A boatload of Haitians awaits detention in Miami harbor after making the 800-mile voyage through the Caribbean.

Inside Haiti: all the poverty and the vigor

By MARJ CARPENTER
PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI — Intense heat poured down on the main street of this capital city which teems with blacks going about the hourly routine of trying to survive.

Pushing into the marketplace where they hoped to sell, barter, beg or even steal enough to stay alive for one more day were all ages and sizes of Haitians.

A gentle people, violence is outside their nature — but desperation seems to be the main emotion in those hot, dirty, stinking streets. Sewage runs openly in little channels down the streets and is used by some for water.

The markets include every type of food and fare still available in a land which has so much drought and soil erosion that anything edible will immediately be eaten or bartered. Similar to some communities in Africa, the clan gathers in the evening to pool whatever they have been able to obtain that day in the way of food.

Water is also precious and everywhere can be seen children and women walking with cans, buckets, or gourds of water on their head as they walk down rough rocky trails without spilling a drop.

Cruise ships have decided to quit stopping at this former Caribbean tourist town because their passengers come back to the ship upset over the filth and poverty. The decline of tourists makes the natives even more desperate and when a tourist walks into their market, they clutch and plead and try to hold them back until they have at least looked at their wares.

The items they sell are beautiful, and some are made from a fast depleting supply of mahogany which has nearly disappeared since the days Columbus stopped on the isle and called it Hispaniola.

There are also baskets, iron-works and embroidery. But there aren't many customers. This reporter walked in thinking it would be like a market along the Mexican border, but soon realized the desperation of the Haitian situation.

Aisles are narrow and dust pours up and the people bodily pull and tug, and plead with their eyes and voices with phrases such as "Mamma — please — look at how pretty — three for one dollar — help me — no, no, don't leave. Please, you must look."

One hand pulling me back tore open the flesh on my arm and suddenly I was sweating, bleeding, gasping for breath in the dust. As I escaped into the light, one last pleading face of a woman held out an item pleading, "Please ... please help me. One dollar." Hurriedly buying the item — any item — and reaching the street, I stood crying in the sunlight.

Haiti, the second republic formed in the Western hemisphere since 1804, is in trouble. This is becoming common knowledge in the United States where we are suddenly faced with the problem of Haiti's refugees.

It doesn't take much of a visit here to reach the conclusion that if caught in the trap of the squalor and poverty, the first inclination ought to be to make a handmade dugout and paddle out with your bare hands for oars.

The problem is not particularly political, although a different kind of leadership might work out some of the problems. The problem is economical. The people do not appear to be angry, only desperate. Their nature is gentle and their history is despairing and they seem to accept hardship — but faced with starvation, they set out for something better.

Certainly it is of little help to the people that President Francois Duvalier, referred to as "Papa Doc," proclaimed himself a president for life back in 1957. When he died 10 years ago, power was turned over to his son, called "Baby Doc" (which often comes out sounding like "Baby Duck" when the natives roll it out in Creole).

"Baby Duck" recently married and his wife is envisioned by some as a potential Eva Peron to be loved by the people. However, she is quick to claim that she comes from "a better family than Eva." The public seems to approve of her, although putting up street signs has been her major project thus far.

Some sugarcane and bananas are grown, but nothing in comparison to what used to be grown on the plantation before the land was depleted. Industries include a baseball factory and a brasserie factory (of all things), but they are a drop in the bucket in meeting the need for employment.

Many churches and agencies swarm the country, trying to help with nobody sure as to what constitutes help. Evangelists face the superstition of Voodoo, which in many cases is what keeps the natives going. They consider the god Loa all-powerful and mix Voodoo with what they know of Christianity into one big religion.

The U.S. Presbyterian Church and the Episcopal Church of Haiti have combined to build a hospital at Leogane which is constantly full and serves to treat the sick, deliver babies, try to help children starving of malnutrition and patch back together the people killed and maimed on the few roads in that country.

Everybody drives like a maniac. There is no highway patrol, no speed limits, only two-lane roads and "tap taps" that stop any and everywhere.

"Tap taps" are panel trucks painted gaily with bright paint and religious slogans like "Foi de Job" (Faith of Job). It takes faith to ride those highways. Missionary vehicles have been struck and sideswiped, but are used as long as they will drive. There are an average of three fatalities a day in the 10-mile stretch between Leogane and Port-au-Prince.

The reason the trucks are called "tap taps" is because the rider inside taps on the ceiling with his knuckles when he wants to stop. The "tap tap" stops immediately, no matter who is coming along behind.

The roads are mostly ones constructed by the U.S. Marines during their long stay from 1915 through World War II. Haiti, incidentally, was the first country behind the United States to declare war on the Axis powers right after Pearl Harbor.

The Presbyterian Church, in addition to the hospital, has an agriculturist named Lynn Coultas who attempts to show the Haitians how to grow vegetables. Coultas said that when he brings vegetables produced into market, a swarm of people have brought them all before he can unload the truck.

Haitians who have fled and hope to eventually send help back to their families are certainly serious when they say they would rather die than go back.

Immigration could snag border governor talks

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan's proposed immigration reform policy is expected to be the most controversial topic among governors from four American and six Mexican states who meet here Monday and Tuesday.

They'll be here for the second Border Governors Conference to exchange ideas and recommend policy on a variety of issues affecting the U.S.-Mexican border. The historic first meeting of the governors was last June in neighboring Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Most of the recommendations and resolutions to be churned out already have been approved by the 10 governors and are to be formally accepted and signed during the meeting.

But representatives of the American governors say there could be fireworks in private discussions concerning immigration and undocumented alien workers.

"It's going to be the main issue," said Jim West, press secretary for Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona. "That's going to impact every other aspect of what's being talked about. If no agreement can be reached on (that issue), it may all go out the window."

Reagan has proposed a guest worker program that would allow thousands of Mexican workers to enter the United States to hold temporary jobs. He also has proposed "legalization" opportunities for illegal aliens who have been living in the United States and fines for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

West said Babbitt "has some problems with nearly every area" of the Reagan plan and will oppose it in discussions Tuesday.

Gov. Bill Clements of Texas, who initially opposed the Reagan plan but now says he supports it in concept, is not satisfied with all of the details. Some officials have said Clements is expected to bring immigration proposals of his own.

"Gov. Clements has been very interested in that issue and may come in with something," said Rich Juarez, California Gov. Jerry Brown's spokesman on the conference. "They may be very heavy on that one."

New Mexico Gov. Bruce King has said he will try to convince the other three governors to take a unified position on the Reagan plan. His state's Border Commission has recommended that he oppose the plan.

The governors' discussion of immigration problems will be behind closed doors as will their talks on technical exchanges and mutual border problems.

Rick Montoya of Clement's Department of Regional Development said drug trafficking and recovery of stolen property also are expected to be discussed although those issues are not on the public agenda.

King's director of the Department of Finance and Administration, Kay Marr, said she also expected the governors to discuss a wide range of social programs and natural resource management plans because of the anticipated booming growth of the border region.

"It's supposed to be pretty free-flowing," Juarez said.

The Mexican governors scheduled to attend are Oscar Ornelas of Chihuahua, Samuel Ocana Garcia of Sonora, Emilio Martinez Manautou of Tamaulipas, Alfonso Martinez Dominguez of Nuevo Leon, Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California and interim Gov. Francisco Madero of Coahuila. Madero recently replaced Oscar Flores Tapia, who resigned pending a government investigation.

The state heads will be joined in the closed sessions by a few aides and federal officials from both sides of the border.

The governors will meet Monday in public to hear from committees that have worked on border issues since last year's meeting.

They will report on agriculture, cultural exchange, ecology and pollution, energy and commerce, twin plants and industrial development and tourism.

Committees from both sides of the border worked on reports until they were mutually acceptable by all.

"Getting representatives of four states to agree to anything and then getting the six Mexican states to agree to them is a big job," said Augie Garcia, Babbitt's committee representative.

"You have to go through a lot of sorting out. The fact that we can reach an accord on a list of things tells you something about the process."

California's Juarez said the acceptance of the committee recommendations by the governors is virtually assured in advance.

"There are no real problems with any of them," Juarez said.

"There may be some issues that pop up that are controversial. But we had Cabinet-level people working on these and they weren't going to let anything in that they thought would be controversial."

Montoya of Texas said the proposals were being kept under wraps until the conference began because "it wouldn't be fair to the committee chairmen to release them."

But other state officials said most call for formation of permanent committees to coordinate efforts by both countries.

On the ecology question, for example, the recommendation is for establishment of a binational committee to coordinate pollution control measures and research on both sides of the border, Juarez said.

Another example is the agriculture committee, which recommended formation of a permanent committee to foster agriculture.

EPA declines to revoke state's pesticide powers

AUSTIN — The Environmental Protection Agency won't revoke the Texas Department of Agriculture's authority to regulate pesticides as demanded by a coalition of environmental and worker groups, an official of the federal agency said.

The coalition, which filed a complaint including more than 30 affidavits with the Environmental Protection Agency and the governor's office last week, says farm workers are suffering from pesticide poisoning because of negligent regulation.

"Sometimes the pesticide will be fresh and we will get the droplets, like dew, on our skin," said Josefina Castillo in an affidavit. "This makes your skin itch and irritates your eyes. Some days it will make you very sick."

But Andy Anderson, chief of the pesticide section in the Dallas regional Environmental Protection Agency office, said there's no one else to do the job.

Action/reaction: Closed meetings

Q. Are the minutes of a closed executive school board meeting open to the tax paying public? And for what reasons would a school board even have a closed meeting?

A. Lynn Hise, superintendent of the Big Spring Independent School District, said to his knowledge, minutes of closed executive sessions are not open to the public. "I know legislation was introduced" recently concerning the minutes of closed sessions, said Hise, but "I have not been notified that it has been changed."

Hise explained that school boards are allowed executive sessions under Article 6252-17 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas. Items discussed in the executive sessions include consultations with attorneys over pending litigation, discussions about the purchases or sales of real properties, and meetings about the appointment or dismissal of school personnel.

Also the discipline of public school children, and the deployment of security personnel or devices may also be discussed in executive session.

A look at Proposition 6 on November ballot

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cities want you to vote in next month's election for sizeable homestead exemptions from property taxes, but the teachers union and some business leaders are waving red flags.

Three constitutional amendments affecting property taxes are on the Nov. 3 constitutional amendments ballot, and Proposition 6 probably will get the most attention.

Proposition 6 allows city councils, school boards and other local governments to exempt from property taxes up to 40 percent of the market value of owner-occupied homes in 1982-84, 30 percent in 1985-87 and 20 percent after 1987. The minimum exemption would be $5,000, in addition to the $5,000 write-off given by the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment. The Legislature, which meets next in 1983, could impose a ceiling on exemptions.

Cities, fearing a taxpayer revolt, want Proposition 6 to pass, but the Texas Federation of Teachers and a leader of the Texas Association of Business are among its opponents.

"It's the cities with a defective tax roll that will need Proposition 6 to prevent a shift of taxes from businesses to homes," said Dick Brown, executive director of the Texas Municipal League.

"It benefits the rich. ... We will lose a great deal of school revenue because of this thing," said June Karp, legislative director of the teachers' union, which plans to announce its opposition at a news conference Monday.

Gerald Dorsey, general counsel and vice president of the Texas Association of Business, said his organization has no official position but "I think we'd be a little opposed to it" because of its potential for higher taxes on commercial property.

The idea behind Proposition 6 is to soften the blow that homeowners in some areas will feel when their property is reappraised after the new Property Tax Code or "Peveto Bill" takes full effect on Jan. 1, 1982.

When legislators passed the "Peveto Bill" in 1979, it was widely assumed that business, commercial and oil property was undervalued and that homeowners were paying more than their fair share of taxes.

But some cities reappraised property in 1980 and found homes were seriously undervalued for taxation while commercial property values were relatively up-to-date.

The result was a "shift" in taxes from business property to homes. The State Property Tax Board estimates

Fed is blamed for penny shortage

DALLAS (AP) — Bank officials said Wednesday the current penny shortage makes no sense, since about 70 percent of all U.S. coin production is in the copper coins.

But banks have limited the number of pennies that can be purchased by smaller customers, because the Federal Reserve Bank is not delivering enough coins to meet demand.

"It's hard to conceive where the devil these things go," a Federal Reserve Bank official said, "and it's hard to understand why there's a crunch." A spokesman for the Dallas branch of the Federal Reserve Bank said September's delivery of pennies was only $408,000. That amount must be distributed among more than 500 banks.

The Fed, local banks and businesses blame hoarding for the penny crunch.

Retail store owners have posted signs asking customers for their pennies. Cash register operators now take the extra time needed to ask customers for the odd cents involved in purchases. A Fed spokesman said a reserve store of pennies has been depleted and, for the past several months, one-cent pieces have been shipped to reserve banks as quickly as they are minted.

Four are indicted in arson scheme

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted three Amarillo businessmen and a Houston man in an alleged arson-for-profit scheme.

The indictment, handed down Thursday, accuses the men of plotting to torch buildings, then filing fraudulent insurance claims for the contents.

Named in the multiple-count indictment were Sidney James Heard, Rodney Leland Horne, and William K. Lankford of Amarillo, and William M. Anderson of Houston.

Heard and Horne are accused of submitting a claim of $41,350 to Lloyd's of London and Great Southwestern Insurance Co. for the contents of a Clovis, N.M. building destroyed by fire in 1977. The indictment charges the actual value of the building's contents was $6,000.

In another count, Heard is charged with trying to collect $28,000 from Aetna Life and Casualty on the contents of a Lubbock building destroyed by fire in 1977. The actual value of the contents was $6,000, the indictment said.

Heard and Anderson are accused of burning a building in Amarillo in 1978, then trying to collect $41,413.90 from Home Insurance Co. on contents allegedly worth only $6,000.

Lankford and Heard were charged with trying to defraud St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance using a similar alleged scheme involving a building in Breckinridge.

Heard and Lankford previously were indicted with two other men in an alleged plot to manufacture and pass counterfeit South African Kruggerands.

Lankford is scheduled to stand trial in that case on October 13.

The improvements to the water distribution system will be bid in three parts. The Base Bid covers work which will definitely be included in this Contract. Alternates A and B deal with replacing certain water lines in the easements behind the residences or in the streets respectively. One of the alternates will be included with the Base Bid. Additive Alternates are provided to make up the difference between the Base Bid and the funds available. None, all or any combination of the Additive Alternates may be added to the Base Bid.
A Pre-Bid Conference will be held in the Council Chambers, City Hall, Big Spring, Texas at 10:00 P.M., October 13, 1981.
Bidders must submit a Cashier's or Certified Check issued by a bank satisfactory to the Owner, or a Proposal Bond from a reliable Surety Company, payable without recourse to the order of the City of Big Spring, Texas, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible bid submitted as a guarantee that the Bidder will enter into a contract and execute bonds and guaranty in the forms provided within ten (10) days after notice of award of contract to him. Bids without the required check or Proposal Bond will not be considered.
The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond, each in the amount of the contract, written by a reliable Surety Company, authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 1560, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.
The City of Big Spring, Texas reserves the right to hold all proposals for a period not to exceed 30 days after the date of receiving bids, to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. No bids may be withdrawn, after having been opened, within the 30 day period set out herein.
Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.
Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Secretary, Big Spring, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79402 (Phone 806-742-0141) upon payment of $25.00 deposit for each set of documents. Refund of the deposit will be made as provided in the INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS.
Copies of the plans, specifications, and contract documents may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79402 (Phone 806-742-0141) upon payment of $25.00 deposit for each set of documents. Refund of the deposit will be made as provided in the INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS.
A provision is made for the fact that there may be paid on the project not less than the general prevailing rates of wages as set out in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS. However, the inclusion of such minimum schedule of wages does not release the Contractor from compliance with any State Wage Law that may be applicable. The Contractor must abide by the Wage and Hour Laws of the State of Texas and must pay not less than the rates legally prescribed or as set forth in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS, whichever is higher.

A boatload of Haitians awaits detention in Miami harbor after making the 900-mile voyage through the Caribbean.

Inside Haiti: all the poverty and the vigor

By MARJ CARPENTER

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI — Intense heat poured down on the main street of this capital city which teems with blacks going about the hourly routine of trying to survive.

Pushing into the marketplace where they hoped to sell, barter, beg or even steal enough to stay alive for one more day were all ages and sizes of Haitians.

A gentle people, violence is outside their nature — but desperation seems to be the main emotion in those hot, dirty, stinking streets. Sewage runs openly in little channels down the streets and is used by some for water.

The markets include every type of food and fare still available in a land which has so much drought and soil erosion that anything edible will immediately be eaten or bartered. Similar to some communities in Africa, the clan gathers in the evening to pool whatever they have been able to obtain that day in the way of food.

Water is also precious and everywhere can be seen children and women walking with cans, buckets, or gourds of water on their head as they walk down rough, rocky trails without spilling a drop.

Cruise ships have decided to quit stopping at this former Caribbean tourist town because their passengers come back to the ship upset over the filth and poverty. The decline of tourists makes the natives even more desperate and when a tourist walks into their market, they clutch and plead and try to hold them back until they have at least looked at their wares.

The items they sell are beautiful, and some are made from a fast depleting supply of mahogany which has nearly disappeared since the days Columbus stopped on the island and called it Hispaniola.

There are also baskets, iron-works and embroidery. But there aren't many customers. This reporter walked in thinking it would be like a market along the Mexican border, but soon realized the desperation of the Haitian situation.

Aisles are narrow and dust pours up and the people bodily pull and tug, and plead with their eyes and voices with phrases such as "Mamma — please — look at how pretty — three for one dollar — help me — no, no, don't leave. Please, you must look."

One hand pulling me back tore open the flesh on my arm and suddenly I was sweating, bleeding, gasping for breath in the dust. As I escaped into the light, one last pleading face of a woman held out an item pleading, "Please — please help me. One dollar." Hurriedly buying the item — any item — and reaching the street, I stood crying in the sunlight.

Haiti, the second republic formed in the Western hemisphere since 1804, is in trouble. This is becoming common knowledge in the United States where we are suddenly faced with the problem of Haiti's refugees.

It doesn't take much of a visit here to reach the conclusion that if caught in the trap of the squalor and poverty, the first inclination ought to be to make a handmade dugout and paddle out with your bare hands for oars.

The problem is not particularly political, although a different kind of leadership might work out some of the problems. The problem is economical. The people do not appear to be angry, only desperate. Their nature is gentle and their history is despairing and they seem to accept hardship — but faced with starvation, they set out for something better.

Certainly it is of little help to the people that President Francois Duvalier, referred to as "Papa Doc," proclaimed himself a president for life back in 1957. When he died 10 years ago, power was turned over to his son, called "Baby Doc" (which often comes out sounding like "Baby Duck" when the natives roll it out in Creole).

"Baby Duck" recently married and his wife is envisioned by some as a potential Eva Peron to be loved by the people. However, she is quick to claim that she comes from "a better family than Eva." The public seems to approve of her, although putting up street signs has been her major project thus far.

Some sugarcane and bananas are grown, but nothing in comparison to what used to be grown on the plantation before the land was depleted. Industries include a baseball factory and a brasserie factory (of all things), but they are a drop in the bucket in meeting the need for employment.

