Lawmen hunt for deputy's alleged killers

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — Upton County law officials arrested 20-year-old Terri Graham shortly before 6 p.m. Friday — as one of three suspects in the shooting death of an Upton County deputy sheriff — releasing the McCamey resident two hours later on a personal recognizance bond.

Lawmen from seven counties, who began combing the desert-like area near Bakersfield early Friday, were still searching for two other suspects at presstime.

Upton County officials have issued warrants for 40-year-old Richard Lee Graham and 18-year-old Thomas Graham.

Deputy Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, 44, was shot to death early Friday morning after he apparently interrupted a burglary at a McCamey lumber and hardware store, according to police.

Upton County Sheriff Sid Langford said Ms. Graham was released about 8 p.m. Friday because authorities were not sure she was involved in the Friday morning shooting. She was released on a no-cash bond with the promise to appear before the judge.

"They arrested her at her home here," he said. "I wouldn't want to say she was or wasn't involved. I'm just not sure."

Langford added that the "$64,000 question was the whereabouts of the other two," who are Ms. Graham's father and brother.

Numerous West Texas lawmen from areas surrounding Upton County are assisting in the manhunt, including the Midland County Sheriff's Department, which manned roadblocks at the Midland-Upton county line; Ector County Sheriff's Department, which authorized two helicopters; Odessa Police Department, which assisted in the investigation; and the Department of Public Safety, which searched the area and also set up roadblocks.

In an earlier interview, Langford said the suspects' pickup truck had been impounded and "we feel like the suspects are still in the area...they're well-acquainted with this area."

According to Deputy Chief W.L. Walker, of the Odessa Police Department's Identification Division, a blue pickup truck was found late Friday morning on Interstate 10, about five miles east of Bakersfield.

Walker's team was requested to make plaster impressions of tire tracks found about 12 miles southwest of McCamey on FM 1901. The tracks were suspected to have been made by the blue pickup.

Meanwhile, McCamey residents were stunned — especially Eugene Corvill, manager of the Red Bluff Lumber Co., where Renfro was shot to death shortly before 1 a.m.

Corvill said he arrived at the store

Upton County Sheriff Sid Langford

on 3rd Street in McCamey about three to five minutes after the shooting.

"They (suspects) came in from the roof, through the back and set off the alarm about 1 a.m.," Corvill said.

"Two deputies from Rankin responded — one of them was Chuck," Corvill said, adding that "Chuck was a good friend."

So good, in fact, that Corvill said he had given a store key to Renfro "for those occasions when I'd be out of town."

According to Corvill, Renfro used the key to enter the store's front door. Walking toward the back of the hardware store at noon Friday, Corvill stopped, pointed and said:

"This is where Chuck got shot. They sneaked up behind him and shot him — twice in the back. He must have swung around and then they (suspects) shot him again."

"Chuck responded pretty quick," Corvill added. "When I got here, the other deputy was around back. I went to the front door and yelled for Chuck. He didn't answer. They (suspects) didn't get away with anything, but a 12-gauge shotgun."

Langford confirmed Friday night that Renfro had been shot three times with a 12-gauge shotgun.

"I just don't know," he said.

"Chuck was a good officer."

Many McCamey residents said they felt the same about Renfro.

Congregating Friday afternoon at a small McCamey diner, a few residents sat, sipping on coffee and sodas while talking fondly about Renfro.

"Chuck was fine man, a good family man and a well-liked deputy," were the comments at the diner.

Renfro, who once worked for the Midland County Sheriff's Department under former Sheriff Ed Darnell, was a 4½-year veteran of the Upton County Sheriff's Department. He was married and had a daughter and a son.

Bomb at Orly Airport kills five people, injures 60

PARIS (AP) — Terrorists set off a bomb at the Turkish Airlines counter at Orly Airport Friday, and police said five people were slain and 60 were injured, many of them seriously burned. Armenian extremists claimed responsibility.

The same group — The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia — also took responsibility for the assassination of a Turkish diplomat in Brussels Thursday.

Police said one unidentified dead man could have been the person carrying the bomb — made of explosives attached to a gas bottle. Two of those who died at the airport were identified as a Frenchman and a Turk. Two others died later at hospitals and their nationalities were not immediately known.

Police sources speculated that the bomb may have gone off prematurely and had been meant to explode after the Turkish Airline flight to Istanbul had taken off with 167 scheduled passengers. The bomb exploded about an hour before takeoff time.

"I had just checked my suitcase. I saw a suitcase explode. There was a lot of smoke and fire," said a witness who was in the crowded south terminal waiting for the Istanbul flight. The witness requested anonymity.

Another witness, Randi Neuman of New Deal, N.J., said she was waiting for a charter flight back to New York when she heard a very loud noise about 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT).

"It seemed like it could have been a firecracker," she said. "We saw the smoke immediately and we just ran out." She said she saw people lying on the floor near the Turkish Airlines counter "and a lot of people walking around with cuts."

The blast occurred in a corner of the terminal that has about six check-in counters on each side. The area of about 30 feet square was strewn with suitcases, some of them blown open. Bits of clothing and plastic bags were thrown about on the floor in a large smear of blood.

The electric sign boards were blown out.

An anonymous caller telephoned the French news agency Agence France-Presse and said the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia was responsible for the attack.

ASALA and two other Armenian groups claimed responsibility for the murder Thursday of Dursun Aksoy, 39, an attaché at the Turkish Embassy in Brussels. Aksoy was shot to death as he was about to start his car. The extremists say they are avenging the massacre of 1.5 million Armenians in Turkey between 1894 and 1915.

Within 15 minutes of the Orly explosion, dozens of ambulances, fire trucks and rescue personnel were on the scene. Joseph Franceschi, France's secretary of state for security, said 21 of the wounded were suffering from serious burns.

Former ambassador's wife rescued from kidnappers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of a former Salvadoran ambassador said Friday "it was just like watching TV" when she was rescued by the FBI from kidnappers who, according to one agent, had demanded that her husband pay a $1.5 million "war tax" for leftist guerrillas.

Another FBI official played down speculation the kidnappers of Clelia Quinonez were tied to the insurgency in El Salvador. Despite their "terrorist-type" threats, he said, "it seems to be more of a criminal matter."

Clelia Quinonez

Nine people were arrested, including a lower-level Guatemalan diplomat, six others in the Washington area and two more in Miami, where the abduction of Mrs. Quinonez, 53, began a week ago. Her husband, Robert Quinonez, was El Salvador's ambassador to the United States from 1977-79.

The couple returned home to Florida on Friday and had an emotional reunion with their children at Miami International Airport. Meanwhile, federal authorities in Miami released statements in which two of the suspects arrested in Washington admitted to involvement in the abduction.

In Miami, the government freed Margarite Lacayo, who was arrested Thursday night with her brother, Salvador. "The United States will not proceed against Margarite Lacayo," Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederick Mann told a magistrate.

The Guatemalan diplomat, Dora Iliana Caceres, her husband and a nephew were arrested Friday in suburban Virginia, only after the Guatemalan government took "extraordinary steps to waive" diplomatic immunity, the FBI said. Mrs. Caceres is listed as the third secretary and adviser to Guatemala's mission to the Organization of American States.

U.S. Magistrate W. Harris Grimsley ordered Mrs. Caceres, 32, her husband, Juan Caceres, 43, and their nephew, Jorge Alfredo Santiago-Castro, 19, held without bond Friday on kidnapping charges after a hearing in Alexandria, Va.

At the hearing, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Burger told Grimsley that during a court-approved wiretap, one of the alleged kidnappers had been heard to tell Quinonez that the money was "a war tax."

Meanwhile, three men and a woman were arraigned Friday afternoon in U.S. District Court in Washington on charges of kidnapping and conspiracy. The four, all residents of Washington, were Mack L. Carr, 18, Clifford Bibbs, 23, Robert A. Gerald, 19, and Jennifer Brown, 27.

Acting U.S. Attorney Charles Harkins said Carr, Bibbs and Gerald abducted Mrs. Quinonez in Miami and drove her in a station wagon with blacked-out windows to Washington, where she was kept hidden in Miss Brown's apartment. The prosecutor said the three men were part of an "international terrorist kidnapping scheme."

U.S. Magistrate Patzjck Attridge

ordered the three men jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond each, and set $10,000 bail for Miss Brown, with only $1,000 payable in cash. Attridge set a preliminary hearing for July 25.

Mrs. Quinonez was freed about 10 p.m. Thursday when her abductors took her from a hotel to a pay telephone so she could call her husband, who had demanded assurances that she was well, agents said. No ransom was paid.

FBI agents, who had been watching the hotel for "several days," rushed in and grabbed Mrs. Quinonez and arrested three men, according to James Vatter, assistant special agent in charge. A fourth man ran away but was arrested shortly afterwards.

Midland's Space Week celebration starts Sunday

In a combined celebration of the Apollo 11 moon landing, NASA's 25th anniversary of its conception and the bi-centennial of manned flight, Midland will begin its Space Week celebration this weekend.

A week of educational programs and festivities planned, concerned with the past accomplishments and future goals of the U.S. space program.

Sponsored by the L-5 Society and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, activities will begin Sunday with a presentation of "The Scorpion and Sagittarius Connection" at the Marion Blakemore Planetarium at 2 and 3:30 p.m.

On Monday the L-5 Space Cadet program will begin at 1 p.m. in the planetarium. Designed for Midland young people, the program will run for three consecutive days and cover the history of the space program, from NASA's birth in 1958, through the Apollo landings on the moon, to the Space Shuttle of today. Also on Monday there will be a showing of the Space Disk at 7 p.m. in the Midland County Library.

Wednesday is Moon Day, the 14th anniversary of the Apollo 11 lunar landing. At 7 p.m., the Marion Blakemore Planetarium will present "Apollo 11 Lunar Mission," a visual history of the moon project.

On Saturday, the final day of the Space Week celebration, a day-long exhibition will be held at Midland's National Guard building two blocks north of Wadley on North Lamesa Road. Exhibits will include displays from Rockwell International, Hughes Corp., TRW, American Airlines, Air Midwest and the Geological Society. Also on the agenda is a model rocket launch by the Boy Scouts and a Star Wars/Star Trek costume party. The public is invited to attend.

Police investigate four burglaries

Midland police were busy Friday investigating burglaries of houses and a business.

Reported missing from the Merit Food Store, 1800 N. Big Spring, at about 5:30 a.m. by Russell Martin was $500 worth of cigarettes. Entry was gained by throwing a rock through the glass window in the front of the store.

Nancy Robbins, of 3008 1/2 Franklin, reported the burglary of her residence about 8 a.m. A watch, camera and coins totaling $500 were reported missing. Entry apparently was gained by breaking a lock on the north door.

A video recorder and tapes valued at $586.87 were reported taken from the residence of Horace Modkins, of 509 S. Stonewall, at 5:15 a.m. Entry was gained through a southside door, according to police reports.

J.R. Mirreles reported a burglary at Mission Square Leasing Office, Big Spring and Loop 250, at 2 p.m. Entry to the business was gained through an unlocked door on the north side of the office. Taken was a saw valued at $630.

Carpenters agree to wage freeze

Midland Carpenters' Local 1428 agreed to a wage freeze of $14.45 per hour during contract negotiations with the Midland-Odessa chapter of the Association of General Contractors, according to union business agent Jim Purcell.

The new, two-year contract was ratified by the rank and file July 12 and replaces the previous contract, which expired July 1. "This wage freeze is comparable to contract settlements being reached across the state," said Purcell.

The wage package breaks down to $14.30 an hour in wages and a 15-cent per hour contribution to the union's apprenticeship training program.

One change over the previous contract, noted Purcell, was a 20 percent reduction in wages for sheetrock hanging, metal stud framing, acoustical ceiling installation, contract maintenance and residential construction.

"Contract negotiations are very arduous," he added. "But I feel we reached an agreement the union can live with and one that will also help association contractors in bidding future jobs."

Jury sentences man 28 years for murder

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The difference between a plea-bargaining agreement and a jury trial in the same father-son murder case turned out to be 16 years.

The father and son, Ross Ellis Jones Sr., 48, and his son, Ross Ellis Jones Jr., 28, were indicted in the shooting death of Glynn Stokes, a 33-year-old St. Louis man who was staying at the Jones Hotel, operated by Odessa Jones, mother and grandmother of the accused, last Nov. 15.

Assistant District Attorney Steve Bruneman had offered both defendants 12-year prison sentences in exchange for their pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter — a crime of passion.

The son accepted the offer. He's now serving the 12-year term at the Texas Department of Corrections.

The father rejected the state's proposal, pleaded "not guilty," and went to trial this week in Midland's 238th State District Court. On Thursday, he was found guilty of murder by the same jury which on Friday set his punishment at 28 years in prison. The jury deliberated about equal time — two hours — in the guilt-innocence and punishment phases of the trial.

"He (Jones Sr.) couldn't take it," his defense attorney, Sandy Torres, said of the prosecutor's proposal, "because he didn't believe he was guilty." The jury was not apprised of the son's guilty plea and sentence.

Stokes was shot several times just outside the hotel, at 105 N. Lee St., following a dispute over slashed truck tires. Stokes, who allegedly admitted and then denied that he had cut the tires, paid $50 in restitution on the tires just to avoid any "trouble," but then got angry at Jones Jr. for allegedly "snitching" on him.

Stokes drank or was going to drink a cold soda pop "to cool down," remarked that "somebody's going to pay for those tires," and left the hotel lobby. The Jones dual followed, according to testimony.

Jones Jr. fired first, as Stokes turned around as if to re-enter the hotel and then tried to run, fell and crawled as shots were fired into him.

Jones Sr., who said he assumed the initial shot had been fired by Stokes, fired several rounds into Stokes, who apparently was unarmed.

Prosecutor David Joers told the six-man, six-woman jury that the defense had "the audacity to come in and tell you they (the Joneses) were acting in self-defense." He recommended a "substantial" sentence for Jones Sr. Range of punishment for murder is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

In his argument for probation or a light sentence for his client, Torres noted the slaying "was not a random street killing."

"No question about it," he said, "this was a horrible killing."

The defense attorney allowed that "justice is a double-edged sword" and that "some form of tranquility will follow this trial."

"This was a brutal, brutal slaying — an execution," Bruneman said in recommending a mid-range punishment for Jones Sr. "This man (Stokes) was running for his life. He didn't make it."

Just prior to the killing, Jones Sr. allegedly told his son at top of the hotel's stairway: "You don't have to be scared of anything," Bruneman said Jones Sr.'s obvious reference were to the pistols both men were carrying.

"He (Stokes) was gunned down in the street, in the dirt," said the prosecutor. He alluded to Jones Sr.'s apparent habit of carrying a pistol for self-defense in the Flats of southeast Midland.

"The only way you can kill somebody with a gun is to gear up," said Bruneman, "...and wait for something to happen."

He cited the slaying.

"There's no divorce from death, ladies and gentlemen," the prosecutor told the jury in Judge Vann Culp's court. "You take a life, you better be willing to pay for it. He (Stokes) was sentenced to death; he's serving his sentence right now."

FBI agents rescue former ambassador's wife

No shots were fired and there were no injuries. Mrs. Quinonez was unharmed and said she had been treated "relatively well" during her week of captivity.

"I was flabbergasted" when the agents rushed up to the phone booth, she said. "It was just like watching TV, like Eliot Ness."

Her husband was an ambassador when the Salvadoran government was headed by Gen. Carlos Humbert Romero. A 1979 coup overthrew Romero. Quinonez moved to Miami, where he has been outspoken in opposition to communism in Central America.

Theodore Gardner, head of the FBI field office in Washington, said Quinonez was asked to pay a $1.5 million ransom that would be a "war tax" to finance leftist rebels trying to overthrow the current Salvadoran government.

But Joseph Corless, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office, said "threats were used that gave indications that this was a terrorist-type incident, but our investigation to date has not substantiated that. It seems to be more of a criminal matter."

