Clinton urges steps to fix economy

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton urged world economic powers Tuesday to take "urgent steps" to limit the turmoil that has roiled global markets. He said the violence of boom-and-bust cycles must be contained.

Addressing financial officials from 182 countries at the International Monetary Fund's annual meetings, Clinton used his strongest language yet to describe the need for all countries to do their part to calm an economic crisis that has sent U.S. stock prices plummeting and pushed one-third of the world into recession.

"Today the world faces perhaps its most serious financial crisis in half a century," Clinton said. "We must take urgent steps to help those who have been hurt by it, to limit the reach of it and to restore growth and confidence."

Behind the scenes, Clinton administration officials worked feverishly on a number of fronts. The White House confirmed that preliminary discussions were under way on an emergency economic summit in London next month, suggested by British Prime Minister Tony Blair.

Meanwhile, Treasury officials worked to put together an emergency rescue package of around $30 billion for Brazil, hoping to keep Latin America's largest economy from being the next to fall victim to panicky investors.

Argentine President Carlos Menem said negotiations on the loans for Brazil could be completed by next week and suggested the emergency lines of credit could be expanded to help other Latin American countries facing difficulty.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin flew to New York late Tuesday to brief U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan as part of an effort to keep the United Nations better informed on efforts to contain the widening economic turmoil.

The Clinton administration also released a study showing the state-by-state impact that economic problems already have had on American manufacturers and farmers, hoping to increase pressure on Congress to approve $18 billion for the IMF before lawmakers go home.

House and Senate negotiators agreed Tuesday to grant the full $18 billion sought by Clinton for the IMF, but only if a package of reforms can be worked out. House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Liv-

Conspiracy theory

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., holds his weekly press briefing Tuesday in Washington. Republican leaders said Tuesday that Congress would not be able to finish work on all appropriations bills by its scheduled adjournment deadline of Friday and asked President Clinton to negotiate a compromise package that would fund the government well into next year. But while extending the hand of compromise, Lott accused President Clinton and Democratic lawmakers of conspiring to force a government shutdown to divert public attention from the Monica Lewinsky scandal.

Funding report

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party has not returned $1.7 million in donations that Republican investigators on the House committee probing fund-raising abuses say are either illegal or clearly suspect, according to an internal report. The report, written by the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, details numerous donations connected to controversial fund-raising figures as James Riady and John Huang. The money went to the Democratic National Committee, Democratic state parties or other Democratic fund-raising committees. The report says it believes the money should be returned.

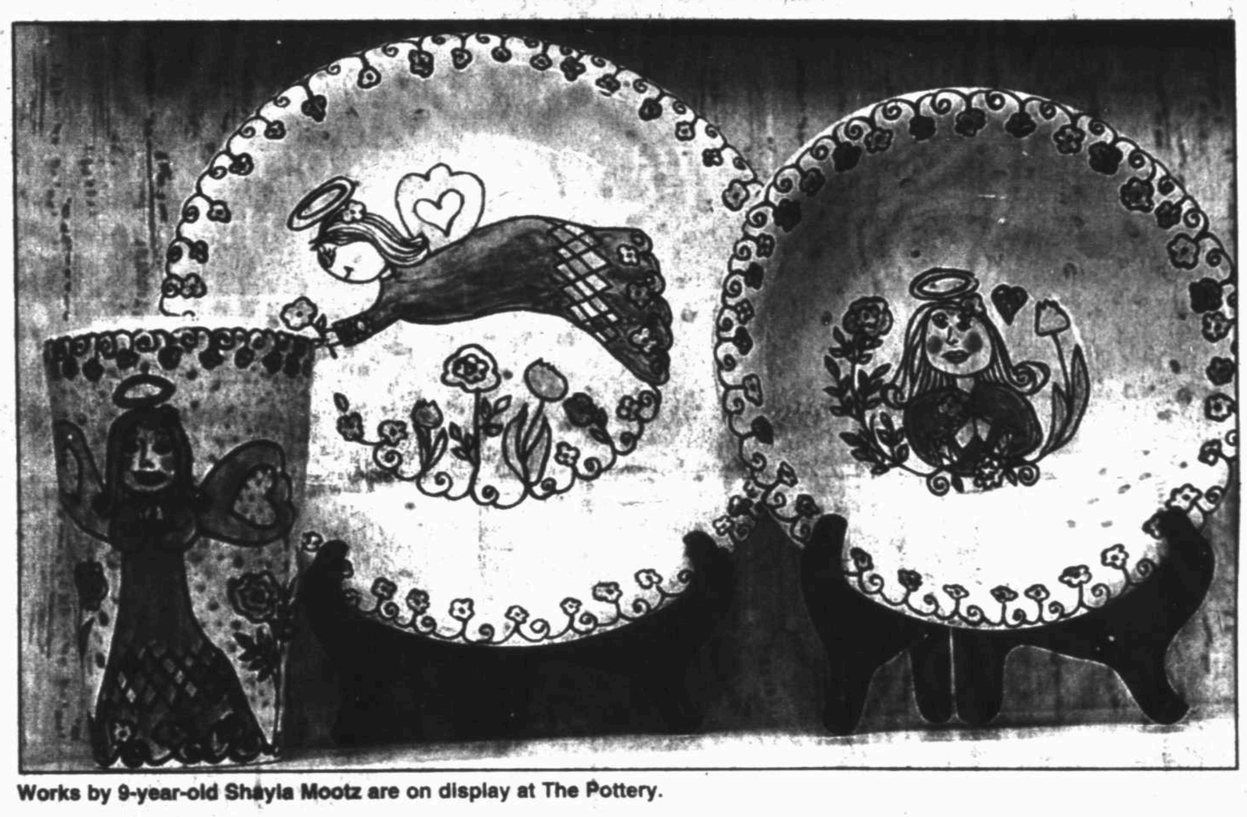
One-woman show



Works by 9-year-old Shayla Mootz are on display at The Pottery.

Bedtime pushed back — for girl's art show opening

Shayla Mootz has come a long way in a short while. In fact, she only began her hobby in January of this year while visiting a local pottery store.

"We went over to The Pottery and I thought it would be fun (to paint the pieces)," she said. "So I got involved and I couldn't stop. It was just too much fun."

Ten months later, Shayla — who was already a Permian Basin Fair blue ribbon winner — has her first one-woman show. The week-long show opened Monday, her birthday.

"I'm excited about getting to see if other people like my pieces," she said. "I hope I inspire them to try to paint, too.

"I also invited my class from school and my Little Princess group to come have cake at the opening, and I got to stay up an hour past my bedtime."

Shayla's ideas are collected in a drawing notebook. From there she draws them on pottery of different sizes and shapes.

"The ideas just come out of my mind," Shayla said. "My mom helps me pick the different pieces to draw my pictures on. That is my favorite part. I love to paint the pottery and see how they look after they are fired."

Her mother, Anna Marie, said Shayla knew at an early age what she wanted to do.

"She was determined to be an artist when she was 3 years old," Ms. Mootz said.

In addition to mom, Shayla lives with her dad, Mike, and two sisters, Jhenai, 16, who is a member of the Midland Community Theater Pickwick Players, and Kharli, 12, who is a volleyball player.

"I never really had a chance to show her a lot of stuff with three girls in the house," Ms. Mootz said. "But we

Milosevic still rejecting end to crackdown

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A senior U.S. envoy failed again Tuesday to persuade Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to end the crackdown in Kosovo, a diplomatic source said, raising the prospects of NATO airstrikes.

Later in the day, the U.N. Security Council declared that the combatants in the Serbian province had not yet fully complied with U.N. resolutions demanding a cease-fire and the withdrawal of special Serb police units. While carrying no legal weight, the action could fuel calls for military intervention.

NATO officials say they are ready to launch airstrikes. No decision is expected until Thursday, when NATO ambassadors meet in Brussels, Belgium.

U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke met Milosevic late Tuesday for a second day, warning that time is running out to resolve the seven-month crisis. Neither U.S. nor Yugoslav officials issued any detailed statement about the talks, but

Cold front likely to linger awhile

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A cold front that greeted Midlanders with a chilly Tuesday morning might linger around the Permian Basin for at least a couple of days, according to a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Midland.

The air mass was sitting stable over the Northern Plains earlier this week, but eventually made its way to Midland-Odessa by Monday night, said Ray Fagen, chief meteorologist.

"There's been an upper-level flow standing over the Nebraska-Iowa area," Fagen said. "It generated enough cold air to make it to Midland and even all the way into the Big Bend area."

Tall City residents might find this morning to be cool and in the low 40s. Afternoon temperatures are likely to rise to the high 70s, Fagen said. Thursday morning could be near 48, while the afternoon high could be in the low 80s, he said.

The front made itself obvious at about 5 p.m. Monday, when the afternoon temperature dropped to 88, Fagen said. By 11 p.m., the temperature had dipped to

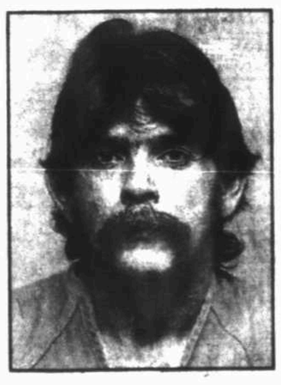
Police arrest second man in Garcia slaying



Portillo

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Police arrested a second Midland man Tuesday in connection with the stabbing death Sunday of Ovidio Garcia, 39.

Guadalupe Portillo, 52, was arrested on murder charges and taken to the Midland County jail, where he will remain overnight without bond, officials said.

A warrant for his arrest was obtained Monday afternoon, Midland police Detective Mel Francis said. Portillo turned himself in Tuesday at the advice of his attorney, Paul Williams.

Williams said Portillo contacted him Monday afternoon after learning that police pegged him as an accessory in Garcia's death. Police have reported that Portillo allegedly recruited Nicholas Rodriquez, 26, to fight with Garcia outside of the residence at 408 E. Hickory Ave.

Rodriquez, who has also been charged with first-degree murder, was identified by witnesses as the alleged assailant, police said. He remained in the county jail Tuesday in lieu of a $50,000 bond.

It is unknown if Portillo will retain Williams once the case is in the district attorney's hands, the lawyer said. Though his surrender to police was peaceful, police have not had an opportunity to question Portillo, Francis said.

Russia braces for first major protest since economic crisis began

MOSCOW (AP) — Overdue wages. Soaring inflation. Lost jobs.

Russians have endured a bitter economic crisis with few public outbursts, but hundreds of thousands, if not millions, are expected to march in nationwide demonstrations Wednesday in what's forecast to be one of the largest protests during President Boris Yeltsin's tenure.

A broad band of government critics, led by trade unions and the Communist Party, have spent months organizing hundreds of protests in cities, towns and factories across the country.

One of the most striking aspects of the Russian crisis, which hit in mid-August, has been the muted public response. Many Russians are deeply disillusioned with the government's inability to halt the country's economic slide, but they have concentrated on personal survival.

Protest organizers have sought to turn the private frustrations into public rallies that could draw as many as 40 million people around the country, according to Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov. Russian labor unions say up to 28 million people will take part in the strikes and rallies.

However, many observers predict the one-day demonstration will more likely resemble a similar protest on March 27, 1997, when police said more than 1.8 million people rallied nationwide.

The Communists and the trade unions have had some difficulty coordinating their aims, and this has partially muddied their message.

The unions want to focus on basic economic issues in a country where the economy has been contracting for a decade and is expected to shrink more than 5 percent this year. Millions of workers get paid months late, and inflation has skyrocketed more than 60 percent since the crisis began.

"The problems of debts, (unpaid) wages and jobs appeared not today and not on Aug. 17," said Mikhail Shmakov, leader of the Federation of Independent Trade Unions. "It has been gradually developing in the country during the past few years."

The Communists, meanwhile, have been calling for Yeltsin's resignation and see the protests as a way to further weaken the president, who still has two years left in his term.

But the Communists find themselves in a bit of an awkward position because several of their members are playing key roles in the new government of Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov.

To further complicate the matter, the union leaders have said they not only want Yeltsin to step down, they also want to see the dissolution of parliament, where Communists make up the largest faction.

Other Yeltsin opponents are also seizing the opportunity to advance their own goals.

Alexander Lebed, governor of the vast Krasnoyarsk province in Central Siberia and a likely presidential contender, said Tuesday that Yeltsin's resignation is "inevitable," the Interfax news agency reported.

"Any government must serve the people, and if it fails to deliver, it must go," Lebed was quoted as saying.

Yeltsin has maintained an extremely low profile since the economic crisis struck, spending most of his time at a presidential residence on the western outskirts of Moscow. He had no public appearances planned for Wednesday.

The Communists and the unions have pledged that the protests will be peaceful. Unrest is quite rare at demonstrations, and several smaller, preliminary marches in recent days have proceeded without any trouble.

Nonetheless, police and interior troops were on alert throughout Russia. More than 11,000 policemen and 4,000 Interior Ministry troops will be deployed in Moscow alone, according to an Interior Ministry official cited by the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Moscow city officials have said the demonstration in the capital could draw up to 150,000 people who will march to the edge of Red Square.

Seeking to discourage angry rhetoric aimed at the government, Justice Minister Pavel Krasheninnikov warned that criminal proceedings could be launched against opposition leaders who recently called for the government's ouster by force. Justice Ministry officials plan to attend rallies to see whether speakers comply with the law.

Nobel Literature Prize to be announced Thursday

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — This year's winner of the Nobel Literature will be announced Thursday at 7 a.m. EDT, the Swedish Academy said.

The prestigious prize is worth $974,000 this year.

The Swedish Academy conducts its deliberations in strict secrecy and even the names of nominees are not released. But critics love speculating on possible winners, and there tends to be wide agreement on strong candidates.

Names that come up a lot in this year's pre-prize speculation include: Bei Dao of China, Jose Saramago of Portugal, Albania's Ismail Kadare and Swedish poet Tomas Transtroemer.

Animated conversations among literary fans begin to bubble around this time of year as to who will win the esteemed prize, first awarded in 1901.

Although a writer's nationality, ethnicity, gender and medium are not supposed to play a part in the selection, many say these elements do. And a review of the recent winners is seen as a way of calculating this year's laureate.

Seven of the past 10 were men — does that favor a woman? Two of the past three were poets — does that favor a prose writer? Four of the past 10 wrote in English — does that favor an writer in another language?

American critic Harold Bloom says the award committee has an unsettling record of selections influenced by political correctness, not just merit.

Each year, close to a million Americans experience a heart attack. Memorial Hospital is nationally recognized for providing timely, high quality care to patients experiencing heart attack.

Memorial Hospital participates in the National Registry of Myocardial Infarctions. Out of 4,000 hospitals participating in the study, Memorial Hospital has one of the fastest rates in the nation for giving thrombolytic, or clot-buster therapy, to heart attack victims. Memorial's success in timely treatment of heart attacks is due to the collaborative efforts of our local cardiologists, physician, nurses, Emergency Department personnel, EMS, and support staff.

Memorial Hospital has joined forces with Midland's cardiologists to educate health professionals throughout the region on improving cardiac care. The American Heart Association has designated Memorial Hospital as the community training center for Advanced Cardiac Life Support, Pediatric Advanced Life Support, and CPR.

Through education, we are not only improving the lives of Midland residents, but also improving cardiac care for patients throughout West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Memorial Hospital is proud to announce the second annual "Clinical Rounds in Cardiology in the Permian Basin" which is being held on Saturday, October 10. Over 500 health professionals, including physicians, nurses and paramedics, will be attending from cities in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico to learn about current trends in acute MI management and cardiac emergencies.

Memorial Hospital would like to thank the following physicians for providing this conference for the Permian Basin:

Dutch demand to know: What was Israeli cargo plane carrying?

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — In the shadow of towering apartment buildings, a living monument to victims of the worst Dutch air disaster bears this inscription: "The Tree That Saw Everything."

Six years later, investigators are struggling to uncover what no one can see — the cause of chronic illnesses that have plagued the neighborhood and its rescuers since the crash of an Israeli cargo jet.

New disclosures the plane was carrying a chemical that can be used to produce the deadly nerve gas sarin have reignited demands for the truth — and renewed speculation over what the Israelis intended to do with the material.

"Once and for all, we must put an end to the disaster. The suffering has lasted too long," Hannah Belliot, who heads the neighborhood council, said Sunday in a memorial service near trees that survived the inferno.

Forty-three people were killed on Oct. 4, 1992, when the Israel-bound Boeing 747 cargo jet lost its two right engines and smashed into a 12-story apartment block shortly after takeoff from Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport.

While the cause of the crash was determined to be a design flaw, its cargo has been a nagging mystery to the scores of residents and rescue workers suffering from chronic health problems.

Last week, the Israeli government confirmed what many had suspected after years of official denials: The plane was carrying dangerous cargo.

Up to 50 gallons of dimethyl methylphosphonate, an ingredient used in sarin, many pesticides and in anti-retardants were destined for the Israel Institute for Biological Research in suburban Tel Aviv, the Israelis disclosed.

Recent reports have said Israel was making chemical and biological weapons at the institute; the Israeli government has not commented on those claims. The Dutch government, meanwhile, has promised a fresh parliamentary probe.

Those suffering from health problems say knowing exactly what was in the belly of the jet is their only hope for recovery.

"I can't get it out of my mind," said ambulance driver Henk Post, 48, a paramedic dispatched to the crash site in the low-income, heavily immigrant Bijlmer neighborhood.

Post arrived within minutes of the early evening crash and worked until the next morning — all while wearing no special protective gear. Three years later, he began suffering health problems, including chronic fatigue and muscle aches. He also weeps easily and suffers bouts of depression.

"He's so emotional," said Post's 22-year-old daughter, Bianca. "He's different. He's not my father anymore."

Post said doctors are at a loss over how to treat him.

He's not alone. Doctors in Bijlmer say some 300 people have suffered health problems since the crash, including nervousness, stress, chronic fatigue, pain and drowsiness.

