Bank Assets, Deposits, Set New Mid-Year Record in County

Assets in Collingsworth county's three banks set an all time mid-season high this year, passing the 8 1/2 million dollar mark as of the close of business June 30. This upsets last year's record figure, exceeding it by more than a quarter million dollars.

Deposits followed the trend, reaching well above the seven and three-quarter million figure, which is also approximately a quarter million over deposits a year ago.

Figures in the reports of the three banks, City State, Wellington State and First State, were those given as of June 30 in compliance with the calls by the Federal Reserve Bank and the State Banking Commission.

Both assets and deposits were approximately one-third higher than they were six years ago, when for the first time, assets went above the six million dollar mark.

The increase has been steady and continuous, except for a drop of only a few thousand dollars two years ago.

The June report is traditionally the low point of the year as far as banking is concerned in the cotton-feed-wheat and livestock oriented economy of this area.

Combined assets of the three Collingsworth County banks on June 30 was $8,590,261.17. A year ago it was $8,249,107.45. Two years ago it was $7,408,786.59, and three years ago the figure was $7,454,099.79. Deposits this year were $7,838,606.69. A year ago they were $7,515,367.60; two years ago the figure was $6,776,334.11 and three years ago it was $6,832,671.92.

Demand deposits on June 30 were $5,951,382.59, which is well above the combined deposit figure only five years ago.

Last year's demand deposits were $5,821,381.63.

This year's demand deposits—the working accounts of the banks' depositors, nearing the six million dollar mark, reached that peak in spite of the county's losing at least half its wheat crop after June 1 to hail.

Loans and discounts on June 30 were $4,825,875.75. This is

D. E. Fulton Dies Here Friday Evening

D. E. Fulton, retired postal employee, died in St. Joseph's Hospital at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 9. He had lived here since 1924. Mr. Fulton, who would have been 73 years old on July 15, had been in failing health for a number of months.

His career in the post office began when the present building was constructed and ended Aug. 1, 1962, a tenure of 24 years. He was in the maintenance department.

David Eldridge Fulton was born in Tennessee and came to Weatherford, Texas, as a youth.

Few men in Collingsworth County had so distinguished an Army record as Mr. Fulton during World War I, for he was near the battle front in Europe for nearly a year, taking part in such battles as St. Mihiel and Argonne Wood.

He never admitted to his outstanding record, and it was only by a few words dropped from time to time that friends learned of his war record.

Mr. Fulton was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

He was married to Miss Ethel Gray March 21, 1918, in Parker County. They came here in 1924 and he farmed and worked as a carpenter until he joined the Post Office staff.

He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Mr. Fulton was a modest man and never spoke of his achievements. To many, however, one that ranked high in his life was his successful effort to give each of his four children a good education.

Zone 4 Firemen Hear Of Hale Center Storm

Members of the Wellington Volunteer Fire Department were hosts to firemen from Zone 4 of the Panhandle Firemen's Association Saturday night, July 10.

Two speakers were featured, Judge R. L. Templeton, Collingsworth County attorney, who discussed liability of volunteer firemen on their way to a fire, and Chief Denton of Hale Center, who described that town's recent destruction by a tornado and how the emergency was met.

A special guest was Bill Sanders, Dumas Fire Chief, president of the Panhandle Firemen's Association. Judge Templeton told the group that when an emergency vehicle, such as a fire truck, ambulance or law enforcement officer's car, is not on an emergency mission for the public, the same laws apply to it as to any other vehicle.

An emergency vehicle also must have a red light flashing or a siren sounding in order to have the right of way over

Keith was riding on the tractor which his older brother, Mike, was driving. Their father was a short distance away.

The boy's leg was broken above the knee.

After receiving emergency treatment here, Keith was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, and his condition this week is considered as improving, Mrs. Buske said.

One of Wellington's all-time Skyrocket greats will be the head football coach at Childress high school this year.

I. D. Russell, assistant coach under LeeRoy Reeves at Childress last year, was named to the top football position recently, and Reeves was appointed principal of the high school.

Russell played four years of football for the Rockets under Coach Al Duncan before graduating in 1947. He then became an outstanding guard for the Southern Methodist University Mustangs and received his degree from that school in 1951.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Russell of Wellington.

Entering the coaching field, he was at Kermit a year, then at Borger and Vernon. He left coaching to work for a steel company in Dallas, do some post-graduate work at SMU, and then owned and operated a feed store and elevator in Childress several years. He returned to coaching and teaching last year.

Mrs. Russell, the former Lynn Moore, taught mathematics in Wellington junior high year before last and now is teaching the same subject in Childress.

