First round ends for prison hearing

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

A legal filing which seeks information related to Scurry County's bid for a Texas Department of Corrections prison produced a combative 8½ hours in 132nd District Court Tuesday.

The ruling which concluded the hearing was in favor of defendants in the case--representatives of various public entities and the economic development committee which worked to secure the TDC facility here--but the wealth of testimony offered dwelt on the TDC bid process rather than the matter technically before the court.

Around 7:15 p.m., District Judge Gene Dulaney ruled "for" a plea of abatement motion offered by defendant attorneys Ernie Armstrong, representing the city; Mike Line, representing the county; and Pete Greene, representing the board of county development and the industrial foundation.

Essentially, this ruling supported the contention that a "writ of mandamus" lawsuit filed by opponents of the prison--a legal document which would give them legal access to all public records related to the TDC bid--had been filed untimely.

In effect, however, Lubbock-based attorneys representing a group whose membership has gone on record as opposed to the prison used the day to gather facts related to the bid.

This followed their revelation shortly before noon that they had already received a copy from TDC of the Scurry County bid package and all other documents received by TDC from the local committee which organized the bid effort.

As the hearing began its afternoon session, Armstrong, who led most of the defendant's case Tuesday, offered a motion to end the hearing since, in his words, the question before the court was "moot."

"Why should we spend the rest of the day getting depositions for further lawsuits?" he asked the bench.

Earlier, however, Dulaney had ruled that plaintiff lawyers would be allowed questions related to what public records exist in relation to the TDC bid--details related to the writ of mandamus hearing rather than the plea of abatement hearing, Armstrong argued.

With this decision as a basis, Dulaney overruled countless objections offered by Armstrong in response to questions submitted by plaintiff counsels George Thompson, who served as lead attorney, and Harvey Morton.

It was Morton who commented on the stand that his clients were seeking information related to the bid "So that we can deliver it to these poor and ignorant people now."

Booster redesign not right...

NASA tells of shuttle delay

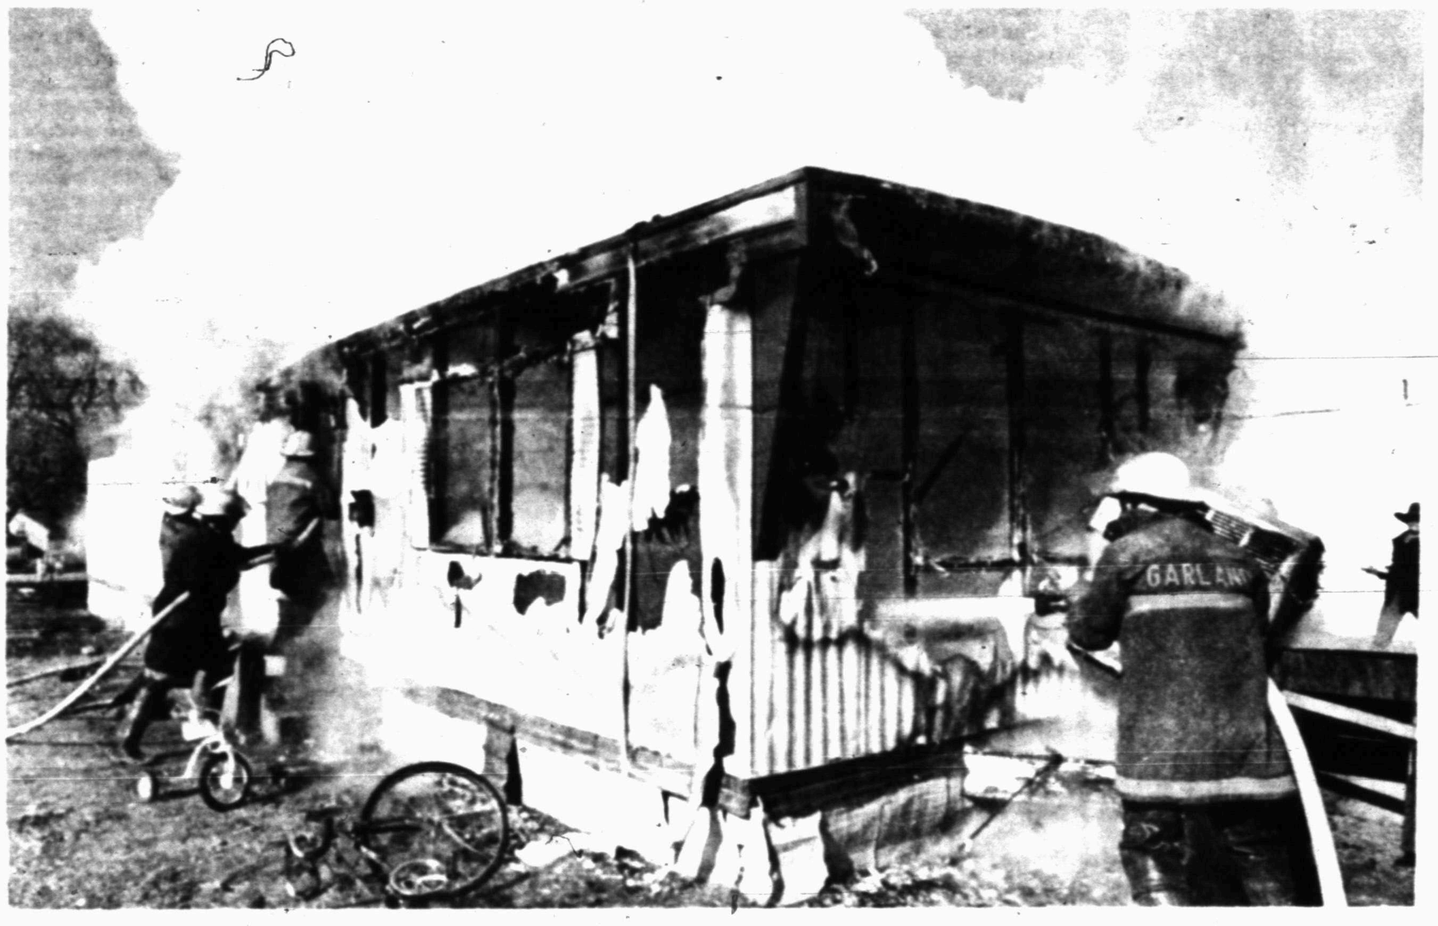

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA says its engineers clearly "missed something" in redesigning a critical booster-rocket component whose failure in a test firing will force postponement of the nation's first manned space launch since the Challenger disaster.

The failure of a new, rubberlike ring that is part of the rocket motor nozzle mechanism presented the National Aeronautics and Space Administration with a stunning new setback as it struggled to resume space shuttle flights two years after their grounding.

Tuesday's announcement reversed a glowing assessment that NASA and rocket contractor Morton Thiokol had made a week earlier following a cold-weather test of the redesigned booster.

Ironically, it came as the Soviet Union was celebrating a new outer space record with the return of a cosmonaut from 326 days in orbit.

It also came on the same day that five Morton Thiokol workers died in an explosion and fire in an MX missile section of the company's Wasatch Operations area in Utah, where the shuttle booster test was conducted last Wednesday.

FAST AND FURIOUS — Firemen battle a trailer house blaze shortly before noon Tuesday at 21st St. and Ave. O, a blaze said fully involved upon arrival of local units. Trailer gutted by fire

Fire swept through a mobile home here Tuesday, gutting most of the interior and leaving only the charred outer shell and portions of a bedroom and bathroom intact.

It marked the third fire call since last Friday--Christmas Day--which involved substantial damage to a county residence.

The residence damaged Tuesday was owned by Dupree's Rental Properties and occupied by Wynona Kay Carrisalez.

Firemen battled the fire for two hours through the noon hour Tuesday, requiring the first 20 to 30 minutes to bring it under control and saving part of the structure.

Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell said the fire started as a child was trying to dry pants over a stove.

The fire was called in by a neighbor. Firemen at the scene reported finding two kittens inside the wreckage which had apparently succumbed to smoke.

The call came in at 11:30 a.m., and firemen in four trucks

Elections, budgets, changes highlight year's third quarter

'87 In Review

The summer months of 1987, comprising the year's third quarter, saw Scurry County voters going to the polls Aug. 4 to decide both a county sales tax and a civil service commission question.

In addition, local prison project supporters were busy in the final weeks of September as the bid for the economic-boosting project was completed.

Tough decisions were also faced by Snyder city council members, as they labored to set a city budget in light of shortfalls in income for the current year. In the end, city employees suffered a 4 percent cut in pay.