"My whole body is a mess. There are all kinds of weird things going on," said Ed Steur, 48, an auto mechanic who helped evacuate the area and now suffers from bronchial problems and muscle pains "so bad that I can't do anything anymore."

Steur is angry at the Israeli and Dutch governments for keeping the plane's cargo a secret. Over the years, officials have said the plane carried a small amount of military equipment; one newspaper report said it was carrying Sidewinder missiles.

Earlier this year, Israel's ambassador to the Netherlands, Yossi Gal, told reporters the plane carried "no dangerous goods ... nothing secret."

"I don't believe ... that something was wittingly and knowingly withheld," Transport Minister Tineke Netelenbos told the daily De Telegraaf.

Fergie draws praise as British TV talk show host

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York's debut as a television talk show host drew approval Tuesday from surprised critics who praised her polished performance and "real skill" at discussing life's crises.

In "Sarah ... Surviving Life," launched Monday, the former Sarah Ferguson talked about her current boyfriend — a still-married Italian count — as well as her refusal to move out of a wing of ex-husband Prince Andrew's house, where she lives with their two daughters.

"You might wonder why I qualify to present a show about surviving life," the 38-year-old duchess told viewers in the first of 10 one-hour shows commissioned by Sky TV.

"After all, I have led a very charmed life — there have been huge ups but there have been some huge downs."

On the show, Fergie, as she is popularly known, sat on a couch dressed in a black trouser suit and discussed life's crises with guests who included a woman raped by a serial killer and a hit-and-run driver who had confessed 20 years later.

The Guardian newspaper said Fergie performed "unimpeachably" and The Mirror newspaper said she carried the show off well despite some nervousness.

Mirror columnist Sue Carroll said Fergie "had clearly done her homework and there was some real skill in the way she turned the conversation around."

"I realize it's unfashionable to praise anything the duchess does, but considering she's a beginner in TV terms, I think she did pretty well," The Express critic Tim Hulse was quoted as saying.

The Times columnist Joe Joseph said that "what struck you was just how sober and professional a performance she delivered for someone we have grown used to seeing behave like a buffoon."

FIX: Clinton calls on Japan to invigorate its economy

ingston, R-La., said congressional leaders would meet with administration officials to discuss the conditions.

The administration in the past has opposed such strings. But a congressional Republican official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the administration might agree to some conditions as the cost of getting the IMF money.

Clinton, in his remarks, called for finance officials to continue working on proposals endorsed Monday by a special 22-nation conference that are aimed at stabilizing the vast flows of international money.

"We must address not only a run on a bank or firm, but also a run on nations," Clinton said. "We simply must find a way to contain the pattern of boom-bust on an international scale."

And he called on Japan to invigorate its economy, something his administration believes is essential for lifting other Asian nations.

In Tokyo, Japanese Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi announced plans for a bigger economic stimulus package after officials said the country, already in its worst recession in 50 years, was facing deepening problems.

Both IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus and World Bank President James Wolfensohn pledged Tuesday to undertake major changes in their agencies because of the severity of current threats.

"It would be perhaps too dramatic yet to talk of global recession, but the evidence of the risks calls for immediate action," Camdessus said.

He welcomed a U.S. proposal to provide a new IMF credit line for nations in distress that would speed loans to a country before panicked investors bailed out. But it is unlikely this week's meetings, scheduled to end Thursday, will produce final agreement on the U.S. proposal.

Wolfensohn spoke of the human pain of the market turmoil: millions of people thrown out of work, small and middle-sized businesses going bust, and children in Asia dropping out of school to support families.

"We must go beyond financial stabilization. ... We must focus on social issues," Wolfensohn said. "If we do not have greater equity and social justice, there will be no political stability."

KOSOVO: Envoy expected to meet Milosevic again today

the source, who was familiar with the deliberations, said there was "no change" in Milosevic's stand.

"Kosovo is more important to him than Bosnia. The American people do not understand that because Bosnia was so much bloodier," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Bosnian war ended in 1995 when Milosevic accepted a peace agreement Holbrooke negotiated. Holbrooke was dispatched to the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade in what appeared to be a last-chance diplomatic effort to resolve the Kosovo crisis.

The source said Holbrooke was expected to meet Milosevic again today.

The United States has threatened military action unless Milosevic calls off his bloody crackdown on ethnic Albanian rebels seeking independence from Serbia, the main republic of Yugoslavia.

Holbrooke met the Yugoslav president after a visit to Kosovo. Following a meeting with ethnic Albanian leaders, the U.S. envoy said that Serbian security forces still maintain a strong presence, despite U.N. demands for them to withdraw from areas of conflict and allow political settlement.

"U.S. diplomatic observers are doing a terrific job bringing us information, and the information they're bringing is not good," Holbrooke told reporters in the Kosovo capital, Pristina.

Milosevic's crackdown against the secessionists has killed hundreds, left tens of thousands of ethnic Albanians homeless and led to growing resolve among NATO allies to stop the bloodshed by striking Yugoslav army targets if necessary.

The U.N. Security Council issued a statement Tuesday night concluding that there "had yet to be full compliance with all the requirements" of U.N. resolutions on Kosovo.

The statement, read by council president and British ambassador to the U.N. Jeremy Greenstock, noted that military activity in the southern Serb province had appeared to wind down in recent days. But Greenstock said Belgrade's armed presence in Kosovo "remained significant" and the operations of the special police had continued even after the council's latest demands for a cease-fire.

The council met for close to seven hours to discuss a report from U.N. chief Kofi Annan on Kosovo.

Hours after Holbrooke returned to Belgrade, reporters saw about 100 Yugoslav security vehicles of all sorts — from armored personnel carriers to trucks loaded with troops — moving outside Kosovo in an apparent show of Milosevic's compliance with international demands.

Additionally, state-run Serbian TV claimed that all Serbian special police units, on the forefront of strikes against Kosovo Albanian militants, were pulled out of the province. Their pullback was one of the key international demands.

Ethnic Albanians constitute 90 percent of the 2 million people in Kosovo. Most ethnic Albanians favor self-rule.

In Washington, President Clinton warned that unchecked, Serb violence in the province could lead to instability throughout the region.

"The stakes are high," Clinton said. "The time is now to end the violence in Kosovo."

Defense Secretary William Cohen told Congress a pullback of troops in Kosovo by Milosevic was not enough to ward off NATO attacks. Airstrikes might be followed by some "international presence" on the ground, he said.

If more Serb forces don't pull out of the province, NATO intervention "will become inevitable," French President Jacques Chirac said.

However, Yugoslav deputy Information Secretary Miodrag Popovic told Associated Press Television News that the complete withdrawal of Yugoslav troops from Kosovo is out of question.

"Is there a country in the world that would do so, especially with an armed rebellion in their hands?" Popovic asked.

Milosevic told Holbrooke in talks Monday night that his government is willing to seek a "political solution" to the crisis. But he also called the NATO threats against his country "a criminal act."

Albania on Tuesday offered its airports and sea ports to NATO for use in any military operation against neighboring Yugoslavia.

Canada said Tuesday it had evacuated all nonessential diplomatic staff and their families from its Belgrade embassy. Other countries were expected to follow suit.

Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov told the Interfax news agency that Russia, a staunch ally of Serbia, would use its veto to stop any move to approve airstrikes on Yugoslavia by the Security Council.

The United States is trying to get Milosevic and the ethnic Albanians to agree on a deal that would defer for two or three years a decision on whether Kosovo would separate from Serbia. But the ethnic Albanians have refused to negotiate with Milosevic.

ARREST: Ms. Zepeda says she tried to stop confrontation

A weapon that police suspect was used in the stabbing was found late Monday. Though they initially reported that they were looking for a broken hoe, the weapon they have in their possession is a folding pocket knife, said Tina Sanders-Jauz, police spokeswoman.

Detectives would say only that the weapon was found outside a south Midland location and would not reveal the exact location at this point in the investigation.

Garcia was stabbed to his chest and pelvic area during the fight and was dead at the scene when an emergency crew arrived, police said.

Police theorized that the early Sunday morning brawl was initiated when Portillo and Garcia were arguing over Gloria Zepeda, the owner of the Hickory Avenue home.

But Ms. Zepeda said Tuesday that the fight was the result of a conflict between the two men and did not directly involve her.

The night before the slaying, Ms. Zepeda said she went to a quincenera and unexpectedly ran into Portillo, who she broke up with eight years ago. They greeted each other and went about their own business the rest of the night.

Shortly after midnight, Ms. Zepeda was walking to her house just a couple of blocks away when Portillo saw her and convinced her not to walk home alone.

Garcia, who Ms. Zepeda has been dating for four years, was driving to her house, saw them walking together and made an assumption before speaking to either of them, according to Ms. Zepeda.

"Ovidio got the wrong impression and he pushed Lupe (Portillo) to the floor," Ms. Zepeda said. "He told him to leave ... and so he got up and left. You could tell by looking at Lupe's face that he was scared."

The fight was not prompted by jealousy involving her, but instead, Portillo's embarrassment that Garcia knocked him to the floor, Ms. Zepeda said.

"It was his pride that got in the way," she said.

The couple lingered in Ms. Zepeda's backyard for a while until Portillo showed up again — only this time with Rodriquez at his side.

"I've known what kind of person Nick (Rodriquez) is. I was in shock the moment I saw him come to the backyard. I told Lupe, 'Why did you bring him here? You know what kind of person he is.' I think he wanted someone younger to fight Ovidio," she said.

The men argued and challenged each other to a fight, she said. Ms. Zepeda tried to get between them, but they ran to the front yard. In a desperate attempt to stop Rodriquez, she clung to his arm as he walked by her. Her effort failed; she only managed to tear off a part of his shirt.

"It has nothing to do with you," she said Portillo told her.

When Ms. Zepeda arrived in the front yard seconds later, she found Garcia lying in the driveway and saw Portillo jumping into his truck.

"He told me not to tell anyone about what just happened ... and asked me to check Ovidio and see if he was all right," Ms. Zepeda said. "I thought he was knocked out, not stabbed."

She went inside to call 911, but the phone rang before she had a chance to pick it up. She said it was Portillo calling her from a pay phone to ask her not to call the police.

She said she hung up and called 911 and then ran outside with a towel to mop up the blood from Garcia's limp body. Immediately after touching him, she discovered he was dead, and at that moment, her life took a drastic turn, she said.

"It was something that should not have happened," she said. "I don't think anyone had intended for it to turn out that way. I think they both got scared of Ovidio because he was tall. If I would have known the way things were going to turn out, I would have kept Ovidio in the house and called police."

After recovering from the shock, Ms. Zepeda said she called her employer, for whom she had worked as a housekeeper for 25 years and had cared for two generations of children.

Ms. Zepeda said she went to her employer's north Midland home, where she was able to sort out her feelings by talking to a friend outside the presence of her teen-age children, who were also upset by the stabbing.

Her emotions ran wild, she said. Ms. Zepeda said she had lost a man she met at a dance six years ago, but dated for only four years. He was the second man she had feelings for after her husband died 15 years ago, she said.

She jokes about Garcia's once scruffy beard and unruly hair, which she said he eventually shed. She let him live at her house whenever he couldn't find another place to stay and she helped him find a job to help support his children with another woman.

"He turned his life around for the better," Ms. Zepeda said. "I was proud of him."

In return, he helped her fix minor problems with her car or house and did other household chores.

While she thought that the relationship was too good to be true, there were problems.

"We had a big age difference. I would be in my 60s and he would still be young," she said. "I had to stop and think about my future. When I get old and can't work, I could not support the both of us. He wasn't a legal citizen, so he didn't pay Social Security."

Her feelings were hurt when Garcia's family blamed the stabbing on her and made other scathing remarks about her. Instead of taking them to heart, she dispels them as pent-up anger and confusion coming from a mourning mother.

"I just want them to understand that I am feeling bad too," she said. "The only reason I am doing this interview is so I can get things straight. Only the people who were there that night know what happened.

"We should let Ovidio rest in peace and just think about the good things he did for people."

have our own art studio in the house and she basically taught herself everything she knows."

Ms. Mootz, an art teacher, said she is careful not to interfere in her daughter's development as an artist.

"I don't show her a lot of things I would show other people I teach," Ms. Mootz said. "The hand-eye coordination does not becomes fully developed until the age of 10. Plus, she already has a 'trademark' style in all her drawings. I think it is better if she develops on her own."

Shayla was born in Singapore and lived in Jakarta, Indonesia, until moving to Midland. Although she has traveled over most of the United States, her favorite place is Bali in Indonesia.

"I love it there," she said. "We get to play on the beach, and sleep in bunk beds, and see the Bali dancers, and we get Bali braids (corn rolls). And there are beaded dresses and beaded hats. It's a lot of fun."

She is happy to have a place like The Pottery where she is welcome to work on her art and have fun.

"I really like to go there," she added. "They are super nice. They let me pick my own pieces and my own colors.

"It is a fun place to work." She recommends it as a "great place for 'unstressing.'"

Ms. Mootz was quick to agree.

"It is a wonderful place," she said. "It is like a coffee-and-talk shop all put together. The people there know her and let me leave her there when she wants to work. They are great."

Shayla's art will be on display until the end of the week at The Pottery.

COLD: Temperature didn't set record

57, he said.

Tuesday's cool and breezy conditions might seem like a drastic change in weather when compared to Sunday's weather, which had an overnight low of 73. That broke the high minimum temperature of 66 recorded in 1994, Fagen said.

However, no records have been broken in light of the cold front, Fagen said. In fact, NWS reports show that Monday's low is in accordance with the average low of 55.

Albright says leaders still must make 'tough choices'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel and the Palestinians have failed to make the "tough choices" needed to conclude a West Bank accord and unless they do, Mideast peacemaking could fall apart, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said Tuesday.

Her remarks, as she met with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu here and with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in Jericho on the West Bank, seemed designed to spur the leaders to tackle their differences.

The key challenge appeared to be settling on security arrangements that would enable Netanyahu to sign off on a 13 percent pullback on the West Bank with high hopes of getting the deal through his rightist Likud coalition government.

Still, Albright set up a three-way meeting on Wednesday with Arafat and Netanyahu at Erez, on the border between Israel and Palestinian-held Gaza.

"Time is not on our side," Albright said, standing alongside Arafat in his Jericho headquarters. "If we don't move quickly, we may find ourselves without a process of peacemaking, without an agreement, and without the hope of achieving an Israeli-Palestinian peace."

Arafat declined to be drawn out on the security issue. "Peace means security, peace means freedom," he said.

The territorial issue — the terms of Israel's pullback — was "largely resolved," said State Department spokesman James P. Rubin. But dozens of other issues remain unresolved, he said.

Whatever Albright may accomplish here, there will be no agreement before President Clinton hosts a Washington summit with Arafat and Netanyahu, he added.

"I think we envisage the summit as a multi-day exercise where some heavy lifting is going to be required," he said. "We do not envisage it as a photo-op in which everything is pre-cooked."

The summit's exact date and site are in flux. The likely startup is Oct. 15 or Oct. 20, and the location could be outside Washington, such as at the Wye Plantation on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

After Albright leaves the region, probably on Wednesday, U.S. mediator Dennis Ross and Assistant Secretary of State Martin Indyk will remain for further talks with Israeli and Palestinian officials.

"We recognize there are tough choices that have to be made by both sides as we approach the Washington summit," said Albright, wear matching peace-dove earrings, bracelet and pin, as she gave no indication that differences had been cleared up.

The aim is an Israeli pullback on the West Bank, the acquisition of more territory for the Palestinians and the start of negotiations over such issues as the future of Jerusalem and Palestinian aspirations for a state.

Whatever the outcome, Albright said the United States intends to pursue a better relationship with the Palestinian Authority "for its own sake."

"We have thought for some time about increasing the level of discourse," she said.

But she declined to say whether the administration was setting the stage for dealing ultimately with a Palestinian state.

Earlier, in Jerusalem, there also was no report of progress in Albright's meeting with Netanyahu. A senior Israeli official, David Bar-Illan, said the Palestinian Authority had done "nothing, nothing, nothing" in the runup to the planned summit to rout terrorists on land under its control.

Albright placed highest priority on security measures but said there were a number of issues where "parallel" movement by Israel and the Palestinians was needed.

For his part, Netanyahu said Israel had met its obligations — meaning a willingness to relinquish more land on the West Bank — and "the crucial question" was whether the Palestinians would reciprocate.

German party chooses new leader amid calls for renewal

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democrats on Tuesday named the man he handpicked as the party's new leader amid calls for revitalizing the party by promoting younger members and more women.

The party's executive committee voted unanimously, with one abstention, to recommend as chairman Wolfgang Schaeuble. A final vote in which Schaeuble is expected to be confirmed is scheduled for a Nov. 7 party convention.

Schaeuble, also re-elected as parliamentary faction leader Tuesday, said he looked forward to leading a "critical, fighting, self-confident" opposition party.

Germany's outgoing conservative government, meanwhile, claimed credit for the lowest jobless figure in nearly two years. But the incoming center-left coalition said the 3.96 million unemployed were still too many.

Unemployment nationwide averages 10.3 percent, compared with 11.2 percent this time last year, the Federal Labor Office said.

The choice of Schaeuble as the Christian Democrats' new leader came despite criticism from some party members that a bolder break from Kohl was needed. In last month's election, Kohl led the Christian Democrats to the party's worst showing in 50 years.

Kohl insisted there was no bitterness during the closed meeting. He said there was no discussion about an official, future role for him in the party.

The CDU has dominated German postwar politics by attracting a wide range of conservative voters. But young members worry it lost touch with the national mood during Kohl's 25-year chairmanship and his 16 years as chancellor.

Observers say government resources used to sway Chiapas vote

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — The government used public programs to encourage voters to support the ruling party in Chiapas state elections, human rights activists charged Tuesday.

