Pact Signed In Solemn Ceremony

Bible Quotations Signal End Of Wars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt and Israel, neighbors but enemies for a generation, signed a treaty Monday to begin a new, fragile era of peace between Arab and Jew.

In a solemn ceremony on the front lawn of the White House, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin put their names to Arabic, Hebrew and English copies of a treaty promising mutual recognition, respect and peace.

"Peace has come!" declared a beaming President Carter, whose personal intervention 19 days ago brought negotiations back to life after they had stalemated on the details.

Carter quoted the Bible and the Koran, and he offered a personal prayer that Arabs and Jews may one day be brothers.

Sadat, replying, declared: "Let there be no more bloodshed between Arabs and Israelis."

"Let us work together until the day comes when they beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks," the Egyptian said.

Carter quoted the same words from Isiah.

"No More War"

"No more war," agreed Begin. "No more bloodshed. Peace unto you. Shalom, salaam, forever."

"Shalom" means "peace' in Hebrew. "Salaam" means "peace" in Arabic.

Begin put on a skullcap and quoted Psalm 126 in Hebrew. He said rather than translate, he would let everyone find the words in his own language in "the book of books."

Protesters shouting "Long live Palestine!" could be heard from the streets. But the three leaders ignored them.

(Arab World's Reaction To Peace Treaty, Page 5, Sec. A)

Sadat and Begin both praised Carter profusely. Sadat called him a man of compassion; Begin said Carter's work would be remembered for generations.

But agreement did not come easily.

Dispute Until Last

Even at lunch with Carter, a little more than an hour before they signed, Begin and Sadat were still disputing what the treaty papers should call an area the Israeli leader insists on referring to as Judea and Samaria and most of the world calls "the West Bank."

Sadat and Begin signed, dramatically, on the windy lawn, after 30 years of hostility and four wars between their nations and after 15 months of American-sponsored negotiations.

Then Carter added his signature, a satisfied witness.

Thus, on a chill, sun-filled spring afternoon, with 1,600 witnesses waving the flags of the three nations, a Moslem, a Jew and a Christian joined in solemnizing their handiwork.

They hoped their act would lead to a permanent peace throughout the Middle East, a task threatening to be even more difficult than this hard first step.

Three-Way Handshake

After signing, the three grasped each other in a three-way handshake. Carter said softly, "I'm so proud of both of you."

Outside the White House gates, 2,000 protestors, supporters of Palestinians, shouted their opposition, charging Sadat had betrayed their cause by making a separate peace with the Jewish state.

In the treaty, Israel agrees to dismantle Jewish settlements and return to Egypt the vast Sinai desert seized in the Six-Day War of 1967. Egypt agrees, for the first time, to formally recognize her Jewish neighbor as a member of the community of nations.

Plea To Arab World

Carter, in his speech, called on the rest of the Arab world to join in the peace process, and he showered Sadat and Begin with ringing praise.

"Two leaders who will loom large in the history of nations — Anwar al-Sadat and Menachem Begin — have conducted this campaign with all the courage, tenacity, brilliance and inspiration of any generals who ever led men and machines onto the field of battle," Carter said.

On the White House lawn, most of the members of Congress and other guests sat in rows of folding chairs. Among them were officials of both countries.

World Reaction Varies

Television carried the ceremony back to the Middle East, where the occasion was marked with anger, hostility and threats — and bombs, strikes, mass rallies and threats of reprisal and revenge.

Effigies of Carter, Sadat and Begin burned in refugee camps and Yasser Arafat, leader of Palestinian refugees, denounced each of them.

"Let me tell all three of them today," Arafat declared, "that I shall not only burn their fingers, but shall even chop off their hands."

About 10 minutes before the ceremony, a grenade exploded in Jerusalem, wounding five tourists.

In Washington, the bells of St. John's church pealed as the leaders assembled to formalize peace. Sadat arrived first for a private meeting with the president. After Begin's arrival an hour later, the three leaders lunched together.

The signing took place at an eight-foot desk covered by a floral pad. There were seats for each of the leaders and their wives.

Forsythia bloomed on the lawn and the brisk wind scattered water from a fountain.

In the evening, 1,300 guests were invited to celebrate at a dinner in a yellow striped circus tent.

Agreement on the final details — the question of Israeli access to oil from wells to be surrendered back to Egypt — came in a Sunday night face-to-face session between Sadat and Begin.

Begin dropped his proposal that the treaty be signed at two further ceremonies, in Jerusalem and Cairo. Instead, he agreed to settle for a one-day visit next Monday to Cairo.

It will be a return call for the historic

Oil Price Hike Likely April 1

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will probably raise oil prices considerably April 1, sources said today. An Iranian delegate said his nation had support for a 29 percent rise.

An increase by that much would raise the American retail price of gasoline and heating oil by about six cents a gallon.

"A price increase is inevitable," said an official of a key member of the 13-nation cartel. OPEC is meeting here to discuss the effects of oil shortages caused by the Iranian revolution and other factors on world oil supply.

The meeting was not designed for a price change decision, but sources said members had voted themselves authority to act on prices.

As part of the quarterly series of price increases approved by OPEC in December, the basic price of a barrel of crude oil is scheduled to rise 3.8 percent, from $13.35 to $13.84, on April 1. But that increase has been superseded by many OPEC members in the form of surcharges, generally of nine percent.

There had been speculation that OPEC would leave the scheduled increase alone and allow the price to rise through surcharges based on market factors. But it was apparent Monday that most members desired firmer action to raise the price.

Price increases and shortages already have had an impact on the American consumer. The Consumer Price Index showed that the cost of gasoline went up 2 percent in February to a level 18 percent higher than it was a year before.

In some areas gasoline costs a dime more a gallon now than it did a year ago. Some service stations are limiting hours because they cannot get enough gasoline to meet demands.

In addition, changes in government pricing regulations are expected to add up to 12 cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline over the next two years.

Iraqi Oil minister Tayeb Abdul-Karim, an OPEC militant, said his nation might withhold oil from some nations to "punish" them for being involved with the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. Asked if that might mean an oil embargo against the United States, he said: "We will punish anyone who works against us."

Iranian Suggests Hike

One senior member of the Iranian delegation said Iran suggested a 29 percent increase. Cyrus Ebrahim Zadeh, an economic advisor to the finance ministry, said the idea had the support of Iraq, Algeria and Libya, and he added that he felt "the atmosphere of the meeting favors" such an increase. Algeria denied it was supporting an increase that large, but said it did want a price rise.

Such a large increase is likely to be opposed by some OPEC nations, especially Saudi Arabia, the cartel's largest producer.

Saudi Oil minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said he would resist a price increase, and both the Saudis and Kuwait have said they want the market to determine the price.

While Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are influential in OPEC, observers said they

Volunteers Relieving City Firemen During Colleagues' Funerals

By A-J News Staff

INVESTIGATION into the mysterious deaths of three Lubbock firemen continues today, while volunteers from several area towns relieve city firemen to attend their colleagues' funerals.

Officials investigating the cause of Sunday's early morning tragedy learned Monday that several more of the fire department's air masks contain pin-sized holes in the diaphragms similar to those in masks worn by the firemen killed.

District Chief Lee Turner said investigators examining the equipment discovered the holes Monday. The masks, which had not been used by firemen fighting the blaze Sunday at a building at 711 34th St., immediately were replaced, he said.

The diaphragm is a piece of rubber about three inches in diameter that regulates air pressure in the air packs.

Death Causes Uncertain

However, officials remain uncertain about what killed the three firemen — Larry Tucker, 25, Kenneth Haggard, 34, and Eddie Swafford, 30 — although there is an indication toxic fumes seeped into their air mask filters, knocking them unconscious and eventually killing them.

Preliminary autopsy results Monday reveal evidence of smoke inhalation, internal bleeding and a "pretty heavy concentration of carbon monoxide" in the three, said Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy.

Micro-Environmental Laboratories, Inc., also is examining the men's air masks and testing air samples taken from the scene. Dennis Owens of the laboratory said the preliminary report "hopefully" will be delivered to city officials today.

A city spokesman said Monday the air masks' manufacturer, Scott Health and Safety Products of Lancaster, N.Y., has been notified about the tests being conducted on the equipment.

About 40 firefighters from Idalou, Spur, Ralls, Brownfield, Abernathy and Saton volunteered their sercices to the city Monday, so that most of the LKubbock firmen could attend the separate funeral of Tucker, Haggard and Swafford.

National Official Here

Howie McClendon of Washington, D.C., president of the International Association of Fire Fighters, also will be attendiong the three services and will be conferring with family members about benefits for survivors of the three firmen.

Fire Chief Tom Foster said Monday a partial pathologist's report indicates the men, despite their wearing air pack masks, inhaled toxic fumes, resulting in bleeding in the lungs.

The deadly fumes, which officials say could be caused by any number of burning chemiclas, apparently seeped through the fire fighters' safety masks moments after they entered a smoldering building shortly before 7 a.m. Sunday.

Accused GI, Family Meet Amid Tears

GREAT LAKES, Ill. (AP) — Jack Garwood said Monday there is "no way" that his son, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who was missing in Vietnam for nearly 14 years, is guilty of desertion or other charges that could lead to his execution.

"I don't believe them (the charges)," the senior Garwood said. He added that whatever his son did, it should warrant no more than "a spanking."

The elder Garwood said nothing could compare with his reunion with his son, who was declared a prisoner of war in 1965. The Marine's brother said it "started raining in the room."

Accused Of Desertion

The reunion came Sunday after Garwood, accused of desertion and collaborating with the Viet Cong, arrived at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center where he is undergoing medical tests.

His father said at a news conference Monday he had not believed he would see his son until "I could reach out and touch him. Then I knew it was my boy. Beautiful. Best thing that could every happen to anybody. I still haven't gotten over it. Butterflies."

Garwood, a 33-year-old Indiana native, could face a firing squad if convicted of all five charges brought against him.

The senior Garwood, from Greensburg, Ind., said that when he first saw his son in the hospital room Sunday, "We just looked up, and hugged each other something fierce. It was beautiful."

Non-Separation Vow

Don Garwood, Robert's 30-year-old brother, said he reacted like his father. "I didn't know how to handle it. I just sort of stood there. And then we came together. It started raining in the room. We both assured each other we'd never be separated again."

The family met with Robert for about eight hours Sunday.

Protestors Hurl Boos At Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 2,000 Arab-American demonstrators marched to the White House and shouted protests Monday as the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty was signed in an outdoor ceremony several hundred yards away.

Applause from guests on the White House lawn was met repeatedly with boos from demonstrators in Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the executive mansion. Protestors' cries could be heard as the leaders of Egypt, Israel and the United States spoke of peace in the Middle East.

A line of mounted policemen, backed up by dozens of helmeted officers on foot, kept the demonstrators on the far north side of the park, the most distant area of the park from the White House.

Demonstrators tore down a hastily erected picket fence between them and police, but did not move further toward the White House.

"Down With Sadat"

As they marched and stood in the park, protestors yelled, "Down, down, down with Sadat," and "Long live the PLO."

Protest leaders branded the treaty a sellout of Palestinians and said it will not bring peace to the Middle East.

The demonstration, though noisy, was generally peaceful.

In one of the few violent incidents, a radio newsman was punched when he tried to interview a demonstrator, police said.

At one point along the march to the White House, demonstrators exchanged angry gestures with a man wearing a yarmulke, a cap worn by Jewish men. Police kept them apart and restrained a marcher who struck a parade leader with a stick that had been used to carry a protest banner.

The demonstration here was the centerpiece of rallies and marches in 25 cit-

Chemist Disputes Link To Slayings

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A defense expert in the murder trial of Gene Leroy Hart testified Monday that hair and sperm comparisons cannot positively identify an individual.

The testimony from Hubert Earl Maxey, a chemist and physicist who is a private consultant, was designed to counter earlier testimony from state witnesses that sperm and hair samples found on the bodies of three Girl Scouts was similar to that taken from Hart.

Hart, 35, is on trial on three counts of first-degree murder in the 1977 sex slayings of three Girl Scouts at a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp.

Maxey, testifying in the seventh day of the trial, said he conducted a comparison of the hairs about one week ago.

Anti-Castro Group Claims Responsibility For Three Bomb Blasts

NEW YORK (AP) — Two bombs exploded in New Jersey late Sunday, just hours after a suitcase blew up at Kennedy International Airport, police said. A self-described anti-Castro terrorist group claimed responsibility in a telephone call to The Associated Press.

The caller said the explosions, which authorities said injured four people, were the start of an offensive by the group against organizations it considers sympathetic to Cuban President Fidel Castro.

Police in New York and New Jersey said they had received no calls from anyone claiming responsibility.

The bombs in New Jersey went off at the offices of the New Jersey Cuban Refugee program in Weehawken, damaging two nearby storefronts, and the Elmaceen Pharmacia in Union City. Police said the pharmacy sends medical supplies to Cuba.

"I was expecting this," said E.J. Negrin, head of the refugee program, which supports closer ties with Cuba. "People who did this don't want us to be reunited with Cuba," he said.

The Kennedy airport explosion occurred in a suitcase at a Trans World Airlines baggage area minutes before it was to be placed aboard Flight 17 to Los Angeles, the airline said. Some 180 passengers were on the plane.

The caller spoke with a Spanish accent and identified himself as a spokesman for a group known as Omega 7, part of a larger Cuban nationalist group known as the Congress of United Revolutionary Organizations.

Members of the Congress of United Revolutionary Organizations have been involved in terrorist attacks in southern Florida, including eight bombings in 1977.

The caller said the explosions were directed at "the fifth column created by Castro in the United States to satisfy his need for American dollars."

Before hanging up, the caller warned: "Similar actions will continue until we shut down this source of cash in the U.S."

Four persons were injured in the Kennedy airport explosion. There were no immediate reports of injuries in the other blasts.

"It was our intention to blow up the plane and not injure anyone," the caller told The Associated Press.

A TWA spokesman said the 8:48 p.m. blast "appears to have been a good-sized explosion." Police said it appeared three sticks of dynamite were used in the device.

"Thank God the plane wasn't in the air. It would have blown up," a police spokesman said. Flight 17 was to take off at 9 p.m., TWA officials said.

Police said an unidentified man made three telephone calls to warn that the bomb was in luggage intended for flight 17, but the calls were received after the explosion and authorities speculated the device went off prematurely.

A police bomb squad was rushed to the area and city and federal authorities scoured the baggage section and the plane's hold for other explosives. The plane was evacuated.

A TWA employee, who declined to be identified, said the baggage was being placed on metal carts for transfer to the plane at the time of the blast. He said he heard the explosion and ran to the area, where he found "men sprawling on the floor."

Roads to the airport were blocked, but an airport spokesman said aircraft departures and arrivals were not affected.

Officials at Flushing Hospital said four people were brought to the emergency room. None were seriously injured, they said.

It was the first at either Kennedy or nearby LaGuardia airport since an explosion at LaGuardia on Dec. 29, 1975, that killed 11 people and injured 75 others.

That blast, estimated to have been the equivalent of 25 sticks of dynamite, originated from a public baggage locker.

Investigators still have no leads in that case, although they have questioned more than 3,000 persons in 38 states and three foreign countries.

Following the 1975 explosion, public baggage lockers were removed from Kennedy and LaGuardia. They have not been replaced.

BOMB AT KENNEDY AIRPORT — New York City Police emergency vehicles park outside the Trans World Airlines area at Kennedy International Airport early Monday after a bomb explosion in the baggage area. Death Of Firemen Shocks Department

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Fire Department, as one fireman put it, is in a state of shock following the deaths of three members of its force from toxic fumes while fighting a blaze Sunday morning at a 34th Street structure.

A fire dispatcher working the morning shift Monday broke down and cried upon hearing a person express his sympathy concerning the deaths of Larry Tucker, 25, Kenneth H. Haggard, 34, and Eddie C. Swafford, 30.

"Thank you for that," said the dispatcher, a personal friend of two of the three men who died at Lubbock hospitals after fighting what was thought to be a routine one-alarm fire at the Moris Kitchen and Ice Cream Parlor at 711 34th St.

A wreath hangs on the front door of the department's Central Station, only one of many things signifying the fire department's worst tragedy ever.

Swafford had been a member of the department since April 28, 1973. Haggard had been a city fireman since April 1, 1969. And Tucker had been a fireman less than a year, joining the department July 10, 1978.

"These guys were like all of our men. Tom Foster said Monday. "They didn't take unnecessary risks and I don't think they took unnecessary risks this time. I don't think you could have found finer boys anywhere," Foster added.

For two city firemen, the Sunday morning tragedy not only meant the loss of friends and co-workers, but also that of a brother.

Dennis Haggard, 31, and Thurmond Haggard, 37, are both firemen at the department's station at the Lubbock International Airport and the brothers of Kenneth, who was pronounced dead at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at West Texas Hospital.

Thurmond, who has been a Lubbock fireman 13 years, said he talked Kenneth into joining the force. "He was real happy. I never thought we made a mistake until yesterday," Thurmond said Monday during a telephone interview.

"I loved him like a brother, and he was like a daddy too since our father died," said Dennis, attempting to keep from crying. "He would have done anything for me; he would have taken the shirt off his back for anyone."

