Scaled-down arms sale to Saudis approved

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan narrowly saved his plan to sell weapons to Saudi Arabia from a Senate defeat by dropping Stinger missiles from the package and then appealing to Congress to not embarrass him before the world.

Some senators said those two factors were the major reasons why the Senate barely failed Thursday to override Reagan's veto of a congressional resolution blocking the sale. The override vote was 66-34, one short of the two-thirds required for a successful veto override.

The vote means Reagan can go ahead with the reduced package of $265 million worth of Sidewinder air-to-air missiles and Harpoon anti-ship missiles. The weapons will be delivered starting in 1989.

The Saudis originally wanted $1.1 billion worth of planes, tanks and missiles, but the request was scaled back to a package of missiles when congressional opposition arose.

Last month, the package was reduced again, with the Stinger anti-aircraft weapons dropped from the deal after both the Republican-controlled Senate and Democratic-run House voted by overwhelming margins to bar the sale. Congress has never blocked a major arms sale.

Reagan vetoed the disapproval resolution and then lobbied hard to sustain his veto, capping his effort with a breakfast meeting at the White House hours before the vote Thursday. About 75 senators attended.

Needing to win in only one chamber, he concentrated on the Senate. The House will not vote now.

Eight senators switched from opposing Reagan last month to support. Reagan also picked up the votes of four senators who were absent last month. On the override motion, 42 Democrats and 24 Republicans supported it, while 29 Republicans and five Democrats stood with Reagan.

One of the eight switches was Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., who said he voted with Reagan because the Stingers were taken out of the package.

"I felt that was enough of a concession to make it a close call on my vote," Armstrong said. "It was a fairly close decision for me, but unless there is a clear-cut reason to vote against the president on a foreign policy issue, I tend to give him the benefit of the doubt. The prestige of the presidency is important."

Similar sentiments were voiced by Sens. J. James Exon, D-Neb., and Chic Hecht, R-Nev., two other switches who noted that Reagan's image abroad was on the line.

"That makes it a considerably different situation" than last month, Exon said.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Reagan's chief lieutenant in the fight, said later, "We knew going in we had 33 votes. We didn't know about the 34th."

Man becomes 11th storm victim

Associated Press

A 72-year-old man who drowned Thursday when his fishing boat capsized during a sudden storm has become the 11th victim of storms that have struck the state during the past 12 days.

Motorists were stranded in low-water crossings and lakes and reservoirs were filled Thursday as the storms, which had caused 10 deaths since the weekend of May 25, prompted flash flood warnings and watches. Later in the day, most areas cleared partially except for the eastern two-thirds of the state.

More thunderstorms were forecast for North and West Texas today, with scattered thunderstorms predicted for South Texas.

Forrest W. Brooks of Killeen drowned while fishing on Lake Buchanan. His companion was found clinging to the chain of one of the dam gates and was rescued by other boaters, said Bill Blackburn, Llano County game warden.

Brooks was fishing near the north end of Buchanan Dam around noon when the 30-minute storm arose, kicking up six-foot waves and causing the boat to capsize, Blackburn said.

An early-morning downpour was blamed for an accident injuring at least two people when a tractor-trailer rig stuck a stalled car on I-45 in Ellis County and numerous other accidents — but no fatalities — were reported.

Meanwhile, San Antonio residents tried to recover from flooding that forced evacuations and closed roadways, businesses and schools on Wednesday.

At least 6 inches of rain fell on San Antonio between midnight and noon Wednesday, flooding highways, low water crossings, and driving at least 2,000 residents from their homes.

Turnout forecast at about 10 percent

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — About 477,000 Democrats and 318,000 Republicans will enter the polling booths in Saturday's runoff primary elections, Secretary of State Myra McDaniel predicted Thursday.

Those figures represent about 10 percent of the state's registered voters. The GOP runoff is the first statewide second primary for the Republican Party in recent history, Ms. McDaniel said.

The secretary of state based her Democratic predictions on turnout in past Democratic runoffs and her GOP estimate on turnout in the May 3 Republican primary and past first Republican primaries.

Both parties will hold runoffs in the Railroad Commission race. The Democratic candidates are state Sen. John Sharp of Victoria and Dallas oil and gas consultant P.S. "Sam" Ervin. On the Republican ballot, state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston faces John Thomas Henderson of Austin.

Other Democratic runoffs include:

— For Supreme Court, place 1: Sen. Oscar Mauzy of Dallas vs. San Antonio appellate Judge Shirley Butts.

— For Supreme Court, place 2: Incumbent Justice Robert M. Campbell of Waco vis Austin appellate Judge Jim Brady.

— For Supreme Court, place 4: Incumbent Justice Raul Gonzalez of Corpus Christi vs. former state Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa.

— For Court of Criminal Appeals, place 1: Dallas lawyer George "Jorge" Martinez vs. Denton lawyer Rusty Duncan.

Other Republican races include:

— For lieutenant governor: Gonzalez businessman David Davidson vs. Kingwood attorney Aaron Bullock.

— For attorney general: San Antonio district Judge Roy Barrera vs. former Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh.

— For land commissioner: Kemp dance hall manager M.D. Anderson Jr. vs. Tyler teacher Grady Yarbrough.

Voters who did not participate in the May 3 primaries may vote in either party's runoff elections. Those who cast ballots in the first primary may not switch parties for the runoff.

Polling places will open at 7 a.m. Saturday and close at 7 p.m.

Midlanders to vote at 17 polling places

From Staff Reports

Seventeen polling places have been set up for voting in Saturday's Republican Party and Democratic Party run-off elections.

In addition to statewide runoffs in both parties, local Republicans will be picking a county commissioner nominee between C. Wallace Craig and Guy McCrary and the 31st Congressional District nominee between Lamar Smith and Van Archer.

The voting sites are:

Groups suggest ways to use federal funds

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Community groups proposed plans for everything from a tutorial center for the unemployed to anti-litter films for school children Thursday night as eight groups and four city departments vied for $659,850 in federal funds to improve the city.

The groups' requests totaled more than $1 million for use of the Department of Housing and Urban Development funds. The money is used to promote community development and must be used in the east and south side of Midland.

James Fuller of the Black Advisory Council told the Planning and Zoning Commission the south side needs a tutorial center for the unemployed and underemployed to teach them technical skills and to improve their academic skills. Fuller also proposed a senior citizen's center to be located next to the tutorial center. The organization's $276,000 request was the largest of all the groups.

"We need to create an atmosphere that would encourage as well as motivate," Fuller said.

"It is our concern to eliminate the stigma that is associated with the unemployed in that area," he said.

The Eastside Economic Development Task Force made a for a $200,000 small business revolving loan fund and $22,000 to organize a small business incubator.

"This project would create and retain a lot of jobs in the area," said Manuel Carrasco of the task force.

A small business incubator would allow companies to share secretaries and other services.

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children requested $75,000 from the commission to add to $450,000 in private funds raised to build a new shelter. The shelter would house between 64 to 72 women and their children, while the present shelter only has the capacity for 32 people. The new shelter would also provide two transitional apartments and would be completed by May 1987.

In March, 61 women and children came to the shelter. The overflow was placed in hotel rooms around the city, which are not as safe as the central location, said Pam Williams, of the center.

"The house will not hold the number of women who are coming...," said Cheryl Franklin, the center's executive director.

Sesquicentennial longhorn dies despite back treatments

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas U.S.A., the Sesquicentennial longhorn, died suddenly, despite acupuncture treatments, get well wishes and hopes that he would recover from a broken back and walk again.

The 1,500-pound animal was partially injured in a May fall but had shown some progress while undergoing acupuncture and hydrotherapy treatments at a veterinary clinic in Bristow, Okla.

"They gave him water this morning (Thursday). He drank it and laid his head over and that was it," said Larry P. Smith II of LS Ranches, who brought the longhorn to Texas on loan for the state's 150th birthday.

Since the accident, the bull's plight had prompted an outpouring of sympathy from people across the state, Smith said.

He said several people called asking about the bull's progress. About 100 Tarrant County Junior College history teachers and students had sent the bull a get well card.

Smith said the bull was famous for more than the state-shaped marking emblazoned on his forehead.

"The blood of Texas flowed through his veins and a heart as big as Texas kept him alive against tall odds. He was the epitome of a Texan — proud, strong, independent and a survivor. His memory will live on."

'Big Flood' may not be enough to end drought in West Texas

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Even though San Angelo just wrapped up its wettest May ever — even wetter than "the Big Flood" of 1884 — not everyone agrees the drought has ended.

"You never break a drought in West Texas," said San Angelo City Manager Stephen Brown. "Sometimes it is less dry than other times. Make no mistake: we will go through the dry spells again."

Tom Green County's annual average rainfall is only 17.53 inches, but through the first four months of the year, the precipitation was far off even that mark. Only 1.64 inches of rain had fallen in 1986 through the end of April.

But gully-washing rains fell the past two weeks, and May's total was 7.28 inches, most ever for the month. By Thursday morning, an additional 1.20 inches of rain had fallen in June, raising the total for 1986 to 10.02 inches.

"Our drought is broken or at least bent pretty bad," said Elmer Kelton, author of "The Time It Never Rained," a novel on the 1950s West Texas drought.

"People say we're getting back to normal, but normal is when things are dry," Kelton said. "We're always going to need one more rain."

The previous record May rainfall 102 years ago is the reason San Angelo is now the county seat of Tom Green County, records show. The old county seat, the community of Ben Ficklin, and many of its residents, washed away in the rain-swollen Concho River when heavy spring rains fell in 1884.

"No doubt about it, we've had periods of drought in the past six years," said Tom Green County Extension Agent Rex Jones. "I think you could say it was a drought-busting rain."

Jones said the rainfall has soaked to the deep soil, which is a drought-breaker by his definition.

"When the soil moisture is deficient then it's in a drought but in West Texas you don't think of it being a drought until it's several months or a year."

Some say it never rains a lot in West Texas so droughts are a perpetual condition.

"Right now, the Good Lord has provided rain," Brown said. "With cloud-seeding, and with some of the lakes deliberately kept low to catch runoff, we have been able to take advantage of that rain for the short term."

Kelton agreed that dry conditions are the status quo in the western part of the state.

Many people use a common sense definition of when droughts are over, saying a drought is over when grass recovers and water supplies are replenished.

"In a sense it's over when it rains," Kelton said.

Woman testifies she was shocked with cattle prod

KERRVILLE (AP) — A woman who once lived on a Hill Country ranch that is the focus of an organized crime trial testified that one of the defendants handcuffed her to a bed and poked her about 20 times with an electric cattle prod.

Sheri Hamilton, 23, also testified Thursday she saw the same man, Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., use a cattle prod on a ranch worker in a lengthy torture session.

The state claims that man, one-eyed Anthony Bates, later died after days of similar torture sessions at the Ellebracht ranch.

Mrs. Hamilton's testimony came in the state's organized crime case against Ellebracht, 33; his father Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55, and former ranch worker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21.

The three are charged with conspiracy in connection with the alleged March 1984 abduction and slaying of Bates, 27.

The state claims the Ellebrachts lured hitchhikers including Bates to their Hill Country ranch with the promise of work, then forced them to stay.

Prosecutors also allege Bates' body was burned in a field at the Ellebracht ranch. Charred human bone fragments were found in a burned out spot on the ranch after the Ellebrachts were arrested.

Mrs. Hamilton testified she moved to the ranch in December 1984 to marry Mark Hamilton, who also is charged.

Her duties, she said, were to cook and clean for the Ellebrachts. Her husband cut wood on the ranch.

At one point, she said, the younger Ellebracht handcuffed her to a bed in his mobile home and shocked her about 20 times with a cattle prod.

"I asked him not to do it. He didn't say anything. He was laughing. Joyce was standing there watching," Mrs. Hamilton said of the younger Ellebracht's wife.

"To me, it felt like labor pains," she said.

Later, she said, she saw the younger Ellebracht, her husband, and ranch workers Marty Miller, Caldwell, and Darryl Hunsaker take turns using the cattle prod on Bates.

"He was mostly screaming. They were just telling him to say stuff. He was saying them," Mrs. Hamilton said, adding she could not remember the taunts.

The torture session, which occurred while Bates was handcuffed to a tree, lasted an hour or more, she said.

'Conscience' drove postal officer to confess, he says

DALLAS (AP) — A "matter of conscience" drove former postal vice chairman Peter Voss to reveal he had overbilled on his expense accounts, Voss said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Voss, who resigned after pleading guilty to embezzling and receiving kickbacks, said Thursday he went to postal inspectors himself with the information that led to the case against him.

He contradicted a claim by Postmaster General Albert Casey, who told a Dallas newspaper that it was the initiative of the Postal Service's chief inspector.

"Nobody knew about it until I brought it to their attention," Voss said in a telephone interview from Washington D.C. He said the confession about his expense accounts sprang "from a matter of conscience that was bothering me terribly."

Voss resigned from the Postal Service Board of Governors and pleaded guilty a week ago to receiving kickbacks for trying to steer a lucrative Postal Service mail-sorting contract to a Dallas-area firm, as well as to embezzlement for overbilling the Postal Service on airline tickets by $43,817.

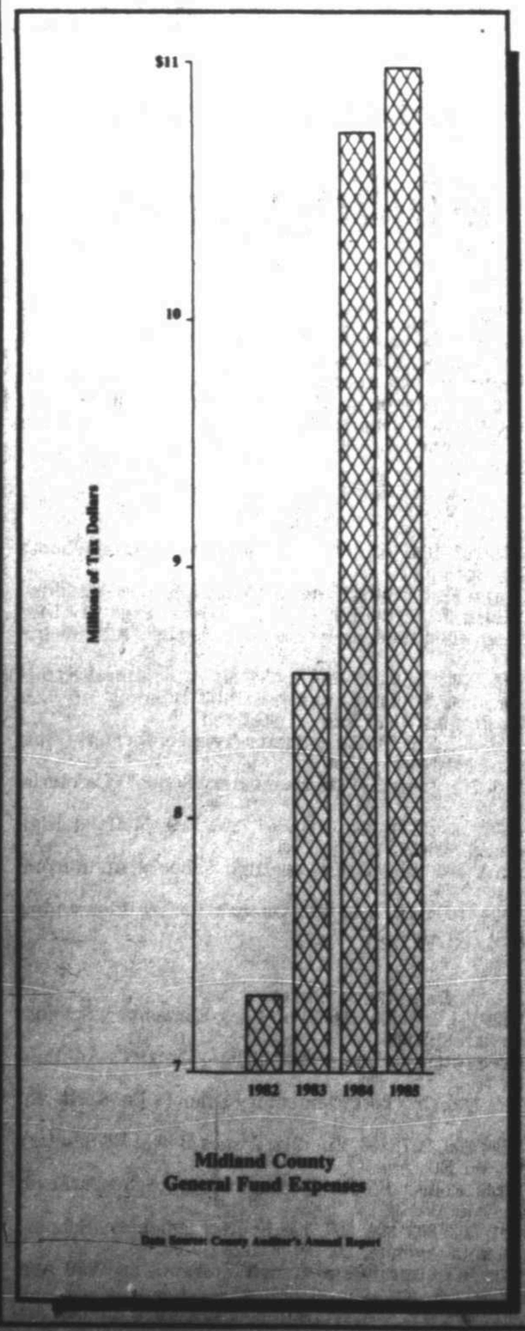
ECONOMY FOR THE TAXPAYER?



Midland County General Fund Expenses

Data Source: County Auditor's Annual Report

Since the incumbent county commissioner of precinct 2 took office less than four years ago, general fund expenditures by the County have grown from just over $7 million to almost $11 million — a 50 percent increase during difficult years.

In 1984 the incumbent precinct 2 commissioner voted for an effective tax increase of 7.143%.

In 1985 he voted for an increase of 7.9%.

As a matter of fact since he took office in 1983, the county commissioner of precinct 2 has voted for three tax increases totaling an effective increase in taxes of over 16 percent.

Yet in his advertisements, the incumbent pledges "economy for Midland taxpayers . . ." and ". . . a County budget which requires no additional tax dollars . . ."

His votes clearly display a record to the contrary.

Midland County needs new leaders who are sensitive to our economic troubles, and assertive in making decisions according to sound fiscal principles.

Vote for new leadership in the June 7th Runoff.

Legal experts say release of report on Challenger sets stage for suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aerospace legal experts are receiving inquiries about possibly seeking damages from NASA or contractors involved in the Challenger disaster, and they say release of a report on the January accident will set the stage for court action.

No relative of any of the seven crew members killed in the explosion has filed a lawsuit, but Houston attorney Ronald D. Krist said he has been contacted by "four or five" lawyers who claimed to represent surviving relatives of the astronauts and sought advice about filing a damage suit.

Krist, who sued on behalf of Betty Grissom after her husband, Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom, died in the 1967 Apollo spacecraft fire, said three of the lawyers contacted him a second time last month asking whether he would be available for a lawsuit. He answered: "You bet."

Arthur Dula, a Houston aerospace lawyer and law professor, said Thursday he has learned that one of the shuttle contractors, whom he would not identify, has been sent a letter seeking compensation, which he said could be a precursor to a suit.

"There are demands being made," he said. Asked if he was representing any astronaut relatives in the case, Dula replied, "I cannot answer that question."

In an interview last month, Krist said a lawsuit was "absolutely inevitable" and that "I fully anticipate I'll be employed in one or more cases."

Asked Wednesday whether he had been retained by any Challenger relatives, Krist said, "No comment," adding that acknowledging representation without a client's permission would violate attorney-client privilege.

He also said an out-of-court, amicable settlement of the matter would best serve all parties. But, he predicted, "if not, one or more of those dependents will seek relief through the court system."

Kenneth Miller of the Chicago law firm of Philip Corboy said his office also was contacted by a lawyer claiming to represent a Challenger family seeking information on filing a suit.

Neither Miller nor Krist would identify either the inquiring lawyers or the relatives they purported to represent.

Some relatives told The Associated Press they would not decide on whether to sue until after the presidential commission investigating the Jan. 28 catastrophe issues its report Monday. Family members were briefed privately on the report Wednesday.

House panel sets hearing on 'abuse' of Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel has scheduled hearings next week to review evidence that U.S.-backed rebels engaged in "substantial abuse" of the spending of $27 million in U.S. aid, the chairman of the subcommittee said.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., who chairs the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America, said congressional investigators have uncovered evidence pointing to apparent diversion of some U.S. funds by the Contra rebels for personal gain. He said at least one senior Contra leader was implicated.

Barnes said that based on bank records subpoenaed by his subcommittee, "It is clear that the concerns that have been raised about diversion of some of the $27 million...have been justified."

Barnes said the evidence implicates at least "one big fish" in the Contra hierarchy for diverting nonlethal aid sent to the rebels over the last seven months. But Barnes declined to identify any of the individuals.

"There has been substantial abuse of the funds. Even a preliminary analysis indicates that," Barnes said in an interview Thursday.

The Reagan administration, which is seeking $100 million in new aid for the rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government, has in the past denied that the Contras diverted aid and had no immediate comment on Barnes' statement. Rebel spokesmen also could not be reached.

Records of Challenger probe soon available to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thousands of pages of records produced by the Challenger investigation commission, including testimony delivered in closed-door sessions, will soon be available to the public.

All 15,000 pages of public and secret testimony, along with more than 100,000 documents, will be bestowed on the National Archives days after the commission report is released Monday, a commission staff member who asked not to be identified said Thursday.

The aide said the investigation by the 13-member commission, headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, cost "in the $2 million to $4 million range, half of it for computerization."

The staff member added, "The only commission that exceeds ours in magnitude was the Warren commission." That commission, headed by the late Chief Justice Earl Warren, investigated the assassination of President Kennedy.

President Reagan will informally be given a report today for his perusal, and a formal presentation of it will be made to him Monday.

The report will be 250 pages along with four appendices, and it will be followed in a few weeks by four other volumes. They will include the transcripts of all closed sessions held by the commission.

Search begins for donor heart for 12-day-old infant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The search for a donor heart has begun for a 12-day-old infant whose unwed parents relinquished custody to his grandparents in order to to reverse a hospital's refusal of a transplant, the parents' lawyer says.

William McMillan, attorney for the parents, known only by their first names, Deana, 17, and Jesse, 26, said custody was transferred to the baby's paternal grandparents Thursday.

No donor hearts were immediately available for the child, known as Baby Jesse, who has an underdeveloped heart, but "the word is out," McMillan said.

The infant, who had been refused a possible transplant by officials at Loma Linda University Medical Center would be transferred to Loma Linda soon from an undisclosed hospital somewhere in Los Angeles County, he said. The baby, born May 25, was in stable condition Thursday.

Sanctuary hearing rules set

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Evidence will not be allowed at a hearing next week on whether the government selectively prosecuted sanctuary movement defendants, while a government motion to quash subpoenas will be argued, U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll says.

Carroll, who presided over the sanctuary alien-smuggling conspiracy trial of 11 sanctuary activists, told attorneys for several of the defendants during a conference telephone call Thursday that they had not made a "prima facie coloring" to show selective prosecution and that he was prepared to deny a full-scale hearing.

Carroll also indicated that he was prepared to throw out their subpoenas of more than a half-dozen federal officials, most of whom attended a Nov. 24, 1984 meeting in Washington.

Garn may donate kidney

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Republican Sen. Jake Garn said Thursday that he or one of his sons may donate a kidney to his 27-year-old ailing daughter next year, according to published reports.

Susan Garn Horn, who is married to a doctor and lives in Vienna, Va., suffers from progressive kidney failure, the Deseret News and The Salt Lake Tribune reported in Thursday editions.

The donor will be determined on the basis of the best match for Ms. Horn, the Tribune reported.

The operation probably will be performed next year at Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital, which treats members of Congress, the president and other federal officials.

Model says career not over

NEW YORK (AP) — A fashion model whose face was slashed with a razor blade in an attack allegedly arranged by her ex-landlord over $850 he owed her is vowing to resume her career despite receiving more than 100 stitches.

"The stitches on my face, I expected to look a lot worse," Maria Hanson told WNBC-TV Thursday night from her hospital bed. "Last night I wouldn't even look in the mirror. But this morning I looked and I feel real good about (the surgery)."

Ms. Hanson, a 25-year-old model with Petite Model Management, remained in St. Vincent's Hospital in stable condition today after a plastic surgeon stitched her wounds, said hospital spokeswoman Caroline McBride.

Perle opposes 'stand with Soviets'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Congress votes to compel continued U.S. compliance with the SALT II arms control treaty, it will "stand with the Soviets" and against President Reagan, says the administration's most vocal advocate of hard-line weapons control policies.

Richard Perle, assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, told the House Armed Services Committee on Thursday such a confrontation would shatter cooperation between the White House and Capitol Hill and endanger the arms control process.

"Either the Congress will stand with the administration...or the Congress will stand with the Soviets," Perle said.

The assistant secretary made clear he was targeting legislation sponsored by Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., that would bar the president from carrying out his plan to stop observing the SALT II treaty's limits on strategic nuclear delivery systems.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, asked today about the White House reaction to such legislation, said, "We don't like it."

"The president will take Congress' views into consideration, but the president's decision is made," Speakes said.

Perle said later he did not intend to question the patriotism of Dicks or any other House member who supports his position.

But when asked directly whether he believes Dicks' legislation "would be supportive of the Soviet position," Perle replied: "I don't think there is any question of that."

"There is a real question of whether the Congress of the United States will align itself with the administration or with the Soviets — and that is a strategic reality," Perle said.

"I think you do a disservice to the Congress when you talk that way," said Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass.

Dicks is seeking to overturn the administration's decision, made public last week, to stay in "technical compliance" with the treaty through this fall but with the option to abandon SALT II limits when further air-launched cruise missiles are added to the U.S. arsenal later in the year.

