Snow drops in on area

Rain due to arrive in Midland this afternoon

■ Midlanders enjoy brief frolic and snowmen sprout around city.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The winter's first snowfall on Friday brought both pleasure and anticipation.

It was a joy for many Midlanders to experience in a land of droughts and dust storms.

By late Friday night, snow was building up on lawns and streets. Snowmen could be spotted throughout the city.

As of midnight, three inches of snow had fallen, according to the weather service.

"I love it. It's my kind of weather," Barbara Self, who was raised in Saltillo near Sulphur Springs in Northeast Texas, said of the snow.

For Winnie Kidd, who grew up in Rankin, snow in West Texas usually is "rare."

"I love it when we finally do get it."

And she was hopeful the snow would stick to the ground, "so we can play in it tomorrow."

But any chance of that could diminish as temperatures begin to climb later this afternoon.

Weatherman Greg Jackson at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said there is a 50 percent chance of continued snow today, but it will likely melt as the day warms up causing any falling snow to turn to rain by the afternoon.

The snow was the city's first of the season.

"We haven't had any (other) snowfall so far this winter," Jackson said.

The most recent snow, in fact, was on the last two days of October when one-tenth of an inch of snow was measured.

But a year ago, in January of 1991, more than five inches — 5.8 inches — of snow fell over Midland. That amount of snow is equivalent to about half an inch of moisture from rain. Snow's rainfall equivalent is derived by dividing 10 into the inches of snow, Jackson said.

Before the weekend is over, the snow will "definitely be out of the area," Jack-

City voters to decide fate of sales tax today

Staff Report

Midlanders will go to the polls today to determine the fate of an one-quarter-cent sales tax for economic development.

Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

If the proposal passes, money from the tax increase would be used by an economic development corporation, headed by a five-member board of directors appointed by the City Council. They can use the money, according to state law, to support expansion projects of local industry and to recruit new business to the city.

Supporters of the tax contend Midland needs the added money to compete with other Texas cities for economic development, to diversify its economy and to create jobs.

Opponents say they, too, are concerned about Midland's future, but they don't want to help create another branch of "unresponsive government" and an increase in taxes. Some opponents also have expressed concern about the fact that there is no "sunset clause" linked to the proposal. A sunset clause is a provision that would set an ending date or a guaranteed vote to consider dissolving the tax and its resulting corporation.

In a late development Friday, Wayne Woodside, a member of Citizens Against

Painter meets with grand jury, discusses reverse stings

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter appeared before the Midland County Grand Jury Friday, apparently to inform and educate the jurors on the inner-workings of reverse-sting operations and on the judicial process of forfeiting seized narcotics, drug money, and drug-related equipment, including cars and airplanes used in illicit drug deals.

Neither Painter nor members of his Sheriff's Office are under investigation by federal or state prosecutors in Midland or Pecos, officials have stated.

"There's no investigation (of his office)," Painter said Friday night.

Rather, the grand jurors were making inquiries into how sting operations and forfeiture work.

"I can't say what went on," Painter said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre Jr. was with the grand jury when Painter appeared to answer their questions.

Earlier this week, Schorre said that the grand jury had "asked to speak to and has spoken to some officials concerning sting operations in general and on forfeitures." But the grand-jurors' inquiry is "not a grand jury investigation per se."

Rather, Schorre said, "It is a general inquiry" into how reverse drug-sting op-

Bush visits King's grave

N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — President Bush came to the resting place of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Friday, locked arms with his widow and sang "We Shall Overcome" in a trip clearly aimed at smoothing the edges of the presidential image on race.

But before Bush left the stage of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, he heard an angry benediction from one of King's daughters, the Rev. Bernice King.

In her prayer, she said the problems of racism, poverty and violence that her father had fought against remained a blight on the land, although she did not link their persistence directly to Bush.

"How dare we celebrate when more than 40 million Americans are without health care?" she demanded in the closing prayer. "How dare we celebrate in the midst of a recession, when nobody is

Angelo backs naming school for Dr. Coleman

By Myra Lee Salcedo

As the holiday to celebrate a national black leader approaches, some Midlanders are campaigning to name a Midland school for a local black leader.

While some American communities — which celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day as an official holiday — commemorate the achievements of the late civil rights leader, Midlanders are campaigning to name the Alternative High School for Dr. Viola Coleman, a longtime Midland physician and black community leader.

At a community meeting several weeks ago, dozens of people endorsed naming the yet-to-be-built school for Dr. Coleman. Then at a more recent commu-

Teen charged

A 14-year-old Midland male was charged with possession of stolen property and possession of a stolen vehicle Friday afternoon after police observed the car in the 4500 block of Mathis St., police said.

Police found a .357 Magnum handgun and an AK-47 assault rifle in the vehicle, along with several other items that are believed to be stolen, police said.

Officers had been searching for the vehicle and the 14-year-old for several days. He is believed to be involved in last weeks sexual assault of a 14-year-old Midland female, police said.

The youth was turned over to juvenile authorities on Friday. No other information was available.

Ranger probe

ODESSA — The Texas Rangers are investigating the actions of an investigator in Ector County District Attorney Gary Garrison's office after the investigator's estranged wife apparently accused her husband of mishandling now-closed narcotics cases, Garrison said Friday.

The Rangers were called in by Garrision and Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire so that the charges might be "handled quickly and responsibly" and to determine "what, if anything, is wrong," Garrison said.

Neither the investigator's name nor specific allegations were made public.

"There has been a whole lot more commotion than there has been substance," Garrison said.

Garrison said that the investigator, who works in his office for the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, is in the "process of getting a divorce."

Garrison said that the investigator's wife apparently "gave statements to various" law-enforcement officers.

The Rangers sealed an area in Garrision's office that holds narcotics-related material, Garrison said.

Justice honor

NEW YORK — Newly appointed Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas has been named one of 10 winners of the 1992 Horatio Alger Award, given to Americans who overcome adversity to achieve success. The prize, named for the 19th-century author whose heroes rose from poverty to riches, is awarded yearly by the Horatio Alger Association of Distinguished Americans, which is based in Alexandria, Va. Thomas, raised in poverty in Georgia, was head of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and a U.S. appeals judge before being named to the Supreme Court last year.

Saddam admits Iraq lost Gulf War

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saddam Hussein admitted for the first time Friday that Iraq was militarily defeated in the Persian Gulf War, apparently seeking to whip up anti-Western sentiment in a population devastated by war and economic sanctions.

The Iraqi leader claimed allies dropped 108,000 tons of bombs, a force he described as six times the destructive power of the two atomic bombs dropped on Japan in 1945.

The speech marked the first time the Iraqi leader had said flatly that Iraq's military lost the 43-day war, which began Jan. 16, 1991, with air strikes on Baghdad and elsewhere.

Iraq's military was seriously battered in the fight to oust Baghdad from Kuwait, although post-war allied assessments indicate the losses were considerably less than initially believed.

"From a conventional and material standpoint . . . the gathering of the faithful was defeated and the gathering of infidelity, vice and corruption triumphed," Saddam said in a speech.

But he claimed a moral victory. "A miracle was attained in this showdown. Faith triumphed over atheism and right triumphed over wrong," he said.

The official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, carried the text of the speech, which included verses from the Koran, Islam's holy book.

The Iraqis permitted some Western news organizations into Baghdad for the anniversary of the war's beginning, but many, including The Associated Press, were denied permission.

The news agency said in a separate report that at first light mosque preachers shouted Islam's battle cry of "Allahu Akbar," or God is great, in memory of the war's victims.

The agency said pro-Saddam demonstrations were held in Baghdad through the night. In the largest rally, thousands of demonstrators gathered outside the Information Ministry and denounced President Bush and his allies, it said.

Washington has repeatedly urged Iraqis to topple Saddam to bring the U.N.-sanctioned economic embargo to an end.

First Scud attack defines Israeli's role in war

JERUSALEM (AP) — A year ago Saturday, Israelis were jolted awake by the whining air raid sirens that would define their role in the Gulf War: sitting fearfully in their gas masks while the air force awaited orders to strike back.

The orders never came, although Iraq fired 39 Scud missiles at the Jewish state. The damage was small compared to the devastation in Iraq and Kuwait. Perhaps the greatest wound was to Israel's pride.

Today, Israelis are still debating whether it was wise to abandon their usual policy of hitting back fast and hard to make the Arabs think twice about attacking.

Many are skeptical about the Arab-Israeli peace talks pressed for by the United States after the war. A third round ended this week without progress. Far-right leaders have quit the Cabinet in fear the talks might lead to surrendering occupied land.

Oddly, the most public Gulf War memorial was a general strike Friday by Palestinians, whose backing for Saddam Hussein lost them the sympathy built up by their uprising against Israeli occupation.

For Israelis, the anniversary was marked mostly by broadcasts looking back at the war and introspective newspaper columns.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens, who warned throughout the war that Israel would retaliate when and where it wanted, again stressed Friday that the military had been ready to attack at any time.

"Had the war not ended when it did, had it continued for a few more days, then you would have seen the IDF (Israel Defense Forces) in western Iraq," he said on Israel radio.

Referring to Israeli restraint, he added as a warning to the Arabs: "You cannot assume that this thing will repeat itself."

Arens recalled the "special circumstances" behind the restraint. An Israeli attack could have torn apart the U.S. coalition against Iraq — which included Arab states — and turned the conflict into another Arab-Israeli war.

Israelis were ready for an attack following Saddam's threats to "incinerate half of Israel" with chemical weapons. The army had distributed gas masks and instructed the public to seal rooms in their houses.

When the first sirens sounded just after 2 a.m. on Jan. 18, 1991, Israelis went into sealed rooms with their children and their gas masks and waited anxiously for the all-clear.

The experience was repeated 18 times until the last Scud attack Feb. 18.

Presidio sheriff waives hearing

Staff Report

PECOS — Rick Thompson, the 45-year-old suspended Presidio County sheriff, at mid-week waived arraignment in federal court here and effectively pleaded "not guilty" to four drug-related charges, officials said.

By waiving arraignment through his attorney, Barry Crutchfield of Lovington, N.M., Thompson is pleading "not guilty" to the four counts alleged in the indictment.

On Jan. 9, Thompson of Marfa and Glyn Robert Chambers, 37, of Alpine were indicted on the cocaine-related charges.

Thompson, sheriff for 18 years, remains jailed in Pecos pending the start of his trial on Feb. 18. Site of the trial is to be determined by the case's presiding judge, District Court Judge Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas.

Midland man dies

Staff Report

Charles McDonald, 24, of Midland was fatally injured Friday night in an oil-field accident in the Greenwood area, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said late Friday.

erations work and how forfeited and seized drug money and equipment are handled by law-enforcement agencies and by the courts.

There are no investigations into "any improprieties" regarding the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Schorre said at that time.

Likewise, Thomas Beery, assistant United States attorney who is heading up ongoing Pecos grand-jury investigations into illicit narcotics in West Texas, this week said that "no one in the Sheriff's Department in Midland County is under federal investigation in the Western District of Texas."

While acknowledging the recent flurry of rumors, Painter said that his department is without guilt and complicity.

"We are not under investigation by a state or federal grand jury," the sheriff said recently.

However, Painter said late Friday that anonymous telephone calls have been made to local news media outlets claiming he had been "indicted."

"I think that there are some individuals who are kind of of jumping the gun in this deal," the sheriff, 44, said, "and I imagine after this (March 10) election is over, it (the calls) won't be quite as important."

SNOW: First fall of season arrives

(From 1A)

son said.

"It looks like it (the snowfall) definitely will end tomorrow," he added.

On the highways and at Midland International Airport, Friday's snow was not creating problems, officials said.

"All the airplanes are coming in," said a spokesman at the airport control tower. Scheduled airline takeoffs and landings were unaffected by the light snowfall, he said.

Highways in the Midland area were "OK for right now," a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said at about 9 p.m. Workers for the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation were out on the highways with their trucks to attack any icing on bridges, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the moisture that the snow brings is benefiting the farmers' winter wheat and other small grains. To ranchers, the snow means more growth for grasses and weeds for cattle, sheep and goats.

"It's moisture," rancher's wife Martha Matthews said of the snow. "We ought to have a good spring — lots of grass and lots of good weeds."

For the farmer, the snow is wonderful, Charlie Wright, general manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative, said. "It's moisture. We haven't had too much that. This is good for anybody who has some wheat planted and small grain."

By now, most of the cotton is harvested, Wright said. Some is still in the fields but should be stripped by next week, when the co-op's gin will have finished cleaning, processing and baling Midland area cotton from the 1991 planting season.

Wright and the farmers are looking for snow or rain after harvesting is finished next week.

"We need sunny, dry days to strip (cotton)," he said. "But just nearly everybody has got it off the stalk. Sometime next week, we will wind it (harvesting) up."

