Driver Dies In Freak Crash Here

A 27-YEAR-OLD motorist was impaled by a steel pole and killed in a freak traffic mishap Sunday night at Fourth Street and University Avenue.

Daniel Lee Westenburg, whose driver's license listed an Amarillo address, was pronounced dead at the scene of the 9:52 p.m. accident by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy.

No Formal Ruling

LeCroy had not issued a formal ruling late Sunday night, but he said an autopsy would not be performed.

According to police accounts of the incident, Westenburg was driving west on

A pole that runs atop the four-foot fence in the median entered the car through the windshield on the driver's side, police said.

Driver Mutilated

The pole severed Westenburg's left arm and went through his throat. The impact of the collision lifted the driver over the front seat and pinned the upper portion of his body between the cushions of the rear seat. Westenburg was decapitated.

Westenburg's car then veered to the north, jumped the curb and rolled through the parking lot of Furr's Supermarket, where it collided with a parked car.

"Passenger" Sought

Police late Sunday were seeking a man who reportedly called the police station and told the desk sergeant he had been a passenger in the car. The man, who apparently was uninjured, left the scene of the accident.

Westenburg's death is the fourth traffic fatality recorded this year in Lubbock.

STATUE KILLS BOY

LITTLETON, Colo. (UPI) — A 150-pound concrete statue toppled off its base and crushed a 7-year-old boy playing in his grandmother's front yard Sunday, police said. Police said the child, who was not identified, was pinned beneath the statue and died of massive head injuries.

Raid Recovers Stolen Drugs

LUBBOCK County authorities recovered stolen narcotics worth an estimated $50,000 and jailed two burglary suspects in a Sunday morning raid on a Carlisle residence.

The two men, ages 19 and 21, were arrested shortly before 8 a.m. when Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies and investigators from the Criminal District Attorney's office converged on the home, located a few miles west of the city.

Armed with a search warrant issued by County Judge J.Q. Warnick, the lawmen recovered several thousand narcotic pills believed to have been taken in last week's burglary of Gordon Moore Rexall Drug, 2609 Boston Ave.

Investigators estimated the street value of the stolen narcotics, mostly barbituates, at approximately $50,000.

Third Suspect Sought

Both men remained in the Lubbock County Jail Sunday night, but authorities are still seeking another man for questioning about the burglary.

Hal Hensley, chief administrator for Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford, said the suspects probably will be charged with burglary of a business and possession of a controlled substance.

Hensley declined to speculate on whether additional charges, including possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver, would be filed.

Residence Watched

CDA Chief Investigator Steve Holmes, along with CDA Investigator Larry Bitter and Deputy Sheriff Jerry Morris maintained surveillance of the Carlisle residence from 1:30 a.m. Sunday until the search warrant was served.

The two suspects left the residence in a 1980 Pontiac TransAm shortly after 7 a.m., but they were detained and taken back to the home to await the arrival of deputies carrying the warrant, one investigator said.

In addition to the stolen narcotics, lawmen confiscated approximately two grams of suspected cocaine, assorted drug paraphernalia including several syringes, a bank bag from the pharmacy and a pickaxe.

Authorities believe the pickaxe was used to hack a large hole in the north wall of the pharmacy. The tool was covered with white mortar powder similar to the debris found inside the pharmacy.

The intruders then apparently stood on a garbage dumpster outside the building to crawl through the hole, which was several feet above the ground, according to police reports on the incident.

Pharmacist Gordon Moore initially reported that 3,100 pills, primarily the depressants Valium and Percodan, were stolen in the break-in. However, he later told police 1,300 more pills — 1,000 Phenobarbital and 300 Placidil — also were discovered missing.

Authorities said the Phenobarbital, a powerful depressant, greatly increased the street value of the drugs.

Sunday's arrests marked the second major drug-related raid in Lubbock County in eight days. Three persons were arrested, and a quantity of heroin worth $70,000 was confiscated Feb. 7.

Holiday Observed By Some Offices

BANKS, county and federal offices will be closed today in observance of Washington's birthday, but most stores will be open at normal business hours for Lubbockites' shopping pleasures.

Included in the holiday closures will be the Post Office and all financial institutions, including savings and loan operations.

City offices will remain open today, but all transactions at other governmental agencies will have to wait until at least Tuesday.

Iraqi Leader Says Forced Peace Due

Iran Claims Outposts Captured

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Sunday his country was sending thousands of fresh troops against Iran and threatened to overrun Iranian cities to force Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime to "kneel and plead for peace," according to the Iraqi news agency.

Iran claimed it captured Iraqi territory for the first time in the war, which ended its 21st week, Sunday. A Tehran communique said Iranian forces drove into northeastern Iraq and captured the Badrah and Jalalah hilltop Iraqi outposts. It claimed 65 enemy troops were killed.

The communique said the cross-border attack was mounted by the 28th Division from the northwestern Iranian city of Sanandaj, the capital of the Kurdistan province. Iran has accused Iraq of aiding rebel Kurds in the province to proclaim a breakaway state for their ethnic minority. Both warring nations are Moslem, but Iran's population is mostly Persian and Iraq is Arab.

Nothing Significant

Iraq had no comment on the Iranian claim, but neither side indicated ground gains that would signal a significant breakthrough in the stalemate along Iraq's roughly 300-mile front.

In Vatican City, Pope John Paul II, preparing to start a 12-day trip to the Far East on Monday, appealed for a truce in the "dramatic and prolonged" war.

Addressing about 50,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square for his Sunday noon blessing, John Paul said, "Flying over the vast area around the Persian Gulf, my thoughts will go to the dramatic prolonged armed conflict which for months has been under way between Iraq and Iran."

Hussein told an Iraqi brigade leaving for the war front that "the Iraqi army has proven its ability to fight in the various seasons of the year and to occupy more enemy cities and territory at will," according to the official Iraqi news agency.

"We have refrained from grabbing more enemy cities and land to give the enemy leadership the chance to reconsider its position and accept peaceful coexistence with Iraq," Hussein said in the speech distributed by the agency. "But if it (Iran) fails to do so, then it shall be forced to kneel and plead for peace."

Hussein has frequently said Iraq could take more Iranian cities, but his forces have yet to take a major city in the vital Iranian oil region of Khuzistan.

The Iraqi leader said his forces, which are heavily Soviet-equipped, suffered no shortages of arms or spare parts as the war approached the end of its fifth month, according to the agency.

"In fact," he was quoted as saying, "we now have more tanks, planes and guns than we had at the start of the war .... We have concluded billions of dollars worth of new arms deals and have found additional paths to weaponry. We have also made deals with all forces of the black market to get arms and equipment."

He did not say what countries were involved in arms deals.

Hussein told the departing troops, "We are rejuvenating the front with fresh blood, with 3,000 fighters after 3,000 fighters after 3,000 endlessly." An Iraqi infantry brigade consists of 3,000 troops.

War claims could not be independently verified because both countries restrict reporters from the battlefield.

Crime Line Spotlights 11-Year-Old Murder

CRIME LINE Inc. this week spotlights the 11-year-old unsolved murder of city zoning administrator A.J. Prim, who died July 24, 1970, after being wounded more than two weeks earlier.

A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for the death of the city official.

Prim was found about 3 a.m. July 8, 1970, slumped over in the front seat of his 1967 Chevrolet at the intersection of FM 1729 and Acuff Road.

After discovering he had been shot, four passersby took Prim to Methodist Hospital, where he died 16 days later. He had suffered five .22-caliber gunshot wounds in the abdomen.

In brief interviews with sheriff's deputies while he was hospitalized, Prim indicated a black man entered his car at a traffic light at Idalou Road and Quirt Avenue and forced him to drive east of the city.

The 50-year-old Prim told deputies the man became angry and shot him when he refused to follow the abductor's instructions. Investigators said the victim's wounds indicated he was shot by someone in the car on the passenger side, or by someone standing outside the passenger door.

Prim said he attempted to drive back to Lubbock after being shot, but he lost consciousness several times before being taken to the hospital.

The Lubbock County Sheriff's Department recently reopened the investigation of the mysterious murder, and anyone having information about the case is urged to call Crime Line at 741-1000. Callers may remain anonymous.

Crime Line is supported entirely by private donations. Persons wishing to contribute to the Crime Line reward fund may mail their tax-deductible donations to Crime Line Inc., P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, 79457.

Arson Suspected In Dublin Blaze

DUBLIN (AP) — A Valentine's Day fire that killed 48 young people and injured more than 130 at a Dublin nightclub might have been started by vengeful youths who set fire to chairs, investigators said Sunday.

Forensic experts searched for clues in the charred remains of the Stardust Cabaret where the fire broke out early Saturday during a "Dance the Night Away" party. An estimated 800 people were in the club.

A Dublin police spokesman said a fireman and a part-time bouncer at the club reported that at least two youths had been seen setting fire to the chairs in an unspecified area of the club.

Dublin's Sunday Tribune newspaper quoted five teen-age girls as saying they saw the youths ignite foam-backed chairs with matches minutes before the fire began near the stage area.

The police spokesman said there were reports the youths might have had a grudge against the club, but he did not elaborate. Residents said the club refused to admit people it considered to be troublemakers. Police would not say if anyone had been denied admittance Friday and the club's owner, Liam Butterly, declined comment.

It was the worst fire in the capital's history, and masses for the dead were celebrated throughout the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation. At the parish church, Old St. Brendan's, hymns were canceled in a show of respect and the congregation prayed in silence.

Prayers also were said for 40-year-old Mary Coyne, who had begun a desperate search of hospitals for her three children and collapsed and died of a heart attack early Saturday when told they were all safe. "The strain must have been too much for her," a neighbor said. Mrs. Coyne's son, Dermot, was treated at a hospital for smoke inhalation; his two teen-age sisters escaped from the nightclub unharmed.

In Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland, about 2,000 sympathizers of the outlawed Irish Republican Army called off a march in support of jailed IRA guerrillas. Instead, the demonstrators stood in silence for two minutes for the fire victims and then dispersed.

Flags in the Irish Republic were lowered to half-staff, the Irish state radio played solemn music and the annual conference of the ruling Fianna Fail party was called off. Scores of sports matches were postponed.

The Irish cabinet met in emergency session, and Prime Minister Charles Haughey said an inquiry into the fire would be headed by an Irish High Court judge with full powers to order appearances at the hearing. Haughey declared Tuesday a day of mourning.

Asked about the arson reports, Haughey said: "We have heard these reports, certainly. Arson has to be considered a possibility."

Officials said 112 people were still in hospitals Sunday. Of the 16 most seriously hurt, half remained in critical condition.

Investigators originally believed 49 people were killed, but a police spokesman said Sunday night that pathologists had established the remains recovered were of 48 people.

By Sunday night, the bodies of 15 girls and boys had been identified, all Irish teen-agers or in their early 20s. Dublin Coroner Patrick Bofin said the victims were so disfigured it could be weeks before they all were identified.

Managers of the club, where twice-weekly dances were held for four years, said they had adhered strictly to safety and fire regulations. "The club was checked out by the licensing authority, Dublin Corp., only a fortnight ago," said Phelim Kinahan, the Stardust's floor manager.

Denying reports from some survivors that doors had been locked, Kinahan said all seven emergency exits were open and that people couldn't see them because of the black smoke pouring off the fiery ceiling.

Firemen said they were not aware that any barred doors had hampered rescue operations but did not hide their anger that stricter building codes were not

Three Injured In Wreck On Tech Freeway

A LITTLEFIELD district judge, his wife and a third person were injured Sunday evening at a two-car wreck in the 3300-block of the Tech Freeway.

Judge Pat Boone, 58, and his wife Janet, 59 were listed in serious condition in Methodist Hospital after the accident.

Vicki Diane Newton, 23, of 5702 50th St., was listed in satisfactory condition with facial lacerations.

Hospital spokesman Bill Campbell said Boone suffered a fractured pelvis and punctured lung in the accident. He also said Mrs. Boone received fractured ribs and a punctured lung.

Police said an eyewitness at the accident said the blue Mercury Cougar driven by Miss Newton ran a red light at the intersection of Tech Freeway and Indiana Avenue and broadsided the light blue Oldsmobile Regency driven by Boone.

Four U.S. Marines passing by the scene said they stopped when they saw the cars hit and helped the 23-year-old woman out of her car.

The Marines said EMS attendants arrived before they could help remove the Boones.

The investigating officer said the Cougar skidded 60 feet before the point of impact. The Oldsmoblie was knocked 25 feet from the intersection onto the grassy area off of the road, police said.

New Monterey Physical Education Class Helps Students Improve Self-Images

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AT 1:30 P.M. each weekday, the Monterey High School girls' gym echoes with shouts of encouragement for 10 handicapped youngsters discovering they can get more out of physical education than just volleyball skills.

The students are the pioneering members of a new adaptive physical education class developed and taught by PE instructor Marty Montoya. Most of the youngsters are emotionally disturbed or otherwise emotionally maladjusted but several have mental or physical handicaps.

The project, begun with the new semester in January, has proved a test of patience and guidance for Mrs. Montoya, but not at all to her dismay.

"Mostly I volunteered for the program," she said, noting resource teachers (who serve handicapped students in special classes) had "mentioned the need, and the timing was now." Monterey principal Jerrell Snodgrass added "parents were just hungry" for such a class.

The program is geared to aid students who generally have low self esteem and "are quick to react," Mrs. Montoya said. "They get angered easily," she added and some have formed a "protective shield" against potential embarrassment and hurt feelings.

Several students who have physical handicaps have additional limitations, although they are obstacles that are being overcome. One young man confined to a wheelchair because of muscular dystrophy rolls about the basketball court eager for his chance to handle the ball.

Another student who has difficulty bending because of scoliosis is exploring his limitations. "I'm going on what he wants to try," Mrs. Montoya said. "I've seen a lot of improvement in him."

The basis of her program is individualized teaching. "Every person in here has a different problem. With a smaller class, you can focus on individual basic skills — in some cases elementary skills — that they haven't acquired."

Mrs. Nontoya and her assistants have begun teaching ball handling skills. "We check their eye-hand coordination. We progress from the very simple and go to a game type of activity where they can learn to participate on a recreational level later."

She said she concentrates on conditioning and strengthening the students' cardio-vascular systems. "A lot of them are very tired and have poor posture. I also cover nutrition and try to improve their health habits."

But more importantly, Mrs. Montoya is attempting to improve their self-image. "We make them realize that although they're different, they're special too. And we want them to learn they have to function on their own."

She said she dispensed with the usual rules, such as the mandatory "suiting out" in gym clothes because "I don't want to put too many rules out right from the beginning. Many of them don't like the way they look" and would rather not change into shorts, she said. "I want them to feel good about themselves."

The responsibility for the curriculum and operation of the class has fallen mostly on Mrs. Montoya's shoulders. She has briefed herself, through literature and the assistance of resource teachers who also have referred youngsters to the special class, on the problems her students face. And she has received additional support from parents who suggest ideas and discuss their youngsters' limi-

Phosphate Discovered On Continental Shelf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geologists doing research on the continental shelf have discovered major deposits of phosphate, a mineral crucial in making fertilizers and one whose dwindling domestic stocks have spawned fears of American dependence on foreign sources.

The National Science Foundation announced the discovery Sunday. It said the huge phosphate deposits, located about 60 miles off the coast of North Carolina, cover hundreds of square miles and have valuable commercial potential.

"This is a very exciting find," said William Stowasser, a phosphate commodity specialist for the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

"Some of the very rich phosphate deposits on (American) land will be depleted in the 1990s, and there has been a lot of concern that other countries might attempt an OPEC-type arrangement to increase prices as our supplies dwindle," Stowasser said in an interview.

OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, is a cartel that provides about 26 percent of the oil used in the United States. It decided last December to allow its 13 member countries to raise prices to a maximum of $41 per 42-gallon barrel, compared to about $15 in early 1979.

Considering the possibility of such foreign control of phosphate, Stowasser said of the new offshore discovery: "It's good to know that there is something we are not going to run out of." The United States claims mining and fishing rights up to 200 miles off its coasts.

The other major phosphate producers are countries in Africa and the Pacific.

Dr. Stanley R. Riggs of East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C., and Dr. Albert C. Hine of the University of South Florida in St. Petersburg made the discovery while studying how such deposits form.

"Much of the technology necessary to begin to recover these shallow continental shelf mineral resources exists today," Riggs said.

"However, because there is no mechanism set up within the federal government to handle offshore mineral leases other than oil and gas," he continued, "these resources cannot presently be recovered."

Phosphates are necessary nutrients for plant growth, and phosphate fertilizers are an key factor in the productivity of the U.S. agricultural sector.

During two research cruises last year in Onslow Bay, the geologists drilled into the sediments and made seismic studies that led to discovering the phosphate deposits.

The scientists said their initial findings indicate a broad belt of phosphate regions extending almost 100 miles south of Bogue Banks to a point off Cape Fear.

The waters in the area range from 50 feet to 130 feet in depth. The phosphate sediments probably were trapped in cracks and basins during periods when the sea level changed, they said.

The richest single deposit tested so far in the new find is up to 26 feet thick, Riggs and Hine reported to the foundation, which funds the research.

"This deposit gently dips into deeper basins below the 30-foot capabilities of our coring equipment," Riggs said. "However, our seismic information suggests that this deposit continues and becomes considerably thicker in the basins."

Stowasser, of the Bureau of Mines, estimated that if the deposit is this large, there could be 650 million tons of phosphate in that deposit alone.

The phosphate-bearing sediment is similar to those being mined today in North Carolina and Florida, where almost 85 percent of the U.S. supply of phosphates for fertilizer is produced. The researchers did not say how much phosphate is currently imported into the United States.

When they made their discovery, the scientists were trying to learn more about the formation, deposition and accumulation of sedimentary phosphorites on the Atlantic continental shelf millions of years ago.

Pravda Cautions U.S. Against Attempted Military Superiority

MOSCOW (UPI) — The United States has no chance of gaining military superiority over the Soviet Union and should concentrate instead on building peaceful cooperation with Moscow, the Communist party newspaper Pravda said Sunday.

"The Soviet Union, keeping self-control and calm even in the conditions of an unprecedented outburst of anti-Soviet hysteria, is suggesting that the United States and its allies go exactly along this way without turning into the dead-end alleys of Cold War and military confrontations," it said.

"Much depends on what way they will choose," Pravda said of the western allies. "And not only in the character of Soviet-U.S. relations."

Pravda ridiculed what it said were the attempts by U.S. military strategists to gain a tactical and strategic superiority over the Soviet Union, saying such a policy was "prospectless."

The newspaper did not discuss the Soviet-American military balance in detail. The claim the United States will never be able to surpass Russia in military preparedness is an often-repeated Kremlin slogan.

Pravda said progress in limiting the arms race "would make it possible to strengthen peaceful cooperation in all fields between states with different social systems," as well as to begin global efforts "to explore outer space, the world oceans, new sources of energy and to combat diseases, hunger and poverty."

But while Pravda was encouraging the chances of rebuilding U.S.-Soviet detente, the national trade union newspaper Trud published another litany of complaints against "Washington ... the breeder and patron of terrorism in various forms."

Trud recounted a number of charges against the CIA that have been widely published previously in the Soviet press and singled out for criticism the new Rapid Deployment Force, which it branded a group of "terrorists in U. S. uniform ... heavily armed with special combat equipment."

Groundhog Dies After Surgery

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Forecasting winter's fate was a one-time shot for Charlie, the Indianapolis Zoo's groundhog who died of complications following a second surgical attempt to remove cataracts. He was 17 months.

The city's official weather groundhog died Friday of respiratory problems caused by the anesthetic used during surgery at Methodist Hospital, said zoo director Roy Shea.

"Charlie gained some notoriety during his short stay here," Shea said. "Unfortunately, with any kind of surgery, there are some elements of risk."

It was the second time the popular groundhog had undergone cataract surgery to help his eyesight.

After successful surgery was performed on Charlie's left eye in October, a second operation had been scheduled Friday for his right eye.

Zoo officials said doctors and veterinarians worried they had not used the right anesthetic to ease the pain of surgery the first time, so they used a different anesthetic the second time.

Mild Weather Expected To Continue In Texas

Mild temperatures in the afternoons are expected in the Lubbock area today and Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service.

The weather Sunday in Lubbock was pleasant, with temperatures in the mid 50s to low 60s for most of the afternoon. The high Sunday was 64 degrees, with a low of 36.

The skies were mostly fair to cloudy Sunday, and the weatherman indicated a possibility of fog over the area this morning. Later today fair skies are expected over Lubbock. Today's high should reach the mid 60s, with an overnight low in the mid 30s, according to the weather service. The high Tuesday is forecast in the upper 60s.

Winds that were southerly at between 10 to 15 mph Sunday are expected to repeat the conditions today.

On Sunday fair skies prevailed over much of Texas during the afternoon. Earlier Sunday cloudy skies and fog were in the High Plains areas of the state from between Midland area and Amarillo.

For the state today considerable low cloudiness and some fog is expected in the southwest this morning, with fair to partly cloudy skies elsewhere through Tuesday. Cool night and mild to warm days are also expected to be the rule.

The extended forecast for West Texas calls for fair skies and mild daytime temperatures for Wednesday through Friday. High temperatures for most of this region will be in the 60s to the north and 70s to the south for Wednesday through Friday, with lows in the 30s in the mountains and north and 40s to the south.

The outlook for West Texas on Saturday through Feb. 25 calls for mild temperatures and no precipitation.

Remains Of 17th Missing Atlanta Child Identified As 11-Year-Old

ATLANTA (AP) — A medical examiner on Sunday identified skeletal remains found Friday as those of 11-year-old Jeffery Mathis, the 17th black child to be found slain in the Atlanta area in 19 months.

Dr. John Feegel, associate medical examiner for Fulton County, said he identified the body primarily from dental records.

Mathis, one of two children who had been listed as missing by investigators looking into the murders, disappeared in March 1980.

Feegel said he focused his efforts to identify the body on the physical differences between Mathis and the other child still missing — 10-year-old Darron Glass, who disappeared in September.

There were "minor inconsistencies" between both Mathis's and Glass's dental records and the remains, but there were several similarities between Mathis's records and the skeleton. There were no similarities between Glass's record and the remains, he said.

Feegel said the remains were too decomposed to determine the cause of death. In five other cases there has been no determination of cause of death, but investigators say foul play is suspected in all of the deaths.

Also on Sunday, self-professed psychic Jeanne Dixon, in the city to deliver a speech at an educators' convention, went unannounced to the downtown headquarters of the task force investigating the deaths.

Mrs. Dixon spoke with investigators in the locked headquarters about five minutes and then told reporters the investigators had said she would be called in Washington today.

Mrs. Dixon showed reporters a copy of a previous prediction that said police "will solve the murders of Atlanta's children this year."

A group of volunteers returned Sunday to an area southwest of the city to search for clues in the case. The volunteers have been combing Atlanta neighborhoods since last fall, but have found nothing significant since their first search.

The volunteers found the remains of 7-year-old Latonya Wilson that first week, one of 17 bodies discovered here. Police say some, but not all, of the cases are related.

Six bodies have been found in the past five weeks alone.

All of the victims were black, and all were between the ages of 7 and 15. All but two were male, and eight were either suffocated or strangled.

Many of the children have been found dead in desolate wooded areas, and the Atlanta solicitor's office said last week it plans to prosecute residents who refuse to comply with the city's new vacant lot ordinance.

The new law calls for the city to clear a lot at an owner's expense if the owner fails to do so within 10 days of being notified.

The solicitor's office had opposed the new law, saying it was difficult to enforce.

"City Solicitor Andrew Hairston assured me that he is going to start putting the cases on the docket," said Richard Stogner, an aide to Mayor Maynard Jackson.

CUT YOUR OWN TAXES

Tax Tips For Stock Investors

By RAY De CRANE
(11th of 14 parts)

Once the special province of the wealthy, stock-market investments have become commonplace with about half the people who file income tax returns today.

As a result, capital gains and losses, and the use of Schedule D to record them, have become familiar to a growing number of taxpayers.

Greater detail and filled-in Schedule D forms are contained in "Cut Your Own Taxes and Save" by Ray De Crane. For your own Taxes and Save" by Ray De Crane. For your copy of the 1981 edition, send a check or money order for $1.50 (plus 50 cents postage and handling) to "Cut Your Own Taxes" c/o Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Because there are risks inherent in investments, special tax rules apply to those willing to supply the funds that businesses and industries need to get started and then to expand and buy new equipment.

If a profit is made on such an investment and if the funds have been committed for a year or longer, the transaction is considered long-term and only 40 percent of the profit is taxable. If the investor wanted to reap a quick profit and sold out in less than a year's time, 100 percent of the profit becomes taxable, and the transaction is considered short-term.

The same general rules are followed in reverse on losses. If a sale within a year of purchase results in a loss is taken into consideration. A long-term loss — which follows a losing transaction more than a year after the investment was made — is considered at 50 percent of the loss.

From these general rules, stock-market investors typically give this advice:

Always strive for long-term gains but short-term losses.

Gains and losses are applied against each other, ultimately resulting in a net gain or net loss.

If the net result is a gain, 40 percent of the long-term gains are added to 100 percent of short-term gains. The total is then added to other income for the year.

If, after offsetting losses against gains, there remains a net loss, the maximum loss that can be subtracted against other income in any one year is $3,000.

It will require $6,000 in long-term losses to provide a $3,000 reduction against other income, since such losses must first be cut in half.

Any long-term losses remaining beyond $6,000 are carried over to the next year, where they may be applied again.

Similarly, short-term losses beyond the $3,000 that may be claimed in any one year are carried over to the new year. Theere is no expiration date on such losses. They may continue to be brought forward into a new year until the full amount has been applied.