Dennis said it was Kenneth who talked him into becoming a fireman. Asked if he would remain on the department, Dennis said, "I think so. I don't know, I probably will."

Dennis said "someone should pay" if it was toxic fumes emitted by some chemical makeup of material inside the 34th Street structure. The three victims had air masks on, but a deadly gas apparently seeped through the safety devices anyway and left Tucker, Haggard and Swafford unconscious.

Dennis adds: "We have enough problems without someone not checking their product. This could be all over town, and we won't know it until something like this happens again. Someone should check it out and someone should pay."

Thurmond, who lives only four blocks from his dead brother's home, said he thought he would remain a fireman. He adds: "I can't express the loss of my brother. It's the hardest thing that's ever happened to me. I never went a single day without seeing him."

Firefighter Richard Brightwell, a driver in Swafford's squad, who was on the scene when the three firemen received their fatal injuries, says he has gone through this type of trauma before.

He was with the department in 1957 when Waylon Jack Jenkins suffered a fatal heart attack while combatting a house fire in Lubbock. Two of his fellow workers were killed before that while he was a fireman in Des Moines, Iowa.

"Kenny Haggard was probably liked by everybody," Brightwell said. "He was the kind of fella you naturally liked."

Brightwell said of Swafford, "He was a great guy and very conscientious." Swafford, who was a part-time EMS attendant, brought his own personal first aid kit with him when he was on duty. "We had his training and his equipment — something he didn't have to do."

Brightwell said city firemen are aware of the obvious dangers, such as a building collapsing. But the strange circumstances surrounding the most recent deaths make the shock even greater.

Says fireman H.G. Trammel: "It's going to be a great loss to the department. The full blow hasn't hit yet because we're still in a daze."

Deregulation Of Trucking Defended

AUSTIN (AP) — State regulation of trucking companies discourages competition and leads to permit "dealing," two sponsors of a trucking deregulation proposal said Monday.

"The present system invites the monopoly that exists to abuse consumers by freezing out anybody else (not already in business)," said Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, D-Galveston.

Schwartz and Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Simonton, told a news conference their proposal would make it easier to enter the trucking business and would deregulate prices over three years.

The Texas Railroad Commission now requires trucking applicants to prove "public convenience and necessity" before receiving a permit to haul goods in the state. The commission also sets routes and prices for transporting commodities.

DeLay said truckers legally sell their railroad commission permits for between $20,000 to $150,000 or lease them and skim off 10 percent of revenues from the second permit holder. Such practices reduce a smaller company's profits and discourage new firms, he added.

"We are not altering the safety or insurance requirements for trucks in any way," said DeLay. "Every truck on the road will have to comply with the standards set by the railroad commission."

Trucking applicants would be required to show necessary capital, insurance, good equipment and insurance coverage to start a business under the proposal, he added.

During the first year of deregulation, companies could charge 10 percent above or 10 percent below the established rate. The rates could vary 12 percent above or below the second year and 15 percent more or less the third year. All price restrictions would end the next year.

Several trucking associations oppose deregulation, said Schwartz. He compared the upcoming fight with the lobby over the legislation to "dragging a dead whale up a mountain."

"The system needs to be changed, but like anything else, the trucking lobby and the associations resist any change because the status quo is best for their profit motives," said Schwartz.

The Texas Motor Transportation Association says deregulation would leave some shippers without reliable service, allow large shippers to squeeze out smaller companies and result in more fuel consumption because of additional trucks operating.

However, the Texas Farm Bureau, the Texas Poultry Federation, the Producers Trucking Association, Common Cause and the Texas Conservative Union support the bill, DeLay said.

Trucking Regulation began in 1929 when businesses needed protection in the depression, the representatives said.

Times have changed, though, and intrastate regulation results in inequity to shippers, Schwartz added.

"It costs more to sent a 40,000-pound shipment from Center, Texas to El Paso than from Center to Los Angeles," he said.

Insulation Safety Request Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has denied a request to set a series of mandatory standards for certain types of insulation.

The commission was asked to set standards covering any possible danger of fire in fiberglass insulation, cancer caused by inhaling or ingesting particles of this insulation and fire in plastic foam or resin insulation.

However, the commission denied the request, statng that it has not seen any indication that these products present an unreasonable risk of injury. A further request, to set a standard covering the possibility of irritation or poisoning from the plastic foam and resin products, was deferred until more information can be obtained.

Last year the CPSC set mandatory fire safety standards for cellulose insulation.

Higher Readings Seen For Area

Warm temperatures will return to the South Plains today after a weak cool front marched its way across the area Monday, keeping afternoon highs in the upper 50s and lower 60s.

Lubbock's high of 61 degrees at noon was not as uncomfortable as were the much cooler temperature readings in the Panhandle that were caused by overcast skies. Amarillo recorded a high of only 39 degrees.

Warmer air will flood the Lubbock area today, boosting the mercury to the mid 70s before dropping it to the upper 40s tonight. Winds will gust at 15 to 20 mph.

Late Monday afternoon isolated thundershowers and thunderstorms were reported ahead of the front in north central Texas. Temperatures were warm, with readings in the 70s and 80s.

Elsewhere in the nation snow continued to fall across sections of the Central Plains into parts of the middle Mississippi Valley.

Further east snow fell from New York and Pennsylvania across the upper Ohio Valley and Great Lakes regions.

Louisiana Governor Bolsters Passman's Defense

MONROE, La. (AP) — Gov. Edwin Edwards surprised the prosecution Monday in the trial of former congressman Otto Passman by testifying that Tongsun Park told him in 1976 that he knew better than to offer Passman money or gifts.

Edwards was a prosecution witness in the trial of Passman, who is accused of taking at least $193,000 in bribes from South Korean rice dealer Park.

Passman's attorney, Camille Gravel, who is also Edwards' attorney, said he would call Edwards later as a defense witness.

Edwards said under cross-examination that Park's denial was made during a 1976 discussion in Louisiana about allegations that Park gave gifts to congressmen, including Passman.

"He (Park) just smiled and said, 'You know him (Passman) as well as I know him and I wouldn't dare offer him anything,'" said Edwards.

Surprised by Edwards' testimony, prosecutor Morris Silverstein asked him if it were true that he never mentioned the conversation with Park during pretrial interviews with Justice Department attorneys.

"That's correct," Edwards replied, "but I was never asked that question and I answered every question that was asked me."

Edwards said he told Gravel about the conversation "some time ago, but that's because he asked me about it and, if you would have asked me about it, I would have told you," Edwards said. "You asked me specific questions and I gave specific answers voluntarily."

Earlier, Edwards said Passman considered Park arrogant and refused to accept a pair of cufflinks from him.

Edwards said the incident occurred in 1970 when he and Passman, both congressmen at the time, traveled to Korea to boost sales of Louisiana rice to the Far East nation.

"Otto gave the cufflinks to me and instructed me to return them and said he wouldn't accept them under any circumstances," said Edwards. "He said he considered it a double insult because, No. 1, he was offered the gift and, No. 2, it was a cheap gift."

A March 1978 indictment accuses Passman of taking at least $193,000 in cash from Park to help smooth the way for the Korean to retain his job as agent for U.S. rice sales to Korea. Park says he received nearly $9 million in sales commissions from 1972 through 1975.

Passman, 75, was defeated in 1976 after 30 years representing Louisiana's rural 5th district.

He said he shopped several times with Passman when Passman bought antique watches and that Passman had told him his collection was worth anywhere from $250,000 to $500,000.

Passman has been accused of selling watches to Park at inflated prices to circumvent a law forbidding congressional campaign contributions by aliens.

The trial, now in its fourth week, has seen eight days of testimony by Park as a prosecution witness. As he left the stand last Thursday, Gravel handed him a subpoena to return as a defense witness.

Earlier, Gravel said his case depended largely on the government's. His strategy apparently is to convince the jury that the government's witnesses — especially Park — lack credibility.

In exchange for his testimony, Park was granted immunity from a 1977 indictment charging him with such offenses as bribery and failure to register as an alien agent.

Weapons Screening Instituted At Jail

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Worried by "the possibility of a gun or knife being smuggled in to an inmate, Lubbock County Jail Officials Monday got tentative approval of a plan to screen jail visitors with a walk-through metal detection device.

"The installation of this device could very well save the life of an officer or prohibit a mass escape made possible by a weapon smuggled into our facility," Gary McGrew, jail administrator, said in a memorandum to the Lubbock County Commissioners Court.

Commissioners authorized their purchasing agent to take bids on a metal detector, which McGrew said would be "somewhat similar to the type used in airports." The machine is expected to cost $4,000 to $5,000, he said.

"In our present jail facility, it is very difficult to control contraband," McGrew's memo to commissioners said.

"This is primarily due to facility design and an inability to adequately monitor visitors entering our jail.

"It would be virtually impossible to hand-search each visitor entering the jail, considering the fact that we process an average of 1,800 visitors monthly...The only feasible method of controlling (guns, knives and other metal) contraband is with a magnetic detection device."

The local jail's security problems were highlighted in the aftermath of the March 7 apparent suicide of murder suspect John Thomas Carter. Carter, according to authorities, shot himself with a pistol in the Crosby County Jail, three days after his transfer from the Lubbock County Jail.

Crosby County officials contend Carter obtained the pistol during his stay in the Lubbock jail. Lubbock County Jail officials deny that.

The Lubbock County Jail has visiting hours from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. daily, McGrew said.

Some visitation is conducted in the jail's new recreation-visitation building, he said. Security there is good, McGrew said. Visitors enter through one door and are confined to a certain area; inmates enter through another door and are confined to a separate area.

Thus, there is no way for a visitor to hand a weapon to an inmate, or to leave a weapon where it can be picked up later by an inmate, McGrew said.

But because of the large volume of visitors, and because the recreation-visitation building must be used primarily for recreation, most visitation is conducted on the actual detention floors of the jail, McGrew said.

"A weapon of some type can be left on the floor" and retrieved later by prisoners, he told commissioners.

Currently visitors walk largely unchecked through the jail lobby and into the facility's supposedly "secure" area, McGrew said.

The new county jail, now under construction, will solve the contraband problem by using a system similar to that in the recreation-visitation building, McGrew said. Each wing of the new jail will have a visitation area, designed so that inmates and visitors never cross paths physically, he added.

"Contraband will be a problem until we move into our new facility, but I would like to eliminate the possibility of a gun or knife being smuggled in to an inmate," McGrew said in recommending the purchase of a metal detector.

Deductions Allowed On Energy-Saving Work On Homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — April 16 is creeping closer and if you're still looking for tax deductions, remember the credits you can claim for energy-saving installations at your home.

To qualify, the work must have been done since April 19, 1977, on a home that was substantially complete before that date.

For energy conserving products or components, like insulation, you can claim a credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000, up to $300 total.

And for renewable energy source items, such as solar equipment, you can claim up to 30 percent of the first $2,000 and 20 percent of the next $8,000 spent, not to exceed $2,200.

There is a space on your income tax form to claim this credit.

Some of the things eligible for the tax credit include:

•Storm or thermal doors and windows.

•A more efficient furnace burner or ignition system.

•Insulation for ceilings, walls, floors, roofs, water heaters and so forth.

•An automatic thermostat.

•Caulking and weatherstripping for outside walls and doors.

•Devices to make flue openings on your heater more efficient.

•Solar, geothermal and wind energy generating equipment for residential use.

Mayor Indicted For Funds Misuse

A former Plains State Bank officer indicted for misapplication of funds is among nine persons indicted here by a federal grand jury.

Ben E. Pate, a former vice president of the Yoakum County bank and mayor of Plains, is accused of seven counts of fund misapplication.

The only other Lubbock District cases handled by the grand jury resulted in indictments for transporting illegal aliens against Jose Florentino Garcia-Servantes and Jesus Sergio Maldonado-Gonzales, whose addresses were unavailable today.

Amarillo District cases included an indictment for attempted bank robbery against Margarito Mary Popp, 37, of Chicago, Ill., who is accused of attempting to rob an Amarillo bank March 12.

Polly Hardy Hooper, 52, of Amarillo was indicted for misapplication of $7,400 in federal savings and loan proceeds as an Amarillo agent for Farm and Home Savings of Nevada, Mo.

Evelyn Marie Mason of Amarillo was indicted for seven counts of stealing U.S. Treasury checks from the mails, and Cleophus Berry of Nacogdoches was indicted on two counts of stealing Treasury checks and forging and passing them.

Earl F. Keithley was indicted for mailing threatening communications. He is accused of mailing threatening letters to two Amarillo men in May, 1978.

Wayne E. Tasker of Amarillo was indicted for tax evasion.

FLOOD OF CIGAR BOXES

MONROE, Ohio (AP) — Monroe Village Treasurer Elizabeth Guzzetta pleads, "Turn off the cigar boxes." The deluge of about 75 cigar boxes has flooded Mrs. Guzzetta's office since the Middletown Journal reported last week a state auditor's recommendation that certain records be kept in cigar boxes instead of being wrapped in rubber bands and kept in corrugated boxes.

U.S. Rhodesia Policy Puzzle

THE U.S., WITH Britain's help, is still pursuing a bankrupt foreign policy as regards Rhodesia and South Africa.

Despite the fact that Rhodesia has operated a year now under a plan whereby black majority rule will be implemented on an internal basis, Washington and London are still holding out for some sort of arrangement which would include two outside guerrilla factions.

The latest effort seems designed to scuttle Rhodesia's first universal suffrage elections April 20. It also brings into question Washington's sincerity in wanting to blunt Communist inroads around the world.

IT WAS A year ago this month that Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black leaders in Rhodesia joined in a pact designed to bring Rhodesia peace, international recognition and, hopefully, economic stability.

The agreement between Smith and the black leaders, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and tribal chief Jeremiah Chirau, was to have culminated in black majority rule on Dec. 31, 1978.

That target date was pushed back because the four could not agree on a new constitution and because the guerrilla war was too intense to permit elections as planned.

Now, things seem back on schedule. White voters have overwhelmingly approved the transition.

ONE MAJOR criticism of the plan, from such persons as UN Amb. Andrew Young and others, is that whites will retain one fourth of the seats in any new setup, plus control of key positions in the justice, security and other portfolios for five years.

The guerrilla leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, backed by Communist forces in Mozambique and Zambia, have refused to join the new coalition and have vowed to continue the war against Rhodesia.

BOTH THE U.S. and Britain have rejected appeals by Smith and the black leaders for support for the new plan.

Instead, Sec. of State Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Sec. David Owen have urged Rhodesia to accept UN supervision of any vote. This would bring in the two Marxist-backed forces. Both have rejected the current compromise.

It is puzzling indeed that the Carter administration will not give the Rhodesian plan a chance to succeed. Why push a proposal, supported heavily by none other than black UN envoy Young, which plays into the hands of Moscow? Why set up a situation where Rhodesia and its vital minerals can be controlled by Marxist sympathizers?

Obviously, President Carter and his "good friend," Andrew Young, learned no lesson at all in Iran.

AN EDITORIAL:

Retreat No Taxpayer Treat

THE FEDERAL Election Commission has just announced that its "machinery is being oiled" in preparation for next year's presidential race.

But that FEC lubrication job includes a questionable expenditure of almost $2,000 in public funds by a small group of the commission's senior staff members during a 2½-day "retreat" at a countryside inn more than 100 miles from Washington, D.C.

The FEC is responsible for administering federal laws governing presidential campaigns and for authorizing payment of millions of dollars to candidates in both the primary and general election races for the White House.

THE DRIVING force behind the meeting, held at a rural lodge near Charlottesville, Va., was William Loughery, the commission's deputy staff director.

After returning to Washington, Loughery prepared a typewritten, nine-page, single-spaced memo that lists all the purported accomplishments of the rural retreat.

But even the participants who have defended the meeting on the grounds that it provided a valuable forum for informal discussions have characterized Loughery's memo as an exaggerated account, possibly prepared to ward off criticism that the trip was little more than a boondoggle.

David Fiske, the commission's chief information officer at the time of the trip, subsequently has declined to discuss his attitude toward the retreat. But others at the FEC have been quoted as saying Fiske warned his colleagues that it could be perceived publicly as "a pointless junket."

SUCH OUT-of-town retreats are common in the business world and do offer various benefits to both the sponsoring organization and the individuals who attend the meetings.

They provide an informal setting where difficult long-range problems can be discussed in a relaxed atmosphere free from the pressure of routine daily business.

But the concept can be abused. Some federal agencies, for instance, have flown scores of officials to high-priced resorts thousands of miles from Washington, at a cost to the taxpayers of $10,000-$50,000 or more.

By that standard, the FEC retreat was a modest affair. But commission officials remain rightfully sensitive about the meeting because it was a questionable undertaking for the watchdog agency committed to ethical campaign financing.

ART BUCHWALD:

East Or West There's No Place Like 'Nome'

WASHINGTON—Ever since President Carter said that our energy crisis was the moral equivalent of war, I have believed we should have war crime trials for people who contributed to screwing up what little hope we had of not being so dependent on the Middle East.

High on my list of Energy War Criminals are the people who designed the Alaska pipeline so it would point directly toward Japan.

After spending $7 billion constructing what was publicized as the eighth wonder of the world, these brilliant engineers, scientists and government bureaucrats have now discovered it is cheaper and more practical to send our Alaskan oil to the Far East than to the United States.