While light snow is good for underground moisture, "We still will need a rain to plow on" this spring, Wright said. "This time last year, we had a couple of inches of rain."

While Midlanders may be enjoying the brief snow, any rain and sunny skies today should melt it away.

The high temperature today is expected to reach into the upper 30 degrees, said the weatherman.

Winds are to be northerly to northeasterly at 5 to 15 mph.

Under decreasingly cloudy skies, the low tonight is to be in the mid-20s. Sunday is to partly cloudy and warmer. The peak temperature then is expected to be in the upper 40s.

Cold weather grips east U.S.

Associated Press

Freezing temperatures dipped into northern Florida on Friday as arctic air surged across the eastern half of the nation, and homeless people crowded into shelters.

At least 39 deaths had been blamed on the weather since Tuesday morning, the majority in the Detroit area.

While many people cursed the frozen north and its export of icy air, Anchorage, Alaska, has had a relative heat wave with a record high Friday of 46, enough to turn streets into ponds and close two ski areas. But on Alaska's Arctic Coast, gusting wind produced a wind chill of 100 below zero.

In northeastern Arizona, snowdrifts up to 4 feet deep have stranded hundreds of rural families and forced tribal officials to declare emergencies on the Hopi Reservation and part of the Navajo Reservation. No deaths were reported.

"The immediate needs are fuels, water, feed for livestock, food and roads," said Hopi Chairman Vernon Masayesva.

Navajo tribal police were using snowmobiles and four-wheel-drive vehicles to take food, water, wood and livestock feed to reservation residents isolated by 5 to 12 inches of snow that fell earlier this week.

Temperatures fell into the teens in northern Florida and parts of Georgia. Tallahassee, Fla., hit 19, and in southern Florida, Hollywood tied its record of 40.

But while it did get cold in southern Florida, into the 30s in parts of Dade County, it wasn't as cold as forecast and Miami cooled only to 47.

WEATHER SUMMARY

STATE

It was cold and wet across much of Texas Friday, but a cold front that triggered the precipitation was not cold enough to cause sleet or snow except in the Far West.

Temperatures remained above freezing during the day, with highs in the 30s to 50s, but gusty winds across West Texas caused wind chills in the single digits.

Winds were northerly behind the front at 15 to 20 miles an hour, and light and southerly ahead of the system.

West Texas was to have rain or light snow ending tonight with snow accumulations up to 2 inches in the mountains and generally 1 inch or less from the Permian Basin to the South Plains. Decreasing cloudiness and warmer Sunday. Highs today were to range from the middle 30s in the Panhandle and the middle to upper 40s for the rest of West Texas. Lows tonight in the upper teens in the Panhandle with mostly the 20s elsewhere.

NATION

Snow was scattered across the northern tier of states Friday, with stormy conditions in New York and Michigan, and there was a threat of more snow during the weekend.

At midday, snow showers were scattered over the mountains of western Oregon, the central Rockies, southwestern North Dakota, the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the central half of New England.

Snow squalls and wind gusting to 46 mph near Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., during the morning caused near-blizzard conditions.

Snowfall over northwestern Upper Michigan between midnight and noon included 6 inches at Ontonagon, Houghton and Munising, the National Weather Service said.

Wind chills over parts of Lower Michigan reached 5 to 15 below zero.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Midland statistics

Fifty percent chance of continued snowfall today with snow lingering through early morning with the possibility of snow changing to rain early this afternoon. High today in the upper 30s. Winds today northerly to northeasterly at 5 to 15 mph. Decreasing cloudiness Saturday night with a low temperature in the mid-20s. Partly cloudy and warmer on Sunday with a high in the upper 40s.

nity meeting — Thursday night at Crockett Elementary School — former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo also endorsed naming the school for the black physician.

Angelo read a letter at the public forum, which he had written to MISD school board trustees.

His letter, in part, said, "While I have not always agreed with Dr. Coleman, I always have respected her for having the courage to fight for her convictions. Regardless of one's opinion about some of the results of Dr. Coleman's efforts, no one can question that she has given tirelessly of her energies and resources in an entirely unselfish manner. In addition to the education sector, Dr. Coleman has contributed to her profession and to the community in numerous ways. She deserves the recognition and appreciation."

Angelo said he intended to make his remarks at Tuesday's regular board meeting, but was unable to attend.

He said he had "second thoughts" about his endorsement upon "reading and hearing about some of the threatening and abusive statements that have been made at that meeting by some supporters of naming the school after Dr. Coleman."

However, Angelo said, upon reflection, he concluded "that it would be unfair to Dr. Coleman "to let a radical element" prevent her from being honored.

At Thursday's community meeting, Angelo also urged the board to establish a policy to name schools which would "retain final authority with the board."

Students from the Alternative School said they were charged with selecting a name for the school.

Alma Marshall, administrator for Midland Independent School District, said some MISD staff members also proposed a compromise solution to name the Alternative School which was presented to board members. She said the compromise solution proposes that the school be named for Dr. Coleman, but the school's programs be named by the students.

An MISD spokesperson verified that a proposal had been given to school board trustees, but noted "it was only a suggestion." The spokesperson said that naming the Alternative High School would be an action item on the agenda of the Jan. 30 regular board meeting.

'Bee' smart

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1992 Regional Spelling Bee April 5 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

To help students prepare, this colomn on words, their spelling, meanings and origins will run daily through April 3. The words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition. Spelling source is Webster's Third New International Dictionary, the official dictionary of the bees. The column is prepared by Lawrence Technological University.

VOTE: City considers economic developement

(From 1A)

Taxpayer Abuse, said he had met privately with Mayor Carroll Thomas in December to discuss his (Woodside's) opposition to the sales tax.

"Mayor Thomas explained that the tax could be recalled by a vote of the city council or by petition," Woodside said. "I reminded the mayor how much work it is to get the required signatures for a rollback, and as to the city council, who will be on it in five years? At the end of of our conversation Mayor Thomas stated, 'I called you for your support; now you have convinced me that we need a Sunset Clause.' "

Thomas, a leading advocate of the proposal, denied making that statement, and he reiterated his contention that a sunset clause would greatly stifle the economic development corporation because it would not allow it (the corporation) to participate in long-term financing projects.

Economic development is what the election is all about, supporters contend. "I hope people take a serious look at the issue," said Janna King, Midland Chamber of Commerce president. "I think if they understood the dollars needed to compete (for economic development), I think they'll be willing to expend the modest $20-$30 a year."

So far, 52 Texas cities already have passed similar tax measures. Thirty-five cities have defeated proposals, and 18 others, including Lubbock, have issues on the ballot today.

If Midland voters approve the measure, merchants will begin collecting taxes at the new rate on July 1. The city would receive its first check on Sept. 10.

Only those citizens who live within the city limits of Midland are eligible to vote.

BUSH: President meets with King's wife, family sure whether their jobs are secure?"

It was a tough note of implicit criticism in an otherwise gently planned day in which Bush surrounded himself with the symbols of racial tolerance and biracial democracy. He laid a wreath at King's tomb, signed a proclamation declaring Monday a national holiday to honor King and kept Coretta Scott King close to his side.

The president was accompanied by his only black Cabinet member, Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, secretary of health and human services, who seldom travels with him. Before joining the Cabinet, Sullivan was president of the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta.

In Bush's speech at the King Center on Friday, he appealed for "compassion" and "service" and the values that King "beseeched us to embrace — of tolerance and decency and mutual respect."

Bush talked of his committment to "root out bigotry wherever we find it." He listened to the glee club from King's alma mater, Morehouse College, sing spirituals like "I've Gotta Mind to Do Right Everyday."

But there was blunt criticism of the president's trip from Democrats. John Lewis, the Democratic congressman from Georgia who served with King in some of his campaigns, said in an interview of Bush, "He's good at talking the talk, but he cannot walk the walk." Lewis added, "Dr. King didn't go in much for symbols."

And Ronald H. Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, declared in a statement: "Today, at the gravesite of Martin Luther King Jr., President Bush's hypocritical rheotric was at its worst. How can a president who allowed racially divisive ads to become the cornerstone of his presidential campaign, who signed the Civil Rights Act only after insurmountable pressure from civil rights organizations, be taken at his word when he claims he's committed to ridding our country of bigotry and racism?"

Brown was referring to the Bush campaign's use in 1988 of the case of Willie Horton, a black convicted murderer who escaped from the Massachusetts prison system while on a weekend furlough and later raped a Maryland woman and stabbed her fiance. The campaign used the case to attack Michael S. Dukakis, the Democratic nominee, as soft on crime.

As he enters an election year, Bush has two political reasons to send signals of racial sensitivity. Republicans have long hoped to nibble away at the Democrats' support among blacks, which is overwhelming in presidential elections and many statewide races. At the same time, Bush has to pay attention to his party's image on racial issues among centrist white voters.

Some analysts argue that these voters can be turned off by the rougher racial politics of recent years, including Bush's repeated attacks on Congress for advocating what he asserted was a "quota bill" but what its advocates, Republican and Democratic, asserted was simply legislation to combat job discrimination.

Bush's day was infused with the kind of "kinder, gentler" oratory that he occasionally used in the otherwise hard-edged 1988 campaign. He talked of the importance of family — "Barb and I feel it in our own lives" — and the importance of community service. He noted that he had met this week with Magic Johnson and said he wanted to help the basketball star in fighting the spread of AIDS.

Correction

A U.S. District Court sentence given to a local chiropractor for mail fraud was incorrectly reported in Thursday's edition.

The story should have said that Dr. Howard Gregory Cooper, 40, received six months imprisonment.

Bush found himself in no-win situation with Gulf War

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

■ Analysis

PARIS — The international consensus on whether George Bush halted the Gulf War too soon is that whatever he did, he stood to lose.

"He was damned if he did and damned if he didn't," was the verdict of former French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, referring to the debate about whether the U.S. president should have pursued the war until Iraq's leader Saddam Hussein was ousted.

Couve said the failure to unseat Hussein meant "Bush didn't attain one of his war aims, no matter what he may claim now."

On the other hand, according to the veteran French politician, if the allied forces had marched on Baghdad and toppled Hussein, "the United States in all probability would at this very moment be deeply involved in an open-ended engagement with thousands of American soldiers committed to staying (in Iraq) indefinitely."

Such a course would probably have ended in a political shambles, at least as damaging to U.S. interests in the Middle East as Hussein's survival, he added.

In a lengthy new study of the gulf conflict, the International Institute of Strategic Studies, probably Britain's most prestigious think tank, called Hussein's survival and continued defiance of the United States "embarrassing for strategic and political reasons."

The strutting Iraqi leader was "a constant affront" to the allied victory, the report said.

However, it went on: "An extension of the allied war aims to include the occupation of Iraq (would have led to) a storm of international protest ... and would have confirmed the worst fears of critics of American policy."

Robert Dannreuther, the author of the report, said that, if the 100-hour ground offensive had gone on longer, "the continued slaughter of Iraqi soldiers would have provided the world's press with a field day" for attacks on Bush and his advisers.

Dannreuther disagreed with Couve de Murville and some other European analysts who think one of Bush's original war aims was to get rid of Hussein, but that he changed his mind at the last minute.

"(Bush's) refusal to countenance marching on Baghdad revealed a political resolve to adhere to limited military objectives," he claimed.

This was almost certainly his intention from the start, although there had been "ambiguities" earlier in his position, according to the IISS report.

A different view came from Jean-Francois Deniau, a senior member of the French parliament's foreign affairs committee and specialist on Middle East politics.

"Bush's sudden decision to stop the fighting on Feb. 28 caught at least his French and British allies by surprise," he said.

What decided the U.S. president, he contended, was fear Hussein's downfall would lead to pro-Iranian Shiites seizing power in Iraq, Deniau alleged.

"The Arab members of the coalition, especially Saudi Arabia, demanded the war be ended," he claimed.

The key factor was the outbreak of rebellion among the Shiites of southern Iraq even before fighting had stopped, he said.

"If the sequence of events had been different, that is, if the Kurds (who were not suspected of pro-Iranian sympathies or support) had been the first to revolt, Bush and the Saudis might have been less anxious to call a cease-fire when they did," Deniau said.

However, writing in the Paris newspaper Le Monde, the former chairman of the French joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Maurice Schmidt, said the Iraqi army retains a "potential offensive capability" of more than 350,000 troops and 2,000 tanks.

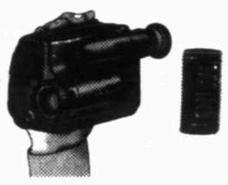

He added: "In the long-run, the war did nothing to diminish the Middle East's dangerous instability."

Second student dies after price riots in Central Asia

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of students enraged by soaring prices and empty bread shops smashed windows, overturned cars and battled police in a Central Asian city, authorities said Friday. Two students were reportedly killed and several wounded.