Russell suffered a knee injury as a schoolboy grid player, and out of this several years later he developed and patented a knee brace which he sells to both school and professional athletes.

Former Childress star athlete Fred Cawthon was hired to be an assistant football coach. He has been freshman basketball and baseball coach at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Davis On Farm Bureau Tour of Mid-West

L. A. Davis left July 11 on a week-long Farm Bureau-sponsored bus tour of five mid-western states to observe operations of county Farm Bureaus in those states. Davis is second vice president of the Collingsworth County Farm Bureau.

He will join approximately 175 other county Farm Bureau leaders from all over Texas in the seven-day tour through Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and Iowa. This "Institute on Wheels" is designed to give a first-hand look at programs carried on by effective county Farm Bureaus in some of the most important farming areas of the U.S. It replaces the annual Texas Farm Bureau Institute which has been held each summer since 1919.

After leaving Oklahoma City, the caravan of buses will be divided into four groups, each one taking a slightly different route to visit not only county FB offices, but also farms, feedlots and other outstanding agricultural facilities in the five states on the itinerary.

The county Farm Bureau leaders will hold a big rally Wednesday evening, July 14 at the headquarters of the state Farm Bureau in Bloomington, Ill. There they will be joined by another bus group from Arkansas to hear an address by Charles B. Shuman, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Presidents of the three southwestern states, including C. H. DeVaney of Texas Farm Bureau, will be in attendance.

On the way home, the group will stop in St. Louis Thursday, July 15 to see a baseball game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Mets. The Texans will arrive back home on Saturday, July 17.

The coming competitive era will be the battle of the brains!" Subjects to be covered will include planning, organizing, directing, controlling, coordination, selling service, managers' roles and images, and other management subjects.

Attending from the Rolling Plains Production Credit Association will be J. L. Hill, Jr., general manager. The conference is designed to further the management techniques of each participant. Kenneth Wolf of Texas A&M Extension Service will be the conference leader. Hill said, "The complicated business of credit analysis and management demands that we take every opportunity to further our professional education. The bank's manpower development program gives us that opportunity."

The Rolling Plains Production Credit Association has $8 million outstanding in loans to 978 members. Directors of the association are C. G. Burson, Sr., of Haskell, president; J. C. Emmert of Wellington, first vice president; Lasater Hensley of Guthrie, vice president; and other directors are J. F. McCulloch of Stamford; Mack T. Claburn of Anson; J. C. SOIL SURVEY PROGRESS

I recently received from Mr. H. N. (Red) Smith, the State Conservationist who directs activities of the Soil Conservation Service in Texas, a report on the progress being made in the 18th District toward completing soil surveys.

These soil surveys constitute detailed physical inventories of soil conditions, showing depth, structure, drainage, stoniness, slope, erosion, and other features of each kind of soil that determines its use and capability. Soil surveys are carried out on a nationally coordinated basis in cooperation with other Federal agencies, the State agricultural experiment stations, other State agencies, county governments, and a number of local organizations.

I'm glad to say that good progress is being made. In four of the 28 counties of the 18th District, the mapping has been completed and the surveys published. In six other counties, the work is completed and publication should follow shortly. Work in other counties is in varying stages.

With each county listed alphabetically, and with the percentage of land area mapped and a target date for completion indicated for each county, the situation in the District is as follows:

Armstrong, 100%, published; Briscoe, 50%, 1970; Carson, 100%, published; Castro, 50%, 1967; Childress, 100%, published; Collingsworth, 100%, complete; Cottle, 32%, 1966; Dallam, 44%, 1967; Deaf Smith, 100%, complete; Donley, 14%, 1968; Gray, 100%, complete; Hall, 100%, complete; Hansford, 100%, published; Hartley, 23%, 1972; Hemphill, 100% complete; Hutchinson, 16%, 1972; Lipscomb, 39%, 1968; Moore, 53%, 1968; Motley, 14%, 1969; Ochiltree, 100%, complete; Oldham, 35%, 1971; Parmer, 26%, 1969; Potter, 2%, indefinite; Randall, 99%, 1965; Roberts, 20%, 1973; Sherman, 0%, indefinite; Swisher, 34%, 1966; and Wheeler, 40%, 1967.

The primary purpose of the soil surveys is to make available to landowners and farm and ranch operators the facts on which to guide development of basic conservation plans. With a soil map and its interpretation, plus related information, a technician of the Soil Conservation Service is able to provide farmers and ranchers with proper planning assistance.

