China doesn't support proposed resolution

■ Many diplomats don't think China will veto U.N. Security Council's proposed resolution authorizing use of force against Iraq.

Associated Press

China's foreign minister said Wednesday his country will not back a proposed U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing force against Iraq, a day before foreign ministers prepared to vote on the measure.

China is one of the five permanent members of the Security Council and could veto the measure. At the United Nations, however, diplomats said they didn't expect such a move and predicted the resolution would pass.

Roland Dumas, the foreign minister of France, issued a "final appeal" to Iraq to pull out of Kuwait, warning that Baghdad had six weeks to "allow reason to triumph."

President Bush has gathered support abroad for military action, but he faces trouble in Congress. A leading democrat said Wednesday he did not support the use of force against Iraq any time soon — even U.N.-authorized force.

There also were appeals for peace in Baghdad. Iraq's deputy foreign minister urged Bush to open talks on the Persian Gulf crisis, although he did not offer concessions regarding Kuwait.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III has asked that foreign ministers represent their countries in the Security Council for Thursday's vote.

Lucas says he's prepared for execution

Lucas

"I'm not a mass murderer," Lucas said in an interview Wednesday. "They don't want me to prove I didn't commit the crimes. I think it's the idea the justice system didn't work when I proved it didn't work. I gave law enforcement a black eye."

Lucas, 54, faces lethal injection before dawn Monday for the slaying of a woman whose body was found Oct. 31, 1979, next to a culvert near Interstate 35 north of Georgetown. The unidentified woman is known only as "Orange Socks," which is all she was wearing when she was found.

"I'm worried; I'm not scared," he said. "I guess anybody who goes through this is worried. But I'm not scared."

The one-eyed drifter previously confessed to nearly 600 slayings before he began recanting them and now admits only to one — the beating death of his mother in Tecumseh, Mich., in 1960.

"I'll go to heaven," Lucas said. "I've been forgiven for that."

He also contends he was in Florida at the time of the "Orange Socks" slaying and was forced by police to confess.

"I tried to explain," he said of his confessions to police. "The more I tried, the more it became impossible to do. I know what they told me. I only repeated it back to them."

George Logan, community services director, stands in front of his city-issued car. Although Logan likely will be keeping his car, some employees in his and other departments will be losing theirs in a cost-cutting move by the city.

Some employees will no longer be able to drive home city vehicles

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Dozens of city of Midland employees will no longer have the luxury of motoring home in their work vehicles, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said Wednesday.

As part of an effort to trim the 1990-91 budget, the city will eliminate vehicle take-home privileges for at least 24 employees by December's end, McGregor said.

Midland city councilmen Tuesday asked city administrators to cut even more. Under an existing proposal, there still would be 99 take-home vehicles, not including the 160 squad cars taken home by Midland Police Department officers.

"I don't think it's even close to where I want it to be," Councilman J.D. Faircloth said of the proposed cuts.

McGregor said some city administrators and department heads have company cars as part of their employment packages, though the city is not bound by contract to supply them with one.

Other employees, such as those in the utility and airport departments, use take-home vehicles to make after-hours calls, he said.

Rebel flag vote too soon, students say

■ Some LHS parents and students complain they haven't been given enough time to discuss Rebel flag issue before Friday's vote.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Although Midland school administrators are rushing to resolve the controversy surrounding the Rebel flag, some parents and students say they aren't being given ample time to discuss the issues.

Lee High School teachers discussed the democratic process and the history behind the school's controversial Rebel flag and other out-of-compliance symbols in classrooms Wednesday.

The classroom discussions were intended to prepare students to vote on the school symbols Friday.

Single mother recovering from rape, shooting

■ Woman who was left paralyzed after being attacked by five teens says the worst part of injury is not being able to care for her four children.

Associated Press

DALLAS — A single mother who was paralyzed in an attack by five Dallas teen-agers says the worst part of her injury is not being able to care for her children.

"I'd rather be back walking, talking, being able to take care of my kids," the woman told The Dallas Morning News. "Knowing that I got to be in a wheelchair and can't do anything when they come up, that's the hardest."

The 25-year-old woman was raped by the youths Aug. 28 in front of her four children. She was shot three times while escaping. Doctors say a gunshot injury to her spinal cord paralyzed her from the neck down.

The name of the woman, like all rape victims, was not published by The News.

Four of the five suspects have been arrested in the incident and officers are searching for the fifth. Three juveniles and two adults were involved in the attack, said Assistant District Attorney Cheryl Beane.

The woman was walking to her Oak Cliff apartment when she was jumped by the five suspects. Police said the youths took her into the apartment where they ripped off her clothes and raped her repeatedly as her children, ages 8, 5, 4 and 2, watched.

Hope told the Houston Chronicle he is trying to get President Bush to persuade the Saudis to allow his traditional USO Christmas show.

Hope said the Saudi government told him they didn't want him to bring female performers with him and he should just shake hands with the troops.

"They say they don't want any girls, but our guys want girls, and we're not performing for them (the Saudis)," Hope said. "So why should they have a fit about it?"

Hope said he will go to Saudi Arabia even if he's forbidden from putting on his usual show.

Ali expected to leave with hostages

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali is expected to leave the Iraqi capital this week with at least 14 American hostages, his spokesman said Wednesday.

Ali met with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq on Tuesday for 50 minutes. The 48-year-old boxing great went to Baghdad at the invitation of the Iraqi government.

Ali's spokesman, Jaber Mohammed, said the former champion and his entourage expect to leave Baghdad on Saturday but hope to receive a list of the hostages Thursday that will provide them with the exact number to be freed.

Baghdad's government has prevented hundreds of foreigners from leaving since its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. But in recent weeks, it has allowed some to leave with visiting politicians, prominent figures and peace groups.

There are almost 1,000 Americans remaining in Iraq and Kuwait, more than 100 held as "human shields" at strategic military and industrial sites in Iraq.

Three former U.S. hostages left Iraq on Tuesday after their relatives had traveled to Baghdad to plead their case.

Ali's spokesman said Iraqi officials promised that a minimum of 14 American hostages would be permitted to go and allowed Ali and his staff to pick the departure date.

"We picked Saturday because juma (Friday) is the holy day, and we did not want to interrupt our prayers," the spokesman said. Ali converted to Islam in 1964 and changed his name from Cassius Clay.

Ali suffers from Parkinson's Disease, marked by slurred speech and shaking limbs. He generally who speaks to the press.

The spokesman, interviewed uses hand signals to communicate his statements to his spokesman, Wednesday by telephone from Nicosia, said the group planned to go to the United States via Amman, the Jordanian capital.

"We feel very pleased with the trip. We feel we got to understand the situation of the people here, their aspirations, and thank God we can take at least 14 back with us," Jaber said.

Jaber said Ali expects the United Nations to pass a resolution authorizing the multinational force in the region to use force against Iraq after Jan. 15. The vote in the Security Council is due later this week.

"But our prayers are (that) even if the resolution passes, they will not use force," he said.

GULF: China may veto proposed resolution

(From 1A)

Wednesday, China's foreign minister, Qian Qichen, threw the only shadow over the vote, saying his country would not back the use-of-force resolution.

"It has always been the position of China to call for a peaceful settlement of the gulf crisis and to avoid the use of force or the act of war," Qian told reporters.

At the United Nations, diplomats were divided over whether China would abstain, or eventually vote in favor of the resolution after wringing political concessions out of Washington.

"It seems rather clear that they're not thinking of vetoing," said British Ambassador David Hannay.

Qian was to meet with Baker late Wednesday. China wants Washington to lift economic sanctions imposed following the June 1989 military crackdown that crushed China's pro-democracy movement.

Also speaking before leaving for New York, Dumas told the French Parliament Iraq had given no sign of withdrawing from Kuwait, despite earlier U.N. resolutions imposing a trade embargo, among other measures.

"I call on the Iraqi leaders to understand that this is really the final appeal being addressed to them," Dumas said. "I say with all seriousness: It is up to Iraq to decide its future."

France has said it will vote in favor of the U.N. resolution, which Security Council ambassadors Wednesday predicted would pass easily.

"There is political will to adopt another resolution," said Canadian Ambassador Yves Fortier.

Oil prices were stable early Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, with many traders waiting for the Security Council vote. Oil was down 36 cents at $32.50 per barrel on contracts for January delivery.

In Washington, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said soaring oil prices are in part responsible for substantially weakening the American economy. He said economic growth probably would be negative in the October-December quarter.

The White House, meanwhile, faced criticism in Congress over the U.S.-sponsored proposal. House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt said he opposed using force against Iraq now, and that Washington should stick to sanctions.

Under the proposed resolution, Iraq must withdraw its nearly half-million troops from occupied Kuwait before Jan. 15 or face "all necessary means" to force them from the emirate.

But Iraq on Wednesday called for talks. Iraq's deputy prime minister, Taha Yassin Ramadan, said Bush "is leading the entire world to a ruinous war" and "has no choice other than to come to his senses and initiate a dialogue."

LUCAS: Convicted killer thinks he'll go to heaven

(From 1A)

Lucas' attorneys were awaiting the outcome of appeals to halt the execution, which would be the fifth in the state this year and the 38th since Texas resumed capital punishment in 1982.

"We have filed all the papers," said Ginger Rogers, the secretary for Fort Worth attorney Richard Alley. "We still haven't heard. We have filed for several things, including a stay of execution."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Tuesday rejected a claim that the trial court did not have the authority to set Lucas' execution date.

An appeal pending before State District Judge John Carter in Georgetown raises five issues, including one about a 1986 report from Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox that said many homicides attributed to Lucas could not have been committed by him.

Lucas said Wednesday he might have confessed to as many as 4,000 crimes because of threats against him or promises made to him.

"I thought I would be brought back and executed. I didn't know what the deal was," he said. "I don't want to be remembered for these crimes. I didn't do them. The people who did are still on the street."

The "Orange Socks" conviction is Lucas' only death sentence although he has at least six other life terms, two 75-year sentences and a 60-year term for other Texas convictions. He also is wanted in Florida on three first-degree murder charges for slayings in 1980 and 1981.

"I wonder what it's going to be like," he said of his death. "I think there's another world to go to. Hopefully, I'll make it some day. I'd rather go the right way than the wrong way."

Asked if he was prepared to die, he replied: "Oh yes. You just accept it. If it happens, it happens. If it don't, it don't.

"I guess I've become more calm than I should be. I just more or less say if it comes to that I'll accept it. I can't say I'm emotionally ready. If it happens, I'll just go somewhere else. I'll go to heaven."

CARS: Budget-trimming effort won't affect police

(From 1A)

But Faircloth contended that a number of those vehicles are used seldomly if at all for after-hours purposes other than between home and work.

"Just to have all these vehicles with the remote possibility that they'll be needed is unjustified," Faircloth said. "You can't tell me we have 99 emergency vehicles."

He suggested that administrators cut the number of take-home vehicles to 40 or 50 and then compensate employees for the number of miles driven during after-hours work using their own vehicles. Police cars would not be affected.

But Councilman John Castro pointed out that paying mileage might be more costly in the long run.

In addition, City Manager Fred Poe said it would be difficult to take away a benefit promised to some employees when they were hired.

"You have to think something about the morale of the employees," Poe said.

Faircloth countered, "I'm concerned about the morale of the taxpayers. Every time I see a city vehicle on the street after hours I wonder if they're messing around."

Under the existing proposal, Poe said the city would save an estimated $6,500 annually in gasoline costs.

The 24 vehicles which would no longer go home with employees have averaged 50 miles per week to and from work, he said. About 1,200 miles per week would be saved under the proposal, he said.

McGregor said employees are allowed to use their take-home vehicles for personal reasons only if it is a brief stop along the pathway to and from work, such as stopping at a grocery store.

"We've found no abuse of the vehicles," he said. "We've gotten complaints occasionally from the public and we followed up on every complaint."

A number of employees were assigned take-home cars because the vehicles were being vandalized and burglarized at night while parked in city garages and parking lots, McGregor said.

He said a number of vehicles that will no longer be taken home are used by employees who no longer need them after hours. The workers have been reassigned or their job responsibilities changed, he said.

City services will not be affected by the proposed cuts, which will mainly affect employees in the water and sewer, sanitation, and parks and recreation departments, he added.

"There may be a few more take-home vehicles that we'll reduce," he said. "But I can't speculate where those cars are and how many there are."

McGregor said the cuts should be finalized by the end of the year.

FLAG: LHS students want more time for discussion

the high school. The task force — which will consist of students, parents and teachers — will attempt to draw up a ballot for the student body to vote on Friday.

Approximately 75 Midlanders crowded into Tuesday's school board meeting to request that trustees "exercise their authority" to ban the Confederate flag and the song "Dixie" from the high school. The opponents of Confederate symbols included minority community leaders and ministers.

"It's not fair to place all this responsibility on the shoulders of the kids," said the Rev. John Mitchell of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, "especially since they have so little time to study the issue."

"I'm not afraid of the Rebel flag or song 'Dixie,' but I am afraid of people who want to wave that flag or sing 'Dixie,' after they are told what they mean," Mitchell added. "These symbols are damaging to our society.'

Ernest Angelo Jr., who is on the task force, said he wished the school board would have ruled on the issue without it ever going before the students.

"There would have been less opportunity for students to be confused by other people," he said. "Now their thinking is being corrupted and they are being told what to think. A perfect example is the woman at the Tuesday school board meeting who said she had no negative thoughts about the Rebel flag when she attended Lee High School. Now she has been told what to think."

Angelo said that the sooner students vote, "the more likely they are to remain true to their feelings on the subject."

James Bradford, LHS teacher and social studies chairman, said he thought students were being given ample time to explore the issue.

"All social studies classes addressed this," he said. "About 1,500 to 1,600 students got through these classes today." Bradford, who also is serving on the task force, said, "Students have also discussed this in different places in the school during the past three or four days."

LaToya Sims, an LHS sophomore, said that the history of Confederate symbols was not discussed in her classes.

"We were only told how to vote in my social studies class," she said. "However, my friends and I spread the word between classes that we don't like the flag."

LaToya, a native Midlander said, "I grew up in Midland and always said, 'The Rebels, yay!' But, as I got older and learned what these things stood for, I saw things in a different way."

The sophomore said she was dismayed to hear some insensitive comments from students supporting the flag.

"I don't think that those opposed to the flag have gotten a chance to explain their position."

Neva Price, another LHS sophomore, said she was pleased that her social studies teacher used his class period to allow students to voice their opinions.

"To me the Rebel flag stands for slavery," she said. "I know it has been a Lee High School tradition, but traditions can change. The Confederacy is in the past, and we need to move forward."

Neva said her feelings have been hurt by racist remarks said on campus during the past few days.

"Even some of my buddies let out stuff that was really offensive," she said. "I wish the Rebel flag, which is unofficial anyway, had never been allowed to be used as a school flag. When we leave high school we should remember our friends and what we learned. The flag is not what we should be remembering."

Several students praised teachers for allowing them to voice their opinions in open forums, and said they gained insight into both sides of the issue.

"I just wish we had more time to discuss this," Neva said. "I was really upset in school today. I just wish people who aren't black would put themselves in our place before voting."

Several parents voiced concern that since the high school has a high percentage of Anglo students, the vote would be unfair to blacks.

One LHS senior, who asked not to be identified, said, "It isn't just blacks who are opposed to the flag. I learned a lot and I'm going to take all the Rebel flags out of my bedroom now. Even though I'm white, I think that the flag has a negative image."

Another senior, who asked not to be identified, said he thought people should forget that the Rebel flag represented the Confederacy. "Why can't it just represent Lee High School?" he asked.

The Rev. Mitchell said, "Blacks are not the only ones caught up in this issue. We can't afford to forget the past, and the Confederacy included a large faction of people supporting slavery. Now, racist groups — who don't like anyone who oppose their way of thinking no matter what race they are — use the Rebel flag and rebelliousness as their symbols."

Although the majority of LHS' enrollment is Anglo (60 percent Anglo, 30 percent Hispanic and 10 percent black) Bradford said he had confidence that his students would use sensitivity when voting.

"I think these kids will use their best judgment when voting," he said. "They are very rational and concerned about the plight of school relations and they want to maintain a peaceful school environment."

The school board will have an open forum on this issue at 7 p.m. Dec. 7, in Midland High School auditorium.

MOM: Rape victim recovering

The two older children tried to fight the attackers and ran for help.

The woman was shot after she broke from her attackers and ran.

A 16-year-old youth has pleaded guilty in the case and has been sentenced to an indeterminate term with juvenile correctional authorities.

Two other youths have been charged with attempted capital murder. One adult is still being sought and the other, 18-year-year Jason Thomas, was charged with aggravated sexual assault.

One of the physicians caring for the woman said her condition was touch and go in the first months after attack. One of her kidneys had to be removed, and she has suffered lung problems and other complications.

She has rebounded, but doctors say she will never be able to live independently.

Now left with no movement in her body from her shoulders down, the woman says it is now time to forget and heal both emotionally and physically.

"I have my kids. I have four kids to raise," she said.

And the woman and her father both hold out hope that she will walk again.

"She's a strong-willed person, more or less what we would call a fighter," said her father, 49.

"As far as the doctors know, she will be confined the rest of her life unless the Lord works a miracle."

DeConcini's lawyer attacks 'Keating Five' accuser's story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dennis DeConcini's lawyer combatively cross-examined the chief accuser of the "Keating Five" senators Wednesday, trying to discredit the former regulator's story that he was improperly offered a deal on behalf of savings and loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr.

Edwin J. Gray, former head of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, stuck to his story — that DeConcini had proposed a deal in which a troublesome government regulation would be withdrawn, and that three other senators had acquiesced in the proposal at a meeting arranged by the fourth.

Despite lawyer James Hamilton's barrage of questions, some of them shouted, Gray continued to assert that such a deal was offered by the Arizona Democrat at a meeting that also included Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., John McCain, R-Ariz. and John Glenn, D-Ohio.

However, Gray was forced by Hamilton to acknowledge that he knew more about Keating's S&L problems than he indicated to the four senators at the April 2, 1987, meeting in DeConcini's office.

Gray said he had received a memo from one of his regulators in September 1986 detailing problems found at Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan.

Despite the memo, Hamilton pointed out, Gray told the senators he knew little of Lincoln's problems and suggested the senators question the regulators handling the examination of the failing Irvine, Calif. thrift.

The testimony came during the Ethics Committee's seventh day of hearings, in which six colleagues of the accused senators are trying to determine whether they improperly intervened for Keating because of the $1.3 million he and associates contributed to their campaigns and favorite causes.

In addition to the four who attended the April 2 meeting, the group includes Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich. Gray has testified — and Riegle has denied — that the Michigan Democrat organized the session.

All five senators have denied wrongdoing in the case that could determine their political futures. Cranston, undergoing treatment for prostate cancer, has announced he's not running for reelection.

Each of the Senate participants in the April 2 meeting said he could not recall a deal being offered on Keating's behalf. DeConcini has been most vehement in denying such a proposal was made.

"Why should the American public believe you and not four prominent U.S. senators?" Hamilton asked Gray.

"The American public can believe whatever they will," a testy Gray responded. "I had nothing to gain by not telling the truth."

Former S&L investor commits suicide, blames regulators

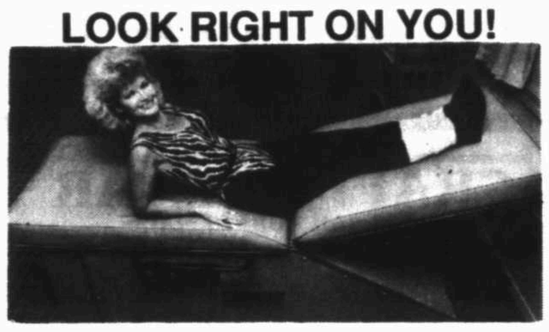

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — An elderly investor who spent his life savings on worthless junk bonds from Lincoln Savings and Loan killed himself, blaming regulators rather than thrift owner Charles H. Keating Jr., authorities said.

"There's nothing left for me of things that used to be," said a note from Anthony Elliot, 89. "Government is supposed to serve and protect, but who? Those who can gather the most savings from retired people. It takes billions to fill the pockets of 'spendocrats.'"

