ITALIAN DIVISION IS REPORTED TRAPPED

GREEKS HAVE FAMED UNIT IN VISE GRIP

Capitulation Said to Be Only a Matter of Time

ATHENS, Nov. 9 (AP).—An entire Italian division—perhaps 15,000 men—was reported in informed quarters Saturday to have been trapped by Greece's defenders in the Pindus mountains and its capitulation was said to be only a matter of hours.

The troops were identified as Premier Mussolini's famed Centaur division, and it was declared hundreds of the men, including the commanding general, had been taken prisoner.

The action was one of a series in which Greek sources said counter-attacking mountain troops had thrown the Italian invasion machine into reverse all along the 100-mile front.

The remainder of the division, said to be without food and other supplies, was scattered throughout the mountains inside a circle formed by Greek troops. Heavy Italian guns and a large quantity of war materials were dumped into a ravine to prevent capture by the Greeks, one source said.

Military experts said the predicament of the division was due both to an Italian blunder and brilliant Greek strategy. The Italians, trying to make a lightning thrust at a strategic road running into Ioannina, went deep into the mountains. The Greeks cut the column and closed the gap in the lines, isolating the invaders.

Gain at Center

The Greek high command reported the Greeks gain were greatest on the central battlefield, where part of the bow the Italians bent in the Greek front line was straightened out, and in the deepening Greek wedge into Albania around encircled Koritza.

The Greeks were said to have captured more hills around the strategic Italian base at Koritza, possibly in preparation for a final onslaught against strong fascist forces reported cut off in the fortified city.

(Reports from Yugo-Slavia said the Greeks were encountering fierce resistance in the Koritza sector but had some gains in a drive at Seba Gora, mountain village to the northeast.)

Five officers, including the general of the Centaur division, were reported Friday night to have been captured in Greek mountain-side ambushes.

Italians cut off and taken prisoner in the Pindus mountains were said to have brought to 2,500 the number of fascist troops captured in 13 days of fighting.

Change in Hot Lunch Program

This is to advise the public that there has been a change in the hot lunch project, which we feel has been highly necessary, after full investigation of other projects and the operation and coordination of same. Through the cooperation and wise decision of our superintendent, R. N. Cluck, he has accepted the responsibility to head the hot lunch project of the schools. While we know that he is a very busy man, and fully realize the responsibility that he has accepted, we further realize, by investigations, that it belongs in his able and efficient hands.

We ask that the people of Cisco fully cooperate with him in lifting as much of the burden from his shoulders as possible, for the purpose of giving him a free hand that he may organize and carry it on as he sees fit, and in a manner that will fully coordinate the personnel of the Cisco.

Their Deaths Foil Assassins

Innocent victims of a plot to assassinate their father were William R. Bohn, left, and his sister, Lois, 17, killed when Lois stepped on the starter of the family car, pictured above, and set off a bomb which shattered the auto and rocked the neighborhood. The father, city health officer of Seranton, Pa., could give no reason for the plot.

VAUGHN WELL NEAR CARBON DRILLS PLUG

Gallagher and Lawson Spud Offset to Jackson No. 1

Another well neared pay dirt in the South Carbon field Saturday as Fox, et al. prepared Saturday to drill one cement plug in their No. 1 Vaughn on top of the Caddo, where a slight show of oil was encountered. The well, a north by east offset of the Mahoney Jackson No. 1, which was rated an 800-barrel producer, topped the Caddo lime and cemented seven-inch casing at 2,572, only a few feet lower than did the Jackson.

Meanwhile Gallagher and Lawson of Cisco have spudded a south offset to the Jackson on the R. C. Morris tract. The well will be drilled to the same pay as the Jackson.

East of the Jackson the Dobbs Oil company was drilling Saturday at 350 feet.

British Claim Munich Beer Cellar Bombed

LONDON, Nov. 9 (AP).—A stick of British bombs overshot its mark and hit the famous beer cellar where Adolf Hitler spoke at Munich Friday night and started a large fire, the British Press association said Saturday.

The air ministry said Munich and military objectives in northern Italy were raided.

An air ministry announcement reported "military objectives" in the birthplace city of national socialism were heavily attacked at the time Hitler was addressing a rally of the Nazi guard, and the press association said an salvo of explosives missed the target and hit the beer cellar.