Mrs. Quinonez said the kidnapping began on Friday a week earlier, shortly after she had pulled her Mercedes into the driveway of the family home in the Miami suburb of Coral Gables.

Three men jumped out of the bushes "and grabbed me. I was kicking and screaming but they trussed me up like a Thanksgiving turkey. My eyes were bandaged and there were ropes around my wrists and shoulders," she said.

They told me to stop screaming or else," she said, and then drove her in her car to a nearby wooded area, where she was transferred to a van for the long drive to Washington.

Mrs. Quinonez said, "I was more or less treated well," except for the actual abduction, although her three kidnappers threatened to kill her several times "unless the money was paid."

She said she was kept in a bed room and was sometimes blindfolded. She declined to say exactly what her captors said to her about their motives.

At the Miami airport later Friday, Quinonez, who had been reunited with his wife shortly before the news conference in Washington, said "We're so happy to get home I don't know what to say."

Only Airport bomb kills five people, injures 60

"I am overwhelmed," he said. "We must arrest the guilty. It was a bloody attack aimed at killing."

Police said the fact that the bomb was made of about a pound of explosives attached to a gas bottle accounted for the large number of serious burns.

The scene at the airport was one of panic immediately after the bombing. People screamed and ran. Rescue workers dragged the injured to nearby benches and began giving them first aid.

Dozens of ambulances and more than 150 firemen, some of them holding plasma bottles aloft, worked quickly in the terminal building. Airport officials evacuated the facility and closed it down, keeping passengers outside behind barriers as helicopters ferried the most seriously wounded to nearby hospitals.

Traffic was diverted to the Orly west terminal, a separate building for domestic flights about 250 yards away. The south terminal, officials said, would not be reopened until Saturday.

The government condemns the cowardice of attacks which strike blindly," said Premier Pierre Mauroy, who spent about 20 minutes at Orly after the attack.

Selcuk Bakalbasi, press attache at the Turkish Embassy in Paris, said the victims apparently were passengers awaiting Turkish Airlines Flight 926 to Istanbul.

It is typical of the savage, blind attacks of these people," said Bakalbasi, who was shot in the head by two Armenian bullets during a 1980 attack and is still partially paralyzed. "They could have hit foreign tourists of any nationality, quite indiscriminately."

In Ankara, Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said, "It is now clear what threat the savagery of such terrorism poses for all nations and international relations."

In an obvious reference to France, Turkmen said "especially those who support or tolerate terrorism should now realize that terrorist acts can also cause serious damage for themselves."

Armenian terrorists have claimed responsibility in the past 10 years for the assassination of 27 Turkish officials and members of their families abroad. Paris has been the scene of such attacks more than any other capital with six killed.

Turkish officials have maintained that the French government has encouraged these attacks by giving support to the Armenian cause. They cite as evidence programs on French state-controlled television and lenient handling of Armenians captured

White requests disaster relief

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White has requested a disaster declaration from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for Midland County and 16 other West Texas counties which have suffered financial loss from extreme drought conditions for the last three years.

White requested assistance from Agriculture Secretary John Block to obtain federal emergency feed assistance, payment-in-kind grazing and harvesting and emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

"The losses suffered have created an economic emergency for many agricultural producers," White said in the letter to Block. "The cause for these losses has been beyond the control of the producers and other forms of assistance will be insufficient to alleviate the economic emergency."

Counties included in the disaster declaration request are Midland, Mitchell, Nolan, Pecos, Presidio, Reagan, Sutton, Terrell, Ward, Winkler, Andrews, Coke, Crane, Ector, Culberson, Howard and Jeff Davis.

Closing of Alcoa plant will hurt community

MARSHALL (AP) — It came as no surprise. But as the Alcoa plant in this East Texas town closes its gates, some workers and city officials are bemoaning the loss of one of the area's largest employers.

Alcoa officials had warned their 426 employees that the plant had been steadily losing money for two years, urging them to take pay cuts, reduced pensions, vacations and health insurance benefits. Without it, the Alcoa plant could not survive, they said.

On Tuesday, union steelworkers said "no" to the reductions, voting overwhelmingly against it with a 218-67 count.

Upon reflection, some are saying the vote may have been too hasty. "We made a terrible mistake," plant worker Anita Fugler, 40, told the Dallas Times Herald. "People say it was a matter of pride, but pride doesn't fill an empty stomach."

Alcoa's Insulated Conductor Division here was Marshall's second largest industrial employer, with an annual payroll of $12 million.

But asking workers to take a $2.65 an hour pay cut was too much, union officials said. The reductions would have cut an average day-shift worker's monthly salary from $400 to $324, and also trimmed many benefits.

Some said the company didn't give them much choice.

"They were asking too much in one lick," Steve Harris, who had been working at the company for three months, told the newspaper. "I don't feel the company gave us much of a choice."

Although Alcoa reported $60 million in sales last year, company officials said it wasn't enough; they needed their worker's cooperation.

"The profit potential was absolutely glum," said Alcoa spokesman Joel Cagwin. "Without some major concession from employees, there was no hope for staying open. We are in a survival mode."

Union officials, meanwhile, criticized Alcoa for refusing to negotiate the wage and benefit concessions.

"This wasn't negotiating. It was an ultimatum," said Tony Overhult, an 11-year veteran at the plant.

Company officials say they will try to place some workers at the Alcoa plants in Rockdale and Point Comfort. They are sure, however, the closing of the Marshall plant will be completed in the next 90 days.

According to estimates from the Texas Employment Commission, unemployment benefits to Alcoa employees could total $2.7 million.

The plant's closing is also bad news for the local economy, city officials say.

"Alcoa was one of the better paying employers in the area," said Mayor Lane Strahan. "Losing that $12 million payroll will hurt the entire community, not just the Alcoa workers."

Marshall had an unemployment rate of 8.8 percent in May. In nearby Morris County, about 40 miles northwest of here, where more than 2,800 are out of work at the Lone Star Steel Co., unemployment stands at 26 percent.

Meanwhile, in Harrison County, a population of 25,000 is feeling the effects of the slump in oil drilling and exploration.

Some, however, are determined to survive the shutdown.

Man guilty of attempted murder in dad's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A 26-year-old man who said he shot his comatose father to end the man's suffering was convicted Friday of attempted murder.

The charge against Billy Ray Clore was downgraded from murder earlier Friday after a defense attorney received a telephone call from a doctor watching reports of the trial.

Clare testified Thursday he entered a nursing home room March 21, said a prayer asking forgiveness "for what I was about to do, if it was wrong," and shot his 62-year-old father in the head.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said Dr. Floyd Haar called him Friday after hearing an erroneous broadcast that Clare had admitted killing his father.

Haar, a neurosurgeon, said he had reviewed an autopsy report on Clare's father, Robert, and found the gunshot wound he suffered March 21 was not likely the cause of his death, Zimmermann said. Haar said the swelling caused by the wound had gone down too much to have caused Clare's death April 2.

Haar said prosecutors first called him Thursday morning, asking his opinions on the case.

"They read much of the information contained in the record, including the autopsy. From what I heard on the telephone, I said it would be difficult to prove death was the result of a gunshot wound," Haar said.

"There were so many other probable causes. His kidneys were very, very bad. He had pneumonia, his blood pressure had been extremely low, plus there were bits of information suggesting that there was brain activity to a mild degree. The whole picture didn't fit," he said.

When he heard a news report Thursday night that Clare had admitted killing his father, Haar said he called Zimmermann and Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes. Haar said he spent about one hour reviewing the evidence Friday morning and then met with prosecutors and defense attorneys. Afterward, State District Judge Ted Poe granted a prosecutor's motion to reduce the murder charge.

Harris County Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk testified Monday that the gunshot wound was the cause of death. Other doctors disagreed on whether the elder Clare was clinically dead by the time his son fired the .45-caliber bullet.

"Dr. Jachimczyk was in error," Zimmermann said. He said laymen could not fail to have a reasonable doubt about convicting the younger

Clare of murder if doctors "have a reasonable doubt about it."

The doctor who performed the autopsy, Dr. Martha Mattioli, was hospitalized for a reason she refused to disclose and could not testify.

Zimmermann told jurors in his final argument that the new charge freed them from deciding whether the elder Clare legally died Nov. 19, when he lapsed into a coma after his second heart attack in eight days, or because of his gunshot wound.

The panel was left with the problem of determining the younger man's intent, Zimmermann said.

"Did he intend to kill his father or did he intend to eliminate the possibility that his father was suffering?" Zimmermann asked jurors. The defense has contended that a test showed the elder Clare had no brain waves and that he was legally dead after Nov. 19.

217 homeowners to get $2.5 million

AUSTIN (AP) — An agreed judgment announced Friday will mean more than $2.5 million for Texas consumers who were bilked by a home improvements products company, Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

Mattox called the settlement "the largest recovery of restitution for Texas consumers in the history of the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division."

The state's suit against National Sales and Service Co. alleged the company and four other corporations conspired to violate the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act. The allegations involved the sale of home improvement products and debt collection practices.

As a result of the settlement, the companies involved will release more than $2.5 million worth of liens and debts on consumers' homes.

The agreement also says the companies will stop telling customers that their home improvements will result in energy savings, and stop using threats of violence to collect debts.

The $2.5 million will go to 217 Texans who filed complaints with the attorney general.

"I hope that this settlement will serve as a warning to unscrupulous businesses that I intend to protect the consumers of this state," said Mattox.

Beetles endanger wilderness area

NEW WAVERLY (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service denied efforts to rid the Four Notch region of a Southern pine beetle infestation will sabotage the chances of the area becoming a national wilderness.

Forest Service officials took local leaders, reporters and conservationists to an area deep into the proposed 6,850-acre wilderness Thursday where every pine tree had been killed by the beetle.

Mike Lannan, the chief forester in Texas, said the infested area measures about 700 acres, adding, "We're losing about 120 acres a week here now."

Lannan announced

last week the Forest Service would start cutting down infested trees and clearing buffer strips to keep the infestation from spreading.

He denied allegations by environmentalists that the Forest Service was trying to destroy the area's wilderness value to keep commercial timber production.

"We didn't put the beetles there," he said.

He said control methods now being used are the same as those used in national wilderness areas. "So it stands to reason this will have virtually no impact on the area's further consideration as wilderness," he said.

Handlers learn tricks of trade for shows

HATBORO, Pa. (AP) — Showing a dog may not look difficult, but there's more to it than meets the eye. It's not just running around a ring and stopping in front of a judge.

Dog showing, like any other sport, takes training and endless practice to achieve success. Exhibitors have to learn how to present their animals so judges will take notice of potentially award-winning traits.

For more than 25 years, dog show handlers in Bucks and Montgomery counties have been learning tricks from Richard Van Istendael of Hatboro. Each Wednesday, Van Istendael teaches show handling to aspiring exhibitors and their dogs.

"I have had these classes since the '50s," he said. "When I started, right here behind the (Hatboro Union) Library, there were no classes for show handling. There were plenty of obedience classes but the breed buff had to fumble through."

Van — as he is known by those in dog show circles — has become almost an institution of the show world. He not only teaches exhibitors how to set up a dog properly and how to gait it, but he also teaches the various moves a judge may request.

To the casual observer, Van Istendael's training classes may look a little odd as adults run around in circles with their dogs. But a little closer observation will reveal the nuances of showing a dog — how to avoid collisions, how to pass a slower moving handler, how to move in unison with one's dog while keeping an eye on the judges.

Running circles around Van Istendael is just the beginning. The classes include intricate showing patterns that require a bit of fancy footwork by the handler, patterns judges request when evaluating a dog's gait in the ring.

"The object is to keep the dog in a position where it can be seen by the judge at all times," Van Istendael said. "You have to outhandle your competitors, especially if all the dogs are of equal quality."

Van Istendael looks and sounds like a demanding ballet master as he orders his students around the imaginary ring. His voice pierces the still evening air as he points out mistakes. Above all, he seeks perfection.

He takes pride in the fact that a great number of his former students are still actively involved in the sport, even though the average dog fancier stays with showing only a little more than two years.

Van Istendael's interest in dogs began early in life. "My parents raised German shepherds," he says. "Later I showed keeshonden and Scottish terriers. I taught my sons, Richard Jr. and Edward, how to handle."

He helped train rare breeds such as shi tsus, bichons and soft-coated wheaten terriers before they were recognized by the American Kennel Club.

"Once these breeds were recognized, the dogs which had been trained here were among the first to attain the championship," he said.

'Freaky Frog' has extra four-toed leg to spare

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A professor says it's a common toad with an uncommon appendage. To the kids who found the amphibian, which has a four-toed foot growing from its throat, it's "Freaky Frog."

That's the name chosen by Lydia Locke, 11, her brother Robert, 8, and Heath and Keith Edie, both 6, who spotted the toad last week in a backyard in Noble, south of Norman.

The toad, which also has four normal legs, was taken to the Oklahoma City Zoo on Monday.

Dr. Vernon Hutchison, a research biologist at the University of Oklahoma, identified the amphibian as a Woodhouse's toad.

"There are lots of reports of amphibians with extra digits, but I don't recall one from the throat," the professor said.

Hutchison said the spare leg could have formed if there were "some injury during the early development of the egg."

Artist turns wood into birds

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Amid a swirling cloud of sawdust, George Schmezer works a block of basswood into a feathered form that shimmers in the sunlight.

Working with a hand-held grinder, Schmezer quickly transforms the rough block of wood into the shape of a duck with soft curves and streamlined wings. Sawdust spews upward as the craftsman moves the grinder along the bird's head and shoulders.

The dust gathers on a workshop shelf that resembles a wildlife refuge, covered with an array of wooden, lifelike ducks, owls, killdeer and other birds.

"I'm just in this to keep busy," the 69-year-old Morgantown man says. "I don't need the money and I wouldn't get rich on it."

Schmezer never whittled as a boy growing up in Pittsburgh. The handle of a knife just never felt comfortable in the palm of his hand, he says.

But his ability as an artist and model-maker was apparent early, and finally in 1979 Schmezer turned his talent toward wooden wildfowl.

Now, what started as a Christmas present project has turned into a full-time job. The birds, which are offered on consignment to craft shops in West Virginia, North Carolina and Florida, each take a half dozen hours or more to make, he says.

Starting with a square block of wood, Schmezer uses a bandsaw to slice off chunks until he arrives at a rough-hewn bird.

Hollings thinks he should be nominee

DETROIT — A dark-horse candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination ridiculed some of his opponents Friday, breaking the unspoken truce that had restrained the candidates' criticism of each other.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, after making veiled, joking references to two of his opponents as inexperienced, told the 374-member Democratic National Committee that the party needs a professional. Then he added: "I'm your man."

Appearances by Hollings, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and Sen. Alan Cranston of California on Friday wrapped up the DNC's parade of hopefuls in the last meeting before the party's convention opens one year from today in San Francisco.

A brief talk to the DNC by black leader Rev. Jesse Jackson drew as much attention as the candidates. While Jackson was set to talk about voter registration efforts in the South, it is his talk of running as a black candidate for the party's nomination in 1984 that has attracted the most interest from the DNC members.

Hollings never mentioned his opponents by name, but he was clear in his criticisms and the contrast he tried to draw with his own career. Here was his reference to Glenn:

"When he was orbiting the earth, I was orbiting the legislative halls, walking the fields for hunger and working on school budgets," Hollings said.

And then, in an apparent reference to Gary Hart, who is known for his position papers and his effort to be recognized as the "issues candidate":

"Look at my paper, I've got high-tech, make me president," Hollings said. "You can't deliver wheat on an optic fiber. So what you really need is a professional and I'm your man," he said. "I need your help. I need to break out of this thing."

Askew also made something of a veiled reference to Mondale, who has been criticized frequently for promising all things to all interest groups. He did not mention Mondale by name but said the Democrats cannot give all groups what they want, that the party will have to say "no."

"We can't be all things to all people," Askew said. "We can't give every group their full agenda. We can't satisfy every want or espouse every cause or meet every expectation... Sometimes we must be willing to say no."