Elliot, a retired accountant, was found in a bathtub by his part-time housekeeper Monday.

NATION IN BRIEF

Floodwaters sweep Indiana

DYER, Ind. (AP) — At least 1,000 people Wednesday were forced from their Indiana homes, some evacuated by boat, after two days of rain overflowed creeks and ditches, officials said.

In Chicago, one man died trying to drive through 12-foot-deep water in a closed viaduct, police said.

The heavy rain in northwest Indiana later abaited, but the National Weather Service issued a flood warning for the Kankakee River through Saturday.

Taxing support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government so far this year has collected $474 million in overdue child support payments from 810,000 federal tax returns, the Department of Health and Human Services said Wednesday.

Under a federal program, names of parents who are delinquent in child support payments are submitted to the Internal Revenue Service.

Study taps Hawaii

ATLANTA (AP) — Hawaii has the nation's lowest rate of preventable deaths from chronic diseases and Michigan has the highest, the federal Centers for Disease Control said Wednesday.

The CDC found that the 50 states and the District of Columbia could have prevented at least 26 percent of their deaths from nine leading chronic diseases in 1986 by reducing such risks as smoking and cholesterol levels.

The study found that Hawaii had the lowest rate of preventable deaths. North Dakota and Utah tied for the second-lowest rate. New Mexico and Minnesota rounded out the lowest five.

Mrs. Barry moves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Effi Barry has moved out of the house she shared with Mayor Marion Barry, a mayoral spokeswoman said Wednesday.

"That is all we can say right now," said Lurma Rackley.

However, sources close to Barry said Mrs. Barry and the couple's 10-year-old son, Christopher, moved to an apartment Monday.

Judge lifts broadcast ban of Noriega tapes

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday lifted a ban on broadcasting tapes of Manuel Noriega's prison telephone calls, defusing a confrontation between the rights of the media and those of a criminal defendant.

While CNN hailed the decision as a victory over censorship, Noriega's defense and constitutional specialists said the case showed the U.S. Supreme Court was willing to accept at least temporary restrictions on the press.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler's decision ended a three-week legal battle between Noriega and the network, which aired some of the tapes before the judge ordered CNN to stop.

CNN President Tom Johnson said the decision would allow the network to pursue its story on the government's taping of the ousted Panamanian leader's conversations.

"CNN's coverage of this possible misconduct was delayed by this judicial prior restraint on press freedom," he said. "Despite the unfortunate delay, CNN's reporting of government taping of Noriega phone conversations will continue."

The judge ruled after he and the attorneys reviewed transcripts of seven tapes the network submitted to the court last week following the Supreme Court's refusal to overturn Hoeveler's initial ban.

Immunization may become requirement for federal assistance

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Alarmed at recent outbreaks of measles and other childhood diseases, Bush administration officials want to require children to be fully immunized as a condition of receiving welfare or Medicaid.

Federal health officials said Wednesday that such a requirement would encourage poor people to make sure their children get vaccines against measles, mumps, polio, whooping cough and other diseases.

Inadequate immunization has contributed to outbreaks of measles and other preventable diseases, health experts say.

All states now require children to be immunized by the time they start school. But in many poor inner-city neighborhoods, one-third to one-half of preschool children have not received the basic immunizations that experts say they should get before the second birthday.

Federal, state and local health agencies and parents now share the cost of inoculating hundreds of thousands of youngsters in public health clinics, and that sharing would presumably continue if the proposal went into effect.

Preliminary estimates suggest the cost of vaccines for preschoolers who now go without protection against the major childhood diseases could reach $55 million a year.

Some state health and welfare officials have objected to the proposal, saying it would impede access to welfare and Medicaid. Federal health officials said they would heed such concerns in refining the proposal, which is subject to approval by the White House and Congress.

Dr. Thomas M. Vernon, executive director of the Colorado Health Department, said the government should do much more to encourage voluntary immunization before imposing new requirements that could become "a barrier to people who need Medicaid and welfare," known formally as Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

If a local welfare office turns away a poor child who has not been vaccinated, he said, "we may lose that child entirely to both immunization and AFDC."

Based on current law, the proposal might even bar the whole family from certain types of aid in some cases.

In the first 46 weeks of this year, 25,155 cases of measles were reported to the government. That is higher than the total for any full year since 1978 and 70 percent more than the cases in the comparable period last year.

Federal health officials said they were startled to see that preschoolers accounted for 46 percent of measles cases this year, as against 37 percent last year and 29 percent in 1988. Many of those preschoolers were never immunized.

The number of measles-related deaths this year, 64, is the highest since 1971. The cities with the worst outbreaks this year include Los Angeles, Dallas, Chicago and New York, which has confirmed 482 cases of measles, or three and a half times as many as in all of 1989.

The value of preventive programs is developing as a major theme of President Bush's 1992 budget, to be submitted to Congress in February.

Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, has suggested to his staff that it is often better for the government to invest in the prevention, rather than the cure, of disease, malnutrition and environmental pollution.

No improvement seen in infant mortality rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's infant death rate appears to be showing little or no improvement, the March of Dimes Defects Foundation said Wednesday.

At the current rate of progress, the country will fail to meet the goal of the Public Health Service to reduce infant death to seven per 1,000 births by the year 2000, the foundation said.

The foundation made the statement after the government announced that the infant death rate in 1988 was 10 per 1,000 births, a 1 percent reduction from the previous year. There were 38,910 deaths of infants under 1 year of age in 1988.

The overall infant death rate in 1988, though the lowest ever recorded for the United States, conceals sharp differences between blacks and whites.

The rate for white infants was 8.5 per 1,000 births while for black infants it was 17.6.

Several European countries show much better infant mortality.

One in 500 college students infected with HIV AIDS virus

BOSTON (AP) — About one in 500 U.S. college students is infected with the AIDS virus, and further spread of the deadly disease is likely on campuses unless students change their sex habits, a study concludes.

Based on the new findings, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control estimates that between 25,000 and 35,000 college students are infected with HIV, the AIDS virus.

"Risky behaviors are occurring, and now we know we have the infection. It is cause for concern and appropriate attention," said Dr. Helene D. Gayle, who directed the study.

The CDC study is the first nationwide attempt to judge the presence of HIV on college campuses, said co-author Dr. Richard P. Keeling of the American College Health Association.

It shows that the virus is probably about as common there as in the public at large.

However, the researchers cautioned that AIDS still could spread dramatically among college students, just as some other sexually transmitted diseases have done.

"I think probably the most important thing from this study is that it shows us the potential," said Keeling. "The combination of a sexually transmitted disease tossed into campus behavior has the potential for very serious consequences in the future. It also shows us we have an opportunity to prevent that."

The study was based on random testing of blood samples drawn from 16,863 students at 19 schools, most of them large state universities. It found that two-tenths of 1 percent of the students were infected with the virus.

"This is both good news and bad news," commented Leighton Ku, a public health specialist at the Urban Institute in Washington. "It's good that it's not sky high, as some might have feared. But it's bad that it's there at all."

Among other results of the study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine:

■ Overall, the survey found 30 AIDS-infected students. All but two of them were men.

■ The infection rate was half of 1 percent for men and two-hundredths of 1 percent in women.

■ Those over age 24 were seven times more likely than younger students to be infected.

■ At 10 of the 19 campuses, the survey turned up no AIDS infections at all.

The researchers noted that the risk of AIDS for college students is far lower than among some other groups, such as male homosexuals and drug abusers.

"The potential clearly exists, however, for the further spread of HIV infection in this population, and preventive measures are needed," they wrote.

Britain's prime minister welcomes rivals into Cabinet

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister John Major welcomed his defeated rivals into his Cabinet on Wednesday and called for a nation in which all may prosper according to "their talent, their application and their good fortune."

Major

"I don't promise you that it will be easy and I don't promise you that it will be quick," Major said outside 10 Downing St. after being confirmed as prime minister by Queen Elizabeth II.

Major, at 47 the youngest prime minister of the century, had displayed both talent and tenacity in overcoming childhood poverty and rising rapidly through the government.

It was his fortune to be the popular choice of a party torn by rebellion against his patron, Margaret Thatcher.

Hours after saying farewell to her, Major announced a new Cabinet lineup that reached across the bruised wings of the Conservative Party.

Michael Heseltine, the aggressor in a leadership race that toppled Mrs. Thatcher, was appointed secretary of the environment.

Chris Patten, the former environment secretary and a Tory liberal, was installed as chairman of the party. The right-leaning former chairman, Kenneth Baker, who had spent the past two weeks sniping at Heseltine, was given the Cabinet post of home secretary.

Douglas Hurd, who ran third in the leadership race, was kept as foreign secretary and Tom King stayed as defense secretary, emphasizing the continuity of Britain's tough stance in the Persian Gulf crisis.

The government also announced Wednesday that it was resuming diplomatic relations with Syria, completing a rapprochement which began under Mrs. Thatcher.

WORLD

Major said he hoped to build on the achievements of his predecessor, who said in her own farewell speech that "we leave the United Kingdom in a very much better state than when we came here 11½ years ago."

"Now it is time for a new chapter to open and I wish John Major all the luck in the world," said Mrs. Thatcher, who will make her home in suburban Dulwich.

Major, one of only two men in the Cabinet who did not attend a university, said he wanted to "build a society of opportunity."

"By that I mean an open society, a society in which what people fulfill will depend upon their talent, their application and their good fortune," he said.

"In particular I want to build a country that is at ease with itself, a country that is confident and a country that is prepared and willing to make the changes necessary to provide a better quality of life for all our citizens," said Major.

The environment post was an ironic reward for the 57-year-old Heseltine. It makes him responsible for revising the deeply unpopular local tax known as the "poll tax," which he had turned very effectively against Mrs. Thatcher.

It also brought Heseltine back to the office he occupied in Mrs. Thatcher's first Cabinet of 1979.

Poll says Kohl would garner 53 percent of German votes

BONN, Germany (AP) — Oskar Lafontaine entered the final campaign stretch Wednesday badly trailing Chancellor Helmut Kohl, whom he hopes to oust in the first free all-German elections in 58 years.

A new poll by the Allensbach institute predicted Kohl's three-party coalition would receive more than 53 percent of votes cast in Sunday's election, while Lafontaine's Social Democrats would get about 34 percent.

But a spokesman for the Social Democrats said the polls did not reflect Lafontaine's true popularity, especially among young Germans who like the quick-witted candidate's dynamism and persistence.

"We're not conceding defeat," said Social Democrat spokesman Eduard Heussen. "We think Oskar has a chance."

But German news media say that behind the scenes, the Social Democrats are expecting to lose.

The leftist Lafontaine himself admits that Kohl, widely regarded as the architect of German unity, will be a tough man to beat.

"Unity came, and now it's a fact that the person in power is very fortunate because he can practically dominate the stage," Lafontaine said on Monday.

The federal election will be the first free united German vote since 1932, just before Adolf Hitler came to power and launched 12 years of autocratic rule.

Voters will choose the nation's head of government, the chancellor, and fill 656 seats in a united parliament, half of which will be filled in their districts and the other half from party lists.

In addition, a city council will be elected for Berlin, the capital of united Germany.

About 59.9 million people are eligible to vote, 47.9 million from former West Germany and 12 million from former East Germany.

The two Germanys agreed to unite before holding joint elections to keep the impoverished eastern nation from sliding into an economic abyss.

Kohl, as West Germany's chancellor, steered both nations to unity and then served as caretaker head of united Germany. Once considered a bumbling leader, he has grown into one of Germany's most important figures since the end of World War II.

Kohl and Lafontaine on Wednesday started their last days of campaigning.

Kohl was headed for the northern cities of Oldenburg and Bremen, and then Stuttgart and Offenburg in the south on Thursday. Lafontaine was to attend rallies in Berlin and visit his home city of Saarbruecken on Thursday.

The two candidates couldn't be more dissimilar.

The portly Kohl, 60, usually dressed in a conservative dark suit, stirs up support with promises of affluence and future German greatness. His rallies usually close with the crowd singing the national anthem.

Lafontaine, 47, campaigns in a stylish dark shirt and skinny tie, sometimes accompanied by Christa Mueller, his attractive young companion. During the past few days, Peter Maffay, one of Germany's most popular rock musicians, has performed at his rallies.

Lafontaine has eschewed optimism for straight talk about unification's huge costs, maintaining that Kohl has misled Germans about unity's true price tag.

While Kohl was engineering unification, Lafontaine was warning the process was happening too fast.

Earlier this year, a deranged woman tried to assassinate Lafontaine but he recovered from knife wounds suffered in the attack.

Meanwhile, Kohl has been trying to ride the wave of unity, noting his accomplishment in ending Germany's division and promising future affluence for former East Germany.

The former Soviet-bloc country is beset by high unemployment and mounting social ills.

Kohl's Christian Democrats say they are better equipped than the Social Democrats to "preserve and strengthen our economic capacities."

The chancellor says his government has made progress on environmental, educational, and handicapped-rights issues, and plans more improvements.

He portrays himself as one of Europe's foremost advocates of peace, and a close friend of President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

For their part, the Social Democrats say they are the true standard-bearers of German ecology and peace movements, and charge that Kohl favors big business over helping normal citizens.

Social Democrats also maintain that Kohl is endangering the German economy by borrowing heavily to help rebuild former East Germany.

Early this year the Social Democrats had high hopes that Lafontaine's dynamism and youthfulness would prove a strong challenge to stodgy Kohl.

But as Der Spiegel put it: "All plans and strategies collapsed because of German unity."

Panel working for return of Marcos' assets

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippine government is negotiating with a representative of Ferdinand Marcos' family for the return of $5 billion in assets of the late president, an official said Wednesday.

David Castro, chairman of the Presidential Commission on Good Government, declined to say what conditions had been set for the return of the assets.

He said the assets were a "combination of money and property" in other countries, which he did not identify.

The presidential commission is charged with recovering wealth amassed by Marcos and his cronies during his 20-year rule. A popular uprising drove Marcos into exile in Hawaii in 1986. He died there in September 1989.

Despite claims that Marcos and his allies stole up to $10 billion, the government has yet to win a single lawsuit against the late president's family.

Group says human rights abuses ignored

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Bush administration is being accused of ignoring Mexican human rights abuses and election fraud in its eagerness for the free trade pact that dominated talks at the U.S.-Mexico summit.

"It has become indispensable for Washington's interests that Mexico appears to be an example of democracy and respect for human rights," one of Mexico's oldest human rights groups, the Eureka Committee, said in an open letter to President Bush and President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

"But everyday reality is just the opposite. The will of citizens is not respected in the ballot boxes, nor are the most elemental social and human rights," the letter said. It was published Tuesday.

Salinas' spokesman, Carlos Garcia, on Wednesday declined comment on the Eureka Committee letter.

There was no immediate comment from the Bush administration.

Mexico has been sharply criticized by international human rights organizations such as Amnesty International and Americas Watch. Election fraud is so common that Mexicans have an extensive slang vocabulary for the myriad ways to cheat at the polls.

Salinas, whose Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, has governed Mexico for the last 61 years, has promised democratic reforms, but not at the expense of what he calls political stability.

Skeptics say the PRI's idea of political stability is continued one-party domination of Mexico, a country Peruvian novelist Mario Vargas Llosa recently dubbed "the perfect dictatorship."

Salinas has been widely praised in the United States for his aggressive moves to open Mexico's long protected economy. His slowness on political reform has gone largely unremarked.

"The PRI in power means a guarantee of forging ahead with the free trade agreement," Riordan Roett, head of the Latin American studies program at Johns Hopkins University in Washington, told the daily El Financiero.

Bush and Salinas said in advance that Mexico's internal affairs would be off-limits at this week's summit.

Bush "doesn't want to embarrass Salinas," Susan Kaufman Purcell, vice president of the New York City-based Americas Society, said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

The non-profit society, headed by David Rockefeller, is an umbrella organization for business and professional interests in Latin America.

"U.S. opponents of the free trade agreement can use arguments for more democracy in Mexico to help defeat the agreement and it works the same way in Mexico," Purcell said.

Public relations firm files suit against Walesa

UTRECHT, Netherlands (AP) — A Dutch public-relations firm filed a $69,000 lawsuit against Solidarity leader Lech Walesa over the last-minute cancellation of a visit in September.

Penta Promotions had hired a private jet and reserved the presidential suite at a posh hotel for Walesa, who had been scheduled to visit Sept. 26-27, according to the firm's lawyer.

The company, Penta Promotions, says Walesa called off the visit less than 24 hours in advance, and says it got stuck with the bill.

Walesa finished first in Sunday's presidential balloting in Poland, but failed to garner a majority. He will face Polish-Canadian businessman Stanislaw Tyminski in a runoff on Dec. 9.

"A man who does this kind of thing should not be responsible for the future of Poland," Penta General Manager Karel Hille said Tuesday.

The company said whatever damages the firm won would be donated to a Polish charity.

No one at Solidarity's Warsaw headquarters was available for comment on the lawsuit.

Smoking will be banned on London buses

LONDON (AP) — Smokers will no longer be allowed to light up on London's red double-decker buses, transportation officials said Wednesday.

Smoking, only allowed in the rear seats on the top deck of the buses, will be banned as of Feb. 14, said a spokesman at London Transport, the government agency that oversees London's buses and subway system.

The agency said surveys have shown that 73 percent of Londoners want a ban. Only a third of the people using London's 5,000 buses are smokers, and of those fewer than three in five actually smoke on board, the agency said.

"We hope London will welcome the ban on smoking because buses will be cleaner, healthier and safer," said London Buses managing director Clive Hodson.

London Transport banned smoking on the subway system after 31 people were killed and 80 injured in a subway station fire in November 1987.

Nobel panel can't delay ceremony for Gorbachev

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Norwegian Nobel Committee said Wednesday it would not delay the peace prize ceremony until May despite the request of the recipient, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Gorbachev sent a letter Tuesday saying conditions in the Soviet Union prevent him from visiting Norway to collect the prize and participate in scheduled events Dec. 9-11. He asked the committee, which awarded him the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize in October, to delay the presentation ceremony.

Mideast muddle targets Hussein

As the United States and Iraq move closer to war, the situation both internationally and within this nation appears to grow more muddled with each passing day.

Events of the past several days provide a good example:

■ On Tuesday Soviet ambassador to the United Nations Yuli M. Vorontsov noted that there is consensus among the five permanent members of the Security Council on a resolution demanding that Iraq withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15 or face the prospect of a U.N.-authorized military strike.

■ Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, however, said Wednesday that China will not vote for a resolution authorizing use of force to remove Iraq from Kuwait. As one of the Security Council's permanent members, China has veto power over U.N. resolutions, but Qichen did not say that China would veto such a resolution.

■ Meanwhile, in the Congress there are more indications of concern — particularly from democrats — that President George Bush may attempt to utilize his appeal to the United Nations for support in attacking Iraq as a way around seeking congressional approval for a military strike.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., serves on the Senate Armed Services Committee which has been studying Bush's gulf policy and commented, "It is not enough for President Bush to go to the United Nations to get approval for the use of military force in the Persian Gulf. He must also come to Congress."

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he opposes use of force to get Iraq out of Kuwait and urged Bush to adopt a policy of "patient strength."

It's obvious from the concern exhibited in the Congress that neither that assembly nor the American people are going to tolerate the deployment of U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf for an indefinite period of time. The enormous cost of keeping the troops there will render such an exercise unworkable.

The United Nations' deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait is a good one which puts Saddam Hussein on official notice that the world body is tiring of his power play and refusal to budge, in open defiance of the majority of the world's industrial nations.

Hussein is occupying an increasingly hazardous position. A line has been drawn in the sand and now a deadline has been set. The move now is Hussein's. Only he can avert this collision with destiny.

MR-T could spare us political pap

Now that the election is behind us and all the smoke has cleared, I'm sure we can look forward to the familiarly subtle yet constant carping criticism of our state officials, as is the wont of the Reporter-Telegram in its function as an organ of the Republican Party.

Anyone with half an eye can see you create a negative, hostile editorial environment for Democrats and Democratic policies, while simultaneously serving up Republican pap, spoon-fed to your readers on a daily basis. What's rather droll about all this is the fact that once in a while you even make a pretense of being a balanced newspaper.