Dicks, who is not an Armed Services Committee member but was invited to sit in as a guest, told Perle he believes the administration has purposely "played up Soviet violations so you can walk away from SALT II and abandon arms control."

"I think it is one of the most absurd decisions from a military aspect I have ever seen," Dicks said.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the committee chairman, said the administration has been able to make all the improvements it sought in U.S. strategic forces without bumping up against the SALT II limits. And he said there is evidence the Soviets have been compelled by the treaty to scrap militarily significant weapons systems.

"What in the name of God is the sense of dismantling a treaty which is not constraining us and which arguably may be constraining them?" Aspin asked.

Perle repeated the administration's position that Soviet violations, including the deployment of a new missile type not permitted by SALT II, made abandoning the treaty imperative in order to show U.S. resolve.

Dicks, Aspin and other House members said they believe a proportional response to the Soviets would have been more appropriate, perhaps by speeding up development of this country's Midgetman mobile missile.

The 1979 SALT II treaty was never ratified and was withdrawn from consideration by the Senate after the Soviets invaded Afghanistan. But the United States and the Soviet Union have continued to observe its restrictions in an attempt not to undercut new arms talks at Geneva.

Ronald W. Pelton, center, leaves the Anne Arundel County Detention Center for his trial.

Pelton conviction strengthens FBI

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ronald W. Pelton's conviction of espionage for selling the Soviets secrets about U.S. electronic eavesdropping strengthens the FBI's ability to catch and jail spies, federal prosecutors say.

Pelton, 44, convicted Thursday of four counts but acquitted of a fifth, faces a maximum three life prison terms plus 10 years when he is sentenced July 28 in U.S. District Court.

Pelton sat slumped in his chair, holding his chin in his hand as the verdict was announced after 13 hours of deliberations over two days.

"He's disappointed," said defense attorney Fred Warren Bennett. "I saw some tears welling up in his eyes, and it was obviously a tough thing to stomach."

Bennett said he would appeal the conviction, vowing to carry to the Supreme Court, if necessary, his argument that the FBI tricked Pelton into confessing by making him think he was being recruited as a double agent.

Pelton was accused of receiving $35,000 from KGB agents for divulging secrets between 1980 and 1985 gained during his 14-year career as a technician at the National Security Agency.

The jury convicted him of conspiracy, espionage, attempted espionage and unauthorized disclosure of communications intelligence. Without explaining, it acquitted him of a count that charged he transferred "information relating to the national defense of the United States of America" to the KGB.

Vitaly Yurchenko, a KGB colonel who defected and later returned to Moscow, tipped off authorities to Pelton, the government has said.

Much of the prosecution's courtroom effort was aimed at countering the defense argument that Pelton's rights were violated when he was interrogated Nov. 24 by two FBI agents at an Annapolis hotel. The defense said Pelton was tricked into admitting he sold U.S. secrets. He was arrested the next day.

"The verdict vindicated the investigatory techniques of the FBI," said U.S. Attorney Breckinridge L. Willcox, who supervised the prosecution. Jurors "had to find his admissions voluntary because that was the signficant evidence," he said.

"They would have had to, otherwise they would not been able to reach the verdict they did," said Pelton's interrogator, FBI agent David E. Faulkner.

A jury in Alexandria, Va., accepted similar FBI techniques used against Larry Wu-tai Chin, convicted earlier this year of spying for China during his 30-year career as a translator and analyst for the CIA. Chin later committed suicide in his jail cell.

Before the Pelton trial, prosecutors had to persuade the Pentagon to release enough secrets in court to explain how Pelton had hurt the ability of the NSA to intercept, decode and analyze Soviet communications.

The directors of the CIA and NSA, in a rare public statement, voiced their concern about releasing such information as evidence.

CIA director William Casey and NSA chief Lt. Gen. William Odom also said they did not want the news media to speculate about details of the progams that Pelton had compromised.

Other signs of government anxiety came when the judge sealed a map introduced as evidence and the NSA general counsel attended the trial during the testimony of a senior agency official. The NSA attorney raised the agency's concerns about defense cross-examination of the official.

"We gave the jury sufficient information for them to be persuaded that all the elements of espionage had in fact been proven," said Willcox. "Yet, I am convinced that we did not reveal too much information in the course of this trial that was not already known or otherwise a matter of public record."

Reagan gave up ground to get needed Senate vote

An Analysis

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan needed one-third of the Senate plus one vote to permit his Saudi Arabian arms sale to go through. To get it, he gave up more than two-thirds of his original prospectus for the transaction he called "vital to world peace."

The 66-34 vote in the Senate on Thursday was portrayed by senators on both sides of the aisle as support for a president whose prestige and leadership were on the line. Reagan said the vote was needed to hold the trust of the more moderate Arab nations.

To achieve it, he followed a familiar pattern of taking a firm position, backing down from it when it becomes clear he can't get all he wants, and then welcoming a partial victory as the achievement of his aims.

To begin with, according to congressional sources, Reagan considered a $1.1 billion deal that included $450 million in electronic equipment for fighter planes and $250 million for combat helicopters.

Cautioned by Republican congressional leaders that such a sale might be blocked, he trimmed it to $351 million for Stinger, Sidewinder and Harpoon missiles.

This failed to still the opposition. On May 6, the Republican-controlled Senate voted 73-22 for a resolution disapproving the sale. The House followed suit by 356-62 the next day. With the Democrats in control of the House, the administration concentrated on picking up the 12 votes it would need to reverse the Senate action in a vote by all 100 senators.

It wasn't the first time Reagan had scrambled for votes to keep a Saudi arms deal alive. In 1981, he persuaded enough senators to narrowly stave off defeat on a proposal to sell AWACS radar planes to the Arab kingdom.

This time it was tougher because the senators, instead of just saying they were opposed to the deal, actually had gone on record with their votes.

At this point, one senior administration official said, the Saudi ambassador, Prince Bandar, paid a call at the White House to say that King Fahd was very distressed and would rather withdraw his request than see the president humiliated.

The president's national security adviser, John Poindexter, according to this source, told Bandar that such a step would be seen here as a defeat. Bandar came back a few days later to repeat the king's offer to the president.

There would have been recent precedent for such a decision. A $1.9 billion arms sale to Jordan was postponed last year and again postponed, indefinitely, in February because of overwhelming congressional opposition.

Reagan, however, told Bandar he appreciated the king's offer, but also felt it would amount to defeat.

According to the administration official, Bandar then suggested paring the request, and Reagan agreed this might help. Shortly afterward, the White House announced it was dropping the Stinger missiles — shoulder-fired weapons that critics argued might fall into the hands of terrorists.

This left a $265 million package, made up of Sidewinder air-to-air missiles and Harpoon anti-ship missiles.

To obtain even this limited package took all of Reagan's persuasive powers.

"Although this president is not as good as Lyndon Johnson was at twisting arms, he's very good," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"We're going around the country praising the president, his great leadership, his approval rating; and I think this is one time he'd like to call in the chits," said Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

The arm-twisting, however, apparently took the form more of patriotic appeals than political threats.

Only a few hours before the vote, Reagan told 75 senators at the White House that "American influence in this vital region is absolutely vital to world peace and to exercise that influence we must retain the trust of the moderate Arab nations."

"Today, we have the leader of the free world laying his prestige on the line," said Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., one of two Democrats and six Republicans who switched their votes from opposition.

There was no evidence Reagan threatened to withhold his support from any GOP senator in the fall election. Of the eight senators who switched to his side, none is facing the voters this fall. It is in the president's interest to campaign for all Republican senators anyway to preserve the party's narrow majority in the Senate.

BULL

The bull was found on a ranch near Fort Worth May 11 with a broken back, possibly suffered while breeding with one of the 100 Sesquicentennial heifers — there to breed with the state symbol — in his 297-acre pasture.

His owner, Kathie O'Brien of Denton, Neb., "was as stunned as we all are because he was doing so well. We thought he would walk again and I believe he would have had he lived."

The bull never appeared to weaken because of the injury. He was raised up by a sling daily to stand on his front legs and was given regular treatments. He ate and drank regularly and his bodily functions seemed to be working properly, Smith said.

An autopsy will be conducted at Oklahoma State University veterinary school to determine the cause of death.

FUNDS

The City Wide Community Service for the Aged requested $3,000 for a full-time cleaning staff to "deep clean" many homes of the low income elderly around the city. Volunteers are used to clean homes now, many which are infested with insects and rats, said Helen Johnson, director of the service.

"Many individual homes have not been cleaned for years and constitute a health problem," Ms. Johnson said.

Sgt. Ron Benton of the Police Department requested $50,000 to provide solid core doors and dead bolts locks for about 1,000 homes of the elderly and low income in the south and east side which has been plagued with 188 burglaries since January.

"We're having a real problem with home burglaries. The main way they're getting in is kicking in the doors," Benton said.

"If we can accumulate the money, I think we can put a real dent in the burglaries in the south side," he said.

Other requests included:

— $245,000 from David Mandell, chairman of Precinct #104, for curb and gutter paving in the precinct that amounts to almost one mile. About 13 streets in the area bordered by Midkiff, Illinois, Garfield and Front, need paving.

— $102,000 from city Code Enforcement to contine the demolition of vacant buildings and the clearing of vacant lots overrun with weeds.

— $105,000 from the city Planning and Development department to administer the use of Community Development funds and to ensure the money is used within federal guidelines.

— $101,000 from Parks and Recreation to resurface tennis courts at Ulmer Park, to light the ballfield at Hidalgo Park and to add lights to Washington Park.

— $100,000 from the Housing Authority and the Human Relations Council for rehabilitating low income homes.

— $24,294 from Langtry Village to refurbish buildings and install a sprinkler system.

— $12,000 from the Freewill Foster Home for landscaping and a van.

— $12,000 from Clean Midland for two litter films each for 14 schools, 10 Clean Midland signs at illegal dumping areas and production and publication of a pamphlet and a flyer.

— $10,000 for a contingency fund to complete any projects left unfinished.

— $5,000 from Taylor Park Day Care for educational equipment.

The commission will make recommendations to the city council about funding the projects after a work session around June 17. The council will hear the requests at a public hearing on July 8, and make a final decision on funding the groups by August 12.

Philippine peace efforts entangled

By STEVE LE VINE

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines' communist rebels, old foes facing a new government, have made a gesture of peace with one hand and taken control of hundreds more villages with the other.

President Corazon Aquino's peace efforts, meanwhile, have become entangled in an in-house debate over political and practical issues.

Mrs. Aquino announced Thursday that the rebels had named a representative for talks on possibly arranging a cease-fire in the 17-year-old conflict. But, just a day earlier, the Philippine chief of staff reported the New People's Army guerrillas had spread their influence or control to about 600 more villages in recent months.

"The insurgency situation has not improved," Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said at a news conference.

Many Filipinos had long believed the insurrection would subside once the authoritarian President Ferdinand E. Marcos was removed from office.

Now that he is in exile in Hawaii, however, Filipinos are locked in debate over how to establish a cease-fire, whether soldiers as well as rebels should be pardoned for human rights abuses, and how to pay for employing and housing guerrillas who put down their arms.

The situation leaves officials wondering where to start. At one point in a recent speech, Vice President Salvador Laurel said poverty was fueling the insurgency, and at another that the insurgency was hobbling efforts to relieve poverty.

"Unless you solve the peace-and-order problem it is like a house on fire," Laurel said. "You cannot talk of what to do for lunch unless you put the fire out first."

Before Marcos' ouster in a military revolt backed by the Roman Catholic Church, critics called him the rebels' best recruiter. The New People's Army was organized and grew steadily under his rule.

Ramos said the guerrillas, estimated to number 16,500, now control or influence 7,631 villages, 18 percent of all villages in the Philippines, up from 7,019 at the end of 1985, and are present in 62 of the country's 74 provinces.

Since Feb. 25, when Mrs. Aquino came to power, 1,040 soldiers, rebels and civilians have been killed in the leftist guerrilla war and in the smaller Moslem separatist insurgency in the south, Ramos said.

In some areas, the military is waging a more intense war than it did under Marcos, but Ramos said the number of clashes nationwide has declined to nine a day under Mrs. Aquino, down from 12 under Marcos.

Mrs. Aquino said earlier this year she expected many rebels to return to peaceful civilian life once Marcos was out of office. Over some military objections, she released more than 500 political prisoners, including top communist leaders. But only a few hundred rebels have surrendered.

The government has failed thus far to establish a job and housing program to receive insurgents who do give up.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Aid for evacuees urged

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper today urged Soviets to help those evacuated because of the Chernobyl nuclear accident, saying evacuees should not suffer because of indifference or "absurd rumors" that they might be spreading radiation.

The newspaper Pravda said that while most children evacuated from the officially designated danger zone around the Ukranian power plant are now in summer camp, "still the areas where evacuees live must remain in the center of special attention."

Nearly 100,000 people were evacuated from an 18-mile radius around the Chernobyl plant, where one reactor exploded and caught fire April 26, releasing a cloud of radioactivity that stretched worldwide.

In addition to those evacuated from the danger zone, about 250,000 children from the Kiev region were let out of school early and many were sent to summer camps. And Pravda reported Wednesday that 60,000 children from the Byelorussian region of Gomel, bordering the Ukraine, also were given special passes for summer camps and other vacation places.

A newspaper said fires caused by two months of dry weather are adding to the problems near the Ukrainian-Byelorussian border area.

Haitian mobs dispersed

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers fired in the air to disperse mobs that burned tires and charged passing vehicles hours after the head of the ruling military-civilian council, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, told Haitians that their country was close to anarchy.

A person who answered the telephone at police headquarters in Port-au-Prince early today said one person had died and seven people were injured in the Thursday confrontation, but provided no details. He declined to give his name or rank.

Australia investigated

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A special investigator today began probing allegations that Nazi war criminals settled in Australia after World War II when Britain purportedly asked the government to "go easy" on them.

The government inquiry is headed by a retired deputy secretary in the attorney general's department, Andrew Menzies, who was appointed to the post on Thursday by Special Minister Mick Young.

Soldiers fired tear gas and rifles into the air in an effort to break up the protests.

Henry P. flew in building one day and fell in love with stuffed turkey

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — A doctor's office is an unlikely place for a love affair to develop, but nobody bothered to tell Henry P. that.

But then again, Henry P. has always been known as a rather strange old bird. The "P" stands for peacock.

Nobody knows exactly where Henry, as he is affectionately called by his new friends, came from. He just "flew in" one day a few weeks ago and made the courtyard of a Nacogdoches doctors' building his home.

The folks at the medical building believe one reason Henry has stayed around as long as he has is because of an infatuation. Nobody has told Henry yet that the object of his affections, a huge wild turkey inside one of the medical building offices, is stuffed.

Jo Spurlin first spotted Henry one weekend while she was cleaning one of the medical offices.

"I looked up and saw this shadow come over at first," she said. "I looked up ag'n and did a doubletake and th... he was."

Ms. Spurlin said Henry spent about three hours in the office building courtyard "prancing around and looking at his reflection in the glass windows that line the back of the offices."

The second day Henry showed up at the medical building, the love affair began.

The stuffed turkey stands on a table next to a rear window of one of the offices.

"Female peacocks (peahens) are usually drab colors," said Ms. Spurlin, "just like that turkey. And I guess Henry saw the colors of the turkey's feathers and assumed it was a female peacock. Bless his heart, I think Henry is in love with that stuffed turkey."

Henry has captured the hearts of workers in the medical offices.

"Everybody puts out food and water for him," says Mary Ann Miles, an employee in one of the doctors' offices. "He just walks the sidewalk (behind the building) and goes from window to window looking at his reflection. He's certainly kept us all entertained."

"He's not as skittish around us any more," says Dath Criss, another medical building employee. "He's getting to know us. When he sees his reflection in the windows, he fans his tail out and parades around in the middle of the courtyard."

Henry is well-fed and well-groomed, spending a lot of his time preening — no doubt to make himself presentable for his new love.

Except for a rather frustrating love life, Henry P. never had it so good.

Take time to vote

It may be summer, the lakes or mountains may be calling or a particular leisure activity may be occupying their time, but Midlanders should not overlook voting in Saturday's runoff election. It's important and a large amount of time, expense and energy already has been devoted to this process by countless people.

The election's importance is particularly significant for Midlanders, who still face the responsibility of helping decide the Republican Party's nominee for the vital 21st Congressional District, along with determining the GOP nominee for county commissioner in Precinct 2.

Those aren't the only races to be determined in Saturday's voting, but they should stress to readers the importance of the election. In fact, it probably is much more crucial to local voters not only because of the local nominations to be decided but also because of the import of the statewide nominations still pending. Texans still must determine the Republican nominees for Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Texas Railroad Commissioner, and Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the Democrats' nominees for Railroad Commissioner, Supreme Court Places 1, 2 and 4, and Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 1.

The nominations still unresolved are vital to making November's General Election a quality political event that could install in office the leaders who will bring about much-needed changes in the course of the state's future.

Following is a list of the Reporter-Telegram's recommendations to voters regarding the various offices:

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY — Railroad Commissioner: John Sharp; Supreme Court Place 1: Shirley Butts; Supreme Court Place 2: Robert M. Campbell; Supreme Court Place 4: Raul Gonzalez; Court of Criminal Appeals Place 1: No recommendation.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY — Midland County Commissioner, Precinct 2: Guy McCrary; U.S. Representative, 21st District: Lamar Smith; Lieutenant Governor: No recommendation; Attorney General: Roy Barrera Jr.; Railroad Commissioner: Milton E. Fox; Commissioner of the General Land Office: No recommendation.

Of course it's the responsibility of each voter to determine who will best represent their needs and to cast his ballot accordingly. Please take the responsibility to do so Saturday.

JACK ANDERSON

Space frontier offers limitless promise

WASHINGTON — Five centuries after Columbus sought to explore the unknown, the same objections are being heard again: The risk is too great. The cost is too high. The dream is too impractical.

Jack Anderson

The voyage of Columbus was turned down, first by the king of Portugal, then by a Spanish blue-ribbon commission. But in the end, Columbus opened up new continents and new vistas of knowledge that made his critics look foolish. He also made possible the most successful anti-poverty program in history: the great migration of destitute peoples to the Americas.

Today Columbus has been superseded by astronauts eager to explore the space frontier, to lead mankind to other worlds. They believe untold knowledge and hidden resources await them — the raw materials of space that will enhance life on Earth.

They expect to assemble in space solar-powered satellites that can capture the sun's inexhaustible energy and transmit it to earth. They will mine valuable minerals up there, not only to supplement dwindling resources on Earth but to build and sustain society in space. They also hope to transfer industrial activities from Earth to space. This will improve old products, create new products and, at the same time, protect the Earth's fragile biosphere.

Even as the space program opens up future worlds, it will continue to advance science and enrich our everyday lives in the here and now. The Apollo program, which transported men to the moon, created many times more wealth than it cost — new jobs, new products and new industries.

This becomes increasingly true as the old sources of jobs and prosperity — the raw-materials industries and the smoke-stacks plants — falter and decline. The new businesses — data processing, electronics, telecommunications, robotics, automation, services of many kinds — are based heavily upon information.

In the Information Economy of today, the primary raw material is information, and that is what the space program pre-eminently produces. The space program gave the United States the lead in sciences that affect the health, environment and economy of the people. The nation that leads in space will assuredly lead in these other vital fields.

Yet there are those who belittle space exploration, who see only the dollars in front of them and not the riches that lie beyond the horizon. The federal funding required for the space program is coveted for things of Earth — boondoggles for the rich and appropriations for pork-barrel projects.

We have spoken with many astronauts — men like Alan Shepard, the first American in space; Edwin Aldrin, who made the first landing on the moon; Thomas Stafford, who rendezvoused in space with Soviet cosmonauts; Eugene Cernan, the last man to walk on the moon.

They are united in their enthusiasm about the opportunities that await mankind in space. But space must be explored by living, breathing people — not by unthinking robots, the astronauts emphasize. They insist there is no substitute for human eyes, ears and hands out there.

They also stress the importance of keeping space exploration under civilian control. They fear some of NASA's critics have a hidden motive: They want to paint the space shuttle blue and turn it over to the Air Force to operate.

It is inspirational to listen to astronauts describe their experiences beyond the Earth. The words don't exist, they say, that can convey what it's like to see the Earth from space. Nor can any camera capture the spectacular beauty of our world set against the vast, black velvet of space.

The curve of the earth, the swirling eddies, the patterns of clouds marbling the surface above the brilliant blue of the water and the blue-green of the land — this is a sight that must be personally witnessed to be appreciated, the astronauts tell us.

MINI-EDITORIAL: A remarkable document arrived in the mail the other day: the results of an in-depth "drugs of abuse" test "voluntarily and successfully passed" by David Andrew Brown, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate in Missouri. Brown went to a laboratory and had his urine samples tested for amphetamines, barbiturates, benzodiazepines, cocaine, opiates, THC, methaqualone, PCP, methadone and propoxyphene. In each case the result was "none detected." We're happy for Brown, of course, but can't help wondering if this is the chief qualification he brings to his Senate race. It must have something to do with Missouri's "Show me" tradition.

CHARLEY REESE

Debt to military more than monetary

It is the fate of a soldier to be sacrificed on the altar of bigger stakes. Soldiers neither declare wars nor negotiate their ends. They only fight in them, die in them, win them, or lose them.

Charley Reese

Every war, like a receding wave, deposits its flotsam on the beach — the dead, the maimed, and the grieved. It is our minimum obligation to remember them all. Their suffering and misery was at our bidding for what we told them was our benefit.

It is true, as the Bible says, that there is no greater example of love than for one man to lay down his life for another. To give one's life is to give it all. That's love to the max.

It is also true that man is a corruptible creature who is capable of and has done just about every low down, contemptible act conceivable. Nothing, in my book, is lower than for the living to be ungrateful to the dead whose dying made their living possible.

Americans particularly need to be mindful of this. Thanks to the deaths and injuries of hundreds of thousands of our fellow Americans, it has been a long time since we have known what it is like to be at the mercy of a conquering army. Americans do not know what it is really like to have their homes burned, their families and neighbors lined up and shot or shipped off to labor camps. Most have not experienced the terror and humiliation of helplessness. Most do not know what it's like to have their life hang by the thin thread of an enemy's whim.

We are a proud, even conceited people. We put a high value on our personal rights. We tend to boast about our prosperity and to brag about our system of government. And so we should. But we must never forget that is all bought and paid for with blood and pain and death.

I confess that I despise pacifists and peace-mongers. The former are parasites whose right to be pacifists was paid for by non-pacifists on the battlefields. The latter are idiots.

American independence was won and has been maintained by war, not by negotiations or diplomacy or reason or peaceful conflict resolution. Not in the whole history of mankind has any thing of substance ever been settled except by arms or the threat of arms. The fate of nations and empires which allowed their military ability to decline is uniform and clear. They fell to the strong.

I take it as a minimum level of decency that when we tuck our children in bed that we remember that they can sleep in peace because others died horrible deaths, because others lie even now maimed in hospitals, because still others are awake in missile silos, communications bunkers, submarines, on fortified lines, and in ships at sea.

I take it as a minimum level of sanity that a people who have so much to lose and who spend more on beer than on tanks will not allow the foolish, the naive, and the wicked to weaken the armed forces and thus lose all we love.

I take it as a minimum level of justice that those of us, and I certainly include myself, who prefer civilian pursuits to military ones, will at least appreciate and support those who willingly take up the hard and painful tasks we decline.

By support, I mean a commitment to remain informed about military affairs and a willingness to take up the military's fights in the political arena from which we, by law and tradition, bar them.

The blessing of a country whose military forces are subservient to its civilian government imposes on the civilians a heavy responsibility to see that its military forces are adequately compensated and equipped and properly used. It is their job to fight. It is our job to see that they have the means with which to fight. It is our job to determine where they will fight and for what reason.