Although soil surveys are being used mainly in developing and managing farm and forest lands, they provide information for other purposes. County and community planning officials use soil survey information to help locate areas that are suitable for housing, schools, shopping centers, roads and parking lots, industry, and parks and recreational areas. Bankers, insurance officials and loan companies find soil surveys helpful in determining the soundness of proposed investments in land. Engineers use soil surveys in locating and designing highways, airports, sewers, pipelines, buildings and other structures.

In past years, a number of attempts have been made to reduce funds available for soil conservation programs, including soil surveys. I have always supported proper appropriations for soil conservation work, recognizing the great work done over the years in the Texas Panhandle, and have on several occasions helped lead fights to restore threatened cuts in appropriations.

It now appears that the SCS appropriation for the fiscal year 1966 will provide approximately the same amount of money

UNDERWATER CABLE—Big loops of steel-armored coaxial cable are unreeling into a barge at Baltimore for the trip that will end under the Hudson River in New York as was available for the program in 1965. Many of us have been concerned because a $20 million cut was threatened under legislation to be offered increasing the extent of financial participation by cooperating soil conservation districts, landowners and operators.

However, this legislation has not as yet been submitted to the Congress and its fate, when it is submitted, is very much uncertain. Certainly we can ill-afford to handicap the soil conservation movement. Our treasured soil resources must be preserved.

The soil, water, range and forest resources of the country are basic in the structure of our national economy. From

Hormone Used to Conserve Crop Water

Farmers have searched many years for ways to produce crops on less water. This may be just around the corner for Texas farmers, due to research at the High Plains Research Foundation at Halfway, Texas.

Laboratory, greenhouse, and field experiments currently under way at the Foundation may disclose the possibility of securing the same yield from cotton on 1/4 to 1/2 of the irrigation water now used. A hormone applied in research by Dr. Arthur F. Gohlke, assistant director and senior soil scientist for the Foundation, has been found to produce cotton plants with shorter stems, thicker stems, and thicker dark green leaves than untreated plants. This change of the plant inhibits the evaporation of water through the leaves of the plant.

Treated plants undergo a great change, but this change does not reduce the yield or quality of harvested cotton. The application of the hormone in sufficient amounts shortens the internode distance between the leaves and the stem. This, in turn, produces a short dry-weather cotton plant capable of possibly producing from one to two bales of cotton per acre on less irrigation water.

The Plains of Texas grows 16 percent of the nation's cotton on 1.6 million irrigated acres. Water alone has made this possible. It is hoped that by the full utilization of this chemical hormone, the productivity of the land can be maintained.

It is thought that yields on dryland cotton may be obtained, through the use of this hormone, similar to those now being harvested off irrigated crops. On irrigated land, the reduction of up to 50 percent of irrigation needs might not be too far in the future. Due to the dwarfing effect on the plant caused by the hormone, it is also thought that yields may be increased in some instances by closer planting of the crop.

At this time, Dr. Gohlke reports that his research will be complete on this project in about 3 years. The results of the 1964 hormone research showed an increase in lint of from 16 to 50 percent per acre. Quality was unaffected with

This is one more area of research underway at the High Plains Research Foundation to conserve the underground irrigation water supply and increase crop yields.

SALT FORK SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

By Doug Lowe

Management is the key to top production on improved pastures. After a pasture has been successfully established to an approved grass, then the way it is grazed, watered and fertilized will determine the forage yield.

Pastures should be fertilized according to a soil test. Application is best made in several small applications during the growing season rather than one large application. It is most desirable if top production is to be obtained, to divide the pasture into two or three plots of equal size so that livestock can be grazed no shorter than 4 to 6 inches.

The taller grasses, such as switchgrass, Indian grass, Sand Love or Johnson grass will make more tons of forage during the growing season if they are grazed no closer than 12 to 18 inches in height. By leaving this much top growth at the beginning of a rest period. An irrigated pasture divided into 3 parts would normally have one part being grazed at all times during the growing season and the other two thirds being watered, fertilized and making re-growth. A common cycle for this system of management is to graze a plot for two weeks and allow four weeks for recovery.

Under dryland conditions, if moisture is limited, a pasture divided in half is usually most successful. The height to which the grass is grazed is most important. Bermuda grass should be grazed no shorter than 4 to 6 inches.

The atmosphere is 75 times as deep as the deepest part of the ocean.

a more rapid and vigorous growth.

Very close grazing will stop root growth in a plant and if continued will eventually kill it. This amount of grass left on the land is important for several other reasons — it protects the soil to some extent from the drying action of the wind; it keeps the temperature of the soil surface lower, which reduces moisture evaporation; and it tends to catch and hold more of the moisture that falls on the land.

If weeds become a problem on improved pasture they should be controlled by spraying, mowing or shredding. However if a pasture is well established, properly grazed, watered and fertilized, weeds are usually no problem.