I don't suppose there will ever be any respite from your egregiously biased editorial bent, but in light of the recent election results could we please be spared the ridiculous pronouncements of local pundits — like Winfree Brown and others — concerning how Republicans are going to "take over" Texas, or, how Texas is now a solid Republican state, et cetera, ad nauseum?

Soon new congressional districts will be drawn up for the decade of the '90s. In view of the fact the redistricting board will be composed of the lieutenant governor, attorney general, speaker of the House, land commissioner and state comptroller — who are all Democrats, approved by a state Senate and House which are both overwhelmingly Democratic — it seems inevitable Texas Democrats will add to their already lopsided 19-to-8 advantage in the United States House of Representatives.

And since it is inevitable, (look out, here it comes!) why not just kick back, relax and enjoy it!

Fire those responsible for buying voters' list

What is available for sale these days? I was amazed, then incensed, after reading your article that stated the superintendent of schools had purchased a list of names of people who voted in the recent school bond election (Midland Reporter-Telegram Sunday, Nov. 18).

I am sure the school personnel believe that you have nothing to worry about. Does that sound like, "Trust me"?

This is a first for me, but I can assure you that, in my opinion, the person or persons purchasing the voter list should be asked to resign or be fired. If this action is allowable, I believe we need to vote on an action that would make it unlawful to purchase such data.

Regardless of how I might have been leaning previously, I assure you I shall be opposed to any bond vote and will encourage my friends to vote the same.

Sanctity of the secret ballot.

High-handed information gathering.

The school board must be very desperate to overcome the ignorance of the voters.

Europe turns up nose at U.S. dollar

WASHINGTON — The dwindling value of the dollar is keeping many dedicated Europhiles at home, but not just because the dollar buys so much less in Europe than it did in the good old days.

Anderson

True, the hapless buck, combined with some European inflation, means that a cup of coffee that cost 75 cents two years ago is now $1.50, and the modest hotel room that went for $50 is now $70 or more.

But what has saddened some Americans and irritated others is not their reduced buying power, but the "snub factor" when they produce dollars, traveler's checks or American-based credit cards.

Some restaurants, stores and hotels have put a surcharge on American credit cards. Others refuse outright to take them, fearing that U.S. financial institutions are so shaky that payments might suddenly cease.

Tellers in some banks are patronizing when dollars or U.S. traveler's checks are presented for exchange. "You must feel awful," they say. "The rate is down today."

By contrast, the banks are all smiles when Germans or Japanese appear with their strong currencies. Europeans say that the "ugly Americans" of years past created a climate in which today's Americans are getting the backlash.

The widespread contempt for the dollar is having an effect. Some dedicated American skiers, who used to make regular trips to the slopes of Europe, are putting the bucks back in the United States.

In Colorado and Utah, Americans are not treated like impoverished immigrants. And they will swear the snow is better anyway.

If American tourists stay away because they feel snubbed, some Western European tourists are also staying away because their interests are being drawn elsewhere.

Young Western Europeans, in the past, used their vacations to tour their own region. Now the fad is to see what has been behind the Iron Curtain for years — Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Their sturdy francs, deutschmarks and lires get them farther afield than ever, but the main draw is curiosity.

For years they have heard the communist nations boast about their workers' paradise. Now the young people are going in legions to find out for themselves, encouraged by travel agents in Moscow, Prague, Warsaw, Budapest, and even Bucharest and Sophia. Those returning tell of optimistic people but grim, cold realities.

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLITICS — Italy's Communist Party is proving to be a die-hard. The collapse of Soviet communism has had a ripple effect elsewhere, but the Rome-based party remains fairly vigorous, and for a very practical reason — it is perceived as being less corrupt than the democratic parties.

One scandal after another has jolted the moderate parties. Bribery is endemic at almost every level. But the communists have managed to keep their noses clean.

The parties in power can't say the same. Many customs and tax officers are notorious for taking bribes, particularly when inspecting yachts, art and other big-ticket items. Sources told us of one customs inspector who caught a smuggler and then asked him how to get in on the deal.

One native, commenting on a recent strike by customs workers, said cynically, "It's a very idealistic strike. The customs workers are striking for more wages so they can stop taking so many bribes."

The communists, on the other hand, being out of power, do not have the opportunities to get rich quick, even if they have the inclination. In fact, with some notable exceptions, even communist officials in local government in Italy have a reputation for probity.

In a town outside of Florence, even millionaire land owners, capitalists by nature, often vote for the communist candidates. The incumbent communists have kept the roads so narrow and the zoning so strict that Italy's mega-developers cannot get in to build high-rise buildings on some of the famous hills surrounding Florence.

The residents fear that if the communists are voted out, their successors will open up the little town and its environs to greedy developers. Then the villas and olive groves will be just so much more Italian history.

EVANS & NOVAK

Is Bennett resignation ploy or olive branch?

WASHINGTON — So deep has conservatives' distrust of the Bush White House become that they greeted the extraordinary selection of William J. Bennett as Republican national chairman not as an olive branch but with suspicion of chicanery from John Sununu.

Evans and Novak

The immediate response from the right was that Sununu had tapped one of the nation's most articulate and attractive figures in order to silence him in what may be a darkening winter of Republican discontent against President Bush. Longtime friends and allies pleaded with Bennett not to take the post for that very reason.

That judgment may do a grave injustice to the White House chief of staff. But it reflects how bitterly conservatives have reacted to the rampage by Sununu, their erstwhile favorite, in the wake of Bush's budget fiasco. There will be close scrutiny whether the decision to name Bennett national GOP chairman reflects a changed attitude by Sununu. After pondering the offer for several days and at one point turning it down, Bennett accepted the job Saturday morning.

This unexpected course of events was triggered shortly after the election by published reports that National Chairman Lee Atwater, physically disabled by an inoperable brain tumor, would seek a second two-year term. The reaction from National Committee members was that while they greatly admired Atwater's courage and would gladly give him the honorific title of "general" chairman, the party badly needs an active leader in a period of internal unrest.

There has been no lack of volunteers, including two members of the Cabinet who are among Bush's personal favorites. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher would like the chairmanship, and Transportation Secretary Sam Skinner would adore it. Characteristically without checking it out, Sununu selected the just-resigned Bill Bennett.

No more unlikely — or innovative — choice for party chairman can be found in American political annals. Bennett did not even become a Republican until May 1986, at age 42, a year after he was named the Reagan administration's secretary of education. He has never run for public office, never been involved in a campaign and probably could not pick too many members of the Republican National Committee out of a police lineup.

But Bennett became a national figure by enriching what has been the backwater education portfolio for everybody else who else held it. As Bush's drug policy director, he did not solve the problem in two years but surely neutralized it as a Republican problem in the 1990 election.

He has become a legitimate leader of the conservative movement, a potential presidential candidate of the future if he can ever find a way to acquire the necessary political credentials. With the party's right wing bitter at what it considers betrayals by the White House, Bennett has been mentioned as the potential challenger to a weakened Bush in the 1992 primaries.

Thus, Sununu's selection could be viewed in two ways. It could be an outreached olive branch as a peace offering to the right. Or, it could be a ploy to muzzle Bennett. Indeed, Bennett's friends see a scheme to downgrade him in a job for which he has no training and in which he can only end up as either a puppet or a renegade. At best, say these skeptics, the White House wants Bennett to bash Democrats, not preach true-believer conservatism.

ART BUCHWALD

How many big fish can fit in the Iraq pond?

There will be 400,000 American soldiers in Saudi Arabia by January. The question no longer is "Why are we there?" but rather "Where is everybody else?"

President Bush is having a tough time answering that one.

Buchwald

We know why some of the major countries aren't there. For example, Japan isn't there because it lost World War II, and since it has done so well since, it doesn't want to win one. Also, because the Japanese produce most of the stereo equipment for the United States, Washington feels that it would be best to defer essential Japanese workers and keep them manufacturing Walkmans for our boys in the gulf.

Japanese diplomats agree. One told me, "If it wasn't for our Toyotas, there would be no reason to fight for the oil in Kuwait."

Germany would love to send men to Saudi Arabia, but they also lost World War II, and they feel that it would be risky for them to ship any troops to the Saudi front where their officers might commit war crimes.

The Germans informed me, "We won't fight without Field Marshal Rommel, and he's dead. At the same time, Germany supports the United States in what you are doing, and we have guaranteed to supply your armed forces with all the Beck's beer they can drink."

I asked him if he thought that Germany would use any of the oil that Americans were protecting.

"We will if you ask us to. Our understanding, however, is that America is not there for oil. It's there to protect the royal families in the area and any democratic governments that might accidentally pop up during the next 20 years."

France has a token force of fighting men in the region. The reason for this is that the French troops are bogged down in Chad and Paris. "We can't spare any more troops for Saudi Arabia," a Mitterrand spokesman said, "because there's no telling when Hussein will want to buy our airplanes again. France has always had close ties with Iraq. She was the first country in the area to return French hostages which shows liberte, egalite and fraternite are not dead — even in Baghdad."

Great Britain seems to have more troops in place than anyone else. This is thanks to Margaret Thatcher, who has been America's staunchest supporter. President Bush's advisers have suggested that now that Mrs. Thatcher is out, she be made commander-in-chief of all the fighting troops in Saudi Arabia. The president has turned down the idea, insisting that he would still like to give the embargo a chance.

The truth of the matter is that none of the NATO powers has supplied men to the build-up. Denmark wants to keep its draft-age men home in case the Iraqis attack the Tivoli in Copenhagen. Italy can't spare one soldier until all the Romeo and Juliet festivals are over.

Ironically, our only hope for allied support is the U.S.S.R. Gorbachev has promised to give Bush Soviet soldiers, but Boris Yeltsin said that would happen only over his dead body. Gorbachev wants the Soviet parliament to vote on Boris' body.

If the truth be known, the U.S. is all alone in Saudi Arabia. Countries claiming to be involved are actually sitting comfortably in ships out at sea. The leaders of our great NATO allies cannot be faulted on their reluctance to send troops. It would be suicide for them because their electorates could become furious, and no Western leader wants to wind up in a political body bag.

A plaque at the newly dedicated Achievement Plaza at the intersection of West Wall and Front streets honors Keep Midland Beautiful for its beautification efforts. A $100,000 landscaping award from the state was used to fund construction of the plaza.

Achievement Plaza dedicated

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

As 18-wheelers whizzed by and sports cars honked, Keep Midland Beautiful members dedicated Achievement Plaza Wednesday.

The traffic island at the intersection of West Wall and Front streets formerly featured several forlorn granite lumps.

Now, as Keep Midland Beautiful's prize for winning the 1989 Governor's Community Achievement Award, it sports 15 live oaks, 1,310 pansies and 200 purple and white ornamental kale, surrounded by decorative brick and slate work.

The $100,000 landscaping award is given annually by the Department of Highways and Public Transportation and Keep Texas Beautiful to communities that have shown a commitment to beautifying their piece of Texas, explained Bill Yenne of Lake Jackson, the chairman of Keep Texas Beautiful.

"You people of Midland should be proud that your community's doing its part to keep Texas beautiful," Yenne said.

For Keep Midland Beautiful, the award is old hat by now, said Sharla Hotchkiss, its executive director. The group won Volunteer Park as the 1987 Governor's Community Achievement Award.

"I'm delighted with it, it's beautiful" she said. "The first time I saw it with all its flowers was when I was driving Bill (Yenne) from the airport."

Ms. Hotchkiss said Steve Patton, a highway department landscape architect, designed the park, which was built by Wall's Green Enterprises under the direction of Lynn Passmore, a resident engineer with the department. Patton also designed Volunteer Park.

"We're fortunate to have someone that talented," she said.

As Webelos from Den 1, Pack 156 presented the colors and the Midland College Wind Ensemble performed, representatives from the city and the highway department praised Keep Midland Beautiful's efforts in the community.

"Keep Midland Beautiful exemplifies the importance of the active promotion and improve-

PUC accepts Bell proposal

■ The "Texas First" plan offers an $87.5 million refund in exchange for bringing Texas to the leading edge of telecommunications technology.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Southwestern Bell customers will get a one-time credit of $8.75 on their telephone bills and rates frozen at an average of $9.70 a month for the next four years under a contested settlement the Texas Public Utility Commission approved Wednesday.

On a 2-1 vote, the PUC rejected the advice of its hearing examiners as well as consumer advocates who claimed the agreement shortchanged ratepayers. They called for an interim rate reduction and new hearings in the 22-month-old case.

Instead, commissioners Paul Meek and Marta Greytok accepted the settlement proposed by Bell, the PUC general counsel and 22 other parties, including long-distance carriers who will get a 40-percent reduction in access charges that they are expected to pass on to customers.

The commission action also reduced the fee customers pay for service connection from the current $60 to $38, which Greytok said should make telephone service affordable to the 12 percent of Texans who now go without telephones.

The Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents residents and small businesses in rate cases, and 110 cities, including Midland, led the consumer advocates who hoped for an interim rate reduction of at least $1 a month to recover more than $1 billion they claim Bell overcharged Texas ratepayers after Congress cut the utility's tax bill by 26 percent in its 1987 tax reform.

Instead the telephone company proposed the "Texas First" plan that offered an $87.5 million refund and a four-year rate freeze in exchange for the promise to install new equipment that would bring Texas to the cutting edge of telecommunications technology.

PUC General Counsel Bob Rima and Southwestern Bell spokesmen claimed the settlement would result in $1.2 billion in customer benefits over the next four years, although two PUC administrative judges who analyzed the settlement in a 511-page report said it was worth $291 million.

Dissenting Commissioner Jo Campbell, the lone Democrat on the PUC, agreed with the administrative judges who called for a new round of hearings.

"Settlements are supposed to be win-win situations, where everybody, all of the parties, are sitting around the table and all the parties have input," Campbell said.

"Texas First doesn't really bring us anywhere close to the cutting edge of technology," she said. Many of the benefits Bell offered in the settlement were things the commission should have ordered years ago, she said.

"This is really a step backward from bringing Texas into the in-

Texas Education Commissioner William Kirby, standing center-right, chats with Edgewood school district Superintendent James Vasquez, during a recess in Wednesday's state Supreme Court proceedings. More than a year after the court ruled the state's system of financing public education unconstitutional, justices are questioning whether a new system has made the changes they ordered.

Justices press for evidence of funding change

■ The state's high court again hears arguments surrounding the latest legislative proposal to end inequities in public education funding.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Supreme Court justices grilled attorneys and disagreed among themselves Wednesday during their second hearing of the landmark Edgewood v. Kirby school finance lawsuit.

"I don't necessarily see a unanimous court this time," Education Commissioner William Kirby, the defendant whose name is attached to the suit, said afterward. "It could go either way."

An attorney for the state, Kevin O'Hanlon of the Texas Education Agency, said he anticipates a decision within 30 days. "They pretty much know where they stand," he said.

The hearing marked the second time the court has heard arguments on the issue. It was also the first time that still and video cameras were allowed in the courtroom simultaneously to record the proceedings.

In October 1989, Justice Oscar Mauzy wrote a unanimously supported opinion that struck down the way Texas pays for public education.

In response, legislators and Gov. Bill Clements postured and haggled through four special sessions before agreeing on Senate Bill 1, which State District Judge Scott McCown of Austin has found unconstitutional as well.

Alibi offered in rape, sex assault trial

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Relatives of Jan Jerrot Allen, who is accused in the July stabbing and rape of a Midland woman, told jurors Wednesday that Allen was at home when the attack supposedly occurred.

Allen, 27, is charged with one count of aggravated sexual assault and one count of attempted murder in connection with the incident, which occurred at the Sandstone Apartments, 4513 Neely Ave. His trial began Monday in 238th District Court.

Allen's grandfather, James Council Sr. of Midland, testified Wednesday that Allen was home watching television with him between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. on July 2, when the attack reportedly occurred.

"He was there before 3 o'clock," said Council, who in July was living at the Junction Apartments, 1902 N. Midland Drive.

Council's testimony corroborated statements made Tuesday by one of Allen's uncles, who told jurors that Allen was at Council's apartment until just before 5 p.m. the day of the attack.

Reber Council, Allen's grandmother, further bolstered the alibi. She testified Wednesday that she called home from her babysitting job several times on the afternoon of July 2, and said Allen answered the phone each time.

"He said, 'Grandmama, you sure do call regular here,' and I said 'I've got to check on your granddaddy,' " she said. "He takes heart medicine and insulin and I have to check on him. He's a sick man."

She said she called home once an hour between noon and 3 p.m.

In other defense testimony Wednesday, an evidence analyst said his lab had detected no semen residue on bedding on top of which the sexual assault supposedly occurred.

Charles Linch of the Southwest Institute of Forensic Science also said his lab — which was retained by Midland law enforcement authorities — found no hairs with "classical negroid characteristics" in the bedding.

The victim of the attack, a 41-year-old woman, testified earlier this week that Allen, who is black,

Eight locations around Permian Basin accepting entries for Pecan Show

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Many of those West Texans who fancy that they know the varieties and traits of their pecan trees and their nutty fruit about as well as finicky pet owners know the pedigree of their household pets will be showing off the best of their 1990 pecan crop this Monday and Tuesday in Midland.

The pecan offering from three counties — Midland, Ector and Glasscock — just might not be the best ever in the Midland County Pecan Growers Association's annual Pecan and Food Show, which is now in its 16th year. But it is sure to perk the interest of pecan fanciers.

This is the first year in which Ector County and Glasscock County pecan growers have joined their Midland counterparts, this year headlined as the Tri-County Pecan and Food Show.

Pecan growers who wish to enter the show are to submit a minimum of 40 pecans per variety. Any single variety entry may be from more than one tree.

While mixed samples will be disqualified, a grower may submit several varieties, such as Western, Stuart, Burkett, native or any of the "Indian" varieties, such as Wichita, Choctaw, Kiowa, Sioux, Mohawk, Shawnee and Cheyenne, for judging by Dr. Sammy Helmers, a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) in El Paso.

Entries may be dropped off at eight locations: La Casa Verde Garden Center at 2615 N. Midland Drive; Art and Marge Shaw's place off LaVera Drive; Boyd Reese's place at 2010 Rankin Highway; Earl Sellman's place at 5809 State Highway 349 (Rankin Highway); Claude and Phyllis Reames' place at 2601 Cessna Drive; and at the TAEX offices in Midland, Odessa, and Garden City.

Entry deadline is 5 p.m. Saturday and show chairman is Morris "Dave" Davis of Midland.

In the show's food division, pecan-based foods are to be submitted at the south entrance to Dellwood Mall at Midkiff Road and Illinois Avenue between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday or between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. on Monday.

Food categories include appetizers, bread, cake, candy, cookies, and pie.

SCHOOLS: 72nd Legislature to include more funding debate

(From 1B)

While his decision was the basis for Wednesday's hearing, legislators are gearing up to make another stab at designing a system when they come back into session Jan. 8.

In addition to asking the court to uphold McCown's decision, attorneys for plaintiffs said they want the judiciary to create a competing plan as a kind of prod to keep the Legislature on track.

Dave Richards, one of three plaintiffs' attorneys who spoke before the court, said a similar strategy "had a certain impetus in getting the Legislature moving" during negotiations with Clements earlier this year.

At that time, a special master McCown had appointed wrote a school finance plan that redirected large amounts of state aid from wealthier school districts to poorer ones, a politically unpalatable proposal.

Plaintiffs' attorneys also are asking the court to speed up the timetable that McCown set out.

The district judge said a replacement for Senate Bill 1 must be in place by Sept. 1, 1991, but he only left provision for a hearing should the state miss the deadline, attorneys said.

The plaintiffs want the deadline moved forward to the spring. If the Legislature should miss the date, their proposal is for the court's plan to go into effect.

The idea met with resistance from some court members on grounds they must observe the proper separation of powers.

"The Constitution says it's the Legislature's job to come up with a system," Justice Nathan Hecht told another attorney for plaintiffs, Al Kauffman.

But Justice C.L. Ray thought the inclination to delay a part of the legislative process.

"Five members of this court are former members of the Legislature, so we know what goes on over there," he said.

"Yeah, and some members of this court still think they're members of the Legislature," replied Justice Eugene Cook, an advocate of judicial restraint, to laughs from the court and observers.

