Mickey Mouse LSD rumors trip into Big Spring schools

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

The character of Mickey Mouse has brought millions of children joy since he was spawned from Walt Disney's fertile mind, but according to a mimeographed handbill circulating around Big Spring, the popular rodent possibly may be used to dupe innocent children into taking the drug LSD.

The memo — which is not an official PTA or Big Spring Independent School District announcement — warns parents that Mickey Mouse acid or LSD has been circulated widely through some parts of the United States as part of or in the form of "lick and stick tatoo stickers."

The handbill goes on to say that contact with the skin or orally could be potentially dangerous to children.

The memo states: "The picture (on the sticker) is of Mickey Mouse in the Walt Disney movie 'The Sorcerer's Apprentice from Fantasia.' Mickey is wearing a red gown, blue hat, yellow shoes and sticker appears to be a lick and stick tatoo transfer."

The memo also says that the stickers or transfers has been reported in the Big Spring area.

Similar messages have appeared in Dallas and other states such an Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and South Carolina. The warnings say that innocent children may be harmed for life by ingesting the powerful halluncinogen.

MICKEY MOUSE? — Stick-on transfer tatoos resembling Mickey Mouse and other Disney characters such as the one pictured above may be laced with LSD, according to a handbill circulating in Big Spring.

Detective Bill Price of the Big Spring Police major crimes task force said his department had received reports from a confidential informant that some of the stickers had been brought into Big Spring, but he was quick to add the police had not yet determined to what extent the stickers may have infiltrated Big Spring.

"It is a good idea to make parents aware that the stickers may be in the area," Price said. "Parents must be cautious because kids might not know this is a drug."

"We have the stickers under investigation, but we don't believe them to be in the elementary schools or junior highs. We're checking leads out to see if the stuff is actually in Big Spring. Anyone with pertinent information should contact the police right away," he said.

Big Spring ISD superintendent Lynn Hise said he has heard no confirmed reports of the LSD in the schools.

"Just as a precautionary measure we sent a message to all the principals to announce to students the possibility of the stickers. The principals of the elementary schools may choose to send notes home with younger students."

"It's good practice to warn students against anything like this," Hise said.

Emily Ward, public relations officer at Malone-Hogan Hospital said the Food, drink increase fun at Howard County show

By MIKE DOWNEY

A stock show is like a goulash. As beef, vegetables and paprika combine for a delicious dish, so must several ingredients blend for a successful livestock show. Animals, people and events were already simmering yesterday afternoon at the Howard County show barns — a tantalizing taste of what's to come.

Several women worked diligently in the concession stand area to prepare for today's and Saturday's onslaught of starved and thirsty participants and viewers. The usual clean-up problems expected of a seldom-used area were increased due to vandalism at some time in the past, said one woman.

Another concession stand laborer listed the components of the show's menu: "Mostly hamburgers, burritos, candy, cokes, coffee — the usual things; nothing like nachos though 'cause the kids don't like to work with their animals, then try and eat something with their hands."

The two ladies laughed as they recalled a past mistake when they had forgotten the cardinal rule of stock show eating. "We had brought out a ton of popcorn and planned to make a fortune selling it. Of course none of the kids wanted to eat popcorn."

Look for the eats to be ready at 2 p.m. today and 8 a.m. Saturday at the Howard County Junior Livestock Show.

The final cleansing and shearing is important in preparing a lamb for show as was evident by the serious looks on the faces of those working on animals yesterday. A young face, brown knit in concentration, carefully following the curve of a lamb's back to clip every errant strand of wool or a somber girl delicately drying a dripping lamb with a hot-air hose were examples of time and effort spent in preparation.

In another barn, the mingled odors of steer, swine and sand were strong, almost a tangible force as they mixed with the sounds of the stock. The high, screeching squeal of a hog and the bass rumble of a calf could be heard with the clatter of feed buckets. Twenty barrows were weighed in yesterday.

In yet another barn, several head of sheep draped in shapeless sacks milled about in their pens — evidence of an exhibitors effort. In the doorway of the building, waist-high cages held the first creatures to be judged in the Howard County show: the capons. The bright white fowls stood three to a cage, their fat wide bodies balanced on two stick-like legs. Their red eyes suspiciously marked each movement of every passerby.

The capon show begins at 3 p.m. today with the swine exhibit to start at 7 p.m. Saturday's show opens at 8 a.m. with lambs featured, followed by the steer competition at 1 p.m.

Shaw is seeking re-election to Texas House from new 69th

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, despite the fact that the state's legislative districts hang in limbo, announced Thursday his candidacy for re-election to Texas House District 69 that was drawn by the Legislative Redistricting Board last fall.

A U.S. Justice Department's decision Tuesday that newly drawn Senate and House districts violated the Voting Rights Act threw incumbents and new candidates alike into confusion as to which district they would be filing in.

A three-judge federal court in Dallas Thursday decided it would draw Texas House and Senate boundaries for the 1982 election, but would let the Legislature decide on redistricting in 1983.

The federal panel said it will only modify the legislative redistricting plans in areas cited by the Justice Department this week as violating minority voting rights. It appears the rest of the state will escape revision.

Flaws listed by the Justice Department were in San Antonio and Houston senatorial districts and in House districts in San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, El Paso, Lubbock and an area involving Zavala and Crockett counties.

The federal panel also extended the Feb. 1 filing deadline for the state's May 1 primary elections to 6 p.m. March 19.

"Right now I must operate under the assumption that my residence will end up in the new 69th District as it is drawn in the plan now under

The men will discuss the Caylor book, which features a variety of the western's artist paintings. The introduction to the book was written by Pickle.

The program is produced by Gary James Tidwell, who grew up in Big Spring. Tidwell was here during the Big Spring-Howard County Railroad Centennial in May. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tidwell.

New tax rules help savers, investors

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the third in a series of five articles written to help taxpayers prepare their 1981 income tax returns. This article concerns income exclusions.

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's effort to stimulate personal saving and investment will pay off for millions this year when they file their 1981 income-tax returns.

A couple using a joint return can reduce income subject to taxes by up to $400 for certain interest or corporate dividends earned last year. For a single person, the exclusion is $200.

Second, $2,000 of interest received by a couple from a so-called "All Savers Certificate" in 1981 is tax-exempt; a single taxpayer may exempt $1,000.

But the vast majority of Americans who bought these certificates since they were first offered Oct. 1 will be paid the interest when the one-year certificates mature and will claim the exclusion only after they get their money back. Thus, only the relatively few savers who elected to receive periodic All-Savers interest checks in 1981 will use any part of the exclusion on their 1981 returns.

The two new exclusions are available to taxpayers whether or not they itemize deductions. However, a person filing the short Form 1040A must fill out Page 2, and those filing the long Form 1040 must attach Schedule B if:

— Any interest was received or credited to your account during the year from an All-Savers Certificate, or if — Interest (other than All-Savers) totaled over $400 or dividends were more than $400 regardless of whether the return is being filed by a couple or a single person.

Action/reaction: Poor reception

Q. On my TV, channel 13 on cable does not come in clearly. Is this the fault of my set or are other people having the same problem?

A. Big Spring Cable TV Inc. says they have had some complaints of poor reception but accredited it to the work being done on Channel 4 here in Big Spring (Channel 13 on cable). Channel 4 said the last two weeks to 10 days should have been clear reception but work on the transmitter was still going on. Differences in the quality of reception could be due to the area in which a person lives.

Judges to redraw district lines

DALLAS (AP) — Three federal judges have decided to take on the nasty job of redrawing district lines for Texas legislative elections, pleasing everyone involved in the case — except themselves.

Bemoaning the "chaotic process" that forced the court to intervene in the "legislative function" of redistricting, the three-judge panel Thursday also extended the May 1 primary filing deadline for the Texas House and Senate races from midnight Monday to 6 p.m. on March 19.

"The only way for the elections to proceed without delay — perhaps substantial delay — is for the court to adopt an interim plan" until the Legislature draws permanent district lines, said appeals court Judge Carolyn D. Randall.

She said the court accepted the task "with great reluctance."

"Without question, it (Texas' redistricting process) should be changed," said U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer in a separate statement. He noted that because the Legislature is not in session and the Legislative Redistricting Board no longer exists, only the courts can negotiate Voting Rights Act challenges with the U.S. Justice Department.

The decision came after six days of hearings in a legal challenge of the plan drawn by the five-man, all-Democratic LRB. Opponents of the plan said it violated the Voting Rights Act by diluting minority votes, and on Monday the Justice Department agreed, effectively vetoing the LRB plan.

Republicans said the LRB plan was partisan, that it unfairly helped Democrats and hurt the GOP. Their lawyers urged the court to abandon the LRB lines and accept their proposals, or to devise an entirely new map.

Texas Democratic Party chief Bob Slagle, emphasizing the "confusion" among would-be candidates, joined lawyers representing the state in asking the court to adopt the LRB plan so the many details of running an election won't have to be redone and the election delayed.

The court's decision fell somewhere in between.

"Everybody won," said Joaquin Avila, attorney for the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, one of the plaintiffs in the case.

Catholic Education Week

Prizes will be awarded local marathon walkers

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

The Marathon Walk set Sunday is one of several events planned for National Catholic Education Week, according to Sister Lucy of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church and School.

Check-in time for the walk is 1 p.m. Sunday at the Highland Mall. Starting time is 2 p.m. Sponsor sheets may be obtained at the church or at the school, 1009 Hearn.

The 11-mile walk will begin at Highland Mall and go west on FM 700 to West Highway 80, east on 4th street through town to FM 700 east, and returning to Highland Mall.

Prizes will be awarded to the walker completing the 11-miles in the categories of the fastest time, the most money, most pledges, oldest participant and youngest participant.

Sister Lucy said schools across the country will be observing National Catholic Education Week in a variety of ways.

Theme of the week is "The Good News in Catholic Education."

Children at the school this week have been preparing essays on why they attend Catholic school, and what changes they would like to see within the school.

Last year, many people participated in a similar marathon, Sister Lucy said. She said she saw "The most beautiful spirit" on the behalf of the community in support of the walk.

"They all got behind us," she said.

The walk earned $7,000 last year. Money made goes into purchases for the school to build up the curriculum, "Things the budget doesn't allow for."

Other events during the week will be Monday, student day.

On Monday, students at the Immaculate Heart of Mary school will observe student day. Students will attend a morning assembly and will be given a key, upon which they will write something they find positive about their school.

"At the end of the week, we'll put the key in a treasure box," Sister Lucy said.

On Tuesday, Parent's Day will be observed. Open house is set from noon to 2 p.m. This will afford parents the chance to "see our school in operation."

Visitors from the general public are also invited, Sister Lucy said.

At 2 p.m. Tuesday, students will sponsor a tea for guests.

Wednesday is Teacher Appreciation Day. Students are planning the day.

Friday, activities will culminate in a Mass at 8:45 a.m.

are available to those who file the long Form 1040. These adjustments include:

— Job-related moving expenses, if the change in job added 35 miles or more to the distance from your old home to your place of work. Any such expenses reimbursed by your employer must be reported as income. You must attach Form 3903.

— Amounts you set aside in 1981 (and this year before you file your return) in an Individual Retirement Account. Such accounts were not allowed in 1981 for any worker who was covered by a company pension plan, but the rules have been changed radically for 1982 and later years.

— Any penalty you paid for early withdrawal from a savings account.

— Alimony, but not child support or voluntary payments to a former spouse.

— Parts of certain pensions received by persons under age 65 who are totally and permanently disabled. The full pension must be listed as income on Line 7 and any tax-exempt portion listed on Line 28. You must attach Form 2440.

— Certain business expenses, such as travel and lodging, that were not reimbursed by the employer. Attach Form 2106.

Every employee should receive from his or her employer a Form W-2 listing wages paid during 1981. But you must report all wages received, even if you don't get a W-2. In addition to the obvious wages and non-exempt interest and dividends, here are some other forms of income that must be listed on your tax return:

— Tips.

— Sick pay or disability payments received from an insurance company or anyone other than your employer. If paid by your employer, such benefits should be included on your W-2.

— Strike benefits paid out of union dues.

— Refunds of state or local income taxes if the refund is for a year in which you claimed an itemized deduction for such taxes. If only part of the deduction cut your federal taxes, list only that part as income.

— Alimony received.

— Profits from the sale of property. In most cases, if you owned the property a year or longer, only 40 percent of this capital gain is subject to tax. The Internal Revenue Service offers two publications, 544 and 550, to help you figure capital gains and losses.

— Some pensions and annuities. If any or all such income is taxable depends on the type of plan and your contribution to it. Get Publication 575 for assistance.

— Some or all your unemployment compensation. After a single person's income, including unemployment compensation, passes $20,000, half the benefit is taxable. For a couple filing a joint return the threshold is $25,000.

NEXT: Deductions.

hospital had not reported any cases of children being treated for LSD.

Albert Smith, superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital said, "No cases of the LSD stickers have come to my attention. We have not heard any reports from the medical staff concerning these stickers. I have heard of these stickers and LSD is a very dangerous drug. I hope they do not get started in the area."

Mrs. Ward said it was a good idea for parents to become aware of the possibility of the LSD stickers, but she advised them not to panic about the situation.

challenge," Shaw said.

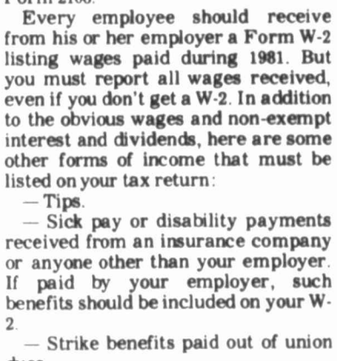

"In 1981, the Legislature drew new Congressional, House and Senate districts based on the 1980 census population figures. At that time I expressed my displeasure at the way the whole process was handled, and now it appears likely that none of these plans will stand the test of constitutionality," he added.

At the present time the 69th District pairs Rep. Shaw with Rep. Jerry Cockerham, R-Monahans, in a cumbersome district that stretches 300 miles to the El Paso county line. If the remap plan stands the two will face each other in the general election to see who wins the right to serve the 69th District.

Counties included in the district are: Howard, Borden, Crane, Culberson, Glasscock, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Loving, Reagan, Reeves, Upton, Ward and Winkler.

"I took one look at the map of the new district and promptly signed up for flying lessons, and last week I soloed for the first time. I'll spend a great deal of time over the next few months travelling throughout the new district, meeting people and seeking their support," Rep. Shaw said.

Shaw said he expects the federal court's remap to affect the 69th District somewhat because of conflicts with El Paso and Lubbock divisions.

LARRY DON SHAW
.....announces

"I expect the 69th District to be a bit more compact and perhaps we may have less of Rep. Cockerham's district included, but right now anything is really just a guess," Rep. Shaw said.

Shaw said he would base his campaign on important issues and on his record in the 67th Legislature. He said he hopes to inform voters of his dreams and goals for the people of his district.

"I make the same pledge to the people of the new 69th District that I made in my last campaign: I'll work hard for you and I'll seek your advice and as long as I'm your representative, you'll know that your voice in the Texas House is speaking up for you and that your vote in the Legislature is not for sale at any price," Rep. Shaw said.

Shaw sponsored the landmark Agent Orange Bill which was designed to aid Texas Vietnam Veterans suffering from exposure to the chemical defoliant Agent Orange.

He co-sponsored bill calling for the elimination of the state inheritance tax, stiffer penalties for drug dealers and rapists, the promotion of gasohol and generic drug substitutions.

Rep. Shaw also appointed to two House subcommittees: The steering committee for the House Democratic Caucus and the House Study Group.

Shaw said he expects the race against Rep. Cockerham will be a tough one, but he vowed he would not be outworked on the campaign trail.