Two surveys of the DNC members found that support for Mondale has fallen, but no one has gained at his expense.

CBS News said its survey of 302 DNC members found 22 percent said Mondale was their personal choice, down from 34 percent in February. Glenn had 10 percent, compared to 9 percent previously. A majority did not give an opinion.

ABC News said its interviews with 287 DNC members found 19 percent naming Mondale their choice, down from 32 percent in January. Glenn dropped from 12 percent in January to 8 percent. Forty three percent were undecided this month, up from 28 percent in January.

CBS News' survey said the DNC members more often listed Mondale as the candidate who would win their state's primaries or caucuses.

Rocket performs atmosphere tests

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) — Red and blue-green clouds were spread across the early-morning sky over the East Coast on Friday as a NASA rocket sprayed out colored chemicals for research on the upper atmosphere.

The multicolored clouds from the rocket launched at 4:49 a.m. were seen as far as more than 400 miles to the north at Portland, Maine, about 200 miles south at Atlantic Beach, N.C., and as far west as Beckley, W.Va., more than 300 miles away, said Joyce B. Milliner, a spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A second rocket was scheduled to be launched early today from NASA's Wallops Island research station.

Friday's rocket released a reddish cloud when it reached an altitude of 94 miles and a blue-green cloud while still ascending at 130 miles. It reached an altitude of 158 miles and then released another blue-green cloud while descending at 139 miles, Ms. Milliner said.

The test was conducted before dawn so the chemical clouds would be illuminated by the rising sun, she said.

Tracking stations at Raleigh, N.C., and Duck, N.C., photographed the clouds to measure upper atmosphere wind and electrical fields.

Ms. Milliner said the experiment in the future might be performed from space shuttle.

"The space shuttle could eject chemicals in the Earth's atmosphere just like the rocket is doing from the opposite direction," she said.

Charitable organizations feeling economic pinch

By The Associated Press

Donations to Goodwill are down nationwide and officials connected with the charitable organization say uncertainty over the country's economy still makes consumers reluctant to discard old clothes, furniture and appliances.

Teresita George, 41, who works at a Goodwill outlet in Camden, N.J., says she is one of the many handicapped employees starting to worry.

"Everybody's hours were cut real bad, and people here feel the pinching," said Ms. George, who suffers from scoliosis, a severe curvature of the spine.

"It's been unusually critical this year," said Joseph Pouliot, a vice president for worldwide operations, in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C., office.

"It appears this is a normal result of a longstanding recession," he said. "People have been holding on to their materials longer, which causes two things — we not only have less material quantity-wise, but the quality of the material donated has gone down, since it's been used longer."

Goodwill Industries, created 81 years ago to prepare the physically and mentally handicapped for private employment, receives about 51 percent of its income from the sale of used goods in more than 1,000 thrift shops nationwide, Pouliot said. Goodwill also serves the poor in 41 other countries.

Wages range from $1 to $3.35 an hour, the federal minimum wage, depending on a worker's productivity.

Patients with minor head injury should be hospitalized for tests

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother was in an automobile accident recently, and I guess he got out of it lucky although he did bang his head. He was dazed for a while but, after a few minutes in the emergency room, he was able to answer the doctor's questions and he knew where he was. He has had some headaches since the accident, and I would like to know if this is a common experience or if the headaches mean he is an exception. — Nathan, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Nathan: Dr. Stephen Gazak, of the department of emergency medicine at the Medical College of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, reports that the large majority of patients — almost 85 percent — who suffer a minimal head injury do well after the accident. However, slightly more than 15 percent experience such symptoms as headache, dizziness or loss of memory. These findings suggest that some patients with minimal head injury should probably be hospitalized for a thorough evaluation instead of being permitted to return home directly from the emergency room.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went for a physical examination because of a new job I was starting, and the doctor told me that I have a perforated eardrum. But he also said that it wasn't causing me any trouble and that I didn't have to do anything about it. Does this make sense or do you think it requires an operation? — Stanley, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Stanley: It is not unusual for a person to have a tiny perforation of the eardrum that does not cause any difficulty. If the person has a hearing loss, however, or if he is subject to frequent infections, it might be advisable to have surgery.

Dr. Malcolm D. Graham, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, points out that a person who has a perforated eardrum is more susceptible to infection, particularly if water enters the ear while he is swimming or taking a shower. Apparently you have not found this to be a problem for you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had a duodenal ulcer for some time and I've been taking medicine for it even though it hasn't bothered me. My doctor sent me to a specialist and the specialist said that I did not have to take the medicine any more. I don't like to take drugs if I don't have to, but I would like to know if it is a good idea to stop if I have an ulcer. — Mr. F.J., Oakland, Calif.

Dear Mr. J.: According to Dr. Howard M. Spiro, of Yale University, most gastroenterologists believe that an ulcer should be treated only when it causes symptoms. Apparently, the specialist to whom you were referred feels the same way.

For Bernie, Washington, D.C.: A number of studies have demonstrated a relationship between drinking and blood pressure. A person who stops drinking will usually experience a drop in blood pressure; however, the blood pressure will increase if drinking is resumed. In addition, the complications associated with hypertension, such as stroke, appear to occur more frequently in heavy drinkers.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems to be fashionable to look for a psychological cause for every problem a person may have. I know this is true of the symptoms women have when they are going through the change of life. What gets me is that it usually seems to be men who are telling women that their problems are all in the mind. I would appreciate your opinion on this subject. — Mrs. E.L., Salem, Mass.

Dear Mrs. L.: I would agree that some people attribute the symptoms of menopause to psychological factors exclusively, but this is not necessarily true of everyone. Dr. Arthur F. Haney, of the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, North Carolina, notes that one of the most common symptoms, hot flashes, is caused by physiologic factors. In fact, studies have shown that hot flashes occur regularly during sleep.

Although menopause may have a psychological impact on some women, it would be wrong to attribute all of the symptoms experienced by women during this period to such factors.

Uncle Sam wants West German citizen

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Christian Pietscher lives in Hanover, West Germany. He's also a conscientious objector and was given permission to forgo military service by West Germany.

But now Uncle Sam wants him — or at least some proof of his identity and nationality.

U.S. officials notified Pietscher by letter recently that "as a result of a computer match of government records, you have been identified as a potential Selective Service registrant."

Keith Taylor, a research clerk at the Selective Service office in Chicago, said such errors often occur when lists of drivers' license recipients are matched against lists of draft registrants.

Pietscher obtained a Washington state driver's license four years ago while an exchange student at Cascade High School in Everett.

The 20-year-old Pietscher, who told a German hearing panel that "Jesus Christ" was his reason for rejecting military service, is now back home and started 16 months of alternative duty on June 1, driving ambulances.

Awards presented for achievements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The founder of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) and a man who was instrumental in building the Washington memorial to Vietnam veterans are among nine people being honored for their service to the country and to their communities.

The men and women are recipients of the 11th annual Jefferson Awards, given by the American Institute for Public Service, which was founded in 1973 to honor achievements in the field of public service.

This year's winners, being honored at a ceremony scheduled for at the Supreme Court, include people who have worked with youngsters, with the elderly and with the poor.

The recipients are:
—Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, cited for service by an elected or appointed official, for his "courage and leadership in guiding the country's monetary policy in difficult economic times."

—Actor Kirk Douglas, honored for the greatest public service performed by a private citizen, for his "continuing efforts to share the meaning of American freedom with other nations and his concern for refugees."

—Actress Helen Hayes, cited for service benefiting the disadvantaged, for her "countless activities as a humanitarian and as an advocate for senior citizens."

—Jan C. Scruggs, honored in the category of the greatest public service performed by an individual 35 or under, for "his individual leadership and integral role in the building of the Vietnam veterans' memorial."

—Dean Crisp of Asheville, N.C.; Darlene Handley of Chicago, Dr. Robert Kustra of Franklin, Wis.; Candy Lightner of Fair Oaks, Calif.; and Tony Messineo of St. Louis, Mo., cited for public service benefiting local communities.

The winners in the first four categories receive gold and silver medallions and $5,000 each; those honored for service to local communities will receive medallions and $1,000 each.

Crisp, a five-year veteran of the Asheville Police Department, was honored for the volunteer work he has done with young people, including his efforts to develop a summer camp program that involves 500 disadvantaged youngsters. He also works to teach children from kindergarten to high school about the dangers of drug abuse.

Ms. Handley is the founder of Anchor No. 1, a community center in an area that was known for its crime and lack of programs to help the needy. She and 30 volunteers, many of whom are handicapped, operate the center which began as a result of Ms. Handley's desire to help her brother, a paraplegic. The center has organized a tutorial program and softball team in the neighborhood and provides visits and other services to hospital patients and shut-ins.

Train rolls into final sunset

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming's last passenger train rolls into Utah, the sunset and history tonight, ending 116 years of service along the nation's first transcontinental railroad line.

In Evanston, a sendoff with a band and fireworks is scheduled to mark the departure of the westbound San Francisco Zephyr at 7:20 p.m., commemorating its last visit to Wyoming.

In Rawlins, latter-day desperadoes were planning mock holdups and saloon girl serenades for the Chicago-San Francisco train and its passengers, which is to travel a more scenic route through the Colorado Rockies beginning Saturday.

Train fans also were expected to line the tracks at Union Pacific Railroad depots in Green River, Rock Springs, Laramie and outside Cheyenne for the final chapter in the rich history of passenger trains across Wyoming's southern plains.

Amtrak planned the switch for April 24-25, but a mudslide that blocked tracks in Utah and lawsuits by Wyoming delayed the changeover to the Colorado route until now.

Officials with the federally subsidized rail passenger service contend they can increase revenue $3.3 million annually on the Colorado route.

Although Wyoming residents generally are saddened by Amtrak's departure, Evanston's farewell will be a positive salute to the contribution of passenger trains to the area, organizer Leta Rae Haas said.

"We lost it because we didn't pay it its proper respect," she said Thursday. "We're adapting — it's the end of one era and the beginning of another."

Evanston leaders already are working on plans to include the Union Pacific Depot and roundhouse with turn-of-the-century buildings in a downtown redevelopment project, officials said.

It will be the first time since the Union Pacific arrived in Cheyenne in 1867 that Wyoming has been without passenger train service. Amtrak took over in 1971.

Striker awarded $15,000

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — John Jawor, a reactor operator at the Indian Point nuclear power plant, put aside his "On Strike Against Con Ed" picket sign long enough to accept a $15,000 check from his employer — but it wasn't a defection from the cause.

Jawor was awarded the check by the utility for a suggestion that is saving the company hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The recent award was the maximum available under a company program that encourages employees to make suggestions to improve operations.

Jawor, who has been taking part in a strike against Consolidated Edison since June 18, got his award for suggesting that nitrogen be used to prevent a vacuum from forming when water is drained from heat-exchange tubes for a servicing shutdown of a nuclear reactor electrical generator.

With no vacuum, 16 hours are saved in each shutdown.

Jim Smiths converge on Ohio

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio (AP) — Who's on first?

Jim Smith.

At bat? Jim Smith. On the mound and behind the plate? Why, naturally, Jim Smith.

In a game where all Jim Smiths are fair and none are foul, about 100 folks with the common moniker will take to the softball field and other amusements this weekend for a gathering of the international Jim Smith Society.

"We never introduce ourselves to each other ... it's useless," said Jim Smith of Dayton, who is known as "Dayton Jim Smith" to his like-named cohorts.

"Most of the year we have difficulty telling people 'No, that's not me,' or 'Yes, I'm the one,' — once a year it's nice, we become sort of important," Dayton Smith said.

"It's hard to order a pizza and then go down to pick it up and find they didn't make it because they thought you were lying about your name. That's the hard, every-day part of being a Jim Smith," he said.

Dayton Smith is one of 1,200 members of the society, which was formed 14 years ago by James H. Smith Jr. of Camp Hill, Pa.

"He decided he'd had enough hassles with people over the years and decided to turn it around and have some fun with it," Dayton Smith said.

The members, who range in age from one to 87, follow the club motto of "We don't shun fun," and share no purpose other than promoting their name, Dayton Smith said.

Most Jim Smiths in the club are American men, but some members live in China and Pakistan and five women named Jimmie Smith also belong. One family attending the festival this year has complete membership — James Smith Sr., his wife Jimmie Smith and their son, James Smith Jr.

Jim Smiths pay $5 for life membership, which is reserved for "pure" Smiths — those who spell their surname S-M-I-T-H. No Smythes allowed, Dayton Smith said.

Founder and president "Camp Hill" Smith remains the club's only officer and publishes its quarterly newsletter.

Dayton Smith said he is a little worried about Jim Smiths identifying themselves at this year's festival because many may come from the same cities.

"I'm Dayton Jim and the founding Smith is Camp Hill — pretty much we use cities and towns. Now, because of the metropolitan location of this year's festival, I suppose we'll go to middle names or nicknames, or whatever occurs to us," he said.

The Jims and their families will continue their softball competition and play "Jimgo," a personalized form of bingo where players bring their own prizes.

University left more than $15 million

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A corporate executive who died a month ago has bequeathed at least $15 million to Duquesne University, the largest donation ever received by the small, Catholic school.

"When we get a gift like this, it's like something coming from heaven," said the Rev. Donald S. Nesti, president of the liberal arts school in downtown Pittsburgh.

Noble J. Dick, who died of a stroke June 12 at age 83, contributed the money shortly before his death to establish an educational foundation in his name.

In addition to creating the foundation, Dick named the university as the principal beneficiary of his estate in his will.

"To the extent that the assets of Mr. Dick's gift have been evaluated in the brief time since his death, the gift is believed to be in excess of $15 million," Nesti said.

The money is believed to be the largest gift from an individual donor ever granted a Catholic college or university.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: Naval hero John Paul Jones, fur merchant John Jacob Astor and "Perry Mason" author Erle Stanley Gardner were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor James Cagney, Diannah Carroll, Phyllis Diller, Art Linkletter and Lucie Arnaz. Make a birthday resolution to stop procrastinating! You need to pursue your goals with greater zeal. An idealistic dream can be translated in a commercially feasible project. Take things one step at a time. A promotion is possible after the end of the year. You appear less conventional than you really are. Be sure romantic partner understands your need for a settled family life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family members will show resentment if you conduct business today. Keep your promises to an elderly person. Romance demands special tact. You need to listen more to a teenager.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Domestic issues could cause arguments. Seek a quiet setting for a candid talk with mate. You cannot afford to ignore his or her desires. Plan a special treat you will both enjoy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote more attention to family matters. Loved one may act in a mysterious or unpredictable manner. Do not ask too many questions or you could ruin a happy surprise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tolerance and patience are essential when dealing with young people. Seek ways to help teenagers to help themselves. Do not allow yourself to become entangled in a neighbor's personal affairs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend the day relaxing with loved ones. A picnic is a fun, inexpensive way to entertain. Include several generations. Loved one makes a startling announcement. You love it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Bonds of affection will be strengthened today. A short trip can be fun if you get an early start. Romance sparkles for singles. You enjoy being part of a crowd tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your new rapport with others builds your self-confidence. Attending church in a resort area will widen your social circle and provide fresh insights. Check out a local art show as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An out-of-town visitor may upset your plans but will also add excitement to your day. A loved one shares a secret. You could benefit financially. Repay past favors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family reunions are fine if you do not bring up old feuds or problems. Travel arrangements may be changed at the last minute. A summer romance could develop into the real thing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): To avoid misunderstandings, say what you mean. Physical pursuits help you keep fit and let off steam. Some find digging in the garden therapeutic. Group entertainment is favored this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your finances may still be a major concern. Keep spending within reason. Rely on your own efforts and you will be disappointed less often. Travel holds special appeal late today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have good rapport with others now. Share your hopes with those who are closest to your heart. Jot down the ideas you get from a TV program or newspaper article.

Duo pens musical in hills

By JOE EDWARDS

GALLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Broadway music is being written in the hills of Tennessee where the only skyscrapers are the mountains and where New York-style busboys pay way to a slow and easy country folksiness.