Producers who are establishing improved pastures this year in the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District are James H. Hobbs, W. D. Simpson and John H. Christner.

Contact any of the personnel assisting the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District for assistance in planning and managing improved pastures.

Improved Cotton Products Sought By Producers

LUBBOCK—Efforts by cotton growers to provide consumers with new and improved cotton products are making significant progress, a report from the Cotton Producers Institute indicates.

Renewal of grants for research work on cotton products was announced recently by Roy Davis of Lubbock, and Jack Funk of Harlingen, Texas trustees for the Institute.

Growers renewed three projects aimed at providing men with improved cotton suits and trousers. Purpose is to develop suitably styled and designed garments with maximum wrinkle resistance, freedom from seam pucker, good shape and crease retention and good wash and wear properties.

Scientists at Harris Research Laboratories, Washington, D.C. have developed several novel methods for altering cuffs and for a process for delaying the "curing" of treated fabric surfaces.

Some 100 suits have been wear-tested. The present level of performance exceeds that of wash-wear suits now on the market, according to reports.

To make the suits even more attractive, growers are sponsoring research on fabric design and development. Idea is to offer men attractively styled cotton suiting fabrics that give top performance.

Research grants to Texas Woman's University to compare the performance of all-cotton products with that of competing products have been renewed.

Besides producing information on research opportunities, these studies are providing valuable facts for use in informing consumers of the advantages of cotton products.

Two renewed Institute grants deal with reversible crosslinks. With this technique, molecules within fibers could be "linked together" and then "unlinked" as desired. This would enable the production of cotton garments which have durably creased, easy care qualities, yet can be altered to fit individual customers.

Also renewed was an Institute project to find a method to improve the luster of cotton products. Better luster would improve cotton's competitive strength in markets now using the equivalent of nine million bales annually.

The Institute was launched in 1961 by cotton growers as a mechanism to increase cotton markets and profits through research and promotion. Its projects are serviced by the National Cotton Council, so all funds from participating grow-

4-H Boys Aim at Tractor Know-How

Operating a modern farm tractor today is a lot different than it was a generation ago. More farm mechanization, demands for greater horsepower, larger farms and stiffer competition have resulted in rapid changes in tractors. And as fast as improvements are made, the operator must learn how to use them.

One group of young farmers, 4-H Club members, have the advantage of starting early to learn about operating and maintaining the tractor. This year, an estimated 63,000 youths from coast to coast, are engaged in a 4-H tractor project or activity, says the Cooperative Extension Service.

Some of the newer "extras" they are learning about are power steering, power transmissions, 10 or more forward speeds and up to five reverse speeds. Also four-wheel drives, increased horsepower, air-conditioned cabs and two-way radios. They may soon learn about remote control tractors.

Blase Beaver builds Brownwood Bivouac

BROWNWOOD.— District Chief John R. Wood of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department was excitedly paged to settle an argument about whether there were any beaver in Brown County.

"Man, there's a beaver dam about three blocks from your place of business."

The dam impounds about four feet of water in Adams Creek, smack downtown in busy Brownwood.

New Monuments at Ft. Parker

MEXIA.—Two groups are interested in Old Fort Parker State Park monuments, according to Bob Magouirk, regional park ranger.

One granite marker is getting a new base in the historically important park, and plans are being made to erect a cast aluminum marker.

Pack 125 of the Mansfield Cub Scouts have requested permission to erect a new base on the monument detailing the story of the attack on the fort by Comanche and Kiowa Indians where Cynthia Ann Parker, later mother of the famed Quanaah Parker, was captured.

The Limestone County Historical Society is proceeding with plans to erect a 24x27 inch cast aluminum marker that will point out further facts for visitor information.

Tax Break for Students

President Johnson has promised that his Great Society will provide the means so that no qualified young person in these United States need be denied a college education because of lack of funds.

Certainly this proposal beats pouring money into Viet Nam where their college students' favorite extra curriculum activity is flinging rocks and insults at the American Embassy.

Senator Abraham Ribicoff has a bill which he is going to present to the Congress having to do with aiding the college education of our young people. Ribicoff proposes a tax relief to families sending students to college, and this is a measure which it seems would fit into the President's new program like a hand into a glove.

Some might argue that such deductions would mainly aid those who already have plenty of money to send students to school. But we think there are vast numbers of middle income families who pay income taxes and struggle to send their children to college. We can't see where the difference lies in taking the taxes to hand back to the people for college educations, and relieving them of the burden in the first place. Actually, keeping the federal government out of the picture is the most economical method, for the government does not administrate cheaply.