Above all, it is our responsibility to remember the debt we owe them. Beside that debt, the monetary debt is peanuts.

LETTERS

Good 'replacement'

As a longtime resident and concerned citizen of Midland, I am compelled to write this letter on behalf of Lamar Smith who is in the Republican congressional runoff on Saturday.

In July of 1985, Mr. Smith was the first congressional candidate to announce his candidacy for the 21st Congressional District seat in the House of Representatives. Since July of 1985, Lamar Smith has been to Midland almost weekly knocking on doors meeting the constituents of Midland County and listening to their concerns.

Mr. Smith's dedication and time in campaigning in Midland is an indication that he sincerely cares about Midlanders' concerns: Lamar would be a congressman we could depend on to look after our needs and interests, not only in Midland but throughout our district.

Smith is a rancher, so he understands the needs of the ranchers in West Texas. He also has first-hand knowledge and an understanding of the oil and gas industry. He knows it is vital to the survival of the people in West Texas.

Lamar Smith is an effective and qualified leader. Smith is the candidate for the 21st District that will be able to unite the Republican Party in November and keep the 21st Congressional seat Republican!

Besides his dedication, concern and effectiveness, Lamar has run a positive, upbeat and clean campaign. Lamar has stuck to the issues and gotten his message to the people. He is a man whose positive vision of America is one that I share. He will take that vision to Washington to benefit all the people in the 21st District. He is a man of the utmost integrity, sincerity and honesty that as congressman we will be proud of.

I know that many of us will miss Tom Loeffler and we wish him well, but with a man like Lamar Smith to replace him, I am confident the people of the 21st District will be well represented in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Gary D. Douglas
Midland

Vote for effectiveness

This week we make the decision on the man who will, in all probability, succeed Tom Loeffler as our representative in the U.S. Congress for the 21st District.

One candidate advocates his conservatism without stating his definition of that term and then proceeds to attack the other man's conservatism, effectiveness and other attributes in a fashion that is less than admirable.

The better candidate, Lamar Smith, has spent the vast majority of the available time addressing the issues and offering his views toward the solution of the problems of our time: international and domestic affairs, including defense, terrorism, the agriculture and energy industries and the overall situation of the economic climate in the 21st Congressional District which are of vital concern to all of us participating in the electoral process.

Lamar does favor keeping the federal government out of our lives, wherever and whenever possible. He favors our constitutional right to keep and bear arms and strongly opposes federal funding of abortions, for example. The list could go on and on.

Lamar Smith has a background in agriculture, energy, business, law, the legislative process, and has proven himself to be effective at working with people of diverging views and thereby accomplishing a desired (always desirable) goal.

He is running, not on his opponent's demerits, but on his own merits!

Lamar is a different personality from Tom Loeffler, but Lamar Smith will give us the effectiveness to which we have become accustomed.

Jack Borchers
New Braunfels

Vote for decisiveness

On Saturday, June 7, the County Commissioner's runoff election will be held to select a Republican candidate for the general election in November. Guy McCrary faces the incumbent in the commissioner's runoff election.

The critical issue in this race is whether the citizens of Midland wish decisive action in regard to the problem of housing prisoners. The members of the current Commissioners' Court have taken an inordinate amount of time trying to find a solution that will please everyone. That isn't possible!

The jail problem is not one which lends itself to a simple, universally accepted solution. To the contrary, the three most actively-suggested answers to our dilemma are: (1) build a new jail, (2) seek bids from the private sector to house prisoners, or (3) consolidate with other communities to form a regional co-op. All have merit and all have distinct disadvantages which make the selection of a single alternative difficult.

I'm uncertain which of the solutions listed above, or whether another alternative not yet discussed, is best for Midland at this time. I am sure about one thing: the problem is not going to go away by delaying the decision-making process indefinitely. Our current practice of busing prisoners to other locales is extremely costly, eating up coveted tax money for useless transportation and staff salaries while the real problem continues to confront us. Effective administrators know that at some point, every issue has been studied enough; facts are in; available data has been analyzed sufficiently; and it is now "decision time." In the case of the jail issue, we are well past that point when we should have had a decision and already begun work toward a permanent solution.

Guy McCrary is a man who has dedicated his life to public service. During a long association, I have actively sought Guy's administrative counsel on difficult decisions and found him to be thorough, careful, intelligent and, most of all, innovative in finding the right solution to a given problem within the appropriate time frame.

We need Guy's ability now. Those of us who are voters in Precinct 2 have the opportunity to have Guy represent us in one of the most critical offices in county government. I hope we avail ourselves of that opportunity by taking a few minutes of our day on June 7th to cast our ballot.

Jean Starnes

Send 'saver' to Congress

With the upcoming congressional runoff election, the voters of Midland County and indeed the rest of the 21st District have a very clear choice of whom to vote for.

To me that choice is Lamar Smith. In my years being involved with politicians and government officials, I have found no one as conscientious or dependable as Lamar Smith. Lamar also has the energy and the youthfulness to stay in Congress for a long time and gain seniority. West Texas needs a representative in the party leadership to represent our interests.

True leaders are hard to find these days. That's why the voters of the 21st District should elect Republican Lamar Smith as their next congressman.

The lone Republican on Bexar County Commissioners' Court, Smith was the first to propose an ethics code for the court. He eliminated duplication between city and county government, saving taxpayers millions of dollars.

The 21st District should send Mr. Smith to Washington. Our country needs congressmen who know more about saving money than spending it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On June 6, 1944, the D-Day invasion of Europe took place during World War II as Allied forces stormed the beaches of Normandy, France. The assault broke the Nazi stronghold on the continent and led to the eventual surrender of the Axis.

On this date:

In 1844, the Young Men's Christian Association was founded in London.

In 1918, the World War I Battle of Belleau Wood, which would result in a U.S. victory over the Germans, began in France.

In 1925, Walter Percy Chrysler founded the Chrysler Corp.

In 1933, the first drive-in movie theater opened, in Camden, N.J.

In 1934, the Securities and Exchange Commission was established.

In 1966, black activist James Meredith was shot and wounded as he walked along a Mississippi highway to encourage black voter registration.

In 1975, British voters decided in a referendum to remain in the Common Market.

Today's birthdays: Baseball hall-of-famer Bill Dickey is 79. Actress Billie Whitelaw is 54. Singer-songwriter Gary U.S. Bonds is 47. Playwright-actor Harvey Fierstein is 32. Tennis player Bjorn Borg is 30.

Thought for today: "If there is a possibility of several things going wrong, the one that will go wrong is the one that will do the most damage." — Corollary to Murphy's Law.

Thunderstorms are possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

The possibility of thunderstorms is once again in the forecast for Permian Basin area residents. According to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, there is a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms for tonight and Saturday.

The high on Saturday is predicted to be in the middle 90s with southerly winds at 10-15 mph and partly cloudy skies. Tonight, under partly cloudy skies, the low is expected to be in the upper 60s with southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Thursday's high was 14 degrees below the 102-degree record high set for that date in 1974. This morning's low of 70 was 14 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1983.

STATE

Heavy thunderstorms that developed in North Central Texas early today washed out one bridge and prompted flooding advisories in an area reeling from rains that have struck during the past 12 days.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning today for residents of Ellis and Navarro counties. And a flood watch area is bounded on the north by line from Clarksville through Quitman, Kaufman, Granbury and Eastland and on the south by a line from Carthage through Rusk, Waco and Goldwaithe.

The Navarro County Sheriff's Department said that a bridge on State Highway 55 between Blooming Grove and Italy had just washed out.

Weather service radar indicated very heavy thunderstorms in northern Navarro and southern Ellis counties overnight. Movement of the storms was northeast around 10 mph.

Thunderstorms developed along a line from Comanche to east of Corsicana, with movement east northeast.

The weather service said showers and thunderstorms, some with locally very heavy rain, increased from Valley Mills to near Comanche and from Cleburne to south of Corsicana. Stongest storms were southwest of Meridian in Bosque County, west of Lake Dawson and north of Itasca in Hill County.

Statewide temperatures were mostly in the 70s over the eastern two-thirds of the state, with the 60s over the Panhandle and far west texas. Extremes ranged from 79 at Laredo to 62 at Marfa.

The flash flood watch for portions of North Texas continued today. Scattered to isolated showers and thunderstorms were expected mainly over the southern portions of West and North Texas.

...Those beautiful spaces...

When shopping for a new mattress/box spring set, you can use a simple calculation to help you decide how much to spend: Cost-per night. A variation on the old cost-per-wearing calculation savvy shoppers use to figure how much to pay for a fur or other big-ticket investments. "Cost-per-night" is an easy way to figure what a new bed is worth to you.

It can also be an eye opener. If you figure the cost of a new full or queen-sized mattress/box spring set at about $500, and the average person sleeps at home about 350 nights a year (with about two weeks off for vacations and other trips away from home), that's 3,500 nights in your own bed over the 10-year life-span of the average mattress. That comes out to just under 18¢ a night. Even if you spend $1,000 on a new mattress/box spring set, sleep at home 350 nights a year and keep your mattress for 10 years, you'll still be spending just under 29¢ a night.

Think about it: What else can help you feel relaxed, energetic, un-kinked and just generally better for only 18¢ to 29¢ a day? The therapeutic value of a good night's sleep has long since been established as being as important as good diet and exercise.

For many people, the loss of a night's "beauty sleep" has faster bad effects on their looks and mood than a poor diet or lack of exercise.

The need for sleep in combating stress has also been known for generations. Shakespeare, who seemed to have something to say on every subject, praised "sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care." Today's Americans are just as careworn as poor Hamlet, from putting in long hours in high-stress jobs, on the home front, or both. We need a good night's sleep as much for restoring mental balance as for physical ease. Bedding in good condition can make a real difference in how easily we achieve the goal of "a good night's sleep."

Bedding "in good condition" often means "not too old and worn." While the average car or VCR may be replaced every three years or so, a mattress may hang around the house as long as 12 to 15 years. Actually, most standard, premium and super-premium bedding is designed to give good service for 8 to 10 years, and should be retired with honors after that.

Many stores will help arrange removal of your old bedding to make room for your new set -- ask them. And whatever you do, don't make a "hand-me-down" of your old bed to your child. Today's kids also live high-stress lives, and their bodies are still developing -- both reasons why they need good sleep too.

Permian Mattress offers discount prices on quality products

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

Cutting costs – that's what it's all about these days. And that's exactly what Permian Mattress can do for you, the customer, as they now are able to offer maximum savings through omitting that "costly" middle man.

"Permian Mattress is the largest bedding manufacturer in the Permian Basin with many years in the business," explained Burt Herron, owner of the establishment. "In the past we have made our product available to area furniture retail outlets. But now, with our present economic hardships, we want to aid the consumer as much as possible by selling our entire line of bedding sets at low factory outlet prices."

The experienced staff at Permian Mattress takes time with their product, hand building each mattress and box spring to insure the highest quality; using raw materials such as steel innerspring units, West Texas cotton and a high-density polyurethane foam. Every mattress size and price is available at the plant, including polyfoam, innerspring and soft-side flotation mattresses.

"Through research, bedding experts have agreed that the soft-side flotation mattress we carry most likely will be THE flotation mattress of the future," explained Herron.

All of these products come with five to 15 year warranties, depending upon the price of the set. Permian Mattress does guarantee free replacement and/or repair for up to five years on any set sold.

"Our low prices for these top-quality items are what the public will enjoy. A good-quality full size innerspring mattress and box spring will average at about $125; and, for a king size the cost is around $500, almost half the price of those same bedding sets sold in retail furniture outlets. While purchasing the set, the customer can choose from several mattress cover patterns to suit their individual tastes," said Herrin.

"And one fact every customer will appreciate is that we own the building where our factory is located meaning that we are here to stay and will continue to offer these wonderful prices every day."

Permian Mattress, located at 15 Industrial Loop is open Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will be an active participant in the All-American Sleep Sale June 6-16. For any questions, please call 687-1281.

The staff at Permian Mattress, located at 15 Industrial Loop, invites the public to come in and shop for the best in "warehouse sleep savings."

Aladdin House can help you get the most for your money

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

One of the most difficult lessons to learn for most of us is that "getting the most for one's money" does not always mean buying "a lot for a little."

"In spending too little for bedding, the end result is usually quite costly," said Ed Smead, owner of Aladdin House Furniture. "Price and price alone is not the best way to compare. In researching the various sleep products on the market, the experts have found that quality remains long after the price is forgotten. The person who relies on price alone is the loser; their health can suffer from lack of or improper sleep from a product which simply cannot perform."

Aladdin House offers many types of bedding, conventional and the popular waterbeds, from brand names such as Simmons, Sealy, Serta, Somma and Eastman House.

"We have been in business since 1948. At one time, Aladdin House had a reputation of selling more Simmons matresses per capita than anywhere in the USA. We also sold many Sealy, Serta and almost every other major manufacturer's products. We finally came to the conclusion that as a merchant we are nothing more than a purchasing agent for a given group of people. Our job is to bring our customers the best product and we have found this product to be our Eastman House line from Burlington, Iowa," explained Smead.

"For many reasons," Smead continued, "we believe wholeheartedly in this product. The features this product offers stand far and above its competitors."

Smead compared these features on a point-by-point basis. The following facts state his beliefs:

Many bedding manufacturers use the polyfoam or innerspring mattresses. Eastman House utilizes the felted cotton method for the top end of their mattress line. Although polyfoam and innerspring mattresses are less expensive and far less labor intensive, the felted cotton "Pillow Top" mattress, where each individual channel is hand-filled with dacron, is the ultimate replacement for down. This mattress gives the luxury of down but retains its shape almost indefinitely. And for those individuals who do experience problems with alleriges, this mattress is their "down" replacement.

There is also a great deal of difference in the way in which the box springs are manufactured in many of the national brands and Eastman House. On a full size Simmons Beautyrest, its box spring has 81 coils with nine slats; the Serta Perfect Sleeper, the same. Sealy has classified their box spring as a "foundation," using a "zigger zag" spring support instead of coil springs. Eastman House utilizes a coil-on-coil method, for a total of 350 coils and 25 slats. For every coil in the mattress, there is a matching coil in the box spring, providing lasting support. The box spring is also cushioned on top with felted cotton, for more long-lasting wear.

The cost to the Eastman House manufacturer is more, yet the top-of-the-line queen set sells for $599.95. Compared with the more nationally advertised brands, that's a savings of $200 to $300 per set.

Most manufacturers offer a 15-year pro-rated warranty. Eastman House offers a 20-year non-prorated warranty. The difference between the two is that anytime during the 20-year life of the Eastman House bedding product, should the customer experience a manufacturing defect (compression not included), the problem will be repaired at absolutely no charge to the consumer.

Another plus: The customer will not have to wait for a manufacturer's representative to come to Midland and inspect the defect. In these cases, customers can register complaints with the service manager at Aladdin House. In turn, this employee will report to management and in 99% of these rare problem cases, the defective mattress will be replaced at no charge to the customer. The defective mattress' label will be removed, sent back to the manufacturer and the mattress will then be donated to a charitable organization.

"We believe that the comparisons are endless and that Eastman House will win the contest on every count," concluded Smead.

Aladdin House, located at 3504 West Wall Street, will participate in the All-American Sleep Sale from June 6-16.

Ed Smead, owner of Aladdin House Furniture, believes in the Eastman House bedding product and can help you in making those difficult bedding decisions.

Choose a bed that's fit for a king

During the Renaissance, Louis XIV filled his palace with more than 400 beds. These are known to be the early forerunners of the king-size bed and ornate to the point of ridiculous by modern standards.

Louis must have been a real expert when it came to selecting a new bed. Today, however, most of us aren't.

While it's not necessary to become the bedding connoisseur that Louis was, it is important to know a few basic facts about bedding before making a purchase.

You can expect your new bed to be around for at least eight to 10 years, so it makes good sense to choose it carefully.

The Better Sleep Council, a non-profit organization which educates the public about sleep and bedding, recommends that you keep four words in mind—support, comfort, durability and space—when making your selection.

"Waking up with back pain, a stiff neck or tingling arms is often traced to insufficient support from your bed," explains Dianne Hales, author of The Complete Book of Sleep: How Your Nights Affect Your Days.

To determine whether your bed provides proper support, Hales explains that when you lie down there should be no ridges or valleys, and no depression at the center that you roll onto, whether you want to or not.

"Your mattress should gently support your body at all points, with a minimum of lateral bending of the spine," says Hales.

"Pay special attention to your shoulders, hips and lower back since the heaviest parts of you will sink down the farthest. A too-soft mattress can cause lower back pain, and a too-hard mattress can create painful pressure at the shoulders and hips."

According to the Better Sleep Council, 75 percent of bedding purchased today utilizes the support characteristics of innersprings—tempered steel coils in various counts, figurations and wire thicknesses.

Layers of upholstery materials provide insulation and cushioning between the body and the coils. The type and amount of these materials can create a wide range of surface feelings and comfort selections.

You may find that you're more comfortable on a taut, firm mattress, or that you prefer layers of softer cushioning. Or perhaps you like the feel of a foam or water-filled mattress.

There are a variety of mattress and foundation constructions that provide support but offer a different "feel."

Whatever your choice, keep in mind that manufacturers design each sleep set—the mattress and foundation—to give their best performance when used together. An old foundation will reduce the performance and life of a new mattress.

Once you have assessed the degree of support and comfort in a mattress, think about its durability. The quality of the mattress and foundation—what materials are selected and how they are put together—determine how long they can be expected to provide support and comfort at their maximum level.

How long should a mattress and foundation last? "Well, that depends," says Better Sleep Council Director Russ Abolt. "It depends on the original quality of construction, the amount of use and the weight of the sleepers.

"A general rule of thumb is that you should start looking for signs of wear and tear when your bed reaches the eight-to-10-year-old range."

How much sleep do you really need to be at your best?

Maybe you sleep eight hours, but your husband has to have nine before he can be civil at the breakfast table. And your daughter stays up half the night and is irritatingly wide-eyed by 7 a.m. Is she ruining her health by not sleeping enough? Is he getting too much sleep for his own good?

Just as there is no height or weight that is "correct" for everyone, there is no right amount of sleep, according to the Better Sleep Council, a nonprofit organization helping people understand more about their sleep needs. Sleep researchers tend to think that sleep is related to our own inner biological rhythms...it's a very individual thing.

While the average sleep time for adults is seven to eight hours, only some 60% actually sleep that much. Apparently, a good night's sleep for the other 40% is less than seven or more than eight. About one in 100 can get by with just five hours. For about the same number, more than 10 hours is perfectly normal.

Some people simply sleep more efficiently than others. They'll spend less time in the lighter stages of sleep, but get in just as much deep sleep and dreaming as someone who sleeps longer. According to scientists, the quality of sleep is more important than the quantity.

If your sleep time is something that your body seems comfortable with, and you generally sleep about that much time with or without the alarm clock, then you're probably getting the right amount of sleep for you. If your daily routine is so demanding that you're not sure, try a little personal sleep research. On your next vacation, go to bed when you are sleepy and get up only when you wake up naturally – sounds wonderful, doesn't it? During the first week, your body may play "catch up," but two weeks should allow your normal sleep cycle to emerge.

Unfortunately, alarm clocks aren't the worst saboteurs of our own biological clocks. We can usually find ways to work our sleep needs into our regualr routine. But unusual stresses, especially emotional ones, can wreck havoc.

Depression almost always disrupts our inner rhythms. Some people need more sleep, mercifully escaping the misery. More often, sleep eludes us, and we may find ourselves victims of "insomnia." In most cases, sleeplessness is a temporary condition, so don't let a few bad nights convince you that you'll never rest easy again. Our inner rhythms are strong and sooner or later, they'll win out over our tensions and anxieties.

Here's a simple routine that can be helpful for the person who's having a bout with insomnia and has begun to think of his bedroom as a torture chamber: If you don't fall asleep within 10 minutes, get up again. It may take a few days, but eventually you are so tired you fall asleep within the 10 minute limit.

The 24-hour a day bedroom

One divorced mother of four teens calls it her "command post." A young married couple calls it their "playground." A busy single executive says it's both her "retreat" and her "branch office." They're all talking about today's new master bedroom.

According to a 1985 Better Homes and Gardens' consumer study, expanding and renovating the master bedroom is third on the list of fix-ups, right after the living room and kitchen. For homes without a conventional den or family room, or where space is allocated less-than-ideally, the master bedroom is becoming an important solution.

Some couples (and most singles) want the master bedroom to express their "private" selves. For some, this means a romantic look, perhaps something nostalgic, like Country French. For others, exotic is the private self they wish to express. Rare woods, Oriental chests, lots of mirrors and, of course, lacquer, help create this dramatic look.

Other couples want some measure of a private retreat, but also need to make room for life's practical side. Space for a small office area can be as simple as the time-honored lady's letter-writing desk, or as elaborate as a modern computer terminal and printer, with storage for accessories. Space for an exercise area may be as small as a free corner in which to swing a jump rope – or as big as a whole wall hung with professional exercise equipment, plus a padded area for floor exercises.

Whether they listen to Whitney Houston's lovesongs or Jan Fonda's workout tapes, more and more couples thing good quality audio equipment and storage for office, exercise and entertainment needs, today's master bedroom often contains an easy chair and ottoman for reading, sewing and having heart-to-heart talks. For those rare but precious hours spent just lounging, a romantic chaise is a popular alternative.

Last but certainly not least, today's master bedroom demands a big masterpiece of a bed. According to a recent Better Homes and Gardens survey, nearly 45 percent of consumers surveyed said they would choose queen size for their next bedding purchase. Another 22 percent said they'd choose king size. To go along with more generous bedding sizes, massively-scaled bed styles are also gaining popularity. Pier beds with light bridges and tall storage units on each side, elaborate four-posters nearly reaching the ceiling, canopy beds, platform beds and other "centerpiece" styles are masterful favorites. Some "console footboards" even conceal televisions.

When it comes to master bedroom accessories, the accent is more than ever on sense appeal. Decorator-sized green plants, once reserved for living rooms, and even mini-greenhouse arrangements are beautifying today's master bedrooms. Fine paintings, lots of mirrors and satiny, sherbet-toned cushions please the senses. Instead of the old pair of table lamps, today's master bedroom may be illuminated by serious reading lamps, track lighting and perhaps, even a beautiful chandelier.

What seems to be gone is the old five-piece bedroom suite: double bed, dresser, chest and twin end tables. The ecclectic look that brought an end to the old dining room has apparently done the same for th eold bedroom. In its place is a new generation of practical, pleasurable furniture and equipment that make the master bedroom the place to be, around the clock.

Beauty of a night's rest

Can a good night's sleep really make you more beautiful? Does proper rest really contribute to a more youthful looking you?

Although few scientific studies have been done on beauty sleep, it's generally agreed that essential repair and regeneration of skin cells accelerates during sleep. In fact, there is evidence that new cells are produced twice as fast when you're asleep than when you're awake.

While sleeping, your body gets rid of skin waste and circulates minerals, vitamins and hormones in the skin. If sleep time is significantly shortened, these materials are circulated less efficiently, capillaries are contracted and the skin doesn't receive the normal solutions that bathe and refresh it.

Skin deprived of needed sleep retains fluid that cause puffiness. The areas under the eyes can become discolored by the pooling of the protein substance known as collagen. Skin tissues sag and we develop dark bags under our eyes.

If you have any doubts about the important role a good night's sleep plays in how you look during the day, think about the appearance of those who insist on burning the candle at both ends. Tired, bloodshot eyes and lifeless skin are the price they pay – along with other dues.

Perhaps the most costly effect of cheating on our sleep needs is the damage that can be done to our energy and our moods. Sleep loss can lead to irritability, sluggishness, difficulty in concentrating, erratic behavior and depression.