And the majority of the Smoky Mountains and rural folk who say "Hi, an' dere arns." Broadway music is being written by two local writers who are so-called "country" music composers, Dave Kover and Rocky Top.

In this town of 2,000 where a subway would be a tourist attraction, and training is the kind done in a camera. Ward Leary and Rocky Top have a new musical, "The Smoky Mountains Musical," which is being written by the two local writers who are so-called "country" music composers, Dave Kover and Rocky Top.

Walesa won't be fired, official says

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa won't be fired for defying authorities when he took an unauthorized vacation from his shipyard job, an official said Friday.

Walesa was expected to return to his Baltic seaport home Sunday, and report to work in Gdansk early Monday morning after a two-week holiday.

"The management of the shipyards will not fire Mr. Walesa," an official of the government-run Polish information agency Interpress said, citing "good sources." He spoke on condition he not be identified.

But Danuta Oczki, personnel director of the shipyards, said she knew of no final decision.

"The decision has not been made yet," she told The Associated Press.

Mrs. Oczki said shipyard officials will decide after talking with Walesa when he returns to work.

Keeping Walesa on the job was seen as a means of deflecting attention from him as the government prepared to lift martial law by July 22, Poland's national holiday.

Walesa could be classified as a "social parasite" for avoiding work and sent to a work camp. He has vowed, if necessary, to fight a dismissal in court, a move that would attract much publicity.

The controversy began last week, when the chief of the outlawed trade union took leave to go fishing and swimming with relatives in lakeside towns north of Warsaw. The government unsuccessfully tried to force him to take leave in August, which would have coincided with the third anniversary of Solidarity's birth.

In Warsaw, parliamentary deputies opened a round of marathon meetings Friday to lay the groundwork for ending martial law, imposed in December 1981 and "suspended" but not formally repealed last December.

The Parliament meets next Thursday, when Communist Party chief and Premier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski is expected to call for a formal repeal.

Parliamentary sources said the legislative, justice and internal affairs committees have received a so-called "omnibus" bill amending some 50 laws to strengthen government control when martial law is lifted.

The omnibus bill may tighten controls over schools and universities, toughen censorship laws and restrict workers from leaving their jobs, sources close to the deputies said.

The sources said the bill also was sent to Roman Catholic church leaders for study.

Western diplomats cautioned, however, that a final analysis of the bill's effects could not be attempted until the law is passed and its full scope known.

Typhoon whips through Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Vera whipped through the Philippines southern Luzon region Friday, blowing down scores of homes, forcing the cancellation of school classes and airline flights and keeping workers at home.

The Office of Civil Defense reported that lightning struck and killed a woman in Zambales province, northwest of Manila.

Two oil barges with an undetermined number of crewmen were reported missing on Manila Bay.

The government's television station said 70 houses in the province of Cavite were torn down by the typhoon's peak winds of 81 miles per hour, but neither Civil Defense nor National Red Cross officials could confirm the report.

Irineo Zabala, a Red Cross disaster official, said 103 families living in flimsy houses at the edge of Manila Bay in the capital's Tondo district were evacuated to a school and about 30 squatter shanties in another suburb were blown down.

About 30 houses in San Pablo City, 45 miles southeast of Manila were either blown down or crushed by falling coconut trees, Zabala said. There were no reports of casualties.

Streets in Manila were littered with broken tree branches, which snapped power lines. The Manila Electric Company said power to some areas was deliberately cut off to prevent fires.

Philippine Airlines Vice President Enrique Santos said international flights to and from Manila were delayed a couple of hours and more than 40 domestic flights were cancelled.

Officials closed Manila International Airport briefly before noon as the eye of the typhoon passed within 19 miles of the capital.

Santos said more than 40 domestic flights were cancelled.

Journalists arrested

BEIRUT (AP) — Eight journalists, three Americans, two Britons and three Lebanese, were arrested by the Lebanese army Friday while covering the fighting in West Beirut, and three of the foreigners charged the soldiers slapped, punched or kicked them.

The Americans were freelance photographer Don Melt, 21, of Wilmington, Del., Time magazine photographer Robin Moyer, 38, of New York City, and Vis News cameraman Bob Deitz of Philadelphia.

Midland prosecutor returns home to Andrews to be county attorney

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Jim Rex, chief prosecutor for Midland's 142nd State District Court, has resigned to become county attorney in his home town of Andrews.

"I'll be handling everything from traffic tickets in JP (justice of the peace) court to capital murder in district court," he said. Rex, who ended his three-year tenure in the Midland County District Attorney's Office Friday, goes to work for Andrews County on Monday.

Under recent Texas legislation passed for Andrews County, the county attorney has been authorized to prosecute felony criminal cases, usually handled by the district attorney. The county attorney normally only prosecutes misdemeanor cases. After Jan. 1, Andrews County will be without services of District Attorney Mike Postel of Kermit. Rex will take over those duties in Andrews County.

Postel's jurisdiction will be limited to Winkler and Crane counties, Rex said. Judge James Clack of the 106th State District Court, which takes in Andrews, Crane and Winkler counties, still will hear cases in Andrews.

"I'll be the only attorney in the office," said Rex, "so it'll be a challenge. I'm looking forward to going over there. If there's anything I had rather do than be a prosecutor in Midland County, it's to be a prosecutor in Andrews County, because that's where I grew up."

He will be Andrews County's chief legal adviser and counsel for the Andrews County Commissioners' Court.

Rex, 28, said he has enjoyed his work under Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin.

"I've tried to prosecute diligently within the bounds of fairness and good ethics," Rex said. "And I hope I continue to do that in Andrews County. A prosecutor's duty is more than just to get a conviction," he said. "It's to see that justice is done."

In addition, Rex said that law enforcement here and in the DA's office has "really made giant steps forward since" he joined the staff in August 1980. "I've enjoyed working with law enforcement officers here. Midland should be proud of its law enforcement, because they do a good job."

Martin, the Midland County DA since 1977, commended Rex. "Jim's been one of the most loyal and faithful employees" in the office, Martin said. "It's going to be hard to fill the gap that he's going to leave on our prosecution team."

"We're really proud of his new undertaking and will cooperate with him in any way to make it as successful as he has been in Midland County."

Judge Pat Baskin, presiding judge of the 142nd State District Court, spoke highly of Rex.

"Jim Rex is a good lawyer, a fine prosecutor, and a man of total integrity," said Baskin. "He brings honor to his profession, and he will serve Andrews County with distinction."

Vann Culp, judge of Midland's 238th State District Court in which Rex has prosecuted cases, has observed some of Rex's traits.

"Jim has proven himself to be industrious, a hard worker and to have a particular aptitude as a student of the law. The attorneys in this area and our court officials and law enforcement officials have the highest respect for his legal ability and intellectual honesty."

Judge Barbara Culver of Midland's 318th State District Court said Rex is a "very fine attorney. We will miss having him around the courthouse. I think he has a wonderful opportunity" in Andrews.

Rex's fellow assistant district attorneys spoke well of him.

"He's one of the best prosecutors we've ever had in this office," said David Joers, chief prosecutor for 238th State District Court and Martin's first assistant.

Prosecutor Janet Copeland described Rex as a "fine family man as well as an excellent prosecutor. I appreciate having had him as an example."

"I think he'll do a great job," said Steve Bruneman. "I think he's capable of running, administering, any prosecutor's office."

Another prosecutor, Jim Frazier, said Rex "has carried a heavy case-load here. He's done a great job. Our office will miss him."

Prosecutor Bill Cooper said Rex is "deeply respected and admired."

"His high sense of honor and duty has enriched us; his impeccable character has been an example for us all. We will miss his quite confidence, easy smile, quick wit and helping hand."

"Jim demonstrated to us that good faith and fair play need not be abandoned in the heated battle of trial and that aggressiveness, dedication, and singleness of purpose do not demand the sacrifice of compassion."

Reforestation to get priority

Canada's federal government plans to increase its spending on reforestation programs to a minimum of $130 million a year within five years. At present about $300 million a year is spent on reforestation, but only about $50 million of that is federal money.

Japan's capital city commercialized

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — Atop a hotel next to the railroad station in this ancient city stands a purple sightseeing tower, poking into the sky like an insolent forefinger.

At the Ryoanji Temple, the graceful serenity of the Zen garden is disrupted by a constantly recycled tape-recording, haranguing visitors on the purpose of the garden itself — a place for quiet meditation.

Kyoto, the elegant capital of Japan for 400 years and a thriving city of 1.5 million, is a jewel in the mud, a stunning collection of gardens, temples, shrines, palaces and beautiful old homes surrounded by garish tourist attractions.

"Tranquility and the harmony developed by centuries of reverence for nature are wiped out to make places to station more cars, to sell more food, to draw in customers and relieve them of the maximum amount of cash," wrote Gouverneur Mosher, the American author of "Kyoto: A Contemplative Guide."

What Mosher deplored in that book, first published in 1969, is even more apparent today to anyone coming here to sample the flavor of Japan's history and culture.

Hotels, souvenir shops, gaudily lighted bars and game centers have sprouted on the edges of Buddhist temples and Shinto shrine grounds, vying for the estimated $4 billion spent every year by some 38 million tourists. At parking lots, tourist buses roar in and out, disgorging noxious fumes and camera-wielding multitudes.

Destroyed in the past by earthquake, fire and war, Kyoto has repeatedly missed its chance to rebuild on a planned and architecturally exciting scale. Other cities which similarly failed might be forgiven because they housed few of Japan's cultural treasures, but not Kyoto.

Among those who worry about how Kyoto has grown without apparent reason is Mayor Masahiko Inagawa. He opposed construction of the sightseeing tower on grounds that it was an eyesore.

"We are dedicated," he said in an interview, "to preserving the townscape, to promoting culture and tradition. But the sad fact was that the hotel was outside the zoning regulations."

ONE PROBLEM IS THE laxity of the regulations themselves. They limit the height of buildings and disallow commercial enterprises next to cultural properties, but that is about all. No one has tried to emulate Paris, Rome or other ancient cities by regulating the style and placement of homes and buildings to make a harmonious, historically influenced whole.

Other factors have worked against Kyoto's preservation as well. Despite a 10-year campaign to persuade travelers to use trains instead of private cars, the city's traffic jams are among the worst in Japan. The mothballing of quaint but traffic-snarl streetcars a few years ago and the opening in 1981 of a 4.1-mile subway linking the main rail station with downtown have been slightly more effective in moving herds of tourists from place to place.

Noblemen and samurai created Kyoto's great gardens, shrines and temples and encouraged the fine arts of painting, sculpture and poetry.

But in the confusion following disasters, city fathers have always put speedy reconstruction ahead of careful planning — reflecting the fact that since the 17th century, the Japanese have been more fascinated by commerce than by culture.

The rising merchant class — exuberant, free-spending and earthy — had little taste for the niceties. The obsession was money, and when disaster struck, the idea was to get back in business quickly rather than seize the chance to rebuild on artistic lines.

"Kyoto," wrote German traveler Engelbrecht Kaempfer in the late 17th century, "is the great magazine of all Japanese manufactures and commodities, and the chief mercantile town of the Empire."

THE NEWLY RICH merchants' own enthusiasms included woodblock prints and paintings depicting Kabuki theater and everyday working life.

The two Kyotos — one cultural and noble, the other vigorous and mercantile — have co-existed through the centuries, surviving in their visibly different ways today.

Upsetting the equilibrium is the sharp decline of the textile industry, still surpassing tourism as the city's largest money earner but incurably crippled by competition from South Korea, China and other Asian producers.

To make up for lost tax revenues from textile makers and to prepare for the 1,200th anniversary in 1994 of the start of Japan's Heian (Kyoto) era, city fathers proposed a 10-year "tourist tax" on visitors to the 40 temples that charge admission fees. They calculated that charging each temple-goer 50 yen (21 cents) could earn 10 billion yen ($42 million).

However, the city's 950 Buddhist temples have strongly objected, saying the tax would violate a constitutional guarantee of freedom of religion.

Commenting on the dispute, the national daily newspaper Asahi noted that "from the ancient days of Heian, the temples and shrines have had a tradition of never bowing to irrational political acts. Today, only 11 years from the city's 1,200th anniversary, this tradition remains in robust good health."

American Indian names popular in East Germany

BERLIN, East Germany (AP) — What's in a name like Winnetou Schmidt?

Likely, an East German child.

Winnetou, which means "burning water," has become a hit as a name for East German boys, the state press reported, despite the Communist nation's strict regulations against giving children unusual names.

Winnetou was the hero of Western epics by Karl May, a German writer whose 19th-century novels about the fictitious Apache chief and his paleface friend "Old Shatterhand" are enjoying enormous popularity in East Germany.

May, who died in 1912 at age 70, never visited America, but his fertile imagination provided vivid, if inaccurate, descriptions of life in the Old West and Indian tribal customs. Seventy million of his books have been published in German-speaking countries, making him the most widely read German author.

East German authorities frowned on May for a long time, apparently because the Nazis used his books to illustrate their racial theory that whites and Indians should not mix.

The East Berlin government relented only this year, allowing the printing of the first Winnetou volume, and the result has been a boom in May books and cases of infants being named after the Indian hero.

Up to now, East German authorities have been very strict on first names, ruling out those which do not clearly indicate the sex of the child, family names such as Larsen (which means the son of Lars), imaginary names or geographic designations.

Foreign first names are allowed, but they must be written in the original version, not as they may sound in German. For example, the use of "Meik" for the English name "Mike" is not permitted.

Two institutes, one in East Berlin and the other in Leipzig, have the final say on whether to sanction or bar an unusual first name submitted by the child's parents.

Local birth registration offices are instructed to seek advice from one of the two institutes if they are faced with a first name which strikes officials as out of the ordinary.

Most East German parents pick conventional names for their offspring, authorities said. Christian and Michael were the most popular names last year for boys, and Nicole and Anja for girls.

Trevino strokes hot putter

By WOODROW PAIGE JR.
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

SOUTHPORT, England — Lee Trevino has come back to his Camelot.

"I really love it here," said the Merry Mexican in King Arthur's court. "I feel young again."

It's not difficult to indulge the imagination while striding in the sinewy countryside, where a medieval castle endures on a hillcock, outside Southport and perceive fanciful Camelot.

This is where Trevino becomes a latter-day knight.

In his last pilgrimage to Royal Birkdale, Trevino won the British Open. Twelve years later he is on the charge again.

With a new putter so magical it seems to have been pulled from a rock, Trevino carved a 66 out of Birkdale Friday and is only one shot away from the Open lead.

"I made enough long putts to go to Blackpool (a town 40 miles away)," Trevino said. "There were some real sea-goers."

Like a sorcerer, Trevino, using his Excalibur, sank birdie putts of 15, 35, 25, 40 and 3 feet and chipped in the hole from 70 feet for another birdie to prompt memories of his glory years — which included back-to-back British Open titles in 1971-72.

"I think I have a major tournament (victory) left in me, but it will have to be done over here (in England)," said the 43-year-old Trevino. "These courses are for me, and it's my type of game. I can hit in the wind and bump-and-run the ball. I can still get to the middle of the green by burning the ball on the ground. I don't have the strength any more to fly the ball 200 yards over hazards on the American courses, and the way I hit the ball so low, if it goes wild here, the semi-rough catches it before it gets to the real bad stuff."

Time and surgery twice on his back have eroded many of the unique-style Trevino skills developed on a public course in Dallas. He is no longer the player who won the U.S., British, Mexican and Canadian Opens in the same year — 1971 — and still was playing proficiently enough to finish second on the money list with two triumphs in 1980. And he does not frolic as much on the golf course. Trevino won just $28,000 in 1982 and had to withdraw from the recent U.S. Open because of his recurring back ailment.

But Trevino did finish first in the Canadian PGA tournament last week and is seven-under-par halfway through the British Open at Royal Birkdale. "I feel like I'm defending my (1971) championship because I missed the last Open here (in 1976) when I was recovering from surgery."