The riots in Tashkent, capital of Uzbekistan, represented the worst violence connected with the new reforms launched in former Soviet republics.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin freed prices on Jan. 2 to spur production and plant the seeds of a market economy. Uzbekistan and other states went along to keep their store shelves from being stripped by desperate Russians.

But reports Friday indicated some food plants had raised prices so high that stores couldn't pay them, leaving shelves bare. The Tass news agency said meat and candy factories in Moscow and Krasnodar had cut production because warehouses were full of goods that consumers couldn't afford.

Meat consumption has fallen 17 percent in St. Petersburg, 19 percent in the southern city of Keremova, and 20 percent in Moscow because of high prices, the State Statistics Committee reported, according to the newspaper Sovietskaya Rossia.

In St. Petersburg, workers on the subway system that carries an average 3 million passengers a day threatened to stop work Monday if Mayor Anatoly Sobchak does not raise their salaries by as much as 500 percent. There was no immediate response from the mayor's office.

In the Siberian city of Yakutsk, ambulance drivers went on strike Friday demanding higher wages to compensate for the prices, the Russian Information Agency said.

In Tashkent, the government of President Islam Karimov lifted most price controls and introduced food coupons Thursday. Students complained their stipends had failed to keep pace with rising prices and that they had not received any food coupons.

The students Thursday night vandalized food stores, overturned cars and threw rocks at police, according to reports from the scene.

When some of the students began marching toward the presidential palace to demand Karimov's resignation, police first fired blanks and then live ammunition, said Anvar Umonov, a Tashkent-based journalist.

One student was killed and about 50 injured, including two seriously, according to students and local journalists. About 20 policemen were injured and 100-500 people arrested, reports said. One of the seriously injured students died early Friday, Interfax said.

Thousands of students gathered again early Friday in the student quarter, Interfax reported. All roads leading to the area were blocked by troops and Interior Ministry police, it said. Gunfire was heard in the area again late Friday.

At least 12 people launched a hunger strike demanding the release of those arrested, the news reports said.

Decrying the crackdown, the nationalist Uzbekistan Popular Movement threw its support behind the students and accused Karimov's People's Democratic Party — formerly the Communist Party — of ruling by "dictate and terror," Interfax said.

The students on Friday reportedly sent a delegation to meet with Karimov.

U.N.: Iraq was years from bomb production

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Evidence from the latest U.N. inspection of Iraq's nuclear program shows Baghdad was several years away from regularly producing the materials needed for nuclear bombs, an official said Friday.

Earlier estimates said that before its defeat in the Gulf War, Iraq was only a year to 18 months away from producing enough enriched uranium to produce such bombs.

"Given time, they would have been successful, there is nc doubt about that," U.N. inspector Maurizio Zifferero said at the International Atomic Energy Agency. He returned Thursday from the ninth U.N. inspection mission to Iraq.

But he added: "Twelve months is really unbelievable. ... The 18-month scenario is a very extreme scenario."

During the latest U.N. inspection of its weapons program, Iraq admitted for the first time that it had built a large uranium-enrichment system suitable for nuclear bomb production.

It had not previously disclosed the centrifuge program because Iraq had interpeted the U.N. mandate forcing it to disclose its program as concerning only material still capable of being used in arms manufacture, Zifferero said.

President Saddam Hussein had ordered the centrifuge program's components destroyed or rendered harmless after the war, Zifferero said.

Centrifuges are used to separate uranium gas into highly enriched uranium, used for weapons, and lower-quality uranium.

The U.N. official played down reports the centrifuge program would have produced enough uranium to make up to four bombs a year, and previous estimates that Iraq was 12 to 18 months away from industrial-scale production of enriched uranium.

"It's more likely that they were a few years away, two to three years away," he said, adding that the previous estimate had been based only on a brief examination of 40,000 documents taken from the Iraqis in October.

The latest U.N. mission acted on tips from the German government to uncover the centrifuge program, which Zifferero estimated cost Iraq more than $1 billion and possibly up to $10 billion since it was created in 1982.

Yeltsin appeals to angry former Soviet officers

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin said Friday that the Commonwealth of Independent States will divide the former Soviet navy but warned that if member states spurn a united army, Russia will form its own.

"Russia stood up and is standing up for the unified armed forces. But if the majority of the republics start forming their own armed forces, we will have no choice but to do the same thing," he said.

As the largest and most populous of the former Soviet republics, a Russian military could far outnumber any force assembled in the other 10 commonwealth states.

The dispute over control of the 3.7-million-strong former Soviet military has dominated the first weeks of the commonwealth and hampered political and economic reforms.

Yeltsin spoke to more than 5,000 former Soviet officers gathered to press their demands for a unified military. He tried to reassure the servicemen, but could not pretend that serious divisions hadn't already emerged.

Yeltsin said new conscripts would have to swear allegiance to the newly independent states, but current officers would not have to take new oaths.

Bomb kills seven in Northern Ireland

COOKSTOWN, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army set off a roadside bomb Friday as a small bus passed by carrying construction workers home from work at a British Army base. The explosion killed seven men and injured seven others.

The province's police chief, Sir Hugh Annesley, estimated the bomb contained 600 pounds of explosives.

It was the largest death toll since 1988 in Northern Ireland, where the IRA is fighting a guerrilla war to drive the British from the province.

Prime Minister John Major said in London, "A policy of bombing is odious, contemptible and cowardly and will never change the government's policy in Northern Ireland, or the bravery of the people of Northern Ireland."

U.N. deploys first peacekeepers in Croatia

KARLOVAC, Croatia (AP) — U.N. peacekeepers took up positions in a medieval hilltop castle Friday as part of the first such force deployed on Croatia's front lines to keep a round-the-clock peace watch.

A truce that began Jan. 3 continued to hold on its 15th day with few exceptions.

But a sniper's bullet near the eastern city of Osijek killed a British photographer. Paul Jenks, 26, worked for The Hague-based EPA photo agency. He was the 23rd journalist to die in the nearly 7-month-old war.

The deployment of 11 teams of about 50 military liaison officers on both sides of the front was supposed to reinforce the truce and could pave the way for the arrival of thousands more peacekeepers.

Most of that large force would be deployed in Croatia. But some peacekeepers would be based in neighboring Bosnia-Hercegovina, where ethnic tensions among Serbs, Croats and Slavic Muslims threaten to explode.

The president of Bosnia-Hercegovina, Alija Izetbegovic, announced Friday that his republic's parliament planned on Jan. 24 to announce a date for a referendum on sovereignty, the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency reported.

The 12-nation European Community recognized the independence of Croatia and Slovenia on Wednesday, but said Bosnia would have to vote on the issue before the EC would deem that republic separate from Yugoslavia.

Experts say any war in Bosnia would dwarf the Croatian conflict. But Izetbegovic sought to dispel such fears.

"There will be no civil war in Bosnia thanks to the wisdom of people here and thanks to their fear of war, probably more thanks to that fear," he said, according to Tanjug.

One of the first of five U.N. teams to reach their conflict zone in Croatia were Brazilian Maj. Luis Schons Decio, Malaysian Maj. Salleh Kamaruddin, and Maj. Hubert Vicart of France.

Their white jeep, its pale blue U.N. flag fluttering, drove into Karlovac, about 30 miles southwest of Zagreb, and drew up at the mist-swathed Stari Grad castle, a small 13th-century fortress overlooking the garrison town.

Fundamentalists tell followers not to provoke Algerian troops

ALGIERS, Algeria — Algerian fundamentalist leaders appealed to their Muslim followers Friday to avoid provoking the country's security forces as troops were deployed in strength across the capital on this holy day of prayer.

The Friday prayer services were the first since President Chadli Benjedid resigned last weekend and the government canceled a second round of elections that were expected to give the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front control of the Algerian Parliament.

Backed by army troops on the fringes of the city, riot police officers set up checkpoints early Friday to insure that party supporters from outside the capital would not have access to the city's two principal mosques, which are considered the movement's strongholds in Algiers.

But it has been clear for several days that the acting leader of the Islamic Salvation Front, Abdelkader Hachani, has decided in consultation with other party officials to shift away from the tactics of confrontation they had urged on Monday and to move toward a political alliance with other opposition parties.

Several Algerian government officials and fundamentalist leaders suggested that a truce lasting several weeks might now begin as the military and the fundamentalists assess their chances of weakening each other.

"This regime is going to fall," Hachani told hundreds of followers, even as he and other fundamentalists confirmed that as many as 500 of the movement's activists had been arrested since Tuesday.

"I ask you for vigilance and to avoid all provocation."

Buses bringing fundamentalist supporters in from other towns were turned back Friday at checkpoints, resulting in fewer people attending prayers in the Kuba and Sunna mosques.

Those allowed to attend prayers in the two mosques had to show proof they lived in the neighborhoods to which the mosques belong.

Hachani told his followers that the new military-backed government is looking for a chance to crack down on fundamentalists and that now was not the time to seek a confrontation.

"They want us to bring the people out in the streets so that they can shoot at us, but we will not give them that chance," he said.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, fundamentalist officials said the movement's undisputed victory in the first round of elections on Dec. 26 had given it "an unshakable legitimacy" that they would like to build on.

They said they would take some time to weigh the effectiveness of forming an alliance with the two other parties that won some of the 231 seats that were decided in the first round of parliamentary elections.

Wednesday, the political bureau of the former governing party, the National Liberation Front, and the Front for Socialist Forces indicated they would seek an alliance with the Islamic Salvation Front to oppose the government.

The fundamentalists won 188 of the seats in the first round of elections.

Shamir favors early elections

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Breaking his silence about the impending collapse of his hard-line governing coalition, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Friday he favors early national elections in June rather than leading a minority government.

In interviews with state-sponsored Israel radio and television, Shamir, who was pushed into the Middle East peace talks by the Bush administration, emphasized his desire to continue with the negotiations, which ended their third plodding round this week in Washington.

By at least continuing to show up for the peace talks, Shamir hopes Israel will receive some of the $10 billion in loan guarantees it is requesting from the United States to house Soviet immigrants.

Opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres told state radio on Friday that Shamir should discuss the date of early elections with Labor. If Shamir's dominant Likud bloc "will ask us to talk about dates and elections, we shall not refuse," an eager Peres told state radio in an appeal for a joint decision on the elections, which are regularly scheduled for early November.

Peres said Israel's political turmoil "endangers and maybe extends the peace process unnecessarily, and for that reason I'm for shortening the time of the campaign and having the elections as soon as possible."

Accepting a suggestion of the interior minister, Peres proposed that national elections be held within 60 days. State radio reported Friday night that Shamir favored elections in June, as both Labor and the Likud jockey for whatever political advantage they believe the timing offers.

Shamir's thin parliamentary majority is expected to sink to a narrow minority on Sunday when two small ultranationalist parties say they will formally bolt the government.

The Tehiya and Moledet parties, with their combined five seats in Parliament, are quitting the government over its proposal to discuss political autonomy with the Palestinians, who live in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Those parties, which want to keep all the occupied territories, believe autonomy now will lead to a Palestinian state later.

I have always refrained from using other people's names in my letters because of my belief in private conversations should remain so, and anything said in these conversations can not be substantiated. However, since the Mayor feels free to use my name and comments out of context, I know feel free to expound on the full content of our conversation.

Mayor Carroll Thomas called me one afternoon in December "to talk me out of my opposition to the Economic Development sale tax and the need for a Sunset Clause". After explaining my position on this tax which are as follows:

1. Creating another Taxing entity which may not be responsive or effective in attracting or creating new industry.

2. Pouring hard earned money down another "Black Hole" in the form of TAXES.

3. Who would be on this newly created Board?

4. Where will these new monies to be banked?

5. If this new foundation is self-sustaining in five years, why would we need to continue the TAX?

6. Our understanding is that these TAX monies are to be leveraged. How are they to be leveraged? With bonds? Are the taxpayers going to be indebted with this leveraged money?

7. If an industry were to locate around the Airport as many jobs would be created for Odessa as for Midland with no financial input from Odessa.

8. Submit to the citizens a sound business plan, one that could be "banked".

Mayor Thomas explained that the TAX could be recalled by a vote of the city council or by Petition. I reminded the Mayor how much work it is to get the required signatures for a rollback, and as to the city council who will be on it in five years. At the end of our conversation Mayor Thomas stated "I called you for your support; now you have convinced me that we need a Sunset Clause". I also told the Mayor that without the "Sunset Clause" I would do all I could to defeat this TAX proposal.

CATA asks the citizens of Midland to vote against this sales TAX January 18, 1992. Ask our local government to be more business like. I assure you that if this proposal is defeated they will be back. THEY never take no the first time and who knows the next time they will have goals, a business plan and a Sunset Clause."

FBI, Russian security police solve kidnapping, ransom scheme

By Ahel Wines
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As if elements of the novel "Gorky Park" had sprung to life, the FBI and Russian security police teamed this week to crack a $1.6 million kidnapping-and-ransom scheme that threatened the lives of two foreigners in Moscow.