Texas Legislators To Discuss Non-Emergency Bills This Week

AUSTIN (AP) — How old Texas youth should be to drink, a ban on deducting union dues from state employee paychecks and nuclear waste are on the Senate agenda for today.

Nothing is on the House calendar but state representatives scheduled their first full week of committee hearings on non-emergency bills.

Today is a holiday for state employees — Washington's birthday — and marks the start of the sixth week of the 4½-month legislative session.

Two senators who want to raise the legal drinking age from 18 to 19 served notice they would ask their colleagues to vote on the proposal today.

"The reason for this is to get alcohol out of the schools," said Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, has a similar bill on the calendar. Both bills would prohibit 18-year-olds from buying alcoholic beverages but would allow them to work in bars and places that sell alcohol.

Both bills cleared the State Affairs Committee, 7-0.

The same committee approved for debate, possibly today, a bill that would wipe out Attorney General Mark White's ruling that Comptroller Bob Bullock may deduct union dues from state employee paychecks.

TEXANS WIN OIL 'LOTTERY' LEASES VALUED AT $60,000 — PLUS NEW DRAWINGS AGAIN IN MARCH

ONTARIO, CALIF. (SPECIAL) — Two Texas clients of the H. Kirk Sanders Corporation have been declared winners of high value oil and gas leases in a recently held public drawing by the Wyoming Land Commission. Both leases were located in the famous "Wyoming Overthrust." Names are withheld pending completion of sale negotiations with oil companies.

'Sandy' Sanders, founder of the well established company that bears his name, credits his Wyoming based team of geologists for the research and selection of lease parcels with "meaningful value."

"After all, any U.S. citizen can enter the lottery. But the thrill of winning is mighty hollow when you find that the lease you have won is valueless," declared Sanders.

The Sanders Company geologists have selected leases over the past six months that have attracted bids and sales exceeding a half million dollars. And that figure does not include possible royalties that could result in "millions."

Most of Sanders' clients risk no more than $15 and a minimal service fee, both tax deductible, to enter the little-known lottery program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Entry details and information may be obtained by writing The H. Kirk Sanders Company, Public Lands Division, 2032 E. Caroline (Box 3697), Ontario, Calif. 91761. Enclose $1 to cover postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail in time to meet March 10 cut-off date.

'Lion In Winter' Proves Outstanding Theater

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Delivering one delicious attack after another, sticking each other with verbal daggers and turning the hilts, using sons and lovers as pawns, King Henry II and Eleanor Of Aquitaine played royal chess for well over two hours Saturday night in the Long Wharf Theater's production of "The Lion In Winter" at the Texas Tech University Center theater — providing Lubbock with its finest theatrical experience of this still very young year.

The production completed a two-night engagement by the Connecticut-based repertory group. (Noel Coward's "Private Lives" was performed Friday.)

It was a nasty bit of stage business that transported us back to the 12th century, back to the Christmas of 1183 when Henry II allows his imprisoned queen Eleanor to spend the holidays at his castle at Chinon in France. The issue in question is not Christmas, though, but who will succeed Henry to the throne. Eleanor favors their oldest son, Richard, the most powerful and the boy she raised when separated from Henry. The king, however, favors John, a pimply, disgustingly vulnerable wimp who looks up to him.

A-J THEATER REVIEW

Meanwhile, the middle son, Geoffrey, is the man with the brains, a forgotten schemer often playing both sides against the middle, hoping to win his father's favor by default.

James Goldman's play is a power struggle involving five family members struggling and bickering for control, never trusting one another, passing out insults and painful memories like Christmas candy, bringing up adultery, incest, sodomy, treachery — whatever it takes — to make an opponent give just an inch. And the Long Wharf Theater pulled every possible ounce of blustery fire from Goldman's pages, expressing hate and deceit and love, never lowering its powerful intensity even when the dialogue became barbed with hilarious thorns.

And it should be noted the play is indeed oftentimes funny, despite its serious conflict. For example, following one particularly vicious turn of events, with brother betraying brother, with father denouncing sons, Eleanor merely shrugs and asks, "Well, what family doesn't have its ups and downs?" Indeed, Goldman's use of words is wonderful, and the cast makes them positively drip with anger and sarcasm.

"Greed becomes you. You should wear it more often," Alais tells Eleanor, only to have the queen retort, "Are you dressing me in envy?" At another moment Richard theorizes that John turned out weak because the midwives "threw out the child and kept the afterbirth."

Rex Robbins and Barbara Sohmers, who, miraculously enough, played the leads in "Private Lives" the night before, shed their sophisticated skins and give expert performances as Henry II and Eleanor, respectively. They make it very obvious that, despite the pain and clever subterfuge, they are both very much enjoying the competition. Robbins is a marvelously authoritative king, full of deceit and keeping his opponents always off guard. He genuinely wants his empire to stand, though, under one ruler, and has no plans to divide it amongst his children like Lear.

Robbins expressed self-esteem, ego and even torment with a memorable authenticity.

Miss Sohmers was equally up to the task as Eleanor, the queen who schemes and plans constantly, drawing upon memories of days past like a log used as a battering ram, never without a determined counterplan even if she is without her freedom. The actress's delivery of lines was absolutely priceless, her pauses just pregnant enough, her voice actually sounding incredulous as she discovers things like, "I don't much like our children."

But some of the best moments came when one or the other would imitate or satirize a spouse's tactics, proof that both knew their opponent's game plan all too well.

David Combs was a terrifically haughty and proud Richard, brought to his figurative knees only temporarily by the mother supporting him and the friend with whom he'd engaged in homosexual acts as a boy. Henry Stram was also fine as John, a whiner with his own vindictive streak. (And why was it I kept thinking of Robin Hood, with Robin waiting for Richard to come back from the Crusades and reclaim the throne from John?) As the calculating Geoffrey, Scott Walters was absolutely superb, keeping both the audience and his family in the dark as to his loyalties. His manipulation of John was handled with style.

Peter Webster was equally devious as the teenaged French king, Philip, trying desperately to prove he knew how to play royal hard ball with the best of them, suckered once by Henry but still around for a damaging blow. And Donna Snow should definitely not be forgotten as the beautiful Alais, the princess Henry once accepted as a bride for Richard in return for her landed dowry, only to bed her himself when she grew older. He wants desperately to use her to breed a new royal line, but she is not without her own ultimatums.

The Long Wharf production was directed by Kenneth Frankel, who deserves bouquets for the extremely professional pacing of a difficult show. While performed in only two acts, the play consists of at least 10 separate scenes, and scene changes Saturday were quick and totally effective. The set seemed much grander than any traveling production's set has any right to be, and the costumes retained as much color as the dialogue, as much dust as the period demanded. (The use of a map-like tapestry, hanging from the rear, was also a beneficial historical guide for those close enough to read it.)

"The Lion In Winter" provided a wonderful challenge for a touring repertory group, just in the sheer amount of dialogue alone. But The Long Wharf Theater came through in style, bringing the characters to life, making us believe in their flesh and blood as much as their ambitions and greed, even as we laughed at their witty repartee. Saturday's was a wonderful, memorable, exquisite performance deserving of much more than standing ovations or bravos.

Inheritance Could Cause Another Court Battle

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — If Jean Harris wants to collect the $220,000 Dr. Herman Tarnower left her in his will, she probably will have to go back to court and fight for it — even if she is acquitted of his murder by a jury this week.

Because New York courts have ruled repeatedly that people should not be allowed to profit from their own intentional wrongdoing, Mrs. Harris could face a legal battle with Tarnower's other heirs — one of whom is Lynne Tryforos, her rival for the Scarsdale Diet developer's affections.

Lawyers say a bid by Mrs. Harris to collect her legacy could be resolved in civil court, where many of the facts and issues of her four-month criminal court trial would be dug up again, this time under the civil formula for evaluating evidence.

But Mrs. Harris, by all accounts a woman of modest means, may have no choice: Estimates of her legal expenses have ranged between $200,000 and $500,000.

The 57-year-old former headmistress is accused of deliberately shooting Tarnower, her lover of 14 years, at his Purchase, N.Y., estate March 10. Mrs. Harris says she intended her own death — not Tarnower's — and that he died in a struggle over her gun.

Final arguments, scheduled to start Monday, will be followed Tuesday by Judge Russell Leggett's charge to the jury.

George DeSipio, a member of the Trusts and Estates Committee of the New York Bar Association, says state courts' policy against allowing someone to profit from intentional wrongdoing would appear to bar Mrs. Harris from collecting if she is found guilty of second-degree murder — an intentional killing.

Similarly, a conviction for first-degree manslaughter — intent to cause serious physical injury where death results — would seem to cripple her chances of recovering.

But if Mrs. Harris is convicted of a lesser charge, or even if she is found innocent, she still may have to fight Tarnower's other heirs over the will, which gives Mrs. Tryforos $240,000.

Any or all of the heirs could go to civil court and argue a civil court might find intentional wrongdoing in the case — because it would use a different standard in its determination — whatever the verdict of the Westchester Criminal Court jury.

In civil court, cases are decided on "a preponderance of the evidence;" in criminal court, the prosecution must prove guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt," a stricter requirement.

Thus, the heirs could argue that any exoneration of Mrs. Harris by a criminal court was not binding on the will, a civil matter, since it was based on a tougher standard of proof.

Much of the criminal trial's sensational testimony and evidence, such as the "Scarsdale Letter" Mrs. Harris sent to Tarnower, might be reviewed in light of the civil standard. Mrs. Tryforos, who the prosecution says made Mrs. Harris murderously jealous, could be called to testify.

Would the Tarnower heirs or relatives try to force Mrs. Harris back into court? All it would take is one. Tarnower's sister, Pearl Schwartz, has regularly attended the murder trial and has made no attempt to disguise her contempt for Mrs. Harris and her defense attorney, Joel Aurnou.

And generally, "where there is money there are heirs and they fight over it," says Stephan Peskin, a Manhattan attorney. "There may not even be a lot of money, but there always are a lot of nieces and nephews coming out of the woodwork."

Should Mrs. Harris try to collect, "they could go right through all the same issues again," this time with the outcome being determined by "a preponderance of the evidence," he says.

Boy With Incurable Skin Disease Dies

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — At 10, Michael Hammond was going to finally start school this week. But the "Crisco Kid," so called because the vegetable shortening eased the pain of his rare skin disease, died before he had the chance.

Michael's skin was so fragile that a touch could cause infection and a hug was out of the question. His mother once despaired that he would not know he was loved.

But the boy, the subject of much media attention, told a reporter at age 9: "Lots of people love me," adding, with a grin, "I love everybody."

Michael suffered from epidermolysis bullosa, an inherited, incurable disease that caused blisters and sores to erupt on his body. His nickname came from nurses because of the only treatment that helped — two cans of Crisco applied daily to his skin.

He died Saturday at Sunland Training Center during a visit from his mother. Sunland Medical Director Dr. Charles Williams said the cause of death was cardiac arrest.

The boy, who spent nearly his entire life in institutions, was making significant progress toward his goal of living in the outside world and had been scheduled to start school this week.

"His heart just stopped...that's about all anyone can say," said his mother, Doris Guy. "His heart just quit on him. We were sitting there talking and I had just asked him how he felt and he said, 'Fine.' He drank some water for me. Later he started breathing real hard — the nurses did everything they could...."

Because of his condition Michael was accepted at Sunland, a state institution for the mentally retarded, at age 2 even though he was not retarded.

The disease strikes one newborn in 50,000. At birth, Michael had sores on his ankle and thumb, and within six days he was covered with what appeared to be third-degree burns. At one point blisters covered his body, even his tongue, causing his throat to bleed and webs to form between his fingers and toes.

When he died, the disease's severity had begun to lessen on his arms and legs, and only his trunk and knees still were being wrapped in Crisco-soaked gauze. He had learned to feed himself and to operate an electric wheelchair.

He was eager to start classes at a nearby school. "He was all ready and set to go," said his mother. "He was really looking forward to it."

Mrs. Guy said a rescue unit was called when Michael began breathing hard. "Had it been possible to put an IV (intravenous unit) right in, like an average person, they maybe could have saved him. But that's not possible with Michael. It takes a lot of time, it was just too late."

Williams said that when he arrived, Michael was dead. "There could be a myriad of causes for his death," he said, "but the family did not want an autopsy."

The disease "was hard to accept," said his mother, who works at a sewing factory in Jasper, Fla., and visited Michael regularly. Michael's father, Walter Hammond, lives in Rosenberg, Tex.

Natural Gas Leak Causes Illnesses

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Health investigators have found that leaking natural gas may have led to sickness among 25 workers at a brassiere manufacturing plant, according to a spokeswoman for Lovable Co.

The plant, employing 515 workers, was to be reopened Monday after being closed since Thursday, when five workers complaining of headaches and nausea were sent to hospitals for observation.

"The results of the investigation today suggest the episodes of illness may have been triggered by a combination of two minor natural gas leaks and stale air," spokeswoman Trudy Piper said Saturday.

BURGLAR VS. HOMEOWNER

The Law Protects Whom?

IF A MAN SHOOTS at a burglar, which one is the criminal?

That provocative question could come to a head in Vineland, N.J., where, according to news accounts, one Manuel Marin is to be tried in April on two felony counts of aggravated assault.

What Marin did, the stories say, is fire his .38-caliber revolver in the general direction of two persons who had broken into his house.

Heribeto Torres and Aorica Dee Dix also are to be tried in April—on burglary and theft charges which, if it's any consolation to Marin, carry a heavier penalty than the up to 18 months in prison and $7,500 fine he faces if convicted.

"THE PUBLIC is under a misconception concerning the use of deadly force in defense of one's premises," prosecutor Kenneth Pagliughi has been quoted as saying.

"I'm not saying to people you can't do that, but if you do the law says you're going to have to justify it," he added. "I didn't write these laws, but I'm under a duty to apply these laws."

Well, "these laws" were written by or at the behest of the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice of which said just the other day that the rights of society seem to be becoming lost amid all the concern over the rights of the accused.

A lot of folks are beginning to wonder if maybe the law as it applies to Manuel Marin may be typical of the problem.

MARIN IS SAID to have watched from his window about 2 a.m. as a man and a woman got out of a car he had seen prowling the neighborhood earlier.

His home had been burglarized before and Marin, a printer, part-time grocery clerk, husband and father of two teeneagers, readied his revolver even as he called police.

He watched silently as the intruders jimmied a lock, tiptoed into the living room and moved a stereo system, then crept upstairs and rummaged through jewelry.

When they came back down, he told them to "hold it right there." Instead, they scrambled outside, screaming. He fired after them. They got away, into the arms of an arriving police patrolman.

EVEN AS MARIN was being interviewed about the intruders, word came from the prosecutor to book the homeowner on charges of "knowingly, under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life, pointing a firearm at the victim and firing it three times."

We can't imagine any jury convicting him. But, then, we can't be certain the alleged burglars will be convicted, either, or if they are that they won't get out on appeal.

What would really cap this episode would be if Marin goes to jail and the burglars go free on some such technicality as a faulty indictment drawn by the prosecutor or his slip of the tongue during the trial.

LEGISLATIVE REAPPORTIONMENT

GOP Re-Drawing Battle Lines

A CHIEF ORDER of business for most state legislatures this year will be the reapportionment of congressional districts based on the 1980 census.

The Snowbelt-to-Sunbelt population shift documented by the census will require the Northeast to give up nine of its 113 seats and the Midwest to relinquish eight of its 121 seats.

The South will add eight seats to its current 125, while the West will add nine.

Texas will gain three seats, Florida four, California two, and Washington, Oregon, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Colorado and Tennessee will each gain one.

Ten states will lose at least one seat. New York will lose five, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois will each lose two, and Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, S. Dakota and Massachusetts will each lose one.

MOREOVER, population shifts also will require most of the remaining states to redraw district lines to maintain the constitutional requirement that all House districts be as equal as possible in population.

The Republicans see this process as a golden opportunity to follow up on their 1980 victories.

The party and conservative organizations are hoping to provide state legislatures with technical help in drawing boundaries in such a way that many of the new or redesigned districts will elect Republicans to Congress in 1982.

In many of the states that are losing districts, two Democratic incumbents will be forced to run against each other in party primaries unless one steps aside.

INCUMBENT DEMOCRATS may be threatened even in California, which is gaining two congressional districts.

Population movements may cause one seat to shift from the north of the state to the south, possibly forcing Bay Area Democrats into the same district.

Perhaps the most interesting redistricting battle will take place in Illinois.

"Republicans will try to redraw district lines to force electoral confrontations between two black Chicago Democrats, Harold Washington and Cardiss Collins, as well as between two influential downstate Democrats, Mel Price and Paul Simon," reports syndicated columnist Robert J. Wagman.

Democrats will try instead, says Wagman, to place one of two suburban Chicago Republicans in jeopardy. But in any case, reapportionment promises to become one of the liveliest political stories of 1981.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Public Mood Skewed By Polling Methods

WASHINGTON—The conservative tide that swept over the nation last November came as a surprise to many commentators and analysts of popular opinion.

A major reason for the astonishment was the contrast between the outcome and the conclusions of the pollsters.

Most opinion surveys had depicted a see-saw election; one showed President Carter pulling ahead toward the end; virtually none foretold the landslide that was in the making.

The election outcome was also in vivid conflict with long-term poll surveys suggesting that the American people, despite a generalized conservatism in their attitudes, are firmly liberal on specific policy questions.

This view has been supported by reference to poll surveys showing popular backing for government medical care, old age assistance, aid to the needy, and other specific measures to help the impoverished.

A LOT of confusion on this score has been cleared up by Donald Devine, a professor of political science at the University of Maryland and an expert in the study of public attitudes.

In a new monograph entitled "Public Opinion and the Welfare State," Devine examines the long-standing academic thesis that the American people are favorably oriented toward specific measures of the welfare state.

In the course of his analysis, he also raises some telling questions about the polls themselves.

A major part of the problem, Devine suggests, is the way the pollsters approach their subjects. If people are asked whether they favor some noble-sounding objective or program of social uplift as a general proposition, they are likely to answer in the affirmative.

SURVEYS PURPORTING to show strong public support for welfare-state objectives tend to be of this nature—for example: "Do you agree or disagree that government ought to help people get doctors and hospital care at low cost?"

On the other hand, if people are asked to suggest problem areas or policy initiatives on an open-ended basis, without guidance from the poll-taker, they tend to respond in different fashion—naming issues and problems other than those dictated by welfare-state ideology.

And if they are asked to match benefit objectives with costs, or choose among methods of obtaining desirable goals in addition to central government action, the results are more different still.

EXAMINING A host of opinion surveys across a span of four decades, Devine observes that, "although the spontaneous data were limited, they all tend toward a similar conclusion.

"There seems to be little agreement among Americans as to what national problems other than war are important, little agreement as to how they should be solved, and even less demand for using national government as a means for solving domestic problems."

What has apparently happened in many opinion surveys, and in the interpretations placed on them, is that the poll-takers or interpreters have tended to load their own values into the process, cuing responses from the public by the way in which the questions were asked and options posed (or not posed).

In this respect, much poll-taking has been an exercise in self-fulfilling prophecy, rather than objective inquiry into the state of public attitudes.

On Devine's evidence, there is nothing very surprising about such recent developments as the tax revolt, the general shift of the nation toward conservatism, or the Reagan victory in November.

'Gangway--This Fella Has Rights You Know'

JOSEPH KRAFT:

The Battle Unroyal

WASHINGTON—The furious attack on federal spending now being unleashed by the Reagan administration opens—in a double sense—a dubious battle. The outcome of the fight inside the Congress is in doubt.

Even more in doubt is the impact that even a total administration victory would have on the major enemy—inflation.

The battle plan has been drawn up in a skillful way by President Reagan's Budget Director, David Stockman. Stockman says that all federal programs will be cut, and that the reductions will feature equity as between different groups in the country.

Leaked information already shows that big cuts will come out of the darlings of the construction lobby—spending for highways, airports, and sewer and water systems.

Farm subsidies are to be reduced. Almost certainly Stockman has up his sleeve a surprise slash at one of the more outrageous giveaways to super-rich corporations.

As to reductions in social spending for people in trouble, the new Budget Director has penetrated beyond the wonderful labels—labels like Social Security and Unemployment Assistance—to the minute detail of the programs themselves.

In case after case he has found spending at levels not previously envisaged for purposes only tenuously related to the original program.

Social Security, for example, has had tacked on to it programs benefiting students who are dependents of retired, disabled or deceased workers. Those student benefits have almost nothing to do with the original idea of a pension scheme.

MOREOVER, STUDENTS are eligible for other benefits. By killing their entitlement, the administration figures to cut $100 million out of 1981 spending, and $200 million out of the 1982 budget.

In similar manner, the school lunch program will be reshaped so as not to benefit the vast majority of users who enjoy middle-level incomes.

The food stamp program would be amended to bar those who have high incomes during certain periods of the year. The Unemployment Assistance program would be consolidated to prevent benefits being paid on top of benefits for those said to suffer from foreign competition.

Going behind the labels to the real programs represents undoubted achievement. The Reagan administration has made what was untouchable subject to scrutiny. It has converted sacred cows to profane cows.

STILL, THE battle inside the Congress will go very hard. Many interested parties will join forces to lobby against the administration.

Even if the President does very well in the cutting operation (and I hope he does), the savings are bound to be small—maybe $15 to $20 billion. At precisely that point there comes into question the relevance of the spending battle to the war on inflation.

The argument advanced in naked form by the President in his speech on Feb. 5 is that federal spending creates deficits, and the deficits create our "economic mess."

A more sophisticated gloss is that inflation now feeds on expectations of inflation. Those expectations can only be broken by a show of government determination to cut the budget, especially the entitlement programs.

ONCE THAT test is passed, the argument continues, confidence will return to the markets. Long-term interest rates will go down. Productive business investment will rise.

More goods will become available. Shortages will end, and inflation abate.

Maybe so. But there are overwhelming reasons to doubt that scenario. A cut of $20 billion in a $3 trillion economy is a mere spit in the ocean—about half of one percent, not something likely to turn around all the markets.

Nor is it clear that federal spending is the chief engine of inflation, or that confidence is mainly drained by budget deficits.

How about those other candidates, like skyrocketing energy costs? And dependence for oil on countries run by people who wear sheets?

AND THE shaky state of the international markets because of the vast accumulation of petrodollars? And the danger of Soviet aggression? Or of internal collapse in the oil states?

Or how about the inflationary impact of wage settlements, now averaging increases of nearly 10 percent annually.

There is a good chance, in other words, that the Reagan administration, driven by its ideological thing about government spending for social purposes, has severely misdiagnosed the trouble.

Faced with the jungleful of man-eating tigers that constitute our economic problems, it has come up, in its emphasis on budget trimming, with a plan to clip the nails of mere kittens.

If that analysis is correct, then the coming struggle over the budget cannot be decisive. It is much more likely to be the first battle in a long, drawn-out trench warfare that years from now will leave inflation still high, economic growth still slow and the American position in the world still uneasy.

ANDREW TULLY:

Reign Of Terror

WASHINGTON—In looking ahead, we Americans must face one hard fact about international terrorism: If terrorists are willing to die for the satisfaction of murdering hostages, there is no way the hostages' lives can be saved.

Thus—it should go without saying—the Reagan administration's first priority must be to prevent the taking of hostages. Reagan's promise that "swift and effective retribution" would follow any attacks on government employes abroad is in effect an after-the-fact thing.

What is needed, then, is a policy that would make the taking of hostages both more difficult and more dangerous for the terrorists.

Reagan has ordered that henceforth Marine Security Detachments assigned to American embassies "resist to the utmost" any attempts by host country "militants" at an embassy takeover.

IN IRAN, the Marines were under order not to use force against such invaders. We saw the result of such a pusillanimous policy. The Marines obeyed orders, and 66 Americans were taken hostage.

It is possible that in his new order Ronald Reagan has heeded the unofficial "advice" of retired Army Lt. Gen. Arthur Collins, a combat veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

In conversations with news people and in an article in the Washington Post, Collins has called for no surrender without a fight. Collins says permitting those Marine detachments "to accomplish the mission they are trained for is an essential step in preempting the seizure of U.S. embassies."

THAT MISSION, notes Collins, is to protect embassy personnel from surprise attack pending arrival of the host nation's security forces, which are responsible for the protection of embassies and resident diplomatic personnel.

Iran's security forces never showed up. Perhaps the U.S. Marines couldn't have fought off the attack in any event.

But Collins makes a point: "On occasion, a small Marine detachment might be overwhelmed if a host government secretly supports the attacking rioters."

"However, if the Marine guards put up a spirited fight, the host nation would find it difficult to explain why security forces did not arrive in time to protect the U.S. Embassy, in accord with international agreements."

SMALL SOLACE, perhaps, since the Iranian regime was hand-in-hand with the attacking barbarians and couldn't have cared less about international law.

But the policy of not surrendering without a fight is not only initially essential but a warning that the U.S. will fight on.

Collins admits that a small Marine detachment might be overwhelmed. But he points out that attacks by "militants" can be vulnerable in their early stages.

Says Collins: "If the first few attackers over a fence are wounded, or if a leader is killed, the attackers may become discouraged and pause to regroup. Determined and immediate resistance is the best way to stop surprise attacks."

JAY HARRIS:

The Flag Wavers

WHAT IS patriotism? What does the word mean to most Americans? Do we have more than we have had in years past, or less?

Those questions probably stir as many answers as there are people in the United States.

Patriotism, as Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines it is: "Love for or devotion to one's country." It follows then that a patriot is "One who loves his country and zealously supports its authority and interest."

One edition of the American Heritage Dictionary describes a patriot this way: "A person who loves, supports and defends his country." Note the addition of the word "defends." And none of the definitions carry the qualifying phrase, "right or wrong..." or "if it suits me..."i Patriotism today has all of those meanings, and then some...