A major opposition party said it will ask officials to annul results from Sunday's vote and call special elections to avert a governmental crisis caused by the cancellation of voting in nine counties.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party led in most counties, with 95 percent of 3,341 precincts reporting. The PRI, as the party is known, appeared to recover some counties it lost three years ago.

However, the conservative National Action Party retained control of the state capital, Tuxtla Gutierrez.

Voters chose governments in 102 of the state's 111 counties and members of the 40-seat state legislature. But voters could not elect enough representatives to form a legislative quorum because balloting was postponed in eight flood-wrecked counties and residents boycotted elections in the highlands county of San Juan Chamula.

Despite the oddly calm balloting in this conflict-ridden state, human rights organizations reported numerous irregularities and abstention as high as 76 percent in some areas.

In this colonial city, hundreds of Indians received $21 each from a federal anti-poverty program in the three days prior to balloting, the La Foja newspaper reported.

In the highlands county of Huixtan, Indian peasants on election day had to present their voter credentials to receive federal agriculture subsidy checks, said Francisco Gallardo of the national election watchdog group Civic Alliance.

In Ocosingo county, a bastion for the leftist rebel Zapatista National Liberation Army, opposition leaders said officials offered money and food for ruling party votes. They accused federal troops and pro-government paramilitary groups of inhibiting voters by erecting checkpoints on main roads.

Only about 24 percent of the electorate there voted, leaders of the leftist Democratic Revolution Party said. Many rebel supporters boycotted the vote.

In the flood-devastated Pacific Coast county of Tonala, National Action leaders accused the victorious ruling party candidate of having used humanitarian aid to sway voters.

Observers with the San Francisco-based group Global Exchange said last month's disaster and the presence of troops discouraged voter turnout in two-thirds of the state.

Mexican lawmaker wounded; political motive suspected

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two men shot an opposition congressman as he arrived home early Tuesday, leaving him unconscious and in "delicate" condition. Police said nothing was stolen and colleagues speculated about a possible assassination attempt.

Jose Antonio Prats Garcia, a little-known lawmaker from the center-left Democratic Revolution Party, was attacked just after midnight as he returned to his house in a middle-class Mexico City neighborhood, police spokesman Alejandro Montes de Oca said.

The men shot Prats in his left shoulder and lung, Montes de Oca said. Prats was taken unconscious to a local hospital, where he was listed Wednesday afternoon in "delicate" condition.

"He went to get something from the rear door of his car and he heard steps," his secretary, Carmen Serrano, told the Televisa television network. "It was two men, and they pointed a pistol at him and fired."

Neither Prats' party nor Congress would comment officially, and a congressional employee, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said factions in Congress were debating whether to describe the attack as an assassination attempt before issuing a statement.

The 44-year-old lawmaker is a schoolteacher from relatively calm Michoacan state, west of Mexico City. In Congress, he sits on the Commerce, Housing and Social Development commissions.

But the attack recalled the beating and robbery in March of two members of the Mexico City local assembly — both from the same party as Prats.

Veronica Moreno and Francisco Ortiz Ayala were followed and attacked as they rode in a taxi. The attackers stole their belongings and bank cards but Moreno said her attackers told her "our chief wants you dead so that you will stop screwing us."

Moreno heads a legislative commission overseeing the city's marketplaces. The markets, like other institutions in the city, have been controlled by powerful and sometimes corrupt groups linked to the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has run Mexico since 1929.

GOP seeks new alternative after tax cut dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acknowledging their $80 billion tax cut has no chance of passing the Senate, Republican leaders are assembling a minimal package that would renew expiring business tax credits and possibly include a few nuggets for favored groups such as farmers and the elderly.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., wouldn't officially pronounce the death of the House-passed bill Tuesday, insisting that "parts of it might still be salvaged" in the smaller package.

But Lott's chief of staff, J. David Hoppe, wrote the White House that the package fell victim to Democratic resistance. President Clinton vowed to veto the tax cuts because they would spend part of the projected budget surplus instead of reserving "every penny" for Social Security.

"Our attempt to help the American people by cutting their taxes will have to wait for another day," Hoppe wrote.

The House measure passed Sept. 26 would provide $80 billion in tax relief over five years for farmers, married couples, the elderly who work, small business operators, people with modest savings accounts and people saving for a private college education.

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., blamed the demise on Democratic election-year claims that the GOP tax cuts amounted to a raid on Social Security. Republicans, he said, were unable to articulate their case that Clinton would use the same surplus to pay for emergency spending on such items as Year 2000 computer problems and embassy security.

"I think it's a little misleading, if not deceptive," said Nickles, the No. 2 Senate Republican. "They're just trying to say, 'Let's play politics.'"

But opposition wasn't limited to Democrats. Between five and 10 of the 55 Senate Republicans opposed spending the surplus on tax cuts until Social Security's solvency is guaranteed when baby boomers begin retiring in about 30 years. Others want the surplus used to pay down the national debt.

With Congress racing to adjourn in a few days, the tax focus is turning to a six-item part of the House measure that would extend expiring business tax credits until early 2000. These items, costing $6.1 billion and known collectively as the "extenders," do not spend any surplus dollars and have been heavily lobbied by businesses — especially a $3.9 billion extension of a research and development credit.

"The extenders are critical," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

The question now is whether Republicans will attempt to move a measure containing only those items or risk objections and possibly fatal delay by attaching a few small tax-relief items.

Lott, for instance, mentioned a provision that would allow the self-employed to fully deduct their health insurance premiums. Others want relief for farmers, who are suffering deep income losses due to slumping crop prices, and some want the earnings limit raised for Social Security recipients who also work.

"We're looking at all the options," Lott said. "We're going to keep trying to find some way to add some more fairness to the tax code right up until the last minute."

In the House, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, will likely move a straightforward extenders bill later this week that would probably clear the floor in short order.

But because of Senate rules allowing a single senator to block legislation, any items added to the extenders package would have to have virtually unanimous support. In addition, some senators could hold things up in an effort to attach their own tax priorities.

Republicans said tax cuts would be a top priority when the new Congress convenes in January, particularly if the Senate GOP adds enough members to achieve the magic number of 60 needed to cut off debate on controversial items.

The talk if that happens is for huge tax cuts, including an income tax rate reduction, further cuts in capital gains taxes and inheritance taxes and relief for married couples who now pay more than if they had remained single.

Senate sends farm aid plan to White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans sent their $4.1 billion farm aid package to President Clinton on Tuesday despite his admonition "not to leave town" before adding more money.

Clinton and the Democrats have pushed a $7.3 billion plan that would rely mostly on giving farmers an extra $5 billion through a program that subsidizes growers when commodity prices fall below set levels.

The 55-43 Senate vote for the smaller package sets the stage for Clinton's certain presidential veto.

It also means the $61.3 billion overall agriculture spending bill, to which the relief package is attached, is on hold until lawmakers reach an agreement, which must come soon. GOP leaders have said they hope to complete all of their spending work by this weekend, when Congress is scheduled to adjourn.

"Today the Senate had one last chance to improve this bill," said Tom Amontree, spokesman for Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman. "We're disappointed they didn't do it."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said if the president goes ahead and vetoes the bill, Republicans plan to try to attach it to an omnibus spending bill with other appropriations measures.

"The president is willing to put at risk those programs that are funded in this bill to accommodate the interests of a few," Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said during debate Tuesday.

The House passed the agriculture bill on Friday by an overwhelming 333-53.

But the Senate's vote isn't enough to sustain a veto, a fact that gave Democrats hope for a compromise.

"The number of votes gives us the leverage," said Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.

Republicans claim the Democratic proposal is a throwback to the days before the 1996 farm law when subsidies were tied to crop production.

Instead, the GOP package offers a mix of disaster relief and about $1.7 billion in direct payments to farmers. Farmers in the upper Midwest would get about $675 million to help with a series of crop failures over the past five years.

Dusty conditions tainted success of AirSho'98

There's no doubt about it, the Confederate Air Force's AirSho '98 was a tremendous success, complete with flyovers by vintage World War II P-47s and Japanese Zeros, modern supersonic jetfighters, and all the thrills and excitement that makes an air show click.

Thousands of aviation enthusiasts and spectators showed up at Midland International Airport to enjoy the air show, but those present for Sunday's show got more than they bargained for when an old-fashioned duststorm, caused by an early-season cold front, rolled across fields adjacent to the airport and engulfed the air show crowd in eye-stinging, choking dust. It made for a less than enjoyable conclusion to what had been an outstanding air show.

'There is no doubt that Mother Nature on Sunday was out of our control.'
—Bob Rice, Confederate Air Force executive director

"There is no doubt that Mother Nature on Sunday was out of our control," noted Bob Rice, Confederate Air Force (CAF) executive director. He said the combination of the ongoing drought and the resulting lack of ground cover on the flight line contributed to the dust problem.

The City of Midland generously permitted the CAF to use water tankers to spray water over the entire area, but the extremely dry conditions made it impossible for even the spraying to even keep the dust under control.

Noting that the air show is a "world class event" that could bring many more thousands of people to Midland in coming years, Rice said he now plans to send a request to the City of Midland that the entire Confederate Air Force area be black-topped to control the dust problem.

Although he believes a preferable solution would be to have an expansive grass area where spectators could view the air show, Rice said that solution is impractical in the region's semi-arid conditions.

We agree. Black-topping the CAF area would be the best solution. Finding the funds for that work could present an obstacle, but it can be overcome. The CAF's facilities are important not only to the members of the organization but to all those who travel from around the nation and even from overseas to see the aerial events.

Gasoline tax boost unfairly burdens less affluent

It's a cold irony that the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 includes a new 24.3-cent tax on each gallon of kerosene. The fuel is used heavily for heating by low-income families and the elderly on fixed incomes who can least afford this added cost.

The tax, beginning this past July 1, was imposed by Congress to discourage truck drivers from spiking diesel fuel with kerosene or using it as a substitute. ...

The law requires producers to begin adding red dye to kerosene for heating fuel that wouldn't be subject to road taxes. But the manufacturers have two years to comply. ...

A spokesman for U.S. Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., told The Greenville News that the law's kerosene tax provision sneaked by the congressman last year and that he and other lawmakers were trying to get an exemption at least until the dyed kerosene is widely available.

It would be in their interest to do so. Few things are more galling to people than to be punished for someone else's misdeeds. Such action fuels resentment against lawmakers who already are perceived to be insensitive to portions of their constituency that have no voice.

Racist behavior still alive and well in Germany

MUNICH — German Chancellor Helmut Kohl had just made his final campaign speech in this conservative corner of southern Germany. In the waning days of his last campaign, Kohl made his strongest speech to date condemning the influx of immigrants to Europe's largest country.

Anderson

Outside the rally, a fight broke out between a man of Turkish decent and a lederhosen-clad German. Inspired by Kohl's speech, the second man yelled at the Turk to go home. Enraged, the Turk shouted back at the blue-eyed German: "I am home."

The event was scarcely noted, yet it speaks volumes about the underlying racial tension that served as a backdrop to the recently concluded German elections. Kohl's plea didn't help him carry the election, which was won by Gerhard Schroeder, an upstart Social Democrat whom some have compared to Bill Clinton.

Nowhere in Europe — and perhaps the world — is racist behavior more scrutinized than in Germany. Haunted by its harrowing past, Germany today is still struggling with itself over the touchy subject of race and immigration.

On the surface, anti-immigrant forces suffered a setback in the Sept. 27 elections. None of the hard-line parties who made ethnicity an issue were able to clear the five-percent hurdle for inclusion in the national legislature. The closest contender was the innocuously named German People's Union (DVU), which secured 15 percent of the vote in state elections in southern Germany last year but couldn't pick up enough votes elsewhere to merit inclusion in parliament.

But the hard right might have done better had it not been so splintered. The DVU won't be packing away its billboards, with slogans like "Germany for Germans" and "Criminal Foreigners Out." As many as half of the 33 parties on Germany's national ballot had some type of xenophobic views in their platform. Polls taken just before the election showed that these parties struck a chord with more than half of all Germans, who find it convenient to blame foreigners for the economic problems that have developed since unification.

Sixty thousand Germans have cast their lot with the Christian-oriented Party for the Ten Commandments, which claims its anti-Turkish platform is derived from the Koran (Turks and other Muslims account for most of the 7 million foreigners in Germany). Party spokesman Michael Seodor claims the Koran instructs Muslims to kill all the unbelievers, and that when some classrooms are up to 80 percent Turkish, all Germans should be scared.

The German Fatherland Party projects civil war in Germany if the borders aren't shored up to keep out "job snatching" and "society damaging" foreigners. And the National Democratic Party, recognizable by its skinhead supporters, has just one solution for all of Germany's social woes: "They (foreigners) are all problems," Alexander Von Webenau, the party's director of youth recruitment, told our associate Kathryn Wallace.

Von Webenau acknowledged that Nazism's social theories are part of their program; agreeing with Adolf Hitler's assessment that the only way to reclaim German culture is to ship out every non-German.

The German policy on immigration has always been somewhat two-faced. To make amends with history, Germany has the most open borders of any industrialized country. Thousands are granted asylum each year, and Bonn has been much more generous than its neighbors in sending financial aid to trouble spots like Bosnia and Kosovo.

But refugees who are granted asylum are then legislated to be leaches of the social systems. They aren't allowed to work, because that would "take" jobs from Germans. While American politicians are busy abolishing all benefits to legal immigrants, Germany forbids refugees from performing any kind of work that might offset the cost of their care.

Yet beneath such generosity, Germany remains an exclusive club. Naturalization is extremely complicated. Citizenship only belongs to "blood Germans," though people who've lived in the country at least 10 years can apply for another class of citizenship.

Stuck in the middle of all this are Germany's major parties, always wary of repeating their country's gruesome past but reluctant to defend immigration for fear of losing votes. Yet ignoring the problem has just made it worse, by giving hard-liners and fascists an opening.

"We say what the big parties are afraid to say," one right-wing spokesman told us. Pushed by the right, both Schroeder and Kohl spoke in favor of deporting "criminal foreigners" and vowed to cap the quota for refugees and immigrants.

Echoes of an earlier day.

Clinton talk will ruin a good party

Buchwald

Mrs. Hewitt said, "Instead of Clinton, let's talk about Yugoslavia."

Everyone agreed it was a good topic, particularly since the Serbs are causing untold damage to the Albanians.

Hardtack said, "I don't see why people are so upset about Clinton when they know Bosnia is up to its ears in trouble."

Blamself agreed. "I can forgive Clinton for what he did, particularly because it wasn't a sexual act, but how can we forgive what the prime minister did in Yugoslavia?"

Everyone seemed to have an opinion on Kosovo. Especially Wallace, who had just returned from Nigeria.

Said Wallace, "Clinton is well admired in Nigeria. They can't understand what all the fuss is about in the White House over the giving of presents. Nigerian presidents always give gifts to to their interns. That is why they are considered the most generous of all the African leaders."

Peabody said, "I'm sick and tired of all the talk about Clinton. What he did is private business between him and Dick Morris."

Oglethorpe pointed out, "If America is going to impeach someone, we ought to impeach Boris Yeltsin. He just doesn't care where the ruble should be."

The dinner was moving along nicely. There was little talk of Ken Starr, but a lot of discussion of North Korea.

What made it worthwhile is that people loosened up. There was no criticism of Clinton -- nor was anyone concerned about who wore what dress.

Our group insisted on getting back to the real world. Grumph was the only one who still wanted to talk about who let whom through the White House gate. What it meant no one knew, but Grumph has been known in our group for refusing to talk about Albania.

He knew how to ruin a party.

Seven questions overlooked in the Clinton testimony

WASHINGTON — Here are seven questions overlooked in the torrent of testimony. 1. Why, amid all the supplementary boxes of referrals to Congress by the independent counsel, is there not one word about the harassment and intimidation of Kathleen Willey?

Safire

In President Clinton's grand jury appearance, we witnessed his direct contradiction of Willey's assertions about nonconsensual Oval Office groping. But her testimony about that and subsequent pressure is still being withheld. My surmise is that an indictment may be forthcoming about what was done to her by aides after the alleged pass.

2. Did Monica tell the whole truth?

My guess is that she has not. On her volunteered statement that "nobody told me to lie," which Clinton lawyers seized upon as exculpatory: of course nobody said to her, "Monica — lie!" But she was directed to a common cover story and encouraged to submit a false affidavit, which is joining a conspiracy to lie.

And what about the "talking points" urging her friend Linda Tripp to testify falsely, and backing it up with a cash inducement? Monica swears she wrote that document with no legal help, and Clinton lawyers (who still claim she lies about their client ever even touching her) insist we take as gospel truth her protection of the president and his aides on this. Now that we can compare writing styles, it is hard to argue that the Monica who wrote the notes and letters is the unaided author of the legalistic talking points.

3. Why are House Democrats pushing the notion that the Judiciary Committee should deal only with sex?

No committee of Congress should be forced to concentrate solely on crimes to cover up sex. Where is it written that impeachment inquiries be limited to prurient material provided by outside prosecutors? Cries of "no fishing expedition" mean "don't dig any more deeply" and should be met with "don't fence us in."

4. Why is Henry Hyde's legal eagle reportedly throwing away Clinton's abuse of executive privilege as an impeachment count?

Rarely has our doctrine of checks and balances been so egregiously challenged as in Clinton's pattern of refusal to answer questions by the co-equal judicial and legislative branches. If this president were allowed the power he claims to direct a publicly paid aide not to reveal to a criminal grand jury any conversation with someone outside government, that would set a precedent transferring excessive power to the executive.

5. Where, as actor Ronald Reagan famously asked, is the rest of me?

We have a legless referral: Ken Starr has sent over Chapter I of a five-chapter book. The three-judge panel overseeing independent counsels should direct Starr to indict, expose or exonerate those involved in Whitewater, Filegate and Travelgate affairs by a specified date, perhaps tied to a coming Supreme Court decision ending Clinton delays by spurious claims of executive privilege. Then, as the next Congress convenes, two other House committees and a Manhattan prosecutor will send reports on campaign finance depredations directly affecting a national election.