"I won with hard work and straight talk in 1980 and that will be my campaign strategy again this year," Rep. Shaw said.

Credit union awards prizes

Al Valdes, president of the Cosden Employees Credit Union, said last night's meeting attracted over 1,000 credit union members and 63 persons split up $3,000 in prize money given out at the gathering.

"We had fine attendance last night and we are certainly proud that the credit union's 12 percent interest rate remained stable all year. We were also able to apply 10 percent interest on passbook accounts in the last quarter of 1981," Valdes said.

The meeting was in the Big Spring High School cafeteria.

Cauble convicted

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Millionaire Rex Cauble said he was "surprised" when jurors found him guilty of financing and profiting from an elaborate drug smuggling scheme.

Cauble was not the only one surprised.

When jurors returned to the courtroom after nearly nine hours of deliberations defense lawyers looked confident.

But their confidence quickly faded when the court clerk read off a guilty verdict on all 10 counts of an indictment charging the rancher with racketeering, conspiracy and embezzlement.

The rancher was accused of masterminding an elaborate drug smuggling scheme that prosecutors said brought 106 tons of marijuana from Colombia to Texas during 1977 and 1978.

The 68-year-old rancher and his attorneys, looking grim and pale, stood quietly as the verdicts were read.

Afterwards, Cauble said, "I am surprised and disappointed, and that's all I can say right now."

Cauble's attorneys weren't even saying that much. They refused comment, citing a gag order imposed by U.S. District Judge William Steger at the onset of the three-week trial.

Steger delayed sentencing until Feb. 22.

Cauble faces a maximum of 95 years in prison and forfeiture of one-third of all his vast business and ranching empire, estimated at between $55 and $80 million.

After Steger released the jurors, defense attorney G. Brockett Irwin walked across the room and shook hands with Assistant U.S. Attorney David Baugh.

"Congratulations," Irwin said.

"I don't think that's necessary," said a solemn Baugh, "But thanks anyway."

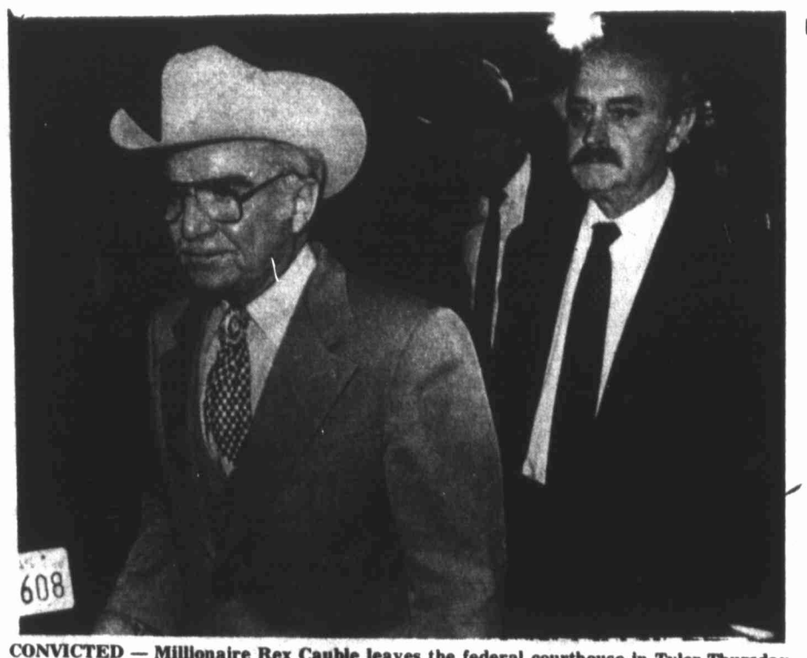

When jurors returned to the courtroom Thursday night, some were smiling and laughing at a quiet comment from one of the panel members.

Defense attorneys apparently interpeted the levity as a good sign while prosecutors looked grim. But the mood on both sides quickly changed when the verdicts were announced.

Spectators, including many Cauble supporters, appeared stunned. Several were teary eyed and a few wept openly.

Carolyn McConnel, a Cauble office manager who testified during the trial, cried softly as she left the courthouse and whispered to a man standing near her, "He's innocent."

Cauble and his attorneys left the courthouse quickly after meeting for a few minutes in Steger's chambers. Cauble remains free on $250,000 bond.

CONVICTED — Millionaire Rex Cauble leaves the federal courthouse in Tyler Thursday night after being convicted on charges he financed and profited from an elaborate smuggling ring that used shrimp boats to ferry 106 tons of marijuana from Colombia into Texas. Cauble remains free on a $250,000 bond. Following Cauble is Charles Burton, one of his attorneys.

Dozier praises Italian commandos

VICENZA, Italy (AP) — U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, rescued after 42 days in the hands of Red Brigades' kidnappers, today thanked Italian authorities for the "speed and precision" with which he was freed.

He said at a news conference that the commandos who rescued him from a Padua apartment Thursday were "professionals," and that the people of Italy have a right to be proud of them.

Dozier's wife, Judith, stood next to the general as he met reporters and gave a statement from notes. Dozier was dressed in his military uniform, with rows of ribbons on his chest.

The statement was broadcast live to the United States.

Italian newspapers hailed the 90-second police raid that freed the 50-year-old American general Thursday as the greatest victory to date against the ultra-leftist terrorists. It was the first operation since 1975 to free a captive of the Red Brigades, who enjoyed an aura of invincibility.

"The Dozier case marks a turnaround," said the conservative Rome newspaper Il Tempo in a front-page editorial.

Dozier rested in seclusion at a NATO hospital in Vicenza with his wife and daughter. He was to make a statement at a televised news conference this afternoon, but the Army said he would answer no questions.

The general embraced his wife, Judith, and daughter, Cheryl, in a tearful reunion in his hospital suite on the NATO oase in this north Italian town. U.S. officials said he was in fine condition but need rest after 42 days in captivity.

Dozier was rescued just before noon Thursday by 10 commandos from an elite anti-terrorist squad who broke into the apartment where he was held in Padua, 19 miles south of Vicenza.

One of the raiders swung a rifle and floored a terrorist pointing a pistol at the head of the general, who was bound and gagged, shoeless and dressed in a blue warm-up suit.

No shots were fired, police said.

The commandos arrested three men and two women, and investigators began questioning them for leads to their accomplices. Officials said they expected to find eight terrorists in the apartment. They sealed off the neighborhood, where many students live, for half an hour after the raid but no more arrests were made.

The Italian news agency ANSA reported the raiders seized 15 pistols, five submachine guns, seven hand grenades, six packages of plastic explosive, $16,000 worth of lire, false identity documents and an "archive" of information about people living in Venice.

Police would not say how they knew where Dozier was being held. But a U.S. official said the police captured some members of the Red Brigades "column" that was holding the general, and one of them talked.

Three of the five people arrested were identified by police as Antonio Savasta and Emilia Libera, long-sought members of the Red Brigades' Rome column, and Cesare di Lenardo, 22, from Udine, northeast of Venice.

Savasta, a 27-year-old former law student, was wanted on a number of other charges, including involvement in the kidnap-murder of former Premier Aldo Moro in 1978.

Teen held in killing of Turkish official

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police raided a home in a middle-class suburb and arrested a teen-ager on a murder charge after Turkey's consul general was assassinated in a burst of gunfire only a week after he had turned down an offer of official protection.

Armenian terrorists claimed responsibility for the killing Thursday of Consul General Kemal Arikan, the third Turkish consular official in Los Angeles killed in nine years. Deputy Police Chief James Hardin said officers were "looking for at least one other suspect."

Hanpig "Harry" Sassounian, 19, of Pasadena, was booked late Thursday for investigation of murder in Arikan's killing, said police Sgt. Dudley Varney. Arikan was shot as he waited at a stoplight on a busy city street while he was driving to work.

Three juveniles were held for questioning for several hours but were released, Varney said.

Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates said the ambush killing came a week after the 54-year-old diplomat was warned that his life was in danger but turned down an offer of police protection.

"We have no idea why he chose to do what he decided to do, but he did refuse our offers," Gates said.

Minutes after Arikan was shot, anonymous calls claiming responsiblity were received by various news organizations, including the Washington bureau of The Associated Press.

"We have just shot a Turkish diplomat in Los Angeles," the caller in Washington said. The male voice identified himself as a member of the Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide.

Armenian nationalists accuse the Turks of slaughtering 1.5 million of their countrymen in Turkey in 1915 and driving hundreds of thousands more into exile. The Turkish government never has acknowledged the accusations of genocide.

A friend of Arikan, Akif Keskin, said the consul general seemed to have a premonition of his assassination, but stopped using bodyguards because he felt they could not save him.

"He told me, 'If someone wants to kill me, he will whether I am guarded or not. Why should I get a young bodyguard killed too?'" Keskin said.

Arikan was alone when he pulled his white Ford out of the garage of the high-rise apartment he shared with his wife, Nuran.

It was 9:56 a.m. and rain was beginning to fall as Arikan turned the corner and headed up Comstock Avenue to busy Wilshire Boulevard and his office at the Turkish consulate two miles away in Beverly Hills.

He stopped at a red light. Eyewitnesses and police said two dark-haired young men rushed up to the car and opened fire through the door and window of the driver's side. A hail of bullets, eight or 10 in all, smashed through metal and glass.

The gunmen fled to a waiting car, the witnesses said, and sped away while Arikan, hit in the head and chest, slumped over dead.

His car rolled, hit two autos and crashed into a tree.

"The car was rolling, like by itself, like there was no driver," said construction engineer Rick Collette, who looked up from his work nearby and saw two young men, about 18 to 21 years old, running away.

Police found a 9mm pistol and a .45-caliber pistol in ivy where witnesses saw the assassins pause before jumping in a white Chevrolet Camaro. All the bullets in the guns had been discharged.

Witnesses noted the license number of the car, and police traced it to a home in a middle-class area of Pasadena, where it was confiscated and the four young men were taken into custody, said Pasadena Police spokesman Rocky McAlister.

"Our revolutionary struggle began in 1975," the caller to the AP said after Arikan was killed. "Our sole targets are Turkish diplomats and institutions."

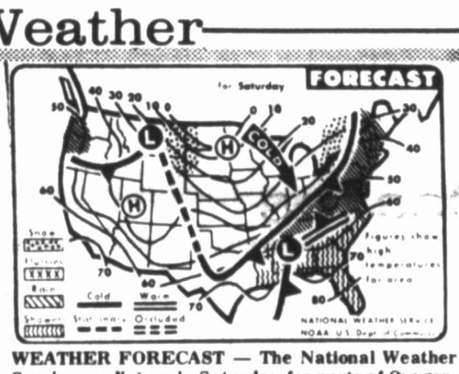

In a written statement, President Reagan called the attack "a tragic event," and ordered the FBI to join the investigation by the Los Angeles Police Department.

Reagan said Arikan "was assassinated in an apparent act of terrorism. I condemn this vicious act."

On Jan. 27, 1973, Turkish Consul General Mehmet Baydar and Vice Consul Bahadir Demir were shot to death at a hotel in Santa Barbara. Gourgen Yanikian, 77, of Santa Barbara was imprisoned for the attack.

On Oct. 6, 1980, two gasoline bombs were tossed at the Bel-Air home then occupied by Arikan.

Only Clements knows about prison study?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, who says he heard about it from prison Director Jim Estelle, apparently is the only man in Texas who knows anything about a supposed federal grand jury investigation of the special master assigned to monitor state prisons.

Clements insisted Thursday that Special Master Vincent Nathan and his staff are the target of an investigation of their "misbehavior."

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges of Houston, however, said there is no investigation, and never was.

Nathan has demanded an apology from the governor.

In a brief statement, Nathan said it was unfortunate Clements made the remarks without "adequate knowledge or information. Under the circumstances, he owes an apology to me and members of my staff."

According to Hedges, attorneys for the state brought some evidence to his attention regarding Nathan and his prison monitors.

Hedges said his office "determined there had been no violations of federal law." He said an investigation would have been ordered if federal laws were violated.

Nevertheless, Clements, basing his information on what he said Estelle told him, insisted there was an ongoing investigation.

"That master and those monitors we have over there ... have been in a state of misbehavior," said the governor. "One of the reasons that this master now is refusing to comment with respect to some of the controversies is because those monitors and the master himself are under a grand jurh investigation."

Clements said reporters seeking further information should talk with Estelle.

"I have no knowledge of any federal grand jury investigation," Estelle said. "I'm not privvy to that kind of information, nor should I be expected to be."

Nathan was appointed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to monitor the federal court's order for reforms in Texas prisons. Earlier this week, Attorney General Mark White asked Justice to fire Nathan. The state's request says Nathan has incited prison unrest and has had improper contact with reporters.

"I would say that their state of misbehavior is certainly subject to scrutiny by this grand jury and it could be, and I want to underline could be, that there will be the result of a criminal charge. Certainly withholding information and involving themselves in a conspiracy, so to speak, within the prisons is a criminal matter," said Clements.

Nathan told The Associated Press Thursday that he knew nothing about the grand jury investigation Clements mentioned.

"I am not aware that is occurring," he said. "Grand jury proceedings are secret proceedings.

Transplant is last chance for 8-year-old

DALLAS (AP) — Eight-year-old Cassie McPherson knows she may one day soon drown in her own blood.

As each second passes, her mother says, the possibility increases that blood will pour uncontrollably through her stomach walls, and she will suffocate.

"There is nothing more terrifying for me as a mother than to hold her after she starts bleeding through the nose or mouth or rectum and not know if it's going to stop," said Cassie's mother, Carolyn McPherson of Seagoville, a city about 10 miles south of Dallas.

Mrs. McPherson said Cassie knows "all the details" of her plight. "She knows every minute of it (bleeding), what might happen. It's terrifying to her."

Cassie was born with cyst on her liver that blocks bile production. Doctors have tried all possible cures and operated several times.

Now, they say, her liver has deteriorated so badly that her only chance is a liver transplant, a rare medical procedure performed by only one American surgeon.

That doctor, Thomas Starzl of the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, has agreed to take Cassie as a patient.

Mrs. McPherson, after hesitating for years because of the experimental nature of liver transplants, has agreed to let Starzl operate. She noted that the chances of long-term survival have greatly improved since Starzl performed the first liver transplant in 1963.

But no donor liver is available.

No liver that is the right size and blood type has become available since Cassie became Starzl's patient last July.

Livers are difficult to obtain because — unlike kidneys — livers can be transplanted only after the donor has died.

For best results, the liver must be removed from a body between the time the brain dies but before the heart stops beating. After the liver is removed, Starzl has only about 14 hours to begin the transplant operation.

FRESH WATER FROM AN OLD WELL

Searching

The story is told of an old man who lost a coin one day at breakfast. When a friend came by later, he found him in the yard searching the ground.

"What are you doing, Joe?" he asked.

"Looking for the coin I dropped," he answered.

"Where did you lose it?"

"In the house."

"Then why are you out here?"

"Because," the old man replied, "the light is better out here."

"People searching for truth, for meaning, for purpose in life need light to find answers. Sometimes, help can come from wise men or women; sometimes it comes from books such as the Bible. Most often the answers come from ourselves. The Bible talks about "a still small voice" (I Kings 19:12). Some people call that their conscience; believers know it to be God's whisper in their hearts. If you are confused, disoriented, uncertain, perhaps you've been looking in the wrong place for answers. Like the old man who went outside to seek a coin lost in his house, we may need more light, too. But going outside isn't the answer. Going inside — inside ourselves — is.

Something else to worry about

HERE'S something for the man who has nothing. Nothing to worry about, that is.

A research at Washington University in St. Louis, using data processing techniques and space-age technology developed to study other planets, has made a startling discovery about our own home.