Kauffman argued that the court may draw such a plan under the "inherent and implied powers" set out by the State Constitution.

Asked later about the idea, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said he found it "almost insulting to the Legislature."

Instead, Parker hoped the court would provide "a little wiggle room" for lawmakers by striking down a decades-old decision — Love v. City of Dallas — which has prevented the Legislature from mandating county-wide taxing districts.

Combining all school districts within a county for taxing purposes also would put a stop to "tax-haven districts," tiny school districts created in high property wealth areas so residents can enjoy low property taxes.

Questioning from Mauzy indicated that overturning Love v. Dallas is among the options under consideration.

During their allotted time period, attorneys for the state said they want the court to return SB 1 to its previous status, arguing that it will become efficient and equitable if given enough time to work.

But some justices did not react favorably to the bill, since it relies on legislative panels to conduct studies of the school finance system every two years and to recommend measures to keep it in balance.

"We said we don't want a Band Aid on the system, and it sounds like the Legislature is saying the best it's good for is an Ace Bandage," said Justice Lloyd Doggett.

O'Hanlon acknowledged that legislators did not alter the structure of state government in creating the plan, but panels such as the Legislative Budget Board and Legislative Education Board were given "significant new functions."

He said Senate Bill 1 placed into statute many sections of Mauzy's original opinion that dealt with efficiency and equity.

However, Chief Justice Tom Phillips said previous finance laws also have prescribed equity and efficiency but failed to provide the mechanisms to accomplish those goals.

formation age, rather than a step forward," Campbell said.

But Meek said Texas taxpayers would be glad to get a similar assurance from the Legislature that it would not increase taxes for the next four years while it increased services. "I think it is a very good thing for the state," he said.

Among the settlement supporters at Wednesday's hearing was Texas AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn, who said Bell's commitment to invest in Texas would create the climate for economic expansion.

"I'm talking about jobs, both present jobs and future jobs," Gunn said. "When you look at the Texas economy, I believe we need the best telephone communications systems we can have and I believe the proposals of Texas First wraps in that."

Merlin Breaux of Sour Lake, chairman of the Texas First Steering Committee, endorsed the plan on behalf of 67 cities, chambers of commerce and economic development groups across the state and said it would provide modern telephone service in many areas for the first time.

"The rural areas need this Texas First proposal in the very worst way," Breaux said.

"People in rural Texas are sick and tired of the kind of service we have," said Breaux, a farmer and businessman. "We think we can have much better," he said.

But in a news conference after the decision, Public Counsel C. Kingsbery Ottmers said ratepayers got shortchanged.

"They should enjoy their $8.75 because that's all they'll get," she said. "We had hoped we would have several dollars a month for the indefinite future for the ratepayers, but obviously it is more important to let Bell keep that money," she said.

'Texas First' freezes rates

- Freeze basic local rates for four years at an average of $9.70 monthly.
- One-time refund of $8.75 for residential customers and $10 per line for business customers.
- Reduce access charges to long-distance carriers by 40 percent over four years, with savings to be passed on to customers.
- Reduce surcharge for Touch-tone service over four years to 50 cents for residents, a 60-percent drop.
- Reduce service connection charge for new customers from $60 to $38.
- A Lifeline discount of as much as $7 a month for needy customers, which would provide service for as little as 60 cents a month.
- Upgrade all multi-party lines to one-party status and eliminate mileage charges for rural customers.
- Provide dial tones to allow emergency calls on all pay phones.
- Replace all mechanical switches in the state with electronic switches in four years.
- Share with customers profits greater than 12.06 percent return on investment, with refund of all earnings above 14.5 percent.

ment of the natural beauty of the city of Midland," said Mayor Carroll Thomas, who read a letter of commendation from the City Council.

Marshall Huffman, the district engineer for the highway department, said the landscaped plaza is a fine use for the state-owned traffic island because of the high traffic flow around it.

"The highway department is often thought of as a big impersonal structure whose only purpose is to move traffic along the interstate, but we want to be a part of the community," Huffman said.

Joel Ford, the chairman of Keep Midland Beautiful, said the group will continue to work to educate children in the schools, enforce litter laws, promote recycling and beautify right-of-ways and open spaces in the city with the help of its volunteers.

On Friday, a contingent of Keep Midland Beautiful members will go to Washington, D.C., to receive a second-place national community award from Keep America Beautiful for its projects. Keep Texas Beautiful will receive the first-place award for state efforts, Yenne said.

The car struck a dirt embankment on the north side of the road and overturned. Ms. Thomas was thrown from the car, which landed on top of her, police said.

According to the report, Anderson fled the scene on foot and was arrested a short time later.

An 8-year-old girl is in stable condition in skeletal traction at Midland Memorial Hospital after she was involved in an accident on her way to school Monday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Jaclyn Bradley of Midland suffered several broken bones when her bicycle and a 1989 Chevrolet Cheyenne pickup driven by Steven Masdon, 39, of Midland, collided in the 4100 block of Thomason Drive, Midland police reported.

According to the report, Jaclyn crossed the street on her bike at about 8:15 a.m. as the pickup traveled southeast. She was thrown six feet onto the pavement by the impact.

The truck skidded to a stop on top of the bike, the report said.

According to reports, a black male between 20 and 30 years old entered the business at about 4:20 p.m., tied up the victim, a 32-year-old woman, with clothes, took clothes and money from the cash register and fled.

The sexual assault is still under investigation, the report said.

The suspect is described in the report as being 5 feet 7 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair, wearing a white sweatsuit with blue lettering.

Bentsen optimistic about trade agreement between U.S., Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A free trade pact between the United States and Mexico, to be negotiated soon, would have winners and losers, but in the end both countries will benefit, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance said Wednesday.

"Areas that are labor intensive in the United States would be losers, and areas that are capital intensive in Mexico might be losers," Lloyd Bentsen said. "Overall the people will win because they'll get products at cheaper prices, and it will help improve the standard of living on both sides."

The Texas Democrat discussed the proposed free trade agreement with President Carlos Salinas de Gortari on Wednesday. It was also the main topic at a summit Salinas held with President Bush earlier this week.

His committee and the House Ways and Means Committee are charged with drawing up legislation for the agreement for Bush to formally present to Congress, and he reflected the presidents' enthusiasm for the project.

"I'm optimistic about a free trade agreement. Personally, I believe it will result in a great expansion of trade. Expansion of trade between two countries creates jobs. If I didn't think it would increase jobs, I wouldn't be a part of it," he said.

"It's not a done deal, (but) I think we'll be able to bring it off. We start out with a very friendly mood on the part of Congress. I don't see it as that major of a political issue," he added.

Speaking at a news conference at Ambassador John D. Negroponte's residence, Bentsen called the schedule ambitious, considering that a free trade agreement between the United States and Canada took three years to negotiate and was finally approved in 1988.

A U.S. recession or the failure of international negotiators to reach agreement next month's round of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Brussels, Belgium, would spur the Bush administration on toward the free trade accord with Mexico, Bentsen said.

stabbed her repeatedly, beat her and raped her after she let him into her apartment.

The woman was hospitalized for seven days following the attack, suffering from 11 or 12 stab wounds and a collapsed lung.

Dr. Andrew Tofield, a Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room physician, testified Wednesday that hospital personnel did not examine the victim for evidence of rape.

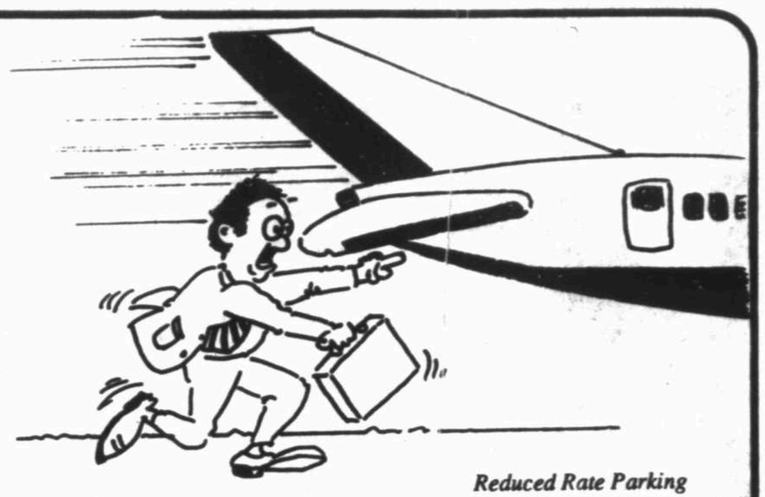

Such examinations are performed at the request of victims and law enforcement officers, Tofield said under questioning from defense attorney Tom Hirsch.

"Otherwise we are under no obligation to investigate for sexual assault," Tofield said.

Testimony in Allen's trial is expected to resume today before Judge John Hyde.

If convicted on the aggravated sexual assault charge, Allen faces from five to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine. Attempted murder, meanwhile, is punishable by two to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Farm bill appropriates $60 million to Rio Grande colonias

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush signed a five-year farm bill Wednesday that authorizes $60 million in loans and grants to improve conditions for thousands of Texans living in impoverished communities along the Rio Grande.

At a White House signing ceremony, Bush called the legislation the "most environmentally progressive farm bill ever signed."

A provision of the legislation, sponsored by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, establishes a program that authorizes up to $30 million in loans and $30 million in grants annually to bring water and sewer systems to colonias on the Texas-Mexico border.

The bill targets communities facing significant health risks due to the lack of access to adequate or affordable water and waste systems. The legislation allows grants and loans to be made to communities to develop water and sewer systems, as well as to individuals seeking to connect their homes to those systems.

A recent General Accounting Office study found 198,000 people are living in colonias — unincorporated communities lacking adequate water, housing or sewer systems — in six border counties in Texas. The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, found 60 percent of colonias have water supplies but less than 1 percent has a public sewer system.

De la Garza, a Mission Democrat and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said the 1990 farm bill strengthens efforts to protect soil and water resources and improve environmental quality in rural America.

"It continues the food stamp and nutrition programs which help provide food for our needy. It also maintains our export promotion programs that help American farmers compete with the massive subsidies and unfair trade barriers of our competitors," de la Garza said.

De la Garza said the Agriculture Committee would "closely monitor the implementation of the new farm programs to determine the effects on the rural economy.

"We have invested too much in the revitalization of American agriculture to let it fall apart again," he said.

Bush said the bill keeps American farmers competitive and "keeps our rural areas environmentally sound."

"Because farmers have always been important stewards of the earth, this farm bill will help farmers protect water quality and wildlife habitat, and its greater flexibility wil boost crop rotation, in term, helping to control weeds and pests and erosion," Bush said.

The measure, approved by Congress in October, also freezes minimum commodity target prices at 1990 levels and cuts subsidized acreage 15 percent. The federal deficit-reduction plan approved last month requires a $13 billion cut in spending on farm programs through fiscal 1995.

De la Garza said the budget legislation greatly reduces the level of government protection of farm income.

Scottish test new theory on angina

By Jean Carper

People who suffer from chest pain known as angina, caused by heart disease, may have low blood levels of vitamin E and vitamin C. That's a new theory now being tested.

Carper

Scientists at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland recently compared 430 healthy men with 125 men who had angina. Regardless of other risk factors like cholesterol, those with the lowest blood levels of vitamin E or vitamin C were more than twice as likely to complain of chest pain as those with the highest levels of the vitamins.

Why? Both of these vitamins are strong antioxidants that can help neutralize damaging "free radical" compounds that promote heart disease.

More intriguing, the scientists discovered that the fatty tissue of the angina-sufferers was remarkably low in linoleic acid, a polyunsaturated fat in vegetable oils, nuts and seeds — foods also rich in vitamin E. Thus, the scientists say, the low vitamin E may also reflect a diet lacking in protective linoleic acid.

In that case, taking vitamin E capsules would probably not be a remedy for angina. Only eating foods high in both vitamin E and linoleic acid might help do the trick.

Zinc and the PMS Puzzle

Scientists have rounded up yet another suspect in the cause of premenstrual syndrome (PMS). It is the trace mineral zinc.

PMS typically comes on about two weeks before menstruation, creating symptoms of anxiety, crying, binging and depression. That time often coincides with low blood levels of zinc in PMS women, suggests new research at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

The study of 10 women with PMS and 10 women without the disorder, found that about 70 percent of the PMS women had abnormally low zinc during the symptom-phase.

It's possible, says study-director C. James Chuong, that zinc spurs the secretion of hormones, such as progesterone, and that too little zinc causes a plunge in progesterone, altering brain chemistry. For example, he and others have found that women during the PMS phase have lower levels of endorphins, the brain's natural opiates or pain killers.

However, it is unclear whether replenishing zinc can alleviate PMS. Thus, Dr. Chuong finds it premature to recommend taking zinc tablets, which can be detrimental in high doses. Foods richest in zinc are shellfish, notably oysters.

No Bones About Colas

You may have heard that drinking too much cola can weaken bones, promoting the degenerative bone disease osteoporosis. One theory is that phosphorous in colas triggers bone loss by stifling the body's absorption of bone-building calcium.

So speculated Harvard researchers last year, after studying a group of 5,400 women. They found that among former college athletes, soda-pop drinkers were about twice as likely to have a first-time bone fracture after age 40 as non-soda drinkers. The researchers put most of the blame on phosphorous-laced colas heavily consumed by the women athletes.

But when Dr. Samuel Smith at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore recently gave laboratory rats as much diet cola as they wanted for three months, he was totally surprised to find their spinal and leg bones no weaker than those of rats given water. "I fully expected the bones of the cola-drinking rats to be less dense," he says.

Although his study does not support the popular notion that swilling down cola destroys bones, Dr. Smith advises moderation in drinking cola. There's still the chance unknown adverse effects will show up in future tests, he says.

Controversial treatment ready

By Ruth SoRelle
Hearst News Service

Sponsored by Clintec Corp., a venture of Baxter Pharmaceuticals and Nestle, the program is controversial because it involves the use of high technology in lowering cholesterol.

HOUSTON — A surgeon here is poised to begin a nationwide test of a new intravenous treatment he hopes will reverse arteriosclerosis, commonly called hardening of the arteries.

Dr. Stanley J. Dudrick, surgeon-in-chief at Hermann Hospital, plans to compare the effects of his treatment to the standard low-fat diet and a special no-fat formula diet in patients whose coronary arteries are narrowed by accumulations of fibrous fatty material called plaque.

The 45 to 60 patients accepted into the study will be facing a second operation or balloon procedure to open clogged arteries. That means their disease is very severe.

"We are stacking the deck against ourselves," said Dudrick, who admits many in the medical community are skeptical of his treatment.

Hermann will be the anchor point for the trial, which will also include the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Sponsored by Clintec Corp., a venture of Baxter Pharmaceuticals and Nestle, the program is controversial because it involves the use of high technology in lowering cholesterol. Dudrick said some skeptics have questioned whether the treatment can reverse arteriosclerosis, a major cause of heart disease.

Patients in the study will have a catheter inserted into a major vein. The special fat-free nutritional solution continuously infused into that vein will satisfy all their dietary needs.

They cannot take anything other than water by mouth during the 90-day treatment. The protein component of the nutritional solution is called Atheromine, a special formulation that Dudrick said his previous work has shown to cause regression of plaque.

Patients on the treatment will be compared with those on the other two dietary regimens to determine if there is a difference in how patients respond to their dietary manipulations.

Eventually, Dudrick hopes to develop a form of his treatment that can be taken orally in solid or liquid form. But now, its active ingredient is destroyed in the digestive tract.

Currently, attempts to lower cholesterol have centered around low-fat diets and special drugs, but they are only minimally successful, Dudrick said. His treatment, he said, appeared to reverse atherosclerosis in animals and humans.

But Dudrick said his study will look at more than the effects of the medication on coronary arteries. "We are also concerned about quality of life," he said.

Patients will be counseled about altering their lifestyles and eating patterns to ward off recurrences of the disease.

Dudrick is internationally known as the developer of total parenteral nutrition, an intravenous feeding process that can take the place of a normal diet indefinitely.

While studying that form of nutrition, he found that atherosclerosis stabilized or regressed in many patients.

Demand for psychiatric service to outpace supply, report says

CHICAGO (AP) — The number of psychiatrists will not grow as fast as the demand for their services, and more doctors will develop specialities such as addictions therapy or geriatrics counseling, a report on psychiatry's future says.

The number of psychiatrists is expected to increase 14 percent between 1985 and the year 2000, while demand for psychiatric care is expected to grow by 19.1 percent, according to a report published recently in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"We're very concerned that the demand outstrips the supply." said Dr. Melvin Sabshin, medical director of the American Psychiatric Association in a telephone interview from Washington.

The projected 14 percent increase in the number of psychiatrists compares with a 24 percent projected increase in physicians overall, the report said.

Those figures may be a signal that medical students are shying away from a field that pays less than other medical specializations, Sabshin said.

At the same time, psychiatric treatment has become more socially acceptable thus prompting more people to seek care, says the report by the AMA's Council on Long Range Planning.

"It's not a case of increased incidence of psychiatric problems," said Thomas M. Gorey, staff secretary for the council. "It's more that in the future, we expect the social stigma attached to psychiatry to diminish even further."

In 1985, Americans made 27.8 million visits to psychiatrists, Gorey said. Researchers project that number to grow to about 33.2 million in 2000.

"It's not a case of increased incidence of psychiatric problems. It's more that in the future, we expect the social stigma attached to psychiatry to diminish even further.'

— Thomas M. Gorey, AMA Council staff secretary

Gorey said the increased demand also may be due to increased numbers of drug and alcohol addicts and the growing elderly population, which often has difficulty adjusting to certain physical impairments.

"We have a rapidly aging population and they have unique problems that will have to be addressed," Gorey said.

Changing population needs will prompt more psychiatrists to receive the added qualifications needed to specialize in treating children, addicts and the elderly or to work within the legal system to provide testimony in lawsuits, the report said.

The move toward specializations is needed, but the profession also needs to address the dropoff in medical students seeking to practice psychiatry, said Dr. Kenneth Altshuler, president of the American Association of Chairmen of Departments of Psychiatry.

The dropoff may be due to regulations of the psychiatry practice that impede doctors' ability to hospitalize patients as well as sharp increases in medical malpractice lawsuits, Altshuler said.

"As a psychiatrist, you're spending a lot of time justifying to people why you're keeping a patient in the hospital," he said. "But then you're also very concerned about discharging a patient too early because a psychiatrist can be held liable if a patient harms someone."

College psychiatry department heads and the American Psychiatric Association are planning more recruitment efforts to keep medical students in the field, Sabshin said.

"Our way of handling this is going to be to work with medical students as much as we can and try to make sure we don't lose the ones who have in interest in the field to pay or other concerns," Sabshin said.

Groups start new system to track cancer

N.Y. Times News Service

The American Cancer Society, working with the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer, has started an information system to track and compare information on the treatment of cancer from hospitals around the country.

The National Cancer Database will be the largest collection of diagnoses, treatments and results ever compiled on cancer in this country, the society said. The information will be analyzed and published in periodic reports, the first of which will be issued in about six months.

Doctors and researchers will be able to use the reports to determine what happens to the one million patients who are found to have cancer each year, including how the disease was diagnosed, what treatment they received and whether it was effective. The system will also allow comparisons among different population groups.

"Not only will this database be an invaluable tool for physicians and hospitals, but it will give the American Cancer Society and the public a sort of report card on treatment outcome that will let us know how we are doing on certain cancers," said Dr. Gerald Murphy, the society's chief medical officer.

So far, reports of 170,000 cancer cases from 1985 and 300,000 from 1988 have been compiled.

Cryosurgery offers new hope

CHICAGO (AP) — A procedure that freezes cancerous tumors by using ultrasound-guided probes offers hope to people who otherwise would be certain to die of liver malignancies, a radiologist said Tuesday.

Of 30 patients who underwent the treatment, six are free of disease, said Dr. Gary Onik of Presbyterian Hospital in Pittsburgh.

The technique, called cryosurgery, has the ability to destroy tumors next to major blood vessels without destroying normal tissues nearby, Onik reported at the 76th Scientific Assembly and Annual Meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

He and his colleagues also are testing ultrasound-guided cryosurgery for prostate cancer, and among seven patients who have undergone it so far, no complications have resulted, Onik said.

