident at the Chernobyl power plant "shows the importance of inspections and reviews of procedures."

"Just how this accident took place we don't know," Shultz said, adding that inspection might reveal what happened and what safeguards could be used to prevent another disaster.

Dismissing the Soviets' contention that only two people were killed and fewer than 200 injured in the explosion and fire, Shultz said he stands by his earlier assessment that casualties far exceed the official figures.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called for on-site inspection of Soviet nuclear power plants, complaining that information about the disaster is still sketchy.

Reagan, on his way to the meeting with Nakasone, told reporters, "We hope they're going to rectify that by

Jet explodes before takeoff

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — An explosion tore through an AirLanka L-1011 jetliner before its scheduled takeoff for an Indian Ocean vacation mecca Saturday, and state radio said 20 people aboard were killed and 41 injured.

The national news agency, Lankapuvath, said a time bomb caused the blast, but the government made no immediate comment on its cause. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The state radio said passengers were boarding the Lockheed Tristar at Colombo's international airport when the explosion occurred, sending plumes of black smoke skyward and shattering glass panels in the main terminal building.

It said 12 of the injured were in critical condition.

The United News of India quoted officials as saying 128 people already were aboard the plane and that at least 26 were killed by the blast. It said sources at the airport reported suspicions of sabotage by Tamil militants seeking a separate homeland in Sri Lanka.

The Lankapuvath news agency, quoting unidentified security sources, said a time bomb had been planted in the tail of the aircraft, which was taking mostly European holidaymakers to beachfront vacations in the Maldive Islands, an hour's flight from Colombo.

The plane, Flight UL101, had arrived earlier from London via Zurich and Dubai. The explosion occurred at 9:10 a.m., 20 minutes before its scheduled departure for Male in the Maldives. Witnesses said the aircraft was virtually broken in two by the blast.

None of the dead had been identified, either by the Sri Lanka government or AirLanka, a state-owned company.

The British High Commissioner in Sri Lanka, contacted by the British television station TV-AM from London, said one Briton had been injured in the blast. The identities of the other victims were not immediately known.

One of the injured, who identified himself as only as Redato of the French navy, told state radio he had not yet taken his seat when the blast occurred.

"I was lucky to escape alive," he said.

Senior government officials, including the defense secretary and senior military chiefs rushed to the airport, 18 miles north of Colombo. AirLanka Chairman Rakhitha Wikramanayake was also at the scene.

The airport was ordered closed to all incoming and outgoing flights.

Hijacking ends in Oregon

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — A hijacker who seized a commuter airplane carrying 11 other passengers and held them for a time after the plane landed at Hillsboro Airport surrendered early Saturday, authorities said.

The episode ended about 1:45 a.m. when the hijacker was taken into custody after slashing his wrists, authorities said. Earlier, the passengers and co-pilot were released and the pilot escaped.

Authorities identified the man as Douglas B. Thomas, 29, of Tulsa, Okla. He was taken to Tuality Community Hospital in Hillsboro, where he was in stable condition. A spokeswoman in the hospital's emergency room said Thomas' wrist injuries were not life-threatening.

"He just opened the door and walked down the ramp and was taken into custody," said Ted Gardner, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Portland. "He carried no weapons when he surrendered."

Gardner said Thomas was being held on federal hijacking charges.

A search of the twin-engine Horizon Air Metroliner turned up no weapons or explosives, authorities said. Earlier, they had said they believed he had a gun.

Four passengers were released first, shortly after midnight, followed by the other seven and the plane's co-pilot about a half-hour later as FBI agents negotiated with the hijacker, said spokeswoman Sherre

Soviet official admits

Chernobyl 'dangerously' radioactive

By The Associated Press

A top Soviet official said the area ringing the disaster-stricken Chernobyl nuclear power plant is now dangerously radioactive and has been sealed off, and implied that the atomic reactor fire had been triggered by human error.

Moscow Communist Party chief Boris Yeltsin, in the first detailed description by a Soviet leader of the situation at the Ukrainian plant, also said in a Friday night interview in Hamburg, West Germany, that water reservoirs near the facility were contaminated.

In the interview with West Germany's ARD national television network, Yeltsin, an alternate member of the Soviet Union's ruling Politburo, said damage-control workers were using helicopters to drop sacks of sand, lead and boron on the fire-swept reactor to block further radioactive emissions.

In Tokyo, President Reagan was told that the reactor at the power plant 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev still appeared to be smoldering, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz said casualities appeared worse than the Soviets were acknowledging.

Shultz, who accompanied Reagan traveled to Japan for a seven-nation economic summit, told reporters that the Kremlin's account of two dead and 197 wounded, 18 of them seriously, "looks very low from information we have from a variety of sources."

The disaster at the four-reactor facility one week ago sent a huge cloud of radiation over much of Europe, and many governments were nervously monitoring fallout and ordering precautions against possible contamination.

Although many European countries reported abnormally high radiation levels, none of the readings indicated any danger to life, said government officials.

Western experts said hazards from the disaster had abated Friday, but a southerly wind was blowing the radiation into a new area, the Balkans.

Yeltsin, in Hamburg to attend a West German Communist Party congress, said the disaster's cause "lies

Woman says she lied about FBI-KGB deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A convicted Soviet spy, a key witness in the espionage trial of former FBI agent Richard W. Miller, now says she lied when she said he once met at poolside with an agent of the Soviet KGB.

Svetlana Ogorodnikov, undergoing intense government cross-examination, insisted Friday that Miller, the only FBI agent ever charged with spying, did not meet with the KGB man who is an unindicted co-conspirator in Miller's espionage case.

"He did not meet anybody," she said of Miller, who sat across the courtroom scribbling notes on a yellow legal pad.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Hayman confronted Mrs. Ogorodnikov with statements she made last year while negotiating a plea bargain with the government. She acknowledged incriminating Miller but insisted, "I told that because I wanted to plead guilty."

Miller, 47, is accused of giving Mrs. Ogorodnikov classified documents in exchange for promises of $65,000 in gold and cash. A jury deadlock in November forced his current retrial.

Mexican soldiers destroy 75 acres of marijuana

VILLA AHUMADA, Mexico (AP) — A 75-acre marijuana farm tucked away among alfalfa, corn and cotton fields near this small rural city 70 miles south of El Paso has been destroyed by Mexican soldiers armed with machine guns.

Authorities said the raids were carried out Thursday and Friday by soldiers from the 26th Infantry Battalion in Juarez. They said more than 300 pounds of marijuana plant, which ranged from four to 10 inches tall, were burned during the raid.

The raid on the marijuana farm is the third time in a month that Mexican soldiers have cracked down on marijuana and poppy farms in the state of Chihuahua, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

The two previous raids involved small farms in isolated areas of the Sierra Madre mountains in Southern Chihuahua.

The latest raid involved a much-larger farm located in a moderately-populated agricultural area.

The three fields used to grow the plants were located in an agricultural zone five miles south of Villa Ahumada, a rural city of about 15,000 inhabitants, authorities said. The fields are two miles west of the Pan American Highway connecting Juarez and Chihuahua City.

The marijuana fields were watered from wells pumping into cement irrigation canals with cast-iron faucets feeding water into the near rows of plants, a military official said. On all sides of the marijuana farm were fields of more traditional crops to the area — alfalfa, cotton, corn and beans.

About 40 soldiers, with machine guns slung across their backs, bent and stooped to pull up the last of the marijuana plants from the farm Friday.

One soldier on duty said they were carrying their machine guns while picking the plants in the event of an ambush by drug dealers. He said there were guards posted at all corners of the fields.

Late Friday afternoon, the soldiers lit a diesel-fuel bonfire of an 8-foot-high pile of plants, whose total weight was at least 150 pounds. A similar pile was burned Thursday, soldiers said.

Soldiers on duty at the farm refused to answer questions about the raid or owners of the farm.

"Take all the photos you want, but we're not making statements," said one officer.

A farmhouse adjoining the fields appeared to be abandoned.

Farmers working in fields near the farm said they had no idea that marijuana was being grown in the area.

Three weeks ago, soldiers of the 10th Cavalry Division from Cuauhtemoc destroyed several small marijuana fields totaling 10 acres in the Sierra Madre mountains near the city of Temosachic in southern Chihuahua.

On Thursday, a Juarez man was formally charged with being the owner of the marijuana fields near Temosachic.

Mexican Federal Judicial police said they confiscated 10 ounces of cocaine, four ounces of hashish, six pistols and a machine gun, and about $150,000 in cash during the April 25 raid on the man's home.

Mexican soldiers had earlier raided a five-acre poppy field in Chihuaha and arrested 10 men working in the field.

The fields are in the Sierra Madre mountains in southern Chihuahua near the town of Urachic, authorities said. They said the poppies grown in the moutain farms are used to make heroin.

Easter Opry Show to benefit child

The Easter Opry Gospel Road Show will perform Saturday to benefit 5-year-old Derik Harkins, who needs facial surgery to correct a birth defect. Derik, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harkins, has had 11 surgeries which have been provided by a private foundation in Austin, however, those funds have ceased.

Showtime is 7:30 p.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium. This concert will feature many area vocalists. Tickets are $2 for adults, and $1 for children under 12.

Tickets are available from Boots and Saddles, Park Avenue Florist, Summerfield Fertilizer, Easter Grain, and any Easter Lions Club member.

Nuclear power plant fined

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A federal agency has proposed $370,000 in fines against the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant for alleged intimidation of quality-control inspectors and failure of the project's construction and quality assurance programs.

The levy, proposed Friday by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff, is divided into two areas of concern, said NRC spokesman Clyde Wisner.

A fine of $120,000 was proposed for Texas Utilities' "failure in three instances to assure quality-control inspectors the organizational freedom to identify problems," Wisner said.

A second fine of $250,000 was proposed for failures to meet requirements in the plant's construction and quality assurance programs, which are intended to guarantee the safety of the plant, the spokesman said.

The $250,000 fine included a $50,000 penalty against the utility's reinspection program, which is being conducted to find and correct design, construction and inspection problems at the plant.

Texas Utilities has 30 days to respond to the intimidation charges and 60 days to challenge the findings of the NRC construction and quality assurance review. Company spokesman Dick Ramsey said the company will not decide on a possible review until it reviews the agency's proposed action.

"We first need to determine if the proposed fines are warranted and if they're excessive before we respond," Ramsey said.

In addition to ordering the reinspection program, the utility has made more than a dozen top-level management changes since the NRC began finding serious problems at the plant in 1984.

James M. Taylor, director of the NRC Office of Inspection and Enforcement in Washington, said the recent actions of Texas Utilities had been considered when judging the amount of the fine.

But he said the fine was not reduced because of "the prior poor performance" of the utility in the area of employee harrassment and intimidation.

In its report, the NRC found three instances of intimidation of quality-control inspectors. In the reinspection program, the agency accused Texas Utilities of having an inspection supervisor enforce production quotas the resulted in faulty work.

NRC inspectors also found major construction problems that the utility had failed to identify, officials said.

Comanche Peak opponent Juanita Ellis said the size of the fine indicates the NRC "finally realizes" the seriousness of the situation at the plant.

"All of this proves that it is time for a 100 percent reinspection of all accessible attributes — first of design, followed by construction," Ms. Ellis said. "It doesn't make sense to inspect construction, which may have to be torn out tomorrow because of redesign."

giving us more information."

Asked to comment on Soviet charges that the United States is exaggerating the damage caused by the accident, Reagan told reporters at the start of a separate meeting with Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi there wouldn't be a problem "if they would come forward and tell everybody exactly what happened."

When a reporter suggested the U.S. criticism amounted to "Soviet-bashing," the president replied, "No, but ... you can hardly call this kind of an accident an internal affair when other countries are threatened with the fallout and radioactivity."

Asked why the Soviets haven't been more forthcoming, Reagan said, "They're a little mistrustful of all of us."

On-site inspections of nuclear power facilities by outside technical experts would be a "practical and worthwhile goal" toward which to work, Speakes said.

The International Atomic Energy Agency now inspects U.S. and Soviet reactors to ensure they are not producing materials for nuclear weapons, but the inspections are not conducted to ensure compliance with safety standards.

Speakes said Reagan had received a written report from Vice President George Bush providing the government's latest information about the accident collected by a special task force in Washington and reviewed by Bush's special Cabinet-level committee.

Bush told Reagan "We have every reason to think that the fire has diminished, but there is evidence that the reactor or associated equipment with the reactor continues to smolder," Speakes said.

apparently in the subjective realm, in human error. We are undertaking measures to make sure that this doesn't happen again."

Yeltsin, a close associate of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, said water reservoirs around the city of Chernobyl were contaminated, but did not elaborate on how the local population was dealing with that.

The plant is near the junction of the Pripyat and the Dniepr rivers, which feed into rivers and reservoirs that may be connected to the water supply for Kiev, a city of 2.4 million in the wheat-growing heartland.

Yeltsin repeated the Soviet's earlier report that residents of four "settlements" in the vicinity of the reactors were immediately evacuated. "No one was exposed to radiation," he said.

The Soviets have never said which four "settlements" were evacuated, but it has been presumed that one was Pripyat, the town that grew up around the plant site in the 1970s, and that a second was probably Chernobyl, which is nearby.

ARD provided a full tape of the interview with Yeltsin to news agencies after the evening telecast. He spoke in Russian, and his comments were dubbed in German.

Reagan's spokesman, Larry Speakes, said the president had received a written report from Vice President George Bush providing the government's latest information about the accident collected by a special task force in Washington.

Yeltsin said the three other nuclear reactors at the Chernobyl complex were shut down after the accident, but that the area surrounding the plant remained dangerously radioactive.

"People may not go back" at this time, he said.

Yeltsin, in separate comments to the West German Communist Party, complained of Western media reports that said thousands were killed in the disaster.

Vandals strike meteor crater

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A giant crater created when a meteorite smashed into the earth near this West Texas city has been struck again — this time by vandals who defaced signs and blasted the lock off a deep shaft dug to study the site.

But an Ector County judge said that caretakers will begin staying at the site of the county-owned Odessa Meteor Crater soon to protect it from vandals.

"I think the best thing out there is going to be the presence of someone," Judge Jan Fisher told the Odessa American on Thursday.

The second largest U.S. meteor crater is is a national landmark, listed on the Department of the Interior's registry.

But an Odessa woman said that when she invited another resident to see the tourist attraction last week, she was appalled to find signs battered, riddled with bullet holes and thrown into gullies.

Lorraine Wells, 59, said she no longer plans to take visitors to the meteor crater.

"If any of my friends come to see me again and want to go there, I am going to say, 'No, let's go to the sandhills,' " she said, referring to the dunes near Monahans, 51 miles southwest of Odessa.

The 10-year Odessa resident said weeds grew at the crater site, a lock protecting a 265-foot-deep shaft had been shot off and a fence around the crater was down.

"And the main information sign wasn't even there," she said.

Land is being prepared for a mobile home where a married couple is to live, said County Cemetery Director Jim Tobin, whose department is responsible for the property about seven miles west of Odessa.

Tobin, who has had responsibility for the site since October 1984, said the shaft's lock was missing but the door covering it was welded shut.

He said the shaft was dug in the 1930s as a Works Progress Administration project, with the intent of locating the main body of the meteorite. The meteorite was never found, Tobin said.

"That (site) has been used as a target practice range for quite a while," he said. "It's getting to the point where there's too much destruction out there."

Tobin said part of the fence had been removed to take in a rig to drill a water well.

"I don't know who's responsible for it," said Ms. Wells said. "I believe that they can keep up some of these parks that are tourist attractions."

County commissioners on Monday approved posting signs announcing no firearms will be allowed.

Tobin said those signs and others constructed with steel pipe will be installed soon.

"They will be a lot better," he added, noting that wood signs were used previously.

Agency seeks opinion on abortion reporting

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Health Department has asked for an attorney general's opinion to settle a dispute over whether doctors across the state should report abortions to the agency.

The health department, responsible for enforcing the state's abortion law, requires information on all abortions, whether they are performed in a clinic, hospital or doctor's office.

"We feel the law is very clear that every abortion in the state must be reported," said Dr. Juanita Carrell, director of health facilities licensure and certification.

She said Friday that some private doctors have questioned in writing whether they are bound by the law.

"Our general counsel says they do, but to make sure, the commissioner (Robert Bernstein) has asked for an attorney general's opinion," she said.

The 1985 abortion law deals primarily with abortion clinics. Clinics must be licensed by the state, pay annual fees, meet certain medical standards and undergo regular inspections by the health department.

In addition, the law, the first since the old anti-abortion statute was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973, sets reporting requirements for abortion clinics and other medical facilities, including hospitals.

Reporting rules require clinics and hospitals to record statistics on each patient. The type, date, stage of pregnancy, number of previous abortions and patient's condition after the operation must be reported, although names are not reported.

The requirements took effect Jan. 1. Full reports on all abortions performed during 1986 must be filed with the health department in January 1987.

The state law was a compromise between anti-abortion and pro-choice groups.

The statistics could serve as a springboard for legislation filed in the 1987 session of the Texas Legislator.

Proponents of tougher abortion legislation say the figures will show a largenumber of abortions being performed in the third trimester of pregnancy, something they say will justify the Legislature going a step further in regulating abortions.

'Lucia & Mapp' battle for social supremacy

NEW YORK (AP) — That horrid Lucia! She thinks she can play the piano and pretends to speak Italian with silly Mr. Georgie. She plots and schemes and lords it over everyone.

She is one of the funniest creatures in fiction.

"She's a rather dangerous woman, really, incredibly selfish and arrogant," said Geraldine McEwan, who stars as the gimlet-eyed heroine of E.F. Benson's acidic novels. The British-made series based on the books, "Mapp & Lucia," begins a four-week run Sunday night on public television.

Lucia is all affectation, starting with her Italianized name. She's really Emmaline Lucas, a recently widowed small-town tyrant who, as the story opens, is looking for new worlds to conquer.

With her effete co-conspirator and neighbor, Georgie Pillson, Lucia takes up residence in Tilling-on-Sea to battle the resident dragon, Elizabeth Mapp, for suzerainty over the town's prominent phonies. Few wars have involved so many petty battles.

Will the gardener manure the strawberries, or will he weed the flowerbeds? Did the hanging committee really reject Lucia's painting? Could anyone endure another little "po di mu," as Lucia calls her piano recitals?

The outcome turns, finally, on possession of Lucia's recipe for "lobster a la Riseholme," a combat so momentous that the village priest forgets his Scots accent.

Filmed in the flamboyant costumes of the 1920s in Benson's old hometown of Rye, "Mapp & Lucia" is a tart, airy meringue that will leave Luciaphiles — who include Queen Mother Elizabeth — begging for more.

Miss McEwan, who played the execrable bishop's wife in "The Barchester Chronicles," adds a goofy squeal to Lucia's baby talk: "Ickle chat, Georgino mio? Any newsypewsy?"

Prunella Scales, the harridan innkeeper's wife on the "Fawlty Towers" comedies, donned 45 pounds of padding to play the blustery Mapp, while Nigel Hawthorne minces shamelessly as Georgie. Both are real-life cat lovers, and the feline touch is the essence of the Lucia stories.

"I think the relationship of Georgie and Lucia is quite fascinating," Miss McEwan said in a telephone interview from London. "They are incredibly selfish, and use each other. I think Lucia is a ruthless person. But everyone in that small society follows her: Her saving grace is that she has an incredible energy and zest for life, and for fun."

In the opening episode, Georgie and Lucia are mistakenly given a double room at the inn, a gaffe that nearly paralyzes him. Even a glance into Lucia's room — her very bedchamber — strikes terror into his fluttering soul.

Lucia gracefully defuses this explosive situation.

"People like us, with this dear strong bond of friendship between us, can look forward to old age — can't we? — without any qualms," she said. "Tranquillity comes with years, and that horrid thing which Freud calls sex is expunged."

Georgie, poor boy, exhales for what seems the first time in days.

The war power

President Reagan's two military strikes against Libya have prompted fresh demands that Congress be consulted before such attacks are launched. There is a real problem here, but that is most certainly not the solution.

Matters are not made any easier by the American public's happy habit of electing a president of one party and a Congress of the other; but the struggle between the White House and Capitol Hill would go on, in a more muted form, even if both were held by the same party. Traditionally, foreign policy has always been the special preserve of the presidency. But the Constitution vests in Congress, and Congress alone, the power to declare war, and Congress rightly feels that some presidents have eroded that power. Harry Truman unilaterally took us into the Korean War on the theory that it was a mere "police action." Lyndon Johnson escalated our involvement in Vietnam to full-scale war without ever asking Congress for an explicit declaration.

In part, of course, the problem is the nature of modern warfare. The kind of American military response that may be appropriate in the event of a communist coup or a guerrilla-style infiltration or terrorist bombings in some friendly country is often a world away from full-scale warfare. It would have been utterly ludicrous, not to mention counterproductive, for President Reagan to have asked Congress for a declaration of war against Grenada before invading it, or against Libya before striking at Khadafy's headquarters and the terrorist camps, or against Nicaragua before equipping and training the Nicaraguan contras.

The War Powers Resolution of 1973 was an attempt by Congress to limit the extent of such military adventures without crippling presidents altogether. Its core provision specifies that a president cannot send American troops abroad for more than 60 days without express congressional approval. If such approval is not forthcoming, the troops must be withdrawn.

That is not, it seems to me, an unreasonable attempt to prevent future "police actions" and "escalations" that, in effect, finesse the constitutional provision that Congress alone can declare war. Unfortunately, the War Powers Resolution goes on to specify that the president must "consult" with Congress in advance "in every possible instance." It is this provision that certain critics are complaining Mr. Reagan has ignored, or at least not fully complied with.

Luckily the provision is so vague that it can be construed narrowly, and therefore safely — as Mr. Reagan demonstrated when he told the Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress what was about to happen to Libya after our bombers had already taken off from England. But some congressmen insist that this wasn't enough: To them, to "consult" with Congress means involving it, somehow, in the decision-making process itself. It would be hard to imagine a more dangerous folly.

In the first place, little as Congress may like to hear this, it simply isn't secure enough. When Portugal was threatened with a communist election victory in 1975, a high-ranking American official told me that our government badly wanted to give secret financial help to friendly parties there, but that under prevailing law two committees of Congress would have to be notified in advance, and in that case "every friend we have in Portugal would be dead or in jail by dawn."

In the second place, Congress has developed a bad habit of trying to influence or shape presidential policies by conditioning its approval of them, or its financial support for them, on the prior occurrence of certain events. What, do you suppose, would have happened to those American medical students in Grenada if Congress had conditioned our invasion on prior certification by the president that he had first tried unsuccessfully to negotiate with the communist government for their safety?

Congress has the right to declare wars, but lesser applications of U.S. military power belong where they are: in the president's hands.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek ponders a Congressional matter this week.

Dear editor:

The other day Congress, whose members make, who are paid, $75,000 a year plus a lot of other things like free airplane trips, free telephones, free mail, free office rent, etc., voted to increase the amount they can get from making speeches and writing articles from $22,000 to $30,000 a year. Under the law, a Congressman can't be paid more than $2,000 per speech or article.

I don't understand this. I've heard Congressmen talking on television and I've never heard one of them deliver a speech I figured was worth $2,000. Every voter in the country gets letters from Congressmen several times a year and I'd like to hear from just one citizen who figured what a Congressman wrote was worth $2,000.

Of course when you turn the rock over you discover the people who pay $2,000 for a speech are paying it to a Congressman whose vote they need on special legislation. If a bankers' association pays a member of the Congressional Banking Committee $2,000 for a speech at its national convention, it doesn't expect to get any new ideas from him on banking. In fact, he could be overdrawn for all they care. They just want him to vote right, like a defense lawyer wants a jury to vote right.

The way Congress voted to increase its speech-making and article-writing allowance was masterful. With few members present, a bill was introduced raising the limit from $22,000 to $30,000. Under a special rule, the Speaker simply announced: "Unless there is opposition, the bill is passed." No recorded vote needed.

This is like announcing to 6-year-olds at a birthday party: "Unless some of you object, everybody can have a second helping of ice cream."

Unfortunately for columnists, when Congress' voting chicanery was brought to light, members quickly reversed themselves and agreed to get along on just one helping of ice cream.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

RETORT

The Bible says, "A soft answer turns away anger." Being a nut I somehow think that means the best way to keep from getting angry is to master the fine art of retort. The good ones are the retorts that hit quietly and then explode.

A friend asked what she should say when total strangers comment on how slender she is. They aren't nice enough to say slender. They ask how come she is so skinny. It bothers her and she wonders why people are so cruel. I told her to find a sharp answer. The next time someone says she is skinny she is going to say, "Yes, cancer does that." Instead of being angry or hurt she can enjoy the embarrassment when the bomb hits.

The problem with retorts is that we usually think of them too late. I wish I had said all of the good ones I thought of the day after they were needed. My epitaph should read, "Boy, I wish I had said that."

Someone should write a book of sharp retorts so we could have them ready when needed. Sharp retorts to nasty salespeople, great returns for crude teasing, I would buy such a book.