FORGET ABOUT the dangers looming over California from the San Andreas fault. We in mid-America have our own concerns.

The Washington University team has discovered the Missouri Gravity Low, a rift in the crust of North America that extends from Idaho to the southern Appalachian Mountains. In all, the rift is estimated to be 1,700 miles long — twice as long as the famous San Andreas fault.

FOR NOW WE CAN all remain calm. The rift is considered seismically inactive. But its intersection with the Reelfoot Rift which underlies the Mississippi River Valley has apparently created a "zone of weakness" 60 miles by 30 miles, the scientists say.

Almost all the 1,000 local earthquakes which occurred between 1974 and 1979 were within this zone, according to the scientists.

THE BENEFICIARY of this information is New Madrid, Mo., immediately north of the intersection point. New Madrid was the center of an 1811 earthquake which changed the course of the Mississippi River.

Soon perhaps, New Madrid will become a tourist attraction in the mold of San Francisco. After all, it's not every day one gets to visit the epicenter of a zone of weakness.

THE MORE FAINT-HEATED among us, however, will have to be content to worry about it all.

Awry, all ready

Meet Ronald Reagan, Libertarian.

That's right, Libertarian.

You remember the Libertarian Party — that's the party of Minimalist Government. The party that wants to reduce the operation of the federal government to little more than a postage-stamp factory.

The size of a postage stamp is just about the size of the U.S. government these days, thanks to Tuesday night's unveiling by the president of his so-called New Federalism.

TO FIND OUT how the new, improved, pint-sized government is working, we went and talked with Yusef Awry, the portly and amiable man in charge of the United States after Reagan dumped 99 percent of the federal government in the hands of state and local governments.

Mr. Awry holds forth from a cluttered, closet-sized room in the basement of the old U.S. Capitol Building, which is all that's left of the federal government.

"Allo," says Mr. Awry. "I am Awry. You okay?"

It's his typical greeting.

"We're fine, Mr. Awry. Njce and stable. Tell us," we say as we quickly scan the entire U.S. government in a matter of seconds, "tell us, is that the old Department of Housing and Urban Development we see there?

Awry picks up a dollhouse, and a man-doll and woman-doll fall out.

"Ah, Joe Q. Public and Jane, his wife," says Awry.

"You hung on to them, we see," we say to Awry.

"Yes, and that's not all. Here's the Treasury." He holds up a piggy bank. "Shake it." We do. "Empty! Hah!" he says.

"Well, it's a rather tight ship you run here, Mr. Awry."

"Ship? Hah! I show you ship!" He picks up a matchstick model of an old clipper ship.

"The entire American Navy!" he boasts. Suddenly, the model slips out of his hand and breaks on the floor.

"Shhh!" He cries. "Don't nobody tell duh Russians."

We began to worry about something else when we saw the ship fall.

"Uh, Mr. Awry, is that, uh, lightbulb over there on the floor with the purple glow — is that the U.S. nuclear arsenal?"

"What? This?" He steps across the room and accidentally crushes the lightbulb.

"Oh well, we still got the H-bomb," he says. Immediately he pulls a large, plastic letter "h" from his pocket and holds it up for us to view.

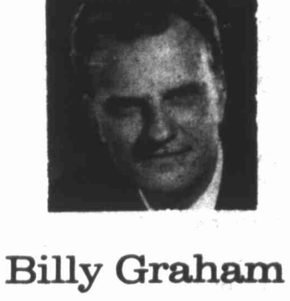

"Mr. Awry," we say, beginning to suspect that the man is more than just caretaker for the remnants of the United States government, "are you, well, are you Mr. Reagan's replacement since he retired to Santa Barbara?"

"REPLACEMENT? What? I've been running the show all along! I was the one that told Bill Clark where South America is! I was the one who told Dick Allen not to linger in the watch bazaar so long when we took a trip to Tokyo. I've been around a long time — I was around in FDR's day. In fact, I was the one that called for a new deal in that poker game. You know that was the craziest poker game — where all the legislation, the public works projects and all that, came from is beyond me. It was just a poker game. A shady little poker game. And all I said was, "Hey, let's have a new deal!"

By now, Awry has forgotten his audience. He's wandering around the District of Columbia, tripping over unused rocket ships, clutching the plans for 50 years of tax cuts in his hands, reminiscing out loud about the good old days.

We leave him now: a bloated, useless and self-absorbed bureaucracy, waiting for the Great Reagan in the Sky to turn the lights out.

Billy Graham

Mental problems

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have had a lot of mental problems, although I believe God has helped me greatly to come through the rough times. However, a therapist I now have tells me that my belief in God is making me escape from my problems and that I need to learn to deal with my problems on my own. Is this possible? — Mrs. D.B.L.

DEAR MRS. D.B.L.: I would suggest that true faith in God does not make us escape from our problems. Instead, he makes us face up to them and then helps us turn them over to him. Let me explain what I mean.

The greatest need any human being has is the need for salvation. We were created by God, but we have chosen to go our own way and leave him out of our lives. Untimately all the confusion and suffering of this world comes from the fact that we are infected with a deadly disease — the disease of sin. We need forgiveness, and we need to be reconciled to God our Creator. And that is possible when we realize God's love for us in Christ and come to accept that love by inviting Jesus Christ into our hearts and lives.

If we fail to face up to our sin and our need of God, then we are escaping from our deepest problem — no matter how many other problems in our lives we may face and try to conquer. But if we face our need of God and turn to him, I believe we are better equipped to face other problems in our lives, whatever they may be. Sometimes it is painful to face these problems, but God wants us to be honest and he gives us strength — the strength of his love.

I do not know what specific problems you are facing right now, but I hope that they will cause you to trust God more firmly and look to him for strength. It may be also that you would be more comfortable with a Christian psychiatrist or psychologist if your present doctor scorns your spiritual commitment. Christ is with you, and nothing "in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 8:39).

Polish debt battle

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is torn on the Polish debt issue between go-slow advice from Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, two of his big three Cabineteers on one side, and far more hawkish officials on the other, led by United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick, who considered leaving the administration because of her profound disagreement with the go-slow policy, has plenty of conservative Reaganite allies, particularly at second levels of the State and Defense Departments. The hawks believe the Soviet Union would be severely hurt if the U.S. foreclosed on the $28 billion of Polish debt to Western countries and banks: Foreclosure could affect Soviet credit standing throughout the West and would gravely aggravate Poland's economic crisis, forcing more Soviet aid.

But Haig and Regan have so far won the day. Haig worried about Western Europe's reaction to U.S.-led foreclosure or a refusal to "roll over" the huge debt with easier payments. Regan fears dislocations in the financial markets. The betting today is that Reagan, against his own ideological convictions, will stick with Haig and Regan despite costly political erosion on the right flank.

ANTI-DEFENSE COUNTER ATTACK

Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a wily leader of old-line Republican conservatives, has sent this private word to the Reagan White House: Don't count on me to support the big new military spending bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Dole's opposition, while not wholly unexpected, signals a possible revolt against Reagan's prime legislative priority when Congress reconvenes next week. Reagan has submitted to White House advisers on raising new taxes, on continuing nuclear talks with Moscow despite Poland and on continuing to bar tax exemptions for racially-discriminatory private and religious schools, but he is adamant on continuing the military buildup whatever the cost and whatever the budget deficit.

The private message from Dole warns that with the off-year election only nine months away, the pro-defense bloc on Capitol Hill will lose many of its 1981 allies, worried about soaring defense costs during another round of domestic budget-cutting.

BAKER'S WORRIES

Shortly before costly administration stumble-bumming on the torrid issue of religious school tax exemption, White House chief of staff James Baker confided this worry to a close friend: Some day I'm going to wake up and find the roof has blown off this place.

The cause of Baker's concern, he explained, is the scarcity of top-grade personnel surrounding the president in the White House and at second-levels throughout the government.

Jack Anderson

European allies worry Reagan

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's worries over our European allies' "pacifism" in the face of Soviet aggression are matched by the allies' concern over the Reagan administration.

The Europeans are nervous about what they consider America's traditional "amateurism" in foreign affairs generally. In addition, the allies are upset by President Reagan's failure to formulate a comprehensive Middle East policy, and his administration's apparent hostility to international organizations like the United Nations and the World Bank.

One issue on which the Reagan administration is showing increased sensitivity to European concerns is nuclear arms negotiations with the Soviet Union. Just as more and more Americans object to nuclear power plants in their backyard, so Europeans are growing more frightened about the 55,0000 NATO nuclear weapons in their midst and an equally awesome arsenal in the Soviet bloc.

A measure of this concern is the Swiss government's program requiring a fully equipped fallout shelter for every home and public building. Such wholesale precautions are beyond the means of other European countries, so their people are demanding that their governments do something to halt the nuclear arms race.

MEANWHILE, THE Pentagon has decided to keep a low profile on its semi-annual nuclear command exercise, "Ivy League 82," scheduled for March 1.

According to a secret Pentagon briefing paper, "conduct of a worldwide nuclear command post exercise could show strength of purpose." But the generals have decided that this spring's exercise will be "secret and sensitive," because of "the repeatedly demonstrated sensitivities of the European public to the exercise of nuclear war fighting concepts."

The spring war game "could be perceived by some as making preparations for the actual use of nuclear weapons and thus acting inconsistently with our position that such exist for the purpose of deterrence," the briefing document acknowledges. It adds that the exercise "could be exploited by certain elements in Europe to increase fears that we are planning for the conduct of a nuclear conflict limited to the continent."

This fear — intensified by President Reagan's injudicious remark foreseeing just such a possibility — is not entirely groundless, sources told my associate Ron McRae. Since the Warsaw Pact nations have far greater ground forces than NATO, U.S. planners do indeed envision "selective releases" of tactical nukes against Soviet armor invading Western Europe. They hope the limited use of nuclear weapons would lead to a wholesale exchange of missiles between the Soviet Union and the United States.

In fact, however, the scenario for "Ivy League 82" envisions a worldwide crisis, in which "active consideration of selective nuclear release is underway when a strategic nuclear strike is made on the United States" by Soviet missiles.

The command exercise culminates in a simulated nuclear exchange between the two superpowers. So at least in this paper exercise, the Pentagon hasn't abandoned Europe. The alternative of a worldwide holocaust may be a small comfort to our allies, however.

Creationism --Part Three

Dear Editor,

In the editorial on "Creationism not for public schools" Mrs. Adams stated that belief in the "big bang" theory of the universe was not premised upon religious faith as the sudden creation theory is. She quoted Judge Overton of the recent Arkansas trial stating that "creation of the world 'out of nothing' is the ultimate religious statement because God is the only actor." Thousands of creation scientists throughout history would disagree. The "big bang" theory of the origin of the universe contradicts much physical evidence and could only be accepted by some sort of blind faith. To scientists of the past it would indeed only seem to be laughable at best.

The First Law of Thermodynamics states that the total quantity of matter and energy in the universe is constant. The Second Law of Thermodynamics states that matter and energy always tend to change from complex and ordered states to disordered states. Therefore the universe could not have created itself, and could not have existed forever or it would have run down long ago. Thus the universe, including matter and energy, apparently must have been created. Such a conclusion is much more rational and consistent with these two laws of science than the "big bang" fairy tale!

In regards to Judge Overton's comment, I'll let the words of Dr. Wernher von Braun, the renowned late physicist in the NASA space program, reply. "The Universe has obvious manifestations of an ordered, structured plan or design. Similarly, the electron is materially inconceivable and yet it is so perfectly known through its effects: yet a strong rationale makes some physicists accept the inconceivable electrons as real while refusing to accept the reality of a Designer. The inconceivability of some ultimate issue (which will always lie outside of scientific resolution) should not be allowed to rule out any theory that explains the inter-relationship of observed data and is useful for prediction."

Today creationist scientists are discriminated against and even called "not real scientists" by the majority of the scientific fraternity. Nevertheless, modern creationists can take comfort in the fact that many of the greatest scientists of the past were creationists. Men like Newton, Pasteur, Linnaeus, Faraday, Pascal, Lord Kelvin, Maxwell, and Kepler, did research and analysis that led to the very laws and concepts of science which brought about our modern scientific age. The mechanistic scientists of the present are dwarfed in comparison to these intellectual giants of the past. And lest anyone should think that their commitment to theism and creationism was only because they were not yet acquainted with modern philosophies; realize that many were strong opponents of Darwinism (Agassiz, Pasteur, Lord Kelvin, Maxwell, Dawson, Virchow, Fabre, and Fleming).

Dr. Henry Morris and Dr. Duane Gish of the Institute for Creation Research are such like minded men today. They have debated the evidence for creation versus the evidence for evolution with evolutionary scientists on the campuses of hundreds of universities in the U.S., Canada, and Europe. I attended one such debate several years ago at Texas Tech. The opinion of most who attended was that the creationists won that debate. More recently, Dr. Russell Doolittle, professor of Biochemistry at the University of California at San Diego debated Dr. Gish on a nationally broadcast religious television program. A front page story that appeared in the Oct. 15 edition of the "Washington Post" (the Bible to newspaper editors) reported that "Dr. Doolittle agreed he had lost. 'I'm devastated,' he said afterward."

Creationism can indeed be debated purely upon its scientific evidence, that's already been proven on hundreds of occasions. It should obviously follow that it can be taught in our public schools purely upon its scientific merits. It should be realized that in the theatre of debate it is the anti-creationists who invariably avoid discussing the actual scientific evidence for macro-evolution, and turn to the smokescreen tactic of ridiculing the Bible and claiming that creationism is just religion. If there were any such evidence for macro-evolution being anything but a religious belief itself, they could settle the whole conflict merely by presenting the evidence! Instead, they seem compelled to resort to ridicule, defamation, intimidation, and distortion. All of these are the true markings of raw prejudice.

Breakup may bring phone companies closer to home

Local exchanges face 'welter' of problems

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — If Henry Zarlengo were still in the saddle, lawyers for the "new" Mountain Bell might find a more sympathetic ear next time they asked the Colorado Public Utility Commission for more money.

Zarlengo, for 18 years a commission member, has had his share of showdowns with representatives of utilities "with ties back East." And the feisty, 74-year-old former utility regulator wears his Western prejudice like a 10-gallon hat.

He was pleased at news that the divestiture of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. could yield a Denver-based phone company "where the shots are called" at home, not in New York.

"If I were sitting on the commission and the attorney came in, I'd have to say I'd have a more open mind," said Zarlengo, who left the panel four years ago.

Bringing the telephone company closer to home may mean relief from sometimes stingy state regulations the past often have counted on Ma Bell to make up local revenue shortages, but some financial analysts question whether sympathy alone will be enough to help Mountain Bell and AT&T's other 21 local operating subsidiaries to be spun off as part of the announced breakup.

They say local exchanges face a welter of possible problems, including downgraded credit and higher borrowing costs, duplication of efforts, inefficiency and, possibly, poorer service.

"Our forecasts show that these companies will need 15 percent rate relief per year over the next five years," says Bradford Peery, an analyst with Paine Webber. "That's 15 more each year. When you start talking about rate increases that size, it's certain commissioners are going to balk."

The settlement between AT&T and the Justice Department announced earlier this month, and still subject to court approval, means the telecommunications giant will keep its most profitable operations — Long Lines, its long-distance network, Western Electric, its manufacturing subsidiary, and Bell Laboratories, its research arm.

But as for the future of Ma Bell's 22 children, there are more questions than answers:

—Will there be 22 separate firms, a few regional companies, or just one — a coast-to-coast local phone company with estimated revenues of $27 billion?

—Will the loss of the protective AT&T umbrella make the local companies bigger credit risks, hampering their ability to borrow money to finance new construction and replace aging equipment?

—Will the breakup discourage the free movement of bright people and the cross-pollenization of new ideas?