Rather than admit they made a mistake, the oil consortium is lobbying to get permission to sell our Alaskan oil to Japan, and is suggesting that we buy Japanese oil supplies from the Middle East to make up the difference.

AT THE MOMENT the pipeline is running at half-capacity because there is a glut of oil on the West Coast, and to deliver it to the refineries on the East Coast the tankers have to go through the Panama Canal, to get the oil to where it is needed.

The main problem with finding Energy War Criminals is that no one will admit responsibility for selecting the route over which the pipeline was eventually built.

One engineer said, "It isn't my fault. I was only following orders."

"Whose orders?"

"The oil companies all decided they wanted the pipeline to go to the coast of Alaska. I would have been shot if I hadn't built it where they wanted it."

THE HEADS OF the oil companies, of course, claim they're innocent. "We're small potatoes just doing our jobs.

"The State Department couldn't negotiate a treaty with Canada to put the pipeline on its territory, so we had no choice but to build it where it is.

"The environmentalists wouldn't let us bring the oil into California for refining so we had no choice but to ship it through the Panama Canal. We still could have delivered the Alaskan oil at a cheaper price, but they wouldn't let our supertankers go through the Panama locks."

A retired official of the Panama Canal said, "We wouldn't let the supertankers through because they couldn't get through. I told them that at the time, and they said I was a troublemaker."

I WENT TO the pipeline people, and related to them what the former official said about the supertankers and was told, "That's exactly what he would say. But why couldn't they have widened the canal?"

No one at the State Department would admit having had anything to do with the Alaskan pipeline, and I was referred to the Department of Energy which refused to take responsibility because the agency did not exist at the time the pipeline was built.

A Canadian government spokesman said Canada was innocent. "We would never tell another sovereign government where to build its pipeline."

My travels finally took me to Nome, Alaska, where I met a drunken engineering draftsman in a bar. He admitted, after several drinks, that he was tbe one who drew up the final plans for the pipeline.

"I WAS IN Joe's bar one night drawing a picture of the lady, Madeleine, who jilted me, when my boss came in and said they needed the final plans for the pipeline immediately.

"He grabbed the picture off the barroom floor, and before I knew what happened they had 80,000 guys laying pipe from the North Slope to Valdez."

"Everyone must be furious with you."

"Nah. They gave me a pension for life providing I never set foot outside of Nome, Alaska."

Today's quote worth re-quoting: "Talent may be its own reward, but a good contract is better." —O. J. Simpson, who drew $733,000 with the hapless pro football San Francisco 49ers last season.

GEORGE F. WILL:

Bermuda After Dark

PEMBROKE PARISH, BERMUDA—In the 1960s, an unsung hero translated the Bible into Wensleydale, an English dialect found in a cheesemaking valley in Yorkshire.

If I knew how to say "Bravo!" in Wensleydale, I would, because the translation was a blow struck for little platoons everywhere.

Bermuda is an admirable platoon 570 miles off Cape Hatteras.

Britain's oldest colony is logically a sovereign state—economically self-sufficient, and geographically not part of anything else—and in the 1980s it will probably become independent.

Logic aside, which is where logic generally is, Bermuda is ambling toward independence not because of any grievance but because of the mild pride of mild people who have many grounds for pride.

The 57,000 Bermudans live on about 20 square miles of land set in an aquamarine sea that is unclouded by sediments from rivers. No one here is ever more than a mile from that sea.

Per capita income is better than that of the United States, double that of Britain. Bermudans have all the attributes of civilization, except neon signs and an income tax.

Mark Twain, a frequent visitor, called Bermuda "the tidiest place in the world." It sparkles as though, at night, elves swarm over it, polishing the pastel bungalows with toothbrushes.

Bermuda, which has been the beneficiary of countless shipwrecks, almost certainly was the inspiration for Shakespeare's most magical play, "The Tempest," a drama about shipwrecked people.

THIS CLUSTER of islands, which nature playfully shaped like a fishhook, never was connected with any land mass. Every form of life on it is descended from something carried by waves or winds.

Early visitors called it "Island of Devils" because of strange squeals which came from wild pigs, the descendants of pigs that had swum ashore from a shipwreck.

Bermuda has been continuously inhabited by humans since 1609, when a ship was wrecked en route to the less charming shores of Virginia.

Some old Bermuda fortunes were built by "privateers," which is the name some Bermudans prefer for the pirates whose descendants became haberdashers and pillars of the community.

Which is to say, the origin of some of Bermuda's old families is somewhat like the origin of some of Britain's oldest families.

HERE IS Emerson's impudent description:

"Twenty thousand thieves landed at Hastings (1066). These founders of the House of Lords were greedy and ferocious dragons, sons of greedy and ferocious pirates.

"They...took everything they could carry, they burned, harried, violated, tortured, and killed...

"Such, however, is the illusion of antiquity and wealth, that decent and dignified men now existing boast their descent from these filthy thieves..."

Bermuda always has been tangled in American history. It is said that 100 kegs of gunpowder from the Bermuda arsenal wound up in the American guns pointed at the British when they evacuated Boston in 1776.

The burning of Washington in 1814 may have been planned here.

AND BERMUDA blockade runners almost certainly extended the life of the Confederacy.

Terry Tucker, a local historian, notes that "the only international salute ever tendered the Confederate flag" was fired in Bermuda, a 21-gun salute to the rebel frigate "Florida."

The fact that the United States did not seize Bermuda in 1777, as Lafayette recommended, or later, was due more to the weakness of the American navy than to the strength of American principles against forcible expansion.

But it is just as well the navy was weak, considering what Americans have made of such playgrounds as Atlantic City.

Bermudans have a long history of preserving their blessings.

By 1620, they had the New World's first "endangered species" legislation, to protect turtles.

AND THEY had an enchanting law against "the unjust killing of swine"—whatever the standards of justice are in such matters.

By strictly limiting immigration and the growth of tourism, Bermuda is showing how to preserve fragile social values.

And unlike the Caribbean islands to the south and the United States to the west, Bermuda is a closely balanced (60 percent black, 40 percent white) multi-racial society, and a successful one.

It will be an exemplary member of the New World's family of sovereign nations.

ANDREW TULLY:

The Kid's A Killer

WASHINGTON—Killing. There's always killing somewhere in the world.

Call them the government, the revolutionaries, the liberators, the highest authority, they all kill, as though they need their daily fix of blood.

And worst of all, kids kill. Some of them are no more than 12 or 14, but they kill, many of them efficiently. They remind me of Fortunato.

I met Fortunato in a Cuban village during the Castro revolution. The Castro forces had dug up the bodies of 12 men. Some of the bodies were naked, all of them looked bad.

We went over to the police station where they were questioning one of those who had helped to do the job.

HE WAS A soldier in the scattered forces of the unseated dictator, Fulgencio Bastista, we were told—a member of a small group of anti-Castro terrorists.

A magistrate sat behind a small walnut desk stained by many glasses of rum. He was an old man, about 80, slender and with a thin white mustache. He wore pince-nez glasses.

At first I didn't see the kid. Then I looked over to the left and he was there, partially hidden by a revolutionary guard.

He looked frighteningly young, with lank black hair and black eyes that were like pieces of coal. He was wearing green army fatigues and he was barefoot.

THE GUARD nudged the boy gently and said, "Say what you did."

The boy spoke flatly, almost matter-of-factly. "I took part in the killing of eight men," he said. "I put a rope around the necks. I tightened the knots so they would strangle until they would die."

He spoke like a schoolboy reciting a lesson for his teacher. He just said the words. He didn't seem to feel them.

My friend Guss, a reporter with fluent Spanish, addressed the boy. "Is this true?" Guss asked. The boy nodded. "Why did you do it?" The boy shrugged. "I was ordered to." His face was blank.

"Ask him how old he is," I told Guss. The boy said he was sixteen.

A younf girl, pretty, with brown hair and a clear complexion, came into the office.

A SOLDIER handed the girl a typewritten paper. It was the boy's statement.

She read it to us, and it was worse in the cold official wording, although the girl read it tonelessly.

The confession told how Jose Benito Diaz and Octavio Campos had been shot to death and their bodies thrown into a cane field. It told of the beating of eight other prisoners.

"One was immediately hanged," the girl read. She continued: "After a while the remaining seven men were hanged. The undersigned took part in all this under orders." The confession was signed Fortunato.

"What will they do to that boy?" I asked.

"He undoubtedly will die," the magistrate replied.

"But he is only sixteen," I said.

The magistrate spoke gently: "He is only sixteen, but he murdered."

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

'Belying' In State

SECRETARY OF State Cyrus R. Vance faces the agonizing resignation of more than 100 seasoned Foreign Service officers. The impact is lethal.

A legal quirk has the effect of increasing Foreign Service officers' pensions if they retire earlier than normal.

The 100 and more resignations are by the absolute lynchpins on which the State Department depends—unsung heroes, staunch and tested.

You find many "time servers" who merely go through the motions to hold their jobs. But these Foreign Service officers are not among them.

Nor are they in the department's middle echelon, the worst possible place for them to be. This middle section is where they can be used, but they are buried there and can go no higher.

SECRETARY VANCE has inherited a bureaucracy. It takes amazingly good care of itself. It is so busy taking care of itself that it has scant time to do anything else.

This includes faithfully following the encrusted bureaucratic rule: "Don't stick your neck out."

You find in the State Department an astonishing amount of bureaucratic make-work: a bureaucracy that exists merely to exist. It operates as if the heads had been wired to the same master puppeteer.

And all the king's horses and men do not permit Secretary Vance to do anything about the bureaucracy.

The department has only about 25,000 full-time employes. Only the Labor Department has fewer. Of these employes I find that some 11,500 are foreign nationals.

OF ALL grades, there are only about 3,500 Foreign Service officers. They must man the State Department in Washington and America's 115 embassies abroad.

At the end of World War II, the United States had less than half those 115 embassies. And our number of diplomatic posts, including consulates, total 263 throughout the world.

Many U.S. citizens, walking into our embassies, find them a beehive of activity. Very naturally, they assume the people they see are on the State Department payroll. But they are not.

Incredibly, four-fifths of them work for other U.S. government departments or agencies.

FOR EXAMPLE, in the London embassy, about 800 of the 1,000 staff report to departments and agencies other than the State Department.

Moreover, largely unknown to the American public, the State Department is all but penniless. The President Carter budget is only about $500 million for all the State Department's activities.

This is less than one percent of President Carter's 1979 budget.

The department's task is to foresee problems developing and thus solve them before they reach the crisis stage.

But the department focuses intently on "front burner" issues while less pressing, but sometimes more important, "back burner" issues are left to simmer.

ALWAYS, THE best decisions are made voluntarily, not defensively. But inside the State Department you will hear a famous phrase: "We're so used to reacting that we've forgotten how to act."

As a result, Secretary Vance has no choice but to reorganize the State Department.

It has evolved into an anonymous collective. It breathes as heavily as a beached whale; a stranded hulk of blubber, demoralized and made indecisive by President Carter.

When everybody is responsible, nobody is responsible. And that is precisely the place President Carter has put Secretary Vance, a man of decency and outstanding ability.

THE STATE Department committees are overabundant. In addition, you find time-consuming policy clearances and concurrences.

They can involve State Department regional desks, the Office of International Affairs, the assistant secretaries of state and, within the Department, the deputy secretary.

Then when concurrences finally reach Secretary Vance's level, there are usually interagency clearances to be obtained.

President Carter has technically concentrated authority in Secretary Vance, but responsibility is diffused.

It seems inconceivable, but at least 46 other U.S. government departments and agencies are in varying degrees concerned with forming and implementing U.S. foreign policy.

Conspicuously, these include the Pentagon, our Central Intelligence Agency, the Treasury, Commerce Department, etc. Then, finally, there is the National Security Council at the White House.

Months may elapse before a decision can be made. And Secretary Vance knows it.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

HOW DO YOU account for the fact that the game of Monopoly had its biggest 12 months of all time only last year?

Consider the new electronic toys competing with it. Consider the fact that it has been on the market since 1935. Yet the Monolopy sales were almost double last year what they had been during the year two years previously.

There is a small band of creative citizens out there who invent games, hoping they'll hit a winner that will make them rich. I envision them, sitting in front of their fireplaces, gazing into the flames, their fingers steepled as though in prayer, murmuring, "Make another Monopoly, oh Lord, and let it be mine."

Am surprised to learn than dust isn't dry. Scientists say a seemingly dry dirt road can be 15 percent water by weight.

Q. "Are kidney stones really stones?"

A. That they are. They're not much different from natural stones. Usually, they're comprised of uric acid, urates, phosphates, calcium and magnesium.

Report is that the U.S. Army has come up with one more way to dehydrate cabbage. It's cut into disks that take up less storage space.

Water is added out in the field. And the whole schmeer is sliced into cole slaw. Ingenious.

Unfortunately, nobody will eat it.

What the Seasoned Citizen always called a "blackboard" is generally referred to by younger folk these days as a "chalkboard," I'm told.

Peace Treaty Angers Many Arabs; Arafat Threatens Retaliation

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Much of the Arab world seethed with hatred and sorrow Monday, the day of peace for Egypt and Israel. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat vowed to "chop off the hands" of "the stooge Sadat, the terrorist Begin and the imperialist Carter."

"This is my worst day since I left my home in Palestine in 1948," one Palestinian, tailor Mohammed Khaldi, told a reporter. "I wish I were dead rather than be alive and witness this stigma and disgrace."

Effigies of President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Begin and Egyptian President Sadat went up in flames in Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut and elsewhere in Lebanon.

Palestinians staged general strikes in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip to protest the Israeli-Egyptian treaty. General strikes also paralyzed Lebanon's Moslem areas.

In Tehran, Iran, protesters seized the Egyptian Embassy and four employees as hostages but said they would not be harmed. A mob stormed the Egyptian Embassy in the Persian Gulf oil state of Kuwait, smashing doors and windows. Protesters occupied the offices of Egypt Air in Damascus, Syria.

In other world capitals, Palestinians, other Arabs and sympathizers paraded, sat-in and rallied to denounce a treaty that ends 30 years of war between Israel and Egypt but leaves Israel in control of some occupied Arab lands and does not meet Arab demands for an independent Palestinian homeland.

Arab states led by Syria and Iraq pressed their diplomatic campaign for pan-Arab economic and political sanctions against Egypt.

In his speech to guerrilla trainees at a Palestinian shantytown on the southern edge of Beirut, Palestine Liberation Organization chief Arafat predicted Sadat would soon be assassinated.

"The stooge Sadat, the terrorist Begin and the imperialist Carter have conspired to forge a new pact against the Palestinian people," Arafat declared. "But I declare that this wanton pact will be crushed under our boots....

"I shall carry on the Palestinian struggle to the bitter end. A protracted strife is my strategy and I never tire.

"You are young and strong as beasts," he said to the youths. "Are you tired?"

"No! No!" they shouted back in unison. "You have our blood and souls. We shall never tire or falter."

Arafat said Washington had warned him against causing trouble when Carter visited the Mideast earlier this month, and noted that Begin said the PLO chief would "burn his fingers" if he tried to sabotage the treaty.

"But let me tell all three of them today that I shall not only burn their fingers, but shall even chop off their hands," Arafat said.

Palestinian sources said Arafat told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, in a meeting Sunday in Damascus, that the PLO would strike out at U.S. and Egyptian interests in the Middle East.

Before and after Arafat's speech, armed guerrillas and Lebanese leftists took to the streets of Beirut's Moslem sector, burning tires and firing machine gun volleys into the air in what has become a traditional method of displaying wrath in this part of the world.

"May Allah roast Sadat with hellfire, because he has burned our cause," a refugee bystander said.

A refugee housewife, shouting anti-Sadat slogans, paused and told a group of reporters "Behold, we will never forget our homeland! We will never condone treason!"

Arab foreign and finance ministers meet in Baghdad, Iraq, today to plan ways to counter the bilateral treaty. Hard-liners are expected to push for the political isolation of Sadat in the Arab world, an economic boycott against Egypt and the cut-off of aid Egypt receives from Saudi Arabia and other wealthy Arab states.

The Saudis appear reluctant, however, to end their estimated $2 billion in annual aid to Egypt. In an interview with a Saudi newspaper, Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal appealed to the Arab nations to "save and support the Arab League."

Jordan's King Hussein, regarded as a "moderate," flew to Damascus and Baghdad in an apparent attempt to coordinate positions of hard-liners and moderates before the Tuesday meeting.

Observers in Baghdad said it seemed Hussein was underlining his displeasure with the U.S.-backed peace drive by cementing ties with the staunchly anti-Sadat nations.

Reaction elsewhere around the world ranged from applause to stern denunciation:

•The nine nations of the European Common Market endorsed the treaty as "a first step" toward what they hoped would be a comprehensive Mideast settlement.

•The Soviet Union issued a joint statement with Syria angrily charging that the pact "serves only the expansionist designs of Israel and its accomplices." In weekend meetings with Syrian President Hafez Assad, Gromyko reportedly promised stepped-up Soviet military aid to both Syria and the PLO.

•Echoing the comments of most other East European nations, the Czechoslovakian Communist newspaper Rude Pravo said the treaty "worsens the situation in the entire Near East."

•A spokesman for Kurt Waldheim said the U.N. secretary-general believes the signing of the treaty "is a very important historical development" but that the Palestinian question "is not adequately taken into account."