Here is a woman known for her good character cynically used by the president to facilitate acts of bad character, and a person known for strong religious values induced by peer pressure to ever-increasing forgetfulness while under an oath before her God.

7. Why are we allowing White House spinmeisters to rig the coming evaluation of this "impeachment election"?

American voters will decide on Nov. 3 if Clinton will be impeached. But the Clinton line is if Democrats merely "hold their own," that is to be interpreted as a ringing vote of confidence as if this were a normal midterm election. No sale. If Democrats gain strength in Congress, Clinton wins. If Republicans extend their majorities, he loses, because the voters' message to the House will be: impeach. If it's a breakeven, it's a wash, and unsignaled Senate jurors would just have to vote their consciences.

Troops may be needed in Kosovo, Cohen warns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration raised prospects Tuesday that airstrikes against Serbs might require a follow-up international ground force of peacekeepers in the Yugoslav province of Kosovo. Defense Secretary William Cohen told Congress that U.S. participation in such a force was "a possibility," but not one he favored.

President Clinton warned that, unchecked, Serb violence in the province could lead to instability throughout the region.

"The stakes are high," Clinton said. "The time is now to end the violence in Kosovo."

Cohen, facing skeptical questioning from senators weary of the long U.S. presence in nearby Bosnia, said it was "my recommendation, my insistence" that any ground force be largely composed of Europeans.

Diplomatic activity intensified, here and in Belgrade, in an attempt to persuade Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to comply with all terms of the U.N. resolution designed to force him to end all hostilities against ethnic Albanians and to let some 250,000 refugees receive humanitarian aid and return to their homes.

Clinton's warning came in an address to a joint meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. The president said world leaders "all agree that Kosovo is a powder keg in the Balkans. If the violence continues, it could spill over and threaten the peace and stability of Bosnia, of Albania, of Macedonia and other countries in the region."

NATO is prepared to act if Milosevic fails to honor the United Nations resolutions, he said, adding that U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke was conveying that message directly to Milosevic in Belgrade.

At the Pentagon, a senior military official said Washington has informed NATO that it could provide up to "several hundred aircraft" for military action involving Kosovo.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the U.S. package is composed of about half warplanes and half "support" planes — such as tankers for refueling, reconnaissance and radar missions.

Clinton also talked by phone with British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who was in China on an official visit. A day earlier, he talked with Russian President Boris Yeltsin and derided the steps Milosevic has taken in response to a Sept. 23 U.N. Security Council resolution aimed at ending the 7-month-old conflict in Kosovo.

In an apparent effort to head off NATO airstrikes, Milosevic has ordered most of his Serb army units back to their barracks, withdrawn police units and apparently ordered a halt to the burning of villages.

Cohen, testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, was asked if these concessions had lessened the likelihood of NATO strikes.

"I don't believe so," Cohen said. "He cannot simply avoid NATO action by picking one or two items."

Gen. Henry H. Shelton, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testifying before the same panel, said NATO was ready to exercise military options should diplomacy fail.

"We all hope to see a diplomatic solution ... but as we all know, hope is not a method," Shelton said.

Cohen justified the prospective use of air power. "He (Milosevic) stands to lose a substantial portion of his military capability."

As for a ground force, Cohen said such a force would likely be needed to maintain peace after an air bombardment. NATO has already done some contingency planning for such a force, he said, although not to any degree of detail.

Asked Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz: "Would that include U.S. troops?"

"It's a possibility," Cohen said. "But ... I have urged we not get involved on the ground in Kosovo."

Currently, 7,500 U.S. troops are in a peacekeeping force of 33,000 in Bosnia. Sending U.S. troops also to Kosovo would inevitably draw congressional fire. Cohen conceded the Bosnia experience was a principal reason why he was not advocating U.S. participation in any ground force.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright also raised the issue of a peacekeeping force to help maintain any peace settlement resulting from a NATO attack or negotiations. "We think there has to be some kind of international presence," she said in an airborne news conference as she headed to the Middle East.

Some senators said such a force should only be considered if a peace agreement were first in place. Others cited extreme wariness, given the five-year presence of U.S. troops in Bosnia — with no exit date yet in place.

"You do have, I think, a different situation between Kosovo and Bosnia. And frankly I don't believe it would take that kind of a presence that we have in Bosnia in Kosovo," Cohen said.

But McCain cited a "credibility gap," suggesting the administration had misled the nation on the duration of U.S. involvement in Bosnia and might now be doing the same regarding Kosovo. "None of us have heard a coherent plan of how to proceed in Kosovo," McCain said.

If the impasse continues, Albright is expected to meet with her NATO colleagues in Brussels on Thursday to discuss next steps.

Democrats throw scare at GOP governors

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — As Republican governors in the South, Alabama's Fob James and South Carolina's David Beasley had reason to think the electoral cards were stacked in their favor. But then Democratic challengers played their hand, lining up with gambling interests and narrowing the incumbents' odds for re-election.

When James this week unveiled a free tuition plan for college students with good grades, he all but acknowledged the new math of his race: Despite his GOP label in a Bible Belt state, he was losing and lottery advocates were on a roll.

James, a champion of school prayer who once seemed a lock for another term, has joined Beasley as a GOP incumbent whose disdain for lotteries has given Democratic challengers an issue with surprising punch.

By contrast, another Republican seeking re-election in a Southern state, Tennessee's Gov. Don Sundquist, is seen as the solid favorite against Democrat John J. Hooker, who is running a single-issue race based on his opposition to campaign contributions and has not made an issue of the lottery.

After publication of a weekend statewide poll that showed him trailing Democratic Lt. Gov. Don Siegelman 52 percent to 39 percent, James took aim at Siegelman's proposed Georgia-style state lottery that would pay for college scholarships, pre-kindergarten programs and school computers.

The GOP governor described a state lottery as being a "deceitful tax" and a "crap shoot." He said his scholarship initiative could be funded with existing state education dollars, a claim disputed by higher education officials who have been in a funding crunch under James' tutelage.

A poll commissioned by The Birmingham News and The Tuscaloosa News and conducted Oct. 1-2 showed the potential impact of the lottery on the gubernatorial race. Respondents to the telephone poll favored a state lottery for college scholarships by 61 percent to 34 percent, according to the results published Sunday.

In South Carolina, a poll in June showed Beasley leading 55 percent to 34 percent, but a poll in late September showed that lead had disappeared. The spread was down to 44 percent for Beasley and 39 percent for Democratic challenger Jim Hodges, who is advocating a lottery to bolster education in that state.

With gambling interests buying campaign commercials for Hodges, Beasley softened his opposition to a lottery, saying he would not block a public vote on it. Beasley's campaign has had to fight talk of an alleged affair, but the lottery issue clearly has been a factor in governor's decline. A Mason-Dixon poll for South Carolina news organizations last week found two-thirds of the respondents favored a lottery.

Charles Bullock, a University of Georgia political science professor, said traditional moral and religious opposition to gambling is disappearing across the South. He said residents of non-lottery states are realizing that their counterparts in states with lotteries are getting a big payback: dollars for public education without increased taxes.

"It pits two kind of competing ideas. It's the lottery and it's bad and it's wrong, juxtaposed against" a belief that lottery proceeds benefit education, Bullock said. Education now "sells well in the South," he said.

Bullock said some Georgians who initially opposed the state lottery have changed their minds, now that it is paying for their sons and daughters to attend college.

"The Southern electorate is far more opposed to raising taxes than to gambling," he said.

Republicans now hold 32 governorships compared to 17 for Democrats, with an indepdendent in Maine.

"It's ironic that, while Republicans nationally may make some gains, that Alabama would go back toward the Democratic Party," University of Alabama political science professor William Stewart said. "The religious right has been extremely influential in Alabama. They have elected Republicans to most all the high offices."

Trailing in election polls is nothing new for James, however.

Brad Moody, an Auburn University political science professor, said James has shown a knack for surging ahead in the closing days of a campaign, as was the case in the GOP gubernatorial runoff in June when a surprise turnout of rural voters gave him the nomination.

"The same poll had us down by 1 (percent) three days before the runoff and we won by 12 (percent)," James spokesman Donald Claxton said. "We're not losing sleep over this poll."

Moody was among those who saw James' announcement of a plan to provide state-funded scholarships as an attempt to offset gains Siegelman has made with his lottery-for-schools program.

University of Alabama political science professor William Stewart also said James' announcement of a scholarship program "sounds like he is trying to react to Siegelman rather than have his own plan, his own program and his own platform."

Scandal inspires season's hottest costume ideas

BOSTON (AP) — This year's most popular Halloween costume may call for a blue dress, a beret and, yes, a cigar.

"We thought 'Titanic' costumes would be the big rentals, but it looks like Bill and Monica are winning the race," said Stephen LaLiberte, rental manager at Boston Costume.

As the impeachment process moves forward in Washington, stores around the country are fielding requests for costumes of President Clinton, Monica Lewinsky and Linda Tripp. And that's not all.

"Volvo-driving-type liberals are looking for Kenneth Starr costumes," said Mary Papayotou, owner of Chicago Costumes. "They want to support the president."

The story didn't break early enough for manufacturers to put together rubber masks or costume ensembles in time for Halloween. But customers are asking for wigs, dark berets, cigars and other props.

"People even want the tie," said Marilynn Wick, owner of the Fort-Lauderdale, Fla.-based chain Costume World, referring to one of the gifts the former White House intern gave the president.

LaLiberte suggested "power business suits" for those who want to show up as Starr, Tripp or the first lady, and a blond, stringy wig for Tripp.

Schenz Theatrical Supply in Cincinnati is steering clear of the Monica madness because "it's just not a nice thing to do," said manager Stephen Keeling. The business also has refused to sell O.J. Simpson masks.

And when customers say they must have a garment like the now-infamous blue dress?

"We suggest they go to the Gap because that's where the dress came from," Keeling said.

Cardiology conference gets large response

More than 500 health-care professionals to attend Midland Hospital seminar

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's second cardiology conference has proven so popular that all of the 500-plus seats have been reserved and a waiting list measures about 100.

Clinical Rounds in Cardiology in the Permian Basin is scheduled for Saturday at Green Tree Country Club and is drawing health-care professionals from Abilene to El Paso and southeastern New Mexico, and from Lubbock to Alpine.

MHMC staff sent notice that no spaces will be available on the day of the annual cardiology conference, said Chris Thrash, director of community relations for MHMC.

The conference is being presented by local cardiologists including Drs. Ravi Patel, Michael Miller, James Barnett, Steven Brown, Bart Mayron, P.V. Patel and Pankaj Patel.

Narrower tables were purchased for this year's event to expand the seating beyond 500, but there are still many interested people who will not be able to be accommodated this year, Thrash said.

With the growing popularity of the event, the only way to accommodate more people is to move the conference to a larger venue such as the Midland Center.

"That's probably what we're going to have to look at next year," Thrash said.

Midland's cardiology conference is a great draw to health-care professionals in the region because of ongoing research into acute heart attack care at MHMC.

Over the past few years, the MHMC Emergency Department and Cardiac Intensive Care Unit have been testing the latest line of thrombolytic or "clot-busting" medications that can reopen blocked heart vessels in a matter of minutes, he said.

Most heart attacks, or myocardial infarctions, result from blood clots forming in the cardiac vessels, which provide oxygen and nutrients to the heart muscle itself.

Local health-care professionals have been studying the use of clot busting drugs to alleviate this condition and protect the heart from continuing injury from the clot.

"We have been one of the premier sites for this research," Thrash said.

Part of this research has centered on the time interval between the onset of heart-attack symptoms and the delivery of the thrombolytic drugs.

It has been determined by these ongoing studies that shortening this time interval can greatly reduce damage to the heart muscle and reduce recovery times for heart attack victims.

Shortening this interval includes public education and coordination with emergency medical services as well as with the hospital medical staff, MHMC officials said.

The goal of the conference is to disseminate this information in a way that improves cardiac care not only for Midland residents, but for people throughout West Texas and southern New Mexico, Thrash said.

BASIN BRIEFING

Logo contest

The West Texas Herpetological Society is sponsoring a logo contest. The new group is dedicated to the conservation, preservation and study of reptiles and amphibians, especially those found in the Edwards Plateau and Trans-Pecos regions. The logo must be no larger than 10-by-10 inches, must incorporate the society's name and may be color or black-and-white. The winning artist will receive $50, a T-shirt bearing the logo and a one-year membership in WTHS. Entries should be submitted to WTHS, P.O. Box 69844, San Angelo, Texas 76906. Deadline is Nov. 30.

Red Cross meeting

The American Red Cross of Southwest Texas is to meet at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission to install its new board of directors. Donors and other members of the Red Cross are invited to attend. For more information, call 684-6161.

Post-game show

The West Texas A&M University Marching Band, under the direction of Don Lefevre, will present a post-game show immediately following the Lee High School homecoming game on Friday. Many former local students are members of this band.

$9 million for schools

AUSTIN — State officials leased more than 40,000 acres of land for oil and gas exploration Tuesday, earning $9.2 million for the Permanent School Fund. The General Land Office, which oversees the fund, received bids for 140 tracts of land, including lakes, bayous and creeks spanning to the Gulf of Mexico, the agency said. Sabco Oil & Gas Corporation had the highest bid for a tract of land, according to the agency. The company bid $1.1 million for 320 acres in Corpus Christi Bay. The fund provides money for the state's public schools.

New addition at Midland Christian brings excitement, relief to campus

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Midland Christian School has a new icon for school spirit and learning.

The school's elementary staff and students are nestled into their 44,000-square- foot elementary building.

They moved into the $2.6 million building Monday and are back to the school routine. The new facility relieved crowding at the private school on Culver Drive.

The building, decked out in the red, white and blue school colors, is a hit with students.

"My classroom is all like this, red white and blue a lot; it has this big, huge painted flag on it," said fifth-grader Constance Wood. "It's better because it's a little bit bigger."

New elementary building features 28 classrooms with bright white and red checkerboard floors, glass bricks and striped hallways.

"It's really cool," said sixth-grader John Rydell. "It's bigger than the older building," he said, eyeing the bright-colored hallways. "They show a lot of school spirit around here."

Sixth-grader Lindy Perrin, in her new classroom writing about Billy, a character from the novel "Where the Red Fern Grows," said she prefers the new building.

"I like about everything. It's bigger, and way better and there's a lot more space."

Eddie Lee, Midland Christian's superintendent, said the elementary will probably be the last addition to the school because the board of trustees wants to keep the school small. Enrollment is at 1,000 students.

"It kind of completes our facility," Lee said. "This is probably as big as we want to be. We have a very family-oriented environment. We want to maintain it as much as we can."

When school started Aug. 17, Midland Christian had to hold six classes at Golf Course Church of Christ and use every inch of space on its campus.

The new elementary building was the solution.

It features 28 classrooms with bright white and red checkerboard floors, glass bricks and striped hallways. Kirk Macon, the school's spokesman, said that until now the students have been divided into two buildings — one for grades kindergarten through three and one for grades four through six.

"It brings all of the elementary grades in one building, and it frees up the other buildings for other things," he said.

It couldn't have come a moment too

Garza

From Staff Reports

Texas Railroad Commissioner candidate Tony Garza is pleased with his campaign so far; however, he knows that there is still hard work ahead of him.

"We have taken to statewide polls and in both I am doing good," Garza said Tuesday during a campaign stop at the Midland Petroleum Club.

"One poll had me up by 14 and another had me up by 20. Only Gov. Bush had better numbers than I do right now. But I know the only poll that counts is the one on Nov. 3," said Garza, a Republican.

"Being ahead in the polls is not a sign to slow down or take it easy, but to work harder to get more people out to vote."

'We need to think less about Republican and Democratic and more about what is good for Texas.'

— Tony Garza, Republican, Railroad Commission candidate

He faces Democratic nominee Joe B. Henderson in the November general election.

Garza, former secretary of state, said the major issue is for people to work pro-Texas.

"We need to work towards a better oil and gas community in Texas.

"We need to think less about Republican and Democratic and more about what is good for Texas."

Garza is hoping to see tax policy that is good for everyone.

"I want to see a tax policy that is both good for the environment and the oil companies," Garza said. "We need to get off people's backs and out of their pockets so we can enjoy our economic growth."

Speaking about his accomplishments as secretary of state, he said, "we incorporated technology in that office.

"We were the first secretary of state office to have online election results. I think it is important for Texans to know how their tax dollars are being spent."

Just when you thought it was safe, parents trot out the past

Wiegand

There are some subjects you should never bring up with your parents. There are some events you should never remind them of — even 10 years after they occur.

You may be in your 20s, 30s or 40s. You may live thousands of miles away from said parents, have a successful career, a home of your own and all the other common trappings of adulthood. You may even have children of your own, now pulling the same stunts you pulled on your parents, and thus — one might think — evening the score.

But not everyone sees it that way.

Namely, your parents don't see it that way.

And if you bring up THAT subject, you will find yourself, once again, being grilled for something you did when you were 17. And you'll find yourself inexplicably trying to weasel out of the situation. You don't want to lie to justify your actions ... you're not a teen-ager anymore, and you like to think you're above having to lie to Mom and Dad to save your butt. On the other hand, you know that you have utterly no moral standing to defend your actions — 10 years ago.

This bit of wisdom comes from experience.

My family was in Chicago for a visit, talking about something in the local news that day. Someone mentioned the prison in Cook County. "Well," said my dad, turning to me and joking snidely, "You tell us. You've been there."

Very funny, Dad. But there's a slight difference between doing time with hardened criminals in the prison serving the greater Chicago area, and, say, sitting in a city jail for an hour after a traffic violation.

But he wouldn't let it go. And I made the mistake of trying to defend myself.

The conversation went something like this:

"I couldn't believe the way that first lawyer we talked to kept asking me, 'Were you drunk? Were you on drugs?'" I complained.