Many churches and agencies swarm the country, trying to help with nobody sure as to what constitutes help. Evangelists face the superstition of Voodoo, which in many cases is what keeps the natives going. They consider the god Loa all-powerful and mix Voodoo with what they know of Christianity into one big religion.

The U.S. Presbyterian Church and the Episcopal Church of Haiti have combined to build a hospital at Leogane which is constantly full and serves to treat the sick, deliver babies, try to help children starve of malnutrition and patch back together the people killed and maimed on the few roads in that country.

Everybody drives like a maniac. There is no highway patrol, no speed limits, only two-lane roads and "tap taps" that stop any and everywhere.

"Tap taps" are panel trucks painted gaily with bright paint and religious slogans like "Foi de Job" (Faith of Job). It takes faith to ride those highways. Missionary vehicles have been struck and sideswiped, but are used as long as they will drive. There are an average of three fatalities a day in the 10-mile stretch between Leogane and Port-au-Prince.

The reason the trucks are called "tap taps" is because the rider inside taps on the ceiling with his knuckles when he wants to stop. The "tap tap" stops immediately, no matter who is coming along behind.

The roads are mostly ones constructed by the U.S. Marines during their long stay from 1915 through World War II. Haiti, incidentally, was the first country behind the United States to declare war on the Axis powers right after Pearl Harbor.

The Presbyterian Church, in addition to the hospital, has an agriculturist named Lynn Coultas who attempts to show the Haitians how to grow vegetables. Coultas said that when he brings vegetables produced into market, a swarm of people have brought them all before he can unload the truck.

Haitians who have fled and hope to eventually send help back to their families are certainly serious when they say they would rather die than go back.

Immigration could snag border governor talks

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan's proposed immigration reform policy is expected to be the most controversial topic among governors from four American and six Mexican states who meet here Monday and Tuesday.

They'll be here for the second Border Governors Conference to exchange ideas and recommend policy on a variety of issues affecting the U.S.-Mexican border. The historic first meeting of the governors was last June in neighboring Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Most of the recommendations and resolutions to be turned out already have been approved by the 10 governors and are to be formally accepted and signed during the meeting.

But representatives of the American governors say there could be fireworks.

In private discussions concerning immigration and undocumented alien workers.

"It's going to be the main issue," said Jim West, press secretary for Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona. "That's going to impact every other aspect of what's being talked about. If no agreement can be reached on (that issue), it may all go out the window."

Reagan has proposed a guest worker program that would allow thousands of Mexican workers to enter the United States to hold temporary jobs. He also has proposed "legalization" opportunities for illegal aliens who have been living in the United States and fines for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

West said Babbitt "has some problems with nearly every area" of the Reagan plan and will oppose it in discussions Tuesday.

Gov. Bill Clements of Texas, who initially opposed the Reagan plan but now says he supports it in concept, is not satisfied with all of the details. Some officials have said Clements is expected to bring immigration proposals of his own.

"Gov. Clements has been very interested in that issue and may come in with something," said Rich Juarez, California Gov. Jerry Brown's spokesman on the conference. "They may be very heavy on that one."

New Mexico Gov. Bruce King has said he will try to convince the other three governors to take a unified position on the Reagan plan. His state's Border Commission has recommended that he oppose the plan.

The governors' discussion of immigration problems will be behind closed doors as will their talks on technical exchanges and mutual border problems.

Rick Montoya of Clements' Department of Regional Development said drug trafficking and recovery of stolen property also are expected to be discussed although those issues are not on the public agenda.

King's director of the Department of Finance and Administration, Kay Marr, said she also expected the governors to discuss a wide range of social programs and natural resource management plans because of the anticipated booming growth of the border region.

"It's supposed to be pretty free-flowing," Juarez said.

The Mexican governors scheduled to attend are Oscar Ornelas of Chihuahua, Samuel Ocana Garcia of Sonora, Emilio Martinez Manautou of Tamaulipas, Alfonso Martinez Dominguez of Nuevo Leon, Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California and interim Gov. Francisco Madero of Coahuila. Madero recently replaced Oscar Flores Tapia, who resigned pending a government investigation.

The state heads will be joined in the closed sessions by a few aides and federal officials from both sides of the border.

The governors will meet Monday in public to hear from committees that have worked on border issues since last year's meeting.

They will report on agriculture, cultural exchange, ecology and pollution, energy and commerce, twin plants and industrial development and tourism.

Committees from both sides of the border worked on reports until they were mutually acceptable by all.

"Getting representatives of four states to agree to anything and then getting the six Mexican states to agree to them is a big job," said Augie Garcia, Babbitt's committee representative.

"You have to go through a lot of sorting out. The fact that we can reach an accord on a list of things tells you something about the process."

California's Juarez said the acceptance of the committee recommendations by the governors is virtually assured in advance.

"There are no real problems with any of them," Juarez said.

"There may be some issues that pop up that are controversial. But we had Cabinet-level people working on these and they weren't going to let anything in that they thought would be controversial."

Montoya of Texas said the proposals were being kept under wraps until the conference began because "it wouldn't be fair to the committee chairmen to release them."

But other state officials said most call for formation of permanent committees to coordinate efforts by both countries.

On the ecology question, for example, the recommendation is for establishment of a binational committee to coordinate pollution control measures and research on both sides of the border, Juarez said.

Another example is the agriculture committee, which recommended formation of a permanent committee to foster agriculture.

EPA declines to revoke state's pesticide powers

AUSTIN — The Environmental Protection Agency won't revoke the Texas Department of Agriculture's authority to regulate pesticides as demanded by a coalition of environmental and worker groups, an official of the federal agency said.

The coalition, which filed a complaint including more than 30 affidavits with the Environmental Protection Agency and the governor's office last week, says farm workers are suffering from pesticide poisoning because of negligent regulation.

"Sometimes the pesticide will be fresh and we will get the droplets, like dew, on our skin," said Josefina Castillo in an affidavit. "This makes your skin itch and irritates your eyes. Some days it will make you very sick."

But Andy Anderson, chief of the pesticide section in the Dallas regional Environmental Protection Agency office, said there's no one else to do the job.

Action/reaction: Closed meetings

Q. Are the minutes of a closed executive school board meeting open to the tax paying public? And for what reasons would a school board even have a closed meeting?

A. Lynn Hise, superintendent of the Big Spring Independent School District, said to his knowledge, minutes of closed executive sessions are not open to the public. "I know legislation was introduced" recently concerning the minutes of closed sessions, said Hise, but "I have not been notified that it has been changed."

Hise explained that school boards are allowed executive sessions under Article 6252-17 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas. Items discussed in the executive sessions include consultations with attorneys over pending litigation, discussions about the purchases or sales of real properties, and meetings about the appointment or dismissal of school personnel.

Also the discipline of public school children, and the deployment of security personnel or devices may also be discussed in executive session.

A look at Proposition 6 on November ballot

By LEE JONES

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cities want you to vote in next month's election for sizeable homestead exemptions from property taxes, but the teachers union and some business leaders are waving red flags.

Three constitutional amendments affecting property taxes are on the Nov. 3 constitutional amendments ballot, and Proposition 6 probably will get the most attention.

Proposition 6 allows city councils, school boards and other local governments to exempt from property taxes up to 40 percent of the market value of owner-occupied homes in 1982-84, 30 percent in 1985-87 and 20 percent after 1987. The minimum exemption would be $5,000, in addition to the $5,000 write-off given by the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment. The Legislature, which meets next in 1983, could impose a ceiling on exemptions.

Cities, fearing a taxpayer revolt, want Proposition 6 to pass, but the Texas Federation of Teachers and a leader of the Texas Association of Business are among its opponents.

"It's the cities with a defective tax roll that will need Proposition 6 to prevent a shift of taxes from businesses to homes," said Dick Brown, executive director of the Texas Municipal League.

"It benefits the rich. ... We will lose a great deal of school revenue because of this thing," said June Karp, legislative director of the teachers' union, which plans to announce its opposition at a news conference Monday.

Gerald Dorsey, general counsel and vice president of the Texas Association of Business, said his organization has no official position but "I think we'd be a little opposed to it" because of its potential for higher taxes on commercial property.

The idea behind Proposition 6 is to soften the blow that homeowners in some areas will feel when their property is reappraised after the new Property Tax Code or "Peveto Bill" takes full effect on Jan. 1, 1982.

When legislators passed the "Peveto Bill" in 1979, it was widely assumed that business, commercial and oil property was undervalued and that homeowners were paying more than their fair share of taxes.

But some cities reappraised property in 1980 and found homes were seriously undervalued for taxation while commercial property values were relatively up-to-date.

The result was a "shift" in taxes from business property to homes. The State Property Tax Board estimates

IRA calls off hunger strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The IRA called off its hunger strike at the Maze prison Saturday after a seven-month fast that left 10 dead, relatives of the living in revolt and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government firmly in control. The guerrillas accused the Catholic Church of betrayal.

Seven fasters gave up in recent months, five after relatives stepped in and two on medical grounds. A month ago, the Irish National Liberation Army dropped out of the protest, citing British "intransigence," and relatives of five of the six remaining fasters said Friday they would not let them die.

Father Denis Paul, an assistant Roman Catholic chaplain at the Maze who met with the families, said the relatives no longer were willing to stand by and allow more deaths. "Who wants to be the last to die?" he said.

Americans see war coming

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of three Americans believe it is likely the United States will become involved in a war during the next few years, the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

The nationwide poll of 1,601 adults, contacted by telephone last Monday and Tuesday in a scientific random sampling, also said the American public opposes a U.S. military response even if the Soviet Union intervenes militarily in Poland.

And while a large majority of respondents said the Soviet Union matches or surpasses the United States in military strength, President Reagan maintained his approval ratings for both his foreign policy and for his dealings with the Soviet government.

The poll said 68 percent believe it is either very likely or somewhat likely that the United States will become involved in a war during the next few years.

In answer to the same question on AP-NBC News polls earlier this year, 57 percent in August and 59 percent in February said American involvement in a war is likely in the next few years.

SAT scores dip ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — Educators say tougher standards, a change in students' attitudes and even the graduation of the last of the baby-boom generation all may be working together to spark a turnaround in the nation's high schools after years of decline.

The latest sign was in the College Board's announcement last week that for the first time since 1968, the Scholastic Aptitude Test scores of college-bound high school seniors did not decline.

The nearly 1 million students in the Class of 1981 averaged 424 on the verbal SAT and 466 on math, the same as the class of 1980. It is still a long way from the 478 verbal and 502 math national averages in 1963, when the decline began.

"I have a hope bound up in some very encouraging signs around the country that there will be gains in the SAT scores," said Robert G. Cameron, executive director of research and development for the College Board in New York.

"There is a trend among students to be more serious about learning," and more willing to submit themselves to adults' judgment about what they should study, Cameron said.

A voluntary questionnaire given to the nearly 1 million seniors who take the test each year found that in the past four years, students have been taking slightly more academic courses. They now average more than four academic courses per year, compared to less than four in 1977, and the extra course more frequently was in math or the physical sciences.

Hinckley likes Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., accused of trying to kill President Reagan, thinks Reagan "is the best president we've had this century," Newsweek magazine reported Saturday.

Hinckley's comments were made in an exchange of letters with the magazine. He wrote it on Sept. 3, offering to respond to a "typewritten list of 20 questions, none dealing directly with my case," the magazine said in a news release.

He responded to the questions two weeks later, and the results will be published in the Oct. 12 issue. Newsweek said it did not pay Hinckley.

Newsweek said that after his final answer, Hinckley scribbled a marriage proposal to actress Jodie Foster. It has been claimed he assaulted Reagan because she rejected his attentions.

In a preview of its story, Newsweek released the answers Hinckley provided to seven questions. Hinckley's answers included the information that:

—He does not admire any political leaders "except, perhaps, Mr. Reagan. The only person I ever idolized throughout my life was John Lennon, and look what happened to him."

—He believes in gun control.

—"Most assassins are disillusioned with everything, most of all politics. The ideology of the target doesn't matter. Politics has nothing to do with political assassinations in America."

—"After seeing enough hypnotizing movies and reading enough magical books, a fantasy life develops, which can either be harmless or quite dangerous."

—"Watching too much television can cause numerous social disorders... It is not a good way to pass time because, once again, a fantasy world tends to develop the longer a person stays in front of the tube."

—He is attracted to Miss Foster's "sweetness and innocence." He said her intelligence formerly scared him, but "now I think we are equal and compatible."

Hinckley is being held in the Fort Meade, Md., stockade awaiting trial for the March 30 assassination attempt.

Israeli-U.S. tensions

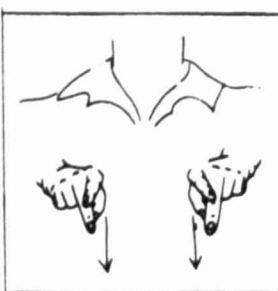

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel faces an inevitable strain in relations with Washington this month as the Reagan administration urges Congress to approve the AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia.

"The entire sale represents a no-win situation for Israel," the Jerusalem Post correspondent in Washington, Wolf Blitzer, wrote recently — a gloomy analysis widely believed in Israel.

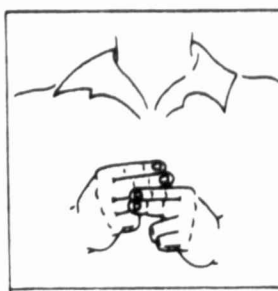

According to the analysis, Israel's security will be harmed if the United States completes the $8.5 billion sale of AWACS radar planes and offensive equipment for F-15 jets to the Saudis, and if Congress vetoes the sale President Reagan will blame Israel for sabotaging an attempt to protect the vital Saudi oil fields.

Congress has until the end of the month to act on the deal — known as the AWACS package after the Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes that are the centerpiece of the sale.

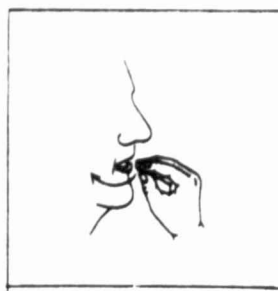

Reagan, trying to win over the majority in the Senate opposing the deal, said at his Thursday news conference that the arms package would enhance America's "vital national security interests in the Middle East."

SIGN LANGUAGE REVIEW

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

Here's a short review on the signs we featured in the Herald last week. We are running this feature to help you communicate with the deaf here in Big Spring because of the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

First is "person," formed with the "P" hands drawing downward in front of the body. This sign reflects the outline of another person's body.

Next, the sign for "name," formed by placing the middle finger of the right "H" sign across the index finger of the left "H" sign, as shown in the illustration. This sign reflects the "X" which represents the spot to write your name.

Now sign "home," as pictured here. Home is signed using the "and" sign. To form "and," touch the thumb and fingers together. Take the "and" sign and place it to your mouth, then to your cheek. The sign for home reflects the place where you eat (the hand to your mouth) and the place where you sleep (the hand to your cheek).

"Work" is illustrated next. To sign "work," bring the right "S" sign facing down on the left wrist of the left "S" sign. This originally pictured the activity of the hands.

And, finally, "school." To form the word school, clap the hands twice. The origins of this sign reflect a teacher clapping her hands for attention in a classroom, or a schoolbook being slammed shut.

Now for a review on some signing tips. Always remember that sign language is very visible. Facial expressions are important in getting the meaning across. If you're signing a question, remember to have a questioning look on your face, instead of a somber stare.

Most sign language manuals discriminate against left-handed signers, by printing the signs as a right-handed person would sign them. But if you're a lefty, don't despair. Just remember to reverse the signs, and you'll be doing fine.

Novice signers should be patient with themselves, and should remember that practice is the key to better signing. We've discovered many people in Big Spring who are sign experts are very patient with those of us who are just beginning. If you think you can sign what you want to communicate, then try.

And, finally, when finger-spelling or signing, remember to hold your hands in front of the chest in a comfortable spot. Bidders take a look at some of the surplus items sold by the city of Big Spring in its annual auction held yesterday.

Industrial Park. City officials estimate about 300 persons showed up to bid on motor vehicles and other items.

Bidders turn out for city auction

Approximately 300 bidders converged on the city of Big Spring's annual auction which was held yesterday in the Industrial Park. The buyers were able to choose from a variety of items including city vehicles, earth moving equipment, electronic gadgetry, stoves, heaters, desks, chairs, pianos, medical equipment and assorted junk.

Dub Bryant's Auction Co. handled the auction with a staff of four and kept the crowd buzzing with excitement with each new item that came up for bid. The auction started at 10 a.m. and continued on until about 5 p.m.

City Finance Director Tom Ferguson said of the auction, "It looked like we had a pretty good crowd and things were selling pretty good considering what we had to sell."

Ferguson said the proceeds from the auction would go into a general fund and an airport fund for maintenance and general expenses. He said it would be Monday before he would have the tallied results from Dub Bryant.

Also sold were a few items from the Big Spring Independent School District and Howard County Junior College.

Mitchell County Fair: some learnin', some fun

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

The Mitchell County Fair, held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Agriculture Building west of Colorado City, featured a variety of educational booths, and other booths that were just plain fun.

Marian Morris, county extension agent for Mitchell County, said that the majority of the booths at the fair were put in individuals and organizations from Colorado City, as opposed to commercial booths.

One of the special exhibits was "Grandparents Brag," which featured the pictures of 45 toddlers who are the pride and joy of their grandparents. It was up to the grandparents to get the pictures in to be judged by Geniece Whisenant, Nolan County Extension Agent.

Belle Compton, a member of the Extension Homemakers and one of the coordinators of the "Grandparents Brag" exhibit, said the exhibit has been held for the past four years, and is always popular with Mitchell County residents.

To be eligible for judging, the pictures must feature preschool age children. The art is judged on the clarity of the photos, and the personality reflected in the shot, said Ms. Morris.

"Grandparents are really interested in this exhibit," said Mrs. Compton. "They start calling as soon as the fair planning begins."

It's a chance for proud grandparents to show their neighbors how cute their grandchildren are, said Mrs. Compton. It's also a chance for those same grandparents to tell those who stop by and view the exhibit about the children pictured there.

Mrs. Compton was familiar with most of the children pictured in the exhibit, she said Friday. Many of the children are participants in the "Mother's Day Out" program featured by the Colorado City First Baptist Church.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Reported sightings of two 13-year-old girls believed abducted while attending the Oklahoma State Fair continue to increase a week after their disappearance, but authorities say most of the reports remain unfounded.

Missing are Cindy Pallett and Charlotte Kinsey, both of Oklahoma City. Meanwhile, two other girls who vanished after heading for the fair — Susan Tollison, 16, of McLoud and Sheryl Ann Vaughn, 15, of Newalla — have been classified runaways because Miss Tollison called a friend and said she and her companion were safe, said Lt. Tom Mundy of the city police.

A look inside the state races on 1982 ballot

By JACKIE CALMES
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite talk of their getting behind a unity candidate for governor in 1982, Texas Democrats apparently are far from dispelling the joke that if recruited for a firing squad, party members would form a circle. Similarly, most other statewide offices available in 1982 will be contested by Democrats in next May's primary. In contrast, from governor on down, slots on the Republican ballot are more likely to be filled with names of consensus candidates for state offices.