A good friend of mine found a good one. Her daughter was in an accident. She said, "If one more person comes into this room and says this happened because God was trying to teach me a lesson I think I will scream." We decided she needed a retort. She found one. She decided to say, "You are right. I think this happened because of my smoking, drinking, and running around on my husband. I have thought about it and decided to give up smoking."

That's fun.

Women in the part-time trap

Is part-time work really a good deal for women? With children or elderly parents to care for and a house to run, working 20 hours a week seems to make sense. Yet, economically and in other ways, it often doesn't. Here's why.

First off, part-time jobs — when you add dressing and driving time — can eat up most of the hours in a day anyhow.

Secondly, the pay is seldom half of a full-time salary — and raises are also seldom.

Third, part-time workers usually get no benefits. It is rare that a company provides hospitalization, paid vacations, sick leave or pension perks to part-time employees.

Fourth, in cost of clothes, gas, lunches and day care, a part-time job is often as expensive as working full time.

Fifth, while a part-time job sometimes converts to full time, most offer no future. Employers don't consider part-timers workers as having the same drive and ambition as full-time staffers. They are hardly ever included in staff meetings or given an opportunity to have their say on policy decisions.

Despite all these disadvantages, millions of women are drawn into the part-time trap because it is the only way they can work at all. If a woman wants to be home for her children at 3:30 p.m. or if she doesn't want to get on the superwoman merry-go-round, a part-time job looks ideal on the surface. But the surface often wears thin.

One woman, 38, told me how she's been taken advantage of on part-time bookkeeping jobs. She doesn't want to work full time just now because of responsibilities to elderly parents and because she's taking courses for a bachelor's degree. Presently, she works part time for several clients. There's no continuity to her jobs and certainly no benefits.

One client, a non-profit agency, agreed to pay her $6.50 an hour, but when the grant money ran low, the director found someone to replace her at $4 a hour and asked her to train the new clerk. Some months later, the trainee quit, the books were in a mess, and the agency enticed her back. Yet, whenever the bottom line looks wobbly — and she's the first to know — the director warns he'll have to find someone less expensive.

Another woman works part time because she's the mother of a 12-year-old and is also taking courses for a college degree. She's 29 and a single parent with no child support.

She has worked two years for an insurance company, usually 20 to 25 hours a week during the school year, as much as 40 hours a week in summer months. Yet, she gets no hospitalization insurance ("Thank heavens, my son and I stay healthy") and no other benefits despite being called "permanent part time." Now, because the company lost its major contract, she's facing momentary discharge. So are other workers, but full-time employees will get a month's notice and severance pay. She will get neither.

I myself taught part time for seven years at an urban college and was paid $750 per 10-week course. I sometimes taught three classes a quarter, which was average for many full-time professors making much more. In seven years, I was never included in a department faculty meeting. There was no health coverage and when I underwent emergency surgery, I had to pay another instructor to take my classes for several weeks. I could only afford this travesty because my husband was employed and I did not have to support a family.

It is a paradox that women face this continual dilemma between full-time work and full-time responsibilities at home. Part-time employment, while seeming to be a workable solution, only widens the gap between men's and women's pay. It perpetuates the devaluation of women's work and women's worth. But I can't come up with any alternative solution.

And isn't it ironic that we do it to ourselves because we care more about our families than a job.

Tax reform creates doubt

By Richard L. Lesher,
President

WASHINGTON – Daniel Defoe, the guy who wrote Robinson Crusoe, said nothing in life is certain except death and taxes. He could have added that at least we only have to die once.

Everyone hates taxes and none more than President Reagan. He has fought valiantly to cut tax rates, and is now embarked upon a campaign to make the system less complicated.

Those are worthy goals, but Congress has a way of making mincemeat of worthy goals.

For example, it is widely believed that Congress, at the request of our President, has cut taxes in recent years. But if that is so, how is it that total tax revenues have risen $217 billion, or 42 percent, since 1980?

True, the budget deficit has grown during that time, but only because spending has risen faster than taxes, by $355 billion, or 60 percent, since 1980.

Now Congress is turning its attention to the next phase of President Reagan's plan–tax reform. With history as our guide, we can assume that the mess that emerges will be even more incomprehensible than the one we have now.

For example, the Senate Finance Committee is already at work trying to simplify our tax code. A few days ago, it found itself debating whether to tax trucks carrying hamburger buns more than trucks carrying baseball gloves. As Senator George Mitchell of Maine pointed out, this is the sort of economic planning the Soviet Union does all the time. But at least the Soviets have enough sense to let economists do it, not politicians.

Meanwhile, business is cooling its heels, postponing important investment decisions until it sees what Congress is going to do. The effects of these delays are already being felt in our economy. As former President Lyndon Johnson said a long time ago, "The most damaging thing you can do to any businessman in America is to keep him in doubt, and to keep him guessing, on what our tax policy is."

President Reagan is right when he says our tax system is too complex. Even the great genius Albert Einstein was baffled by it.

But while President Reagan, Albert Einstein and I agree the system is more intricuate than it needs to be, it is highly unlikely Congress will resolve the problem in this century. Its painful deliberations upon tax reform are serving only to create uncertainty and impede economic growth.

Take a lesson from ancient Israel

Ancient Israel was defiled by strangers within her gates and soon her prosperity was no more.

Today, more and more European and Scadinavian counties are issuing a nonwelcome for outsiders.

Nine million illegal aliens in the United States are costing American taxpayers $35 billion a year in unemployment insurance, welfare payments, education and other services.

Just how many are displacing American workers is debatable, but Census data indicates that 65 American workers are displaced for every 100 illegal aliens in the United States.

And they are not easy to identify. In Mexico, $20 will buy you a U.S. Social Security Card.

Presently, there are so many illegals in California and New York that those states have an extra seat in their congressional delegations.

And they continue to pour across our borders, uncounted thousands per day.

Hal Boldin, a 29-year veteran with the Immigration and Naturalization Service who has headed the lower Rio Grande Valley office for six years, says the United States can throw tons of money and armies of manpower at the problem, but it won't be solved until Congress approves employer sanctions.

And face it, many members of Congress now have enough aliens in their home-district constituencies that they dare not confront the problem.

The Senate voted last fall to fine employers who hire illegals, but it exempted "farm workers," and other employers have managed to use this status to escape penalties.

The House is currently contemplating legislation, but that could be sid almost anytime over the past five years and we still don't have an adequate response.

We hear AIDS and other exotic diseases have been introduced into our country by the influx of Africans, Asians and Caribbean islanders carrying virus, for which Americans have no natural immunity.

Whether this is true or not is less important than the fact that the allegation is symptomatic of increasing suspicion, resentment and resistance.

And history is on the side of the fearful. Ancient Israel was defiled by strangers within her gates and soon her prosperity was no more.

Great-grandmother still selling 'Highlights' after 40 years

DALLAS (AP) — In an age of multi-million dollar giveaways and other high-pressure magazine sales gimmicks, Elizabeth Whitlow relies on her friendly telephone pitch to sell Highlights For Children.

"I guess you'd call me a low pressure salesman," says Mrs. Whitlow, who has represented the educational magazine for the 40 years it's been around.

And, at 87, she is willing to take the time required to make the sale.

"At my age, all I have is time," she says.

Unlike salespeople who are "just interested in getting the order and running," Ms. Whitlow says she would rather take the time to get to know her customers.

She tells the story about a man from Sherman who called to thank her for making a sales call to his wife.

"She was a little down and appreciated talking to somebody," she said.

A former high school English teacher, Mrs. Whitlow put her two sons through Oklahoma University by selling Highlights. She has seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, but refers to all her young subscribers as "my little boys and girls."

Some subscribers even send her pictures and letters. Mrs. Whitlow responds with personal notes with their statements.

The magazine includes fiction and nonfiction stories for children, craft projects, hidden pictures and other games and "Goofus and Gallant," a popular comic strip depicting two boys whose differing behavior is used to draw morals on everyday situations.

Since Mrs. Whitlow has been selling the magazine for so long, she now is calling on parents whose parents had bought Highlights from her.

Her leads come from postcards pulled from complimentary copies of the magazine provided to doctors and dentists for their waiting rooms.

And she does a good job, with about 100 sales a month.

"I set myself a quota and never rest until I get it," she explains.

Reid Romer, national director of sales at the Highlights for Children, Inc., headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, says Mrs. Whitlow is the oldest of the company's 180 field representatives.

However, he says her output is "tremendously consistent — unbelievably, in fact."

Mrs. Whitlow's territory covers much of North Texas plus parts of Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Highlights, which has a circulation of about two million and doesn't accept advertising, prefers its representatives to call on potential subscribers in person, but Romer is willing to let Mrs. Whitlow use the phone.

"We kind of bend the rules because she can't get out much," he says.

Mrs. Whitlow has been driving for 70 years and still has a valid license.

For years, she traveled in East Texas with her dog, "living in Holiday Inns, selling Highlights and having a wonderful time."

But now she uses her car only for trips to the store and doesn't get onto the freeways.

So she uses the telephone to make her sales.

"The only thing that doesn't wear out is my voice," she says.

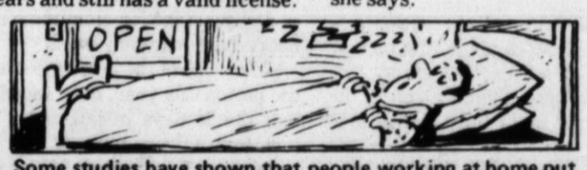

Mrs. Whitlow lives alone in an apartment with her 13-year-old miniature poodle, Muffin. But she doesn't mind the solitude since she has her job.

"I would almost pay them to let me work," she says, unable to comprehend other elderly people who would rather "take it easy."

"I don't want to go into a nursing home," she says. "I hope I just sit here on the divan selling Highlights when a heart attack takes me."

Her goal is to stick around at least until the year 2001, when she would be 102.

"I believe the good Lord has left me here to help parents get good reading material for their children," she says.

Some studies have shown that people working at home put in 20 percent more time than those working at the office.

In mammoth PBY-6

History bluffs plan flight

By HANK MURPHY
Big Spring Herald

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Charles Lindbergh flew the first nonstop flight across the Atlantic Ocean in 1927. But the first man to cross the Atlantic by air was a U.S. Navy pilot, Albert Read, who preceded Lindbergh by eight years.

Read did make one stop in the Azores before landing to the sound of church bells in Lisbon.

This year naval history buffs plan to re-enact Read's flight, and Connie Edwards of Big Spring will be at the helm of a mammoth PBY-6 flying boat, a craft similar to the first airplane to make the journey, a Navy NC-4.

Edwards, 52, who owns dozens of vintage planes at his Edwards Ranch west of Big Spring, took off from his ranch airstrip Friday en route to Corpus Christi.

From there, it's on to Pensacola, Fla., Washington D.C., Rockway, N.Y., Weymouth, Mass., Chatham, Mass., Halifax, Nova Scotia, and finally to Trepassey, Newfoundland, where the maiden flight lifted off.

The re-enactment flight, which leaves from Newfoundland May 15, is sponsored by the Naval Aviation Museum Foundation to commemorate the 75th anniversary of naval aviation.

Edwards, who owns dozens of vintage planes, volunteered for the trip.

"Connie came forth," said Navy Lt. Commander of Public Affairs John Roach. The Navy was "casting around for some civic-minded, philanthropic individual" who owned a PBY and found Edwards, Roach said.

"I wanted to know how much I could withstand and now I'm going to find out," Edwards said with a laugh.

Edwards will serve as flight commander on the 25,000-mile trip. "Lindbergh I'm not. Can you imagine sitting in this thing for 20 hours by yourself? ... We have four other very qualified pilots going with us."

In all, nine or ten men, including Cable News Network correspondent Chuck de Caro, will make the journey.

From Newfoundland the PBY will fly to the Azore Islands, a Portugese territory about two-thirds of the way across the Atlantic. Then the craft will head for Lisbon.

The PBY-6 Edwards owns was selected to re-enact the flight because of its similarity to the lumbering NC-4.

A group of three such planes started out on the first crossing in 1919 but navigational errors and rough seas seriously hampered the mission. Forced to land at sea because of a navigational error, the NC-1 was broken up by rough seas and sank, while the NC-3 sailed 205 miles amid 12-foot waves to the Azores. Only the NC-4 piloted by Read completed the mission.

Edwards said he expects this crossing to be somewhat less harrowing.

An accomplished pilot with 35 years experience, Edwards has on board his craft sophisticated navigational equipment and a weather advisory system.

The Texas aviator has worked as a stunt pilot for aerial sequences in the movies "Battle of Britain," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "Bermuda Triangle."

Edwards' PBY has a wingspan of 104 feet and is powered by two Prat and Whitney engines. Its cruising speed is 112 miles per hour, he said.

Edwards said the flight to the Azores will take 13 hours with another seven or eight hours to Lisbon. The original crossing took more than 50 hours.

"It's going to be an interesting trip," he said. "I think it'll be a lot of fun. I have no anxiety about it whatsoever."

Edwards' PBY will be joined on the flight by one belonging to California businessman Robert Franks.

Banana bug

Mosquitoes have been reported by a Filipino experimenter to be drawn to people who eat bananas. The insect apparently craves chemicals found in the fruit. The bugs appear to be equipped with sensitive detectors that enable them to sniff out faint banana odors in perspiration.

In 1954, the United States said it would build a radar warning system across Arctic Canada.

Whitefaces suffer 6-1 loss to Monterey

The Hereford Whitefaces had the bad luck of hitting the ball hard, but right at their opponents in the field Friday in Lubbock when they suffered a 6-1 loss to Lubbock Monterey.

Hereford had a good number of baserunners in the game, but Monterey recorded three double plays.

The loss dropped the Herd to 7-8 in the district and 14-11-1 overall, going into the season finale that was scheduled Saturday. Monterey clinched the District 3-5A championship with the win over Hereford.

Hereford gained a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Rodney Torres singled and Keith Herrera hit a sacrifice bunt to move Torres to second base.

Keith Anderson then singled into left field, moving Torres to third base. Torres then scored on a wild pitch.

Monterey came back with three runs in the bottom of the first on four singles and a Hereford error. The Plainsmen later scored a run in the second, a run in the third and a run in the fifth.

Hereford had eight hits in the game, all singles, and Monterey committed two errors. Anderson went three-for-three. In addition to Torres' single, other Hereford hits were one single each by Doug Watts, Curtis Cotten, Kyle Streun and Roby Collier.

Anderson pitched a complete game for Hereford, recording two strikeouts. Monterey had seven hits in the game, and Hereford committed three errors.

Michigan State athlete Skiles begins sentence

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Michigan State basketball star Scott Skiles entered the Marshall County Jail Friday morning to begin a 30-day sentence for violating his probation on a drug conviction.

Skiles, one of the leading scorers in the nation this year, may spend only half the 30 days in jail under state law that allows part of the time suspended for good behavior, said Sheriff Richard Tyson.

Stephanie Thomas qualifies for state girls' track meet

Hereford High School's Stephanie Thomas qualified for the state class AAAAA girls' track meet by placing second at the regional meet Friday in Lubbock.

Stephanie set another personal best, a distance of 40 feet, four and one half inches. The state meet is scheduled this coming Friday and Saturday in Austin.

She also competed in the discus at the regional meet, placing fifth in that event on Friday with a throw of 116 feet, two inches.

The HHS senior placed first in the shot put in five meets this season, and placed second in three others, before Friday's regional meet.

Stephanie began the season with a second place finish in the shot put at the XIT Relays in Dalhart on March 1, with a distance of 37 feet, four and one half inches.

She then placed second in the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Invitational Girls' Track Meet in Hereford on March 8, with a throw of 36 feet, four inches. An effort of 36 feet, 11 and one half inches at the West Texas Relays in Odessa on March 14-15 gave Stephanie a first place finish.

She followed that with another first place finish, 39 feet, five and one fourth inches, at the Canyon Reef Relays in Snyder on March 22. A third straight win was achieved at the Lubbock Invitational on April 5 with a distance of 38 feet, two inches.

A week before the District 3-5A meet, Stephanie against had a distance of 38 feet, two inches, but placed second at the Panhandle Invitational On April 12.

Then came her district championships in both the shot put and the discus on April 19 in Lubbock. Her efforts were 37 feet, 11 and one fourth inches in the shot put and 119 feet, three inches in the discus.

Stephanie kept herself going during the week between the district and regional meets with some competition in the Clovis Invitational on April 25. She won both events with distances of 39 feet, 11 inches in the shot put and 114 feet, eight and three fourths inches in the discus.

Here is a list of her placings and distances in the discus this season, before the District 3-5A meet: second place in XIT Relays, 115 feet, four inches; fourth place in Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Invitational Girls' Track Meet, 108 feet, six and one half inches; second place in Canyon Reef Relays, 116 feet, eight and one half inches; first place in Lubbock Invitational, 115 feet, three inches; and second in the Panhandle Invitational, 111 feet, two inches.

As a sophomore, Stephanie was fifth in the district meet in both the shot put and the discus. Last year, as a junior, she was second in the shot put and third in the discus in the district meet.

Hereford High School Coach Martha Emerson said, "Besides her effort and dedication in her own events, Stephanie has contributed much to the total girls' track program."

SWC looks like three-team chase

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference spring training is history and it looks like a three-team chase for the football championship in the fall.

This fingerprint-smudged crystal ball reflects Baylor, Texas A&M, and Arkansas in a photo finish in 1986.

Of course, the way the NCAA has put the SWC under the microscope only Rice might be eligible for the Cotton Bowl before it's over.

Here's the Freeman File's spring training SWC morning line:

BAYLOR (2-1) — These Bears are loaded for the SWC. They've got a quarterback, Cody Carlson, the pro scouts think might be the best in the country. And All-American Thomas Everett leads a secondary that could be the best from coast-to-coast. Big momentum after the Liberty Bowl rout of LSU.

TEXAS A&M (3-2) — The defending SWC champions have offensive firepower to burn and a defense that returns nine starters. It will be almost the same team that strapped Auburn in the Cotton Bowl. Overconfidence is the Aggies' biggest problem.

ARKANSAS (4-1) — Running back Marshall Foreman had a big spring and the Razorbacks will be salty if they can get consistent quarterbacking. The victory over Arizona State in the Holiday Bowl was a big confidence booster.

TEXAS (5-1) — The Longhorns could be a big surprise in 1986 if Coach Fred Akers DOESN'T call the plays. The 'Horns should be more unpredictable with a new offensive coordinator and there's still a ton of talent on the Forty Acres.

TEXAS TECH (6-1) — David McWilliams could make a big splash in his first year as the Red Raiders' bossman. The Raiders are barbed-wire tough on defense and the offense could be solid behind Billy Joe Tolliver.

TCU (7-1) — Although the Horned Frogs probably won't be eligible for the title because of booster payments to the "Sinful Seven," they won't be fun to play. Quarterback Scott Ankrom's broken ankle is fully healed and the Frogs will run some out of the Wishbone. Coach Jim Wacker returns a bunch of redshirts.

SMU (8-1) — If Bobby Watters gets over his starting jitters at quarterback, the probation-stained Mustangs could make life miserable for its SWC bretheren. The Mustangs won't be eligible for the title but all games against them will count.

HOUSTON (20-1) — Too much turmoil and not enough defensive players for the Cougars to expect to do much. An investigation of the program from top to bottom will make life nervous for Coach Bill Yeoman's club.

RICE (100-1) — Jerry Berndt will wish he never left the Ivy League after the upcoming fall. In fact, the depth-thin Owls SHOULD be playing in the Ivy League.

The SWC should be tougher from top to bottom like last year when Baylor beat eventual champion Texas A&M.

Of course, off-the-field scrimmages are another matter. Every school in the SWC but Arkansas, Baylor and Rice are having their football programs scrutinized by the NCAA.

The NCAA's morning line on those matters isn't for public consumption.

BASKETBALL

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Dwayne "Pearl" Washington, the flashy Syracuse University guard often frustrated by zone defenses in college, announced he will leave the school a year early and enter the National Basketball Association draft.

Washington, generally acknowledged as the best guard in Syracuse history behind Dave Bing, finished eighth in school career scoring with 1,490 points. He started 95 consecutive games for coach Jim Boeheim, 71 of them Orangemen victories.

AUTO RACING

AJACCIO, Corsica (AP) — Finnish rally driver Henri Toivonen and his American co-driver Sergio Cresto, who were leading the Tour of Corsica motor rally, were killed when their Lancia crashed and burned.

The accident came one year to the day after another top Lancia driver, Italian Attilio Bettegba, was killed in a crash in the same race.

Despite rule changes for Indy 500

Speeds apparently will rise

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Despite rules changes intended to make the Indianapolis 500 more competitive, the speeds will apparently continue to rise.

Practice was scheduled to begin this weekend and Pancho Carter's year-old qualification record at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway appeared to be in jeopardy.

"If we have a decent day (with weather), I'd say yes," Carter, a 12-year Indy veteran says of the likelihood of faster speeds. "It depends on track conditions. A lot of things can happen, but it's going to be very competitive."

The top qualification speed has increased in each of the past four years.

And Carter, whose current four-lap record of 212.583 mph was more than 2.5 mph faster than the previous record, says it probably will be broken again because of continued improvements in car design and engines.

Starting with pole position qualifying on Saturday, May 10, there will be two weekends of time trials preceding the 70th running of the world's richest automobile race on May 25. Seven former champions and eight rookies are among drivers named for the 68 entries.

About 30 cars had arrived at the track by Friday afternoon.

The major speed increases in recent years have come in the corners of the 2½-mile track, rather than on the straightaways, because of the air tunnels on the underside of the cars and the wings that produce aerodynamic downforce.

But the U.S. Auto Club, which sanctions the Indianapolis 500, and Championship Auto Racing Teams, which runs every other Indy-car race, have adopted new restrictions to cut down on the aerodynamic advantage.

"A lot of people were concerned about the speeds being so high," said USAC technical chairman Jack Beckley, whose crew must inspect each car before it is allowed on the track. "We changed (rules for) the cars a lot. The size of the front wing can only be eight inches across the face, 56 inches wide and two inches thick. Before, there were no restrictions.

"The side pods can only be 12 inches tall through the length of the car, and the (wind) tunnels are now a maximum 15 inches wide and 10 inches high. They were unlimited before."

Beckley said the changes were made "hopefully to slow the corner speeds, but they don't appear to have changed much. The teams have gone back to (testing in) the wind tunnel and they're back to where they were last year."

Safety is one concern, of course. But even though drivers and car owners are presumably aware of the risks of unrestricted speed, there's another reason for at least trying to slow down the cars, said Beckley. It's to make the smaller teams with fewer dollars behind them more competitive with the super-teams.

"Penske and Patrick would be so far ahead of these other guys who just can't afford it," Beckley said.

The Roger Penske team boasts three drivers who have won the 500 a total of six simes — three times by Al Unser, twice by Rick Mears and last year by Danny Sullivan. The Pat Patrick team has former world champion Emerson Fittipaldi and veteran Kevin Cogan, winner at Phoenix in one of the two Indy-car races so far this season.

Besides the three Penske drivers, other former winners entered this year are A.J. Foyt, the only four-time Indy 500 winner; three-time champion Johnny Rutherford; and one-time winners Tom Sneva and Mario Andretti.

Andretti's son, Michael, won the other race so far this season, at Long Beach, Calif.

WTSU football TV show is announced

West Texas State University head football coach Bill Kelly will have a television show on KCIT-TV, Channel 14, during the 1986 football season, it was announed last week.

The Amarillo station will televise the "Bill Kelly Show" 14 times on Sunday evenings, including preseason and postseason shows in addition to the 11-game schedule and one week off in the Buffaloes' 1986 schedule.

More programs will be produced if WTSU play in postseason games. Making the announcement were Bruce Grimes, West Texas State University athletic directir, and Fred Hutching, KCIT-TV vice president and general manager.

Hutching said, "KCIT is proud to become a part of of the very exciting football program being developed by Coach Bill Kelly and Athletic Director Bruce Grimes."

Grimes said, "West Texas State University is grateful to TV 14 for becoming involved with our football future. The fans and supporters of the Buffalo football program deserve an opportunity to see our team's highlights and to hear from Coach Kelly on a weekly basis."

Kelly said the show will not only highlight the football team, but also focus on academic programs offered at West Texas State.

"It's nice to have a football program that will give people in the Panhandle an opportunity to see what the Buffaloes are all about," Kelly said.

Kelly was the Missouri Valley Conference coach of the year last season, directing the Buffaloes to a 6-3-1 record. West Texas State broke many school and conference records, and finished the season ranked third in the nation in passing yardage (343.2 per game) and 10th in total offense (445.4 per game).

Kelly has a 36-16-3 career coaching record. He began his coaching career at Snow Junior College in Ephraim, Utah, where his teams had a 17-6-1 record and won the Wool Bowl and the Valley of the Sun Bowl.

He then coach two seasons at Eastern New Mexico University, leading the Greyhounds to a 13-7-1 record and to the NAIA playoffs for the first time in the school's history.

Two Oiler draftees figure they have size advantage

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Notre Dame's Allen Pinkett and Louisville's Ernest Givins figure they have a size advantage coming into the National Football League.