Palestinian sources said Gromyko promised Assad and Arafat the Kremlin would soon embark on a diplomatic campaign to explore the prospects of renewing all-party Mideast peace talks under the aegis of the United Nations.

Kate Millett Disappointed In Iran Regime

NEW YORK (AP) — Kate Millett, the feminist writer expelled from Iran, said Monday the new revolutionary government there was "a disappointment to everybody who fought for freedom in Iran."

At a news conference, the 44-year-old author of "Sexual Politics" also urged feminists to support the cause of women in Iran, which she called "the most dramatic confrontation of women and bullies."

Miss Millett said she traveled to Tehran March 4 at the invitation of a group of Iranian women campaigning for equal rights under the revolutionary government of religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

By the time she spoke before a small group March 8, women had begun spontaneous demonstrations to protest new restrictions on their freedom, she said, and a group of 2,000 "militant women" attended her speech.

"The women in Iran were the first to protest the losses of democracy that the insurrection was supposed to achieve," she said.

The American feminist said her role in demonstrations during two weeks in Tehran was as "kind of an historian to record the beginning of the women's movement in Iran."

She defended her participation, which was widely criticized in Iran as interference. "The issue of human rights is the concern of all people, all over the world," she said.

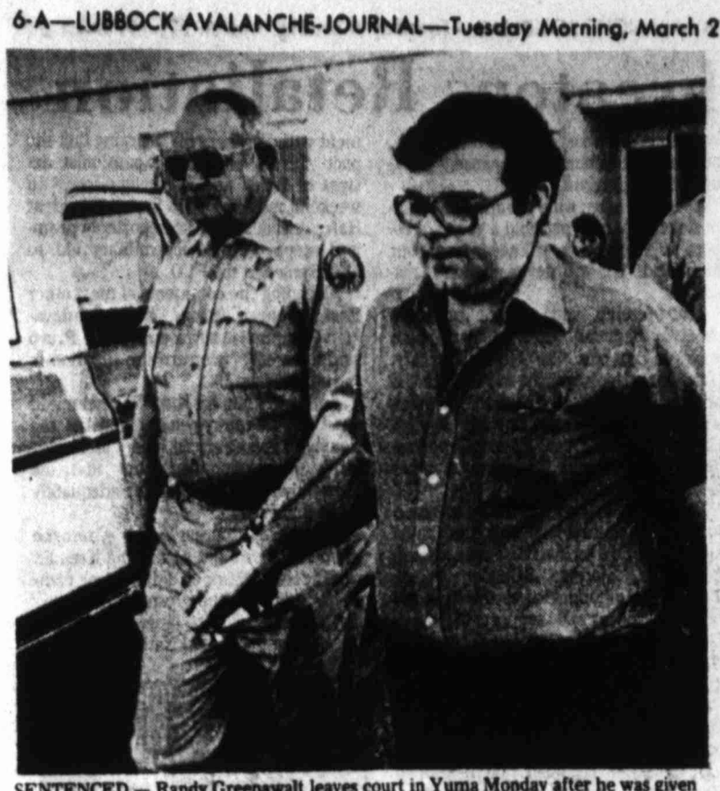
Greenawalt Receives Death Sentence



SENTENCED — Randy Greenawalt leaves court in Yuma Monday after he was given the death sentence by Judge Douglas Keddie. Greenawalt was sentenced for the shotgun slayings of a Yuma Marine sergeant and three members of his family, whose bodies were found in the desert last August. He was serving a life sentence in Arizona State Prison for two previous murders when he escaped with fellow inmate Gary Tison. (AP Laserphoto)

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Randy Greenawalt was sentenced Monday to die in the gas chamber for the Aug. 1 shotgun murders of an Omaha Marine and three members of his family.

"This court finds that there were no mitigating circumstances sufficiently substantial to call for leniency," said Superior Court Judge Douglas Keddie as Greenawalt, 30, of Thornton, Colo., stared at the bench without emotion.

Keddie also imposed life sentences on three kidnapping counts, terms of 50 years to life on two armed robbery convictions, and four to five years for theft of a motor vehicle. All terms were consecutive.

The death penalty is appealed automatically under Arizona law.

Greenawalt was convicted in February on four counts of first-degree murder in the death of John F. Lyons, 24, of Omaha, a Marine assigned to Yuma. Also slain on the southwest Arizona desert were Lyons' wife, infant son and a niece, Teresa Tyson, 15, of Las Vegas, Nev.

Keddie noted two previous murder convictions, and the "heinous, cruel and depraved manner" in which the family was slain. He said the murders were senseless and not necessary to further Greenawalt's escape from the Arizona State Prison.

Carl Cansler Jr., chief adult probation officer, said earlier this month Greenawalt should be sentenced to die.

Cansler, in a presentence report to Keddie, said he found Greenawalt to be a "dangerous threat to humanity." He said on some days Greenawalt showed no remorse and little compassion.

Canseler said Greenawalt also took an active part in the slayings, adding he took the four lives "just to gain possession of an automobile and escape further confinement in Arizona State Prison, from which he escaped."

Greenawalt was serving a prison term for murder at the time he fled the prison last July 30. Cansler noted Greenawalt had 14 felony arrests and 10 convictions.

Ricky and Raymond Tison, also convicted of the slayings, are scheduled to be sentenced Thursday.

The Tisons and Greenawalt were among five men who engineered a successful break from the prison that freed Greenawalt and the Tisons' father, Gary.

The five were in a car that broke down near Quartzsite Aug. 1. The group stopped a car driven by Lyons, and later used that car to flee toward Colorado, authorities said.

The Tisons and Greenawalt were captured near Casa Grande Aug. 11 following a shootout with police at a roadblock. A third Tison brother, Donald, was killed in the shootout. The body of Gary Tison was found in the desert 11 days later.

The Tison brothers and Greenawalt also face trial in Colorado where they are accused of killing James and Margene Judge of Amarillo. The gang was driving the couple's van at the time of the capture.

Physicist Qualifies Testimony On Radiation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A physicist who claims the Army made "tragic mistakes" by exposing 100,000 soldiers to atomic fallout in the mid-1950s acknowledged under government cross-examination Monday he had "no first-hand knowledge of the actual amount of radiation."

Ernest Sternglass, professor of radiology at the University of Pittsburgh, said he based his estimates of allegedly dangerous over-exposure to plutonium and uranium particles on declassified government reports and on the testimony of eyewitnesses.

"Plutonium is a toxic material, and the amount involved here is enormous," he said, alleging that a greater percentage of plutonium is concentrated in Camp Desert Rock, a Nevada test site, than anywhere else in the world.

"The actual blasts delivered a light dose of radiation, but the troops received a heavier dose by going through the fields and by inhalation," Sternglass said.

The professor testified at a U.S. District Court hearing on a request for an injunction to force the government to warn all participants in the nuclear tests of dangers to offspring, present and future.

Paul Figley, one of six government lawyers fighting the injunction request and a civil suit seeking an unspecified amount of damages, went point by point through an affidavit Sternglass presented last Thursday, demanding the source of every statement.

Sternglass had claimed the Army presented fraudulent documents to a 1957 Senate hearing in order to cover up the amount of radiation troops received in a 1955 test code-named "Turk."

When Figley pointed out that certain Army records indicated troops were not where Sternglass claimed they were, the physicist replied, "It is very difficult to speculate when you have conflicting evidence." But he insisted his estimates of heavy radiation exposure "are reasonable."

The lawsuit was filed last January by Paul Hinkie, a 45-year-old Philadelphia trucker, and Hope Punnett, a genetic counselor at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia.

Hinkie lost one son to birth defects and has another, now 7, who is retarded. He blames the government for failing to warn him about genetic risks because of his exposure to the A-bomb fallout. He has two normal children.

Sternglass has testified that participating servicemen witnessed an average of three tests and were exposed to 320 rems of radiation, equivalent to 320,000 X-rays.

"It used to be that scientists believed that up to 50 rems of radiation could cause some form of cancer, but now studies indicate cancer can result from as low as five rems," he said.

"In retrospect, it is now clear that tragic mistakes were made when human beings were asked to walk into areas freshly contaminated with highly toxic plutonium and fission products produced by nuclear bombs detonated only a few minutes earlier," Sternglass said in his original testimony which the government is challenging.

Armed Guerrillas Abduct 39 Girls

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — A band of 40 armed guerrillas abducted 39 girls and a woman teacher Monday from a secondary school in northern South-West Africa and marched them into Angola, officials said.

Timo Bezuidenhout, chief secretary of the Owambo government, said the guerrillas took only girls, leaving boy pupils behind.

The school at Uukekete is about five miles south of the Angolan border.

Bezuidenhout said the girls were aged 16 to 20. He identified the teacher as Aume Heita.

Owambo, in northern South-West Africa along the Angolan border, is the partially self-governing homeland of the Owambo tribespeople.

Bezuidenhout said the guerrillas, members of the South-West Africa People's Organization, which is fighting to end South African control of South-West Africa, were armed with AK-47 Soviet-made rifles. The territory, also known as Namibia, was once a German colony.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am 34, single, with about $5,000 in my company's credit union at 7 percent interest. I am considering moving all but about $1,000 into a money market mutual fund run by a big brokerage firm, because of the high yield that fund now provides. I would keep the money in the fund, as long as the yield there is higher than at the credit union. What are your comments on my plan?

A. It's a good one, for getting a higher yield on your savings. Many people are doing exactly what your propose. As a result, money market mutual funds have become just about the hottest item in the world of finance. Assets of such funds now total more than $15 billion and the numbers have been growing by leaps and bounds lately.

Because the "short-term money market instruments" in which money market funds invest now pay very high interest, those funds are able to declare dividends which also result in high yields. Some money market funds are now yielding better than 10 percent.

And, although there is no federal insurance on money market funds, there is also very little risk. So, they become very popular in times of high interest rates, such as we have experienced lately.

It wasn't too long ago, however, that the yields on money market funds were lower than the 7 percent you are getting at your credit union and even lower than the 5 or 5 1/4 percent available on insured savings accounts.

So, when interest rates drop — as they eventually will — so will the yields on money market mutual funds. At that point, you can scurry back to your credit union or some other form of insured savings. And it must be pointed out that short-term money market rates are not expected to take a big fall in the near future.

Money market mutual funds should provide higher yields than most "liquid" — easy to cash — forms of savings and investments for some time into the future.

Q. In determining a stock's price-earnings ratio, is the earnings figure used in the calculation the company's earnings before or after expenses for bond interest, taxes, etc.?

A. It's after all expenses, of course. The earnings figure used in a price-earnings calculation is the "net earnings" number — what the company has left after deducting all expenses from its revenues.

Lets call on our old standby, XYZ Corp., as an example.

Say that, in its latest fiscal year, XYZ took in $100 million as total revenues from sales of its product and from other sources. Say that XYZ had expenses of $90 million — in the cost of raw materials, wages, interest on bonds and other debts, property taxes and various other things.

That left the company with a $10 million "pre-tax" — before federal income tax — profit. Say that the federal income tax was $4 million. XYZ's net income was $6 million. That number is the "bottom line."

Now, say that there are exactly two million shares of XYZ common stock outstanding — owned by investors. Divide $6 million by three million shares and you see that XYZ's net earnings per share were $2.

If XYZ common stock is trading in the market at $10, its price-earnings ratio — the arithmetic relation between a stock's market price and its net earnings per share — is five-to-one. Expressed in different words, XYZ is "selling at five times earnings."

Q. I am 68. My wife is 65. We receive $566 a month from Social Security, and $1,300 a year from pensions. We have $6,000 in a mutual fund, a $10,000 savings certificate and $13,000 in a savings account. My wife thinks we should redeem our mutural funds shares and put the money in a gambling casino stock. Should we do this?

A. Absolutely not. The stocks of casino companies, like the gaming tables of the casinos they operate, are strictly for people who can afford to take big risks. You can't.

Any broker who filled your order to buy a casino stock would violate the "suitability" rules.

Litton ... the leader in microwaves

LITTON is changing the way America cooks and LITTON has changed the way microwaves are built, with many new innovations.

IF YOU HAVE A QUESTION ON MICROWAVES ... LITTON HAS THE ANSWER!

Can you cook a complete meal in a microwave? With the LITTON exclusive Meal-In-One, you can cook one, two, three foods ... even a complete meal ALL AT ONE TIME.

Is it possible to use metal in a microwave? LITTON even uses a metal shelf in the Meal-In-One microwave.

Does a microwave brown meat? Most meats begin browning in 8 to 10 minutes of microwave cooking. For quick searing and grilling of steaks use the LITTON Micro-Browner.

Can I set the time and temperature on a microwave as I do on a conventional range? YES. All you need to do is adjust the Vari-Cook or the Vari-Temp and you cook by time and temperature as you always have, and at any speed.

Is continuous rotation of food necessary while cooking? No, LITTON's unique stirrer system eliminates this need.

Do LITTON microwaves cost more? LITTON, the most advanced in microwaves, costs no more than an ordinary microwave.

Model 621

Litton gives you the microwave you want and a range too.

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My new granddaughter's soft spot has closed and she is barely three months old. It is my understanding that this is a dangerous situation. Anything you can write on this will be greatly appreciated. — L.N.J.

This is called a "fontanel" (FON-tuh-nel). Fontanels (there are essentially two) are little gaps where skull bones join. Nature provides them in the newborns to allow for development of the brain and skull structure. The one commonly referred to as the soft spot is the larger one located toward the front of the skull. This begins to close at about the third month and the process is usually complete by the second birthday. Most front fontanels close between the 8th and 15th months after birth.

The smaller fontanel is to the rear of the larger one. It may close as early as the third month.

I have to question your skill in determining the status of either fontanel. One may be an inch in diameter in the first few weeks, then enlarge before starting to close. What does the pediatrician say? So long as he is seeing the child regularly, I doubt you have cause for concern. In any routine examination, he measures the skull size to see if this is normal for age. If the front fontanel has closed completely at three months, that would be a matter of concern. If the tot has not been examined recently, she should be. On the other hand a fontanel that does not close within a reasonable time might indicate low metabolism, a vitamin deficiency or abnormal pressures about the brain.

Many new parents worry about fontanels. They are covered with an extra-tough membrane, which can be seen to pulsate or bulge slightly when the infant wails. No need to be squeamish about cleansing these areas, although commonsense gentleness is obviously in order. By no means should they be tampered with.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Occasionally, my ear blocks up or something happens that makes me feel like I'm living at the bottom of any empty barrel for months on end. I lose some hearing in that ear, which is very annoying and disturbs my work performance, which involves talking with people. Some people (my boss included) say I should have a hearing aid. Could this be related to my sinuses, which have given me other problems over the years? I once had surgery for nasal polyps. — H.G.

This pattern of sinus trouble, polyps (grape-like tissue growths) and such ear symptoms is all too familiar. People like yourself are usually allergic and settle into a "barrel," as you put it, at various times of the year. The time of the year may be important if it can be related to a particular pollen season.

Having said that, I would advise you to have the ear examined. It could be a simpler problem, such as ear wax. At the same time the doctor can look for signs of infection. The state of the ear drum would probably reveal that if it is present.

The likely problem is a build-up of fluid behind the drum, which might be relieved by a good decongestant. This would help if the cause is allergic. Nasal polyps have a way of growing back, so that should be investigated. You might find my booklet, "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble," helpful toward understanding the backgrounds of various sinus-centered ailments. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My husband has lung cancer. He is 57, and has been taking chemotherapy treatment once a week. Every six weeks he takes CCNU, which makes him vomit and get very tired. His main problems are a dry mouth and feverish lips. He just got over fever blisters and has a very sensitive left nipple. Can you offer us any help? — D.A.H.

The chemotherapy treatment is a combination of two drugs given in hopes of controlling his cancer. These are potent drugs, and the side effects you mention are to be expected in anyone, but they vary with individuals, even those using the same dosage. Normally the side effects are relatively brief (a few days). There are newer medicines to help control these effects. The vomiting and sore mouth are common and present real problems. Make sure he gets proper nutrition during this time.

Except for this, all you can do is make him as comfortable as possible and inquire about some of the other drugs.

Walking Edges Jogging In Race For Fitness

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Although jogging seems to be the fastest growing form of physical activity in the country, not everyone is up to such strenuous exercise.

Almost everyone, however, can enjoy, and benefit from, walking, whether for exercise or pleasure.

Physicians agree that activities such as jogging, cycling, swimming, and walking promote fitness of the cardiovascular system and help increase stamina and endurance. While jogging uses 1000 calories per hour, walking uses only 200-400 calories per hour. So jogging has the edge over walking if one is interested primarily in losing weight. However, it might be worthwhile to check out the obvious advantages of walking:

• Almost everyone can enjoy walking, even those in only moderately good condition.

• Getting out-of-doors enriches the spirit as well as the body.

• The walkers' continuous, gentle movement does provide a mild cardiovascular workout. You might be surprised to learn that walking engages more than half the body's muscles.

• To get the greatest benefit of fitness, however, take long brisk walks and swing your arms. For those not in top condition 20 minutes three times a week should help you get in shape. For those more fit, walking 30 minutes should help maintain fitness.

You may be saying to yourself that you don't have time to fit walking into your hectic schedule.