THIS IS A most appropriate day to discuss patriotism.

You see, today, for those who may have overlooked it, is more than another bank holiday and an early "Made in Washington" observance of George Washington's birthday, which is next Sunday, if that makes sense.

Today marks the start of National Patriotism Week.

In a way, while George's birthday is on the early side, so as to make a three-day weekend, Patriotism Week is a bit late. It would have been better as things turned out, to have observed the occasion the week the American hostages returned.

But, President Carter designated the third Monday in February as the start of National Patriotism Week some time before the last-minute hostage dramatics and called on the American people to commemorate the event "with appropriate celebrations and observances."

MOST PERSONS probably are fresh out of yellow ribbons and American flags. As well as energy for whooping it up, for that matter.

But, on the assumption that we can't get enough of a good, or bad, thing these days, the nation will observe National Patriotism Week.

Among things Mr. Carter specifically suggested was that "all primary and secondary schools adopt an appropriate curriculum for that week which should include such elements as the study of the Pledge of Allegiance and the national anthem, national symbols, seals and mottos, and national monuments, heroes and accomplishments."

It would be interesting to know just how many schools put those items somewhere on their agenda for this week. Or for any week, for that matter. If there is one thing Johnny does worse than not being able to read, it is not being able to recall history. Mainly because he hasn't been taught it to forget or recall.

HAVING MADE those points, we would be the first to say that some folks feel the patriotism bit is overdone on occasion.

Those occasions have been far and few between, however.

But, before breaking out the flags once again, it might be worth recalling that Samuel Johnson called patriotism "the last refuge of a scoundrel."

And Aldous Huxley said: "One of the great attractions of patriotism—it fulfills our worst wishes. In the person of the nation, we are able, vicariously, to bully and cheat. Bully and cheat, what's more, with a feeling that we are profoundly virtuous."

Those were the sentiments of two noted English authors, but similar thoughts have been expressed by writers on this side of the Atlantic. In "World Government and Peace," E. B. White noted that "everybody likes to hear about a man laying down his life for his country, but nobody wants to hear about a country giving her shirt for her planet."

THE POINT, of course, is that patriotism, like anything else, can be carried to excess.

In moderate doses, it can be a boost for morale on an individual and national scale and it can be unifying, as we have just witnessed during the outpouring of love and allegiance during the welcome to the hostages.

It can also lead to some deep thoughts about what is right and wrong and how we treat others and our own.

There have been times in the past when not only the U.S. but other nations have carried patriotism to the point of such extreme nationalism that we lost sight of remaining objective, about our interests as well as those of others.

Recently, the Rev. Billy Graham created something of a stir with comments to the effect that America is not God's only Kingdom, nor necessarily His favorite country. This is not to deny the fact, however, that America, its laws, its people and its adherence to a religious concept surpasses any similar system of self government in the history of mankind.

As the Seventies got underway, the U.S. was still reeling from the wave of Vietnam War protests. And it was true that the returning Vietnam vet, while welcomed, was not accorded the warmth and adulation showered on the hostages. Yet, they deserved it even more.

The nation's observance of its 200th birthday during the Centennial celebration on July 4, 1976, marked the first major turning point from the years of discord and waves of Vietnam War protests which had rocked the campuses and cities.

Now, we have come almost full circle. Americans for the most part have shaken the "guilt" laid on them by a liberal press and protestors who shook the nation to its foundations. Today, patriotism, being proud to be an American, a willingness to defend the flag is back, alive and well.

Because it is, even in moderation, not only America, but Freedom, once more stands tall. It may be just in the nick of time...

Iran Critical Of Soviet Gulf Policies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's prime minister, in an exchange with the Soviet ambassador to Iran, sharply criticized the Soviet Union for its policies toward Afghanistan and Iraq, the official Iranian news agency reported Sunday.

According to the report monitored here, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai was asked by Ambassador Vladimir Vinogradov for help against U.S. "propaganda" and Rajai agreed with the accusations — but then launched a tirade against the Soviets.

The exchange occurred during a 45-minute meeting Saturday night in Tehran, according to Pars, whose dispatch appeared to indicate one of its reporters attended the meeting.

Pars quoted Vinogradov as saying the United States had started a campaign against global "liberation movements" under the guise of fighting terrorism "but is silent over the fascist and reactionary regimes of South Korea, Chile and El Salvador."

Pars said Rajai replied: "This is true, we also say the same things, but at a time when our army is not present in any country.

"You who criticize the U.S. for interfering in the destiny of other nations should remember that we could not ignore the problem of Afghanistan. You who criticize the U.S. for its attitude towards fascist and reactionary Chile, how have you remained silent vis-a-vis flagrant Iraqi aggression against Iran and the massacre that it has brought about?"

The Soviet Union sent an estimated 85,000 troops into Afghanistan in December 1979, and the troops have remained there to help the pro-Marxist regime fight Moslem rebels. The two Moslem nations of Iran and Iraq, both of which border Afghanistan, have been at war with each other for nearly five months.

"My question is whether you think we are fighting the U.S. or not?" Rajai asked Vinogradov, according to Pars. "If your answer is positive, how do you judge Iraq and this imposed war and yet do not condemn this aggression? We adhere to the principles on the basis of which we embarked on a revolution."

"As far as we are concerned, there is no difference between aggressors, and condemnation should not be limited to a specific country. If aggression is condemned it should be so far every country," Rajai was quoted as saying.

The ambassador noted that the Soviet Union was helping Palestinians, Vietnam, Mozambique and Angola and said "no country has questioned Soviet honesty and sincerity in this regard," Pars reported.

The news agency said Rajai replied, "The mere claim that you are anti-imperialist is not enough for us. At the moment, we do not consider the U.S.S.R. as anti-imperialist. Even if there are a hundred reasons, we confine ourselves to one: your approach to the Iraqi issue."

Pars said that near the end of the talk, Rajai told the Soviet envoy, "We think that Iraq's weapons are supplied by you ... You should ask your government to declare officially its stand on two aggressive governments, Iraq and Israel. Then we shall be able to tell whether you favor imperialists or revolutionaries."

Bodies Of Tortured Found In Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Fourteen bullet-riddled bodies of young people, all showing signs of torture, were found east of the capital Sunday, Guatemala City police said.

Authorities also said heavy gunfire erupted in front of the newly opened headquarters of the liberal Christian Democratic Party, leaving one person dead and three wounded.

The 14 bodies were found by field workers near Chiquimula, about 100 miles east of the capital, but were not identified, authorities said.

They may have been victims of paramilitary, rightist death squads which assassinate people almost daily in response to attacks by leftists trying to topple the militay regime of Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia. Students, union and political leaders and professionals have increasingly been a target in the anti-leftist violence.

In the capital, police and members of the Christian Democratic Party gave conflicting accounts of what triggered the shootout in front of the party's offices on Saturday. The four casualties, including the fatality, were not identified but police said they were bystanders caught in the exchange of gunfire or wounded by an exploding hand grenade.

Police claimed party members opened fire on a passing security forces' vehicle in the street near the party offices.

But Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo, secretary-general of the party, told reporters the attack was directed against him personally. He said his car was hit by at least 40 bullets in the shootout.

The Christian Democrats recently reopened their offices here after having suspended all political activity last year when they claimed members were being attacked throughout the country.

In August, men firing machine guns burst into the office of a party leader in Coatepeque and killed him.

Police said they arrested two party members after the Saturday shootout here, but their names were not disclosed.

The Christian Democrats have sid they want to participate in Guatemala's presidential elections next year.

Hypnosis Helpful In Hit/Run Arrest

OAK LAWN, Ill. (AP) — A hypnotist helped elicit information that led authorities to file charges against a St. Xavier College student after a hit-and-run traffic death, police said.

Three witnesses to the incident were questioned Friday under hypnosis and were able to provide a description of the driver and his van, said Capt. Frank Gilbert of the Oak Lawn police department.

Police meanwhile stopped the driver of a damaged van for questioning about the accident, Gilbert said.

Police later charged Mark J. Wroblewski, 19, of Chicago, with leaving the scene of an accident and reckless homicide in the death of Lucille Crivellone, 58, of Oak Lawn, police said.

It is well-known that resistance to disease and the rapidity of recovery from many illnesses often depend on a well-balanced, regular diet. Modify a diet only on a doctor's orders to compliment a diagnosis and bodily needs during illness. All the basic food groups should be included in daily meals unless a physician orders otherwise. These include milk and milk products, meat, vegetables, fruit, bread and cereal. We suggest that balanced diets with some nutritional education is far superior to resorting to fad diets to combat certain health deficiencies.

Lubbock Man Reports Assault At Pool Hall

A 61-year-old Lubbock man reported that he was assaulted and robbed inside a downtown pool hall early Sunday morning, according to police.

Toribio Arredondo of 2123 Main St. said he was in the Rancho Grande Pool Hall, 710 13th St., about 1:30 a.m. when two black men wrestled him to the floor.

During the struggle, Arredondo said, one of the men took $70 cash and an undetermined number of food stamps from his pockets.

The victim and a companion then went outside and flagged down a passing policeman, but reports indicate no one in the pool hall would admit knowing anything about the alleged robbery.

Arredondo described one of the assailants as a heavy black man, 5 feet 10 to 6 feet 1, between 36 and 45 years old. No arrests were made.

In a separate incident, a 25-year-old Lubbock woman said a man she knows attacked her and her young daughter at their home late Saturday night.

The woman told police the man, who had been drinking heavily, arrived at her home about 11 p.m. The man became angry and struck the woman in the face, reports show.

When the man picked up a brick, apparently with the intent of striking the woman with it, she told her seven-year-old daughter to run next door and notify police.

The man then reportedly grabbed the child by the hair and began dragging her around the living room of the residence.

When officers arrived, they found clumps of hair on the floor of the home, but the girl apparently was not seriously injured. Her mother suffered a bruise on the right side of her face, but she did not require medical attention.

The man left the home before police arrived, but he promised to return Sunday night. The woman told officers she and her daughter would stay with friends.

In other activity, Eulocio Garcia, 32, of 3003 Harvard St. told police three men attacked him as he was leaving an east Lubbock club Saturday night.

Garcia and his wife were preparing to leave the Fiesta Club, 1902 E. Fourth St., shortly before midnight when they were approached by two men, one of whom hit Garcia on the back of the head with a chair, police said.

Another man then joined the fray, and all three began beating Garcia, reports show. He was treated at West Texas Hospital for a head laceration and later released.

The attackers were described only as Mexican-Americans.

In a separate incident, a 30-year-old Lubbock woman told police her husband beat her after making her to leave a local bar Saturday night.

The woman said she was in the Stumble Inn Lounge, 802 34th St., when her 43-year-old husband came inside and forced her out of the bar about 6:15 p.m. Once the couple was outside, the man began punching and kicking his wife in the face, reports show.

Witnesses also told officers they saw the man dragging the woman face-down across the parking lot.

Home-Owned Wood Metal House Services Include Shredding

With all its facilities and services related to scrap metal, the Wood Metal House at 1912 Ave. F not only is locally owned but is one of the oldest businesses of its type in the area.

The services of Wood Metal House have been utilized by a lot of customers in Lubbock and region since its founding back over a quarter century ago!

Founded by the late J.W.C. Wood, the firm still essentially is a family-operated enterprise, with Mrs. C. P. (June) Houston as owner and active operator, with her son, Harry Hays, as manager.

Keeping in a leadership position in the trade is a way of business at Wood Metal House.

Example of this is recognition that the firm has the only can shredder in Lubbock, the owner reports, and purchase of aluminum cans is one of its major and appreciated services. Presently, aluminum cans are bought at 30 cents per pound.

Furthermore, customers can see their cans weighed and then run through the shredding machine in only a matter of minutes.

Most all scrap metals are purchased at the convenient lot at 1912 Ave. F, easy to reach from anywhere.

Local Ownership

Owner June Houston is a lifelong Lubbock resident and she takes pride in the local ownership of the firm, emphasizing that revenues are channeled back into the local economy.

Wood Metal House is open 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and business is appreciated, just as it has been throughout the years, whether for purchase of scrap metals or for buying and shredding cans.

"We are glad to be part of the community and economy here," Mrs. Houston always is glad to relate, "and we look forward to continued years of mutually beneficial dealings with the greatest group of customers anywhere. May we include you, took in this list?"

Remember the location, 1912 Ave. F, phone 747-2441, in Lubbock. The firm is clearly marked on the west side of Avenue F, just south of 19th.

'NO INCONVENIENCE, NO EXPENSIVE REPAIR' — George C. Washington of the Triple W Windshield Repair demonstrates the unique, simple, speedy and proven method of repairing many types of windshield damage. Check the accompanying story for details of this service enabled throughout the region

Triple W Windshield Repair Affords 'Kier System' In Area

"Helping you reduce costs on quality, speedy windshield repairs" is the business of Triple W Windshield Repair utilizing the proven "Kier System" and making it available throughout the area.

The Kier repair process will repair the "bullseye, halfmoon, daisy or star" type cracks that most frequently occur in windshields, it is emphasized by the distributorship, and the more expensive the windshield the greater the savings . . . even a savings of approximately 80 per cent can be expected!

Advantages Outlined

In brief, listed here are advantages of this system:

The windshield will not need to be removed for the repair of damages listed above, and average repair time is only a few minutes. Then . . . chances are you won't even be able to locate where the repair was made!

Minimum Inconvenience

The vehicle does not have to be brought into the shop; repairs are made "on the spot," with two mobile units working in this area (one out of Lubbock and one out of Springlake).

A bullet-proof glass type solution is forced into the damaged crack or hole (as indicated in the accompanying picture) and a "money-back guarantee backs the claim that the pit will not crack or run."

'Folks You Know'

Triple W Windshield Repair service is afforded by a family team in the area, with George C. Washington in Lubbock (2707 29th St., phone (806) 797-0130 or 792-0212), and P. A. and Brent Washington in Springlake (phone 986-2251). Triple W is distributorship for the Kier System in a nine-county area in this region.

The area firm has been in existence just over a year, with the Kier System full tested and researched and proven for some two years before its marketing. It was first marketed about four years ago.

One wishing attention to a windshield repair can expect service without delay, within two days or less most usually. The work is done by factory trained personnel.

The Lubbock-Springlake distributorship makes a further point:

"Ask about insurance benefits; it is quite possible this repair will not cost you a thing!"

'Why We Serve Better

"Advertised prices are cash and carry, with in-store financing available.

"We promise that we can save up to 50 per cent on name-brand furnishings."

"Merchandise is first quality, not seconds."

"As a factory direct furniture, we term ourselves as the 'middle man,' cutting out the retailer!"

"A large inventory is a hard and fast rule here. And if we do not have the item you want, we have access to a multi-million-dollar inventory from which we can supply you within a week!"

"We are a live-and-let-live firm, enjoying your friendship and serving to the best of our ability, saving for you throughout the year."

FABIT FLEET INCLUDES ROLL-OFF UNITS

Fabit Services Reflect Local Firm's Ability, Consideration

Fabit Corp., affording refuse container service including compactor and roll-off containers and service, says:

"Thanks, Lubbock; your trade and confidence enabled our trash hauling volume to increase by 70 per cent in the past year alone!"

There must be a reason.

First, Fabit Corporation's Refuse Container Service is a one-source answer to (1) side-loading container service, (2) roll-off container service, and (3) container repairs, trading and sales.

Add to this the many other advantages of this Lubbock firm (since, 1968) such as local ownership, radio dispatched units, no contract required, and readily available references.

Even with all this, the real reason for the firm's growth and loyal patronage might be summed in the following paragraph:

"Fabit believes in the golden Rule as applied to business practices, as is shown by its policy with regard to customer contracts. Fabit is willing to enter into contracts for trash hauling, but doesn't require a contract, and Fabit will not sign a contract that shifts part of the liability for property damage or personal injury from the hauler to the customer, or that is otherwise not fair to both parties. Our customers are our friends, and we want to earn their continued business through good service and friendly and fair business practices, this is Fabit's policy."

Fabit is owned and operated by a small group of local businessmen who make their home in Lubbock, spending their money in Lubbock. Clyde A. Blakeley is Fabit president and directs his personal attention and supervision to the company's departments including the Refuse Service Division.

Not only are all the trucks radio equipped to give better and more prompt service, but back-up equipment is kept in readiness to guarantee Fabit's ability to service containers on a dependable and regular schedule.

Side Loading

Several years ago, Fabit from its 1408 N. Quirt Ave. headquarters initiated a side-loading refuse container service to commercial accounts in Lubbock, and both commercial and residential service to customers outside the city limits.

This service still is a key enterprise of the Refuse Service Division.

Diesel-powered Mack trucks and efficient side-loading mechanisms handle containers quietly, safely and quickly. The side-loading containers work well in narrow alleys and in parking lots. Also, the gentle container handling results in less damage to containers and nearby objects. In contrast to heavy and cumbersome lids on front-loading containers, side-loading containers have lids that are easily and safely used by women and children. Small 1½ cubic yard containers are available for small users at minimum cost, and three or four cubic yard units are available for greater demands.

Roll-Off Containers

With expansion of the Refuse Service Division, Fabit now also serves the area with the large roll-off container service including both compactor and container and open-top container service.

"Let us at Fabit's Refuse Container Division, phone 762-2650, at 1408 N. Quirt, detail the services that match your needs. Remember, Fabit can work for you, too; may we have the opportunity?"

Hallie's Thrift Shoppe Sure Answer In Budget Stretching

"You are not alone if the season's demands have caused a really great strain on the pocketbook. Were wardrobe expenditures sacrificed for other needs? If so, there is sensible assistance just as near as Hallie's Thrift Shoppe. It is a great place to trade and save in face of inflation."

Hallie's Thrift Shoppe, 3510 Ave. Q, can appreciably aid the fashion need and the economy need "for you, too" in every season of the year, as it has for so many during the past 14 years.

At Hallie's Thrift Shoppe there is lots of new merchandise plus consignment items that are strictly "first class" that can be a smart solution to the wardrobe budget.

With the increased costs at every hand, it is exciting to find a firm that can greatly reduce some of this cash outlay.

There are clothes for the entire family (sold on consignment) and the prices are most appealing.

Call Regarding Consignments

"If you have items suitable for consignment, call Hallie's at 744-6772 for appointment and arrangements."

"Please be prepared, when calling for appointment, to disclose at that time the number of acceptable garments you want to consign. (By 'acceptable' we mean apparel in perfect condition, in fashion and most usually in season.)"

Classic Ballet Conservatory Enrolling For Spring Schedule

Dedicated to the preservation of the complete tradition of classical ballet, the highly professional Conservatory of Classical Ballet, Inc., announces that its spring schedule enrollment is now underway.

Operating on the premise that success is not just by talent but by proper instruction from qualifed direction, the Conservatory of Classical Ballet at 4902 34th St. (in Terrace Center, Unit 35-B) phone (806)797-9899) takes pride in its reputation and stature as the only professional classical ballet training school of its type west of the Mississippi. In fact, it instructs in a disciplined art form as only taught in a handful of schools in the entire world. Certainly, Lubbock and area is fortunate in having a school of this type.

Outstanding Qualifications

Owner and director, Peggy Willis is reputed as one of the most outstanding pedagogical pupils of John Barker, leading authority in the West on the teaching method of classical dance. Ms. Willis earned degrees at Texas Christian University and began her ballet studies in Naples, Italy. She has performed in the South and in England, performing with the American Festival in Great Britain. She has received numerous awards for choreography and teaching innovation, and in 1977 she made a trip to the Soviet Union with John Barker and his pedagogical students to observe the International Competitions for Ballet Artists in Moscow. She also is a noted director and author in her field.

Peggy Willis in Lubbock directs a faculty of four at the popular conservatoty. On the staff are Paula Hunter, Brent McArthur, Mary Maynard and Brian Clement. All are highly qualified and each instructs classes in the art of classical ballet.

For All Ages

Even though the school trains pupils for a career in classical ballet, Peggy emphasizes, all ages are welcome and study for various reasons includes just plain enjoyment, for the highest quality of physical exercise, etc.

Enrollment might be said to be welcome for any reason, for any age.

Registration Underway

New classes are forming, with new beginning adult lessons slated for 1½-hour and 1-hour sessions on a two, three or six times a week basis.

Children's introduction to ballet (4 to 8 years old) involves one hour, one or two sessions per week.

Academic training for children begins at age 9 at the school, with students under that age afforded a very valuable orientation program with definite educational benefit.

Facilities Excel

Peggy Willis, an associate professor at Texas Tech since '72, opened the Conservatory of Classical Ballet at its present functional, large and attractive quarters in August of '79. Reception of this type conservatory not only has been most auspicious locally but has gained wide renown for the school in the ballet field.

All efforts at the conservatory are directed to the field of classical ballet and the children's programs.

Visitors are welcome at the Conservatory, and inquiries are especially solicited, whether from those thinking of enrollment for the professional challenges and development, for exercise or for just pure enjoyment. All ages are welcomed, and for a limited time, new students receive 10 per cent off on the comprehensive ballet album produced by Peggy Willis.

Lessons at the Conservatory are carefully prepared, with the guideline written by V.S. Kostrovitskaya of the Vaganova Choreographic School, Leningrad. Her textbooks, "School of Classical Dance" and "101 Classical Dance Lessons," translated into English by James Barker, provide the basis of pure classical training. This classical tradition is now accessible to the English speaking reader, and Ms. Willis has introduced this classical tradition, that is over 200 years old, at Texas Tech, making this university the "leader" in the field.

Testimonials regarding the Lubbock Conservatory are most impressive.

One said:

"I moved all the way from Pittsburg, Pa., in order to be able to study at the Conservatory. Why don't you discover what's in Lubbock!"

Another said, in part:

"It is one of the finest professional classical ballet schools in the country. I realize now that you don't have to be a certain age to enjoy learning ballet." (This was from a housewife who also lauded the physical exercise and personal program enabled at the Conservatory.)

"Don't you, too, wish to know more of this Conservatory right here in Lubbock? Call now, at 797-9899, or visit the facilities in the Terrace Center, 4902 34th St."

BJ's Toggery Racks Including Large Sizes At Budget Prices

"Large Clothes for Big, Beautiful Ladies" is making a lot of friends and customers for the remarkable BJ's Toggery, 2507 34th St. (just west of the University Avenue intersection and across from the S & H stamp redemption center.

And here is still further great news:

Not only does BJ's Toggery provide the hi-fashion look in larger sizes, but smaller sizes also are on the racks! It is a store you won't want to overlook . . . for selection, the right sizes, and fantastically low budget prices.

One large area of the big 60 x 70 store is devoted to the larger size clothing, sizes 12 through 20 and 32 through 52. One may select from dresses, pants, skirts, blouses, uniform tops, blazers and dusters.

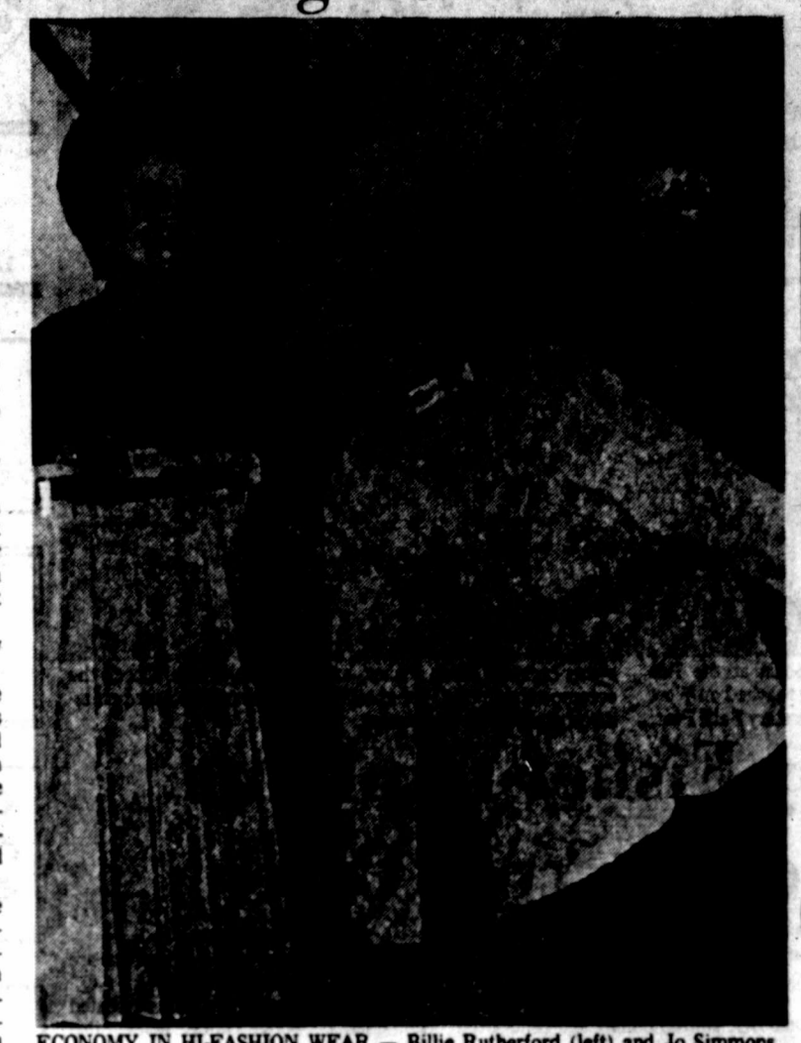
All these are at budget prices, with comparison invited to emphasize just how economical it can be for the larger woman to choose appropriately from fashion merchandise without exorbitant expense.

"In fact, you just won't believe how very low the prices are!"

Still grouped on the west side of the big, roomy store are salesmen's samples in sizes 7 through 10, with these priced just above the salesman's cost, insuring a very, very low price to the customer. One may select from these first-quality samples for very good buys in dresses, blouses, jeans, pants, skirts, jump suits and long dresses.