Pinkett is 5-feet-7 and Givins is 5-9.

"My size is an asset," said Pinkett, the Oilers' third round pick in Tuesday's NFL draft. "At Notre Dame, we could hide behind those big 6-7 linemen until we were ready to make our move.

"I got into the secondary a lot, I just wish I could have gotten into the end zone more."

Seven more collegiate touchdowns would have made Pinkett the all-time NCAA touchdown leader.

Pinkett's 53 career touchdowns rank fourth in NCAA history behind Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett and Army's Glenn Davis with 59 each, and Oklahoma's Steve Owen with 56.

Pinkett finished his college career as the school's all-time leading rusher with 4,131 yards and 320 points. His scoring total is 10th on the all-time NCAA list.

"He's the kind of back that can make you miss with his quickness," Coach Jerry Glanville said. "We're got some that will run right at you. We felt we needed someone like Allen."

Pinkett and Givins have been overcoming the size factor throughout their careers.

"I'm either hard-nosed and tough or dumb and crazy," Pinkett said. "Size is one thing I've had to deal with all my life. But now that I've been successful, it doesn't matter."

Givins was one of the top-rated wide receivers in the draft and he also brings outstanding college credentials into the pros.

If Pinkett is "Mr. Excitement," Givins is "Mr. Excited."

"I got off the plane at the airport with a smile on my face," Givins said. "I'm happy. I hope when fall comes around, I'll be standing on the sidelines or on the field catching passes and returning kicks."

Givins led the nation much of the season in kickoff returns and finished ranked No. 2 in the nation with a 27.6 average. He said he talked with former Oiler wide receiver and kick return specialist Billy Johnson at an all-star game.

"He told me, 'You've got all the tools. I think you can follow in my footsteps,'" Givins said. "That's a compliment and I thank him for boosting my ego."

Pinkett and Givins will try to justify the Oilers' selection of eight offensive players among their 10 picks in the draft.

Houston needed help for its 27th-ranked defense, but Coach Jerry Glanville said the Oilers picked by talent.

"A lot of teams took a third-round player in the first round to try to fill a need," Glanville said. "We didn't do that. What we need on defense is maturity. We have the nucleus of a good defense. They just have to mature."

Nor does Glanville see any reason for concern about the size factor for Givins and Pinkett.

"As you can see, my mama didn't have anything against short people," he said.

Glanville is 5-9.

The one-time New York Yankee outfielder, Bob Meusel, had a lifetime batting average of .309. His brother, "Irish," had a career mark of .310, playing mostly for the Giants.

In 1963, Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves was 42 and became the oldest pitcher to win 20 games in the major leagues. Spahn had a 23-7 record that year.

Hill Gail, the 1952 Kentucky Derby winner, was so fractious in the paddock before the race that Trainer Ben Jones punched him in the nose.

Shortstop Joe Sewell struck out only 114 times in 7,132 times at bat during his major-league career of 14 years. It was a record.

Happy Birthday!

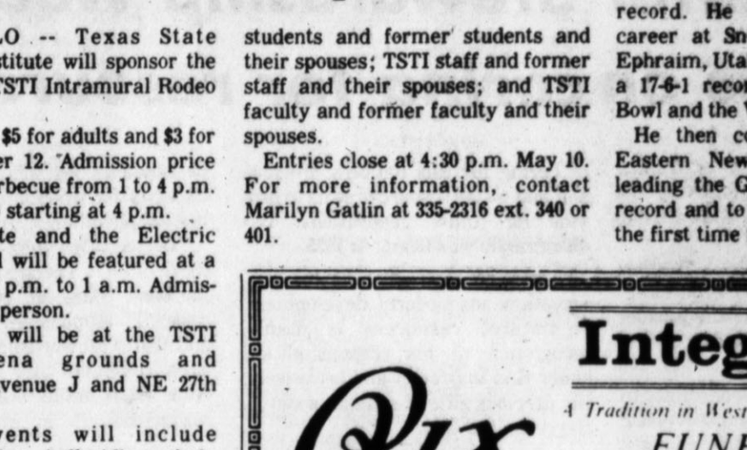

A girl in every port, so they say,
is the way you had it back then.
But you can forget "anchors away", cause those days are gone, my friend!

Golf with the guys or work in the yard,
what'll you do to celebrate this day?
Since you're too old to cut the mustard,
not many choices will come your way!

The years have past, the dice are cast;
kids and grandkids now rule your life.
Birthday No. 60 is here and if you last,
it'll be due to TLC from your wife!

This poem, we're sure you can guess, is from friends who love you most.
And on this day, we wish the best,
even if this sounds like a roast!

Administration officials fearful

Judge to reconsider buyout plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge will be asked to reconsider and clarify his order to overhaul the government's whole-herd buyout plan to send a million and a half dairy cattle to slaughter, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Undersecretary Daniel G. Amstutz said the decision was made after a review of the order handed down earlier this week in Lubbock, Texas, by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

Under the $1.8 billion plan, 1.55 million dairy cattle will be sent to slaughter over the next year and a half.

The court, acting on a lawsuit by beef cattle producers, gave the USDA until June 1 to write new rules that will ensure an orderly marketing of dairy cattle to slaughter during the 18-month program. As announced, about two-thirds of the 1.55 million cows, heifers and calves will move to slaughter or into the export market this spring and summer.

Although the court order did not halt the program, administration officials are fearful that it could force enough changes so that many farmers would be allowed to pull out, effectively gutting the plan to trim milk surpluses in 1986-87.

Congress authorized the program in the Food Security Act of 1985 as a way of reducing the U.S. milk supply. Under the plan, dairy farmers whose bids were accepted will sell their herds and remain out of the milk business for at least five years.

In addition to market prices for their cows, the farmers will get cash subsidies based on their cows' milk output. The subsidies will be paid for in part by assessments on all dairy farmers.

Amstutz said in a telephone news conference with farm editors and broadcasters that the program "clearly will require modification" under terms of the April 30 court order as it currently is understood.

"The program still is operating, and we are asking the judge to reconsider," Amstutz said. "I hope we have some word on that process by the middle of next week."

The main question relates to a provision in the law which says the slaughter of dairy animals cannot exceed 7 percent of the nation's dairy herd during a calendar year, Amstutz said. The 7 percent limit is in addition to the normal slaughter of cows culled from milking herds.

Amstutz said the legal hinge point seems to be the interpretation of the 7 percent rule as it applies to the number of cows contracted to be slaughtered in the first five-month period, which began April 1 and runs through Aug. 31.

Not clear is whether the 9,503 dairy farmers who have contracts to sell their cattle during this period — 633,176 cows, 216,970 heifers and 165,900 calves — would have to accept modifications in their contracts to remain in the program, he said.

Wheat Field Day set

The Annual Wheat Field Day at the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland will be held on Thursday, May 22, according to Dr. Paul Unger, acting director.

Tours and exhibits will be available starting at 1 p.m.

Visitors taking tours will see irrigated and dryland small grain varieties and hybrids, cropping systems, no and reduced tillage systems, water conservation practices and terrace systems. The Russian Wheat Aphid and other pests will be discussed.

Activities will be coordinated by Dr. Kenneth Porter, TAES Small Grain Breeder at Bushland.

The event will be sponsored by The USDA Agricultural Research Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Wheat Producers Association.

Interest expenses seem to be culprit

COLLEGE STATION – Many of today's farmers are having trouble paying their debts, and the big culprit seems to be interest expenses.

"Farmers need to take a careful look at their total interest expenses, particularly now as many are thinking about debt restructuring," points out Dr. Danny Klinefelter, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"As a general rule, if interest expense exceeds 15 percent of total revenue, a farmer needs to look seriously at how efficiently the business is organized and operated and how profitably debt is being used," says Klinefelter. "In most cases, if interest expense is more than 20 percent of total revenue–and in almost all cases if it is more than 25 percent–simply restructuring debts is not going to solve the problem."

Although interest rates have come down considerably in the past five years, farm debts are still high, so interest expenses continue to be a major factor plaguing farmers, notes the economist. Many farmers are operating with a 40 to 50 percent debt-asset ratio. That means a farmer has 40 to 50 cents in debt for every dollar in assets. With an earning rate of 4 to 6 percent on agricultural assets, a farmer would still be losing ground even with interest rates at 8 percent.

"Unless a farmer can reduce his total debt load to meet cash flow commitments, debt restructuring may simply prolong the current situation and eat up equity in the process," Klinefelter points out.

While the current lower interest rates have done little to remedy the farm debt situation, they have helped stocker and feedlot businesses where most cattle are 70 to 80 percent financed, the economist points out. After the cost of feed and the animals themselves, interest is the next major expense item. In addition, most of these loans are on floating rates tied to prime. Thus, the current stable interest rates which may be as much as 10 percent lower than just four years ago have had a major impact on reducing costs and risks, says Klinefelter.

Soil, Water Stewardship Week to focus on caring for resources

COLLEGE STATION – Taking care of nature's resources is the focus of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, May 4-11.

This year's theme, "Conservation's New Frontiers," highlights the revival of the pioneer spirit to explore the new frontiers of today.

"Society must adjust constantly to changes dictated by new discoveries, new technology, population changes and depletion of resources, points out Dr. B.L. Harris, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The Extension Service is joining with the Association of Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts in the nationwide observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, which annually focuses on the importance of caring for this nation's precious soil and water resources so as to provide for future generations. The observance was begun in 1955.

"The basic motivation for the conservation and orderly development of natural resources is man's recognition of his responsibilities under God to protect and use wisely His precious gifts of soil and water," Harris points out.

"Human survival depends on other living things–and those living things are dependent on soil and water," says Harris. "So conservation of soil and water is essential for meeting the food needs of future generations.

"Clean water and fertile land are the basic source of abundant food fiber," adds the soil specialist. "We have an obligation to leave our descendants an inheritance whose capacity for producing food has not been depleted.

"In today's 'high tech' society, there often is a tendency to overlook the basic things on which our lives depend," emphasizes Harris. "Soil and Water Stewardship Week serves as a reminder that all life forms come from nature's soil and water resources."

Conservation methods are encouraged

Farmers and ranchers with practical soil and water conservation methods in their operations are encouraged to compete in an awards program sponsored nationally by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and the DuPont Co.

Coordinating the state competition is Harvey Davis, executive director of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board.

Texas Farmer Union nominating committees have until May 10 to submit applications to the state office in Waco,

Peking cracks down on loud pop music

PEKING (AP) — Peking's city government has cracked down on more than 300 shops and restaurants for playing loud pop music to lure customers, an official Chinese newspaper said today.

Forty-eight of the establishments were fined, 15 had their sound equipment confiscated and 267 received disciplinary warnings in the weekend clampdown, the official English-language China Daily said.

The newspaper said the establishments were accused of having disturbed the normal life of neighborhood residents and had been punished or warned in accordance with city regulations on noise control.

Pop music, banned during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, has since become popular among Chinese youth.

Man who gave what he had for animals remembered

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Sidney Leonard Batsford shared what little he had with animals and members of the Humane Society of North Texas.

He had a simple wish.

He wanted someone to attend his funeral, his dogs taken care of and some flowers on his grave.

Batsford got his wish thanks to his friends at the Humane Society.

Stoney Prater, executive director of the Humane Society, said Batsford, who had no known relatives in the Fort Worth area and lived alone on his social security income, started visiting the society's animal shelter in 1980.

"He came often and would always bring fruit and vegetables for the animals and goodies for the employees," she recalled Friday.

She said Batsford brought apples and carrots for the horses and loved to feed them. He brought other food for the dogs and cats.

"He came down one day and saw that the employees didn't have any way to warm up their sandwiches," she recalled. "The next day, he returned with a new microwave oven. We know now that he had to sacrifice to present that gift."

Batsford died last week. His will left everything he owned to the Humane Society.

"All we know that he had was an old 1962 car, which still runs, a few appliances and a house full of things in boxes," Prater said. "But he left us with much more. He was one of the most caring persons I have ever known."

"His pets ate better than he did, although he was a big man, weighing about 290 pounds," Prater added.

She recalled that on one of his last visits before he died, Batsford told the shelter employees he would like for someone to attend his funeral when he died and that he would like for his dogs to be taken care of and some flowers put on his grave.

"I vowed he'd get that," Prater said. "We have his dogs, and we are going to care for them."

Rural county farmers more likely to die of cancer

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Farmers in rural counties are far more likely to die of certain types of cancer than people who live in a more urban setting, a University of Illinois study suggests.

Researcher Don Buesching examined cancer mortality rates in three Illinois counties — JoDaviess, Carroll and Winnebago — from 1973 through 1980, and found they were up to five times higher among farmers.

Buesching said the death rate for farmers who develop cancer may be higher because medical care is inconvenient or too expensive for them and they are exposed to cancer-causing substances by farm chemicals and animals.

"There's a lot of speculation but not too many answers," said Buesching, now a market analyst at Rockford Memorial Hospital.

The highest mortality rates were from leukemia and prostate cancer among farmers in JoDaviess and Carroll counties. Buesching said 4.9 times as many farmers died from leukemia and 4.7 times as many died from prostate cancer.

The death rate for cancer of the lymph system among farmers in JoDaviess ⅞ndCarroll counties was 3.7 times as high.

The control group was the entire population of Winnebago County, which is classified as metropolitan and includes Rockford. Buesching said the other two counties are considered non-metropolitan and medically under-served.

However, even farmers in Winnebago County had a higher death rate from all three types of cancer than the control group, he said.

"Farmers do use health services at a lower rate than the rest of the population," said Buesching.

He said it may be more difficult for them to leave the farm, particularly during busy seasons, and travel to distant medical facilities.

In addition, those farmers in rural counties may be less likely to be employed part-time — or have wives employed — by companies with good medical insurance.

"We hear a lot about the economic plight of farmers but now is not the time to neglect your health," said Buesching, noting that cure rates for cancers are linked to early detection and treatment.

Buesching also found that the total cancer mortality rate was 2.5 times higher for the rural farmers and 1.5 times higher for the Winnebago County farmers, while rural non-farmers had a death rate lower than the control group.

Another theory for elevated cancer rates among farmers is their environment, he said. Buesching said the rates increased as the use of chemicals on the farm rose dramatically.

Farmers also may be exposed to cancer-causing viruses carried by the livestock they handle, he said.

Other studies also have documented higher cancer mortality rates among farmers, said Buesching, however no cause-effect relationship has been established scientifically.

"You have to start scratching your head and saying, 'Maybe there is something here.' But, now we need to move on and find out why it's happening."

New rules set for bass, crappie fishing

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has ignored protests from hundreds of people and approved a five-fish, 14-inch limit for bass and set a crappie limit of 25 per day.

The action was taken during a meeting Thursday attended by hundreds who opposed the most drastic freshwater fishing changes since the state's black bass limit was reduced from 15 to 10 per day in the early 1970s.

The current rule allowed anglers to have in their possession 10 bass that are at least 10 inches long.

The laws approved Thursday will take effect Sept. 1.

The new law will give anglers an equal amount of meat, biologists say, because five bass 14 inches long weigh as much as the current allowable of 10 fish that are at least 10 inches long.

The commission also voted to include Toledo Bend and Caddo Lake in the 5-14 regulations. Earlier it had been determined that Toledo Bend and Caddo Lake would remain at the 10-10 limit since they border on Louisiana and no agreement had been reached with Louisiana authorities to make the changes.

The commission heard arguments from business people and guides at Sam Rayburn Reservoir that if Toledo Bend and Caddo Lake were exempted from the new rules, it would hurt business at Sam Rayburn because it is only 30 miles from Toledo Bend.

Exempted from the new rules on bass were lakes in the Panhandle where fish grow slower and at lakes where experiments are in progress such as Lake Conroe. Also exempted were lakes where slot limits are already in effect.

At Lake Texoma, the minimum length will be 14 inches, but the daily limit will remain at 10 to comply with Oklahoma regulation.

"What happened today made black bass a sports fish," said Phil Durocher, Inland Fisheries program director for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Chester Burdett, chief of law enforcement for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, clarified the possession provision of Texas fishing laws.

He pointed out that it has always been against the law to cull fish if a limit is in possession.

Fishermen must always retain one fish short of the limit if they are seeking a still larger fish. He noted, however, that a person who has caught the limit can still continue to fish if they unhook their catch and return it immediately to the water.

Crockett School students, faculty use suicide prevention program

AUSTIN (AP) - The deaths of two Crockett High School students since February have resulted in the establishment of the first district-wide program here aimed at preventing suicides and building awareness of the problem.

In February, a Crockett ninth-grader committed suicide by stabbing herself in the chest, according to a Travis County medical examiner's report. An 11th-grader died Monday of a single gunshot wound to the head. His death is under investigation, but suicide is suspected, a spokesman for the medical examiner's office said Friday.

Vivian Ward, a counselor at the school, said little extra counseling was provided after the death of the first student. "It caught us by surprise, so we didn't do a lot."

Crockett principal Robert Enos said that since the second death, the school has been relying on techniques developed by Betty Phillips, supervisor of psychological services for the Austin district, to provide students with extra counseling.

Ward said she and the nine other Crockett counselors have worked with students individually and in groups.

"Kids need to talk about their feelings," she said, adding that the school's faculty and staff also have been shaken by the incidents. "All of us are feeling so frustrated. But we are learning from this and we will be stronger after this."

Two suicides in one school in the same year would be unusual, particularly so close together, said Ward.

"I have been here 18 years, since Crockett opened, and we might have one a year, but not every year. We probably haven't had more than three or four in the past 18 years," she said.

Records from the Travis County medical examiner's office show that five youths age 18 and younger have taken their own lives since Sept. 1, near the start of the school year. Three were Anglo males, one was a black male and one was an Anglo female.

The Austin suicide-prevention program is similar to other programs that now are being developed across the country, Phillips said.

She said the program, which started in November, advises counselors on how to help students come to terms with suicides and trains administrators, teachers and counselors to detect potentially suicidal students.

Two in-service training sessions on the subject have been held for teachers and counselors, and two university professors known as regional experts on suicide prevention have conducted seminars for principals and other administrators.

Phillips said teachers and counselors believe they have been able to prevent some suicides, Phillips said.

When an Austin student is identified as potentially suicidal, a counselor immediately notifies teachers to watch him closely. Parents are notified and urged to obtain outside counseling for the student.

If parents are uncooperative, a child welfare agency is called in to provide counseling for the child. Some students are referred to a hospital, such as the Travis State Hospital or Shoal Creek, for treatment, Phillips said.

Crockett students said Friday that discussions of suicide have been helpful and educational.

"Until now, I didn't know any of the signs," said senior Leslie Callahan.

"Talking about it has made kids more aware" said senior Barbara Garza. "We now know the warning signals but we learned you can't always detect them all at once."

Phillips said teen-age suicide ranks second to accidents among causes of death of American youths. "And some accidents are thought to be suicides" that are undetected, she said. "During the last five years it has increased dramatically."

Defense minister says he will arrest Marcos

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said he will arrest Ferdinand E. Marcos if he ever returns to the Philippines, and said ensuring the deposed ruler's safety in his homeland would be a difficult task.

Enrile's statements came as President Corazon Aquino fired the Manila police chief on Friday for failing to contain violent protests by diehard Marcos loyalists who are demanding that Marcos come home.

Marcos was ousted from Malacanang Palace on Feb. 25 by a joint civilian-military revolt following fraud-tainted elections earlier that month that both Marcos and Mrs. Aquino claimed to have won.

Marcos, who ruled the Philippines for 20 years, now lives in Honolulu. Marcos has said in several speeches broadcast on Manila radio stations in recent weeks that he still considers himself this Asian island nation's legitimate president.

On Friday, the government filed criminal charges against Marcos and three judges, alleging they plotted the acquittal of 26 men who were accused of killing Mrs. Aquino's husband in August 1983.

Benigno Aquino was gunned down at Manila International Airport after returning from self-imposed exile in the United States to lead the opposition against Marcos.

The defendants, 25 members of the military and one civilian, were acquitted in December after a 10-month trial.

Enrile said in a speech Friday that younger military officers "will never forgive Marcos for what he had done to the country and the military organization."

Manage small grain growth with fertility. If a producer is going to increase yields in small grain crops, more nutrients will be needed to do the job when the plant needs them the most. Experts say a good soil fertility program can do more for yields than any other single management procedure. Management includes these steps: Take soil test, at plow depth, to reflect average fertility. Take several weeks before planting. Judge what nutrients are needed by soil conditions and management practices. Nitrogen should be provided at critical growth stages. Phosphorus is important for early plant development, proper growth and plant maturity. Other advantages in having the right amount of phosphorus in the soil includes improved root development, early maturity and increases winter hardiness. For additional details on nutrient management, write for a manual called "High Yield Management for Small Grains" published by Union Carbide Agriculture Products Co., Inc.

TV newsman fined for drunken driving produces documentary

WASHINGTON (AP) — An emotion-filled documentary on drunken driving, which will be broadcast on public television Wednesday night, is more than a story of the horrors that can result from driving under the influence. It is one man's legal punishment.

Kelly Burke, a Washington TV reporter, produced "Drinking and Driving: the Toll, the Tears" on orders from a judge after Burke caused a fatal accident while he was driving drunk.

The documentary details eight accidents involving alcohol, with interviews from drivers and victims, including the family of the man Burke killed.

The newsman said putting the program together was worse than the jail term he could have received.

"I had to spend a lot more time facing the place of alcohol in my life," said the WRC-TV reporter, who worked several months on his own time to complete the one-hour documentary. "I don't drink at all anymore. It has no place in my life."

Burke first took the finished documentary to his station, but was turned down. WETA, Washington's public TV station, welcomed the project and got it on the air.

He takes viewers to homes, prisons, churches, cemeteries and hospitals where he interviews families and drivers telling tearful stories of regret.

Burke's accident July 1, 1984, killed Dennis Lee Crouch, 32, of Poolesville, Md. In January 1985, he was fined $500 and placed on two years' probation on the condition he do the documentary, which was his suggestion to Montgomery County Circuit Judge William Cave.

When Cave agreed to the project rather than sentence Burke to jail, Crouch's widow and Mothers Against Drunk Driving protested.

At the time of the crash, Mrs. Crouch, a Montgomery County police officer, was eight months pregnant. The documentary shows her attending her husband's funeral and later playing with her infant daughter, Denise.

"I pride myself in being a professional police officer ... handling a drunk driving case will be very, very difficult," Mrs. Crouch says in the program. "Dennis was my life."

"It was very difficult for me to put the Sandra Crouch segment together," said Burke.

He conducted all the interviews in the program, except the one with Mrs. Crouch. "I didn't want to put us both through that," Burke said. She talked with a colleague of his.

"She was wonderful in the way she cooperated," Burke said.

Burke said he consumed from six to 11 glasses of wine after a long day's work before beginning the drive home.

"I was playing American roulette," he said. "You assume because you had made it home so many times you can make it home again."

Colors in paints typically follow a cycle that begins in clothing fashions, according to Dennis Kotyk, a color stylist for Pittsburgh Paints.

"Once new colors have been worn for a year or so, they begin to show up in home interiors," says Kotyk. "After colors reach home interior use, they move next to automobiles. And after another year, they become popular as exterior architectural finishes. The entire color cycle takes about four years."

Kotyk says his company has introduced a palette of 24 new interior colors this year as a "designer supplement" to some 900 colors already available.

Reagan signs bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed emergency legislation Friday extending the depleted authority of two government agencies that are major sources of home mortgage credit, the White House said.

The law enables the Federal Housing Administration, which hit its $57.4 billion credit ceiling on Tuesday, to again accept applications for government insured mortgages.

The law raises the FHA's credit ceiling $17 billion and extends the agency's authority to insure mortgages to June 6. The FHA stopped accepting mortgage applications on Wednesday.

Reagan signed the bill in Tokyo within hours after he arrived for this weekend's economic summit meeting. The bill's signing was announced here and in Tokyo. The bill was passed Tuesday night by the Senate and final action came Wednesday on a voice vote in the House.

The law also enables the Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae) to guarantee the prompt payment of new securities backed by government-insured mortgages.

The rush to refinance home mortgages at lower interest rates caused Ginnie Mae to reach its $65.3 billion commitment limit on April 4. The bill signed by Reagan raises Ginnie Mae's authority to $126 billion.

FHA-insured mortgages allow homebuyers to purchase a home with a 5 percent down payment. FHA and Veterans Administration-insured mortgages, which have been granted at 9.5 percent interest, account for 15 to 20 percent of the mortgage market.

Community involved in fight

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Tiny Friendship Village is the site of a 10-year battle between residents who want to incorporate and officials who say they don't want to see liquor sales legalized in an otherwise dry county.

The battle heated up when County Judge Ed Miller said he will oppose the dismissal of a two-year old suit contesting a 1983 election in which the village voted 23-0 in favor of incorporation.

The suit was scheduled to be dismissed May 23, because a trial date has not been set for two years.

"Our attorney will advise the judge it is an active case," Miller said. "I do not think the judge will dismiss it in May."

The man who owns most of the land and friendship in Friendship Village, J.A. Pollard, is black. In April he called in a mediator from the U.S. Department of Justice, saying he thought the county's opposition "might be racially motivated."