Kurt Zizzi, Sealy Sales Representative for Carter's Furniture and Charles Waller, Sealy USA Regional Sales Manager discuss the positive points of the unique construction of the Sealy mattress.

Carter's Furniture aids in more "healthful" sleep

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

It seems that nearly every merchant these days boasts about the "unbelievable sales available" at their prospective places of business.

But one particular Permian Basin business specializes in an important area of everyone's life. Carter's Furniture, located at 501 East Illinois, has focused on the area of aiding their customers in proper sleep.

"Carter's Furniture carries all types of Simmons Beautyrest mattresses, including the Beautyrest waterbeds," said Charles Waller, Regional Sales Manager for Simmons USA in Dallas. "In fact, customers will find Carter's to be the 'headquarters' of the Permian Basin for Simmons products, with the widest selections at quality values."

Tim Carter believes in these products also and that is the exact reason he and his father, Jimmy, have carried the Beautyrest line for many years.

"During this special promotion, we want to make the consumer aware that the lowest price offered in bedding may not necessarily be the best buy. Their number one priority should be to insure a healthful rest through the purchase of proper bedding which will sustain day-to-day wear, a long-range insvestment opportunity" explained Waller.

"And that is just what Simmons does. For over 60 years, the Simmons people have perfected the type of mattress construction used today. Each coil is individually pocketed and conforms to the body contours keeping the spine straight and perfecting the perfect sleep environment."

Waller continued by saying that the Simmons Company is backed by 100 years of business and now is proud to offer the Beautyrest mattress as a "flagship product" with a one-of-a-kind construction.

"And right now, Simmons will offer the Classic Beautyrest at high values to the consumers. This is our premiere product which will be available at the most affordable prices around," said Waller.

During this special promotion, Carter's Furniture will be a part of the nationwide Simmons giveaway, not only for great prices to the customer; but, with every Simmons Beautyrest set purchased, the customer will receive a six-piece set of Corning Ware cookware, a remarkable $65 value."

"We want to help our customers to realize the importance of buying proper bedding. I'd like to think that in offering this convenient gift with a purchase, we are rewarding their 'educational achievement'," concluded Tim Carter.

Carter's Furniture will be offering these special savings on the complete Simmons line during the All-American Sleep Sale, June 6-16.

Writer earns his money where other mouths' are

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As a soap opera writer, Frank Salisbury earns his living putting words in other people's mouths.

Salisbury, who writes the dialogue for two episodes a week of the NBC daytime serial "Santa Barbara," has been writing soap opera dialogue for the past 15 years. His credits include "The Guiding Light," which brought him an Emmy award, "General Hospital," which won him an Emmy nomination, "As the World Turns" and ABC's prime-time serial "Dynasty."

In his spare time, Salisbury turns out yet more dialogue in the form of stage plays. But for contrast he writes comedies rather than the angst and suffering of the soaps. His play "The Seagulls of 1933" won the Los Angeles Drama Critics Award. He has another play, "Shooting in Scotland," which he hopes to have produced on Broadway.

Soap operas consume so much material — most are now an hour long — that they require a platoon of specialized writers. "Santa Barbara" has three head writers, a script editor, three breakdown writers and four dialogue writers. ABC's "General Hospital" has 15 writers, making the credits look like those of "Star Wars."

"The head writers do the bible, the long-term story projections," Salisbury said. "The breakdown writers take that and break it down into episodes and scenes and write very detailed outlines. The dialogue writers write the scripts, and the script editor keeps everything straight."

Salisbury said he's always pleased when an actor follows his dialogue precisely, but he's also resigned to the fact that most actors merely use the script as a blueprint and change the words.

In the years he's worked on the soaps, Salisbury said he has seen the form change considerably. "They've changed both in content and in the way they're done," he said. "They're much franker now, more explicit. And they're done more by committee. There are no more writers shaping the shows alone. They're doing more location work, too. The shows today are geared to younger audiences than they were when I started."

Salisbury spends one day a week at the "Santa Barbara" office for a marathon story conference. He writes the scripts at home on his word processor in three to four days. Often, he finds himself working over a weekend and taking a few days off in the middle of the week.

"It gives me plenty of time to pursue my other projects," he said. "It's like having a grant to work on your own things. We don't make as much as prime-time writers, but it's steady and 52 weeks a year."

Salisbury had written for prime-time anthologies in the 1950s, but gave it up to join a contracting company. He was a vice president when the company was bought out by an Eastern conglomerate.

"I suddenly found myself out of work," he said. "One day I ran into my old agent and he said he handled the head writer of 'The Edge of Night' and he was looking for a writer. I wrote a couple of sample scripts and I was hired. I've been at it for the last 15 years. The longest time I was out of work was six months.

"To be a writer after the confines of working in an office is wonderful. You can go out and play tennis in the afternoon if you feel like it. It's one of the nicest things about the writing profession."

His play "Shooting in Scotland" had been optioned for staging in London but the option was dropped last December.

"We're now knocking on doors in New York," he said. "I think something will happen. It's a good, three-character commercial comedy. It's about a man shooting a movie in Scotland, but it all takes place in Malibu."

Grand Ole Opry's first home holds many music memories

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The floors of Ryman Auditorium sag and show the wear caused by feet keeping time to the music of bygone performances of the Grand Ole Opry.

The footfalls heard on those same boards today are much quieter, as visitors retrace the steps of Opry legends who filled the Ryman stage from 1943 to 1974.

The Ryman, built as the Union Gospel Tabernacle in 1892, was the idea of Col. Tom Ryman, a rowdy riverboat captain turned born-again Christian. Evangelists of the day drew crowds to the red-brick building, but so did the era's popular entertainers.

In 1943, the Opry was moved into the Ryman, and the two remained together for 31 years until the show went across town to its present spacious home at the modern Opryland U.S.A. complex.

The Ryman today is a tourist stop. Younger generations seeing the auditorium get their fill of stories from tour guides; older generations visit a place filled with memories.

Ron Schutta, of West Palm Beach, Fla., remembers visiting the Ryman in 1948 on a family vacation that included Nashville.

Recently, Schutta, arriving in Nashville with his wife, Joyce, to attend a conference, finally made it inside the auditorium. After leaving the Nashville airport, the two headed straight for the Ryman, not even taking time to stop by their hotel first.

"I've always been a country fan," said Schutta, as he stood on the famous stage. "I remember hearing the Opry on the radio a little bit when I was young."

The backstage walls of the Ryman are covered with fading color portraits of Opry stars, along with posters announcing long-since-past performances.

A microphone used during the Ryman's Saturday night radio broadcasts stands on the stage, attracting many a would-be star to pose behind it for a photographic memento of their moment in the Opry spotlight.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A busy social life and improved working conditions are part of the picture. Flexibility will give you an edge over the competition. Computers, medicine and nutrition hold special interest. Romance is both spirited and a source of joy. Your inquiring mind leads you to an important discovery. You are able to accomplish something others have failed to do.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Singer Tom Jones, actress Jessica Tandy, rock star Prince, basketball's Bill Russell, Rep. Peter Rodino (D-N.J.), poet Nikki Giovanni, conductor Fred Waring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spending extra time with a child pays off. Someone is depending on you; open your heart but not your pocketbook. Too much confidence can be just as bad as too little.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Help loved one find a new creative challenge. Your warm personality wins you many friends and admirers. An exciting romance is part of the picture. Sports activities capture your interest. Go slow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be assertive and you will get your point across. Family responsibilities lie heavily on you only because you are unwilling to delegate more of the work. To avoid exhaustion, change your ways!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tell partner how things stand financially and he or she will be more cooperative. A social invitation you thought was not coming finally shows up. A light touch is fine in romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your serious side takes over today. Some will be pleasantly surprised. Spend as much time as you can with loved ones. Stand up for your beliefs. Your views will be upheld.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be direct when differences of opinion arise. A personal relationship benefits from open communication. You reap new financial rewards from your efforts. Friction between relatives could upset vacation plans. Offer a compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let your good mood spread. Don't try to force your recreational preferences on others. Look for activities the whole group can enjoy. A wonderful day to have lunch with an old friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Insecurity could be at the root of a problem that arises this weekend. See things as they really are. A conflict of principle is not easy to resolve. Romance involves a fun adventure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Have an alternative in mind if today's weather interferes with your weekend plans. Your love life gets a welcome boost. A daydream may be more attractive than the real thing. Contact an old pal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to attend a cultural event or art show opening. Bring a favorite hobby down to earth and it could earn you extra money. Share a special outing with romantic partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New spiritual growth brings you greater peace of mind. Involvement with a community project becomes very attractive. A romantic excursion lives up to your expectations. You could have second thoughts about marriage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make a final commitment only if you are ready to accept the responsibilities that go with it. A good time to think about any psychological hang-ups that have hampered romance. Be honest.

The odds on a simple finesse succeeding are 50 percent; either the player you are finessing against has the key card or his partner does. However, that does not mean that all finesses are equal. There are a number of reasons why you might choose one over another.

Suppose you get to three no trump via the auction shown. You and your partner both have balanced hands worth a minimum opening bid and no eight-card major-suit fit, so the no trump game is a natural contract to reach.

West leads his fourth-best heart, you try the jack (after all, the opening lead could be from the king-queen) and capture East's king with your ace; there is no point to a hold-up. You can take finesses in spades and diamonds. As a matter of fact, you can hook the diamond either way. What do you plan to do?

First, if you plan to take the diamond finesse, it is correct to lead to the ace and then finesse. That way you can bring in the suit even if East has queen-fourth, and you give yourself the chance of dropping a bare queen.

However, you can improve your odds considerably by opting to take the spade finesse. Why? Because you can combine that with trying to drop the queen of diamonds!

At trick two, lead a diamond to the ace and return the suit to your king. If the lady is fickle and does not appear, you will have to fall back on the spade finesse. Once in a while, however, the cards are going to lie as they do in the diagram above. One of your opponents is going to hold the doubleton queen, and you will have nine tricks without having to resort to a finesse.

McAuliffe letter nets $1,500

NEW YORK (AP) — A handwritten letter from Christa McAuliffe, one of seven astronauts killed in the Jan. 28 space shuttle Challenger explosion, has been sold for $1,500, an auctioneer says.

The Aug. 16 letter was written to a New York City man who had asked the Concord, N.H., schoolteacher what it felt like to be selected as the first ordinary citizen in space, auctioneer Herman Darvick said.

Darvick said Thursday night's $1,500 bid came by mail from a California collector who had viewed a catalogue of goods offered at the auction.

According to Darvick, the letter, written on NASA stationary, closed with this paragraph: "I'm looking forward to my training in Houston and hope that you are able to tune in to my lessons which will be broadcast live during the shuttle flight."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mario Puzo has been signed by Paramount Pictures to write the screenplay for "The Godfather, Part III," which will be produced by journalist-author Nicholas Gage.

Neither financial terms nor a release date were announced Thursday by Frank G. Mancuso, Paramount's chairman and chief executive officer.

The film will continue the saga of the Corleone organized crime family created by Puzo in his best-selling 1969 novel "The Godfather."

Puzo also wrote the Oscar-winning screenplays for the 1972 movie version of his book and the 1974 sequel, "The Godfather, Part II." Both won Academy Awards as best picture and garnered a total of 16 Oscar nominations.

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Jesse F. "T-Bone" Winters, former pitcher for the New York Giants, died Thursday morning at his home. He was 92.

Winters, a former Abilene mayor and longtime businessman, was born south of Stephenville. He attended John Tarleton Junior College, now Tarleton State University, for two years before entering Simmons College, now Hardin-Simmons University, where he graduated.

He played baseball and football at John Tarleton and later pitched major league baseball. He played for John J. McGraw's New York Giants, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Hartford, Toronto and San Francisco.

He was inducted into the Tarleton State University Hall of Fame in 1980. He got his nickname at Tarleton while eating steak with the team. He ordered "T-bone" explaining he thought a "plain steak" wasn't good enough for a "fireball pitcher."

Aged manuscript may be genesis of modern math

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — An aged manuscript newly acquired by Arizona State University may force scholars to rewrite the still-shadowy history of medieval mathematics.

Although the 162-page "Algebra" has not yet been fully translated or analyzed, researchers who have seen some of it are ecstatic. They say it is far more sophisticated than would have been suspected for a book written in 1344.

Its completion, they believe, may have marked the beginnings of modern mathematics, a turning point previously thought to have taken place more than two centuries later.

One mystery is who wrote it. In common with a Hebrew translation prepared in 1473, the ASU folio credits "Dardi of Pisa." None of the three other known versions — each slightly different — identifies an author, and Dardi's name isn't known in any other connection.

Jeanie Brink believes the material now in Tempe "will revolutionize the history of mathematics by showing that in the 14th century, complex algebraic solutions were possible."

Ms. Brink directs the Arizona Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies, an ASU-based consortium of the state's three universities.

Whatever the scholar's true name was, she believes his calculations could prove to be epochal. She contends they heralded the genesis of modern mathematics.

We're going back to Boston, Boston...

Tap punch fires upset

HOUSTON (AP) — Boston's Jerry Sichting called the punch a tap. Houston's Ralph Sampson called it unfortunate.

But the wild swing Thursday night that triggered a bench-clearing brawl and got Sampson thrown out Game 5 of the NBA championship series lit a fire under the Rockets, propelling them to a 111-96 victory and sending the best-of-7 series back to Boston with the Celtics ahead 3-2.

"It was just an incident that happened," said Boston's Dennis Johnson, who also got nailed in the melee, leaving him with a bloody left eye. "Ralph hit me with a right. I finished the game OK. I won't need major surgery. I got hit and I bled."

With 9:35 left in the second period, Sampson and Boston center Bill Walton jostled under the Rockets basket and Sampson started swinging at Sichting, who is 15 inches shorter than the 7-4 forward.

THEN Walton, 6-11, stepped in and pulled Sampson to the floor.

After several minutes, referees and coaches were able to separate the players restore order.

Sampson, who averaged 18.9 points and 11.1 rebounds a game during the season, said that earlier in the game he tried to set a pick on Sichting and Sichting held him. Then, in a battle for position under the Boston basket, Sampson suddenly started swinging. He said Sichting hit him.

Sampson was the only player ejected.

His 12 points had helped Houston to a 34-33 lead, but when he left, the Rockets ran wild, rolling up a 58-47 halftime lead, and Boston never got closer.

"I was trying to hold someone back," Sichting said, who described the punch from Sampson as "a little tap around the temple."

"I had no idea. I barely turned around."

Asked if he started it, Sichting replied: "I'm not that stupid, you know. He's got a long reach."

"We jostled a little before the foul. I think I said something about the elbow. There was a lot of yelling out there. Everybody was pushing and tugging."

Walton declined to comment on the fight.

"We just didn't do anything well tonight," he said.

Sampson said he regretted the incident. "I was very emotional during the game and I will continue to be emotional the rest of the series, but there won't be any more fights," he said in a statement after the game. "I thought that a foul should have been called. I had to protect myself."

BIRD issued a warning to Sampson now that the series is returning Sunday to Boston, where the Celtics took the first two games.

"He better wear his hardhat," Bird said. "There will be a lot of contact in Boston. Our crowd will be louder than their's on Sunday and they are mean and nasty just like here."

After the fight, the Rockets raced away to a 58-47 halftime lead and Boston never got closer.

"It may have ignited them but they were leading at that point and we weren't playing too bad," Johnson said.

Teammate Kevin McHale agreed. "I think psychologically we went down after the fight and they seemed to turn it up."

Houston Rocket Akeem Olajuwon, right, throws a punch at Boston Celtic Dennis Johnson during Game 5 of the NBA championship series in Houston Thursday.

'Lone Tower' sinks Celtics

HOUSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics have learned what Denver and Los Angeles already know — fight with one of the Houston Rockets' Twin Towers and the other one is likely to deliver a knockout punch.

Enraged by the ejection of 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson for fighting in the second quarter, the Rockets rallied around 7-0 Akeem Olajuwon and roared to a 111-96 victory Thursday night, keeping the Rockets alive in the NBA title series.

The victory narrowed Boston's lead in the series to 3-2, and returned the best-of-7 series to Boston on Sunday afternoon. Game 7 also would be in Boston, on Wednesday night.

The Celtics easily won the first two games of the series in Boston Garden, where they have lost only once this season under their 15 championship flags that hang from the ceiling.

Houston, which lost in six games to Boston in the 1981 title series, also is marked by history — no team has ever come back from a 3-1 deficit in the championship series.

THURSDAY'S victory marked the third time in the 1986 NBA playoffs that the Rockets have gathered around one Tower when the other was ejected from a game.

Sampson was sent to the dressing room with 9:40 to go in the second quarter following a bench-clearing fight that started between Sampson and Celtics guard Jerry Sichting.

With Sampson gone, the Rockets banded together as they have in the past.

Houston eliminated the Denver Nuggets in the sixth game of their second-round series and the Los Angeles Lakers in the fifth game of the Western Conference championship after Olajuwon had been thrown out of both games for fighting.

"That was the turning point, with Sampson out. The Rockets really stepped up to another level," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "When Sampson went out we lost our intensity and the Rockets gained more intensity and took it to us."

Houston led 34-33 when a scuffle broke out.

Sampson battled first with Sichting, then guard Dennis Johnson and finally Celtic center Bill Walton before order was restored.

With Sampson in the dressing room and reserve Jim Petersen in his place on the court, the Rockets outscored the Celtics 20-8 and never trailed again as a deafening capacity crowd of 16,016 roared its approval over Houston's last home game.

"We were not going to lose in front of our fans," said guard Robert Reid, who had 17 assists and 13 points. "I sat right here in 80-81 and heard that team celebrate the championship. I couldn't let that happen here again."

The halftime score was 58-47 and the Rockets stretched that to 86-65 entering the fourth quarter, as Houston outscored Boston in the third quarter for the first time in the series.

WHAT DID Rockets Coach Bill Fitch tell the Rockets after the fight?

"The speech was, 'There goes 25 points walking to the dressing room and everyone has to pick it up,' " Fitch said. "For the first time we turned up the meter and got the running game going. We played like there was no tomorrow."

And now there is

Sampson declined to answer questions about the fight, but in a statement, said he was sorry it happened.

"I'm very emotional and will continue to play emotionl," he said. "Somebody jumped at me and I reacted to protect myself."

With Sampson gone, Olajuwon picked up the slack. He had 10 points before the fight, 22 afterward. He also finished with 14 rebounds and eight blocked shots, which tied Walton's nine-year-old championship series record.

"Maybe the team just got closer together," Olajuwon said. "When Ralph got kicked out we just had to win. We couldn't end our season here.

"We came out to show them that we could beat them good and not just by one point."

Petersen, and reserve guards Mitchell Wiggins and Allen Leavell also rose to the occasion.

"Pete (Petersen) rose up and played the game he's been dreaming about since he was a little kid," Fitch said. "Wiggins played some great defense and Leavell helped out too."

Petersen had six points and 12 rebounds as Houston outrebounded the Celtics 56-37. Wiggins had 16 points and seven rebounds and Leavell had seven points and four assists.

Dr. Naismith tried for non-contact sport

Sports Anaylsis
HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — When Dr. Naismith scrambled up that rickety ladder at Springfield College with a peach basket tucked under his arm, the idea was to create a non-contact sport.

Nice try, doc. It did not quite succeed.

There was, for example, Thursday night's fifth game of the NBA finals between the Boston Celtics and Houston Rockets. They could have used boxing promoters Bob Arum and Don King to stage the brawl.

WHEN HOUSTON'S Ralph Sampson, 7-foot-4 and 230 pounds' worth of heavyweight, was finished fighting Celtics' guards Jerry Sichting and Dennis Johnson and reserve center Bill Walton, he was thrown out of the game — and the Rockets were thrust into it.

Strangely, Sampson's ejection might have been the best thing that could have happened to Houston. Even though he was playing inspired basketball, the Rockets were not exactly dominating the game until he started throwing haymakers.

After he left, Houston played on a wave of adrenaline that turned the game around and made it a 111-96 Rockets' rout, sending the series back to Boston with the Celtics leading 3-2.

Had Houston Coach Bill Fitch seized the emotion of the moment with a stirring sideline speech to spur his team to victory?

"The speech," Fitch said, "was when 25 points walked into the locker room."

Sampson, so often criticized for being too timid, went at it first with Sichting, 15 inches shorter at 6-1. There was a preliminary exchange of elbows followed by some big-league boxing.

"I don't even know why he hit me," Sichting said. "What could I do? I threw a couple of elbows and then he was punching everybody."

Johnson, at 6-4 a foot shorter than Sampson, came out of the scrap with a cut at the corner of his left eye.

"It was just an incident that happened," he said. "Ralph hit me with a right. I got hit and I bled. I won't need major surgery."

The surgery was performed instead by the Rockets, now faced with playing the rest of the game without one of their most important weapons. Poor Houston. Surely, the roof was about to fall in on the Rockets.

Guess again.

"Maybe we relaxed," Boston's Kevin McHale decided. "Maybe they got fired up. It's tough to say."

Shouldn't it have been easier for the Celtics, not having to cope with Sampson? Maybe, McHale thought, that was precisely the problem.

"It wasn't easier at all," he said. "They got more aggressive. They played much better after that. I don't know why we didn't react in an aggressive manner.

"I definitely don't think they are better without Ralph. I think, pychologically, we went down after the fight and they seemed to turn it up."

With Sampson gone, Boston managed only four baskets for final 9½ minutes of the second quarter, one of them a goaltending call against Akeem Olajuwon. They went from one point behind when Sampson was ejected to 11 down at the half. And it got worse after that.

"We lost our composure," Larry Bird said. "There's no question they got the majority of the calls. I think the refs thought they had to protect them."

Sampson answered no questions about the fight, preferring to issue a statement in which he said, "The incident on the court was unfortunate. I'm sorry it happened. The NBA is not that type of league. Somebody jumped at me. I did what I had to do to protect myself."

Then he made a promise.

"I was very emotional during the game and I will continue to be emotional for the rest of the series. But there won't be any more fights."

Dr. Naismith would be thrilled.

Walker's slam saves Angels, 12-10

Dodgers head for Midland after twin loss

From Staff and Wire Reports

BEAUMONT — Midland designated hitter Glen Walker blasted a grand slam home run just on the fair side of the left field foul pole in the ninth inning to provide the Angels with a 12-10 Texas League baseball victory over Beaumont's Golden Gators here Thursday before heading for the Tall City in the wee hours this morning to take on the San Antontio Dodgers at 7:30 p.m. today.

Walker's hit Thursday ended a 3 hour, 12 minute affair played in the rain after being delayed 1:20 at the start. His homer came off Gator reliever Rusty Ford, who walked the bases loaded to start the inning.

DeWayne Buice, the third Midland pitcher, picked up the victory, improving to 5-2. Ford absorbed the loss in staying winless in four decisions.

Beaumont rallied from 6-3 and 8-7 deficits to lead 10-8 before Walker's grand slam. The Gators scored three times in the eighth inning, with two of the runs scoring on a bases-loaded single by Joey Cora.

The other came on a rundown as Cora was tagged out, setting off a bench-emptying brawl when Angel shortstop Jeff Schaefer went for Cora after applying the tag near first base.

The Angels scored twice in the top half of the eighth inning to go ahead 8-7.

A triple by Raul Tovar accounted for one of the runs while an error by Gator third baseman Tom Brassil netted the other.

Midland's eighth inning erased a three-run Beaumont rally in the seventh that put the Gators on top 7-6. Steve Lubratich singled in two of the runs, then scored himself on Shane Mack's second double of the night.

Beaumont starter Mike Mills flirted with a no-hitter in the early going until Midland spoiled things with a six-run rally in the fifth inning to wipe out a 3-0 Gator lead.