BJ's is owned and operated by Billie Rutherford and Jo Simmons, both longtime Lubbock residents who know retailing, clothing and the preferences of area women who expect and deserve a fashion-value combination. Jo and her husband, Kermit Simmons, have owned Lubbock Sound Equipment for some 20 years, and Billie has long been in business here, too, especially knowledgeable in the apparel trade.

Billie owned the former Factory Outlet store, at the same 34th Street location, and back in December she and Jo renamed it BJ's and expanded the merchandise to feature the hard-to-find larger sizes with patterns and prices that no longer make them "off limits" to the larger lady who appreciates such selection.



ECONOMY IN HI-FASHION WEAR — Billie Rutherford (left) and Jo Simmons, owners of BJ's Toggery just west of the 34th Street-University Avenue intersection, call attention to beautiful wearables from the stock at that firm where low budget prices are the rule, for the extensive 'larger sizes' selection and for the 'smaller sizes,' too.

BJ's is open 10-6 six days a week.

Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed, and 30-day layaway purchases can be made at no additional charge.

"Thanks to BJ's, the larger woman can dress economically, at budget prices in fact, yet still securing a chic wardrobe of fashion-oriented pattern designs best suited for her and her preferences. Larger women may now forget that 'I just can't wear fashion-conscious clothes'!"

Billie and Jo are most adept in their selection, stocking apparel one will desire, appreciate and wear with the knowledge that "I am dressed right, and the cost was negligible."

"Don't you think it is time you, too, discover BJ's Toggery, at 2507 34th St.?"

Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies, 2255 34th St., phone 744-7433, has become an affiliate member of Hardware Wholesalers, Inc., a member-owned organization consisting of over 2,400 independent merchants.

With home office in Fort Wayne, Ind., Hardware Wholesalers, Inc. (HWI) serves retail hardware and building material dealers and has an annual sales volume of over $426 million.

Danny Fowler, owner of Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies, says his firm now will be an outlet for more than 33,000 items in the HWI distribution center. He emphasized his firm will now be able to offer the local market a complete selection of building materials, builders hardware, brand-name tools, kitchen cabinets and paint.

No Newcomer

Many contractors, do-it-yourself handymen and other Lubbock residents have voiced their appreciation of the type store afforded by Fowler, lifelong Lubbock resident associated in the construction field for years. (His plumbing and electrical background experience can be a customer benefit, with Danny glad to advise and help in selection of the proper items.

Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies, located between University Avenue and Avenue Q (in front of the water tower), on 34th Street, also provides lawn and garden supplies, housewares, toys, appliances, sporting goods, plumbing and electrical items and more that are carried in stock or may be ordered from the HWI catalog.

Deliveries from the HWI distribution center in Waco are made each Monday. Special orders can be delivered during the week in which the order is placed if the item is ordered before Wednesday.

John Clark has been assigned as the area supervisor for the local firm. His responsibilities include employee training, inventory control, management training and product knowledge training. In addition, training meetings are conducted periodically in Waco for specialized instruction in all phases of retailing.

The company symbol "Mr. Friendly" will appear in all advertisements. Fowler believes the Lubbock area should have a "friendly" place to shop where a well-rounded line of items is displayed, with prices that appeal to the customer, he emphasizes.

Representative of these prices are current values such as two Westinghouse lightbulbs for 69 cents (60w, 75w or 100w soft white).

Or a Ray-O-Vac flashlight with batteries, $1.77 (all-steel barrel and including two D-size batteries).

On and on the list of good hardware and building supply values could be listed, but the best idea is for "you who appreciate quality and appealing pricing to come on in to Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies where there are scads of items one rightfully should expect to find in a better hardware store."

Global Discount Pharmacy Affording Specific Benefits

"Now would likely be a good time for you, as either new or old customers, to visit Global Discount Pharmacy, Inc., 2809 Ave. Q. With the day-to-day weather changes, the usual "colds," etc., a good pharmacy can be a mighty good friend!"

A lot of people in the past have learned the advantages of patronizing Global Discount Pharmacy.

Senior Citizens Discount

Some have been especially appreciative of the 15 per cent discount extended senior citizens (at age 60) on all prescriptions.

Others noted the personalized service afforded by the small operation, with the pharmacist taking personal interest and speeding one's prescription service . . . without the longer waits sometimes associated with the large pharmacy in more congested areas.

There's easy off-street parking at Global Discount Pharmacy, on the east side of Avenue Q, where owner-pharmacist Henry Dominguez is on the job.

Henry is a graduate of Southwestern State at Weatherford, Okla., and marks over a year ownership of his present pharmacy after serving for several years in the area, nine years with Ellis Pharmacy in Levelland, later at Stumbaugh's in Lubbock, and association with the Global Pharmacy even before purchasing it.

Henry Dominguez personally is on duty at all hours the pharmacy is open, filling all prescriptions. He is truly dedicated to giving an exceptional service.

"We think you'll like the Global Discount Pharmacy, 2809 Ave. Q, phone 744-5353."

No-Fat, No-Gristle Chili Among Great In-Demand Gary's Frozen Foods Items

For instance . . . wasn't that chili just right that cold day, especially if it was chili from Gary's Frozen Foods!

Yes, Gary's has added chili to its product list, affording a definite treat in good meaty, no-fat, no-gristle, no-grease chili! As is true for other Gary's products, it is available in supermarkets and at the Gary's plant south of the city.

Select also from other members of the Gary's family of products: Gary's Super Dogs, Bar-B-Que Brisket, Barbeque Delight and Corn Dogs.

And there are hickory smoked turkeys, brisket and ham, also.

Gary's has quite a reputation, and rightly so, for its expertise in custom cooking, too.

Gary's Frozen Foods, at 109th Street and South University Avenue, is the ready answer for easily-prepared but super-delicious meals for any occasion. Every meat product from Gary's is an experience in goodness . . . for meals, snack-time treats, picnics, etc.

New packaging recently was announced, with the new barbeque brisket trays, as example, ready to place in microwave or conventional oven.

Gary still stocks the popular Dynamic electric nutcracker, great for one's own use or for special-situation gifting. Response to this unit in seasons past has been so enthusiastic that Gary has made it a year-around feature rather than a pre-Christmas item only.

For the cook that deserves every consideration, for the family or guests that deserve the tastiest of well-prepared meat products, Gary's Frozen Foods comes through . . . deliciously so!

Poland's Top Red Talks With Czech

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish Communist Party Chairman Stanislaw Kania flew to Prague, Sunday, for surprise consultations with Czech party chief Gustav Husak, who has warned that Poland faces the same dangers Czechoslovakia did in 1968.

Poland's state-run television disclosed the trip just as negotiators in Lodz apparently reached a compromise to avert a nationwide students' strike in an agreement that also dropped compulsory Russian language and Marxism classes.

Kania's one-day trip was his first to neighboring Czechoslovakia since he was named to the party chairmanship Sept. 6 at the end of Poland's summer of strikes.

The television gave no details of Kania's meeting with Husak except that it was a "short, friendly visit" that would aid "international peace" as well as improve relations between the two countries.

Czech criticism of unrest in Poland has been among the most violent in the Communist bloc, and Husak was quoted as saying Saturday that the situation in Poland was like the one that led to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslavakia in 1968.

"We experienced something similar in 1968-69," Husak told a party meeting in Prague. "We know how much chaos, how many shocks and what economic disruption came of this and how long we had to overcome it."

In Lodz, where 10,000 students occupied their university campus, their leaders and Higher Education Minister Janusz Gorski agreed to sidestep the issue of whether a student union would have to recognize "the leading role of the Communist Party" in its charter.

Instead, the issue will be dealt with in an appendix to the charter.

The students' strike at Lodz and at some campuses in Warsaw and two other cities had been one of two significant protests still hampering the honeymoon new Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski asked for to ease Poland's labor and social strife.

Walesa Talks To Farmers

In the other outstanding pocket of resistance, Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa went to the southeastern town of Rzeszow to persuade peasants, demanding recognition of a farmers' union to end their occupation of offices of the former Communist Party-run labor union.

Solidarity has not given any formal reply to Jaruzelski's call for 90 strike-free days to allow his government to start bringing Poland out of its crisis, but Walesa urged moderation after meeting a government representative, Saturday. The union leadership also has banned uncoordinated strikes.

Other concessions won by the students included easing of restrictions on travel abroad and ending of unpaid manual labor for the government during vacations.

They dropped other demands that included shortening of their compulsory military service, but had threatened to call a nationwide strike unless an agreement was reached by midnight Sunday.

"We are rather satisfied with this agreement," a spokesman said earlier. "We got freedom in the field of education. We can choose what we want to study, and this really satisfies us."

Crime Line Seeks Data On Shooting Of Pair

Judge Menton Jr. told police he, his wife and the youngster were driving west in the 3100-block of Clovis Road when a man in a late-model Ford pickup truck fired a single gunshot blast at their vehicle.

The boy was struck in the head by the blast, and he is undergoing treatment at Lubbock General Hospital. The woman was struck in the back of the neck, but she was treated at the hospital and released. Menton was not injured.

The vehicle involved was a 1977-78 Ford club cab pickup, light gold over brown in color, with a "headache rack" or roll bar outlining the rear window, with a citizens band radio antenna on the rack or roof.

The truck also had chrome wheels, loud mufflers, and bore the partial Texas license number 2860 or 2660. The two letters preceding the four digits are unknown.

The driver of the vehicle, who fired the shotgun, was described only as a white man wearing a western-style hat. The vehicle was last seen westbound on Clovis Road.

A $500 reward also is offered in the Feb. 9 robbery of the State Savings of Lubbock Medical Branch, 3519 21st St., where a masked man made off with $2,115 cash.

The man entered the office shortly before 10 a.m., and forced a teller to remove the money from a cash dr awer. He then put the cash in a paper sack or manila envelope.

The bandit forced the two woman tellers to lie face-down on the floor, where he tied their hands behind their backs. He then ran out the north door of the office toward Methodist Hospital.

The robber was described as a white man, 26 to 35 years old, 5 feet 7, and of heavy build. He was wearing a gray stocking over his head, a blue denim jacket and denim jeans.

Cime Line offers a $300 reward for information about the Feb. 9 burglary of McMillian Trucking Co., 3002 Slaton Highway, where the loss, including property damage, was estimated at $8,000.

Someone broke into the fenced yard of the company and burglarized several trailer vans between 4 p.m. Feb. 8 and 6 a.m. Feb. 9, police said.

Taken were several cases of Prestone anti-freeze, several cases of Chevron RPM Delco oil, 14 Firestone truck tires (sizes 1000-20 and 900-20), three cases of Texaco oil and a small black-and-white television.

A $300 reward is offered in the Feb. 6 burglary of a residence at 302 E. Purdue St., Space 27, where goods worth $437 were stolen.

The victim said someone entered the home between 7:20 a.m. and 5:25 p.m. by prying open the front door.

Death Toll Mounts In Brazilian Fire

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Firemen searching the flame-gutted 5th floor of a 20-story office building found the charred bodies of three women and two men huddled in a bathroom Sunday, raising the death toll to 17.

Authorities said they did not believe there were any more victims of Saturday's fire and firemen had completed their search without determining the cause of the blaze.

Police said 30 people were injured in the fire that broke out just before noon and 10 were in serious condition. Fire Chief Alcione Pinheiro de Castro said few people were at work because of the weekend, with only cleaning crews in the building on Paulista Avenue.

The toll would have been higher, but a helicopter rescued eight people from the roof and several people scrambled to safety over ropes strung by firemen between the blazing structure and nearby buildings.

Israelis Concerned Over Russian Jew

TEL AVIV (AP) — Yosef Mendelevich, one of 26 Soviet Jews jailed for a 1970 airplane hijacking attempt at Leningrad, is no longer in the Soviet labor camp where he was last heard from and his fate is unknown, relatives here said Sunday.

Israeli government officials have expressed concern over his case, and the cabinet said Sunday that Israel will appeal to world opinion for his release.

An official telegram sent to friends of the family in Moscow said Mendelevich was no longer in the Ural Mountain camp where he had been serving his 12-year sentence. The telegram, from the camp's chief warden, did not say what had happened to Mendelevich.

Government-In-Exile Called Peace Step

By United Press International

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Sunday, urged the PLO and Palestinians living in the Arab world and Israeli-occupied lands to set up a government-in-exile as a step toward diplomatic recognition by Israel.

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir briefed Israel's Cabinet on his visit, this week, to Washington.

Shamir, who leaves Tuesday, told the Cabinet he anticipates U.S. objections to Prime Minister Menachem Begin's call for resumption of Palestinian autonomy talks before Israel's June 30 elections, which the opposition Labor Party is favored to win.

Settlements Issue

The foreign minister meets Friday with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who is likely to raise reports that the Begin government is accelerating construction of Jewish settlements on the West Bank before the elections.

Newsweek magazine reported that Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres favors negotiations with the Palestinians but feels they can only take place with the participation of Jordan.

"We are ready to negotiate with any Palestinian who is ready to recognize the state of Israel, any Palestinian who stands for peace and who rejects terrorism. But I personally do not believe that such Palestinians will join us at the negotiating table and that is the reason why I stress the importance of Jordan," Peres said in an interview published by Newsweek, Sunday.

Peres, described by Newsweek as "the clear front runner to succeed (Prime Minister) Menachem Begin," said that because of the current Syrian threats against Jordan, cooperation with Israel is a must for the Jordanians, not just for Israel.

Sadat issued his call for a Palestinian government-in-exile after meeting with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, who was on a four-day visit to Egypt as part of a Middle East fact finding mission for the Socialist International.

Sadat and Kreisky agreed that Palestinian autonomy negotiations should be held off until a new Israeli government is formed, after the June 30 elections.

"The PLO should sit together with the Palestinians under occupation and the Palestinians in other parts of the world and decide upon the new government," Sadat told reporters.

Sadat first broached the idea of a Palestinian government-in-exile in 1972, but the call was rejected by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Presidential spokesman Mansour Hassan said, "We believe there can be no effective negotiations on autonomy before the Israeli elections."

The spokesman also said Sadat and Kreisky agreed that Western Europe should play a more active role in promoting Middle East peace.

European Persuasion

In a speech to the European Parliament in Luxembourg, last week, Sadat said the Europeans could persuade Israel and the Palestinians to exchange recognition.

The two said Sadat will visit Vienna, this summer, to meet with leaders of the Socialist International, including Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

Kreisky, who maintains good relations with the PLO, refused to comment on Sadat's call, but appeared to be placing his bets on Peres.

Referring to Begin, Kreisky said: "My view is that President Sadat has not met the adequate partner who has shown the same readiness for peace .... Israel is facing an election which may result in a government change. The best policy is to wait and see."

Shamir told the Israeli Cabinet he also expects to meet U.S. objections to Israel's opposition to the European initiative.

AUSTIN JAIL RIOT QUELLED

AUSTIN (AP) — Deputies used chains and handcuffs to subdue a group of 96 prisoners who started a "major disturbance" by setting fire to their mattresses, trash and other debris in the Travis County Jail, Sheriff Doyne Bailey said late Sunday. One prisoner was hospitalized for treatment of smoke inhalation but there were no other injuries, officials said.

Archbishop Asks End To Killing

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The leading spokesman for the Roman Catholic Church here Sunday pleaded "in the name of God" for an end to El Salvador's political violence, which informed sources said killed 250 people in the last week.

The appeal by Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas in his weekly homily came amid unconfirmed reports of scattered gun battles in the eastern provinces and word from residents in San Miguel that terrorist bombings of substations have left them without electricity for a week.

"Please, in the name of humanity do not kill the defenseless, in the name of Christ do not kill your own brothers, in the name of God do not kill," the archbishop said.

"Prudent Use"

Rivera y Damas said the situation in El Salvador makes it necessary to give the nation's security forces certain special rights, but called for a "prudent use of those rights."

He said that in less than a month, at least 178 people have been shot for violating the dusk-to-dawn curfew in force across the nation.

"For 20 days, it is many," the archbishop said.

He said the anti-guerrilla campaign launched by the government "is not always just," citing as an example last week's arrest of 21 university professors.

Government spokesmen say 13 of the professors have been released and that the other eight are "under investigation" but will be freed soon.

Rivera y Damas was also critical of what he called "inhuman" tactics employed by leftists waging a guerrilla war against the U.S.-backed ruling junta.

"No Reason"

Referring to an incident, Tuesday, in which a terrorist bomb killed 18 people, mostly peasants, riding in the back of a truck, the archbishop said, "There is no reason to put such an inhuman end to innocent lives."

"Because of actions like this," he added, "there is much resentment and reserve in the population, which explains the lack of response to the so-called final offensive."

Leftist guerrillas launched what they proclaimed to be their "final offensive" against the military-civilian junta, Jan. 10, and said they would set up a Marxist regime.

But government troops crushed the main thrusts of the armed uprising. Observers attributed the offensive's failure to limited popular support of the guerrillas, whose calls for general strikes went generally unheeded.

In San Miguel, about 110 miles east of the capital, residents said they have been without electricity for at least a week due to leftist bombings of power substations in the area.

The guerrillas have stepped up a campaign against public works facilities, blowing up bridges and communication links in efforts to isolate cities and towns from the capital. The government has said they are also burning cotton fields in an attempt to damage the Central American country's already troubled economy and have attempted to extort a "war tax" from entrepreneurs under the threat of death.

An official in the Public Works Ministry said Saturday that 138 ministry workers had been killed and 11 bridges blown up in the eastern provinces, but he would not say when the attacks occurred.

Reports of scattered fighting, Sunday, in the eastern provinces could not be confirmed. Guerrillas and government troops have engaged in sporadic skirmishes in the central and eastern areas of El Salvador in the last month.

But Mrs. Montoya also has drawn on her experience as an elementary PE instructor. She said she taught the subject for three years in low socioeconomic areas "where there are a lot of emotional problems. I'm going on a lot of what I learned there. Most of that work was adaptive."

When she began work with her new class, she decided not to read their records to learn about their problems. She didn't want the students to start out with labels, Mrs. Montoya said. "I wanted to find out about them myself. I didn't want to have any opinion of them. I wanted to find out about each person and observe them."

She since has begun checking their records and has found out she accurately pinpointed most of the youngsters' handicaps.

And Mrs. Montoya said she has learned patience. "Sometimes you have to pry to find out what's wrong. And they respond to affection. I play more than a teachers' role," she said. "Sometimes I'm a parent or a counselor."

She also has to sometimes be a disciplinarian, but a benevolent one. "You have to allow for more anger" in a class where students easily become upset, Mrs. Montoya said.

"I don't give ultimatums and I don't like to yell or belittle them; I feel like they've had enough of that," she said. Still, she added, "They have to know when they're here, they have to participate or they go back to the classroom."

It Takes Persistence

Her therapy with the students also takes empathy, Mrs. Montoya said, "although I've been accused of being too emotional. But you have to feel when they're hurting. And you can't be afraid to love them. They need it. It takes persistence."

Her persistence and that of her student aides apparently has paid off. "Some (students) were very withdrawn; they have come out of that and give you more attention," Mrs. Montoya said.

Students Also Optimistic

Some of Mrs. Montoya's students confirmed her optimism. "I think it (the class) is great," said sophomore Donald Waller. "It's a little bit easier on us. I think we get to do a little bit more than in the regular class. I feel a whole lot better."

Sophomore Nancy McCool concurred: "It's a lot of fun. I like the way they throw the ball so that I can hit it easier. And the teacher is nice."

Snodgrass said a swiming program for the students is being considered as an additional feature of the class. But Mrs. Montoya is cautious, noting there is no guarantee the course will continue at Monterey next year.

Nonetheless, she and Snodgrass said they hope the pilot project will pave the way for an expanded program. "I'm hoping we can get enough parents to support us," Mrs. Montoya said, "so we can have the class at other secondary schools."

Balloonists Give Up World Trip

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two American balloonists, forced to abandon a round-the-world voyage because of mechanical problems, spent Sunday night in New Delhi and the government offered a helicopter to pick up their craft from the village where it touched down.

Maxie Anderson, a mining-investment executive from Albuquerque, N.M., and his partner Don Ida, a nurseryman from Boulder, Colo., landed the "Jules Verne" at Mirchpur, about 90 miles northwest of here, a few hours before dark Saturday. They said mechanical problems would have made a crossing of the Himalayan mountains too dangerous.

Curious villagers from surrounding areas were drawn to the scrub-filled field to see the aeronauts and their deflated, 20-story-high balloon.

Hissar District Commissioner Yogeshwar Sawhney said "hundreds" of spectators converged on the field to see the Americans, who were not injured in the landing.

Anderson said a Soviet-built Indian air force helicopter flew to Mirchpur to retrieve the balloon and gondola, but had trouble locating it and had to return to New Delhi for more fuel. He said the "Jules Verne" would be hauled to the Indian capital Monday, and the gondola probably would be sent to a port and transported by ship back to the United States.

Anderson and Ida had hoped to make the first manned, nonstop, round-the-world balloon flight. They said after their landing that even if they wanted to relaunch the craft, the difficulty of getting a helium supply would be a problem and they were abandoning the effort.

The pair launched the balloon, Thursday, at the resort city of Luxor, Egypt, after a five-day delay because of unfavorable winds that could have carried them over Iran. Iran, fighting a border war with Iraq, said it would consider the balloon a "hostile aircraft" if it penetrated Iranian airspace.

diate withdrawal of Iraqi troops because the continued fighting "paves the way to interference and aggression of the imperialist superpowers," especially the United States, the Albanian state news agency reported.

The leader of the hardline Eastern European communist nation made the comment after meeting, Saturday, with Iran's deputy premier, Abdollah Yassbi, who headed a delegation from Tehran, according to the news agency report monitored in Vienna.

Iran's official news agency, Pars, said heavy exchanges continued, Sunday, on the Abadan front off the Shatt al-Arab waterway, with the Iraqis firing rockets into the oil refining city that killed three people and wounded 55.

Pars said fighting also continued in the eastern section of Khorramshahr, 20 miles north of Abadan. It claimed that Iranian defenders repulsed an Iraqi commando raid in the Mehrian region on the western front, killing 10 Iraqis and wounding 15.

An Iraqi communique broadcast over Baghdad Radio said Iraqi forces killed 80 Iranian soldiers in the various war zones in the last 24 hours. It conceded 16 Iraqis killed.

There were rumors of an electrical fault or a carelessly lighted cigarette causing the blaze and police said they also were investigating those reports.

Package Vote Seen As Budget Cuts Key

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of President Reagan's proposals for budget and tax cuts will depend largely on whether Congress considers them as a package or individually, a top congressional backer said Sunday.

"If these cuts have to come to the floor one at a time ... then there is no chance of getting this country turned around on fiscal restraint," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Unless the president's program is voted upon as a package, "the special interests will prevail as they do historically and have historically," he said.

"In my opinion, the answer to this is to find a way to get a package on the floor of the Senate where the special interests can argue about their part in that, but our president and those of us who are worried about jobs and the future and inflation can continue to focus on a package, with an ultimate vote on a package," Domenici said.

As the senator spoke, Reagan was at work on an address he will deliver Wednesday to Congress detailing his economic package. Aides said he was laboring in the study of Aspen Lodge, the presidential cabin at Camp David, where he was spending the weekend. Reagan was to return today to Washington.

The package Reagan will propose includes a cut in individual tax rates of 10 percent, effective July 1, and a rollback in business taxes retroactive to Jan. 1, administration sources have said. It also includes cuts in dozens of federal programs.

Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that Reagan's cuts might eventually result in the laying off of more 200,000 federal workers, 10 percent of the total. The magazine said it had learned that the cuts would be concentrated among federal regulatory agencies on the theory that "one sure way to stop over-regulation is to fire the regulators," in the words of one budget office employee.

Domenici said that, as outlined to him, the administration's proposals include reductions in or outright elimination of 83 federal programs for a saving of $8 billion in this fiscal year and another $40 billion in fiscal 1982, which begin Oct. 1.

"The cuts he's asking for are dramatic," declared Domenici. "They're everything from Ex-Im Bank (the federally sponsored Export-Import Bank, which aids U.S. companies doing business abroad) to foreign aid, to farm subsidies in some instances, milk subsidies, cutbacks in the Comprehensive Employment and Training program."

"He is saying, 'No more gradualism, no more little tinkering here and there,'" said Domenici of Reagan's proposals.

But House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas warned that cuts won't be easy to make.

"Everybody in the entire United States wants to reduce expenditures. Unfortunately, there isn't any line in the budget that says 'waste, fat and fraud,'" Wright said, adding that "when you get down to specifics, it's extremely difficult."

Domenici said, "There is no question that this program will bring inflation down substantially next year, and in '83 it will be down dramatically, and in '84, it will be down to a truly reasonable level ... And the tax cuts, coupled with the kind of restraint he's talking about, should start America growing again."

But Sen. William Proxmire, ranking Democrat on the Senate Appropriations Committee, disputed Domenici's contention that the president's plan, by itself, would bring inflation down.

"This is not a comprehensive anti-inflation package," Proxmire said. He said he would like to see the budget and tax cuts bolstered by new government antitrust actions and the lifting of trade barriers to cheaper foreign goods.

As to the spending cuts, the Wisconsin Democrat adjudged them "a good start ... It's more than any other president has proposed so far ... But the cuts should be deeper if we are going to go ahead with Kemp-Roth," the tax cut plan that calls for a 10 percent-a-year reduction in tax rates for each of the next three years.

Wright said Democrats are "every bit as eager" as Republicans to cut the budget, but "we would be vigorously opposed" to cuts in "programs to create jobs or help jobless people."

Wright also warned against any cutback in the synthetic fuels program. "We launched a massive synthetic fuels program last year and we've got to insist that the enthusiasm does not wane ... We've said we will make this country energy-independent again. If we retreat, it gives the wrong signal to the world."