The British bombers flew more than 600 miles, reached Munich before 9 p. m. (2 p. m. CST), the air ministry said, and dropped bombs for more than an hour.

Railways, which run through the center of the city, were reported particular objectives.

(The National Broadcasting company in New York had been advised that Hitler would speak at the rally from 12:20 p. m. to 2 p. m., CST, Friday. The broadcast later was postponed to 2 p. m., then was canceled.)

Communications objectives elsewhere in Germany and industrial sections of Italy were said to have been bombed in the overnight raids.

Italian Towns Bombed
The air ministry said Milan and Turin Italy, were "among towns"

Roosevelt Faces Third Term Our Most Powerful President

Big Vote, Federal Funds, Old and New Laws Add to Office

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Heading triumphantly into his third term, President Roosevelt carries with him more actual, concentrated power than any president in American history.

Lay aside the prestige that goes with his smashing of the third term tradition and his victory at the polls, and consider only black-and-white laws.

These are in literal fact what some of them have often been called—blank checks, signed and countersigned by the congress, giving the president power to do practically anything he may wish with the foreign and domestic affairs of the nation.

Some of these powers were voted to him last summer. Others are holdovers from the early days of the New Deal. Still others come down from laws passed long before Mr. Roosevelt came into office. Probably it is fair to say that no one in Washington knows precisely how many of them there are and how far they go.

Along with the powers goes a vast amount of authority over a sphere congress has always jealously considered its own—the public purse. In any survey of the vast powers held by the president, those affecting money must get first consideration.

MONEY—AND MORE MONEY

For example: The president has complete control over a stabilization fund of $2,000,000,000.

He can devalue the dollar at any time he chooses. He can print $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks.

He can fix the value of the silver dollar at any rate he selects, and may lay down the rules under which gold can be acquired, held, imported or exported.

In addition, he has $250,000,000 in cash at his disposal. The army and navy appropriations bills of last June set up an emergency fund of $100,000,000 for the president to use as he saw fit to provide for emergencies "affecting the national security and defense. The president need make no accounting of this money before June, 1942. So far, only a little more than $5,500,000 of this has been spent.

A supplemental defense appropriation bill passed in September gives the president another hundred million for defense housing. Slightly less than $40,000,000 of this has been advanced to the federal works agency, but the president will get this money back from the war and navy departments.

Lastly, there is $50,000,000 which the president may spend on supplies of food, medicines and other necessities for refugees and war victims, to be distributed by the Red Cross. Only a few hundred thousands of this have been spent to date.

All this is only a starter. POWER GRANT HAS LAWYERS GUESSING

Last July congress passed an act to expedite the national defense. This empowers the president, through the secretary of war, to build and operate factories for the manufacture of military equipment, supplies and munitions. Under this the president could put the government into the munitions business—or the airplane manufacturing business, or indeed into practically any other business "affecting national defense."

This same law then goes on to make an amazing grant of power which has the lawyers guessing but looks like authorization to do practically anything. It simply empowers the president "to provide for emergencies affecting the national security and defense and for each and every purpose connected therewith."

The draft act authorizes the president to commandeer any factory which refuses to accept a government order for defense material or to give such an order promptly.

The president may also requisition any munitions or machine tools produced here for foreign governments or for private concerns.

He can control the nation's industrial life by issuing priorities for the production of defense materials.

Under the espionage act of Interstate Commerce act he can control the railroads in time of emergency by laying down priorities for certain types of traffic—a power by which any industry in the country could be brought to heel.

Under the espionage act of 1917, the president may exercise complete control over all vessels, domestic or foreign, in U. S. territorial waters, even to the extent

CISCO STORES TO BE CLOSED ON ARMISTICE

Most business houses in Cisco will be closed tomorrow in observance of Armistice day. The closing is in accord with the custom annually observed here. No local celebration of the event is planned, however, and the feature event of the day so far as Cisco is concerned will be the game tomorrow between the Loboes and the Ranger Bulldogs at Ranger at 2:30 Monday.

The First National bank and the Cisco post office both will be closed Monday. There will be no issue of the Cisco Daily Press Monday afternoon.

Both the Cisco public schools and the Cisco Junior college will hold no sessions, allowing pupils a holiday as is customary.