So the odd love affair between the conservative Brits and the Mexican-American raised by his grandfather continues. England adopted Trevino, even though "I come from a long line of striped golf balls (practice range balls)." British galleries only politely acknowledge holes-in-one, but they have enthusiastically applauded Trevino at every green.

And with good reason Friday. Trevino has changed putters and his putting technique. "This is the best I've ever putted in my whole life. I got a flat putter, and I'm using a 10-fingered grip. For two or three years I was pushing every putt and had kinda gotten the yips. Now I'm rolling the ball true."

As a result every hole appears as inviting as a washtub to Trevino, and "these greens look like pool tables. I feel like I can make every putt." He took only 29 in the second round.

Trevino's iron play has not been particularly effective, "but, fortunately, the greens are big enough that I can at least hit onto them."

He is also proving that practice does not necessarily make perfect.

Trevino has given it up — because of the back problems. "I've retired from practice. I'll never hit another practice ball. You won't catch me on a practice range after a round unless a pretty girl talks me into it. I warm up by hitting two balls with each club, but that's it. I didn't even practice my putting today. I don't want to mess it up."

Trevino even brought his own Guinevere to Birkdale.

His recent failures were compounded when his wife Claudia requested a divorce, but Trevino has a new lady — 26-year-old Claudia Bove. "She has the same name. That way I don't have to change the initials on the towels." Bove is the daughter of an assistant club pro in Connecticut and first met Trevino when she was 11 and selling lemonade at the 16th green during the Hartford Open. "She has calmed me down. I've never had someone constantly traveling with me, and I had too much time on my hands before."

As Trevino walked out of the scorer's tent Friday he spotted a crippled young girl and promised her, in a typical charitable Trevino gesture, if he won the British Open, he would buy her a motor-driven wheelchair. She may get it.

"My chances of winning are very good. At the beginning of someone would score well here, but I didn't know it would be me. I feel confident, and I want this championship as bad as the other players because it may be my last chance."

Trevino is not ready to leave his enchanting kingdom of Camelot yet.

Cubs beat Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK—Stan Kyles came through with another strong pitching performance and the Cubs backed him up with a 10-hit attack as Midland squared its series with Arkansas with a 7-2 win in Texas League action here Saturday night.

The teams play the third game of the five-game series here tonight.

Midland is 2-5 on the present road trip and the win before 4,447 fans Friday was the Cubs second in the last 12 games.

Randy LaVigne hit a double and home run to knock in four runs, as the Midland bats, silenced in Jackson, came to life for the second straight night.

Trey Brooks chipped in with two hits and two runs batted in, hitting his eighth home run of the season. LaVigne's homer was his 12th. Kyles, in bringing his record to 6-7 for the season, pitched a five-hitter. He walked only one and struck out eight. His route-going performance was his sixth of the season, high for Midland this year.

Rick Baker, who collected two hits, also stole a base, only his second since June 26. That gives him a league-leading total of 42.

The Cubs play here through Monday night and then take three days off for the Texas League All-Star game at El Paso Wednesday. Midland returns to Cubs Stadium Friday to open a five-game series with Jackson.

Pittsburgh homers defeat Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jim Morrison and Tony Pena belted ninth-inning home runs to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-2 triumph over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

It was the third consecutive game in which the Pirates have scored in the ninth inning to win.

Morrison cracked his fourth homer of the year, off left-hander Mark Thurmond, 21, to break a 2-2 tie. One-out later, Pena belted his third homer into the left field seats.

Thurmond, who had blanked the Pirates on just one hit through the first six innings, gave up a two-run homer to Dave Parker, his fourth of the year, to tie the game at 2-2. Parker's homer was his first since June 1 and followed Morrison's single.

Mariners win

SEATTLE (AP) — Ricky Nelson's RBI triple highlighted Seattle's six-run sixth inning and Matt Young snapped his six-game losing streak Friday night as the Mariners defeated Detroit 7-2 Friday night, snapping the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

Seattle exploded against Juan Berenguer, 4-2, in the sixth as Nelson's one-out drive to right-center scored Tony Bernazard, who had walked. Richie Zisk then grounded to short and Nelson beat Alan Trammell's throw to the plate.

Spinks pulls out four hours before bout with Mustafa Muhammad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Spinks pulled out of a light heavyweight bout with Eddie Mustafa Muhammad Friday — four hours before fight time — after the match was downgraded to a 10-rounder instead of a title fight because Muhammad was overweight.

Purses were trimmed significantly after Muhammad tipped the scales at 177 1/2 — 2 1/2 pounds over the weight-class limit of 175 pounds.

Spinks, who was originally promised a $1 million purse, lost $500,000 when the fight was reclassified. Muhammad's $250,000 share was cut to $100,000.

Spinks' pullout was announced, about four hours before he was to enter the ring. Booker Griffin, a spokesman for Spinks, said the undisputed light heavyweight champion "would not dignify what Eddie Mustafa had done in not making the weight."

He said it was a matter of Spinks' "pride and dignity that he not fight in a 10-round fight."

At a news conference to formally announced the cancellation, Mustafa Muhammad squared off against Dwight Braxton, a former light heavyweight champion, who interceded on behalf of promoter

Butch Lewis. The two were restrained by supporters as an angry crowd shoved both men towards the wall. District of Columbia police escorted Muhammad from the room and restored order.

Before the interruption, Muhammad said: "I want to tell my friends in Washington I am sorry for the events that have taken place. This morning, I know I made the 175-pound weight. But that is another issue. We got to the point where I said, 'All right, I didn't make the 175-pound weight, I will sign a contract to fight Michael Spinks 10 rounds.' I took a reduction in purse. I didn't care. I just wanted to fight and show him I was the real champion. The man said all right."

"Then I go to sleep and when I wake up two hours later, they tell me the man doesn't want to fight."

Jim Binns, an official with the World Boxing Association, said as a result of Muhammad's actions Friday, "effectively immediately, Eddie has been dropped from the rankings of the WBA."

"I will recommend that he be dropped from the rankings," added Sam Marais, a member of the Nevada Boxing Commission and representative of the World Boxing Council.

Cora Wilds, chairman of the D.C. Boxing Commission, said the commission would meet Saturday morning to act on a resolution to suspend Muhammad's boxing privileges in the nation's capital. Wilds said she hoped other state commissions would honor such a suspension.

Representatives from state boxing commissions in Nevada, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Rhode Island, all present at the time of Wilds' statement, indicated their states would comply with the request.

The WBA sanctioned the fight, which was to have been televised on cable by Home Box Office.

Rose's hustle now enthusiasm

By JOHN ED BRADLEY
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

PHILADELPHIA — After 42 years Pete Rose's bangs are striped with gray, the color of weather-board that's faced the sea too long.

Sometimes he doesn't sprint as hard down the first base line as he did when he was Charley Hustle.

But a walk still isn't a walk — although it's not a sprint, either. It's more like a jog, a cross between what a base on balls used to be and what it's fast becoming: a stroll.

"Enthusiasm is a better word to describe me than Charley Hustle," Rose said one day last week. "A lot of guys hustle. Hustle, hell. The biggest word you can associate with my name is enthusiasm. As long as I come out to the ball park and enjoy myself, I'm not gonna get old. I'm just not."

After near-devastating slumps during which he went zero for 20 from May 30 to June 7 and zero for 15 last week, Rose is hitting .251 and is back in the starting lineup.

Still, he was not named to the National League All-Star Team, breaking a streak of 10 straight appearances. Rose says he agrees with the decision, that he does not deserve to be in Wednesday's game in Chicago.

FOR NINE games in June, Manager Pat Corrales benched Rose because "Pete wasn't hitting with timing, and he was struggling to score runs and he realized it." Corrales used Rose as a pinch hitter, allowing him to continue his streak of games played to 896, 12th in the record books.

But the one record that continues to elude Rose is Ty Cobb's hit total of 4,191. Rose has 3,928, only 263 shy, a number he believes he'll get next year. "The Ty Cobb record's not on my mind. The 4,000 mark is, because I can do that this year. I don't ever worry or concentrate on something I can't achieve this month, this week, this year. I can't get the Cobb record this year. So I'll just do it next year."

"Whenever I go to bat and the ball coming at me looks like a watermelon, I can't think I'm in a slump. I can't even remember the last time I struck out. I can't even remember the last time I swung and missed. I got no reason to think I'm in a slump. Why should I?"

Batting-practice pitcher Hank King, Rose's best friend, said, "Pete'll get Cobb's record; there's no doubt about that. He's got so much energy. He may be 42, but he plays like he's 30."

"His batting average doesn't reflect how well he's hitting the ball. He's got a great eye. The only problem he has now is that he's hitting right at people, but there's no doubt he'll start getting his hits."

Rose and King met in 1979, when Rose was signed by Philadelphia as a free agent after 16 years with Cincinnati. Rose was looking for a friend, somebody on the team he could confide in, and King hit it off right away.

King said Rose went through a tough time when Corrales benched him. "Pete was going through hell inside, but he took it pretty good. He's a real gamer, a real pro. He could take sitting the bench as long as the team was winning."

"Records are records, but he worried about the team first and Pete Rose second. He was out there for the National Anthem before the game, always at the park way before time, and he stayed there through the entire ball game. A lot of ball players wouldn't have done that. But he hasn't run from anybody."

"Enthusiasm, it's enthusiasm that keeps you going, because all baseball really is anyway is this crazy kids' game, and we're all grownups playing a good time. But once the enthusiasm to play this game the way it's supposed to be played is gone, then Pete Rose is gone, too. But I'm still enthusiastic, and I'm not going anywhere. I got a lot left in me. I can't hang it up."

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Jon Chaffee fired a course-record, 8-under-par 62 Friday to move into a three-way tie for the lead with Danny Edwards and rookie Curt Byrum after two rounds of the $200,000 Quad Cities Open.

Chaffee had the best round in a day filled with good ones. He put together eight birdies while touring the 6,514-yard, par-70 Oakwood Country Club layout in nines of 33 and 29. His score for the back nine Dill earned a spot in a qualifying round July 5.

Defending champion is Don Halldorson, and tour regulars such as Bob Byman, Jerry Heard and Al Geiberger, a four-time winner. Also competing will be Jim Carter, NCAA champion from Arizona State, and Billy Ray Brown, the 1982 NCAA champion from the University of Houston.

missed establishing another course record by one stroke.

Chaffee, 28, of Austin, Minn., took advantage of the baked fairways and watered greens early in the day to make a relentless attack on the pins, dropping his longest birdie effort from 16 feet on No. 7.

His seven other birdies came on putts ranging from six to 12 feet. "I've putted a lot better" since changing putters after the Greater Milwaukee Open, said Chaffee.

Weary Beth Daniel holds 3-stroke edge

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Beth Daniel, despite insisting she's mentally tired, shot a second-round 71 and held on to a 3-stroke lead Friday after 36 holes of the $350,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association's McDonald's Kids Classic.

Daniel, the tour's leading money winner in 1980 and 1981, had shot a 67 Thursday for a 6-under-par 138 total over the 6,283-yard White Manor Country Club course.

She had three birdies and two bogeys Friday in 96-degree heat

It's not Pokes-Skins

DENVER (AP) — It's not exactly the National Football League's Washington-Dallas rivalry — these teams haven't been around long enough — but the Michigan Panthers and Philadelphia Stars still say there's some getting even to get done.

When they meet in Sunday night's first United States Football League championship game, a few old wounds, some inflicted even before the season began, will be opened. It could make for some very interesting confrontations.

Last February, when the USFL was staging training-camp scrimmages in lieu of exhibition games, the Panthers and Stars got in some cheap shots, late hits and impromptu fistfights during a supposedly friendly meeting in Florida.

"It's a bitter feeling, a bitter taste," said Philadelphia wide receiver Rod Parker. "There were low blows that day, late cheap shots. There was a lot of talk, a lot of mouth-ing off... Every three plays there'd be a fight."

"It was intimidation on both sides," added

John Corker, the Panthers' free-wheeling lin-backer. "We knew we were going to have to encounter each other later in the year so we decided it'd be a good time to try and get the upper hand. So did they."

Cannon pleads guilty to charge

From wire reports

Football

Billy Cannon, 1959 Heisman Trophy winner, pleaded guilty Friday to a federal counterfeiting charge in a $6 million scheme that failed to net him a dime. After Cannon's 11-minute court appearance, U.S. Attorney Stan Bardwell was asked how much profit the former LSU great, great got from masterminding the counterfeit operation. "Our information is that he has not received anything,"...

Basketball

Houston, runner-up in this year's NCAA championship, will play Kentucky in a TV (CBS) prelude to the Super Bowl Jan. 22 at Lexington.

Dale Ellis, drafted by the Dallas Mavericks out of the University of Tennessee, was charged with drunk driving in Knoxville.

Six Continental Basketball Association teams will offer fans a full money-back guarantee on tickets purchased for the 1983-84 season if a purchaser is not satisfied with the product. "We have enough confidence in our game that if any fan, for any reason, isn't 100 per cent happy and satisfied, he can get a full refund of his ticket anytime before the second quarter begins," says CBA Commissioner James Drucker. "CBA pro basketball is exciting and we're willing to put our money where our mouth is."

Tennis

Eddie Dibbs and four doubles players were forced to withdraw from the U.S. pro championships at Brookline, Mass because of the heat. Dibbs retired during his singles match with third-seeded Jimmy Arias, complaining of breathing difficulty and dizziness.

Czechoslovakian tennis authorities fined Ivan Lendl and suspended him from that country's Davis Cup team for playing this month at a tennis exhibition in Bophuthatswana. This country does not recognize the tribal "homelands" set up by the South African government. Lendl played in exhibition matches in Sun City, Bophuthatswana, July 8-10.

Baseball

GM Bob Howsam says the Cincinnati Reds are not for sale and predicted the club would enter the free-agent market.

The wife of former major league Manager Gene Mauch died of cancer Friday. From Palm Springs, Calif., Mauch issued the following statement through the Angels:

"Mrs. Nina Lee Mauch died early Friday in her fight with cancer. A private funeral service is scheduled for next Tuesday at Desert Memorial Park in Palm Springs. In lieu of flowers, well-wishers are invited to make any donations to Children's Hospital in Los Angeles."

Texas scored an unearned run in the second inning on an error, a walk and Dave Hostetter's single. The Rangers made it 3-2 in the third on Larry Parrish's infield single, a wild pitch and George Wright's RBI single.

Parrish, who had three hits, crashed a three-run homer in the fourth inning to pull Texas within 6-5. Parrish's 16th homer followed singles by Jim Sundberg and Buddy Bell.

Cannon always controversial

Billy blamed for McClendon ouster

By DAN EVEN

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Billy Cannon Sr., facing five years in prison for masterminding a $6-million counterfeiting scheme, has known the limelight on and off the field in the city where he became a football legend.

One of the greats in Louisiana State University's storied football history and the first $100,000 pro player, Cannon's alleged counterfeiting shocked many local residents.

But it's not the first time he's been the center of an off-the-field controversy.

Many longtime Tiger fans blame Cannon for the ouster of Charlie McClendon, the winningest coach in LSU football history, and for steering Billy Cannon Jr. away from the Tiger purple and gold and to Texas A&M.

"LSU wasn't good enough for his own son," and one-time Tiger fan. "That left a sour taste in the mouth of a lot of people."

IN RECENT years Cannon, a successful local businessman, has been the subject of many detractors.

Cannon, 45, is best remembered for his 89-yard punt return through and around the entire Mississippi team that gave the Tigers a 7-3 victory over the Rebels on Halloween night in 1959.

Each year since, local stations have replayed the tired old black and white film of the run before homecoming or on Halloween night.

"Yes, I was one of the two million people who were in the stands watching that night," present LSU football Coach Jerry Stovall quipped last year.

Cannon's arrest was a bombshell in the city where Tiger fever is an annual occurrence during football season and the mayor and a state judge are former LSU football standouts.