But Domenici said Reagan does indeed intend to propose cuts in the synthetic fuels program. He said the president would not seek termination of the Synthetic Fuels Corp., which aids development of alternative energy supplies, but would seek to eliminate energy projects that are fully financed by the federal government.

Labor Leaders Brace To Fight Budget Cuts

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — With the Reagan administration ready to propose substantial reductions in federal jobs and unemployment compensation programs, AFL-CIO leaders are convening here for talks that likely will focus on a strategy for resisting the cutbacks.

The 35-member executive council of the nation's largest labor federation — once one of the most powerful lobbying forces in Washington — is expected to concentrate on the budget cuts during its meetings this week, but to consider a host of other issues as well, including revitalization of its political machinery.

The administration appears set on a phase-out of public service jobs provided under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, as well as a downgrading of Labor Department programs such as extended unemployment benefits and Trade Adjustment Assistance.

The labor leaders can be counted on to take a dim view of these proposed cuts.

Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, and three other top labor leaders were invited to the White House last week by President Reagan and Vice President George Bush for a briefing on the new administration's plans for the fiscal 1982 budget.

Besides Kirkland, those attending the Oval Office meeting were Frank Fitzsimmons, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Douglas Fraser, head of the United Auto Workers; and Sam Church, president of the United Mine Workers. The three unions remain outside the 13.5-million-member AFL-CIO, though there has been speculation that the Teamsters and the UAW might rejoint the federation.

None of the four union leaders was willing to discuss with reporters the details of the meeting, although Church did say that administration officials asked for organized labor's cooperation in pruning federal spending.

Although Kirkland was unwilling to comment after the meeting, he had indicated earlier that the AFL-CIO would fight any rollback in social programs aimed at helping the jobless and disadvantaged.

It is expected that the federation's leaders, meeting in this Florida resort city, will approve a host of resolutions opposing the budget cuts, which Reagan is set to announce to Congress and to the nation on Wednesday night.

The labor leaders also will have a chance to make their views known directly to the administration here this week.

Bush, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker and Edwin Meese, Reagan's top White House counselor, have been invited to appear before the executive council. Also invited were House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and Raymond J. Donovan, secretary of labor.

Sources have said that under the Reagan proposals, the CETA program, which has been a favorite of the labor movement, would be phased out in the new fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

This year, some 315,000 persons — most of them poor and black — have held CETA jobs, which are administered by state and local governments but subsidized by the federal treasury. The administration's budget experts have estimated that phasing out the program could result in a federal savings of as much as $3.3 billion in the new fiscal year.

The administration's budget-cutting initiative is also said to target the mechanism by which the government makes available 13 additional weeks of unemployment checks for those who have exhausted the traditional 26-week benefit period without finding work. Under the new proposal, the "national trigger" unemployment level, which determines when extended benefits are to be paid, would be replaced by individual state triggers.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: What is a resource recovery engineer?
— S.I.J., Denver, Colo.

An emerging specialist in waste management, the resource recovery engineer uses complex technology to reclaim energy and useful materials from trash.

As this technical play-it-again-Sam wizardry becomes commonplace, additional numbers of engineers and supporting technicians will be needed to design, construct and manage automated facilities and systems. The prediction comes from the new "Environmental Protection Careers Guidebook," an unusually informative publication of the Department of Labor and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Some resource recovery engineers work to change refuse into steam or electricity. Others are working to recapture scrap paper, metal or glass. Still others are experimenting with ways to cull other wanted resources from the junk heap.

As well as evaluating chemical or mechanical recovery technology, and recommending the most economic and appropriate processes, the engineers may assist planners with marketing studies of how and where to sell the nearly new valuables.

Many recovery engineers are employed by city or county governments, where they typically earn in the range of $25,000 to $45,000 yearly.

State and federal environmental agencies hire recovery engineers; those in the private sector work for waste management companies or serve as consultants.

Entry requirements are not set in stone but usually include an engineering degree in civil, chemical, mechanical or waste management, plus several years of experience. An advanced degree may substitute for some experience.

The guidebook warns that opportunities may be limited for the immediate future, except in research and development, because many of the technologies are being tried for the first time on a commercial scale. But, as cities run out of landfill space, demand will grow for people who can manage resources the second time around.

Nevertheless, more may be called to the recovery task than ultimately are chosen. Jerome Leszkiewicz, director of environmental construction in Montgomery County, Md., who is heading a resource recovery project, expects a continuing shake-out of the industry as marginally qualified people are, well, discarded.

Appropriate engineering programs are included in the "Environmental Protection Careers Guidebook." The publication describes 100 occupations, many of which did not exist a decade ago and some that never before have been clearly described. The 200-page paperback costs $6.50 from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402. Include stock number 029-014-00205-4. Counselors, don't miss this book.

Dumping Of Undersize Oranges Sparks Feud

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A dispute has developed over how to dispose of tons of California navel oranges now reportedly being fed to cattle, buried or left to rot on the ground.

The groves are bursting with a bumper crop of oranges, but the problem is that, by industry estimates, 40 percent is undersize. Industry sources called it "a freak kind of thing...a historical aberration."

As a result, says the industry, less than half the fruit will reach the market as fresh produce. Prospects for them becoming juice is unlikely because navel orange juice flavor deteriorates in storage.

The "dumping" has prompted Consumers Union to call for the throwaway fruit to be diverted to non-profit food banks for distribution to the poor.

That solution was challenged by an industry source who told a reporter, "Of this stuff that is being thrown away...if you gave somebody a bag of them, 50 percent of those oranges would be thrown away" because people won't take the trouble of peeling them.

Harvey Snyder of the Consumers Union in San Francisco called on the Navel Orange Administrative Committee, which controls the flow of the oranges to California markets, to divert the doomed fruit to food banks.

"They (growers) have a surplus. All the rest of the world thinks of it as food. To them it's just garbage...feeding (the oranges) to cattle is a way of dumping them without having to cover them with dirt."

Lewis Robison, editor and publisher of Citrograph magazine, which covers the orange industry, called the problem of the little oranges a major headache.

"To ask a grower to hire a crew to go out there and pick this little stuff, then ask him to give it away, is like asking him to give away $3 a box," said Robison.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems. HEARTLINE: I noticed in your column last week a basic explanation of a trust (or trust fund). Now could you tell me what the duties of the trustee are? B.N.

ANSWER: The following is a basic outline of the duties volved in accepting a trusteeship, whether the trustee is a company or an individual.

1) Administer the trust — Upon acceptance of the trusteeship the trustee is under obligation to the beneficiary to administer the trust.

2) Loyalty — The trustee is under obligation to the beneficiary to administer the trust completely in the interest of the beneficiary.

3) Keep Accounts — The trustee must keep clear and accurate accounts of the trust and make them available to the beneficiary.

4) Not to delegate — The trustee is under obligation to do all the work involved in the trust and not to hire others to do such work unless it is absolutely necessary.

5) Exercise care and skill — The trustee must, to the best of his/her ability exercise the care and skill that a man of ordinary prudence and intelligence would in dealing with is/her own property.

There are many more duties involved in accepting a trustee-ship, but these are the most common among all the trusts. A trustee must be willing to do a considerable amount of work on he trust and must be responsible for their actions.

The complications involved in a trusteeship obviously change depending on the type of trust which is created. If you re trying to choose a trustee, you should take a very detailed ook at the duties involved with the kind of trust you wish to reate, so that you can make a sould choice. We highly recommend that you seek advice and assistance in matters of this nature from an attorney.

Dog Goes For Help When Woman Goes Into Labor

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — When Marina Holmes went into labor at 4 a.m. — alone in the house without a telephone, her husband away at work in the Middle East, and a month before the baby was due — the couple's dog Scamp raced to her mother's house for help, authorities reported Saturday.

"Come quickly, the baby is due," Mrs. Holmes, 19, wrote on a piece of paper that she tied to the dog's collar after going into labor early Thursday. She ordered her pet to go to "mother's house," where the dog once lived.

Scamp sprinted through the streets in this south coast resort town, woke up the family by barking and delivered the message. Mrs. Holmes' 4-pound, 11-ounce son was born that afternoon at Brighton's Royal Sussex Hospital, where both were reported in good condition.

Pope Set To Visit Strife-Torn Nation

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Anti-government demonstrations led by priests and nuns, the bloodiest guerrilla raids in years and new political challenge to the authoritarian Philippines regime have set the stage for Pope John Paul II's first major stop on his Asian pilgrimage.

On Tuesday, the pope steps into a country of 42 million Roman Catholics who are preparing a welcome to rival that in his native Poland.

Each of the nine Philippine cities the pope is visiting has prepared an elaborate and costly welcome with arches, thrones and papal colors. Radio and television announcements urge: "Let us prepare for the great visit." Banners reading "Tutus Tuus," Latin for "I'm all yours," hang from lampposts and buildings.

John Paul leaves the Philippines Feb. 22 for an overnight stop in Guam and then visits Japan until Feb. 27 in his first visit to Asia as pope.

Here, John Paul will step into a country of political and social tension, touched off Jan. 17 when President Ferdinand E. Marcos declared an end to eight years of martial law.

Marcos remains the dominant force in Philippine politics, retaining his near-dictatorial powers. In recent days he has announced plans for a presidential election in May.

Associates of one possible opposition candidate, former Sen. Benigno Aquino, have said he may return "before, after or with" the pope to challenge Marcos. Aquino, in exile in the United States, faces terrorism charges and a possible death sentence.

Marcos has organized a vast political machine under martial law, while the opposition holds only a handful of local offices.

The papal visit has brought church and state together temporarily, but some clerics say they want to be sure the pope hears about alleged repression under Marcos.

Priests and nuns carrying a giant wooden cross led 2,500 demonstrators in a brief clash with riot police Friday in the largest of several street protests since the lifting of martial rule.

An all-night vigil and other demonstrations were planned for the papal visit.

A religious group claimed Saturday that the number of political prisoners has reached 1,014, with at least two dozen arrested since martial law was lifted.

Renewed violence by guerrillas seeking independence for the predominantly Moslem southern Philippines is expected to draw the pope's attention as he visits the island of Mindanao.

On that island and the neighboring Sulu archipelago 175 people have died in guerrilla raids in the past 10 days, including 118 soldiers ambushed on Thursday on the island of Pata.

The pope is to address representatives of Moslem tribes in his visit to the southern Mindanao city of Davao.

In other cities, the pope is to speak to sugar workers, their bosses, farmers, students and Indochinese refugees.

He will also spend two hours with Marcos, who is Catholic, his wife, Imelda, and their three children at Malacanang Palace.

Almost 1 million people are expected at public Masses, including a beatification ceremony for Filipino martyr Lorenzo Ruiz and 16 others — the first such ceremony in Asia.

Even the demonstrators, who expect thousands to join their pleas for social justice, say they may be lost in the tumultuous crowds.

The Rev. Sonny Ramirez said the welcome could be even warmer and more prayerful than the one given the pope when he visited his native Poland.

"Filipinos are sentimental and open," said Ramirez, manager of a church shortwave station that will broadcast a special papal message to China and Russia.

"The pope went to Poland as a Polish pope," Ramirez said. "Here he'll be coming as a pilgrim pope and a father to the Filipino people."

By DONNA RAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The South Plains Council Boy Scouts of America's annual Recognition Banquet Saturday night honored adult scouters in the council for their "distinguished service to boyhood" and enabled scouters and their families to hear William "Green Bar Bill" Hillcourt, author of several scouting books.

Winners of the Silver Beaver Award were announced by Bobby J. Moody, council vice president. This award is conferred by the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America on the recommendation of the local council.

The winners of the award were Lt. Col. John G. Roush of Anton, A.C. Jones of Plains, N.W. "Nick" Kramer of Plainview, George D. McNeill of Crosbyton and Joe Price of Lubbock. Moody also paid tribute to the adult leaders in the audience. He recognized Lubbock School Superintendent Ed Irons for his help in the scouting roundup.

Moody then introduced those who had become Eagle Scouts during the past year and three Distinguished Eagles, council members who received their Eagle award over 25 years ago and have continued their distinguished service to their community, as honored guests at the banquet.

Cub Scout Matt Smith, 8, of Lamesa, was presented an honor award for saving the life of a three-year-old girl last July 23. The award was presented by Joe Murfee, council commissioner. Murfee said Smith pulled the drowning youth to the side of the pool where she received additional aid.

Roy McClung, council president, told the group the banquet was kicking off the scouts development fund program in which the scouts hope to raise $523,500 for the upgrading of buildings and facilities at Camp Post, Camp Haynes and Camp Tres Ritos.

Development Fund Program chairman and mayor-pro-tem, Alan Henry asked the audience to support the program and to help solicit funds for the proposed upgrading.

Henry said South Plains Scouting has grown 8.3 percent in the last year in youth membership and that year round camp use has increased 14.1 percent. Long term camp attendance is up 8.7 percent, he added.

He said the development program is necessary because of the growth of scouting on the South Plains. Two hundred and fifty scouting units make up the 20 county area on the South Plains with more than 6,000 youth in Cubs, Scouts or Explorers.

Tech president Lauro Cavazos is chairman of the city of Lubbock portion of the fund raiser, Henry said.

Hillcourt, in his address to the crowd, discussed the founding of the Boy Scouts and his commitment to the organization.

He said scouting has had its ups and downs and that to remain "up" scouting must be different in order to attract youth.

"Scouting activities must be the best entertainment in town," Hillcourt said. "This way the youth will go in the right direction."

Hillcourt said that in his edition of the "Official Boy Scout Handbook" he stresses "forward to the fundamentals rather than back to basics." Fundamentals, he said, are outdoor games, patrols with adults and scoutmasters and the scout oath and law.

He added that the hardest part of rewriting the handbook was describing what scouting is all about. He said that if scouting was described incorrectly, it would turn the youth away from the organization.

Hillcourt, who suffers from "jamboritis", ended the evening by inviting all the scouts to the national and world jamborees. He said that scouting has brought a new meaning to the word jamboree.

Three Youths Arrested In School Fire Probe

TYLER (AP) — Fire investigators arrested three teen-agers Sunday in connection with a multi-million dollar fire that destroyed 90 percent of John Tyler High School.

One of those in custody was identified as former John Tyler student Arthur Gene White, 17, charged with first-degree arson. Justice of the Peace Ray Day set bond at $50,000 and White remained in the Smith County Jail after surrendering at the Tyler Central Fire Station late Sunday afternoon.

A second teen-ager in custody was said to be another former student at the school, but charges were still being prepared in his case late Sunday.

The third teen-ager was a 15-year-old whose name was not released. He was being held on juvenile delinquency charges.

Fire Chief Gerry Weaver said White was one of two students suspended by the school board after a Dec. 12 incident in which an assistant principal at the high school was attacked and beaten in the school parking lot.

Weaver said the arrests came after a man who lives near the school said he saw three young boys lying on the ground watching the Saturday morning fire, and said he overheard one of them say to the others, "Ain't that pretty?"

The 15-year-old was arrested shortly after noon Saturday and the 17-year-old surrendered about 5 p.m., Weaver said. The third boy was taken into custody shortly before 7 p.m., he said.

While the investigative work was under way, the Tyler school board met in emergency session and, after 1½ hours' debate, voted that the 2,300 displaced John Tyler students would begin attending Robert E. Lee High School on a split-class basis.

Lee's 2,400 students would attend class from 7 a.m. until noon, and the Tyler students would go from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., beginning Wednesday.

Ex-Teacher Of African Tribes Sets African Dinner At Reese

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Armed only with a smattering of Swahili picked up from servants in the United States International University in Nairobi, Kenya, Patricia Blakney went to teach in the huts of nomadic African tribes to learn as much as she taught.

She slept on a mat, a skin or grass on dirt floors. She climbed famous mountains, saw famous landmarks and experienced the homelife of her pupils.

"It made me a whole person, gave me a sense of origin," Air Force 2nd Lt. Blakney said. "But, I didn't want to stay there. It's not my home, my conditioning is American."

Wednesday, the St. Louis native will serve African foods she learned to prepare on primitive stoves to those observing Black Heritage Week at Reese Air Force Base.

She will be wrapped in the one-piece dress of the Kikuyu, Kisii or Masai woman. Her goehlii (head scarf) will be knotted in front after the manner of young women "to show they are ready for marriage" instead of in back like the old women.

Main dish will be sukuma-weke, consisting of vegetables mixed with meat and eaten with a scoop fashioned of ugali, a doughy substance steamed instead of baked like other bread.

There will be mataka made of green bananas and a cinnamon tea cooked in milk and called chai.

The food, Lt. Blakney explained, is not that of the Nairobi city dwellers. It is the food of the country tribes who still live in the old ways, who never converted to the British influence.

"They can live on bread, water and beans and not have heart failure or cancer."

The other segment of Kenya society is "very intellectual on an equal" with anyone because of British schools. It has the same worries and the same crime problem as American cities.

She was teaching in the university school, which begins with elementary classes, when she applied for service with the Nairobi Teachers Service Commission.

Homes in which she lived were huts made of grass, mud or wood or combination of all.

"It took three geikos to cook a meal — one to boil the water, one to cook meat and one to cook the rest. And, it took three hours."

There were no matches, Lt. Blakney explained. Tribes carried stones with fire made by one particular Masai warrior who struck fire from stones into grass and blew on it in the ancient manner.

While the rest of the camp slept, the men fished.

"They straddled logs and waded out into the river, dropped their nets and stayed there all night. They came in next morning, cooked some fish and sold some. Then they went to sleep about 10 o'clock that morning."

In cities, Africans behaved much as city dwellers everywhere with jobs and entertainment, but in the country, Lt. Blakney observed, they sat around the fire and sometimes danced in traditional manner around the fire.

They went to bed early, however, because there was water to haul, in back containers with a head strap, from the nearest source and wood to be gathered early. Women did these chores while the men, who had fished all night, slept.

Africa, where Lt. Blakney taught in 1973-75, was beautiful, a wonderful place to visit and to remember as part of her heritage.

But, the native dress is a little unhandy, the food something for special heritage sessions because the lieutenant's own roots are, admittedly, deep in the America where she was born. She wouldn't have it any other way.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are some people who say there are no surprises left in the world anymore. They say that everything has become predictable.

We can accurately predict the sex of an unborn baby.

We can tell when our appliances will go just by checking the date on the warranty.

And if a woman serves braised parakeet lips over wild rice for dinner, it's a certainty her husband had it for lunch.

Well, adventurers, take heart. There are a few things that will continue to be a mystery no matter how much technology dominates our lives. Some things will never be predictable in our times.

Take the cost of your prescription. I can never anticipate how sick I am until the druggist tells me the cost of my medicine. I can be standing there feverish, nauseated, aching and afraid to start a long novel, when he announces, "That'll be $12.17." $12.17! I've paid more for a suntan!

At other times, I've been the picture of confidence as I stand at the counter with loose change in my hand and a simple stitch in my side. The druggist presses a small vial in my palm no bigger than a thimble and announces, "$47.53." I haven't seen that much cash since the garage sale.

And speaking of garages, what about the one where you take your car to be fixed? Don't tell me the world doesn't hold some shockers. The garage I go to is a shrine. It marks the birthplace of the post-dated check. More chest pains have been recorded at a service department of car repairs than at any other single place of business. No matter what estimate has been given, there is always a charge that was not foreseen. I have heard there was a person whose car had to be pushed into a garage only to discover the problem was a 15 cent hose, but I never knew him personally.

The American people are not naive, nor are they without appreciation that services cannot carry a standard price tag, but I watched a young girl recently in the vet's office who had come to claim her puppy. First she had her billfold out and as they tallied up the charges, she got out her checkbook. As they continued adding up the tab, she graduated to her charge card revolving account.

I wouldn't be surprised if that dog had to live to be 137 before he was paid off.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH:

Dilation Results Excellent For Some Throat Troubles

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: For the past few months I have been having trouble swallowing. X-rays show I have a restricted esophagus. My doctor suggests having my esophagus dilated. He says this should give relief. Would the relief be for a short period and would dilation have to be repeated? What sort of procedure is involved? Should I live with it? — A.B.

There are many causes for a restricted (narrowed) esophagus, and dilation therapy is the treatment for many of them.

The esophagus, as you know, is the muscular swallowing tube through which food gets to the stomach. Its muscular wave action propels food downward to the stomach when we eat. A restriction of the esophagus means that some part of it, usually the lowermost part, is narrowed. Scar tissue from an inflammation (as from chronic splashing of irritating stomach juices upward into the esophagus) can cause the restriction. Accidental exposure to lye or other damaging substances causes the same scarring.

There is a specific illness, called achalasia, which interrupts muscular control of the esophagus. Its muscles cramp much the same as a muscle elsewhere in the body might. Again, the esophagus narrows. These are but a few examples.

Dilation is helpful in many of these conditions. There are different ways to do this. In one, the patient swallows a tiny, deflated balloon that is attached to a narrow tube. When the balloon reaches the narrowed portion of the esophagus it is inflated gently, enlarging that area. Doctors have other tubes with weighted ends. They do the same thing.

In many conditions where the esophagus is restricted the results of dilation are excellent. Some patients may need follow-up dilations, depending upon the results of the first attempt. You might be able to live with your problem, but, as you can see, you probably don't have to.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please, doctor, what causes fluid around the heart? Would it be easy to detect in a test? I am disturbed by these questions. — S.Z.

Fluid around the heart is pericardial effusion. The heart fits into the pericardium the way a fist might fit into a small cellophane bag. This covering protects the heart. But the narrow space between the heart and the pericardium can fill with fluid (become effused) from a number of causes. Infection can cause it; so can rheumatoid arthritis, too little thyroid hormone or severe anemia. The precise way the fluid builds up cannot always be learned.

A pericardial effusion can be easily detected by the doctor as he listens to the heart sounds with his stethoscope or when he feels the heart with his hands. With a fluid wall around the heart, it is difficult to hear the sounds emanating from it. This often provides a good clue to pericardial effusion.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I wanted to write to you to thank you and L.O.C. for her letter and your answer linking headaches to a leaky furnace. You may have saved my life and that of my young daughter. We had both been having headaches off and on all day for a week, and I just assumed we had a flu bug. Then I read your article about carbon monoxide gas. I called the gas company first thing this morning and sure enough, we have a furnace problem. The men shut down the furnace immediately and told me to call in a repairman. Thank you from the bottom of my heart! — S.F.

Yes, and I should add here that the colorless, odorless carbon monoxide gas (the product of combustion) is the culprit. The uncombusted natural gas, on the other hand, has a distinctive odor added to it to alert homeowners of its escape.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I've never heard of my symptom. I'm 70 and well enough, for a senior citizen. I have plenty to keep me occupied, so I'm not bored. However, I hum almost constantly — just a tuneless little hum. I hum while I work, shop, watch TV, read, and when I brush my teeth. Half the time I am not aware of it until someone calls it to my attention. What do you think of this? Am I losing my grip — Y.M.

No. I don't think your humming indicates you're losing your grip on things. I have even heard of prominent surgeons who hum while they work.

Headaches — you can beat them! Write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

National Maid Of Cotton Visits

By ANN EVANS
Family News Staff

Modeling designer clothing ... traveling around the country and to the Far East ... being photographed for magazines ... appearing on talk shows...

Sounds like a dream come true, doesn't it? For Karie Ross, the 1981 Maid of Cotton, it is fun and glamorous, but also hard work.

Karie, who spent four days in Lubbock representing the American Cotton Industry, visited several cotton gins and factories during her stay in Lubbock.

During an all-day photo session in Memphis, Karie found out that modeling is not just standing around with a smile on your face. "I was tired at the end of the day!" she said. "Those models really have to work hard!"

While in Lubbock, she learned all phases of the cotton industry, including cotton irrigation and planting.

But when she speaks to those already knowledgable about the cotton industry, what does she talk about?

"Usually here in the cotton belt they ask about the program — where I've traveled, who I'll be talking to, and so forth. The key issues and concerns about the industry will be discussed more after my overseas trip."

Karie, who is from Clinton, Okla., said her father does not grow cotton, "but it grows around Clinton." She had no association with cotton before she was named Maid of Cotton, but said she finds the benefits and experience intriguing.

A senior at the University of Oklahoma, Karie took a semester off from school to travel for seven months to represent the cotton industry. She is a news communication major who has had experience in print media and media information.

"Recently I became interested in broadcasting," she said. "Right now I'm on the other side; I've always been the one to do the interviewing, but now I have to answer questions instead of ask them. It's fun, though."

In March, Karie will visit China in a trip sponsored by the Cotton Council International. She also will see many Far East countries including Korea, India, Thailand.

"The nicest thing about touring is that I don't see the usual tourist places. I get to learn about the cultures and the towns," she said.

Karie's wardrobe is very limited. "Used to, the Maid of Cotton took 25 suitcases with her and had to have two cabs to carry everything," she said. "Now we are limited to three suitcases. I've learned to pack efficiently and be organized."

Her main problem in traveling is getting enough rest. "Sometimes I cut short my enthusiasm by being tired, and that's bad on my part. But no one is physically capable of being enthusiastic 24 hours a day, although I feel I need to be."

Although she has just begun her tour, Karie feels she has learned a lot about life and people.

"Friends have said they could tell a difference in me. They say I am more mature and not as scatterbrained!" she said laughing. "But I think I just appreciate the simple things in life more."

Card Carriers Questioned

WASHINGTON (Special) — Here is today's quiz about those plastic cards that most people carry around in their wallets.

1. You lost your credit card, or it was stolen. How much money would you be responsible for if someone else used the card?

2. You lose your automatic bank card (you know, the one that works the bank's magic money machine), or it is stolen. How much money would you be responsible for if someone else used the card?