As for loans, the banking industry of the United States has already taken great steps in meeting the need for low cost loans to young people trying to get an education, and many, many types of loans are available.

We would rather take the route of Ribicoff's bill and loans from local banks than see the government turn the plan into its usual ball of red tape.

—The Wilson County Citizen, Fredonia, Kan.

A sweet old lady, always eager to help the needy, spied a sad looking old man standing on a street corner. She walked over to him, pressed a dollar bill into his hand and said, "Chin up."

The next day, on the same corner, the old man shuffled up to the lady and slipped 10 dollars into her hand. "Nice picking," he said in a low voice. "He paid nine to one."

Ford, Bart Patterson, Wesley Proctor, Nathan Ray, Richard Sims and Jeff Hanna. Absent when the picture was made were Joe Porter and Steve Hartman. There are several brother combinatins in Peewee ball this year, but most of them were split so they would not play together. "They play better when they're competing," said one of the coaches.

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor:

The papers say Attorney General Katzenbach made a speech at a big schoolhouse called Tufts University and said student demonstrations are healthy and commendable "in some areas of social concern."

My obsolete neighbor says this shows what progress we have made, because our head lawmen didn't used to feel so admiratory toward youths who got overcome with Social Concern.

Says in the old days officers of the law usually deplored instead of commended any time a mob of young bucks got Socially Concerned and put on a demonstration to improve society by giving somebody a coat of tar and feathers.

It has been epistled down from Washington that a team of research scientists measured 7,000 citizens and has proclaimed that women tend to be wider in the seat than men.

My broad viewer neighbor says this research has not divulged any secret that today's shorts and unslacks haven't already made obvious to any interested observer.

But he says it's nice to know that Washington has got its important work all tidied up, so it has pay-rollers with nothing better to do than go around measuring the west ends of eastbound people.

Reports are that some snob hairdressers are now giving girls a mop-top haircut sort of like those worn by the Beatles and the Beatle apers.

My crew-cut neighbor says this development, plus the wearing of pants by both boys and girls, could lead innocent employers into the sin of discrimination against one sex or the other, since it is now illegal to ask prospective employees which they are.

Says the problem is made even worse by widespread selling of lotions and perfumes to boys, so you can't use the dog system and tell them from girls by the smell.

My semi-psychologist neighbor notes that this year, as usual, numerous notorious characters got titled Doctors of Laws and Philosophy and stuff by colleges, without having to sweat for same like ordinary student types do.

Of course, these are just honorary titles, but he's noticed that pretty soon the honorees forget this honorary feature and commence acting superior like they are real Doctors.

But he knows just how a synthetic title can stimulate the self-importance gland, because he is an Honorary Colonel and an Honorary Deputy Sheriff himself.

American investments abroad reached a book value of $40 billion in 1963. Of this nearly a third was in Canada, a quarter in Europe and more than a fifth in Latin America.

COASTAL DESERT

The world's longest and driest coastal desert stretches along the Pacific littoral of Peru and northern Chili. Many weather stations in the area have recorded no rainfall in more than 20 years, but torrential rains sometimes fall in places and literally melt clusters of baked-mud houses.

While John Quincy Adams was president of the U. S., he and his wife raised silkworms in the White House and actually wove silk cloth.

Little Hole a Big Show

Drama at Palo Duro Natural, Man Made

AUSTIN.—People have 15,000 acres including an enormous gorge to tour in mighty Palo Duro Canyon State Park, but the smallest natural feature is one of the biggest attractions. That, according to Park Ranger E. J. Boehm, would be Timber Creek Cave which is little more than a good-sized hole in the rock, with the deepest available penetration only 30 feet back under a slanting ledge.

But Texas' Little Grand Canyon, covering parts of two Panhandle counties, has its budget of distinctive headlines including some it even boasts about, such as an occasional "trained" flash flood.

As a general rule, said Ranger Boehm who has supervised a few score over the years, the floods are sort of Hollywood staged and simply add to the rugged canyon environment.

A network of communication between the radio-rigged canyon staff and the state and local authorities alert the folks sometimes even before the floods develop. Thus the five crossings of the Prairie Dog Fork of the Red River are carefully manned by the time the water arrives.

The main camping grounds are on high ground deep in the park, reached by a steep, winding, scenic road leading to the five crossings. That is why the staff contacts each party penetrating the remote areas, answering the usual questions and informing the patrons of the absolute safety regardless of the water depth.

Only one impatient person in the last five years decided not to defer fording during the usually comparatively short time for the water to subside. He splashed into the swift stream and lost both his car and his trailer.