Among Democrats, a half-dozen men aspire unofficially to be the party's gubernatorial nominee. While they maneuver up to the Feb. 1 filing deadline and beyond to the May primary, Gov. Bill Clements probably will be unopposed in the GOP primary, husbanding his time and money for the fall campaign.

"Every time I pick up the paper, there's somebody else that's been added to the line," Clements joked recently about the Democrats.

The remark was prompted by news that day of a possible re-run by Clements' predecessor, Dolph Briscoe. A second trial balloon went up from Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, and last week he filed necessary papers to begin fund raising.

Briscoe's decision, which he says he hasn't made yet, in turn will affect others. Sen. Peyton McKnight of Tyler, who has been spending about $50,000 a week on campaign travels, says he will bow out if political ally Briscoe runs.

In contrast, former Attorney General John Hill probably would join the fray, friends say, for a grudge-match against the former governor. Ditto for Briscoe if Hill decides to run. The two men have not mellowed since 1978, when Hill upset Briscoe in the 1978 Democratic primary, and Briscoe in turn refused to support Hill in the losing battle against Clements.

Hill, vacationing in Italy and Bermuda, was unavailable for comment.

Though Attorney General Mark White's verbal clashes with Clements over prisons, bilingual education, windfall-profit and the Gulf Coast oil spill have long made him appear a likely contender, many Democrats' scenarios have him running instead for re-election. White says he will make his decision by late October, pending results of a poll that pits him against the Republican governor.

Mid-November is the decision-making deadline for a sixth political, Sen. W.F. "Pete" Snelson of Midland.

While Briscoe and McKnight speak of the party uniting behind one candidate in the primary, so as to muster forces against Clements, Snelson says the competition is healthy.

"The Democratic Party's tradition is one of individuals trying to make their own decisions and assessments," he says.

Similarly, Armstrong scoffs that a unity primary is "a vain hope" that bucks party tradition.

According to talks with numerous Democrats, the ranks of Democratic rivals for governor probably will thin over the four months until the filing deadline to include just McKnight and Armstrong — and possibly White.

For other offices, possible candidates include the following:

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR — Democratic incumbent Bill Hobby might run unopposed in the primary, but his support this year for a Republican-backed congressional redistricting plan angered party stalwarts and stirred talk of a challenge. However, no names have surfaced and two fast rumored rivals, McKnight and Snelson, have set their sights higher.

Secretary of State George Strake was the Republican Party's blessing. That dampened ambitions of Sen. Bill Meiser of Euless, who switched to the GOP this year.

A murder they thought wouldn't ever come to trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Jury selection begins Monday in a murder trial that some people in this rural southeastern Texas town assumed would never take place.

After all, when details of the shooting death of former Texas Speaker Price Daniel Jr. came out last spring in a bitter custody battle, the result was that his widow, a former Dairy Queen waitress accused of murdering him, got to keep their two small children.

During that hearing, Vickie Daniel got on the witness stand and all but admitted she shot her husband to death Jan. 19. But she also testified Daniel was a child molester and a wife beater who was advancing on her during a violent quarrel the night he was killed.

When jurors sympathized with the attractive blonde and her attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, and awarded her custody of her sons, speculation among the jurors and others at the Liberty County Courthouse was that murder charges would not hold up against her and a criminal trial would probably never materialize.

But whether a person is a good mother has little to do with whether she is guilty of murdering her husband, said attorney Zeke Zbraneck, who opposed Mrs. Daniel during the child custody fight. He represented Jean Daniel Murphy, sister of the slain Daniel.

"The jury could have believed she killed Price in cold blood but that she still should have custody of the children," he said.

Visiting District Judge Leonard Giblin of Beaumont was chosen to preside over the trial here after judges in Liberty withdrew their names from consideration because of associations with the Daniel family. He has instructed lawyers in the case not to discuss strategy or evidence with the press.

But Zbraneck said since Mrs. Daniel has already testified she was holding the gun when the fatal shot was fired, her most likely plea is self defense.

He said if that is the case, she would have to show that retreat was not a reasonable alternative that night last January when she and Price were having a vicious argument.

Mrs. Daniel testified during the custody case that Daniel had beaten her and just before the shooting she ran to a back door of the house but could not open it to flee because it had several locks and she was distraught.

One scenario was Meir aiding Clements' re-election effort and, if both Clements and Strake are successful in their respective races, accepting appointment as secretary of state. However, Strake was told Texas Republican Party Chairman Chet Upham that he will resign as the state's top election official to campaign for lieutenant governor because of what Strake sees as conflict of interest.

That would create an opening for Clements to fill and Meier, because of constitutional constraints, could not fill it until his senatorial term is up in January 1983.

ATTORNEY GENERAL — The probable Democrat is incumbent Mark White, party insiders say, and they point to the dearth of potential successors' names as proof. "Everybody expects White to run," one said.

Other Democrats named include former state legislator and U.S. attorney John Hannah Jr. of Tyler, and Sens. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls and Jack Ogg of Houston.

Wayne Thorburn, GOP executive director, says Republicans so far have no candidates for the job. "But that would change if White doesn't run," he adds. "Then it's an open field."

COMPTROLLER — Incumbent Democrat Bob Bullock announced for re-election almost a year ago and, aides say, the campaign continues while the often controversial candidate is treated in California for alcoholism.

"If he comes back and is cured, quote-unquote," says spokesman Tony Proffitt, "he becomes, in my mind, a more formidable candidate."

So instead, she testified, she reached into a hallway closet and grabbed a .22-caliber rifle.

"I didn't want him to hit me," she said. "I was afraid he was going to hurt me some more, and I backed away." She said she fired a warning shot, purposely missing him, and testified he shouted an obscenity at her.

She said at that point she closed her eyes, but she said she does not remember firing the shot that struck Daniel in the abdomen.

"I remember hearing a funny sound," Mrs. Daniel, 34, testified. "It must have been the last shot. I didn't know then I had hurt him."

Daniel, son of former Texas Gov. and U.S. Sen. Price Daniel Sr. and great-great-grandson of Sam Houston, bled to death before an ambulance reached the couple's home on the 3,000-acre Daniel Ranch just outside the town limits. He was 39.

A grand jury later indicted Mrs. Daniel on a murder charge, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

During the custody trial, spectators sent flowers and cards of encouragement to Mrs. Daniel, and some even took up a collection to help pay for her lawyers. The verdict giving her custody of Marion Price Daniel IV, 1, and Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 4, was unanimous.

Mrs. Daniel, who was removed from Daniel's will before his death, receives $640 a month in child support from the estate and worked part of the summer as a waitress in a Dairy Queen in nearby Baytown, Texas.

She has allowed Daniel's parents to visit their grandsons and keep them for several days at a time, according to her attorney Jack Zimmermann, an associate of Haynes who took over her defense during the summer.

"Mr. Haynes and I work as a team. We were going to try this case together," he said, but other cases came up and Haynes had to drop out of the Daniel defense.

District Attorney Carroll Wilborn said by mutual agreement with the attorneys and the court, one week has been set aside to seat a jury. Giblin estimated the trial would take four to five weeks.

Wilborn conceded jurors in any murder trial may return a guilty verdict of a less serious offense; such as manslaughter, if the evidence supports such a lesser offense. He declined to discuss the case beyond that.

Mrs. Daniel, who lives in Baytown, said she had been advised "not to talk to anyone, regardless of who they are."

Even Homer Smith, director of the Liberty Chamber of Commerce, who invited a group of reporters covering the custody trial out to his house for a barbecue, was reluctant to discuss the Daniel case with reporters.

"A lot of people got scorched by the press last time," he said. "My brother read a quote from me in Atlanta, Ga. You got to be real careful what you say, and I guarantee you it's going to be tough (for reporters) this time around."

says, adding, "I haven't closed any doors."

On the Republican side, Thorburn says Blanco County Judge Kent Smith is the only person who has spoken to him about the race.

AGRICULTURE COMMISSIONER — Democratic incumbent Reagan Brown recently made his pre-announcement announcement that he would run for re-election. Monday, Texas Consumer Association President Jim Hightower officially challenges him.

State Rep. Pete Laney, a Hale Center cotton farmer, says he hasn't had time to make a final decision on the race since he is "right in the middle of crops."

Republicans have no known aspirants but Chairman Upham predicts one will be on the ballot.

"We will have a full slate," Upham says, "except maybe for the Railroad Commission."

RAILROAD COMMISSION — Chairman Jim Nugent, a Democrat, is up for re-election to a full six-year term, having narrowly defeated Jim Hightower in 1980 for the unexpired two years on a vacated seat. His colleagues, Buddy Temple and Mack Wallace, are the only state officials who do not face re-election matches.

One Democrat named as possible rival for Nugent is U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox of Dallas, who is looking for openings since his congressional district is likely to be unwinnable when redistricting is complete. Another is state Rep. Bill Keese of Somerville.

TREASURER — Presidential namesake Warren G. Harding is likely to be unopposed in the Democratic primary. So far, Upham concedes that Republicans also have no competition to offer in the fall election.

Demos vow to fight Reagan's stepped-up militarization plan

DAVIS, W.Va. (AP) — Senate Democrats vowed Saturday to fight President Reagan's MX missile and B-1 bomber plans, and one of them said not one senator spoke out in support of either proposal.

"The B-1 was a turkey, is a turkey and always will be a turkey," said Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, who added that no Democratic senator endorsed either plan at a Saturday meeting.

All but five of the 46 Senate Democrats were gathered here for a three-day conference to plot strategy. Eagleton said the MX and B-1 proposals Reagan announced Friday were "heavily discussed."

Reagan announced plans to revive the B-1 and to deploy 100 MX missiles in existing silos rather than shuttle the missiles among 1,000 shelters. He also advocated development of a radar-avoiding "Stealth" bomber.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said the MX plan does not "close the window of vulnerability" and the B-1 would be obsolete almost as soon as it was produced.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington echoed Byrd's concern about the MX proposal and predicted Reagan's plan would be altered by Congress.

Byrd and Jackson said they favored developing the "Stealth" bomber instead of the B-1.

Byrd described the meeting at scenic Canaan Valley State Park as "the first step on the way back to building a majority." Democrats are a minority in the Senate for the first time since the Eisenhower administration. The senators lined up against the B-1 and MX during a day of meetings, panel discussions and speeches that urged the Democratic Party to develop alternatives to the president's policies.

Pollster Lou Harris told the senators the public is looking for leadership on defense and economic issues. He said his polls indicate Americans are confused because Reagan campaigned for more defense spending but now wants to cut the military's budget.

Harris said the Democrats need coherent policies on inflation, productivity, and competition from foreign manufacturers. He said his polls show most Americans consider the Japanese superior in technology and production.

Pollster Peter Hart said Democrats cannot counter Reagan's policies and recoup their losses in the last election without emphasizing "lifestyle issues."

"The battle is really after the voters under the age of 40," Hart said. Although many of that group sided with Reagan in 1980 because of economic concerns, he said, they are not solidly in the GOP camp.

And Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York said the Democrats need a strategy to win back seats in the South and the West.

"We are a party which has lost most of its seats west of the Mississippi," he said. "You have to look very hard to find many."

Rep. Jack Brooks ready to duel his opponents

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jack Brooks is "concerned" and it shows.

"They are taking shots at me because I'm on top," Brooks says of his critics, his blue eyes popping. "But they don't realize that I used to be at the bottom. I sold things on the streets for a dime; 10 for a dollar. We were poor. I was on the streets."

Brooks doesn't want to be out on the streets again. The 29-year veteran of the House has reason to get nostalgic. The former confidant to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson faces his toughest re-election in years. His opponents are loudly singing the same tune; the 58-year-old dean of the Texas delegation has lost touch with the homefolks.

But the cagey old pol has seen and heard it all. He is ready for battle.

His congressional office is adorned with several magnificent plaques of deer antlers bagged by Brooks over the years.

"Yeah, I get trigger-happy whenever I think of my opponents," Brooks says with a gleeful laugh, playfully shooting imaginary candidates flying through the air.

Brooks has raised $173,000 and plans to "get considerably more" for the 1982 race. He is also spending more time back in the district.

He is unafraid of his competition.

"Everytime they think they can build a name, they will run against you. That's politics," Brooks says.

The Beaumont Democrat is confident that his opponents can't beat him. But many political experts say Brooks may beat Brooks.

His own party admits he has "problems."

"I think he will win," says a state Democratic Party official, who declined to be named. "But he has an image problem — people think he has not paid enough attention to the district."

Adds a GOP state official: "He's a tough opponent. But Jack Brooks is an arrogant SOB and a lot of people know it. We think we can take advantage of that."

To win, Brooks understands he will have to overcome the "aloof" image. It doesn't matter if the image is deserved or not. It exists. He will have to again persuade voters that he is one of them.

It will not be easy and Brooks knows it. That is why he says "we're concerned."

"I am going to have to make people understand that being a congressman is a full-time job," Brooks says, pointing a pencil for emphasis. "I can't go home every week and still be an effective congressman."

Brooks quickly adds, "I go home about 20 to 25 times a year."

The Beaumont Democrat is stuck in the middle. If he steps up his visits back home, his opponents will say, "Where have you been?" If he does not, they'll complain, "You don't care about us."

There are many political landmines in Brooks' path to another congressional term. But he also has many political advantages:

- He is chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, an ideal spot to dole out favors for the home district.
- He has traditionally enjoyed strong labor support in the 9th District which is heavily union-oriented and blue-collar.
- The Democratic Party primary, where some feel Brooks will undergo his toughest test, should be crowded, an advantage to Brooks who has name recognition.
- He's got a lot of things going for him," said a state Democratic official. "He should win but..."

Brooks' district, which includes all of Jefferson, Chambers and Galveston counties, has become increasingly conservative in recent years.

Governor for day picks our mascot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, was sworn in as governor-for-a-day Saturday and dedicated his brief administration to the "most important people in the state — our children."

One act that was sure to find favor with youngsters was Ogg's signing of a proclamation designating the armadillo as a state mascot.

Students at Oak Creek Elementary School in Houston started the "dillo movement" in 1978, and were joined by others in lobbying the Legislature in 1979 and 1981 — without success — to pass Ogg's resolution recognizing the creature as the official state mammal.

Ogg told several hundred friends in the Senate Chamber he had received "a lot of kidding" about the armadillo resolution. He said, however, he was using his power as governor to sign the proclamation "because it is important that they (children) see the system works and today that it's going to work."

Ogg flubbed the oath, stumbling over the words "paid, offered or promised to pay," and Chief Justice Joe Greenhill had to repeat them.

"Judge," said Ogg after he was sworn in, "I believe the first thing we ought to do is shorten that oath."

Ogg mentioned his mistake again in advising children they needed a sense of humor so "when in a crowded room you blow a line in the oath, you have to laugh at it."

When the governors meet behind closed doors...

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Governors of states on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border will talk about mutual problems in their meetings in El Paso this week, but citizens of both nations will be kept in the dark on the issues.

The principal discussion item undoubtedly will be the illegal flow of Mexicans to work in the United States.

There will be some public sessions at which the governors will hear reports from committees that have been working since last year's meeting on issues such as agriculture and tourism. The committees have worked and reworked their reports to the point that none should raise any eyebrows.

But the critical discussion on immigration policy will take place behind closed doors, with only the governors, their aides and some federal bureaucrats present.

That setup is designed to allow a frank and open discussion among the officials without worry about how their words might look in the newspapers back home.

While there's some validity to such arguments, there's an overriding principle that says private meetings don't promote public understanding.

Right now, some understanding is needed on the complex immigration problem.

The Reagan Administration has put forth a fuzzy projection of its proposed new policy to allow work opportunities for Mexicans in the United States and to allow legislation of status for longtime resident aliens.

So unclear is the policy that Gov. Bill Clements, who fancies himself to be an expert on the subject, first opposed it and then offered support.

Clements, a Republican, underwent his conversion recently during a trip to Washington. The Reagan team was determined to bring the maverick governor back into the fold and did some hard selling to get him to agree "in concept" to the plan.

But Clements isn't likely to receive much support in El Paso for this administration's plan, since the three other governors from this side of the border are Democrats.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona has been particularly critical of the plan. He and Clements already are accustomed to taking wide swings at each other with verbal machetes.

The likely prospect of such exchanges probably explains the closed meeting. But the closed doors could only make such matters worse.

Reporters are hopelessly nosey creatures who take closed doors as a challenge to finding out what they're not supposed to know. Politicians are hopelessly vain and talkative creatures who want to tell their side of the story to the world.

So, the public will end up hearing someone's description of what happened, rather than learning what happened.

Clements, who has a narrow view on the value of public discussion of controversies, undoubtedly will oppose any change in the plan. As host governor he has a strong say on such things.

Ironically, the closed doors could diminish the importance of the border meeting and its very reason for happening.

The governors themselves have no actual power to affect immigration or international relations. All they can do is talk and try to persuade.

If they are talking and no one is listening, there isn't likely to be much of persuasion.

Q. We found our "dream" home, unfortunately. It's unfortunate because right before signing the contract to buy we realized changes we would have to make for the house to fit our family priced it out of our range. Could we have avoided this disappointment?

A. Yes. Prior to house shopping, make a list of your requirements. A good, complete list might include:

- Amount of space needed
- Number of bedrooms and baths
- Entertainment rooms needed
- Required storage and work areas

This list, along with advice from a good real estate broker, will not only help evaluate possible homes, but may also help in contract negotiations.

Reagan's men explain budget woes

By ROBERT E. RHODES
Executive Editor
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

WASHINGTON — On the one hand, we have to cut the budget so we can get the deficit under control and bring the interest rates down.

On the other hand, we have to spend 180 billion dollars in the next six years on a strategic defense plan.

The problem is, Congress might not want to do either one.

And that, in a nutshell, is the monumental problem the Reagan administration will be struggling with for the next several months.

The problem hardly could have been made more evident than it was by the Reagan administration in five short hours Friday. The administration spokesmen didn't identify it as a problem as such. It just came out that way.

The administration was host to a group of about 75 editors from around the country for a day-long briefing. It was the second group in five days to be invited to the White House and a third will be coming in Monday. It's part of a new communication program put into effect under a recently reorganized White House press staff.

Heavy emphasis all morning yesterday and through lunch was on what the administration calls the desperate need to bring the budget under control. The administration brought out its heaviest hitters, capped with Budget Director David Stockman who spoke at a sumptuous chateaubriand luncheon in the State Dining Room.

Stockman painted a dark picture of the economy the the budget cuts proposed by the President must be approved this fall by the Congress in order to control the deficit which, in turn, would bring interest rates down.

It had been a familiar plaint, Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisors, had said much the same thing during the briefing earlier in the Indian Treaty Room of the Executive Office Building.

And so did Larry Kudlow, assistant director for economic policy in the Office of Management and Budget. And Richard Allen, assistant to the President for National Security Affairs. Cut the budget, chop the deficit, get those interest rates down.

The hidden territory — more than a billion acres around the nation's fringes — is underwater. Yet the land ranks as a prime place to prospect for oil and gas, and it lies beneath some of the world's richest fishing regions.

If Secretary of the Interior James Watt goes ahead with his announced plan to offer to lease out almost a billion acres — at a rate of about 200 million a year for five years — it would represent the biggest boom ever in offshore oil and gas exploration.