"Nobody knows," says Edith Miller, chairwoman of the Colorado Public Service Commission. "I think we are viewing the situation through a glass very, very darkly.

"The consensus seems to be that this could very well result in higher rates on the local level, not only because of efficiency considerations, but also because of increases in capital costs because they (the local operating companies) don't have the same credit ratings."

'The concensus seems to be that this could very well result in higher rates on the local level...'

Ms. Miller is looking to Congress to help offset potential losses Mountain Bell will suffer under terms of the decree, which takes effect in 18 months.

And Colorado's attorney general was among 24 state attorneys general who filed motions seeking public comment on the proposed settlement. U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene in Washington, who has final word on the pact, has ordered such public comment.

Presently, AT&T uses its lucrative long-distance revenues to subsidize the cost of local telephone service, reducing the charge for basic phone service. The divestiture ends that arrangement.

Mountain Bell could recoup some of that loss by charging a fee for the long-distance company to hook up to its local phone network.

But the complicated business of establishing a value of all the equipment to be transferred as part of the enormous divestiture — a tug-of-war with billions of dollars and local operating company rate bases at stake — is yet to be done.

Waiting anxiously on the outcome is Robert K. Timothy, president of Mountain Bell, a low-key executive with a deacon's broad jaw and bright, clear spectacles.

Mountain Bell serves 4.3 million customers in seven states — nearly one-quarter of the geography of the continental United States — from the rugged mountains of Montana to the desert of Arizona and New Mexico. The other states are Idaho, Wyoming and Utah.

Once alone, Mountain Bell may find that its diverse and rugged terrain will mean problems dealing with emergencies.

Timothy insits the breakup of AT&T will not adversely affect telephone service to Mountain Bell customers, but he acknowledges it could make the job more difficult, especially in a catastrophe.

In addition, Timothy says there could be duplication if each of the 22 subsidiaries begins developing its own promotional advertising, engineering plans and management training programs — all presently handled centrally by AT&T.

U.S. Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the House telecommunications subcommittee, says Congress should make sure the trimmer AT&T, unregulated and flush with cash, doesn't move into the local market, doesn't take the most lucrative business and cannibalize its former children.

Reagan's 'dangerous exception'

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan said he will stick to his goal of diminishing Washington's role in a host of local and private sector activities, but he made one huge and possibly dangerous exception.

That exception was the budget deficit, the financing of which intrudes deep into what the private sector considers its territory, sopping up a limited supply of capital that otherwise might help finance industry.

Since industrial expansion has been a high priority of the Reagan administration, a contradiction seems to exist. Can industry expand, that is, if Washington won't give it the room in financial markets?

The argument has been well aired even before the president indicated he had abandoned major remedies for quickly closing the budget gap, which he now places at nearly $100 billion in this fiscal year.

Henry Kaufman has been especially outspoken about that gap. A credit authority and partner in the Salomon Brothers investment firm, Kaufman early this month said: "A confrontation between the credit needs of the U.S. Treasury and those of business is shaping up for 1982." Interest rates will rise again, he said. The rebound will be "substantial."

Paul Volcker, the Federal Reserve Board chairman, never has ceased to be concerned, seeming to feel he has but two choices for handling the credit demands of the federal government: Keep a firm hold on the money supply and watch interest rates rise; or let the printing presses run, making credit available for all, and watch inflation resume its rise.

Either way, the economy gets damaged, so again and again Volcker has sought to get the budget gap reduced. Just hours before the State of the Union Message he suggested that heavy Treasury borrowing could work against the very objectives of the Reagan administration.

Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary, apparently isn't as concerned. The marketplace, he is quoted as saying, has had several weeks to digest the news about the federal deficits, indicating that existing prices for borrowing already reflect the news. Time will tell.

Whatever might be done to return responsibilites to states and reduce the size of federal government, that deficit remains a tremendous factor in the marketplace — a wide wedge driven into the private sector from whence the administration expects the economic recovery to come.

As Kaufman assesses the financial markets, about $50 billion in new money will be available for all forms of credit in 1982. That is, $50 billion more than was available in 1981 from all private savings.

But, he figures, the net increase in privately held federal debt will reach a new high of $135 billion — $22 billion more than in 1981. And that would mean "nearly half the expected increase" in credit funds.

Dear Abby

Naked truth needs a cover-up

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old man planning to marry a 34-year-old divorcee I'll call Vicki. She is raising two sons, ages 11 and 13, from a previous marriage. Vicki and I agree on almost everything except her attitude on nudity in the presence of her sons. She maintains that hiding her body teaches her sons that the body is something to be ashamed of, thus creating sexual hang-ups. She goes topless into their bedroom to talk to them and causually parades around the house with little (or nothing) on. Although she acts very nonchalant in her disrobed state, the boys appear to be somewhat embarrassed and uncomfortable.

We've discussed the subject, and Vicki insists that nudity is natural, pointing out that people who grow up in cultures where nudity is accepted have healthier attitudes about sex.

Abby, I was raised in a family with brothers and sisters who were taught to be reasonably modest. Nobody ever diliberately walked around naked, and as far as I know, none of us ever developed any hang-ups.

I would appreciate your views on this subject.

OLD-FASHIONED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Vicki is undoubtedly well-intentioned, but we are not living in a culture where nudity is generally accepted. Her attitude might have been constructive when her boys were tiny tots, but they are not adolescents with healthy, normal sexual feelings and the sight of an attractive unclothed female (a mother included) is apt to produce a disturbing level of stimulation. Your observation that the boys appear to be "embarrassed and uncomfortable" would indicate that Mother is either consciously or unconsciously turning them on.

I vote for reasonable modesty.

DEAR ABBY: We have had a long friendship with an extremely well-to-do, kind and generous couple for many years. For the last four or five years the man has been stealing various items from our home. (We are not just guessing — we know.)

Since making this appalling discovery, we have been avoiding his company as much as possible. It must be a sickness because he can buy anything he wants.

We doubt if his wife knows about this. He obviously needs professional help. What should we do? Thank you for any help you can give us.

A BEVERLY HILLS FAMILY

DEAR FAMILY: Tell this man privately exactly what you have told me. Stress the fact that you value his friendship and realize that he is afflicted with "kleptomania" — a consistent neurotic impulse to steal without economic motive. Urge him to seek professional help from a behavior modification therapist. If he becomes indignant and denies his problem, don't invite him to your home again.

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Shaw speaks at BPW meeting

Larry Don Shaw, state representative of the 63rd Congressional District of Texas, spoke to members of the Business and Professional Women's Club Tuesday. The meeting took place at Lee's Chinese Restaurant with Mamie Roberts presiding. Rozelle Dohoney, legislative chairman, was in charge of the program.

Shaw told of his introduction to Texas government and discussed some of his problems in relation to the district and his political future.

Shaw said that Texas is one of the 13 largest producers of nuclear waste. Waste disposal has always been a problem, he said, but progress is now being made in this area. He discussed the cost and life of nuclear plants and mentioned alternate energy sources such as solar and wind energy. Texas, however, is not funding such projects.

Shaw also spoke of his relationship as freshmen representative with the speaker of the House, lieutenant governor, lobbyists and older members of the legislature. Shaw authored the recent bill funding SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf and also co-sponsored several other bills affecting his district.

Shaw asked his constituants to voice their approval or disapproval of his actions in the legislature in order to better serve the needs of the district.

Rainbows initiate three new members

Three new members were initiated into Big Spring Assembly No. 60, Order of the Rainbow for Girls Tuesday. The meeting took place in the Masonic Temple with Anne Thomas, worthy advisor, presiding.

Those initiated were Anessa Dean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dean; Kim Phipps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Phipps; and Tracy Wilkerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilkerson.

Prior to the meeting, a dinner was held in the banquet room. Louise Hamilton, long-time advisory board member, was honored at the dinner. Mrs. Hamilton is retiring from the board after many years of service. She was mother advisor and chairman of the board for many years.

It was announced that Mrs. Martha Marie Whitefield, supreme faith and supreme inspector of Texas has resigned her post as supreme inspector which she has held more than 50 years. Mrs. Pearl Mills, Crane, has been appointed supreme deputy in Texas.

Rainbow Girls will hold officer installation Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Masonic Temple.

Dr. Donohue

Is medicine aggravating angina?

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am writing on behalf of my 68-year-old father, who is being treated for hyptertension with Aldoril. Very recently, he began suffering chest pains under the breastbone on his left side and arm. He's been told he has angina. My question concerns the side effects of these drugs. Might there be some surgical technique to correct this worsening angina condition, and what tests determine how bad the angina is? — A.N.

Your father's Aldoril is a blood pressure-lowering medicine, a combination of two drugs — methyldopa and hydrochlorothiazide. The latter is a diuretic. It lowers blood pressure by removing salt and fluid from the body. Methyldopa lowers pressure by expanding small arteries. However, this medicine may, in a few instances, aggravate angina pectoris, so you should explore that possibility with your father's doctor.

The most important test for angina is simply asking the person how frequent attacks are, how long they last, and what degree of activity brings chest pain, which, of course, is a sign of circulation deficiency to the heart muscle. More objective tests include the ECG, both at rest and while using a treadmill, if necessary.

Because of the circulation aspect, further tests can include X-rays of blood vessels of the heart to see if they are narrowed and how dramatically. Heart scans tell what parts of the heart are being deprived. A radioactive material is injected into an arm vein and a picture is made to find out points of blockage.

At times, replacing blocked arteries may be necessary, and in fact, the more sophisticated tests I mentioned are usually done in preparation for such surgery. Each case is different, but you should talk over the possibility that your father's Aldoril might be aggravating his angina.

Poinsettias can bloom again

BY TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Writer

Poinsettias can be cared for through the year for blooming next Christmas if proper care is taken.

Faye's Flowers and Mr. G's Garden Center offered several tips on growing poinsettias.

One suggestion is to keep the plant near a sunny window. A south or west window will do well. After the plant sheds its leaves, cut back each stem so that it's left with only two leaf scars. Move plants to a cool, dark place and do not water. When the danger of frost has past, plunge the pot, up to the rim, into outdoor soil water thoroughly and feed. Cut back long stems to encourage bushy growth.

To make the plant to bloom next Christmas, place the plant in a dark closet for 14 hours a day beginning 6 weeks prior to the date you wish it to flower.

After the flower has faded and fallen, cut back 1-2 inches from the pot and let soil become almost dry. When growth stops keep the plant at normal room temperature and in bright, filtered light until April. Again, a south or west window works well. Water thoroughly. The plant, still in its old pot, will soon begin to grow again.

At this point, there are two ways to make the plant bloom again.

1. Take three-inch long tip cuttings from the new side shoots and root them to make new plants. The nursery suggests using Rootone rooting powder. Take the end of the shoot and dip it into the powder. Tap excess powder off and place the shoots in loose, sandy soil.

Other alternatives to the rooting suggestion are to treat the cutting with water to seal in latex (milky liquid) then place cutting in a pot with equal mixture of peat moss, sand and perlite. Keep pot at normal room temperature and in filtered sunlight. Keep it watered but not wet. Allow top two-thirds of dirt to dry out between waterings.

When rooting has occurred, nomally in three to four weeks, and cuttings are growing actively, move them into pots of fresh soil-based loose potting mixture.

2. Allow stump of old plant to develop an entire new plant. Keep watering and giving it light. When plant starts to grow again, shake off old potting mixture. Replant newly growing plant in a fresh soil based mixtures.

It is important not to use a pot larger than the original one for either a rooted cutting or a newly growing established plant. Bigger pots encourage the rapid growth of lush foliage at the expense of flowers. The result is a huge plant unrecognizable as a poinsettia.

Once repotted it should be given monthly applications of a standard fertilizer high in phosphoric acid until mid-September. The nursery suggests Super Bloom as a good fertilizer.

Give the plant no less than 14 hours of total darkness, unbroken even by glow of a small light bulb, per day for eight weeks before blooming is desired. However, the plant still needs some light during the day (about 8 to 10 hours is suggested).

Designer gowns museum bound

Fashion free to first lady

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan is deriving "no personal benefit" from the thousands of dollars of clothing she is receiving free of charge from American fashion designers, her press secretary contends.

"This has done nothing but benefit the (fashion) industry," Sheila Tate said recently.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Reagan is saving a lot of money by not having to purchase the designer originals herself. And the style-conscious first lady has the added advantage of being able to wear the latest haute couture gowns and sportwear.

Mrs. Tate refused to say how many items of clothing Mrs. Reagan has received as gifts or loans from designers, or how much they are worth. Couture ensembles range in price from $100 to more than $10,000.

There has been "an inordinate amount of interest in everything she (Mrs. Reagan) wears," Mrs. Tate said. "She's been looking at how to take this interest and turn it to the benefit of one of the most important industries in the country."

Many of the creations will be passed on to American museums after Mrs. Reagan has finished wearing them so that they may be studied by students of design.

The clothes will be presented to the museums by the first lady, but technically they will be gifts from the designers because Mrs. Reagan does not own the clothes. The designers have told the first lady they will not take a tax deduction for the donations, Mrs. Tate said.

The 1978 Ethics in Government Act requires high-ranking government officials and their spouses to report any gifts they have received worth more than $35, as well as loans and other financial liabilities that exceed $10,000. But it is unclear whether loaned clothing — especially if it is ultimately given to a museum — falls under that category.

It is not known whether previous first ladies accepted free clothes. Rosalynn Carter purchased clothes from designers at a discount, but never received them as loans or gifts, according to her aide, Madeline MacBean.

Ann Keagy, chairwoman of the fashion design department of the Parsons School of Design, will distribute Mrs. Reagan's clothes to 12 selected museums around the country after photographing each item, appraising its value and marking where it was worn by the first lady.

The first lady relies almost exclusively on a few designers, including Bill Blass, James Galanos and Adolfo. But in light of the museum project, others already have begun offering to donate clothing to her.

The museums involved are: the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; the Smithsonian Institution, the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Museum, the Chicago Historical Society, the Phoenix Art Museum, the Boston Museum of Fine Art.

Also, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Western Reserve Historical Society, the Atlanta Historical Society, the Oakland Museum, and the Dallas Museum of Fashion in association with North Texas State University.

'Blackjack fever' infects North Dakota

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Swearing is discouraged, the music is likely to be a local band, and the drinking is controlled, but on most nights, the blackjack tables are crowded in North Dakota bars and motels.

The betting limit is $2 a hand. If you lose, the money goes to charity.

Since the state put blackjack on its charitable gambling list in July, more than 300 playing sites have been opened across the state by service groups ranging from a community theater to the state's public television network to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Fargo, a city of 62,000 on the Minnesota border, is suddenly seeing tourists from neighboring Minneapolis and Winnipeg, Manitoba come to play blackjack. "It's cheaper than Las Vegas," said one customer.

Bar sales are climbing and at least one motel has built a new addition just for blackjack tables.

North Dakota lawmakers are surprised at its success.

"We were looking for a way to allow people to do legally what they will do anyway — gamble — and for a way to help out the charities," said state Rep. Pat Conmy, a co-sponsor of the blackjack law. "We didn't think blackjack would be so popular. We were awfully naive."

The bars and motels lease sections of their establishments to the service groups. Larger motels have from six to 15 tables in the bar area, where players trade names and make small talk as the cards fall. Profanity is frowned upon, and pit bosses firmly escort those who have had too much to drink away from the table.

"You can maybe win $100 or $200, but with a $2 betting limit you have to play quite awhile," said Duane Hoppe, who drops into a local tavern three or four times a week to play blackjack.

"I just play for the heck of it, not to win a bunch of money," said the tall bar manager from Moorhead, Minn.

He says bars in Moorhead, across the Red River fom Fargo, have lost business because of blackjack, although they still get the college crowd because Minnesota's drinking age is 19 and North Dakota's is 21.