But, Bud Montet, a retired sports editor of the Baton Rouge Morning Advocate, recalled that Cannon was "temperamental" even in his high school days.

CANNON HAS acknowledged that he had a run-in with the law when he was a high school senior in Baton Rouge, but details of the incident have never been publicized.

Law enforcement sources say investigators have turned up strong evidence that Cannon was a heavy gambler and had a series of recent financial setbacks.

"He'd bet on anything and everything," said one federal official who would not be identified.

Court records show that Cannon has been sued at least five times for a total of $500,000.

He also has been involved in horse racing in recent years, owning several horses that run at tracks in the state.

The motive for Cannon's involvement in the counterfeiting ring hasn't been established, and U.S. Attorney Stan Bardwell said the reason hasn't been discussed by Cannon.

Although he was a two-time All-America at LSU and winner of the 1959 Heisman Trophy, Cannon's post-college career has been checkered. Both the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and the Houston Oilers of the new American Football League claimed him, and a court battle was needed to settle the matter.

He spent 11 years in the pros with the Oilers, Kansas City Chiefs and Oakland Raiders.

IN THE late 1970s, it was said that Cannon was ringleader of a group of LSU faithful that pushed McClendon into retirement.

And in 1980, Cannon got embroiled in a controversy with pro baseball over his son, Billy Jr., a standout high school shortstop and running back.

Cannon Sr. sent telegrams to all 26 major league teams saying his son would not play pro baseball but instead attend college. Nonetheless, the Yankees drafted young Cannon in the third round.

The choice was later voided by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Cannon Sr. said he had sent the telegrams because none of the teams were willing to give his son the signing bonus he was asking — reportedly $350,000.

Cannon's connection to LSU and his legendary 1959 run even carried over to his new legal problems. The joke around the campus is that the feds tied the counterfeit $100 to Cannon because instead of saying, "In God We Trust" on the back, there was "Go To Hell, Ole Miss."

Texas golfers march into Trans-Miss semis

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Four Texas golfers marched into the semifinal round of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament with match-play victories Friday at the Kansas City Country Club.

Brandel Chambliss of the University of Texas topped Stan Utley of West Plains, Mo., 4 and 3. Pat Herzog of Texas Christian beat Oliver Rheinhardt of North Hollywood, Calif., 3 and 1.

NCAA appeals to justice

WASHINGTON (AP)

— The National Collegiate Athletic Association asked a Supreme Court justice Friday to temporarily salvage $263.5 million worth of television contracts for NCAA college football.

Association lawyers asked Justice Byron R. White to temporarily set aside a federal appeals court ruling that the NCAA violated federal antitrust law in negotiating the contracts with ABC, CBS and the Turner Broadcasting System.

"Any attempt to revamp things for 1983 would produce wasted motion, chaos or both," NCAA lawyers told White.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled earlier this month that the NCAA had violated the Sherman Act, a major antitrust law, by controlling the televising of college football.

The appeals court upheld a similar ruling by a federal trial judge in New Mexico in a lawsuit filed against the NCAA by the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

The lawsuit contended that individual colleges and universities should be free to make their own TV deals despite the NCAA's contracts that extend over several seasons.

Tuten gains semis in Publinx golf

COLTS NECK, N.J. (AP) — Defending champion Billy Tuten of Palatka, Fla., defeated the 1978 champion, 45-year-old insurance salesman Dean Prince of San Bruno, Calif., 5 and 3 in semifinal match play Friday at the 58th U.S. Amateur Public Links Golf Championship at the Hominy Hill Golf Course.

Tuten earned a berth in the 36-hole finals on Saturday against David Hobby of Santa Ana, Calif. Hobby defeated 18-year-old Michael Swartz of Phoenix, Ariz., the 1983 junior college national champion, 3 and 2 in the other semifinal match at the 6,992-yard, par-72 course.

Dauer, Stewart testify in cocaine investigation

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rich Dauer and Sammy Stewart of the Baltimore Orioles have testified before a federal grand jury investigating alleged cocaine dealing by two local men, according to a report published Friday.

The Baltimore Evening Sun, quoting unnamed sources, said both were cooperating with federal authorities but that neither Dauer nor Stewart was the target of the drug probe.

The Evening Sun's sources said investigators had evidence that indicated the two players may have obtained a small amount of cocaine from Gary Kimmel, a resident of suburban Owings Mills.

Stewart, a relief pitcher, said he knew nothing about the probe and Dauer was unavailable for comment.

Fishermen peddle bargain lox on docks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brad Posey would rather be out fishing, but he and other California trollers are selling cut-rate lox on the docks in a dispute over the price of Pacific king salmon that could prove a bonanza for consumers.

"If I'm sitting here trying to sell my fish, that means I can't go out and catch any," lamented Posey, a member of the Santa Cruz Commercial Fishermen's Association, the equivalent of a fishermen's union.

Posey was out on the dock Thursday, hawking his delicacies at $2.50 a pound — $1 less than the pink fish commands at local markets — as negotiations continued between fishermen and buyers at nearby Moss Harbor.

More than 1,000 fishing boats along the California and Oregon coast have been ordered to dock by local fishing associations after fish buyers cut the wholesale price paid for king salmon under marketing agreements.

THE PRICING BATTLE BEGAN a week ago 200 miles north of here, when 350 members of the Humboldt Fish Marketing Association were called in. But the dispute spread up and down the coast at a time when the best king salmon is layered on bagels or roasted on backyard barbecues.

"Normally, this is the peak time of year for us," said Posey, one of 200 members of the Santa Cruz association. "When all this came down on us, we were out fishing."

Zeke Grader, executive director of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, blames the price war on the influx of sockeye salmon from Alaska, a fish he says is lower in both quality and price than king salmon.

About 32 million sockeyes were taken with gillnets in Alaska while the Californians struggled to catch their annual take of 700,000 fish by trolling, he said.

Shoppers snapped up the Alaskan fish, cutting demand for the California salmon. As a result, Grader said California wholesale buyers reduced their prices below the level specified in marketing agreements.

FOR EXAMPLE, Santa Cruz fisherman Carl Azevedo said he had been getting $1.95 per pound for seven-pound to eight-pound fish destined for home use; $2.30 for seven- to 12-pound fish used in restaurants; and $2.45 for the large "smokers" used for lox.

But on Wednesday, wholesale buyers cut the local prices to $1.40, $1.70 and $2 a pound, a move that brought the Santa Cruz fleet into port.

"We can't make it on that," said Azevedo, one of the trollers selling fish from his boat, "so we thought we'd go right to the public."

Jim Flannigan, the buyer at General Fish Co. at Moss Landing, said he'd be happy to pay a top price of $2.25, but couldn't find anybody to buy from.

"We'd buy it, but there are no boats out now anyway," he said.

There were similar standoffs in Fort Bragg, Bodega Bay, Eureka and elsewhere along the coast.

"Basically, we're trying to get the buyers down south (in Moss Landing) to raise their prices a little," said Carla McCabe, spokeswoman for the Humboldt County fishermen's group. "Hopefully, if we could do that, the buyers up here would raise their prices."

New law helps taxi business

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — When the band quits playing and the bottle runs dry, more Arkansans are climbing into a taxi instead of behind the wheel of a car, to avoid getting nabbed under Arkansas' new drunken driving laws, cab companies say.

"On a Friday or Saturday night, I'll have five or six new customers," William Long, a nighttime driver at Checker Cab Co. in Hot Springs, said recently. "They always mention the law. They say it's cheaper to ride in a cab than to pay that DWI ticket or lose your license."

The new statutes, passed by the 1983 Legislature, mean a first offender could lose his license for three months and could be fined up to $1,000 and sentenced to a year in jail. The first of the statutes became effective in March, the second in April.

Cab drivers and dispatchers interviewed in Fort Smith, Fayetteville, Little Rock and Pine Bluff said they've noticed an increase in business because of the laws.

Rep. Judy Petty, R-Little Rock, one of the primary sponsors of the DWI bill, said the cab companies' statements proved that the new laws are effective.

"To me, that's the proof of the pudding — that every night so many intoxicated drivers are not behind the wheels of their cars," she said. "They're getting home some other way."

She said courts throughout Arkansas were being monitored, and though some judges are interpreting the law differently than it was intended, others were following it to the letter.

Designer, conservator puts books in a bin

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Say you nod off in the bathtub while reading your favorite novel. You wake with a start as the novel goes down for the third time. What do you do with it?

"Wrap it in plastic and put in the freezer for a month," recommends Jean Gunner, a bookbinder and conservator at Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation at Carnegie-Mellon University (CMU). "The moisture will evaporate just as it does from frozen food left in the refrigerator for a long time," explains Ms. Gunner.

One of only 25 design binders in the country, Ms. Gunner is used to peculiar questions. "A nun from New York called and said they had just slaughtered a goat and wanted to know how to tan the hide so they could bind a book with it. I told her I wouldn't know what to do with it. I'm not into tanning."

"Someone else brought in a World War II flyer's leather jacket and wanted to know how to restore the leather label in it," she adds with a laugh.

A NATIVE of Cobham in Surrey, England, Ms. Gunner studied bookbinding as a required course at Epsom and Ewell School of Art in Surrey. She quickly decided to specialize in it.

"They told me I couldn't go into bookbinding, that it wasn't for women. It's very much a man's world in England. The more they told me that, the more I wanted to do it."

The main job of Ms. Gunner, who has been at CMU for 11 years, is maintaining the bindings and book collections for the Hunt Institute's rare books, but she also teaches bookbinding to design department students and others privately. Two of her private students come in from Cleveland, two from Akron and one from West Virginia for the weekly classes.

"There's really no course in this country for bookbinders," she says. "Most come from Europe."

WHILE THE BINDING of books started in the first century and the tooling or decorating of bindings began in the ninth century, design binding began in 1935. A design binder, according to Ms. Gunner,

"designs the cover to reflect the contents of the book. I read it, think about it for a long time, design it and put it together." Each design is one of a kind.

"I start with a painted design. It's sort of like doing a complicated jigsaw puzzle." She cuts leather pieces in various colors to create her design. Some are inlaid in the leather cover, some are overlaid.

But a design binder does more than make a jacket for the book. Ms. Gunner constructs the entire book — stitching pages together by hand, attaching the spine, pressing the spine to curve it.

She sands the composition boards that form the cover. "That takes two hours and I sneeze constantly," she says. "I punch holes in the boards and lace them to the book."

The leather binding goes on last when everything else is completed. "I'm a nervous wreck when I'm doing the cover," the bookbinder admits.

She recently completed a design binding of the book, "Tulips and Tulipomania" for The Royal Library of The Hague, where she is the only American bookbinder represented. "They were tickled pink with it," she reports. She is working on another original design of the "Tulips" book for an individual.

MS. GUNNER is about five years behind in commissions.

"Design bindings cost about a minimum of $1,000, depending on the complexity of the design," she says, explaining that it takes about 100 hours to make a design binding. "Some go for as much as $15,000."

What does it take to be a design binder?

"You have to be crazy. You have to have patience," says Ms. Gunner. "I have absolutely no patience with people. I have some with books. You have to like to work alone. And it takes a tremendous amount of concentration. You should have a good sense of feel for the materials you work with, a good sense of design and color."

Ms. Gunner admits that you can't really make money in bookbinding. The time needed for restoration of a book is so great that people can't afford it or aren't willing to pay for it.

Team steams ahead in boat hunt

JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) — A team of Texas A&M University scientists, hunting for the submerged wreckage of the Mittle Stephens, completed additional sonar testing Thursday, but have not yet found the steamboat, the leader of the nautical archaeologists said.

Dr. Ervan Garrison said the scientists will study the underwater sonar readings taken at Caddo Lake near the Texas-Louisiana border and determine if the area of the wreck has been pinpointed.

"We haven't found the boat positively," Garrison said. "We're going over the data to see what we've got."

The Mittle Stephens, a 19th century vessel, burned and sank in Texas' worst waterway disaster. Sixty-two people died in the Feb. 11, 1899 disaster.

A Polish youngster contemplates an array of black market toys at a flea market near Warsaw last Saturday. Although martial law may end soon, Poles are embittered and remain crushed by daily life.

Poles crushed by harshness of life

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Although martial law may end soon, many Poles, embittered and losing their spirit, remain crushed by daily life.

Euphoria from Pope John Paul II's June pilgrimage and signs that civil authority will be restored next week has been tempered by another round of price increases for such basic items as bread, meat and housing.

But Polish analysts and diplomats believe chances are slim that workers can rekindle the sweeping strikes and protests that gave rise to the independent trade union Solidarity in August 1980.

"We are just living life...if you can call it life," remarked a Polish journalist. "There is some hope, but people are frustrated, dispirited, and they worry about the future."

Western diplomats expect what one called a war of attrition between the government and church-supported independent labor movements.

The pope-inspired Poles to defend their right to seek a better lot, but now economists and social scientists worry that the economic burdens may be too much for the country's 37 million inhabitants.

SUCH FIGURES as a $26 billion debt to the West, a 25 percent drop in national income over three years and a 100 percent cost-of-living rise in 1982 suggest the overall problem.

But the crisis is most evident in long lines snaking through city streets.

Meat, largely gristle, bone and greasy sausage, is rationed at 5.5 pounds a month per person. At a cost of 1,250 zlotys it is 10 percent of the average monthly wage, and many Poles cannot afford even that. Many others can, however, and lines run as long as 80 people.

Meat prices are to rise by 10 percent in the coming months. Last year they went up as much as 300 percent.

A wage of 12,000 zlotys officially equals $125, but Poles cannot change money legally so it buys only $20 on the black market. Many items are available only at special stores requiring hard currency. As a result, a pair of jeans priced at $25 takes more than the average monthly wage.

Even if they don't convert their money, Poles often must pay two to 10 times the official zloty price for scarce goods.

POLES WAIT in line for six months for luxuries like furniture. Gas lines can be six hours long. The wait for an apartment at the official price can be 30 years.

A one-room studio in a modest part of town might cost two million zlotys, $21,000 at the official rate or $3,400 on the black market.

On Saturdays, huge crowds throng a meadow north of Warsaw to sell Japanese stereos, wilted carrots, peeling hobby horses, running shoes and even hard rock records. The mood is grim and businesslike.

A 16-year-old girl stands silently, holding her stock: a single can of powdered baby formula. Next to her, a toothless old man offers cheap cigarette filters.

The economy is distorted.

A shoemaker fixes a pair of heels for the unofficial equivalent of four cents, including the nails. Miners, forced by martial law to stay at their jobs, can earn five times the average wage. Farmers, mostly private, might clear even more.

ADDITIONAL problems are caused because there are so few consumer goods. People that have money bid up prices so the limited goods that factories do produce often "fall off the back of the truck," as one Pole put it, and are sold to higher bidders than housewives standing in line.

An ordinary citizen cannot buy a car at anything under two to three times the official price. People who paid in advance 10 years ago still await delivery. "The situation has vastly improved since martial law (December 1981), but it is very bad in absolute terms," said Zdzislaw Sadowski, deputy minister in charge of economic reform.

The economy was improving slightly, he said, and by 1985, "there should be a state of widely restored internal market equilibrium."

But the Polish economy depends on politics, and few analysts are willing to make predictions.

Western sanctions cost Poland $12 billion directly or indirectly, the government says, and they cripple Polish industry.

EVEN WITHOUT strikes, a demoralized work force could further damage industry, already suffering from sharp drops in quality.

The reform lets lower level managers set wages, leaving the system vulnerable to imbalances which aggravate social tension. And tension in Poland unsettles a clearly unpopular government.

Without martial law, police would likely put away their AK-47 assault rifles but not the long white truncheons which symbolize the enforced tranquility.

Cynics aren't snickering at girl's trip to Soviet Union

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, a 13-year-old girl told her father that the most important thing her country could do would be to control nuclear weapons.

He told the country about it, and the cynics snickered. They said it was just like Jimmy Carter to talk about Amy's ideas in the middle of a climactic, nationally televised campaign debate with Ronald Reagan.