Ranger Boehm likes to tell about the principal interest of the visiting crowds such as the tremendous canyon scenery, the bird life including swirling eagles, the big game including rare aoudad sheep occasionally seen on the distant rim and the cultural stand-out — the nightly summer performances except Tuesdays in the outdoor amphitheatre by the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation.

But there are those physical angles again. Not the least of these are the exhilarating but hazardous skids down Devil's Slide and the Hog's Back. Natives swoosh down these perilous slopes as a matter of time worn (and britches worn) privileges. And usually escape with the thrill. Outsiders, particularly the young, try to duplicate the dangerous feats, occasionally with disastrous consequences.

In the main, though, the quarter million people touring Palo Duro Canyon State Park each year come to embrace the challenging setting, to gaze at the massive surrounding peaks and yes, to quaff real spring water from a certified flow of water gurgling out of a rock.

Last year, Boehm said, 256,439 visited the park and 31,965 stayed to camp overnight along the quiet, trickling stream or in the open shelters, all entertained nocturnally by the low call of the coyote or the mournful hoot owl and all in close proximity to very civilized conveniences including modern hot water showers.

A Little Work May Produce Quail Crop

TYLER.—The bobwhite quail has many enemies, according to the Parks and Wildlife Department. Landowners can be the quail's best friend by providing the popular game birds with much needed food and cover.

Joe Davidson, biologist for the Department, says "it doesn't take much." Discing and plowing 1/3 to 1/2 acre patches along fence rows, woods borders and near thickets is a good way to begin. This will encourage wild annual plants such as croton (goatweed), partridge pea, ragweed and broom weed. Such plants furnish good quality natural food for the birds and are not readily eaten by cattle.

Another plan is to disc or plow areas along fence rows and woods edges, and then seed with hybrid sorghum, German millet, stock peas or corn.

Later, these areas will offer shelter for the birds with available food nearby. However, these planted areas should be fenced from livestock grazing.

A CASE OF CLEVER POLITICS

Again we have had a demonstration of the fact that Americans (and most certainly our national leaders) have a weakness for the supposed underdog.

For two decades the Congress regularly rejected general aid to education — until somehow it was slipped in under the guise of the poverty program.

This seems to have resulted from a wild stretch of imagination (based on a premise that poverty is based on lack of education), the object of which was to make aid acceptable to a nation which clearly has not wanted it during 20 years of Congressional debate.

The irony of it all is that whatever need was cited earlier is now no longer present. Our "war baby" enrollment boom is leveling off.

The school age population, after almost doubling itself after the war, is predicted to grow only 15 percent in the next decade. The lower grades may show a decline.

But the eminent success of local and state governments in providing for the postwar growth left aid proponents little argument. The projected doubling of expenditures that in 1946 was supposed to require federal aid was handled very nicely by the states. Actually, they achieved a seven-fold expansion, without federal aid.

The education picture all up and down the line reveals expansion through local initiative. Vast improvements were recorded in teacher training, in salaries, in student-teacher ratios. In facilities, local authorities have been building 70,000 classrooms a year, far above the federally proposed goal of 60,000.

But all the facts and figures meant little to the advocates of federal aid. They had been clamoring for aid for years and they now had the votes to put it over. Why bother, they said, to hear all the arguments all over again. The Congressman who is not in a habit of voting federal money to the underdog is hard to find today, it seems.

But it was the National Education Association that cooked up the idea of hitching the bill to the poverty war. Their idea, of course, was to keep the federal aid idea alive and push a more general program at the next opportunity.

The President had told them he was on their side until every teacher got his due and no overcrowded classrooms exist. If the next Congress is as receptive to Presidential dictation, we may expect the program to be broadened for the rich and poor alike.

The NEA knows it will be no trick at all to broaden the aid idea in future years. Federal projects go that way.

Besides, what politician can resist helping public education? What Congressman can succeed without the teachers and the support of their organizations? There's no denying the power of big lobbying for good causes, even if bad methods and unwise legislation are proposed. When money is to be handed out, the home district comes first.

This bill is to funnel funds into 94 percent of the nation's counties. Some of the most distressing needs of education, existing both in the big cities and the poorer states, will get only token attention from the bill.

News reports during the progress of the bill through Congress showed the steam roller in operation. Even the committee debate was virtually eliminated as Rep. Adam Clayton Powell rubber-stamped the bill and rammed it through.

The Congress again crowned itself with no laurels for being a democratic, deliberative body — the result was a bad bill, so faulty and so full of loopholes that a sixth-grader could point them out. The double-talk will be interpreted largely as allowing the Commissioner of Education to dispose of the $1.34 billion about as he pleases.