"It's still too early to tell how much it's increased our business. But we are seeing a number of people staying longer," one Fargo motel manager said.

Bob Myers, general manager of the Fargo-Moorhead Community Theater, said the theater's decision to sponsor gambling at a motel was based on economics.

"We realized federal cutbacks were on the way and that our public sources were drying up," he said. "We felt our ability to deliver services would be severely hampered — especially our children's theater — and that we might be forced to raise ticket prices to the point where they would not be affordable."

With only a month's experience, the theater can't say yet how successful its gambling operation has been, Myers said, but "the trend is good."

Associated Press Photo

CHARITABLE BLACKJACK — With a betting limit of $2, blackjack is a way to socialize in North Dakota, which legalized the card game in July for charitable purposes.

Dave Drenth, who manages the theater's tables at the Doublewood Inn, said even casino operators from Las Vegas were curious.

"I think they expected wooden floors and spittoons," Drenth said. "They said it looked nice, but they didn't seem worried about too much competition from us."

Roxanna Clower, who runs a dealers school in Fargo, estimates 350 people have taken the 32-hour course since it started in May. She's taught many college students, a few lawyers and several grandmothers.

"People need jobs and the hours are flexible," she said. Starting salaries vary, but dealers can make $8 or $9 a night including tips.

Fargo Chamber of Commerce Director Ken Larsen said he has no direct figures, but "I suppose when you consider the number of tables and the people needed for each table, it does add up to quite a few part-time jobs."

Charitable gambling brought in $3.5 million in gross receipts last year between July and September. That compares with $4.9 million during the first half of 1981, before blackjack was legal. Bingo, raffles, and sports pools were allowed earlier.

Blackjack managers say it costs $12,000 to $20,000 to set up a blackjack operation. The state allows the groups 35 percent for operating costs and collects a 5 percent tax which goes into the general revenue fund.

Some operators say 35 percent is not enough and others would like to see the $2 limit increased. Meanwhile, Conmy said he's received calls and letters from people who wonder whether the state has gone too far.

State Attorney General Robert Wefald knows of four violations. One club manager misused money and two other clubs ran gambling activities not specified under the law. A Fargo man was charged in December with keeping around $5,000 from a tip jar and bingo operation.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen say they are concerned about the amount of money involved in North Dakota gambling operations and are investigating the possibility that some of it may be subject to a business income tax.

Former deacon convicted

DALLAS (AP) — A former church deacon has been convicted of fraud in connection with a bankrupt movie starring four Dallas Cowboys football players.

A state district court jury Wednesday found William Gene Chaffin guilty of felony charges of selling unregistered securities, failing to obtain a state license and fraudulently inducing a man to invest $15,000 in the movie "Squeeze Play."

Chaffin, 44, faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a fine of $5,000 on each count.

The 1979 movie, which followed five Vietnam veterans readjusting to civilian life, starred Dallas Cowboys Drew Pearson, Ed "Too Tall" Jones, Jay Saldi and Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson.

Prosecutors contended that Chaffin, a former deacon at First Baptist Church of Dallas, swindled $75,000 from 11 people by selling them shares in the movie or by soliciting loans and then using the money for personal benefit.

Where Someone Trudged Before

How deep is the snow? How rough is the terrain that lies beneath it? You can never be sure until there are footprints to follow. It is easier to make one's way through the snow where someone has trudged before.

At the heart of the Christian religion is the belief that God gave his own Son, to be our Savior . . . and also to be our example. The study of his life is, therefore, an important part of Christian education. Though we cannot aspire to be like Him — we can learn to meet life's challenges and crises with the same resolute courage and commitment.

Why plunge aimlessly on? Someone has shown the Way!

Bristow always wanted to be a priest

By TINA M. STEFFEN
Church Editor

"Being a priest is the only thing I ever really wanted to do," says Rev. David L. Bristow, rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin and headmaster of St. Mary's Episcopal School.

What is a rector? A rector is a priest in charge, elected by the vestry of the parish with approval of the bishop. A priest who heads a parish is described as rector rather than a pastor.

Bristow has been in the ministry for 10 years and with St. Mary's since May, 1981. He has also served as rector in Houston, Jasper and Odessa. He is an associate of the Order of the Holy Cross in study and prayer life. "I keep a rule of life the way a monk does," he said, although he is not required to take a vow of celibacy.

Bristow has two issues that are special to him. One is "a proper education for the young in a happy environment with inspired, active teachers," he said. He enjoys being a part of the school at St. Mary's and being responsible for the life of the school. He never served a church that didn't have a school, and "I wouldn't have it any other way," he said. "All knowledge is God's knowledge, therefore, when we teach children we are doing God's work."

The other issue important to him is ministry to the aged. He has deep feelings for this because as the youngest child while growing up, he had older parents who were around their older friends much of the time. "I discovered at an early age the wisdom and intrinsic value they (older adults) have," he said.

Bristow enjoys listening to and playing music. He once was a music major in college and plays all brass wind instruments, piano and organ. His other hobbies include sailing, photography, flying, racquet ball and swimming and he is working toward a pilot's license. "Like most active priests, I have very little time for my hobbies," he said while looking at some of the pictures he's taken of his family.

Hs loves reading, especially British literature, and enjoys collecting antique books. He also enjoys cooking, "expecially Chinese food."

Bristow was an honors graduate of University of Texas at Austin. He has a double major in history and philosophy with minors in English, German and music. He also graduated with honors from Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest in Austin, receiving a Masters of Divinity degree in medieval ecclesiastical history and systematic theology. He minored in liturgies.

Bristow attends special continuing education classes every year in other locations. This summer he plans to begin working toward a Doctorate of Divinity degree at University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. When he does this, he studies at home, then goes to the university for five-week sessions of lectures and exams. Does he enjoy learning? "Yes!"

During a tour of duty with the United States Air Force in Viet Nam, Bristow was awarded, among other decorations, the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart.

Bristow is a member of the Rotary Club and the Ministerial Alliance. His goal is to be "a good priest to my people. I want to be the best priest I can be."

The Bristow family includes Bristow, wife Janice and daughters Kathryne, 21, and Jane, 20. Kathryne graduated from Tyler College, Tyler, and is a registered radiographer (x-ray technician). Jane is married, lives in Jasper and has one child. Janice is a homemaker.

Church educators agree with decision on 'Creationism' and evolutionary theory

NEW YORK (AP) — Mainline church educators agree with the Arkansas court decision overturning a law for teaching "creationism" along with evolutionary theory, but they criticize tendencies to present evolution as the whole story.

They see "creationism" as a religious concept not belonging within scientific limits. They say faith doesn't specify how life developed, but only that God arranged the process, however it happened, whether by evolution or otherwise.

They find no inherent conflict between religion and scientific theory, and say this week's court decision properly drew a distinction between the two fields, but several objected to approaches that handle evolution as a closed absolute.

"The creation story is a religious story about who is the originator of the universe and the life in it, not how it was done," said the Rev. Richard Solberg, of the Lutheran Church in America. "The danger is evolution taught as absolute truth."

He said the church has no basis for saying "how the world was created or how it developed, if indeed it did," but affirms that whatever the means used, God did it. "How is left to any kind of methods for ascertaining it, but it's not given in revelation."

While the mainline church officials generally backed the court decision, evangelical conservatives expressed distress at it.

"We're upset and disappointed," said Gary Jarmin, an official of Christian Voice, which promotes legislation upholding conservative evangelical views. "The State of Arkansas put up a poor defense."

Mainline church leaders also maintained that evolution should not be taught as a final or full explanation, and that there is no scientific basis for doing so, but they upheld separation of sceintific inquiry from religion.

"We're more concerned with God as the creator of the world than with how he created," said the Rev. Thomas G. Gallagher, secretary for education of the U.S. Catholic Conference. How it was done "is an issue for science" he added, but the church deals with the "who" behind it, the source.

The Rev. Harold Viehman, executive director of the United Ministries in Education, including eight Protestant denominations, called the court decision responsible and "in keeping with historic traditions of the separation of church and state."

The Rev. Thomas Trotter, United Methodist education executive, called the court decision "good news."

The Rev. Ben Fisher, retired executive director of the Southern Baptist education commission who teaches at Campbell University, said "I don't see how the court could have reached any other decision," considering the narrow frame in which the issue was cast.

Year's most significant news is assassination attempts

NEW YORK (AP) — The year's highlight in religion was a twin burst of darkness.

That, in essence, is the conclusion of those who cover news of religion for the country's newspapers, newsmagazines and wire services.

Although religion exalts human life as having divine worth, they cited attacks on the lives of two prominent personages as 1981's "most significant" news in the field of religion.

The attempted assassinations both of Pope John Paul II and President Reagan, together with the ensuing wave of religious reaction, were combined in the top category.

The negative element thus was seen as overshadowing the positive in religion, the prime features of it running counter to its key perspective on the value of human life.

Assessment of the year's occurrences in religion was made in a poll of members of the Religion Newswriters Association, made up of 140 members on newspapers and other secular print media.

Willmar Thorkelson, Minneapolis Star religion editor who did the poll, said 46 of a list of 50 developments in religion got some votes.

The shooting of the world's pre-eminent spiritual leader and of the nation's most powerful political leader was chosen overwhelmingly as the main development.

Another significant development, as picked by the secular reporters of religion, was the investigation into financial affairs of Chicago's Roman Catholic archbishop, Cardinal John Cody.

Other top religion events of 1981 included:

—Growing religious opposition to the nuclear arms race, manifested both among Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders.

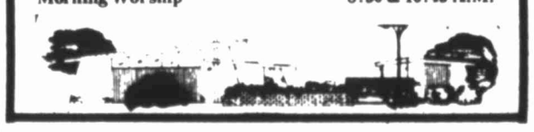

—Rising Moslem fundamentalism typified by the assassination of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in the midst of sectarian strife there and continuing executions of Bha'is and others in Iran.

—Arkansas' new law requiring teaching of "creation science" in public schools if evolution is taught, and a court trial challenging the law. It is like one in Louisiana and laws proposed in many states.

—Continuing debate over the "religious right," a movement of conservative Protestants and Catholics which has become politically active, favoring prayers in public schools, and an end to abortion, among other things.

—Opposition by some religious leaders and groups to the Reagan administration's budget cuts for social programs, with some churches and synagogues seeking ways to fill the gap.

Group presents sermon in drama

Covenant Prayers, an international repertory drama group, will present a traditional sermon through drama at St. Mary's Episcopal Church Sunday at 10 a.m.

The tradition is based on Christ's method of preaching in parables, and on the medieval church using story-telling to communicate to its followers who could not read or write.

Players will hold a drama workshop at the church at 3 p.m. The workshop provides individuals with the means of becoming a significant communicator in the church, and in their private lives. It is designed to reveal insights as to how people communicate with each other, and to increase the ability to use these insights.

The Covenant Players are based in Los Angeles, Calif. In 18 years of operation, they have performed more than 575,000 times in 25 countries. They have 85 full-time touring groups.

St. Mary's Episcopal Church invites everyone to attend the special service and workshop.

World Leprosy Day will be observed by many Sunday

BLOOMFIELD, N. J. (AP) — As churches, mission societies and other voluntary agencies observe World Leprosy Day this Sunday, Jan. 31, a survey showed that less than 4 million of the 15 million suffering from the disease in the world currently are under treatment.

The survey was conducted by members of the International Federation of Anti-Lerosy Associations, which includes 25 national associations treating leprosy patients through 800 programs in 90 countries.

The observance, now marked in much of the world, was started in 1954 by American Leprosy Missions, founded in 1906 and the oldest agency aiding leprosy victims, to bring attention to their needs.

Religious leaders critisize policy of deporting refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous religious leaders have criticized the U.S. administration's policy of deporting Salvadoran refugees and turning back boats carrying Haitian refugees to this country.

In a joint letter to President Reagan, officials of national Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations said deporting Salvadorans and interdicting the boats from Haiti violate principles for which America stands.

Work on 'Last Supper shows the apostles eating oranges

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Details uncovered in restoration work on Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" show the apostles were eating oranges and drinking from gold-rimmed tumblers in a tapestried room.

The previously age-dimmed fresco had seemed to show dark doors in the room, but they turned out to be trapestries. The restoration also brings out slices of oranges on the plates and gold rims on the glasses.

Coahoma church hosts area-wide youth devotional Sunday

The area-wide Church of Christ youth devotional will be held this Sunday at the Coahoma Church of Christ, 311 N. 2nd. "Seekers of the Word," a drama and singing troup from Abilene Christian University will present skits and singing. The skits are often humorous and carry a message. All junior and senior high youth are invited to attend. Several youth groups from the Big Spring Churches of Christ and other churches in the area will be attending.

Group to host slide show of Japan and its religions

Jane Smith will speak and present a slide show on Japan and its religions at a meeting of all Christian Women Fellowship circles of First Christian Church Thursday at 7 p.m. Members are asked to invite friends to attend the special program.

Sharp postal hike shakes many religious publications

NEW YORK (AP) — An abrupt financial jolt has hit religious publications, threatening to stifle religious communications in this country.

During end-of-the-year budget juggling this week by Congress, pressured by the White House for more cuts, a postal subsidy for most non-profit publications was wiped out.

"It's really a terrible blow," says James A. Doyle, executive director of the Catholic Press Association and head of a task force of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish publishers seeking to combat the problem.

"It will mute and in some cases silence the voice of the religious press. Certainly that voice will be a lot weaker."

The subsidy previously was being phased out over a 16-year period ending in 1987, giving publications time to adjust rates and operations to the added costs. But the revised congressional action abolished it immediately.

Doyle estimated the postal costs increases, effective Jan. 19, at 40 to 300 percent, depending on weight, volume and other factors.

"It's the worst thing that ever happened to the religious press," says the Rev. Everett Parker, communications director of the United Church of Christ.

Felecia Ford sings at evangelism conference

The 1982 Texas Baptist Evangelism Conference met in Fort Worth's Tarrant County Convention Center Jan. 18-20. The annual three-day convention convened under the theme "Listen Now, Hear Forever" and was supported with a 41-hour prayer vigil.

The Commissioning ceremony of Carlos McLeod as director of the Texas Baptist Evangelism Division highlighted the convention. The ceremony was led by Charles McLaughlin, director of the Texas Baptist State Missions Commission.

Motivational messages, testimonies and special music were also featured. Felicia Ford, Texas Miss T.E.E.N. 1981, sang "Born Again" before a crowd of about 4,000 during the convention Jan. 19. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Dunbar, 424 Edwards Blvd., and Roy Ford, Princeton.

Grant Teaff, head football coach at Baylor University, Waco, and Jerold McBride, pastor of First Baptist Church, San Angelo, were among those giving testimonies. Approximately 14,000 attended the convention.

Episcopal priests apply for Roman Catholic priesthood

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixty-four Episcopal priests, most of them married, have applied for admission to the Roman Catholic priesthood under a special process authorized for it in the United States.

About 20 others have inquired about it, reports Bishop Bernard F. Law of Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Mo., named by the Vatican about a year ago to handle the processing.

In a progress report, he says 62 of the priests are, or were until recently, pastors of Episcopal congregations, and two are college professors. The Episcopal church has about 12,300 priests.

While "recent events in the Episcopal Church may have prrecipitated the decisions of some" of the 64 to leave, Law says the basic factor was their concern for Catholic faith, leading to their seeking full communion with the papacy.

"To imply that their motive is a desperrate reaction to events...in the Episcopal Church or to dismiss them as 'dissidents' is to fail to recognize their underrlying motive of faith," he says.

However, their dissatisfaction with the Episcopal Church largely came to a head over its 1976 decision to ordain women.