Industry group forecasts rise in HMO fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising hospital costs and physicians' salaries will contribute to an estimated 12.9 percent increase in premiums next year for patients of health maintenance organizations, an industry group said Wednesday.

The Group Health Association of America Inc. based its projection on a survey of 44 HMOs enrolling more than 11 million people.

Increases averaged 16.9 percent in 1989 and 16 percent this year, said the group.

Return to status quo concerns mall tenants

EL PASO (AP) — Tenants of a shopping center seized in the nation's largest cocaine bust are concerned about government plans to return the center to the family of an accused drug trafficker.

If the center is returned, tenants of Westside Park II at Alto Mesa shopping center will have to make lease payments to a corporation whose president is the father of Rafael Munoz Talavera.

Munoz faces charges in Mexico stemming from the discovery last year of 21 tons of cocaine in a suburban Los Angeles warehouse. A man convicted in the case in the United States signed an affidavit pinpointing Munoz as the owner of the cocaine. Two others were convicted on drug charges in the case.

"This could hurt my business and unfairly because it's something I don't have anything to do with, nor do any of the other tenants," David Lindauer, owner of One Hour Foto, told the El Paso Herald-Post.

"We can't pick this equipment up and move without spending $75,000 to $100,000," Lindauer said. "The other side of me says I don't want to be a contributor to someone who may be trafficking in drugs. This is one hell of a dilemma."

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the IRS seized the shopping center in November 1989. Authorities believed they had evidence to prove the mall was purchased through drug profits.

But Munoz's father, Rafael Munoz Telles, was able to prove that the center he bought in May 1989 with a $1.2 million down payment was bought with income from legitimate businesses in Mexico.

In lieu of a lengthy civil trial, the U.S. attorney's office agreed to return the center to the Munoz family's Ramu Corp. for $167,000, the sum of center's net equity. Ramu has 90 days to pay the sum or lose the center.

The government also kept Munoz's lavish El Paso mansion confiscated around the same time.

The agreement protects the center's lien holder and saves the government costly court costs, said Steve Jurecky, assistant U.S. attorney with the asset and forfeiture unit in El Paso.

But some tenants think it will give them a poor public image.

"If you could give me another location, I'd get out of here," said Inga Lorey, owner of Lomart Supermarket, the center's anchor. She said she's bound by a 15-year lease she had with the center's original owners. The property changed hands several times before it was purchased by Ramu Corp.

> 'If you could give me another location, I'd get out of here.'
> — Inga Lorey, owner of mall's anchor store

Federal documents accuse Munoz Talavera and his brother-in-law, Rafael Aguilar, of being the primary narcotics movers in the Mexican state of Chihuahua in the 1980s.

Aguilar is a former Mexican federal security police director for the states of Chihuahua and Coahuila. The two men's wives, who were sisters, had ties to Hector del Castillo, then federal anti-drug coordinator for northern Mexico, according to the federal forfeiture suit in the case.

The men's combined drug empire was generating net profits of $40 million to $50 million a month. Much of it ended up in real estate purchases in the United States, the documents said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Ex-sheriff gets probation, fine

GREENVILLE (AP) — A former Rockwall County sheriff was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years probation and a $10,000 fine for his role in marijuana and bail bonds scheme, court officials said.

John David McWhorter, 37, also was assigned to perform 600 hours of community service, said Irish Brown, Hunt County deputy district clerk.

A jury found McWhorter guilty of engaging in organized crime Tuesday. He could have faced up to life imprisonment.

Bail bondsman Jimmie Charles Cook and former Chief Deputy David Knight testified that McWhorter approved the removal of more than 90 pounds of marijuana from the department's property room. He also was accused of sharing in the profits from the drug's sale and entering in a bail bond scheme for profit.

McWhorter denied any wrongdoing and testified that the marijuana was burned with the permission of a district judge.

District Attorney Ray Sumrow, who prosecuted the case, did not immediately return calls from The Associated Press. McWhorter's telephone number is unlisted.

S&L trial underway

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Trial testimony has begun in a state official's effort to recover millions of dollars he claims were "looted" from the state's only uninsured savings and loan before it failed.

Jorge Gutierrez, state-appointed liquidator for the Harligen-based Rio Grande Savings and Loan Association, sued to recover the money. Gutierrez alleges it was lost through nine unsecured loans to a Houston-based institution, Champion Savings & Loan. Champion later was taken over by Heights of Texas Federal Savings Bank.

The 50-page suit alleges that $20 million of Rio Grande's good loans were converted into nine worthless loans through fraudulent loan swaps and transfers with Champion Savings.

Testimony in the case began Wednesday in the state's 357th District Court in Brownsville. Judge Roy Valdez told jurors Tuesday that the complex trial could take up to three months.

Because Rio Grande had no federal deposit insurance, more than 6,000 depositors — many of them elderly — lost all but a fraction of their money when state regulators shut it down in May 1987.

Gulf drilling rig capsizes

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — A jack-up drilling rig capsized in the Gulf of Mexico about 50 miles south of here, but the two people aboard escaped serious injury, the Coast Guard said Wednesday.

The rig remained afloat and drifting, with debris posing a navigational hazard in that area of the Gulf, a spokesman said.

The rig, owned by Dynamic Offshore Crafts of New Iberia, went over about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday while underway in moderate seas, said Steve Hardy of the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office.

The captain, Chuck James, and crewman Nick Mestrobato escaped in a lifeboat and rowed to a nearby petroleum platform, where they were picked up by a helicopter.

UT announces centers

GALVESTON (AP) — The University of Texas's medical school said Thursday it planned to open six new research centers to study regional health problems such as toxic exposure and tropical diseases.

The opening of the centers at the university's Medical Branch here will be part of the $254 million Centennial Capital Campaign, which has raised $175 million so far. The campaign marks the centennial of the school, founded in 1891.

The Center for Environmental Health and Toxicology, which will be located virtually at the site of several recent oil spills, will study the effects of exposure to natural and manmade toxicants on individuals and the environment, the school said.

Other centers to open in 1991 include the Center for Tropical Diseases, the Center for Wound Healing and centers for molecular biology.

True re-elected to TFB

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas Farm Bureau president S.M. True was re-elected Wednesday to lead the state's largest general farm organization.

Delegates to the Texas Farm Bureau convention here picked True for a ninth one-year term.

Delegates to the 57th annual convention, which wrapped up Wednesday, also adopted resolutions in support of protecting the environment.

SSC-related spending put at $60 million

DALLAS (AP) — The superconducting super collider, under construction south of Dallas, brought 150 new workers to North Texas and had a $180 million impact on the local economy during the last year, a study released Wednesday said.

Spending because of the collider's development added $60 million to the business activity of Dallas, Ellis and Tarrant counties, the study said. That money turned over three times in the region, it said.

The study, prepared by consultants for the development group called the North Texas Commission, showed the collider's economic benefit far outstrips the $3.6 million contribution the three counties made to it.

More than 700 people work for firms that make up the super collider laboratory in Ellis County. Most of them live in Dallas County, which saw the most economic benefit during the past year, the study said.

"The composition of spending will likely change from year to year as project requirements shift from the setup and planning mode of operation to construction activities," the study said. "Still, the local area stands to benefit greatly."

The commission plans to release a study next week showing the benefits of the collider's development in other parts of the nation. Organizations and companies in 40 other states have been awarded contracts for the collider during the past year.

That study may help the collider's in Congress next year, where its chance for funding appears dimmer because of budget restraints and opposition from scientists.

Congress this summer first approved spending $318 million on the collider in 1991. But lawmakers cut the appropriation by $75 million in October after passing a five-year deficit reduction plan.

Congress freed $25 million that had been set aside for later use on the collider and the state of Texas made up the rest of the cut.

The deficit reduction plan requires that spending increases on government projects be matched by reductions on other projects.

Ex-exotic dancer runaway write-in winner

AUSTIN (NYT) — Former exotic dancer Bubbles Cash outstripped all her competitors in the write-in contest for Texas governor.

And Cash, who now owns a jewelry store in Dallas, said Wednesday that she is considering building on that showing by running for the Dallas City Council.

"I'm thinking about it," Cash said. "I'd like to be on the Dallas City Council, and if I may be so grandiose to say it, I would love to be mayor of this town."

The final count gave Cash 3,287 write-in votes. She was followed by James "Jim" Wright of New Caney, who was the choice of 1,566 Texans, and Arlington dry cleaner Tyler Pierson, who received 1,396 votes.

She said a vote for her "was an alternative, kind of like the Boston Tea Party. It was a way for voters to show their disappointment without throwing their vote away."

By comparison, Gov.-elect Ann Richards received 1,924,458 votes, Republican Clayton Williams got 1,824,785 and Libertarian Jeff Daiell received 129,185.

A record 19 Texans signed up as write-in candidates in the Nov. 6 election.

Cash said her tough stands on issues — in support of abortion rights, the death penalty and a state lottery — catapulted her to the top among the write-in candidates. She distributed bumper stickers that read, "Texas Needs Cash."

A peace write-in candidate for governor in 1968, Cash, 43, said her celebrity as a former stripper also may have helped. She said a vote for her "was an alternative, kind of like the Boston Tea Party. It was a way for voters to show their disappointment without throwing their vote away."

Small schools remain alive

■ The Garden City Bearkats and Rankin Red Devils remain the area's two teams still competing in the Class A football postseason tournament.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Crunch time is upon area Class A football teams in regional action Friday.

Unranked Rankin, 9-2, will face third-ranked Farwell in a Region I matchup Friday in Seminole while fifth-ranked Garden City, whose only loss in 11 games is to Rankin, will face surprising Axtell in Region II action at 7:30 p.m. in Brady.

Also Friday, top-ranked Munday faces Fort Davis in the other Region I battle at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Stanton — the second straight week that Buffalo Stadium will host a playoff game.

Rankin has won six straight on the field (and another by forfeit when District 8-A rival Tornillo dropped its football program on the eve of the season) after starting the season 2-2.

Farwell hasn't lost to anybody.

In fact, the 11-0 Steers have won all of their games by at least 20 points — and most by much more. Coach Rex Cumpton's team has outscored foes 472-60 this season, scoring at least 32 points each time out.

The Steer defense posted four shutouts in the regular season and held playoff opponents Booker and Spur to six points each. But Cumpton doesn't think the endless series of blowouts has misled his team into a sense of invincibility.

"This particular group of young men have been through playoff pressure in both football and basketball," Cumpton said. The Steers made the playoffs in both 1988 and '89 with many of the same players who will take the field against Rankin.

Farwell's multiple offense is led by tailback Shawn Stewart, who has rushed for more than 1,500 yards this season despite carrying less than 15 times per game.

Other Steer weapons include quarterback Greg Atkinson, wingback Monty Delgado and split end Chad Byrd.

Linebacker Delgado helps spur the defense, along with fellow backer Michael Arce and end Ruben Lucio.

Not by any stretch of the imagination does Cumpton think his team has it made against Rankin.

"Won-loss record and state rankings can be thrown out the window when you get to the playoffs," he said.

Cumpton, younger brother of Hereford head coach Don Cumpton, is particularly concerned about the Steers' ability to stop Rankin quarterback Kirk Kennedy, who leads the Red Devils in virtually every meaningful offensive category.

Kennedy needs only 14 yards rushing Friday to pass the 1,000-yard mark. The junior has also completed nearly 50 percent of his passes for 796 yards and 10 touchdowns, in addition to rushing for 21 touchdowns and handling place-kicking duties.

The Red Devils will stay with the I formation this week, after running the veer for most of the last three seasons. Tailback Gabe Hyatt is the team's second-leading rusher, while fullback Kevin Braden has provided outstanding backfield blocking since moving back from center in mid-season.

Plains shut off the Red Devils option attack last week, leaving Kennedy to throw. And throw he did ... two touchdown passes to wide receiver Joey Varela that broke open last Friday's area round game.

"They gave some things (other than the option), and that's what we ended up doing," Coach Kennedy said.

Inside linebackers Braden and Clint Templeton lead the Red Devil defense, which bounced back from a 36-point effort by Van Horn in non-district play to allow less than 10 points a game in district action.

The Rankin-Farwell winner will face the Fort Davis-Munday winner in state quarterfinal action next weekend.

The Garden City-Axtell game features a team that has been highly-regarded all season against a team for which hope was withheld.

Surprise, surprise. After being picked to finish next-to-last in District 16-A, Coach Joe Wyatt's Longhorns have fashioned a 9-2 mark despite a series of close calls.

The Longhorns have won three of their games by two points, and have had to come from behind for five wins. Only in a 34-6 win over Evant were the 'Horns in command from the outset.

"I feel like our kids have a lot of character," Wyatt said. According to the coa-

Equestrian eyes Nationals, Olympics

■ Seventeen-year-old Midlander Andrea Elwood has ridden a smooth road of equine success thusfar; now, the Midland Lee senior is eyeing bigger prizes with the help of her Arabian gelding, Pasha.

Andrea Elwood considers winning a national competition with partner Pasha a dream come true.

Andrea Elwood knows that years of hard work and training lie ahead on her path to reaching the pinnacle of equestrian success as a Grand Prix rider.

But in just the third stage past Training level, the 17-year old Midland Lee senior has already qualified to show her gelding Pasha at Regionals this summer in Fort Worth. And a Top 5 finish in the junior division there would be rewarded with automatic inclusion at Nationals next October.

"Just to go to Nationals would be a dream come true," says Andrea, who recently steered Pasha to Grand Champion honors at shows in Lubbock and Abilene.

"Well," she adds, "It would fulfill one of my dreams, anyway."

Andrea's first love of riding is the international art form known as dressage, which involves the execution of complex maneuvers by horse and rider over a large rectangular course while each movement is judged on a 1-to-10 scale. The highest level of the sport is conducted by Grand Prix masters at the Olympic Games.

"The Olympics. That would really be something," Andrea beams. "That's a really long way off, but I once thought Nationals was a really long way off.

"Of course at my level it's unrealistic to put a timetable on reaching the Grand Prix level. It depends on your horse and the ability of the horse to take you there."

Pasha is not just any horse.

Christened Abu Nazeer Pasha, he is a rare purebred Egyptian Arabian that Andrea purchased and pays for with her earnings as a part-time fitness instructor at the Midlander.

Pasha's price tag was $4,000.

"He was a real bargain," Andrea said. "Usually Arabians don't make the best dressage horses because of their lighter, airy flow. What you typically want is a horse with bold movements.

"But when I saw through his movements that he had the potential, I bought him. He's smart, gentle — he wouldn't hurt a fly — and he's 16 hands, which is unusual for an Arabian."

Arabians average 14 to 15 hands. They also catch the critical eyes of judges that Andrea says instinctively tend to see the world's oldest known purebreds as being out of place at dressage competitions.

"Sometimes the judges will stare at him (Pasha) and ask me if he's a purebred Arabian, and I think sometimes it's a disadvantage.

UIL won't act now on latest allegations

■ As 'Mojo-gate' takes yet another turn, a spokesman for the University Interscholastic League says that no immediate action will be taken concerning the latest accusations involving Odessa Permian.

Associated Press

ODESSA — The governing body of high school athletics in Texas won't immediately pursue an investigation into allegations that Odessa Permian High School coaches received secretive payments from boosters.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Wednesday that former Permian football coach Gary Gaines received at least $15,000 in cash from boosters after both the 1988 and 1989 seasons. A booster who was not identified told the newspaper the payments allegedly occurred for more than a decade.

"We are not involved at this time," Bill Farney, athletic director of the University Interscholastic League, said Wednesday. "The District 4-5A executive committee has heard testimony about those concerns.

"It fell into the executive committee's jurisdiction. And as far as we are concerned, that case was adjudicated by the committee," Farney said.

The District 4-5A executive committee, comprising superintendents from Midland, Odessa, Abilene and San Angelo, met in a closed session on Nov. 16 in Big Spring.

Findings from internal investigations by Odessa Permian and Midland Lee were revealed at the meeting, Farney said.

After studying the testimony, which included discussion of payments by boosters to the two schools' coaches, the executive committee chose not to forward the case to the UIL, said Chuck Hornung, spokesman for the Ector County Independent School District, which includes Permian.

"Financial payments were discussed in the investigation, and they were discussed in the committee meeting. But as far as amounts, I am not aware of what they were," Hornung said.

UIL rules prohibit annual gifts or bonuses to coaches in excess of $300 from any source, including booster clubs.

Ted Miller, coordinator of communications for the Midland Independent School District, said investigations into possible wrongdoing at Midland Lee are closed.

"Unless someone brings up something else, it's over," Miller said. "It's kind of like going to the courts. If all parties are happy with the ruling, then that's where it stays. We certainly aren't going to pursue it."

An unidentified Permian booster told the Fort Worth newspaper that the amount of the cash payments were determined largely by how far the Pan-

Cooper coach steps down

Staff Report

ABILENE — After five years without a winning record, Abilene Cooper head football coach Larry Peel turned in his resignation to the Abilene Independent School District Wednesday.

Peel, a former assistant coach at both Midland High and Midland Lee, posted a five-year record of 13-35 while at Cooper. He had a 1-9 record this past season.

Peel's contract with the AISD was to end this year. He was not given a contract extension going into this season.

Larry Pullin, head football coach at Abilene High, was also not given a contract extension by the AISD; Pullin's Eagles were 1-8 this season.

Peel's immediate plans are not known. The AISD is now taking applications for the Cooper opening.

Dixie Rebels on a mission of winning

Dixie College

In junior college basketball circles, fans and coaches are used to dealing with freshmen and sophomores. But how about RMs?

For the Dixie College Rebels, the RMs play an important role in the fortunes of their teams. Just how important, fans can discover on Friday and Saturday, when Dixie joins Odessa College, Midland College, and San Jacinto College of Pasadena, for a two-night "Meeting of Champions."

Dixie College plays Odessa College at 6 p.m. Friday while Midland faces San Jacinto. Opponents are reversed on Saturday with Odessa playing San Jac and Midland going against Dixie.

Back to the RMs. Those are Returning Missionaries, an important consideration for the Dixie Rebels from St. George, Utah.

In that predominantly Mormon area, young men often serve two-year church missions before attending college or after being in college only a year.

Midland College fans remember that from their trips to the national junior college tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., when the Chaps defeated Dixie in 1982 and then faced many of the same Dixie players in 1985. Those players had done their missions after one year at Dixie, then returned for their sophomore year.

Among the RMs you'll note on this season's Dixie roster are:

■ Doug Ross, freshman, who did his mission in Phoenix.

■ Marc Miller, sophomore, who has returned from his mission in Southern Italy.

■ Gib Arnold, freshman, whose mission was in Munich, Germany.

■ Dave Lloyd, sophomore, who has been on a mission to Spain.

While first year head coach Dave Rose has just three returning starters, Miller and Lloyd both have experience at Dixie. Rose also has a redshirt freshman from Liberty University in Clark Adams; Rich Thornton, a transfer from Shoreline Junior College, Seattle; Brian Sitter, sophomore transfer from St. Mary's College; and Joe Mantashigian, who played last season at Antelope Valley Junior College.

In sophomore forward Cliff Reed, the Rebels have a returner who led the team in both scoring (20.4 ppg) and rebounding (12.2 rpg) last season.

Guard Lester Turner averaged 13.9 points and 3.8 rebounds for the Rebels as a freshman.

Renaud Gordon, the third returner, started all 33 games for the Rebels last season, averaging 4.6 points and 2.7 rebounds.

Add in all those RMs, plus three talented freshmen and you'll see why coach Dave Rose is rather confident about his chances as a first year head coach. Besides, he was an assistant when those valuable RMs were freshmen — three years ago.

Rose to try hand at teaching after release from prison

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, who was never much of a student in school, will become a teachers aide when he gets out of prison in January.

Rose has worked out an agreement with the Cincinnati public school system that will take him from jail to gymnasium. Rose has agreed to help teach physical education and health classes as part of his 1,000 hours of court-ordered community service when he's released from prison.

"He seems comfortable with the idea," said Cecil Good, an assistant superintendent in the school district.

Rose is serving a five-month prison sentence for failing to report income from gambling, memorabilia sales and autograph appearances on his taxes. He's scheduled to be released from a federal prison camp in Marion, Ill., on Jan. 7.