The kidnapping ended Thursday morning, Moscow time, when agents of the newly formed Russian Agency for Federal Security, one of the successors of the KGB, which has been abolished, swooped down on a hotel on a busy highway outside Moscow and freed Daniel Weinstock, an Australian computer-company executive who had been taken hostage Jan. 8.

Weinstock's wife, Ivonne, had been freed by police the day before at a country house outside the Russian capital.

The couple was released, and 10 Russians arrested and charged with extortion, after the kidnappers telephoned American relatives of the Weinstocks demanding money in exchange for their freedom.

The relatives, in Philadelphia and Newark, N.J., worked with the FBI, Australian diplomats and a Philadelphia law firm with extensive Russian connections to track down the Weinstocks and their captors.

The Russians charged in the case are said to have been disgruntled partners in a Siberian electronics venture with Weinstock, whose primary Russian venture is a firm named Sovaustral Technika J.V.

It is not known whether the kidnappers claimed they acted to recover a debt or losses from the Siberian venture, or whether they were acting out of revenge or some other motive.

The FBI was said to have entered the case only reluctantly, and with but a single agent who worked from the bureau's Newark field office.

But participants in the inquiry said that that agent applied proven American tradecraft to a crime that is relatively rare in Russia, stringing the kidnappers along, stalling for time and even tricking them at one point into leaving their Moscow telephone number with a fake American "answering service."

In a written statement Friday, the FBI credited the Agency for Federal Security with "unprecedented cooperation" in the case. The agency was created by Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin from remnants of the former KGB, the once-feared Soviet espionage and internal-security agency.

The bureau also gave credit to a young Russian lawyer, Dimitri O. Afanasiev, who became enmeshed in the case while working at the Philadelphia law firm of Wolf, Block, Schorr & Solis-Cohen. Afanasiev used his language skills and Russian political contacts to speed negotiations with the hostage-takers and to keep Russian police on their trail.

"Had it not been for Dimitri, this whole episode would have been delayed a lot longer than it was," said Jerome J. Shestack, a partner in the firm. "He literally worked all night for several nights on this."

Australian Embassy officials in Moscow said Friday night that the Weinstocks were safe. Shestack and others said they had been beaten and abused during their eight-day ordeal, but those accounts could not be confirmed.

As related by Shestack and Afanasiev, the FBI and the Russian police were forced into a tense cat-and-mouse game with the kidnappers before a trail of documents and traced telephone calls finally led them to the Weinstocks.

The Australian couple was in Moscow tending to business matters when they were abducted on Jan. 8. That day, the FBI said, an Australian-born relative of Weinstock, Dr. Israel Rayman of Wayne, N.J., received a telephone call from Weinstock, who told him that he had been taken hostage and that his captors were demanding $1.6 million in hard currency for his release.

That same day, the kidnappers called an unidentified Philadelphia relative of Weinstock with similar demands. That relative summoned Shestack, whose law firm is well known as an adviser to American businesses in Russia. Shestack said he then called in the FBI and asked his protege, Afanasiev, to seek help from the Russian government.

"It was frankly quite a problem, because it's such a mess over there right now that you don't know who to talk to," Afanasiev, a former assistant district attorney in Moscow, said in an interview Friday. "The KGB was abolished after Yeltsin took over."

Afanasiev called old associates of Shestack in the Russian Foreign Ministry, and they ordered the new Federal Security agency onto the case. The Russian agents then called the American Embassy in Moscow, where surprised security officers, unaccustomed to chatting even with former KGB officers, set up a conduit to the FBI back in the United States.

In Washington, a State Department official who insisted on not being identified, said Friday that the cooperation between the American and Russian security forces was apparently unique in the annals of modern Moscow-Washington relations.

"The KGB just contacted our embassy," he said. "Nobody knows of any case like this. We think it worked very well. It's just the kind of thing that can happen these days."

From then forward, talks with the hostage-takers were routed through the home telephones of Rayman.

"They told the kidnappers, 'All right, let us call you back on Monday,' and the Russians left their phone number," Afanasiev said Friday. Strange as that might seem to Americans, he said, the kidnappers were confident that the Russian police were so inefficient "that by the time the number was turned over to the police, the whole thing would be over."

Kubiak returns

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Former Denver Broncos quarterback Gary Kubiak is expected to be named running backs coach at Texas A&M Saturday, a newspaper reports.

School officials have called a news conference for 12:15 p.m. to announce the hiring of Kubiak, who lettered three years at A&M, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported in Saturday's editions.

TCU, Texas lock horns

Frogs undefeated at home; both teams perfect in SWC

■ The Texas Longhorns have often found trouble lurking upon arrival at the Daniel-Meyer Coliseum in Cowtown.

Associated Press

How tough is a Horned Frog at home?

The Texas Longhorns find out Saturday night when they travel to Daniel-Meyer Coliseum to test Texas Christian in an early season showdown of undefeated Southwest Conference basketball powers.

It will be only the fifth home game of the year for the 12-3 Horned Frogs, who have defeated Tulsa, Pacific, San Francisco and Texas A&M in Fort Worth.

"It will be nice to get back in our own gymnasium" said TCU coach Moe Iba.

TCU improved its SWC record to 2-0 Wednesday night with a 72-63 victory over the Southern Methodist Mustangs as 6-10 center Reggie Smith scored 23 points and had 14 rebounds.

"It will be good to play at home," Smith said. "It seems like we've been gone a long, long time. The crowd should give us a big boost."

Texas is 3-0 in SWC play with victories over Houston and Texas Tech in Austin.

Coach Tom Penders' Longhorns outlasted Texas A&M 76-73 Tuesday night in Texas' first conference venture outside Austin's Frank Erwin Center.

TCU gives Texas big problems in Cowtown.

The Horned Frogs defeated the Longhorns 78-70 last year in Fort Worth after falling 90-49 to them in Austin.

Two years ago, Texas managed only an 83-80 victory in Fort Worth.

■ Houston Cougars at Rice Owls, 2 p.m., KPEJ (Cable Ch. 14)
■ Tulane Green Wave at Texas Tech Red Raiders, 7 p.m., KCRS (550 AM)

In other SWC games on Saturday, preseason favorite Houston is at Rice in a noon (Raycom TV) encounter, and winless Texas A&M faces Baylor at 7:35 p.m.

Non-conference games include SMU at Oral Roberts in a 7:30 p.m. game and Texas Tech hosts 19th-ranked Tulane in a 7 p.m. meeting at Lubbock.

Houston, which lost to Texas a week ago in Austin, will have to beat the Owls to keep pace with the Longhorns and Frogs.

However, the Owls are particularly tough in their "Jungle Gym" Autrey Court, which is known for its heat and humidity.

No name suits Bills line fine

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Jim Ritcher shook his head as he talked about a local radio station's attempt to bestow a catchy nickname on the Buffalo Bills' offensive line.

"They were trying to find one for us and none of us were really interested in it," the Bills' left guard said. "When you start getting too much attention, then you're usually in for a fall."

The current Bills' line doesn't have a catchy moniker like the Washington Redskins' Hogs or the Bills' Electric Company that led the way for O.J. Simpson in the 1970s.

But that doesn't mean the line — center Kent Hull, guards Jim Ritcher, Mitch Frerotte, Glenn Parker and John Davis, and tackles Will Wolford and Howard Ballard — has gone unnoticed, according to former Electric Company member Reggie McKenzie.

"Being still involved in football, I think they get a lot of respect," said McKenzie, sales and marketing director for the Seattle Seahawks.

"Hull was in the Pro Bowl, Ritcher's in the Pro Bowl. Wolford was last year and I think Ballard is going to get there before too long," McKenzie said.

There aren't many statistics kept for offensive linemen; in fact, the only well-publicized one is a negative one: sacks allowed. The Bills allowed 35 this year, up from last year's 27 and way up from the Redskins' league-low nine.

"Mark Rypien was sacked nine times this year; that's unbelievable," Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly said. "I like to hold on the ball a little extra, and sometimes it gets me in trouble."

Because he takes his time, Kelly said that perhaps only one-third of the sacks

John McEnroe siezes the moment after his defeat of Boris Becker Friday.

A kinder, gentler McEnroe

■ John McEnroe does his best Jimmy Connors imitation with a shocking upset of third-seeded Boris Becker at the Australian Open.

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — It wasn't vintage John McEnroe. It was better.

It was art without angst. No arguments, no tantrums, not a single angry glare at a linesman. Just 2½ hours of the smoothest, sweetest tennis McEnroe, or anyone else, has played in eight years.

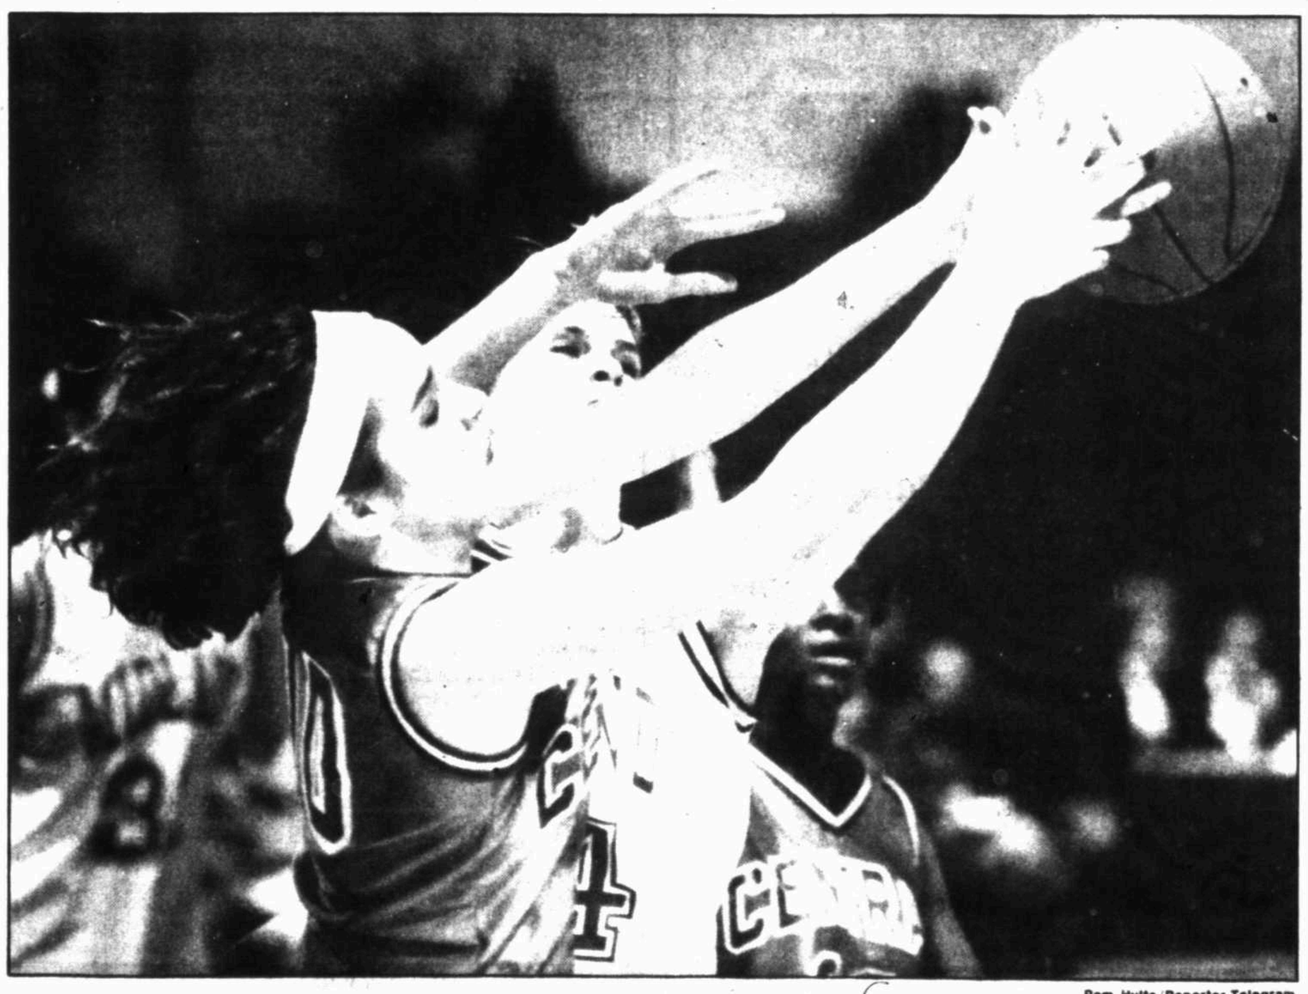

McEnroe, envious of Jimmy Connors' spectacular run at the U.S. Open last year, tasted that same satisfying return to glory Friday at the Australian Open with a stunning 6-4, 6-3, 7-5 victory over defending champion Boris Becker.