Paul Tovar broke up the Mills' no-hit bid with a single past a diving Cora at second base to lead off the inning.

The Angels grabbed five hits including a two-run single by James Randall and a double from Bill Merrifield that brought in two more runs. An error by Gator catcher Sandy Alomar accounted for one of the Angels' runs.

Midland now returns to Angels Stadium for a 7:30 p.m. game with the San Antonio Dodgers today in the first of a six-game homestand. Tonight is KNFM/Burger King Family Fun Night and Southwest Airlines will give away a trip to Disneyland and a California Angels game for a family of four.

Midland enters tonight's series opener with San Antonio with a 27-26 overall record, but trail first place El Paso by 2½ games in the Texas League West.

El Paso swept a doubleheader over San Antonio, 6-0 and 4-2, Thursday to increase its lead and send the Dodgers to Midland reeling. Jackson's contest at Tulsa and Shreveport's game at Arkansas were both postponed due to rain.

In the Diablos' opener against San Antonio, Dan Scarpetta had a two-hitter for the win and a 6-3 record. He has won six straight games. El Paso batted 10 hits.

The Dodgers' Chris Chapman hit a double to lead off the fifth inning. San Antonio's other hit was a seventh-inning double by Matt Devereaux.

The Diablos scored four runs in the fifth, including doubles by Alan Cartwright and Lavell Freeman and a single by Steve Stanicek.

The loser was Bill Brennon, 3-4.

In the nightcap, El Paso rallied from a 2-1 deficit in the top of the seventh with three runs. Charlie O'Brien, Stanicek, Freeman and Jesus Alfaro contributed singles. John Gibbons hit a sacrifice fly.

Jay Aldrich, who pitched the final two innings, was the winner in relief. Aldrich and Tim Crews, who pitched the first five, combined on a six-hitter.

Dodgers cover Astros in 'Honey'

Associated Press

While Rick Honeycutt isn't much of a complete-game pitcher since he underwent surgery on his left shoulder following the 1984 season, he still can get people out.

Honeycutt was at his best Thursday night, allowing only two hits in eight innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the National League West-leading Houston Astros 1-0 in the opener of a four-game series.

The Dodgers scored the game's only run in the bottom of the sixth inning on a leadoff triple by Steve Sax to the center-field wall and a sacrifice fly by Ken Landreaux to deep right-center.

Honeycutt, 3-3, walked one and struck out a season-high seven before being replaced by Ken Howell at the start of the ninth. Howell retired the Astros to pick up his third save.

"I think I'm past the ego part of trying to complete games," said Honeycutt, a 31-year-old left-hander who doesn't have a complete game this year and had only one last season. "I was losing it real quick.

"It's tough, a two-hitter, you really hate to come out. It's as good as I've thrown this year. You want to stay in. But the eighth inning took a lot out of me.

"We lost four games (in the standings to Houston) on the last road trip. We're playing the leaders for four games, we can make that ground up right away."

The losing pitcher was Houston starter Manny Hernandez, who blanked the Dodgers on one hit until the sixth in his major-league debut.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier downplayed the importance of this series, the first time the Dodgers and Astros have met this season.

The victory moved the fifth-place Dodgers within 5½ games of Houston.

"I don't worry about that right now," Lanier said. "It's too early in the season and the teams are too close together to start talking about our main competition.

"Honeycutt pitched very well. We didn't have too many chances to score."

Honeycutt retired the first 13 Houston batters before Kevin Bass beat out a grounder to deep short with one out in the fifth for an infield single.

Steve Sax tripled to center leading off the Dodgers' sixth against Hernandez. Landreaux followed with his sacrifice fly to deep right-center.

The Dodgers were held hitless by Hernandez until Sax lined a single with two outs in the third. Hernandez went 5⅔ innings, allowing only three hits while walking three and striking out one. Relievers Aurelio Lopez and Charlie Kerfeld held Los Angeles hitless the rest of the way for a combined three-hitter.

Houston picked up its second hit in the eighth when Phil Garner grounded a leadoff single up the middle. Honeycutt struck out Bailey and retired Dickie Thon and pinch-hitter Jim Pankovits on forceouts.

Baseball

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Braves 4, Padres 2

Zane Smith started Atlanta's first triple play in eight years and pitched the Braves over San Diego.

The triple play came in the third inning and ended in a contested call at home plate. The play ignited a series of San Diego arguments and resulted in Steve Garvey's first ejection from a game in his 16-year major-league career.

With Leon Roberts on third and Tony Gwynn on first, Kevin McReynolds hit a grounder back to Smith, who threw to second baseman Glenn Hubbard for a forceout. Hubbard relayed back to first baseman Bob Horner to retire McReynolds while Roberts broke for the plate.

Horner threw to catcher Ozzie Virgil, and Roberts slid under the tag but missed home plate and was tagged out. Garvey, the on-deck batter, was ejected during an ensuing argument.

Smith, 5-5, gave up six hits, including Carmelo Martinez's homer leading off the ninth. The home run was the first allowed by Smith in 98⅔ innings this year and brought on reliever Gene Garber, who got the final three outs for his fourth save.

Phillies 7, Expos 3

The Philadelphia Phillies, who have been lagging behind in the National League East this season, are starting to hit their stride, says catcher Darren Daulton.

Daulton hit a three-run homer, capping a five-run first inning and the Phillies won for the ninth time in their last 10 games and sent Montreal to its fifth straight loss.

"We've had a tendency lately to score a lot of runs and get them quickly," Daulton said. "When you get into that kind of pattern, you start feeling you can do it every night."

Cardinals 4, Cubs 3

Andy Van Slyke hit a two-run triple and Ozzie Smith hit a two-run double, leading Bob Forsch and St. Louis past Chicago.

Forsch, 5-3, tied Hall of Famer Dizzy Dean for fifth place on St. Louis' all-time victory list with his 134th victory. Forsch raised his career record against Chicago to 18-8.

Forsch took a five-hit shutout and 4-0 lead into the eighth before the Cubs broke their scoreless streak at 22⅔ innings with three runs. Todd Worrell pitched the final 1⅓ innings for his ninth save.

Mets 7, Pirates 0

Bob Ojeda pitched a five-hitter and George Foster continued his hot hitting with a two-run homer as New York beat Pittsburgh.

Ojeda, 7-2, struck out three and walked three in pitching his first NL shutout. It was Ojeda's second complete game of the season.

Foster's second-inning homer was his 10th of the season and sixth in his last 10 games.

The Mets won for the ninth time in their last 12 games.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Brewers 7, Red Sox 5

Rookie Dale Sveum hit a three-run double during a four-run third inning, extending his hitting streak to 14 games, and rookie Bill Wegman scattered six hits over 7⅓ innings as Milwaukee stopped Boston's five-game winning streak.

After Boston had pulled within 5-3, Rob Deer of the Brewers hit a two-run homer, his 10th, in the eighth.

Rich Gedman and Dwight Evans hit consecutive homers off former teammate Mark Clear in the Boston ninth to cut the final margin to two runs.

Wegman, 1-5, got his first 1986 victory in his 12th start. Clear got his fourth save.

Royals 8, Twins 2

Rookie Scott Bankhead pitched 5⅓ innings of scoreless relief and George Brett homered and drove in four runs, pacing Kansas City over Milwaukee.

With their sixth victory in seven games, the Royals moved to 27-25, two games over .500, for the first time since April 20.

Bankhead, called up from Class AAA Omaha two weeks ago, raised his record to 2-0. He gave up five hits and struck out four, entering the game in the second inning after starter Mark Gubicza threw 13 straight balls and walked in two runs.

Brett had an RBI single, a two-run home run and a run-scoring grounder.

Orioles 7, Mariners 1

Lee Lacy drove in two runs, including an RBI single during a five-run fifth inning that led Baltimore over Seattle.

Storm Davis, tagged with three losses in the Orioles' current 18-6 surge, allowed one run on seven hits over eight innings.

Mike Young homered for Baltimore and Ken Phelps homered for the Mariners.

White Sox 9, A's 5

Harold Baines drove in four runs and Greg Walker hit a home run to lead Neil Allen and Chicago over Oakland.

The victory was only the second in the last 12 games for the White Sox and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Chris Evert Lloyd is set to return a shot in a 6-1, 6-1 win over Hana Mandlikova Thursday in French Open action.

Martina, Chris in expected finals

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd won their semifinal matches at the French Open tennis championship Thursday and will meet for the 69th time Saturday to battle for the title.

The world's top two-ranked women managed to avoid the upset wave that washed away so many other hopes on the red clay courts of Roland Garros stadium, though Navratilova seemed a potential victim before fighting back to defeat sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 4-6, 7-6, 6-2.

Lloyd brushed aside No. 5 Hana Mandlikova, also of Czechoslovakia, 6-1, 6-1.

"I could have easily lost the match by three points," Navratilova said after her close scrape against Sukova. "I'm thrilled to have won."

The women's final will be a rematch of last year's championship match, which Lloyd won.

"It's not water under the bridge," Navratilova said of that three-set Lloyd victory, "because I will always remember."

On Friday, the men's semifinals will be staged with top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia meeting American Johan Kriek, and Henri Leconte of France taking on Sweden's Mikael Pernfors. The men's title match is scheduled for Sunday.

The "Chris and Martina Show" has been touring the world since 1973, when they first tried out their opposing styles in Akron, Ohio. Navratilova holds the career edge 36-32.

Fittingly, the first time they moved their act into the big time was at Roland Garros, meeting in the French Open final in 1975. Lloyd, then ranked No. 1 in the world, won.

French Open

Saturday will be Lloyd's 33rd Grand Slam singles final. She has won 17. Navratilova, who has won 13, will be making her 20th bid for a women's singles crown at either the French Open, Wimbledon, the U.S. Open or the Australian Open. She has won 10 times in her last 16 Grand Slam appearances.

Saturday's contest will be the 14th time the two have battled for a Grand Slam crown.

On Thursday, though, there was a serious question as to whether Navratilova would be there.

"I cannot be more disappointed than I am," Sukova said. "The tiebreaker was 7-4, so I was only three points away. In the second set, I had 30-love on my serve and lost the game. It shouldn't have gone to a tiebreak.

"At 40-15 I missed two easy shots. You can't do that if you want to win."

The 6-foot-2 Sukova, who upset Navratilova in the 1984 Australian Open, snapping Navratilova's record 74-match winning streak and halting her bid for a record seventh consecutive Grand Slam singles title, had the correct answer for every problem Navratilova presented in the first two sets.

"She put pressure on me, coming to the net," Navratilova said. "She just seemed to get everything. She half-volleyed and volleyed.

Sukova led 4-3 in the tiebreak before Navratilova ripped off the next four points to capture the tiebreak and level the match at one set each.

Garcia nails world record jump

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Esmereida Garcia, a senior at Florida State and the defending women's NCAA champion in the triple jump, wasn't sure how she managed a world's best.

All she knows is there's room for improvement, and it could come on Saturday.

"I felt good in all three jumps, but I won't say I was perfect," Garcia said Thursday night after qualifying for Saturday's finals with a leap of 44 feet, 10¾ inches — four inches longer than the previous world's best. "I didn't do anything differently. I just tried to do everything technically correct."

Garcia's mark in the women's triple jump was a world's best but not considered a world record because the event is not widespread outside the United States and is and not recognized by the sport's international governing body. It nevertheless was a meet and U.S. collegiate record.

AMERICAN and meet records also were set in qualifications by Gail Devers of UCLA in the women's 100-meter dash and by Ken Flax of Oregon in the men's hammer throw. Devers, a sophomore, was also the fast qualifier in the women's 100-hurdles.

In the night's only final, Jolanda Jones of Houston won the heptathlon, beating Conny Ecki of Washington State 5,826-5,718.

Garcia topped the previous world's best of 44-6¾ set by Wendy Brown of Southern California in the NCAA meet last year. Brown was sixth among the 12 who qualified for the finals. Second was Terri Turner of Texas, whose distance of 44-9¾ is now the American record because Garcia is a native of Brazil.

Garcia was surprised by her performance.

"I felt so tight this morning," said Garcia, a member of the 1984 Brazilian Olympic team in the long jump and the 100-meter dash. "I needed to go out for a little run and a stretch earlier today. I wasn't feeling my best today."

In the two-day heptathlon, Jones, a sophomore, totaled a personal best of 5,826 points, getting firsts in three of the seven events. Ecki's total also was a personal best, while Eva Karblom of Brigham Young finished third with 5,621.

Earlier, Flax broke the meet record in the hammer throw three times. His best throw of 255 feet, 1 inch came on the last of his three attempts and matched the collegiate record set this year by Washington State's Tore Gustafsson of Sweden.

However, Flax' throw was measured metrically at 78.74 meters, two centimeters short of Gustafsson's mark although the imperial conversions are the same. Gustafsson had set the meet record of 246-10 in last year's final.

Washington State's Gabriel Tiacoh of the Ivory Coast, the Olympic silver medalist, and Arkansas' Roddie Haley, the defending champion, advanced to a showdown on Saturday in the finals of the men's 400-meter dash.

Tiacoh, owner of the fastest time in the world this year at 44.32 seconds, won a tough heat in 44.74, a stadium record. Haley, in an easier heat, cruised to victory in 45.51.

"As smooth as he (Tiacoh) looked, he's going to give me trouble," Haley said of his chances of repeating as NCAA champion.

Haley said he talked to Tiacoh after their heats and said, "I told him he looked strong and he said he thought I looked strong."

AND IT wasn't a psych job, Haley said. "I was dead serious."

Haley has beaten Tiacoh each of their two previous meetings.

Devers was clocked at 13.08 in winning her heat in the women's 100-meter high hurdles. She later broke the meet record in the 100-meter qualifying with a time of 11.12, the fastest in the world this year by an American. It broke the meet mark of 11.16 set by Jeanette Bolden of UCLA in 1982.

There was a surprise in the men's 100-meter qualifying, as Roy Martin, the heralded freshman from Southern Methodist, failed to reach the final. Martin finished fourth in his heat, won by Lee McRae of Pittsburgh in 10.14. The second-fastest qualifier, at 10.15, was Tennessee's Sam Graddy, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist.

Ormsby survives suicide attempt after track race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kathy Ormsby, a promising distance runner from North Carolina State, remained in serious condition today with spinal injuries, following an admitted suicide attempt — the reason for which still is a mystery.

The 21-year-old Ormsby has been in the surgery intensive care unit at Wishard Memorial Hospital since Wednesday night when she jumped off a bridge, following what she considered a disappointing performance in the 10,000-meter race during the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

A statement from Ormsby's parents, Dale and Sallie Ormsby, issued Thursday through the hospital, said their daughter "suffered a spinal injury with spinal cord damage and chest injuries."

"We are unsure at the present time if the damage is permanent," added the statement. "Kathy is awake and alert. She will be undergoing further testing."

A hospital spokeswoman, Karen Wilczewski, said it was too early to tell whether Ormsby would be paralyzed. Not "until we know more," Wilczewski said.

North Carolina State Coach Rollie Geiger, who found Ormsby in a grassy area below the bridge, about 20 feet from the water, said Thursday, "She cannot talk because of tubes in her mouth."

The distraught Geiger also related a touching story that took place at Ormsby's bedside Thursday.

"Her mother and father told me that Kathy this morning took her mother's hand and on the hand wrote, 'Good luck, Janet,' " Geiger said.

The reference was to teammate Janet Smith, who was supposed to run with Ormsby in the same qualifying heat of the 5,000 meters Thursday night.

The 5,000 qualifying was canceled when the number of qualifiers was reduced from 16 to 14 with the withdrawals of Ormsby and Ellen Reynolds of Duke. All 14 were advanced to Saturday's final, instead of the normal 12.

The report of the incident, filed at the police department of the Indiana University Purdue University of Indianapolis, listed it as a suicide attempt.

"I don't know how anybody could have fallen off (the bridge) without climbing up on the top, which is about 3½ feet to 4 feet high," Lt. Doug Cox of the IUPUI police department said.

The drop from the top to the bottom of the bridge is about 40-50 feet.

Cox said that Ormsby jumped off the White River bridge, about two blocks from the stadium, after dropping out of the 10,000 after 6,500 meters.

"She left the track stadium and people believed she had just continued to jog after dropping out," Cox said. "She jogged toward the New York street bridge and then did jump off."

Cox said she was found by Geiger and told him she had jumped.

Asked about a possible motive, Cox said, "The speculation is that she is a real perfectionist and didn't think she had done very well. She felt despondent because of the way she was running."

Westchester Golf

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Sieckmann completed a 65 with a birdie on the last hole and tied Jay Haas for the first-round lead Thursday of the $600,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

Sieckmann, who played several seasons on the Asian tour before joining the American circuit two years ago, took a share of the lead when he got up and down from a bunker for birdie-4 on No. 18.

Bill Israelson was two strokes off the co-leaders with a 67 that included only 23 putts.

"It's always nice to get off to a good start, but you don't expect to shoot 65," said Sieckmann, who won three Asian tournaments in 1981 but didn't qualify for the American tour until 1984.

Haas scattered nine birdies across his card in his 6-under-par effort.

"I don't think I've ever had nine birdies in a round before," said Haas, now in his 10th season of PGA Tour activity.

He chipped in from about 60 feet early in the round, had a string of four consecutive birdies at one stretch and capped his round with an 18th hole birdie.

But Haas, the first man off the tee, also had three bogeys — one of them a one-putt — and only six pars in his early-morning round at the hilly, 6,723- yard Westchester Country Club course in suburban New York.

"I got away with one today," he said. "I've hit the ball a lot better and come up with a score of 70 or 72. But that's golf."

He said the key to his round was the long chip that found the hole and "turned a 5 into a 3" on the fourth hole. He used only 25 strokes on the greens and made "3" on six of the first eight holes he played.

"I hadn't played very well in the pro-am, and I hadn't played particularly well in recent weeks, so I didn't go out with particularly high hopes," said Haas, who scored the last of his five career victories almost four years ago.

"It's a little frustrating. I feel in my heart I'm ready to win again, but for one reason or another it just hasn't happened," he said.

Inkster takes 2-stroke lead

LPGA McDonald's

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Juli Inkster put together two opposite philosophies, aggresiveness and conservatism, and parlayed them into a two-stroke lead after one round of the $450,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship.

Inkster, 25, of Los Altos, Calif., shot a 4-under-par 68 Thursday over the 6,313-yard White Manor Country Club course. She carded six birdies and two bogeys.

Two strokes back are Mary Beth Zimmerman, Patty Sheehan, Amy Alcott, Marta Figueras-Dotti and Bonnie Lauer.

"You have to be aggressive but conservative," Inkster, the 1983 LPGA Rookie of the Year, said.

She then explained the divergent approaches.

"You have to be aggressive and take advantage of some par-5s, but conservative on par-3s, get a par and get out of there."

Inkster, the tour's fourth leading money winner and a five-time winner including one title this year, wasn't overly impressed with her opening round.

"I didn't do anything well." she said. "I just hit the ball, put up some numbers.

"I was frustrated the whole day until, plop, plop."

The plop, plop were birdies on the final two holes which made the round.

"As we walked off at 18, my caddy said, 'For what you were doing you had a pretty good round.'"

Inkster also was surprised to be in the lead because she insisted she's not a quick starter.

"I play best on Saturday and Sunday," she observed.

Inkster said she is trying to conquer her biggest problem on the golf course, a lack of patience.

"I want it all to happen at once," she explained.

Cowboys, Miami win CWS games

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — One gopher ball wasn't enough to change Miami Coach Ron Fraser's opinion of his ace reliever, Rick "Spider" Raether.

Louisiana State's Joey Belle homered off Raether with one out in the ninth inning of Thursday's College World Series game. The solo blast trimmed Miami's lead to 4-3 and sent Fraser to the mound to visit Raether.

"I told him that he was the best relief pitcher in college baseball," Fraser said. "I also feel he's the best relief pitcher I've ever seen in college ball. So I told him that we had our bags packed up and we were ready to go back to the hotel with a win."

RAETHER retired the next two batters to knock LSU out of the double-elimination Series. The third-ranked Hurricanes, 49-16 and 2-1 in the tournament, play Arizona Saturday.

In Thursday's first game, fourth-rated Oklahoma State eliminated Loyola Marymount 11-5. The Cowboys play No. 1 Florida State on Saturday.

Florida State and fifth-ranked Arizona, the only teams who haven't lost in the tournament, square off at 7:10 p.m. CDT today.

Miami's Bob O'Brien pitched 4 2-3 innings of one-run relief against LSU to improve his record to 5-2. The side-winding Raether replaced O'Brien to start the ninth inning and earned his 16th save.

"I wanted to make it through the ninth," O'Brien said. "But when you have Spider, why try it?"

Raether refused to talk with a reporter after the game.

Belle's home run in the ninth inning was his second of the game and 18th of the season. He also homered in the first inning.

O'Brien had retired 10 straight batters when he gave up a solo home run to Jack Voight in the eighth.

"They kept the bases empty when the homers were hit, which is what a pitcher is supposed to do," LSU Coach Skip Bertman said.

Chris Magno hit a two-run homer and Mike Fiore also drove in two runs for Miami, the defending national champion.

Freshman Robin Ventura was 4-for-5 and drove in three runs as Oklahoma State beat No. 6 Loyola Marymount. The game was suspended in the fourth inning Wednesday because of rain.

VENTURA, who swings from the left side, is now 7-for-13 in the Series.

"Lefties are throwing me curves and I've been looking for them," Ventura said. "Right-handers are throwing fastballs, and I'm looking for them, too."

The Cowboys, 56-14, were batting .337 entering the College World Series. They hit .234 in their first two tournament games but rapped 14 hits against Loyola Marymount.

Lefty Gordie Dillard pitched 5⅓ innings of one-run relief to improve his record to 5-4.

UT regents OK almost $9 million for UTPB budget

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The University of Texas System board of regents Thursday approved a nearly $9 million 1987 budget for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Although the new budget reflects about a $51,000 drop from the current academic year, UTPB officials say they expect to see no change in the courses or services offered to students.

The regents set a $2 billion-plus budget for the entire system Thursday, including a $91 million reduction in the system's draw on state revenues in response to Gov. Mark White's austerity order.

"In committing to these reductions we reiterate our determination not to erode our basic mission, which essentially is to provide high-quality education and basic research at each of our components and high-quality patient care at each of our medical components," said Jess Hay, chairman of the board of regents.

Warren Gardner, academic vice president at UTPB, said the Odessa campus will actually have three more faculty members next year than currently because it was able to fill some vacancies.

"We're going to be in fine shape for the coming academic year for the degree offerings and course offerings we offer to students," Gardner said. "We're going to squeeze the most we can out of declining dollars."

The 1987 UTPB budget includes $7.7 million from state funds and tuition, $934,000 from auxiliary campus enterprises and $348,000 from private gifts and grants. The budget includes no funds for sponsored research or for capital construction or renovation.

In a related matter, the regents approved a $12.25 million bond issuance to improve the UT System's libraries. The money will pay for increased collections at 12 campuses and includes $7.5 million for library automation projects on seven campuses.

UTPB will receive $276,000 to increase its collections.

Hay said the bonds, backed by the Permanent University Fund, "will significantly strengthen the state's environment for scholarship, and without additional drain on the state's already strained general revenue resources."

Fear of AIDS pervades Odessa bar

EDITOR'S NOTE: At their request, the names of all but one of the homosexuals quoted in this story have been changed to protect their identities.

ODESSA (AP) — The Odessa bar is crowded and smoky.

Music blares loudly. People are dancing and buying drinks for their partners.

It's a place where girls meet girls and boys meet boys.

And patrons select their partners carefully here, Frank said.

"Several customers I know have AIDS," said Frank, a 36-year-old bartender at a north Odessa bar catering mostly to homosexuals.