Miller said he assured the mediator the issue was not Pollard's race, but the fact that, once incorporated, Friendship Village could hold an election to approve liquor sales.

Miller has said he wouldn't oppose a wet-dry election in one of the county's well-established cities, but doesn't think an area should incorporate for that purpose.

Pollard said he is not interested in calling a wet-dry election but wants to incorporate in order to be able to apply for federal grants. "What actually happened is, I inherited a bad situation."

Friendship Village is about six miles west of Texarkana. After the 1983 incorporation vote, then County Judge Robert Dalby refused to certify the results.

An appeals court ruled the county judge was required by law to certify the results of the election in 1983. the county.

Miller did so, but the county soon filed suit in district court charging the election was illegal and should be declared "null and void."

The suit charged, among other things, that trailers were moved into Friendship Village a few days before the election to satisfy requirements that more than 200 people live in the area to be incorporated, but that the requirement still was not met.

The next year, Miller and Pollard appeared to have reached an agreement in which the county would drop its lawsuit and Friendship Village would not hold a wet-dry election — even though the county's attorney for the matter, Jerry Rochelle, said he considered the suit could be won.

But the agreement fell through.

Miller said he is "still trying to look to see if there's some way it could be worked out so it would not be a wet-type city."

Pollard said Howard Willingham — the controversial former Texarkana, Texas, city manager who established Friendship Village — did plan to sell liquor in Friendship Village. He was murdered in 1978.

But Pollard, noting that he doesn't live in Friendship Village, said it is "left to the people out here to determine if they want it or not."

Pollard had one offer for $2 million for the property before the interested parties learned of the lawsuit "hanging over our heads," he said.

The 56-acre town includes 47 mobile homes and 175 people, Pollard said.

Receives Certification

Jo Nell Satterfield, left, received her certification, presented by Phyllis Dawson, after completing the Auburn University Dietary Manager Independent Study Program. Satterfield finished 90 hours of dietetic instruction and 150 hours of supervised on the job training at Deaf Smith General Hospital. She is now eligible for membership in the Dietary Managers Association.

When it rains, it pours

LUBBOCK –The adage "When it rains, it pours" is all west in radar storm studies.

In fact, Texas Tech University atmospheric science Professor Colleen A. Leary, says that much of the time when it rains, it does not pour. That is especially true in mesoscale convective storm systems–groups of individual thunderstorms which organize together and cause turbulent weather over a large area.

Learning more about this type of storm will aid meteorologists in forecasting them. That is important not only because the storms provide most of the growing season rain for the central Plains of the U.S., but also because they are responsible for much of the severe weather and flash flooding.

"At the front of the storm, we see a line of deep thunderstorms and heavy rain," Dr. Leary said. "On the other side of the storm, the rain is much lighter."

The primary factor in determining the volume of rainfall appears to be wind, she said.

"The upward movement of wind drives the condensation process," Leary explained. "The air cools as it rises and cooler air can hold less water vapor. Water droplets condense, get bigger and bigger and eventually fall as rain."

Leary collected detailed information on one storm during the project. She will use computer programs developed by the National Center for Atmospheric Research and imaging equipment at Texas Tech to analyze the case study data. Her research is funded by NSF.

Dolly Parton theme park set to open in Tennessee

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — When Dolly Parton left the Smoky Mountain hollows where she was born, the most exciting ride in town was the family horse.

That was more than 20 years ago and times have changed — for East Tennessee and for Miss Parton, who is marking her homecoming with the opening today of the "Dollywood" theme park in the foothills she once called home.

Miss Parton, 40, is a partner in Dollywood, a $5.5 million expansion of an earlier theme park known as Silver Dollar City. The new park features 400 acres of attractions, including "River Rampage" — an artificial version of white-water rafting — and a steam locomotive that chugs through surrounding hills.

"East Tennessee gave me life, enthusiasm and inspiration. And it's good if you can give something back," the flashy actress, singer and songwriter said Friday at a news conference.

"I was born a dreamer, and I love the Smoky Mountains. I think it's a very beautiful place for someone ... with a creative mind."

Miss Parton said her favorite part of the park is a museum of souvenirs from her life, including the "coat of many colors" she wore as a child that inspired a song of the same name, and the costumes she wore in movies such as "9 to 5" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"Yesterday, I went through the museum," she said Friday. "... I got very emotional about it ... because it was like looking at your life.

"I think it was the first time that I realized I was a star — that other people looked at me like a star. I felt very proud but ... I don't know (if) I necessarily liked all the emotions I felt. It kind of jarred a lot of things in me."

One thing Miss Parton's the museum does not contain is the three-room cabin where she once lived. That still stands, but its present owner wouldn't trade it for enough money to build a new cabin.

So Dollywood recreated the cabin as Parton's Back Porch Theater, in which family members will stage shows.

Miss Parton said Friday she plans to spend as much time as she can at the park during its first summer.

"Dolly's involvement has been invigorating for the park," said general manager Ken Bell.

"Dolly speaks the same language as people here," said Billy Baker, the park's publicist who will work in the show hall as a comedian. "She's like a local girl who hit it big, but hasn't forgotten that she was brought into this world by a doctor who was paid only a bag of corn meal for his work."

Steger expedition reaches North Pole

NEW YORK (AP) — Six adventurers waited on the Arctic ice cap today to be picked up for a flight back to civilization after a grueling 500-mile, 56-day dog-sled voyage to the top of the world.

The six slogged their way from the northern tip of Canada to the North Pole to become the first entirely self-sufficient expedition to re-create Robert Peary's 1909 conquest of the pole.

First word of the feat came from a bush pilot shuttling supplies to a remote mining camp who picked up a radio transmission Friday from the Steger International Polar Expedition and relayed it to the base camp in Resolute Bay, Canada.

Expedition co-leader Paul Schurke of Ely, Minn., reported their position at 6:50 p.m. CDT Friday as 90 degrees north latitude, zero degrees longitude, where the view in every direction is south.

As radio communications in the Arctic are susceptible to atmospheric conditions and are frequently blocked, the brief conversation Friday night was their first radio report since April 23.

"It's great. We're happy," said the base camp operator, Jim Gasperini, who had been trying hourly without success to reach the adventurers by radio.

"We could hear that they were transmitting but we couldn't distinguish any words," Gasperini said. The entire conversation lasted less than 10 minutes. "We didn't have time to chat."

"Whenever you have a conversation like this, you just relay the most important information — they're there," Gasperini said. All six team members — co-leader Will Steger, also of Ely; Geoff Carroll of Juneau, Alaska; Brent Boddy, of Frobisher Bay, Northwest Territories; Richard Weber of Cantley, Quebec; and Anne Bancroft, of Sunfish Lake, Minn. — were reported fine.

The explorers will forgo the return trip to Ward Hunt Island, Canada's northernmost tip, where they set out March 8, in favor of an airlift to Resolute, where a celebration was planned.

Knowing the expedition would be anxious to get off the ice, Gasperini, along with a horde of reporters, flew to Eureka, 400 miles north of Resolute but still 600 miles short of the pole, at about midnight. There they awaited word that clouds blanketing the pole had lifted enough for a safe landing.

The expedition originally had eight members, but Bob McKerrow of Anakiwa, New Zealand, was airlifted out after a sled rolled over on him, breaking ribs, and Bob Mantell of Anchorage, Alaska, was flown out with frostbitten feet.

The team's arrival at the pole, which had been expected early Thursday, was delayed by overcast skies. Without the sun, which normally is visible 24 hours a day in the Arctic spring and summer, their sextant was useless.

Like Peary, they relied only on a hand-held sextant and a chronometer to determine their course, measuring the angle of the sun above the horizon at specific times each day.

A beacon transmitter and a radio were concessions to modern times. Steger said he wanted to reach the pole unassisted, but without loss of life.

An American B-50 plane landed in Fort Worth, Texas, in 1949 after completing the first non-stop flight around the world.

Committee's tax overhaul plan good start

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole says the new tax-overhaul plan drafted by Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood is a good start, but he withheld his complete endorsement until several unidentified problems are solved.

Dole's statement Friday indicated the breadth of committee members' individual concerns about the new bill, which Packwood said he thinks has the support of a majority of the panel. Six members stood with Packwood when he made the announcement, and he said he was authorized to say that Dole also supported the bill.

Neither Packwood nor any of the six members would declare absolutely that the new bill has enough votes for approval. And some staff members who work with the committee said the measure is likely to undergo considerable change before it can pass.

"I hope there is a majority for it," Packwood said, calling it a major improvement over present law in terms of simplicity, fairness and investment decisionmaking.

The bill — the third plan Packwood has offered in two months — would cut taxes for most Americans, raise taxes on corporations by about $100 billion over five years, and retain full deductions for home mortgages, charitable contributions and most state and local taxes.

Packwood said the committee — which met in private all week to resolve some major differences — will take up the new plan in a public session Monday.

Major features of the plan would:

—Remove 6 million lower-income people from the income-tax rolls altogether. A family of four would pay no income tax until earnings exceed about $12,470.

—Cut the 50 percent top individual tax rate to 27 percent. The only other rate in the new plan, 15 percent, would apply to about 80 percent of all taxpayers. The 27 percent rate would apply to a family's taxable income (after deductions and exemptions) above about $28,000.

—Raise the $1,080-per-person exemption to $2,000 for all but the wealthiest taxpayers.

—Increase the standard deductions, to about $5,000 for joint returns and about $3,100 for singles.

—Repeal the deduction permitted for state and local sales taxes paid.

—Allow deduction of mortgage interest on two homes. The deduction for consumer interest, such as for a car, or a college loan, would be limited to an amount equal to investment income.

—Continue the deduction for charitable contributions by itemizers but repeal the special charitable writeoff for those who don't itemize.

—Restrict tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts to workers not covered by a company pension plan.

—Remove the tax advantage for individual capital gains.

A key provision, supporters agreed, would take away some of the incentive that upper-income people have for investing in tax shelters — ventures aimed more at reducing their tax burden than at making a profit.

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said Packwood's plan "represents the most significant step taken to date toward achieving true tax reform."

Better Watch Those Weeds

Weeds such as these are prompting the city to fight back. The city will soon be charging fines if yards are not kept up to standards.

Says Jay Spain

Use mowers with caution

Taking caution with gas powered lawn mowers and trimmers will help rid the weekend gardener of any unwanted fires, says Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain.

Spain recommends a few helpful hints to be aware of while cleaning up around the house and yard:

-Never burn any trash inside the city limits. Spain noted that it is against a city ordinance to have any open fires inside the city. Those who break this ordinance are subject to a fine.

-Keep all weeds mowed, and be sure to clear dead weeds away. Dead weeds will still burn.

-Never store any flammable materials near a heater, dryer, or water heater.

-While mowing a lawn, always let the mower cool down before refueling with gasoline. A hot mower can set gas afire and the flame will follow the stream of gas.

-Never put a hot mower in a storage shed, let it cool off before putting it in an enclosure.

-Remember to be extremely cautious during the spring and summer months. Even after a little rain, the wind and sun will dry out the ground making vegetation a fire hazard.

Spain also recommends that people be very careful when cooking outdoors. Never use anything but a commercially sold charcoal lighter fluid to start your coals. Spains says to never use gasoline.

The United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty on trade boundaries and commerce in 1794.

Lion's to offer free camp

The Texas Lions Camp is looking for insulin dependent children ages seven to 17. Priority is given to children who have never attended a camp for diabetics and who require guidance with their special health needs.

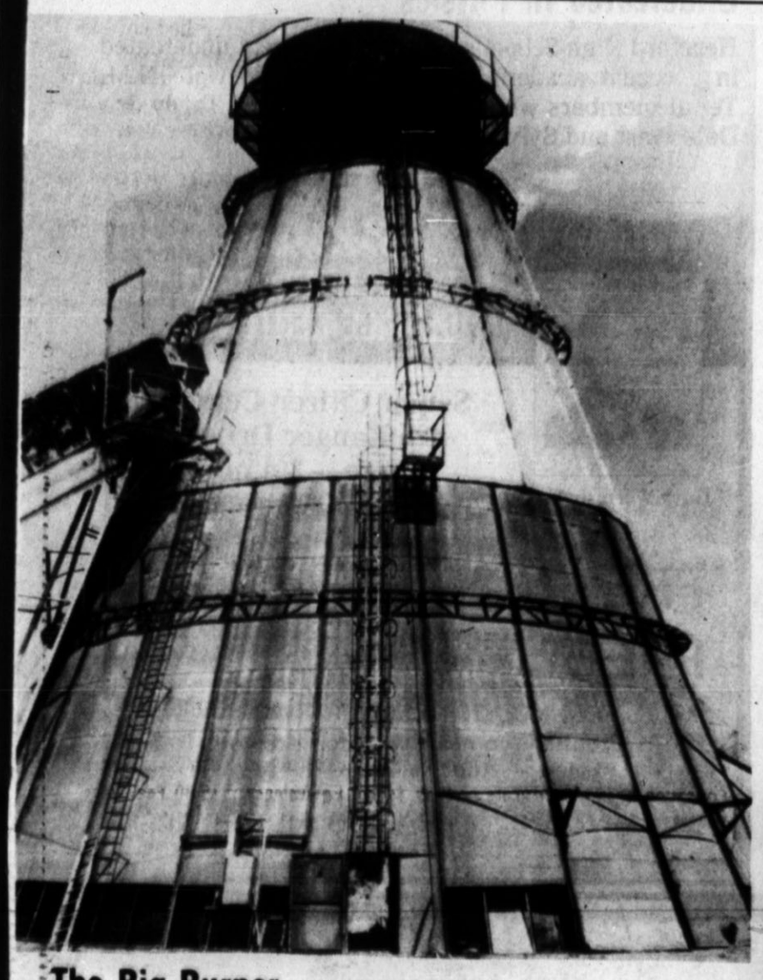

Two sessions will be held this summer. The two-week session is for children ages seven to 12 and the one-week session for children ages 13 to 17 so concerns typical of different age groups can be addressed.

Recreational activities make Camp life fun, while a medical team supervises the children's education about diabetes. Campers will be learning about their blood sugar and urine analyses, giving their own injections, controlling diet and monitoring their exercise. The individualized attention in health care encourages good control of diabetes.

The Camp and the parents' seminar are free of charge because the Lions believe in serving others. Insulin, syringes and testing kits are also provided free of charge.

The Texas Lions Camp is a non-profit charitable organization that has been educating children about diabetes for 14 summers.

If you would like more information or need a Camp application, contact local Lions' Club member, Raymond White at 364-1155.

The Big Burner

Hereford's incinerator located at the city landfill on North Progressive, is said to be one of the best in the state by City Manager Darwin McGill. The incinerator is used to burn all of the clean burning trash. Burning the trash also keeps from having too much in the landfill.

Says McGill

Notices to be given

The City of Hereford will soon be cracking down on residents who let their property get out of hand, according to City Manager Darwin McGill.

As the summer months approach, grass and weeds begin to get out of control. The city will be sending out a notice to property owners if their land becomes unattractive. The landowner will have 10 days to get the property back into shape, or the city will come out and do the work for them -- but, if the city has to intervene, the landowner must pay a fee.

McGill said that the city has been doing this for a few years.

McGill also said that the city dump is still free of charge for the time being, but a fee may be assesed in the near future for non-city residents who use the dump. The dump is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and until noon on Saturday.

McGill also mentioned that the city also will be sending out notices to those who may overfill the dumpsters with large items or who throw big, bulky items near the dumpster or in the alley.

In a recent meeting of the city commission, it was voted on to allow McGill to add an admendment to the city ordinance stating that people would be fined for throwing large items near the dumpster.

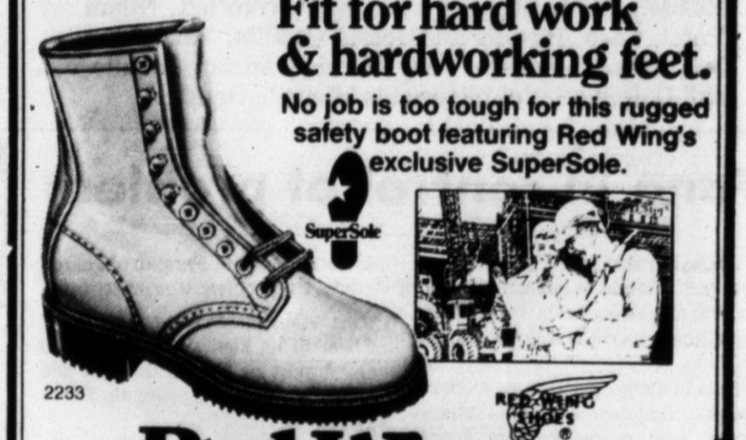

"Maybe after we send out a few notices, they will know to take things to the dump," said McGill.

Fang in control of problem

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Police in this Dallas suburb were faced with a gnawing problem until they found the solution in a Persian named Fang.

Rats in the property room were attacking evidence and other stored items, said property room supervisor Sgt. Doug Clancey and his assistant Detention Officer Don Swanz.

That's when officers enlisted Fang, a 20-pound feline.

Swanz said he called the city's animal shelter and asked for the "biggest, baddest" cat they had.

"I guess you could call it an interdepartmental transfer," said Swanz.

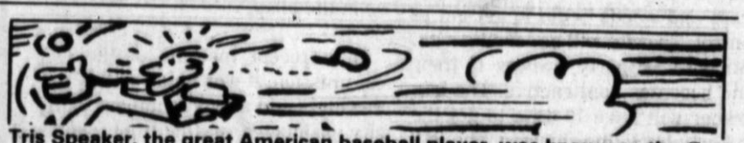

Before the white Persian cat came on duty, the problem was pretty bad.

One bold rodent chewed into a can of beer being kept as evidence on a shelf almost six feet off the floor and apparently drank its contents, Swanz said.

"The rats were getting into everything in here," Swanz said. "We put out rat traps, but the rats would pop the traps and steal the food in them. They're pretty smart.

He said the marauders are especially fond of tobacco, beer, candy and gum.

"I don't know if Fang has caught any rats yet, but he sure has kept them out of here."

THE RED CROSS

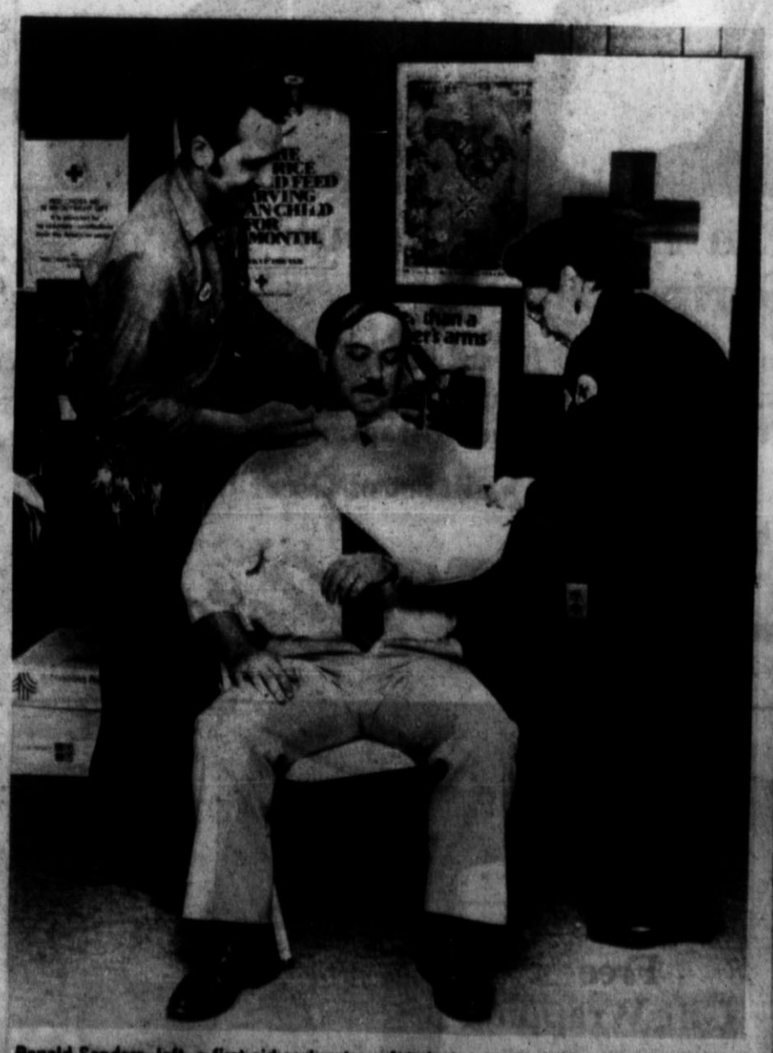

Four-year-old Eric Black peeks under the kick board from far left. Looking at the board in his mom's hands, Tyler and Karen Martin, water safety instructor, and her daughter Shyla, are getting into position to learn to kick in the water with a kick board. At right, Debbie Black, water safety instructor trainer, tells her daughter Erin to lay on her tummy and show them how it's done. Advance life saving classes, sponsored by the Red Cross, will begin May 12 at 6:30 p.m. Water safety classes are also offered by the Red Cross and they will begin June 9.

Garth Thomas, chairman of the board of directors of Red Cross, and Lupe Chavez, also a board member assist the Deaf Smith County Chapter of American Red Cross in any way they can, including sprucing up around the chapter's building grounds. Red Cross is primarily for assisting people in need when disaster strikes, such as the recent Sweetwater tornadoe. Luckily, Hereford hasn't had recently, but if disaster strikes our local Red Cross will be there.

Ronald Sanders, left, a first aid and water safety instructor, is ribbing the guy around the neck as he practices his first aid techniques. Pat Michael, a CPR instructor and also an emergency medical technician, sits patiently while Lottie Wertenberger, first aid and home nursing instructor, ties the final slip. CPR, first aid, and water safety play a big part in the American Red Cross- they really have to be prepared, for everything.

Kee Ruland, at right, a kindergarten teacher, pokes her finger in the manequin baby's mouth to remove anything obstructing it's breathing. Suzanne Duvall, left, a certified CPR and first aid instructor, advises the procedure to use when a child is choking. Ruland explained later that teachers must have training in first aid and CPR updated once a year as required by law.

Bethany Dawson, at left, sits with Grandma, Ruth King, as Olivia Brown takes her blood pressure. Mary Jane Burrus, chairman of nursing, standing left, oversees the procedure. She and other members of Red Cross are responsible for bringing a blood pressure clinic and several programs to Hereford as part of Red Cross' community service projects.

MRS. ROBERT TOYSTON BURTON
...nee Denise Renee Albracht

Albracht, Burton exchange nuptials

During a mid-morning wedding ceremony, Denese Rene Albracht of Hereford and Robert Toyston Burton of Midland were united in marriage at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Officiating was Father Patrick Walsh, S.A., of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Albracht of 201 Western and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Burton of Lubbock.

The main church altar was decorated by white gladioli arranged in gold vases and two gold tree candelabra holding off-white tapers and trimmed with greenery and pink beauty blossoms. Side altars were adorned with arrangements of pink beauty blossoms.

Janice Burton of Amarillo served her sister as maid of honor and William Burton was best man for his son.

Acolytes were the bride's nephews, Aaron Albracht, Michael Berend and Michael Albracht. Ministers of the Eucharist were the bride's uncles, Duane Albracht and Ray Berend.

Serving as groomsmen were the bride's brother, Joseph Albracht of Hereford, and Derrick Lynn of Lubbock.

The bride's niece, Jenny Burton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Burton of Amarillo, was the flower girl and ring bearer was the bride's nephew, Eric McNutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry McNutt.

The bride's sister, Cecilia Albracht, lit candles during the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Fromm of Prayer Town, Texas presented vocal selections accompanied by Cindy Baker on the piano and Sharon Cramer on the organ.

Musical pieces included "On Eagles Wings," "Wherever You Go," "Trumpets Voluntary," "Joyful, Joyful," "One Bread One Body," and "Only A Shadow."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a satin gown designed with Victorian sleeves with the lower sleeves of sheer organza accented with chantilly lace.

The drop-waist bodice of organza over satin was fashioned with a Victorian neckline of chantilly lace enhanced with tiny seed pearls extending down over sheer organza to create a striped extension of lace.

The full satin skirt swept into a semi-cathedral-legnth train edged with a wide border of chantilly lace.

An illusion bridal veil, scattered with seed pearls, graced the top of the small brimmed hat. The illusion was gathered at the back into a pouf and then fell to elbow-length.

The bride carried a fresh cascading bouquet of gardenias steophanotis, miniature pink roses and baby's breath.

Her jewelry consisted of pearl and diamond earrings and she carried a mother-of-pearl rosary carried by her mother when she married.

The maid of honor wore a beauty pink taffeta tea-length dress designed with an angeled dropped waist, dirndle skirt, and below the elbow-length puffed sleeves. The dress was accented at the hip with a large bow. She also wore a strand of graduated pearls and carried a nosegay of miniature pink roses, miniature beauty pink carnations, purple status, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The candlelighter and flower girl wore identical tea-length dresses of beauty pink taffeta with fitted bodices and bound scoop necklines. The skirts were flared and the elbow-length sleeves had gathered caps forming bands.