Rose then must serve three months at a halfway house in Cincinnati and perform 1,000 hours of community service at five inner-city elementary schools and a youth center designated by U.S. District Judge S. Arthur Spiegel. The judge decided last July that Rose should "return to his roots in the inner-city" as part of his rehabilitation.

It's unusual for a judge to specify community service in the schools. Good drove to the Illinois prison earlier this month to figure out how Rose can fit in.

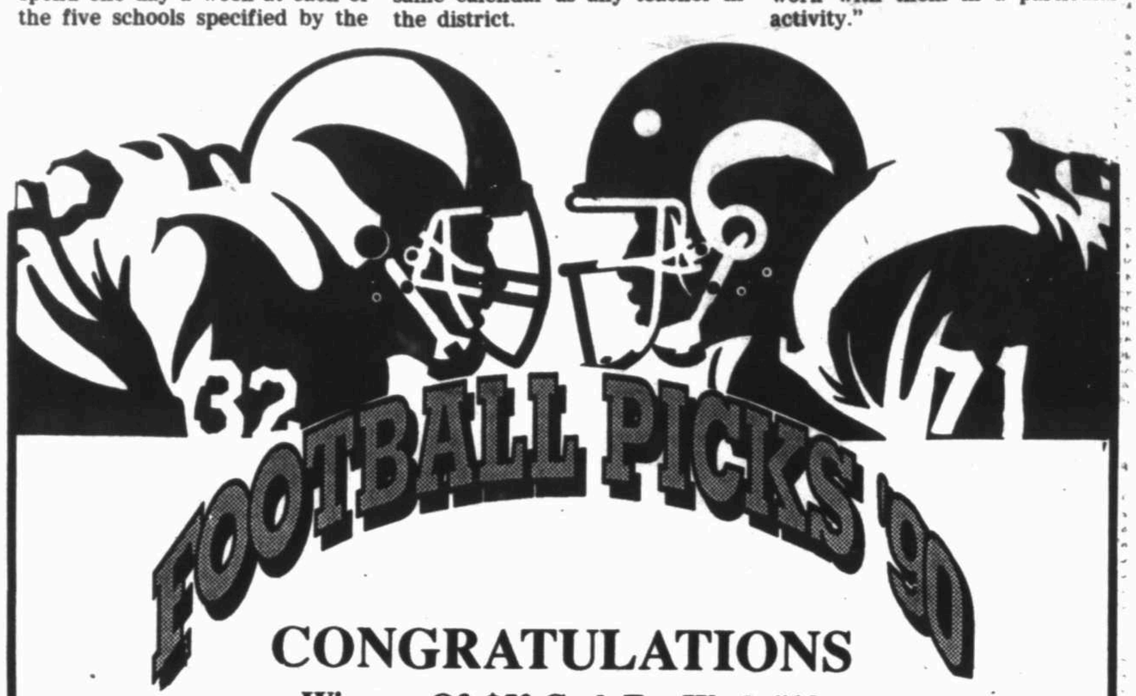

The decision to use him as a teachers' aide grew out of that meeting.

"I shared our thoughts with him. He seemed real comfortable with the idea," Good said. "We worked it out mutually."

Details haven't been worked out. Good said Rose likely will spend one day a week at each of the five schools specified by the judge, working under the direction of teachers. The school district has many such instructor assistants.

"We've arranged for him to work full-time in the schools," Good said. "He'll be working the same calendar as any teacher in the district.

"He would be working directly under a certified teacher and do whatever kinds of tasks that teacher determines are most appropriate. For instance, in a gymnasium, if there are games going on, he may take a small group and work with them in a particular activity."

West Texas to be well represented at National Finals Rodeo

Staff Report

LAS VEGAS — Several area cowboys figure to make an impact in the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas when action begins Friday and ends on Dec. 9.

Ty Murray, a former Odessa rider who now hails from Stephenville, enters the NFR competition as the All-Around leader, having amassed $140,831 this year. Murray's money winnings are almost $65,000 more than his nearest competitor, Lewis Field of Elk Ridge, Utah.

Murray was on the Odessa College team two years ago and at only 20 years old was the youngest person to ever win the World Champion title last season. And he is well ahead for this year's crown.

Murray ranks sixth in saddle bronc riding with $46,381, seventh in bareback riding with $40,345, and fifth in bull riding with $54,106.

Kermit's Jim Sharpe, another former Odessa College star, enters the NFR's bull riding competition as the top money winner with $78,643, but does not qualify for the All-Around title since this is his only event.

Still, his bull riding earnings rank him as the third overall money winner for the year behind Murray and Charmayne Rodman of Galt, Calif., who has amassed $85,470 as the leading barrel racer.

Another former OC rodeo team member, Steve Northcott, ranks fifth in team roping with $35,584. Northcott has used different partners this year and it is not known who he will team with in the NFR finals.

Roscoe's Clint Branger ranks second behind Sharpe in the bull riding with $74,656, just $4,000 behind Sharpe. Wacey Cathey of Big Spring ranks 12th in bull riding with $38,112.

Snyder's Tim Segelke ranks fourth in steer wrestling with $42,398 while Andrews' Dan Fisher is fourth in steer roping with $21,754. Snyder's Sherry Johnson ranks 17th in barrel racing with $19,861.

Martial arts organization holding community event

Staff Report

The Midland Martial Arts Association will hold its first community martial arts event Saturday, Dec. 8, at the Midlander Health Club, 225 Corporate Drive.

The event is geared to the comingling of martial arts students in the Permian Basin and will begin at 9 a.m. and end at noon.

The martial arts competition will consist of forms, or kata evaluation and scoring. Each student enrolled will receive a report showing the referee's evaluation of stance, technique, form, speed and power.

The second event will be free sparring. In advance of the competition, each school's instructors will review all rules and regulations for the competition with all students. The student should use his/her skills in the martial arts to the best of his/her ability with the proper attitude and show of sportsmanship.

The cost is $10 per student. Enrollment form and payment must be made at least one week prior to the date of the event to Terri Kent (694-1527). No entry will be allowed on the date of the event.

If you have questions, call Bill Kent (694-1527), Curtis Abernathy (683-8152), Daniel Miller (686-8205), or George Keely (337-3144).

Celts, Hawks all washed up

Associated Press

NBA

The NBA game between the Boston Celtics and the Atlanta Hawks was called early in the second period Wednesday because of a slippery court at Boston Garden.

With Boston ahead 37-22 and 10:30 left in the first half, officials called the game "because of unsafe conditions."

Under NBA rules, the game will be rescheduled at a later date. It was not known if the game would be restarted or picked up where it was stopped.

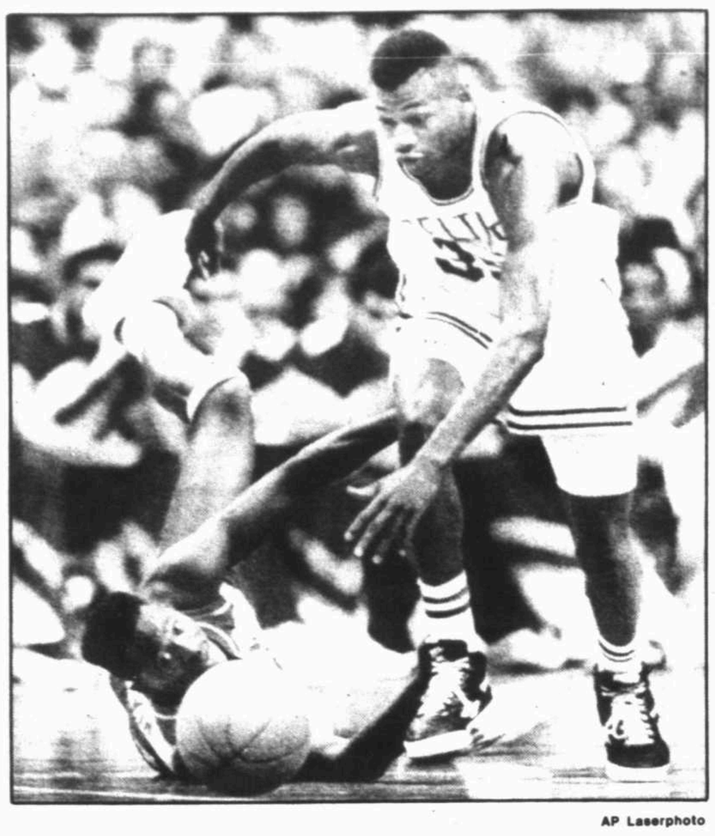

An area at one end of the court inside the 3-point perimeter became slippery as unseasonably warm weather apparently caused condensation of ice under the court.

With Boston ahead 37-20 just 1:15 into the second period, officials called time and Boston Garden workers attempted to wipe up the slippery area.

During a delay of nearly one-half hour, Celtics president Red Auerbach and operations chief Dave Gavitt left their box seats for a closer look at the floor. Officials talked to coaches of both the Celtics and the Hawks.

When play was resumed, Boston's Kevin Gamble was called for a foul and John Battle sank two free throws.

Suddenly, play was whistled dead and first the Hawks and then the Celtics were ordered to their dressing rooms as an announcement was made that the game had been called.

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins goes down on the Garden floor as Boston's Reggie Lewis comes up with a loose ball in the shortened contest. The game was called early in the second quarter as referees determine the floor to be too slippery for playdue to condensation and moisture.

Lakers 97, Spurs 80

James Worthy scored 8 of his 20 points as the Los Angeles Lakers outscored San Antonio 16-2 to open a 24-point lead in the third quarter and won their fifth straight game.

After their worst start in 12 years (1-4), the Lakers improved their record to 7-5.

The Spurs beat the Lakers 110-99 in San Antonio in their season opener, but in the rematch at the Forum, the Lakers took command with the run in the first 4:38 of the third period, opening up a 67-43 lead.

The Spurs, playing their fourth game on the road in six days, threatened briefly in the final quarter, narrowing the gap to 86-74 on Terry Cummings' jumper with 5:23 remaining. But Byron Scott's jumper put the lead at 14 and the Lakers pulled away again.

Worthy also had 11 rebounds for the Lakers, and Sam Perkins had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Heat 97, Nets 79

Willie Burton, scoreless until late in the third period, sparked a decisive 9-0 run that lifted Miami over the New Jersey Nets.

The Heat were paced by Kevin Edwards with 20 points, Rony Seikaly with 17 and Glen Rice with 16.

76ers 116, Pacers 106

Charles Barkley scored 33 points and Hersey Hawkins added 25 as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated Indiana to keep the Pacers winless in seven road games.

The victory was the 76ers' eighth in their last 10 games and improved their home record to 7-1. Indiana lost its third straight game.

Warriors 110, Cavaliers 108

Mitch Richmond scored 24 points and grabbed a rebound that sealed the victory as the Golden State Warriors beat the Cleveland Cavaliers, ending a three-game losing streak.

Pistons 90, Knicks 83

James Edwards scored 22 points, including a pair of key baskets down the stretch, as the Detroit Pistons won their ninth straight game.

The Pistons, 7-0 at home, held the Knicks to 31 second-half points as they handed New York its fourth straight loss and fifth in the last six games.

Hornets 118, Bucks 111

The Charlotte Hornets, who didn't lead until the overtime period, got 21 points apiece from J.R. Reid and Rex Chapman and beat the Milwaukee Bucks for the first time in franchise history.

Bulls 118, Bullets 94

Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 24 points in Chicago's 39-point first quarter, and the Bulls went on to rout the Washington Bullets.

The win was the third straight for the Bulls, who saw all 12 players score and had six in double figures.

Jazz 103, Rockets 92

Karl Malone scored 31 points as the Utah Jazz won the 600th game in franchise history, beating the Houston Rockets.

John Stockton added 14 points and 12 assist for the Jazz, while Jeff Malone and Blue Edwards had 13 apiece. Buck Johnson led Houston with 22 points, Kenny Smith scored 20 and Akeem Olajuwon 19.

Mavericks 107, Clippers 88

Rolando Blackman scored 30 points to become Dallas' all-time leading scorer as the Mavericks snapped a three-game losing streak with a win over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Dallas' inside defense forced the Clippers outside, and Los Angeles shot only 39 percent, 33 of 85, and remained winless on the road at 0-5.

The Clippers have not won at Reunion Arena since Jan. 22, 1986, and are 0-10 in Dallas since then.

Blackman surpassed Mark Aguirre, who scored 13,930 points for Dallas, with a 12-foot jumper with 10:40 left in the second quarter.

PASHA: Horse, rider spend coutless hours on technique

From 1C

"But the thing I really like about dressage is there are always improvements to be made — a transition to smooth out — and Pasha can make those improvements."

Andrea, who trains out of the Davis Training Stables under Deen and Holly Davis, sold her much younger first horse and bought 11-year old Pasha because her own talents had surpassed those of her initial steed. Now horse and rider mature together, and their successes after little over a year of real competition are heightened even more by the fact that Arabians are not expected to master the intricate moves of the ballet-like dressage.

Andrea's next plateau is the Prix St. Georges level, which is two steps removed from Grand Prix. Intermediate I and II fall in between. To continue her move up the riding ladder, Andrea spends endless hours patiently working on Pasha's technique, as well as her own.

"What you have to realize is that people who show on the Grand Prix level train for years and years, and they go into the ring and ride for 15 or 20 minutes. That's it," she says. "This is my last year in Juniors. Next year I'll find myself competing with people that have been riding and competing for 30 years. I think it will be a real challenge.

"I guess it's the competition that I love, and that starts with a love of riding. What success I've had has come from putting my heart into it, and to having great trainers with knowledge of classical training.

"I'm interested in the communication between me and my horse, and dressage is just absolutely beautiful."

MOJO-GATE: Time to look ahead

The Permian booster club member told the Star-Telegram that the cash paid to Gaines and apparently to John Wilkins, his predecessor as head coach, came from advertising proceeds from the coaches' weekly television show broadcast on a local station.

Wilkins, who coached the Panthers from 1973 to 1985 and is now athletic director for the Ector County Independent School District in Odessa, said Tuesday that the payment question had been settled at the Nov. 16 UIL district committee meeting.

"That's behind us," Wilkins said. "We're looking toward the future, not anything in the past. The amount of money was brought forward at the district meeting. It was all taken care of."

ECISD Superintendent Gene Buinger said the Permian program has been "out of compliance for a number of years" because of the booster club payments.

'Huskers upset No. 5 Spartans

Associated Press

Beau Reid hit a 23-foot shot with 2 seconds remaining, giving Nebraska a 71-69 upset of No. 5 Michigan State.

Reid's basket came after Matt Steigenga made a dunk off a lob from Steve Smith to give the Michigan State (1-2) a 69-68 lead with 13 seconds left.

Smith led Michigan State with 27 points. Rich King had 13 points to lead four Nebraska players in double figures.

The Spartans took a three-point lead with 5:50 remaining on a 3-pointer by Smith. But the Cornhuskers (3-1) came back to lead 68-67 on a layup by Tony Farmer with 1:45 remaining.

Michigan State was hurt at the foul line, making only 7 of 19 free throws.

No. 10 Indiana 70, Notre Dame 67

Pat Graham made four free throws in the final 18 seconds as No. 10 Indiana held on after rallying from a 12-point second-half deficit for a victory over Notre Dame.

A 3-point attempt by Elmer Bennett, who scored 18 points, rolled off the rim at the buzzer and left the Irish (2-3) losers in eight of their last 10 games against Indiana (3-1).

Notre Dame's zone defense stymied the Hoosiers, who trailed until Calbert Cheaney hit consecutive baskets to give Indiana a 55-53 lead. The Irish took a 60-58 lead on LaPhonso Ellis' tip-in goal with 3:37 left, but Indiana came back with five straight points and held the lead.

No. 13 Pitt 82, Siena 80

Jason Matthews scored four points in the last 79 seconds and Sean Miller added two free throws as 13th-ranked Pittsburgh held on for a victory over upset-minded Siena.

Pitt took a 79-77 lead with 1:19 left to play when Matthews hit a 3-point shot from the corner. He hit one of two foul shots with 31.5 seconds remaining and Miller made both of his with 10 seconds to go for an 82-77 lead.

Siena (2-2) had a chance to tie the game after Matthews' free throw. But Bruce Schroeder missed a 3-point shot and after Siena controlled the rebound, Doremus Bennerman threw the ball away with 12.5 seconds to go.

Senior forward Bobby Martin led Pitt (3-0) with 21 points and 12 rebounds. Matthews and Darren Morningstar had 15 points apiece. Miller and Brian Shorter added 12 points each.

No. 11 Ohio St. 116
Delaware St. 67

Jim Jackson scored a career-high 29 points and 11th-ranked Ohio State set a team record for points in a victory over Delaware State.

The previous school record for points was set in a 112-89 victory over Butler in 1969 and matched in a 112-80 decision against Ohio University in 1972.

Mark Baker added 19 points and 8 assists, Perry Carter had 15 points and 13 rebounds, Treg Lee scored 12 points, Jamaal Brown 11 and Chris Jent 10 for the Buckeyes (2-0).

Tom Davis scored 29 points for Delaware State (1-1), while Emanual Davis scored 17 points and had eight assists.

No. 17 Georgia 124
W. Kentucky 65

Jody Patton scored 21 points and Litterial Green 20 as 17th-ranked Georgia used runs of 18 and 20 points in its second-best offensive showing ever, routing Western Kentucky.

The Bulldogs scored more points only in a 138-91 victory over Arkansas A&M to open the 1967-68 season.

Georgia (3-0) extended its homecourt winning streak to 14 games, dating back to a loss to Tennessee in the next-to-last game of the 1988-89 season.

Rod Cole added 17 points for the Bulldogs and Marshall Wilson and Reggie Tinch scored 10 apiece.

No. 18 Oklahoma 81
Texas A&M 65

Kermit Holmes scored 27 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, and No. 18 Oklahoma pulled away in the second half as it beat Texas A&M.

The game was the home debut of Texas A&M coach Kermit Davis. The Aggies split their first two games of the season on the road.

Oklahoma (3-1) led 9-1, but the Aggies closed to 15-14. The Sooners increased their lead to 38-30 at halftime and Brent Price's 3-pointer early in the second half gave Oklahoma a 43-32 margin. The Aggies were unable to get within 10 points after that.

Oklahoma's largest lead was 81-62.

NCAA expected to hand down UNLV decision today

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV officials say the NCAA will announce Thursday whether it will modify its ban on postseason play for the defending national basketball champions.

The university has scheduled a news conference for 3 p.m. EST, the same time the NCAA will publicly release its decision in Overland Park, Kan.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions this summer banned the Runnin' Rebels from defending their national championship, the final resolution of a dispute with coach Jerry Tarkanian dating back to 1977.

The committee agreed, however, in October to look at new UNLV evidence in the case, including an offer by Tarkanian to step down for the duration of the postseason tournament if UNLV would be allowed to compete.

UNLV counsel Brad Booke said he had received no indication what the NCAA might do.

Even if the Infractions Committee rules against UNLV, it still has the right to appeal the decision to the NCAA Council.

The decision to ban UNLV from postseason play dates back to 1977, when the NCAA ordered the university to suspend Tarkanian for two years because of violations in the basketball program.

ch, something has to make for his team's glaring lack of speed.

"We're so slow, the grass grows underneath our feet," Wyatt said.

But huge linemen like 242-pound tackle Kyle Golson and 232-pound John Underwood have opened the way for both tailback Michael Voss and fullback Chris Harrison to gain more than 1,000 yards each.

Garden City runs one of the more balanced attacks in Class A ball. Not only has tailback James Soles rushed for more than 1,900 yards and 23 touchdowns this season, but quarterback Shae Scott has completed 62 percent of his passes for 1,529 yards and 17 more TDs.

Scott can throw to a glittering array of players, such as split end Allen Hoelscher, who was beat out for the quarterback job early in the season but has rebounded to catch 32 passes for 503 yards and five touchdowns.

Other favorite receivers include tight end Jim Bob Scott (30-438, four TDs), and wingback Richard Morales (22-388, five TDs).