In a stadium that shook from the roars of 15,000 fans, on a court where he sank to his lowest moment two years ago, McEnroe recalled for at least one night the magic that made him No. 1 from 1981 to 1984.

From his first ace in the opening game, to his fifth and

Lady 'Dawgs snowed under by unlikely hero

Pam Hutts/Reporter-Telegram

San Angelo's Kristi Porter, left, and Midland High's Sally Gibson grapple for a loose ball.

■ Hard times continue for the Midland High girls, who after a 54-45 loss to San Angelo Friday night, dropped their third game in four tries.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Isn't there a rule written somewhere that when it snows in West Texas, you can expect a miracle?

Well, Midland High's Lady Dawgs tried to test the rule Friday night at the MHS gym and found out that the rule really doesn't exist; losing to San Angelo's Lady Bobcats, 54-45.

A miracle try? Well, how about falling behind by 15 points in the first half and then come roaring back to take the lead on an Ashley Chase three-pointer, 43-42, with 2:50 left in the game?

This was a miracle well in hand until Lady Bobcat Julie Johnson became an unlikely hero. Johnson, who had missed 12 consecutive shots from the field, ran down court and had the nerve to pump up a net-filled three-pointer for a 45-43 lead, rubbing out MHS' only lead of the night.

That basket was the back breaker, but Johnson made it worse, reeling off seven consecutive points down the stretch, leaving both teams at 2-3 in the District 4-5A basketball race.

"It's for sure that I wasn't hitting my shots all night," Johnson said, "but I

Reid Ryan loosens up in hopes of landing a spot on the TCU roster.

Ryan looks for second chance

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Reid Ryan, the son of Texas Rangers' pitcher Nolan Ryan, could be a starter for Texas Christian as he makes a second effort at a college baseball career.

The younger Ryan, who spent last season at Texas, had his first spring practice Thursday since transferring to TCU. The Horned Frogs will open their season Feb. 5 against Dallas Baptist.

Frogs coach Lance Brown said he was encouraged by Ryan's pitching performance since his transfer.

"Reid would be one of the five guys we're looking at to start," Brown said. "After the first month, we might get it down to three."

Ryan spent most of his freshman year practicing and made three appearances last season for the Longhorns, including an exhibition against his father.

"I've got a lot of experience at Texas finding out what it takes to pitch against a top 10 team to practice," the younger Ryan said. "I've developed physically. I want to improve as much as I can. I hope I'm good enough to be one of our top three pitchers."

Last year, Brown led TCU to the Southwest Conference Tournament in the team's first post-season appearance since 1956. The coach began his relationship with the Ryans in 1983.

Brown often threw batting practice to the Houston Astros during Nolan Ryan's tenure in Houston. He has since become a batting practice regular for the Rangers.

Ryan's father met with Texas president William Cunningham to clear the way for his son's transfer from UT.

Longhorn coach Cliff Gustafson had told Ryan he could transfer without losing a year, but believed then that the student would go to a school outside the SWC.

After Ryan decided on the Horned Frogs, a conference rule blocked his transfer until Gustafson altered the paperwork to indicate the new school.

"A lot of people leave," Ryan said of the Longhorns. "But they go to junior colleges or NAIA schools. They'd never given a baseball release, and I think they didn't want to set a precedent."

Skiles' 41 leads Magic to rare win

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Scott Skiles had 41 points as Orlando overcame a 14-point deficit in the second half to defeat the Indiana Pacers, 127-120, the Magic's third victory in 28 games.

Chuck Person led Indiana with 29 points, while Rik Smits added 23 and Reggie Miller 22.

Jerry Reynolds had 17 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter for the Magic, while Nick Anderson had 18.

Orlando trailed 109-108 with 2:26 to go when Anderson began and ended a 15-6 run with two free throws for a 123-115 lead with 39 seconds left.

George McCloud cut the lead to five points with a three-point play, but Indiana could get no closer.

Trailing 106-98 with 4:56 left, Skiles hit two free throws and Reynolds made four free throws and a layup to tie the game with 3:25 left.

The Magic, who had trailed by 14 points at the start of the third period, trailed 79-65 with 7:33 to go in the third quarter and used an 11-2 surge to get back in the game. The Pacers, who had shot 73 percent in building a 66-52 lead, took led 86-83 going into the final period.

Indiana led 32-31 after a first quarter that featured 11 lead changes and five ties, but were ahead 66-52 at halftime as its bench scored 20 of its 34 points in the quarter. The Pacers made 29 of 40 shots in the first half.

Smits had the hot hand early for the Pacers, hitting six of seven shots before sitting down at the 4:01 mark of the first quarter with three fouls. He and Person combined for Indiana's first 17 points

Celtics 98, 76ers 95

BOSTON — Kevin Gamble scored 30 points and Robert Parish returned from injury and surpassed the 20,000-point mark as the Boston Celtics snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

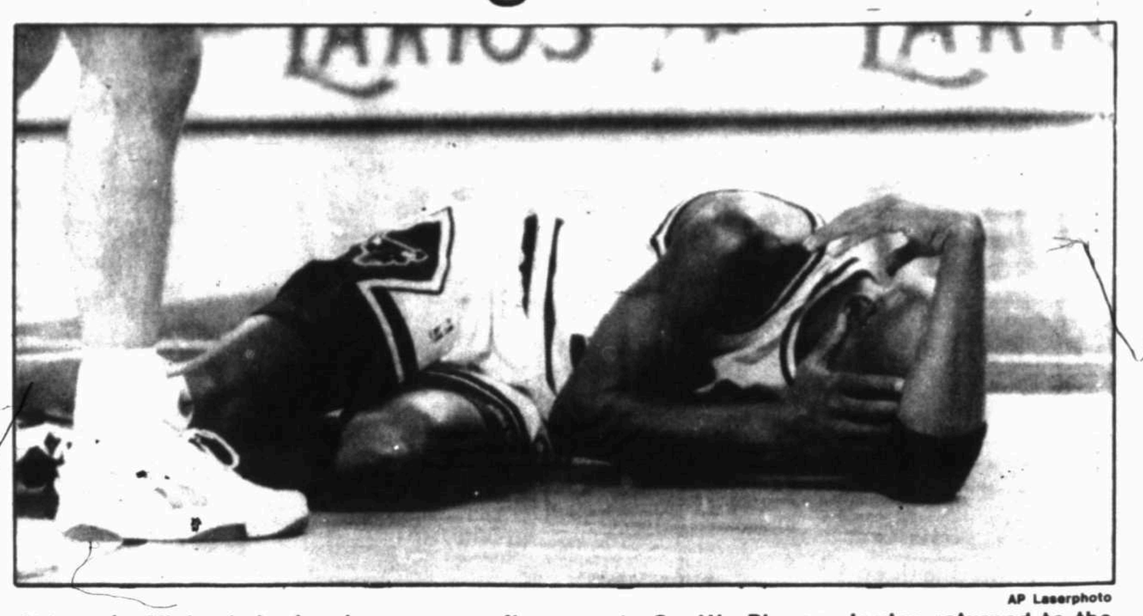

With Larry Bird and Kevin McHale still on the injured list, the Celtics celebrated the return of Parish from a two-game absence by defeating the 76ers for the fifth consecutive time at home since Dec. 22, 1989.

Parish, who was sidelined with a twisted ankle, scored 14 points, including a pair of free throws with 13 seconds remaining after being fouled while on the floor to grab a loose ball. He finished the game with 20,011 points.

Parish gave Boston a 75-70 lead with a short field goal early in the fourth period, but the 76ers closed to 83-82 on a 3-point shot by Hersey Hawkins, who led the 76ers with 20 points.

John Bagley then hit three baskets during an 11-4 spurt that put Boston back in control. Ed Pinckney finished the burst with a three-point play that made it 94-86 lead with 2:25 left.

Armon Gilliam and Gamble exchanged baskets for a 96-88 score with 1:48 remaining. Philadelphia rallied again as Charles Barkley hit a 14-footer and Ron Anderson added a 3-pointer.

Chicago's Michael Jordan lays prone after catching an elbow in the cheek from teammate Scottie Pippen. Jordan returned to the game and finished with 31 points.

Bulls 102, Spurs 96

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 20 of his 31 points in the pivotal third quarter, lifting the Chicago Bulls to their eighth consecutive victory.

The Bulls, who trailed by nine points at halftime, improved their home record to 18-2 as Horace Grant added 19 points and Scottie Pippen 17. The Spurs were led by David Robinson with 20 points and Terry Cummings with 17.

After Chicago outscored San Antonio 34-19 in the third quarter, Robinson hit the first basket of the fourth quarter to close the Spurs to 79-75. But that was the closest they got until Sean Elliott's jumper from the corner made it 94-90 with 2:21 left.

Bucks 90 Knicks 85

MILWAUKEE — Moses Malone scored 20 points and the Milwaukee Bucks held New York to 35 points in the middle two quarters, beating the Knicks and ending a four-game losing streak.

Larry Krystkowiak added 17 points for Milwaukee, while Gerald Wilkins topped the Knicks with 24 points. Patrick Ewing, his playing time limited by foul trouble, scored 16, nearly eight under his average.

The Bucks took an 11-point lead early in the third quarter but couldn't build on it.

Suns 134, Kings 94

PHOENIX — Kevin Johnson scored 16 of his 20 points in the first quarter Friday night, leading the Phoenix Suns to their sixth consecutive victory.

The Suns became the 12th NBA team to win 1,000 games, reaching the mark midway through their 24th season. Phoenix won No. 900 against Sacramento on Feb. 22, 1990.

Trail Blazers 120, Hornets 104

PORTLAND — Clyde Drexler had 25 points and 11 assists as the Portland Trail Blazers improved their record against the Charlotte Hornets to 10-0.

Drexler scored 14 points in the first quarter and 10 in the third period, leading seven Blazers in double figures. Cliff Robinson had 17 points and Kevin Duckworth and Terry Porter 14 each for Portland, which pulled into a virtual tie for first place with Golden State in the Pacific Division.

Oregon State star collapses

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Oregon State guard Earnest Killum, who suffered a mild stroke last summer, was rushed to a hospital Friday after collapsing at the team's hotel.

The 6-foot-5 sophomore, the California 5-A prep player of the year in 1990, was found about 11 a.m. near the hot tub at the Airport Hilton, Oregon State assistant sports information director Steve Fenk said.

Killum was listed in fair condition at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital in Inglewood.

"They are evaluating," hospital spokeswoman Mary Ellen Brown said. "That's all I can tell you."

Killum, 20, suffered a mild stroke last summer while playing a pickup game in Los Angeles.

A blood clot was removed from his left arm July 19 and several other clots were discovered. He was treated with medication and was cleared to rejoin the team in late December.

Killum played 16 minutes in the Beavers' 90-73 loss to Southern Cal Thursday night, scoring 13 points.

At Lynwood High School in Los Angeles, Killum averaged 29.7 points and nine rebounds per game as a senior. As a junior, he averaged 30.4 points per game. The high school retired his number Wednesday night.

Killum sat out his freshman season at Oregon State for academic reasons.

Shortly after Killum joined the team just before the Far West Classic in Portland last month, Oregon State team physician Richard Cronk said the player would remain on anti-clotting medication, but at a reduced level that would allow him to play.

Cronk said Killum had been tested at least once a week since last July.

At the time Killum rejoined the team, Cronk said Killum "likely will always be at some risk, which he is aware of. But the experts have determined that the risk is in an acceptable range."

MHS boys collect first district victory

SAN ANGELO — Midland High's Bulldogs claimed their first District 4-5A basketball win of the season here Friday as they ran past the San Angelo Bobcats 75-56.

MHS is now 12-10 overall and 1-3 in district, while the Bobcats fell to 14-11 and 1-2.

Leading the way in scoring for the Bulldogs were Mike Melzer and Joseph Golding with 20 points each. Antwan Goodley kicked in 11. Robert Smith paced the 'Cats with a game high 25 points.

"We played much, much better than we had been. We won three games tonight (the junior varsity won 86-50 and the sophomore team took a 55-35 victory), so it was a big night for us," said MHS head coach Jack Stephenson. "I thought everybody played well.

After being outscored 16-13 in the first quarter, the 'Dogs went on a 20-9 run in the second period to take the lead for good. MHS also outscored the Bobcats in the third and fourth quarters.

"We had a nice second quarter and had an eight-point lead at the half. We played with a lot of enthusiasm," Stephenson said.

MHS will play its third road game in four outings Tuesday when it travels to Odessa Permian for an 8 p.m. game at the Permian Fieldhouse.