G. R. Nance and Stanley Webb attended the SMU-A&M game in Dallas Saturday.

Open House Here to Be National Book Week Event

Featuring observance of National Book week—November 11 to 16, inclusive—which the club is sponsoring, the Twentieth Century club will hold open house at the Cisco Public Library from 3 to 6 Friday afternoon, it was announced.

Visitors will be shown through the magnificent library, which the club has developed over a great many years, and which is being expanded as rapidly as its patronage and the finances of the club will permit.

Light refreshments will be served the guests during the afternoon.

The Twentieth Century club is endeavoring to foster more and more interest in the library and its use by the citizens of Cisco, and the emphasis which is being placed on National Book week observance now is aimed at creating a wider appreciation of the library and a greater use of the facilities for cultural development that it provides.

1.4 INCHES OF RAIN IS REGISTERED

The prolonged period of light but constant rain that fell over this section Friday and Saturday registered 1.4 inches of precipitation in the gauge at the city hall at noon Saturday.

The rain, heaviest during Friday night and early Saturday morning, let up late Saturday morning.

According to reports to the Cisco Daily Press, the fall was general over a wide area of central Texas.

CONDITION "UNCHANGED"

LONDON, Nov. 9 (AP).—The condition of former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who is gravely ill at his Hampshire home, was reported "unchanged" Saturday. It was disclosed that King George VI and Queen Elizabeth had visited Chamberlain recently for about an hour.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

On November 11, twenty-two years ago, the World paused in a struggle that has been going on for six thousand years and more. It was a struggle between two very distinctly different philosophies of getting along together.

The philosophies took different political forms, but within each the ideal in conflict was quite definite. In one was the ideal that man cannot govern himself, that the state, a nebulous sort of something endowed with a divine right—a necessary assumption since the ability of mere man to endow his government with authority is denied—is supreme and its dictates are unassailable.

In the other is the conviction that the individual is supreme, that government exists for the individual and his happiness, security and advancement and that it ought to be limited strictly to that which the individuals choose to surrender in the cause of the common defense and proper regulation.

Since the latter ideal places its emphasis on the individual it presumes an individual with freedom of action and choice, enlightened and equipped to discharge the responsibilities of his sovereignty. Since the former makes the individual a ward of the state, to obey without question that which the state decrees, he has no need either of freedom or enlightenment.

You can estimate for yourself what the influences of the two forms of government exert upon the individuals concerned and what the ultimate product will be in each case. The point is that the two forces have been in conflict for a long, long time. They are still in conflict. Never were they more clearly delineated than in the war that is going on over Europe today.

A great many pretty words and a lot of sentimental gush have been written about the Armistice day celebrations such as we are entering upon tomorrow. But the truth of the matter is that the celebration, if it means a conclusion to anything, is premature. The Armistice day of 1918 didn't settle anything. Two very tired and extravagant organizations of men and arms merely agreed to call it quits for a spell. The real war went on. The chance to win it for the cause of the individualistic ideal was transferred to the field of politics and diplomacy, and the leaders in charge there

The United States Goes to College

Did you vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt or Wendell Willkie for president on Tuesday, Nov. 5?

Pardon us, but you didn't.

You voted for electors, who you hope and expect will vote in the electoral college for the candidate of your choice. That is the unique college to which all the United States goes, once every four years, to find out whom it has elected its president.

Those electors, for whom you really voted, will meet and THEY will vote for the presidential candidates. The result of their vote will be forwarded to Washington, they tabulated with similar votes in other states, and the result is the official election of a president.

A long way around to achieve a result everybody knows about anyway? Perhaps. Some people think it ought to be eliminated as a useless snarl of red tape, to say nothing of the possibility that the electors just might possibly get together and vote for somebody you didn't intend them to vote for at all.

It all started when the country was young, and had fewer than 4,000,000 people, most of whom were not allowed to vote. Even this restricted suffrage was not trusted. It was felt that the voters ought to delegate the right to choose a president to a select group of respected citizens. These would be chosen by the voters for their standing and judgment, and they, in their wisdom, would choose anybody they thought best for president.

Their number, too equal in each state to the number of senators and representatives, guaranteed minimum representation to each state as such, no matter how small.