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The year ahead has all the ingredients to make it unusually rewarding! The most favorable periods for handling money matters are next month, and February and May of 1991. An employment situation will change for the better next June. A romantic relationship will enrich your life in ways you never thought possible. A dream could come true in October. Play your cards close to your chest if thinking about changing jobs.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: musician Chuck Mangione, sportscaster Vince Scully, comedian Garry Shandling, actress Diane Ladd.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Organize your schedule as far in advance as possible. A business or employment situation shows steady improvement. Make plans for future investments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Have faith in your own abilities and you will enjoy a prosperous future. Keep spending within reason, and encourage your loved ones to follow your example. Actions still speak louder than words.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): People trust you and believe what you say. Do not let them down. Ask yourself if you are really on the right track or just following the path of least resistance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Great tact is required when dealing with an overly emotional individual. Try to keep control of the situation so that it does not get out of hand and interfere with business.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep all your business dealings aboveboard. Otherwise, your plans may backfire. It is very important that you be on good terms with an influential associate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Listen carefully, especially when a loved one speaks. Use privileged information wisely. Travel, long-distance messages and your ability to overcome a language barrier are underscored today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your relationships are in the spotlight. Emphasize your ability to get along with almost anyone. If you act in a mature manner, you will be treated with greater respect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The first order of the day is to determine which way the wind is blowing. The next thing to do is to obtain an associate's enthusiastic support. Try your hand at creative writing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your friends are your biggest boosters today! Be sure the information you have obtained is accurate before you make a final decision. Give your partner a well-deserved pat on the back.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It can be risky to change methods without an expert's advice. Afternoon is the best time for business negotiations. Saying nothing could be as harmful as sounding overly vehement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Creative work will boost your spirits sky-high. Plan to spend part of the weekend doing household chores. You can be a pillar of strength to family members who lack your skills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Anything you do to make the family more comfortable will contribute to family unity. Ask your loved ones for suggestions. Shoppers can find good bargains in their own neighborhoods.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are open-minded, idealistic and somewhat shy. It takes them a while to warm up to newcomers. Wise parents will let things develop naturally. Sports-oriented, these Sagittarians tend to be especially fond of baseball and hockey. A favorite conversational trick is to play dumb, watching and appraising others before casting their own opinions. Affectionate but restless, these Sagittarians usually marry later in life — after years of playing the field.

LOSE ONE, WIN TWO

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	4 ♠	5 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♡

This deal is from a match between two teams of internationalists. It was not until much later that one of the players spotted that the deal was a real gem.

South was a little unhappy at not being given a chance to double four spades, although no one could fault North for competing with five hearts. (Indeed, to defeat four spades requires very careful defense.) West elected to lead a trump. Declarer won in hand and ran the nine of diamonds to East's queen. The trump return was taken in dummy and the king of diamonds was led for a ruffing finesse. Whether or not East covered immediately, declarer was eventually able to discard three losers on the good diamonds, using a spade ruff as the entry to dummy.

That all seems normal enough, doesn't it? Take a good look at the diagram before reading on.

Actually, West had found an excellent lead, forcing declarer to use an entry before it could be put to profitable purpose. Have you seen how the defense can prevail?

Suppose that, when declarer runs the nine of diamonds, East does not win the trick. Declarer has won a cheap trick, but is now an entry short to set up the diamonds. South can ruff two spades in dummy, but as long as East covers any diamond led from the table, declarer will have to end up losing two spades and a club.

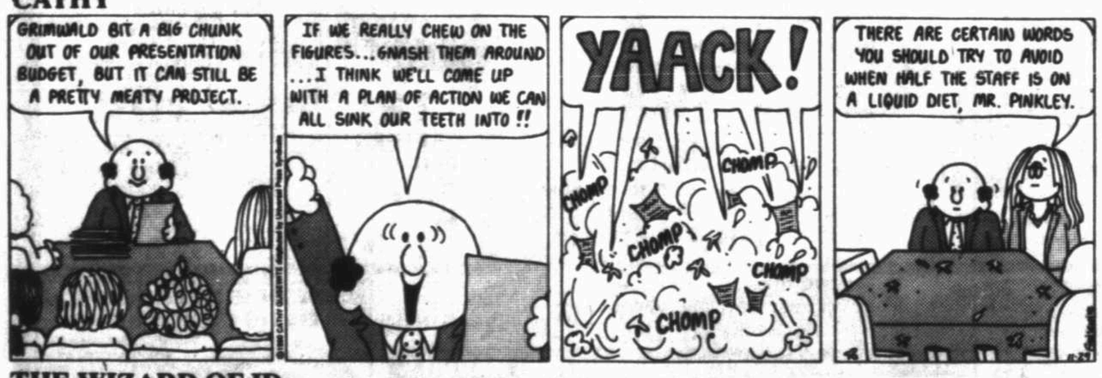

Incidentally, switch the five and six of diamonds, and declarer can always make the contract by overtaking the nine of diamonds with dummy's ten. With the seven and eight dropping under the jack and king, the fourth round will be won by North's six over East's five!

Milli Vanilli's Pilatus arrested on charge of sexual battery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Milli Vanilli's Rob Pilatus was freed from jail on $10,000 bond, but he couldn't escape the media after being arrested for investigation of sexual battery.

Pilatus

"Too much publicity," he said Tuesday night as he left his home with Fabrice Morvan, his partner in the fallen lip-synching duo.

He was arrested early Tuesday at his home, said police spokeswoman Maureen Dambach.

Police said the alleged victim was a 25-year-old woman but gave no other details. Sexual battery is defined as touching "an intimate part of another person while that person is unlawfully restrained."

Pilatus also paid $485 for outstanding traffic violations before being released, police said.

Pilatus refused to comment on the allegations. No charges have been filed against him.

The entertainers last week were stripped of the Grammy Award they won last February for best new artist after admitting they didn't sing of note of their album, "Girl You Know It's True," which sold 7 million copies.

AUSTIN (AP) — Some fans of Willie Nelson say they're planning a fund-raising "Willie Weekend" this week to help the singer with his tax problems.

Nelson

James Hataway, an organizer of "Willie Aid," said as many as a dozen bands have agreed to perform Saturday and Sunday at Austin's Broken Spoke dance hall, where Nelson often has played.

Hataway also said an auction was planned for Sunday, with items donated by singers Johnny Cash and Waylon Jennings, Texas Gov.-elect Ann Richards and U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, among other celebrities.

The Internal Revenue Service earlier this month seized more than 20 of Nelson's properties in four states.

IRS officials say Nelson owed $16.7 million as of Sept. 21. Among properties seized were his Pedernales Country Club and recording studio outside Austin.

Hataway said a "Willie Aid" community trust fund also had been established to accept donations.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former child actor Gary Coleman, who starred in television's old "Diff'rent Strokes" series, has been hospitalized in Arizona with kidney problems, his publicist said Wednesday.

Coleman

Michael Gerety said Coleman was "resting comfortably and in good spirits" and was expected to be released within a week.

Gerety refused to reveal the name of the hospital or the Arizona city, but a Tucson University Medical Center source who requested anonymity said Coleman was in serious but stable condition Wednesday. Coleman, who lives in Tuscon, was admitted under the name Milos Shea, the source said.

The 22-year-old actor was stable and "is expected to make a complete recovery," Gerety said.

Gerety didn't reveal the exact nature of Coleman's illness. The 4-foot-7 actor has had two kidney transplants and has a history of renal disease.

DALLAS (AP) — Filming of a television movie about an aging businessman who develops amnesia was halted when actor George C. Scott developed an unspecified illness, the film's distributor said.

Scott complained of not feeling well over the weekend and production of the ABC-TV movie was halted Monday, said Kim Reed, a spokesman for MGM-UA Productions.

The film, tenatively titled "Mittelmann's Hardware," is being shot in Denton, about 35 miles northwest of Dallas.

Reed said filming will resume Thursday but Scott will return to the set Friday. Reed said he did not know the nature of Scott's illness, but he said it apparently wasn't serious.

"If it was serious, I don't think he'd be back by Friday," Reed said.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Chips Moman, who co-wrote Aretha Franklin's 1967 hit "Do Right Woman — Do Right Man" and produced Willie Nelson's "Always on my Mind" album, has landed in jail for contempt of court.

Moman was ordered to spend 72 hours in jail for failing to return recording equipment and other items to the 3 Alarm Recording Studio, which he opened five years ago at the invitation of city leaders.

Businessman Will Johns, who has tried to buy the studio and has operated it since September 1989, filed a Chancery Court suit because of differences with Moman over the sale.

Chancellor D.J. Alissandratos cited Moman on Monday for failing to comply with a Nov. 1 order to return the equipment.

Moman also produced Elvis Presley's "Suspicious Minds" in 1969.

Prices rise

Staff Report

Crude futures prices showed modest improvement Wednesday.

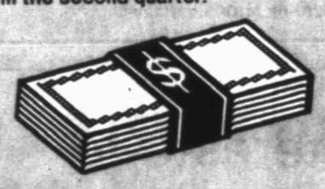

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, January contracts for West Texas Intermediate rose 42 cents to $33.28 per barrel.

Posted prices also rose, with local crude purchasers such as Texaco Trading and Transportation and Permian Corp. raising their posted price 50 cents to $32.50.

Profits jump

WASHINGTON (AP) — After-tax corporate profits jumped 6.7 percent from July through September, the government reported Wednesday. Some analysts said the rise was due primarily to inflation.

Nevertheless, the Commerce Department said the gain was the largest since an 8.9 percent advance in the first quarter of 1988. It followed a 0.6 percent decline in the second quarter.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose Wednesday on comments by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan indicating that U.S. interest rates would remain at their current levels.

Meanwhile, the pound fell Wednesday as traders feared that British interest rates would soon decline under the incoming government of John Major.

Sterling dropped to $1.9695 in New York from late Tuesday's $1.9775.

The dollar jumped to 130.10 Japanese yen in New York from late Tuesday's 128.35.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's quotes, included: 1.4860 German marks, up from 1.48025; 1.2700 Swiss francs, up from 1.12595; 5.0140 French francs, up from 4.9950; 1,118.10 Italian lire, up from 1,111.25; and 1.16445 Canadian dollars, up from 1.16406.

Gold was unchanged on the Commodity Exchange in New York, closing at $385.20 a troy ounce.

Stocks drop

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed little change Wednesday in a choppy session that had traders balking at the uncertainties of a sluggish economy and the Persian Gulf crisis.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell near the close to finish 8.66 points lower at 2,535.15.

GNP up 1.7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew at a 1.7 percent annual rate in the third quarter, a bit less than previously thought, the government reported today. And Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said there had been a "meaningful downturn" in the nation's economic output.

The Commerce Department said its downward revision in the gross national product showed the economy advanced even more slowly from July through September than the 1.8 percent first reported last month.

The GNP is the nation's total output of goods and services and its broadest measure of economic activity.

Recent surveys of professional economic forecasters show that most believe the economy has tumbled into a recession — informally defined as two consecutive declines in the GNP. For many, the question is when it began.

Some analysts contend most of the third-quarter growth was concentrated in the first part of the period and was tapering off at the end after Iraq stormed Kuwait on Aug. 2 and the subsequent oil-price shock to the economy.

Even President Bush and his chief economic adviser, Michael Boskin, have said publicly the economy has weakened in recent months. Bush calls it a "slowdown"; Boskin says it is a "lull."

Greenspan confirms economic recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Wednesday that oil-price problems from the Persian Gulf crisis have pushed the economy into "a meaningful downturn," confirming private analysts' recession talk.

Appearing before the House Banking Committee, he also said the central bank can do little to cushion the effect of higher oil prices on Americans' standard of living.

Separately, the Commerce Department reported that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew at a lackluster 1.7 percent annual rate in the July-September quarter, even worse than the previously reported 1.8 percent rate.

Most private analysts believe the economy has weakened sharply since the quarter ended, an assessment Greenspan confirmed. But he carefully avoided describing the deterioration as a recession, which is defined as a contraction of six months or more in the GNP.

Eastern predicts profitability

■ Given breathing room by a cash infusion Eastern Airline officials claim the company can become profitable by March.

Associated Press

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines officials claimed business surged Wednesday after the carrier gained breathing room with a massive cash infusion from a bankruptcy court escrow account.

The leader of the striking Machinists union, meanwhile, urged new talks to settle the union's 21-month-old strike.

"The phones are ringing off the hook. Consumers are viewing this as a substantial vote of confidence," Eastern boss Martin Shugrue said in New York, where a federal bankruptcy judge Tuesday agreed to Shugrue's request to release up to $135 million from the carrier's escrow fund.

Travel agents said the move had temporarily put aside consumer worries about being stuck if the carrier folded. Shugrue said the new money will ensure the carrier's operations through the end of March, when he says Eastern will be ready to make a profit.

"Eastern is alive and well, thank you," said Henry Yaniz, president of Hollywood Travel.

"The reaction has been incredible," said Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock. "For the first time that a great many of us veteran people have seen in a long time, people are rooting for us."

Shugrue plans a mass meeting with Eastern employees here Thursday night and will exhort them to take advantage of the opportunity the airline's been given.

"It's a Christmas present for everybody who works at Eastern," Ashlock said of U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton R. Lifland's decision. "You can see what this enables us to do. It takes away the uncertainty and gives us a chance to make good on what we know we can do."

Less than two weeks ago, Shugrue had asked the court to release $30 million, saying he would need an additional $50 million in two payments through early January. The carrier's unsecured creditors urged the judge to liquidate the airline instead.

The judge agreed to give Eastern $15 million and another $15 million in early December, provided Eastern was keeping on track with its business projections.

But Eastern said in asking for even more money Tuesday that it had suffered up to $70 million in damage from publicity surrounding the creditors' move to have it closed. Among the problems cited by Eastern were canceled reservations and a demand from American Express that the airline deposit $10 million to cover any losses that could occur if Eastern stopped flying.

Shugrue argued that forcing Eastern to return periodically to withdraw from its escrow account made the airline look as if it could fail at any moment. Lifland agreed and even scolded the creditors for hurting Eastern's business.

Unsecured creditors nevertheless renewed their argument that the carrier cannot become viable and the fund should not be depleted further.

USX head cool to meeting with Icahn

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — USX Corp. Chairman Charles A. Corry is in no hurry to meet with a committee formed by Carl C. Icahn to press the financier's case that the company should separate its steel and energy businesses.

Two professors heading the "USX Shareholders Enhancement Committee" wrote a letter to Corry on Nov. 15 requesting he meet with them to discuss the company's future.

"We believe the best place to begin is with a quiet conversation with you and whomever at USX you deem appropriate to introduce the members of our committee, set forth our plans and discuss USX," they said.

Corry, in a letter released Wednesday and dated Tuesday, requested a detailed agenda of the proposed meeting.

"I have difficulty understanding the purpose of having a meeting as you suggest," Corry said in the letter. "It is difficult to imagine that the views and demands of your committee would be any different than those of Mr. Icahn."

Corry said the company has had many meetings with Icahn and discussed his views "at great length and in significant detail" during the past four years.

Icahn, USX's largest shareholder with a 13.3 percent stake, announced Nov. 14 he had formed the committee to represent shareholders who want to boost the price of USX stock by creating a separate steel unit.

He threatened to nominate the five members of the committee as directors at USX's next annual meeting in May unless the company moves quickly to restructure its steel business.

Icahn said he does not control Pound's and Gilson's actions on the committee, although he said he paid each $25,000 in cash and USX stock. He said he considers the payments campaign contributions for their bid to join the USX board.

Oil firms hit by crisis

DALLAS (AP) — Oilfield service and supply companies in Dallas, Houston and the Permian Basin have lost millions of dollars from the Persian Gulf since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait four months ago.

Some also have employees being held hostage, the first time Middle East unrest has taken such a toll, say officials of the companies who are veterans at doing business in the turbulent region.

Most Texas companies contacted by the Dallas Times Herald have kept employees being held hostage or hiding in Kuwait on the payroll. OGE Drilling Co., which provided drilling supervisors to Kuwait National Oil Co., has had to rely on 13 other oil companies to pay hostages' families.

"I am just trying to keep the company alive," said T.B. O'Brien, president of O'Brien, Goins & Simpson, the Midland-based parent of OGE. "We spent up all our reserves."

Smaller service companies like OGE that relied heavily on operations in Kuwait have been hit hardest by lost equipment inventory, unpaid service bills and canceled orders.

Some of the financial losses suffered by Texas energy companies include:

— a $29 million third-quarter writeoff by Dallas-based Halliburton Co. because of troubles in the Persian Gulf. The company also wrote off $11 million to cover unpaid bills by the Iraqi and Kuwaiti governments for services and equipment.

— a $10 million contract National Oilwell of Houston had with Iraq for complete drilling rigs. The company now is selling them part by part to other customers, said James Fitzgerald, vice president of sales and marketing.

— $4 million to $5 million lost by Houston-based Baker Hughes Drilling Equipment Co. in unpaid bills and equipment inventory from the two countries, President Joel Staff said.

Advising single woman on boosting savings

By Scott Burns

Q. I am a 26-year-old single woman employed as an office manager at an advertising firm and earning $27,000 a year. I net $882 every two weeks. I rent an apartment convenient to work that costs $500 a month with $60 monthly for utilities and $40 for phone. Please don't suggest a roommate — I prefer living alone!

Burns

I have a $2,500 balance on a $4,000 personal bank loan used for buying a dining room table and a full length mink coat. The monthly payment is $248.16. At this rate my loan will be paid off next August. I am able to pay more toward the principal if I so choose.

I drive a 1985 Mazda RX7 with 76,000 miles. It is in good condition but I would like to start planning for a replacement in the next 12 to 18 months. In my situation do you think I would be better to lease or buy a new car?

My credit card bills are about $1,800, $800 of which is on a Visa. Does it make more sense to pay off the cards with the smaller balances or apply the most payment to the card with the highest balance in order to avoid higher interest charges?

My savings account, I am sad to say, has only a $600 balance. What would you suggest to help me save more money? At the rate I'm going now, it seems as though I'm living from paycheck to paycheck and I don't like that feeling at all. How can I make the most of my salary?

A. Congratulations for recognizing that things aren't quite right — you ARE living from paycheck to paycheck. My first suggestion is that you set some goals that will increase your peace of mind: (1) pay off your credit card debt; (2) build your minimum savings to about $5,400 — 3 months of income; (3) save at least 5 percent of your income; (4) establish a goal of having your interest income exceed your interest expenses; and (5) plan a reward for yourself such as buying the new car when you have met the other goals.

Here's how you might do this:

You Won't Spend Money You Don't See. So arrange for a payroll savings deduction or an automatic transfer from checking to savings at your bank. Have your check reduced by 5 percent or about $45 a paycheck.

Consider Moving. Your cost of shelter, at $560 a month, absorbs too much of your income. Look for an apartment that rents for about $100 a month less. (Yes, I know this is easier said than done!)

Put Away Your Credit Cards. Don't use them until you have paid off your debt. You can do this in about a year at $150 a month.

Use Your Extra Payroll Checks for Vacations. If you are paid every two weeks you receive 26 checks a year. Organize your finances to run on two checks a month. You will have an extra paycheck two months a year. This money could be reserved for special major expenses such as gifts, vacations, etc. (The less visible message here is that you don't take the vacation unless you have the cash up front.)

You'll be able to do this by making a budget and sticking to it, deciding what you are going to do... and what you aren't going to do.

What's the reward?

Peace of mind. And more money to spend on yourself. Your $1,800 in credit debt, at 18 percent, costs $324 a year in interest. Consumer interest, however, is no longer tax deductible and you are in the 28 percent tax bracket. You also have to pay employment taxes of 7.5 percent bringing the total tax burden to 35.5 percent.

This means you have to earn $502 before taxes to pay your $324 in consumer interest. Consumer interest has just become TOO expensive.

When you buy a car, buy it rather than lease it. The longer the term of the lease the greater the odds you will be "upside down," having to pay additional money if you want to get out of the lease. Cars may not be a good way to build equity

Chevron to produce oil from off California coast

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Despite an unresolved conflict with environmentalists, the Chevron Corp. said Tuesday that it would begin producing oil from a large reserve off the central California coast.