The 1/4¢ for Economic Development

WHAT CONTROLS AND SAFEGUARDS WILL PROTECT TAXPAYERS MONEY AND GUIDE THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION DIRECTORS?

A. The directors must comply with Texas law and regulations which prohibit use of funds for non-economic development projects.

B. Midlanders should have even greater confidence through local controls recommended to the Council.

1. Volunteer sub-committees support the directors in an advisory capacity. At a minimum there should be finance and investment policy committees.

2. The Corporation's operating budget will not be approved until the investment policy is approved and sub-committees are in place.

3. Unpaid directors will be appointed by the City Council based on business qualifications. Sitting Council members are ineligible to serve on the board of the corporation.

4. An immediate implementation of a policy statement addressing conflicts of interest involving a director or contractee.

5. At least 1/4 of the public meetings each year be scheduled at a time other than between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. on Monday through Friday.

6. Policy setting responsibilities of the Corporation's directors may not be delegated to any other party but recognizing that the directors are encouraged to contract for services required by the Corporation rather than hiring staff and requiring office space.

7. General and administrative costs for any fiscal year may not exceed 10% of the sales tax revenue expected to be received during that year.

8. Unexpended funds shall be either invested in direct obligations of the U.S. government with a maturity not longer than one year or deposited in a local commercial bank (a) in amounts up to FDIC insurance limits or (b) under the terms of a depository agreement substantially like that of the City of Midland.

9. The Corporation will have an annual audit of its financial affairs.

10. The presentation to the City Council of an annual report which, among other things, provides an analysis (including peer group comparisons if available) of the Corporation's past year performance, the prospects for the coming year and a recommendation on the Corporation's continued existence.

McENROE: Odds of Mac winning go from 66-1 to 16-1 after upset sixth aces in the final game, McEnroe showed flashes of the power he once had. He spun hard, deep serves into Becker's body or away from him. He beat Becker to the net for putaway volleys. He blunted Becker's strength with slices, then shocked him with crisp returns into the corners.

"When I was No. 1, I could do that all the time," he said, recalling his three Wimbledon and four U.S. Open titles, the last eight years ago. It was a mistake for him in recent years, he said, to play against the more powerful opponents with an emphasis on touch shots rather than his own strength.

"The bottom line is I should never have changed my game," he said.

Yet, more than any of his strokes, it was McEnroe's focused demeanor throughout the match that impressed Becker and beat him.

"He played the whole match on a high level, and he didn't give me a chance to breathe," Becker said. "I didn't play great, but it was his fault, too. He played his old way."

McEnroe, thrown out of this tournament for a temper tantrum in 1990, said his father always told him he would be a better player if he could keep himself under control and not argue so much about calls. For once, McEnroe listened.

"It's important for me to feel in control," he said. "I played great. I did what I wanted to do. He didn't believe I could keep doing it. You could see he was getting frustrated."

At the U.S. Open last summer, the 32-year-old McEnroe lost in the third round, then watched with admiration and some jealousy as Connors, 39, went on to the semifinals. McEnroe said he felt he still had the ability to play at that level, yet had begun to wonder whether he was fooling himself.

"Doubt creeps in," he said, as the years go by without victories over the top-ranked players. "It's been so long since I had such a big win I can't even remember. This is a big monkey off my back. It's a big relief. I feel so much lighter. It's been so long since I've beaten a player of Boris' caliber.

This was a match that no one who watched will forget, a match that McEnroe can use to motivate him for the rest of the year and cherish when he finally quits.

It was a chilly night, with fans bundled in coats and blankets. Becker wore a heavy, armless sweater, McEnroe only a T-shirt. Both players nursed slight injuries, Becker a hamstring pull that affected his speed and led him to don lycra undershorts during the match, McEnroe a knee strain that required a protective brace.

But if the fans and Becker were cold, McEnroe was hot from the start. After holding serve in the first game with a service winner and an ace on the last two points, he broke Becker at 15-40 in the fourth game with a sharply angled forehand crosscourt pass. Becker contributed to his demise in the game with three straight volleys into the net.

Becker broke back to 3-2 when McEnroe netted an easy forehand approach, then showed one of his rare moments of pique by bouncing the ball in disgust.

Rather than let that error get to him, as he has so often over the past few years, McEnroe bore down and seized an opportunity in the 10th game when he led 5-4. With Becker serving at 15-30, McEnroe jumped on a second serve and ripped a forehand return down the line that Becker couldn't touch. Becker then lost the set with a backhand crosscourt that sailed wide.

While McEnroe played fluidly and in virtual silence, Becker stomped around the court, angrily berating himself almost as much as he did when he lost the Wimbledon final to Michael Stich last year.

"Nothing goes!" Becker screamed in German at one point.

"Trash, Trash!" he yelled on another occasion.

Capriati breezes by opponent

Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia — Jennifer Capriati swept into the fourth round of the Australian Open with her easiest victory yet, overwhelming fellow American Katrina Adams 6-0, 6-0 on Saturday.

Making her debut here, the 15-year-old fifth seed played almost flawless tennis against the outgunned Adams and has yet to drop a set in three matches. With the 35-minute outing, Capriati has spent less that three hours on court.

"She made a lot of errors," Capriati said. "She didn't play as well she can. I really didn't have to do that much."

Capriati is on a collision course with No. 2 Gabriela Sabatini, who also won easily, 6-1, 6-0 over Australia's Jenny Byrne. If they win their fourth-round matches, Capriati and Sabatini will slug it out in the quarterfinals.

No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez, a finalist here two years ago, faltered in the second set of her match against Australia's Rachel McQuillan before prevailing 6-2, 1-6, 6-1. She's the only seed remaining in her quarter of the draw following the withdrawal of No. 2 Steffi Graf and the loss Saturday by No. 15 Helena Sukova to Dominique Monami of Belgium 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

A grumpy Michael Stich, still struggling to find the form that carried him to the Wimbledon title last year, survived another subpar outing to advance to the round of 16.

In a center-court performance that sharply contrasted with John McEnroe's artistry the night before against Boris Becker, the fourth-seeded Stich advanced with a 6-0, 2-6, 7-5, 6-2 victory over Martin Jaite that neither player was likely to keep in his scrapbook.

Unseeded Aaron Krickstein continued his mastery of long matches by coming back from down 2-1 in sets to oust Alexander Volkov 6-4,, 5-7, 6-7 (2-7), 6-1, 8-6 in four hours. Krickstein is 22-6 in five-set matches.

MaliVai Washington, who beat No. 16 Goran Prpic in the second round, fell to Australia's Wally Masur 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

The top seeds, Monica Seles and Stefan Edberg, scored third-round victories Friday, and neither showed signs of nagging injuries.

Seles said her strained neck felt fine in a 6-1, 6-1 third-round blitz of Yayuk Basuki.

And Edberg, suffering from a lingering cold and coming back from several minor injuries, rebounded from service breaks early in the first and third sets to oust Australian John Fitzgerald 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 and also advance to the round of 16.

But Patrick McEnroe's luck in this Grand Slam event, in which he reached the semifinals last year, ended. Russia's Andrei Chesnokov, in trouble after the first three sets, switched rackets and his luck to win 6-4, 1-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3.

No. 5 Ivan Lendl, a two-time champion, overcame the service blasts of 6-foot-5 German Markus Zoecke to advance 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (8-6).

David Wheaton, the No. 15 seed and winner of $2 million in the Grand Slam Cup last month, beat Lars Koslowski 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Agents omnipresent at today's Senior Bowl

Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — At the Senior Bowl, there's as much action in the lobby of the Riverview Hotel as there is on the football field.

The key figures don't wear helmets and shoulder pads. They're agents decked out in expensive suits, ready at the drop of their cellular phone to talk money with a prospective client or make sure that a done deal doesn't come undone.

Every day, a gauntlet of agents stakes out positions in the lobby of the downtown hotel where the players have been staying in preparation for Saturday's Senior Bowl.

■ The Senior Bowl, 1 p.m., ESPN

"It's like a mind game, psychological warfare, that goes on in this lobby," Gene Burrough, a sports agent from Houston, said. "If you're insecure or not prepared, this lobby will drive you crazy."

The agents are easy to spot.

They're usually in conversation with a player or at least hanging close to one. Most carry a briefcase or leather attache, and no self-respecting agent would be caught without his business card or a brochure. Many try to position themselves near a telephone for that quick call to the office, unless they have a cellular phone.

Richard Bell, president of Blue Chip Sports Management of Raleigh., N.C., said it's futile to try and recruit players at the Senior Bowl because so many agents are around and many players already have committed to someone.

"One of the things I like to do is talk to NFL people," such as scouts, personnel directors and general managers, Bell said. "I want the inside scoop. Inside information is vital to me."

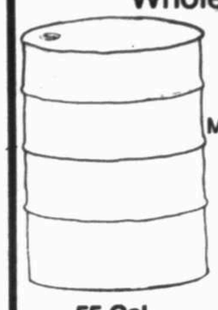

Bell, a former NFL player and sports agent for nine years, also acts like a babysitter to the players who have agreed to sign with his agency. Hence, he spends a lot of time in the lobby.

"I have to protect my interest," Bell said. "This is a nasty business. The worst part is when agents try to interfere with a contractual obligation."

Peter Schaffer, vice president of the Denver-based All Pro Sports and Entertainment Inc., blames the system.

"In this business, nobody has to pay their dues," Schaffer said. "You can print up a business card and you're a sports agent — without any background or training."

"They're everywhere," Kansas State linebacker Elijah Alexander said after being stopped by an agent on his way to lunch Friday. "It's hard to avoid them."

BILLS: Line likes obscurity

(From 1C)

Buffalo gave up this year were the fault of the line. The rest were either caused by good coverage or his unwillingness to get rid of the ball.

Since there are so few numbers with which to judge a line's performance, Wolford said the bottom line for a lineman is wins and losses.

"When you lose, average play is poor; but if you win and play average, it's great," he said. "That's just the way it is with linemen because there's nothing to judge by."

The closest thing to positive stats for a line, Wolford said, are the honors gathered by stars like Kelly and Thurman Thomas.

"We played well enough for our team to win 16 games," he said. "We played well enough that Thurman's the top running back and MVP of the league — and if he didn't get it, Jim Kelly was going to. That's stuff you take pride in."

Added Parker, a sometimes starter, "The big names we've got are Jim Kelly and Thurman Thomas. How well they're doing is how well we're doing."

Wolford and the other Bills' linemen credit much of their success to the fact that most of them have played together for most of the last four seasons.

"Since I've been here, I think I've played next to Jimmy (Ritcher) for the last four years," Wolford said. "Because we've played consistent, our mental mistakes are lessened every year. As a group, we've been pretty solid over the last few years."

Ritcher said there's another, simple reason for the line's success — hard work.

"We still prepare hard each week and we still learn a lot of things each week," he said. "Things that we thought we were doing really well, we'll run up against a team and that same technique's not working. We go back and watch the film and all of a sudden we understand what we we're doing wrong and how to correct it."

They also don't take the praise — and criticism — of outsiders too seriously, Ritcher said. The praise was intense after the first two games, when the Bills scored 87 points.

"When they started putting labels on us — 'The best line in pro football' — we tried to keep it on an even keel and say, 'We're still the same bunch of guys,' and not let it get to our head," he said.

Just call them the No-Name line, Hull said. "We'd rather not have our name out there. That's just the way it is."

Apology not enough, Gibbs says of player

Associated Press

HERNDON, Va. — Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said Friday that backup tackle Ed Simmons' apology for a drunk driving arrest won't change the fact that Simmons "will have to pay a price."

Simmons was arrested early Friday for driving while intoxicated, District of Columbia police said.

Simmons was stopped in the Georgetown section at about 2:30 a.m., according to police spokesman Sgt. Joe Gentile.

"I talked with Ed," Gibbs said. "He told me, 'I just messed up. I shouldn't have done it.' "

MFHS remains perfect

Staff Report

The Midland Freshman girls basketball team stayed unbeaten Friday with a 61-17 rout of Odessa Hood.

The win moved MFHS' record to 13-0 for the season, as Amy Alcala scored 18 points and Veronica Paoge added 10.

MFHS will be back on the floor Wednesday, when it travels across town to play Lee Freshman.

Court provides stay before dawn for convicted killer

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer David Michael Clark was spared from lethal injection Friday only hours before the order for his execution would have expired.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia issued the stay about 2:30 a.m., long after most Texas executions would have been completed.

When told of the action, an elated Clark clapped his hands and exclaimed, "Praise the Lord!" He had spent much of the evening and early morning hours talking with corrections officers and the prison chaplain in a holding cell near the Texas death chamber.

Under Texas law, death sentences are to be carried out on the scheduled date before dawn, or about 7:15 a.m. on Friday. Most of the procedures begin at midnight and are completed within a few minutes.