Since the federal leasing program began in the early 1950s, only 45 million acres have been put up for lease, and 20 million have actually been leased. But even at this controlled pace, offshore leasing has reaped the government a total of more than $45 billion.

Throwing open the new frontiers would take offshore exploration a long way from the wooden piers that jutted out from the southern California shore to drill the first oil wells in the 1890s. Today there already are more than 5,000 producing wells rising from federal waters out of sight of land, almost all of them in the Gulf of Mexico. But 5,000 wells is only a handful compared with the government's future vision.

"Instead of the past popularity contests to select small tracts, we would offer our entire south Atlantic area, for example, about 94 million acres," Interior's Alan D. Powers said. "Not every single acre, but most of it."

The outer limit of the federal territory is not so easily marked. The underwater land itself is extremely jagged, varying drastically in width before it drops off to the ocean deep. It can reach out as far as 300 to 400 miles off the Atlantic coast, for example and can be as narrow as 10 miles or less around Hawaii.

For drilling purposes, the outer boundary is limited only by federal policy and technological advancements — both of which are pushing the frontier out farther and down deeper. At this time, it certainly includes the area closest to shore, traditionally known as the shelf, and extends down onto the area called the slope.

Drilling would stop at the beginning of the rise, a depth that averages about 8,200 feet. Eventually, exploration is expected to move onto the rise, the last stretch of submerged land before the drop-off to the ocean deep at about 12,000 to 13,000 feet.

What is the shelf? A soggy, sandy, muddy, and sometimes rocky version of dry land, complete with valleys, plains, canyons, plateaus, and even islands. And in many places, exactly what it takes to make oil and gas. Layers of sedimentary rock at least two miles thick. The remains of marine plants. The right temperature, timing, pressure, and oxygen-free environment.

The whole oil-making process takes about 30 million years and geologists still don't know precisely how it happens. "It's a wonder that we have any oil at all when it means getting so many conditions right and when every major U.S. shelf area has a very different geologic history," said N. Terence Edgar, the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) chief for marine geology.

Although no one expects to discover an underwater Saudi Arabia, exact estimates of what's there are difficult to make because so much of the region is unexplored.

The most recent USGS estimates indicate a potential 28 billion barrels of oil and 167 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in federal offshore waters on the shelf and slope. That amounts to about 34 percent of the potential U.S. oil reserves and about 28 percent of the natural gas reserves.

Ranked in order of most likely to produce, the most promising areas are: the Gulf of Mexico, the Beaufort

Second only to the value of the oil and gas beneath the shelf in some of these regions is the fish in waters above it. About 90 percent of the global fish harvest is from continental shelf waters around the world. And the United States has a significant share of the catch—cod and flounder from Georges Bank; salmon and crab from Alaska's Bristol Bay, and shrimp from the Gulf of Mexico.

MEXICO. Concerned about "the potentially devastating effects" a massive leasing program could have on these ecologically fragile areas, organizations such as the Natural Resources Defense Council oppose Watt's plan. "It's impossible to assess the consequences to the environment," the council contends, when leasing areas range from 9 million to 160 million acres each.

On another level, the United States and most of its neighbors don't agree on who owns what land. The only underwater border disputes considered resolved are with Cuba off Florida, and the Soviet Union off Alaska. The others are under negotiation.

"These underwater boundaries just weren't an issue before. Until a few years ago, technology had not moved far enough off shore to make them worth worrying about," explained the State Department's Frederick Monroe.

The major dispute swirls around George Bank, a 40-million-acre underwater plateau area off the New England coast that is considered a bonanza for oil drillers as well as fishermen. Exploratory drilling began there in July.

The United States claims the entire bank, insisting it is a natural prolongation of Cape Cod. Canada contends it is entitled to about a third, based on the principle of equidistance between the two countries' mainland borders.

Interior Secretary James Watt is the man who will okay the exploration of the continental shelf.

Earth's one giant landmass into smaller continents millions of years ago. Africa, North America, and eventually Europe drifted apart in the primeval sea, North America moving westward.

On the leading edge, along the Pacific coast, the continent was pushed over part of the Pacific sea floor, creating a narrow, faulted edge. On the Atlantic side, the newly formed edge sank, and the shelf slowly began to build up as sediment from rivers flowed into the sea.

As recently as 15,000 years ago, following the last major glacial period, much of the Atlantic continental shelf was above water. Rising sea levels since have submerged the shelves in increasingly deep water.

Retrieving numbers from the Dewey Decimal System

By JUDITH GRAY
County Librarian

Last week's article gave instructions on how to find books on the shelf and described the Dewey Decimal System classification plan.

Remember every subject has a number!

This week the emphasis will be how to retrieve the number. What process should you follow to find books in a library?

The Howard County Library has a divided catalog. That means that author cards are filed separately from subjects and titles. To find books by an author, you use the author section. The cards are filed alphabetically by the last name of the author. If the name is compound like Van Gulik or St. John, look under Van or Saint. If the author is an organization or business, then it is filed by the first proper noun or in the name.

For example, The Daughters of the American Revolution would be under "Daughters." The American Association for the Advancement of Science would be filed under "American," the Xerox Corporation would be under "Xerox."

If you are a mystery fan and want all or one of the books by Ngaio Marsh, you look alphabetically, first for Marsh, then if there are other Marshes, for Ngaio. If you're a western fan and want to see what books are in the collection by Louis L'Amour, look first for L'Amour (ignore the apostrophe and spell the name as Lamour), then for Louis. If you want books on economics by John Kenneth Galbraith, look first for Galbraith, then for John or John K. or John Kenneth if there are other Galbraiths.

Now that you've found the card for the author, if the library owns more than one book by that author, the cards will be arranged next by the title alphabetically (what else?). Remember to ignore "the," "a," "an."

When you locate the card for the book you want, what next? The call number is in the upper left hand corner of the card. There are slips of paper and pencils on top of the catalog cabinet. Write down each of the books that you want to look for on the shelves. The top part of the call number sends you to the section. The second part of the call number is a coding of the author's last name. This is to alphabetize authors on the shelves.

The other part of the card catalog has the cards for subjects and titles. These cards are arranged alphabetically and are interfiled.

Subject cards have the headings in capital letters across the top of the card and are found alphabetically: AIR-PLANES in the A's, HORSEBACK RIDING in the H's. Books that are about people's lives or are about their works (books, paintings, buildings, etc.) are found by the last name of the person: WASHINGTON, GEORGE; STEINBECK, JOHN; and CAYLOR, H.W.

What if you don't find a subject card? Try to think of (Cont. on next page) alternative terms used for the subject or look for a cross reference card that will guide you to the correct heading. For example, if you are looking for books on flower shops and can't find anything under that heading, try FLORISTS. If you want books on World War II, you might find a cross reference to WORLD WAR, 1939-1945. Besides alternative terms for the subject, in the event you are looking under something very specific and there is no card or cross reference and no alternative term, try something more general.

 Example: No books on ostriches? Look under BIRDS for a book on African Birds or perhaps subject headings BIRDS, AFRICAN or AFRICAN BIRDS.
 When you find the group of cards on World War II, economics, cooking, dogs or whatever, these cards will be arranged by author then by title if there is more than one book by the same author on the same subject. You will also find that these cards are broken down by subheadings on different topics connected with World War II.

 Remember to write down all of the call numbers of the books that you are interested in seeing. That will save you time running back and forth to the card catalog.
 Sometimes you may not want a specific book on a subject, you may just want a book on football. Note the nonfiction number 796.33 and head for that area of the shelf and browse through the books.
 Titles are arranged alphabetically except when the first word is The, A, An. Title cards are interfiled with subject cards. Numbers and abbreviations are spelled out (2 equal two in the T's; St. equal Saint in the S's).
 What if you can't find a card in the catalog or can't find a book on the shelf? Always ask the library staff for assistance!

Woman who allegedly shot self is charged

CHICAGO (AP) — A teen-ager who allegedly shot herself in the abdomen to terminate a six-month pregnancy has been indicted under a state abortion law and could face 14 years in prison if convicted.
 Lorrie Gray, 18, of suburban Robbins, was indicted Friday by a Cook County grand jury on charges of violating a 1975 Illinois law that prohibits abortions outside of hospitals after the first three months of pregnancy. Also indicted was Nicholas B. Hamilton, 18, who was allegedly involved in the September shooting incident and is believed to be the woman's boyfriend, officials said.
 A female fetus died as a result of the shooting, authorities said.
 William E. Oplatka, an assistant state's attorney, said

Saturday that the case may be the first in which the state law has been used to indict anyone on abortion charges.
 "The law doesn't provide for murder charges (in this type of incident)," Oplatka said. "In this case, nobody did anything to her, she did it to herself."
 "The only charge we could proceed on was abortion... If anyone else shoots a pregnant woman, that's feticide," he said.
 Oplatka said Miss Gray and Hamilton face up to 14 years in prison if convicted on the charge, a felony.
 Miss Gray and Hamilton were arrested Sept. 7 in a forest preserve south of Chicago by Cook County sheriff's police who answered a report of a woman bleeding, authorities said.

Big Spring

High school receives new computers

By RHONDA WOODALL
Several students are starting to work on projects that will help them in the future.

Big Spring High School has received in some new equipment for the Apple Computing Center. Any student that is the slightest bit interested should go to room 260 and talk to Mr. Dawes.

Any sophomore, junior or senior who is interested in winning a $14,000 scholarship should contact Mr. Smith in the Forensic Dept. A three to five minute speech for the Veterans of Foreign Wars Democracy Contest is all that is required. Deadline is Nov. 1.

Students that are interested in having a project in the Permian Basin Regional Science Fair on March 18-19, 1982 in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum should begin working on their projects as soon as possible. If you would like some more information, see Mr. Reed in room 106.

Senior group pictures that were paid for in advance may be picked up in the office before and after school and during lunches.

Juniors and seniors who wanted to order senior rings from the school should have paid a $30 deposit on Oct. 2 to order their rings.

Tri-Hi-Y had a garage sale at 1729 Yale on Oct. 3.

"The Ugly Duckling" was performed at 1:30 p.m. in the Amphitheatre at Comanche Trail Park on Oct. 2-3.

Future Homemakers of America have been taking orders and money for 1981 homecoming spirit ribbons for 50c each.

The senior float committee will meet Oct. 5, at 3:30 p.m. in room 231.

The jets club will meet Tuesday, Oct. 6 at 7:30 p.m. Members need to bring $4 for dues.

Future Teachers of America will meet on Oct. 6 at 3:35 p.m. in Ms. Atkins' room. A reporter will be elected.

One of the highlights of this next week will be the upcoming varsity volleyball game between BSHS and San Angelo Bobcats on Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Steers gym. Both teams are undefeated in district. This game will decide the first half of district winners.

The junior varsity team won their games against Odessa Broncos and Abilene Cooper Cougars. The JV won second place in the Seminole Tournament on Sept. 25-26. They defeated Kermit and Crane. Snyder defeated the JV in the final game.

The boys' and girls' cross country competed in the Odessa cross country meet. The girls finished fourth out of the eight district teams.

They were led by Stephanie Russell who finished in 12th place. The boys finished in second place. Karle Wolfe finished in second place setting a school record and a personal best time of 15:30.

James Hodges finished in fifth place with a personal best time of 15:14. Wolfe is the runner of the week. Other runners that placed were Tim McNamara, 14th; Javier Calderon, 19th and Curtis Harrison, 21st. Both teams were back in action in October 3 in San Angelo.

All organizations that plan to have a nominee for Homecoming need to elect one before Oct. 15.

DALLAS (AP) — A 7-year-old Mesquite girl who collapsed after running about 100 yards at school suffered from a rare heart disease, a medical examiner has ruled.

Stephanie Halbert, who died Tuesday after running as punishment for talking, "could have collapsed at any other point," said Dr. Arthur Copeland, a Dallas County medical examiner.

He said she died from hypertrophic obstructive cardiomyopathy, not heat or physical exhaustion.

Copeland said the heart disorder, which is believed to be hereditary, is one in which muscle fibers in the heart block the flow of blood to the organ. Because of the blockage, he said, "the heart doesn't beat right and goes into heart failure."

Copeland described people suffering from the disorder as "walking time bombs" and said Stephanie's punishment probably did not contribute to her death.

Stephanie, a second-grader at Florence Black Elementary School, and eight classmates were ordered by their teacher to run 100 yards as punishment for talking in class.

A short time after the students finished running, a classmate told the teacher Stephanie had fallen asleep at her desk. Efforts to revive her failed and she was pronounced dead on arrival at a nearby hospital.

Lighter heifers means less offspring according to studies recently completed at Kansas State University. The K-State study affirmed that the lightest heifers at weaning were the less reproductively efficient because of delayed puberty, resulting in higher death losses of offspring. The study documented feeding low levels of energy during the gestation period lowered pregnancy rates. The study suggests three important management practices to maximize reproductive performance including selection of replacement heifers with the heaviest weaning weight, provision of adequate energy during growth period and during gestation period. Implementation of these three practices, researchers say, should result in maintaining calving on schedule and reducing calving death losses.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Soviet naval vessels, including 20 guided missile

The statement said the cruises have followed a counterclockwise pattern along the coasts of Florida, Alabama and Louisiana.

In a copyright article in its Sunday editions, The Corpus Christi Caller-Times said the Soviet Gulf operations were confirmed in a statement issued by the U.S. Navy.

"Since July 1969, a Navy statement said, "the Soviets have conducted 21 deployments to the Caribbean which have included combatants (destroyers and submarines). These deployments are apparently for the purpose of showing the flag but have also resulted in joint exercises with Cuban military forces.

"In all," the statement continued, "ten of these deployments resulted in 39 individual ship transits into the Gulf of Mexico, none of nautical miles of shore. A nautical mile is 15 percent longer than a statute mile.

"Soviet naval presence in the Gulf of Mexico since the first deployment to the Caribbean in 1969 has included various classes and types, primarily guided missile-equipped cruisers, destroyers and frigates," the Navy statement said. "Supporting auxiliaries and submarines have also participated."

In July and August of 1969, a seven-ship Soviet flotilla steamed into the Gulf along with two Foxtrot-class diesel submarines and a November-class nuclear-powered submarine.

The Soviet force included the intelligence ship Repeter and remained in the Gulf throughout the U.S. Apollo 11 space mission that first landed American astronauts on the moon, The Caller-Times said.

Foxtrot-class submarines also accompanied Soviet deployments to the Gulf of Mexico in November 1971.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — About 2,000 people were evacuated Saturday from a busy shopping area in Fort Worth after a tanker truck carrying 9,000 gallons of liquid butane overturned and ruptured, police officers and civil defense officials spent seven hours waiting for the butane to leak out of the tank and for the volatile fumes to dissipate.

The accident closed a dozen businesses in the area, and the butane could have caused a massive explosion.

At one point Saturday, a motorcyclist ignored police roadblocks and roared within a few yards of the truck and the spewing cloud of gas.

No injuries were reported and those evacuated were allowed to return to their homes and shops about seven hours after the 9:10 a.m. mishap, police said.

Mornth, 150, said about a dozen businesses in the normally busy westside shopping area and snarled traffic all day on three major thoroughfares, police said.

LT Les Burks, a Fort Worth Fire Department spokesman, said a single truck hit a wall when the driver of the truck, Harvey Christian, told authorities he was en route from his home in Azle, just west of Fort Worth, to Texaco Butane Co. in nearby Forest Hill Worth when the truck hit a wall.

ALL SMILES — These women, who are local members of the Texas Medical Record Association, have reason to be happy as they received a proclamation from Big Spring Mayor Clyde Angel declaring the TMRA as outstanding in the

Medical records keepers meet

The District II-B meeting of the Texas Medical Records Association was held yesterday at Malone-Hogan Hospital. In attendance was Mayor Clyde Angel, who presented the Association with a proclamation declaring the TMRA outstanding in its contributions to medical record keeping.

The TMRA was established in 1939 and is an affiliate of the American Medical Records Association. There are approximately 1,500 registered record administrators and technicians involved in the Association serving all aspects of medical record keeping.

Lee Askew, of Malone-Hogan's medical library, said the meeting and proclamation helped to kick-off Texas Medical Records Week being held Oct. 18-25. She said her department has prepared a sample of its work in the form of a "mock" medical record which will remain on display in the lobby of Malone-Hogan through Oct. 25.

The mock record contains a patient's complete medical history including summaries, physical examinations, progress reports, nurse's notes, doctor's notes, x-rays, medication and so on.

"We want people to know how many functions we perform and how involved they are. We don't just simply keep records," said Askew.

Askew said 26 people showed up for the all day affair and she termed the meeting "an outstanding success." Members heard reports on "The Art of Need and Where We Stand," intensified oxygen therapy and the role of record keeping in a radiation center.

Askew said next Saturday Malone-Hogan will hold an open house of its medical records library from 2-4 p.m. so that the public can see for themselves exactly what goes on in the world of medical records.

She said most of the department heads of Malone-Hogan would be attending a national meeting of the AMRA the week of Oct. 18-25. Local department heads attending today were Lee Askew, Tracy Brady, Belva Harrington, Charlene Ragan and Billie Mize.

Also at the meeting were Darlene Brooks, Danna Chandler, Jeanie Cunningham, Joyce Evans, and Kim Hancock — all of Malone-Hogan. Wanda Arencibia represented Hall-Bennett Hospital.

Regan wants Fed to ease money supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan wants the Federal Reserve Board to ease up on its tight control of the money supply sometime soon. The Washington Post says.

"What I'm saying is that we are coming to a time here

J. ARNOLD MARSHALL

Marshall elected

Caprock president

J. Arnold Marshall of Big Spring has been elected president of Caprock Service Co., Inc., a crude oil buyer and oil field service company operating in the Permian Basin.

The announcement was made Friday by Reagan M. Martin of Dallas, chairman of the board.

For Marshall it marks a return to the company which he co-founded in 1957 and managed for 20 years. Caprock is a division of the H.W. Smith Transport Co.

Marshall was a part owner of H.W. Smith Transport and Caprock from 1957 to 1967, when he bought full interest in both corporations. In the meantime he started the ACE Transport, Inc., in Sonora. He sold all three companies in 1977 to Martin and his associates.

Marshall is a former mayor of Big Spring from 1962 to 1972. He currently is vice president, Eastern Region, of the Buffalo Trails Council of Boy Scouts of America, and president of Big Spring Boys Club. He is a past president of the board of the First United Methodist Church of Big Spring and has been active in many other civic organizations.

"I am very pleased with this appointment," Marshall said. "I intend to work very hard to insure that Caprock maintains the very highest standards of service and integrity."

where a change has to be made," Regan was quoted as saying in an interview conducted Friday and published in Sunday's editions.

In the past, Regan said, the board has exacerbated recessions by keeping a tight rein on the money supply too long.

"What we are trying to do this time, and I know the Fed is as sensitive to this as I am, is to anticipate that and not stay in a low (money) supply mode any longer than is necessary in the downturn

Regan's comments represent the strongest signal yet of administration unhappiness with the Fed, an independent agency, during the persistence of high interest rates. Earlier in the year, the administration defended Fed policies as necessary to control inflation.

Regan declined to say how much faster he thought the supply of money should grow or when that growth should start.