After all, they said, Carter was president of the United States and this was not a matter for teen-agers, it was serious business.

It still is, 3½ years later. But reactions have changed. Amy's comment to her father was fodder for the stand-up comics of 1980. There are no wisecracks about the Soviet journey of Samantha Smith, 11, of Manchester, Maine.

She went at the invitation of Soviet President Yuri V.

An Analysis

Andropov, bearing a message quite similar to the one Amy Carter gave her father. "Hopefully, we will all have peace for the rest of our lives," Samantha wrote in a note she put into a bottle and tossed into the Black Sea.

In the campaign debate with Reagan, Carter said he wanted to put the nuclear question into perspective. "I had a discussion with my daughter Amy the other day before I came here, to ask her what the most important issue was," he said. "She said she thought nuclear weaponry. The control of nuclear arms."

It was grist for the cartoonists and comics. Not so when Andropov wrote Samantha.

Samantha said she was worried by accounts of the nuclear arms race, so she sent Andropov a letter, asking why he wanted to conquer the world or the United States, and whether "you're going to vote to have a war or not?"

Andropov replied that the Soviet Union is doing everything possible "so that there will be no war at all on earth."

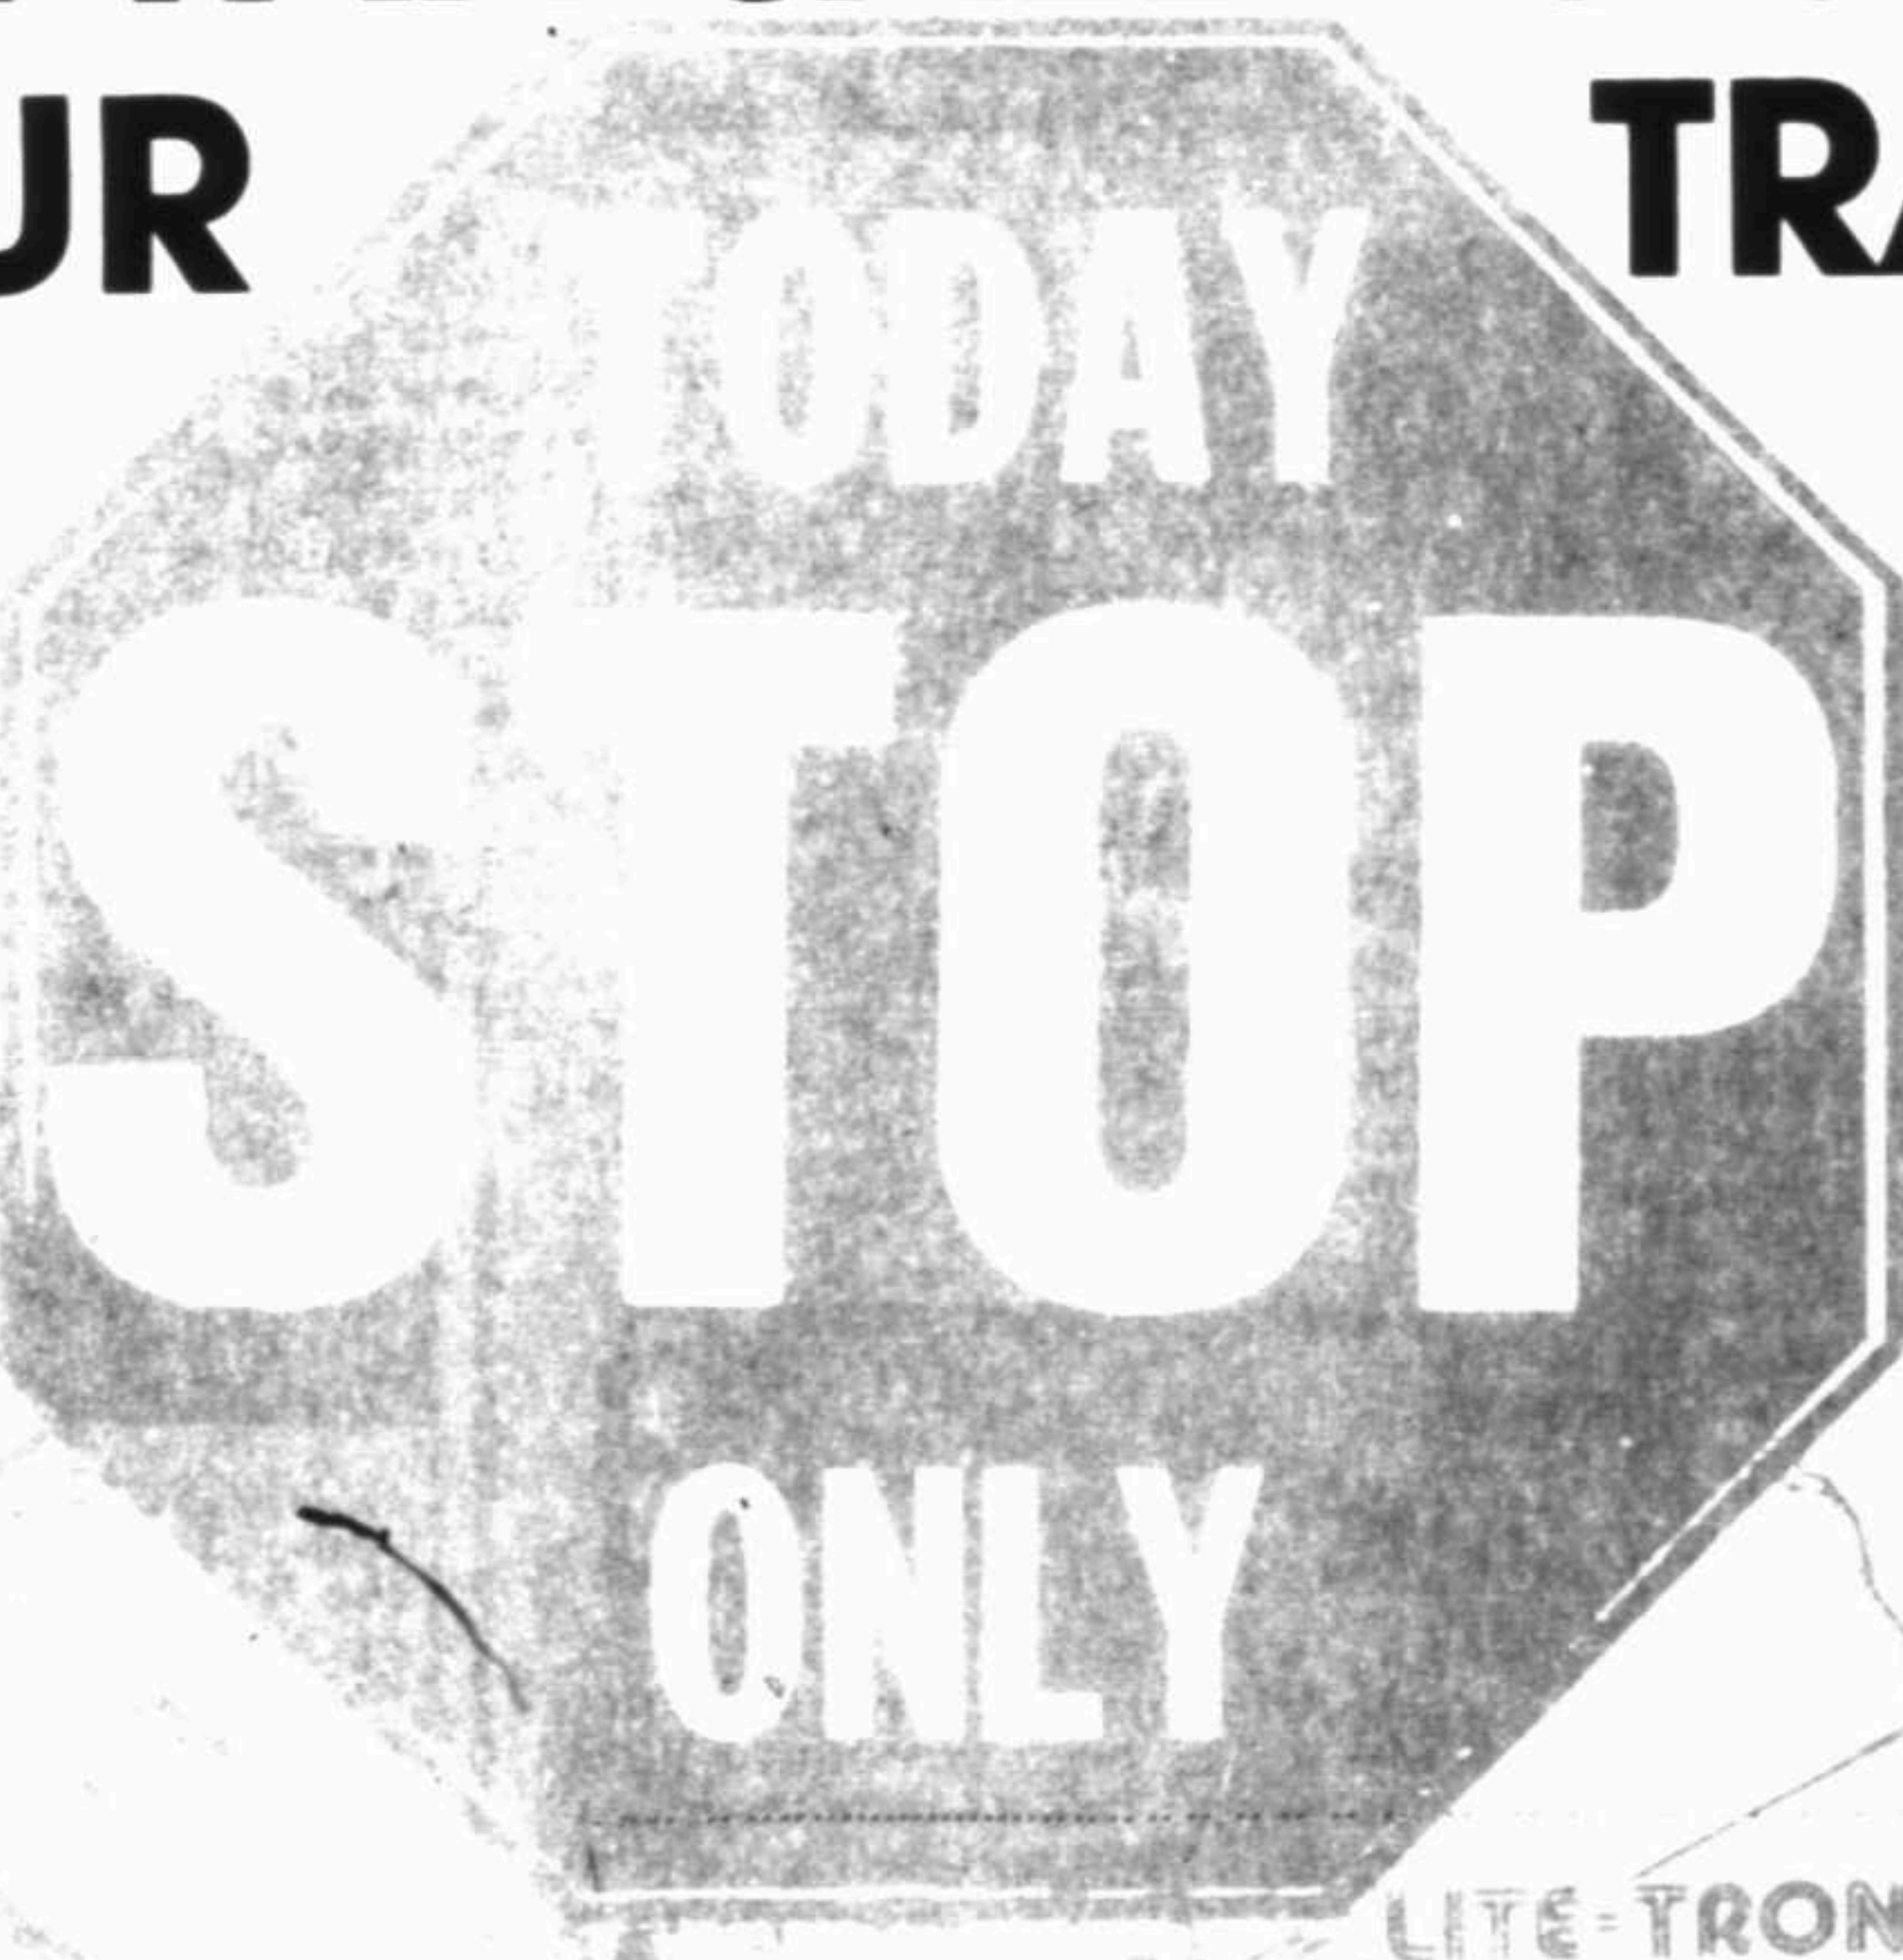

"Nobody in our vast and beautiful country — workers or peasants, writers or doctors, children or grown-ups or members of the government — wants war, be it big or small," he wrote. "We want peace. We have a lot to do: grow grain, build, invent, write books and make space flights."

That's not a description that likely would flow from President Reagan's comments on the nuclear fears of American children. "The most upsetting letters I receive are from schoolchildren who write me as a class assignment," Reagan said in a speech last Nov. 22.

Despite hardships, Iran rebounds

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

News Special

Despite revolution, war and a costly showdown with a superpower, reports from Tehran and Western analyses show that a leaner, resilient Iran is rebounding economically, its pockets full of oil dollars.

Accounts reaching the West make clear that ordinary Iranians still are enduring hardships, just as they were when American journalists last were allowed to visit Iran eight months ago.

The latest example: hundreds of slum-dwellers demonstrated in protest of water shortages in south Tehran earlier this month, anti-government exiles report.

But Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government last year gradually began ending rationing for many food and other consumer items, and his money managers say they now have paid off most of Iran's foreign debt and are building up billions of dollars worth of foreign-currency reserves.

"IT'S ALL BASED on oil. We've been surprised at how well they've done in the past year," says economist Joseph Story, a Middle East specialist with the Washington, D.C., research firm Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates.

The Wharton forecasters last year saw bleak economic prospects for Iran until about 1986. But Story says they now project strong growth — a 9.4 percent increase in the gross national product in the Iranian fiscal year ending next March.

Oil production, which normally provides 80 percent of Iran's foreign income, collapsed when war broke out with Iraq in September 1980 and an Iraqi invasion army stormed into southwest Iran's petroleum belt. But the Iranians have driven the Iraqis back and repaired damaged facilities.

Oil output averaged 2.3 million barrels a day in the first four months of 1983, double the Iranian production in the same period last year, the authoritative Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reports.

Last March's crucial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries strengthened Iran's hand within the cartel. Although OPEC's standard prices were cut, Iran's daily production ceiling was doubled to 2.4 million barrels.

"THE IRANIANS TOOK in $16.8 billion from their oil in the fiscal year ended this March, more than in the last year under the shah (1978)," Story said. "For the current year we project their oil revenues at $23 billion."

The Japanese are the biggest buyers, importing 250,000 barrels of Iranian oil daily, four times what they were buying in early 1982, Tokyo's trade ministry reports. And Iranian-Japanese commerce may expand. An Iranian trade delegation visited Tokyo last month.

Iran also has found economic partners in the Third World, such as Pakistan, India and Turkey, especially since late 1979, when Washington clamped a U.S. trade embargo on Iran because of the seizure of American Embassy hostages.

The embargo was lifted 2½ years ago, when the hostages were freed. Iranian-U.S. trade is still only a fraction of what it once was, but it is rising sharply. In the first five months of 1983, the United States bought $234.2 million worth of Iranian goods, compared with only $17.4 million in the same period of 1982, the U.S. Commerce Department reports.

"The vast majority of that is oil, along with some pistachio nuts, caviar, carpets," said Kathleen Keim, the department's Iran specialist.