"They come in and say, 'I'm afraid I have it.' You can't tell about others. It scares the hell out of me," he said. "Like any social disease, it's scary."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is usually contracted through anal sex, said Tommy Langham, disease intervention specialist for the Texas Department of Health in Odessa.

The possibility of AIDS being contracted through oral sex is considered low because stomach acids kill the virus that causes AIDS, Langham said. The disease also is contracted by sharing drug needles with a carrier of the virus.

Langham said the disease breaks down the immune system, allowing a person to fall victim to AIDS-related infections that later prove fatal.

About 90 percent of the 1,172 AIDS cases in Texas involve homosexual or bisexual men. Nationally, about 73 percent of the 20,016 total AIDS cases can be traced to homosexual activity.

Although Frank said business at the homosexual bar hasn't declined because of the AIDS scare, some of his customers say the possibility of contracting the disease has made them more cautious about whom they choose for a sex partner.

Jerry, a 26-year-old bisexual tobacco and candy salesman from Odessa, said he checks to see whether a potential romantic partner of the same sex looks sickly.

"I'm very careful. It's not just, 'Hi, let's go to bed.' I'm more passive than aggressive. I usually let someone else make the first move, but it's my choice. I can always say no, especially if they look sick," Jerry said this week.

Tom Lewis, a 35-year-old Odessa hairdresser, said most homosexuals in the Odessa area aren't using condoms for protection and haven't given up sexual activity because of AIDS.

AP Laserphoto

Tom Lewis, a 35-year-old hairdresser from Odessa, has had three friends die from acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but says he doesn't think he'll ever get AIDS because of his selectiveness in choosing sexual partners.

But he said many homosexuals aren't as open as he is about his sexual practices.

"I've accepted my lifestyle. I don't care who knows about it. If it offends someone, I'm sorry, but it's my choice," Lewis said.

Lewis said he knows AIDS kills.

"I've had three very close friends die from it. Most of the cases come from other places, but they've come back here to die," he said.

"I don't think I'll ever get AIDS," he said. "I'm cautious. I know I'm gay, but I don't feel like the typical gay person."

Currently, no known AIDS patients live in the state health department's 17-county Region 12 area, which includes the Permian Basin.

But "there's definitely the virus in the region," Langham said. "About 20 percent of 160 of those tested in Region 12 have come up with the AIDS antibody."

Langham said it could take as many as six years or as few as six months for an active AIDS infection to develop, once the antibody to the virus has been indicated.

The state health department spokesman said that about 20 percent of those with the AIDS antibody will develop the non-fatal AIDS-related complex, while a smaller number will develop the fatal illness.

"About one-third of that 20 percent go to a full-blown fatal AIDS case," he said.

High-risk groups for the disease include homosexuals, bisexuals, prostitutes, hemophiliacs and people who share needles. Those receiving blood transfusions before 1985, before AIDS tests were done on most blood supplies, also are considered at risk in catching the disease.

Gladys, a 26-year-old homosexual Odessa nurse, said she has more fear of catching the disease on the job than in her bedroom.

"As safe as the medical field is, we sometimes make mistakes. People get careless," Gladys said.

There are no known cases of women catching AIDS by having sex with other women, Langham said.

Alfonso, a 23-year-old Odessa restaurant worker, said he doesn't go around with "everybody."

"To me, you have to work up to AIDS. You have to abuse your body for a long time to get it. I don't think I'll ever get AIDS, but I know there's a chance I could," he said.

Alfonso contended his relatives who go to the hospital to get blood could catch the disease as easily as he could. He says he stopped giving blood five years ago, when he became a practicing homosexual.

Junior, a 24-year-old Rice University student from Houston, said he fears the disease because "it kills."

"But I've never run around or been loose, so I've never been tested for AIDS," he said.

Junior's Midland partner, David, a 31-year-old auto parts salesman, said he hasn't been tested for AIDS either because he doesn't think he'll ever get it.

"I hate AIDS like most people hate cancer," David said.

Trinity School reports higher re-enrollment

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Re-enrollment at Trinity School is higher than it has been at this point in recent years despite the slowdown in the local economy, a school official says.

Margaret Farrell, director of admissions, said officials at the school "feel good" about the increased number of students returning to classes there in light of the economic situation, with many Midlanders taking pay cuts and others losing their jobs.

Mrs. Farrell estimated re-enrollment for the 1986-87 school year at more than 300 students, with about 450 expected this fall.

"With the downturn in the economy people are spending their money wisely," she said.

Mrs. Farrell explained that the various forms of financial aid available to Trinity students help ease the burden on parents who choose to send their children to the private school.

Trinity School designates a portion of its annual operating budget to be used for financial aid. These funds are awarded to students in primer classes (classes for youngsters between kindergarten and first grade who may not be ready to move into the structured classroom environment) through ninth grade on the basis of need only. Any current or prospective student also may apply to receive tuition-only grants.

Financial aid comes from interest on endowments and from gifts and other donations, she said, with appropriations increasing from $155,000 in 1985-86 to $175,000 in 1986-87.

Among the various types of assistance available are the George J. Farrell Memorial Scholarship, the David D. Allen Memorial Scholarship, the P.D. Peterson Scholarship and the Alumni and Faculty Scholarships.

"This (financial aid) has been a constant factor in keeping enrollment (steady) for the past 10 years," she noted. "Approximately one third of the students in primer classes through ninth grade receive some type of financial assistance."

Mrs. Farrell said letters were mailed to parents last winter, explaining that the board of education would not force children who could not afford tuition increases to leave school.

GOP's Davidson attacks reticent opponent

From Staff Reports

David Davidson, Republican Party candidate for Texas lieutenant governor, said his opponent, Aaron Bullock, in Saturday's runoff elections has evaded the press and has held a "blatant disregard for the voting public."

"I seriously question Mr. Bullock's motives by his lack of campaign efforts," said Davidson, who has been touring the state prior to Saturday's runoff. "This man has paid his $3,000 filing fee and refused to campaign openly."

Davidson is an Austin businessman.

Bullock, an attorney who lives in Kingwood near Houston, polled enough votes in the four-way May 3 Republican Party primary elections for lieutenant governor to get in the runoff because of the coincidence of his surname matching that of Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock, a Democrat. Davidson has speculated that many votes were cast for Aaron Bullock because they associated his name with that of the comptroller.

"He (Bullock) is running for the most politically powerful office in the state of Texas, but refuses to even show his face, furnish a photograph or answer questions," Davidson said.

Davidson said that it is "obvious that Bullock has been running under false pretense. He has led people to believe he is the prominent state comptroller by refusing to campaign only on his own behalf."

Davidson said that he has received the support of two of his opponents in the four-way May 3 primary elections. Supporting Davidson are Judge Virgil Mulanax and Glen Jackson.

Mulanax, who, as a judge, said he was prohibited by law from making political endorsements, said he "would certainly not endorse Davidson's opponent, as I, like most of the public, have no information on his qualifications. I wish David the best of luck."

Jackson said Davidson "has not been afraid to inform you (voters) of his view or decision to serve Texas and let you see who he is."

"It is time for all good Texans to stand together for better government of the people and for the people of Texas."

Can 'Waco Creek' challenge famous river walk?

By ALAN NELSON

WACO (AP) — Promoters of Waco's Brazos River corridor often mention the success of the famous San Antonio River Walk.

Waco is trying to do its own version of the river walk, on a much larger scale, and with a much smaller population base.

The San Antonio River is really a creek a few yards across, with an average depth of 3½ feet. The waterway cuts a horseshoe bend through the heart of the central business district and through the heart of San Antonio's convention and visitor economy.

This year, an estimated 10.2 million visitors and convention delegates will bring almost $1 billion to the city, ranking it second only to the military complex for its impact on the economy, said Toni Renfrow, a spokeswoman for the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce. This year alone, more than 915 conventions have been booked.

Six major hotels, and dozens of sidewalk cafes, shops and restaurants are built along the 1½-mile-long river walk. Also within the River Walk's horseshoe is the famous Alamo, the historic La Villita, the Tower of the Americas, and San Antonio's main public library with a boat marina at its river level.

The walk itself is legally a city park and is maintained by the city of San Antonio's parks and recreation department. There also is a river walk group, Paseo del Rio Association, formed along the same organizational pattern as the Downtown Waco Inc. organization. The San Antonio River Commission governs new development and design of new projects on the river.

"It's really more like the Waco Creek," said Waco City Manager David Smith. "We have a better chance, because we don't have as many problems. I think we have a lot more opportunities because there's more public land along the river."

Other than the river walk moniker, the two projects are not that comparable. San Antonio is the nation's 10th largest city, while Waco is the nation's 163rd largest city. The Brazos corridor is 10 river miles long, including the bends, from the low-water dam to the city limits past Steinbeck Bend. At its widest point, it is as much as 150 yards across.

AP Laserphoto

Lee Wilburn and Bryant Bradshaw, both of Abilene, relax along the Brazos River walk in Waco.

In comparison to the 15-year development of the Brazos River corridor, San Antonio's present river walk development has taken more than 65 years.

Development in Waco has been progressing steadily since the completion of the low-water dam.

"Things happen so slow, it seems like nothing is happening," Smith said. "Then when you look back, you see a number of things."

Within the last 15 years, the low-water dam has been completed, along with the development of the Baylor Marina and swimming pool and recreational area.

Other projects include the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and its four major additions, the restoration of the First Street Cemetery, the completion of Interstate 35, Indian Spring Park, the Waco Convention Center, the restoration of the historic Suspension Bridge, the development of Lake Brazos Drive, and several hotels, restaurants and office buildings.

While the San Antonio River has river barges, the Brazos Queen II floats on the Brazos. In addition, the Brazos River corridor has become the site of drag boat races, an annual Labor Day raft race, the Cinco de Mayo Festival and the Brazos River Festival.

Later this year, a historic village is scheduled to be relocated to the Brazos River banks on the Baylor University Campus. Architects are drawing up a 20,000-square-foot addition to the Waco Convention Center. And F.M. Young, who is behind the Brazos Queen II, has mentioned building apartments and office complexes on Lake Brazos just north of the lagoon near Water Works Ltd.

Brazos Commons Ltd., a California-based company, plans a $100 million development along a 2,200-foot shoreline of the Brazos between Interstate 35 and Indian Spring Park. The development includes a shopping center, at least two midrise office buildings and a hotel.

Dr. Tom Kelly, director of the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at Baylor University, said the corridor still has a certain investment threshold it must pass.

Retailers, entertainment, conventions "each feed on each other and increase market size," Kelly said. "The problem is the initial seed investment." The city has entered an agreement with Brazos Commons Ltd., and private and federal funds eventually might provide the investment needed, plus the tax increment district in the area.

Before the San Antonio River was developed, it was a stream that meandered throughout the town. In 1921, the river flooded. Fifty people lost their lives and the downtown suffered millions of dollars in property damage.

A debate ensued over whether to fill in and concrete over the stream and remove the historic, tree-lined horseshoe bend, or build a bypass channel for flood control and save the horseshoe bend. The citizens wanting to save the horseshoe bend prevailed, and the channel was built.

In 1938, federal Works Projects Administration funds were put to work and the walkways, staircases from street level and pedestrian bridges were built.

The next major stage of development happened in the 1960s, when the Paseo del Rio master plan was developed by the Tourist Attraction Committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

San Antonio's world's fair, Hemisfair '68, not only spurred new business activity on the river walk, but also created a permanent convention center complex and a river linkage to those facilities and the fairgrounds.

Police arrest man climbing out window

From Staff Reports

Police arrested a 21-year-old Midland man who apparently was in the process of burglarizing an apartment Friday morning, according to reports.

No bond had been set for the man in city jail custody. He is expected to be charged with burglary of a habitation today, police said. The man was observed climbing out of an apartment window around 1:30 a.m. today at the Chaparral complex, 4201 North Garfield, when he was arrested, police said.

In other law enforcement reports, NDT Systems Inc., 9900 West Interstate 20, reported the theft of $4,577 in equipment. Items discovered missing in the past month include a $3,000 miller welder, a $750 air compressor and seven tires worth $827.

Police Roundup

The People's Market, 1700 Cloverdale Road, reported the theft of about $113 worth of food and alcohol. According to Sheriff's Office reports, 10 cases of beer worth $105 and eight pizzas worth $8, were taken between 9:10 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday.

Silvia Ramirez, Rt. 9, Box 9705, reported the theft of a $105 bicycle between 2:30 a.m. May 30 to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Midland Memorial Hospital reports that T.P. Hyson, 1102 East Pecan, is listed in critical, but stable condition. The 57-year-old Midland man was shot once in the abdomen Thursday morning, after someone fired through the front door of a house he was visiting on East Wall. No arrests have been made in the case.

City of Dallas settles suit

DALLAS (AP) — The city of Dallas and two neighboring downstream counties have agreed to settle a lawsuit that discharges of raw or poorly treated sewage from Dallas was polluting the Trinity River.

Officials involved in the suit said they believe cleaner water would result from the settlement, which requires the city to make several improvements at its two sewage-treatment plants by 1989.

The suit was filed by Anderson and Freestone counties a year ago. Riverside residents blamed the annual spring and summer fish kills on sewage pollutants that absorb oxygen from the water. One fish kill in the summer of 1984 suffocated 100,000 fish. More than 250,000 fish died in two major kills last summer.

The settlement was filed Thursday in Judge Barefoot Sanders' federal court in Dallas and still is subject to final approval by the judge. The terms are similar to improvements recently ordered by the Texas Water Commission.

The commission also levied a $344,775 fine and ordered the city to fund a $200,000 environmental impact study of the Trinity River.

"I think it was a good settlement for both sides, because I expect a much cleaner river from it," said Freestone County Judge Dick Black. "We weren't out for blood or anything. We just wanted Dallas to comply with state law and federal law.

"We probably could have gone into court and recovered civil penalties, but those (fines) would have gone to the U.S. government. This way, everything Dallas spends will go for the river."

Ector County law officers seek man who fled court

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County law enforcement officers today continued to seek a 33-year-old man who fled Judge Tryon's Lewis' 161st District Court late Thursday afternoon after being sentenced to 16 years in prison.

According to District Attorney Eric Augesen, Pedro Jimenez Amancio, who had been free on a total of $20,000 in bonds, had appeared before Lewis for trial on three drug-related charges.

Just before 4:30 p.m., Lewis had found Amancio guilty on charges of possession of heroin and hydromorphone (dilaudid) and not guilty on the charge of cocaine possession.

Reports indicate Amancio's attorney, Warren Heagy, had left the third floor courtroom and the judge had instructed assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra to call the jail to have sheriff's deputies take custody of Amancio.

Cadra reportedly left the courtroom to make the call, leaving Lewis and Amancio alone. A few minutes later, the judge reportedly looked up from the bench and saw Amancio leaving. A search of the courthouse and immediate area failed to locate Amancio.

Augesen said this morning he doesn't anticipate filing any additional charges of escape against Amancio when he is finally located because he was still free on bond and "not technically in custody." The district attorney said no sheriff's deputies had been present in the courtroom because Amancio had been free on bond. Had he been in jail, Augesen indicated, he would have been in the custody of deputies.

Amancio was arrested June 27, 1985 by Odessa police who executed a search warrant issued two days earlier by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

House vote gives boost to project in Port Arthur

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives Thursday gave a boost to Port Arthur's Park Central project when members voted 245 to 162 against an effort to kill additional aid to the long-planned "new town, in town."

Assistance to the Park Central project is included in a major reauthorization of several existing housing and community development programs administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Farmer's Home Administration. Debate will continue next Wednesday.

The vote defeated an amendment by Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., that would have eliminated funding for the Port Arthur project, begun under a now-defunct community development program approved by HUD in 1979.

If it becomes law, the housing bill would direct that $5 million from the housing secretary's discretionary fund be provided for the "new town, in town" project for public works and other development.

Two programs that were to have been used to complete Park Central — the Section 8 "new construction" program and the Section 235 home ownership program — have been wiped out or curtailed.

Instead, the new bill would set aside 250 certificates for fiscal 1986 under the less-costly Section 8 subsidized rent program for "new town, in town" and would authorize 250 additional certificates to be set aside out of the 1987 budget authority.

"Because there is approximately 21 percent unemployment and a depressed economy in the Port Arthur area, there is a strong demand for these certificates and the units are available," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, in a floor speech opposing the Kolbe amendment.

Brooks said the assistance, contemplated in the original plan, is necessary if the project is to survive.

GOP commissioner hopefuls report campaign donations

From Staff Reports

The two Republican Party candidates for commissioner of Midland County Precinct 2 reported $18,897.31 in contributions and $18,288.42 in expenditures in the seven days prior to Saturday's runoff elections, according to records in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office.

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, 62, reported $10,822.21 in contributions. His opponent, Guy McCrary, 32, reported $8,075.10 in contributions since the outset of the campaign.

McCrary outspent Wallace by almost $5,000 by expending $11,606.52 in funds. Craig reported $6,681.90 in expenditures.

Winner of the runoff will oppose Democrat Don Boydstun, 39, in the Nov. 4 general elections.

McCrary is a marketing consultant, and Craig, a real-esate broker, has been commissioner since 1983. Boydstun is a design technician.

Washington YMCA offers Summer Music Program

From Staff Reports

The Washington YMCA is offering a Summer Music Program. The program will center around three skill development areas — motor skills development, auditory skills and social skills.

Motor skills development will include activities to increase skill levels in rhythmic moving. This should begin with basic drills such as the Weikart Rhythm Sequence and "listen and do songs" and activities and progressing to basic rhythm activities and possibly basic dance steps. Ultimately, not only will good rhythmic moving skills improve agility and athletic ability, but recent studies indicate that good rhythmic skills may lead to improved reading skills, according to a YMCA press release.

Auditory skill development is the second major skill area to be a dressed. The student will be asked identify instruments and oth sounds in order to improve listeni skills. Hopefully, this improved sk will carry over into school requi ments in the fall, the press relea said.

The last, and most important, sk level to be addressed during t summer, is social skills. This will volve relationships with family a peers, as well as understanding fe ings and coping with stress.

The program will be held at t Washington YMCA on Mond starting June 9 and running thou June 30. Class time is 6-7 p.m. The is $7.50.

Even though the program will centered on specific goal areas, activities will be structured around musical fun and games.

Robots soon may become 'astronaut assistants'

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Engineers are developing talking, thinking robots that eventually may work as "astronaut assistants" aboard the U.S. space station.

Computer scientists already have developed much of the fundamental technology for such thinking machines, "but we have not mastered the fine art of utilizing all of the abilities of the hardware and software," said NASA engineer Robert T. Savely, the chairman of a Johnson Space Center conference on robotics.

In an interview at the conference, which ends today, Savely said perfecting the techniques to create an independently operating robot are of critical importance not only to space exploration, but also to American industry.

"Automate, immigrate or evaporate are the options that face our country today," he said. "We must automate to be competitive with the rest of the world in manufacturing and to accomplish our goals in space utilization."

The key to automation, said Savely, is perfecting the technology of artificial intelligence, or machines that think, see and do. Engineers, he said, have now learned to cluster computer functions together to perform complex tasks through a technique called parallel processing.

"The evolution of parallel processing technology may well be the most important technology in the history of mankind," said Savely. "It will make possible the intelligent robot which will be able to perform complicated tasks without human supervision."

Most computer uses in the past, he said, have been for single tasks, such as processing numbers, that could be done more rapidly and flawlessly than by the human mind.

Savely said that simple human tasks, such as walking, are beyond the single-task processing of computers. But parallel processing techniques can be used to control each element required to effect a walking stride. The same techniques can be applied to permit a robot to see, speak and perform specific tasks.

Boeing Computer Services Co. already is building what Claire Meier of Boeing said is the first step toward an "astronaut assistant."

The device, called the flying eye, would be about the size of a football and be powered by six jets that would permit it to fly around the outside of an orbiting shuttle or space station.

Ms. Meier said the flying eye receives instructions by radioed voice and has a 35-word vocabulary.

"We want to expand the language so that the robot could actually answer the astronaut," said Ms. Meier.

She said Boeing is developing an "expert system", a computer program that would enable the flying eye to return to specific positions that it had "learned" from previous trips to those locations. The expert system, she said, would enable the flying eye to evaluate instructions and determine immediately that, "hey, I've got enough gas to do that," or to decline the instruction.

Ms. Meier said the flying eye could be used in the space station to inspect the exterior of the craft and thereby save astronauts from risky space walks.

Allan C. Holt, a Johnson Space Center engineer, said that mobile robot, perhaps even "humanoids" similar to those featured in the "Star Wars" movie fantasies, will be essential to the exploration of the Moon and of Mars.

Mobile robots, said Holt, will be developed to help build and maintain lunar bases and to operate automatic stations on Mars.

Holt said engineers believe now that it will be technically possible to develop robots that independently perceive and react to situations.

Festivals and fiestas draw as many as 150,000 people at a time. San Antonio has continues to develop its river walk. In the most ambitious project to date, a $250 million RiverCenter is being built on 10 acres of land and will have 2.2 million square feet when completed.

There will be approximately 100 shops, anchored by a Joske's of Texas, and a "mega-Marriott," a 42-story, twin-tower hotel. The mall is scheduled to open in October 1987, with the hotel to be completed by October 1988.

Religious leaders hit restrictions

DALLAS (AP) — Religious leaders asked the City Plan Commission to drop most of the proposed restrictions in an ordinance that would control where churches could locate in residential areas.

Restrictions in the proposed ordinance include minimum half-acre lots for new churches and one-half mile spacing between churches on certain residential streets.

An estimated 2,500 people cheered and applauded speakers critical of the proposed ordinance.

Tuition increases will vary this fall depending on what grade the student has enrolled in; however, persons billed on a monthly basis could see a decrease in their monthly installments.

"In a few instances, some monthly payments are less, due to the reduction in interest rates," Mrs. Farrell said.

Tuition for three-year-old kindergarten students increased from $925 in 1985-86 to $1,000 for 1986-87, but persons who choose to pay monthly will pay 31 cents less per installment than in 1985-86.

The drop in interest rates also brings about a reduction in montly payments for students in seventh through ninth grade. In 1985-86, the monthly payments were $481 compared to $454.98 in 1986-87.

Paris drive-in theater opens after two years in dark

PARIS, Texas (AP) — There was a time when loading the kids into the station wagon and going to the drive-in to see a movie was as much a part of the American way of life as baseball, hot dogs and apple pie.

But movies became more expensive to make and the property the drive-ins occupied became more valuable, so many drive-in movie theater owners found it more profitable to close up shop.

Drive-in after drive-in bit the dust during the late 1970s and early 1980s and Paris' was no exception. But like the Phoenix, the mythical bird that rose from its own ashes, the 271 Drive-In on North Main Street rose from the dust and weeds this spring to reopen after two years in the dark.

"I think the drive-in is like a big picnic," said David Floyd, who with Jim Moss, re-opened the 271 Drive-In. "I've always loved drive-ins. You can come as you are. You can bring the kids in their pajamas and it doesn't matter."

Moss, who came to Paris last March, has 30 years of experience in the drive-in movie business. He closed the last operating drive-in in Louisiana several months ago after he received an offer from Wal-Mart for the land on which it was located, an offer that he couldn't refuse.

Moss says that business at the reopened 271 Drive-In has gone very well, especially on the weekends. "Weekdays have been different, but I think that's because this theater didn't open during the week before. However, I expect the summer to be quite different," he said.

Moss and Floyd are aided in the business by their wives and children who work the concession stand and take the money at the gate. Peggy Floyd said she has been surprised at how Paris residents have accepted the new 271.

"The very first night we opened, we had advertised the gate would open at 7 p.m. We had cars lined up and waiting here at 5:30 p.m.," she said.