The necks were self fabric of scalloped embroidered ecru lace and the sleeves were ruffled. Deep flounces finished the hemlines of the skirts and the waists were marked by cumberbunds and bows in the center back of the dresses.

They each wore a strand of graduated pearls.

The candlelighter wore a wrist corsage of gardenias, miniature pink roses, miniature carnations, purple status and baby's breath.

The flower girl carried a basket covered with beauty pink taffeta with an overlay of sheer ecru lace. The basket was filled with miniature pink roses, miniature beauty pink carnations, purple status and baby's breath.

Donna Juett of Amarillo invited guests to register at the reception-brunch held at the E.B. Black house.

The groom's sisters, Rebecca Hooten of Austin and Mary Burton of Dallas, served cake, and punch and coffee were poured by Lisa Kittner of Midland and Becky Melugin.

The bridal couple's cake table was covered with an antique white crochet cloth which was a wedding gift made by the bride's paternal grandmother.

The bride's cake was decorated in ivory icing and fresh miniature pink roses, miniature beauty pink carnations, stephanotis, baby's breath and English ivy. The three cake layers were separated by pillars and topped with a fresh bouquet of matching flowers.

The groom's three-layered German chocolate cake was placed on the table decorated by brass accents and encircled with English ivy and baby's breath.

Crystal and brass accents were used on the brunch table which was decorated with a cascading fruit centerpiece. The brass punch bowl was encircled with fresh greenery, pink and purple status and baby's breath.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., the bride wore a tailored off-white belted skirt and off-white linen blouse with front pleats and embroidered cut-work detail on the collar and sleeve cuffs.

The couple will make their home after May 9 at 3907 Nasworthy Place, Midland, Texas.

The bride, a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated from Texas Tech Universeity in 1983 with a B.S. degree in home economics education. She is a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron, Home Economics Honor Society.

The bridegroom, a 1979 graduate of Monterey High School, received a B.S. degree in petroleum engineering in 1983 from Texas Tech. He is a member of Big Brothers/Big Sisters and Toastmasters.

Out-of-town guests represented Midland, Dallas, Austin, Amarillo, Slaton and Tyler.

Volunteers nominated

Hereford and surrounding area volunteers have been nominated for the 1986 7 WHO CARE Volunteer Recognition Program. Argen Draper, Lottie Wertenberger, Nell Culpepper, Homer Garrison and Gene Brock were submitted to KVII-TV and the Volunteer Action Center of Amarillo for consideration as one of the seven Outstanding Volunteers who have made an impact on their community.

"Three hundred and fifty-two nomination forms were judged by a panel of 21 area community leaders including W.D. "Bill" Johnson of Hereford," said Debra Patterson, Director of the Volunteer Center of the United Way of Amarillo. The seven winners selected were Maurine Allison, Happy; Mary Kay Blanton, Amarillo; Mary Lou Hazelrigg, Amarillo and Betty Lou Winkler, Liberal, Ks.

"The judges had to make some very difficult decisions as many candidates were nominated," commented Patterson.

Wildflower poster winners announced

In conjunction with "Operation Wildflower," the Bud to Blossom Garden Club recently held a Wildflower Poster Contest with the fourth grade students at West Central School.

Prior to the contest Mrs. Joe Spann and Mrs. Ronald Fuhrmann talked to the approximate 125 students about the importance of wildflowers and showed the illustrated lecture. "Flowers of Texas", by the Texas Highway Department.

Grand winners of the six classes of the fourth grade were Melissa Riley-first; Jeremy Jones-second; Katie Young-third; and Fidel Garcia honorable mention.

From Mr. Boyd's room the first place winner was Jeremy Jones; second, Emilio Cantu; and third, Edna Valdez. Honorable mention went to Stephanie Wilcox and Gilbert Castillo.

Mrs. Gallagher's winners were Katie Young, first; Shalon Taylor, second; Fidel Garcia, third; and Angelica Garza honorable mention.

Melissa Riley won first from Mrs. Gage's room. Other winners were Joel Salaza, second; Jose Casarez, third; Chris Lyles and Misty Dudley, both received honorable mention.

Mark Rodriguez won first in Mrs. Been's room with Armanda Hagar second; Amy Lescano,third; and Elid Ochou honorable mention.

Mrs. Stapp had Lee Parker as her first place winner.

Raul Martinez was first and Jodi Wallace was second in Mrs. Flores' room.

Texas Beautification and Litter Control Week was observed April 20-26, and Saturday, April 26, was not only Texas Wildflower Day but also "Texas Trash-Out" day. A movie, "Litter-Control and How to Stop It," from the Texas Highway Department was viewed by the entire West Central School. Mrs. Gaylon Bryan, Litter-Control chairman, arranged for the showing.

Because of the closely associated and connecting topics, some of the children chose Litter-Control as their topic for posters. Winners under Litter-Control were Chris Hodges, first; Haley Lockmiller, second; Prisca Cantu, third; and Spencer Rose, Jodi Northcutt and Becky Bridges-honorable mention.

These posters will be on display at the Deaf Smith County Library during the month of May.

58th Pioneer Round-up slated in Plainview

Complete plans for the 58th Pioneer Round-Up are taking shape, according to Doris Washington, president of the sponsoring organization, the Plainview Business and Professional Women's Club. The Round-Up will be held Saturday, May 17.

The traditional square dance will conclude the activities and the guest caller will be Sid Perkins of Plainview. Helen Burleson is dance chairman.

Perkins is calling for Promenaders of Plainview; Whirlers of Lockney-Floydada; Levi and Laces of Lubbock; Shirts and Skirts of Tulia; Castro County Kurlie Q's of Hart; and Spring Steppers of Roaring Springs.

He is teaching lessons in Tulia, Floydada, Plainview, Lubbock and Dimmitt.

Perkins is a veteran square dancer and has been calling for 23 years. He has called in Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and the New England states. He will be calling at Fun Valley, Colorado the first week of July and has called there for eleven years.

He is a past president of West Texas Callers and Teachers Assn; past president of Amarillo Area Callers & Teachers Assn and past president of New Mexico Callers & Teachers Assn.

Perkins is a full-time caller and has called for many benefit dances including the Cancer Fund and the Heart Fund. He has a radio program daily over KWLD, Wayland Baptist University.

Mrs. Burleson and Perkins cordially invites all square dancers to attend the Pioneer Round-Up and participate in the square dance which will begin at approximately 9 p.m. on Saturday night at the Hale County Agriculture Center. Everyone is also invited to enjoy the waltz, polka and other couple dances.

Mrs. Washington states the price of the tickets is $4.50 (tax included). This covers all activities beginning with the supper at 6 p.m., the program at 8 p.m. and the square dance at 9 p.m. and tickets may be secured from any member of the Plainview Business and Professional Women's Club.

Also everyone is invited to shop that day for baked products at the Kountry Kitchen beginning at 9 a.m. at the Agriculture Center.

Couple observe 40th wedding anniversary here Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Celso Romero celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary Saturday. They were honored with a Mass ceremony, reception and dance at St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

Serving as hosts were the couple's children and their spouses including Mr. and Mrs. Archie Romero, Mr. and Mrs. Zack Romero, Carlos Romero, Anthony Romero and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Gomez.

Celso Romero and the former Carolina Madrid were married May 2, 1946 in Las Vegas, N.M. Romero is retired from employment at Champion Feeders and his wife is a housewife. They have three grandchildren.

To allow more cabinet space for canned goods, keep an extra bread box in the kitchen just for the baby's special foods.

MARIE HAMBY, BRADLEY BELFORD

Couple to wed

Una Marie Hamby and Bradley Lewis Belford, both of Hereford, plan to be united in marriage May 18 at Kingsland Community Church in Kingsland, Texas.

The bride-elect is the daughter of James M. and Mary R. Hamby of 328 Ave. E. and the prospective bridegroom is the son of former Hereford residents, the Rev. and Mrs. George Belford of Kingsland.

Miss Hamby, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, studied fashion photography at Amarillo College. She is employed by St. Thomas Episcopal Church and Mary R. Hamby Photography.

Belford, a 1985 graduate of Community Christian High School in Hereford, is a member of Kiwanis Club and is employed as an emergency medical technician at Deaf Smith General Hospital and Home Health.

POLLY'S POINTERS — What kids draw makes gift quilt

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — The the next gift-giving occasion for that special person, try this: Cut muslin squares 7x7 inches or larger. Have the kids color a picture, write their name, trace their hands or whatever, using crayons on the square. (Secure the square with masking tape to a tabletop while they're coloring to prevent wrinkles, fraying and stretching.) When the pictures are done, lay the squares face down on top of a scrap of fabric and place another fabric piece on top. Iron with a hot iron, pressing the crayon into the fabric. Remove the crayoned square from between the fabric scraps. Then cut more squares of a patterned fabric and lay into a quilt pattern along with the crayoned squares. You don't have to make a large quilt; a lap quilt is nice. I guarantee this will be a treasured gift. It also makes a nice baby quilt from older brothers and sisters or to an expecting teacher from her students. — JANET

DEAR JANET — This is a lovely family project. The squares could also be used on a smaller scale in a pillow cover. I bet lots of grandmas and grandpas out there would love to receive a sample of the grandchildren's artwork preserved in such a manner, too! Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To give seashells a nice shine, rub them on the outside with baby oil and a fine cotton cloth or cotton ball, then wipe them off with a dry cloth so they are not oily. This brings out the pretty colors in the shells and gives them a nice shine. — MRS. M.M.

DEAR POLLY — When baking fruit cookies, I spray my pancake turner with non-stick cooking spray. This makes removal of the cookies easier. — TRACY

Concert Association tickets available

Those wishing to join the Hereford Community Concert Association may purchase tickets from May 5-17 at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

Family pass tickets are priced at $40; individual tickets, $15; and students may obtain a season pass for $7.50.

All concerts will be held at the Hereford High School auditorium.

Booked for a country sound are the Tennessee River boys from Nashville. They have played with several major artists at Opryland, in some television specials and on "Hee-Haw." Four band members back up the three vocalists.

Arthur Woodley, a versatile bass-baritone, will have a concert to show his vocal talent. He has been in major roles in Carnegie Hall and several operas.

Phil Coulter's Pops Orchestra of Ireland will bring a program of international favorites. His band is a big name product in the British Isles and Ireland.

The Alexandria Quintet puts together a flute, harp, violin, viola, and cello for a wide-repertoire of classical music.

Ann Meyer is serving as the association's membership drive chairman.

The ancient Aztecs are said to have considered chocolate such a prestigious drink that the golden goblets in which it was served were thrown away after one use.

The foreheads of the Dinka women of Southern Sudan are heavily scarred to symbolize the horns of cattle, which the tribe consider beautiful as well as vital to the tribe's existence, according to National Geographic.

The tallest cabbages in the world are found on the island of Jersey in the English Channel. The plants — some growing up to 15 feet tall — are too bitter to eat, but one group of local craftsmen make the woody stalks into fancy walking sticks.

Ann Landers

No answer

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As a reader of your column for many years I know that you not only help those with troubles, but you also educate them. May I share with you and your readers my recent experience with the Soviet people?

In November I visited the Soviet Union for three weeks with a group of 29 others. Our purpose was to meet average folks like ourselves and let them know Americans want peace. Since we were permitted to move about unsupervised, our task was easy.

The Soviets I encountered were warm, friendly and accepting of us. They are aware that the actions of our government do not always reflect the wishes of all the people. They believe most Americans are eager for peace.

When I asked a 17-year-old Soviet youth how he felt about Americans, he thought for a moment and said, "I believe the American people and my people want the same things – peace, happiness and the right to live their lives as they choose. But we also feel that war is profitable for the American industrialists and they wish to keep war alive. In our country we may not speak to our government about such matters. But from what I understand, in your country you may speak to your government about anything you wish, and we are depending on you to do just that."

It might be time for all Americans who have felt frustrated and helpless about the threat of nuclear war to exercise the right given to us by our Constitution. We must start, as the young Soviet said, to speak to our government so it will know exactly what we want.--AN AVERAGE AMERICAN IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR AVERAGE AMERICAN: A while back I printed a column describing what the world would be like if we had a nuclear war. I asked my readers to clip it out, write their names across the top and mail it to President Reagan. Within three days, the president was good enough to let me know that he had approximately 100,000 columns on his desk.

"Wait, Mr. President. This is only the beginning. There will be more."

President Reagan suggested that my readers write to Brezhnez "because," he said, "that's where the problem is."

Brezhnev is now gone and for the first time in memory, The chairman of the Soviet Union is a young, healthy, contemporary man millions of Americans can relate to. I am more optimistic about our chances of getting along with Russia than at any time since World War II.

The real threat is the ruthless, mindless terrorism among the countries in the Middle East. How does one deal with people who believe it is a privilege and an honor to die in battle and that their reward for heroic suicide is eternal life? The lady who specializes in answers wishes she had the answer to this one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My mother refuses to attend my wedding because I have invited my sister, to whom Mom has not spoken for two years. My father will not walk me down the aisle because he doesn't "feel like it."

I am paying for the wedding myself. How can I make this day a joyous one?--DOWNHEARTED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Inform your parents that you'd love to have them participate if they choose to. Don't beg. If they choose not to, the reflection will be on them, not you. Make you mind to be happy–no matter what.

Public invited to meeting

The public is invited to a meeting of The Deaf Smith County Chemical People Task Force at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Shirley Media Center

Special guests will include members of the Hereford High School Keywanette Club.

TODAY'S HISTORY: In 1886, seven policemen were killed and scores of people were injured at Haymarket Square in Chicago when a bomb was thrown at an anarchist rally. The Haymarket riot swayed opinion against the labor movement.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS: Horace Mann (1796); Thomas Huxley (1825); Audrey Hepburn (1929).

TODAY'S QUOTE: "Every great advance in natural knowledge has involved the absolute rejection of authority." — Thomas Huxley.

TODAY'S MOON: Between last quarter (April 30) and new moon (May 8).

TODAY'S TRIVIA: Where was Audrey Hepburn born? (a) Belgium (b) Connecticut (c) Indonesia

TODAY'S BARBS
BY PHIL PASTORET

Our minister says that even the most sedentary of his parishioners become incredibly nimble when they're dodging the collection basket.

You can tell summer is on its way when your neighbor returns the snow blower and borrows your lawn mower.

TODAY'S TRIVIA ANSWER: (a) Audrey Hepburn was born in Brussels, Belgium.

A clothing store in Georgia has run an ad in the same place in its local newspaper since 1889.

KRISTY SIMONS, GARRY PARMAN

Engagement announced

Kristy Lynn Simons and Garry Wayne Parman, both of Lubbock, plan to exchange wedding vows June 28 in the First Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Tom Simons and Jenna Simons, both of Hereford, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Steve Carroll of Amarillo and Darleen Carroll of Hereford.

Miss Simons, a graduate of Hereford High School, is currently attending Texas Tech University where she is majoring in accoutning. She is employed by Texas Tech University.

Parman, also a graduate of HHS, is majoring in accounting at Tech and is presently employed by the Lubbock Avalanche Journal.

Bay View meets for final spring session

Bay View Study Club members met for "a picnic on the Tierra Blanca" at noon Thursday at the Hereford Country Club.

Picnic baskets contained cornish hens, cheese wedges, finger foods, fruit, rolls, Perrier water, coffee and cake squares.

Following the luncheon, president Meredith Wilcox recognized special guest, Sara Durham, and conducted the business meeting.

Amy Gililland installed new officers for the 1986-87 club year.

AVOID MISUNDERSTANDING
By Bob Wear

MISUNDERSTANDINGS probably rob us of more joy and contentment than any other source of loss. We often think and talk about the problems we have in effective communication, in trying to attain this success. Communicate means to understand and to be understood. We may never reach perfection in communications, but we can continue to move in this direction. We can be diligent to 'avoid misunderstandings.'

WE OFTEN FAIL to be clear and exact in transmitting our thoughts, or our needs, or our instructions, or our wishes, or our feelings. To whatever extent these happenings occur there will be some misunderstanding. Much of it will not cause serious difficulty, but some of it does. Obviously, we must be just as careful and thorough as we can be in all of these actions. Misunderstandings also arise when we are not honest in the transmission or reception of a message.

LACK OF CONSIDERATION for other people and their feelings can cause some breakdown in communication resulting in misunderstandings. This problem may be with either the communicator or the recipient. This can be overcome, to a very great extent, is we actually develop and maintain a genuine and honest concern about making sure that we are understood and that we understand others. We must actually care and make this important.

SOME PEOPLE don't listen. They may be pre-occupied, or distracted, or rude, or they may not care. They may be so self-centered, and so unmindful of others that they have lost touch and have no interest in successful communication. With these, there will always be misunderstandings.

WE MUST NOT take anything for granted. We must never assume that others have the information which we must supply. It is better to repeat, and repeat to make sure; than to take so much for granted. From the other side, we must always make sure that we have the full report, and never jump to hasty conclusions. We can avoid most misunderstandings.

In 1917, Republican Representative Jeannette Rankin of Montana became the first woman to serve in Congress.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Director

Two bestsellers are available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "A Perfect Spy" by John LeCarre and "Enter Talking" by Joan Rivers.

The premier spy novelist of our time now gives us his largest and most engrossing work. It is a novel that plumbs the essential nature of espionage itself as it interweaves the story of a secret international manhunt with the unfolding of a secret life–the life of a man of spectacular gifts, nursed on deceit, schooled in betrayal, incapable of love: a perfect spy.

The man is Magnus Pym, a senior partner in "the Firm" of British intelligence; a man whose boundless charm, energy, and wit so dazzle that no two people have ever perceived him in the same way; a man unknown, really, and perhaps unknowable, even to those closest to him.

For Magnus Pym has disappeared. His superiors, his colleagues, his friends are baffled. Even his wife is shaken. And while they follow their frenzied attempts to discover Pym's whereabouts–a search that soon galvanizes the espionage communities of both East and West as it continually opens into new labyrinths of mystery, as it unearths a clandestine chain of operations in Washington, Vienna, Prague, London and Berlin.

"A Perfect Spy" is a magnificent novel whose most remarkable achievement is to immerse us at once in two parallel dramas. It is a work that surpasses any novel we have yet had from John Le Carre.

"Enter Talking" is the story of Joan Rivers. It is the bitter and bizarre struggle, the desperate hilarity, the deep pain and anger, that created one of the world's foremost comedians. It is the story of Joan River's obsessed childhood and apprentice years, her battle against doubting parents, sleazy agents, hostile audiences in tawdry clubs, until literally in one night, she burst through into the bright light of her show-business dream.

"Enter Talking" tells the suspense of how she achieved her happy ending. It is a ringing testimony to the power of persistence.

Casey Cobb named as honor student

Casey Cobb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cobb of Hereford, received the Aggie of the Month award for December.

The honor was bestowed on Cobb when the Texas Tech University College of Agricultural Sciences recognized outstanding departmental and high academic achievement students and Aggies of the Month during the annual Ag Honors Banquet held this month.

Jaime Neeper looks through the history of the Episcopal Church Women's organization at St. Thomas Episcopal Church that is displayed in the church scrapbook. She glances over a page that came from last year's Tour of Tables, which was the first competition sponsored by the ECW. It's been exactly one year since the last Tour of Tables competition was held and today the community is invited to view the 19 entrants from 2-5 p.m. at the Community Center.

Bridal shower given for Lori Fischer

A bridal shower was held recently for Lori Fischer in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The honoree and Allan Mongold plan to exchange wedding vows May 31.

Vicky Mongold, the prospective bridegroom's sister, invited guests to register and another sister, Donni Tice, assisted by Cindy Morgan, served refreshments.

The main serving table was covered with a cream colored lace cloth and enhanced by crystal appointments. The bride-elect's chosen color of dusty rose was used in the central potted plant, cake, mints, and napkins. Also, served were nuts and punch.

Recognized as special out-of-town guests were the honoree's mother, Norma Fischer, and her sister, Lisa Howell, both of Amarillo; and Elizabeth Moynihan of Clovis,N.M.

Serving as hostesses were Edwina Thomas, Mary Lou Shore, June Rudd, Dolly Parker, Cathy Sammann, Violet Barton, Carolyn Evers, Marlene Roe and Karen Shore.

Bride-Elect Honored

Accent on Health

Heart disease is by far the leading killer of older persons. In Texas, where the older population is the fastest growing age group, nearly 40,000 persons 65 and older die annually from heart attacks or related cardiovascular problems. But according to the Texas Department of Health, the incidence of heart disease can be greatly reduced by individuals who take a few, basic precautions.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Commissioner of Health, said, "Certain risk factors, physical characteristics and personal habits can create dangerous heart conditions. Diabetes, high blood pressure, and tendencies toward obesity usually can be controlled, with the help of a physician. And smoking, high blood cholesterol levels, and lack of exercise can be corrected by the individual."

He said young people should be aware that most heart disease in older people is the result of many years' cumulative effects. Any reduction of risk can help lessen the collective wear and tear on the heart. "Older people should know that even if they already have suffered some heart damage, by starting now to properly maintain their hearts, they may minimize future risk," Dr. Bernstein said.

He named six steps each person should take to reduce the risk of heart disease. They are:

-Do not smoke. Smoking is the single most preventable cause of heart disease. Remarkably, people who have smoked for many years can reduce their risk to 10 percent above normal in the first year after stopping. Ten years after ceasing to smoke, a former smoker is no more at risk than a person who has never smoked.

-Have your blood pressure checked at least once a year. If you learn that you have high blood pressure, follow your doctor's orders for reducing salt and fats in your diet, and taking prescribed medications.

-Lower your blood cholesterol level. Most Americans' diets include too many saturated fats, which in time can accumulate in the blood vessels, forcing the heart to exert more pressure than it should.

-If you find that you are diabetic, follow your doctor's orders for medication and diet.

-Get plenty of exercise. Activity stimulates the entire cardiovascular system and keeps the heart muscle in condition to withstand unexpected stresses.

-Know your family health history. Persons whose parents or other close relatives have experienced heart problems may be prone to develop similar conditions. Such people should be especially careful to reduce their risks.

"You have to wonder," Dr. Bernstein added, "how much longer the human lifespan could be, if everyone minimized their risks as they should. Since heart disease is the cause of death for more than a third of the people 65 and older, those entering that age group might well look forward to many more healthy, productive years than they do now. In medicine, we still don't know how long as well-maintained heart can be expected to last. But wouldn't it be wonderful to find out?"

Baptist Women assemble for salad supper, program

Members of Baptist Women of First Baptist Church met Thursday evening in the church fellowship hall for a salad supper and program.

The opening prayer was led by Lille Stagner.

President Lee presided over the business meeting and prayer requests for the sick and bereaved were asked for.

Leatrus Clark reported that her grandson, Preston Clark, went with B.S.U. from W.T. on a mission trip to Ohio during spring break.

Also, a report on prayer retreat at the Trinity Baptist Church in Amarillo was given. Wilma Reed followed the theme of the retreat, "Discover Christ in Me Through Prayer."

Donnie Owen presented the program, "The Communicators." The setting was in a television studio with Owen serving as narrator.

Other characters included Mr. A. Wise Futrist, Mildred Drake; missionary, Cole Cochran, director of Japan Baptist Communication Center, Bonnie Sublett; and Zeb Moss, concultant of communicators in Nairobi, Kenya, Lillie Stagner. Moss said, "Mass media is a useful tool in the whole range of proclaiming, teaching and training in discipleship. With some 68 percent of the world's population labeled as non-Christian today, mass media certainly has its place in our work."

Clark closed with the calendar of prayer for missionaries and prayer requests from Association for New Missions. A piano is needed for the Hereford mission.

The next meeting was set for May 15.

Ella Oglesby and Eunice Boyer served as hostesses for the 14 members present.

Executive dish

Calvin Coolidge, who invited members of Congress to breakfast meetings at the White House, startled his guests one morning by pouring coffee and cream into his saucer. In confusion, several others at the table did the same. Without a word, the president placed his saucer on the floor for his dog.

Crowley inducted at WTSU

Marcia D. Crowley of Hereford was among 24 West Texas State University students who were introduced into the Iota Theta Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, the national scholastic honor society in education at the spring initiation recently.

Kappa Delta Pi is limited to upperclass students with an overall grade-point average of 3.25 or better (3.0 or better in professional education courses). There are 50,000 active members in 400 college and university chapters nationwide. WTSU has had a chapter since 1960.

Big country

Canada is the world's second-largest country, territorially. It extends from the North Pole to the U.S. border and includes all the islands of the Arctic from near Greenland to the Alaskan border. Its seacoast is one of the world's longest. It includes 17,860 miles of mainland and 41,810 miles of islands.

In 1859, Frank W. Woolworth opened the first of a series of stores that later became famous around the world.

Old words

Authorities disagree on where the ancient Romans got the name Junius, our month of June. Perhaps from Juno, the queen of their gods. Possibly from juniores (youths), to whom the month was dedicated, as May was to majores, the elders.

Among the newest looks in this year's window fashions are pleated fabric shades, which feature clean horizontal lines, a soft designer look and a wide range of colors, prints and textures.