Other decisions were required of school board members, who learned Sept. 2 that Superintendent Bob Hawes would be leaving the district to accept a similar post at Joshua ISD.

On Sept. 15, the board named Assistant Superintendent Dalton Moseley to the head district post--in the processing electing to keep the number of top administrative positions here at three rather than four.

In other changes, longtime Cogdell Memorial Hospital Administrator Cy Miller announced Aug. 27 his intent to retire at the end of the year.

The following is a chronological listing of some of the headlines making news during the year's third quarter:

July 5

A new general merchandise store will be available for Snyder area shoppers when Furr's Plus opens its doors Wednesday in the former location for Safeway in the Varsity Square Shopping Center.

July 19

As an August 8 election date nears, groups both for and against the implementation of statewide civil service laws for Snyder police and paid firemen have organized here, it was reported Sunday.

July 21

Keith Collier, county sheriff here since 1965, was awarded the highest honor given annually by the Sheriff's Association of Texas at the group's annual banquet held in Fort Worth Tuesday.

Collier was on hand to receive the Tom Tellepsen Award, presented by the Tellepsen Founation of Houston.

July 26

Snyder city council members have finalized guidelines to solve their estimated $600,000 budget problem, measures which will see utility rates and city taxes go up while salaries and benefits for all city employees go down.

Council members noted that while all Snyder citizens will feel the effects of their actions, the hardest hit will be city employees, who will see a 4-percent reduction in their pay plus the loss of a sick day "buy back" plan.

Civil rights legal suit is dropped

A civil rights lawsuit filed against County Attorney Michael Line has been dismissed in federal district court in Lubbock.

U.S. Magistrate J.Q. Warnick Jr. had told The Snyder Daily News that the suit would be dismissed if 48-year-old Travis Wesley Sawyer did not make it more satisfactorily specific by Nov. 30.

The Dec. 8 dismissal order was signed by U.S. District Judge

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If Congress can raise their own salaries, citizens should have the right to lower taxes."

A fellow over at the senior center says a friend of his is just getting over a bout with his ticker. The heart doctor had told the gentleman that he could resume his romantic life as soon as he could climb two flights of stairs without becoming winded.

The patient listened attentively then asked, "What if I look for women who live on the ground floor?"

There is a widely-held theory that early-risers get a headstart on the rest of the world. From this theory comes such sayings as "the early bird gets the worm," and "early to bed and early to rise makes one healthy, wealthy and wise."

A gal in the office was yawning one morning. A co-worker learned that she had been up several hours and inquired if she was practicing the "healthy, wealthy and wise" theory.

"No, but with four kids in the house, it's the only way to get in the bathroom."

It happened in a nearby city. A young woman meant to call the book and record shop, but dialed the wrong number and got a private residence.

"Do you have 'Eyes of Blue' and 'Love That's Real'?" she asked.

"Well, no," said the puzzled homeowner. "But I do have a wife and 11 children."

"Is that a record?" asked the young caller.

"I don't think so," replied the man, "but it's as close as I care to get."

Q — Regarding the ½ cent sales tax the county is to begin charging, is there any restriction on how the money from this tax can be spent?

A — The state comptroller's office says the revenue can be used for anything in the county budget. The purpose of the tax is to offset county personal property taxes.

In Brief

Thrift sues

DALLAS (AP) — A savings and loan has sued an organization operating a home for AIDS patients to recover $175,000 an executive of the thrift embezzled and gave the non-profit group last spring.

First Texas Savings Association filed its lawsuit in state district court Tuesday against the Persons With AIDS Coalition Inc. which operates a home for 23 AIDS patients in Dallas.

The home has been financed mainly by donations from Patrick Debenport, a former First Texas branch manager who admitted he stole $1.7 million from the thrift after he found he had contracted AIDS-related complex.

May deport

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli leaders said they plan to deport Palestinians accused of leading recent riots in the occupied lands, even though Washington warned such punishments could cause more violent protests.

However, one Israeli official said there would be no mass deportations and that each defendant's case would be considered individually.

In another development, two people were slightly injured when they opened one of eight letter bombs mailed to addresses in Israel and a Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank, police said today.

The other letter bombs were defused without causing injuries, police said. The bombs were discovered today and Tuesday, police said.

Stocks sag

by The Associated Press

Stocks and the dollar continued to sag in light trading wedged between Christmas and New Year's Day.

In other economic developments Tuesday, oil prices rose and forecasters predicted moderate inflation but sharply decreased job growth in 1988.

Super collider news cheered

AUSTIN (AP) — Much work still remains to be done to try to land a $4.4 billion atom smasher research project for Texas, now that one of two submitted sites has been selected one of eight finalists nationwide, Gov. Bill Clements said.

"We still have a long way to go, and I pledge to do my utmost in working with the Texas delegation to bring this project to our great state," the governor said Tuesday.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, announced Tuesday in Washington that a site in Ellis County, near Waxahachie, 25 miles southwest of Dallas, is on the short list in the national competition for the so-called super collider, along with Arizona, Colorado, Tennessee, New York, Illinois, Michigan and North Carolina.

Clements said it is regrettable that a site near Amarillo, Texas, didn't survive to the final round of consideration, but added, "If the project comes to Texas, the entire state will benefit."

"This is a great Christmas present. But it is one based on hard work, an outstanding proposal and unprecedented bipartisan teamwork," Clements said. "I applaud the fine work of the many people who helped us get to this point."

Gramm said he got the names in a telephone call from Energy Secretary John Herrington, as Herrington had promised when the selection process began.

"Needless to say, everyone here is pretty excited about this. We felt all along that we could make the final list," said Waxahachie's city manager, Bob Sokoll.

"We intend to do our best to be the final choice. It will definitely be the biggest thing that this town has ever seen."

William Banowsky, in charge of the effort to land the super collider in Ellis County, said Texas' chances of landing the project are excellent.

"If you look at it, it's a race between Illinois and Texas," Banowsky said. "Every state will be in there with a strong case, but I don't think anyone will be there with a stronger one than Texas, and we want to leave no stone unturned."

Banowsky said Texas now needs to concentrate on gaining alliances with surrounding states. Universities in Oklahoma, New Mexico, Louisiana and Arkansas need to be reassured that they will benefit if the super collider is located in Texas, he said.

Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss said, "Everything points to us having a great chance of getting the project. It will have a tremendous impact economically and academically."

Along with the Amarillo-area site, two independent bids for sites — one near Midland and one near El Paso — also were not included on the list, which the Energy Department will narrow to one preferred site by July 1988. A final decision is expected by January 1989.

"I'm very, very disappointed," Amarillo Mayor Glen Parkey said. "We were very optimistic about being on the short list because we were the lowest-cost site. ... But we're still going to be 110 percent behind Texas getting the Super Collider."

Thane Akins, a Midland geologist who helped coordinate the Midland bid, said: "For anybody who's put the effort into this, it's got to be a real downer." The Midland bid was funded with $400,000 and had extensive volunteer effort.

Gramm said important work lies ahead in Washington.

"Every one of these states has a good proposal. Now it will be the little extras" that determine the winner, Gramm said.

The inclusion of a Texas site means "We have a dog in the hunt, so to speak," Gramm said. "We have eight sites that are technically feasible. The question is, who can get that last little bit of effort to put them over the goal line?"

If Congress appropriates the funds, the U.S. Energy Department will build the 53-mile circular atom smasher to be used in high-energy physics research.

The super collider is expected to have a $20 billion economic impact over the next two decades and could create 4,500 construction jobs, 2,500 scientific jobs and 5,600 jobs for firms doing business with the super collider operation.

Gramm said he believed the fact that the announcement was made a month ahead of schedule is a positive sign and hoped the selection of the final choice would come as early.

Banowsky said the Dallas-Fort Worth authority he heads will now plan a $1 million fund-raising drive to lobby for its site during the next few months.

"The race has now begun. It's now a political battle, to be sure," Banowsky said.

Investors raise operating funds

RATON (AP) — Forty-seven investors have pledged $470,000 to keep La Mesa Park horse race track operating in 1988 while they work on a long-term solution for the financially troubled track.

Morton Simon, a Santa Fe attorney representing Friends of La Mesa Park, said the group submitted a plan last week to International State Bank of Raton and Sunwest Bank of Raton to keep the state's oldest track running.

The banks have not responded, he said.

Dear Abby

Peer Pressure Helps to Put Squeeze on Smoking Habit

By Abigail Van Buren

1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I sat in the seat ahead of you on a flight to Los Angeles. Although I was dying to talk with you, I understand that thousands of people must have that urge — and follow it daily — so I said nothing. But since you welcome letters, may I speak with you now?