Here are the answers:

1. Your liability is limited to $50 for each missing credit card.

2. There's a difference for automatic bank cards. If you notify the bank within two work days that the card is missing, your liability is $50. But if you don't notify the bank until more than two days have passed, you could be liable for up to $500.

To learn more about electronic transfer of your funds from banks (such as with the bank cards), send for a copy of the new Federal Reserve Board booklet, Alice in Debitland. It's free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 605J, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The two-day rule also applies to other electronic transfer systems. One system involves using a card that looks like a charge card. But instead of getting a bill when you buy something, the computer transfers the money directly from your account to the merchant's.

The rules usually apply to direct transfer of funds from your checking or savings account to pay bills, whether the money is sent automatically or you have to authorize the transfer over the phone.

If you have any of these accounts, the bank has given you a secret code number, usually on a separate piece of paper. Don't keep the card and the code in the same place. Then if someone does take the card, they will not be able to use it.

So that you can notify the bank quickly if you should lose the card, make sure you have the telephone number handy for reporting the theft. Keep a list of the card numbers so you can give those to the bank when you call. And make sure you read your monthly statement as soon as it comes. That way, you can protect yourself from loss because of theft or error.

Tech Students Model Oriental Fashions

By ANN EVANS
Family News Staff

Just by comparing ancient and modern fashions, quite a bit can be learned about cultures. When the Chinese celebrated their new year last week, a fashion show featuring ancient and modern clothing was given.

History and legend are intermingled with the ancient clothes, which were obtained from the Coordination Council for North American Affairs in Houston.

Jennifer Carro, coordinator of the fashion show, said the ancient outfits are from different dynasties, and are therefore from different times in China's history. The oldest costume, an everyday dress originating from Shi, also has a legend behind it. Shi Shih was known as the most beautiful girl in China, and was said to have been discovered while washing clothes at the river. She was taken to the palace where she was admired for her beauty.

The emperor's robe from the Han dynasty also was modeled. Charles King, who posed as the emperor, supposedly has classic emperor-like features. According to Jennifer, the emperor during that dynasty should not have high cheekbones, and his face should have a becoming shape. "He could not have a big belly either," she said. A slender, healthy body was preferred for an emperor.

Some of the modern clothing in the fashion show was a modification of the ancient dress. Other clothing was of modern styles suitable for working and shopping. These styles, which are usually silk or a silk blend, feature many side slits, piping and braided buttons. Embroidery also is used generously, either hand-sewn or painted.

The fashion show took place during the celebration of the Chinese new year. 1981 is called the "Year of the Rooster", because the Chinese call a year by its animal name.

All the models in the show are Chinese or Taiwan students attending Texas Tech University. Jennifer Carro, coordinator of the fashion show, is a fashion design major at Texas Tech. She said she would like to do more Chinese fashion shows if possible.

NO, IT'S NOT EMBROIDERY — It's hand-painted. Deep green all-cotton dress has collar modification from typical Chinese gowns. Red piping is used for accent, and tie belt is traditional. Peyshuh Lee models. (Staff photos by Bob Sigmon)

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ4 ♡75 ◇92 ♣AKQ982
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—The temptation to bid three no trump is great, but you could be wide open in one of the red suits. The winning action is to tell partner about your spade stopper and leave it up to him to go on to three no trump if he has the red suits stopped. Bid three spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K8 ♡AJ75 ◇KQ76 ♣AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	3 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—While you might be able to make three no trump, that is by no means certain now that you know the defenders will get off to their most effective lead. However, a double of three spades should net your side at least 200 points, and perhaps more if East has been a bit indiscreet or if the key cards are badly placed for him.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ76 ♡AKQ3 ◇93 ♣872
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—A very awkward hand. Even though partner has taken a mere preference and probably has only three-card support for spades, you must make a move. After all, you have 15 high card points and partner has shown 10 or more. Our vote—a close decision—is to raise to three spades. The other bid worth considering is two no trump, but if no trump is the right contract, partner should declare it to protect his club holding from a potentially fatal lead through.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠93 ♡AQJ54 ◇K72 ♣K65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What is your rebid?
A.—Despite your fine suit, don't rebid two hearts—that action normally shows a six-card suit. You have a minimum balanced hand, with stoppers in the unbid suits, which can be accurately described by rebidding one no trump.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ10974 ♡5 ◇K87 ♣J92
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—When partner "reversed" into hearts on the second round, he announced a hand worth about 18 points. His subsequent action showed virtually no support for spades—he might even have a singleton! Nevertheless, we recommend a leap to four spades. You have the values for game, and your suit should play for no more than two losers opposite any holding partner may have. However, your spades could prove virtually worthless at a no trump contract.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ9 ♡A9865 ◇K7 ♣A73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Slam prospects flared when partner opened the bidding, which encouraged you to make two forward-going moves by overcalling at the two-level and cue-bidding the club ace en route to four spades. Partner, however, has shown a distinct lack of enthusiasm so you must be content with four spades for the moment. If partner has been taking it easy, awaiting to see whether you have a fit or not, and now bids again, don't settle for anything less than a small slam.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "I see that your son Jim, playing with Dr. John Fisher of Dallas, finished a very close second to Hans Kreyns and Bob Slavenborg of the Netherlands in the 1966 Olympiad."

Oswald: "It was very close. A mere eight match points after 280 boards. There was a lot of luck involved. Both pairs had their full share, but Jim gives this hand to show how a brilliant bidding decision by Slavenborg gave the Dutch pair 33 out of a possible 34 match points on a key hand in the finals."

Alan: "That was skill. The luck came when the Dutch held the North-South cards so they could use their skill."

Oswald: "West opened a trump against the three-club contract. East took his ace and led a trump back to dummy's king. Kreyns discarded a diamond on the ace of hearts, ruffed back to his hand, drew West's last trump and played spades. He still had to lose four spade tricks for down one since he ran out of trumps before getting to clear the suit."

Alan: "What a brilliant pass. I can see other North-South pairs landing in game or maybe slam and going down for telephone numbers."

ANN LANDERS:

'Hopefully Desperate' Needs Help With Worthless Freeloader

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time I have read your advice, "Throw the bum out." Usually it applies to a husband who is no good. What about kids?

I have tried to evict our 22-year-old son, without success. He denies himself nothing and is in debt up to his eyebrows. This kid pays no room and board, contributes nothing by way of work around the house and his room is a filthy mess. He steals from his father and me and his brothers and writes rubber checks.

The police say they cannot throw a son out of his legal residence. Bell of Canada says there is no way to prevent him from placing long-distance calls on our phone. All I can do is refuse to accept his collect calls. But he doesn't call collect. He is HERE.

It seems the only way to rid an otherwise normal family of this sponge and force him to accept responsibility for himself is to move away and lock him out of the house. This is not possible for a number of reasons.

Please consult your experts and find out if there is a solution to this problem or must we continue to accept the financial and emotional drain? — Hopefully Desperate In Kitchener, Ont.

Dear Kitch: Under the U.S. law, parents have no obligation to support a child who has reached his majority if that child is in good mental and physical health. A parent, indeed, can ask a child to move out of the family home. If the child refuses, the parents can initiate a civil or criminal suit for trespassing.

I just telephoned someone eminently qualified in Canadian law and was told, "The same applies here. The parents can and should evict the son." So — instead of being held hostage and throwing in the sponge — my advice is hire a lawyer and throw the sponge OUT.

Dear Readers: Let's make it a Canadian day across the board. Here's one from Calgary, Alberta.

Dear Ann Landers: We are five women who work in a mail-order office in Canada. We receive thousands of orders from the USA every month. Many of these people do not receive their merchandise. Naturally, they are disappointed, but the problem is due to carelessness, ignorance or both. Will you please print the following information?

(1) Do not send U.S. stamps or stamped envelopes to Canada. They are of no value to us.

(2) Cash should be folded and placed in a separate piece of paper. Do not put loose change in an envelope. It tears out the ends.

(3) If you decide to use tape across the coins, one piece is sufficient. Coins that are encased in tape take forever to pry loose.

(4) Print your name and address clearly in large block letters. Use a pen or a soft lead pencil, please.

(5) Do not abbreviate the name of your city or state. We are not as well acquainted, as you with "Phil., Pa.," "Balt., Md." or "Wash., D.C."

If you follow these rules faithfully, our job will be a lot easier and you will receive your merchandise without unnecessary delay. Thank you. — Calgary

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Heart-Shaped 'Love You' Cake Delightful Any Time Of Year

HELLO LUVS:

Isn't it sad to think Valentine's Day is past — and we've got to wait a whole year for it to come 'round again — or do we?

Darned if we do. Just any old day of the year is a good day to let someone special know you care. So here's my everlovin' idea: When you're counting your lucky stars because you have a special someone or when there's occasion to celebrate, like a birthday, anniversary, or promotion, bake your sweetie a heart-shaped Love-You Cake.

No need to buy special pans to get that heart shape, either. If you have a round pan and a square pan, you're in business.

Mix your cake and pour half the batter into the prepared round pan and the other half into the square pan. Bake as usual.

After you've removed the layers from the pans and cooled them, place the square cake in a diamond position instead of a square position on a tray. (You'll need a larger tray or serving plate than normal — a foil-covered piece of cardboard cut to size works fine.)

Cut the round layer in half and place the cut sides of each half next to the two top sides of the "diamond." There's your heart!

Tint the icing pink. Frost the entire cake, filling in and building up the adjoining pieces to make a smooth layer.

Decorate with candy hearts, cinnamon bits, or whatever your imagination suggests. You can even write a special little "message," if your heart desires. Just be sure to serve it up with plenty of love — as much as I have for you. Hugs, Heloise

FRIDGE STORAGE

DEAR HELOISE:

I never seem to have enough room in my refrigerator, especially when having company.

To utilize less space for more food, I use my cake cooling racks for a double-decker effect.

This works well for gelatin salads and casseroles that have been prepared ahead of time. — Ruth H. Bone

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

I read all your hints and bless you each day. Sometimes I see a hint I have used for years and I guess I think everyone has used it too.

Then I realize sharing with each other is what it's all about. — Mrs. Leah Ferrando

So right you are and may God bless you, too. — Heloise

LOST AND FOUND

DEAR HELOISE:

Take two address labels, dampen them, and attach them to a rib of your umbrella, glue side to glue side, with the rib between.

I've retrieved a lost umbrella by having my name and address on it. — Betty Day

PROTECT THE CHANDELIER

DEAR HELOISE:

To avoid damage or having paint drip on it when painting a room containing an expensive or ornate chandelier, cover the whole thing with a large plastic garbage bag, securing it tightly with a tie.

You'll be glad you did when it comes to clean-up time. — Mrs. R.A. Picone

TRAVEL TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Ever stand in a crowded airport and watch the caravan of suitcases parade down the baggage conveyor belt, only to discover that there are several the same size and color as yours, if not exactly like it?

My husband came to my rescue. He put an inch-wide strip of brightly colored plastic tape across each piece of my luggage.

Now, when the luggage, which is blue, comes down the revolving baggage ramp with the wide strip of orange and silver tape, I can spot it easily. — Omaha

JETT LAG? — Joan Jett & The Blackhearts made their second appearance at Rox in the space of three months Saturday night, earning an enthusiastic response from a crowd of 350. However, the A-J reviewer did not leave harboring the same favorable impressions. Joan Jett recorded an album last year with different musicians and released it on her own Blackheart label, and the success of the LP saw her recently signed by Boardwalk Records in Los Angeles, which re-released the same album under the new title "Bad Reputation." The cut "You Don't Own Me" was released as the single last Tuesday. (Staff Photos by Milton Adams)

Joan Jett Show Less Than Total Disaster

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Rox celebrated Valentines Day Saturday by bringing in Joan Jett, who recently signed a record deal with Boardwalk Records, for a return appearance at the club, her first as a headliner. However, Miss Jett didn't take the stage at Rox until well after midnight Saturday night, after Valentines Day had become a thing of the past, wholly appropriate because her band of Blackhearts certainly weren't offering any sweetheart deals.

Oddly enough, though her band's performance was incredibly sloppy Saturday, the group earned a much more enthusiastic response than was rewarded it on its last visit.

Of course, you have to remember that the appearance by Joan Jett & The Blackhearts last November was hampered by (1) an ice storm raging outside and (2) the fact the weather kept the night's headliner, Iggy Pop, from making it into town. The crowd was dead, and the band worked extremely hard in a futile effort to revive it. The best thing about the November show was Miss Jett's refusal to adhere to trends or grow up, her energetic dedication to '60s rock and roll.

A-J CLUB REVIEW

Now, all of a sudden she has a record deal and her band has become showy to pretentious lengths.

Saturday's short set — the show lasted about an hour, even with the encore — was the culmination of what the club had billed as an evening of new wave music. Odessa band Research was the lead-in, and was so ridiculously (and purposely?) bad as to actually be booed off stage. ("We've never ever had a band booed off stage before," manager Carlo Campanelli said at the time. "Not even The Cramps got booed off stage.")

No doubt after Research's performance, the "punks" in the audience would have cheered anyone. At least, I can't help but feel that this comparative stature is what inspired the enthusiastic response to The Blackhearts. It sure couldn't have been the music.

As expected, the band opened with "Bad Reputation," a theme song of sorts which opens Miss Jett's underrated LP of the same name. But from the beginning, it became obvious that changes had been made. Her young band had adopted punk postures (though not punk music), and for some inexplicable reason lead guitarist Eric Ambel's instrument was granted much too much volume. The power of a Joan Jett performance, after all, is watching and listening to her spit out rebellious lyrics, airing and strutting her defiance simultaneously.

She is more a shouter than a singer, depending on gutsy power more than finesse. Even so, Ambel's guitar all but slit her vocal cords on stage, drowning out her lyrics from start to finish, diluting her efforts. It was made even worse by the fact that both Ambel and bassist Gary Ryan showed little talent all night long. In November, they played '60s rock and roll; Saturday saw them regress a few centuries and whip out neanderthal rock, the sort thatmakes it difficult for a listener to distinguish one chord from the other two being played.

This is not to say the evening was a total disaster. At the risk of sounding wishy-washy, it should be noted that, even if the music did not succeed, there pervaded an aura of true potential. Her performance of Gary Glitter's "Do You Wanna Touch Me" brought back memories of, but did not re-create, the fun of her previous performance. Her rendition of "You Don't Own Me," announced as the single off her LP, showed nothing on stage, but the more solid recorded version (on which Steve Jones laid down both guitar and bass tracks) wherein Miss Jett adopted an atypical sweet tone could very well earn airplay.

She still likes the teenaged issues: sex and good times. And unfortunately, she still insists on playing a rotten song called "Teenaged Sex Machine," complete with sloppy leads and lyrics like, "Teenaged sex machine/I want you in my jeans." Anything for a rhyme, don't you know?

The set ended with The Isley Brothers' "Shout," the paying customers once again coming to life as visions of "National Lampoon's Animal House" danced in their heads. But even this song was mangled, with no one — not even her Blackhearts — following Joan Jett's instructions as to when to get softer and louder. Sadly, or perhaps fortunately for the band, it was one of those nights when it just didn't matter. The cheers seemed preordained.

Canadian Break Talks Continue

OTTAWA (AP) — It is not yet as noisy as the American Revolution, but Canada's effort to break an archaic colonial link to London is setting off its own fireworks — with leaks of secret cables, hints of trans-Atlantic wiretapping, and charges that diplomats are working as "agents provocateurs."

The entire episode has become a field day for constitutional lawyers and a nightmare for the diplomatic corps. It was supposed to have been an amicable constitutional change, but instead it has proved embarrassing and troubling for two prime ministers, Canada's Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Britain's Margaret Thatcher.

What Trudeau wants to do is bring home the Canadian constitution, a document that now sits in a vault in London. It is officially named the British North America Act of 1867, which established the Canadian confederation. As an act of Her Majesty's Parliament, it remains under British control, and every time Canada needed an amendment British lawmakers had to adopt it.

Trudeau wants the Canadian Parliament to end this humiliating anachronism by petitioning London to surrender control. But first the British will be asked to add a few final amendments, including a bill of rights and provisions for making future amendments in Canada.

The Canadian leader wants the British to do this because he and the governments of Canada's provinces cannot agree on taking these steps themselves once the constitution is back in Canada. Most of the 10 provinces object to the bill of rights and amending formula, arguing they diminish provincial powers.

Six provincial governments, outraged that Trudeau sidestepped them and went straight to London, appealed to Canadian judges and buttonholed British lawmakers to plead their case. Other "special interests," from Canadian Indians to women's groups, also jumped into the constitutional fray, seeking new protection in the revised document.

The Thatcher government, grappling with a stubborn recession and other problems of its own, suddenly was in the middle of a Canadian tug-of-war.

Ever since meeting with Mrs. Thatcher last June, Trudeau has insisted she is prepared to push his constitutional package through the British Parliament. But on Feb. 4, it was disclosed that a top Thatcher lieutenant, Sir Francis Pym, told Canadian officials at an Ottawa meeting late last year that the package faced "appalling difficulties" in the British Parliament.

Pym's remarks were reported in secret minutes of the meeting leaked to the Canadian press.

The British, it developed, were balking because of the increasingly vocal Canadian opposition to the constitutional proposals. Pym complained that it was only in October, four months after Trudeau's initial approach, that Thatcher learned of the bill of rights proposals and other complications.

But Trudeau, who reports say may have been told of the British uneasiness as early as November, continued to assert that Mrs. Thatcher would not let him down.

Then the next bombshell burst. Two members of the Canadian Parliament alleged that at a social gathering the British ambassador in Ottawa, Sir John Ford, tried to influence their votes on the constitutional issue.

Ford retorted that he had merely advised the pair, both members of the minor party New Democrats, that the package as it stood faced "considerable opposition" in the British Parliament.

But Ed Broadbent, the New Democrats' parliamentary leader, claimed Ford had advised the legislators to vote against the package.

Britain Now In Middle Of Canadian Tug-Of-War

The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. reported it had obtained secret diplomatic cables in which Mrs. Wadds expressed the fear that Canadian telephone conversations were being tapped by the British.

"We must take it for granted that phone conversations of this sort are all monitored and taped by suitably equipped countries, including certainly Britain, France, the U.S.A., and the Soviet Union," she reportedly said in a cable to the Canadian Foreign Office.

"Why give Britain notice of our strategy, concerns or judgments of some of its key players? Why give others ... opportunity for mischief?"

The British described as "nonsense" the suggestion they were tapping Canadian constitutional conversations, and Trudeau said he knew of no wiretaps. But the incident further heightened trans-Atlantic tensions in what was supposed to have been a dull and inoffensive parliamentary sideshow.

One key Briton described the wiretap "twaddle" as some kind of Canadian plot.

"The Canadian government is trying to stir up sentiment by beating the anti-colonialist drum," said Sir Anthony Kershaw, head of a British House of Commons committee that considered the Canadian constitutional issue.

It is true that some of Trudeau's statements have taken on an "anti-colonialist" tone.

The Canadian prime minister said two weeks ago it would be wrong for Britain to "refuse to give complete and final independence to one of its former colonies" and he suggested the Canadian people would react strongly.

One curious fact: even if the constitution is "sent home," Canada will continue to pledge allegiance to the queen as head of state. The "revolution" in Canada, oldest of England's New World possessions, has not gone that far.

Church Plays Key Roles As Moderator In Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church, its prestige enhanced by a Polish-born pope, has emerged as a key moderator between the officially atheist communist regime and the independent union movement in this nation's protracted labor and social unrest.

The church, which claims the allegiance of 80 to 90 percent of Poland's 35.5 million people, played a key role in settling a general strike last week in the southern city of Bielsko-Biala, working out a deal in which several unpopular local officials were fired.

Leading clerics also have been urging leaders of Solidarity, Poland's largest independent union with a membership of some 10 million, to restrain their demands for changes in Polish society.

Emphasizing the need for government-church cooperation, Poland's new premier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, promised religious leaders an even greater role in Polish society.

While the church seeks to moderate the demands of restive workers — apparently in an effort to head off the possibility of Soviet military intervention — it also exerted a powerful influence for change from the very inception of Poland's labor rebellion last summer.

As nationwide strikes last August trumpeted workers' demands for social reforms, lower food prices and union representation independent of Communist Party controls, churchmen joined the workers on the barricades.

Priests administered Holy Communion to strikers at the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk, flashpoint of the labor rebellion, and Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski publicly embraced strike leader Lech Walesa soon after the Aug. 31 settlement ended the strike wave.

Walesa, a former electrician who now heads Solidarity, was warmly welcomed at the Vatican in mid-January by Pope John Paul II, who said he had closely monitored developments in his homeland. The pope reportedly said he would fly directly to Warsaw if the Soviets intervened in Poland's problems.

Walesa, a devout Catholic who attends mass daily, has repeatedly stated that his principal advisers include the church hierarchy under Wyszynski and Catholic lay intellectuals led by former parliamentary deputy Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

Western observers familiar with Polish society credit the church for playing a shrewd political game in its support for the labor movement.

The regime of Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania needs the church to restrain extremists in the labor movement and help restore order.

Playing the role of mediator gives the church greater leverage with the government in pressing demands for such concessions as additional seminaries, faster approvals for new church buildings, draft exemptions for religious students and wider circulation for religious publications.

At the same time, the workers' rebellion won a major government concession for the church — direct access to the state run media. Last September the state radio began the first of its promised weekly broadcasts of the Sunday Mass.

Jaruzelski, in his first speech after becoming premier last week, promised that "the actions taken by the government will meet with understanding of the church, and the Christian social movement."

A church spokesman said that if Jaruzulski needs church cooperation, "I can safely assume he'll get if if things go really well.

"I think he is entitled to our credibility. He sounded like a man who wants to put some order in this country," the spokesman added.

The church, suppressed during the Stalinist era, began reasserting its influence in Poland in 1956 after the return to power of Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Gomulka, a nationalist who was often at odds with Moscow, released Wyszynski from house arrest and began a program of reconciliation with the church.

But the growing influence of the church was best reflected in the massive outpouring of public support for the pope when he made his historic visit to Poland the following May — a visit that got him a red carpet welcome from the communist regime.

Officials Think More Involved In Fire

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Convinced "we've got somebody else involved," fire officials said Sunday they don't believe all four fires set at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel can be linked to the prime suspect in the killer blaze.

Philip Bruce Cline, a 23-year-old Hilton busboy booked for investigation of murder and arson, allegedly told police he accidentally set the largest of four fires which sprang up at the east wing of the nation's largest hotel last Tuesday.

Eight people died and 198 were injured in the $10 million blaze, the second killer hotel fire to hit Las Vegas in three months.

Mike Patterson, chief arson investigator for the Clark County Fire Department, said the possibility exists that the other fires were started by someone else "who wanted to jump on the bandwagon."

"It could have been a pyromaniac or a goofball, but we have nothing to indicate that," said Bob James, another member of the arson squad.

"Whether there is a link with the suspect, we can't say at this time," James said. "We expect a few things to surface in the next couple days. We think for sure we've got somebody else involved."

Cline could not have been involved in at least one of the fires that followed the main blaze because he was giving officials a statement at the time it broke out, Patterson said.

Investigators said Cline told them a marijuana cigarette he was holding while engaging in sex with another man he identified only as "Joe" touched a drape on the eighth floor elevator lobby of the 2,783-room hotel, setting off a fire which blasted through a window and soared up the side of the 30-story buildings.

As firefighters struggled for two hours to extinguish the first blaze, three other smaller fires were started on other floors in the east wing.

On Saturday, Patterson rejected Cline's story of an accidental fire, saying flatly that "Joe doesn't exist." He said new evidence has surfaced that will "throw big holes" in Cline's story.

The 5-foot-9, 129 pound Cline, who had worked at the hotel only five days before the fire, remains in custody without bail in a special security section of the Clark County Jail. He is scheduled for arraignment Tuesday.

Cline worked at several other hotels before coming to the Hilton, including the MGM Grand, where an electrical fire last Nov. 21 killed 84 people.

Unable to locate rooms, many vacationers slept in their cars after finding most of the hotels and motels booked tight. One of the smaller motels along the Strip was asking $125 for a single room.

"If we had had 2,000 more rooms last night, we still would have been short," said Bob Lee, a reservation clerk for a firm that handles hotel overflow requests.

USDA Reports Americans Eat Contaminated Mexican Produce

HIDALGO (UPI) — A U.S. Food and Drug Administration report says unsuspecting Americans annually consume millions of tons of Mexican produce contaminated by pesticides that are either banned or unregistered in this country because of potential health hazards.

The Dallas Morning News Sunday quoted an FDA report which said an average of one in every 14 truckloads of Mexican fruit and vegetables that enter the United States through the tiny checkpoint of Hidalgo is contaminated.

During the peak Mexican produce season, nearly two-thirds of the produce consumed by Americans during the fall-winter-spring season is imported through Hidalgo and Nogales, Ariz., the report said.

Some of the banned pesticides found on the Mexican produce are suspected of causing cancer, the FDA said.

FDA employees, who say the agency is understaffed, admit they are able to test only 2 percent of the 2.75 billion pounds of Mexican produce that enters the United States each year.

Since the foodstuffs are highly perishable, truckloads of fruits and vegetables that undergo tests often are allowed to continue toward their destination as the time-consuming, pesticide-detection tests are run.

By the time the complicated tests are completed, the produce sometimes already has been delivered.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My aunt has a problem but refuses to believe me when I tell her she has it. She owns 1,100 shares of stock in a big oil company, acquired by her late husband. Before he died, about a year ago, he told her never to sell the stock, because it provides good dividend income.

My aunt is 50 and now works part time, at $80 a week, for added income she needs. The dividends on the stock amount to only 5 percent.

I told her to sell the stock and put the money in long-term savingscertificates at 13 or 14 percent. She refuses to do so. Can you help me persuade her to "see the light?"