Here are a few suggestions:

• Park your car and walk whenever you can.

• Make it a habit to walk up stairs instead of taking the elevator.

• Around the house, do routine things with gusto: high step from room to room, like a drum majorette.

• Rid your garage of labor-saving machines: and get out the push mower and manual hedge trimmers.

• Instead of using the dryer, walk, stretch and bend to put clothes on a line in the fresh air.

In other words, think of new ways to walk and be more active. The benefits to be gained from walking are many: increased energy, body fitness and maybe even the added advantage of a brighter outlook on living.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm sure most young mothers have found out, as I have, that baby clothes are so expensive and are usually outgrown before they are worn out. Often, they get handed down.

I was a grateful recipient of some of these, but most second-hand baby clothes have awful formula stains on them which defy removing by ordinary washing or bleaching.

Figuring I didn't have much to lose, I filled the washing machine to the medium load mark with HOT water, added one cup of chlorine bleach, one cup of laundry detergent and one cup of automatic dishwasher detergent. I let the machine run a few seconds to mix this well.

Then, I put the stained baby clothes in this solution (stop the machine) and let them soak overnight.

The next morning, I turned the washing machine on and let it run through a regular cycle, then an extra rinse cycle to make sure all the detergent residue was out of the clothes.

They were beautiful! I was very glad that I had been able to salvage some otherwise unwearables and I also found this solution will work on yellow and graying white cottons as Well. — C.J.A.

Oh, those other young mothers are going to love you! And, gals, it is safe to mix all these ingredients (chlorine bleach, dishwater detergent, laundry detergent) and, in combination, they are a great stain remover.

But again, NEVER, NEVER, NEVER, mix bleach and ammonia or any product containing ammonia. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My stove is orange, my fridge is blue and green and my bathtub is pink and red.

If you don't have these colors right, you don't have small children and crayons in your house!

Seriously, how do you get crayons off painted walls without all that elbow grease? — K. Bookey

With pre-wash spray! Puts you on the right track, pronto!

But, test a hidden area first as pre-wash sprays differ as to their formula contents. Some are petroleum-based, therefore oily, and some are not.

We tested both kinds — both removed the crayons, and neither left a residue on our painted walls.

Still, your walls might be different, so do test first. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For those thrifty persons who save that beautiful gift wrapping paper to be reused later, here is a hint:

Stickers, name tags, and transparent sticky tape may be removed without tearing the paper by ironing with a moderately hot iron on the reverse side of the paper. — Nadine Rector

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Kitchen appliances, such as food processors, electric knives, slicers, can openers, juicers, blenders, etc., which have metal moving parts (I'm not referring to the motor) can be kept running smoother and longer by washing and drying them thoroughly, then spraying them with vegetable non-stick spray.

Spray oven hinges also and they will work with little or no squeaks. — Jack Weleba

DEAR HELOISE:

A super household hint...(from our school custodian)...

Use a sponge mop (new) to wash walls, then just throw a dry towel over the mop to dry them quickly!

Great! — C.K. Bachman

That is a great idea! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When you measure a pattern on the curve, place the tape measure on its side to measure more accurately.

But be sure to use a non-stretch tape measure. — A Friend

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think about a person who has dinner at your home and the next day gets on the phone and calls up all the other guests and asks if they threw up all night, too? Is this a friend?

My husband and I entertain frequently and I have a reputation for being a good cook. So far as I know I have never poisoned anybody. The other night I served a fish course as the appetizer. My so-called friend insists it's the fish that made her sick. You know as well as I do, Ann, that if something is wrong with fish you can either smell it or taste it immediately. Everyone enjoyed my broiled halibut and there wasn't a smidge left on any of the plates.

This morning I had three calls from guests who wanted to know if we were sick last night because Mrs. Big Mouth had called to say she was deathly ill and was sure it was the fish. I'm beginning to think the woman made up the story just to undermine my reputation as a hostess. What do you think? — It's Hell To Be Envied

Dear Envied: It's possible but not likely. I can't imagine a person fabricating such a fish story — just for the halibut.

Since no one else became ill, it's safe to assume that the woman did not get sick because of anything she ate in your home. It was probably something she ate elsewhere.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently in your column there was a letter about people who keep saying they are going to do things and never get around to it. I seem to have this problem.

I feel like I'm always a day late and an hour behind. My house is a mess. I never get everything done. I have three children, ages seven, four and one, and a husband who thinks all things to do with caring for children, house and yard should be the total responsibility of the wife.

I work a full-time job and try to participate some in church and school activities because I feel everyone should contribute something. Consequently, there aren't enough hours in a day to get everything done. I feel disorganized and can't get it all together.

If you have any suggestions I'd like to have them. I envy people who seem to get so much done while I go around in circles. — Good Intentions

Dear Good: A woman who has three children under eight years of age, takes care of the house and yard, tries to participate in church and school activities and holds down a full-time job shouldn't apologize for the looks of her house, nor should she be envying anybody for performing better. Your husband, it seems to me, should give you a hand — plus a lot of praise and emotional support.

Dear Ann: My kindly, gentle neighbor, 76 years of age, was hit over the head at noon yesterday less than 75 feet from the front door of a large supermarket. Her purse with five dollars in it was grabbed and she was knocked unconscious. She hopes to be released from the hospital at the end of the week.

The store manager posted this warning on the wall, which I think is worth printing: DON'T CARRY A POCKETBOOK. KEEP YOUR MONEY IN A CHANGE PURSE. CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET UNDER A JACKET OR A SWEATER. BE ALERT AT ALL TIMES AND SHOP IN PAIRS IF POSSIBLE.

I don't know what is happening to this great country of ours when an elderly woman isn't safe on the streets at high noon. — Deeply Concerned

Dear D.C.: You — and millions of others — are wondering about the same thing. Thanks for contributing the store manager's suggestions.

North was bitter. He said to South: "If you are going to go out of your way to get to play notrump contracts you should learn how to play them."

South's rebid to one notrump was a poor bid but it still led the partnership to a normal notrump game.

West opened a club. South ducked one club and won the second. Then he went after diamonds. The play of his ace and king picked up the suit but dummy's two last diamonds were both high and South had no way to get back to his hand to collect that fifth diamond trick. Down one!

"How could I do any better?" asked South. "The diamonds blocked automatically."

"They only blocked you because you are a blockhead," replied North. "You should duck the second club, but win the third. Discard a diamond from dummy on that third club. Cash a high diamond to see if the queen falls. Lead your last club to West while discarding another diamond from dummy. The suit would have been unblocked and you would have made the game."

Shoppers Urged To Buy Wisely

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Everyone is talking about the high costs of food today, but Dairy Council, Inc. home economists like to think about the positive side of spiraling prices. People have to think about their purchases more, starting with better nutrition.

In the past, shoppers could fill their carts with anything they wanted at the time. Often this meant impulse items with little more than empty calories. Today, everyone has to shop more wisely in order to stretch that food dollar, and oddly enough, buying food in terms of sound nutrition pays dividends both in better health and savings.

Prepare a shopping list before you leave for the store, and include items from the Four Food Groups: milk, meat, vegetables-fruits and breads-cereals groups. Eating thse foods daily will not only provide better health, but also will yield savings by replacing nutritionally inadequate, yet often more expensive, items.

Instead of potato chips, buy fresh potatoes. Replace soft drinks with orange juice or milk. Substitute for candy and cookies cheese or bread sticks. Purchase meats, fruits and vegetables that are in season or on special. Combine lower-cost protein items such as beans or peanut butter or cheese with higher-cost meats. Whenever possible, avoid "convenience" foods.

COLLECTOR'S ITEM

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, England (WNS) — Jean Burke, 48, revived poetry in public life when she sent this message to local collectors:

"On Tuesday when you empty our bins
Thus revealing our household sins,
Please put the lid back on the bins.
At this request, please do not scoff.
You always leave the lid right off."

Supervisor Alec Padley promptly offered this reply:

"It's realized we never oughter
Let your bin collect some water.
Our aim will be to replace it right,
And put the lid on nice and tight.
On us is placed a lot of onus.
We are only trying to earn our bonus."

Outstanding Local Women Honored By Soroptomists

Margaret Elbow, Dr. Syeda Ahmed and Jeanette Baker received special awards Monday evening at the Soroptomists, International, banquet in the Lubbock Club.

Mrs. Elbow received the "Women Helping Women Award" which honors a woman who has achieved and has recognized her responsibility to help other women. She is the executive director of the Family Services Association. She is nationally recognized for her intervention counseling work in family violence. Locally she has been involved in the work of the Girl Scouts, Lubbock Opportunities Indistrialization Center, Highland Hospital, and Texas Department of Human Resources.

Dr. Ahmed, who received the "Women Resident Grant," is a third year resident in pediatrics at the Texas tech University School of Medicine. She is originally from Bombay, India, and will complete her medical training here in June. She and her husband, also a resident here in pediatrics, hope to open a general pediatrics practice somewhere in Texas following the completion of his studies.

Miss Baker, who will graduate from Estacado High School this year, is the recipient of the Soroptomist Youth Citizenship Award. This award recognizes a student who has taken an active part in service in the home, school and community with a high degree of cooperation, courtesy and consideration for others.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — Did you ever have the fear that one of these days a soap opera camera might zoon in on a performer's face so closely that a scene would take place in the nasal cavity?

The soap opera tendency to shoot extreme closeups began in the early days of TV serials when there was nothing else to shoot but performers' faces and upper torsos. Background scenery in those years was minimal, or in certain instances, non-existent. Many veterans can remember when scenery consisted of window frames hung on wires and set before black curtains. Closeup also provided an intimacy between viewer and character that was considered essential to maintaining audience interest and loyalty. What better way to hook an audience on a weepy storyline than to show in extreme detail the fretful frowns and dewy teardrops?

With the advent of color and increased production budgets, soaps have moved out of the conventional serial home setting and into expansive offices, penthouses, nightclubs, hospital complexes, tennis courts, boating docks, mansions, and, of course, outdoor locations. Camera direction has become more fluid in movement and less stationary. Still, the old closeup is thrown in to capture a character's most stressful emotions. That's a fine effect if used prudently. But a few soaps use the techniques to excess and they don't even use it well.

How often have you wondered why a camera angle cuts off the performers' foreheads and chins? In order to better focus on the actors' eyes? Possibly, when terror or shock is involved, that's acceptable. But this viewer, for one, is growing weary of watching the day-to day increase of performers' crows feet, frown lines, pockmarks and pimples, unevenly-shaven beard growths and quivering nostrils with unclipped nasal hairs.

A pretty or handsome face should be like a melody, not an anatomical survey, and then there's sloppy lighting that often casts ghastly shadows on faces, which should be seen but not chopped up in pieces that extend from eyebrows to upper lips. Tune in tomorrow to see if cameras begin to pull back and give performers just a bit more breathing room.

SHORT TAKES:

YOU CAN expect James O'Sullivan to sign off soon in his role of Jeff Martin on "All My Children." James wants to try other acting arenas. Meanwhile, his screen wife, Robin Strasser (Chris Martin), is also making plans to move on, possibly to "One Life to Live," where she's negotiating to take over the role of Dorian Lord from Claire Malis, who is another performer who doesn't wish to sign another year's contract.

Mart Takes Slight Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Expectations of new moves to raise prices by the oil-exporting countries helped send the stock market into a moderate decline Monday.

The volatile gambling issues were among the biggest losers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had amassed a gain of 44 points over the past three weeks, fell back 4.93 to 854.82.

Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange dropped off to 23.43 million shares from 33.57 million Friday.

Losers among the gambling stocks included Caesars World, off 1% at 58 1/2 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Playboy Enterprises, down 13/8 at 22%; and Del E. Webb, down 1% at 215/8. Resorts International class A was off 53/8 at 45 1/2 and Golden Nugget lost 23/8 to 22 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Cleveland Symphony Orchestra Celebrates 60th Anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — Mention Cleveland these days and most people probably think of political infighting and financial disaster.

Well, why not think of Beethoven, Beverly Sills and birthdays instead?

You'll have a chance to do just that tonight during "The Cleveland Orchestra's 60th Anniversary Celebration," a one-hour television tribute aired in Lubbock at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.

It's a lovingly assembled package of musical excerpts, historical tidbits about the orchestra, and interviews with musicians, fans and financial supporters. Several ex-players discuss the old days, including a harp player who recalls an entire decade in which she was the only woman in the orchestra. The narrator is Lorin Maazel, who has been chief conductor since 1972.

"We tried to show that the musicians and conductor that you see are just the tip of the iceberg," said Allan Miller, who produced and directed the show. "The days are gone when orchestras were the property of a small group of people.

"These days a major symphony orchestra in this country relies on a broad spectrum of support, a whole lot of people."

Judging from the show, many Clevelanders do look with special pride on their orchestra, which rose to world prominence after World War II under the baton of the late George Szell. It has become firmly entrenched among the "Big 5" of American orchestras, along with New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston — all cities with much larger populations to support their cultural endeavors.

Miller, who specializes in musical projects, won an Academy Award for "The Bolero," a short featuring Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic. He discussed in a telephone interview how he confronts a problem that has sabotaged many attempts to televise concerts: how to make it interesting for the audience to watch an orchestra play.

"I try to make the way the camera moves or doesn't move somehow carry along the dynamic of the orchestra," Miller said. "To make the camera shot appropriate, but never obvious. You don't want the viewer to be aware of what the camera is doing. It's keeping time with a small 't.'"

Miller said he has learned to steer clear of certain traps. "If the oboe is playing a solo and you show a picture of the oboist," he said, "it may be exactly wrong because of the expression on the guy's face."

The musical selections are among those that were actually played at the anniversary concert last Dec. 11 in Severance Hall — and that program in turn was drawn mostly from the orchestra's very first performance in 1918.

The works are necessarily short and, except for Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, a bit lightweight to show the true measure of a great orchestra. Miss Sills sings an aria from Thomas' "Mignon," Isaac Stern plays Saint-Saens' "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso" and the orchestra plays Victor Herbert's "American Fantasy" and two excerpts from Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet."

The program ends with all participants joining in "Happy Birthday" while the audience sings back. As the camera pans through row after row of plush seats, one sees many of the bankers and businessmen who hold the orchestra's — and the city's — future in their hands. But one searches in vain for Mayor Dennis Kucinich — ordinarily an inescapable presence whenever Cleveland gets into the news.

"The people involved in the day-to-day operation of the city aren't really worried," said Miller. "No one's going to get laid off. It's a political deal that's happening. They just want to get rid of Kucinich

"The mayor comes to concerts. But he didn't come to this one."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAR. 27, 1979

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Hobbs Scholar Set As Merit Finalist

James A. Shoemaker, a 17-year-old senior at Hobbs High School, recently was named a finalist in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Shoemaker will receive a certificate of merit and a chance at a four-year Merit Scholarship or a $1,000 National Merit Scholarship.

He was the only Lea County student named as a semifinalist and one of 14,000 finalists in the country being considered for a corporate-or college-sponsored scholarship.

Shoemaker, the son of The Avalanche-Journal's Hobbs circulation representatives, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shoemaker, hopes to study mathematics and statistics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass.

In 1521, Ferdinand Magellan discovered the Philippines.

Shroud's Potential Impact 'Incredible'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Tests to determine if the Shroud of Turin is really the burial cloth of Jesus Christ won't be completed until next year, but one researcher says "there is a strong sense that we're dealing with a potential impact that is incredible."

The researcher, Ken Stevenson, an IBM data processor from New Orleans, is one of those who has been examining the 14-foot linen shroud, housed in Turin, Italy. It shows a pale sepia image of the front and back sides of the corpse of a 5-foot-7 bearded man. Dark blotches appear at the wrists and ankles, on one side of the chest and around the scalp.

The markings suggest those suffered by Jesus at the Crucifixion about 30 A.D. Although many persons believe the shroud to show the image of Christ, the Vatican has never taken an official position.

Barrie Schwortz, lead photographer for the team that examined the shroud last October, said Sunday it will be at least 1980 before any conclusions are announced.

The two-day weekend meeting here at the Brooks Institute, where Schwortz works, was held to discuss data gathered by the various research teams, he said.

"The image is proportionally very good," scientist Donald Lynn said about the ancient cloth. "It has to be a projected image. It would be miraculous if it were a forgery."

The research team spent five days last October making various tests. At their meeting here, researchers divulged no details about their data. But, said a spokesman, if they had uncovered evidence of a fraud or found it impossible to date the linen to the first century, "they would have walked out the door long ago."

A key question is how the image got on the linen. Tests over the years have ruled out theories it was painted on the cloth or that body oils or similar circumstances stained the linen.

The history of the shroud can be accurately traced only to the 13th century. Evidence that it dates to the time of Christ is only circumstantial.

Even if it should be established the linen came from Jerusalem 2,000 years ago, scientists say, it may be impossible to prove beyond doubt the image is that of Christ.

Consultation On AT&T Antitrust Suits Allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday rejected American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s attempt to stop consultations between the government and MCI Communications Corp. over separate antitrust suits against AT&T. The justices, without comment, left intact a lower court ruling that cleared the way earlier this year for such consultations to begin.

Under that order, MCI also turned over to government lawyers copies of 1.5 million documents and depositions of 40 AT &T employees reportedly relevant to the antitrust actions.