Nuclear suicide is great crisis

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A noted Benedictine priest, the Rev. Godfrey Diekman, says the threat of "nuclear suicide" is the greatest crisis ever confronting the human race.

He urged a joint gathering of Lutherans and Roman Catholics to work together against the nuclear arms race. Diekman, who played a leading role in the reform of Catholic liturgy into English, added:

"Maybe together we can make the nuclear clock move more slowly and eventually stop it before it reaches midnight."

Queens keep top spot

BORGER — Melissa Luna broke out of a recent scoring slump with 20 points in just over a half of play to lead the Howard College Hawk Queens to an 89-45 Western Junior College Athletic Conference win over Frank Phillips Thursday night.

The win boosted the front-running Queens to a 6-1 league mark and their 11th straight win improved their season record to 17-6. Frank Phillips lost for the seventh straight time in conference play.

Luna, a starter until recently when she fell into her shooting slump, came off the bench to hit eight shots from the floor and four of five tries at the foul line to lead all scorers. She also collected six rebounds and blocked a shot.

"Melissa played a great game," said a pleased coach Don Stevens. "Everyone got to play a half."

Howard College led 41-24 at halftime and Stevens was able to get all his team into the game. Other double figure scorers were Nell Haskins with 13 points and Carol Wassermann, another player off the bench, with 12 points. She also chipped in 10 rebounds to lead the Queens to a 44-33 advantage in that category.

Tracy Weathers had 16 points and Jeann Davis 10 for the losers.

The victory kept the Hawk Queens a step ahead of both Amarillo and Western Texas. The Lady Badgers topped Odessa 81-76 Thursday night to move into a second place tie with the Dustrers at 5-2.

The Dusters visit Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday for a 6 p.m. rematch with Howard. Western Texas already has defeated the Hawk Queens twice this season.

Phillips stops Hawks

BORGER — A late first half surge carried over into the second half and sparked Frank Phillips College to a 100-89 conference win over Howard College Thursday night.

The loss was the second straight in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play for the Hawks. Howard College is now 6-4 in league and 16-6 overall while Frank Phillips improved to 5-4 with the victory.

Because of pressure on their outside shooters, the Hawks took the ball inside to Nathan Givens, Wimberly Hardrick and Reggie Childress in the first half. Howard grabbed an early lead and maintained that advantage until late in the half when Phillips tied the game and slipped into a 40-36 lead at intermission.

Frank Phillips scored the first bucket of the second half and went into a zone that allowed them to take control of the game said Hawk coach Harold Wilder. Still, the Hawks stayed within three baskets until 12 minutes remained when Phillips reeled off several quick baskets to take a double figure lead.

"We played tried to catch-up and we don't do that very well," Wilder reported.

Again the star for the Hawks was inside big man, Givens, who topped the 30-point barrier for the second straight game with 31 points. Childress added 15 points and Leon Issac 11.

Five players for Frank Phillips scored in double figures with Dwayne McMillan leading the charge with 23 points. He was followed by James Wright with 20 points, Clifford Morgan with 16, Dave Chrisman with 14 and Avery Lovely with 10.

The Hawks return home Monday for an 8 p.m. contest with Western Texas.

College Basketball Roundup

Tulsa toys with WTSU

By The Associated Press

It's called the "Hurricane," but that doesn't necessarily mean the University of Tulsa's basketball team blows the opposition away.

"People expect us to beat people to death," says Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson. "We don't have a team like that. When you juggle the lineup as much as we do, you can't expect us to get any kind of big lead. We just want to win the game."

Thursday night's performance was typical of the 16th-ranked Tulsa team. Richardson used a lot of substitutions, as he usually does, and his players straggled and then spurted to a 68-61 Missouri Valley Conference victory over West Texas State.

The triumph was the 27th straight at home for the Hurricane, which hasn't lost there since Richardson brought most of his players along with him Western Texas' junior college champions two years ago.

"Our margin of victory was satisfactory to us," said Richardson. "We've got some senior kids who are pressing. They're just not playing well right now. But I really praised the kids afterward because there's a lot of pressure on them from me, from the fans and from the polls."

Greg Stewart, one of the players Richarson brought from Western Texas who helped Tulsa win the National Invitation Tournament last year, combined with Bruce Vanley for 30 points to help the cause Thursday night. Trailing by as many as nine points through most of the game, the Hurricane took the lead for good at 61-59 when freshman Steve Harris hit two free throws with 2:41 left.

Vanley, a 6-foot-10 sophomore, hit six of eight field goal attempts to finish with 16 points, while Stewart came off the bench to add 14. West Texas State got 12 points from Eddie Harris and 10 apiece from Goliath Yeggins and Charles Bell.

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 6 Iowa eged Michigan State 57-56, No. 9 San Francisco crushed San Diego 72-53, No. 10 Minnesota beat Northwestern 61-53 and No. 19 Fresno State defeated San Jose State 63-45.

The Top Twenty

Kenny Arnold and Steve Carfino scored 12 points each to lead Iowa over Michigan State. The triumph, before a sellout crowd of 10,004 in Jenison Fieldhouse, improved the Big Ten-leading Hawkeyes' record to 6-1 in conference play and 14-2 for the season.

It was the first victory for the Hawkeyes in Michigan State's arena after seven straight losses there.

"We were trying to get out of here with any kind of win that we could," said a relieved Lute Olson, the Iowa coach. "The first thing we have to overcome when we come to Michigan State is the Spartans. They normally play quite well. The media plays up this jinx thing to a point where the Michigan State players really believe there is a jinx."

Wallace Bryant and Quintin Dailey combined for 43 points, leading San Francisco to a convincing West Coast Athletic Conference victory over San Diego.

Bryant scored 23 points and Dailey added 20 for the Dons, who raised their WCAC record to 4-1 and their overall mark to 18-2. Forward Gerald Jones paced San Diego with 12 points and a game-high nine rebounds.

Trent Tucker scored 18 points and Minnesota took control in the second half to defeat Northwestern. The score was tied three times early in the second half before Gary Holmes put the Gophers ahead to stay at 37-35.

Walls among six Pro Bowl rookies

HONOLULU (AP) — A number of newcomers to the Pro Bowl will see action in Sunday's National Football League all-star match, including six rookies.

On the 40-man NFC squad are first-year cornerbacks Ronnie Lott of San Francisco and Everson Walls of Dallas, New Orleans' running back George Rogers, and New York Giants' linebacker Lawrence Taylor.

Running back Joe Delaney of Kansas City and Cincinnati wide receiver Chris Collinsworth are the two rookies on the AFC squad.

"These players have been selected by a vote of their peers and by the league's coaches, and that's a very critical eye," said American Conference Coach Don Shula. "I think the players who are here appreciate that.

"It used to be, before the coaches and players did the voting, that you could make it on reputation. But now a player makes it on the kind of year he had. That's why we have a number of rookies here."

In addition to the rookies, there will be 25 others players making their Pro Bowl debuts in the nationally televised game at Aloha Stadium.

Among the first-time players in the all-star game are five representatives from the Super Bowl Champion 49ers, headed by NFC starting quarterback Joe Montana.

The AFC first-time list includes Cincinnati running back Pete Johnson and Bengal offensive tackle Anthony Munoz; 11-year NFL veteran wide receiver Frank Lewis of Buffalo; tight end Ozzie Newsome of Cleveland; and Denver wide receiver Steve Watson.

The veteran Pro Bowl players for the AFC include Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert, appearing for the seventh time, and linebackers Ted Hendricks of Oakland and Robert Brazile, each making their sixth appearance.

For the NFC, Los Angeles' center Rich Saul has played in five previous Pro Bowls. Minnestoa linebacker Matt Blair, Atlanta center Jeff Van Note, and Dallas defensive tackle Randy White are all fifth-time selections for the game.

Eagles soar by BSHS

ABILENE — It was Tracy Hubbard in the first half and Sonya Roberts and the Abilene High scoring duo shot the Eagles to a 77-51 win Thursday night over Big Spring.

The loss dropped the Lady Steers to an 0-2 start in the second half of District 5-AAAAA play while Abilene High improved to 2-0. Big Spring is now 11-15 on the year.

Hubbard hit 20 of her game-high 34 points in the first half when the Lady Steers were concentrating their defensive efforts on Roberts. She scored just four points but returned in the second half to drop in 17 points, including 13 in the last quarter.

Abilene High jumped off to a huge 22-6 lead in the first quarter and the Lady Steers could never recover. Big Spring regrouped enough to win the scoring wars in the second and third quarters but her team wore out in the final period said coach Sandie Brown.

"It was a combination of bad coaching errors and the lack of self-motivation that hurt us," Brown said.

Although the Lady Steers solved the Eagle full court press, Abilene High was able to do the same against Big Spring, registering a lot of points on easy layups.

AHS led 40-26 at halftime and 52-39 at the end of three quarters before running away with the game in the last eight minutes.

The Lady Steers play again Monday night in Midland. Midland is off to a 2-0 start in the second half after a surprising win over Permian Thursday nnight.

In the junior varisity game, Abilene High roared off to a 30-11 halftime advantage and held on for a 39-30 victory over Big Spring.

Paula Spears had 16 points and Tressa Smith eight for the Lady Steers, now 11-7 for the year.

The freshman team played at home against Sweetwater and dropped a 38-30 decision after leading for three quarters.

Adrianne Allen scored eight points and Dalia Correa seven points for the Lady Steers. Coach Patti Purser praised Allen and Alice Lopez for their efforts on defense in the game.

Big Spring is 8-7 and plays at home Feb. 4 at 5:30 p.m. against Lamesa.

Miller, Zoeller top San Diego Open

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Johnny Miller knew what he had to do.

"You know you better take advantage of this North course," Miller said, "because the South is very tough, maybe three, maybe four shots tougher."

So Miller toured the 6,667-yard North course in a solid, no-bogey, 7-under-par 65 Thursday and tied Fuzzy Zoeller for the first round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Wickes-Andy Williams-San Diego open golf tournament.

Zoeller also played the North, the shorter and easier of the two layout used for the first two rounds.

Mark Lye, however, had a 66 at the tougher, 7,002-yard South course. "As far as I'm concerned, Mark is the leader," Miller said.

As an illustration of the relative difficulty of the two courses, the North yielded 12 scores of 68 or better, the South only three. The players switch courses for today's second round, with the last 36 holes to be played on the South.

Gil Morgan was one shot off the pace after a 66 at the North. Tom Watson, seeking to regain his position as golf's leading performer, topped the group at 67. Also at that figure were Mike Donald, Calvin Peete, Morris Hatalsky and Bruce Fleisher. Fleisher played the tough South course, the others the North.

Jack Nicklaus opened his 21st season on the tour with a 69, including a double bogey-6, on the South.

Tom Kite, the 1981 leading money-winner, matched par 72 and PGA champ Larry Nelsson shot 70, both on the South. At the North, British Open king Bill Rogers and defending champion Bruce Lietzke each had a 71 and U.S. Open champ David Graham had 72.

Miller, who has scored some of his greatest successes early in the season, said he was "quite down" after playing poorly in Tucson and Phoenix, his first two starts this year.

"I was having a terrific letdown," he said, as the result of his 9-hole sudden death playoff in a $1 million tournament in southern Africa in the first week of the year.

"That was such a good win for me, I just had a terrific letdown.

"Now, it's important to get it back in gear, get rolling again.

But he must contend with the free-spirit Zoeller, who has played his last four competitive rounds in 24 under par after starting with a 76 in the first round at Phoenix last week.

And he started poorly here, too.

Zoeller, who scored his first career victory here in 1979, opened his round with bogeys on his first two holes Thursday. But he got a shot back on the fourth, began a burst of seven birdies in an 8-hole stretch beginning on the seventh and played the back nine in a tournament record 30.

"Just one of those things that happen," he shrugged. "This is a crazy game."

Spurs now on the tube

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Local television viewers will be able to stay home and watch all home games of the San Antonio Spurs next season on an all-sports television channel scheduled to go on the air on Sept. 1, 1982.

At the same time, Spurs officials said smoking in HemisFair Arena seats would be banned beginning next season.

Officials of the Spurs, the Houston Astros and UA Columbia Cablevision announced plans for the sports channel Thursday, saying all 42 home National Basketball Association games, at least 60 Houston Astro road games, four boxing cards a month, and other San Antonio-oriented sports events, would be carried live.

Spurs president Angelo Drossos told a news conference the channel would operate 365 days a year beginning Sept. 1, and would be sold on an annual subscription basis by UA Columbia, which has the franchise for the San Antonio metropolitan area.

Officials said initial proposals mention a fee of $10 a month for receiving the sports channel.

Drossos said the Spurs would be amenable to negotiation with other South Texas cablevision networks for live coverage of home basketball games and other events, such as professional and amateur boxing matches which originate in San Antonio.

Local boxing promoter Gene Cooper and boxing matchmaker Tony Ayala said they would produce four cards a month — two amateur and two professional — for the cablevision network. Each card would consist 30 rounds of professional boxing or six three-round amateur matches.

Trinity University and University of Texas-San Antonio sporting events also are candidates for coverage, Drossos said.

Sweetwater wins three Thursday

Red and white teams at Runnels Junior High dropped basketball games Thursday night to Sweetwater.

Sweetwater won 36-11 over the red team. Dana Hiltbrunner scored seven points in the loss for Runnels.

Amanda Solis scored eights and teamed with Monique Jones on defense but Sweetwater claimed a 37-17 vicotry against the white team. Runnels trailed by two points with four minutes to play but Sweetwater pulled away for the big win.

Both eighth grade teams play in a tournament in Snyder Feb. 4-5-6.

Sweetwater also took a 22-18 win over Goliad Thursday night at Runnels.

Sheri Myrick and Deanna Westbrook each scored six points for Goliad with Tabitha Green starring on defense with six rebounds and three steals.

Goliad is now 7-5 and also plays in the seventh grade division in the Snyder tournament next week.

NBA Roundup

Texas teams win

By The Associated Press

A player named Russell helped a coach named Red reach a milestone, but it wasn't quite the same as the glory days of Bill Russell, Red Auerbach and the Boston Celtics.

The Russell-Auerbach tandem helped the Celtics win nine NBA championships in 10 years from 1956-57 to 1965-66. Red Holzman and Campy Russell, on the other hand, are struggling to keep the New York Knicks out of the Atlantic Division cellar.

And the Knicks' 102-98 victory over the Washington Bullets Thursday night — Holzman's 600th triumph as the New York coach — enabled them to snap a last-place tie and pull one-half game ahead of the New Jersey Nets.

The Celtics are still winning, too. They trounced the Cleveland Cavliers 116-104. Elsewhere, the Houston Rockets downed the Philadelphia 76ers 109-101, the Los Angeles Lakers trimmed the Phoenix Suns 97-87, the San Antonio Spurs whipped the Kansas City Kings 126-115, the Milwaukee Bucks flattened the Utah Jazz 119-101, the Golden State Warriors edged the Chicago Bulls 111-110 and the Portland Trail Blazers nipped the San Diego Clippers 96-93.

The Knicks' victory was the 683rd overall for Holzman — Auerbach leads the pack at 938 — but it didn't come easy. New York trailed 58-45 early in the third quarter but reserve Larry Demic, averaging 1.6 points per game, scored nine points to help give the Knicks their first lead of the game 69-68 with 2:03 remaining in the period.

The score was tied 71-71 entering the final period but the Knicks hit 12 of 17 shots to break a three-game losing streak. Russell led the way with 24 points, 10 in the final period. The loss ended Washington's seven-game winning streak.

Celtics 116, Cavaliers 104

Larry Bird scored 33 points, including 22 in the second half to turn back a Cleveland threat. The Cavaliers outscored Boston 8-1 at the start of the third quarter to pull to within 64-61 but Bird's 15-footer sparked a 12-2 Boston surge and the Celtics stretched their lead to 95-77 entering the final period.