"Well, were you?" my dad queried.

"No, for goodness sake! I ran that light because the city traffic was overwhelming. The lights were on the side of the intersection, and I just plumb didn't see them. There were too many other things going on."

"Oh, I see. So you're saying you were inexperienced with Chicago driving. So I take that to mean this was the FIRST time you told us you were spending the night at a friend's house and took the family car out of state, an hour and a half away, to go party in the big city?"

"Look, that's not important. It was a long time ago. And anyway, it was very traumatic for me."

"I see. So traumatic that you thought you'd avoid it altogether by just driving away from the scene of the accident?"

"I was going to stop ... I think. But, you know, I didn't want to just stop cold in the middle of the street, soon.

"We're busting at the seams with enrollment," he said. "We are sitting with a total enrollment of probably a 2A school. We have 1,000 students and we're right in the middle of a residential area. We needed the space desperately."

The new building also has two principals' offices, a computer center, a library, two workrooms and two conference rooms. All the equipment is new and the building smells faintly of fresh paint.

The building has boosted morale.

"Some of the kids were saying it was like the first day of school all over again," Macon said. "I think the kids were excited and a little nervous. I know everybody has been glad to get in it."

The school's enrollment actually fell during the deep oil recession in the 1980s and money was tight, but Midland Christian will probably grow to its maximum 1,200 students, he said.

"Right now, Midland is experiencing good times, so we are, too," he said. "We've got projections that say we're going to continue to grow."

Work continues on the elementary's sister project — the Midland Christian gym — which could be finished in December. Both projects were funded through private grants and donations, including donations from all Midland Christian employees.

WIEGAND: Just remember, your parents never forget

From 1B

blocking traffic ... ."

"Well, it sure was a good thing those cops were there, a block behind you, to point out to you just where to stop."

"Yeah, they were real helpful. Or one was, anyway."

By this time I'm shuddering. I remember how the cops seemed to swoop down on me. I remember standing on the busy sidewalk while they rifled through the car and tore the lining in my purse to check for contraband. I remember following them downtown, and my best friend and I being 37 cents short of the money we needed to keep me out of jail.

They told me I'd have to go upstairs, to the jail. I told Jenny to call my parents.

On the elevator ride up, "good" cop calmly told me not to worry, they'd only keep me for an hour. I breathed a sigh of relief, but immediately knew I'd made a mistake telling Jen to call my house.

Little did I know that at that very moment, she was telling my mother, "Hi, um, this is Jenny — Sandy's friend ... ." And, in a testament to her faith in my choice of friends, my mom was interrupting to shout my father's name, "GENE!"

I didn't gain any admirers from this fiasco. Even my younger sister was angry when I got home. My mom, she said, upon finding out that my sister knew about the plan, reportedly denied our parentage, telling her, "You're both #@*%!!"

Meanwhile, I spent an hour in the jail, listening to the person in the cell next to me yell for food. I busied myself by building a house with the paper cups and pieces of tissue they'd provided for my welfare.

But the punishment didn't end there. Months later, I went to court with my father, where we waited for several hours before my new and improved lawyer advised me, five minutes before I was supposed to talk, to lie to the judge. She said I should say the light was yellow when I started going through the intersection — it wasn't. So I pondered this further moral dilemma until my case was called, and the lawyer talked to the judge for two minutes about what a great student, etc. I was, and they let me off the hook.

All in all that part was relatively easy. But unbeknownst to me, my dad had further ammunition, which he saved for about two years after the incident — until my next screw-up. (This may have been the time I let a friend drive the family car and she totaled it. "Do you see the car in the driveway?" my mom asked my sister that time. My sister looked at her quizzically, because the driveway was empty. "THAT's what's left of the car!" my mom concluded.)

Anyway, my dad let me know then that he'd had to pay the owner of the other car in the Chicago accident an extra grand to avoid a civil lawsuit.

Mentally reliving this experience exhausted me.

"Dad," I pleaded, "haven't we all suffered enough? Can't we let it go?"

"Well ... OK," he agreed, and was silent for a moment.

"So you remember that time you guys totaled our new car in Kentucky and got banned from Cave City for life? Were you drinking? Were you on drugs?"

A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

Bush says daughters leaning against presidential bid

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush said Tuesday even though he won't make his decision about running for president until next spring, his teen-age daughters already are voicing their opinion.

Bush was asked by a reporter at an appearance in San Antonio whether his daughters have shared with him their views on his possible run for the Republican presidential nomination.

"Yes, they have," Bush said. After a pause, he added, "They kind of like their life in Texas."

Bush and his wife, Laura Bush, have twin 16-year-old daughters, Barbara and Jenna, who attend Austin High School.

The governor said he was encouraged by the way news reporters have given President Clinton's teen-age daughter Chelsea her privacy.

"Chelsea Clinton seems to be a fine young lady and the press has basically left her alone and that's the way it should be and that gives me some heart," Bush said.

As for Texas first lady Laura Bush, the governor said, she's waiting before saying what political step he should take.

"She knows what I know: Now is not the time to make up our mind," said Bush, who has said he won't decide whether to seek the presidency until after this year's gubernatorial race.

His opponent in the governor's race, Democrat Garry Mauro, has called on Bush to state publicly whether he is running for president. Mauro contends Texas needs a "full-time" governor.

Bush was elected governor in 1994, defeating Democrat Ann Richards. He increasingly has been the subject of national speculation about a presidential bid.

In June, Fortune magazine called him the favorite for the GOP nomination. A May poll published by USA Today gave Bush a slight edge in a head-to-head matchup with Democratic Vice President Al Gore.

Bush said Tuesday he is "amazed" by such polls.

"I've got the best job in America, the governor of the great state of Texas. My family life is serene and we're happy," Bush said. "Part of my decision, which I'll make next spring, is a great personal decision."

Texas Supreme Court agrees to open administrative records

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court won praise from watchdog groups Tuesday for efforts to open virtually all of their administrative records but were told some rule changes don't go far enough.

"The changes that were made were positive changes," said Walt Borges, head of the court-monitoring Texas Watch program and a frequent critic of the court.

But the court should help set criminal penalties for judges who ignore or disobey requests for administrative records, Borges said. Under the draft proposal, judges would only be subject to internal and typically private penalties, he said.

Judges should be subject to the same penalties as other government officials, Borges said.

"The judiciary has to set the example on this, and it's a bad example if judges have one set of standards and the other branches of government have another set," he said.

Chief Justice Thomas Phillips said it would be up to the Legislature to create a criminal penalty.

"Neither the judicial or executive branch can create a crime," Phillips said. "The power to make something a criminal offense is left with the state Legislature."

Phillips said the current penalties are appropriate. "I think we have provided for adequate means of enforcement ... but I'm not going to tell the Legislature that they can't set up an alternate or additional penalty," he said.

The judicial branch is exempt from the Texas Public Information Act, which generally requires records held by public officials to be made available to the public for a reasonable cost.

But after criticism from state lawmakers, the Supreme Court agreed to open its administrative records that don't deal directly with decision-making in court cases, including phone records, which it had previously fought releasing.

$1.4 million grant to fund Hispanic aging study

EDINBURG (AP) — The mental and physical health of Hispanics in the Rio Grande Valley will be the subject of a study funded by a four-year $1.4 million National Institutes of Health grant.

The study will track the mental and physical health of 800 randomly selected participants aged 45 and older over four years, The Monitor of McAllen, Texas, reported Tuesday.

Researchers are calling it the first long-term study of the Valley's aging population. The only previous study to date was a cross-sectional, nationwide Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (HANES) in the early 1980s, which looked at the health of Hispanics.

The latest study is a continuation of research by Elena Bastida, professor and chair of the sociology department at the University of Texas-Pan American. UTPA's sociology, psychology and anthropology departments will conduct the study.

"To have a health profile of your community is very, very important," Bastida said. "We want to know if our community is a healthy community; and, if it is not, what are some of the health conditions or health problems that are likely to occur in our community."

Ms. Bastida, Israel Cuellar, an associate professor in UTPA's department of sociology and anthropology, and Genaro Gonzalez, a UTPA psychology professor, will be co-investigators in the study.

They will look at a variety of factors — diet, sleep, exercise, and methods of social support like friends and family. They will also look at the state of a person's mental health, including feelings of self-worth and mood changes and how all of these factors may contribute to early rates of illness, disease and death.

"There is such a strong relationship between mental health and physical health," Cuellar said. "They are intertwined and interrelated to one another. As one becomes depressed, they withdraw. As they feel hopeless ... it adds to the physical problem."

The study could show how diet and exercise contribute to higher rates of health complications and heart disease.

"The Valley is becoming a center of geriatric care. We need to have local data," Cuellar said. "All in all, we'll be able to identify risk factors and develop interventions to reduce risk."

One of the study's goals is to understand the overall health needs during the later years of a person's lifetime "particularly how culture serves as a buffer or a catalyst for either protecting one's health or exacerbating impairments," Cuellar said.

The study's results will be shared with the NIH, the Texas Department of Health and the community.

Coastal officials join forces to fight shrinking beaches

GALVESTON (AP) — Having just watched Tropical Storm Frances gobble more than 30 feet of already shrinking Texas beach last month, coastal officials are banding together to fight erosion.

Coastal preservation advocates from all along the shoreline Tuesday formed a state chapter of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association, an organization dedicated to nourishing dwindling beachfronts across the country.

"We're really pushing for shoreline protection. We don't envision becoming a broad environmental organization," said Joe C. Moseley, a Corpus Christi engineer and longtime shoreline advocate who was named the group's executive director.

Keeping the state's beaches viable and open to the public is the group's chief concern, but they recognize it's an uphill battle in a state that currently spends little to prevent the steady, natural deterioration of its beaches.

State Rep. Patricia Gray, D-Galveston, said she plans to talk to the group today about her plans for a bill that would get the state involved in beach nourishment and repair.

"I'd like to set a real estate transaction fee for all counties," said Gray, who proposes that a $4 or $5 fee on each real estate transaction in the state be dedicated to beaches. "We might have to compromise and have that fee for first-tier coastal counties for now."

Inland lawmakers traditionally have resisted attempts by coastal legislators for beach funding. For instance, former state Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz recalled how he wasn't able to get the windstorm insurance passed until 1971, when he was able to use the great Lubbock tornado of 1970 as leverage with West Texas lawmakers.

Inland Texans have a stake in beaches too, Gray argues.

"Why should someone in Amarillo pay for this? Because people in Amarillo use the beaches, that's why," Gray said.

A similar version of Gray's bill passed the Legislature last session, only to be killed during a procedural motion known as the "Memorial Day Massacre." Angered by an unrelated issue, state Rep. Arlene Wohlgemuth, R- Burleson, wiped out 52 bills by using a little-used tactic.

Gray also is eyeing two federal sources for beach reconstruction money. One is the Harbor Maintenance Tax, which has accrued more than $1 billion in a trust fund but was declared unconstitutional by a federal appeals court last year. The U.S. Supreme Court is reviewing the ruling.

The other is possible source would be funding freed up by a bill U.S. Sens. Mary Landrieu and John Breaux, D-La., intend to file today. Their plan to redistribute the government revenues from offshore drilling would mean $128 million to state coffers, Gray said.

Because the act might not take effect until after the next state Legislature adjourns, Gray said it will be important for lawmakers to decide how to spend the federal money before it arrives.

As much damage as Frances did, Schwartz and others warned it was just a fraction of what a major hurricane could do with Texas beaches. Without money to prevent or repair damage from the next big storm, they say the coast is in danger.

"This was a sufficient disaster to let everyone know that there's one pending down the road that we need to prepare for and protect Texas' beaches for everyone's benefit," he said.

Trio of Texas Dems say they'll vote for inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several conservative House Democrats from Texas indicated Tuesday they will vote for a presidential impeachment inquiry, breaking ranks with a Democratic rank-and-file that views the Republican-drafted resolution as a license to launch an unending fishing expedition.

As party leaders worked to minimize defections in advance of the vote expected Thursday, a trio of Texas Democrats said they would vote for an impeachment inquiry that Republicans insist must be without time or subject limits.

"We have to realize who's in the majority and who's running the show," said Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, who is locked in a tight reelection battle. "Republicans are running the show."

At least two other conservative Democrats from Texas — Ralph Hall of Rockwall and Jim Turner of Crockett — also will support the impeachment inquiry. "It is in the best interests of the nation that we move forward with fairness and diligence," said Turner.

Hall, who has said he would be "pleased" if President Clinton were to resign, contends the investigation is necessary to ensure the country's peace of mind. "If we don't have a full hearing on it, I don't think it will ever come to closure," he said in a recent interview. "It's going to be like the Kennedy assassination or the sinking of the Titanic. Everybody's got a different version of that."

'It is in the best interest of the nation that we move forward with fairness and diligence.'

— Rep. Jim Turner, conservative Democrat from Crockett

Unlike Monday's House Judiciary Committee vote, which split along party lines, Republicans predict they'll get significant Democratic backing when the House vote occurs. Clinton, whose behavior has been unanimously denounced in Texas' 30-member House delegation, has gained no support among the state's 13 Republicans.

Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, said he would be "disappointed" by any Democratic defections.

"I hope they're looking at the big picture, too, and not just their own districts," Green said, attributing likely defections to the elections just four weeks from now.

A lawyer, Green said he is not sure that Clinton's wrongdoing "reaches the level of criminal law violation." Seeking to bring some guidance to other Texas Democrats, Green, who is chairman of the Texas Democratic delegation this year, invited constitutional law professors to his office Tuesday afternoon to brief lawmakers.

Some in the 17-member Democratic delegation from Texas were holding their own counsel Tuesday. Others criticized the Republican resolution, saying a long-running investigation would be harmful at a time when the nation is confronting economic and diplomatic challenges.

Rep. Ken Bentsen "thinks that the country cannot afford an open-ended fishing expedition given the problems it faces at the moment. And the American people don't want that," the Houston lawmaker's chief of staff, Vince Willmore, said.

Illustrating the sensitivity — and possible political peril — surrounding the topic, Willmore stressed that Bentsen's objection to the GOP resolution doesn't mean his boss is opposing an investigation of Clinton's conduct. "He does not consider this vote to be about whether or not you have an inquiry, but how you have an inquiry," Willmore said.

While Democrats were working to fashion their own measure limiting an inquiry to the Lewinsky affair, House Majority Leader Dick Armey said the House will not vote on a Democratic alternative.

Green County jail officials use inmates for personal labor

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Tom Green County jail officials acknowledge they used inmates to perform odd jobs at their homes, but they deny the practice violates any laws.

Jail official Aaron Lankford says a jailer took three trusty inmates more than a month ago to do private work.

The inmates went willingly, were paid for their services and were supervised by the jailer at all times, Lankford told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

All three inmates confirmed Monday that they willingly did odd jobs for the jailer and that payment was rendered for their services.

Two male inmates said they were paid $25 each into their jail accounts for moving furniture on two different occasions. A third inmate, a female, said she was paid with "the greatest cheeseburger and onion rings I have ever eaten" after she washed windows for the jailer.

Sheriff Dan Gray said he approved the work, but said there might be some small legal problems. Nevertheless, Gray said, "I don't think there's anything to make a case out of it."

No such work program exists in Tom Green County, but Lankford said he would like to have one.

The district attorney's office declined to comment on the investigation.

According to state law, jail inmates may volunteer to work in a program operated by the sheriff, but the program must be for the public good.

Gray said "the lawbook's like the Bible" in that there can be several interpretations.

Lankford said the investigation is another attempt by detractors of Gray and his department to bring down the sheriff.

"Every time we try to get creative, he gets stabbed in the back," Lankford said, referring to a now-defunct program that allowed inmates to buy visit time by paying for a guard to supervise. The program, established by Gray, was shut down by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Gray got support from the three inmates, all of whom said they like the way they are treated at the jail.

"I've never felt loyalty until I came here," said the female inmate, a convicted forger. "And I'm not the only one. Who'd have thought an inmate would say that?

Republicans seek Clinton compromise to avoid shutdown

By Greg McDonald
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders said Tuesday that Congress would not be able to finish work on all appropriations bills by its scheduled adjournment deadline of Friday and asked President Clinton to negotiate a compromise package that would fund the government well into next year.

But while extending the hand of compromise, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., accused President Clinton and Democratic lawmakers of conspiring to force a government shutdown to divert public attention from the Monica Lewinsky scandal.

"We're reaching out to try to get some discussion with them as to what they want (in the 1999 spending measures)," Lott said.

But he said GOP leaders are 'concerned about a domestic 'Wag the Dog' scenario in which Clinton would veto a number of spending bills this week and force a government shutdown.

The reference to the movie in which a president stages a phony war to distract attention from sexual misbehavior drew a sharp response from the White House.

Press Secretary Joe Lockhart denied that there are any "secret plans" to close government operations. He said Lott and other Republican leaders should "stop worrying about the politics and start worrying about the job they were sent here to do and get the work done."

"They've been in session now for nine months," Lockhart added. "We're now six days late (for the 1999 fiscal year that began on Oct. 1)."

Despite his concerns, Lott said he was hopeful that White House officials would meet with congressional leaders as early as today to work out the details of rolling at least five of the 13 major appropriations measures into one omnibus bill. He acknowledged that packaging whatever the Republican-controlled Congress fails to pass before Friday into one big measure is the only way to avoid an interruption in government services and allow members time to campaign for re-election.

Lawmakers realized several weeks ago that they would not be able to complete work on the major spending bills by Oct. 1, and adopted a temporary funding measure that expires at midnight Friday. If lawmakers fail to reach agreement with the White House on remaining spending matters by then, they may have to pass another stopgap measure until compromise agreements can be worked out.

'The problem we have is the president, as usual, and the Democrats, want to spend more money.'

— Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott

Lott said Congress will complete work by Friday on no more than eight of the 13 bills needed to fund government operations. That would leave five that would have to be combined. But many of those, covering everything from foreign operations, labor and commerce to education, contain funding levels and amendments that have been the source of disagreements between Clinton and the Republicans.

For example, Clinton wants $14 billion included in the State Department spending bill to help shore up the International Monetary Fund. But conservative Republicans, led by House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Irving, are against it.

Clinton also wants money to hire 100,000 new teachers and build more schools, and wants to eliminate what he considers a number of anti-environmental provisions in the bills.

"The problem we have is the president, as usual, and the Democrats, want to spend more money," Lott said. He added that a meeting with administration officials would try to focus on where the "major heartburn" problems are with remaining legislation.

With the clock ticking down, both sides appeared willing to abandon a number of controversial positions to avoid a budget stalemate like the one that forced partial government shutdowns in 1995 and 1996.

Armey, for instance, announced that GOP conservatives had dropped their insistence that school vouchers be included in the District of Columbia funding measure that would allow parents to send their children to private schools. Clinton had threatened to veto the bill if the voucher program remained in it.

On the Senate side, meanwhile, Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., signaled that Democrats were ready to negotiate as well.

"With time running out, we realize that we're not going to get everything we want," he said. "But we want a lot more than the Republicans are offering."

So far, Congress has completed work on six of the 13 appropriations measures. But the $60 billion farm bill approved by the Senate Tuesday could be headed for a veto because it falls $3 billion short of the $7 billion Clinton requested for emergency relief to farmers and ranchers hit by drought and floods.

Democrats move to counter GOP plans for impeachment

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a House vote set for Thursday on launching an open-ended impeachment inquiry, Democrats rushed to counter Republican plans while still underscoring their disapproval of President Clinton's affair with Monica Lewinsky.

At the White House, spokesman Joe Lockhart accused the GOP leadership of using the impeachment issue "to embarrass the president" and produce political gain for Republicans at the polls this fall.

Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said the issue would come to the floor for a vote on Thursday. Republican officials expressed confidence they would prevail, thus making Clinton the third president in history to face possible impeachment proceedings.

The GOP-controlled House Judiciary Committee approved a sweeping impeachment inquiry in a party-line vote on Monday, after first brushing aside two Democratic alternatives.

With midterm elections less than a month away, political calculations weighed heavily as the issue moved toward a vote on the House floor.

Leaders are likely to redraft a plan that was offered in the Judiciary Committee on Monday that would have limited the scope of the inquiry to the Lewinsky affair, and called for it to be concluded by Nov. 15. A second proposal, authored by Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., would have required the committee to first decide whether Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's allegations, if proven, would constitute impeachable offenses. If so, the Judiciary Committee would then be empowered to investigate with unlimited time.

Party sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Democratic rank-and-file group remains divided, however. Some liberal lawmakers from safe seats favor no inquiry on grounds that Clinton's offenses don't rise to the level of impeachment. But others, including moderates who face difficult election battles, are likely to vote for the GOP measure, officials said.

"What works in nine districts doesn't work in the 10th," said Rep. Gary Ackerman of New York. He said the Democratic leadership is "trying to figure out where the equilibrium is."

The White House would like all Democrats to vote against the Republican plan, officials said, to buttress the claim that the GOP is pushing a partisan impeachment probe. But House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt's objective is somewhat different, officials said, and is to ensure the re-election of as many Democrats as possible this fall.

White House officials — concerned with the president's fate — have circulated polling in recent days suggesting that Democrats will fare best nationally in the elections if they oppose the GOP measure. They say Republicans are vulnerable to election-year criticism that they want to open the way to a prolonged investigation at a time when the public favors a swift end to the impeachment drama.

NEW YORK (AP) — Who rescued whom?

Last month's $3.6 billion bailout of the high-flying hedge fund Long-Term Capital Management by an array of leading financial institutions has raised some sticky conflict-of-interest questions for the firms and the executives that work for them.

Because of the secrecy and lack of regulation surrounding the hedge fund industry, some experts expect the answers may not be available any time soon.

The question: If financial executives had their own money and their firm's money invested in a hedge fund, whose interests are they protecting when they gallop in like white knights to save the day?

Were they saving the global economy by keeping the fund afloat or were they protecting their own pocketbooks?

A good example of this tricky question is what's going on at Merrill Lynch & Co., which was closely involved in financing and setting up the 4-year-old Long-Term Capital fund.

Besides providing a mountain of loans to Long-Term Capital, Merrill and its executives had investments linked directly to the hedge fund. The executives' investments were through a deferred compensation plan.

The firm reported that 123 executives — including Chairman David Komansky with $800,000 — had a $22 million investment. The company had $2 million in the fund, as well, down from an initial $15 million investment.

Critics are wondering whether Merrill's deep ties to Long-Term Capital affected any of its decisions in granting credit to the fund or in kicking in $300 million toward the private bailout.

On the surface, at least, they seem to think there may be a conflict of interest.

"It's clear there will be lawsuits alleging that the directors breached their fiduciary duties to shareholders," said Frank Partnoy, a former Wall Street investment banker and law professor at the University of San Diego. "Shareholders should and will sue. Based on the facts I have seen they have a good argument."

But the firm, the nation's biggest investment bank, strongly disagrees.

"This assertion is ridiculous and unfounded," said Merrill Lynch spokesman Tim Gilles. "No decision was ever made that was adverse to the interest of Merrill shareholders. "Indeed, Merrill's shareholders have not lost a dime in connection with Long-Term Capital Management."

Merrill Lynch was not the only Wall Street firm with a personal connection to Long-Term Capital. But it is the one, so far, that is the most revealing about its ties to the hedge fund, an unregulated investment club for wealthy individuals and institutions.

James Cayne, Bear Stearns Cos. chief executive, and Donald Marron, PaineWebber Group Inc.'s chairman and chief executive, also were among the executives with personal investments in Long-Term Capital. Neither firms participated in the bailout and it's unknown if they ever lent any money to the fund. Spokespersons for the two firms refused to comment.

No one is suggesting Merrill Lynch did anything illegal. But they are saying the firm probably should have been a bit wiser in avoiding anything that could even be perceived as a conflict — giving the appearance that decisions might be made especially to protect the personal interests of the firm and its executives.

"That just seems radioactive," said Jack Broughton, a professor of finance at Chapman University near Santa Ana, Calif. "It's a scenario that should never play out. There would definitely be that aroma."

Critics also question whether the personal stakes made it easier for Long-Term Capital to get loans, which helped it to make its gigantic bets that almost brought down the house and rocked the foundations of an already fragile global economy.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, among others, have suggested that some of the blame for Long-Term Capital's losses lies with its lenders.

Although regulators, politicians and others wonder whether institutions were too liberal and didn't properly assess the risks when they eagerly made loans to Long-Term Capital, no one can say whether the hedge fund received attractive terms or favorable treatment from Merrill Lynch.

Merrill Lynch has said that its $1.4 billion in exposure to Long-Term Capital is fully secured by cash, U.S. Treasury and agency securities. And Gilles denies that the firm treated Long-Term Capital differently than any other client to which it provided money.

"The same credit and risk management requirements and procedures were applied to Long-Term Capital Management as to any other hedge fund or large institutional client," Gilles said. Moreover, the dual relationship in which Merrill was an investor along with its executives in Long-Term Capital as well as being a lender was not unusual for the company or the industry, he said.

A spokesman for the Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates investment firms, refused to comment on the issue. The Securities Industry Association, an industry trade group, agreed with Merrill's assertion that there was nothing improper or unusual about a securities firm lending money to a client in which it had a personal stake.

"There's is nothing that prohibits firms from doing that," said Stuart Kaswell, general counsel at the industry trade group. "It seems to me like putting your money where your mouth is. As part of its myriad of investments, a firm like Merrill makes investments like that all the time."

But according to Joseph F. Sinkey, a finance professor at the Terry College of business at the University of Georgia in Athens: "The point is whether or not the proper controls and procedures were followed in the organization. In my mind that is the important thing."

Dr. James Weber, an associate professor and director of the Beard Center for Leadership in Ethics at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, said many corporations would prohibit any kind of activity that gives the perception of impropriety or that might place the company in legal jeopardy.

"It's a riot. It's as if an officer at a bank had taken a personal stake in a real estate project then caused the bank to loan money to the developer," said a securities lawyer and academic, who did not want to be quoted by name for fear of jeopardizing his relationship with Merrill and other firms.

Gilles declined to say whether Merrill Lynch had any similar dual relations — as lender and investor — with any other investment fund. The firm's total exposure to about 300 hedge-fund groups was $2.08 billion — most of it secured. That's less than Chase Manhattan Corp.'s $3.2 billion but more than Bankers Trust's $875 million.

The unprecedented rescue Sept. 23 of Long-Term Capital was orchestrated by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York after the hedge fund faced crushing losses from bets that went sour after Russia devalued its currency and defaulted on its bonds — sending a shiver through global financial markets.

Regulators were worried that the hedge fund would be forced to dump its gigantic portfolio of bonds on the market if it wasn't rescued, causing prices to fall, interest rates to rise, and rattling investor confidence all around the world. A recipe for economic chaos.

Merrill was one of 71 financial institutions that channeled money to Long-Term Capital to magnify its $2.2 billion capital base into a $90 billion investment portfolio. Those assets were involved in bets representing $1.25 trillion.

Disney lobbies for exemption from online porn restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Walt Disney Co., already under boycott by some religious groups, is seeking to be exempted from a proposed law aimed at keeping Internet pornography away from children, according to Republican congressional staffers.

The Clinton administration opposes the legislation — at least pending a study of online pornography — saying it prefers the use of high-tech tools by parents over a "static, imperfect solution" such as a new law.

The GOP-sponsored Child Online Protection Act, the second major effort by Congress to protect children on the Internet, would require commercial Web sites to verify an adult's age before showing photographs or other material "harmful to minors." The House is scheduled to vote on the bill Wednesday.

Disney, the Motion Picture Association of America and other groups are lobbying Republican leaders, said the GOP staffers, speaking on condition of anonymity. Instead, they are pressing for language limiting the bill to only a company that displays online material "as its primary or principal course of trade or business," according to lobbying documents.

As written now, the bill would apply to all companies that display such material on the Internet "as a regular course of such person's trade or business."

Disney, through spokeswoman Rebecca Anderson, declined to comment about the bill or the company's lobbying efforts except to say, "Clearly, we believe in protecting children from online predation."

Others lobbying for the change said they're concerned that a bill aimed mostly at pornographic Web sites might inadvertently snare mainstream sites, especially as the Internet matures into an entertainment medium that could include the delivery of movies.

"We have concerns that the current language is too broad," said MPAA spokesman Rich Taylor. "We support changes to the language that would target and impact commercial adult Web sites."

Disney, whose business has long been entertainment mostly for children, has been the target of a largely ineffective boycott by some religious groups, notably the Southern Baptist Convention and the conservative Focus on the Family.

They object to some of Disney's policies, including providing health benefits to the same-sex partners of its employees, and to films such as "Pulp Fiction" by its Miramax Film Corp. subsidiary.

Disney, with $22.4 billion in sales last year, operates "Disney.Com — The Web Site for Families" through its Disney Online business, part of the company's massive "Creative Content" division that overall is responsible for nearly half its revenues. That division also covers Miramax, The Disney Store, home video releases and some television shows.

But since Disney's "primary or principal business" isn't its online activities, the company wouldn't fall under the new law if the wording were changed. Most other entertainment companies also would be exempted from the law.

The Clinton administration's top telecommunications adviser, Larry Irving, wrote last week to the bill's sponsor, Rep. Michael Oxley, R-Ohio, urging Congress to "refrain from imposing new access restrictions."

Irving said lawmakers should wait until a new commission — as outlined in Oxley's bill — completes a study of ways to prevent children from seeing "harmful" material on the Internet.

"The rapidly evolving technology tools available to consumers make us reluctant to embrace a static, imperfect solution today," Irving wrote.

Oxley's bill largely parrallels legislation in the Senate by Dan Coats, R-Ind., which is part of a Justice Department spending bill that is awaiting a vote. Congress adjourns Friday.

Civil liberties groups also oppose the efforts, which they compare to the 1996 Communications Decency Act, which the Supreme Court overturned last year as unconstitutional.

But supporters say the House bill's prohibition on commercial Internet sites allowing children under 17 to see "harmful" rather than "indecent" material is narrower in important ways.

The 1996 law sought to ban anyone, not just companies, from sending "obscene or indecent" material to minors. The Supreme Court overturned the law in part because it was overly broad and because of uncertainty about what "indecent" meant.

Study: Immigration affecting congressional seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The influx of immigrants is significantly affecting which states will come out ahead in the redistribution of House seats, according to a study released Tuesday.

The Center for Immigration Studies, a think tank that favors lower immigration, said the concentration of new immigrants in just a few states resulted in six states losing House seats after the 1990 census. It predicted that seven more would lose seats after the 2000 census.

That is a "distortion of the political system in which seats are taken away from citizens and reallocated in effect to noncitizens," said Mark Krikorian, the center's executive director.

The 435 House seats are redistributed every 10 years based on changes in the population. The Census Bureau counts all residents, including noncitizens and illegal aliens, in determining the population.

Immigration groups warned against any disenfranchment of noncitizens. "Legal immigrants are future Americans so they should be counted," said Joel Najar of the National Council of La Raza, an Hispanic advocacy group.

"The founding fathers decided on apportionment by population, not by votes," said Jeanne Butterfield of the American Immigration Lawyers Association. "Counting immigrants who live here, pay taxes and serve in the military ... is consistent with that principle."

The study said 800,000 to 900,000 legal immigrants arrive in the country every year, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates that 420,000 illegal aliens enter the country annually. Three out of four settle in six states: California, New York, Texas, Florida, New Jersey and Illinois.

As a result, California will get new nine seats after 1990 and 2000 that it wouldn't have been allotted if there had been no immigration, the study concluded. New York picks up two, and Texas and Florida one each.

On the other side, after 1990 Louisiana, Michigan, Montana and Ohio lost seats and Georgia and Kentucky failed to get seats they would have otherwise received without the immigration factor.

In 2000, the study predicted, Michigan, Mississippi, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin will lose one seat and Colorado and Kentucky will be deprived of a new seat because of immigration. Of the 13 affected seats, perhaps four are attributable to the presence of illegal aliens, it said.

"The stakes are high for low immigration states," said Steven Camarota, one of the report's authors. "This can be seen as distorting our democracy."

One result of the trend, he said, was that representatives from immigration-heavy districts were elected with far fewer votes. The report noted that in 1996 more than 200,000 votes were cast in typical congressional races in Michigan, which has few immigrants, while 55,000 votes were cast in the immigrant-heavy 33rd district of California and only 51,000 in the 25th district of Texas.

The concentration of immigrants, who usually vote Democratic, will lead to more safe Democratic seats, said James Gimpel, a University of Maryland associate professor who participated in the study. "You are likely to see more partisan polarization on the immigration issue," he said.

That will be true "if Republicans continue to keep bashing immigrants," said Yolanda Chavez, chief of staff for Rep. Lucille Royball-Allard, Democrat from California's 33rd district. She said in the last election, her district had the biggest voter increase of any in the state and that new voters are turning out at higher rates than other citizens.

The report did not make any recommendations on how to ease the effects of immigration on the political process. But Gimpel said the country could stop counting noncitizens, something that could require a constitutional amendment. Other solutions, he said, were streamlining the naturalization process to decrease the numbers of noncitizens or limiting the entrance of legal immigrants.

A one-dish meal, Apple-Kraut and Bratwurst Skillet, would make a fine centerpiece for an Oktoberfest celebration. Tart green apples are grilled with spicy sausage in the same pan with sauerkraut.

Break out the bratwurst for Oktoberfest

Associated Press

Historically, Oktoberfest is a German revelry famous for an abundance of food and fun.

This at-home version of Apple-Kraut and Bratwurst Skillet is easy to make. And it's perfect for an evening at home with family and friends in festive spirit.

Bratwurst, a lightly spiced sausage, is browned then simmered in the same pan with a mixture of sauteed onions, tart green apple wedges and sauerkraut. Serve with other traditional foods such as dark rye bread and strudel for dessert.

APPLE-KRAUT AND BRATWURST SKILLET

1 pound fresh bratwurst
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 medium tart green apple, cored, cut into 12 wedges
1 pound sauerkraut, drained (about 2 cups)
1/4 cup apple juice
Pepper

Cook bratwurst in oil over medium-low heat in large nonstick skillet 10 minutes or until browned on all sides; remove from heat and reserve. Add onion and apple wedges to skillet; cook and stir over medium heat 5 minutes or until lightly browned. Stir in sauerkraut, apple juice and pepper. Return bratwurst to skillet. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes or until bratwurst is cooked through and juices run clear. Makes 4 servings.

Cheddar wheels wrapped in cheesecloth

N.Y. Times News Service

VERMONT — Last summer, Shelburne Farms in Vermont went back in time and started wrapping some of its wheels of raw-milk Cheddar in cheesecloth, instead of sealing them in wax, for aging.

The cheese, along the very top of the wheel, is dark ivory and firm but buttery, with a complex flavor at once herbaceous and fruity. It has a sturdy, mottled rind the color of concrete beneath its layer of cloth.

The cheese, aged a little more than a year, is available on a limited basis at Balducci's, 424 Avenue of the Americas (Ninth Street), and at Murray's Cheese, 257 Bleecker Street (Cornelia Street), for $18.99 a pound.

Pricey for Cheddar? "Even though the cloth wrapping allows the cheese to age faster than regular Cheddar, which is sealed in Cryovac, then waxed before it is shipped, it is more labor-intensive to make because you have to keep turning the wheels and scrubbing the rind," said Elizabeth Skinner, who handles the cheese marketing for Shelburne.

For now, the cheese ages in the cellars of Major Farm in Putney, Vt., but Shelburne Farms is building its own aging cellars.