I have known you to devote many columns to getting people to quit smoking. I doubt if those columns will cause one smoker to stop. They are addicted to nicotine just as heroin addicts, etc.

The best deterrent to cigarette smoking is peer pressure and legislation. Praise those people who demand that smoking not be allowed in their homes. If enough people were firm about it, more smokers would feel like outcasts and perhaps decide to quit. Making it difficult for a smoker to have a cigarette makes the time between his cigarettes increase, making it easier to quit.

Please, Abby, use the great power you have to persuade non-smokers to assert themselves when smokers try to light up in their homes. Persuade non-smokers to write to restaurants, sports arenas, airlines, any place where they are bothered by smoke and complain. These complaints are heard!

Now aren't you glad I didn't talk with you on the plane?

SANDRA LIPPS
SANTA MONICA

DEAR SANDRA: No, I would have taken notes in shorthand and used it in my column. You and I agree about smoking. Some smokers are, indeed, addicted. But neither peer pressure nor legislation will cure an addiction.

A smoker has to want to quit for his or her own reasons. Some get the "will" after the doctor says, "I just saw your X-rays, and I have some bad news for you."

I hate for that to happen to people I care about. Too many smokers say, "Well, I enjoy smoking — and it's my life." Actually, they more "crave" than enjoy it; they don't realize it's not only their lives, unless they have no one in the world who loves them, or depends upon them for something — if it's only friendship.

I could write a book — and one day I may. Thanks for writing, Sandra.

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting a baby soon. If it's a girl, I want to name her "Abby." It's a beautiful name, but I'm not sure if it's a real name, or the nickname for "Abigail."

I have found "Abby" listed in one book of baby names, but most books list it as the nickname for "Abigail." In a world where we call a president "Jimmy," I still believe in using a formal name where proper, but I would rather give my child the name I am going to call her.

What do you think? You would know.

KAREN ROSIER
ELGIN, ILL.

DEAR KAREN: If you have a girl, name her whatever you wish, whether or not the name is listed in a book of baby names. Some people "invent" their own names. I have met some "Abbys" who were never "Abigail." Good luck to you and the new baby, whatever her (or his) name is.

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the double standard concerning women wearing men's clothing and vice versa, I had to write. I am happily married to a man who shares his closet with me. On a trip to Hawaii a few years ago, my luggage was lost, so I wore my husband's clothes until mine arrived — five days later. We are the same size — I am large for a woman, and he's small for a man.

He has worn some of my things too, which doesn't make him less masculine in my eyes. He likes to wear my nighties and negligees because they feel so soft next to his skin.

Clothes do not make the man or the woman, Abby.

Homeless men in Dallas are locked out of shelter

DALLAS (AP) — The superintendent of a shelter that locked out 20 homeless men overnight during sub-freezing weather says the decision was made because the men were acting wild and disobeying rules.

"The problem is not over any one incident — it's just an attitude that we owe them," said John Gardner, the mission's superintendent. "They've acted wild this past week. It's not an easy decision. Who wants to put people out in the cold?"

The homeless men, clustered Monday night around burning trash barrels to fend off the cold in a vacant lot across from the Union Gospel Mission, which had vacant beds. Officials of the shelter said the men were locked out because some had caused disturbances.

Many of the men had slept in warm beds and eaten free meals at the mission for years. But Monday, some used rocks to splinter wood into pieces small enough to fit into the two trash barrels.

Others attempted to escape the wind's bite by lying on the ground near a makeshift shelter made out of a piece of wood, an old door and a piece of cardboard.

Gardner said he allowed three handicapped men to stay the night in the shelter, which was reopened at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

He said he decided to close the mission because some of the men staying there had refused to abide by rules and had frightened families who had brought food to the shelter.

"We have simple rules," he said. "But we're not here to be a flophouse. We're here to help. I told them that I'm sure there are some who don't deserve to be out there.

But some men who spent Monday night sleeping on sidewalks outside the mission or shivering beside the burning trash barrels felt that no one deserved to be out there.

"Instead of caring, they're throwing people out in the cold," said 28-year-old Lee Owens. "They're not helping. They've got 86 vacant beds in there. Any time there's a rescue mission with 86 (empty) beds in it on a night when it gets down to 20 degrees, it's not a rescue mission."

The shelter, which was created in 1949 by a group of businessmen, is supported by donations.

Some who had hoped for a bed at the mission went to other shelters in search of a meal and a warm bed. Others just wandered around.

"They just got out. No telling where they went," said Owens.

Willie Skinner, 35, who has been living on the streets for three years, said the mission was unfair in making the group pay for wrongdoing by a few.

"If they want to punish me for somebody else's sin, I can't buy that," said Skinner.

Neighbors say...

Suspect 'slavedriver' to wife and children

DOVER, Ark. (AP) — R. Gene Simmons Sr. was a sullen "slavedriver" who dominated his family and was despised by a teenage daughter who called him a "drunken bum," neighbors and the girl's classmates said.

The daughter was among 16 people Simmons is suspected of killing in a Christmastime shooting rampage. Authorities said murder charges would be filed later this week, and a judge Tuesday ordered Simmons held without bond.

Relatives say Simmons, 47, committed incest six years ago with another of his slain daughters and fathered her child, who also was killed, according to reports today in the Arkansas Gazette and the El Paso (Texas) Times.

A New Mexico grand jury charged Simmons in 1981 with three counts of incest that were dropped a year later after he moved to Arkansas, the Gazette said.

Simmons was described Tuesday as a quiet, stingy, retired Air Force master sergeant who made his wife and children do hard work.

"I called him a slavedriver," said Karen Shaddon, a resident of the Pleasant Grove community where the family lived.

"He'd have them (the children) carrying five-gallon jugs" of dirt to maintain a steep driveway leading to the property where 14 bodies have been discovered since Monday, she said.

"He'd keep them very isolated," Mrs. Shaddon said, and if neighbors passed, "he'd shoo the kids up the hill."

Loretta Simmons, 17, disliked her father, said Summer Mooney, a 17-year-old classmate at Dover High School. "She said he was a drunken bum. She was real mean to him," Ms. Mooney said.

Loretta Simmons got $5 in spending money each month from her mother, who saved it from cash Simmons gave her for groceries, Ms. Mooney said.

She said that when she occasionally stayed overnight at her slain friend's home, Simmons "had a beer in his hand all the time. He had one little room he would stay in all the time. It was dark and seemed spooky and it stunk. Nobody ever went in there but him."

She said Loretta Simmons tried to commit suicide with an overdose of pills last summer.

"I knew none of the children liked their father much at all," said 17-year-old Jennifer Mayhew, another classmate. "He was kind of quiet, coming from a military background, he was very reserved. He wasn't the kind of person you could sit and visit with."

Teachers and schoolmates said Tuesday that the four Simmons children living at home were bright, well-behaved students who did not discuss their family life.

Adeline Schower of Cloudcroft, N.M., where the Simmonses lived from 1977 to 1981, recalled that Becky Simmons, Simmons' slain wife, was not allowed to mingle with neighbors. "She was a lovely woman. He was an abusive man."

Wilma Simmons, ex-wife of R. Gene Simmons Jr. — who was killed along with the couple's 3-year-old daughter — said her former father-in-law often stayed in his bedroom alone to avoid contact with his family.

New laws take effect Friday

AUSTIN (AP) — Thirty-three new laws that take effect Friday will touch a diverse group of Texans, including couples waiting to be married, farm workers and people who ride all-terrain vehicles.

The final installment of the $5.7 billion tax package passed by the 1987 Legislature also goes into effect Friday, when the state sales tax will be extended to most data processing services and to repairs and remodeling of nonresidential property.

Lawyers also will have to pay an annual $110 occupation tax. The state corporate franchise tax will be raised, and a surtax will be placed on insurance companies.

Couples who want to be married beginning in 1988 will have to wait at least 72 hours between the time a marriage license is issued and the time the marriage ceremony can occur. Marriages that take place within the "cooling-off" period will be subject to annulment, except in certain cases.

People on active duty in the U.S. armed forces are exempt from the measure, and those who do not want to wait can ask a state district judge for an exemption.

Among other soon-to-be laws is a measure to give agricultural employees access to information about hazardous chemicals they may be exposed to. That law will protect farm workers from retaliation by employers when they exercise their right to know about the chemicals.

Another law will strengthen the prohibition against the abuse, sale or delivery of volatile chemicals, abusable aerosol paint or glue. Officials have said the abuse of the substances by sniffing is an important problem in the state.