Rockets 109, 76ers 101

Moses Malone scored 31 points and grabbed 20 rebounds and Calvin Murphy became the NBA's 21st all-time scorer as Houston posted its fifth victory in the last six games. Malone dominated play throughout the game, scoring 13 points and grabbing 12 rebounds in the first half. Murphy hit a 16-foot jump shot with 6:40 gone in the second quarter to give him Murphy 16,961 career points and put him ahead of former Boston star Bob Cousy, who finished his career with 16,960.

Lakers 97, Suns 87

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 points and Norm Nixon, a questionable starter because of injuries, added 22. The Lakers led 62-59 after three periods but outscored the Suns 21-8 in the first seven minutes of the final quarter.

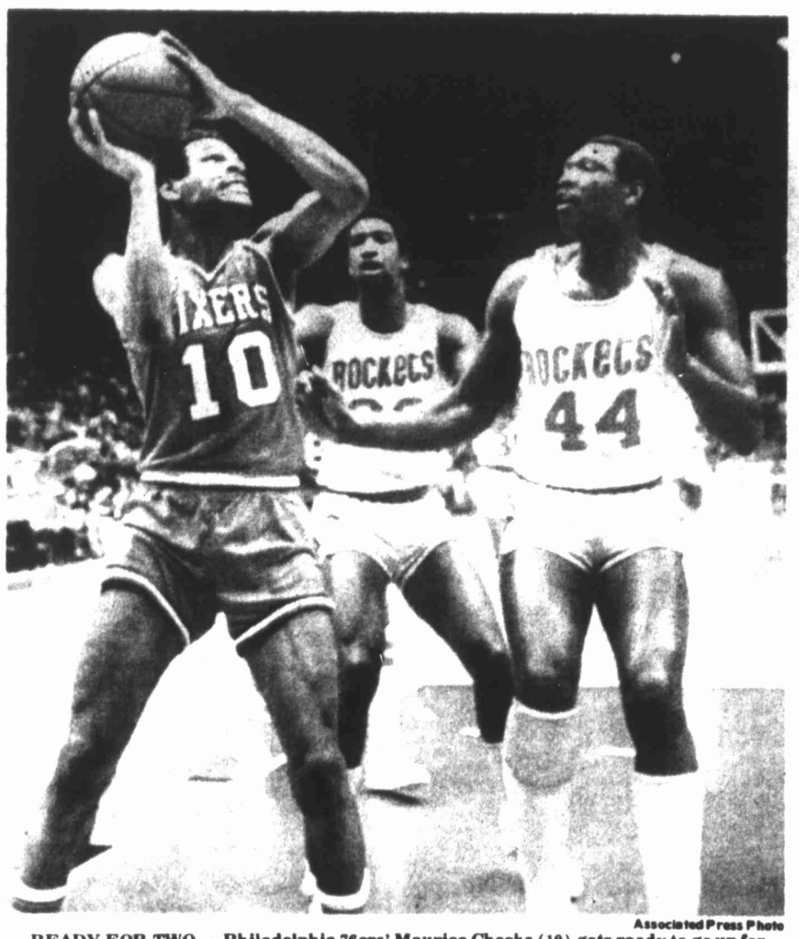

Nixon suffered bruises to his elbows and a hip during Tuesday night's 96-94 loss to Milwaukee. His status for Thursday night's game was uncertain, but he started and played most of the way.

Spurs 126, Kings 115

George Gervin scored 37 points in only 29 minutes of action and Mike Bratz came off the bench to add a season-high 19. Four other Spurs were in double figures as San Antonio defeated the Kings for the third straight time and handed the Kings their 20th defeat in 23 road games. Bratz scored 12 points as the Spurs outscored the Kings 37-21 in the second quarter to take a 61-44 halftime lead. Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer, hit 12 of 20 floor shots and 13 of 14 free throws.

Bucks 119, Jazz 101

Sidney Moncrief and Scott May combined for 49 points. May scored a season-high 27 points and Moncrief added 22. Bob Lanier had 20 points and keyed the Bucks' surge in the second quarter that pushed them ahead. Adrian Dantley, the NBA's No.2 scorer with a 30.9 average, led Utah with 32 points.

Benitz respects Duran's ability

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Wilfred Benitez has seen film of Roberto Duran's last two fights, but he knows he will see a different Duran Saturday night when he defends the World Boxing Council super welterweight championship.

"He will be better than in his last two fights (10-round decisions over Nino Gonzales and Luigi Munchillo) because he knows what kind of a boxer I will be." Benitez, a 23-year-old Puerto Rican who has won world titles in three weight classes, is confident he will beat Duran and move on to challenge for an unprecedent fourth championship.

"This is going to be my last fight in the weight," said Benitez, who said he has trained well to get down to the 154-pound limit, but that it is difficult for him to fight at that weight.

He hopes to ride the victory into a challenge for the undisputed middleweight title (160-pound limit) currently held by Marvin Hagler.

Duran, at age 30, will be trying to win his third title and force a third fight with undisputed welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard.

Duran bristles when questioned about another Leonard fight.

"Right now, my mind is on Benitez, not on Leonard," he said Thursday. Then, through an interpreter, he snapped "Everybody is concerned about the siutation of me fighting Leonard. Nobody asks why Leonard is not giving me a rematch.

"If I win, Leonard will have to come and ask me for a fight."

But Duran said he would fight Leonard at the 147-pound welterweight limit. There is no doubt it is the only class in which Leonard would consider a third fight, something he doesn't feel he will have to worry about after Saturday.

Duran said he was retiring after quitting in the eighth round, blaming stomach cramps, to lose the WBC welterweight title to Leonard Nov. 25, 1980. And, he says he will retire for good if he fails against Benitez, which will be the third fight of his comeback.

"I see Benitez stopping Duran," said Leonard, who will be at ringside at Caesars Palace as a commentator for Home Box Office, which will televise the fight live beginning at about 7 p.m., PST. "I see Duran running on emotion, being frustated again."

Leonard maintains Duran quit in New Orleans because he was frustrated at being beat, not because of stomach cramps.

Benitez also feels he is capable of stopping Duran. An excellent boxer, Benitez has scored 26 knockouts in compiling a 42-1-1 record, and his punching power seems to be increasing as he grows toward what he feels is his natural weight class — middleweight.

"The stone hands will be me," said Benitez, referring to the nickname Duran earned when he dominated the lightweight division (135 pounds) for most of the 1970s. His record is 74-2-0, with 55 knockouts.

Cougars scoring at issue

Lewis takes the offensive

HOUSTON (AP) — If you encounter that sinking feeling from an air pocket on your next flight and someone yells "spread offense" it's probably Houston basketball coach Guy Lewis.

When Lewis gets the feeling that his Cougars are sinking on the court, that's usually his call, much to the chagrin of growing critics of the slow-motion maneuver.

The Cougars, who recently were ranked No. 10 in the nation, are in the throes of a four-game losing streak and in two of those defeats -- Southern Methodist and Arkansas -- the Cougars lost trying to protect dwindling leads with the spread offense.

Although Lewis remains a staunch believer in the spread, he also is perplexed at the frustrating turn of events that has put the pre-season favorites far back in the Southwest Conference title chase with a 2-4 league record.

"We've played well enough to win so I can't find too much fault with our game in Fort Worth," Lewis said, referring to UH's fourth straight loss Tuesday night against Texas Christian. "It was a repeat of all the other losses. . .you look at the stats and wonder how we could have lost."

The Cougars, 11-5 for the season, will try to rebound Saturday night when they host Baylor, fresh from its 69-59 upset of fifth ranked Texas Tuesday night.

Lewis is not certain he will start center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon against the Bears.

"I just don't know for sure," Lewis said. "I don't want to tip my hand at some things I might be planning. Not starting doesn't mean he won't play."

Olajuwon has started three of Houston's four losses.

Whatever the Cougars problems, Lewis refuses to blame it on UH's use of the spread offense.

"It's amazing to me the way people react to the spread," Lewis said. "Now you can be in any other offense and get a layup and blow it or get fouled and miss a free throw. . .and they don't blame the offense.

"But once you go into the spread and clear for a layup and miss all of a sudden it's the offense. I don't understand that."

After Saturday's game against Baylor, the Cougars travel to College Station Monday to complete the first half of the SWC slate against the Texas Aggies.

Kuhn: clubs acting fairly

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says despite Marvin Miller's charge that club owners were acting in concert to thwart the free agent system he found no indication that the clubs were doing business any differently than they did last year, before the strike.

Miller, executive director of the players association, has contended that there is a noticeable difference and he again described it as collusion Thursday.

Kuhn said Miller's charge earlier this month had caused him to "check the numbers out."

"The numbers speak for themselves," said Kuhn, who reported only a four percent difference in the signing of 1981 re-entry draft free agents compared with the signing of those in the previous crop at the same point.

He said 24 of the 41 players, or 58.5 percent, who declared for free agency in 1981 had signed contracts, while at the same time last year 30 of 48, or 62.5 percent, had signed.

"The figures are so close, you're talking about about Tweedledum and Tweedledee," said Kuhn.

Miller was not impressed. He said if the commissioner meant to indicate that an investigation had disclosed no collusion, "That's hokum — that's really trying to pull the wool over the press' eyes."

Miller saw evidence of poststrike collusion in two areas — where the free agent's former club had retained negotiating rights, offers made by other teams did not exceed the salary offered by the original team. And free agents were not offered contracts for more than three years.

"Is Bowie now claiming that all 26 teams woke up one morning and said, 'I think three years is the limit. This is all their individual separate judgments, no matter who the player was, what his position, no matter how young he might be, no matter how injury free he might have been. They each independently, with no consultation and no decision on policy suddenly changed from clubs who signed players for 10 years, 6 years, 5 years — all down to 3?'

"If you want to believe in Alice in Wonderland and the tooth fairy, you can believe the 26 clubs separately made that kind of decision without consultation," said Miller.

The figures cited by Kuhn on free agent signings were included in a news release distributed at a showing of the 1981 World Series film. While there was no breakdown in the figures prepared by the commissioner's office, of the 24 free agents who have signed so far, 14 have remained with their former club, and 10 moved to other teams.

Kuhn said not only were free agents signing at about the same rate as last year, they also were signing for higher salaries. Miller said that was no indication of lack of collusion. "Looking at a piece of paper and seeing higher numbers says nothing," said Miller. "It doesn't tell you, for instance, if Ron Guidry's actual market value was held down by collusion on the part of 18 clubs including the Yankees."

Astros sign Garcia

HOUSTON (AP) — Infielder Kiko Garcia has signed a one-year contract with the Houston Astros, but team officials have declined to release any terms of the pact.

The Astros have signed three of five players who filed for arbitration in contract negotiations. Pitcher Frank LaCorte signed a one-year contract with the club Wednesday. Outfielder Terry Puhl agreed to a four-year pact Thursday.

Garcia, 30, came to the Astros from the Baltimore Orioles last season and played in 48 games with a .272 batting average and 15 RBIs. Lifetime, Garcia has posted a .237 batting average with 93 RBIs.

Pitcher Bob Knepper and infielder Dickie Thon have not signed with the club.

Huff a 'Giant' among inductees

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Now that Sam Huff's fears of not making the Pro Football Hall of Fame have been dispelled, he has a request of the game's shrine.

"I don't know how they decide where your plaque or your bust goes, but I'd love to be put along side Jim Brown. I think Jim Brown would like it, too," said a laughing Huff from his office in Washington.

Brown, as the Cleveland Browns' fullback, and Huff, as the New York Giants' middle linebacker, were famed adversaries in their National Football League primes. Brown preceded Huff into the Hall of Fame several years ago.

Huff will be one of four former football stars selected to be inducted into the Hall on Saturday, Aug. 7, in ceremonies prior to the NFL's first exhibition of the season, matching the Baltimore Colts with the Minnesota Vikings.

He will be joined by two Chicago Bears, lineman George Musso and defensive end Doug Atkins, and Merlin Olsen, the former Los Angeles Rams' defensive tackle and now a national television sports personality.

Olsen, star of NBC's "Father Murphy" series and a pro football analyst for the same network, was the only player in 1982 to be elected in his first year of eligibility, five seasons after his retirement.

Huff, a West Virginia All-American, says he never feared anything in a physical sense in his linebacking days with the Giants and the Washington Redskins.

"But as a player I was afraid of failing, not playing well, not doing my job. And in recent years I started being afraid of failing to make the Hall of Fame. That's how much it meant to me. But, after being afraid of failing to make it, I think that's why finally being voted in now makes it sweeter than if I'd make it right away," said Huff. He retired in 1969.

Musso and Atkins push the Bears' list of Hall of Fame members to 20, counting George Halas, the franchise owner and former coach.

Musso, a $90-a-game tackle when he started his pro career in 1933, had the distinction of playing against two future United States presidents. The Collinsworth, Ill., native, while playing for Milliken College, performed against a Eureka College 175-pound guard named Ronald "Dutch" Reagan. In the 1935 College All-Star game, he was pitted against Michigan's center, Gerald Ford.

Some men are known by their deeds, others by their mortgages.

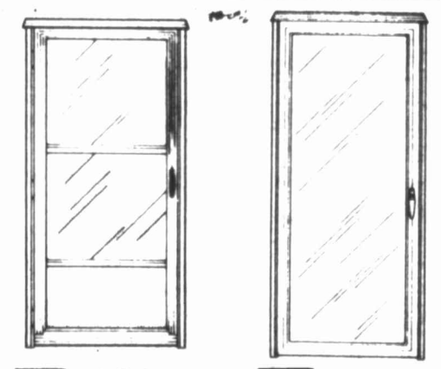

America, the free market place for ideas. Yes, you can have all the ideas you want ... just don't try to push them on the government. Especially if it is an idea to save the government money or to simplify procedure.

If men had no faith in one another, all of us would have to live within our income.

It's no longer a question of "balancing the budget" ... it's now budgeting the balance.

If you are doing the latter, you probably are a farmer. You can protect your investment .. increase your borrowing power with ALL RISK FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE. Make an appointment today at BIG SPRING SEED .. CHEMICAL, 602 N.E. 2nd to learn about your coverages.

DENNIS THE MENACE

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Jack Spratt was on the Pritikin diet."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to get together with congenials and plan how you and they can become more successful in your relationships. Fine also for entertaining and romance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Concentrate on having more harmony with allies and become more successful in the future. Try to make life more pleasant.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan some time for recreation that can take you away temporarily from the stress and strain of regular duties.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are now able to come to a fine understanding with family members and have more accord in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A day to visit good friends, relatives and business allies and come to a better understanding with them.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Check your surroundings and make needed improvements. Ideal time to catch up on your correspondence. Handle money wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A time to think about improving your financial status. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets. Be wary of outsiders.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Think along lines of gaining your personal aims. Be more efficient in handling routines. Don't neglect an important payment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make plans that could produce greater income in the future. Don't waste money on persons who are ungrateful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make it a point to keep in touch with persons you really enjoy. A personal goal can be easily attained now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A time to contact loyal friends and get their backing for something that is important to you. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget dull routines now and make new contacts with those who can liven up your life. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care of your personal obligations early in the day for best results. Show more interest in a civil matter.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will get along well with just about everybody because of the real charm in this nature, so be sure to direct the education along lines that will require being with the public a good part of the time.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Tower says 'honeymoon' is over

WASHINGTON (AP) — The honeymoon is clearly over, and President Reagan's proposals that more than 40 programs be turned over to state and local governments is "shaping up as something of a partisan battle," says Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

"But I think it will depend to a great deal on the reaction from state and local officials. At that point, I think it will become more of a bipartisan issue," Tower told Texas reporters in a 30-minute news conference Thursday.