The broad inclusiveness of the bill's language has impress-

Experts Sift Exotics Part Among Herds

KERRVILLE.—A study is being made in the Edwards Plateau region of Texas to determine the place, if any, of exotic-introduced animals in the environment.

Back in 1963 a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department study indicated a population of approximately 13,000 exotics of 13 species.

Should these imported animals increase at the present rate, by 1970 it is estimated that they may be found on 340 ranches in Texas.

Assuming the production rate to be one young per female and the existing herd to be composed of one-half females the exotic population could be 100,000 by 1969, reports the department.

The Edwards Plateau is a goat, sheep and cattle ranching center. It also probably contains the highest deer population in the United States.

Biologists say competition between deer and livestock on the existing forage is often intense. The addition of exotics could compound the problem, especially if they have food preferences common to deer and livestock.

Foreign introduced animals, from Europe and Asia, have reached numbers great enough to affect the existing vegetation in some areas. The current question concerns: can they be managed? Are they desirable? Do they provide another good game species? Or how do they fit into the game picture in Texas?

The specific objectives of the study are:

1. To determine the native habitat of important exotic species.
2. To determine the habitat under which the important exotic species are thriving in Texas.
3. To gather life history information.

Historic Inn Given University

Miss Ima Hogg of Houston has presented the historic Wine-dale Stagecoach Inn in northeast Fayette County to The University of Texas for the benefit of the state.

The gift includes more than 130 acres of land and several related buildings, as well as an endowment for the maintenance of the property.

Miss Hogg bought the inn in 1963 and made an authentic restoration of the two-story, 8-room building near Round Top.

It was a stagecoach stop on the old road from San Felipe to Bastrop from 1849 until after the Civil War.

'64 Cotton Valued at $650 Million

Value of the 1964-65 Texas cotton crop was about $650 million, representing a $150 million drop from the preceding year, University of Texas Cotton Economic Research reports.

Texas ginned 4,053,030 bales for the 1964-65 season by Jan. 16, 1965. The total was about 323,000 bales below the figure at the same date in the 1963-64 season. The decrease was attributed to three factors: a smaller crop, a price decrease for lint and cottonseed, and a lower state average for grade and staple lengths.

COMMUNICATIONS — Your Tool for Progress

In case of fire, this telephone rings the alarm

In many of our towns, fire protection comes from a volunteer fire department. An effective communications system summons these volunteers by ringing all members' telephones at the same time. What's more, it is a distinctive ring which means "FIRE!" and brings firemen on the run. Here is another example of how Communications becomes a Tool for Progress—a communications service of great value to every town with a volunteer fire department. any infestation, especially of boll weevil and boll worm. These two damaging pests are appearing in spots, with fields along Buck Creek the hot spot now, according to Jimmy Helmers, county agent.

A team of four student entomologists from the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers Association check the insect build-up each week, and will continue their work through the growing season.

Their check covers approximately 10 counties in the Rolling Plains cotton growing section.

These men check regularly four fields with a past history of heavy cotton insect infestation, then spot check other areas of the county, Helmers said.

The team is set up for the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers Association by Don Rummell, district entomologist for the Extension Service, Lubbock, who is a former Wellington resident.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—by Deskins Wells

We may have to take a second look at the manner in which we assist customers with their want ads here at the newspaper. It is all due to the fact that a Democrat from Virginia introduced the Sex Amendment to the Civil Rights Act in an effort to delay its passage; but the Civil Rights bill was steamrolled through the Congress with the sex amendment intact. Thus it becomes against the law to advertise for males specifically.

Under the new law the advertiser cannot insert this sort of an advertisement in the paper: "Young man wanted as assistant to sanitary engineer." That should be young man and/or woman, and the same thing would apply to advertising for a waitress since a waiter would do just as well. Thank goodness the bee is on the advertiser and not the newspaper, but even so some of the daily papers have been instructing their want ad takers to refrain from offering advice on this score since that might involve the newspaper.

The girls are now equal to the men by law. Does this mean that the girl will have to start picking up the bill at the restaurant half the time, not to mention the theatre? They have been doing it for years; but it was on a voluntary basis and because they liked the broke guy and not because they were afraid of the policeman.

Congressman Walter Rogers gets in on the cigarette act in a recent news letter. He says: "Does cigarette smoking cause lung cancer? Some eminent medical scientists say yes. Other equally eminent medical and other scientists say no. The facts are that it has never been proven biologically that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer." As I understand the matter after considerable reading, Congressman Rogers is correct in his statement about cigarettes and their possible relation to lung cancer.