"If it was up to me, once I found him guilty, I'd walk him out back and do it then," said Lewis Gears, 50, the father of one of the victims and a Texas corrections officer. "But that's not our way. Too many appeals."

Before the high court ruling, a series of state and federal courts late Thursday and early Friday had refused to grant a stay.

Clark, 32, was condemned for the Feb. 18, 1987, fatal shooting, beating and stabbing of Charles Gears and his girlfriend, Beverly Benninghoff, at Gears' home in Bryan.

Prosecutors said Clark and three other suspects, including his fiancee, Mary Copeland, planned to kill Gears and Ms. Benninghoff because they suspected the pair stole some chemicals used to manufacture methamphetamine.

Clark pistol-whipped Gears with a .38-caliber handgun while Ms. Copeland held a .25-caliber weapon on Ms. Benninghoff. Clark then made Gears lie face down on the floor while he beat Gears' head with a wooden club until the weapon broke. When Gears rolled over, Clark covered his face with a pillow and stabbed Gears in the chest numerous times before shooting him.

Ms. Copeland shot Ms. Benninghoff three times but Clark also shot her in the head because he didn't think the previous wounds were severe enough to kill her, testimony showed.

Ms. Copeland is serving life prison term. The other two defendants, Tracy Penuel, and her brother, Gary Penuel, testified against Clark and Ms. Copeland. Penuel received 30 years for burglary.

"It's changed our lives. A big part of it's missing. Our daughter's missing her brother," said the elder Gears. He and his wife, Jo Ann, who also is a prison corrections officer, have two daughters — one, a teen-ager, still lives at home.

"He's the only one that was able to carry on the family name," Gears said of his son. "After he dies and I die, our family name is dead there's nobody else to carry it on. So actually he didn't just wipe out an individual, he wiped out a whole family."

Clark, a construction worker with a 10th-grade education, pleaded guilty midway through his capital murder trial in Bryan, leaving the jury to decide only on punishment.

"He openly admitted it that he did it," the elder Gears said.

Texas Dairy Queens settle menu dispute

FORT WORTH (AP) — In the land of Dairy Queen, Texas will remain a country itself.

Operators of the more than 800 Dairy Queen restaurants in Texas on Friday settled a lengthy dispute with the parent company over advertising and a regional menu.

The agreement between the Texas Dairy Queen Operator's Council and Minneapolis-based American Dairy Queen Corp. allows the Texas restaurants to continue serving regional items like chicken fried steak sandwiches and advertising with its "This is DQ Country" campaign.

A franchise agreement written in 1986 allowed the company to direct the Texas Dairy Queens to stop serving the regional items. The Texas operators worried they could lose a sizable part of their business if they were told to serve Dilly Bars without Belt Buster hamburgers.

Four lawsuits brought by the Texas council were settled with a new franchise agreement.

"That seemed to be the best way to resolve everything," said William G. Hall, president of the council and operator of 65 Dairy Queens in North Texas.

"We're delighted with the results," said Michael Sullivan, president of American Dairy Queen.

Both men said the ties of the Texas stores to Dairy Queen was never in jeopardy.

"That was something we never wanted to lose," Hall said. "We are a part of the worldwide Dairy Queen system. On the other hand, we did feel strongly there were some regional programs that did make sense."

"It was really a question of terms of input and involvement and handling of the marketing dollars," Sullivan said.

The Texas stores use a different advertising campaign and have a broader menu than Dairy Queens in the rest of the country.

Show to feature Killeen's mass shooting

AUSTIN (AP) — "America's Most Wanted" will key its fourth anniversary television show with a segment on the cafeteria slaying in Killeen, including a re-enactment of the shooting that left 24 dead.

That has Killeen's mayor angry, but the Fox network program defended the segment as a sensitive portrayal that is devoted to honoring the survivors and acts of heroism during the worst mass shooting in U.S. history.

"We would like to put that thing to rest," said Mayor Major Blair.

He said the planned re-enactment is "totally out of order."

"It's one of those things that should be left alone," Blair said. "Nobody in this country is proud of what happened."

On Oct. 16, 1991, George Hennard, 35, smashed his pickup truck into a crowded Luby's cafeteria and then, armed with two semiautomatic guns, stalked the restaurant, fatally wounding 23 people.

Law officers dashed into the restaurant and wounded him several times, before Hennard used his final bullet and killed himself.

On Feb. 7, "America's Most Wanted" will devote about half of its hour-long program to speaking with survivors and re-enacting from their point of view what went on in the cafeteria.

The purpose of the segment is a "testimonial to the human spirt," said John Walsh, the show's host.

On Feb. 7, 'America's Most Wanted' will devote about half of its hour-long program to speaking with survivors and re-enacting from their point of view what went on in the cafeteria.

"One of the ways you keep your sanity is by fighting back, and the people of Killeen are certainly a model. These people are a blueprint for survival," he said.

"America's Most Wanted" frequently re-creates crimes in order to seek help in catching fugitives. But the program's producers said that the show is also dedicated toward helping victims, even when there is no criminal to catch, as in the cafeteria shooting.

Walsh said he met for several hours with about 25 people who were either in Luby's or lost loved ones in the shooting.

Bell County victim's counselor Jill Hargrove, who sat in on the session, said it was well handled. Asked if the re-enactment scene might produce more grief for the survivors, she said, "I think that they (America's Most Wanted) will do it in good taste."

But Blair said, "I can see no advantage to bringing it back to the minds of people and eyes of the public."

Transit executive director resigns

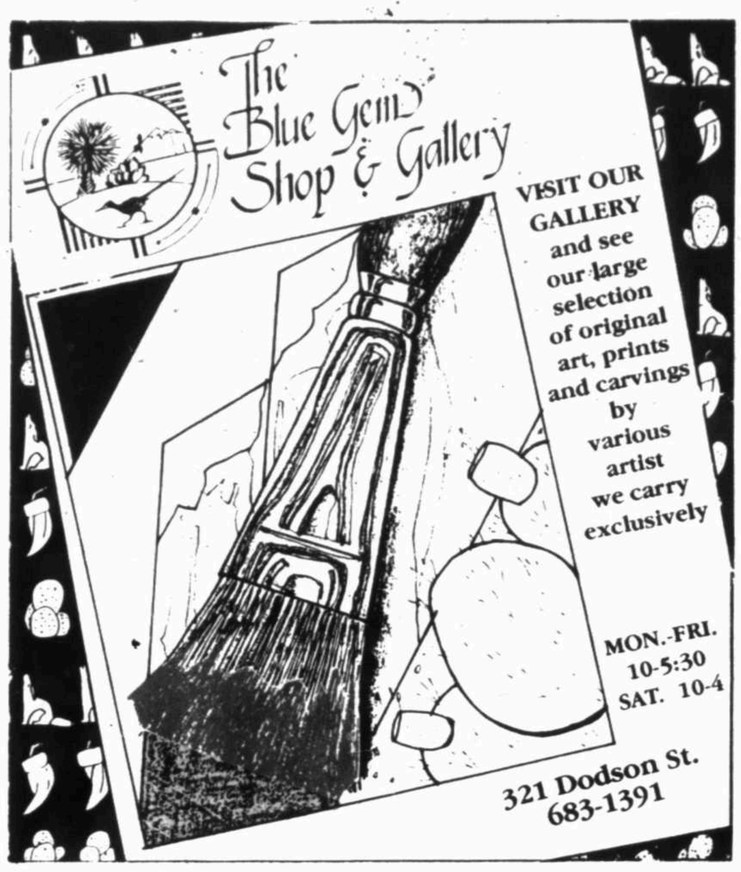

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Area Rapid Transit Executive Director Charles S. Anderson on Friday announced his resignation effective 30 days after DART breaks ground on its light rail system.

Anderson, hired in 1986, held the position longer than any of his five predecessors since the agency's inception in 1984.

"I feel I've done as much as I can do to get us to the point of construction on the light rail starter system, which was my commitment to the board in 1986," said Anderson, 51.

DART's executive director is responsible for the operation of a 950-vehicle network of buses and vans that cover a 700-square mile service area.

Facts About The BIBLE

"LET'S GO HUNTING!" IN TODAY'S LANGUAGE THAT PHRASE BRINGS TO MIND A PLEASANT DAY IN THE FIELDS WITH A GOOD DOG, THE TAKING OF A PHEASANT OR TWO—FINE SPORT! NOT SO, IN BIBLICAL TIMES! TOO OFTEN, IT WAS A CALL TO THE UNPLEASANT DUTY OF RIDDING THE COUNTRYSIDE OF SOME BEAST OF PREY—USUALLY THE FEROCIOUS LION! THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE CONTAIN MANY REFERENCES TO THE LION AND, ALTHOUGH HARDLY A ONE CAN BE FOUND TODAY IN WHAT IS TERMED THE BIBLE LANDS, THE AREA ABOUNDED WITH THEM IN THOSE TIMES.

Texans find inspiration in celestial sightings

By John Brooks
Associated Press

HEREFORD — On Dec. 28, 1991, Shirley Anderson's world changed.

Since then, the world has changed for a growing number of other Hereford residents.

They have seen what Mrs. Anderson calls "The Dancing Sun."

The Dancing Sun is a sign which, its viewers say, usually accompanies sightings of Mary, the mother of Jesus, or messages from her. Such events have been associated with Roman Catholicism, but Mrs. Anderson said The Dancing Sun was seen simultaneously recently by three people: a Catholic, a Presbyterian and a Baptist. "And they all saw the same thing," she said.

Jane Lozoya of Hereford said that not only had she seen The Dancing Sun, but she has seen the Virgin Mary in the sun and sky.

"She was tall," she said. "She is beautiful. The sun dances, goes down and comes back. The rays, the gold around the sun is beautiful."

The Dancing Sun is best seen late in the evening, said Mrs. Anderson. She usually has a group with her at 5:15 p.m. at the Anderson building on the northeast corner of Second and Main.

Mrs. Anderson explained that when the phenomenon is observed, the sun is covered with a white disc. The disc dims the brilliance of the sun so it may be seen. There is a corona around the sun of changing colors which have been seen to pulsate, rotate or spin. The colors change in size and hue, with varying shades of red, blue, green, pink, purple and gold, she said.

Mrs. Anderson said the sun is covered with the disc much of the day, but is best seen late in the evening when the sun is low in the sky and its brightness is less intense.

She first saw the white disc covering the sun when she was driving home from Canyon on the afternoon of Dec. 28. "I left Canyon about 4:30 p.m., and the sun was very bright and bothering my eyes as I drove west," said Mrs. Anderson. "When I was about eight miles outside Hereford with the sun directly in my eyes, it suddenly changed with the white disc appearing in front of it.

"The sky around the sun changed to red surrounded by deep blue, then to gold. The sun pulsated at first, like a beating heart, then alternately began spinning and rotating, as one would turn a steering wheel. The movement was much stronger that first day than I have seen it since, almost like it was going to jump out of the sky, although the colors were about the same as they are every day."

When she arrived home, she told her family and several friends about the phenomenon. Five families said they also witnessed The Dancing Sun on Dec. 28. A growing number of residents say they are seeing the phenomenon.

"I see it every day at 5:15 p.m.," said Christina Lozoya, Jane Lazoya's daughter-in-law and an employee of Mrs. Anderson.

Mrs. Lozoya says she saw it the first time at the St. John Neumann Church in Lubbock in 1988. She said the sun is of varying colors, and the area around the sun is red.

She said her young son, Joshua, had seen the apparition at the Lubbock church and has seen the spectacle in Hereford.

Not everyone sees the same thing.

Kelly Rogers, who was one of about 4,000 people who saw The Dancing Sun at an October prayer conference near Pueblo, Colo., sees the same changes in the sun she had viewed in Colorado.

Homeless group gets donation from Paul Newman's company

TUCSON, Ariz. — Paul Newman's food company helped save a referral service for the homeless through a $12,000 donation.

Primavera Foundation, which runs the program, applied for help from Newman's Own last summer and received a check last month.

The program refers homeless people to other social services for such things as medical care and provides them with a mailing address.

Newman and friend A.E. Hotchner, the company's chief executive officer, select donation recipients every year, said Ursula Hotchner, senior vice president of Newman's Own.

The money comes from profits of foods sold under the Newman's Own label, including salad dressing, salsas, lemonade, popcorn and spaghetti sauces.

SAN FRANCISCO — Lawyer Melvin Belli, who rode the rails in 1933 as the "king of torts," has a spot in the National Hobo Hall of Fame.

Belli hopped trains for three months during research for a project called the "Scientific Basis for Transient Relief." The report became the basis for government aid to hobos and the 1930s movie "Wild Boys of the Road."

"These early hobo activities along with his outstanding legal career and other adventures over his lifetime provide worthy qualifications for induction into the Hobo Hall of Fame," said Santa Fe Bo, also known as Bobb Hopkins, founder of the 15-year-old hobo association.