Democrats criticized Reagan sharply the past two days — partly because of his suggestion for releasing federal control of programs but mostly because he made no mention of the rising national deficit in his State of the Union address Tuesday night.

The Democrats said the omission makes it clear the president has abandoned thought of a balanced budget and is willing to live with a $100 billion deficit, which they said his economic proposals have brought about.

Tower said he agrees with Reagan's stance that no new legislative steps need to be taken this session to correct the national deficit.

"I don't like a deficit of $100 billion, although I'm not sure it's going to be that high. I think that's using the most pessimistic figures to get that. But even if it's $65 billion, it's too high. The question is, should we make a mid-course correction?" Tower said.

" I don't think we should. If we abandon a program before it's even had an opportunity to work, based purely on speculation, then I don't see how we can ever resolve problems on a long-term basis."

'Dopers,' employees catch oil thefts blame

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas independent oil and gas operators say often their own employees are the culprits in thefts totaling $100 million a year in crude oil and equipment.

"Dopers" seeking money to feed drug habits also are among the thieves that "will take anything left above ground in isolated" fields, says Tom Haywood of the North Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Haywood on Wednesday attributed part of the theft problem to industry growth that is so rapid employers do not have time to screen prospective employees.

Some employees are "in collusion," Haywood said, while others "turn their back at the right time, presumably for a price."

He and other independents told a news conference they would hire armed guards and special prosecutors to stop oil field losses that cost them $40 million last year, with losses by major companies accounting for at least another $60 million.

Spokesmen for more than 10,000 independents also said they would try to develop group theft insurance to protect operators they described as "risk-takers" that have "no way of covering their losses."

They announced the formation of Petroleum Industry Security Council, Inc., a statewide, non-profit organization, to direct the anti-theft effort.

Haywood said the council was considering hiring special rangers who could carry weapons, similar to agents employed by railroads and cattle raisers.

President L. Frank Pitts of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association and Gene Wright, chairman of TIPRO's task force on theft, pledged a "vigorous special prosecution program" to secure theft indictments and convictions.

Wright stressed that the security council would act in support of — not in place of — law enforcement agencies.

Among the council's first efforts will be a state hotline to receive tips on thefts — with rewards for tips leading to convictions, training seminars to reduce "in-house theft" and a standard marking system for oil field equipment.

The statewide program is an outgrowth of a hotline set up last August in Wichita Falls. Haywood said in six months tips from the hotline led to the recovery of $200,000 in oil field equipment. Also, he said, one person received a 10-year prison sentence for theft, eight people are under indictment and five parolees have had their paroles revoked for theft.

Involved in the organization of the security council are TIPRO, North Texas Oil and Gas, Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association, West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association, Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association and the Association of Oilwell Serving Contractors.

"The more (thieves) we put behind bars," said Pitts, the more money will be saved for independents "to use for drilling for oil and gas."

Haywood said, however, despite huge industry losses, it is not a tax problem because stolen oil is usually transferred to tanks on other leases and those operators pay the state and federal tax.

Auto talks collapse

DETROIT (AP) — The collapse of emergency contract talks between the United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. means fewer jobs for auto workers and no price cuts for car buyers, top bargainers for both sides say.

The negotiations fell apart late Thursday night over job security and other issues, UAW President Douglas Fraser said.

The union chief announced the bargaining breakdown about 11:30 p.m. after a 14-hour session that wrapped up nearly three weeks of contract talks.

"Things are going to be worse (in the auto industry) than they otherwise would have been had we reached an agreement," Fraser said. "We've lost jobs as a consequence. The American consumer has lost a reduction in prices."

The failure with GM won't stop the UAW from pursuing similar negotiations at Ford Motor Co., where talks are to resume Monday.

Three dead, nine hurt after high-rise shootout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man who coolly assembled a shotgun and opened fire in his wife's insurance office, killing two people and wounding nine others before he was slain by police, was "always jealous," says a co-worker of his wife.

Ricardo Contawe was carrying a flower gift box when he strolled into the 18th-floor office in a high-rise above downtown San Francisco on Thursday afternoon.

He chatted casually with some of his wife's co-workers. Then, while they watched, he assembled a 12-gauge pump shotgun concealed in the long box, Sgt. Mike Pera said.

He fired first at his wife, hitting her in the leg.

As others rushed to her aid, he fired "randomly," Pera said, critically wounding a company vice president and an unidentified woman who had to have her right arm amputated below the elbow.

Contawe's wife, Orlinda, was in stable condition. The two dead had not been identified.

"My first instinct was to jump under the table and that's what I did," said David Luke, a senior insurance underwriter, who said he was six feet from the gunman when the shooting started.

"I heard a woman yell, 'Please don't shoot me.' I heard a shot and that's when I got up and wheeled around and just headed the other way."

The 42-story building overlooking San Francisco Bay was plunged into chaos as workers stampeded down stairs and dove for cover. Minutes later the offices of the Mission Insurance Co. were spattered with blood and the shooting had stopped. Contawe, 36, was dead.

Two mountain survivors are 'glad to be alive'

LITTLETON, N.H. (AP) — Two climbers who wandered blindly for four days without food on icy, windswept Mount Washington say they were "90 percent sure" they were going to die.

And Jeff Batzer and Hugh Herr said today that if they don't lose their frost-bitten feet, they will join rescue crews in memory of the volunteer who died Monday while searching for them.

Batzer, a tool and die apprentice, and Herr, high school junior known as one of the top climbers in the East, began their climb Saturday and were reported missing before the end of the day.

Rescuers were forced to curtail the search for the two Pennsylvanians as temperatures dipped to nearly 30 below. With the winds, the wind-chill factor on the 6,288-foot mountain, the highest in the Northeast, hit 100 degrees below zero at times.

A volunteer mountaineer, 27-year-old Albert Dow, was killed Monday in an avalanche while looking for Herr and Batzer.

A National Guard helicopter plucked the pair Tuesday night from a ledge where they had huddled for shelter.

From their hospital beds today, the two men said they had had no food and were almost sure they would die.

"I was pretty sure if we went into another night, we would die," said Batzer, 20, of Manheim Township.

Herr, 17, of Holtwood, Pa., said "at one point we were trying to die."

Reagan wants Dallas for GOP convention?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top GOP officials say President Reagan has said Dallas would be an excellent site for the 1984 Republican national convention.

Republican national chairman Richard Richards said Thursday, "We will, of course, do everything possible to accommodate the president's request to give preference to Dallas."

The comments came during a meeting of the party's executive committee in Washington.

Richards was to appoint a site-selection committee today to consider bids from various cities.

DECLARATION OF WAR — Congressional leaders look on as President Roosevelt signs the bill which declared the U.S. as being in a state of war with the Japanese Empire, December 8, 1941 at the White House.

'FDR' is robust, effective

NEW YORK (AP) — For anybody who lived through the 12-year reign of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, ABC News' three-hour documentary Friday night has a wonderfully nostalgic feel. For younger viewers, "FDR" is an enlightening and entertaining history lesson.

Either way, ABC's robust undertaking illustrates how effective television can be in bringing to life a personality and period of time.

The network is devoting an entire night of prime time to "FDR", but the boldness of this scheduling must be tempered by recognition that ABC's normal Friday lineup is no match for CBS' blockbusters "Dallas" and "Dukes of Hazzard" anyway.

ABC doesn't call the three-hour project a documentary, terminology that might scare off entertainment-seeking viewers. ABC prefers the label "news special," hoping to lure audiences away from J.R. Ewing for one week.

"FDR" captures the heart and soul of the desperate Depression and wartime years through vintage footage, newspaper headlines, period music and revealing interviews with the four living presidents and several historians, including Arthur Schlesinger, major consultant on the project.

Having ABC's Robert Trout provide the principal narration is a master stroke. The voice of Trout, who covered Roosevelt for CBS, evokes the era better than any modern name. David Brinkley serves as the commentating bridge between the nine acts that include Roosevelt's early years, his first 100 days as president, the second New Deal and his pre-war and wartime policies.

Roosevelt, who was born on Jan. 30, 1882, was the first master media manipulator, using the radio and his folksy "Fireside Chats" to marshal support for his policies and educate the public for future decisions, like his inevitable advance toward war.

ABC makes just passing reference to the chinks in Roosevelt's historical armor: inertia around equal rights for blacks, acceptance of internment camps for Japanese-Americans (but not for Italian- or German-Americans), and closed-door policy toward Jewish refugees from Europe.

And the network reaches too far and seems to lose the Roosevelt focus when it attempts to connect him to American foreign policy in 1960s and '70s.

But these are minor flaws. Overall, "FDR" is remarkable in its scope and insights into a leader who helped rediscover America. If television is supposed to one day replace the classroom, "FDR" is the kind of lesson worth attending.

'World War III' full of cliches

NEW YORK (AP) — It's December 1987. Soviet troops land in Alaska intent on blackmailing the United States into ending its grain embargo. Neither side will budge, and American and Soviet leaders square off in a game of nuclear chicken that isn't a game at all.

NBC's "World War III" Sunday and Monday nights is about the possibility of the final war. It wonders what might happen if both sides raise the military ante and neither appears willing to fold?

The film has horrifying seeds of reality, particularly the realization that a nuclear capability serves as a deterrent only when each side considers being deterred the paramount priority.

With this premise, "World War III" couldn't miss being suspenseful, but it should have been better. It never is totally involving beyond curiosity over the final outcome, which NBC has asked reviewers not to disclose.

The show is also overloaded with cliches. Every Russian talks in stilted language, spiced with "comrades," and looks like a subject from a 1950s American propaganda film. The presidential advisers also are stereotypes: the Jewish liberal, the publicity relations-minded WASP, the bombs-away military men and the serious woman.

In the opening scene, President Thomas McKenna, played by Rock Hudson, is awakened by a nightmare and then seen in the universal morning posture of stumbling to the bathroom, serving to illustrate both the president's powerful burdens and his humanity.

On the domestic front, McKenna, who inherited the office when the president died, must deal with slippage in the polls and whether to declare his candidacy for a full term. Farmers are clamoring for an end to his grain embargo, initiated as leverage against the Soviet presence in Afghanistan, Poland and Yugoslavia.

Meanwhile, his Soviet counterpart, Secretary Gorny (Brian Keith), is grappling with food riots caused by grain shortages. He, too, is seen as a sensitive soul via a breakfast scene, in which he tells his son (Meno Peluce) that communists don't chew Wheaties with open mouths.

And like McKenna, Gorny is a pacifist with healthy fears about military machismo.

Quite rightly, it turns out, because the top Soviet general has ordered a small force into Alaska, without Gorny's knowledge. The purpose of the mission is to hold America's oil pipeline hostage until the grain embargo is lifted. "The KGB is convinced America will not engage in a pre-emptive strike so we can escalate without danger," the general tells Gorny after the fact.

The burden of fighting the Soviets falls to Col. Jake Caffey, a career officer not wearing general stripes because he won't play toy soldier. David Soul is forceful as the anti-authority authority figure. Cathy Lee Crosby plays an intelligence officer, who happens to be in Alaska, and Caffey's former lover.

Bale of cotton to be given away by ag commissioner

AUSTIN — If you would like to have a bale of cotton all your own (or the possible $240 it's worth), Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown will be giving one away March 18 as part of the state's observance of Agriculture Day.

Brown is the state chairman of Agriculture Day, a nationwide recognition of the contribution of agriculture to the U.S. economy. The theme for this state is "Agriculture — It's Your Heartbeat, Texas."

The Lamesa Cotton Growers Association is donating the 480-pound bale. The average price of cotton today, depending on grade, is about 50 cents per pound.

"Persons interested in becoming instant cotton farmers will have to do some work. They are required to write a postcard full of reasons why agriculture is important to Texas," Brown said.

"The winner will be facing the same challenge that farmers have now in finding the buyer with the best price. We'll give some suggestions, but the owner will handle all of the negotiations for the sale."

Entries should be addressed to Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, Texas Department of Agriculture, P. O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711. Entries must be postmarked no later than February 26. The winner will be announced at ceremonies on the Capitol steps March 18 at 1 p.m.

Remembering FDR at home; absorbed by stamps, country

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — "The president of the United States is very disturbed," Henry Morgenthau Jr. told the trembling architect of the Rhinebeck, N.Y. post office on April 25, 1938.

Hitler had invaded Austria a month before and 10 million Americans were out of work. At the moment, though, Franklin Delano Roosevelt had something else on his mind.

Roosevelt had learned that architect R. Stanley-Brown intended to disobey his instructions and use freshly quarried stone for the Rhinebeck post office, spoiling its Hudson Valley Dutch design.

"His instructions are that they should use old stone wall," Treasury Secretary Morgenthau warned Stanley-Brown. "For God's sake do, please."

He did.

People surrounding Franklin Roosevelt learned quickly that the man, one of the dominant world figures of the 20th century, could be just as absorbed by post office design — or stamp collecting — as he was by world war and economic collapse.

"That's the part of FDR that people don't write about," said Susan Brown, a museum curator here. "What's so amazing is the way he would shut it all off. He could finish a meeting with Winston Churchill, go to his room and work happily on his stamps."

On Saturday, America celebrates the centennial of a man who shaped his home and county with the same intensity that he would later shape New York state, the nation and the world.

Franklin Roosevelt was born Jan. 30, 1882 in the gracious, 35-room family home here, 70 miles north of New York City on the east bank of the Hudson River. Springwood was the lifelong residence of the only president elected to four terms.

Exactly a week before his centennial, fire ripped through the third floor and attic of the home. Water from fire hoses cascaded through the lower stories. Dozens of rescuers rushed into the burning home and salvaged nearly all the irreplaceable furnishings.

National Park Service staff have vowed to restore the national historic site. Roosevelt, an early backer of historic preservation, surely would have approved.

Before Saturday's fire, Springwood remained almost exactly as it was the day Roosevelt left, down to the issues of Time magazine on the coffee tables and the World War II-era blackout curtains on the windows.

Visitors — there were more than 250,000 last year — have been struck by the sight of wheelchairs. They appear small and crude. One is made from a kitchen chair with its legs chopped off.

The sense of quiet tragedy is heightened by the sight of Eleanor Roosevelt's bedroom, the one adjoining the president's that she occupied after he was stricken by polio in 1921. It is as sparsely furnished as a guest room. In a sense, it was — mother Sara Roosevelt owned Springwood until her death in 1941 and Eleanor was the woman of the house for less than four years.

The main staircase is usually crowded with naval paintings — Roosevelt's collection of 5,000 paintings and prints on seafaring is considered the world's largest.

"FDR would have gone down in history as a great collector even if he had done nothing else," historian Samuel Eliot Morison once said.

The president's eclectic, hands-on approach to collecting stamps was mirrored in his New Deal efforts to lift America out of the Depression.

Laissez-faire economists were horrified with Roosevelt's "pump priming" social-spending approach to reviving the national economy. Likewise, true stamp collectors were shocked that Roosevelt handled his collection with his fingers rather than tongs.

Roosevelt loved Springwood and planted more than half a million trees on the 1,000-acre estate. The greenery plan germinated in his mind — and the Civilian Conservation Corps he proposed as president put unemployed men to work planting trees across the country.

Hyde Park has the nation's oldest oral history project. In 1947, National Park Service historians began making wire recordings of such people as the family chauffeur, Louis Depew, recalling Roosevelt's battle to regain the use of his polio-stricken legs.

"One day, he hollered to me — he was out there swimming — and he says, 'The water put me where I am and the water has to bring me back.' That's the very words he said," Depew recounted for posterity.

There is also the voice of Robert McGaughey, another employee, revealing that he used to help the 40-year-old Roosevelt onto a tricycle and push him around the driveway.

"He thought he would bring his health back quicker that way by getting more control of his legs," McGaughey recalled.