The law will require businesses that sell abusable glue or aerosol paint to conspicuously post a sign in English and Spanish outlining the penalties for selling the abusable substances to people under age 18, and for abusing glue and paint.

It also will step up the penalty against someone who delivers abusable glue or paint to someone under age 18.

Organ donors are the subject of another new law, which will require hospitals to develop a procedure for identifying potential organ and tissue donors when deaths occur.

The law says the person authorized to make an organ donation on behalf of a person who dies in a hospital shall be asked if the dead person had volunteered to be a donor.

2 lawmen indicted in river shooting

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The 1985 shooting of a Mexican while he was crossing the Rio Grande near the area of a reported robbery has led to civil rights charges against the police chief and a police captain in the border city of Hidalgo.

Police Chief Jose G. Perez and Capt. Jose Hernandez Jr., both of the Hidalgo marshall's department were named in a four-count indictment returned Tuesday by a federal grand jury.

William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said the four-count indictment charges Perez and Hernandez with violating the rights of Mario Alvarez-Mendoza of Reynosa.

Mexican officials protested to U.S. authorities after the Oct. 8, 1985, shooting incident.

The marshall's department acts in the same capacity as a police department in the border city of about 2,300 across the river from Reynosa, Mexico.

A call to Perez at the department on Tuesday was referred to Hernandez, who declined comment.

"I can't say anything about it until I talk to my attorney first," Hernandez said.

The indictment alleges that Perez and Hernandez shot and wounded the Mexican national with a shotgun, violated his "constitutional rights not to be deprived of liberty without due process of law and not to be subjected to unnecessary and excessive force by someone acting under color of law," according to a Justice Department news release.

Alvarez-Mendoza, who was 21 at the time of the shooting, suffered multiple gunshot wounds in his lower back and legs, according to the Justice Department.

In the 1985 incident, Alvarez-Mendoza was brought back to the U.S. side, where he was treated, said Deborah Burstion-Wade, a Justice Department spokeswoman in Washington.

She said the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department notified the FBI about the incident.

"He was near the scene of a robbery and not a suspect, per se," she said. "They (Perez and Hernandez) were apparently questioning people in the area and that's how the whole incident came about."

"I guess he was pursued, he was chased when he was told to stop and didn't stop," Ms. Burstion-Wade said. "When they saw him, I think he was already in the river. It wasn't like he was on the shore and then went in the river."

Perez and Hernandez also were charged with one count each of using a firearm to commit a crime of violence.

A long shot is the only shot

By James Jacoby

You already knew, didn't you, that defensive pre-emptive bidding distorts the auction, taking away room that most of us humans need to get to the right contract? That's a fact of life and bridge, but don't let the sad reality of occasionally playing a ridiculous contract blind you to taking the best chance to make it. Here, when West stepped in with three hearts and North bid three spades, opener South had his last chance to bid three no-trump. He had the heart ace and hoped that North held the diamond ace for his bidding. That was not the case.

West led the queen of hearts, asking partner to unblock the jack, and declarer ducked. When another heart was continued, declarer won his ace and resignedly played the king of diamonds. East took the ace, cashed the ace of spades and put declarer in the dummy with a second spade. Poor South could now do nothing except cash dummy's ace of clubs and hope that the king would fall. When that didn't happen, he was down three.

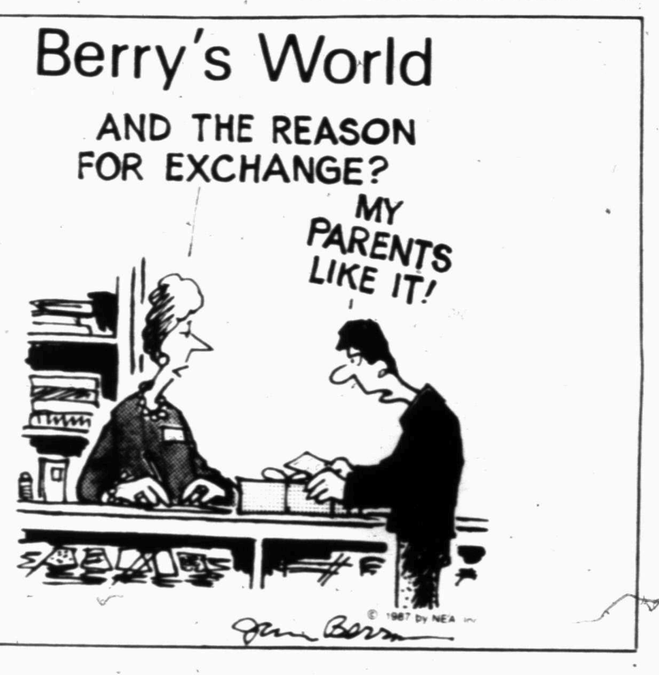

Though it seems unlikely that East would hold both missing aces, that is the only hope declarer has for success. But to avoid being locked into dummy early in the play, South must work on clubs. At trick three, declarer should run the nine of clubs. When that holds, he can continue with the queen and another club and then drop West's king with dummy's ace. Only then should he play diamonds, and East cannot stop him from making the contract.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Three T's lead Scott's Tigers to victory over Mineral Wells

CLYDE -- Snyder put the T-N-T plus T on Mineral Wells here Tuesday night, caging the Lions 83-63 in a non-district basketball game.

Tracy and Terry - Tracy Braziel and Terry Garza - combined for 62 points and Trey Tippens also landed in double figures as Snyder won big following a week-long layoff. The victory was Snyder's 11th in 16 games this season. The Tigers will go for No. 12 on Saturday when they play Central in San Angelo at 7:30 p.m.

Mineral Wells was ahead 17-16 after the first eight minutes and led by as many as six points in the second quarter, before Snyder made its challenge.

"We started pressing them and that worked pretty well for us," said Coach Larry Scott, whose Tigers outgunned the Lions 30-23 in the second period and 17-10 in the third.

Point guard Cory Stephenson paced the Lions with 14 first-half points. His effort included three three-pointers. Mineral Wells tallied five three-point buckets in the first half.

"We weren't playing bad defense, they were just making the shots," noted Scott.

The coached made a couple of adjustments for the second half. In one, he moved Garza over to cover Stephenson in place of Kevin Combest.

"Kevin was doing a good job, but we put Terry on him because Terry is bigger and had longer arms. We wanted to force him (Stephenson) to have to shoot over him," explained the coach.

Garza is 6-4, Combest is 5-11.

"Also, with our press, he (Stephenson) had to work harder to get the ball down court and that took away from his shooting," noted the coach.

Garza scored 14 of his 26 points in the second quarter while teammate Braziel, a sophomore, bagged 12 of his game-high 36 in the second. Garza's effort in the period included a six-for-seven effort from the free throw line.

Snyder hit 33 of 64 shots in the game while Mineral Wells managed only 25 of 63. The Tigers also won on the boards, outrebounding the Lions 38 to 20. Tippens yanked down 14 to lead Snyder. The 6-5 senior also contributed four steals and four assists.

Stephenson led Mineral Wells with 16 points. Mike Brown scored 15.

Ponies, Aggies cop victories; meet in Rainbow Classic tilt

by The Associated Press

Two Southwest Conference foes vie for the consolation title in Hawaii's Rainbow Classic today after victories Tuesday.

Carlton McKinney scored a career-high 33 points Tuesday night to lead Southern Methodist to an 88-51 victory over Creighton, while Texas A&M defeated Hawaii 80-78 in overtime in Honolulu.

In games involving other SWC teams, Portland defeated Texas Christian 67-65 in overtime to take fourth place in the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore., and Montana beat Rice 64-48 in Missoula.

Southern Methodist, 9-2, took a 10-0 lead and extended it to 21-10 with 11:21 left in the first half. But the Bluejays came back to outscore SMU 22-16 and trail 37-32 at halftime.

Creighton closed to 39-36 in the opening minutes of the second half, before the Mustangs pulled away behind McKinney's 19 second-half points to lead 67-46 with 7:58 left.

From then on, the Mustangs coasted, playing their reserves the rest of the game. Eric Longino had 18 points for SMU, while Creighton was led by Rod Mason with 15.

Darryl McDonald scored a career-high 30 points, including a 3-pointer that sent the game into overtime, as Texas A&M edged Hawaii.

The Rainbows, who trailed 35-20 at halftime, made 14 of 15 shots during a second-half stretch to take their first lead of the game at 58-56 with six minutes to go. Hawaii led 67-64 until McDonald's 3-pointer with two seconds left sent the contest into overtime.