"I'm not going to try to tell the Fed, since I am secretary of the Treasury and they are an independent group, exactly what mechanisms to use in order to do this," the secretary said.

But a slackening of the monetary reins would be "a sufficiency of money to enable the economy to recover nicely from its current flat period," he said.

that the share of the property tax burden borne by homes will rise 27 percent after the "Peveto Bill" takes full effect, while the commercial-industrial share will drop 6 percent and that of oil and gas will decline 16 percent.

The Peveto Bill requires a single appraisal of each piece of property by a countywide appraisal district in each county. It says taxes must be levied on full appraised value, with reappraisals at least every four years.

Legislative sponsors of Proposition 6 said they wanted to ease the impact of reappraisals, particularly the shift in taxes from businesses to homes.

The Peveto Bill already allows local governments to avoid huge, sudden lurches in property evaluations. It says that until 1985, they may limit the rise in the taxable value of a piece of property in the first year after a reappraisal to 50 percent. The rest of the increase would be added in subsequent years.

Local governments can tinker with tax rates to avoid big increases in taxes and also face the possibility of tax rollback elections if they raise taxes more than 8 percent a year.

But some individual homeowners, particularly in areas where real estate values have skyrocketed and reappraisals have been infrequent, will face massive jumps.

It is believed that taxable values of homes in some neighborhoods will triple or even quadruple after reappraisal.

Proposition 6 would take some, but not all, of the sting out of such a massive revaluation if — and only if — locally elected governing bodies chose to use it.

"It is probably the only choice we have to counter a disaster," Rep. Doug McLeod, D-Galveston, said during House debate. His city recently had undergone the trauma of reappraisal.

Sponsors pointed out that Proposition 6 would not cut taxes but merely slow their rise.

But Rep. Bennie Bock II of New Braunfels called Proposition 6 a "shell game" and said taxes would have to rise to make up for the loss in the tax base it would cause.

Ms. Karp raised a politically damaging objection that has dogged Proposition 6 from the day it was approved by the Senate — that rich people with expensive houses will benefit the most. Senators lopped off a House provision limiting the total exemption on a house to $40,000, regardless of its value.

"This is another example of 'Clementonics' — like Reaganomics. It benefits the rich and not the middle income or the poor," she said. "The Houston Independent School District has many, many homes worth over $1 million. If my house is worth $1 million, over the next 10 years I would get over $100,000 in tax relief from Proposition 6."

The House Study Group staff said data compiled by the Dallas Times Herald suggested that in Dallas, 53 percent of the total tax break from Proposition 6 would go to people with homes valued at $70,000 or more.

Ms. Karp said she feared the exemptions would take money away from schools that would not be made up with higher taxes on businesses.

But the Texas Association of School Administrators took no position on any of the three constitutional amendments dealing with taxation, and the Texas Association of School Boards decided at its September convention not to fight Proposition 6.

"There has to be some pressure relieved, and this is a local decision. There are some areas that do need this kind of escape valve," said Orby Holden, the TASB's executive director.

It is the fear of higher taxes on businesses that prompted Dorsey's objection.

"Businesses were bearing a disproportionate share (before the Peveto Bill) because their inventories were revalued regularly while homes were not. ... I think we have been paying too much all along," Dorsey said.

Brown said businessmen had nothing to fear.

"No city council that is interested in attracting business is going to let the word get out that 'we are going to make you pay more than your fair share of the tax burden,'" he said.

The Municipal League also favors Proposition 1, which allows cities to use "tax increment financing" and "tax abatement" to redevelop blighted areas.

Beirut on edge

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Terrorized by bombings that have killed 146 people in the past 17 days, merchants in this divided capital erected makeshift barricades Saturday to shield themselves from booby-trapped cars.

"We are living like rats. We go out and we don't know if we will be alive in an hour," said May Salameh, whose antique shop was leveled once by a bomb during Lebanon's 1975-1976 civil war.

Hidden explosives and parked cars packed with bombs have brought this combat-weary country to a state of agonizing nervousness. When and where will the next bomb go off and who is really doing it, the Lebanese ask themselves.

"I don't feel any safer, but it is the only thing that might work," said Hassan Ramiz, placing cinder blocks in front of his money-changing booth in the west Beirut business district.

Steers lose heartbreaker to Abilene

Eagles win on pass with 14 seconds remaining

By NATHAN POSS
Sports Editor

It was a heartbreaker extreme for the Big Spring Steers football team Friday night in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium. The Steers held their own for most of the game, and it appeared that they might hold off a last gasp Eagle rally and emerge with a win in the District 5-AAAAA opener for both schools.

Abilene quarterback Karl Kearney found split end Roman Bell in the corner of the end zone with 14 seconds to play for a nine-yard touchdown play, boosting the home town War Birds to an exciting 20-13 win.

The contest might prove to be a double tough loss for the Steers, too, as a recurring knee injury to star running back defensive back Bobby Earl Williams might keep the returning All-District performer out of action for the remainder of the year. And even if he returns, the earliest it could be would be three weeks.

Abilene drew first blood in the contest, but until the final six minutes, it was all Big Spring. The only problem was that the Steers didn't have a bigger margin going into the final stretch run.

The Eagles first score was set up after a 20-yard Big Spring punt gave the Eagles possession at the Steer 28. On a fourth and two from the 20, Abilene's Ron Lewis broke through the middle and found an open path to the goal line with 3:33 left in Quarter One. But a herd of Steers broke through to block the extra point, and it appeared until the final winning pass that the blocked PAT would be a big part in the win.

The Steers began their march toward a lead on the first play of the second period when linebacker Danny Stephens recovered an Abilene fumble on the Eagle 34.

After Richard Evans made four yards to the 30, Williams churned the Bovines to the 13 on runs of 11, one and five yards. Facing a third and four, quarterback Tracy Spence kept and boogied to the Abilene one. The Eagles held off the Steers for two plays, but Spence logged the ball across the touchdown stripe to tie the game with 8:23 left in the half. Gregg Scarbro booted the PAT for a 7-6 Steer lead.

The Steers held Abilene on their next possession, and a 28-yard punt gave the Bovines good field position at their own 49. A run of 10 by Williams and 19 by Spence moved the ball to the Eagle 11, but Spence was sacked on a fourth and six play at that point, killing the drive.

In the first half, both sides scored when the wind was at their backs. But when Abilene took the wind in the third period, the Steers buckled down defensively.

After Big Spring took the second half kickoff and was stopped, Abilene moved to the Big Spring 43 before stalling. Scott Hamilton then punted into end zone and the Steers took over on their own 20.

BSHS moved the ball to the Abilene 46, and on a third and four, the Steers had an apparent first down on a pass interference call against the Eagles. But the official making the call was overruled, and the Steers were forced to punt.

That turned out alright, as Scarbro pinned the Eagles to the eight, with a penalty moving it halfway to the goal at the four. As had been the case for most of the game, the Steer defense held, and Hamilton punted 35 yards to his own 46.

Working against the wind, the Steers stayed on the ground, eating up time and moving the pigskin. Evans and Williams took turns carrying the football, with a 13-yard pickup by Williams giving the Steers a first and goal on the Abilene four.

But Abilene dug in, pushing the Steers back to the seven. But on a big third down play only four snaps into the final stanza, Evans took an option pitch from Spence, and with the aid of a nifty clearing block by Williams, jaunted to paydirt and a 13-6 Steer lead.

The Steers went for two, but the option pitch to the left failed. Still, the Steers had a 13-6 lead with 10:18 to play and the wind at their backs.

But Abilene's Wayne Coffey, who played at Big Spring until his sophomore year, took the ensuing kickoff and moved it to the Eagle 38.

Two plays later, Abilene's Darrell Denman scampered for 28 yards, with only a saving tackle by Alan Trevino preventing him from going all the way. Abilene moved to the 19, at which time Williams was injured.

When questioned Saturday about how the injury occurred, Williams had only a general idea. "It was in a pile and I think Tony (Molina, Steer defensive tackle) fell on it," he related.

The Eagles used his absence to move around their right side on a couple of plays, with a dive up the middle producing a first and goal at the four. On second down, Denman barreled over from the two to narrow the Steer lead to 13-12 with just over five minutes remaining.

But on the big try for two, Abilene tried to go around the right side again, but Scarbro and Stephens greeted Kearney in plenty of time to preserve the Steers slim lead.

The Steers didn't use the wind advantage at this point well. They returned the kickoff to their own 17, and just three plays later, an Eagle blitz caused a fumble, but the Steers recovered at their own 14.

Scarbro punted 40 yards to the Eagle 46, but Kearney, who has been a thorn in the Steers side for the last two years, returned it to his right some 22 yards to the Big Spring 32.

Denman barreled for 12 yards on first down to the Steer 20, and Abilene moved on to the 11 where they faced a fourth and one. Hamilton got the call at this point, rambling for four yards and a first down at the seven.

Abilene made one yard on first down, but was penalized five yards on their next snap for illegal motion. Denman then made two yards to the Steer nine, but Abilene called their final time out before the decisive third down play with just 20 seconds remaining.

Kearney returned with the winning play. He rolled to his left and the southpaw delivered a pass to the back of the end zone to Roman Bell. Bell, who had run an inside then outside route, accepted the pass with just 14 seconds remaining after the Big Spring defender had lost his footing.

Kearney then passed on the right side for the two-point conversion to Austin England, but it was purely academic in regard to the final outcome.

It was the second straight year that Abilene had overcome a one touchdown deficit vs. Big Spring to win in the final quarter, and it was the second straight year that a Kearney punt return set the Eagles in motion.

The loss no doubt left the Steers saddened. After playing their hearts out, to lose in such a fashion had to have a double hurt. Williams finished what might be his final high school football game with 116 yards on 20 carries, while the Steer ground game as a whole ate up 188 yards.

The Steers must try and regroup next Friday when they travel to face the Midland Bulldogs, which played Odessa Permian surprisingly close in their contest two nights ago. Abilene travels to meet Permian on Friday.

To win over Coahoma Bulldogs

First half explosion boosts Colorado City

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado City Wolf Pack, aided by a 24 point scoring burst in the second quarter, coasted to a 30-16 win over the Coahoma Bulldogs here Friday night.

The Wolves totally dominated the first half of play as the Bulldogs were powerless to stop the strong offensive output of Colorado City. The Wolves were led by quarterback Jeff Hammond who ran for one touchdown and passed for two others.

Colorado City scored on its second possession of the first quarter when Hammond sneaked for the score with a one-yard run. The score came after a seven play drive by the Wolves. The conversion failed leaving the score at 6-0 with 3:32 left in the first period.

Coahoma was not able to move the ball on its next possession and was forced to punt to the Wolves. The Wolves drive also appeared to be stalled after three plays, but a run off of a fake punt by Mike Scott gained 19 yards and Colorado City was in business at the Bulldog 24-yard line.

The Wolves needed only four plays before running back Victor Jackson romped around right end for a three-yard touchdown with 11:15 left in the second quarter. The two point conversion failed again.

Coahoma quarterback Bruce Walker then threw an interception into the waiting arms of Jackson at the Coahoma 49. On the next play Jackson went 49 yards to paydirt and the Wolves went up 18-0 with 10:12 left in the half. Again the two point conversion went awry.

Ill-fated Coahoma fumbled the ball away to the Wolves on the first play of its next possession, but Colorado City turned the ball back to the Bulldogs on the Coahoma two-yard line after a goal line stand by the still unbowed defense.

On the Wolves next series of downs quarterback Hammond tosses a 31-yard scoring strike to split end Tim Nobles. The extra point try failed, but it really didn't matter anymore as the SETTING THE TONE ... Colorado City quarterback Jeff Hammond (2, on bottom) rests in the end zone amidst a pile for the Wolves first touchdown in the opening quarter of their game with Coahoma. Colorado City scored all 30 of their points in the opening half in the 30-14 win over their longtime rivals.

Cowboys go for 5th straight vs. Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys hope to whip a sometimes sputtering offense into gear Sunday when they gun for their fifth straight win against the St. Louis Cardinals before a sellout crowd at Busch Stadium.

The Cardinals, 1-3, also will be offensive-minded as wide receiver Mel Gray and tight end Doug Marsh are expected to come off the injured list and play for the first time this season.

Quarterback Jim Hart also will play after missing the first meeting between the two teams with a slight knee injury. The Cowboys took a 30-17 decision in the Sept. 13 contest.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry sees Hart's return as significant. "That's the biggest change I see," he said. "With Hart back and the others returning, I would think they should be pretty much at strength."

Landry, however, is concerned over a subpar performance turned in by the Cowboys last week in an 18-10 win over the New York Giants. With Tony Dorsett held under 100 yards rushing for the first time this year, Dallas needed three Rafael Septien field goals to win.

"We didn't block very well last week," Landry said. "If you don't block well, you don't go very far. We didn't block very well and, as a consequence, we didn't go very far."

Septien, by the way, has hit on 14 of 15 field goal attempts so far to lead the league in scoring with 51 points.

Quarterback Danny White has completed 71 of 141 passes, a 96.1 rating, for five touchdowns and only one interception.

"My attitude this year is to take what they give you and eliminate mistakes," White said. "It's not an attitude of creating big plays necessarily as one of eliminating mistakes. I'm not forcing the ball like I was last year."

"Consequently, I'm not getting the Con't. on 4-B "Danny White"

MARCUS ALLEN RUNS FOR MORE YARDAGE

Record setting Marcus Allen leads USC rout

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Sensational tailback Marcus Allen rushed for 233 yards to break two NCAA records Saturday as No. 1-ranked Southern California rolled over Oregon State 56-22 in the Pacific 10 Conference football opener for both schools.

Allen became the first college player to gain more than 200 yards in four consecutive games, even though he sat out the final quarter against the outmatched Beavers.

The 6-foot-2, 202-pound senior has gained 925 yards in leading the Trojans to a 4-0 record. His total breaks the four-game rushing record of 906 yards set by Greg Pruitt of Oklahoma in 1971.

Allen scored on runs of 30, 8 and 13 yards as the Trojans burst to a 42-17 halftime lead. He gained 133 yards in 20 carries in the first quarter and wound up carrying 35 times overall.

Oregon State, 1-4, was able to move the ball surprisingly well against the Trojans, but the Beavers' defense couldn't stop the powerful Southern Cal offense. Southern Cal was forced to punt only once. The Beavers had run only one offensive play and trailed 14-0 after just 4½ minutes.

The Trojans had the ball eight times in the first half and scored seven times. Southern Cal lost the ball on a fumble the only time it didn't score in the first 30 minutes.

Rice outlasts Tulane

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Calhoun passed for one touchdown and ran for another Saturday and Rice defenders overcame four trick plays to defeat Tulane, 20-16, in a nonconference college football game.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak for Rice and left Tulane winless at 0-4.

Tulane was successful in converting a fourth and 12 into a first down with a fake punt attempt. Instead of punting, kicker Vince Manalla passed 21 yards to Bobby Moses. Seven plays later, Manalla kicked a 28-yard field goal.

But Tulane's three attempts at onside kicks failed, giving Rice possession on its own 46, 45, and 47-yard lines.

Calhoun's first touchdown, a 47-yard scoring pass to Vince Courville, capped a 54-yard drive that began after Tulane's first onside kick attempt.

Tulane's Marvin Lewis ran two yards for a touchdown in the third quarter to tie the score at 10-10.

But Rice struck back in the fourth quarter, as Calhoun ran four yards for a touchdown to put the Owls ahead for good.

Joel Baxter kicked field goals of 29 and 27 yards for Rice.

UH dominates Baylor

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston defensive coordinator Don Todd was saying before Saturday's Southwest Conference opener against Baylor that his highly ranked defense would bend but not break.

The UH defense bent all the way to the one-foot line on the opening drive, but held and the Cougar offense, gaining strength behind sophomore quarterback Lionel Wilson, stunned the defending Southwest Conference champions 24-3 Saturday before a regional television audience.

Wilson, in his second start for the Cougars, passed for one touchdown and ran for another and the UH defense held Walter Abercrombie and Dennis Gentry, the two most prolific rushers in Baylor history, to a combined 34 yards.

"We knew we were going to have to lean on Baylor and it really helped when the offense came into its own," UH Coach Bill Yeoman said. "This was a great game for the kids' confidence. With Abercrombie and Gentry, I was really worried about this game."

Yeoman also was delighted with the progress of Wilson, who had problems earlier picking up his secondary receivers.

"On the touchdown pass by Wilson, he went to the fourth receiver," Yeoman said. "I couldn't have been more thrilled. He is really learning well and will continue to do so in the future."

Astros clinch 2nd half in loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Welch and Steve Howe scattered seven hits in pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-2 victory over Houston Saturday, although the Astros clinched the second-half title in the National League West by virtue of Cincinnati's loss to Atlanta. The Dodgers and Astros, who conclude the regular season Sunday, will meet Tuesday night in Houston in the opening game of the best-of-five NL mini-series.

Welch, 9-5, gave up only three hits in six innings to earn the win, one of the hits being Alan Knicely's first major-league home run.

Ken Landreaux led the Dodgers' 13-hit attack with three singles and Pedro Guerrero knocked in three runs with a pair of base hits. Joe Niekro, 9-9, took the loss.

The Dodgers scored in the first inning when Steve Sax walked and eventually scored on a double play ball.

By the third inning the Astros learned of Cincinnati's loss to the Braves. The Dodgers then added two more runs in the fourth on bases-loaded single by Guerrero. Los Angeles scored three more times in the fifth off Gordie Pladson.

Brewers edge Tigers for AL East

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Gorman Thomas drove in the go-ahead run with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in a two-run Milwaukee eighth inning and the Brewers held on to defeat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 Saturday to clinch the American League East "Second Season" championship. Rolfe Fingers, 6-3, the major league leader in saves with 28, earned the victory with 11-3 innings of shutout relief as the Brewers gained a playoff berth for the first time in the team's 13-year history.

The Brewers, who have a 2½-game lead over Detroit with one to play, advanced to the best-of-five division championship series against the New York Yankees, who won the first-half title.

Losing pitcher Jack Morris, 14-7, carried a six-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the eighth. But Paul Molitor drew a leadoff walk.

Cecil Cooper, whose sixth-inning error allowed the Tigers to run to score.

Horner led Braves give Astros NL West title

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bob Horner slammed a pair of home runs, drove in three runs and scored the winning run on second baseman Ron Oester's eighth-inning throwing error as the Atlanta Braves defeated Cincinnati 4-3 Saturday, eliminating the Reds from playoff competition.

The loss, Cincinnati's third in a row, clinched the National League West Division second-half title for the Houston Astros, who will play the first-half champion Los Angeles Dodgers in the mini-playoffs.

Horner led off the eighth with his third hit of the game, a single to center, and took third on Chris Chambliss' single. Dale Murphy lined out to Oester, who threw wildly past first base trying to double up Chambliss, allowing Horner to score.

Cardinals stay in contention in NL East

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Martin pitched a seven-inning shutout and drove in two runs as the St. Louis Cardinals, battling to stay in contention in the National League East, Ernie Camacho, 0-1, as Keith defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3 Saturday.

The Cardinals jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the opening inning off losing pitcher Hernandez, Dane Iorg and Ken Oberkfell each singled home runs.

In the second, Tom Herr walked, stole second, moved to third on a balk and scored on Gary Templeton's groundout to give St. Louis a 4-0 lead.