AT&T's appeal argued that MCI should have been prohibited from doing so because the documents had been among those submitted by AT&T under a protective order.

U.S. District Judge John Grady in Chicago issued the original protective order, but then modified it to permit MCI's cooperation with the government. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in January upheld Grady's modification.

In other decisions Monday, the Supreme Court:

•Refused to hear a union's argument aimed at forcing the publisher of two Milwaukee newspapers to submit a dispute to arbitration.

•Set aside a ruling that had prohibited First of Omaha Service Corp., a Nebraska-based national bank, from charging 18 percent a year interest on credit card purchases by Iowa customers. The Iowa Supreme Court said that was in violation of an Iowa law limiting interest to 15 percent, but the high court sent the case back for review in accordance with a previous Supreme Court ruling stating the law of the state where a bank is based is the controlling law.

•Refused to hear Fairchild Industries' accusations of government abuse in a grand jury investigation into the firm's taxes. The company and its chairman, Edward Uhl, have been acquitted of criminal charges of filing false corporate tax returns in 1971 and 1972, but an investigation is continuing of the company's returns in later years.

Fairchild said the Internal Revenue Service was trying to obtain evidence through a grand jury that it could not otherwise obtain. But lower courts refused to order a hearing on the allegation, a decision the high court declined to review.

MCI, a company that competes with AT&T for telephone business, sued the huge communications network in 1974 for alleged violations of federal antitrust law.

Later that year, the government charged AT&T with numerous anti-competitive practices in one of the largest antitrust suits ever filed by the Justice Department.

In late 1977, the government asked Grady in Chicago to allow MCI's lawyers to share with it materials that MCI's faster-moving suit had disclosed during discovery proceedings.

The government also sought permission to consult with MCI lawyers.

Over AT&T's objections, Grady agreed, and the 7th Circuit court found no fault in the judge's subsequent modification of his protective order that had made the documents in question confidential.

In a related case, the Supreme Court last Jan. 8 refused to hear Bell System arguments aimed at freeing it from an order to surrender to the government 2.5 million documents that Bell had culled from a larger pool of documents in the MCI case.

The newspaper case concerned Newspapers Inc., which publishes The Milwaukee Journal and The Milwaukee Sentinel.

The labor dispute stems from a union contract between the company and Local 25 of the Milwaukee Newspaper and Graphic Communications Union, which was in effect from June 1, 1974, to Aug. 31, 1976. The contract has continued beyond its scheduled expiration date.

The old contract contained an arbitration clause that said "all questions ... including disagreements arising in negotiations with respect to a new contract ... are to be referred to arbitration."

After extensive negotiations, the union and company could not agree on numerous aspects of a new contract.

The union sought to bring all unresolved issues to arbitration, including the question of whether the new contract should include the same arbitration clause.

Newspapers Inc. took the position that established national labor policy was against submitting to arbitration the so-called "interest arbitration" dispute. Lower courts sided with the company after the union filed suit.

Decision On Control Of Iranian Home Set

LUBBOCK (UPI) — If negotiations go as planned Tuesday, the new Iranian government will assume ownership of a $265,000 house once occupied as a weekend retreat by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's eldest son.

Attorney Elgin E. Conner Jr. said Monday that his client, who holds the property in trust, has reached a "tentative, oral agreement" with the new government to transfer possession of the house once used by Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi.

The prince arrived in Lubbock in mid-August to begin a 49-week pilot training course at nearby Reese Air Force Base. He left prematurely on March 11, however, to join his family in exile in Rabat, Morocco.

If the new government, expected to make its decision by mid-morning, approves the agreement, "We'll dispose of (the property)," Conner said.

The agreement provides for the property to be deeded to the "government of Iran," Conner said, a technical phrase designed to remove realtor Stephen Von Phul from any future arguments between the old and new regimes.

Despite the cautious wording, Conner said Monday the shah's representatives have stated neither the deposed monarch nor his son planned to make any claim on the ranch-style residence.

Under the agreement, the current regime would pay overdue utility bills on the house and trustee's fees totaling some $32,000, Conner said.

He also said his client would require an "opinion letter" from Sylvan Marshall, a Washington attorney who represents the new Iranian government. Conner said Von Phul would require a second opinion letter on the agreement from the State Department. Conner said both letters already have been drafted. Three representatives from the Iranian consulate-general's office in Houston arrived in Lubbock March 13 and notified police of their plans to occupy the house on behalf of the new government.

However, Assistant Chief C.G. Bartley told the Iranians any intruders would be arrested prior to resolution of the ownership question.

Burglary Charges Lodged Against Seven

Seven Lubbock area residents have been charged with burglary or attempted burglary of a habitation.

Raymond G. Rodriguez, 30, of 3224 Bates St. and Andrew Duran Jr., 26, and Ronnie Jay Peacock, 21, both of Anton, were charged Monday with attempted burglary in a reported Sunday break-in attempt at a rural home about five miles north of U.S. 62-82 and Farm 1729 in Lubbock County.

Larry G. Hambrick Jr., 17, of 2434 E. 30th St. and Colonellee Ford, 17, of 3614 Walnut Ave., No. 1, were charged with burglarizing a home in the 200-block of 31st Street March 22 and stealing $120 in jewelry.

Lester Ray Harris, 18, of 218 Cherry and Robert Lowery, 17, of 3018 E. Third Place were charged with breaking into a 1700 E. Dartmouth apartment March 12 and stealing $400 in pistols.

Donna Marie Pryor, 21, of San Marcos was charged with possession of methamphetamines at Lubbock International Airport, where Lubbock police arrested her after being called there by airport authorities.

Wendell Jones of 5614 40th St. was charged with theft by check in the reported Sept. 19, 1978, giving of a $439 check to a Lubbock carpet company.

Area Unemployment Remains Unchanged

Unemployment in Lubbock continued to hold steady at 3.6 percent of the labor force during the mid-January through mid-February review period, the Texas Employment Commission reported today.

TEC figures indicate a slight increase in the labor force, which they say was absorbed by a seasonal resurgence in agricultural activity.

A late Easter was blamed for cutbacks in the retail trade segment of the economy. Easter will be celebrated on April 15 this year.

TEC predicts an estimated 1,500 additional non-agricultural jobs over the next three months, especially in manufacturing.

Several manufacturing firms, they say, are planning expansions "well above the usual seasonal gains."

Last Alarm

Dedicated to the children and families of three Lubbock firefighters who died in the line of duty:

LARRY D. TUCKER
KENNETH H. HAGGARD
EDDIE C. SWAFFORD

My father was a fireman,
he drove a big red truck,
and when he'd go to work each night
he'd say, "Mother, wish me luck."

Then Dad would not come home again till sometime the next day, but the thing that bothered me the most was the things some folks would say.

"A fireman's life is easy,
he eats and sleeps and plays, and sometimes he don't fight a fire for days and days and days."

When I first heard these comments,
I was too young to understand
'cause I knew, when people had trouble
Dad was there to lend a hand.

Then my father went to work one day and he kissed us all good-bye, but little did we realize,
that night, we all would cry.

My father gave his life that night, when the floor gave way below,
and I wondered why he'd risk his life,
for someone he didn't know.

But now I realize,
the greatest gift a man can give,
is to lay his life upon the line,
so that someone else might live.

So as we go from day to day,
and we pray to God above,
say a prayer for your local fireman,
he may save the ones you love.

STOLEN CARS

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Many stolen vehicles that disappear across the California-Mexico border end up as personal property of Mexican law enforcement authorities, their relatives or friends, according to a San Diego newspaper. U.S. law enforcement officials have an informant's letter which implicates Mexico's Federal Judicial Police in a stolen car ring, the San Diego Union said Sunday in a copyright article. Carlos Aguilar Garza, the anti-drug coordinator and overall head of the Federal Judicial Police in the Mexican states of Sinaloa, Sonora and Baja California branded the letter "a series of lies."

MARCHING TOWARD WHITE HOUSE—Demonstrators march down Connecticut Avenue Monday for a rally in Lafayette Park and the Eclipse on the north and south sides of the White House. Their meeting was planned to coincide with the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty on the north lawn of the White House. (AP Laserphoto)

Egyptians, Israelis Cheer Pact Signing

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Uncertain, apprehensive, joyful, millions of Egyptians on Monday night watched their televisions, tuned in their radios or simply listened for the pealing of bells announcing the birth of peace for their land.

Not all welcomed the treaty with Israel. Officials said public gatherings were discouraged Monday night out of concern that treaty opponents, calling it a betrayal of the Palestinians and other Arab states, would try to disrupt them.

Meanwhile in Israel flags and banners proclaimed "Shalom" although worry was expressed about the price of their treaty.

The ruling National Democratic Party of President Anwar Sadat planned rallies throughout Egypt for later in the week.

Church Bells Ring

Monday night's organized events were simple — the lighting of mosques and ringing of church bells at the moment of the treaty signing in Washington, 9 p.m. here; the presentation of a "flag of peace" to the captain of the Norwegian cruise ship Sagafjord as it carried 400 American passengers through the Suez Canal; the piping of ship whistles along the canal.

Many Egyptians had mixed feelings about the post-treaty period. They were relieved that the state of war was ending, but continued to have doubts about how much the Israelis can be trusted.

"On the first day of peace, I shall be happy like every one else, like a man who is so drunk he can't think," said George Dimitry, a retired teacher of English.

"But on the second day and thereafter I shall be thinking and watching. If the Israelis are arrogant and defiant, as they are said to be, then it won't work."

Egyptians Optimistic

The difficult negotiations of 16 months cooled much of the peace enthusiasm here, but many Egyptians still seemed optimistic Monday, particularly about the prosperity they believe will come with peace.

"Is there anyone who hates peace? No, it is good," said Hajj Omar, a 50-year-old doorman at an apartment building in the middle-class suburb of Heliopolis.

"For the last 30 years, we have mobilized all the prosperity we had and it has all gone to making bullets. With peace, everything is bound to work better and the leaders can look at the internal situation instead of always worrying about Israel," he said.

Many Egyptian city dwellers contend daily with the problems of inadequate bus service, housing shortages, rising prices, broken sewer lines, power failures and quixotic telephones.

Street sweeper Rashad Mohammed, 30, who said March 26 should become a national holiday, noted, "Peace means prosperity and when there is prosperity people give larger tips at feast time."

Leaning on his broom, Mohammed, who is paid less than $35 a month in his government job, turned philosophical.

"Imagine," he said, "if all this money that goes toward war went to good things, projects, business and machines to help clean the street so we don't have to try to sweep away the mud after a rain with these brooms."

Israelis View By TV

In Israel large screens were erected in several towns so Israelis could gather in public and watch the live telecast of the Washington signing ceremony. A special stamp was issued in honor of peace, and quickly sold out. Youth movement members laid flowers on the tombs of war dead throughout the country.

The newspaper Maariv splashed color reproductions of the Egyptian, Israeli and American flag across its front page and editorialized: "This is the day we hoped for."

But Ettie Shahar, a 25-year-old hairstylist, reflected the misgivings of many Israelis when she said: "I'm scared. Even if the Egyptians do want peace, how will they stay out if other Arab states attack us? How can they stand against their own brothers?"

Social worker Rachel Aran said: "I feel I don't know enough about what we are giving up. I get the feeling that each time we made a concession we left the Egyptians with less problems in case they want to attack us in the future."

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, demonstrations were reported by Palestinians who complain that the treaty ignores their rights.

"I think the Palestinians will have to fight to get their rights," said an Arab youth of 18 in Manger Square, in the West Bank village of Bethlehem.

Military officials said Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai desert, to be spread over three years as stipulated in the treaty, would begin shortly after the signing.

The Israeli media did their best to strike a festive note. State radio and television organized marathon trans-Atlantic broadcasts of the Washington ceremonies, and changed some of their usual signature tunes to the opening bars of the old Hebrew folksong "Heveinu Shalom Aleichem" (We Bring Peace upon You.)

The army radio network telephoned American personalities throughout the day and broadcast their reactions to the signing. Among those called were conductor Leonard Bernstein, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and singer Roberta Flack.

A possible explanation for Israel's restrained reaction came from a Jerusalem psychiatrist Michael Abruskin, who attributed the apathy to "anxiety concerned with the unknown."

Abruskin said that "however paradoxical it may sound, the Israeli will feel secure when he knows he has enemies on his borders, and he knows how to deal with that."

But on the Egyptian front, he said, the Israeli "is groping his way emotionally toward a new kind of neighbor."

He said "...it is difficult to concede that the enemy has become a friend overnight." He estimated this mood could last two to five years.

Uganda's Amin Says Residence Besieged

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin claimed he was besieged by 20,000 Tanzanian troops and 12 tanks at his Entebbe residence Monday. He said God-fearing men such as himself should expect these problems, and vowed to fight his way out with a handful of help.

Ugandan exiles claimed the tanks belonged to mutinous Ugandan soldiers, but there was no other indication that any such siege was taking place. Residents of Entebbe, 20 miles north of the capital of Kampala, reported no tanks, no troops and no fighting. They said the road to Kampala was open.

The airport control tower said all was quiet and Tanzanian military officials said their invasion forces were still 20 miles from Entebbe. But Amin said he could see 12 tanks from his window.

"I'm looking forward to having breakfast with the enemy," said Amin through an aide who telephoned reporters in Nairobi. Uganda government radio, monitored in Nairobi, carried a similar report after Amin personally telephoned the newsroom.

Fight Against Odds

The radio quoted Amin as saying, "A brave and strong man who believes in God and discipline will always find this kind of problem. I will show how only 20 men can fight against 20,000 invading troops."

The size of the invading force of Tanzanian soldiers and Ugandan exiles has been put by independent observers at about 7,000. Amin has put it as high as 40,000.

In Nairobi, observers said the flamboyant Amin falsely reported a major Tanzanian advance once before, then claimed his troops had driven it back.

Entebbe is on Lake Victoria near Uganda's only international airport. Amin said the tanks arrived during the night and cut off Entebbe from Kampala.

Orders Airport Closed

Amin ordered the airport closed to foreign flights Sunday and said planes violating Ugandan air space would be shot down. An employee reached by telephone at the control tower said all was quiet Monday. "Nothing is wrong here. No shooting. No tanks. We are OK," he said.

Tanzanian sources with direct access to military planners in Dar es Salaam, said Tanzanian units were still at Mpigi, a village about 20 miles from both Entebbe and Kampala.

This is said to be the deepest advance of the Tanzanians in the five-month-old war. Fighting began in October when Ugandan soldiers occupied and claimed to annex 720 square miles of northwestern Tanzania.

Ugandan exiles said the tanks allegedly surrounding Amin belonged to mutinous Ugandan soldiers who were trying to overthrow Amin in the name of Brig. Emilio Mondo, No. 2 in the Ugandan Defense Ministry, and make peace with the Tanzanians.

A spokesman for Amin described Mondo, however, as completely loyal.

Exile Leaders Meet

Exile leaders wound up a meeting in Moshi, in northern Tanzania, and announced agreement on the structure of a provisional government after the possible defeat of Amin. About 120 exiles traveled from the United States, Britain and elsewhere in Africa to take part.

The exiles have been divided along regional, tribal and political lines. Tanzania, intent on overthrowing Amin and replacing him with a friendly Ugandan regime, had hoped the meeting would produce unity.

Exile spokesmen said an 11-man committee of professionals, businessmen and academics would govern for two to three years as the Uganda National Liberation Front, using the southern provincial center of Masaka as a capital. Elections would then be held to form a constitutional government.

Peace Treaty Signed By Sadat, Begin

visit of Sadat to Jerusalem on Nov. 19, 1977, which started the peace process after years of unyielding rhetoric between the two countries.

Begin also agreed that within seven months Israel would return to Egypt the Sinai oilfields from which Israel had been taking about a fifth of its oil needs.

A score of Jewish settlements are to be dismantled, "a pain" that Begin says he will suffer to his last days.

Also, Israeli airfields will be demobilized and handed over to Egypt for civilian use.

In return, Egypt has recognized Israel, agreeing to an exchange of ambassadors 10 months after ratification.

Other Treaty Provisions

The package also includes these parts:

— Three annexes, one on establishing relations, another outlining the withdrawal and a third providing maps of the pullback.

— A joint letter giving interpretations of some of the more troublesome issues, including how the treaty relates to Egypt's defense pacts with other Arab countries.

— Two memoranda of agreement in which the United States specifies how it will help guard against violations and agrees to make up any Israeli oil shortages over 15 years.

In support of the treaty, the United States has offered loans and grants of $3 billion to Israel and $1.5 billion to $2 billion to Egypt.

Protestors Hurl Boos At Leaders

ies in the United States and Canada.

The march began two hours before the treaty ceremony, at Dupont Circle, once the staging area for protests against the Vietnam War.

Paced by a police car, the marchers walked slowly in one traffic lane through the streets, cordoned between lines of officers on motorcycles. Many of the demonstrators wore colorful Arab headdress called "hatta."

Banners carried by the demonstrators attacked Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. "Sadat is a traitor," "The shah is gone, Sadat is next," and "Victory to Palestine — Down, down, down with Israel," read some of the signs.

A different message was carried by one man, apparently a basketball fan. "Go, Win, Indiana State," read his sign — a reference to Monday night's NCAA college championship game with Michigan State.