The Aggies, 8-5, made seven of eight free throws in the final 48 seconds of overtime to clinch the victory.

Also in double figures for Texas A&M were Doug Dennis and Donald Thompson with 14 each, and Keron Graves with 10.

Reserve guard Robert Phillips scored 12 of his 18 points in the second half to help Portland beat TCU.

Lack of charity costs Lady Tigers title bid at C-City tournament

COLORADO CITY -- Snyder's Lady Tigers hit just 11 of 21 free throws here Tuesday - missing the front end of seven bonus situations along the way - and fell to Abilene Cooper 66-60 in the finals of the Lady Wolves Basketball Tournament.

Snyder had routed the Lady Cougars in the first game of the season, 74-48, but Coach Ken Housden was expecting a strong battle this time around.

"I made the comment earlier after the first game that they would come along and have a good ballclub. We made too many turnovers and missed the front end of seven one-and-ones and it's hard to do that and win," said Housden. "All in all, it was a pretty good ballgame. We played pretty well, but we need to do the things like make free throws in close games."

Snyder was also outrebounded 41 to 33.

Shelly Tomlin paced Snyder with 16 points. Teri Sue Henry scored 14 and Melody Pickering added 9 points and five rebounds.

Cooper, 10-6, was led by Paula Scott's 16 points. Liz Greer scored 15 while Wendy Hill and Holly McMillan scored 12 each.

The Lady Tigers, 9-6 now, will take on non-loop opponent Odessa this Friday in the Snyder High School Gym. Snyder freshmen girls will play Odessa JV at 2 p.m. and the varsity game will follow immediately. Housden's Tigers resume 2-4A play next Tuesday, Jan. 5, when they bus to meet loop favorite Big Spring.

Tournament action continues through Saturday.

Late field goal lifts Bulldogs to Liberty triumph over Hogs

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Georgia Coach Vince Dooley figures his 15th-ranked Bulldogs' come-from-behind victory over Arkansas in the Liberty Bowl may be a good omen.

The Bulldogs capped a 9-3 season with a 39-yard field goal by John Kasay as time expired Tuesday night to defeat the Razorbacks 20-17.

"I'm very proud of the way our team came back and won the ballgame. We've lost games in the last second recently, so it's good to win one in the same way," Dooley said.

The Bulldogs escaped disaster with 1:42 left in the game when Arkansas placekicker Kendall Trainor was wide to the left as he attempted to break a 17-17 deadlock from 36 yards out.

Arkansas forced the Bulldogs to punt and wanted to mount a last-gasp drive from its own 40-yard line.

The Razorbacks' victory hopes were dashed quickly, however, as Georgia cornerback Carver Russaw intercepted a first-down pass by Greg Thomas at the Arkansas 43.

Four plays later Kasay sent the Bulldogs home a bowl winner for the first time in four years.

"I guess the turning point in the game was Russaw's interception," Dooley said.

Kasay, a freshman who had hit only one of two field goal attempts during the regular season, was given placement duties for the game after junior kicker Steve Crumley was suspended for the game by Dooley for breaking team rules.

Georgia's 13-point comeback in the fourth quarter took some of the luster off the performance of the Razorbacks' Thomas, who was voted the game's MVP.

Thomas rushed for 79 yards on 13 carries, scoring on runs of 10 yards and 1 yard. He completed seven passes for 86 yards.

Arkansas took a 3-0 lead with 6:37 in the first quarter on a 43-yard field goal by Trainor.

After Georgia moved in front 7-3 on a 1-yard run by Lars Tate, the Razorbacks appeared to take control.

Thomas guided the Razorbacks 68 yards in the final minutes of the second half to push Arkansas into a 10-7 lead.

Arkansas retained its momenteum at the start of the second half, taking the kickoff and driving 76 yards in only eight plays to forge a 17-7 advantage on Thomas' 1-yard scoring run.

Georgia refused to fold, however, pulling within 17-10 on a 24-yard field goal by Kasay on the first play of the fourth quarter and moving into a 17-17 deadlock with 10:23 left to play on a 5-yard scoring run by James Jackson.

The Bulldogs got the opportunity to pull even when cornerback Rusty Beasly intercepted a deflected pass thrown by Thomas at the Razorback 39 with 13:20 remaining.

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said the decision may have turned on a holding penalty that pushed his Razorbacks from field position at the Bulldog 5 to the 19-yard line.

"We had a great drive in the fourth quarter from our 12 to their 5. Then we had a crucial holding penalty. If not for the penalty, we would have been kicking from the 5 to win," Hatfield said.

Hatfield said the loss mirrored some the Razorbacks' frustrations during their 9-4 season.

Conlan defensive newcomer of year

by The Associated Press

Linebacker Shane Conlan, one of the defensive catalysts who helped the Buffalo Bills to their best season in five years, was selected Tuesday as The Associated Press NFL defensive rookie of the year.

He beat out his own teammate and fellow linebacker, Cornelius Bennett, in the voting conducted among three sports writers or sportscasters representing each of the NFL's 28 teams.

The acquisition and signing of Bennett on Oct. 30 allowed the Bills to move the 6-foot-3, 230-pound Conlan from outside linebacker to inside, where he led Buffalo in tackles with 114 in 12 games. That included 14 in a 34-21 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders.

Conlan, one of the leaders of Penn State's collegiate national champions last season, earned the rookie honor despite missing four weeks of training camp in a contract dispute.

Rice named top offensive player

NEW YORK (AP) - Jerry Rice of the San Francisco 49ers, who set two new NFL records for touchdown catches despite playing in only 12 games of this strike-shortened season, was named today the NFL's offensive player of the year by The Associated Press.

Rice, called by San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh "the single most dominating player in the game today," had 22 touchdown catches, breaking the single-season mark of 18 set in the 16-game season of 1984 by Miami's Mark Clayton. Rice also ran for a touchdown.

Rice continues to ride a record streak with touchdown catches in 13 straight games, two more than the mark set by Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch in 1950-51 and tied by Buddy Dial in 1959-60.

Economists say new job creation will falter

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. economy's ability to create jobs will falter in 1988 after nearly five years of strong growth, and most new positions will be in businesses offering little employment security, labor specialists say.

They attribute the decline in quantity and quality of new jobs to the Oct. 19 stock market collapse, changing population patterns, tougher management and the inevitable maturing process in a cyclical economy.

"America's great job-generation machine will run out of steam in 1988," said Richard Belous, a labor economist at the Conference Board, a New York business research group.

In one of the bluntest assessments of U.S. employment, the group predicted Tuesday that the number of new jobs will tumble to about 1.5 million next year, roughly half those generated in 1987.

Both labor and industry say the economic dynamo that has created about 12 million new jobs since the last recession is stumbling, although they disagree on how that will affect 1988 employment.

Henry Schechter, deputy director of economic research for the AFL-CIO, said a growing inflation rate, decline in housing construction, sluggish auto sales, relentless growth in imports and cutbacks in government budgets all would contribute to fewer new jobs next year.

"How bad that will be, I won't define in terms of numbers," he said.

Belous attributed part of the deteriorating job outlook to a prediction that the population of Americans seeking work will grow faster than new employment opportunities.

In addition, the labor force will be comprised increasingly of what Belous and other economists call "contingent employees," a group that will fill part-time temporary jobs and face higher risk of layoffs if the economy shrinks.

These economists contend the layoff risk has been aggravated by the stock market crash, which hurt the ability of companies to raise money by selling stock. The alternative is to borrow money, which will make corporate executives more aggressive in cutting costs in order to pay increased debts.

"Many managers are going to say, 'My God, we're either highly leveraged or over-leveraged,'" Belous said. "That's not the kind of environment where you play 'Mr. Nice Guy' with human resources."

Private analysts also foresee an inevitable cyclical slowdown in the number of jobs created since late 1982, when the last recession ended.

"If you assume we have some growth next year, if we don't have an outright recession, we will still get some job growth but much less than in 1987," said Sandra Shaber, an economist with the Futures Group, a Washington forecasting firm.

Ms. Shaber predicted a 1.5 percent rate of job growth next year, compared with the 2.3 percent growth rate the firm forecast for this year. The gains will come largely from increased manufacturing, while the financial services and retail trade businesses will suffer, she said.

Others also foresee more gains in American manufacturing, largely as the result of the dollar's depreciation, which has made U.S.-made goods cheaper and more competitive. But in the country's increasingly service-oriented economy, this will only soften the impact of unemployment in other areas, they say.

"For an economy to perform well, it's got to grow fast enough to keep up with the population and growth in the labor force," said David Blitzer, chief economist for Standard & Poor's Corp., a credit-rating and investment research firm. "The chance to do that in 1988 will be very difficult."