Some pleated fabrics are metallized, such as the ones bonded with an ultra-thin layer of aluminum for energy efficiency by Verosol USA Inc. of Pittsburgh. Since they are anti-static, cleaning is rarely necessary.

The metallized shades cut glare and reduce directly-transmitted solar energy by up to 80 percent but are so light you can see through them. Thus they provide protection against summer's direct sunlight, while in cold temperatures give the insulating value of a storm window.

For more privacy, heavier density material is available.

Peach elected as Woman of the Year

For her achievements in business, Cherry Peach was elected Woman of the Year by Top O' Texas Chapter of the American Business-Women's Association (ABWA) in Amarillo.

Since joining the chapter in 1982, Peach has served as vice-president and boss night chairman. She also was selected as Boss of the Year in her chapter in 1984.

Each chapter elects one of its members for the annual award. Selection is based on the member's achievements in her field of business, education, community activities and participation in ABWA.

ABWA is dedicated to the professional, educational, cultural and social advancement of women.

Peach and her family recently moved to Westway where her husband, James, is pastor of Westway Baptist Church.

CHERRY PEACH

Avoid retirement trap

A man we'll call Charley Hudson was a mild social drinker most of his productive professional life as an aerospace engineer.

When forced to retire at 65, he began to drink more–and feel it more.

Fortunately his wife, Amy, acted as a brake on his drinking.

But when she died two years ago, the desolate Charley began drinking heavily. Several months ago, his children brought him to a substance abuse center in Southern California. He was disoriented and depressed. And his judgement, motor abilities and thinking were severely impaired. He told his doctors he no longer cared. He was ready to die.

Charley soon discovered alcoholism is a long, slow, painful and denigrating death. He eventually accepted the help offered him.

At 72, Charley–now released from treatment and participating in the treatment center's aftercare program– is staying sober and trying to reassemble the life left him. With support from his friends and children, he has a better than average chance of making it.

But no one told him it was going to be easy, particularly since Charley has an extra albatross around his neck–he's old.

Over the past decade, aging Americans have quietly and steadily become the newest group at high risk for alcoholism. And this situation is almost certain to worsen because a steadily increasing percentage of the population is moving into the over-60 age group.

A recent study found that the number of people 55 or older in substance abuse treatment programs has tripled over the past 10 years and is still growing.

The reasons for the startling numbers of elderly alcoholics include:

–Too much leisure time. Many activities retired people enjoy such as golf or bridge often revolve around drinking.

–Loneliness. Alcohol can become an anesthetic–even a trusted friend–to people who suddenly find themselves alone for long, bleak stretches of time.

–Special stresses of aging. It's difficult to watch friends and spouses die, and children and grandchildren move away. It's tempting to seek solace in a bottle.

–Denial. Because the older generation was raised during a time when alcoholism was considered a moral weakness instead of a disease, denial is more vehement.

–Physiological changes that lower tolerance to alcohol. The aging process causes the body's metabolism and liver detoxification process to slow down. This means that what was once comfortable social drinking can become dangerous to an older person. Lower tolerance to alcohol is further complicated by the fact that many physicians who mistake the symptoms of alcoholism for those of aging.

The elderly can take basic steps to protect themselves from slipping into the alcoholism trap.

First, recognize your susceptibility to alcohol and cut down accordingly. Occupy your time with constructive, challenging activities. View retirement as a beginning instead of the end of life and get involved with groups that don't rely on drinking to have a good time. This column provided by the CareUnit at Palo Duro Hospital.

Recruitment program scheduled

The Hereford-Dimmitt Extension of the Amarillo College Vocational Nursing Program has started its recruitment program for the 1986-87 class year.

On Wednesday, at 1:15 p.m., a meeting will be held in the classroom at Deaf Smith General Hospital to explain the program curriculum.

The vocational nursing program prepares the student to write state board examinations in order to practice as a licensed vocational nurse. Classes are held in Hereford, Dimmitt and Amarillo.

Registration for the summer session will be held from 9 a.m. until noon June 1 on the Washington Street Campus. The first class day is June 2 in Amarillo.

For more information contact the Educational Department at the local hospital.

Red Cross Update

The Uniformed Volunteers will meet for a workday at the office Tuesday, May 13, in place of their regular luncheon for May 8. Volunteers are asked to bring a sack lunch and spend any time they can spare to help with Spring House Cleaning.

The Board of Directors will meet Tuesday, May 20, noon, at the office.

The latest report on the Sweetwater tornado disaster relief includes the following information. At the Service Center located at Third and Cane, 239 families have registered for emergency assistance. Mass care workers using seven vans have served 14,301 meals to disaster workers and victims.

Red Cross Health Services have assisted 101 people with disaster related illnesses or injuries or who have lost medical supplies. The Red Cross disaster operation has been assisted by 275 volunteers.

Anyone wishing to make a donation to the disaster fund may do so through our local office P.O. Box 1371 Hereford or coming by the office at 224 South Main St.

WHEN IT RAIN

Remember back last year when your grocery shopping c things got a whole lot better when Bag & Save and Price gee, just a few months later, Smith's came along and b
Hereford,

NEW STORE COMPLETE!

So... now we have two big grocery stores right down the street from each other. Naturally, both of us want your business. Save'n'Gain offers you the lowest prices in town, the largest selections and the freshest produce, meat and dairy products. Smith's ads proclaims that they are the store that "brought Hereford Everyday Low Prices and Carry Out Service." We disagree with the part about everyday low prices (Save'n'Gain's prices are still lower than Smith's and have been from the day they opened their doors.) But we sure can't argue about that carryout service!

DON'T BREAK YOUR BAC OVER LOW GROCERY

LOW PRICES + CARRYOUT SERVICE = EVERYDAY LOW PRIC AND CARR SERVICE EXTRA CH

By Shopping Smith's Food and Drug Center, you're doing all you can to stay within your family's budget because you won't find lower grocery prices in any other store in Hereford. It's that simple.

HERE'S HOW WE DO IT ...

Smith's has grown into one of the largest privately owned supermarket chains in the country, operating in seven states. We accomplished that by being more than just a grocery warehouse to our customers. We believe full service is just as important as low prices. It's something that our customers are entitled to, not an "extra" that they lose to enjoy low prices

Just as important. Smith's i supermarket...that means w friendly people available to and load them into your car us you don't pay extra for.

So the next time you shop store because of wallet st remember back strain too Then come to Smith's. Both your wallet and you will feel a lot better.

LOW PRICES & CARRYOUT SERVICE MADE FOR HEREFORD

HOW IMPORTANT IS CARRYOUT SERVICE?

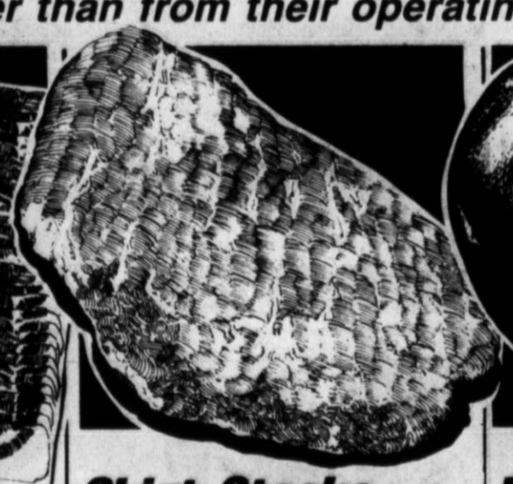

One of Smith's recent ads read: "...we have plenty of friendly people available to bag your groceries and load them in your car. It's a service from us you don't pay extra for." Does this mean that the folks who give you carryout service at Smith's don't get salaries or benefits? Do they do it for free? Does this mean that these people's paychecks come out of Smith's profits rather than from their operating budget? Do you believe for one minute that YOU don't pay for this service in the long run by paying a penny here and a nickle there for higher prices? If carryout service is more important to you than rock-bottom prices, then you're a Smith customer from the word go and we wish you every happiness. But if saving money is more important to you, then you should be shopping at Save'n'Gain.

Sims installs new officers

Tricia Sims installed new club officers when members of La Madre Mia Study Club met Tuesday at the E.B. Black House. The dinner was served by Something Special.

Lucy Rogers will serve as president; Mary Beth White, vice-president; Sharon Hodges, secretary; Jenna Simons, treasurer; Tricia Sims, parliamentarian; Judy Williams, reporter; and Betty Martin, historian.

"Attic Antiques" was the theme of the installation and book markers with antiques pictured on each were presented to new officers.

Tables of four were decorated with white cloths, red and blue napkins and baskets of ivy with Texas flags.

Georgia Sparks was presented a gift for perfect attendance for the year and Sims was presented a gift as out-going president. Names were also drawn for secret pals for summer months.

Also, new members were welcomed including Beverly Lambert and Merle Clark.

President Rogers named standing committees.

Jeri Bezner will serve as home tour chairman; Mary Beth White, membership; Jenna Simons, finance; Betty Taylor, yearbook; Pat Walsh, social; Georgia Sparks, telephone; Betty Owen, courtesy; and Carolyn Baxter, project.

Serving on the yearbook committee will be Betty Taylor, Lavoo Nieman, Susan Robbins, Joyce Allred and Betty Martin.

Social committee members are Pat Walsh, Mary Herring, Francyne Bromlow, Tricia Sims, Marline Watson and Beverly Lambert.

Those on the telephone committee are Georgia Sparks, Gladys Merritt, Mysedia Smith, Merle Clark and Jenna Simons.

Betty Owen, Judy Williams and Mary Bety White are on the courtesy committee and project committee members are Carolyn Baxter, Betty Lady and Ruth Black.

Beware of insect dangers

Spring weather can mean danger for Texans who get bitten or stung by insects.

Insects cause a number of injuries to people each year when outdoor activities increase. The worst offenders are bees, wasps and yellow-jackets. The greatest peril from insect-people encounters is allergic reactions, points out Dr. Phil Hamman, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. He notes that insect bites kill at least nine times more Americans than do snake bites.

People have different reactions to insect venoms, and allergic reactions are classfied by the severity of one's boy reaction, notes Hamman.

He cites at least three levels of reactions insect bites and stings can cause:

–Slight reactions, including itching, inflammation of the skin or anxiety.

–Moderate reactions, including swelling, abdominal pain or nausea.

–Severe reactions, including difficulty in breathing or swelling, hoarseness or confusion.

Most severe would probably be a shock reaction that causes a drop in blood pressure, collapse or unconsciousness, says Hamman. Moderate and severe reactions from an insect bite or sting are enough cause to see a doctor. Capture the offending insect if possible to help the doctor in providing treatment.

Students not disciplined

AUSTIN (AP) — McCallum High School officials say they can't do anything about 175 seniors who took an unauthorized holiday.

However, an award winning teacher, Deron Bissett, apparently has been reassigned because of "skip day."

Bissett, who was named the outstanding high school science teacher in 1982 by the Science Teachers of Texas, has been reassigned to the school district's learning resource center.

Carroll Patterson, outgoing president of the school's PTA, said Bissett's reassignment was related to the skip day.

In 1919, the Third International, known as the Comintern, was established in Russia.

Genealogy discussed at extension meeting

Jeanette Ramey spoke about genealogy when members of North Hereford Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Edith Higgins.

Ramey stated that the Deaf Smith County Genealogical was organized in the late 1960s. The speaker has been tracing her family tree for approximately 20 years. She said, "To research your family tree, start by asking your family members first."

Martha Lueb led the opening exercise by reading "Maturity" by Jill Francis.

During the business meeting with Peg Hoff presiding, it was announced that the Council will be selling sesquicentennial cookbooks for $10.95 each. Anyone wishing to purchase one may call the extension office at the courthouse. The state extension clubs give eight scholarships to 4-H girls.

Also, during the business session, Martha Lueb was elected as a nominee for delegate to the state meeting and each club woman in district I was asked to donate $1 for Girls Town.

Those present included Evelyn Crofford, Hoff, Brenda Campbell, Marcella Hoffman, Anna Werlein, Lueb, Higgins and Naomi Brisendine.

Teddy bears

The World Almanac Book of Inventions reports that both Americans and Russians claim to have invented the teddy bear in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Czar Nicholas II gave toy bears as gifts to his hosts. President Theodore Roosevelt presented his son with a toy bear after his son's live bear died. The bear was named after the president's son, Teddy.

DR. GOTT — Bad habits are problem's cause

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR. GOTT — I am a 50-year-old male. For the past 18 years I have been working in heating and air conditioning, around a lot of asbestos and dust. I smoke two packs of cigarettes and drink six 16-ounce cans of beer a day. My problem is phlegm in the throat. My doctor's latest prescriptions do nothing to help. Am I lacking in communication with my doctor?

DEAR READER — The answer to your question is so self-evident that when I first read your letter, I thought you were pulling my leg. However, after a re-reading it, I suspect that you truly do lack communication with your doctor. Have you told your physician how much you drink and smoke?

To begin with, you are working in an environment that is very likely to produce bronchial irritation. Short of changing jobs or using a mask, you probably have little control over this environment.

More important, your smoking pattern is something you do have control over. If you cut out the cigarettes, your phlegm problem will certainly improve. In addition, you are drinking too much beer. The alcohol-nicotine combination is a real health hazard.

All the prescriptions in the world aren't going to help you until you address the real causes of your difficulty. Stop smoking, reduce your beer consumption to no more than two cans a day and wear a mask at work. Once you have altered your behavior, the medicine may be much more effective. In fact, you may not need it at all.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Health Report, LIVING WITH CHRONIC LUNG DISEASE, which describes the causes and management of lung problems. Others who want a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is mental illness something that can be cured or is one stuck with it for life?

DEAR READER — Mental illness encompasses a wide range of behavioral abnormalities. Some forms tend to improve with time, while others get worse with age. Our present medical knowledge about mental diseases is painfully inadequate. Although most types tend to be chronic, treatments like psychotherapy and drug therapy appear to help many people who have mental illness.

Numerous diseases are lifetime problems. Diabetes, arteriosclerosis and mental illnes are treatable and controllable; that fact is probably more important than the issue of being "stuck" with a condition for life. Sometimes one's attitude counts more than the chronic nature of the disease.

DEAR GOTT — I recently started using tampons, and I change them frequently. My mother says they are bad because they act like a plug. Is this true or is it just an old wives' tale?

DEAR READER — At the risk of antagonizing some well-intentioned mothers, I must state that tampons are safe, if they are used according to manufacturers' directions and are changed at appropriate intervals. Many conservative adults consider the use of tampons by teenagers to be inappropriate. However, this view is not shared by specialists in the field of reproduction. If a girl wishes to use tampons and her mother prefers pads, I usually suggest that a gentle and sympathetic gynecologist be used as a mediator. If no physical problem is present, any mensturating female can safely use tampons. These products do not work like plugs; they are highly absorbent and actually blot up menstrual residue.

Gem, mineral show set

Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club met recently at the Flame Room. President, Thama Pearson, presided.

Joe Williams reminded members that the Amarillo Gem and Mineral Show is coming up on May 10-11. It will be held at Amarillo Civic Center in Amarillo.

Stella Hershey led members in singing Happy Birthday to members having birthdays in the month of April.

Jack Nunley reported on a trip to Turkey for Bob Wills Day and Garth Thomas reminded members to pay Bob Newell.

Hosts for the meeting were Ezell and Verba Sadler and Weldon and Bobbye Roberson.

A program was given by Jack and Helen Nunley and Dale and Betty Henson on their trip to Carls Bad Caverns, Davis Mountains, and Guadalupe Mountains.

Thirty-three members and one guest, Alice Wilks, a guest of Fred Mulkey, were present.

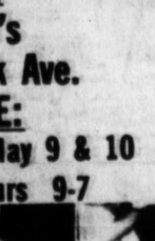

In old Scotland, Parliament passed a law forbidding any man to turn down a girl who proposed to him on Leap Year, under penalty of a $500 fine.

A force of British and Canadians, under Lt. Col. George MacDonnell, crossed the ice of the St. Lawrence River Feb. 22, 1813, and captured Ogdenburg, N.Y. The raid, during the War of 1812, was in retaliation for an attack on Brockville.

CLASSIFIED ADS

Classified advertising rates are based on a minimum of 20 words. One day is 13 cents per word or $2.60 minimum. Rates below are for consecutive issues, no copy change, and apply to solid ad lines only.

TIMES	RATES	MIN.
1 day per word:	.13	2.60
2 days per word:	.22	4.40
3 days per word:	.31	6.20
4 days per word:	.40	8.00
5th day FREE

Add 9 cents per word for additional days: 10 days (2 free) is 15.20 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is 22.40; month 27.80.

Classified display rates apply for special captions, paragraphing, bold type or larger type, and ads not set with full lines. $2.60 per column inch, $2 a column inch for additional insertions, or $1.75 a column inch per month.

LEGALS

Advertising rates for legal notices are $3.50 per column inch for the first insertion and $3 per column inch for consecutive issues.

Deadlines for classified ads are 3 p.m. daily for the next day's edition; 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition.

Cash is required on advertisements under $10.

ERRORS

Every effort is made to avoid errors in Classified Ads and legal notices. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. In case of errors not the fault of the advertiser, an additional insertion will be given.

Pump Installations and Repairs are a Job for Certified Pump Installers

Looking for a pump for a new or existing water well? Or do you just need some repair work on your present one? If the answer is yes to either one, your next move should be to call a certified pump installer. Each certified installer has been tested by the National Water Well Association on his ability and knowledge to install, troubleshoot, and repair water pumps. Only those who have successfully completed the examination are permitted to display the symbol of a certified drilling contractor. Look for the emblem of confidence. Call this certified pump installer

POSTAL JOBS
CLERK & CARRIER POSITIONS
($9.48/hr to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Hereford, Dimmitt, Friona, Bovina and Vega Post Offices. APPLICATIONS ARE BEING ACCEPTED APRIL 28TH THROUGH MAY 9TH ONLY! (And since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!)

4-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.
★ You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.
WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (Includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Corey Guide to Postal Exams [with 6 complete practice tests], a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, "12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service" Booklet, Follow-Up Consultation Privileges, Achievement Award to High-Scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). Please bring two sharpened No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.
Seating is limited; pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

Oreo cookies world's most popular

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You can split the chocolate wafers and scrape off the sugary filling with your two front teeth; or you can throw caution to the wind and munch them whole. You can dunk 'em in milk or smash 'em in your ice cream.

However it's done, it's done lots: Oreo chocolate sandwich cookies are the world's top selling cookies — more than 100 billion have been sold since they were introduced 75 years ago, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Noting the anniversary, Nabisco Brands Inc. is taking the opportunity to provide most of the information you could ever possibly want about the cookies.

One tidbit Nabisco omits, not surprisingly, is that the Hydrox cookie is older. Invented by an Englishman, Hydrox cookies were first sold in this country in 1908, says their maker, Sunshine Biscuits Inc.

But Oreos are more famous, and by far better sellers.

If all the Oreo cookies that were ever eaten were piled one on top of the other, they would reach to the moon and back twice; if placed side by side, they'd circle the equator 130 times, Nabisco says.

The cookies are sold in 25 countries, and about $1 of every $10 spent on cookies in American grocery stores is spent on Oreos, the company says.

Nabisco says it has been forgotten where the Oreo name came from, but among the theories is that company executives just liked the sound of it.

Another is that the name may be derived from the French word for gold, or. The original label had the product name in gold, with gold scrollwork, the company says.

In 1975, Nabisco introduced Double Stuf Oreos, which have a double dollop of cream in the middle. That cookie now is the fifth best-selling cookie in the country, the company says. Two years ago, a mint-flavored version was brought out.

Nabisco, based in Parsippany, N.J., declines to detail Oreo's sales trend in recent years. Sunshine Biscuits also won't provide such numbers. The American Bakers Association in Washington and the Milling and Banking News say they don't have the figures.

But competition has been heating up.

In April, Sunshine Biscuits introduced Hydrox Doubles, which contain extra cream filling plus one of three flavors: mint, fudge and strawberry.

But if it's Oreo trivia you're after, Nabisco has plenty:

— More than 1 million Oreos are produced in an eight-hour shift at five bakeries. It takes an hour and 35 minutes for an Oreo to wend its way through the process.

— Over the years, the size of the cookie has varied. The current, 20-year-old version is 1¾ inches across.

— A standard Oreo contains 47 calories, the company says.

— The treats are most popular with 6- to 18-year-olds.

Four more have been arrested says Gov. White

AUSTIN, Texas – Governor Mark White has announced that four more Texas Most Wanted fugitives have been arrested during the past month.

A total of 22 fugitives out of the 68 who have been featured on Texas Most Wanted are now in custody, the governor said.

Clarence Marvin King, 46, was arrested April 20 in Indianapolis, Indiana, by the Indiana State Police, following a tip to the Tarrant County Crime Stoppers program. King was wanted for aggravated sexual assault in Tarrant County in connection with the molestation of an eight-year-old Arlington, Texas, girl. An arrest warrant had been issued for King in October, 1985, after he failed a polygraph exam.

John DeWayne Christie, 33, was arrested April 19 following a traffic stop in Centerville, Michigan. Christie was wanted for aggravated sexual assault, burglary, assault and escape out of Hopkins County, Texas. The rape charge stems from a September, 1985, attack on a 14-year-old girl at her residence in Sulpher Springs. Christie also allegedly tried to attack the girl's mother. He was originally arrested in November, 1985, at a Rockwall, Texas, truck stop, but managed to escape from the Hopkins County Jail on January 30.

Russell Edward Turner, 33, turned himself in to authorities in Houston on April 14. Turner was wanted for murder in Jefferson County. The murder charged stemmed from the September 21, 1984, stabbing death of Jewel Savoy, Jr., in Port Arthur. Authorities also wanted to question Turner about the July, 1985, disappearance of his eight-year-old daughter Angie Marie Turner.

Austin Morrell Robbins, 52, turned himself in to Sgt. Leonard Schilling of the Fort Worth Crime Stoppers program on March 19. Robbins was wanted on warrants out of Young County charging him with delivery of amphetamine, possession of marijuana and two counts of bribery of a public servant. He had been a fugitive since February 1985.

Ironically, James Dwight Pinson, who was to have been placed on the Texas Most Wanted list this week, was arrested last week in San Francisco, California. Pinson, 38, was wanted for aggravated robbery in Tarrant County. Detectives say he was a suspect in almost 50 robberies in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Texas Most Wanted is a cooperative effort between the Department of Public Safety and Texas Crime Stoppers. The program is designed to enlist the public's help in locating fugitives who are wanted for serious crimes committed in Texas.

The Texas traffic code requires that children under two be in a properly installed child safety seat, and that children from two to four must be in a safety seat or wearing a safety belt, regardless of where they are sitting in the vehicle.

About 56 percent of the 58 million children under age 18 had mothers in the labor force in 1984; 48 percent of all children under age 6 (9.3 million) had working mothers, according to "Working Mothers and Their Children," a fact sheet issued by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Names in the News

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Dovie Beams de Villagran, ex-lover of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, will auction off more than $26 million worth of luxury houses to stave off bankruptcy.

Among the holdings going on the block are 21 houses, 19 of them in exclusive Beverly Hills, and a 67.2-acre estate, real estate agent June Davidson said Thursday.

Mrs. de Villagran, a former B-movie actress, was pushed into the limelight in February by speculation that properties in her name might be among overseas Marcos holdings disclosed when he fled his country.

Her main business, the now-defunct International Auto Brokerage, specialized in selling exotic automobiles. An estimated $150,000 worth of cars remain, including a Stutz Black Hak, a Rolls-Royce and several limousines, according to court documents.

She and her husband, Sergio, list assets of $58 million and debts of $22 million in their Chapter 11 petition for protection from creditors.

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Dolly Parton returns to her hometown here in the Smoky Mountain hollows Saturday for a week as the star attraction of a giant theme park named after her.

Miss Parton has scheduled three days of performances in the opening week of Dollywood, a $5.5 million expansion of the Silver Dollar City theme park, and plans to spend as much time as possible here this summer.

In addition to rides, amusements and crafts, Dollywood includes a museum of Miss Parton's souvenirs and mementoes of her childhood, including the gowns she has worn in her movie roles.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dr. Albert Sabin, who developed an oral vaccine for polio in 1960 while working at a Cincinnati hospital, plans to attend "Sabin Day" ceremonies at which the city's convention center will be renamed for him.

The Cincinnati Convention Center, which has undergone a $60.9 million expansion and renovation, will become the Albert B. Sabin Convention and Exposition Center in the June 9 ceremonies.

Mayor Charles Luken told reporters Thursday of the plans for the ceremony.

Sabin, 80, who now lives in Bethesda, Md., developed the vaccine at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Cincinnati.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Talk show host Dick Cavett, appearing in his hometown to boost a $20 million performing arts center, said he doesn't see Johnny Carson leaving his "Tonight Show" anytime soon.

"I don't see any reason why he'd ever run out," Cavett said Thursday of Carson, also a Nebraska native. "I think he really likes it, no matter what he says."

Cavett returned to Lincoln to plug the Lied Center for Performing Arts planned for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Spring cleaning of closets fill those of needy

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Getting rid of old clothing from years gone by and storing old winter clothes can be a chore.