At a series of news conferences before the march, leaders denounced the treaty.

A statement read on behalf of the National Association of Arab Americans said peace will not be achieved until Palestinians gain an independent homeland. It said other Arab nations will carry on the struggle if Egypt does not.

March leaders predicted acts of terrorism in protest of the treaty, and George said, "terrorism has brought to the attention of the world the plight of the Palestinian people."

Hatem Hussaini, director of the Palestine information office here, said "President Carter has pushed the Middle East once more to the brink of war."

Ismail Zayid of Halifax, Canada, chairman of the National Committee on the Middle East, accused Carter of trying to create "a new shah in Egypt" and said "President Sadat will fare no better than the shah of Iran," who was overthrown.

Accused GI

Foley of New York City, asked reporters not to ask about Garwood's actions before the reunion.

Garwood disappeared in September 1965 from an area near Da Nang, Vietnam. He is charged with desertion, soliciting U.S. forces to refuse to fight, misbehavior as a prisoner of war, disloyality, and unlawful communication with the enemy.

The charges will be investigated to determine if there is sufficient evidence to court-martial Garwood, said Lt. Col. Art Brill, spokesman for the Defense Department.

Brill said the investigation has not yet begun and that Garwood would remain at Great Lakes "indefinitely." Brill said Garwood was not under restraint and that his duty station is Great Lakes.

While at the base, Garwood is being medically examined and Brill said the government hopes to conduct "an intelligence debriefing."

Brill said Garwood was undergoing the same medical testing and treatment that other returning POWs received in 1973, and that doctors were treating him for possible malaria.

And he said Garwood had reported receiving some unusual medical treatment while in Vietnam. "When he had diarrhea, he was treated with electricity, which is interesting," Brill said, adding that when Garwood got sick he was treated at times with "an injection into the heart."

Report Of Autopsies On Firemen Awaited

Cream arlor, formerly Underwood's Bar-B-Q Cafeteria, not only killed the three men, but sent two firemen to Lubbock hospitals and caused minor rashes and respiratory problems for other firefighters called to the scene at 4:30 a.m.

Eugene Melcher, 38, and Robert Perkins, 21, were rushed to West Texas Hospital after battleing the blaze, but were released at 8:55 a.m. Monday.

Turner said that between 10 and 12 of the masks, including the ones worn by the dead men, had ruptured filters. The filters, located in the masks' air regulators, appeared to have been penetrated by some type of chemecal, he said.

"I'm not saying the equipment was faulty," Turner emphasized. "At this point, we just don't know."

Asked if the filters were checked regularly, Turner said, "They will be. They hadn't been up until now."

Several sources have said it appeared the toxic fumes had been emitted by burning ceiling tile. "That seems to be the obvious thing right now," Foster said Monday.

John Kice, chairman of the chemistry department at Texas Tech, said the key to knowing what caused the deaths is the material put into the plastic tiles — "if that's what even did it."

"It's amazing to me that anything could eat a hole through these things (rubber masks)" and be toxic enough to kill by causing severe lung damage, Kice said Monday. "Rubber is not something that is attacked very easily."

He speculated the deadly fumes may be a combination of things, one that ate the holes and one that killed the men.

However, the chief added that the mysterious case was still under investigation and no conclusions had been reachee "I've speculated on this until I'm not going to speculate anymore."

Fire Marshal Robert Stokes and a team of investigators were at the fire site Monday trying to determine a cause o the fatal blaze.

"It looks like it's going to be another day or so before we find the cause of the fire," Stokes said. "We're taking our time because we want to be sure we're right."

Services for Swafford, of Slaton, will be at 10 a.m. today in Englunds Funeral Chapel at Slaton. Burial will be in Englewood Cemetery under direction of Englund's Funeral Service.

Services for Haggard, of 4410 17th St., will be at 2 p.m. today in Lubbock's First Christian Church. Buri will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Sander Funeral Home.

Services for Tucker, of Route 4, Lubbock, will be at 4 p.m. today in Sanders Memorial Chapel. Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

The three men are the fire department's first fatalities since 1957, when Waylon Jack Jenkins died of a heart attack while at the scene of a fire.

Oil Nations Prepare For Price Boost

may not have enough clout to block a large increase.

Many nations believed earlier to be opposed to increases now appear to have changed their stance. Qatar Oil Minister Abdul Aziz bin Khalifa, who Sunday said he didn't feel the meeting would even discuss prices, said Monday a price increase was "very possible."

The cartel may also agree on voluntary ceilings on production, now that Iran is producing again after being shut down for two months.

Iran is producing two million barrels a day, according to sources in the delegation, and will be up to four million by June. Earlier estimates were that Iranian production would level off at about three million barrels a day, half of the six million it produced before the revolution.

To avoid an oil surplus that might dope prices, other OPEC members who boosted production during the Iranian-caused shortage likely will lower production to earlier levels, sources said. This would keep supplies comfortable and prices high.

Swine Short Course Scheduled For Plainview

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Two noted extension swine specialists from Minnesota and Indiana will join scientists and producers from Texas, Arizona and Iowa to conduct the annual Texas A&M University Swine Short Course here Wednesday, April 4.

The course is designed to bring pork producers in West Texas and neighboring states up to date on the latest research and ideas in management and production, said Dr. Robert S. Cohen, extension area swine specialist at Lubbock.

The program begins at 8 a.m. and adjourns at 4:15 p.m. at the Hale County Agricultural Center.

It is organized and sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cooperating are the department of animal science at A&M, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Pork Producers Association, and the Texas Pork Producers Board. There is a $7 registration fee.

Among the speakers will be Dr. Allen Leman, extension swine health specialist at the Univeristy of Minnestoa, St. Paul, Minn.

Also featured will be Dr. Wayne Singleton, reproductive physiologist and extension specialist at Purdue University, West Layfayette, Ind.

In the morning session, Leman will discuss opportunities for improving reproductive efficiency. In the afternoon, he will discuss reproductive diseases and problems.

A specialist in swine reporduction, he joined the Minnesota staff in 1975. Prior to that he had served six years as an extension veterinarian at the University of Illinois.

He is past president of the American Association of Swine Practitioners and has written two books on swine disease.

A native of Peoria, Ill., he earned both the D.V.M. and the Ph.D. degrees at the University of Illinois.

Singleton will focus on management strategies for the breeding herd during the morning session. After lunch, he will outline management strategies for the young boar.

In addition to duties as an extension swine specialist, Singleton is an associate professor of animal sciences at Purdue. His educational programs for swine producers and extension agents have earned him awards from the Purdue Univeristy Cooperative Extension Specialists Association and from the American Society of Animal Science.

The Purdue association honored him as outstanding specialist with less than 10 years of service. The ASAS presented him its Extension Award for the Younger Animal Scientist.

In addition to ASAS, he is a member of the Society for the Study of Reproduction, Gamma Sigma Delta, Alpha Zeta and Phi Theta Kappa.

A native of Vincennes, Ind., he holds a bachleor's degree from Purdue and the M. S. and Ph. D. degrees from South Dakota State University.

He served as instructor of animal science at South Dakota State for a year before joining the Purdue staff in 1970.

Helen Kelley, District II chairwoman, will be in charge of the conference.

COASTAL STRUCTURES STUDIED

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Economic Development Committee approved a bill Monday creating a 15-member committee to recommend building standards for the Texas Gulf Coast. The vote was 4-0. The bill is part of an effort by Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, to enable coastal buildings to withstand hurricanes. The technical committee's recommendations would be submitted to the State Insurance Board, which regulates windstorm insurance for coastal counties.

Cattle Futures Finish Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 120 to 150 points lower with April through February at the daily limit level decline Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales held to 14,519 cars with some contracts locked limit much of the day.

Prices fell to the lowest in six weeks.

An early gain of 25 was quickly over turned as traders noted the drop of 4,919 in open interest and continued aggressive selling by the cash connected commission house. Traders ignored firm beef and mostly higher cash cattle.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 105 to 106½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were up $2 to off $1 with the best top $75 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 108,000 head. About 13,300 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 145 to 150 lower with all contracts except January at the limit level loss. Earlier, that contract was also down limit. Sales totaled 3,936 contracts.

Prices fell to the lowest in two weeks on aggressive selling, much of which spilled over from the live cattle pit. An early gain of 17 was quickly lost. Liquidation continued in April following similar action in the live cattle futures. Ignored were higher feeder cattle and firm beef.

There have been 631 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $150.25 per hundredweight at San Antonio. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 2,200 head today.

Hog futures closed 20 to 150 lower with all contracts except distant April and June down the daily limit. Volume was estimated at 6,198 lots. The market reacted after a brief early gain of 37 in distant April.

Pressure spilled over from limit lower cattle futures and traders also noted heavy hog runs and sharply lower prices coupled with further weakness in pork products. April continued at a discount under cash.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 82 to 92 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $1.25 with the best top $48.50 per hundredweight, which is the lowest since July. Kill was 328,000 head. The major terminals are expecting about 29,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed the daily limit of 200 lower with sellers over across the board. Sales totaled 3,263 cars. Prices were lower from the start and fell to the lowest since January.

The limit loss was the third in a row and forced prices 13½ cents under the February highs. Selling spilled over from limit lower cattle futures and weak cash hogs and bellies.

There have been 58 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was off ¼ to 3 cents at 49¾ to 52A cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A HIGH PROBABILITY OF A SUBSTANTIAL increase in U. S. cotton plantings this year has led to widespread speculation on where cotton prices may be next fall.

This, in turn, has led the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., of Lubbock to do some figuring on the subject.

"A lot of things can happen to alter the picture as the year progresses," points out Donald A. Johnson, PCG executive vice president.

"But there is no arguing with the fact that the odds now favor surplus production, and depressed prices are a logical expectation."

TRYING TO DETERMINE THE EXACT LEVEL of cotton prices at harvest is an impossible task, Johnson adds.

"But it isn't too difficult to arrive at figures that should be fairly close to the minimum per pound return (1) to producers who plan an acreage in 1979 equal to or greater than what they planted in 1978 and (2) to producers who in 1979 plant 15 percent or more less acreage than last year," he says.

The two minimum figures are approximately 49 cents and 51 cents, respectively, according to PCG caleulations.

The loan rate on strict low middling 31/32nds-inch, 3.4 micronaire, considered to be about the average High Plains quality, should be no lower than 44 cents per pound.

That's a little more than six cents below the 50.23-cent base U. S. loan rate for strict low middling 1-1/16th, 3.5-4.9 micronaire.

BUT IF HIGH PLAINS COTTON SELLS at that level, Johnson says, the national average price paid to farmers for the year isn't likely to be above about 51 cents per pound.

"And that figure subtracted from the 57.7-cent target price would mean a price deficiency payment to all farmers of 6.7 cents, bringing the total return to 50.7 cents per pound on High Plains cotton eligible for the payment."

Growers can assure themselves of that 50.7-cent minimum return on all production by reducing 1979 cotton acreage by the 15 percent "voluntary reduction percentage" announced for 1979.

Otherwise, the payment will be subject to a "program allocation factor" yet to be calculated and announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

THE ALLOCATION FACTOR WILL BE FIGURED by dividing the estimated 1979 acreage for harvest into the national program acreage of 10.6 million.

With normal abandonment from 14.1 million acres planted, acreage for harvest would be 13.1 million acres and would result in a program allocation factor of 81 percent.

This would mean producers subject to the allocation factor — those who did not reduce acreage by 15 percent — would get the target price payment on only 81 percent of their production.

Put another way, their average payment on all production would be reduced to 5.4 cents per pound. And that 5.4 cents plus the 44-cent market minimum would be 49.4 cents.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures rose today on the Chicago Board of Trade in sympathy with higher silver prices.

Analysts said concern about inflation and rising oil prices pushed silver futures higher and led to some buying in soybeans and grains by traders who view metals futures asvan index of inflation.

Talk centered on a Geneva meeting of oil-producing nations and speculation that it might yield an immediate hike in OPEC prices.

Spartans Rule Basketball World

Bird No Match For Johnson, Kelser

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Michigan State threw a net around Larry Bird with a brilliant zone defense and Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 24 points as the Spartans defeated the Indiana State Sycamores 75-64 Monday to win the NCAA basketball championship.

The loss ended a Cinderella season for the Sycamores, who had stormed out of nowhere to the top of The Associated Press poll and had won 33 straight games before the final.

Bird, who had been killing just about everyone this season with a 29.0 scoring average, had to work hard for his 19 points against the Spartans' two-three zone, which sagged on the blond bomber every time he went to the basket.

The national championship was the first for Michigan State in its fourth appearance in this tournament.

The Sycamores never led after the opening minutes and trailed by as many as 16 points several times early in the second half. But they made it interesting with a late 12-2 flurry behind Bird that chopped Michigan State's advantage to 52-46 with 10 minutes left in the game.

Johnson then spearheaded a rally that put the Spartans in command and quieted the usually raucous Indiana State fans in the noisy crowd of 15,410.

Johnson scored seven points in an 8-4 burst that moved the Big Ten Conference power's lead to 61-50 with 5:06 left in the game.

The Sycamores never came within striking distance of the Spartans after that.

Bird, who had been a terror in this tournament in four previous games, was so stymied by the rugged Michigan State defense that at one point he went more than 13 minutes without a field goal.

Foul trouble hurt both teams in the closely called game, and the calls had both coaches bitterly complaining to the officials throughout the contest.

Greg Kelser, who scored 19 points for the Spartans, put the cap on the game with an enormous slam dunk at the end and the Michigan State cheerleaders and some supporters rushed to hug their heroes.

While the Michigan State players danced joyously around the court, Bird sat disconsolately on the bench with his head buried in a towel, his great college career ended.

Bird, playing with a broken left thumb that never seemed to bother him earlier, was only able to connect on seven of 21 shots from the field.

Bird's eyes appeared red-rimmed when he went up to accept the runner-up trophy for the Sycamores.

The Spartans, though holding a 37-28 advantage, seemed to be in trouble because their two leading players, Johnson and Kelser, were saddled with three fouls apiece. Kelser had to sit out a good portion of the second half in foul trouble after scoring only nine points before intermission.

Ron Charles fouled out for Michigan State while Carl Nicks had to sit down for the Sycamores in the closing minutes of the game with five fouls.

Terry Donnelly also was a key factor for Michigan State, 26-6, scoring 13 of his 15 points in the second half with some sparkling outside shooting and helping the Spartans build their mountainous 16-point lead at 50-34 with 15 minutes left in the game.

Kelser scored four points in the first six minutes of the game, helping Michigan State hammer out a 16-8 lead.

Kelser also was instrumental with his passing, contributing seven of his nine assists before intermission, helping Michigan State continue to increase its first-half lead.

The Spartans scored seven straight points at one time, charging into a 30-19 advantage with 6:32 left before the half, and then made it 35-23 with Kelser and Johnson leading the way.

Dockery Continues Shuffling Gridders

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

With the cold north wind whipping through Jones Stadium Rex Dockery kept on the move, to try to dodge the winds as well as to generate a little more warmth. A wind-breaker he wore, but it was manufactured for less biting breezes.

It was the first workout after more than a week of rest for the Red Raiders. Spring break created a welcome respite from spring drills, but Monday, the cold as well as the coaches greeted the players.

And there were the changes in positions.

Even before the spring break, Dockery and his staff had shuffled some players. There were changes prior to the start of spring drills and some during that first week. Monday, there were even more.

"Hey, Johnny, how'd you like it?" Dockery asked Johnny Quinney as the senior from Jim Ned headed for the dressing room at the end of the workout.

"Liked it," responded Quinney.

What the question had reference to was the move of Quinney from last year's free-safety position to linebacker.

The move of Quinney came after Dockery and his staff evaluated the first week of work.

Another move involved Jamie Giles, the second of the spring for him. Giles was a noseguard last fall, but to start spring training, Dockery shifted him to outside linebacker. Monday, he reported at defensive tackle, and Dockery commented he felt Giles looked better at the spot in drills.

Tracy Kensing, a defensive tackle, got the call to move to offense.

With the changes, Dockery spent Monday in a learning session, something which will continue most of the week. There will be some situation-type scrimmaging later this week, and a regular scrimmage on Saturday, half-way point in the spring drills.

"I thought we had a good workout," commented the head coach. "Got a lot done."

Raider Netters Enjoy Fast Start

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Looking at an 8-7 won-loss record is all a matter of perspective.

For instance, a UCLA basketball coach wouldn't be around long enough to pick up his paycheck if a Bruin team ever fell to such a dismal low.

But for the Texas Tech tennis team, that 8-7 mark is no small feat— and coach Mark Hamilton knows it better than anyone else.

Those eight wins already represent double the number of dual match victories the Raiders were able to notch last spring (4) and you'd have to go all the way back to 1975 to find a Tech team that compiled more than eight wins in an entire season.

"Last year at this time we were something like 2-14," said Hamilton. "So naturally I'm pleased with our record at this stage.

Hamilton's netters just returned from a week long stay in California whey they returned with a respectable 3-3 mark. And according to Hamilton, that slate is more than just respectable.

"We played some awfully good teams out on the coast," he said. "Before we left, I figured that if we could come back with an even 4-4 record (the Raiders had two matches rained out), it would have been a successful trip. And we lost two matches 5-4, both of those we could just have easily won."