Congressman Rogers is no advocate of smoking in any form. His concern is over the veiled attempt of a Federal Bureau to use the cigarette issue to encroach upon the legislative powers of Congress. His contention is that Congress should not meekly surrender its constitutional legislative powers to a bureau not directly responsible to the electorate.

Add to the list of once heavy smokers who have quit: B. W. Beard, who has not smoked in 5 years and Frank Gully who has not smoked in over two. Beard quit because of what it might do to his arteries; but Gully did not quit for reasons of health. He quit in disgust at some of the silly things the smoking habit caused him to do such as lighting up with an unsmoked cigarette right in front of him.

Ben Wilhelm, the Seventh day Adventist, says that he will get one of those cigarette schools for Wellington if enough people are interested. His church has been holding them with marked success for years. He read about the book that is based on the methods used in this school.

Regardless of the health aspects of smoking and I doubt if it is as serious as some people claim, the habit is an expensive one. At 40¢ a package it can mount up. Suppose that a man and his wife both smoke and that is rather common in this day and age. Say that he is a two pack a day smoker and she is a one pack gal. That adds up to 21 packages a week or $8.40 or $436.80 in a year. Perhaps there is more than one reason for thinking about Mr. Wilhelm's school for those who want to quit smoking.

Luther Sullivan is another who turned off that Congo tune music that was on the TV last week. He said at first he couldn't believe that they intended to make an hour and a half program out of such stuff; but when he became convinced that was what they intended to do he switched to another channel.

If Tom Campbell had just kept his big mouth shut I would not be in this jam; but as it is I am in the midst of more discussion than the furor over the hog-nosed snakes or puff adders. Tom attributed the pecan tree on the northeast corner of the court-

Bratten Urges Postal Exams Be Taken

L. B. Bratten announced this week that the Wellington Post Office is seeking applications from local residents who are interested in becoming postal clerks or city carriers.

Those who apply will be given a written test by the Civil Service Commission and those who pass will be placed on a list of eligibles and will be considered for future job openings.

"The only opening at the present time," Postmaster Bratten said, "is that of substitute and we can't guarantee any certain amount of work; but I urge all persons who think they may be interested in the future to take this examination now because it is not given very often."

The top three among those who take the examination will be eligible to serve as substitutes, Bratten said, and when one of these secures a permanent position, the fourth will be moved up on the register for eligibility.

The Post Office Department is the largest employer in the Federal service and postal employment is unusually stable and normally leads to a lifetime career.

Anyone interested in such a career can obtain complete information from Postmaster Bratten.

Cemetery Work Set at Plymouth

A cemetery working will be held at Plymouth Cemetery on Saturday morning, July 17, C. J. Bradley announced this week. Everyone who has an interest there is asked to come, he said.

Templeton which it was not. Then Mrs. O. E. Dodson phoned to say that she had it transplanted and cared for it. Now the group over at the courthouse claim that it was set out by Claude McKinney and the late P. W. Myers in the late thirties. R. L. Templeton was county judge in 1949 and he had a troop of boy scouts digging up the courthouse lawn and was asked whether or not to save the tree which looked to be about 8 or 9 years old at that time. Some think that Mrs. Dodson must have set out one of the younger trees. On my part I seem to have a hazy memory of Mrs. Dodson watering the tree for I remember wondering what on earth the district clerk was doing taking care of the courthouse lawn.

Now that I have the tree business all dug up, I think I will take off for Roo-ee-dosa or some other place high in the mountains or far out to the prairie to cool off or to get home.

Kid Baseball Uniforms Sought

This is a message to mothers of former baseball players: Please search your home, storage or memory for the few baseball suits that may not have been returned at the end of the playing season in past years.

Mrs. John Coleman is trying to locate these. She reports that the baseball association is also short about two barracks bags which were used to carry baseball equipment.

"This is a community program and your cooperation will be appreciated," she said. The suits may be left at The Toggery, or Mrs. Coleman said she will pick them up, if notified. "We need to make an inventory of equipment on hand," she said.

Bank Deposits

Undivided profits also are up —$235,573.59, compared to $205,847.77 a year ago, and $173,948.05 two years ago.

With these figures digested, Collingsworth bankers are optimistic on the county's financial condition and the outlook.

"The farmers are in real good shape," said Zook Thomas. He cited the progress made in the north part of the county since the destructive hail and remarked that around Lillie, the crops are better than last year.

Bankers noted also that cattle prices are better than they were last year, although the number of head in the county is estimated at about the same. Cattle are in excellent condition, although the grass is getting a little short from Buck Creek south.

Thomas also noted that county production is far above what it was before, due to the increasing number of irrigation wells, as well as ponds and seeps that provide water. "We're harvesting lots of crops from those places," he remarked.