The group has 3,800 members, including writers, executives and stockbrokers who ride the rails as a hobby. There are about 5,000 full-time hobos nationwide.

Belli participated in the hobo project as a law student at the University of California. His induction into the unique hall was set for Friday night.

The two announced Thursday they plan to marry June 21 in Hagerstown, Md., where Ms. Elliott lives.

Tuckwell, 60, is founding conductor of the Hagerstown-based Maryland Symphony Orchestra. Ms. Elliott, 40, is director of customer relations for Potomac Edison Co.

The Australian-born Tuckwell has toured the world as a French horn soloist.

WAVERLY, Tenn. — The son of country singer Loretta Lynn has been convicted of selling a gram of cocaine to an undercover agent in 1989.

Ernie Lynn, 38, lead guitarist in his mother's band, was convicted Thursday by a Circuit Court jury. He faces eight to 12 years in prison when he is sentenced Jan. 29.

"Not really surprised . . . not here," Lynn said as he left the courtroom. "I'll never spend a day in prison. We're going to take this to the U.S. Supreme Court if we have to."

NEW YORK — Rapper Marky Mark, who usually performs bare-chested, wants the shirts off some fans' backs.

A federal judge Thursday granted a temporary order allowing authorities to seize bogus merchandise of Marky Mark & The Funky Bunch.

Like many musicians, Mark sells "official" T-shirts and other merchandise at his shows, but his lawyer, Jules Zalon, said many people are peddling unofficial copies.

"The group is very hot, and at a number of concerts now, they found there is more than just a little bootlegging," he said.

Counterfeit shirts sell for $10 to $15 outside arenas, about half what licensed ones sell for inside, Zalon said.

The order requested by the group applies to all Marky Mark concerts until a hearing Jan. 27 when Zalon will seek a permanent injunction.

LOS ANGELES — Rocker David Crosby, who has a small role in the movie "Hook," continues his acting efforts with a guest appearance on Tuesday's episode of "Roseanne."

Crosby teams up with another musician, playing the husband of Bonnie Sheridan, who makes a guest appearance as a waitress on the ABC comedy.

Miss Sheridan was with the 1960s group Delany & Bonnie & Friends, which also featured Eric Clapton.

Gas surge causes explosions, fires

CHICAGO (AP) — Explosions caused by a natural gas surge ignited 10 fires that destroyed or damaged 18 buildings Friday, authorities said. One person was killed, two others were reported missing and five were injured, one critically.

"Buildings are burning all around us," witness Sam LaRoussa said shortly after the explosions. He said he saw five buildings explode or burst into flames near his office.

Just before the blasts, the gas surge shook furnaces and sent stoves' pilot lights soaring, witnesses said. A malfunctioning pressure regulator caused the surge, a gas company spokesman said.

Explosions were reported at various sites in a 16-block mixed residential and business area shortly before 4 p.m., said Fire Department paramedic George Medina.

Ten fires damaged or destroyed 18 buildings before being brought under control within 2½ hours, Fire Department spokesman Mike Cosgrove said.

A body was recovered Friday night from the rubble of a demolished building, said fire department spokesman Earl Larsen. He said two other people were missing. Three firefighters were among the injured.

Gas was to remain shut off overnight to about 640 customers in a square-mile area a mile northwest of the downtown business district. The city was organizing shuttles to take residents to overnight shelters.

The surge happened when a low-pressure gas regulator malfunctioned, said Peter Munoz, spokesman for Peoples Gas Co., which serves 842,500 customers in Chicago — more than 90 percent of area homes.

lowered to medium pressure by regulators as it enters a city. Low-pressure regulators further reduce the level to one household appliances can use, Munoz said.

"It's winter, so people have furnaces, heaters running. Suddenly, a burst of gas will come through the appliance causing a flareup. Because it's a very sharp burst, that would create the explosion," he said.

"We've shut off gas to that area and we've got the pressure system under control, at present," Munoz said.

A two-story building was reduced to smoking rubble by one explosion. About two blocks away, another explosion blew parts of the roof off a two-story house and dropped fragments across the street and halfway down an alley.

The blast in the house blew out windows in businesses across the street. Flames shot out attic windows, fanned by a stiff breeze. Firefighters poured water on it with hoses.

Smoke covered the neighborhood, and gawkers on nearby Kennedy Expressway brought rush-hour traffic to a halt.

Witnesses reported gas furnaces and heaters shaking and making odd noises before the blasts. LaRoussa, who owns a shipping business across the street from one building that exploded, said his gas heater "went crazy" before he shut it down. His business wasn't damaged.

Brian Zaramba said his daughter called him to the kitchen when the stove began hissing.

"I went and looked and the pilot light was 3 feet high," Zaramba said.

One firefighter was in fair condition at Cook County Hospital.

Company guilty of coverup, critics say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Dow Corning Corp. study in 1974 found that materials closely related to those used in the company's silicone gel breast implants could cause immune-system reactions.

Dow Corning dismissed the study as "very minor," especially in light of more recent studies. But critics said it is another in a series of company efforts to suppress evidence that its silicone gel implants can cause disorders in the body's immune system.

"They really have done everything possible to cover up evidence that silicone compounds can cause auto-immune diseases," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the consumer-oriented Public Citizen Health Research Group.

The study showed that "a large number of silicone compounds, including some that are in silicone gel breast implants, were found to be immune-enhancing agents," Wolfe said.

Robert LeVier, technical director of Dow Corning's health care businesses, said, "we obviously disagree with him."

He said the work was "a basic screening experiment, not a full-blown study" that included compounds that are "closely related in terms of structure" but not identical to those used in silicone gel breast implants.

Fifteen years later after that early experiment, in 1989 and 1990, "we did six state-of-the-art studies ... that showed absolutely no effect on the immune system whatsoever," LeVier said.

He said the 1974 study was made available to the Food and Drug Administration and the public earlier this year along with other Dow Corning documents.

LeVier acknowledged that the earlier study showed an immune system response from the compounds similar to the breast implant materials, but he said it was very small.

"I don't think there's absolutely no effect (on the immune system) just based on that experiment ... that's why the other experiments (in 1989-90) are useful as well," he said.

Police find suicide note in assailant's apartment

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A suicide note apparently written by a man killed with his 12-year-old hostage in a hail of police gunfire is strong evidence he planned to die in a clash with law officers, authorities said Friday.

The undated note by Bryan French appeared to be addressed to his mother, said Deputy State Medical Examiner Karen Gunson.

French, 20, was gunned down Thursday morning after he broke into a house and threatened to kill Nathan Thomas, 12, with a butcher knife. The child was fatally wounded in the head by the police gunfire.

Police believe the note was written shortly before French set out on a brief crime spree that included another attempted break-in and vandalism, said police spokesman Sgt. Derrick Foxworth.

Police found the four-page note Thursday night in a search of French's apartment.

"I hope to die tonight," the note said, according to Gunson.

She said the note also said, "I love you mom, it's not your fault."

Gunson's office must rule whether French's death was a suicide.

"The note is pretty good evidence of his intent to die," she said.

Police went to the neighborhood about 3:30 a.m. Thursday after receiving a call about a burglary in progress.

A police dog tracked French to a basement window that had been forced open at the home of pediatrician Greg Thomas, 38, and his wife, Martha McMurry, 45.

Officers waited while the parents went upstairs to wake up their two children. McMurry found French in her son's bed and screamed.

The parents and their other son, 8-year-old Benjamin, went into another bedroom as three officers at the foot of the stairs tried to talk French, who had moved out of the bedroom, into surrendering.

"French was very irrational, very angry, and repeatedly threatened to kill the boy," Foxworth said.

He said French, who was out of the officers' sight at the top of the stairs, shouted at the officers about the suicide note and demanded an officer's gun.

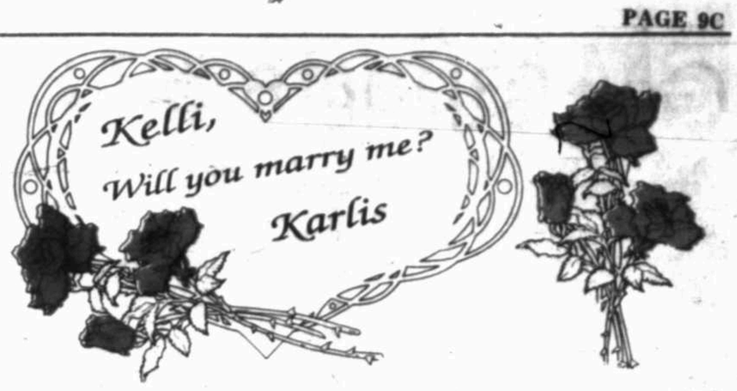

Two police officers outside the house fired at French through a window and missed. Foxworth said French then renewed his threat to kill the boy and began a countdown.

"'Ten, nine, eight, seven, six,' and it was clear in those officers' minds that he was in the process of killing the boy," Foxworth said.

The three officers rushed upstairs and fired at least 16 times, with 14 of the bullets hitting French and two hitting the boy. French died at the scene. The boy died three hours later at a hospital.

Gunson said the autopsy showed no evidence the boy was cut by the knife.

Assistant District Attorney John Bradley said a grand jury will decide whether the officers were justifed in opening fire.

IBM reports $2.8 billion 1991 loss

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM reported a 1991 loss of $2.8 billion Friday, its first-ever annual deficit, caused by two huge set-asides to pay for retiree benefits and a previously announced cost-cutting program.

But the underlying business of the leading computer maker also was weaker than many analysts predicted, illustrating the tough times in the industry and the broader economy.

International Business Machines Corp. reported its first drop in annual revenue since 1946, when the winding down of World War II hurt business. Revenue fell 6.1 percent from 1990 to $64.8 billion.

"1991 was a disappointing year," said Chairman John F. Akers. "We were adversely affected by protracted worldwide economic weakness, competitive pressures and transitions within our product lines."

IBM's problems prompted it to take unusual actions last year. In July, it announced a startling alliance with competitor Apple Computer Inc. to develop advanced personal computers and software. In December, IBM announced a plan to make its business units more independent.

The loss was created by the two enormous charges against earnings, accounting procedures under which money is put aside to pay extraordinary expenses.

One, $2.3 billion after taxes, accounts for the future cost of health care benefits for retirees. Most U.S. companies are required to take such a charge under new accounting rules.

The other, $3.4 billion before taxes, will pay for the cost cutting program. That is greater than the $3 billion IBM originally estimated. The company said the increase came from a higher number of employees leaving.

In 1991's fourth quarter, IBM lost $1.4 billion, or $2.42 a share, due to the $3.4 billion accounting charge to pay primarily for the cost-cutting program. That compares with a profit of $2.5 billion, or $4.30 a share, in 1990's fourth quarter.

Fourth-quarter revenue totaled $22.1 billion, down 4.2 percent from $23.1 billion a year earlier.

Akers said IBM exceeded its employee-reduction goal of 20,000 last year by 9,000 jobs. IBM has been encouraging employees to leave through voluntary severance programs.

The company still plans to cut up to 20,000 more jobs this year. That would put year-end employment at about 324,000.

"We are moving into 1992 a tougher, smarter and more competitive business," Akers said in his statement from IBM headquarters in Armonk, N.Y.

IBM's loss last year translated to $4.95 a share. That compares with a profit of $6.02 billion, or $10.51 a share, in 1990.

Chinese agree to stop piracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said Friday that China's agreement to prevent illegal copying of U.S. products was a promising sign in the bigger battle to open China's markets to more American made goods.

"The agreement, if enforced, will stop the theft of our intellectual property in a very meaningful way," U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills told reporters after a formal ceremony.

Negotiators reached agreement late Thursday, averting a trade war just hours before a midnight deadline. The Bush administration had threatened to double tariffs on a range of Chinese exports to the United States, including electronics, textiles, clothing, low-cost athletic shoes and beer. China had said it would counter with duties on U.S. aircraft, steel, grain and other goods.

"This (agreement) means of course the need for retaliation is avoided, which is a happy circumstance for both the United States and China," Hills said.

And the pact "can't help but be constructive," she said, in settling a much broader dispute over Chinese barriers to U.S. goods, including import quotas and bans, complicated licensing requirements and unpublished trade rules.

"We believe that we have made a bridge toward better understanding of our respective problems in these various negotiations," Hills said. "... The fact that we have a good working relationship at a high level with the Chinese government can't help but be constructive."

In Beijing, the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade said, "China hopes that both sides will continue the positive approach and appropriately settle other trade disputes as soon as possible through negotiations on an equal and friendly basis."

China could suffer imposition of harsh penalties unless it commits to opening its markets by October. Negotiators for the two sides plan to meet next in Beijing in late February.

The U.S. trade deficit with China, estimated at $13 billion in 1991, has quadrupled since 1984 and is now second only to the gap with Japan.