(From 8B)

Pinki Verma. "Diwali comes on the darkest night of the year. In Hindu philosophy darkness is compared to ignorance and the lighting of the lamp has significance of losing ignorance and gaining knowledge."

Diwali began as a Hindu festival, according to information from "The Kathmandu Post." The story surrounding the festival involves the Indian prince, Lord Rama, returning home after exile. The people welcomed the prince by lighting diwas all over the street.

"This festival also marks the beginning of the Hindu new year," Ms. Verma said, noting the event combines similar traditions of the American holidays of Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

She said, in India, gifts are exchanged with friends and relatives during Diwali and decorative designs are painted on floors and walls of houses.

"Diwali is a sight to behold in India," Ms. Verma said. "All the buildings are beautifully lighted and fireworks can be seen all over. There is joy and happiness in every face you see. Such is the spirit of Diwali."

The festival lasts 10 days and nine nights, said Midlander Medu Medi. "It's also called Navrati. 'Nav' means 'nine' and 'ratri' means 'night,' she said.

The evening began with traditional foods served at 6 p.m. By 8:30 p.m., the music began and a few women walked to the center of the auditorium to begin a graceful, swaying dance as they stepped in a circle.

Other women and children soon joined them and the junior high school took on the appearance of a town plaza as many observers sat in a circle to converse around the dancers. Soon, a group of young adult boys joined the circle for a few turns around the "plaza" while others laid monetary donations in front of the image of the goddess Durga, the Eternal Mother destroying the demon. "Durga destroys evil," explained Ms. Medi.

The only intrusion of American culture occurred when a pizza delivery man arrived with an armload of pizzas. He was soon surrounded by children eager to eat the food they had grown accustomed to.

Ms. Medi said the traditional foods served at the dinner were "very spicy, and too spicy for many of the children not used to eating these foods at home. Some of the food was too spicy for us adults."

Ms. Verma offers a popular traditional samosa recipe that is not too spicy:

India's version of the stuffed fried pastries is popular throughout the world. Mango chutney is the traditional dip for samosas. Plain yogurt garnished with snipped parsley or coriander leaves is often served as an additional dip.

VEGETABLE SAMOSAS

8 ounces potatoes, cut into even-size pieces
3/4 cup frozen green peas
2 tablespoons corn oil
1 onion, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon cumin seeds
1 (1/2-inch) piece ginger root, peeled, grated
1/2 teaspoon turmeric
1/2 teaspoon garam masala
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon juiced
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons warm milk
Vegetable oil for deep frying
Lime twists, if desired
Fresh celery leaves, if desired

In a saucepan, boil potatoes in salted water 15 to 20 minutes or until tender. Drain well, return to saucepan and shake over low heat a few moments or until dry. Mash well. Cook peas in boiling salted water 4 minutes. Drain well.

Heat oil in a skillet. Add onion, cumin seeds, ginger, turmeric, Garam masala and salt. Cook gently 5 minutes. Add mashed potatoes and peas, then stir in lemon juice. Mix well, remove from heat and cool. Sift flour into a bowl.

Cut in butter finely until mixture resembles bread crumbs. Add milk and mix to form a stiff dough. Divide in six equal pieces.

Form each piece of dough into a ball and roll each ball on a lightly floured surface into a 6-inch circle. Cut each circle in half. Divide filling equally among semi-circles of pastry.

Dampen edges of pastry, then fold over and seal to form triangles which enclose filling completely.

Half fill a deep-fat fryer or saucepan with oil. Heat oil to 375 degrees or until a 1/2-inch cube of day-old bread browns in 40 seconds.

Fry samosa in hot oil, a few at a time, 3 to 4 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on paper towels. Garnish with lime twists and celery leaves, if desired, and serve hot with dips.

Makes 12 samosas.

DEAR ABBY

Woman sorry she recommended her friend for a job

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: One of my best friends (I'll call her Peggy) has betrayed me. There was an opening for a position at my place of employment that paid more than the job she had. Peggy asked if I would help her get the job.

After attempting to put her off, and against my better judgment, I agreed to help Peggy because she had always been responsible at work. I spoke to the supervisor of the department and told her how reliable my friend was, so she agreed to interview her.

Van Buren

Abby, based on my recommendation, Peggy was hired, but after only four days, she decided the job was not for her and she quit.

Should I apologize to my supervisor? I know I'll lose respect from my co-workers because of what Peggy did, and I'd like to regain it. Am I justified in being angry with Peggy, and should I say something to her, too? — EMBARRASSED AT WORK

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Since you went to bat for your friend, it would be in your best interest to apologize to your supervisor for the lemon you recommended. And you would not be out of line if you told Peggy that her irresponsible behavior damaged your credibility and embarrassed you. Next time, listen to your intuition.

DEAR ABBY: I am the divorced father of a 7-year-old daughter. I'll call her Gloria. I have custody of Gloria every Thursday and every other weekend, but it's not often enough. However, "Lois," her mother, will not agree to give us more time together. Lois, by the way, has newborn twins. I think she's spending so much time with them that Gloria is getting too little of her mother's attention.

Abby, my daughter cries constantly and begs to spend more time with me. We have a great relationship and love each other very much. It breaks my heart to drop her off at her mother's home, and Gloria never wants to leave me. I remarried right after the divorce and my second wife is due to deliver our first child in a few weeks. I think the new baby about to join our family may have upset Gloria. Perhaps that's the reason for her tears. I worry that my beautiful daughter will become a problem child in need of therapy.

A few days ago, before I dropped Gloria off at school, I mentioned that I had a "tummyache." She worried about me all day, terrified that I would die. When Lois picked her up after school, the teacher told her that Gloria was crying because of me, so Lois called and screamed at me for upsetting Gloria. I spoke to my daughter on the phone and calmed her a little bit, but she was still worried.

I suggested again to Lois that Gloria be allowed to spend more time in my home, but Lois screamed, "It's too disruptive!" She's extremely stubborn when it comes to Gloria and will not listen to a word I say.

Abby, I'd give my life to save Gloria's, and now I ask myself why I didn't remain in my marriage, despite my unhappiness, so that I could be a full-time father to my precious daughter. But I didn't, so now what do I do? —DESPERATE DAD

DEAR DESPERATE DAD: Now you go back to court and make a formal request for more time with your daughter. In the light of what you told me, I hope the judge will be sympathetic.

DEAR ABBY: How can "Kathy in Huntsville" resent her husband maintaining amicable contact with his ex-wife? I come from a broken home. My parents divorced when I was 10, and if my parents had stopped being close friends after the divorce, my sisters, brothers and I would have been crushed. Moreover, it would have given us multitudes of opportunities to play one of them against the other.

The husband's relationship with his ex-wife is a part of him and should be accepted with the package. If Kathy expects him to behave as though she's the only woman in his life, or feels she can't trust him with the mother of his child, perhaps it is the "beautiful new life" she had planned — and not the man — that she's in love with. — GLAD MY PARENTS STAYED CLOSE IN GEORGIA

DEAR GLAD: You have made some excellent points, and you'll get no argument from me. It's to everyone's advantage to maintain a friendly relationship for the sake of the child involved.

NEW YORK (AP) — Who rescued whom?

Last month's $3.6 billion bailout of the high-flying hedge fund Long-Term Capital Management by an array of leading financial institutions has raised some sticky conflict-of-interest questions for the firms and the executives that work for them.

Because of the secrecy and lack of regulation surrounding the hedge fund industry, some experts expect the answers may not be available any time soon.

The question: If financial executives had their own money and their firm's money invested in a hedge fund, whose interests are they protecting when they gallop in like white knights to save the day?

Were they saving the global economy by keeping the fund afloat or were they protecting their own pocketbooks?

A good example of this tricky question is what's going on at Merrill Lynch & Co., which was closely involved in financing and setting up the 4-year-old Long-Term Capital fund.

Besides providing a mountain of loans to Long-Term Capital, Merrill and its executives had investments linked directly to the hedge fund. The executives' investments were through a deferred compensation plan.

The firm reported that 123 executives — including Chairman David Komansky with $800,000 — had a $22 million investment. The company had $2 million in the fund, as well, down from an initial $15 million investment.

Critics are wondering whether Merrill's deep ties to Long-Term Capital affected any of its decisions in granting credit to the fund or in kicking in $300 million toward the private bailout.

On the surface, at least, they seem to think there may be a conflict of interest.

"It's clear there will be lawsuits alleging that the directors breached their fiduciary duties to shareholders," said Frank Partnoy, a former Wall Street investment banker and law professor at the University of San Diego. "Shareholders should and will sue. Based on the facts I have seen they have a good argument."

But the firm, the nation's biggest investment bank, strongly disagrees.

"This assertion is ridiculous and unfounded," said Merrill Lynch spokesman Tim Gilles. "No decision was ever made that was adverse to the interest of Merrill shareholders. "Indeed, Merrill's shareholders have not lost a dime in connection with Long-Term Capital Management."

Merrill Lynch was not the only Wall Street firm with a personal connection to Long-Term Capital. But it is the one, so far, that is the most revealing about its ties to the hedge fund, an unregulated investment club for wealthy individuals and institutions.

James Cayne, Bear Stearns Cos. chief executive, and Donald Marron, PaineWebber Group Inc.'s chairman and chief executive, also were among the executives with personal investments in Long-Term Capital. Neither firms participated in the bailout and it's unknown if they ever lent any money to the fund. Spokespersons for the two firms refused to comment.

No one is suggesting Merrill Lynch did anything illegal. But they are saying the firm probably should have been a bit wiser in avoiding anything that could even be perceived as a conflict — giving the appearance that decisions might be made especially to protect the personal interests of the firm and its executives.

"That just seems radioactive," said Jack Broughton, a professor of finance at Chapman University near Santa Ana, Calif. "It's a scenario that should never play out. There would definitely be that aroma."

Critics also question whether the personal stakes made it easier for Long-Term Capital to get loans, which helped it to make its gigantic bets that almost brought down the house and rocked the foundations of an already fragile global economy.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, among others, have suggested that some of the blame for Long-Term Capital's losses lies with its lenders.

Although regulators, politicians and others wonder whether institutions were too liberal and didn't properly assess the risks when they eagerly made loans to Long-Term Capital, no one can say whether the hedge fund received attractive terms or favorable treatment from Merrill Lynch.

Merrill Lynch has said that its $1.4 billion in exposure to Long-Term Capital is fully secured by cash, U.S. Treasury and agency securities. And Gilles denies that the firm treated Long-Term Capital differently than any other client to which it provided money.

"The same credit and risk management requirements and procedures were applied to Long-Term Capital Management as to any other hedge fund or large institutional client," Gilles said. Moreover, the dual relationship in which Merrill was an investor along with its executives in Long-Term Capital as well as being a lender was not unusual for the company or the industry, he said.

A spokesman for the Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates investment firms, refused to comment on the issue. The Securities Industry Association, an industry trade group, agreed with Merrill's assertion that there was nothing improper or unusual about a securities firm lending money to a client in which it had a personal stake.

"There's is nothing that prohibits firms from doing that," said Stuart Kaswell, general counsel at the industry trade group. "It seems to me like putting your money where your mouth is. As part of its myriad of investments, a firm like Merrill makes investments like that all the time."

But according to Joseph F. Sinkey, a finance professor at the Terry College of business at the University of Georgia in Athens: "The point is whether or not the proper controls and procedures were followed in the organization. In my mind that is the important thing."

Dr. James Weber, an associate professor and director of the Beard Center for Leadership in Ethics at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, said many corporations would prohibit any kind of activity that gives the perception of impropriety or that might place the company in legal jeopardy.

"It's a riot. It's as if an officer at a bank had taken a personal stake in a real estate project then caused the bank to loan money to the developer," said a securities lawyer and academic, who did not want to be quoted by name for fear of jeopardizing his relationship with Merrill and other firms.

Gilles declined to say whether Merrill Lynch had any similar dual relations — as lender and investor — with any other investment fund. The firm's total exposure to about 300 hedge-fund groups was $2.08 billion — most of it secured. That's less than Chase Manhattan Corp.'s $3.2 billion but more than Bankers Trust's $875 million.

The unprecedented rescue Sept. 23 of Long-Term Capital was orchestrated by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York after the hedge fund faced crushing losses from bets that went sour after Russia devalued its currency and defaulted on its bonds — sending a shiver through global financial markets.

Regulators were worried that the hedge fund would be forced to dump its gigantic portfolio of bonds on the market if it wasn't rescued, causing prices to fall, interest rates to rise, and rattling investor confidence all around the world. A recipe for economic chaos.

Merrill was one of 71 financial institutions that channeled money to Long-Term Capital to magnify its $2.2 billion capital base into a $90 billion investment portfolio. Those assets were involved in bets representing $1.25 trillion.

Disney lobbies for exemption from online porn restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Walt Disney Co., already under boycott by some religious groups, is seeking to be exempted from a proposed law aimed at keeping Internet pornography away from children, according to Republican congressional staffers.

The Clinton administration opposes the legislation — at least pending a study of online pornography — saying it prefers the use of high-tech tools by parents over a "static, imperfect solution" such as a new law.

The GOP-sponsored Child Online Protection Act, the second major effort by Congress to protect children on the Internet, would require commercial Web sites to verify an adult's age before showing photographs or other material "harmful to minors." The House is scheduled to vote on the bill Wednesday.

Disney, the Motion Picture Association of America and other groups are lobbying Republican leaders, said the GOP staffers, speaking on condition of anonymity. Instead, they are pressing for language limiting the bill to only a company that displays online material "as its primary or principal course of trade or business," according to lobbying documents.

As written now, the bill would apply to all companies that display such material on the Internet "as a regular course of such person's trade or business."

Disney, through spokeswoman Rebecca Anderson, declined to comment about the bill or the company's lobbying efforts except to say, "Clearly, we believe in protecting children from online predation."

Others lobbying for the change said they're concerned that a bill aimed mostly at pornographic Web sites might inadvertently snare mainstream sites, especially as the Internet matures into an entertainment medium that could include the delivery of movies.

"We have concerns that the current language is too broad," said MPAA spokesman Rich Taylor. "We support changes to the language that would target and impact commercial adult Web sites."

Disney, whose business has long been entertainment mostly for children, has been the target of a largely ineffective boycott by some religious groups, notably the Southern Baptist Convention and the conservative Focus on the Family.

They object to some of Disney's policies, including providing health benefits to the same-sex partners of its employees, and to films such as "Pulp Fiction" by its Miramax Film Corp. subsidiary.

Disney, with $22.4 billion in sales last year, operates "Disney.Com — The Web Site for Families" through its Disney Online business, part of the company's massive "Creative Content" division that overall is responsible for nearly half its revenues. That division also covers Miramax, The Disney Store, home video releases and some television shows.

But since Disney's "primary or principal business" isn't its online activities, the company wouldn't fall under the new law if the wording were changed. Most other entertainment companies also would be exempted from the law.

Irving said lawmakers should wait until a new commission — as outlined in Oxley's bill — completes a study of ways to prevent children from seeing "harmful" material on the Internet.

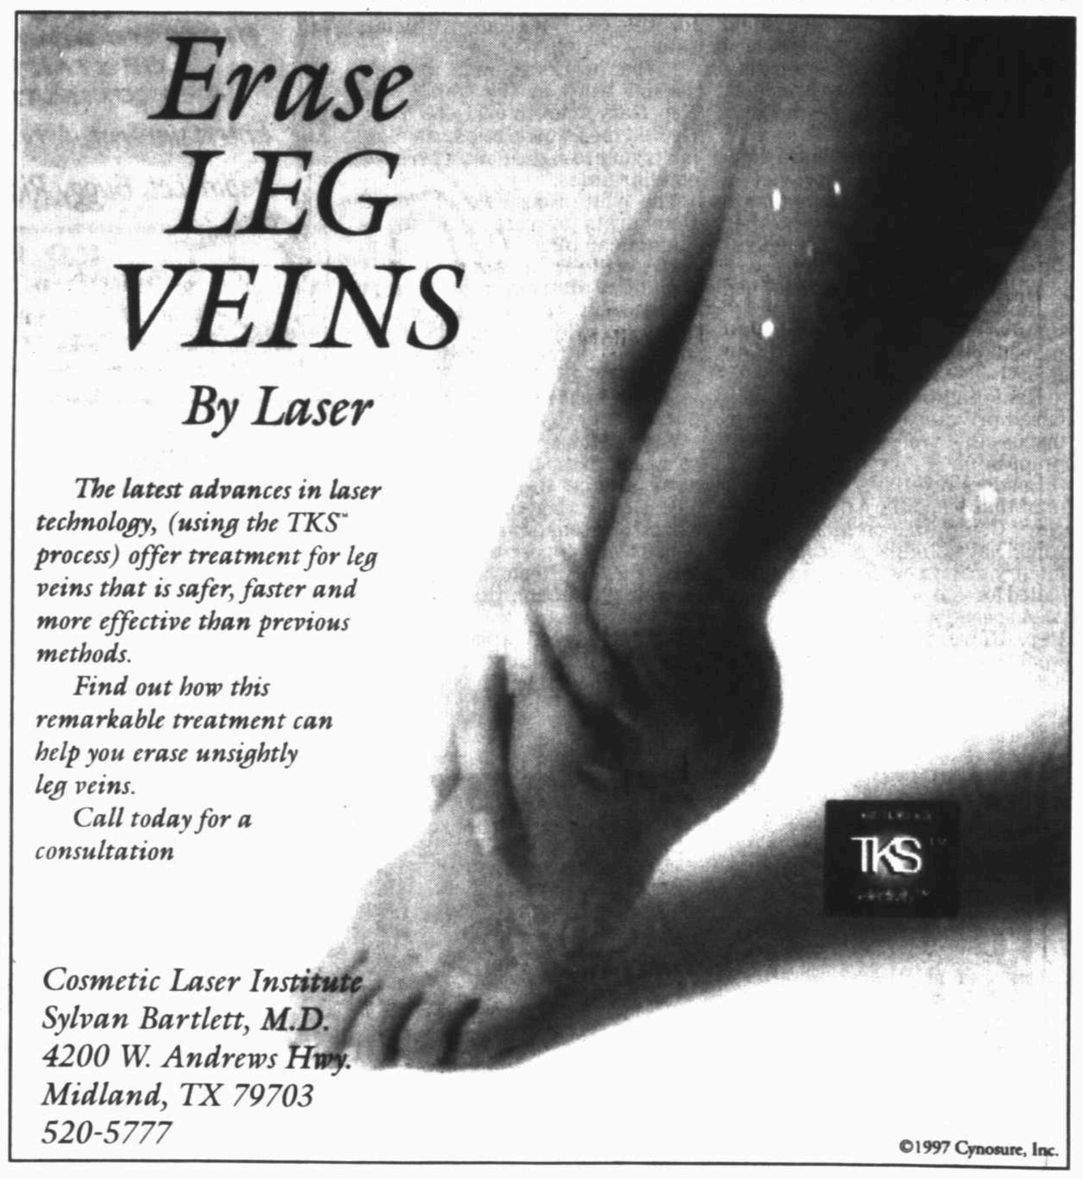
"The rapidly evolving technology tools available to consumers make us reluctant to embrace a static, imperfect solution today," Irving wrote.