But after this college had twice elected Washington, parties sprang up, and the idea became more and more firmly entrenched that the electors were to be pledged in advance to vote for a specific candidate, thus reducing them from a choice-making body to a mere transmission belt for a choice made by the voters themselves.

Thus we are reminded every four years of two things: first, that our government is more democratic today than when it was first set up, and second, that it is a federal union of sovereign states, and that our presidents are chosen by the vote of the people of the states as such, and not directly by the mass of all the people.

This odd and atavistic "college" has been functioning for 152 years and bids fair to turn out many another "graduate."

Too bad all the polls couldn't have been correct. Everybody would have been elected.

We finally found the answer to "Button, button, who's got the button?" The laundry!

Lots of persons are driving an old car because they don't owe for a new one.

made such a mess of their opportunities that most of the ground that was gained was lost. New leadership was created out of the hopes and fears and resentments of the people and now the physical struggle goes on again.

The forces which these leaders represent are not confined to their respective nations. They run across the national complexion of every country that is represented. The battle is not between Nations A and Nations B. It is between groups and elements within every country. It is even going in the uncertainties of many individual minds. It will never be solved by war. It will be solved only when one of the two ideals proves in operation that it offers the most for the happiness and freedom of the world, the encouragement of advances and the protection of those gains.

We believe, here in America, that the ideal of individual freedom is the superior. Our Armistice day celebration should be a rededication of ourselves as individuals and Americans to make that ideal work, not merely for ourselves, but for a world which, if we are to be secure and happy and prosperous, must also be prosperous and happy.

visited by the RAF last night." An aircraft factory at Turin and the Pirelli magneto works at Milan were said to have been bombed.

Both Reuters (British news agency) and the British Press association speculated that some of the bombs had fallen close enough to disturb the beer hall meeting.

The press association said because the targets of British bombardment were rail communications—and most of those run through the center of Munich—it can quite easily be imagined that those assembled in the beer hall to listen to Hitler were undoubtedly disturbed.

The British planes were said to have arrived over Munich 14 minutes after Hitler was scheduled to begin speaking and to have remained more than an hour and a half dropping heavy caliber explosives.

The press association said there was little doubt it was the visit of the RAF which put a stop to any plans to broadcast the Nazi Fuehrer's speech.

Targets in Germany and Nazi-occupied territory which the communiqué listed included oil refineries at Gelsenkirchen and Frankfurt, aircraft factories at Nuremberg and Amsterdam, freight yards at Hamm, Soest, Osnabrück, Duisberg, Rohrt and the Hook of Holland, railway communications at Stuttgart, Mors, Saarbrücken, Mainz and La Havre, and 18 German airdromes.

A German submarine base at Lorient on the Nazi-held coast also was reported bombed "with good results."

POWER OVER MEN

The president could control the electric utilities under an act of 1935, which gives him broad powers over distribution systems to provide current for war-essential industries.

He could control radio up to the hilt in time of war, in time of threat or peril to the country, or even "to preserve the neutrality of the United States," having authority to take over stations and networks to run by the government.

During any emergency period proclaimed by the president, he can have complete power over the country's banking and financial system.

In wartime he could put all telephone and telegraph facilities under military control.

Nor are these powers all. The president can control foreign trade by embargoing the export of any commodities he deems necessary to the national defense.

He can control and regulate foreign exchange and transfers of credit.

Through the RFC and the Import-Export bank he can grant loans to private industry or to foreign governments. He can authorize the sale of "surplus" war materials to foreign countries, subject to the approval of ranking army and navy chiefs.

Last but certainly not least, the draft act is so drawn as to give the president sweeping power over the nation's men. The act vests exceedingly broad powers in the local draft board—which, in the last analysis, means that the power is vested in the president. Conceivably, these powers could be used to regiment workers, farmers and indeed all other men

Lieutenant and Mrs. Gaston Alford of San Antonio are visiting in the home of Mrs. Alford's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raby Miller, and in Rising Star. They expect to leave Tuesday for McDill Field, Tampa, Florida, where Lieut. Alford is stationed with the U. S. Air Corps.

Two Cisco Girls To Be Married in Similar Rites

Two weddings of unusual interest to Ciscoans are those of Miss Christelle Reynolds and Mr. Don Hood of Cisco, and Miss Maxine Cearley of Cisco and Mr. Ross Smith of Seattle, Washington. Miss Reynolds' wedding will be performed tonight at 10 o'clock, in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Reynolds, and Miss Cearley will be married at 8 o'clock tonight in Seattle. The girls have been lifelong friends.