The Cardinals added three more runs in the third on Darrell Porter's sacrifice fly and Martin's two-run single off reliever Robert Long. St. Louis added an unearned run in the fourth inning.

Martin, 8-5, retired the first 11 batters before yielding a fourth-inning single to Mike Easler.

Injury costs Sutton World Series chance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Houston right-hander Don Sutton hasn't missed many starts in his lengthy baseball career, but he won't get a chance to take the mound when the Astros face his former Los Angeles teammates in the first round of the playoffs.

All things considered, Sutton, who'd missed just four starts in his 15 Dodger seasons before going to the Astros, would rather have skipped Friday's assignment against his former team.

"This is one (start) I should have missed," Sutton said after a pitch by Los Angeles' Jerry Reuss fractured his kneecap Friday night to knock him out of the Dodgers-Astros playoffs that begin Tuesday in Houston.

The Astros clinched the second-half National League West title Saturday when second-place Cincinnati lost to Atlanta.

"It was a rather long ride over to Centinela," Sutton said of the ambulance trip after he was hit by the pitch.

"I think anyone who wanted something very much for a very long time and then sees a chance not to be involved in it would understand my feelings very vividly."

The incident happened in the third inning, after Sutton had allowed one run in the first two innings. He got the loss in the 6-2 defeat, his ninth in 18 decisions, but only his second setback in nine decisions during the second half of the split season.

"This is going to cost me a chance at something I looked forward to, the playoffs and the World Series," said the 36-year old Sutton. "But there's nothing I can do about it. I plan on being at the World Series with this team anyway."

Sutton was attempting to punt when the incident occurred. Asked if he thought Reuss had thrown at him, Sutton answered: "I don't know... the ball was way inside. I had no chance."

Reuss said the pitch that hit Sutton was "just a fast ball that ran in on him."

Sutton is the Dodgers' all-time leader in eight pitching categories. He was 230-175 in 15 seasons with Los Angeles prior to signing as a free agent with the Astros last winter.

But Steers move closer

San Angelo wins own cross country

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo Central continued their dominance here Saturday of the West Texas high school cross country circuit, but the Big Spring Steers continued to eke toward the Bobcats.

San Angelo tallied 33 points on the Santa Fe Park course, with the Steers just four points behind with 37. Abilene ended with 70, Midland Lee, 103, Odessa Permian 131 and Midland 149.

The Big Spring runners return home for the Big Spring Cross Country race here next Saturday, with their eyes still set on the District 5-AAAA Meet on October 31.

Fumbles spur Nebraska by Auburn

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska took advantage of two fumble recoveries deep in Auburn territory to record a 17-3 non-conference college football victory Saturday.

Cornhuskers defensive end Jimmy Williams helped break a 3-3 third-quarter deadlock when he forced and recovered Auburn quarterback Charles Thomas' fumble at the Tiger 4-yard line. The recovery set up a 3-yard Roger Craig touchdown just 45 seconds after Nebraska kicker Kevin Seibel tied the game with a 39-yard field goal.

Western Texas wins WJC Golf meet

SNYDER — Western Texas College won this weekend's Western Junior College Athletic Conference's golf tournament on their home course, using only 294 strokes to take a seven stroke win over second place Odessa College.

Midland College, led by ex-Big Spring Bruce Carroll's round of 76, finished third with 310 strokes. Following Midland College was New Mexico Junior College, South Plains and NMCI.

Medalist in the weekend tourney was Pete Petri of Western Texas. Carroll's round was good for fourth in the medalist competition.

The golfing action was played under some very gusty winds that made low scores difficult.

Mizzou upsets Bellard's Dogs

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Running back Bobby Meyer ran for one touchdown and caught a pass for another as Missouri upset ninth-ranked Mississippi State 14-3 in a college football game Saturday.

Quarterback Mike Hyde clinched the victory by hitting Meyer with a 2-yard scoring pass with 1:03 left, capping a time-consuming 71-yard march.

Meyer, who carried 26 times for 122 yards, collected his first touchdown on a 4-yard run, giving Missouri a 7-3 lead late in the first quarter.

The victory in the regionally televised game gave the Tigers a 4-0 record and dropped the Bulldogs to 3-1.

Okie State extends North Texas loss skien

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman kicker Larry Roach booted three field goals for the only scoring of the afternoon as Oklahoma State overcame a sticky North Texas defense — and its own mistakes — for an uninspired 9-0 intersectional football win Saturday.

Although the Cowboys completely dominated the statistics, they gave North Texas four turnovers to keep things close on the scoreboard.

Roach's kicks traveled 39, 51 and 25 yards, capping OSU scoring drives that sputtered inside North Texas territory.

Andrews explosion stops Lamesa

ANDREWS — The Andrews Mustangs, trailing 7-6 at the half, roared back in the final two stanzas to rout the Lamesa Golden Tors by a count of 43-7 behind the four touchdown performance of sparkling quarterback Keith Brooks.

Brooks opened the scoring on a two-yard run in the first quarter, but the kick failed.

Lamesa then took the lead in the second stanza when quarterback Sam Hansard passed 20 yards to Tony Lara, and Sid Schmidt booted the PAT.

But Andrews seemed to come alive in the third period, scoring 23 points.

Brooks had all three of the Andrews touchdowns in the third period on runs of three, 20 and one yard.

In the final stanza,

Mustang Darrell Ray scampered 35 yards to paydirt and Adam Smith also scored on a 35-yard jaunt.

Andrews' Brad Boynton kicked all the PATs in the final half, with Smith receiving a pass from Brooks for one two-point conversion.

The win boosted the state-ranked Andrews record to 5-0. They are 3-0 in 2-AA-A action. Lamesa fell to 0-5 and 0-3.

After romp of Grady

Top ranking deserved by Highland

HIGHLAND — The number one rated six-man team in the state, Highland, left Grady Wildcats Coach Richard Gibson with a big impression after Friday night's 50-0 win.

"They are rated where they should be," said Gibson of the Highland No. 1 state ranking. "They are the most physical team that I've ever coached against. They're going places again this year."

Last year, Highland advanced to the state championship game before losing, and they look to have the potential to better that this time.

After scoring 16 points in the first quarter and upping that to a 34-0 halftime lead, Highland added 16 points in the third stanza, at which time the contest was called on the 46-point rule in six-man football.

Grady had two scoring opportunities in the contest, but couldn't capitalize. A Grady touchdown on a screen pass to Jackie Vining was called back just before halftime.

Gibson had high praise for Highland's 190-pound Monty Richburg. "He's quick and fast as I've ever seen. He's a very physical and punishing. He can play in college football."

One bright spot for Grady was Lynn Key. He had eight tackles and 41 yards rushing against the rugged Highland team.

Another bright spot for the always positive Gibson was that no Wildcats were hurt enough to keep them out of next week's game against Trent.

"Fortunately, nobody was hurt, and that really had me worried playing a team like Highland. If we can make it through our next two games with our heads up, I think we'll have a real good chance to win our last four games," said Gibson.

Highland plays at Hermleigh next Friday, while the Trent game will be on the Wildcats home turf.

Everything starts right for Wolves

Colorado City would not take a break, though, as Mike Scott intercepted a Bruce Walker pass and Hammond once again connected with Nobles on a 22-yard pass with eight seconds left to play in the first half. The conversion failed.

Coahoma assistant coach Dona Harriman said of the first half, "About all we did was show up for the first half. We put on our suits and went out there, but that was about all." Harriman said Denny Islas, who had two interceptions in the game, was the Bulldog's outstanding player for the game.

The Colorado City Wolves were unable to score the entire second half because of a Bulldog defense that refused to back down. The offense came alive also in the third quarter with a scoring pass from Walker to Manuel Martinez that covered eight yards. Martinez ran the two point conversion.

The Bulldogs scored again with 1:21 left in the fourth quarter as Bruce Walker ran it over from two yards out. The conversion pass from Walker to end Lynn Hinsley was good making the score 30-16.

Victor Jackson had 120 yards rushing for the Wolves while Bruce Walker chalked up 80 yards for the Bulldogs.

Colorado City claimed its second win in a row and rises to 2-3 for the year, while Coahoma drops to 1-4.

C-City fish nip Coahoma

COAHOAMA — The Coahoma ninth graders saw Colorado City score with just 22 seconds remaining here Thursday night and take a 22-14 win in football action.

Colorado City drew first blood on a 12-yard pass in the first quarter, with the two-point run giving the visitors an 8-0 lead.

Coahoma came back to score on a two-yard run by Jimmy Yanez, but the try for two failed.

Coahoma took the lead in the second quarter when Yanez ran over from the one. Yanez's two-point conversion run moved the Coahoma halftime lead to 14-8.

But Colorado City tied the score in the third stanza, setting the stage for the final minute visiting heroics. The final Colorado City score came on a four-yard run.

Offensive stalwarts for the Coahoma freshmen were Yanez, Bobby Henry, Billy Brant and John Swinney. Yanez had 118 yards rushing on 23 carries.

Defensive stars for Coahoma were Robbie Henry, Shawn Justiss, Ronnie Musser and Emilio Molina. Henry had 10 tackles to lead the young Bulldog.

TO NO AVAIL ... Coahoma's Manuel Martinez (with ball) runs for an apparent five-yard touchdown during third quarter action in their loss to the Colorado City Wolves. But the touchdown was called back due to a penalty.

Michigan rambles

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Tailback Butch Woolfolk rushed for 176 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as eighth-ranked Michigan, moving almost at will against Indiana, beat the Hoosiers 38-17 in a Big Ten Conference football game.

The Wolverines built a 24-10 halftime lead, halted one Indiana drive in the third quarter with a pass interception by Marion Body in the Michigan end zone and put the game out of reach with touchdown runs of 24 yards by Woolfolk and 2 yards by Lawrence Ricks.

The Hoosiers moved from their 10-yard line to the Michigan 5 before Body made the interception off Indiana quarterback Babe Laufenberg.

Indiana held the Wolverines on the next possession — forcing the only Michigan punt of the game. But, the Wolverines got the ball back a minute later and needed only four plays before Woolfolk's 24-yard run gave them a 30-10 lead. Woolfolk also scored on a 1-yard run in the second quarter.

Pitt QB unreal in win

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Quarterback Dan Marino passed for 346 yards and six touchdowns as fourth-ranked Pittsburgh outscored South Carolina 42-28 in a regionally televised football game Saturday.

The Panthers were awesome in the first half, holding the Gamecocks to minus seven yards in offense while building a 28-0 lead.

Pitt, with Marino leading the way, scored almost at will in the first half.

Iowa State ties OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Tailback Dwayne Crutchfield dove for a tying fourth-quarter touchdown and ran for 171 yards Saturday as 20th-ranked Iowa State held No. 5 Oklahoma to a 7-7 tie in the Big Eight Conference football opener for both teams.

Crutchfield, held in check the first half by a swarming Oklahoma defense, carried 43 times for the Cyclones, who are 3-0-1.

Iowa State's touchdown came after the Cyclones gained possession at the Oklahoma 46 following an interception by John Arnaud. Following Crutchfield's TD, Alex Gifford's conversion tied the score.

That turnover was one of five in the second half for Oklahoma, which was beaten by No. 1 Southern California 28-24 last week.

Iowa State had two opportunities late in the fourth quarter to win the game. However, the Cyclones missed a 23-yard field goal with 1:12 remaining and a 62-yard field goal attempt with four seconds left on the clock.

DISTRICT 5-AAAAA ROUNDUP

Cooper beats Bobcats

SAN ANGELO — Abilene Cooper sophomore Alan Gunter rushed for 170 yards on 24 carries to pace the Cougars to a 21-6 win over San Angelo Central in the 5-AAAAA opener for both schools.

The win moved Cooper's season mark to 3-1, while San Angelo fell to 2-2. Cooper plays Odessa at home next week, while San Angelo hosts Midland Lee.

Cooper opened the scoring on a 77-yard punt return by John Williams in the opening stanza. Denny Bryson kicked the PAT.

The Cougars upped to count in the second stanza on a two-yard run by Gunter, with Bryson again toeing the PAT for a 14-0 lead.

San Angelo scored late in the second period on a one-yard run by Kel Crain. The 35-yard drive was set up by an interception.

Cooper's final score came in the third period on a quarterback sneak by Brad Morrison. The PAT was again true.

San Angelo forced two Cooper fumbles only yards from paydirt in the final period, but couldn't cash in on either opportunity.

Permian wins toughie

MIDLAND — It wasn't the easy win for Permian as most had predicted, but the defending state champions held on for a 17-10 triumph over the Midland Bulldogs here Friday night in the 5-AAAAA opener for both schools.

After a scoreless first quarter, Permian drew first blood and the lead for good on a 48-yard run by Dale Carr. Bobby Knott booted the PAT.

But Midland came back to narrow the margin to 7-3 at half when mammoth 260-pound Joe Goebel kicked a 28-yard field goal.

Permian extended their lead to 14-3 in the third quarter on Coy Brown's 11-yard pass to Robbie Brown, with Knott again booting the PAT.

But Midland fought back when Wesley Williams ran in from the six, with Goebel's PAT narrowing Permian's margin to 14-10.

Permian moved deep into Midland territory in the final frame, but had to settle for a 23-yard field goal by Knott to finalize the scoring.

Midland had the ball on the Permian 27-yard line with just a minute to play but did not score.

Permian had 16 first downs and 285 yards total offense, while Midland managed 14 first downs and 202 total yards in offense.

Permian hosts Abilene next Friday while Midland hosts Big Spring.

Lee dominates Odessa

ODESSA — The Midland Lee Rebels kept their season record perfect in their District 5-AAAAA opener with Odessa High, rolling to a hard fought 21-7 triumph.

The Lee Rebels managed only 22 yards total offense, but the rugged defense of Coach Spike Dykes held OHS to 197 total offensive yards. Both teams had 12 first downs.

As usual, Lee used defense and the kicking game to set up their offense. Lee's first score came on a one-yard run by Calvin Riggs, with Van Gravitt kicking the PAT. The score was set up when OHS quarterback Derrick Shepard fumbled on his own 40.

Lee moved the score to 14-0 later in the second period when Luther Johnson returned a punt 85 yards for a touchdown. Gravitt toed the PAT.

The score remained that way until the final frame when Lee's Bart Rayn ran over from the two. The PAT was true by Gravitt. Big play in the drive was a 53-yard run by tailback Troy Barber.

OHS defender Boyd Cowan intercepted a pass off Ryan later in the fourth quarter to set up the Bronchos at the Lee 40. Derrick Shepard then scored with just over five minutes remaining on an eight-yard run. Able Mendoza's kick was good.

Lee, now 4-0 on the year, meets San Angelo on the road next Friday. OHS is now 2-2. They face Abilene Cooper on the road next Friday.

Forsan breaks 5-AA drought in 42-0 romp

O'DONNELL — The Forsan Buffaloes won their first District 5-AA game since a win over Anton in 1979 here Friday night, and they left no doubt as to the outcome. The Forsan squad blitzed O'Donnell by a score of 42-0 in the district opener for both squads.

Forsan scored in every quarter of the lopsided triumph, with a variety of performers getting into the act.

Preston Daniels opened the scoring with just under four minutes gone in the contest, running one yard to paydirt. The score was set up on a 22-yard pass from Robert Eggleston to Tony DeLaGarza. Lewis Boeker toed the PAT.

With 11:05 left in the first half, Brad Jenkins scored for the Buffaloes, with Boeker again toeing the PAT.

The Forsan crew wasted no time in tacking on another touchdown. With 8:25 remaining in the half, Daniels cruised in from the one and Boeker toed the PAT. The short scoring plunge by Daniels was set up on a 23-yard run by Wade McMurray.

Forsan didn't let up in the third stanza, as Eggleston hurled a 31-yard pass to David Harrell. The PAT failed. O'Donnell threatened to score in the fourth quarter, but Daniels put a stop to it and more, picking off a pass and returning it 91 yards to paydirt. Boeker ran for the two-point conversion.

Forsan's final run came from McMurray. After he ran 40 yards to get the Buffaloes close, McMurray ran over from the one. Boeker toed the PAT for the final point in the Forsan romp.

The district opening win moved the Forsan record to 3-2, and was a tremendous ego boost, as Coach Jan East recognized.

"It sure helps to win, and to win like we did. Maybe it'll help us get some momentum going for ole' Stanton next week," said East.

Others drawing East's praise were defender

Harrell, who had two pass interceptions and made some big tackles, as well as Daniels, who was all over the field.

"We didn't play as good a defense as we did against Sterling last week but we shut them out and that's what it's all about," noted East.

The loss in O'Donnell's league opener dropped their season record to 3-2.

Stanton dominates Seagraves, 22-6

SEAGRAVES — The Stanton Buffaloes used three touchdown runs from Kevin Newman and a rock hard defense here Friday night to take a big 22-6 win over Seagraves in the District 5-AA opener for both schools.

The win marked the second straight year that Stanton has beaten the always tough Seagraves team. Stanton is now 1-0 in 5-AA play and 3-2 on the year, while Seagraves has an identical season record but is 0-1 in league play.

Newman used an excellent offensive line performance to ramble for 190 yards on 22 carries in the contest, while fullback Bobby Barnhill had 11 carries for 61 yards.

Stanton opened the scoring when Scott Church booted a 20-yard field goal with 1:52 left in the first quarter. The three-pointer was set up when Stanton recovered a Seagraves fumble at the opponent's 29-yard line.

Early in the second stanza, Seagraves drove to the Stanton 11-yard line but was thwarted at that point. And moments later, Stanton took control for good. After gaining six yards on first down, tailback Newman burst through and raced 83 yards to paydirt and a 9-0 Stanton lead. Church booted the PAT with 9:47 left in the half.

Late in the first half, Stanton's Rocky Barnes partially blocked a Seagraves punt, with the Buffs taking possession on the Seagraves 33.

Six plays later and with only 25 seconds remaining in the half, Newman scored from the one. The PAT failed, but the visiting Buffs held a 16-0 lead.

Stanton iced the contest in the third stanza. With 2:40 remaining, Newman capped a 10-play, 76-yard drive by running to paydirt from the three. Newman had the key play in the drive, racing 46 yards to set up the touchdown. The PAT was blocked.

Seagraves' only score came after Stanton fumbled a punt with less than two minutes remaining in the game. On the first play following the fumbled punt, tailback Daniel Suniga hailed in a 32-yard pass from quarterback Clay Mahler. The try for two failed.

Stanton recovered three Seagraves fumbles and had one pass interception in the contest. Recovering fumbles for the Buffs were Polo Mendez, Wally Hazelwood and Newman, while Joe Ortiz had the pass interception.

Others that drew praise for their defensive work included tackle Fabian Villa, linebacker, George Lewis, cornerback Ortiz and end Tracy Spinks.

Garden City whips Water Valley

GARDEN CITY — The Garden City Bearkats used their final non-district tuneup in style, completely dominating play in a 37-12 win over hapless Water Valley.

The win moved the Stu Cooper coached team to a mark of 3-2 going into next week's 3-A West Zone opener against Sands, while Water Valley fell to 0-4 with the loss.

Garden City scored all of their points before Water Valley countered, with Victor Medrano starting the rout with a 23-yard field goal.