A. If your aunt needs additional income, she should follow yourrecommendation.

The stock you named in your letter is currently trading around $44 and is now paying dividends at the annual rate of 2.60 a share. That's just shy of 6 percent.

She could get 12 percent from insured 30-month savings certificates. After paying a commission on the sale of the stock, The money she would put into certificates would increase her income by about $55 a week.

Assuming she can use that money, the move you want her to make would be a good one.

However, if she can get along without extra spending money now, there's really no reason for her to sell that stock. You ma have overlooked the fact that its dividends have increased, nicely. Only two years ago, it paid $2 a share.

Too many widows do hang on to stocks, simply because their husbands bought the stocks. That's often a mistake. Financial circumstances usually change, after a husband's death.

Q. It's bad enough that the interest on savings certificates is subject to income tax. But a more serious disadvantage is the large "interest penalty on early withdrawal," when a certificate is cashed before maturity.

I was hit with a large penalty last year. Can I take that penalty as a deduction on my income tax return?

A. Sure. List it on line 27 of your Form 1040, federal income tax return.

There's a kicker here, however, for people who would normally file a "short form" return — Form 1040-A. There is no place on Form 1040-A to list interest withdrawal penalties, or any of the six other "adjustments to income."

So, when you're entitled to any of those adjustments, you have to file a Form 1040.

Q. I wonder if it would be to my advantage to transfer the $1,000 or so I keep in my regular checking account to an "interest checking" account, paying 5 1/4 percent.

I would have to report and pay income tax on the interest. That might put me in a higher tax bracket. Might I not end up with less money, after taxes?

A. No way. Under this nation's "progressive tax schedule," the Internal Revenue Service takes a larger part of our additional taxable income each time you move into a higher bracket. But Uncle Sam never takes it all. The top tax bracket is now 70 percent.

Also, beginning in 1981, each taxpayer is allowed to "exclude" — and not pay federal income pay tax on — $200 of otherwise taxable interest and dividends. That "exclusion" becomes as much as $400 for a married couple filing a joint return.

Staying with a "regular" non-interest-paying checking account is costing you money. Make the switch to an interest-checking account, as millions of other people are doing.

Study Shows Americans Changing Eating Habits

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans say they are changing their diets because of concerns about health and nutrition, but many people remain confused about what's best for them, the Department of Agriculture says.

The department's Economics and Statistics Service conducted a study involving 37 food and beverage categories. People were asked whether they were eating more or less of each item and why.

Almost two-thirds of those questioned — 64 percent — said they had made some dietary changes in the last three years for reasons of health. In general, people said they were consuming fewer calories, using less sugar and eating less fat.

Losing weight apparently is a key goal. Sixty-one percent of the people questioned said someone in their household had tried to slim down in past year. Forty-three percent of the people who said they had changed their eating habits said they did so to cut calories.

Just over half of the people studied said they wanted to reduce the amount of sugar they consumed, and 91 percent agreed with the statement: "Just about everyone should eat less sugar and sweeteners." At the same time, however, 70 percent of those questioned said they ate cake, pie or other sweet baked goods at least once a week.

A similar type of contradiction was apparent when it came to salt. Nearly nine people in 10 said they agreed that the more salt you eat, the greater the risk of high blood pressure. "In general," the study said, "Americans consume far more sodium than needed." But when people were asked about their own diets, 46 percent of those questioned — almost half the total — said they did not think changing their current eating habits regarding salt would improve their health.

The study showed some confusion and skepticism over the severity of risks from poor eating habits and over the effect of changes in diet. The survey respondents were asked what they would do in two hypothetical situations — first, if scientific tests found that an essential ingredient in a food they ate regularly caused cancer in laboratory animals, and second, if they were told that foods they ate regularly could increase their chances of having a heart attack. In both cases, only about one-third of those questioned said they would stop eating the food or foods in questions.

Ignorance may be partly responsible for the difference between what people say is good for them and what they actually do. "Lack of know-how can be a formidable obstacle to changing food choice habits formed early in life," the study said. People must be taught how to combine good taste and nutrition.

In an effort to provide that kind of information, the USDA has put together a 30-page booklet, "Ideas for Better Eating." The publication is designed to help people follow basic dietary guidelines which were issued by the Departments of Agriculture and of Health and Human Services last year. It includes menu suggestions, explanations of what foods to avoid and recipes. The booklet costs $2.25. It is available from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C., 20402.

There are seven guidelines: Eat a variety of foods; maintain ideal weight; avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol; eat foods with adequate starch and fiber; avoid too much sugar; avoid too much sodium; and, if you drink alcohol, do so in moderation.

A study conducted for a major manufacturer, General Foods Corp., and released this week, showed that many people are unfamiliar with the guidelines. The survey, by Louis Harris and Associates, Inc., posed the question: "How familiar are you with the dietary guidelines for Americans put out by the federal government?"

Twenty-six percent said they were "not too familiar" and 47 percent said they were "not at all familiar" with the rules.

Outlook For Bighorn Sheep Looking Good

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Desert bighorn sheep have roamed the rugged San Andres Mountains of southern New Mexico since the Ice Age. But a little more than a year ago, the rare animals' future looked bleak.

The herd was being wiped out, killed off by tiny scab mites. By November 1979 a scabies epidemic had claimed two-thirds of the herd, and state game officials said many remaining sheep were so weakened by the disease they would not be able to survive the winter.

"It looks pretty good," spokesman Jess Williams said. "We've got about 37 sheep we know of up there on the mountain. We feel we've got the problems of the sheep pretty well in hand. The outlook is for a good race of bighorns in the San Andres.

"We have a man, a biologist, working full-time up there with the sheep. We're going to watch them very closely, at least for the next two to three years."

More than half the sheep now on the mountain are wearing radio collars for monitoring. When any of the animals die, "then we can find them and find out what the problem is," he said.

The problem in late 1978 was scabies, infestations of barely visible parasitic mites that made the sheep itch. Their hair was falling out and their appetites were falling off. Gradually, the animals grew weaker and more susceptible to illness and the elements.

When the scabies outbreak was first discovered that winter, the estimated population of the herd was 250. By Thanksgiving of 1979, it had dropped to between 70 and 90 because of the disease, Williams said.

"We had no lambs and the sheep were very, very heavily infected with scabies," he said. "That's when we took action to capture those. We said, 'We've got to do something to try and save them.'

The old treatment method involved dipping animals in vats of insecticide to kill the mites. That was the first method tried with the San Andres sheep, but it was difficult — first the animals had to be caught.

Using helicopters, dart guns and nets, 49 sheep were captured and airlifted out of the mountains in November 1979.

But 21 of the animals died due to stress, accidents or reactions to the drugs used to stun them, Williams said.

Two of the remaining 28 were taken to New Mexico State University for tests and the others were moved to Red Rock Wildlife Experimental Area to be treated and held until they could be returned to the San Andres.

But tragedy struck the little herd. The sheep languished and sickened in captivity, and only 12 survived until they could be returned to the mountains last month.

Williams said the deaths were unexpected.

"We really hated to see all those sheep die," Williams said. "But the alternative was that most of those sheep would have died anyway on that mountain from the scabies...

"But we developed a new system and learned an awful lot. The bottom line is that although we lost a lot of the animals, we got a giant plus with the development of this new system of treating the disease."

The "new system" involves use of a drug called Ivermectin, which dissolves into a sheep's bloodstream and poisons the mites when they feed on the animal's plasma, Williams said.

The drug can also be administered without capturing the animals. A gunner in a helicopter fires celluose bullets impregnated with Ivermectin into the sheep, where the drug dissolves. The sheep are also "hit" with a paint pellet fired from the special rifle so wildlife officials know which animals have been treated.

Williams said the disease cannot be eradicated, but with the new system "we feel it can be controlled now. That's a giant step forward."

"It's something that can be used all over the country. There are a lot of other states that have sheep and not just big horn," he added.

The system was successfully tested last spring on 19 of the unevacuated sheep that had somehow survived the scabies. These sheep, combined with the 12 returned to the mountain, make up the core of the hoped-for new herd.

A conservative estimate is that more than $125,000 has been spent to save the herd, Williams said, with the federal government paying 75 percent and the game and fish department 25 percent.

"A significant amount of the (state) money was donated by private citizens and organizations to help defray the cost of the program," he said. "We got everything from 50-cent contributions from little kids to one that I think was about $10,000."

Unique Proposal Accepted

NEW YORK (AP) — When Alvin Kalmanson proposed marriage to Kathy Flynn with the help of a Times Square neon sign, the answer was a resounding "yes."

The Valentine's Day proposal, flashed in neon at 1 Times Square Friday night, said: "Kathy, Will You Marry Me, Alvin."

"No, I am not kidding," said Kalmanson, a Los Angeles resident, who had led Ms. Flynn to the sign. "Well, what's the answer?"

Kalmanson, a lawyer who described himself as "a wild romantic," said the idea "just flashed into my head, a vision. This is something you can do only in New York."

"This is just like Alvin," said his brother. "He likes to pull off unusual things." The 30-second message cost $35.

Woman, 84, Retires From Job

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — Steelworker Minnie Kenny says she can beat Father Time but not automation. At age 84 she has retired after 53 years of sorting out imperfect pieces of steel at the Jones & Laughlin Steel plant.

"I guess I must be made of steel," said Miss Kenny, who gave up a job as a waitress in East Chicago in 1928 to work at the old Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., now Jones & Laughlin.

She said her decision to retire was prompted in part by automation taking over her job of inspecting tin plated steel for scratches, holes and other imperfections.

"I was the first girl, and the last girl, on the sorting machines," she said. "I wouldn't go now if they weren't shutting down the machine. I've worked since I was 11."

Pair To Row Across Atlantic

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Curt and Kathleen Saville leave this week for Africa aboard a Morocco-bound freighter. But their return trip promises to be a lot more fun.

They plan to come back by rowboat.

"It can withstand any storm, any conditions that the Atlantic might throw our way," Saville said.

Even though the first trans-Atlantic rowboat trip occurred in the 1890s, the Savilles will be attempting several firsts. If they complete the journey they would be the first Americans to row across the Atlantic from east to west and Mrs. Saville would be the first woman ever to row across the ocean.

"I think we are at the beginning of the golden age of exploration," Saville said.

Ex-Boxer Likes Billboards

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ex-boxer Al Flora, who likes to send billboard messages to politicians, is still in there punching.

At the height of the Watergate scandal, Flora, of suburban Arbutus, put up a billboard message to then-President Richard Nixon that read: "Down But Not Out. Keep Punching Mr. President."

When former Vice President Spiro Agnew was under investigation by federal prosecutors, Flora put up a sign that told passers-by: "Still My Kind of Man Ted Agnew Is. Keep Punching Ted."

His latest billboard epistle is addressed to President Reagan and Vice President Bush. The sign in southwest Baltimore bears both their pictures and says: "Mr. President, Mr. Vice President, America Is The Home Of The Brave And The Land Of The free. Let's Keep It That Way And Keep Punching."

Senator Gives A Hoot

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — Sen. Harrison Schmitt says a gift he delivered recently to President Reagan shows "that we in New Mexico really give a hoot."

New Mexico artist Chuck Glickas sought his Republican senator's help in giving the president Glickas' No. 1 print of a limited edition of prints depicting a New Mexico barn owl.

Nothing Residents Want Sign

NOTHING, Ariz. (AP) — People here tried nearly everything to get something for Nothing.

"How about seeing if you can help us get a highway road sign for our little town like all the other teeny-weeny towns in Arizona," read the letter to Gov. Bruce Babbitt from Arlene Kenworthy, one of the four people who bought Nothing in June 1977.

"It is seldom I receive a letter signed by all the residents of a town!" Babbitt replied. "As far as I'm concerned, nothing's too good for Nothing! Best regards to all four of you."

Mrs. Kenworthy had even less luck with state Transportation director W.A. Ordway, however, and no luck at all with the postal service.

Nonetheless, Nothing — located on U.S. 93 halfway between Phoenix and Las Vegas, Nev., with its service station-grocery-bar (there Tain't Much Bar), one house and two mobile homes — does attract something.

People leaving Vegas sometimes stop for gas but have nothing to pay for it, said Mrs. Kenworthy's brother and fellow resident Kieth — that's the way he spells his name — Wilkerson.

"That's where we got all these tools and spare tires," Wilkerson said. "They hock it for gas and 99 percent of them never come back."

'Cat' Burglar Takes Ring

NORTHVILLE, Mich. (AP) — Blame the disappearance of Ramona Murray's diamond ring on Smokey, a felonious feline who is not your typical cat burglar.

"It started going beep, beep, and we were sure Smokey had it," she said. A veterinarian then took X-rays of the cat's stomach and confirmed their suspicions. Now, she said, they are waiting for the ring to move through the cat's system.

Given the suspect's youth, and the fact that she's a first offender, an arrest warrant is unlikely, trooper Richard Percy said.

"Besides, I don't see how we could take her to court," he said. "There are no litter boxes in courtrooms."

Adage Not Totally True

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — If your valentine had warm hands Saturday, don't let the adage "cold hands, warm heart" worry you. A Duke University researcher says the saying isn't completely accurate.

Clinical tests by Dr. Patrick A. Boudewyns indicate that it's true when a man is first attracted to a member of the opposite sex, his finger temperature takes an immediate drop. After that, the finger temperature rapidly rises, he said.

"Anxiety initially causes the cold hand," Boudewyns said, "not feelings from the heart. Plus, in intimate situations, hand temperature tends to rise indicating warm hands, warm heart, which refutes the adage," he said.

"But for shy persons, the saying could hold true if anxiety causes their hands to remain cold," the researcher said.

The exception also holds for young lovers, who, because of their nervousness, might experience cold hands even in intimate situations. "The anxiety will keep the temperature level down ... they will have cold hands," Boudewyns said.

Clergyman Defends Statements

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — If he knew that the 52 Americans held in Iran were mistreated during their 444-day captivity, "I would have brought that back and said it loudly," says one of the American clergymen who visited the hostages during their imprisonment.

The Rev. Darrell Rupiper, who twice visited the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, has been criticized by some of the former hostages who said he misrepresented their plight when he returned to the United States.

Rupiper, speaking Saturday to Pax Christi, an Omaha peace group, said the reason he did not report that hostages were being mistreated was that none of the hostages he saw told him they were being tortured.

"I do not know if there was torture going on," he said. "I do know that several of the hostages with whom I visited made it a point to say that they were not tortured, and that as far as they knew the people around them were not tortured or mistreated.

"What might be the motivation? I think it would have been difficult to have the huge ticker tape parade at the return of the hostages if they did not come back, as President Carter called them, innocent national heroes," the Roman Catholic priest said.

Irwin Wins PGA Tourney

HONOLULU (AP) — Hale Irwin, displaying the dogged determination that helped him to a couple of American national championships, put on a birdie-eagle finish for a 3-under-par 69 and scored a record-setting six-stroke victory Sunday in the Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

Irwin snapped a 19-month winless string with a 265 total, a whopping 23 strokes under par on the 6,881-yard Waialae Country Club course and a tournament record.

He picked up $58,500 from the total purse of $235,000 for his 12th PGA Tour title. It was his first victory since scoring his second U.S. Open triumph in 1979.

But, while he led all the way, set a scoring record and the margin of victory may have been impressive, this one didn't come easily.

A 10-under-par 62 in Saturday's third round had staked Irwin to a five-shot lead going into the last 18 holes of play. But he made consecutive bogeys on the seventh and eighth holes and John Schroeder, the only man with any realistic hopes of overtaking him, birdied the ninth.

That cut Irwin's lead to two shots. But the gritty guy who makes a habit of winning on the tougher courses was equal to the task. No one ever got closer.

He added a little margin with a birdie on the 12th, then closed with a record-setting flourish.

Irwin hit his tee shot some four feet from the flag for a birdie-2 on the difficult 17th. That nailed down the victory and he was one shot off the tournament scoring record set by Andy Bean a year ago.

He reached the par-5 18th with his second shot and rammed in a 15-18 foot eagle putt that put him 23 shots under par.

Ben Crenshaw, Terry Diehl and Japan's leading player, Isao Aoki, were next at 272. Diehl shot a 70 in the almost-windless weather, Aoki had a 69 and Crenshaw closed up with a 67.

"I really wasn't trying to catch Irwin," said Crenshaw, who once was within two shots of the top. "You have to be realistic. He's too good a player. I was playing for second."

The group at 273 included Bean, Tom Watson, George Archer, John Mahaffey and Schroeder. Bean, Mahaffey and Archer had 67's, Watson 68 and Schroeder matched par 72.

Lee Trevino shot 68-274.

Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner this year, birdied his last three holes for a 69 that extended his string of consecutive rounds at par or better to 18. He finished at 275.

Raiders Defeat New Mexico 8-5

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It was a game of waiting Sunday between Texas Tech and New Mexico.

The two baseball teams met in the fourth and final game of a three-day series at the Tech Diamond and waited for the familiar events to unfold — the Raiders grab an early lead, pitching on both sides is shakey and may collapse and the Lobos score a run late in the game.

That had been the pattern in two of the first three games and, true to form, Sunday's game was no exception. But Tech managed to hang on for an 8-5 victory as the Lobos left seven runners stranded in the final four innings.

The win moved the series record and Tech's overall mark to 3-1 while New Mexico slipped to 1-3 in regular season competition.

The Raiders jumnped on Lobo starter Moe Camilli and releiver Bill Dunston for eight runs in the first three innings, the third time in four games Tech has run up a big lead early in the game. But, despite a strong winning performance by starter Robert Bryant, the outcome was in doubt when the Lobo bats came to life late in the game.

The left-handed Bryant, a senior from Austin, picked up his first win of the season in his initial start by scattering six hits and allowing one run in his seven-inning stint. But he had control problems, walking five Lobos, and left nine runners on the base paths while striking out six.

After he worked his way into and out of a bases-loaded, two-out delema in the sixth, he was replaced by Mark McDowell and came close to not figuring in the final decision.

The Raiders and Bryant were leading 7-1 going into the top of the sixth when signs of a New Mexico comeback began to surface. Bryant hit leadoff batter Larry Harrison in the back to start his troubles. After Mark Biren fanned, John Diggens drew a walk. Bryant then struck out pinch-hitter Mark Berardi before issuing a free pass to Ben Bregman, loading the bases. But Robert Kiro dribbled a weak check-swing hit back to the mound and Bryant threw him out to retire the side.

After a relatively easy seventh, Bryant was removed in favor of McDowell, the seventh Tech pitcher to see action in the four-game series.

"We took Bryant out because this was his first time on the mound this year. He had thrown 130 pitches and we didn't want to take a chance of hurting his arm," Tech coach Kal Segrist said of the decision to change pitchers.

"We felt like he was probably going to be able to finish the game, but we didn't want him to be sore next week and have a hard time coming back. And he had thrown more pitches than we like. We think 120 pitches is enough."

McDowell, a Houston junior who worked in only 16 innings a season ago, was in trouble from the outset. He gave up a single to leadoff man Biren before getting Diggins to fly out to center.

Biren, on second thanks to a wild pitch, moved over to third on Berardi's single and Bregman singled him home. McDowell walked pinch-hitter Robert Martinez to load the bases. Robert Gemignani singled in one run and Tommy Francis singled home two more and Matt Dean replaced McDowell.

Dean got Brunenkant to hit back to the mound and, after walking Harrison to reload the bases, induced Biren to hit a grounder to second, forcing Harrison for the final out. Dean set down the Lobos in order in the final frame to save the game.

While Bryant pitched a solid seven for Tech, Camilli, 0-1, faced tweleve batters in less than two innings before he was yanked. The Raiders got to him early, with leadoff batter Rusty Laughlin hitting his second offering into left field for a single.

A passed ball moved Laughlin to second and he reached third as Scott Nethery bounced out to second. Jeff Harp walked and stole second before leftfielder Bobby Kohler, the team's RBI leader with six, grounded to second to drive in the game's first run. Jimmy Zachry followed with a single to center, scoring Harp.

Tech finished Camilli in the second. Dee Law opened with a single, Andy Dawson hit a grounder to second baseman Harp but shortstop Francis dropped the short relay and both Law and Dawson were safe.

Laughlin's sacrifice bunt moved the runners to third and second and an intentional walk to Nethery loaded the bases. Harp's sacrifice fly to center scored Law and sent Camilli packing. Kohler picked up his second RBI of the game when he lashed a 3-1 pitch from reliever Dunston in right.

A walk to catcher Dan Hejl, a single by Law, a sacrifice bunt by Dawson and Laughlin's two-run single gave Tech an 7-1 lead in the third. Steve Roper scored the final Raider run in the seventh by singling, moving to second on an error, taking third on a walk and coming home on Dawson's fielder's choice.

Other potential Raider scoring threats were stopped by double plays in the fifth and sixth innings and an inning-ending, base-running error by Law in the seventh.

New Mexico, which stranded 12 men, had a scoring opportunity pass in the second inning, thanks to the arm of second baseman Harp. With one out and a runner on first, Bregman rifled a double over the head of Roper in right field. James Smith tried to score from first but Harp's relay of Roper's throw was perfect to Hejl and nailed a diving Smith.

NBA ROUNDUP

Silas Leads Spurs To Victory

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio's James Silas did it again Sunday, popping in an 18-foot jump shot with three seconds left to lift San Antonio to a 110-108 win over Milwaukee in a battle between NBA division leaders.

Silas, known as "Captain Late" because of his late-game heroics, had connected on another 18-footer 18 seconds before to put San Antonio ahead 108-106.

The Spurs set up the shot by Silas and after a time out Milwaukee's Sidney Moncrief was still trying to get off a shot as the final seconds ticked off.

After the score was tied three times in the first period, San Antonio led 31-25 after one quarter, 58-51 at halftime and 87-82 at the end of three periods.

George Gervin led all scorers with 33 points and Silas wound up with 16 as San Antonio upped its Midwest Division-leading record to 41-21. Johnson led Milwaukee with 22. The Bucks, leaders of the Central Division, fell to 44-17.

Lakers 107, Mavericks 99

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 16 of his 35 points in a second half surge by Los Angeles as the Lakers pulled out a 107-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Dallas Mavericks Sunday.

After Dallas tied the game at 62-all midway through the third period, Abdul Jabbar scored 16 of the Lakers' 24 points in the next nine minutes and Los Angeles moved out to an 86-76 lead. After that, Dallas couldn't cut the margin to less than five points.

Forward Jamaal Wilkes scored 23 and guard Norm Nixon added 20 for the Lakers. Guard Oliver Mack, a former Laker, led the Mavericks with 19 points. Dallas lost its 13th straight game for an 8-53 record in its first NBA season, including 2-30 in road games.

Center-forward Tom LaGarde and guard Brad Davis, a former Laker No. 1 draft choice, each had 17 for Dallas. Forward Jim Spanarkel added 12.

Dallas rallied early in the fourth quarter to trail 85-80. But when Abdul-Jabbar and Nixon reentered the game, Nixon scored on a 20-foot jumper and also stole the ball a few seconds later and was fouled while scoring a lay-in. Nixon added the free throw to put Los Angeles on top 90-80 with seven minutes remaining.

76ers 116, Hawks 98

PHILADELPHIA — Julius Erving scored 27 points as the Philadelphia 76ers held Atlanta scoreless for the last three minutes and two seconds to beat the Hawks 116-98 in an NBA game Sunday.

John Drew of Atlanta was next to Erving in scoring with 24 points and Craig Shelton contributed 19.

In the last quarter, Atlanta lost Dan Roundfield at 7:40 and Tree Rollins at 5:50 via foulouts. There were nine goal tending goals in the game, five for Philadelphia and four for Atlanta.

Philadelphia led from 6:10 of the first quarter to the end. On the fifth change of lead of the game, Caldwell Jones dropped in two free throws to put the 76ers ahead 18-16. Philadelphia finished the period ahead 33-24 with a shooting percentage of 73.7.

Twice in the second quarter, Atlanta trailed by only two points but Philadelphia finished the half ahead by 59-53.

In the third quarter, Atlanta twice challenged and narrowed the gap to within one point, at 63-62 and 67-66. Then Bobby Jones began coming on strong for Philadelphia, and was joined by Erving and Dawkins as the 76ers pulled away to 87-75 lead and ended the period ahead 87-82.

The closest Atlanta came in the fourth quarter was three points, 87-84, soon after the period began.

It was the 76ers 50th win of the season and they now lead the Atlantic Division with a 50-11 record. Atlanta is fifth in the Central Division at 21-39.

Kings 107, Supersonics 105

Birdsong's basket was preceded by a 25-foot, 3-point basket by Ford with eight seconds left to give the Kings a 105-105 tie. After Ford's bucket, Seattle called a timeout to set up what was to be the final play.

However, Ford intercepted an inbounds pass from John Johnson and heaved the ball downcourt to Birdsong for the winning score. Ford led all scorers with 23 points and Reggie King added 20 for Kansas City, which won its third straight game and sixth of eight since the All-Star Break.

Guard Paul Westphal came off the bench to score 20 for Seattle. Three others, Vinnie Johnson, Jack Sikma and James Bailey each scored 12 as the Sonics dropped to 26-34.

The Sonics trailed by as many as 21 points in the first half but fought back and led with six points with 4:30 left in the game.

Celtics 120, Nuggets 118

DENVER — Larry Bird followed his own missed shot with 56 seconds remaining Sunday afternoon and provided Boston with the winning margin as the Celtics pulled out a 120-118 NBA victory over Denver.

Bird's basket provided the only advantage that Boston had during the last half and obscured a gritty performance by a Denver team that seems destined to miss the playoffs for the second straight year.

The Nuggets surged from a 63-63 halftime tie to a six-point lead going into the final period, and the game was deadlocked five times in the last quarter before Bird's play decided it. Bird wound up with 28 points for Boston, which ended a four-game road trip with two wins and two losses. But Cedric Maxwell ended as Boston's leading scorer with 34 points, his high total of the season.