OIL REVENUES are not the only key to Iran's financial comeback. The fundamentalist Moslem clergymen who govern the country are still not spending as much as did the man they ousted, the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Last year the revolutionary regime barred many dollar-drawings "luxury imports" ranging from Mercedes-Benzes to bananas, and reported reducing the nation's import bill by 30 percent. In addition, they discarded some of the shah's grandiose, multibillion-dollar schemes for industrializing Iran.

The boom in oil sales abroad and the tight purse strings at home have combined to restore some health to Iran's treasury.

Iran's reserves of dollars and other trading currencies had plunged to $600 million from $14 billion in the first three years of revolutionary rule. Abolhassan Bani-Sadr disclosed after being ousted as president and fleeing to France.

Doctors puzzled by deaths of seemingly healthy men

TOKYO (AP) — Each year hundreds of apparently healthy young Japanese die suddenly in their sleep, sometimes with a gasp or shout, and doctors do not know why.

Reports of similar deaths in the Philippines and among Indochinese refugees in the United States have given rise to speculation by medical experts that the disease might be common to ethnic groups throughout Asia.

In Japan, the mysterious killer is called "pukkuri," an onomatopoeic term that suggests a demise that strikes unexpectedly, with a "snap."

Although the fatal episode in pukkuri disease is much like a heart attack, experts say victims — mostly men in their 20s and 30s — are generally robust and rarely have a history of symptoms related to heart disease.

"It's not a matter of the heart being good or bad," said Dr. Michio Inui of the Tokyo Metropolitan Medical Examiner's Office, which studies pukkuri. "They seem to be dying of heart failure, but we can only guess about the cause."

Eighty pukkuri deaths were reported in Tokyo alone in 1980, all but four of them men. No nationwide statistics have been compiled, but Inui estimates at least 500 Japanese and perhaps more than 1,000 die of pukkuri in a typical year.

Two American researchers recently wrote to a prominent British medical journal that a baffling phenomenon called "nocturnal death syndrome" has killed some 72 Laotian, Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees in the United States over the past six years.

In a letter in the April 2 issue of The Lancet, Roy C. Baron of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and Robert H. Kirschner of the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office in Chicago noted "striking" parallels between reports of pukkuri deaths and nocturnal death syndrome.

A deadly disease called "bangungut" attacks sleeping young men in the Philippines. There are no current statistics on bangungut deaths, but Filipinos believe it strikes those who go to sleep immediately after a heavy meal. Tradition has it that death is preceded by nightmares.

Dr. Ikuro Ishiyama, a specialist in forensic medicine at Tokyo University, said his research on pukkuri suggests that death may be caused by a sudden "coronary artery spasm."

But Ishiyama said investigation showed no evidence of hardening of the arteries, which would be expected in normal cases of heart failure. Nor did victims in his study — aged 15 through 33 — appear to smoke heavily or suffer from stress, he said in an interview.

Ishiyama did discover a pattern tissue death in the heart muscles of pukkuri victims that he attributes to depletion of a protein called myoglobin. His hunch is that the loss of myoglobin, which serves as a reservoir for oxygen and carbon dioxide, is the key to unraveling the pukkuri mystery.

Ethiopia adapts to new ideas

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer, an AP correspondent in Africa, has been a frequent visitor to Ethiopia before and after its revolution.

By ANDREW TORCHIA

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Much has changed and much has stayed the same in the nine years since revolution ended Ethiopia's feudal empire and flipped the country from the pro-American to the pro-Soviet camp.

Tens of thousands of adults in Addis Ababa, the capital, and other cities now attend spare-time classes — an educational upsurge unprecedented in a society where, a few years ago, nine out of 10 people could not read or write. As dusk falls, streams of men and women returning home from school on foot make some streets impassable for cars.

Many of the new students come from the ranks of the dispossessed and unfavored — ditch-diggers, prostitutes, the unemployed.

"IT'S A combination of Marxist ideas about class struggle and an old-fashioned desire of individuals to improve themselves," said an Ethiopian office manager. His 22-year-old servant, Almas, walks two hours a day to attend eighth-grade classes, returns to clean up the dinner dishes and then studies for several hours before going to bed.

Addis Ababa remains a city of amazing contrasts. Sheep still graze amid the mud-walled slums and polluted streams beside modern office blocks. Scenes of Biblical beauty unfold as Orthodox Christian priests, garbed in black, toil uphill at 8,500 feet, and men wrapped in white muslin ride donkeys, single file, along verdant ravines.

BESIDE a church where hundreds of the poor gather on Sundays to beg and keep Christian rituals that spring from Ethiopia's early history is a plot reserved for a hotel to be built by a Western chain. Across the street is a sign erected by the military government: "Socialist Ethiopia is the home of heavy industries."

Ethiopian wit remains sharp, aimed now at the military instead of the late Emperor Haile Selassie. The revolution has bred a new group of businessmen who prosper on government contracts, despite the nationalization of most wealth.

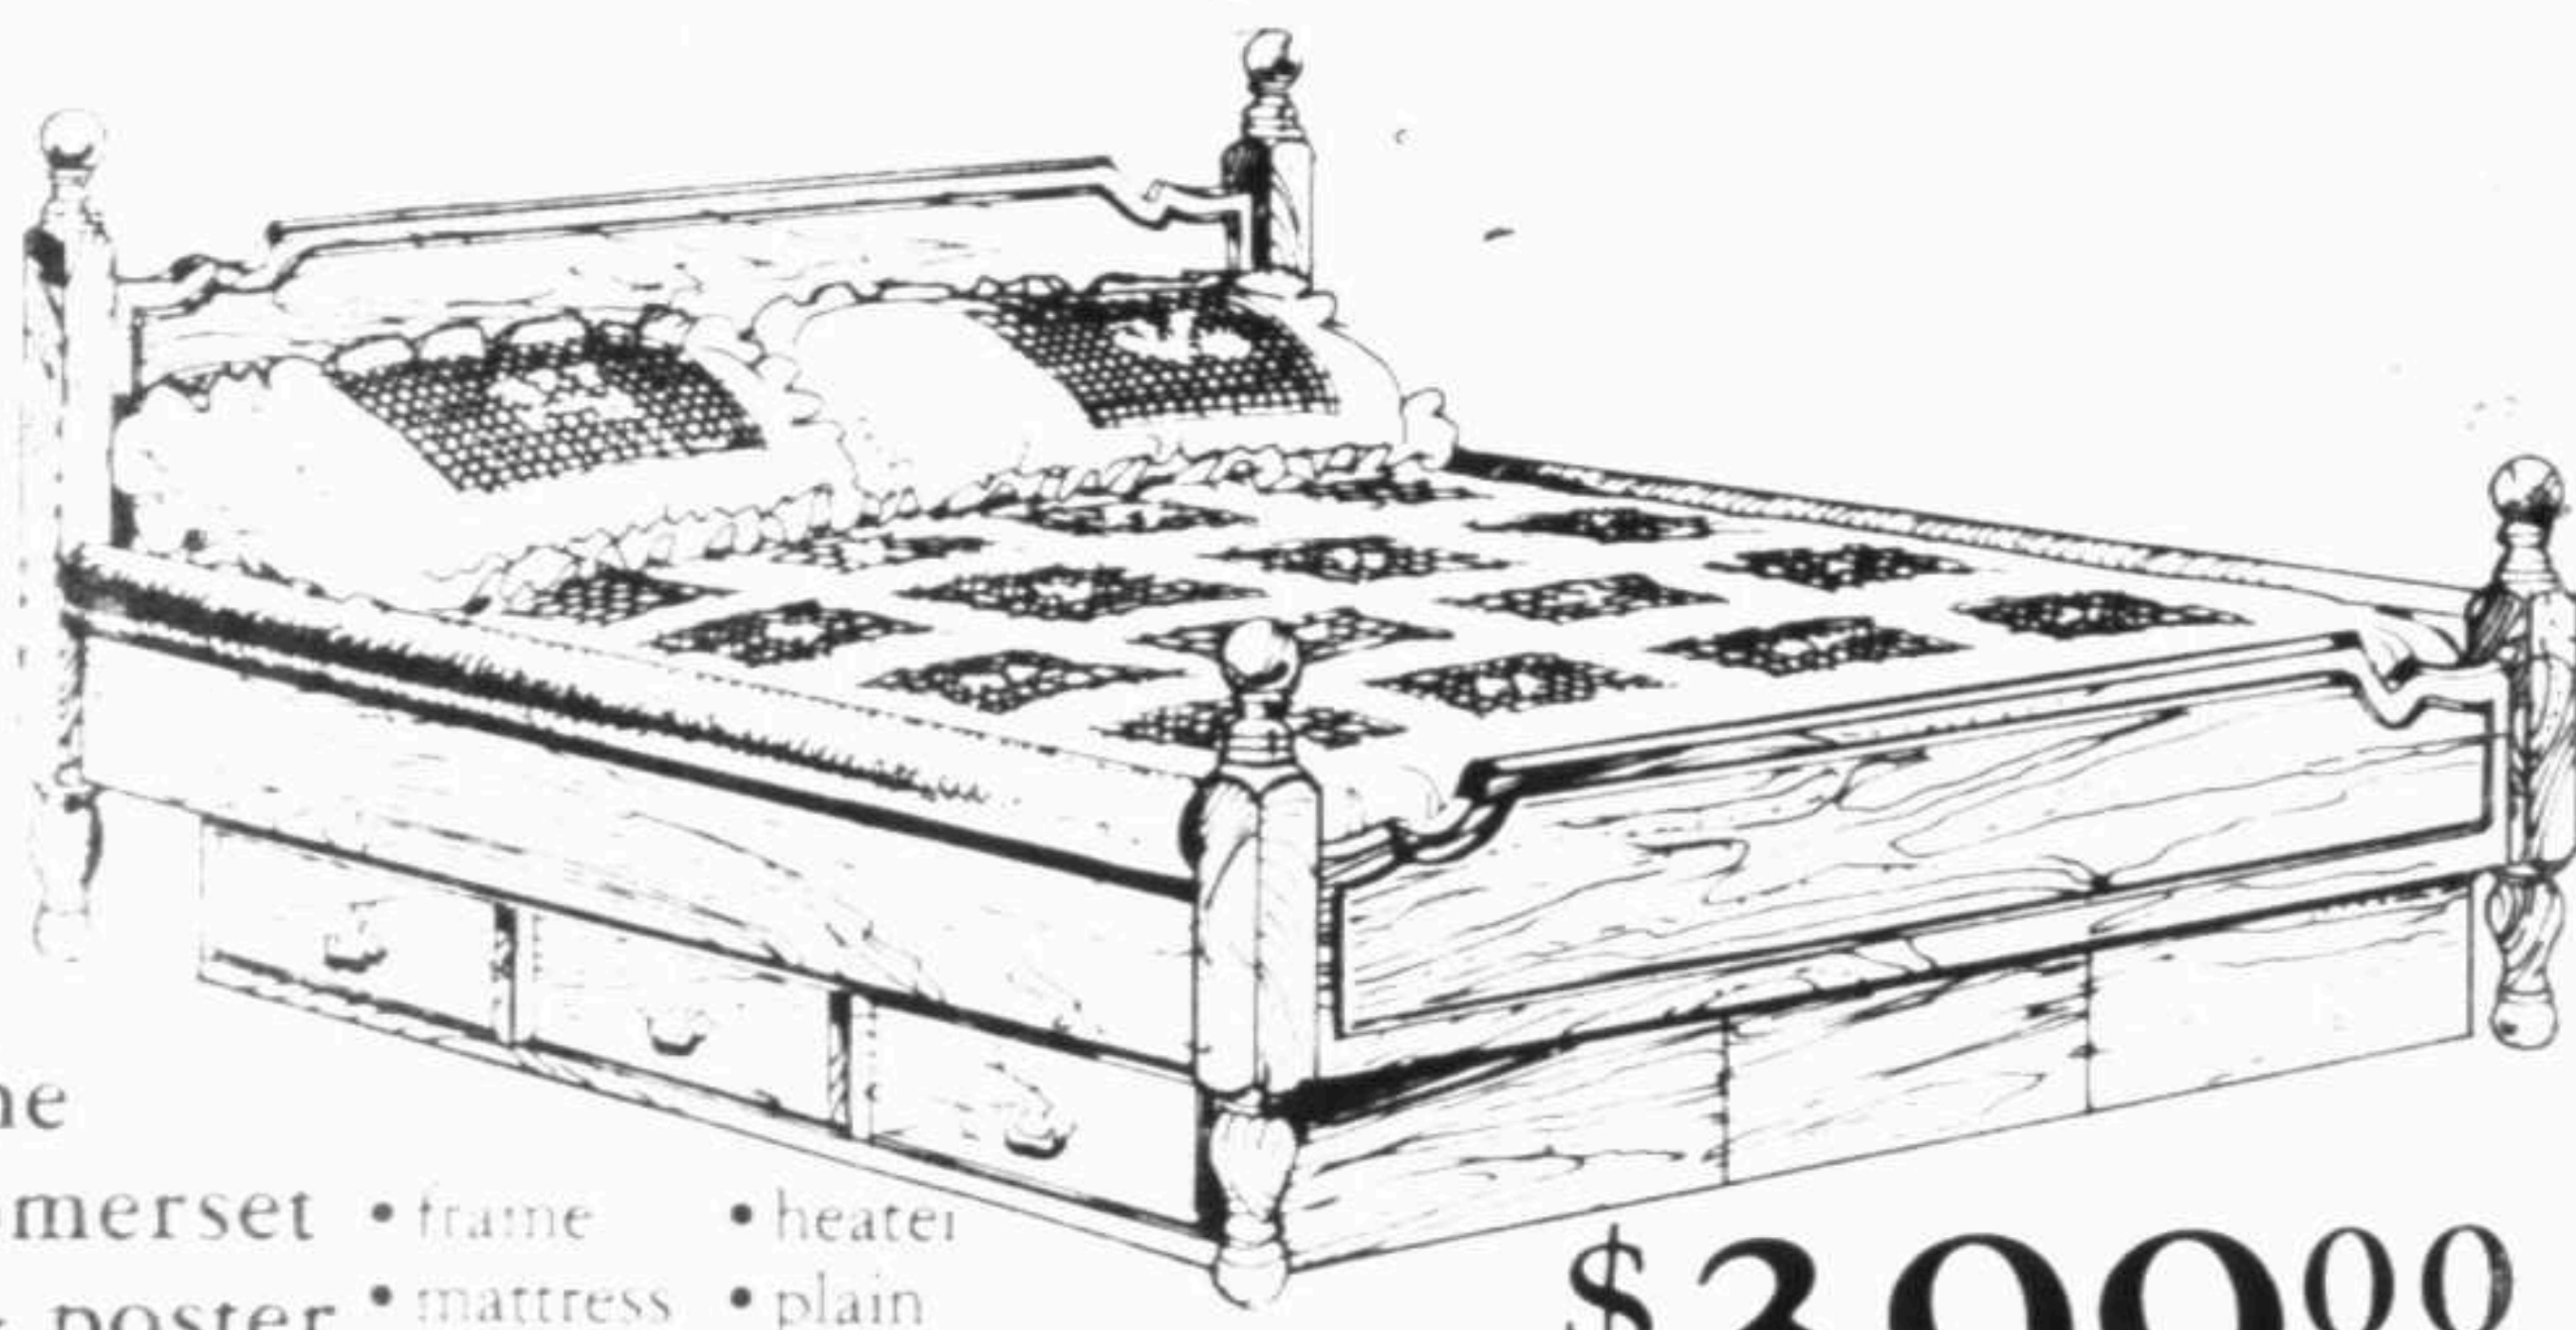

With the establishment of a full-fledged Communist Party targeted for next year, a current joke has one well-to-do merchant saying to another, "If business is this good under socialism, think how good it will be under communism."

CURIO shops along Churchill Road, Addis Ababa's main street, profited from hundreds of U.S. diplomats and military advisers before the revolution, but shopkeepers often complained about American manners. With the Soviets in town and Western tourism dwindled, business is near zero.