What can inspire one to get the job done? The Clothes Closet, Jowell and U.S. 60, and the American Red Cross closet, 224 S. Main. Both are excellent places to donate old clothing and get satisfaction knowing the items will be helping someone needy.

Irene Boardman, director of Good Shepherd Clothes Closet, said "We get everything in here, from brides dresses to pots and pans."

The closet has several departments for children's, men's, women's clothing, and a give-away room.

"We send a lot of stuff in the give-away room to Old Mexico," explained Boardman. "Some of the churches have buses going down. And it gets so full, that if we didn't give it away, I don't know what we'd do."

Boardman said people in Hereford have been very generous.

"We just don't have enough room to keep it all. Look at this wedding gown that someone donated, it has the veil, the crown, and even the little pillow that goes with it," she smiled.

The director said anyone wanting to donate should bring it on down. "People have garage sales and what they don't sell the can bring down here where someone can use it," said Boardman.

She said most of the people that come in are low-income families. "Some of them have so many kids I don't know how they clothe them all. I know it'd be hard for me," she commented.

In the give-away room one finds belts, shoes, slips, dresses, and other odds and ends. "It's the stuff that's been here a long time and hasn't sold– so, we just give it away, at no cost," explained Boardman.

"Some of the clothes that have holes, stains, or anything, they'll want it. One lady came in and bought a bunch of the clothes for making quilts and pillows," said Boardman.

She also added that some of the better seamstresses might be interested in the nice pantsuits they have. "They have the big bells, but if you slit it right down the middle you can have a good-looking pant suit," she grinned.

The workers at the clothes closet are all volunteers. "We don't buy a thing. We can sell the clothes so cheap because we just need to pay the utilities and the rent," Boardman said.

"And if people come in and don't have any money- we just give it to 'em," she added.

Boardman recalled that they had a 10-cent sale recently. "We had to, we had so much stuff..." said Boardman.

Pieces of furniture also can be located through the Clothes Closet. Boardman said they take the information down of people who have big pieces of furniture. "And then we can give to whoever asks for it," she said.

"We'll take anything they offer us, odds and ends of dishes, flower arrangements that have gotten a little curled up on the edge," said Boardman.

She remembered an episode that could pass for a parable.

"One lady had thrown a bunch of clothes out in the dumpster. And her mother-in-law saw it and she got them out and took them in and washed them. She brought it down here and we were glad to get them. We needed them," said Boardman.

"We really want to get across that this is a Christian service and we need to take care of the less fortunate," said Boardman.

"We really have a wonderful group of special kind of people here," she said. "We enjoy working together and we feel like the community has really helped."

The Clothes Closet is a unique thing to Hereford. "It isn't a Goodwill, it isn't a Salvation Army- it's grown out of the faith and generosity of Hereford's community," said Boardman. "And we really get some beautiful clothes."

The Clothes Closet

Founded by Good Shepherd Ministries, the Clothes Closet is open on Thursday's 9 to 11:30 a.m. and on Fridays from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Irene Boardman, the director, displays a newly donated wedding gown to be rented for a $5 fee which will be refunded when the gown is returned. The Clothes Closet is located at the corner of Jowell and Highway 60. The American Red Cross also has a place to donate clothes and is located at 224 South Main.

For optimum usefulness

Computers need proper setting

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Purchasing a personal computer for use in the home is one important step towards organizing a home office, but it isn't the only one. Putting that computer in a proper setting is the second necessity for optimum usefulness, as Susan Stern recently learned.

Stern, who purchased a computer and set up her own business in her Westfield, N.J., home, is one among many who are now setting up such workplaces. Like her peers, she soon found that to be most effective, her computerized office at home required considerably better quarters than the proverbial dining-room table.

Based on her early experience, she is planning, but doesn't yet have, an efficient setup to deal with the problems of glare on the screen, excessive noise, physical discomfort while using her equipment and the annoyance of too much clutter.

"I always seem to be jumping up to open or close the blinds so I can see the computer screen," she says. Other distractions include the noise of the printer while she is trying to talk on the telephone, and back strain when she is at the computer keyboard too long. Lack of closed storage space is another irritation. "While this is an office, it's still my home and I want to be able to store my business behind closed doors," she says.

Stern is planning to turn a currently-unused third-floor space into her office. She will deal with noise by running carpeting part of the way up the wall. She expects to buy office furniture which is specifically geared to accommodate computers at the right height. Screen placement will be made to minimize glare and she will buy an adjustable office posture chair. To keep things tidy, she is looking for shelving that can be placed behind closed doors.

She is on the right track, according to some office experts. They say adequate lighting and furniture that accommodates computer components, software and supplies are essential for efficient home offices.

Another factor to consider is the color scheme, says Patrice White, interior fabrics stylist at the Wool Bureau. "In computer areas it is important to have low-glare and low-reflectant surfaces because of the potential eyestrain that can be created from many hours at the computer screen." (Reflectance is a measure of how much light the surface is giving off.)

Almost any color can be made more or less reflectant depending on its texture and luster (or degree of shine). However, as a rule the lighter the color the more reflectant it will be, she said. Among the best color choices for computer areas are mauves and grays, but you can choose almost any color by selecting it in a grayed hue. By choosing a heavily textured fabric, you will also minimize reflectance. If your room happens to be quite dark, select lighter shades for walls, floors and ceiling; if the opposite is true, opt for darker shades, she suggested.

In furniture it is a good idea to avoid high-gloss surfaces such as those found on highly polished lacquered tables. If your computer screen is near a wall, don't select a glaring print wallcovering for that wall.

Placement of components also plays a role in optimum performance. As a rule, a computer screen should be placed so its center is even or a bit below the horizontal sight line. The keyboard should be no higher than 27 to 28 inches off the floor, says Charles Davis of Steelcase Inc., a computer furniture producer.

Seating becomes critical as more hours are spent in front of the computer. "A chair should provide good postural support in both back and seat and the chair should be easily adjustable to fit the individuals who will be using it," he added.

Guidelines needed in choosing interior decorator

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Some people have the flair, knowledge, time and energy to design their home decor. For those who don't, hiring an interior designer can be a smart move, particularly since decorating a home is among the biggest lifetime expenses.

Here's how to go about finding a designer whose work you can live with.

You can hire an interior designer in private practice, or you can work with one employed by a retailer, such as a department or furniture store. Some architects, remodelers and kitchen dealers also offer interior design services.

Designers in private practice can normally order furnishings and accessories from any manufacturer. Those employed by retail stores and studios may not be able to get you things their store doesn't sell, but they should help you coordinate your selections so you can buy them yourself.

Before talking to candidates, draw up a tentative budget. Designers say people usually underestimate costs and need their help in realistic budgeting.

You can find designers who will take on projects no matter how small your total budget; others set minimums, ranging from $1,500 up to $50,000. You might want to ask a designer for a long-range plan for all of the areas you eventually want to decorate and then carry it out as money is available.

Department and furniture store studios often charge a retainer, around $100 to $500, applied against the price of goods as long as you have spent a minimum amount, perhaps $2,500 or $5,000. Retail stores usually offer more favorable credit terms than designers in private practice.

Private interior designers charge for their services in several ways, frequently in combination. The following are common residential charges:

— The initial consultation fee.

— The design fee covers planning the design concept and the furnishings for your project and may include practically all services provided by the designer. It's usually not applied against the price of goods purchased.

— Hourly fees often cover time spent on technical services, such as drawing floor plans, plus time spent consulting with other professionals or tradespeople and perhaps with you. You'll probably be charged this way if you hire a designer just to give you some ideas about redoing a room.

Avoid paying hourly rates for all of a designer's services, including shopping trips. This can be costly, especially with an inefficient designer.

The range in hourly rates in many major cities varies from $25 or $35 to $100 per hour, sometimes more. You will probably be billed monthly for time and out-of-pocket expenses.

— Cost of purchases. Many designers expect to be compensated for all their services by the profit they make on the goods you buy through them.

Some charge you their wholesale cost plus a markup, normally 25-40 percent. This method is generally better for you than paying regular retail prices or a small percentage off retail (such as 10-15 percent), the two other common methods of charging for goods purchased.

Normally, under any of these methods, you have to pay the designer a deposit of 50 percent or less when each item is ordered.

— The cost of outside labor includes paying for the work of painters, paperhangers, upholsterers and other workers. If you're billed through the designer, you'll pay an additional fee, typically 15-30 percent.

To find a designer, ask for recommendations from people whose home interiors you admire. Go to local decorator showhouses and home-furnishings expositions. Look at model rooms in department and furniture stores.

Chapters of the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), the only nationwide interior designers' professional organization, offer a free referral service through which you can get the names of three local designers who work on projects like yours. Look in your phone directory or write to ASID (1430 Broadway, New York, NY 10018) for the nearest chapter.

At your first meeting, ask about the designer's educational background and work experience. Ask whether an ASID member has passed the examination required to attain the society's highest level of accomplishment.

Ask to see many photographs of the designer's work. If you see a lot of similarity, you can be pretty sure your room will look like that, too.

Discuss your attitudes, life-style and preferences. The designer should work with your furniture, collections and mementos, if you so choose. Collect pictures of rooms that appeal to you and show them to the designer.

Ask yourself: Are the designer's philosophy and personality compatible with mine? Am I comfortable enough to say I don't like a particular recommendation, or to reject a suggested item as too expensive for my budget.

Discuss fees and feel free to negotiate. Ask about liability insurance coverage. Try to determine the designer's work load and how your job fits into the schedule.

Get references from past clients, manufacturers who get much of the designer's business, former employers and the designer's bank and check them all. Call the Better Business Bureau and your chamber of commerce regarding past complaints and whether they were resolved.

Once you've chosen an interior designer, get a written contract (a letter of agreement) incorporating the same ground rules as discussed at your first meeting. Have your attorney review the agreements before you sign them.

Contracts developed by the ASID are the industry norm, although the designer may customize them. Write the ASID for copies of the forms most commonly used in residential projects (address above). Ask for forms 403, 404, 001, 002, 003, 004. The cost for all six forms is $5.50 for nonmembers.

Arrange to receive and sign a separate work order that authorizes the purchase of and describes in detail every item you buy and its cost.

For more information, read "How to Work With an Interior Designer," by William Turner (Watson-Guptill; $12.95 paperback).

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas businessman Robert Dedman and his wife have pledged $10 million for undergraduate scholarships at the University of Texas at Austin, and Dedman said other wealthy Texans also should "enjoy the thrill of giving while living."

"The more you give, the more you live," the founder of Club Corporation of America said Thursday as UT officials announced the Dedmans' gift at a campus news conference.

The donation of $1 million a year for 10 years, starting in 1986, is the largest scholarship gift ever received by UT-Austin and is the largest single donation to UT's College of Liberal Arts.

"I'm visiting with you just a little bit here to get some of the other bigger fortunes in the state to hopefully start turning loose of a bit more," said Dedman, who Forbes magazine says has assets of at least $200 million.

In 1981, Dedman and his wife, Nancy, gave $25 million to Southern Methodist University in Dallas, his wife's alma mater.

Dedman, who has a master's of law degree from SMU and three degrees from UT, said Thursday, "I've said many times that I think SMU is the best asset Dallas has. I think the University of Texas is the best asset the state of Texas has."

The $10 million pledge will almost double UT-Austin's endowment for student scholarships, which is now nearly $13.9 million, and would allow certain students — selected by a committee — to receive a minimum of $24,000 for four years.

Other "Dedman scholars" would receive scholarships ranging from minimums of $750 to $2,000 a year.

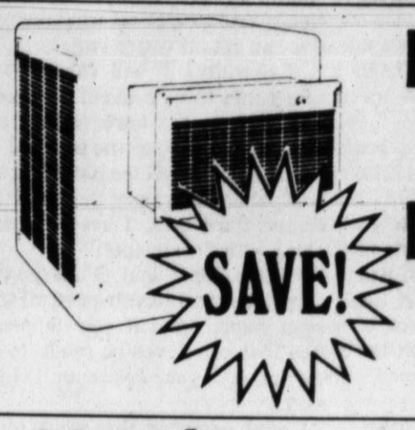

Dedman said one "big reason to give is the simple realization that they don't put any luggage racks on hearses — you can't take it with you, so you probably ought to start doing something about thinking about giving it away. And if you're going to give it away, it makes a lot more sense to start giving it away while you're alive ... I'm enjoying this today a heck of a lot more than I would my funeral."

Robert King, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said, "With this scholarship money we will be able to compete with any other school for the best students. We couldn't have before."

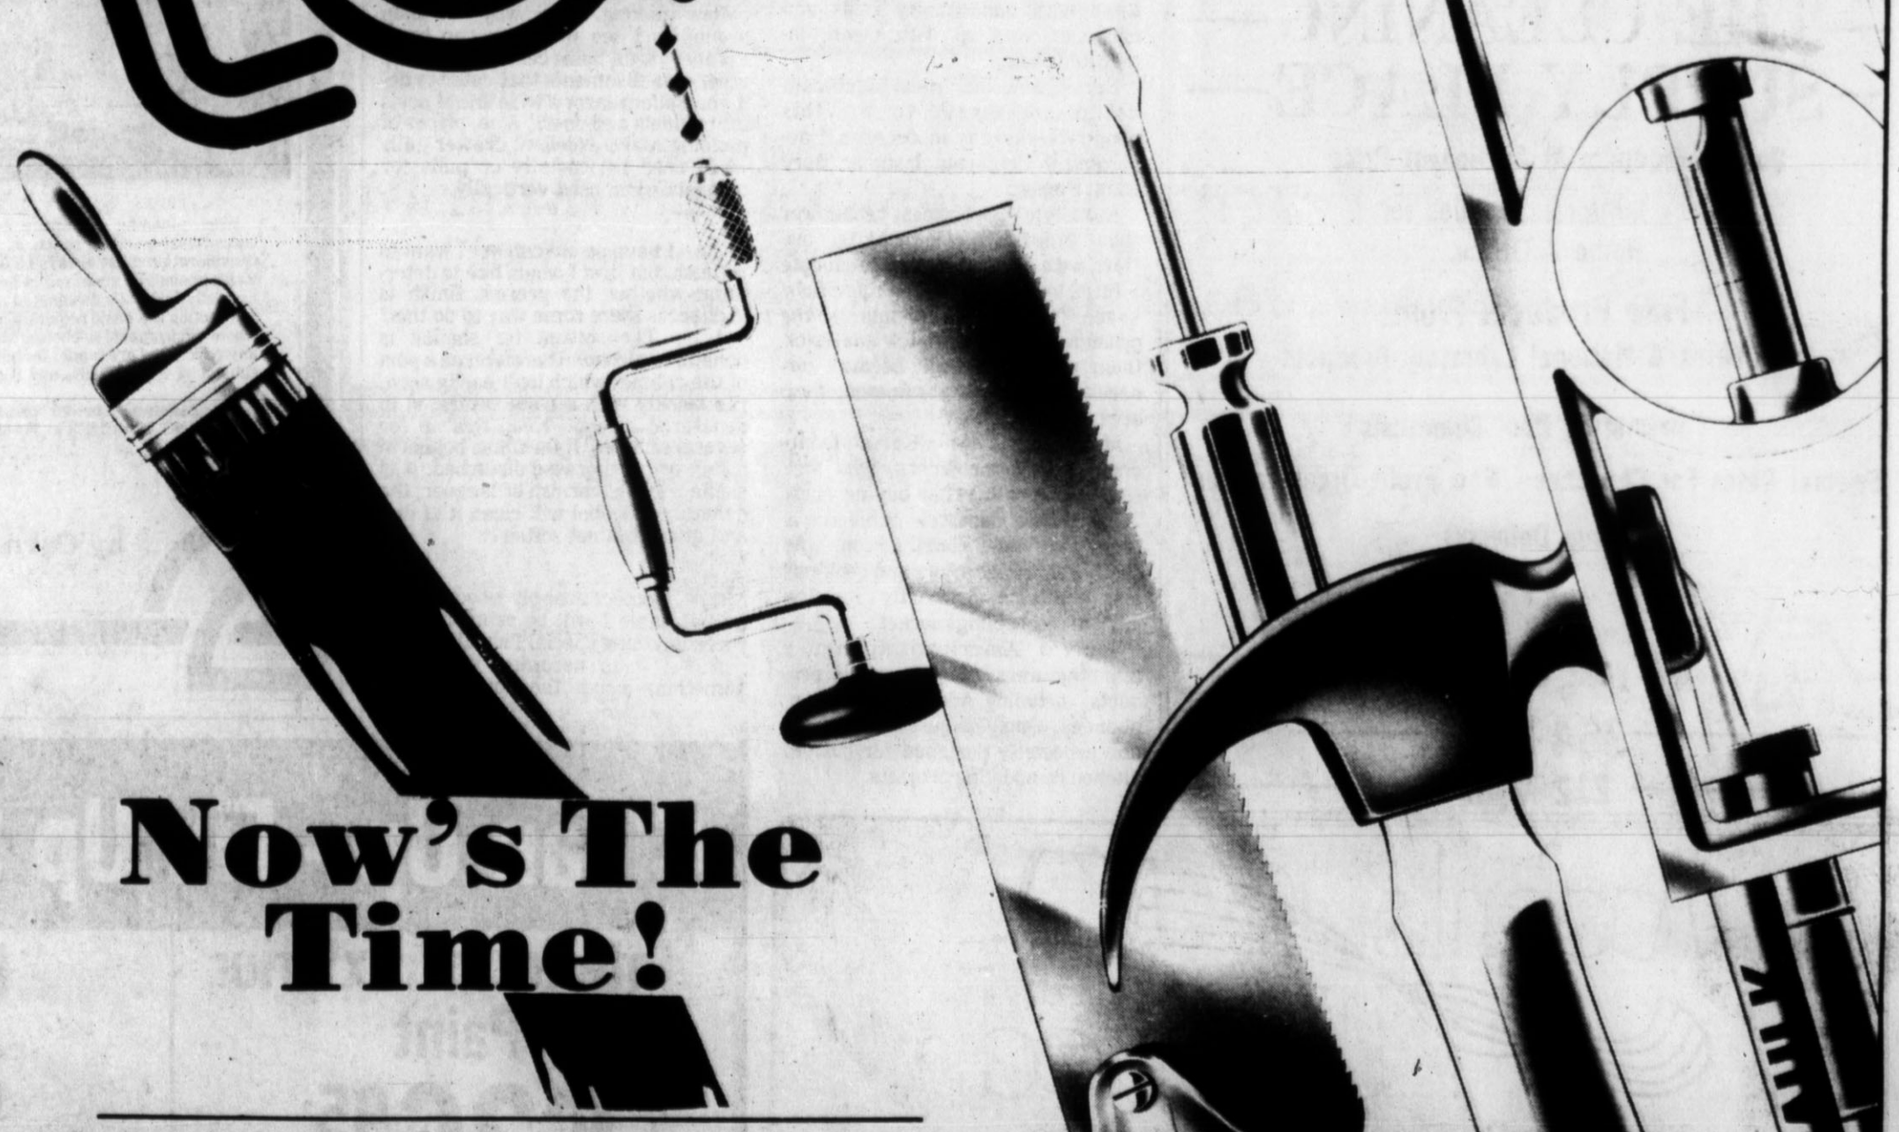

Dedman, 59, is a native of Rison, Ark. His three degrees from UT include a bachelor's of science in naval science in 1946, a law degree in 1948 and a bachelor's degree in economics in 1949.

Make sure the piece is worth the time and effort

Refinishing can give old things fresh look

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Got an old piece of furniture that needs a new look? Refinishing may be the answer.

Beth Gearn has seen the wonders a new coat of finish can perform. She's really qualified to give advice on the do's and dont's of refinishing since she's been at it "for at least 20 years."

"Your first step is choosing the item to be refinished," Gearn said. "Your second thought would be to make sure the piece is physically sound.

"If you just need to reglue some joints, that's easy to do. But if the structure is busted it's almost impossible to repair."

Gearn said that refinishing a piece of furniture is hard work and is time consuming.

"If a board or piece needs to be replaced, find an old board made of the same wood structure. It will blend in better with the rest of the wood because a different piece of wood will not absorb the stain the same as an original piece of wood," explained Gearn.

"So if you're going to refinish, make sure the piece of furniture is worth your time and effort and that you're going to end up with something that is going to be worthwhile," Gearn advised.

She also commented that painting a stripped piece of furniture is much harder than painting a varnished piece of wood.

"If you're going to buy a painted piece of furniture, there might be four coats of paint on it and that will be hard to do," said Gearn.

She explained that an old piece of furniture that still has the varnish on it, before it has been repainted, it is still fairly easy to do. "This is because the paint has not had a chance to soak into the wood due to the old varnish still being underneath, protecting the wood," Gearn explained.

"You also need to like the piece first," added Gearn. All major repair work needs to be made before stripping.

For refinishing a painted piece, Gearn said to start by cleaning the wood with soap and water.

"Take a wood scraper and scrape off as much you can with it being dry," she said. (This also goes for removing varnish too.)

"I also do this because your supplies are expensive and anything you can knock off can save that much stripper," she noted.

The second step after cleaning is to apply the stripper with a brush and let it set a moment.

"Then you get your tools –anything from the spatula in the kitchen to dental tools, depending on the piece you're working on– and you scrape the softened varnish or paint off," Gearn said.

After scraping as much as one can, Gearn said to wipe off whatever else you can get off with a rag.

"Generally, it will take two or sometimes three coats of stripper to get down to the bare wood," said Gearn. "Usually, on the second I use a wire brush to get the paint and varnish out of the grain of the wood. And on the third coat, I use steel wool along with the stripper."

At this point, and if one is very lucky, the paint has stripped off to an even color. "And if you happen to like that color, you're ready to put the finish of your desire on," Gearn said.

Gearn admitted that most of the time the varnish or paint does not strip off evenly and one decides they want a lighter color anyway.

The next step would be to sand down to the bare wood. "I never use anything above a medium sandpaper and graduate down to extra-fine," Gearn said. She stressed to always make sure that one sands with the grain of the wood.

"Make sure you never go in circles or on the cross grain- always go with the straight grain of the wood or it will show," she advised.

"If you're just going to repaint a piece of furniture, sand it down to where it's smooth. Fill all the holes and cracks with wood dough and sand that down also and you're ready to paint," said Gearn.

She explained that if the paint is taken down to the bare wood it is less likely to crack or chip and the paint adheres better to the wood.

"At this point it is time to choose the stain of your choice and there are many colors and brands to choose from," she said.

The stain is applied with a brush and a rag is used to wipe it off, depending on the stain, how it soaks into the wood, and how dark one wants the furniture. Gearn noted that sometimes one might have apply the stain twice.

"You can, if you can't find the color you want, mix the stain and come up with the right color," said Gearn.

BETH GEARN...refinishing

"Depending on what type of finish you want –an oil finish is fine, it protects the wood but not as well as the varnish– you can varnish your pieces to leave a tougher finish, making it more durable," she said.

Three coats of varnish should be applied after each coat is thoroughly dry. "And it should be throroughly dry berfore sanding," added Gearn. "I use a fine steel wool to sand in between each coat to give it a smoother effect."

Gearn lets her pieces dry for at least a week. "It is dry to the touch, usually overnight, but it is best not to even use the piece of furniture for a few days after the last coat. The varnish or paint is dry but it has not dried hard," advised Gearn.

She used fingernail polish as an example. "Paint dries and dries hard, but you can certainly nick it real easy," she warned.

She said she waits at least a week before ever putting any oil or wax on the piece because it prevents the paint from completely drying hard.

"And that's it," she grinned, "now you can enjoy it."

Advice to the average person wanting to refinish a piece of furniture includes buying supplies when on sale.

"When you're getting ready to repair furniture, your tools are expensive. If you're not going to refinish more than a few pieces, you wouldn't want to invest too much money in tools," said Gearn.

"But there again, you have to have the right tools to repair your furniture right," Gearn commented. She knows there is a lot of work involved in refinishing, the stooping, the standing, the scraping...

Gearn said she has refinished too many pieces to count, including a stairway banister, her kitchen cabinets and plenty of furniture that now decorates her house.

She says she picks up most of her pieces at antique shops, second-hand stores, and the least expensive place – garage sales.

Her advice to the person wanting to refinish:

"Get a good night's sleep – you're going to need it!"

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We plan to put a shingled roof on a room being added at the back of our house. We expect to use a framework to support the roof, then a plywood deck. Is it necessary to use roofing felt under the shingles?

A. — Yes. Before putting down the felt, nail a metal drip edge along the bottom edge and, after the felt is laid, to the sides. If your area averages 25 degrees Fahrenheit or less during the month of January, apply a flashing course of mineral-surfaced roll roofing along the eaves, extending a minimum of 12 inches past the inside wall line of the structure. There is much more to the laying of the shingles than that, but presumably you have some idea of how to handle it. If not, better get some kind of book or booklet describing the procedure.

Q. — The plate collectors placed on the roofs of solar energy houses are always black. Is there a reason for that?

A. — Yes, although there are many variations of what are called flat-plate collectors. Black increases absorption of the sun's heat. The collectors are insulated on the back and usually covered with a transparent cover sheet to trap heat within the collector.