And those who have come have been dedicated drive-in movie fans, according to Mrs. Floyd. "A couple of weeks ago we had a real heavy rainstorm on a Saturday night, which is our busiest night," she said. "We had a near sellout crowd, a driving rain and nobody left," she added.

"I'm glad the theater has opened back up," said Mark Esterer of Paris, "There wasn't much to do before."

Johnny Wayne Emeyabbe, who recently took his whole family to the drive-in, also said he was pleased that the theater re-opened. "We've been to the movies here since it opened again and it's all right. I like it," he said.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic reaction to the re-opening of the 271 Drive-In came from nationally syndicated drive-in movie critic Joe Bob Briggs who said: "It's a definite victory over Communism."

Briggs, whose real name is John Bloom, a former columnist for The Dallas Times Herald, added that he felt the 271 re-opening was great because it marked the first time in two years that a new or a previously closed down drive-in has opened.

"The last one I know of to open is the I-45 Drive-In in Houston," Bloom said.

Bloom said that drive-ins really didn't lose their popularity with the movie-going public, but rapid growth and development of cities has been the main culprit in closing the outdoor theaters.

"When most drive-ins were built in the 1950s, they were on the edge of town so they could be away from the lights. As the towns grew, especially during the 1970s, the town would grow out and surround the drive-in and, depending on what was built around it, the land would become valuable and the offers for the property would become so big that eventually the owners would sell out because the offer would be more than what they could make in 10 years," Bloom said.

The 271 Drive-In was built in 1948 by Wesley Bell and his two brothers, Henry and Elmer. Wesley Bell died in 1951, but his brothers and his wife, Francis, and son, Glenn, carried on the business. Mrs. Bell and Glenn eventually bought out the two brothers.

Francis and Glenn Bell operated the theater every summer until 1983 when, according to Glenn, they decided to close it in order to take a vacation. "I liked the vacation so well, that I decided to take another," said Bell, whose full-time business is his electronics shop farther up the street on North Main.

Bell said he and his family still own the theater property but are leasing it to Moss and Floyd.

The 271 Drive-In is basically the same as it was when it was built except for a modern movie projector and concession stand and the addition of of a small radio transistor that broadcasts the movie soundtrack so that it can be received on car radios.

"Years ago when movies were not done in stereo, the little speakers we have were adequate," Moss said. "Now, most soundtracks are in stereo and stereos are much better than they used to be. That's why we have the radio transmitter so that people can listen on their own FM or AM radios."

Moss said that drive-ins are facing much stiffer competition now than they did 20 or 30 years ago but he added that the drive-in theater is still a popular entertainment medium, especially for families.

"Home video rentals have killed the drive-ins in smaller towns, towns under 10,000 in population," Moss said.

Subsidy checks halted by agency

By JIM DRINKARD

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what has become almost a routine financial crisis, the government agency that finances farm subsidies and crop loans has run out of money, shutting off checks to thousands of farmers.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service put out the word this week to its county offices around the country not to write any more checks to farmers until the Commodity Credit Corp.'s fund is replenished by Congress.

That meant a halt to as much as $100 million a day in checks for the government's subsidized dairy herd slaughter program, advances on income subsidies for major crops, storage payments and loans for winter wheat now being harvested in the South.

The shutoff "might not be so difficult if it doesn't last too long" because this is not the CCC's heaviest demand season, said Ray Waggoner, an ASCS spokesman.

"But I just think of it as though I were a farmer waiting for a check," he added. "Some people need checks to make payments for many different things. Farmers owe a lot of money. The more days it is, the more it hurts an individual farmer."

Winter wheat loan demand is not expected to pick up significantly until later in the month, officials said. But dairy programs would be impacted by the funds cutoff, along with a few farmers who had not yet received their advance subsidies for signing up for 1986 crop programs.

Regular purchases of surplus dairy products as part of the price-support system are halted, along with subsidies to farmers participating in the dairy herd slaughter and the red meat purchases being made to offset the slaughter's effects on beef prices.

The CCC is the financial pool for all major farm programs, including crop loans. From time to time it runs out of money, and must be replenished through congressional appropriations.

The shutoff of CCC authority has become a recurrent problem, often tied to squabbles on Capitol Hill over unrelated aspects of legislation that contains new money for the fund.

The last time the fund ran dry was in March, when checks were put on hold for two weeks just as farmers began signing up for 1986 crop programs.

An "urgent" supplemental spending bill that includes $5.3 billion for the CCC is now awaiting action on the Senate calendar.

Thirty-day outlook

Texas should experience normal precipitation levels and below-normal temperatures during June, according to the National Weather Service.

Peter Myers sworn as agriculture deputy despite potato dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a holdup due to a dispute over potato purchases, Peter C. Myers has been sworn in as deputy secretary of agriculture, the Agriculture Department's No. 2 position.

Myers, a Missouri farmer who previously had headed the Soil Conservation Service and was assistant agriculture secretary for natural resources, took office Wednesday.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, had blocked Senate action to confirm Myers out of pique over what he regarded as the department's backing down from promises to tighten restrictions on Canadian potato imports.

Keep watch on pyrethroid tags

During the past two years, horn flies have developed some resistance to pyrethroid insecticides applied with insecticide impregnated ear tags. Resistance levels depended on the intensity of selection pressure placed on developing fly populations. Practical control of horn fly populations is lost when resistance exceeds three-to-five-fold as compared to a susceptible population.

Once the horn fly season starts, cattlemen using insecticide ear tags on their herds need to keep a close check on control to determine if the tags are effective. If pyrethroid resistance is confirmed, special management strategies need to be implemented.

These management strategies should also be used to reduce the development of horn fly resistance to pyrethroids:

— Do not apply insecticide-treated ear tags to animals before economically damaging populations of horn flies develop. Populations which do not exceed an estimated 200-250 flies per animal will not cause economic loss.

— Horn fly resistance to pyrethroid insecticides can be suspected if new tags have not satisfactorily reduced the fly number within 10 to 12 days.

— Use insecticides with an alternate type of action in normal treatment schedules before pyrethroid resistance becomes evident. Use dust bags, oilers and other self-treatment devices to reduce and delay the pyrethroid resistance problem.

— Spray, "pour-on," "spot-on," or dust treatments with phosphate compounds.

— Coumaphos (Co-Ral®), crotoxyphos (Ciodrin®), dichlorovos (Vapona®), dioxathion (Delnav®) or malathion, provide a different mode of killing action and can reduce pyrethroid resistance and control horn fly populations.

— Do not use whole-body sprays of pyrethroid insecticides to control resistant flies which cannot be controlled with ear tags. These sprays will provide significantly higher selection levels of already resistant flies.

— Pyrethroid ear tags can be used successfully where the spinose ear tick and Gulf Coast tick is the target pest.

— Remove insecticide-impregnated ear tags from animals when they have lost their effectiveness in killing target pests. Tags emitting a sublethal dose to the animal appear to heighten the resistance problem by killing or weakening susceptible flies in the population.

— Pyrethroid tags can be successfully used to manage horn flies where resistance has not developed. In general, western and southern areas of Texas have not experienced a resistance problem. However, tagging entire herds year after year with pyrethroid ear tags can cause serious resistance.

— Some producers are enjoying satisfactory management of horn flies with a system commonly termed, "tagging only the calf." Insecticide tags, when applied to calves in the herd, are sufficient to achieve pesticide control in this manner. Self-treatment devices with phosphate-type insecticides are easily integrated into the management system if pyrethroid resistance develops or is suspected.

Suggestions for managing the horn fly resistance problem must be considered on a herd-by-herd basis. Previous herd treatments should be considered as should possible cases of resistance already confirmed.

New insecticide ear tags which disperse a pyrethroid-phosphate combination of insecticides to combat the pyrethroid resistance problem are being offered for the first time in 1986. These tags resulted in limited success in other areas experiencing significant insecticide resistance problems.

Additional information on horn fly control is provided in a new Extension Service publication, B-1306, "Texas Guide for Controlling External Parasites of Livestock and Poultry," available at the county Extension office.

Container plants' versatility increases their popularity

Because of their portability and limited space needs, container plants continue to gain popularity. Flowering plants as well as vegetable and fruit-producing plants can be grown in containers.

Container plants have been used for landscape enrichment throughout history. They can be highlighted in a prominent spot when at their peak and hidden from view when not needed or when in less than attractive condition.

Also, a wide variety of plant species having different cultural requirements may be grown on the same premises since individual soil, watering, pH, fertility, light and other environmental requirements can be provided for in each container.

Almost any plant may be used as a container specimen if its cultural requirements are met. Placing a plant in a container tends to dramatize it and make it more visual. Deciduous or evergreen trees, shrubs and vines, as well as annual and perennial flowers, may be used. The key is to determine where the plant will be located and the availability of sunlight, moisture and protection. Annual flowers usually prefer at least a half day's full sun, but most tropicals and evergreens do well with less.

The plant form needed is another consideration. Often clusters of similar plants and containers may be preferable to a single specimen plant. A large open-growing plant may look best with a ground cover of gravel or plants such as English ivy or ajuga. It is usually better to avoid combining several plant species in a single container since they often compete with each other visually.

When selecting from the wide variety of containers on the market today, choose those of simple design that do not compete with the plant but tend to feature it. For instance, plants in plain terra cotta clay pots often are placed on planned terraces, patios and entrances. Fortunately, some of the most appropriate containers, such as clay products, are often moderately priced.

Container plants usually require more care than those grown in the ground. Frequent watering, often on a daily basis during hot weather, is necessary for most species. Thus, arrangements should be made for their care during vacations. Or they can be partially sunk into the ground in a shady, moist area.

Planting mixtures should contain much organic matter such as peat or compost. A good mix includes five parts garden loam soil, four parts organic matter and one part coarse builder's sand. Most plants need to be repotted every three or four years in a new media since organic matter tends to break down and decompose.

Once the plant is well established, periodically add small amounts of a complete fertilizer. Be cautious of heavy applications because this encourages the plant to outgrow its container too soon.

Because all parts of the container plant are above ground, they are more susceptible to cold injury than plants growing in the ground. Container plants require added protection during periods of extreme cold.

Milk output fixed despite herd reduction

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Milk production in Minnesota dropped less than 1 percent from March to April even though a record number of cows were disposed of by the state's dairy farmers.

The Minnesota Department of Agriculture said the reduction of 25,000 cows left the state with a total herd of 920,000 at the end of April — the sharpest cut in the United States — representing 26 percent of the entire reduction nationwide.

Farmers participating in the $1.8 billion program gave bids to have the federal government buy their herds. The farmers, in return, agreed to stay out of dairy farming for at least five years. During the 18-month program, more than 1 million cattle are scheduled to be slaughtered or exported nationwide.

Paul Christ, vice president of dairy planning for Land O' Lakes Inc., said the decrease in the number of Minnesota cows "isn't an extraordinary number, given the number of sign-ups for the buyout.

"We had the largest buyout in terms of the number of farms," and the number of Minnesota cattle to be slaughtered or exported — 79,597 — was second only to California, he said.

Just more than 1,300 of the state's 2,150 successful bidders were scheduled to dispose of their herds in the first six months of the program, said Bill Coleman, director of the dairy and livestock division of the Agriculture Department.

Land O' Lakes, a farm cooperative based in Arden Hills, expects the reductions to come in two waves, Christ said.

"The first group, those eager to get out for financial or personal reasons, left in April," he said. "There's another group who will find it profitable to keep producing until late July or early August."

From March to April, milk production in the state declined from 983 million pounds to 975 million pounds, but the April total was still up from 959 million pounds in April 1985.

Under the program's implementation, state farmers lost an estimated $5 million in deductions from their milk checks for assessments imposed to pay a portion of the cost of the herd-buyout program.

Originally set by Congress at 40 cents per hundredweight of milk sold, the assessment was increased to 52 cents by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction act.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Loss of employment more than loss of income

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: Approximately four weeks ago, my husband, who is a business executive, was laid off after 18 years with his firm along with a dozen of his colleagues. While his company has experienced a 40 percent cutback in employment, my husband feels picked out and is extremely resentful.

He has become blaming and critical of everyone: his co-workers, me, our children, but most of all, his former employer. Now he's even blaming his college counselor (of 20 years past) for poor career advising. He's become intolerable and impossible to be around. How can I make him see that he's partly to blame too? — FRT

DEAR FRT: Unemployment is not just a loss of income, but for many it represents deep personal loss. Unemployment can feel insulting and degrading, especially to a credentialed professional like your husband. For many men, personal identity is directly linked to their job. In a society where the worth of an individual is usually measured by productivity, loss of that productivity during unemployment carries with it a perceived loss of self-worth.

Unemployment is painful and while no two individuals deal with the loss identically, sometimes individuals do interpret it as a message of rejection or personal failure. What you have described is one "normal" and typical reaction to such a loss.

Placing blame on others is a mechanism some individuals employ to preserve their sense of worthiness and to spare themselves the sharp edge of the pain of rejection.

When job loss first occurs, there is typically an initial shock, often accompanied by extreme resentment of the employer. Behavior patterns have been identified where characteristically the individual eventually moves into a state of relaxation. In the meantime, though, the tendency to attempt to find blame is normal.

If your husband has linked personal "success" and identity to career "success" and identity, then he may see job loss as synonymous with losing part of himself. Therefore, your husband may be feeling a real blow to his self-esteem. Protecting that esteem and sense of personal worth is of utmost importance to him — and it's a function which his family and friends can help fulfill.

Part of your husband's coping device may involve avoiding personal blame or other negative feelings, such as guilt. And rightly so. From your husband's point of view it is perfectly logical to blame outsiders for his plight since he didn't become unemployed by his own choice. Research confirms that individuals who feel like they have little influence over what happens to them are more likely to attribute control and blame to external forces and professionals such as your husband tend to strongly believe that job loss is due to external controls.

In fact, it has been found that the more individuals feel circumstances are beyond their control, the more stress they feel. To minimize that stress, they often adopt coping behaviors designed to avoid painful issues. Anger, blaming and what seem to be illogical accusations are often avoidance techniques. By employing such techniques, your husband may be attempting to avoid personal fears, feelings of incompetence, etc.

When a person believes that external forces control situations, he can conclude that little can be done personally to rectify the situation. This perspective results in a strong sense of helplessness, which strengthens the belief that blame should fall on others for unpleasant situations. Since you are the most integral part of your husband's support system, understanding that the blame-casting can actually be a coping mechanism to protect his sense of worth and competence can better equip you to respond positively to his feelings and reactions.

With such a heightened need for protecting himself, your opportunity for aiding that process is paramount at this time. By allowing your husband to grieve over his loss, by allowing him to "save face" and by preserving his place in the family, you can help bolster a faltering esteem and assure him of his intrinsic personal worth, which is not based purely on performance.

Don't move away from him, even if you perceive him as being "intolerable and impossible" or even if you perceive him as moving away from you. He may believe that your care for him is also based on performance, i.e. his ability to provide. Don't reinforce that belief by withdrawing from him while he cannot provide income.

Your husband needs his family's support now more than ever. Understanding his emotional trauma will be much more helpful in aiding his progression to the next stage — relaxation. Rather than trying to get him to accept partial blame for a worldwide economic situation that is bigger than all of us, communicate your belief in him as a capable and worthy individual.

For any one of us to attempt to find who is at fault in the current economic situation ignores the complexity of the social and structural system at large and does not address the more important issues of family relationships and the emotional and psychic needs of the individual.

Leagues elect head

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Virginia T. Austin, Oklahoma City, was named president of The Association of Junior Leagues Inc.

Austin had served since 1984 as secretary of the international voluntary organization of 163,000 women in 266 Junior Leagues.

Chimney sweeps go high-tech

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Chimney sweeps say their modern image is more like something out of "Star Wars" than the traditional Mary Poppins characterization.

"We go into a home in top hat and tails and we get the Mary Poppins' stuff but then we put on a full-face respirator and white paper coveralls and suddenly it's Darth Vader," said Mary Ann Beaufait, a verteran chimney sweep from Lawrenceville, Ga. "It's the 18th century to Buck Rogers."

The 10th annual convention of the National Chimney Sweep Guild in Baltimore tried to upgrade that image by convincing consumers the modern sweep is more than a soot-covered stranger with a long brush.

"People see you in top hat and tails and they don't take you seriously," Beaufait said. But the job of the sweep is deadly serious — saving lives by making sure home heating systems are installed properly and safely.

Hugh Maine, chairman of the board of the National Chimney Sweep Guild from Belleville, Ill., said statistics indicate at least 130,000 fires stemming from improperly installed or operated solid fuel stoves were reported nationwide in 1983-84.

"After OPEC raised the cost of oil, people went out and bought wood stoves and stuffed them up in any and every chimney without knowing what they were doing," said Main, a graduate of the Black Magic School for chimney sweeps in Stowe, Vt.

In many cases, the century-old chimneys could not accommodate heat given off by a powerful stove, and tragic house fires resulted, he said.

The role of the chimney sweep, he said, is to reconcile that discrepancy between modern, powerful alternate energy sources and 19th century chimneys.

Maine said there are about 6,000 active sweeps nationwide who are available to go into a home and assess its heating system based on National Fire Protection Association Codes.

ASK DR. RUTH

Daughter's boyfriend secret from mom

By Dr. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. For the first time I'm hiding something from my mother — a boyfriend. He's 26, I'm 17 and we are different religions. Mom will explode when she learns, but when I see them pass each other, with him pretending not to recognize her and her not knowing who he is, I really feel disloyal and rotten. But how can I tell her?

A. You're a good kid to want to tell her. As a mother, I am grateful to you for not wanting to trick Mom. Also as a mother, I beg you not to drop this on her like a house. And don't open the subject in a dramatic way, with theme music, so she thinks you are pregnant or diseased or already married.

Have a heart. Tell her "Mom, there's a fellow I'm interested in and I want to know what you think. Things haven't gone too far. I just want to talk about having boyfriends and going with someone I probably won't marry but — you know."

In that confiding mood, of a daughter still treating her mother as her chief friend and and adviser, you can tell her whatever you want to. The religion thing perhaps won't seem so big to her if you don't come across as terribly tense about the relationship. But you can tell her what you are doing without telling her your most private thoughts about this man.

Twenty-six is not An Older Man. And, whatever your mother thinks or I think about religion, your choice of a man has to be yours and yours alone. While you live under her roof, you should not sneak around, hiding things from her, as long as you have any regard for her. You can probably defer any grand plans until you have left home or are quite ready to do so.

Q. My friend is 32, separated from her husband; I'm single and 19. We met at work and now we see each other a lot. I want to be her lover, but don't want to risk our friendship by asking. Is there a way?

A. There are lots of ways, like bringing flowers and helping her rearrange her furniture or hooking up her stereo for her, and waiting in a relaxed way for her to make the move. But I favor being straightforward because it isn't really insulting to say you desire somebody. Tell the lady what you told me — you really would love to love her, and not from afar but in her bed. And if she doesn't want that, you still want to be friends.

She may say she thought you'd never ask. Or she may say she is really flattered and pleased but she'd rather have you as a friend, she'd rather see you with a girl your age, or something like that. If she takes that line, you might wait a little while to see if the idea you have planted in her head doesn't take root and grow, to see if she doesn't come around to saying, "So you want to make love to me?" and then sit close on the sofa. But don't wait forever before moving on to someone else. By forever I mean more than two weeks.

By the way, some dear old men have written protesting that true unfulfilled love lasts forever, like a flower pressed in a book of poems. I think that is sweet, but I do say that while memories are forever, you need not keep yearning and aching for more than two or three weeks unless you really want to.

Q. While my wife and kids are away at our summer place, a certain female exec, my biggest client, wants to play. I've got to fend her off, but how? Don't tell me to be stern — I know how to lose a client myself.

A. Tell her about your absolute rule: no sex with clients or friends because it spoils the relationship. If she quits as a client, say you still think of her as a friend. If she says you're no friend of hers, say no sex if she feels that way. If you have to do that to keep clients, you should be in another business. I won't say what.

Q. How can I find my G-Spot?

A. Probably you can't, as most girls don't seem to have one. More girls have funny bones than G-Spots. I am a pretty square sex therapist and not into what most girls don't have. Ask me how to find your nose or your navel.

AT WIT'S END

Job like marriage

By ERMA BOMBECK

Cohabitation? Parents of young adults have learned to live with the idea.

Missing church on Sunday? Hey, there are some things you can't force.

Dropping out of college? The rationale is you can't live your children's lives for them.

But if there is one thing parents stand firm on, it's a wedding. They want to see their child join hands with a steady job at the altar of employment and promise to love and to cherish from this day forward, for retirement benefits or for mergers ... for pay raises or layoffs ... in slumps and in stock splits till death do them part.

You're seeing a clash these days between a generation who believes a job is like an arranged marriage ... in time you'll learn to love it — and their children who feel employment is a stepping stone to lunch.

Each generation brings to the work ethic an important ingredient: memory. Parents remember when jobs were non-existent, when education opened doors for the privileged ... when compromise was a way of life and pride was a luxury no one could afford. A man or woman never forgets what it is like to be out of work. Ever!

Their children also have memories. They remember a good standard of living, as much education as they would tolerate and a father who was never home to enjoy the spoils and counted the days until he retired.

Sometimes I get the feeling young people wish they could feel the same things their parents feel about a job. That it would bring them fulfillment, make them feel productive, a part of things. So why do they resist being woven into the fabric of the American dream?

Maybe it's because most of them do look upon a "job" as a bride ... a lifetime commitment to what. To "settle down," amass five rooms of materialism and spend the rest of their lives making payments on months two weeks longer than the money.

What if the job is great? Are they trapped for a lifetime in a web of ambition and corporate climbing? Do they lose a part of themselves? While they're "married" to a job do they miss out on other exciting adventures and possibilities? Is "fooling around" out of the the picture? Are their dreams a part of the price?

If the future is filled with apprehension about the state of the world, what have they missed by being "traditional" and doing what is expected of them.

Meanwhile, the voices of experience challenge them to "grow up," "take your place in society," "settle down" and "lay the groundwork for your future."

This is the season when every graduate in the world is being asked, "What are you going to do with the rest of your life?" They are often accused of being "insecure" when they answer they don't know.

Who is more insecure? The man or woman who is afraid to let go ... or the man or woman who is afraid to hang on?

When you know that, you'll know what you're going to do with the rest of your life.

DEAR ABBY

Daughters expect more from mom

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When Dad died 20 years ago, he left Mom some money and a pension. She moved in with me and has divided her time between my family and my sister's family ever since.

We have cleaned for her, cooked for her, washed for her and chauffeured her everywhere she wanted to go.

Mom has never bought a bar of soap, a sack of groceries or a tank of gas. We've taken her on vacation with us and paid her way. Consequently she has saved her pension and Social Security, and now has over $300,000 in savings.

Last week she told us that she recently made a will, and is leaving her money divided equally among her eight children!

The other six have not spent a dime on her. They each have sent her a plant or flowers once a year on Mother's Day.

My sister and I opened our homes to her, sacrificing a certain amount of privacy, but we never complained. We are hurt and disappointed and are ready to kick her out on her ear and let her try to make her home with one of her other children for free. What would you do? — UNAPPRECIATED IN OHIO

DEAR UNAPPRECIATED: For openers, I wouldn't kick my mother out on her ear — or any other part of her anatomy. I would keep my mouth shut and continue to provide her with a home with no thought of what's in it for me, which is the reason I would have taken her in, in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: We have only one child. Our newly made friends have several, but please don't print the number as we do not want to identify them. Well, last Christmas they sent our child an expensive (by our standards) Christmas present. Last week, they sent our child another expensive present for his birthday.

Now, how do we handle gift-giving for Christmas and birthdays for all of their children? We cannot afford to give each one the kind of gifts they have given ours twice a year.