The Hood-Reynolds nuptials will be conducted by the Rev. Wilburn Gaede of Woodson, pastor of the Methodist church there.

The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Evelyn Reynolds, as maid of honor. Miss Reynolds will wear a frock of green lightweight wool, and will wear on her shoulder a corsage of marigolds.

The bride will be attired in a costume suit of soldier blue lightweight wool. Her hat will be of soldier blue and her other accessories will be black. Her flowers will be white gladioli.

Mr. Hood will be attended by his brother, Mr. J. F. Hood, of Lamesa, as best man.

A reception will be held at the Reynolds home immediately following the ceremony. Only the family and a few close friends will attend.

Miss Reynolds is a 1935 graduate of Cisco high school, later attending Randolph college, and Ferson's Beauty school in Abilene.

Mr. Hood, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hood of Breckenridge attended the Breckenridge schools. He is employed at Moore Drug company.

Seattle Wedding
Miss Cearley and Mr. Smith will be married at 8 o'clock tonight in Seattle, Washington. She will wear soldier blue and a white corsage.

Miss Cearley, a 1936 graduate of Cisco high school, attended Draughon's Business college in Abilene, and has since made her home here.

She is the daughter of the late Judge J. Lee Cearley, and Mrs. Cearley of Belton.

Mr. Smith is employed in the U. S. postoffice in Seattle.

East Ward PTA Meets Thursday At School

The East Ward P-T-A met Thursday afternoon at 3:30 in the east ward building for a very interesting program and business meeting. Various numbers were given by students in the fifth grade. The speaker for the afternoon was Supt. R. N. Cluck, who presented a very interesting discussion on the vital topic, "Practical Education."

A short business session followed, during which plans for an auction sale were considered. The definite arrangements will be presented through this publication at a later date. Watch for this announcement.

Rivers Teeming With Life

Sit on the wharf of a busy river front and watch boats come and go with their cargoes of food and supplies. But, look through a microscope into an artery of the human body, and you see more activity than on any river in China or the world. The red and white corpuscles of the blood act as little boats, carrying oxygen, nourishment and protection, to the most remote tissues of the body. The food you eat and the air you breathe must be distributed by these little ships.

Accumulated wastes of the body would soon poison you, if these little cell "boats" did not carry them through the veins to the lungs, kidneys and sweat glands, to be eliminated.

The "blood platelets," plasma and white cells of the blood constantly circulate, ready to pounce on the slightest pin prick, close it up and form a barricade against infection. Keep these "rivers of life" in your body teeming with rich, healthy blood, filled with cell boats in good repair and carrying full cargoes.

CHAPTER VI CHARACTERISTICALLY, Julius Peskin kept Bill late the night of the dance. Hurrying to get ready, he had no chance to see the evening Clarion. He was in the bedroom knotting his tie when Buck wheeled to the doorway.

"Heard the news, Bill?" Crouched before the mirror, Bill shook his head.

"He resigned" following last night's defeat, Buck continued. "The man who takes his place has a rough road ahead. Two games left and less than a week to get ready for the first one!"

"Could you do it, Buck?" "With luck, fellow." Bill caught his father's shoulders in an iron grip. "You're going to get the chance, Buck. Don't you see? Now we can really fight. We don't have to worry about taking somebody's job. Every fellow on the squad will put up a good fight for you."

Buck looked doubtful. "I don't know." Bill said impulsively. "And when I see Dot—" "Dot?"

ed. "You know what I mean. I dated Dot for this shindig two months ago."

Bill said truthfully. "I didn't know that." "Like heck you didn't!" Buletthead seemed to mistake Bill's calmness for fear. He thrust his head forward. "If you know what's good for you, Mentor, you'll beat it."

"Not unless Dot wants me to," Bill retorted. "You come outside," Buletthead ordered. "We'll settle this."

"Careful," Bill said. "Don't forget, this is a school dance. We can't scamp here."

"Why not?" Buletthead jammed a meaty shoulder into Bill's chest. "Scared?"

Bill went white about the mouth. With an effort he kept his hands in his pockets. "I'll take that up with you later," he grated.