Q. — I plan to make two bureaus and two upright cabinets, both of maple. I would like to make the drawer pulls of wood rather than use metal ones. Is this practical or should I buy the pulls already made?

A. — No way to answer that without knowing the degree of your skill. But before making them, why not shop around and see what you can buy? Lumber yards, home centers and many other establishments that cater to do-it-yourselfers carry a wide line of parts for cabinets and doors. Also, pieces of molding make excellent drawer pulls when used horizontally or pulls for cabinets when used vertically.

Q. — I have an old cabinet I want to refinish, but first I would like to determine whether the present finish is shellac. Is there some way to do this?

A. — The solvent for shellac is denatured alcohol. Therefore, on a part of the cabinet which isn't easily seen, rub briskly with a cloth saturated in denatured alcohol. Keep this up for several minutes. If the finish begins to soften or is otherwise disturbed, it is shellac. If it is varnish or lacquer, the denatured alcohol will clean it of dirt and grime but not soften it.

Q. — I expect to apply wood filler to an oak table I will be refinishing. Is there anything special I should know?

A. — It is assumed you know something about the application of wood filler or you probably would not be doing it. But there is one aspect of wood filling you might not know about — the necessity of doing it on a day and in an area where there is no high humidity. Too much moisture in the air will prevent the filler from doing its job of filling the pores in the wood.

Q. — Recently you wrote about how to loosen stuck windows. You said the most common cause of this is hardened paint in the window channels. I soon will be painting all the double-hung windows in our house and I want to avoid the hardened paint. Is there some special way of doing the windows to avoid this?

A. — The most important thing is to be careful. You can avoid trouble if you place each sash 2 inches from the top and bottom. Wait until you finish painting, then move each sash up and down a couple of times. This will prevent a seal from forming. It is the seal that causes the trouble at some later time.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Eurostyle is new trend in kitchens

By The Associated Press

A new trend in kitchen design called "Eurostyle" typifies the statement "form follows function" — which means an object's form or appearance should be determined by its function or use.

In other words, decorators say, down with unnecessary frills and curlicues, and up with clean, integrated design.

Eurostyle is the "most significant design movement to hit this country's kitchens in decades," according to California designer Mary Knott Fisher.

Eurostyle appliances, shallower than American counterparts, are flush with cabinet depths, producing a fitted look and affording more floor space. They also are modular, so the consumer can mix, match and stack them as desired. And because unnecessary trim is eliminated, they are easy to maintain.

Most likely to own a Eurostyle kitchen are homeowners who are remodeling rather than buying a new house. While Eurostyle cabinetry is found in new construction, the shallower refrigerators and cooktops are available primarily for the custom remodeling market.

Several American appliance manufacturers offer Eurostyle products, including Admiral Home Appliances, which has just introduced a line especially designed for custom kitchen remodeling projects.

A Flair for Design

When planning any space, be it commercial or residential, an educational or office space, or any other type of interior, the first consideration must always be function. No matter how beautiful or well appointed a room might be, if it does not function, that is, successfully fulfill it's designated use, that room is a failure.

Function is a basic requirement for each individual segment of the whole enviroment, so choices should be carefully considered before any purchases are made. In the next few weeks, we will take up the subject of FUNCTION, and it's importance in successful interior design.

Color important to consider when redecorating

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Imaginge entering a house with a calming shade of green to greet the eye. The sun filters in through the window to throw a beam on some houseplants. Grasscloth covers the walls and to the opposite, mirrors reflect wicker furniture. The smell of freshness is in the air.

Something about that green gives the feeling of freshly cut grass, of sprouting trees, blossoms on the flower. Green makes one think of growing, sprouting, plant life being alive in the home.

Sound like spring? It may be springy, but in the winter months a darker shade of seafoam green and a blue green seemed to be the colors for redocorating.

This year, colors for redecorating will be the same but in a lighter shade of that calming seafoam.

"There's something of credit to every color," said Carmen Flood, owner and designer of Finishing Frames. "Color can be used in every way."

For redocorating, Flood suggests that painting is the fastest and most economical way to get a fresh, clean start on spring.

Flood is experienced in color, she makes paint selections with local businesses for her clients.

"The 'in' colors go out and you'd want something that would stand the test of time," explained Flood. She usually goes with what the customer prefers.

With many clothing fashions and home furnishings currently available in peach, one would think this would be a popular color for the times. "Peach is not really a big color this year but it has also never gone out," commented Flood.

She explained that the basic color scheme, a typical blue and an orange, are complimentary color schemes.

"They are complimentary colors opposite on the color wheel. Some examples would be going from navy to rust, all the way up to very pale blue and very soft peach," Flood explained.

Flood said adding color to a home can be done in various ways. "Your fabrics, wallpapers, paint, carpeting, framing windows, all kinds of shutters, blinds, shades, and draperies can make an old house look new," advised Flood.

"Covering walls with fabric used to be big in the cities where they had installers to do it, but this has gone out also," said Flood.

"What we're going to see in the future will be faux finishes which can be done on walls, woodwork, or furniture," said Flood.

Faux is a special effect given to a surface which imitates marble, malachite, granite, and other mediums. "Tromp leolie literally translates from the French, meaning 'to fool the eye'," explained Flood of the faux finish.

Other decorative additions that can be made in a home include wallpapering. "Most people think grasscloth is very expensive but there are some patterns available that are less than many prints," said Flood.

Grasscloth, strings, linens, and other textures, is where the actual twig is applied to the paper. They can range from heavy grass to a standard basic weave of grass with different weights. Even moire, a grasscloth which is painted upon, can make the difference in a room.

To make grasscloth wallpaper, the paper is first painted and then the natural grasses are applied. Images also can be screenprinted onto the cloth in the coordinating paint.

"Generally, the grasscloth is contemporary in style," said Flood. "It gives an oriental feel."

When redecorating a home, Flood said the first thing to determine is your budget.

"That will decide what and how you will redecorate your house," said Flood. "But your budget doesn't necessarily decide your priorities, it just limits them, but this can also be overcome."

Flood advises that one list priorities and go from there when redecorating.

"First, the flooring will be the most costly, unless you have someone clean – which may be an option," said Flood.

"Begin with the largest surfaces first, whether it be the floors, the walls, or the ceilings," Flood said. "Upholstering ceilings or papering is also a possibility for something different, depending on the effect you want."

Flood explained that there are differences between redecorating and remodeling. Redecorating is wallpaper, draperies, or carpeting – working with the existing spaces in your home. Whereas, designing is creating something new where nothing existed before.

One may want to re-upholster some existing pieces after deciding if it will be worthwhile.

"If the piece is sound and rebuilt and there's something you don't like, you can also redesign it," said Flood.

She explained that in the restyling process, one can change a piece from traditional to contemporary or vice versa depending on the style sought.

"The fabric you choose makes a great deal of difference in the style of the piece," Flood said. "One thing to be aware of is the fabric should correspond with the amount of use it's going to receive."

Color can be used in every way

CARMEN FLOOD

She added that most long-wearing fabrics are usually pile fabrics such as velvet or corduroy.

"Springtime may be a good time to look at old pieces of furniture to consider stripping and refinishing," Flood noted. One can use a sealer with no color and get a natural finish or staining can be used to get the desired color.

"Pickling is also a possibility. Pickling is where the furniture is stripped, bleached, and then glazed with a very thin coat of white enamel which is for the most part, wiped off, leaving a white cast in the grain of the wood. The piece is then sealed and you have a new piece of furniture," explained Flood.

She also recommended new accessories. "New accessories can really brighten a home," she said. "Rethink where you can hang existing paintings or maybe rematting in a new color.

"Silk flower arrangements, or even fresh cut, can be added in the new color you're redecorating in," said Flood.

Mirrors can also add to the home. She cautioned that when hanging a mirror be sure that it reflects something pretty.

"And greenery is a good way to fill a corner and it gives some hominess to a room," she added.

Flood advises that one should always consider table top arrangements and to try looking at them at every angle from which they will be viewed.

But, the main thing to remember in redecorating your home is to prioritize and then follow the plan.

Putty knife best tool for unsticking windows

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A putty knife with a wide blade is your best ally when faced with the common household problem of a stuck window.

Such a putty knife can be slid between the window sash and the stop or moulding in order to break the paint seal that is the most common cause of a window that won't budge. Jiggle the knife slightly or tap it lightly with a hammer and you are likely to get the desired result. Sometimes the window will move after one or two sides of the window are treated in this manner and sometimes you have to use the treatment on all four sides.

This emphasis on the use of the wide-bladed putty knife is necessary because most of the time somebody in the house will do the job with the blade of a screwdriver. This may unloosen the window alright, but it will also mar the wood considerably, simply because the blade of screwdriver is usually too thick and too narrow for the job. If you see gouges in the wood alongside a window, you can be sure somebody has attempted to unstick it at one time or another with a screwdriver. Incidentally, you can buy a small, serrated tool in some places that is made especially for the unsticking of windows. Your hardware dealer or home-center salesman should know whether he has one in stock.

While this procedure will usually do the trick, there are times when it will not work even though a paint seal is the cause of the trouble. In that case, tackle the problem from outside, again using the putty knife technique. When working from the outside of the window, insert the knife blade between the bottom of the sash and the top of the sill and then wherever necessary.

When a paint seal is not the culprit, it is likely that high humidity has caused the wood to swell and, therefore, it won't operate. Should that be the problem, get a wooden block of some kind. Using care, tap it along the grooves of the sash, a move that will expand the frame a bit and permit the window to be opened. If this doesn't work, use the block of wood and do the same thing with the vertical parts of the sash. Tapping the wooden block with a hammer is usually very effective, but you must do it gently to prevent the pane in the window from cracking.

After a paint seal is broken or the sash is put in operation some other way, be sure to lubricate the channels or grooves to prevent further trouble. It should be pointed out, however, that the high humidity that caused the wood to swell in the first place may do so again unless the condition is corrected. It's the same as removing mildew. No matter how good a job you do of getting rid of it, it will flourish again if dampness and lack of ventilation persist.

Not often, but once in a while, all your efforts to unstick a window are without result. In that case, you must take the drastic step of removing the sash from the frame and lightly sanding or planing the parts that are sticking. This requires considerable care and some knowledge. You must first remove the stop mouldings on the inside of the frame. If you have some idea of how sash cords work in double-hung windows, you should consider possibly replacing them with spring lift sashes or balances

Greenhouse airy housing addition for outdoor feeling

By The Associated Press

When it comes to expanding their homes through room additions, many people are choosing greenhouses, according to a greenhouse manufacturer and installer.

"Most of our customers are interested in changing their existing home, office or restaurant rather than building a new one," says Christoper Esposito, president of the Four Seasons Greenhouse franchise network, based in Farmingdale, N.Y. "The greenhouse structure is most popular because we are selling the feel of outdoor living and bringing it indoors."

Four Season Greenhouses offers customers prefabricated kits for do-it-yourself installation and partial or complete dealer installation.

Its design uses a built-in shading system and special glass that reflects heat, but not light, away in summer and reflects heat back inside in winter, while remaining visibly clear.

Other features include a weather-tight cooling system and tempered curved glass.

A typical 10-feet-by-16-feet greenhouse addition costs $10,000 to $15,000, fully installed, says Esposito.

Among his customers, he says, are celebrities Tom Seaver and Jane Fonda, and commercial companies including Kentucky Fried Chicken and Hyatt Hotels.

Gun club works together for new building

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Accomplishing a major goal of the past four years, Hereford Gun Club now has a new clubhouse that will hold more people than the one bathroom-one room building that used to be the clubhouse.

Although it's not completed yet, the building is 24x50 feet and features a 16x50 patio porch for people waiting to get to through the shooting lines.

Volunteers from the gun club have been working for six weeks on the building, near the Hereford Municipal Airport, and are expected to have it completed soon.

According to Wayne Reinart, club president for the past three years, 90 percent of the building was hand-laid by their own club members.

"We subbed a concrete job, had the technical work hired, and we framed the building," Reinart said. He also said that Jim Clarke, another member, was in charge of framing the structure.

Members of the club together planned the layout for the building. All of the paneling, wiring, and plumbing was done by members, too.

The Gun Club Clubhouse now consists of one big room, two bathrooms, a heating and air conditioning system, and kitchen facilities complete with a stove and, later, a refrigerator.

Beautiful, hand-carved woodwork decks the kitchen area thanks to members, Lloyd Thomas and Eldon Owens, who refinished the cabinets from scratch.

The clubhouse even has two ceiling fans that should come in handy this summer. Members hope to get furniture donated. The old, small clubhouse will be used for storage.

"We still lack the painting on the outside of the building and laying the tile," said Reinart.

Membership dues and fund raising shoots from the past four years, such as turkey, league, and practice shoots, funded the building.

"By doing the work ourselves, we saved about $15,000," he grinned.

The Hereford Gun Club has 74 paid members and six active women shooters. Currently, the gun club is sponsoring a league shooting on Thursday nights that is open to the public.

In the league, there are five people to a team and Reinart said they are shooting at 16 and 22 yard targets. The league started April 3 and will be continue through June 19. The gun club also has a $4,000 automatic trap thrower that never fails.

The clubhouse will also be donated for use by the 4-H shooting sports which will hold shooting sessions on Saturday afternoons.

For more information about the gun club or joining a league contact Wayne Reinart at 276-5878. The gun club is open to the public.

Q. — I have to hang some shelves soon. In the past, I always did this with metal or plastic anchors, but this time I would like to hang the brackets with an adhesive. Will this be OK, since the shelves will be supporting only light objects?

A. — Yes. And if you use a strong adhesive, the shelves will hold a heavy weight. The possible drawback is that, if you ever desire to change the position of the shelves or take them down altogether, you may damage the wall in doing so.

Q. — I plan to do some varnishing. The varnish I have was used a couple of months ago, and I have kept it in an airtight container. I assume it will be all right. In the meantime, I have heard the drying time of varnish can be cut down if you first warm the furniture with a portable heater. Is this so?

A. — Yes, but I don't generally recommend it. However, you can do it if you are extra careful about keeping the varnish away from the portable heater.

Consider kinds, colors of paints to use

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Planning to paint a room in your house? Give some thought now to the kind of paint you want to use and the color of it.

The kind of paint will determine whether the finished appearance will be glossy, semi-glossy, flat or whatever. It will also play a part in the ease of application and the durability of the product. The color of the paint will determine the mood of the room and serve as the decorating base.

These things are important, but not the only factors affecting the result. Surface preparation is vital, as is the quality of the paint. If you pick up a roller or brush and start the job without preparing the surface properly, you will regret it either immediately or within a few months. And, since you are putting in your own labor, it is false economy to buy cheap paint merely to save a few dollars.

Latex paints are the big sellers among do-it-yourselfers. They make it easier to clean up and they have very little odor. Latexes now come in high glosses, semi-glosses and flats. A high gloss paint is extra washable, resists moisture and wears very well, which is why it is used so much in kitchen and bathrooms. Flat paints are easier on the eyes and thus preferred for living rooms and bedrooms, while a semi-gloss is somewhere between the high gloss and flat. Unless you have been living in a cave, you probably have a good idea of which kind of paint you like and where. But many other kinds of paints are available, among them alkyds, oils, textures and many others for special surfaces. If you have a special problem, a few minutes' conversation with your hardware or paint dealer will be of help in making a selection.

It is usually impractical to remove everything from a room before it is painted. But you can at least remove the light pieces. The heavy objects can be moved to the center of the room; then cover them and the floors with paper or plastic dropcloths or whatever else you have on hand that will do the job. You will get a neater ceiling result if you lower the base of the ceiling fixture a little and take off all switch plates, doorknobs, etc.

Remodeled kitchen can increase home value value of home

By The Associated Press

With the coming of spring, it might be a good idea to get a head start on seasonal home improvements by redecorating what many consider the most important room of the house — the kitchen.

Industry experts have estimated that 3.5 million American kitchens will be remodeled during 1985, explaining that many homeowners view the remodeling of their current residence as a viable alternative to the purchase of a new one.

There also is a feeling that a new or remodeled kitchen increases the value of a home while at the same time providing immediate enjoyment.

Because the kitchen usually is the busiest room in the house, remodeling should be aimed at creating a new kitchen that's not only attractive and easy to clean but also functional.

Depending on budget considerations, there are several decorating options. These include applying a fresh coat of paint or new wallpaper and perhaps floor tiles to complement the new color scheme.

Simply by changing the color or style of your curtains, some consultants advise, you can give your kitchen a whole new feeling. Or, you may want to consider a lightweight fabric and color when choosing new curtains to give the kitchen a fresh, airy look for spring.

Another suggestion, if you have a dinette set, is to complete your design ideas with a tablecloth or placemats that complement or contrast your curtain colors.

However, the experts caution, if your kitchen cabinets are in poor condition, out of style or not functional, then other changes in decor will be fruitless.

Many decorators suggest your kitchen cabinets should be the focal point of your renovation, since they dominate the room.

Consumers remodel their kitchens to achieve more counterspace and cabinet storage space, to improve the layout so the room functions better, to have more up-to-date cabinets and to increase the value of the home, according to a 1984 survey by a trade journal, Kitchen and Bath Business.

Rather than installing new cabinets, which can be an expensive, messy and time-consuming process, you can give your kitchen a new look by simply refacing your cabinets.

One company, Facelifters of Chicago, leaves your cabinet framework intact, then attaches new cabinet doors and drawer fronts, and resurfaces the existing cabinet framework with a matching laminate.

There are more than 150 door designs and 200 finishes and colors — including wood-grain finishes — to choose from. This allows you to custom design a new look for your kitchen, and it usually costs about half the price of installing new cabinets. The refinishing process takes only about two days to complete.

After refacing your kitchen cabinets, you may want to turn your attention to other ways to make your kitchen more spacious and functional.

Small appliances, if placed at one end of the kitchen counter or attached to the bottom of upper cabinets can create even more counter space. Space-saving aids — such as pull-down cookbooks, knife, and spice racks — also help reduce counter clutter.

Spring Cleaning Should Include Your Air Conditioner

Now that the house is in shape for summer, what about your air conditioner?

Air conditioners need tune-ups, just like cars. That's why we offer a program called Planned Service.

For a simple, low fee, we'll clean, adjust and lubricate your air conditioner. It can help keep your cooling bills low and prevent problems later.

So call us today. And really clean up – with an air conditioner tune-up – before summer arrives.

To have successful home garden

Fertilizer management is important

LUBBOCK – A successful home garden in West Texas requires a fertilizer management program, say two specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"All vegetables require relatively large amounts of plant nutrients," says Dr. Roland E. Roberts, Extension vegetable specialist. "Most home gardeners will have to provide additional nutrients by applying fertilizers or composts."

"If you soil is naturally rich in nutrients, you are lucky," adds Dr. MIchael G. Hickey, soil chemist and director of the Extension Soil Testing Laboratory here. "However, you may find it necessary to give your garden a nutritional boost through the use of fertilizers.

West Texas soils generally contain an adequate supply of essential plant nutrients, with the exception of nitrogen and phosphorous, the Exetnsion specialists noted. In some soils and situations, iron and zinc may be needed in small quantities.

The amounts of types of nutrients required for your garden can be determined from a soil test by a qualified laboratory, such as the Texas Agricultural Extension Service laboratory at Lubbock, Roberts said. Local county Extension agents can explain the simple procedure for collecting and submitting a soil sample, he added.

Over-fertilization, especially with the "complete" fertilizers, not only wastes your money, but can cause gardening problems, Hickey said. "On many older gardening sites in our region, we find that excessive fertilization with phosphorous has induced zinc and iron deficiency," he said.

If you use a "complete" fertilizer, be careful, because it may contain nutrients you don't need, the soil chemist cautioned. Some "complete" fertilizers will contain trace elements or micronutrients which may be of limited usefulness for soil application, he added.

The content of most fertilizers is designated with tinree numbers on the label that indicate the percentage of total nitrogen, available phosphoric acid, and water soluable potash in the fertilizer. As an example, a "complete" fertilizer such as 10-10-5 contains 10 percent nitrogen, 10 percent available phosphorous, and 5 percent water soluble potassium. A nitrogen source, such as 21-0-0, contains 21 percent nitrogen, but no phosphorous or potassium.

Choice of a fertilizer material will depend on the type and amounts of nutrients needed, and the cost of the material. For example, Hickey said, if you are purchasing a fertilizer strictly for its nitrogen content and plan to apply it to the soil and till it in, you should buy the one in which the proper nitrogen amount is the least expensive.

Additional organic matter, such as compost, peat moss or manure, can benefit the home garden, Roberts said. Organic matter helps improve drainage and aeration in clay soils, and increases the water holding capacity in sandy soils. It will likely improve the general soil fertility of any soil, the specialists agreed.

Care must be taken with manure application, she cautioned. Nutrients–particularly phosphorous--will be added, but so will salts, which can be harmful. Don't exceed a rate of 10 pounds of dried manure or 50 pounds of feedlot or stable manure for each 100 square feet, they advised.

Compost is refuse that has been converted into a "synthetic manure," the Extension specialists said. Leaves, grass clippings, small prunings, weeds, and vegetable matter from the kitchen can all be used. "In our region, grass clippings will predominate," Hickey said. Depending on your lawn fertilization practices, compost from grass clippings will be high in nitrogen.

To utilize compost or peat moss, spread about five bushels of the material over 1,000 square feet and mix it thoroughly into the soil, Hickey said.

Historic textiles popular today

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

What relationship could there possibly be between a museum exhibit of historic textiles and contemporary home decoration?

It might seem as if the answer were none, but nothing could be further from the truth, according to Marianne Carlano, textile and costume curator at the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn.

Carlano is responsible for the current exhibition (through May 25) at the museum of French textiles from the 13th century to 1870. She also co-edited, "French Textiles From the Middle Ages Through the Second Empire," an accompanying book which gathers in one place information hitherto scattered and inaccessible, on the great French textiles of the past.

There are 120 items in the show, about half of which are from the Atheneum's own collection and the rest are on loan from other museums and private collectors. Among the rare objects in the show is a pair of embroidered gloves which are reputed to have belonged to France's Cardinal Richelieu.

Carlano said a major impetus for the exhibition was her discovery of a treasure trove of textiles in the Atheneum's collection. The institution, founded in 1844, says it is the oldest still-operating art museum in the country. However, according to the curator, it is better known in Europe than in the United States. The textile collection numbers some 6,000 examples, 90 percent of them European, and most of those French.

"Though nowadays other countries such as Italy are equally important as centers of influence in fabrics, until at least World War II the finest textiles in the Western world were made in France," Carlano said. The wealthy of many nations, including the United States, selected French fabrics in their own homes almost as a matter of course. Their eventual gifts enriched the museum. Consequently, though it is "foreign," the collection is actually a good record of American taste.

Besides their historic interest, these and all examples from the past have relevance today. They give viewers a chance to see those objects that have inspired and shaped our esthetic values. They also play an important role in shaping contemporary taste, according to Carlano, by whetting the public taste for new designs based on the past.

She says designers of both home fashion fabrics and apparel have come to see the show, and the Atheneum helped things along by holding a symposium on 19th-century French fabrics.

At the symposium, Murray Douglas of Brunschwig & Fils, an importer of French fabrics, said a number of illustrious interior designers and their clients "are having a love affair with 19th-century France."

Though not too many years ago this period was considered hopelessly outdated, today the marketplace is avid for reproductions of its textiles and wall coverings, according to Douglas.

"Comfort is the keynote of what the 19th century gives to us. Today, we are allowing ourselves to indulge in ornament.

"We are covering our walls with pattern and draping our windows with fabric and dressing our beds in antique linens," Douglas said, adding that patterns in special demand include large and small florals, Paisleys and bright colors such as Turkey red.

Speakers at the symposium paid tribute to the great French handweavers of silk fabrics who reached their zenith in Lyons during the 19th century, before mechanization replaced them. Though these figures of the weaving world are today largely unsung and forgotten, the importance of Lyons as a textile center continues, according to Sheila Hicks, an American weaver and textile authority who lives

Installing water filters is easy

By The Associated Press

"People don't realize how important it is to have clean and safe water, not only for drinking, but for cleaning and cooking, too," says Don Burgess, vice president-sales of Peerless Home Products.

"It's so inexpensive to install a water filter yourself that it almost doesn't pay not to," he says, "especially considering what you have to gain from purer water."

Burgess says a new line of do-it-yourself water filters can remove dust and rust particles as fine as a single grain of powder. Bad tastes and bad odors are also eliminated, he says.

Installing a water filter yourself is easy, says Burgess.

"Since there are several types of water filter models to choose from, customers can select the right one depending on their budgets and use — whether it be for kitchens, baths and wet bar sinks, refrigerator icemakers, even recreational vehicles.

"To aid homeowners in installing the water filters, Peerless offers kits to help users install a water filter anywhere, for a no-tools hookup."

More than half of the electric power in the United States comes from coal. Other important sources are water, natural gas, and oil. Other sources, such as wind and geothermal energy, provide less than 1 percent.