With 2:57 remaining in the first quarter, Robbie Creswell rolled in from the three. The PAT failed.

Garden City struck again in Quarter One, when Richard Batla ran across 35 yards to paydirt from his quarterback position. Medrano booted the PAT for a 16-0 Bearkat lead.

The Bearkats increased that margin with 4:48 left in the first half when Batla hooked up with Medrano on a 14-yard scoring pass. Medrano's kick was true for a 23-0 halftime advantage.

Garden City insured the win in the third period with two touchdowns.

The first came on a 15-yard run by Billy Kelso and the second on a 30-yard interception return by the ever present Medrano. Medrano toed both PATs.

Water Valley didn't quit, scoring their two touchdowns in the final stanza. The first was on a two-yard sneak by quarterback Wendall Ramsey, and the final TD came with just over a minute remaining on an 81-yard screen pass from Tim Blair to Billy Montgomery. Both PATs failed.

Medrano finished the night with 19 points on two touchdowns, four extra point kicks and a field goal.

The Bearkats rolled up 396 yards rushing and 445 total

Sands records win

SMYER — The Sands Mustangs rode the three touchdown performance of Santos Ybarra to their first win of the year, an 18-17 triumph over Smyer.

Ybarra rushed for 144 yards on 20 carries and helped offset Smyer's speedy quarterback, William Mosley.

The Mustangs of Coach Jim White had started the year with consecutive 0-0 ties, but then had lost their last two games. But in this final non-district tuneup the Sands team was not denied.

Ybarra opened the scoring in the first quarter on a 57-yard jaunt. The PAT failed.

Mosley brought Smyer back in the second quarter for a 9-6 halftime lead when he booted a 31-yard field goal and then hurled a 56-yard scoring strike to Kevin Gholsen.

Ybarra gave Sands the lead in the third quarter on a six-yard run, but the PAT failed, leaving the Mustangs with a 12-9 advantage.

But the topsy turvy game continued as Mosley scampered 20 yards to paydirt early in the final stanza for a 15-12 home town lead.

Ybarra then scored what proved to be the game winner on a 10-yard run. The PAT failed, but the Mustangs had enough to win.

Smyer's final points came with 20 seconds left when Sands took a deliberate rather than punting out of their end zone.

While it was the Mustangs first win, White also said it was their best played game.

"We played good last week against Loraine, except we just made a few stupid little mistakes that cost us. We didn't do that against Smyer," he said.

The win moves Sands into their District 3-A (West zone) competition next week against Garden City, a team that appears to be among the favorite in the race.

Students get a lesson in Nazi horror

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Jones was teaching his pupils in a wealthy California suburb about the murder of Jews in Nazi Germany. Suddenly the lesson got out of hand, and the atmosphere that led to mindless slaughter in Germany threatened to take over an American high school.

TV tonight

The story of how that could happen is the subject of a television movie, "The Wave," shown tonight from 7 to 8 p.m. on ABC.

Jones, in an interview, said it started 14 years ago with a question from one of his pupils at Cuddy School in Palo Alto, Calif. How could Germans deny any knowledge or responsibility for the Holocaust?

He decided to devote the next class period to a demonstration of Nazi rule. He darkened the classroom. He played Wagnerian music.

"I wrote on the blackboard, 'Strength Through Discipline.' I had them practice cryptic, sharp answers to my questions."

But it became clear the next day that the lessons in Nazism had worked deep changes in his classroom. "When I came to class the next day, I was shocked to see the students were totally silent, sitting at attention. I thought I should continue."

For several days, the experiment grew more elaborate. Jones invited a "Third Wave" salute, a raised cupped hand. He issued membership cards for the group Jones was "Fuehrer" of.

"My own feelings were beginning to change. I was excited at how learning seemed to increase in this environment. I gave a homework assignment and people seemed to do it," Jones said.

But the lesson had spread throughout the school by the third and fourth days. Over a hundred students were crowding into his classroom.

"Third Wave" banners were going up in the library. Even the principal was returning the party salute. Members of the group were verbally abusing and scuffling with non-members.

Jones was now nervous, trying to figure how best to end this experiment — which had drawn barely a murmur of protest from parents, teachers or anyone else.

On the fifth and last day came the climax. Three hundred students crowded into an auditorium, where Jones promised he would introduce a leader who would unite the country behind "The Third Wave." This was no game, Jones said.

This was real. Jones turned on two television sets and said, "Here is your leader." He walked out of the room. Doors slammed noisily shut. The only sound in the room was the hiss of the empty TV screens.

Recalls one of his students, Steve Coniglio, then 16, and now an actor in New York: "My most vivid image of the Holocaust was imagining people led into cement block rooms, the doors slamming shut and then the gas coming in. Well, we waited two minutes, then five minutes, and no new leader appeared on the screen. Then I got hit with the same feeling and screamed, 'I'm getting out of here.'"

And with that, the spell was broken, the lesson learned. It can happen here.

THEY GOT EACH OTHER — Seen together at a recent taping of ABC's "Good Morning America" show are Sonny and Cher, who appear to be remembering the good old days as a popular Sixties signing duo (and as husband and wife).

Bentsen nixes gold standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not only would a return to the gold standard not bail the United States out of its current economic problems, but it also could make things worse, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Saturday.

One of the pitfalls is that tying U.S. money to gold would enable the Soviet Union to manipulate this country's economy, the Texas Democrat said in remarks prepared for Texas television stations.

Asked about the sentiment favoring a return to the gold standard, Bentsen pointed out that a gold commission now is studying the possibility. Some senators have spoken in favor of it, he added.

"But there are a lot of people just looking for an easy answer, an easy out to our economic problems, and frankly I don't think that's the solution," Bentsen said. The United States has been on the gold standard several times in the past, and those periods were not marked by economic or financial stability, he said.

"We were on the gold standard at the beginning of the Great Depression and certainly went off of it because we felt that contributed to the problem," Bentsen said.

A major problem in going to the gold standard now is the advantage that would give the Soviet Union, one of the world's major gold producers.

"Are we going to put our economic policies in their hands? Where they could withhold gold, or they could flood the markets with gold? I think that's a mistake. I really don't believe that's the way to go," Bentsen added.

'Layers upon layers of military hardware'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new defense plan envisions layers upon layers of military hardware — missiles, counter-missiles, radar-eluding bombers, armed space satellites — that the Soviets must contend with should they attack the United States.

The $180.3 billion program includes — along with funds for myriad military equipment and research — a number of strategic options.

Because of the options, and the need for Congress to provide money for the plan, no one knows exactly how it will all turn out. But conversations with Defense Department officials indicate that, far into the future, the system might look something like this:

Deep in a mountainside, 2,000 or more feet below the surface, rests an MX nuclear missile with a range of 8,000 miles.

Other such missiles, each with 10 warheads and a nuclear "throw weight" of 7,900 pounds, are closer to the surface in "hardened" steel and concrete shelters, with anti-ballistic missiles on the ground guarding them.

In the air circles a long-endurance plane that also can launch the 192,000-pound MX.

AWACS observation planes fly at 30,000 feet, their radar and electronic equipment augmenting ground radar in the watch for a Soviet attack. The AWACS can direct F-15 fighter jets against any attacking aircraft.

Higher up yet are radar satellites and other satellites with weapons that can be fired against attackers.

On the ground are mobile radar tracking stations the size of semi-trailer trucks to receive the satellite warnings. These can be flown from spot to spot or moved on the surface, replacing the stationary tracking facilities that now are sitting targets for the Soviets.

At the ready are updated B-1 bombers and the "Stealth" bombers designed to be "invisible" to Soviet radar. These carry cruise missiles that fly at 550 knots and are accurate enough to hit a football field at a distance of 1,500 nautical miles.

Below the surface of the sea lurk submarines carrying cruise missiles or the new Trident II missiles twice as powerful as the current generation of Tridents whose accuracy is a government secret.

Then there are mobile command centers on the ground and in the air to help the president control the vast array of military hardware. Special very low and very high-frequency communications systems and satellites connect the president, military commanders, troops, planes, ships and submarines.

Not all these elements may be included. The first updated B-1 bomber won't be delivered to the Air Force for 3½ years and the first MX missile won't be put in the ground until 1986.

Defense officials, who described the plan to reporters on the basis they not be quoted by name, said the first MX missiles would go in existing Titan or Minuteman missile silos hardened with steel and concrete to protect against increasingly accurate Soviet weapons.

Then, by 1984, a decision would be made on long-term basing, which could include aircraft carrying the MX, deep underground silos, ballistic missile defense, or a combination of these.

One official said the missiles put first in existing silos might or might not be moved in the final deployment.

City manager's job is more than 8 to 5

By TINA MILLER
Lifestyle Editor

COLORADO CITY — A sign sits on the desk of Colorado City's city manager that reads, "No! I want it today. If I wanted it tomorrow I'd have asked for it tomorrow."

The sign reflects the philosophy of Brenda Tarter, who has filled the office of city manager since August 1980. A native of C-City, Mrs. Tarter was city secretary for six years prior to her present position. As city secretary she was second in command in the city government and was twice the acting city manager.

"The responsibilities for the city secretary are greater than the city manager."

Surprisingly, Mrs. Tarter said, "The responsibilities for the city secretary are greater than the city manager. Politics is more what's in here."

Her responsibilities as city manager are great nonetheless. Duties include overseeing the entire city operation, making and overseeing the budget, and complying with state regulations for water, sewer, and other aspects of the city's services. "The red tape is a part of it (the job)," she said. Regulations are becoming stiffer and harder to meet everyday.

Among the problems Mrs. Tarter inherited was the establishment of a landfill or upgrading the present landfill to comply with state regulations. "I've been out on the back hoe, digging holes all over Mitchell County to find good land for the landfill," she said. She said the soil must contain 30 percent clay to comply with regulations. After much research, new chemicals were used in the present landfill soil to bring it up to the current standard. Mrs. Tarter estimates a new landfill would have cost the city more than $100,000.

Mrs. Tarter is also proud of the Wallace Community Educational Advisory Council grant which she wrote. The city applied for a $400 grant from Levi Strauss Company to build a community gazebo in downtown Colorado City. The $400 is called "seed money" because "something good will grow from it," said Mrs. Tarter. In order to obtain the grant, she had to gain support of all clubs and organizations in the city and prove the project would promote community interest.

Land for the gazebo was donated by a citizen, and the projected date of completion for the structure is early 1982. The gazebo, which measures 16 feet in diameter, will be used for all types of community events including weddings, special celebrations, parades, and other public events. Total cost for the gazebo is about $7,000, all except $400 of which was raised by the community. "It (the gazebo) enhances the downtown area greatly," said Mrs. Tarter.

Mrs. Tarter is currently writing another grant for a new swimming pool in the city. The present pool was built in 1939 by the Works Projects Administration (WPA). The grant Mrs. Tarter hopes to receive is from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which would pay for half the estimated $500,000 required to build the pool. Interest rates are currently so high, however, that Mrs. Tarter expressed doubts as to whether the city could afford to pay even half the cost of the new facility.

Mrs. Tarter graduated from high school in Colorado City and has since taken several courses at Texas Tech University in Lubbock and Angelo

State University in San Angelo. She is a registered tax assessor and certified in several other areas of city government.

Shunning the idea of ever being discriminated against by those in her field because she is a woman, Mrs. Tarter said, "I'm not into women's lib or ERA (Equal Rights Amendment). It was just a job opportunity. I've loved city business since the day I stepped in, and I'm sure it's in my blood."

Mrs. Tarter believes budget cuts will greatly affect all towns and cities regardless of their size. "Revenue sharing will be the greatest factor cities will feel," she said. Colorado City buys virtually all its equipment with the revenue sharing funds, and the elimination of those funds severely limits the equipment that can be purchased. Those who govern the city will be forced to choose between offering fewer services and raising prices, and according to Mrs. Tarter, "That's a tough choice to make."

"I've loved city business since the day I stepped in, and I'm sure it's in my blood."

Still uncertain exactly how the budget cuts will affect Colorado City, Mrs. Tarter said "We're just trying to stand back and consider what might happen. Small cities will hurt real bad in the next three years," she said. "New tax laws have greatly affected small towns ... because the industrial tax base is low and homeowners must carry the weight of the taxes," Mrs.

RED TAPE AND POLITICS — Though the amounts of red tape and regulations connected with the job of city manager are often staggering, Mrs. Tarter accepts them as part of the job. Mrs. Tarter has held the city manager's office in Colorado City since August 1980 and believes her success stems from the city's department heads.

Tarter continued, "The average homeowner's taxes tripled this year ... and it's not over yet."

Mrs. Tarter's job as city manager is not one of 8 a.m.-5 p.m. "Irate citizens never call from 8 to 5," she said, "and sewer backups never happen from 8 to 5." Her family, however, is very understanding. "They help me a lot,"

she said of husband, Joe, and daughters, Jan, 16, and Holly, 12.

"The reason I feel successful with the city is the department heads," said Mrs. Tarter. "They do all the work." She describes her experiences in city government as "the greatest learning experience there is for a person in a small town. The city is a different business than any other" because it is so broad.

Mrs. Tarter's philosophy of working with people is simple. "I believe in treating everybody fair and equal," she said, "and treating others like I would want to be treated myself. But I'm not one of life's success stories. I'm just a working girl."

Columnist reveals reasons for her success

'The Best of Dear Abby' spans 25 years

I'm asked almost daily, "What kind of moron writes to a newspaper columnist for advice?"

I've said repeatedly that the person who is smart enough to know that he has a problem — and wants TO DO something about it — is no moron.

Then there are those who ask, "Why do YOU think people write to you?" Since the people who write to me represent the broadest cross-section of men, women and children imaginable, they write for a variety of reasons.

"I don't use form letters."

*I've never had a press agent,
I have no ghost writers."*

Many hope to find quick and easy solutions to complex problems they've struggled with for years. Others don't really want an answer, they just want to tell somebody their side of it without being interrupted or questioned. Some are too ashamed of their problem to face their own clergyman, and many don't belong to a church. Others write to complain, unload, confess, or sound off. Some are just plain lonely and have no one to talk to. They trust me. And the price is right.

But most people who write to Dear Abby are not aware of the help available to them in their own communities. (I keep up-to-date files of all the "help" agencies in every community that runs my column.)

All who request personal unpublished replies receive them. I don't use form letters.

I've never had a press agent, I have no ghost writers. Every column, book and article that bears my name is written by yours truly. If some of the signatures sound contrived, it's because the writer has either provided a fictitious name or has asked me to do so.

Although I have a staff of competent, caring assistants, all personally trained by me, I still answer many of the unpublished letters myself. I also telephone those whose problems are urgent — a despondent reader who threatens suicide or a friendless girl frantically searching for a safe, legal abortion or a home for unwed mothers.

I'm asked, "To what do you attribute the success of your column?"

It's brief, to the point and written in language that everybody can understand. I also select letters that I think will appeal to a wide variety of readers: the young, middle-aged, elderly, the sophisticated, squares, gays.

I'm sure that some read "Dear Abby" for entertainment. Others are looking for answers to their problems. Many are fascinated with keyhole peeping — getting their kicks from reading about the intimacies of someone else's private life.

I know that many read my column for comfort. It's reassuring to know that others suffer from the same feelings of anger, jealousy, hostility, insecurity and guilt that plague them. Misery does love company.

I've published letters on every conceivable subject, from shoplifting to face-lifting. In one week, I've dealt with mastectomies, vasectomies, bed-wetting, child-molesting, acne, arson, incest, rape and false families.

I regard my column as a subtle educational device. I take the view that not only is it good for us to laugh at the more absurd letter writers, it's good for them, too. Sometimes it's shock treatment. It helps get a problem into perspective once it's cut down to a size that can be managed.

Those who write "the funny ones" don't mean to be funny, but their letters somehow come out that way. As can be expected, the funny ones come from people who range all the way from slightly peculiar to those who are clearly not playing with a full deck.

But they all have one thing in common. They're in dead earnest.

DEAR ABBY: Alfred doesn't drink much, but he sure must have been drunk to do what he did last night. He came home with a pair of lady's lips tattooed on his behind!

He claims he paid the artist to give him a rose.

Is there any way of getting a tattoo removed? I hope so, because Alfred goes to religious retreat camp every summer for two weeks, and he will have to leave soon for camp, and he is ashamed of that tattoo back there. — LILLIAN

DEAR ABBY: A couple of women moved in across the hall from me. One is a middle-aged gym teacher and the other is a social worker in her mid-20s. These two women go everywhere together and I've never seen a man go into their apartment or come out. Do you think they could be Lebanese?

DEAR ABBY: I wanted to call up my postmaster and tell him a thing or two because I knew he ate my pension check, but I couldn't find his telephone number in the book. I called information, and that's when I found out he had an unlisted number! That really made me mad, so since I knew where he lived, I drove to his house and told his wife off.

Abby, as a taxpayer, I would like to know why a public servant like a postmaster would have an unlisted telephone number? — TAXPAYER

I told "Taxpayer" it was probably to protect him from people who "know" he ate their pension checks.

*"Has it been a lot of work?
Not really. It's only work if you'd rather be doing something else."*

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been having a little domestic trouble so I finally got him to go to a marriage counselor with me. We were advised to take an interest in each other's hobbies. Well, I'm trying, but it makes me sick to my stomach to go down to the city dump and shoot rats. My husband gets in training for deer hunting this way. Must I join him in this sport? — NO SHOOTER

From sunny Italy a small request:
DEAR ABBY: I am an Italian man, age 34. I am medium build and am told that I am good-looking. I drive a sightseeing bus by day, so I speak a little English. I am single and would like to correspond with an American woman between the ages of 30 and 60.
She doesn't have to be beautiful, but I want one who has

DEAR ABBY — Abigail Van Buren, syndicated advice columnist, reveals her philosophies, the reasons for her success and her views concerning the changes in America during the past 25 years in her new book, "The Best of Dear Abby." The book also contains many letters, some humorous and some serious, that she has received during her years as "Dear Abby."

a steady income and owns a late model American automobile.

If you know of a woman who would like to correspond with me, please ask her to send a picture of the automobile. — VITO IN NAPOLI

DEAR ABBY: I took you advice and decided to start the day out by being real nice to my husband, so first thing in the morning, I said, "Good morning, darling. I love you and, my, but I am glad you are mine." He just looked at me and said, "What's the matter with you? Are you still drunk?"

Some excerpts from young writers who didn't realize how funny they were.

Tonight at the supper table my father said, "Pass the salt." I passed it to him. Then I said, "Dad, isn't it proper to say 'please' when you want something passed?" Abby, how do you get the swelling to go down on your lip?

I'm a big fan of yours, Abby. I heard you speak at our high school assembly last year and you even made sex sound clean.

DEAR ABBY: Socrates was a very smart man. They poisoned him. Please be careful, Love, ALLEN

My mother is mean and short-tempered. I think she is going through her mental pause.