The Raiders faced Pepperdine in their last dual match of the trip and fell 8-1, picking up only one singles victory. But Pepperdine may have the best tennis team in the country— it defeated SMU 6-3 just a few days before it faced Tech. And SMU had been ranked No. 1 in the nation at the time.

"In tennis 8-1 isn't always a bad score," said Hamilton. "A lot of those games went to three sets— we didn't just lay down and die."

The Tech netters open Southwest conference play this weekend against SMU in Dallas, and then in Waco against Baylor.

After spending the last ten days on the road, Hamilton isn't overly pleased about opening conference on the road.

"You don't have too say much about SMU," said Hamilton "They are very good. I wish we didn't have to open with two matches on the road, but's that's the way things go."

Last year the Raiders fell to SMU 9-0 and, although he isn't expecting miracles, Hamilton is looking for an improvement.

"It may be unrealistic to expect us to beat SMU," he said. "But I would like to score a couple of points against them."

Every point a team scores in a dual match adds up to determine the final SWC team standings— so every point the Raiders can get adds up to a moral victory.

Last year the Raider netters scored two (2) points in SWC play which landed them solidly at the bottom. Tech picked up it's two points in a pair of 1-8 losses to Rice and Baylor.

Hamilton looks at a copy of last year's SWC finish and points a finger at where he expects, or hopes, to see the Raiders to finish. It's somewhere around sixth or seventh.

"We lost to some teams we shouldn't have last year," he says.

And this year the Raiders have the personel to help them begin thier climb back up the SWC ladder.

"We have better people this year," said Hamilton, "and that's made all the difference in the world. I mean, put Earl Campbell on any football team and they're going to be a better team."

According to Hamilton, Doug Davis and Chow Wah, a pair of transfer students, have played the most consistently and effectively for Tech so far.

Directly ahead of Tech in the SWC standings last year was Baylor— one of the school's that the Raiders must defeat to pull themselves out of the SWC cellar.

"No question about it, the Baylor match is a big one for us," said Hamilton.

And that's probably an understatement.

Lieberman Wants Olympic Gold Medal

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that she has a national basketball championship, Nancy Lieberman wants the Olympic gold medal.

"Why give Russia the gold medal and settle for something less. Why not go for the top," the 5-foot-10 Old Dominion star said Monday.

Miss Lieberman scored 20 points Sunday as she teammed with 6-5 center Inge Nissen to lead Old Dominion to the AIAW championship with a 75-65 victory over Louisiana Tech in the nationally televised finals.

Monday, she joined nine others who were named to 1979 Kodak Women's All-America team.

"We worked very hard for three years" to win the national title, the New York City native said. "I'm glad it came so soon. But next year is just as important to us as this year."

The only high schooler on the American silver medal-winning team in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, Miss Lieberman is looking toward Moscow, the site of the 1980 Games.

"The gold medal in the Olympics wouldn't hurt," she said.

Besides the Olympics, Nancy was on the U.S. national team that toured Europe that summer. She has faced the Soviet Union team four times.

"The Russians have superior height," she said. "We match up well with them, but their height is a big factor. We need some big girls. Not that our big girls aren't good — we're just overpowered.

"They replace a 6-5 girl with a 6-6. We replace a 6-2 girl with a 5-10."

The most-recruited high school player in the country three years ago, Miss Lieberman thought seriously about transferring from Old Dominion, located in Norfolk, Va., to the University of Tennessee.

"I needed to get away and give it some serious thought," she remembered. "While I was in Europe last summer, I decided to stay. I know I made the right decision."

After beating 1978 AIAW champion UCLA the first week in January, Old Dominion took over the No. 1 spot in the national poll, where the Lady Monarchs stayed despite a loss to South Carolina.

"Losing definitely helped us," Miss Lieberman said. "We were starting to feel as if all we had to do was show up and the other team would let us win because we were Old Dominion.

"Practices weren't as intent as they should have been. But after we lost to South Carolina, it scared us. We've worked just so hard since that game."

Westerners, EHS '9' Explode For Big Wins

The Lubbock High Westerners exploded for eight runs in the top of the sixth to nail the coffin lid shut on the Levelland Lobos Monday and claim a lopsided 17-3 victory.

In the game across town, the Estacado Matadors were equally impressive as they routed Amarillo Palo Duro 18-2 in a game that was called after only four innings of play.

The Westerners sent 11 men to the plate in that wild sixth, and eight of them circled the bases to score. Paul Mendoza and Terry Brady provided the big guns with a pair of two run homers.

The win lifts LHS to 9-3 for the year while Levelland slipped to 10-2. Lubbock High will face the Brownfield Cubs at 4 p.m. today in it's second game of the week.

David Rush started on the mound for LHS and went the distance to pick up the win— his third of the year. Rush stuck out four, allowed only five hits and gave up two earned runs.

Levelland's only lead of the game came in the top of the first when the Lobo's pushed across a run to go up 1-0. But the Westerners came back in a hurry, scoring once in their half of the first, three times in the second and five times in the third.

Mendoza and Noel Jaime were the RBI leaders for Lubbock with three apeice.

Hector Limon went to the plate four times, but he came up twice in the second inning. His work alone was enough to sink Palo Duro as he drove in 4 runs in that one inning as Estacado clubbed Palo Duro 18-2 Monday.

Today, the Matadors will play at Hobbs in a game beginning at 5 p.m. CST.

The Matadors scored 14 times in that second inning, as Limon had a double and single in knocking in 4 of the runs. For the day, he went four-for-four with 6 RBIs.

In addition to Limon, Kenneth Davis went three-for-three and Brett Parker was three-for-four with 4 RBIs.

Parker also went the distance — only four innings since the game was called on the 10-run rule — on the mound for the Matadors to notch his third win of the year against two losses.

Estacado is now 5-5 for the season while the Dons lost their tenth straight game of the year and are now 1-10.

Over the past two season Palo Duro owns a 2-30 slate.

Wichita State Drops Raider Nine

WICHITA, Kan. (Special) — Texas Tech fell too far behind on a cold day here Monday, and the 6 runs the Red Raiders were able to accumulate in the top of the ninth were not enough as host Wichita State posted an 11-6 victory to open a five-game series.

The two clubs will meet in a doubleheader today beginning at 1 p.m. Another twinbill is on tap for Wednesday.

The loss dropped Tech to 11-10 for the year and came on the heels of a series win over SMU at Dallas last weekend. With Monday's win, Wichita State is now 23-4.

Tech fell behind 11-0 as Mitch Denson held the Raiders to one hit through eight innings of play.

The principal Raider destroyer was the right fielder, Yeager, who had two hits, scored three times and drove in 3 runs. However, the Shockers pounded out a whopping 22 hits against the Raiders.

But, in the ninth, the Raiders awoke, as Mike Farmer singled, Larry Selby walked, and John Keller doubled in Farmer.

Brooks Wallace singled to drive in Selby, and Jeff Harp brought in Keller with a single.

Craig Noonan's single brought home Wallace, and Johnny Vestal reached on an error, Harp racing home with another run.

Noonan then scored on a passed ball, but the Raiders were unable to keep the rally going in the top of the ninth.

Hit, Pitch & Run Begins

Lubbock youngsters between the ages of nine and 12 are eligible to compete in the 1979 Pitch, Hit and Run competition— the official youth program of Major League Baseball.

Young people can pick up their official registration forms at any Burger King Restaurant. The program is being sponsored jointly by the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Dept. and Burger King.

The Lubbock competiton will be held on May 19 at Mose Hood Park (27th and Ave Q) at 10 a.m. To be eligible a youngster must be registered by the end of April.

A district winner will be named in each age group with the winners advancing towards the state competition, at a Texas Rangers game, and the finals at the All-Star game at the Kingdome in Seattle on July 17.

Each participant competes in three categories; pitching at a target, hitting for distance and running the base path for speed.

Pitch, Hit and Run is open to boys or girls.

Stipanovich Chooses Mizzou

ST. LOUIS (AP) — DeSmet High School basketball star Steve Stipanovich said Monday he will attend the University of Missouri and play "for Coach Norm Stewart and his Missouri Tigers."

"I knew I was going to play Missouri two weeks ago," the 7-foot, 240-pound forward said during a news conference at the high school's gymnasium.

Mizzou coach Norm Stewart's reputation for getting "the best talent he possibly can out of his players" was one of the factors in deciding where to play, Stipanovich said. He also said he was swayed by "the thrill of playing for my friends and my home state."

Stipanovich, who led DeSmet to 60 consecutive victories and two state championships, was reported to have received expressions of interest from about 200 colleges, including UCLA, Kentucky, Notre Dame, North Carolina and Duke in addition to Missouri.

Chaparrals Shut Out Midwestern

WICHITA FALLS (Special) — Lubbock Christian College, held hitless for the first 6 2/3 innines by Darryl Frazier, exploded for 4 runs in the eighth to down Midwestern State 4-0 in the TAC opener for both teams.

The teams were to play a second game late Monday night, but because of the cold, the game was postponed until noon today. Then, they will conclude their four-game series with another 7:30 p.m. twinbill today.

Bobby Doe drew a one-out walk to open the fireworks in the eighth. After stealing second, Steve Brigante was intentionally walked. Tim Leslie then hit a towering infield popup which the 35 mph wind blew foul and first baseman Danny Hagen had the ball bounce out of the glove in front of the LCC dugout.

Leslie followed with a line single to right scoring Doe and moving Brigante to third. After Leslie stole second, Kenny Toney singled to left to score both runs.

The Indians, now 13-4-1, appealed at third and Leslie was ruled out. However, Frazier neglected to step back from the rubber, and after a conference, the umpires ruled Leslie safe.

Richard Bowles forced Toney at second, stole second, and stopped at third on Dave Hanna's single to left before Frazier wild-pitched him home.

Brady Brashear's infield hit off the second basemans glove ruined Fraziers bid for a no-hitter.

The Indians, in losing at home for the first time this year, seriously threatened in the seventh. Leadoff man Donald Reed doubled to left. LCC catcher Bob Nottebart, who threw out three runners trying to steal and earlier picked Reed off first, threw the ball away at the last second and Reed took third.

Steve Newell bounced out to short and .491 hitter Dave Connacher was intentionally walked. Rick Loisch missed the squeeze sign and Reed was thrown out at third. Loesch was then intentionally walked, but Joe Guillot struck out to end the frame.

Both John Ross, now 3-3, and Frazier gave up four hits, walked five and struck out seven.

ASTROS TRIM ROSTER

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — The Houston Astros have trimmed their roster to 31 players, six above the April 6 opening day limit. Pitchers Mike Mendoza and Gordon Padson, catcher Reggie Baldwin, and infielders Mike Fischlin and Keith Drumright were assigned Monday to the Class AAA affiliate at Charleston, W.Va., and outfielder Tom Wiedenbauer was assigned to the Columbus, Ga., Class AA farm club.

DePaul Edges Penn In Third-Place Bout

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — DePaul coach Ray Meyer said his team did not feel like playing in the NCAA consolation game, played poorly but was happy enough with its 96-93 overtime victory against Penn Monday night.

"We just didn't feel like playing for third place," Meyer said. "We struggled through it. . .We're a winner and we're happy to go home on a winning note."

With the score tied at 85 after regulation time, DePaul freshman forward Mark Aguirre scored eight of the Blue Demons' 11 points in the five-minute overtime.

Senior guard Gary Garland said Meyer told his players to get the ball to Aguirre, who would then either pass off or take the shot.

"He's always our man in the clutch," Garland said.

Meyer said he was unhappy with his team's performance. "We made so many mistakes at the end of the first half, we let them back in the ball game," he said.

DePaul jumped out to a 23-point lead in the opening half and led 46-23 with 4:30 left before intermission. However, Penn chipped away at the Blue Demons' advantage and tied the score at 83 with less than two minutes to go in regulation time.

Penn coach Bob Weinhauer, who had said he wanted to gain respect for the Quakers and the Ivy League — as well as victories — in the NCAA tournament, made no opening statement at the post-game news conference and none of his players were present.

Weinhauer's answers to questions by the media were terse.

The second-year Quakers' coach said his team entered the game just wanting to play well. "We just talked about giving effort," Weinhauer said. "I was not concerned about whether we would win or lose."

Asked if he was aware that the official scorer had erred at not giving Penn a one-and-one opportunity at the foul line during the first half, Weinhauer said, "It seems kind of strange to me. . .but quite honestly, I wasn't surprised."

Asked why, Weinhauer said, "I thought that was obvious."

Was the officiating unfair? "No, I didn't say that," Weinhauer said.

Meyer said DePaul's 23-point lead in the first half "came too easy and we lost concentration. What changed the whole complexion of the game around was when Curtis Watkins got his fourth foul."

Watkins, who fouled out with 7:24 left in regulation, had 10 rebounds when he was tagged with his fourth foul and Meyer said that was when the Quakers started their big comeback.

Meyer was asked if he liked the idea of the consolation game. "Well, it fills in a lot of time," he said. "It's hard for the boys to play it, but it's a thing we have to do."

Garland said he didn't think the game was over when DePaul jumped far in front. "They had a lot to prove after (losing to) Michigan State (101-67). . . They were a much better team than they showed (against the Spartans)."

City Residents Harassed By Burglaries

Burglars and thieves plagued city residents and businesses Sunday, making off with thousands of dollars of property.

Kenneth Lagreca of 2405 Fifth St. said he returned home about 5 p.m. Sunday to discover his place burglarized and $5,500 in household appliances and clothes gone.

Mark Marrs, Edward Pahl Watson and Steven Keith Colburn, all of 2807 Second Place, said they returned home Saturday to find that thieves had taken $2,000 worth of household goods from their residence.

William D. Holder, owner of a business at 2905 Texas Ave., said someone removed $1,192 worth of tools from his place sometime between 9 a.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday.

Stereo equipment and clocks, totaling $1,558, were taken from Robert Jason Moore's 201 Indiana Ave. residence sometime between Friday afternoon and 7 p.m. Sunday, according to reports.

Joe C. Harrington of 4617 Fifth St. said he lost $1,125 in tools to thieves sometime between 2 p.m. and 10:20 p.m. Sunday.

Buford Gregory of 3305 56th St. said his and his wife's golf equipment, valued at $1,110, was stolen between 5:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sunday.

He told police the gear was in the back of his golf cart, which was parked on a trailer in front of a city country club.

Alvin Clevenger told officers someone took $1,006 worth of goods, including a CB radio and tools, from his car, which was parked at 1611 N. University Ave., sometime between 4:30 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday.

Paul Foster Allen of 1886-B Seventh St. returned home Monday to discover burglars had carted off $725 worth of property from his place, including tools and a flute. Allen said he had been gone for about a week.

Armando Garcia, assistant principal for Wolfforth Elementary School, reported that $400 worth of film and stereo equipment had been taken from the school sometime between March 16 and Monday.

Lubbock police Sunday received a tip that led to the confiscation of six pounds of what appears to be marijuana. Three persons were arrested on charges ranging from theft to possession with intent to sell marijuana.

After an informant reported purchasing a quantity of marijuana from the trio in a house on East Cornell Street, police observed about 25 persons ring the front bell and enter the house for five-minute periods.

Police reported they then obtained a search warrant that led to the discovery of the "green substance," most of which was on the kitchen table.

Several television sets and telephones, believed to be stolen, were also found in the house, police said.

The substance believed to be marijuana has been sent to the Department of Public Safety laboratory in Austin for identification.

Rights Agency Measure Urged

AUSTIN (AP) — The sticky "molasses of federal bureaucracy" no longer would frustrate Texans involved in discrimination complaints if the state had its own human rights commission, a House committee heard Monday.

The House State Affairs Committee sent a bill creating a Texas Commission on Human Rights to a subcommittee for more study after hearing an hour's testimony.

"We feel very strongly that the state of Texas, in creating this commission, would be limiting the power of the federal government. The state of Texas should take the leadership instead of having to abide by decisions from outside," said Rep. Reby Cary, D-Fort Worth.

Cary's bill would establish a nine-member commission to enforce laws against discrimination in employment, housing and public accommodations.

Federal agencies must yield their jurisdiction when a state or city has its own civil rights agency.

Commission duties would include helping create local human rights agencies, which would have first-hand authority to resolve civil rights complaints.

Bill Hale, executive director of the Fort Worth Human Relations Commission, said Cary's bill would cut through the "molasses of federal bureaucracy and federal red tape in the area of civil rights."

State and local agencies would deal with civil rights complaints instead of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Justice Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Hale said.

He said the EEOC provides money when a state or local agency handles job discrimination complaints in its place.

While a complaint still could reach the EEOC, that agency must give "substantial weight" to the state or local finding, Hale said. The EEOC has upheld the Fort Worth commission 97 percent of the time, he said.

David Chappell of Fort Worth, a corporate lawyer and chairman of the American Bar Association's Young Lawyers Division, said a cooler emotional climate occurs when job complaints are heard locally.

A businessman, he said, "is no longer a hero in the community for taking on the federal government" when he deals with a local commission instead of the Washington bureaucracy.

Larry Spencer, executive director of the Houston Council on Human Rights, said it takes the EEOC at least 1½ to 2 years to decide complaints.

"Those whose rights are abused and those who are unjustly accused deserve speedier action, at the state level," Spencer said.