Robertson not sure he wants $4.5 million in federal money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson doesn't want the check to be in the mail to him on Monday, because he's just not sure he wants that $4.5 million in federal money for the 1988 election.

On the other hand, Democrat Gary Hart definitely wants the $100,000 in federal matching funds due him next week, but Xerox Corp. doesn't want that check to go into the mail either.

Jesse Jackson wants his federal funds, but he's having trouble getting an OK from the Federal Election Commission.

Xerox obtained a District of Columbia Superior Court order Tuesday aimed at seizing Hart's matching money to settle a 1984 presidential campaign debt owed for copier rentals.

Sue Casey, a Hart campaign aide in Denver, said there would be no immediate comment on the matter because the campaign had not seen the court order.

The FEC has approved money for both Robertson and Hart, and on Monday, the money is scheduled to flow to Robertson, Hart and 10 other candidates who have qualified for nearly $25.6 million in the first installment for the 1988 campaign. Checks will be written or the money will be wired to the campaigns.

Jackson is the one remaining uncertified candidate. The FEC staff found problems with the documentation submitted by his campaign, and the campaign has been asked to to resolve the problems, FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said Tuesday. Ms. Snyder would not specify what those were.

Jackson pledged to clear up the problems with his submissions today or Thursday and get in line for his matching money.

Robertson, in an unprecedented request, asked the FEC to delay sending the money for as much as 30 days beyond Jan. 4.

Robertson campaign attorney Marion Edwyn Harrison, in a letter to the FEC, said the delay would "enable Americans For Robertson to determine whether Americans For Robertson wishes to accept matching funds and participate in the matching funds regimen."

Robertson, the former television evangelist, has expressed opposition to accepting money from the government for his campaign. But the campaign filed all the documents necessary to be ruled eligible for matching money.

No candidate has ever refused matching funds once qualified, said the FEC's Ms. Snyder. And the letters from the FEC to the U.S. Treasury telling it to issue Robertson the check have already been sent.

Harrison's letter said Robertson wanted to avoid testing whether the campaign must abide by the spending limits attached to matching funds, even if it later rejects the money.

Robertson, who already has raised and spent at least $11 million, would have to abide by state and national spending limits in the primary season if he takes the money. The national limit will be about $27 million.

If he takes no federal funds, he would have to abide by all contribution and disclosure rules, but could spend as much money as he could raise.

Through last week, the Robertson campaign had qualified for $4,495,607.72 in matching funds, more than any other candidate except Vice President George Bush.

Warren Rosenfeld, a Washington attorney for Xerox, said the 1984 Hart campaign owed the company $10,480 plus interest for copier rental fees that have not been paid.

When the FEC certified Hart on Monday, Rosenfeld said it was time to move.

"We thought we would take a shot and filed an attachment order rather hurriedly," he said.

Presidential candidates can win eligibility for federal matching funds by raising at least $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 states.

Betty Ford is hospitalized again

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, recovering from heart surgery a month ago, was taken to Eisenhower Medical Center by ambulance and was in stable condition today, officials said.

"She experienced some weakness during dinner," said hospital spokesman Michael McFadden.

A Riverside County fire ambulance took Mrs. Ford, 69, to the desert hospital at 8:13 p.m. Tuesday, said fire Capt. Dan Proctor.

"I guess apparently she was just having some bleeding from the sutures," he said, referring to her recent coronary artery bypass surgery.

Proctor said Mrs. Ford was alert and talking en route to the hospital.

According to Confucius, the Chinese philospher, "Humility is the solid foundation of all the virtues."

Deputy Nazi leader Rudolf Hess landed by parachute in Scotland in 1941 in a private effort to make peace during World War II.

TDC hearing details given

A question often repeated in relation to these inquiries was "do you know of written authority in minutes authorizing (actions taken by public governmental bodies)."

Areas which were often referred to by the plaintiff attorneys--who supported their questions by using specific pages from the locally-generated TDC bid document--included incentive offers made by local entities to TDC.

They also often asked questions about terms of employment of a so-called "Austin lobbyist" employed by the local chamber committee to assist in the TDC bid, Tom Loeffler.

Loeffler made part of the county's oral presentation at the Nov. 9 hearing in Austin during which prison site recipients were announced.

Incentive offer details which prompted the most questions included terms related to:

—The offer of a wing at Cogdell Memorial Hospital for use by the TDC in addition to a discounted rate for patient care of TDC prisoners.

—The offer of paving both on-site and leading to the prison site by the county.

—The offer of utility lines for water and sewer to serve the prison site offered by the city.

—The donation of the industrial foundation building to TDC for use as a storage facility building.

Thompson also questioned if public funds--specifically tax monies--had been spent during the bidding process.

This question was first asked of Roy Baze, who coordinated the compilation of the actual bid document. Baze also proved to be one of the more combative witnesses of the afternoon, at one point declining to answer a question posed by Thompson related to bid specifics.

Baze said he had been informed by attorneys with TDC that the bid documents were property of that state agency and, because of this, not public information.

In response to Thompson's question regarding public funds, Baze noted that the only amount he was aware of was $7,500 contributed last March by the Board of County Development, a local entity which receives tax money from the county to be used to "advertise" the county for the recruitment of industry.

Regarding the total cost of preparing the bid package, Baze estimated this at "from $70,000 to $75,000." Other than the $7,500 from the BCD, he commented the remainder of this money had come from private donations.

On two occasions, Thompson asked Baze if he had been reimbursed for his services. After asked this question a second time, Baze replied, "I'll tell you again sir, not one thin dime."

When asked about this earlier, Baze had commented in fact he had spent an estimated $5,000 of "my own dollars" during the bid process.

Thompson also asked several witnesses of the exact amount paid to Loeffler as the consulant for the prison committee. No exact figures were offered, however.

Thompson questioned Hospital Administrator Cy Miller regarding the offer of a wing at Cogdell for TDC use.

The Lubbock lawyer is also the attorney of record in a second lawsuit filed Monday which attempts to have this action legally blocked.

When asked if the hospital board's decision was recorded in minutes, Miller replied yes, and noted a Dec. 4 meeting during which the board approved this.

Included in the offer is a discount to be offered to TDC for patient care. The discount--figured at 28 percent off the room rate and 20 percent off "other charges"--is also offered locally to senior citizens and personnel with such public entities as the city, college and school, Miller noted in response to a question from defendant attorney Greene.

The county's guarantee to complete paving at the prison site prompted questions of County Judge Bobby Goodwin, who was called to the stand twice by Thompson.

Thompson produced a page from the TDC bid document and quizzed Goodwin about an offer by the county to complete, according to the attorney, some $566,000 worth of paving and dirt work at the project.

In action taken Dec. 7 by the court, commissioners approved an expense of some $4,000 for a 300 ft. section of road and terracing at the site.

Goodwin acknowledged the offer of $566,000 was in the TDC bid, but explained this as an "incentive offer" which was only an estimate at the time since the county could not know exactly where the prison facility might be located on the proposed site.

He said the cost was figured "if the prison had been in the center of the site," indicating this was the most expensive alternative since the county would have had to pave a longer stretch of road leading into the site.

As the project is now planned, he said the $4,000 in expenses to the county is more accurate.

He noted also current plans for an application for state monies to pave a county road adjacent to the site. Regarding where county funds would have come from if the total expense had been in excess of $500,000, he said federal revenue sharing dollars were targeted.

Thompson asked when the decision to promise the paving and site preparation monies was made, and Goodwin indicated that as a committe member of the local prison committee, "estimates" were needed from the county.

He indicated the promise was "informally discussed" by the court during work session-type meetings. When specifically asked by Thompson, he acknowledged there were no public minutes to reflect the decision.

Questions related to the city's promise of water and sewer lines to serve the prison site was answered during the afternoon by Mayor Troy Williamson.

Williamson noted the commitment to offer the utility lines, at an expense expected to exceed $1 million, has been made by the council at least two meetings and this decision was backed by minutes.

Williamson was quizzed also about the industrial foundation building donation since the city had been the "on paper" owner of the facility before allowing the industrial foundation to exercise an option to purchase it last Dec. 18.

This option to purchase was exercised following a $1 million fund raising campaign completed locally by private citizens to assist in the purchase of land and the building in connection with the prison effort.

Rex Robinson, president of Snyder National Bank, was asked about this fund raising effort by Thompson. Robinson noted the land site for the prison has not been deeded to TDC as yet, but that the $1 million-plus is currently being held in escrow accounts with five participating financial instititions and that the transaction is now tentatively set for Jan. 20.