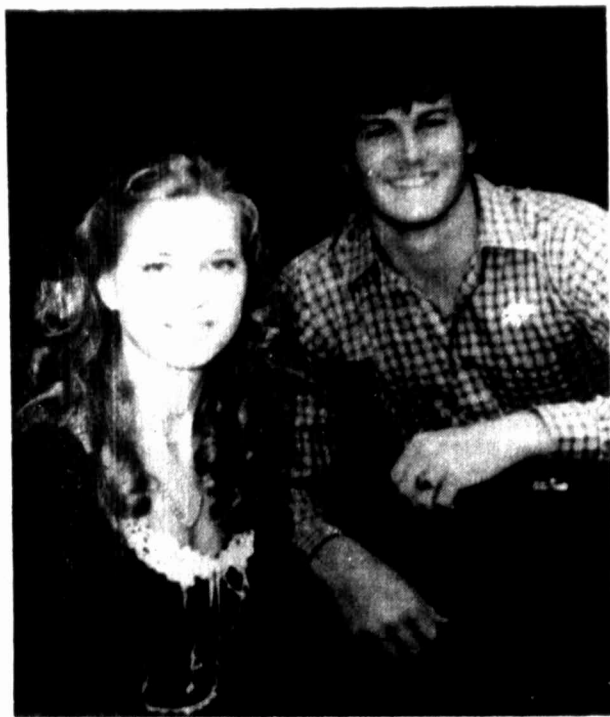

One 7-year-old boy wrote to complain bitterly about Phyllis, his 11-year-old tyrannical sister. On the back of his letter I noticed, printed in a childish scrawl:

- Things to do
- 1) Get pencil box
- 2) Cub Scout kerchief
- 3) Find mitten
- 4) Kill Phyllis

My 25 years as Dear Abby have been fulfilling, exciting and incredibly rewarding. My career has brought me awards, citations and honors far beyond what I deserved.

My readers have told me that they've learned from me. But it's the other way around. I've learned from THEM. Has it been a lot of work? Not really. It's only work if you'd rather be doing something else.

DEAR ABBY: Between you and me, I think the people who write to you are either morons or they're just plain stupid. — HENRY
DEAR HENRY: Which are you?

Invasion of personal space causes discomfort

NEW YORK, N.Y. — You probably feel uneasy if someone comes within three inches of your face to talk. According to Dr. Morton Goldman, professor of psychology at the University of Missouri, "All of us carry around our own bubble of space. If that personal space is invaded, we feel violated." Some of Dr. Goldman's other findings are in a recent issue of "Seventeen" Magazine.

The space of short people is invaded most frequently. A person of average height fears invading the space of a taller person but feels safe with shorter people. Female traditionally like to have their friends sit beside them, while a man would rather sit across from a buddy.

A simple stare can violate your personal space. "Males view staring as a challenge. They will stare back or make a comment," Dr. Goldman notes. "A woman, however, will assume something is wrong with her and leave the area altogether."

Dear Abby

End of Romance Suits Man to a 'T'

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old single male, practicing law in San Francisco. Six weeks ago I broke up with a young woman after a relationship that had lasted nearly a year. She took it pretty hard, so I was rather surprised when she sent me an expensive three-piece suit for my birthday! I didn't want to accept such an expensive gift, so I returned it to the store for a credit, which I mailed to her with a very nice note.

I was even more surprised when the same suit was redelivered to my office with an angry letter from her saying I had "damned well better keep the suit!"

After a few days of thought, I mailed the suit back to her with a curt note informing her that I simply couldn't accept it.

A number of my friends told me that I was wrong and should have kept the suit. What do you think?

BEWILDERED BY THE BAY

DEAR BEWILDERED: I disagree with your friends. An expensive three-piece suit would surely have had some strings attached to it. In order to remain completely free of obligation, you were wise to remain "unsuitable."

...

DEAR READERS: I'll be appearing on "Good Morning, America" on Monday, Oct. 6. Please join me!

DEAR ABBY: The names are fictitious, but I am telling it like it is. I have been dating a fellow named Eric. I mentioned to Eric that Dawn, a good friend of mine, is fantastically well-put-together. Well, Eric called Dawn and asked her for a date. Dawn accepted and then she told Sue (who is also a friend of mine) that she went out with Eric. Sue told me, and now I am humiliated and angry.

I contend that when Eric called Dawn, she should have refused him immediately, saying she and I were good friends, and then hung up the phone. Furthermore, Dawn shouldn't have told Sue or anyone else about her date with Eric because it made me look like a fool.

My friends contend that everything worked out for the best and I am lucky to have found out that Eric was bad news. What is your opinion?

AMY

DEAR AMY: Your friends are right. But there are several lessons to be learned here:

- 1) Never "mention" to a boyfriend that another girl is "fantastically well-put-together." (He may not be able to resist the challenge to "take her apart.")
- 2) If a man is interesting, few girls, out of loyalty to a girlfriend, will pass up a chance to date him.
- 3) Dawn talks too much.
- 4) So does Sue.

Proper technique could save lives

Do you know what to do in case of emergency? Here are some true-false questions on life-saving techniques from a recent issue of Families, a new publication from Reader's Digest:

A swimmer in trouble and needs to be rescued. You should immediately enter the water and try to save him. True or false? False, says Families. Unless you're trained in life-saving techniques, stay out of the water. Reach for the victim from shore or pool's edge. If there's a ring buoy, throw it to the victim. Only a person trained in lifesaving procedures should go into the water.

Allergic reactions to drugs such as penicillin, insect bites such as bee stings, or food such as shellfish, can be fatal. True or false? True. If after this sort of exposure you get hives, or your face starts swelling, or you start to have difficulty breathing, seek medical attention immediately. If you suspect you are allergic to a substance, don't re-expose yourself. The allergic reaction could kill you within ten minutes.

In a heart attack, the most common symptoms aside from chest pain are profuse sweating and a feeling of extreme fright. True or false? True. Sweating, nausea, extreme apprehensiveness and a feeling of impending doom are all symptoms of a heart attack. Up to 60 percent of heart-attack deaths occur within two hours of the onset of symptoms. If you or someone with you has these symptoms, seek medical care immediately.

If a person has food stuck in his throat — but he can still speak — you yourself should not try to help him. True or false? True. If a person can speak, breathe or cough, the blockage is only partial, but you must get medical help because the partial blockage could become complete.

If you arrive at the scene of an automobile accident, you should immediately remove the passengers because of the possibility that the car may go up in flames and explode. True or false? False. Call for trained help to remove the victim — you could cause permanent injury or death. What you can do is turn off the ignition, look underneath the car to see if there is gasoline. Make sure cigarettes are extinguished and flares are at least 150 feet from the vehicle.

Proper cooking of beef

What causes ground beef patties to shrink while cooking?

All meat will shrink in size and weight during cooking, says U.S. Department of Agriculture meat specialists. The amount of shrinkage will depend on its fat and moisture content, the temperature at which the meat is cooked, and how long it is cooked.

Basically, the higher the cooking temperature, the greater the shrinkage, says USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service. Cook ground beef at moderate temperatures, 325-350 F degrees, to reduce shrinkage and help retain juices and can reduce shrinkage.

Season with salt after cooking to reduce shrinkage and drawing of juices out of the meat.

However, if you want to enhance the flavor of the ground beef, you should salt the beef before cooking.

Would you like some more answers on how to buy and handle ground beef? Write for, "Hamburger — Questions and Answers," available without charge from USDA, Information Division, 1100 Commerce, Rm. 5040, Dallas, Tex. 75242.

MRS. RANDALL KEITH HALFMANN

Sawyers-Halfmann speak vows Saturday

Tammy Sawyers became the bride of Randall Keith Halfmann in a Saturday afternoon ceremony at the St. Lawrence Catholic Church. Vows were exchanged at 3 p.m. before an altar decorated with two spiral candelabra and one arch candelabrum garnished with ivy. Baskets of mixed daisies, gladiolas and carnations completed the setting. The Rev. Kevin J. Heyburn, pastor of St. Ambrose Catholic Church, Wall, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex W. Fry, Garden City, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil F. Halfmann, St. Lawrence.

The bride chose to wear a formal-length gown featuring a molded bodice framed with an embroidered lace flounce and a wedding band collar. The full skirt fell from an Empire waist and was trimmed with tiers of schiffli lace and swept into a chapel-length train. A wreath of lace flowers held a chapel-length veil embroidered and edged with schiffli lace. The bride carried a cascade of roses, lilies, and daisies.

Organ music was provided by Gwen Meck and David Bushnd. Harvey Mikulik performed vocal selections.

Maid of honor was Emma Lou Halfmann, San Angelo, sister of the bridegroom. Matron of honor was Sheila Astin, Stamford. Fran Halfmann, St. Lawrence, sister of the bridegroom, Jana Calverley, Garden City, cousin of the bride, Rae Fry, Kingwood, cousin of the bride, Theresa Schraeder and Tina Bednar, both of St. Lawrence, served as bridesmaids.

Clyde Kresta, Ballinger, served as best man. Groomsmen included Nathan Halfmann, St. Lawrence, brother of the bridegroom; Mark Halfmann and Larry Halfmann, St. Lawrence, both cousins of the bridegroom; Greg Halfmann and Roger Strube, both of Wall, cousins of the bridegroom; and Mike Hillger, Lomax.

School superintendent voices support of PTA

"PTA does a very good job," said Lynn Hise, superintendent of schools in support of the current membership drive underway by the Parent-Teacher Association.

"Keeping communication channels open both ways between schools and parents" is an important function fulfilled by PTA, Hise noted.

"PTA's support of public schools today is important," he said, referring to the group's help in cooling criticisms leveled against the nation's public schools.

"Some of the best public relations that schools can get is through parents really staying in touch with us," he added.

"I would encourage every person who has children in school to join and support PTA," Hise said, adding his encouragement of PTA support also by those who do not have school children.

"The greatest natural resource we have is our people, and our little people will be our leaders one day," he said. "The best investment we can make is in an educated populace."

investment is to join PTA, according to Hise.

Big Spring's Parent-Teacher Associations wind up their "Happiness is PTA" membership campaign Friday.

"There's still time to join PTA and support our schools," said Shelene Roberts, city-wide PTA membership coordinator.

Thus far, 1,305 Big Springers have joined PTAs at Kentwood, Marcy, Moss and Washington Elementary. No membership report is currently available from College Heights PTA.

With 360 members, Kentwood PTA has already passed 100 percent PTA enrollment, according to Mrs. Roberts, who explained that this figure means there is one PTA member for each child enrolled at Kentwood. Moss and Washington PTAs are nearing 100 percent membership, also, and Marcy has passed the 50 percent mark.

"Friday is the last day of our campaign. Please drop your membership fees by the school offices or send them to school with students," urged Mrs. Roberts.

Focus on family living

Plan family fun time to fight inflation

By JANET ROGERS

County Extension Agent

Has the "inflation bug" bitten into your family fun?

Bite back! First, reconsider how you want to spend your family fun time. Plan together as a family, focusing fun on free or inexpensive things to do.

Here are a few suggestions — but they're only a beginning!

Start with family "how-to" nights. Their basic idea is to provide positive learning experiences for all the family members — and to develop knowledge and skills that will help them become competent and independent persons.

Don't try to do all of these in one evening! Some skills you might work on together are: How to use the telephone or the CB radio; how to write a check — you could explain banking, including deposits, withdrawals, savings, interest, money transfers and monthly statements; how to set up a personal and a family budget; and how to operate appliances in the home.

Another idea involves family service projects — do something as a family for someone else without thought of recognition or reward.

Discuss several ideas, and decide on one and do it.

Family service projects could be doing lawn care for an elderly or handicapped neighbor, holding a "family-cookie-baking night" and then sending the delicious delicacies to someone who would appreciate them.

Use the story of a movie or television program to discuss family values, morals, or problems and possible solutions.

Hold a family "game night" and work puzzles; have fun with riddles.

Use an evening now and then to discuss the general family financial picture, and include conversations about allowances and estate planning.

There are other ideas the family can pursue away from home — together.

These include collecting rocks, coins, buttons, flowers, driftwood, and native materials.

They also include educational activities: adult education classes, free lessons at hobby-supply houses, joining special-interest groups, or hearing speakers at various gatherings, along with learning such skills as presenting puppet shows.

Also, away-from-home activities include physical pursuits, such as different sorts of exercises, sports, dancing and kite flying, for example.

Family "things to make" can center around sewing, weaving, papier-mache, birdhouse building, tin-can craft, rug making, painting, candle making, wild berry and fruit jellies and jams, paper craft, magic tricks, Christmas decorations from natural products, whittling, herb gardens and ceramics.

Family "places to go" include events, such as flower shows, book reviews, song fests, fairs, bazaars and discussion groups.

MRS. CHRIS BURNETT

Couple is united in Episcopal rite

St. Mary's Episcopal Church was the setting for the Sept. 26 wedding of Danita Minchew and Chris Burnett. The Rev. David Bristow, pastor, officiated the candlelight ceremony before an altar decorated by candles and a vase of yellow mums and roses. Music was performed by Jean Atkins, organist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie J. Minchew, 3212 Drexel. The bridegroom's parents are Sue Burnett, Dallas, and Dr. J.H. Burnett, LaJara, Colo.

The bride chose a gown featuring a natural waistline and a wedding band neckline. A sheer overlay edged in lace covered the sleeveless bodice. The skirt, featuring four tiers of wide lace, fell to a chapel-length train, and a fingertip-length veil fell from a headpiece of pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white daisies.

Mrs. Gage Mims served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Lisa Burnett, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Shain Howard and Kama Minchew, both sisters of the bride. Patti Howard served as flower girl. Paul Nabors, Lubbock, was best man. Groomsman were Gage Mims, David Williams and Scott Emerson. Ushers included Steve Burnett, Dallas, brother of the bridegroom, and Shain Howard, Kent Minchew, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

A reception followed in the church's Parish Hall. The bride's table, covered with white lace, held the three-tiered cake which was decorated with clusters of yellow and green flowers. The bridegroom's table was dressed in colors of beige and brown and featured a double ring cake.

The bride is a graduate of Big Spring High School and attended Howard College. She is presently employed by Delta Lighting Arrestors. The bridegroom, also a graduate of BSHS attended Howard College and is employed by Simmons Construction, Sand Springs.

Following a trip to Midland, the couple is at home in Big Spring.

Weatherize your home; cut winter fuel bills

If you like the idea of capturing the sun's energy to cut your fuel bills but are reluctant to invest in a sophisticated solar heating system, take heart. There are dozens of inexpensive ways to harness the sun and weatherize your home for the winter.

Passive solar energy, sometimes called solar architecture, is the use of the sun's rays to heat your home in winter and cool it in summer without the aid of mechanical equipment. Passive techniques may seem overly simple to many people. Insulated shutters, heat-storing brick or concrete floors and walls, air vents for use of natural convection are not high-technology discoveries. But they work.

The easiest way to harness the sun's warmth in winter is to insulate your house. Air leaks can double your heat loss. One of the most effective ways to reduce heat loss and also one of the cheapest is to seal gaps in the outside walls and around windows and doors with caulking and weatherstripping. A variety of products for a do-it-yourself project can be purchased at the local hardware store. A good job can reduce your heating costs by as much as 30 percent.

Check electrical outlets which are frequently the cause of cold drafts. A simple, inexpensive gasket that fits behind the plate cover will keep cold air out and warm air in. Draft-free rooms not only save energy — they're more comfortable. Be sure the gaskets you buy are approved for safety by a national testing laboratory.

Although storm windows may be a major expense, there are other ways to insulate windows and save on heat loss. For instance, plastic sheeting is not expensive, and it can be fastened to the window frame or window recess with masking tape or a staple gun. You might want to build a wooden frame storm window and cover it with sheeting for less than $6 per 3 x 4 foot window. With care, these will last for several seasons.

If plastic sheeting is unattractive to you, consider covering the upper portions of your windows with close-fitting polystyrene panels. The panels can be covered with a self-adhesive plastic to coordinate with the room's decor.

One most frequently overlooked elements in solar conservation is making sure the south-facing windows of a house are clean and unobstructed. In the fall, prune or cut overhanging branches or tall shrubs that might block the window from the winter sun's rays. Let the foliage grow in spring and summer to serve as a screen against solar heat buildup during warm months.

Draperies should cover the windows at night during winter months. They should be hung so that they extend at least four inches above, below and beyond the sides of the window. Keep shades up and draperies open during the day to capture the sun's heat and light — closed during the night to retain that heat.

Other conservation ideas include closing heating vents and doors in unused rooms, insulating ducts and water pipes in unheated areas and adding an extra layer of insulation in your crawl space. Turn down the thermostat in unused rooms and make sure that curtains, furniture and other objects are not blocking radiators or registers in rooms that you do use.

If you experience an unduly harsh winter and cold house, consider requesting an energy audit from your heating company. It's free or at nominal cost and includes analysis, technical advice and a list of insulation contractors in your community. Plans for next winter might include building a solar greenhouse or opening up the walls facing south to provide more direct access to the sun's warming rays.

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

She turned her life around

Dr. Wallace: I want you to know your keynote address to the juniors and seniors at the Lakeview Youth Conference changed my life.

I'm an 18-year-old young lady who just graduated from high school. For the last three years I was involved in smoking pot and drinking alcohol. I knew it was wrong but all my friends were doing it and the peer pressure (as you so often said) was just too great.

The day after the conference, I promised myself that I would stop getting high with the group. I want you to know that I have not had one sip of alcohol or one tok of a joint in almost three months.

I am going to attend the University of Oregon at Eugene this September. I now feel in command of my life, thanks to you. I won't sign my name because our town is very small. — Nameless, Lakeview, Ore.

Nameless: Thanks so much for the kind words, but I can't take the credit for your change.

The credit goes entirely to you who had the courage and determination to get out of the rut.

Your letter makes me very, very happy! Please keep in touch.

Dr. Wallace: My brother, 21, started dating Daisy and their relationship became very serious. Daisy and I became good friends.

Then for no apparent reason, my brother broke up with her. Needless to say, Daisy was crushed, but we remained close friends.

It took Daisy a long time to get over the hurt but I did all I could to cheer her up. Finally, I fixed her up with my boyfriend's older brother. Before I knew what was happening, they were going steady, and five months later they were engaged.

Well, the more involved Daisy got with her new boyfriend, the less attention she paid to me. I never do anything with her anymore because she is always with him. When I do see her she barely says two words to me.

It appears she is trying to avoid me. In fact, she didn't even tell me she was engaged. I heard it from my boyfriend.

I realize she has interests with her boyfriend but so do I with mine. I don't believe that's a good enough reason to drop a friendship.

Personally, I'm not the least bit happy for her and I refuse to congratulate her. I can't think of anything that I've done to destroy our friendship. Are my feelings and attitudes wrong? Why do you think she is treating me this way? — Jill, Rock Island, Ill.

Jill: It could be that Daisy thinks that you may know "too much" about her relationship with your brother, and she is afraid you will talk. Regardless, two "wrongs" do not make a "right." Congratulate her on her engagement and be pleasant whenever you are around her.

Friendship gained is never lost. Sometimes it just hides for a short time.

Child Study Club begins film series

The Child Study Club met Sept. 9 in the First Methodist Church to view a film entitled "The Strong-willed Child." The film was the first in a series of films on the family by Dr. James Dobson.

The film presented guidelines on how to accept children as children, not adults, and emphasized the importance of discriminating between immaturity and purposeful disobedience.

Nineteen members and 16 guests were present at the meeting. Hostesses were Theta Brooks, Barbara Donelson, and Kay Fraser.