Is there a tactful way to tell them not to send our child any more gifts because we can't reciprocate? — A DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: Honesty is the best policy. Tell them you would feel more comfortable if they would limit their gifts to your child to a "token" inexpensive one because that is all you can afford to send their children. And what's wrong with sending cards?

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. ### MONEY

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell broadly on foreign exchange markets early today in moderately active trading. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

The dollar's weaker tone was linked to comments by U.S. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker indicating a willingness to allow interest rates to fall.

In testimony Thursday before a House of Representatives banking subcommittee, Volcker said a rise in world oil prices might trigger a tighter monetary policy. But he said the United States might lower its discount rate, the interest charged on loans to commercial banks.

Lower U.S. interest rates make dollar-denominated investments less attractive.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

-2.2295 West German marks, down from 2.2500

-1.84125 Swiss francs, down from 1.8622

-7.1140 French francs, down from 7.1775

-2.5130 Dutch guilders, down from 2.5365

-1,528.00 Italian lire, down from 1,544.50

-1.3950 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3939

The British pound rose to $1.5060 from $1.4930.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell for a fourth straight session, closing the week at 167.75 Japanese yen, down from 170.75 yen. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 168.13 yen.

Gold bullion prices fluctuated within a narrow range in light trading.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $341.50 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $341.30 late Thursday.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $341.70, up from $341.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, the metal closed at a bid of $341.78, unchanged from Thursday.

Silver was bid in London at $5.14 an ounce, down from $5.18.

Unemployment rate rises to 7.3 percent in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Layoffs in the automobile and oil industries sent civilian unemployment up 0.2 percentage points to 7.3 percent in May, with all of the increase in joblessness occurring among adult men, the government reported today.

Civilian unemployment increased by 212,000 people last month, raising the total number of jobless to 8,554,000 despite an increase of nearly 200,000 service jobs, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The May rate, adjusted for seasonal variations, was the highest since February, and followed two straight months of slight declines. Civilian employment in May totaled 109,110,000, an increase of 218,000 new jobs since April. But the labor force grew by 422,000, to 119,351,000, nearly double the number of new jobs created.

Manufacturing remained in its depression, losing another 40,000 jobs in May, raising to a total of 300,000 the number of factory jobs lost since August 1984. Fifteen thousand of those jobs disappeared last month in the automobile industry. Since early 1985, automobile and truck manufacturing employment has dropped by 50,000.

The oil and gas industry continued to be the most dramatic area of declining employment, losing another 30,000 jobs in May in addition to the 70,000 jobs lost the first three months of this year in a reflection of falling oil prices worldwide.

"Since September of 1984, that industry has lost one-quarter of its work force," BLS Commissioner Janet L. Norwood said in prepared testimony before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Ms. Norwood said weakness in the oil industry also has affected other areas. "Oil field machinery manufacturing, for example, lost about a quarter of its jobs over the past year, much of that in the past few months," she said.

However, lower mortgage rates continued to spur increases in construction employment and new jobs in finance, insurance and real estate, reflecting the strong housing market.

Contractors hired 21,000 new construction workers last month, raising total employment in that industry to 4.99 million. In the past year the economy has produced more than 300,000 new construction jobs. The finance, insurance and real estate sector hired 28,000 new employees in May.

Federal Reserve not planning policy change

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve chairman, Paul A. Volcker, said Thursday that he did not intend to signal a tighter monetary policy when, earlier this week, he pointed to the potential for revived inflation.

Volcker also indicated that the United States would not necessarily wait for West Germany or Japan to take the lead if the Fed decided to ease monetary policy by making another cut in its discount rate.

The Fed chairman had touched off a large decline in the stock and credit markets on Wednesday by declaring, in response to a question at a monetary conference in Boston, that the inflation trend "hasn't been so bad, but we've got some real problems potentially."

Thursday, however, Volcker told a House subcommittee that he did not mean to imply that his concern about inflation had prompted any shift yet in the Fed's calculation of the relative dangers of overly slow economic growth or renewed inflation.

"I have not been giving any signals, in my mind, on that particular question," Volcker said Thursday in response to a question by Rep. Bill McCollum when the Florida Republican asked whether the Fed was about to tighten monetary policy.

His remarks before a banking subcommittee eased fears somewhat on the bond and stock markets, although continuing uncertainty about the Fed's intentions on rates led to subdued trading. Bond prices gained as the interest rates on most Treasury securities dropped, but stocks were off until a surge of program trading in the final hour of trading lifted prices higher.

Paul A. Volcker

The currency markets reacted most strongly to the remarks by the Fed chairman. The dollar fell against most currencies on renewed speculation that the nation's interest rates could move lower.

Volcker's appearance before the House Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy was devoted mainly to a review of the Fed's own budget, and he would not elaborate later on his remarks. But he did reiterate to the committee his earlier statements that inflation remained a worry since, among other things, the price-suppressing effects of falling oil prices could not be expected to continue.

"There's been a continuing inflationary momentum, even today," Volcker asserted. Earlier in the session, which lasted more than an hour, he had stated, "As a central banker, I always see potential problems."

At the outset, the committee's chairman, Walter E. Fauntroy, the Democrat who represents the District of Columbia, asked Volcker whether his impression was correct that action by the board of governors on the discount rate was now "contingent" on similar moves by other major countries. The Fed has repeatedly suggested that other countries with strong currencies, low inflation and large trade surpluses should stimulate their economies to spur world growth, and a spokesman for the central bank said Thursday that these conditions applied to both West Germany and Japan.

Volcker responded by declaring, "I don't want to create any expectations one way or the other."

Dennis B. Levine

Banker pleads guilty toinsider trading charges

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Dennis B. Levine, a 33-year-old former Wall Street investment banker, Thursday settled federal charges that he earned $12.6 million through illegal insider stock trading. He pleaded guilty in federal district court to four felony counts and agreed to cooperate in a continuing investigation of insider trading on Wall Street.

Levine also agreed to settle civil charges filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission last month. To do so, he will turn over almost all his estimated wealth of $11.5 million, will be barred from working in the securities business and is permanently enjoined from further violations of securities laws.

Levine's guilty plea was to two counts of tax evasion and one count of perjury for lying to the SEC in an earlier inquiry about his stock trading in Textron Inc. He also pleaded guilty to one count of securities fraud for using nonpublic information he obtained about an impending takeover bid for the Jewel Cos. to earn profits of $1.2 million in June 1984.

Southwest Airlines introduces new 'fun fares'

From Staff Reports

On June 1, Southwest Airlines introduced a new tier of low fares called "Fun Fares," and the response has been to double the call volume in a number of the airline's markets, according to spokeswoman Charlotte Goddard.

The response has been to so strong, in fact, that it's been difficult to get through to make reservations, she said, "but we do still have seats available." She noted that the recent flooding in San Antonio, where Southwest's primary reservations center is, played a part in the difficulty since some reservations agents couldn't get to work.

The new fares may give travelers in the Midland-Odessa area the chance to plan a vacatioin that they may not have thought they could afford in light of the current local economy, she stated. She emphasized that although the lower fares are aimed at travelers who can book in advance, Southwest "isn't penalizing the business traveler. You won't see business fares being raised. Business travelers can still fly for the same low rates we're known for." And if the business traveler can book far enough in advance, he can take advantage of the "Fun Fares" as well, she added.

Southwest's new "Fun Fares" start at only $59 each way between Midland/Odessa and Albuquerque or Phoenix. FUN FARES are $69 to Denver, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Ontario and San Diego; and $79 to San Francisco.

According to Goddard, Southwest is attempting to build on its newer routes to the west, such as Los Angeles, Las Vegas, Phoenix and Denver. The fares were introduced on an experimental basis in Kansas City, Mo., and extended throughout Southwest's market.

The "Fun Fares" are each way based on roundtrip travel and all travel must be completed by midnight August 28, 1986. Southwest requires travelers make their reservations and purchase their tickets at least 14 days before departure.

No other discounts or promotional fares will apply to the "Fun Fares" and partially used tickets are nonrefundable. Seats are limited, and "Fun Fares" may not be available on some flights. They are available seven days a week and there is no minimum stay requirement.

The "Fun Fares were made available on Sunday, June 1, 1986, and the last day a traveler can buy a ticket at the new low price is Aug. 14, two weeks in advance of the Aug. 28 expiration date.

Sen. Gramm top beneficiary of funds from nuclear power interests

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Allegations of influence buying by political action committees are nothing new in Washington D.C. A study released this week by a public interest advocacy group attempts to establish a connection between PACs supported by companies with interests in the nuclear power industry and the Congressmen who regulate that industry.

Included in the study are a number of oil and gas exploration and production companies and oilfield service and supply firms which also have interests in nuclear power projects.

In the past five years, Texas Senators Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen and Represenatives Jack Fields and Charles Wilson were among the biggest beneficiaries of campaign contributions from PACs representing companies with a direct interest in nuclear power, according to a study released by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group (USPIRG). Nuclear PAC contributions to the Texas lawmakers included: $120,266 to Gramm; $56,268 to Bentsen; $60,113 to Fields; and $56,700 to Wilson since 1981.

Sen. Gramm was the top recipient in either Congressional chamber, while Bentsen ranked sixth in the Senate. Representatives Fields and Wilson ranked fourth and fifth respectively in the House.

Based on information filed with the Federal Election Commission covering the period from the 1981-82 election cycle through the end of 1985, USPIRG's survey examined 89 PACs with ties to companies involed in the equipping and supplying, design, construction or operation of commercial nuclear power plants.

Among the companies listed as donors of more than $100,000 during the period studied are Fluor Corp., Halliburton, Exxon, Enserch, Sohio, Combustion Engineering, Texas Utility Co., Conoco and Dresser Industries.

The survey shows that more than one-fourth (29 percent) of the $10 million contributed by nuclear power PACs went to members of four key Congressional committees with regulatory jurisdiction over commercial nuclear power plants: The Interior and Energy & Commerce committes in the House; and the Energy & Natural Resources and Environment & Public Works committees in the Senate.

USPIRG, a consumer and environmental advocacy lobbying group, claims that the companies involved in the varioius stages of the commerical nuclear power generation cycle and the PACs expect a return on their investment — and that crucial public safety considerations may be overlooked by PAC-supported lawmakers deliberating on nuclear power issues.

Halliburton laying off 180 employees in Duncan

DUNCAN, Okla. (AP) — Halliburton Services is laying off 180 employees at its operations in Duncan because of the continuing decline in drilling activity, officials say.

By the end of the latest round of layoffs, the oilfield service company expects to have 2,200 employees in Duncan. The workforce has been reduced by about 550 employees since the first of the year.

Halliburton personnel director Gates McPhail said that most of the 180 in the latest reduction are in the manufacturing operations.

"Most of them will go today and tomorrow," he said Thursday.

"The problems we have here in Duncan are a little more defined in that the orders from the field locations are dropping and our inventory of finished products is increasing," said Halliburton Services President Spike Dunlop.

"Until we see some turnaround, we are going to have to adjust our employee count to keep it in line with the level of activity that we have," he said.

Nationally, Halliburton has seen its number of employees drop from approximately 9,000 to 5,700 since the first of the year. Workforce reductions are also going on overseas.

"We still think we are getting close to the bottom on the domestic rig count," Dunlop said. "We have to underline that we think we are getting close to the bottom."

There is a decline in international operations, he said, but not as drastic a reduction as there has been in the United States.

Since late last year, the price of domestic oil has plummeted from about $30 a barrel to as low as $11 a barrel. It currently is in the $13 to $15 range.

Exxon plans to withdraw pension funds

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. said Thursday that it plans to seek federal approval to withdraw more than $1 billion of excess funds from its U.S. pension plan.

The company said it intends to put the surplus money to "general corporate use" after the withdrawal is approved, and that it expects the action to have no significant impact on Exxon's 1986 earnings.

In a letter to its employees, Exxon said the benefits of employees, annuitants and other pension plan participants would be fully protected; that terms of the plan would remain unchanged; and that the company would arrange additional guarantees with an insurance company.

Soviets may hire Red Adair to fight large oil field fire

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston oil-well firefighter Paul "Red" Adair is awaiting w ord on whether he will be hired to put out a large oil field fire that has raged for months in the Soviet Union, Adair said Thursday.

Soviet officials contacted Adair in January after having no luck in extinguishing the flames, he said.

Adair has submitted a proposal to the Soviets, he said.

Adair, the subject of a movie starring John Wayne in the late 1960s, said he had offered his help after two trips to the site in Kazakhstan, a Soviet Central Asian republic.

He said he didn't know how long the fire had burned or how it started.

He said he was reluctant to talk about the fire because he was waiting for the Soviets to sign a contract.

"Something like this is pretty touchy," he said. "It is a pretty big fire."

It is in a pressure field with sulphur gas that is "dangerous to fool with," according to a U.S. Embassy official in Moscow.

Adair said he had to receive permission from Washington to accept the Soviet offer.

If the Soviets accept the 71-year-old Adair's proposal, he said, it will not be the biggest fire he has experienced. Some oil well fires in South Texas and Saudi Arabia have raged for more than 25 years, he said.

He said he and six of his workers are now working on a big fire in the Venezuelan oil fields.

He said he has already put out fires in Hungary, China, Mayalsia and the United States this year.

"In Hungary, they had worked on the fire for two months," he said. "It took me three days."

Operators add to Howard field

From Staff Reports

The Howard Glasscock field of Howard County is seeing some activity as three operators have completed producers in the field.

SAMEDAN OIL CORP. completed the No. 3 Cole as a Glorieta producer in the Howard Glasscock (Middle Clearfork) field. On potential test, the well pumped 118 barrels of 28 gravity crude and 74 barrels of water from perforations 3,254 to 3,739 ft.

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC. and BOND OPERATING CO. each completed wells in the Howard Glasscock (Wolfcamp) field.

Mobil tested the No. 22 Chalk Estate, tcompleted as a Wolfcamp producer in the Howard Glasscock (Wolfcamp) field, pumping 55 barrels of 39.7 gravity crude and 55 Mcfd from perforations 7,302 to 7,388 ft.

Norwegian government orders end to strike on offshore rigs

OSLO (UPI) — The Norwegian government has ordered an end to a strike by state and municipal workers that had threatened to shut down offshore oil and gas production for the second time this year.

The government urged 45,000 state and municipal employees to go back to work, pending forced arbitration to end their wage dispute.

The government intervention followed a threat by strikers to step up their three-week-old walkout to include air traffic to and from offshore oil and gas rigs and thus shut down North Sea production.

Earlier, the state oil company, Statoil, said strike action in the offshore oil and gas industry threatened to undermine the nation's credibility as a major gas supplier on the international market.

Statoil spokesman Willy Olsen said the company considered building up vast gas reserves in order to guarantee deliveries.

Norway's North Sea oil and gas production was cut off for two weeks this spring because of a strike by offshore platform kitchen workers seeking higher wages.

Statoil announced a $65 billion contract with six European gas companies for the sale of 450 billion cubic meters of natural gas from Norwegian North Sea gas fields.

CAMBE GEOLOGICAL SERVICES will open its Midland data library on Monday June 2. The library will cover Railroad Districts 7B, 7C, 8, 8A and 9 and Southeastern New Mexico in hard copy. In addition Cambe's complete Gulf Coast log file covering Railroad Districts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, South Louisiana, North Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida is available in microfilm copy. Over 1,000,000 logs will be available for your use as a member or on a one time purchase basis.

The membership dues of $160.00 per month include our staff pulling all of the data you need and delivering it to you (this includes the Claydesta area). If you prefer to do your own work at the Library, ample work areas will be available. Our out of town members can have their data mailed to them as they need it. If you need to buy logs the cost is $6.00 per log for members and $8.00 per log for non-members.

Cambe has served the Gulf Coast since 1933 and is pleased to bring its full service concept to Midland and West Texas. To order logs or inquire about the membership library call Marianne Lamkin or Rita Cone at 687-1053.

JOBS

The May figures also indicated that people are eating out more, with retail trade employment rising by 45,000, much of it in restaurants and bars.

By another measure of calculation that includes the nearly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, unemployment in May totaled 7.2 percent.

Among civilians, the continuing poor showing in manufacturing was reflected particularly in increased joblessness among adult men. The 6.4 percent unemployment rate for them was about the same as for adult women, Ms. Norwood said. Typically, she said, unemployment among men is usually lower than among women.

Teen-age unemployment in May was 19 percent, 0.6 percent lower than April.

For other population groups, the bureau showed these unemployment figures:

—Whites, 6.2 percent, up from 6.1 percent.

—Blacks, 14.8 percent, unchanged.

—Hispanics, 11 percent, up from 10.4 percent.

—Black teen-agers, 40.8 percent, down from 42.6 percent.

In advance of today's report, private economists had said they expected continued job losses in manufacturing.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for the New York investment house of Shearson Lehman Bros., said Thursday he does not expect any significiant increase in factory employment — "recognized by everyone as the beginning of permanent improvement" — before Labor Day.

"Manufacturing companies that have been under pressure want more proof that any increase in their business is lasting before they hire more people," Sinai said. "They are slow to hire after essentially being in a recession."

Despite preliminary estimates of an annual 3.7 percent growth in the economy the first three months of this year, the manufacturing sector remains weak, said Michael Evans, a private economic consultant in Washington.

Evans, normally an optimist, believes the situation is not likely to improve this year at all.

"There have been just too many things going wrong," he said. "Businessmen are just too afraid that the gains they have enjoyed are temporary."

Texas reports unemployment up 1.1 percent

DALLAS (AP) — The number of Texans looking for jobs soared to 779,000 in May — an increase of 12 percent from the 685,000 out of work the month before and a leap of 29 percent from the same month in 1985 — the U.S. Department of Labor announced today.

Expressed as a percent of the potential workforce, the state's unemployment rate stood at 9.6 percent in May, compared with 8.5 percent in April and 6.3 percent in May of 1985.

Anderson shareholders approve recapitalization

HOUSTON (AP) — Anderson Clayton & Co. shareholders overwhelmingly approved a recapitalization plan proposed by the consumer products company's management, the company announced Thursday.

The plan was adopted by a vote of more than 80 percent of the 10.2 million shares presented at a special meeting Tuesday of stockholders either in person or by proxy.

"Our shareholders clearly perceive value in the opportunity to receive cash on a tax-favorable basis while retaining an equity investment in the company," said W. Fenton Guinee Jr., president and chief executive officer of Anderson Clayton.

Voting on the recapitalization plan began Tuesday at the special meeting and ended at 4 p.m. CDT Thursday.

Under the proposal, stockholders would receive $37 cash for each of their shares together with 0.534 of a "new" share in the recapitalized company.

Two investment firms trying to acquire Anderson Clayton unsuccessfully tried to block voting. The firms, Bear, Stearns & Co. and Cruss & Co., both of New York, joined in a lawsuit in a Delaware Chancery Court to postpone the voting. On Monday, the court ruled that Anderson Clayton could proceed with voting.

Delaware justices stay away from Pickens speech

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — Most of Delaware's Superior Court justices did not attend the State Bar Association's Bench and Bar Conference, citing their involvement or potential involvement in cases concerning keynote speaker T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.

Three of the five members of the high court said they felt their attendance at Wednesday's night's meeting would have been inappropriate because they have ruled and could rule again on cases in which the Texan is involved.

Justices Andrew G.T. Moore II, John McNeilly and Henry R. Horsey did not attend the dinner at the University of Delaware. Vice Chancellor Maurice A. Hartnett III also did not attend.

Moore said the decision of the three justices' was based on a 1978 action in which the Massachusetts Supreme Court censured and disciplined one of its members who allowed himself to be photographed with author Gore Vidal, who had criticized the court's handling of some cases.

About 400 lawyers attended the event where Pickens spoke of his efforts to form a national shareholders' association for America's 47 million stockholders.

"They are connected by the best glue I can imagine — their money," he said, adding that he was trying to get stockholders the right to cast confidential ballots.

Mexican peso continues fall

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican currency fell past 600 pesos to the dollar Thursday, in the third straight day of a marked deterioration of its value.

Prevailing rates on the free market were 635 pesos for those wanting to sell dollars and 640 to buy one.

The rates were up sharply from Wednesday's quotes of 585 and 595. The peso briefly slipped past the 600 mark Wednesday morning at some exchange houses before strengthening later in the day. It was the first time the peso's value had weakened to that level.

A second rate, set daily by the central Bank of Mexico and representatives of commercial banks, was about 543 on Thursday. The rate is used in approximately 80 percent of the nation's commercial transactions.

It was unclear what forces were driving the latest deterioration in the peso's value.

Local newspapers have repeatedly reported that the government is set to put in place a series of strong economic measures to reduce interest rates, freeze wages and prices, and create a new currency. Government officials have denied the existence of any such plan which has been dubbed in the press the "Aztec Plan."

There also have been reports of growing concern about the nation's ability to stay current on its foreign debt of nearly $100 billion.

Gimbels to close Manhattan store

NEW YORK (AP) — Gimbels, one of the biggest and most famous department stores in the city, will close before the end of the year and its Manhattan site near Macy's will be redeveloped, The New York Times reported today.

A smaller Gimbels store in Manhattan also will close, and 5,000 employees at both will lose their jobs, the Times said.

The stores' current owner, Batus Inc., has canceled all orders for merchandise for the two stores as well as for the rest of the stores in the Gimbels chain, the Times said.

The closings will follow the sale of the stores, expected this month, to the London and Leeds Corp., a British firm, the Times said, quoting parties involved in the negotiations. Batus has discontinued negotiations with two other bidders for the stores, the newspaper said.

The Herald Square store is located a block away from Macy's and is in the heart of one of the city's busiest shopping areas.

But the entire Gimbels chain has suffered what Batus calls "a disappointing performance."

Batus is reportedly trying to sell the nine other Gimbels stores, on Long Island; in Westchester, New Jersey and Philadelphia, to Allied Department Stores, which would convert them to branches of its Stern division, the Times said.

Batus, which also owns Saks Fifth Avenue stores, has already sold Gimbels stores in Pittsburgh and Milwaukee.

Biology teacher runs 'living lending library'

PLANO (AP) — Biology teacher n Dunlap believes a bird in the nd is worth two in the book. The ne goes for spiders, snakes, mice d other critters in his classroom .

Since 1980, Dunlap has supervised no Senior High School's Living terials Center — a collection of veral hundred animals available study or lending to teachers and dents.

"The total fluctuates daily," Dun- said as mice, crickets and mealy rms multiply and are fed to larger mals.

The LMC started as an incentive ogram for special education stu- nts, who were allowed to care for animals when they did good rk.

But the zoo now also is tended by mentary school pupils in "critter sses," adult volunteers and stu- nts who receive class credit for aning cages and feeding animals.

"They usually expect an easy A, t they have to work for it," he d.

Incoming residents often are cked temporarily on a loading k outside while Dunlap moves ges to make room for more un- nted pets and orphaned or in- red wild animals.

"Some of these are pet shop refugees," he said, pointing to a cayman, sort of a small alligator from South America.

The lab is bursting at the seams, but voters apparently appreciated Dunlap's efforts. They approved an $800,000 lab to be built on the city's east side, next to the Outdoor Learning Center.

In between his supervisory duties, Dunlap, 41, fields telephone calls about how to care for an injured ferret or treat a dehydrated kingsnake.

He writes a weekly newspaper column, "Backyard Zoo," and is a frequent guest on children's television programs. He also travels from school to school, showing kids a 15-foot-long Burmese python named Katy or a bobcat named Kitty.

One of the latest additions to the fold is Elrod, a 1-year-old wallaby from Australia. He was bought with money raised by preschoolers at the early learning center across the hall.

Elrod's not for loan, but Dunlap gleefully lets teachers check out turtles, snakes, rabbits, gerbils, guinea pigs and the occasional spider or scorpion.

"It's a living lending library," he said.