"Oh, no, right now," Buletthead said, swinging a punch at Bill. Bill ducked neatly, but Peskin's knuckles took skin from his jaw. Swiftly Bill's fist came out of his pockets. Mr. Marx, one of the chaperons, turned just in time to witness the clean, hard uppercut that snapped against Peskin's jaw.

Buletthead wilted to the floor, all the fight gone out of him. Mr. Marx grabbed Bill's arm. "What's the meaning of this, Mentor?"

Before Bill could reply, Dot Skelton pushed through the crowd of young people and announced dramatically, "They were fighting over me, Mr. Marx."

"Is that true, Mentor?" Dot held the center of the stage, her green eyes glowing. "I'm just awfully sorry, Mr. Marx. They're such jealous boys. I do try to keep them apart."

Marx, a fussy little man, said nervously. "From what I could observe, Mentor, you were the aggressor in this quarrel. I feel called upon to inform your father or the circumstances. In the meantime, I suggest that you leave."

Hard knocks had taught Bill Mentor not to argue with those in authority. He turned toward the door without a word. Outside, he was surprised to find Dot at his side. She took his arm and pressed close to him.

"Bill, you were marvelous! I'm just so proud I could burst. Every girl there was simply green with envy."

Bill's face was grim. "Did you really tell Buletthead he could take you tonight?"

Dot's laugh floated lightly across the frosty night. "What if I did, Bill? That was a long time ago. I like you so much better than Buletthead."

After a thoughtful silence Bill said, "I guess Buletthead had a right to be sore. Old man Peskin, too. I've got myself in a sweet jam."

"Nothing of the sort, Bill. I'll explain everything to Father." "Will you?" Bill asked eagerly. "I sure don't want to get in bad with the board just now."

"Don't you worry, Bill. I've fixed things so far, haven't I?" Bill said with some doubt. "Well, yes..." By this time they had reached Dot's front porch. "Good night, Dot."

"Is that all, Bill?" she pouted. Bill saw his duty and did it—a reluctant peck on Dot's cheek. "I don't feel so hot. I'll see you Monday."

BUCK didn't mention the party Sunday morning. He was engaged in some work and Bill spent most of the day reading. He didn't leave the house.

It wasn't until late Sunday that Buck opened the subject. He sat at a table, writing. "You haven't said much about the dance, Bill," he said quietly.

"Did you have a good time?" "Bill shifted his feet uneasily. "Buck, I—"

"I know all about it, Bill. Mr. Marx called me." Buck resumed his writing. "I'm sorry, Buck."

Buck Mentor put down his pen. No anger showed in his face, but his eyes were touched with sadness.

"I don't know what this is all about, Bill," he said. "But I know it isn't like you to mistreat Helen and then get in a brawl over another girl."

Buck waited, and Bill knew he was being given a chance to explain. But there was nothing he could say—not without admitting to Buck his real reason for taking Dot to the dance.

Buck Mentor shrugged. "Okay, Bill, you don't have to tell me," he folded the letter and placed it in an envelope. "I want this to go out in the morning, Bill."

Bill's eyes pleaded mately, but Buck avoided them. He said, "You can forget all that nonsense about coaching West. Somehow, Bill, I've lost your confidence. I think this letter will put me in a position to regain it."

WE'RE READY On Armistice Day - 1940

West Texans on November 11, 1918, were jubilant as was all the world. The cream of West Texas youth had joined in fighting a war to end all wars. They had won the fight for Democracy, Freedom, and Justice. West Texans on November 11, 1940, have less reason to be jubilant, for most of the world is again at war... with Democracy the stake. Present-day problems, however, do not prevent our paying tribute to the heroes of 1918, both those who gave their lives and those who thankfully returned to their families. Busy as we are today building a new defense of our freedom... freedom of action, freedom of thought, freedom from fear and oppression, freedom of enterprise... we owe a debt of gratitude to the heroes of the first World War. Your Electric Servant, prepared for any emergency because it has planned far in advance to meet wartime as well as peacetime demands, will close its offices on Armistice Day. Many men and women in our organization thus will be able to join in the national holiday. Others, though, of necessity will remain on the job to provide light and power. They, then, will observe Armistice Day at a later date. It is this spirit of cooperation that makes Electric Service good... and cheap... in West Texas.