Also called to testify Tuesday by Thompson was Roy McQueen, publisher of the Snyder Daily News. Thompson questioned McQueen in reference to the contention by defendants that information about the TDC bid was withheld since, in their opinion, the bid selection process was not yet complete.

"Did anyone ever ask you to not write stories because the TDC bid was still up in the air," Thompson asked.

"No one ever directed us how to write any articles," McQueen replied.

In all, the plaintiffs had subpoenaed 12 individuals connected to the prison project, but ultimately called only McQueen, Robinson, Goodwin, Williamson, Miller and Baze to the stand during the afternoon.

In the morning session, Joe Fowler, president of the industrial foundation, and City Manager John Gayle were required to testify as well.

Others subpoenaed were Bill Moss, chamber manager and BCD board member, Bill Parker, president of West Texas State Bank and a prison committee member, and city staffers Jeanne Johnson, city secretary, and Don Osborn, city engineer.

Plaintiffs bringing the legal action--which still awaits a second court date since the writ of mandamus is yet to be acted on--are Johnny Eicke, Fairy Eicke, Ava Lapour, Joe Lapour, Elaine Lambert, Mrs. Jim Simpson, Ophelia Blackard, Betty Sorrells, Mrs. Bernard Longbotham Jr., Louise Thompson, Patty Barnes, Fred Bullard, Jeanne Bullard, Caprice Bedell, Raye Sterling, Gloria Griffin, Jonisue Stiff, Mary Lou Crawford, Sid Wall, June Wall and Jim McCright.

Network sues prosecutors

DALLAS (AP) — ABC News, planning a "20-20" segment on the Walker Railey case, has sued the Dallas County district attorney's office to obtain phone message transcripts the former minister left on his answering machine the night his wife was found choked nearly to death.

Margaret Railey was attacked in her Dallas home April 21, police believe the assault occurred between 9:30 and 11:30 p.m.

Railey, who was senior pastor at First United Methodist Church of Dallas, told police that he was studying at a Southern Methodist University library at that time.

Filed Tuesday in state district court, the network's lawsuit claims that transcripts of the messages recorded April 21 and 22 are public record because their contents have been reported extensively by the news media.

ABC News requested the transcripts in a Dec. 4 letter to Norman Kinne, first assistant district attorney.

Kinne refused the network's request. "The recorded messages ... are evidence in the pending investigation of the attack on Margaret Railey," he said in a Dec. 7 letter to ABC.

Included in the messages is the recording of a call from Railey's car phone to his publicly listed home line the night of the attack. Phone records show that Railey made the two-minute call about 12:03 a.m., though Railey said the call was placed about 90 minutes earlier, between 10:30 and 10:45 p.m. April 21, investigators said.

In the call, Railey suggested that his wife lock the garage door because he would be getting home late, Kinne said. Railey later told police he got home about 12:40 a.m. and found the garage door partially open and his wife unconscious on the floor.

No charges have been filed in the attack.

Sawyer's two-year probated sentence for DWI was revoked in October because he had not paid his probation fees and because of a theft of services case against him that Line was pursuing, relevant to a case in which Sawyer had had $500 in yard work done for which he had not paid.

The suit was filed under the broadest civil rights heading and was dismissed because it did not state a cause of action, Woodward said.

Wrecks noted from weekend

The Department of Public Safety Wednesday reported two Sunday accidents that were attributable to icy roads on U.S. 84 north of Snyder and south of the city on Highway 350.

A 1987 Mitsubishi two-door driven by Gary Lee Stallings, 33, of Grand Prairie was going north on 84 16 miles north of the city when it went out of control on ice and overturned 1 ¾ times in the median at 10 a.m. Sunday, a trooper said.

The driver and 40-year-old Laura Stallings of Grand Prairie suffered class "B" injuries and were taken to a hospital in Post by a private citizen, the DPS said.

A 1977 Cadillac four-door driven by Elijah Cole, 75, of Big Spring was in collision at 11:05 a.m. Sunday with a 1985 Ford four-door driven by Dubby Joe White, 33, of Fay, Okla., two miles south of Snyder on Highway 350.

The DPS said the northbound Cole car was following the White car and hit it from behind because of the icy conditions.

Margret Franklin, 31, of Big Spring, in the Cole car, and 10-year-old Deana White in the other car suffered class B injuries but declined hospital treatment, a trooper said.

Wreck vehicle requires towing

A pickup was towed from the scene of a collision with a truck at 7:56 a.m. Tuesday at the traffic circle.

A 1972 Ford truck driven by Daniel Nicolas Espinosa of San Angelo was in collision with a 1983 Chevrolet pickup driven by Lester Odell Moore of Rt. 1, Box 370, police said.

By a unanimous board vote, Snyder school trustees Tuesday promoted Dalton Moseley to the post of school superintendent and opted, for the time being, to keep the number of top administrators for the district at three rather than four.

Efforts to complete the bid document for a 2,250-man maximum security prison unit, a project which supporters say could guarantee the long-term economic security of Scurry County, were described in Sunday's SDN.

By Monday, 16 copies of the document were expected to be in the hands of Texas Department of Corrections officials in Huntsville prior to the 3 p.m. deadline.

September 24

The 22nd annual Scurry County Fair was off and running after opening to the public at noon Thursday.

Construction of a new office building for Olney Savings Association is to begin here within the next few weeks at the site purchased more than five years ago by Olney's predecessor, First Federal Savings and Loan, it was reported Sunday.

September 28

Snyder's prison committee, relaxed after submission of a 116-page proposal for the location of a 2,250-bed facility in Scurry County, was reactivated during the weekend to respond to an addendum issued by the Texas Department of Corrections.

The Economic Development Committee of the Snyder chamber was alerted late Friday that the TDC is considering a change in specifications with regard to two 1,250-bed regional units.

AP lists top stories in 1987

By The Associated Press

The Iran-Contra hearings, which shook an administration and — briefly — made Oliver North a household name, ranked as the top news story of 1987 in a year-end poll of Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcasters.

The year brought news as diverse as a summit conference, terrible airplane crashes, troubles in the Persian Gulf, scandals in politics and TV evangelism, two futile efforts to fill a Supreme Court vacancy, a stock market crash and the rescue of a little girl from an abandoned well.

The stock market crash came in a close second to the Iran-Contra hearings in the voting on the year's top 10 stories.

Ballots were returned by 464 Associated Press newspaper editors and broadcasters who ranked the year's headline events from one through 10. A first-place vote counted 10 points, a 10th-place vote one point.

The Iran-Contra hearings received 3,573 points; the stock market crash 3,500.

The hearings ended with Lt. Col. North a momentary hero, and the man who may have masterminded the operation, CIA Director William Casey, dead.

The sessions took most of the summer and received testimony from 500 witnesses, among them Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser, and Secretary of State George Shultz, who complained that North and Poindexter had deliberately kept him in the dark.

North, who was fired from the National Security Council for his role, admitted he had lied to Congress and shredded documents. He lectured the members of Congress on the morality of his actions. His former secretary, Fawn Hall, told the committees that there were times when one must "go above the written law," but then retracted the statement.

In their final report on the affair, two congressional committees concluded that Reagan had failed in his constitutional duty to faithfully execute the law. The president let it be known he felt personally wounded by the criticism of his leadership.

At year's end, grand juries were still investigating, and criminal indictments were possible.

The $500 billion market collapse of Black Monday, Oct. 19, the worst market panic of modern times, seemed to catch even Wall Street experts by surprise. In retrospect, analysts noted the bull market had been slipping since it peaked in late August. Stocks prices, in fact, began falling sharply in the week preceding the crash when the government reported the nation's trade deficit had worsened, triggering worries about inflation and the dollar.

The nation was stunned, however, when Black Monday's 508-point crash eclipsed the crash of 1929, which ushered in the Great Depression. In the month of October the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 602.75 points and slid 159.98 more in November. By late December the Dow had recovered more than 200 points from its October low, but still was 500 under the year's high. The consensus of economists, however, was that no major recession was in sight.

The third story on the top-10 list, with 2,929 points, was the three-day summit meeting of Reagan and Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in December.

The leaders of the two superpowers signed a treaty to ban medium-range nuclear missiles and proclaimed it a historic turning point. The two shared trumpet fanfares, artillery salutes and champagne toasts, and wound up calling each other "Ron" and "Mikhail." Most liberals praised the treaty; many of the president's fellow conservatives denounced it.

Fourth, with 1,870 points, was the phase in Persian Gulf violence that began with the reflagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers so they could travel under U.S. Navy escort.