Pacers 113, Bulls 107

INDIANAPOLIS — George McGinnis scored a season-high 27 points and pulled down nine rebounds Sunday as the Indiana Pacers held off a late Chicago Bulls rally for a 113-107 NBA victory.

The Pacers, who led by as many 16 points at 89-73 with 10:58 remaining, saw their lead melt to three at 107-104 on a three-point play by Reggie Theus with 1:34 remaining. But four straight free throws in the final minute of the game by Johnny Davis sealed the victory for the Pacers.

Nets 134, Warriors 132

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Cliff Robinson scored 36 points, including a jumper with 22 seconds left that broke a tie score, propelling the New Jersey Nets to a 134-132 National Basketball Association victory over the Golden State Warriors Sunday.

Earlier, the Nets had been trailing by as much as 16 points.

When play resumed, the Warriors' Joey Hassett missed a jump shot. Maurice Lucas, the Nets power forward, rebounded and held the ball until the final buzzer.

The victory marked the first time the Nets have won three games in a row this season. The win boosted their record to 18-44 and evened the Warriors at 30-30.

Mike Newlin ended with 35 points for the Nets and the Warriors' Joe Barry Carroll had 27.

Allison Runs Out Of Gas, Petty Wins Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Petty, the "King" of stock car racing, got a break Sunday when favored Bobby Allison ran out of gas late in the race, then took a calculated risk and and went on to to wrap up his seventh Daytona 500 victory.

Petty, a seven-time NASCAR champion and the all-time Grand National leader with 193 victories, never led before the 175th of 200 laps on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile, high-banked track.

Ricky Rudd inherited the lead for one lap, but fell back when he too had to pit. That left Petty ahead on lap 175 and the 43-year-old veteran from Randleman, N.C., finessed his final pit stop into a seven-second lead and eventual victory.

Petty, who chose not to change his worn tires and only take on enough gas to finish the race, said, "New tires are stickier for about eight to 10 laps, then they're just like the old ones.

"After that, the old tires are just like the new ones. We figured if we could get far enough ahead, they couldn't catch us.

"I wasn't concerned about the car because it was handling pretty good and I knew I could run well by myself," Petty added.

Miss Carner Captures Golf Playoff

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Veteran JoAnne Carner battled winds and rains Sunday to climb back on top and win the $100,000 LPGA S&H Golf tournament on the first hole of a sudden death playoff with Dot Germain.

Miss Germain, the defending champion, birdied the 18th hole after three earlier bogeys to catch Miss Carner and tie the 54-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association strokes behind Germain.

Miss Carner, who led most of the day, bogeyed the 17th to lose her grip. But she shot par on the par-4, 359-yard first hole to wrap up the first prize of $15,000.

Miss Germain hit her second shot into a front bunker to the left of the fairway and then soared over the green on her third shot. Her fourth put her 10 feet from the hole and she two-putted to complete the playoff.

Miss Carner, the first round leader, had rounds of 69, 74 and 72 on the par-72, 6,214-yard Pasadena Golf Club course. Miss Germain had rounds of 71 and 70 before settling for a 2-over-par 74 Sunday.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Hogs Deadlock SWC Race

By The Associated Press

Houston Coach Guy V. Lewis discovered Saturday that sometimes if you deflate the ball in the rarified air of the Ozarks the wind can get knocked out of your team.

The Cougars made a living the first half of the Southwest Conference basketball season by building up leads and going to the four-corner delay, forcing teams to foul or make a defensive mistake leading to an easy bucket.

Trailing by three points with 13:10 remaining, Lewis ordered a stall which lasted four minutes and 10 seconds before Lynden Rose launched an air ball.

Arkansas rebounded and ripped off nine straight points and romped to a 70-55 victory before a delighted soldout house in Fayetteville.

"I looked over at Coach Lewis and kinda wondered what he was doing," said Arkansas forward Keith Peterson. "We were ahead."

The victory tied the Razorbacks and Cougars atop the SWC ladder with 9-3 ledgers.

"I don't know if going to the stall helped them or hurt them but I know it helped us," said Arkansas center Scott Hastings. "I was tired and it gave us time to catch our breath."

Sophomore guard Darrell Walker, who had been yanked out of the game by Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton for not passing to a wide-open teammate, stormed from the lockeroom. Sutton said "He will be disciplined."

In other SWC games Saturday, Texas Tech jumped into a tie with Baylor for the vital third place spot with a 56-53 victory over the Bears in Lubbock, the rejuvenated Texas Aggies flogged Rice 71-56 in Houston and Texas Christian downed Southern Methodist 52-44 in Dallas.

The first two places get a bye to the SWC post-season tournament semi-finals and third place is good for a ticket to the quarter-finals in San Antonio.

Texas and Texas A&M are tied for sixth place while TCU is 5-8 and SMU is 3-10.

In games Tuesday night, Arkansas is at Texas A&M, Texas is at Baylor, SMU is at Rice, and Houston is at TCU.

Admirers of Virginia's flashy 27-game winning streak, please take note: There's another college basketball team that hasn't gotten half the attention but is having almost as much success.

"They don't think they can lose," said LSU Coach Dale Brown of his team after the Tigers extended the nation's second longest Division I streak with a 64-62 decision over Georgia Saturday.

"It was not a normal shot," said Carter about the long-range "prayer shot" from a deep corner. "I couldn't 'feel' the shot as it left my hand. I just wanted to give it a chance and at first I thought it was going to be an air ball."

Brown was confident, if Carter was not.

"When I saw his hand and his elbow, I thought it was in," said Brown. "I didn't even watch the ball. He's the money man. He has been all year."

The victory gave the fourth-ranked Tigers a slick 23-1 record this season, including 14-0 in the SEC.

Meanwhile, top-ranked Virginia raised its Atlantic Coast Conference record to 11-0 and its overall mark to 22-0 with a 73-56 decision over Clemson. The Cavaliers' streak dates back to last year, when they won five straight in the National Invitation Tournament.

In Sunday's only major game, Al Woods scored 28 points and the 10th-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels, opening a 20-point lead in the second half, defeated 19th-ranked Maryland 76-63 in Atlantic Coast Conference play.

The North Carolina senior aggravated an old shoulder injury in the oening minute, sat out a few more minutes, then caught fire midway in the opening half to help the Tar Heels turn an 18-14 edge into a 43-25 halftime margin.

"He's injured the shoulder about three times," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said. "It's almost like a dislocation; it come's partially out. I thought we had lost him from the game."

Elsewhere, No.2 Oregon State beat St. John's 57-45; No.3 DePaul stopped Evansville 61-53; No.8 UCLA trimmed No.5 Arizona State 64-61; Hawaii upset No.6 Utah 83-72; No.7 Wake Forest stopped Duke 58-52; No.9 Tennessee beat Vanderbilt 77-72; No.11 Kentucky turned back Alabama 77-62; No.12 Notre Dame routed North Carolina State 71-55; Michigan State upset No.13 Michigan 70-66; No.14 Iowa routed Northwestern 82-64; San Diego State shocked No.15 Brigham Young 73-72; No.17 Illinois bested Ohio State 63-57 and No.20 Indiana tripped Wisconsin 59-52.

After coming back from an early 12-point deficit, LSU went into a delay game in the final seven minutes when the score was tied at 60. Ethan Martin finally gave LSU a 62-60 lead with a field goal at the 4:19 mark. Georgia's Vern Fleming came back with a short jumper to tie the score at 62 and set the stage for Carter's dramatic shot.

The Raiders rebounded to take a 7-2 victory over Midland College Saturday. In that dual match, Tech was victorious in four of six singles matches and won all three of the doubles encounters.

Chaps Take On ENMU

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — The Lubbock Christian College men's and women's basketball teams conclude their regular seasons against Eastern New Mexico University tonight.

The Chaparral men, 8-21, have already lost to ENMU three times this season. LCC, unlike last year, will not qualify for the District VIII playoffs.

The Lady Chaps of coach Dave Simpson, however, continue their season this weekend when they host the TAIAW Division II playoffs in the LCC Fieldhouse.

The LCC women, who have beaten ENMU earlier this season, are 12-14.

LCC men's coach John Copeland is expected to start forwards Rick Murdock and Larry Holt; center Brian Fortner; and guards Keith Money and Bruce Carver.

Lacrosse Club Wins, Loses

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — The Texas Tech lacrosse club suffered its first loss to a university-level team in 2 1/2 years here Sunday when it fell to Texas A&M 13-8.

The Aggies were led by Al Adler, who scored five goals. For Tech, Bill Notturno had four scoring shots.

The Raiders were penalized often, enabling the Aggies to take advantage of the extra-man situation. A&M led 6-4 at halftime.

Saturday in Austin, Notturno scored the last four goals in an overtime period to lead Tech past the Lone Star lacrosse club.

Notturno, the Southwest Lacrosse Association's leading scorer for the past three years, helped Tech avenge last year's loss to Lone Star in the last two seconds of play, with his key goals.

Tech will play A&M again March 28 in Lubbock. The team's first home game will be against the University of Houston and Oklahoma University Feb. 28.

Confusion Characterizes 4-5A Races

Meanwhile, up north, Tascosa and Pampa finished in ties for the District 3-5A first-half boys' title and still have four games to play.

For a while, it seemed like Monterey (champions of both districts for the last three years) would again walk away with the boys' and girls' titles. Both the Plainsmen boys and girls walked through the first half of district, getting pressed almost every time they turned around, but somehow surviving for perfect slates.

That leaves the Bulldog boys in a tie for first place in district play with two games left and gives the Plainview girls their one-game lead in the second half of play with only a single contest remaining.

Basically, both rascals are headed for playoffs unless one or two things happen.

In the girls', the situation is cut-and-dried. To avoid a playoff between the first half winner (Monterey) and the second-half winner (Plainview), the Bulldogs would have to lose Tuesday night's season finale in Hereford. Now the Herd is 23-5 on the year and only lost to Plainview by 44-42 in overtime when they played in the Bulldogs' gym.

Along with that, of course, Monterey would have to knock off Lubbock High Tuesday. That is almost a foregone conclusion though. The Westerners stand 5-20.

In the boys' race, things aren't so clear. First off, it must be said that all the winner of the regular-season district race gets is the post-season tournament at his gym and a bye to the finals. Now, that's a mighty big "all," but still it is no guarantee of post-season play as the girls' is.

To avoid a regular-season district championship playoff in the boys' race, one of two things will have to happen. Either Plainview will have to lose to Coronado at home or Monterey will have to lose to Lubbock at home.

REGULAR SEASON ENDS

Big Games Highlight Area Cage Scene

It's big-game cliche time on the area basketball scene once again. Every time a contender takes the court at this stage of the season, it's a "must-win game," and last week there were several matchups that both made and broke the hopes of the teams involved.

Defending state champion Abernathy faced two "must-win games" last week, so obviously there was "no tomorrow" unless they won both encounters. The Antelopes won the first, over Tulia 53-41 for the Hornets' first District 3-3A loss of the season, but lost the second to Childress 47-45 to practically end their season. There is very little chance the Antelopes will make it into post season play now as Tulia and Childress are both ahead in the district standings. Tulia and Childress play Friday night.

Abernathy combined a tight defense and press to hold state-ranked Tulia down Tuesday night while Joey Garcia came up with 24 points.

But Friday night the Antelopes were unable to contain Childress' running game. Roger Pinson canned 18 points and Garcia nine, but it was not enough as Childress' Rice Nippert poured in 14 and Barry Johnson added 10.

In a key District 4-2A matchup Tuesday night, second half leader Hale Center topped Ralls 72-45 to almost ensure Hale Center of a playoff for the league title with first-half winner New Deal. The Owls defeated New Deal Feb. 6 to set up the second-half showdown with Ralls. Against Ralls, Stacy Holly led the Owls, who had three players in double figures, with 21 points as Hale Center increased its record to 17-9 and 5-0 in the second half.

Vega avenged an early loss to Bovina to gain the second half leadership in District 3-2A with a 62-57 victory Friday to set up a league playoff game. That district shootout will also be the tie-breaking game in the Vega-Bovina series this season.

Both teams featured balanced scoring attacks Friday night with three players scoring in double figures, but a second-period rally which saw Vega outscore its opponent 20-12 was the difference in the game. Scotty Cook and Bobby Arnold combined for 41 of the Longhorns' 62 points.

Borger Makes Run At District 4-5A Title

Borger took a big step last week toward staking claim to the second-half District 1-4A boys' basketball crown by winning a pair of games last week, but still must deal with Canyon as the race enters the final three weeks.

The Bulldogs, favored to repeat as district champions in pre-season polls, stumbled in the first half and finished in second, two games behind the 6-0 Eagles.

But Borger took the early lead in the competition for the second-half title and a spot in a playoff game with Canyon by taking a pair of nail-biting victories last week.

They started the week at home against Estacado, one of the two teams who defeated them in the first six games, and Scott Hunt's two free throws with eight seconds to play lifted the Bulldogs to a 59-58 win.

Friday night in Levelland, the Bulldogs needed an overtime period in order to down the Lobos 73-71 and slip into first place with a 2-0 mark. Canyon, which played a non-distrct game Tuesday, ripped Brownfield 67-41 Friday and is a half-game back at 1-0.

Starr, McCartney Meet At Ex-Producer's Home

Plymouth, Montserrat (UPI) — Ringo Starr joined Paul McCartney on the tiny Caribbean island of Montserrat Sunday, heightening speculation the three former Beatles will cut an album dedicated to John Lennon.

Sources told UPI Starr would be recording with McCartney. In apparent anticipation of a Beatles reunion, Martin flew in a private secuity force from New York to guard the studio.

Still missing is George Harrison, the third former Beatle.

Sources said it was still certain whether Harrison would join McCartney and Starr to cut the album dedicated to John Lennon that Martin is attempting to produce.

Pop stars Stevie Wonder and Elton John also are expected to show up soon at the isolated British Coony 300 miles east of Puerto Rico, possibly to record some songs with McCartney.

Martin, who produced some of the Beatles most successful records in the 1960s, has strung a ring of walkie-talkie-carrying security guards around the $2 million studio and the five luxury villas he keeps for visiting rock stars.

Local police have been downplaying the reports of an historic Beatles reunion, which the group's members had said would never happen, because they are afraid a deranged gunman might make an attempt against one of them.

The reunion was scheduled for late Februars, but Starr's arrival triggered speculation the record might be cut as early as next week, studio sources told UPI.

Given the Beatles' popularity and the emotional outporing following Lennon's killing, a reunion record dedicated to his memory is sure to sell millions of copies.

California Newspaper Executive Dies

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Ferdinand Mendenhall, a newspaper executive and member of a San Fernando Valley publishing family, was found dead Saturday, apparently the victim of a heart attack, officials said. He was 72.

Mendenhall, vice president and director of special events for the Daily News in Van Nuys, was attending the California Newspaper Publishers Association convention here. His body was discovered by a friend inside his hotel room, said Robert Shaw, a Monterey County deputy coroner.

President Reagan said Saturday that Mendenhall was "a good friend and a distinguished citizen. Nancy and I will miss him." Mendenhall served as Reagan's deputy chief of protocol when Reagan was California governor.

Cronkite Leaving CBS Next Month

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — He told you about men on the moon, about the murder of a president, about the violent birth of civil rights. He told you about rice paddy warfare, campus bloodshed and landslide elections.

Now he is telling you goodbye.

Walter Cronkite, "Uncle Walter" and "the most trusted man in America" to a generation that scarcely remembers when he was not there to wrap up the day with, "And that's the way it is," signs off the CBS "Evening News" Friday March 6 after 19 years behind the anchor desk.

The following Monday, Cronkite's place will be filled by Dan Rather, a former CBS News White House correslondent and co-editor of the network's "60 Minutes" newsmagazine since October 1975.

"I don't doubt that I am going to miss this a great, great deal," said Cronkite, who took over the "Evening News" April 16, 1962, when the program was 15 minutes long.

"And I'm not sure that in six months I won't say, 'I made a big mistake.' I don't think that will happen."

It would be difficult to overstate the significance of Cronkite's departure from the "evening News" to both CBS and journalism.

The "Evening News," delivered by Crokite in what is usually described as an "avuncular" manner — that is, like an uncle — Reached an average of 18.5 million viewers each night in the last three months of 1980.

Cronkite's boss at CBS for nearly 40 years, William S. Paley, once said, "Walter is so objective, so careful and fair in his presentation of the news, that he has been characterized — if not immortalized — with the oft-heard line, 'If Walter says it, it must be so.'"

"I think that only recently, maybe, have I gotten any real sense of the fact that a lot of people do depend on the 'CBS Evening News,' and me," Cronkite, who is 64, said in an interview in his book-lined office, now cluttered with boxes and files.

"I've never felt any sense of authority, though I am aware that anything said on television carries a weight far beyond its real meaning. Because of that, I've always tried to be fair in the selection of items to be used on the news, and in the way they are presented.

"I thnk anybody who walks around feeling he or she is an authority figure, well, they would be impossible to live with," Cronkite added with a chuckle.

Last year, when he was mentioned as a possible running mate for John Anderson, the independent candidate for president, Cronkite was quick to wave off the notion.

"I think it would be an awful, awful mistake," he said on reflection, "for anyone to move into public ofdice out of the anchor's job.

'From then on, every anchorman's motives would be suspect — even though we know ourselves that most of us would never consider such a thing, and never let politics cloud our judgments."

Cronkite, who is not retiring, will maintain a full schedule for at least the next three months. Tis primary responsibility will be the production of a dozen editions of "Universe," CBS News' new science series, which he will anchor.

He has also agreed to take on other assignments and plans to fly almost at once to the Soviet Union to begin work on an upcoming special report on U.S. military preparedness.

"Beyond that, I intend to do a lot of cruising in my sailboat," he said. "I still harbor the dream of sailing around the world, but that really means total retirement, and I don't think I'm ready for that yet."

Walter Leland Cronkite was born Nov. 4, 1916, in St. Joseph, Mo., a descendant of early Dutch settlers who lived in upper New York state until the late 19th century. His family moved to Kansas City shortly after he was born. When he was 10, they resettled in Houston.

While still a very young man, he considered a career as a mining engineer. He abandoned that objective while attending the University of Texas, then left school in his third year for a job with the Houston Post. In 1937, he returned to Kansas City to work for United Press.

Cronkite made his name as a UP correspondent during World War II, and in 1946 was assigned to the Moscow bureau. He left UP in 1948 and returned to Kansas City a second time to create a new job — as correspondent for a small group of radio stations.

When war broke out in Korea, he was lured to CBS News by an acquaintence from his war days in London — Edward R. Murrow.

"My philosophies haven't changed much over the years," Cronkite said, his feet propped on his desk. "The practice of journalism is better today than it was 50 years ago. The average newspaper person is more responsble today, better educated, and the newspapers themselves — though there are far too few of them, I regret to say — are more responsible.

"On the other hand," Cronkite said, "I worry about the truncated nature of much of broadcast jouralism, that people believe they are getting all that they need to know from television.

"That has led to a whole class of people, many of whom are capable only of doing the first paragraph of a story. I am afraid now that many are not well enough trained to cover a story in depth.

"I've always felt," he continued, "if you don't know what belongs in the 34th paragraph of a story, how can you know what belongs in the lead?"

Cronkite's colleagues often said the CBS anchorman maintained the attitude of a print reporter through his career.

"Coming to radio and then television was not a technical problem for me," he remembered. "I adjusted fairly quickly to that.

"I did have a prblem with my immediate superiors, my editors. I would dip way down into a wire story for what I felt was the lead. I had plenty of experience at UP rewriting one story for the next news cycle, and often that was where you found your second-day lead.

"They would say, 'Where did you get that idea?' and I would point to the 25th paragraph of a wirestory, or wherever,and they would say, 'Well, the wires say this is the lead, so we'll go with that.' Often, what I had chosen would be the lead in the next morning's papers."

Cronkite established himself in areas other than what he would call the "headline" service of the "Evening News." He anchored CBS coverage of the space program, and was a familiar figure at political conventions every four years, beginning in 1952.

When he signed off after the Democratic Natioal Convention in August 1980, he had logged more than 450 hours of CBS coverage in 28 years.

Through it all, Cronkite, married since 1940 to the former Mary Elizabeth Maxwell — Betsy — and the father of three children, has remained a private lerson away from the CBS newsroom.

"I do not have the gift of openness," he told interviewer Oriana Fallaci in 1970.

National Lampoon Back Again With New Movie

Having demolished college fraternities in "Animal House," they are now out to massacre time-honored movie cliches. The new project: "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies."

The honcho of this organized nonsense is Matty Simmons, the man who has turned a humor magazine into an empire. After licensing the title from the Harvard Lampoon, he launched the national magazine and followed with stage revues (which introduced Chevy Chase, John Belushi, Gilda Radner), radio series, books, record albums and then "National Lampoon's Animal House."

The 1978 comedy astounded everyone, especially Universal pictures brass. Simmons says that it cost $2.7 million and so far has grossed $210 million. It ranks 13th in Variety's list of all-time money makers. NBC, which paid $8.5 million for three showings, will show a somewhat laundered version Feb. 15.

"I had an exclusive contract with Universal, and that was to be my next picture. I thought the script was terrific, they didn't. So we agreed not to do the picture. I devoted a year and a half to the project, and at my age (54) I can't afford the time.

"Despite our differences, we're still friendly. In fact, I'm preparing 'Animal House II,' which I'll produce for Universal. It's even funnier than the first one."

Simmons and National Lampoon branched out as soon as Universal cut the reins. A series pilot for NBC, "Joy of Sex" (only the title of the best seller will be used) for Paramount, and "Two Weeks at War" for ABC's theatrical film division. The first project to go is "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies."

"An executive from United Artists called me to ask if I had anything I could make for them," Simmons said. "I told him I had been thinking about a parody of four movie genres. 'Let's do it,' he said."

The producer followed the same system as with "Animal House": he handed the project to five of his National Lampoon editors. Originally he planned to have four directors but settled on two: Henry Jaglom ("Tracks," "Sitting Ducks") and Bob Giraldi, a top maker of TV commericals.

The two directors are shooting simultaneously in and around Los Angeles. Simmons decided on the tandem production so the film could be ready for a June release. Production cost is $5 million, a bargain by today's standards:

The four segments:

Others in the cast include Brenda Vacarro, Candy Clark and Allen Goorwitz, with guest appearances by the likes of Henny Youngman, Robert Culp and Elisha Cook Jr.

Satires of movie genres are chancy, Simmons admitted. "Airplane" succeeded, but "Movie, Movie" failed — "because the movies it satirized were funnier than the satire," Simmons theorized.

"If the product is good, it will succeed," he added. "Sid Sheinberg (Universal chief) told me 'Animal House' was a hit because the timing was right. Wrong. 'Animal House' worked because it was a very funny movie."

'Showtime' Passing Pay-Cable TV Test

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Weinblatt took over as president of Showtime Entertainment nearly nine months ago, and perceived rather quickly the test for survival in the exploding pay-cable TV business.

"We live by a standard that is both the toughest and the fairest of all," says Weinblatt, who was hired to run the No. 2 pay television network last May after 20 years at NBC, the last two as president of the network's entertainment division. "We're not automatically in the home, and we've got to compete for our audience every month.

"I look at it this way: on some mythical date each month, the family sits around the table to decide. 'Do we want to pay for Showtime next month?'

"You've got to meet that family's standard. You've got to prove your service is worth spending money for. And I think as long as we never lose sight of that, we will be competitive."

Showtime began 1981 1.6 million subscribers, second only to Home Box Office in the pay television market, which serves about 8 million homes overall. Showtime projects a pay market of 23 million by 1985, and 46 million by 1990.

Since the first of the year, several others — including CBS, ABC and, more recently, the Public Broadcasting Service — have announced or begun to implement plans for cutting into the cable TV pie.

In addition, an organization called RCTV — for Rockefeller Center — took option on the entire British Broadcasting Corp. product for the next 10 years, and said it would enter the pay TV market next year. Yet another proposed pay network, called Bravo, announced plans for a full schedule of high culture.

The CBS and ABC cable networks, largely cultural in content, will be advertiser-supported.

Mike Weinblatt went to work at NBC in 1957, and progressed steadily up the network's administrative ladder. He was named vice president for talent and program administration in 1968, and became vice president for sales in 1973. Six months later, he was appointed executive vice president for NBC-TV.

In August 1977, Weinblatt was named executive vice president and general manager of the NBC television network, and a year later, he became the first president of the newly created entertainment division.

Until recently, both Showtime and HBO were known primarily as motion picture services. Competition, both present and anticipated, has changed that.

"The television audience was acculturated to accepting what the networks offered," Weinblatt says. "Now we've come along, and they're asking, 'What is it we want that they're not offering?'

"We're now involved in a number of things," he says, "that will establish for us an identity, a personality, based on what we supply."

Showtime's 1980-81 programming schedule includes, in addition to recent movies, a biweekly comedy series called "Bizarre," "Carousel" for young viewers, the "What's Up America" magazine, the monthly "Broadway on Showtime" series of theatrical productions, and the "Hot Ticket" concert series.

"I think there is going to be a lot of experimentation," he says, "and a lot of change. I'm not sure what it will all look like in 10 years, but I think much of what you will see will transcend pure entertainment — an incredible variety of information-type shows.

"Everything you see is not going to be great," he says. "It's just nice to know the door is open try almost anything you like."

Weinblatt says he's been asked, "Aren't you just going to bring more garbage to the people?"

"I don't think that way," he says. "I have to believe that the ability to do more things, with different points of view, that there will be, on balance, a lot of good programming.

"You open up a potential that has never existed before. My feeling is that it's our challenge, the challenge of the industry, to meet that potential with material of some merit."