The oil field has become a symbol of the clash between the nation's increased need for domestic sources of energy in the wake of the Persian Gulf crisis and concerns about spills and other pollution from the drilling and transportation of oil.

The field, 10 miles off the coast northwest of Santa Barbara, is the largest oil reserve found in the United States since the giant Prudhoe Bay field in Alaska was discovered in 1969.

Chevron manages the project, known as Point Arguello, in behalf of 17 other oil companies that together have invested $2.5 billion in drilling and building offshore rigs to tap the oil.

But the project has been idle since its completion three years ago because of objections from local governments and environmentalists to Chevron's plan to use tankers to transport the oil.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stocks in 'street name' pose no great risks

By Bill Doyle

Q. Some time ago, I allowed a brokerage firm to hold my stocks, rather than get the certificates myself. The dividends are deposited in a money market account. It is rather nice, as I receive a monthly statement, showing all my holdings and a breakdown for income tax purposes.

However, I am not completely comfortable with this arrangement. I feel somewhat controlled by my broker and wonder if I am the owner of the stocks on the books of the issuing companies. How safe is this arrangement? Is there any risk?

Doyle

A. There always is some risk in owning stocks — that the market value of the shares might fall. But that risk is no greater in your present arrangement that it would be if you had possession of the stock certificates, registered in your name.

Your name does not appear on the record books of the companies as the owner of those stocks. The brokerage firm's name does. That's standard procedure in "street name" and "asset management" accounts such as yours. Don't let that shake you up. The brokerage is the "owner of record" because it is acting as your "nominee." You are the "beneficial owner" — the real owner — as proved by the statements you receive from the brokerage.

Feeling controlled by a broker is a frequent and often justified gripe of investors who have street name accounts. The broker knows exactly what stocks and how much money you have in the account and might be tempted to recommend sales and purchases to produce fat commissions. But you can always "just say no."

If the brokerage firm fails. The Securities Investor Protection Corp. will return to each customer his or her holdings in brokerage accounts up to $500,000, including up to $100,000 in cash. So your stocks are safe on that score. Of course, SIPC does not protect you from losses, if the market values of your stocks have fallen.

Q. My wife and I had our stock certificates in joint names. After her death, there was no charge to have the stocks put into my name and held by our brokerage house. I was told there would be a substantial cost to have the certificates registered in my name and delivered to me.

Is that correct?

A. That depends on how you define "substantial." You could have handled the transfer details yourself by filling out the assignment form on the back of each certificate, having your signature there guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company, and sending each certificate to the transfer agent for that stock, along with the following:

A certified copy of your court appointment as executor or administrator of your wife's estate; a notarized affidavit of domicile stating your wife's address; an inheritance and/or estate tax waiver, if required in your state.

The necessary papers are available your county courthouse. By most definitions, the costs are small.

Q. A friend says I can obtain certificates for my stocks now held by a brokerage firm, at little cost, by requesting a form from each company. True?

A. You don't have to go to even that much bother. Simply tell the broker to have your stocks registered in your name and the certificates sent to you. That's known as "ordering them out."

Unless your stocks are in a margin account on which you have borrowed money through the brokerage firm, you are the 100 percent owner of those stock. If it is a margin account, you will have to settle up your debt.

The certificates should reach you in short order. One week's time is plenty for the transferal of stocks out of street name at a brokerage and delivery of the certificates.

Oryx sells interests to Arco

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy Co. sold its interest in a central California oilfield to Atlantic Richfield Co. for $642 million, Oryx said Wednesday.

The sale virtually completes a divestment program Oryx launched to pay off the $1 billion debt it incurred in the September buyout of its founding family.

Arco is buying Oryx's interest in the Midway-Sunset field in Kern County, Calif., which recently has produced 23,000 barrels a day for Oryx. The company estimates the field's proven reserves at 140 million barrels.

Arco will pay $588 million in cash and assume $54 million worth of debt for the properties and related facilities, including interest in a cogeneration plant.

The sale of the oil property shifts the company's energy mix closer to 50 percent crude oil and 50 percent natural gas, said Oryx spokesman Tom Sullivan. Oryx has been decreasing its reliance on crude oil for more than a year.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks showed modest gains today in choppy, cautious trading after the latest set of economic data was released and the Federal Reserve chairman acknowledged the economy had entered a "meaningful downturn."

Analysts said some investors were optimistic interest rates could be heading lower following the government's release today of new economic data and testimony by Fed chief Alan Greenspan before the House Banking Committee.

The Commerce Department said the economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew at a 1.7 percent annual rate in the third quarter, a downward revision from the 1.8 percent first reported last month.

GNP: Up slightly

(From 8C)

Each quarter's GNP is revised twice as more complete data becomes available. The final revision in the third-quarter report is due next month.

The changes meant the total GNP, the broadest measure of the nation's economic activity, was growing at an annual rate of $4.17 trillion in the third quarter, when adjusted for inflation. That was a gain of $18.0 billion over the second quarter.

Despite the third-quarter growth, many economists believe the recession began during the period — if not before.

Elliott Platt, an economist with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette securities dealers in New York, notes that the U.S. economy has experienced growth during the first quarter of five of the eight recessions since World War II.

Thus, he says, the 1.7 percent growth rate in the third quarter does not preclude the possibility that the recession began during that quarter.

CONFIRM: Recession

(From 8C)

"All indications are that a meaningful downturn in aggregate output occurred as we moved through October into November," Greenspan told the committee.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., responded, "This seems to me to be a nice way of saying we've entered a recession."

Greenspan cautioned, however, that "we won't know whether it is the beginning of a recession or just some aberration in economic activity for quite a while. ... We couldn't conceivably know for certain until April or May of next year."

"It is clearly the case ... that the world out there, when you look at the hard data, is not in as bad shape as it feels," he said.

Greenspan conceded, though, that the GNP will contract in the current quarter if the decline begun in October persists.

CASH: Eastern gets reprieve

(From 8C)

The unsecured creditors, who include aircraft companies, banks, labor unions and others owed an estimated $1 billion by Eastern, are expected to meet soon to determine their next move, but no time for the meeting had been set as of late Wednesday afternoon.

"There are a lot of broad options. I'm not in a position to discuss them," lawyer Adam Harris said.

Eastern would have only an estimated $37 million available in its escrow account after the current draw, but Shugrue said it won't be needed. His "corporate rate" strategy, in which Eastern has nearly doubled its first-class cabin space and offered business travelers discount fares, is helping Eastern build up its passenger base, he said.

and savings but the more equity you have in a car, the less you will pay in consumer interest.

While it may seem contradictory, I suggest that when you have paid off your consumer debt and are ready for a new car, you should borrow the maximum amount for the maximum term so that you can add most of the cash you get for selling your car to your savings account. This will help you get to achieve a reasonable position faster. You can get all this done in 12 to 24 months.

Conoco ups spending

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Higher crude prices should allow Conoco to increase capital spending by about $300 million next year, according to Conoco President Constantine S. "Dino" Nicandros.

Conoco expects to spend about $2 billion in 1991 to look for and develop oil and gas and to upgrade "down stream" facilities such as refineries, Nicandros told reporters Tuesday after a lunch address before the Forum Club in Houston.

"We're pretty much going at full blast," Nicandros said, with Conoco plowing most of its earnings back into capital projects. The extra revenues it has collected since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait will make more funds available next year.

Nicandros said about 75 percent of the capital budget will go into exploration and production next year, although new clean air regulations will force the company in coming years to invest larger amounts in programs to make its refineries burn cleaner.

While Conoco is benefiting from today's higher oil prices, Nicandros cautioned that crude prices could tumble next spring if the Persian Gulf situation is resolved, Kuwaiti and Iraqi oil comes back on the market and other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members refuse to cut back to normal output levels.

Prices could temporarily fall as low as $15 a barrel next spring, he said, but that should be short-lived, because OPEC has a spare production capacity cushion of only 7 per cent. Nicandros and other oil executives are counting on oil prices in the range of $20 to $25 a barrel through the mid-1990s.

If the world economy continues to grow through the mid-1990s, that spare capacity will be needed, he said.

Many are hoping the Persian Gulf standoff and the sharp price spike will result in a new U.S. energy policy that encourages domestic exploration and development, but Nicandros said he's not counting on that.

Lawsuit claims Silverado loan defaulter hid assets

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A former developer who said he was penniless after defaulting on $106 million in debts from Silverado Savings & Loan has hidden more than $6 million in property under his wife's name, a lawsuit contends.

Bill Walters' failure to repay the loans helped bring on the 1988 collapse of Denver-based Silverado, regulators say.

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Santa Ana by a court-appointed trustee, contends that much of the property transfer occurred just days after Walters married in 1986.

Walters told a congressional committee earlier this year that he was broke.

Wigs 'big, hairy deal' for whole new generation

By Francine Parnes

Wigs, the season's versatile accessory that helps you cheat the slim pickin's of nature, are turning heads.

The fall '90 fashion shows last spring were full of fabulous fakes. Chanel models sported long, straight falls with '60s-style headbands, and Thierry Mugler's pack wore hairpieces in blatantly unnatural colors.

Once the domain of an older generation, synthetic hair is now in vogue among the young and trendy. Madonna wore an "I Dream of Jeannie" blond braid during her "Blond Ambition" tour. Supermodel Naomi Campbell owns more than 30 hairpieces.

"Wigs are enormously popular because you can change your personality instantly," says Steven Field, who sells an impressive array of wigs at Patricia Field, an eclectic New York boutique of radical chic. "You can become a slut, a good girl, Marie Antoinette — or simply put on a long straight brown wig with bangs if you can't grow your own."

"Last year it was chic to cut your hair short, this year the trend is very long," says B.L. Ochman, spokesman for Wig Information Services, a New York-based clearinghouse. "Considering that hair grows only one inch per month, wigs are the way to go. Women want to have big heads of hair like Cher, but even Cher has wigs and a stylist."

If you're really serious about looking like Cher, Patricia Field has Cher wigs, both '60s straight and '90s curly, about $95 each.

Also popular this season are smaller synthetic hairpieces. They can be attached to real hair with decorative combs to add body and fullness or to dress up a hairdo for a night out.

"Particularly with headbands, the hairpieces are extremely popular," says Edward Oberhaus, senior vice president of Kaneka America Corp., which supplies Kanekalon, the synthetic fiber used in making 80 percent of today's wigs and hairpieces.

You can buy a hairpiece with headband attached or buy the hairpiece and use your own headband. For a quick-fix hairdo on a busy day, pin on bangs or a braid.

Retail wig sales nationwide are expected to increase 15 percent to $450 million this year, acccording to Oberhaus. Even big retailers like Macy's New York are stocking up: in September they opened a '60s-style accessories and wig department.

The boom in wigs stems from improvements in technology, a far cry from the wigs of the '60s that were heavy, hot and difficult to style and clean.

Nowadays, Velcro tabs at the nape of the neck adjust wigs to different head sizes. And today's Kanekalon is lifelike, easy to wash and feather light.

"The styles that we made in the '60s for 5 to 8 ounces we're making today for 2.5 to 3 ounces," says Henry Margu, president of Henry Margu Inc., a Philadelphia wig maker. "You don't even feel them on your head. And you can style the wigs easily with mousse, gels, setting lotions and sprays, just like real hair."

Fiber wigs cost less than those made from human hair. A pound of Kanekalon costs $20, compared with $600 for human hair, according to Ochman. And they are easier to style.

Wigs can add ease to style

Associated Press

When shopping for wigs, check your inhibitions at the door. Try the short and the long, the straight and the wavy, and the full range of colors. After all, a wig is the perfect way to create a new image with no commitment beyond a few dollars.

Look for a wig that brushes and styles easily, says Steven Margu, vice president of Henry Margu, Inc., a Philadelphia-based wig maker. Fibers should be soft, like natural hair, and you should be able to pull the wig out of the box, shake it, run your fingers through it and put it on, he says.

Put on a wig from front to back, like a bathing cap, placing it just behind the front hairline, says B.L. Ochman, spokesman for Wig Information Services, a New York-based clearinghouse. Comb out a few strands of your own hair and mix them with some of the fine baby hairs on the top and sides of the wig to create a soft, natural-looking hairline.

If you follow manufacturers' instructions, caring for a wig can be easier than caring for your hair. Most wigs require only a quick rinse in a mild shampoo — as often as your own hair. Let the wig drip dry and use a pick or brush to style it. Combing or brushing the wig before it is completely dry can loosen the curl. Brush it an inch or two at a time, starting from the bottom. Never use heated styling tools on synthetic wigs. Hair spray is fine.

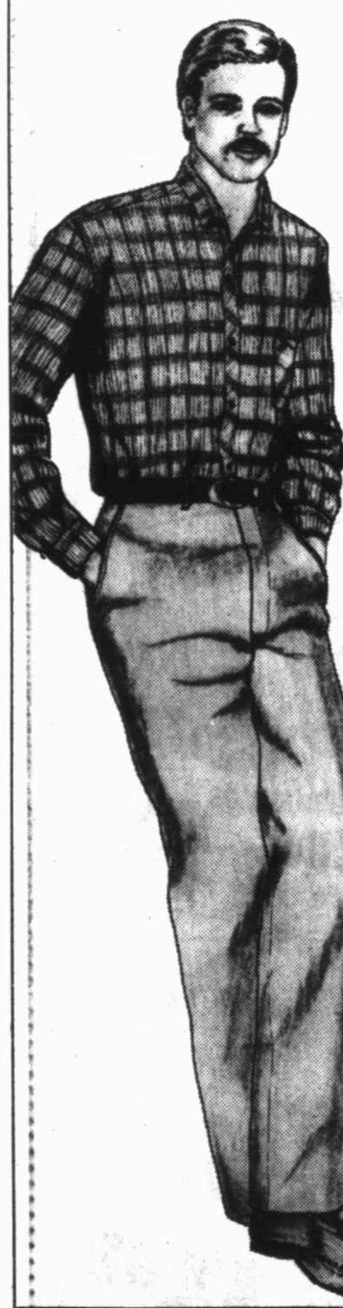

Margu suggests storing your wig in a box where it won't get crushed. "And then when the mood strikes, shake it, toss it on and you're ready to go."

DEAR ABBY

Nursing no longer considered to be women's work alone

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband chose to be a nurse because he truly loves to care for sick people, and no health professionals spend more time with the people they care for than nurses.

Van Buren

He anticipated some kidding and even some possible discrimination from the female nurses he works with, but we never expected what we've heard from complete strangers.

Someone said, "Oh, what a sissy job for a man." Another person had the nerve to ask if he had flunked out of medical school!

Abby, he is very good at his job. The patients and co-workers have raved about his competence and caring.

Nursing has come a long way since Florence Nightingale, and because of dedicated men like my husband, it will progress even further. — PROUD NURSE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Male nurses are not as rare as most people might assume. According to Dr. P. Rosenfeld of the National League for Nursing, there are currently more than 67,000 male nurses in the nation, and the number is growing each year.

This year, at Columbia University's School of Nursing, one-third of the students are male.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from "Baffled in Vancouver," whose 49-year-old husband began acting peculiarly. She said he went outside to turn on the lawn sprinkler in full view of the neighbors wearing only his boxer shorts. Then she came home from work to find him preparing supper in nothing but a T-shirt. She said such conduct was totally out of character for him.

Thank God you advised her to get her husband to a doctor for a complete examination from the neck both ways.

My 47-year-old husband also began acting peculiarly. I wasted a year being angry at him because he refused to see a doctor.

When his judgment became visibly impaired, I practially dragged him to our family physician. (I had told the doctor in advance about the alarming changes in my husband's behavior.)

The physician referred him to a neurologist, and after extensive testing, it was discovered that my husband had a rare form of dementia called "Pick's disease," which is similar to Alzheimer's but strikes people at a much younger age — between 40 and 60. Inappropriate behavior and poor judgment are early symptoms, and like Alzheimer's, there is no known cure.

Abby, I don't want to frighten "Baffled," but if her husband has either Alzheimer's or Pick's disease, the sooner she gets involved in a support group, the easier it will be for all concerned. — BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from Dan in Chula Vista. He told how he had made a tape recording of his neighbor's barking dog, then played it for the neighbor the next day.

A friend of mine did the same thing. Only he recorded his neighbor's shouting and cursing with his wife in the wee hours of the morning. Then he played it back under their bedroom window at 6 a.m.! That was the end of those late-night shouting matches. — DONNA FROM ALBUQUERQUE

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Frederico's ensemble features a full, flared skirt of silk morie and a bodice of mesh sequins on spandex.

Former military chiefs urge caution in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former U.S. military chiefs urged caution in the Persian Gulf on Wednesday, even as President Bush sent Secretary of State James A. Baker III to press the United Nations for formal support of a possible attack against Iraq.

"I counsel patience," said retired Adm. William Crowe, who was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under President Reagan.

"War is not neat, it's not tidy, and once you resort to it, it's uncertain and it's a mess."

Retired Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the joint chiefs under President Carter, voiced concern with the latest troop deployment, in which Bush is sending 200,000 more to bolster the 230,000 already in the gulf and to add an offensive capability.

Jones said his fear "isn't that we might choose to fight, but rather that the deployment might cause us to fight — perhaps prematurely and perhaps unnecessarily."

The former chiefs' comments were generally in line with those of lawmakers whose objections have risen in volume as a shooting war has seemed more likely.

Post-adjournment hearings by a range of committees are occurring, though top Bush officials won't testify until next week, after the U.N. Security Council action.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate minority leader, said Wednesday evening the chances were "better than 50-50" for a special session to deal with the Gulf.

"The question is how much pain we administer and how quickly and whether we do it with the embargo or the use of force," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., whose Armed Services Committee began its hearings Tuesday.

Meanwhile, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt broke with the administration and stepped ahead of other party leaders on the subject of military confrontation with Saddam, announcing his opposition to the use of U.S. military force.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the former Senate Democratic leader, told Armed Services Committee colleagues he believed the world would welcome "patience rather than impetuousness" before any U.S. decision to go to war.

This came just hours after Gephardt, D-Mo., formally announced his opposition to the use of force during a breakfast speech to a U.S. Chamber of Commerce audience.

On Capitol Hill, Crowe and Jones recommended that the United States give economic sanctions against Iraq a year to 18 months to work before opting for military force.

And Crowe said that Bush must consider the future implications of attacking an Arab nation in the tenuous Middle East situation.

Medical strategies explained

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Army medical leaders Wednesday explained their strategies in Operation Desert Shield and said quick alerts and partial call-ups of reserves have caused problems.

Maj. Gen. John E. Major, commanding general of the Army Health Services Command, outlined mission priorities for deputy commanders and chiefs of staffs attending a medical conference on the Persian Gulf buildup.

Major said Army medical facilities must ensure that deployed units are fully staffed with "good people;" supply deployed personnel; and prepare hospitals for casualties.

"We still have a long way to go with that," he said of the third priority, receiving casualties.

"I don't want anybody to relax because it's going to get worse — and I think everybody knows that — and not better."

In participating in Desert Shield, Col. Jim Sawyer, deputy chief of staff for operations at the command, said Army medical units have encountered some difficulties.

Quick alert times have posed problems for reserve medical personnel forced to rapidly leave their private sector jobs.

"The alert time for these nurses and physicians basically amounted to three days," Sawyer said. "It's very hard to close an active practice in that time."

At times, reception of the deployed medical personnel, including arranging their meals, cots, money and other necessities, has been difficult, Sawyer said.

Sports festival set for Iraq

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirty amateur entertainers and athletes headed to Iraq on Wednesday for a sports festival they hope will defuse the Persian Gulf crisis.

"We're going to make every attempt to issue into all the war rhetoric some peace rhetoric," organizer John Quigley said before the U.S. group boarded a flight to Tokyo, where they will continue on to Iraq.

The Peace Wave International Sports and Music Festival will be held Dec. 2-3 in Baghdad. The festival expects 300 participants, including delegations from the Soviet Union, Japan, Venezuela and possibly Jordan.

Between performances the group's members, who are mostly from the Los Angeles area, will deliver short speeches urging peace, Quigley said.

They hope to bring home some of the Americans held hostage, although Iraqi officials have made no promises, he said.

The trip is sponsored by Kanji Inoki, a member of Japan's senate and a leader of the Sports and Peace Party.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