Fifth, with 1,855 points, was the drawn-out and acrimonious effort by President Reagan to appoint a replacement for retiring Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell.

Sixth, with 1794 points, was the story that broke in March with the disclosure that TV evangelist Jim Bakker engaged in a motel room tryst back in 1980 with a church secretary, Jessica Hahn, then 21, and allegedly paid her to keep the affair quiet.

In seventh place, 1,706 points, were two political debacles. Ex-Sen. Gary Hart and another candidate, Sen. Joseph Biden, withdrew from the race for the Democratic nomination. In December, Hart re-entered the race.

Eighth, 1,255 points, was the spread of the AIDS virus.

Ninth, 1,185 points, were airplane crashes in Detroit, killing 156 people, and Denver, killing 28 of the 82 on board, both on takeoff.

(Two other disasters, the crash of a Pacific Southwest Airlines plane in California, in which 43 people died, and the sinking of a Philippine passenger ship, with some 1,500 lives lost, occurred after the top-10 ballot was distributed.)

In 10th place, with 874 points, was the story that captured the heart of the nation in October — the rescue of 19-month-old Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in Midland, Tex.

The editors' and broadcasters' ballots were returned in mid-December and so did not include any subsequent news events. These are the second group of 10, with points in parentheses:

11. Peace process involving Nicaragua (543)

12. Pope John Paul II's visit to America (527)

13. The bicentennial celebration of the U.S. Constitution (463)

14. Changes within the communist giants: glasnost in Russia, westernization moves in China (431)

15. Revolt of Cuban inmates at detention centers in Atlanta and Oakdale, La. (409)

16. Surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead loses in Baby M case in New Jersey (203)

17. The earthquake in Los Angeles (188)

18. Shootings by frustrated motorists on California freeways that left five dead (146)

19. New immigration law goes into effect with its amnesty provision (140)

20. The National Football League players' strike (125)

Hypermart USA has big opening

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Many shoppers at the grand opening of the country's first Hypermart USA said they were overwhelmed by the crowds at the 222,000-square-foot store.

"We thought everybody would have spent their money at Christmas time and there would be lots of lookers and no shoppers," said Patricia May of University Park. "We obviously miscued."

Shoppers were greeted Monday with 30-minute waits for parking spaces and hour-long checkout lines at the grand opening.

Many of the several thousand shoppers Monday at the retail mecca in this Dallas suburb found traffic was worse than Central Expressway and lines were longer than at some rock concerts.

"Have you ever been to the zoo?" quipped Gary Winover of Carrollton after braving the crowds.

The building, large enough to house a football field and several other sports arenas, is a combination supermarket, discount department store and fast-food outlet. It offers shoppers a supervised playroom for children, an auto shop and major appliance sales.

Help to lost shoppers comes from employees roller skating through the huge red, yellow and blue building.

Beth Simpson, who has been roller-skating for 17 years, said she loves her new job as a store skater. But she must be less aggressive than those trying to get into the 1,600-space parking lot.

"I haven't run over anybody yet. I'm just waiting for that one little kid," she joked.

Tom McCarthy, president and chief operating officer of Hypermart, said he did not know how many shoppers came on Monday. He estimated that 3,000 to 4,000 people were in the store at 3 p.m. at the height of business.

Hypermart, touted as the first store of its kind in the country, is a joint venture of Wal-Mart Stores of Arkansas and Cullum Cos. of Dallas. Other Hypermarts were scheduled to open in Arlington, Texas, and Topeka, Kan., in the spring and Ferguson, Mo., in the fall.

Police make three arrests

A 44-year-old man was arrested Monday afternoon at the police station in connection with damages reportedly done Friday and Saturday at a home in the 1400 Block of 22nd St.

Police said the Class A criminal mischief charge was filed because a 12-gauge shotgun was fired in the home, the charge going through a couch and wall, on Friday and window screens were cut and entry forced into the house the next day.

The man was arrested at 2:30 p.m. Monday.

A 23-year-old woman was arrested for public intoxication at 11:08 p.m. Monday at a south Snyder apartment complex.

A 17-year-old male was arrested for DWI at 4 a.m. Tuesday in the 3600 Block of Apple St., and a 16-year-old male was taken into custody for being a minor in possession of alcohol and was later released to his father.

Two out-of-staters injured in mishap

Two Clovis, N.M., residents were held overnight at Cogdell Memorial Hospital with injuries suffered in a one-car accident Sunday afternoon near Snyder.

The Department of Public Safety said a 1985 Chevrolet Chevette was northbound on U.S. 84 16 miles north of Snyder when it went out of control while changing lanes on ice and overturned once in the barrow ditch.

Curly William Lawrence, the driver, and Kimberly Dawn Lawrence, both 18, were taken to the hospital by Snyder EMS Ambulance Service and held for 24-hour observation, a hospital spokesman said.

The accident was reported at 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

James Simpson receives the honor of knighthood

James Dois Simpson, 32nd degree, received the honor of knighthood in the Knight Commander Court of Honor Nov. 14 in the Lubbock Scottish Rite Bodies.

He was nominated for the KCCH April 12, 1979 in the Dallas Bodies by Wayland G. Holt, 33rd degree, John H. Boren, KCCH, and G. W. Ferguson, 32nd degree KCCH, in token of the many hours he served in Scurry County as jr. warden, sr. warden and worshipful master of the Scurry Lodge No. 706 in Snyder.

Simpson was born Jan. 14, 1924 in New Castle. He resides at 4506 El Paso with his wife Maggie.

He was active in the military service in the Navy and held the rank of Chief Petty Officer.

He is a past member of the Advisory Board when the Demoly Chapter was active in Snyder. He was public school chairman for Scurry Lodge No. 706 and is a past steward for the First United Methodist Church in San Angelo and Trinity Methodist Church in Snyder.

He has worked in youth organizations in Snyder and has raised several thousands of dollars for the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas and also for the Shrine Burns Institute in Galveston. He has held all of the officers positions in the York Rite.

Teenager suffers from hypertension

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 17 and have high blood pressure. The doctor put me on Lasix (20 milligrams) and a low-salt/no-fried-food diet and I've lost 40 pounds. I'm 5 feet 6 and now weigh 120, but I'm still losing weight. I don't want to feel like the only teenage hypertensive in the world. Will I ever be normal?

DEAR READER: In the past, high blood pressure was a particularly dangerous disease in young people because treatments were unsatisfactory and hypertension invariably led to heart disease and stroke. Today, however, hypertension is more readily treatable.

The therapy your doctor suggests seems appropriate. I assume that he or she has investigated your kidneys, because renal disease is often a correctible cause of hypertension in adolescents. Stay with your doctor's recommendations. You are not alone. With time, your high blood pressure will return to normal and you may be able to modify your diet and reduce (or stop) your medicine.

Some teenagers outgrow their hypertension. However, until then, continue treatment — and don't lose too much more weight.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Last year I had a complete loss of memory lasting about five hours. I drove to the beauty salon 40 miles away, had my hair done, then started to cry while under the dryer. My son came to get me and said I acted normal, except for asking what day it was over and over.

I don't remember any of this. EEG and CT scans were normal. Can you shed some light on this?

DEAR READER: There are many causes for amnesia, the sudden loss of memory. From your description, I'd guess that you suffered an attack called transient global amnesia.

In this condition, thought to be caused by vascular problems in the brain, the patient experiences a one- to six-hour memory loss of both recent and past events. There are no associated neurological defects and patients recover spontaneously, usually with no memory for the content of the episode.

You should have a complete examination by a neurologist. Transient global amnesia is not a serious ailment, but it can be disconcerting and frightening, to say the least.

If you have questions about HEADACHES, you can get answers in Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. Send $1 to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Headaches.

Teacher accused of sexual assault

DALLAS (AP) — Charges of aggravated sexual assault were filed against a Dallas elementary school teacher who was honored this year as his school's teacher of the year, police said.

An 11-year-old boy told authorities earlier this month that the teacher fondled him three years ago at J.J. Rhoads Elementary School. He told police he did not report the incident earlier because the teacher told him he would get in trouble.

Police said the alleged incident came to light recently when the child was being treated by a psychiatrist. The physician told the child's mother and child welfare officials were notified.

Police investigated the allegation for several days before arresting the teacher, John McGrew, 42, at his home on Dec. 18, they said. McGrew has been placed on paid leave of absence as required by the school district policy, said H.B. Bell, assistant superintendent for elementary instruction.

McGrew "was held in pretty high esteem by the principal and faculty," Bell said.