Oxley's bill largely parrallels legislation in the Senate by Dan Coats, R-Ind., which is part of a Justice Department spending bill that is awaiting a vote. Congress adjourns Friday.

Civil liberties groups also oppose the efforts, which they compare to the 1996 Communications Decency Act, which the Supreme Court overturned last year as unconstitutional.

But supporters say the House bill's prohibition on commercial Internet sites allowing children under 17 to see "harmful" rather than "indecent" material is narrower in important ways.

The 1996 law sought to ban anyone, not just companies, from sending "obscene or indecent" material to minors. The Supreme Court overturned the law in part because it was overly broad and because of uncertainty about what "indecent" meant.



Study: Immigration affecting congressional seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The influx of immigrants is significantly affecting which states will come out ahead in the redistribution of House seats, according to a study released Tuesday.

The Center for Immigration Studies, a think tank that favors lower immigration, said the concentration of new immigrants in just a few states resulted in six states losing House seats after the 1990 census. It predicted that seven more would lose seats after the 2000 census.

That is a "distortion of the political system in which seats are taken away from citizens and reallocated in effect to noncitizens," said Mark Krikorian, the center's executive director.

The 435 House seats are redistributed every 10 years based on changes in the population. The Census Bureau counts all residents, including noncitizens and illegal aliens, in determining the population.

Immigration groups warned against any disenfranchment of noncitizens. "Legal immigrants are future Americans so they should be counted," said Joel Najar of the National Council of La Raza, an Hispanic advocacy group.

"The founding fathers decided on apportionment by population, not by votes," said Jeanne Butterfield of the American Immigration Lawyers Association. "Counting immigrants who live here, pay taxes and serve in the military ... is consistent with that principle."

The study said 800,000 to 900,000 legal immigrants arrive in the country every year, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates that 420,000 illegal aliens enter the country annually. Three out of four settle in six states: California, New York, Texas, Florida, New Jersey and Illinois.

As a result, California will get new nine seats after 1990 and 2000 that it wouldn't have been allotted if there had been no immigration, the study concluded. New York picks up two, and Texas and Florida one each.

On the other side, after 1990 Louisiana, Michigan, Montana and Ohio lost seats and Georgia and Kentucky failed to get seats they would have otherwise received without the immigration factor.

In 2000, the study predicted, Michigan, Mississippi, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin will lose one seat and Colorado and Kentucky will be deprived of a new seat because of immigration. Of the 13 affected seats, perhaps four are attributable to the presence of illegal aliens, it said.

"The stakes are high for low immigration states," said Steven Camarota, one of the report's authors. "This can be seen as distorting our democracy."

One result of the trend, he said, was that representatives from immigration-heavy districts were elected with far fewer votes. The report noted that in 1996 more than 200,000 votes were cast in typical congressional races in Michigan, which has few immigrants, while 55,000 votes were cast in the immigrant-heavy 33rd district of California and only 51,000 in the 25th district of Texas.

The concentration of immigrants, who usually vote Democratic, will lead to more safe Democratic seats, said James Gimpel, a University of Maryland associate professor who participated in the study. "You are likely to see more partisan polarization on the immigration issue," he said.

That will be true "if Republicans continue to keep bashing immigrants," said Yolanda Chavez, chief of staff for Rep. Lucille Roybal-Allard, Democrat from California's 33rd district. She said in the last election, her district had the biggest voter increase of any in the state and that new voters are turning out at higher rates than other citizens.

The report did not make any recommendations on how to ease the effects of immigration on the political process. But Gimpel said the country could stop counting noncitizens, something that could require a constitutional amendment. Other solutions, he said, were streamlining the naturalization process to decrease the numbers of noncitizens or limiting the entrance of legal immigrants.

A one-dish meal, Apple-Kraut and Bratwurst Skillet, would make a fine centerpiece for an Oktoberfest celebration. Tart green apples are grilled with spicy sausage in the same pan with sauerkraut.

Break out the bratwurst for Oktoberfest

Associated Press

Historically, Oktoberfest is a German revelry famous for an abundance of food and fun.

This at-home version of Apple-Kraut and Bratwurst Skillet is easy to make. And it's perfect for an evening at home with family and friends in festive spirit.

Bratwurst, a lightly spiced sausage, is browned then simmered in the same pan with a mixture of sauteed onions, tart green apple wedges and sauerkraut. Serve with other traditional foods such as dark rye bread and strudel for dessert.

APPLE-KRAUT AND BRATWURST SKILLET

1 pound fresh bratwurst
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 medium tart green apple, cored, cut into 12 wedges
1 pound sauerkraut, drained (about 2 cups)
1/4 cup apple juice
Pepper

Cook bratwurst in oil over medium-low heat in large nonstick skillet 10 minutes or until browned on all sides; remove from heat and reserve. Add onion and apple wedges to skillet; cook and stir over medium heat 5 minutes or until lightly browned. Stir in sauerkraut, apple juice and pepper. Return bratwurst to skillet. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes or until bratwurst is cooked through and juices run clear. Makes 4 servings.

Cheddar wheels wrapped in cheesecloth

N.Y. Times News Service

VERMONT — Last summer, Shelburne Farms in Vermont went back in time and started wrapping some of its wheels of raw-milk Cheddar in cheesecloth, instead of sealing them in wax, for aging.

The cheese, along the very top of the wheel, is dark ivory and firm but buttery, with a complex flavor at once herbaceous and fruity. It has a sturdy, mottled rind the color of concrete beneath its layer of cloth.

The cheese, aged a little more than a year, is available on a limited basis at Balducci's, 424 Avenue of the Americas (Ninth Street), and at Murray's Cheese, 257 Bleecker Street (Cornelia Street), for $18.99 a pound.

Pricey for Cheddar? "Even though the cloth wrapping allows the cheese to age faster than regular Cheddar, which is sealed in Cryovac, then waxed before it is shipped, it is more labor-intensive to make because you have to keep turning the wheels and scrubbing the rind," said Elizabeth Skinner, who handles the cheese marketing for Shelburne.

For now, the cheese ages in the cellars of Major Farm in Putney, Vt., but Shelburne Farms is building its own aging cellars.

(From 8B)

Pinki Verma. "Diwali comes on the darkest night of the year. In Hindu philosophy darkness is compared to ignorance and the lighting of the lamp has significance of losing ignorance and gaining knowledge."

Diwali began as a Hindu festival, according to information from "The Kathmandu Post." The story surrounding the festival involves the Indian prince, Lord Rama, returning home after exile. The people welcomed the prince by lighting diwas all over the street.

"This festival also marks the beginning of the Hindu new year," Ms. Verma said, noting the event combines similar traditions of the American holidays of Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

She said, in India, gifts are exchanged with friends and relatives during Diwali and decorative designs are painted on floors and walls of houses.

"Diwali is a sight to behold in India," Ms. Verma said. "All the buildings are beautifully lighted and fireworks can be seen all over. There is joy and happiness in every face you see. Such is the spirit of Diwali."

The festival lasts 10 days and nine nights, said Midlander Medu Medi. "It's also called Navrati. 'Nav' means 'nine' and 'ratri' means 'night,' she said.

The evening began with traditional foods served at 6 p.m. By 8:30 p.m., the music began and a few women walked to the center of the auditorium to begin a graceful, swaying dance as they stepped in a circle.

Other women and children soon joined them and the junior high school took on the appearance of a town plaza as many observers sat in a circle to converse around the dancers. Soon, a group of young adult boys joined the circle for a few turns around the "plaza" while others laid monetary donations in front of the image of the goddess Durga, the Eternal Mother destroying the demon. "Durga destroys evil," explained Ms. Medi.

The only intrusion of American culture occurred when a pizza delivery man arrived with an armload of pizzas. He was soon surrounded by children eager to eat the food they had grown accustomed to.

Ms. Medi said the traditional foods served at the dinner were "very spicy, and too spicy for many of the children not used to eating these foods at home. Some of the food was too spicy for us adults."

Ms. Verma offers a popular traditional samosa recipe that is not too spicy:

India's version of the stuffed fried pastries is popular throughout the world. Mango chutney is the traditional dip for samosas. Plain yogurt garnished with snipped parsley or coriander leaves is often served as an additional dip.

VEGETABLE SAMOSAS

8 ounces potatoes, cut into even-size pieces
3/4 cup frozen green peas
2 tablespoons corn oil
1 onion, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon cumin seeds
1 (1/2-inch) piece ginger root, peeled, grated
1/2 teaspoon turmeric
1/2 teaspoon garam masala
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon juiced
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons warm milk
Vegetable oil for deep frying
Lime twists, if desired
Fresh celery leaves, if desired

In a saucepan, boil potatoes in salted water 15 to 20 minutes or until tender. Drain well, return to saucepan and shake over low heat a few moments or until dry. Mash well. Cook peas in boiling salted water 4 minutes. Drain well.

Heat oil in a skillet. Add onion, cumin seeds, ginger, turmeric, Garam masala and salt. Cook gently 5 minutes. Add mashed potatoes and peas, then stir in lemon juice. Mix well, remove from heat and cool. Sift flour into a bowl.

Cut in butter finely until mixture resembles bread crumbs. Add milk and mix to form a stiff dough. Divide in six equal pieces.

Form each piece of dough into a ball and roll each ball on a lightly floured surface into a 6-inch circle. Cut each circle in half. Divide filling equally among semi-circles of pastry.

Dampen edges of pastry, then fold over and seal to form triangles which enclose filling completely.

Half fill a deep-fat fryer or saucepan with oil. Heat oil to 375 degrees or until a 1/2-inch cube of day-old bread browns in 40 seconds.

Fry samosa in hot oil, a few at a time, 3 to 4 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on paper towels. Garnish with lime twists and celery leaves, if desired, and serve hot with dips.

Makes 12 samosas.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: One of my best friends (I'll call her Peggy) has betrayed me. There was an opening for a position at my place of employment that paid more than the job she had. Peggy asked if I would help her get the job.

After attempting to put her off, and against my better judgment, I agreed to help Peggy because she had always been responsible at work. I spoke to the supervisor of the department and told her how reliable my friend was, so she agreed to interview her.

Van Buren

Abby, based on my recommendation, Peggy was hired, but after only four days, she decided the job was not for her and she quit.

Should I apologize to my supervisor? I know I'll lose respect from my co-workers because of what Peggy did, and I'd like to regain it. Am I justified in being angry with Peggy, and should I say something to her, too? — EMBARRASSED AT WORK

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Since you went to bat for your friend, it would be in your best interest to apologize to your supervisor for the lemon you recommended. And you would not be out of line if you told Peggy that her irresponsible behavior damaged your credibility and embarrassed you. Next time, listen to your intuition.

DEAR ABBY: I am the divorced father of a 7-year-old daughter. I'll call her Gloria. I have custody of Gloria every Thursday and every other weekend, but it's not often enough. However, "Lois," her mother, will not agree to give us more time together. Lois, by the way, has newborn twins. I think she's spending so much time with them that Gloria is getting too little of her mother's attention.

Abby, my daughter cries constantly and begs to spend more time with me. We have a great relationship and love each other very much. It breaks my heart to drop her off at her mother's home, and Gloria never wants to leave me. I remarried right after the divorce and my second wife is due to deliver our first child in a few weeks. I think the new baby about to join our family may have upset Gloria. Perhaps that's the reason for her tears. I worry that my beautiful daughter will become a problem child in need of therapy.

A few days ago, before I dropped Gloria off at school, I mentioned that I had a "tummyache." She worried about me all day, terrified that I would die. When Lois picked her up after school, the teacher told her that Gloria was crying because of me, so Lois called and screamed at me for upsetting Gloria. I spoke to my daughter on the phone and calmed her a little bit, but she was still worried.

I suggested again to Lois that Gloria be allowed to spend more time in my home, but Lois screamed, "It's too disruptive!" She's extremely stubborn when it comes to Gloria and will not listen to a word I say.

Abby, I'd give my life to save Gloria's, and now I ask myself why I didn't remain in my marriage, despite my unhappiness, so that I could be a full-time father to my precious daughter. But I didn't, so now what do I do? —DESPERATE DAD

DEAR DESPERATE DAD: Now you go back to court and make a formal request for more time with your daughter. In the light of what you told me, I hope the judge will be sympathetic.

DEAR ABBY: How can "Kathy in Huntsville" resent her husband maintaining amicable contact with his ex-wife? I come from a broken home. My parents divorced when I was 10, and if my parents had stopped being close friends after the divorce, my sisters, brothers and I would have been crushed. Moreover, it would have given us multitudes of opportunities to play one of them against the other.

The husband's relationship with his ex-wife is a part of him and should be accepted with the package. If Kathy expects him to behave as though she's the only woman in his life, or feels she can't trust him with the mother of his child, perhaps it is the "beautiful new life" she had planned — and not the man — that she's in love with. — GLAD MY PARENTS STAYED CLOSE IN GEORGIA

DEAR GLAD: You have made some excellent points, and you'll get no argument from me. It's to everyone's advantage to maintain a friendly relationship for the sake of the child involved.

Dutch apple pie hits the spot

By Linda Anderson

Some things are irresistible.

I knew I had found one of them when I saw a display of pies by Marie Callender's in the frozen food section of my favorite supermarket.

For years and years, I have heard about how wonderful Marie Callender's pies are, but I have not had the opportunity to taste one — until now. And although I know that frozen foods are not quite the same as freshly-made, sometimes that's as close as it comes. (I hear there's a real Marie Callender's pie store in Austin.)

I bought a 45-ounce frozen Marie Callender's Dutch Apple Pie for something like $5 (I believe they were on sale), took it home and baked it. Several teen-agers live in or hang around my house, so I knew I'd have plenty of volunteers for this taste test.

Back-of-the-box advertising goes like this: "Marie's Dutch Apple masterpiece begins with crisp, fresh Pippin Apples, pure cane sugar and a dash of cinnamon, all in our rich and flaky pastry pie shell. You sprinkle on our delicious crumb topping at just the right time and let it bake to a crisp golden perfection. You're in for a real 'Dutch' treat!"

Then there's some general Marie Callender's advertising on the back of the box that actually confused me a little bit. It starts out like this: "Our story begins over 50 years ago, in 1948 ..." Now correct me if I'm wrong, but isn't this still 1998? Doesn't that mean 1948 is exactly 50 years ago, not "over 50 years ago"? Could it be that I bought the 1999-model box?

Anyway, it goes on to describe a brief and politically-correct history of the company, using such terms as "finest ingredients," "love and care," "good home cooking and legendary pies" and (this one is just too silly for words) "We've been warming hearts and tummies with our famous recipes ever since." You get the picture.

In addition to the Dutch apple, Marie Callender's has other flavors of frozen pies: apple, pumpkin, "razzleberry" (wonder what that is), peach, cherry and Chocolate Satin, as well as deep-dish pie shells and crumb crusts in both chocolate and graham cracker.

Nutrition label shows that one-10th of the pie (which amounts to a pretty good-sized piece) contains 320 calories with 140 of them from fat. But if you're eating a piece of Dutch apple pie, do you really care?

Taste test was the enormous success I thought it would be. While the pie was baking, teen-agers kept coming into the kitchen and looking into the oven. When the pie was ready to eat, they were there with forks at the ready.

About half the pie was gone that first evening; nearly all the rest of it was gone before I got home from work the next day (although they did save a piece for me).

About all they said about the Marie Callender's Dutch Apple Pie was something like "Mmmmmmmmm" and "Good! Really good!"

Can't beat that for high praise.

Cultural program planned

A taste of India cultural program will be offered Oct. 17 in the Lee High School auditorium. The event will begin with a dinner of traditional foods at 5 p.m., followed by a cultural program at 7 p.m. and dancing beginning at 10 p.m.

Tickets are $15 for adults, $8 for children 3-11 and children under 3 admitted free. Deadline to purchase tickets is Oct. 11. Tickets will not be sold at the door. To order tickets call 689-4026.

All of the women participating in the Diwali festivities wore elaborate traditional dress. Many wore new clothing and jewelry celebrating the Hindu new year. The goddess Durga, far right, was on a table in the center of the auditorium. People made monetary donations or offerings to the goddess.

The aroma of curry and exotic spices, the beating of a drum and singers chanting in a singsong cadence combined with the swirl of vibrant colors and dazzling array of saris and silk costumes in shades of fuchsia, gold and bright blues as women danced in a circle. The high energy of food servers was equaled by diners chattering with friends and children as natives of India — from various cities in Texas and New Mexico — greeted each other.

With the mere action of stepping across the threshold of Abell Junior High School, visitors were transported to an atmosphere of a vibrant Indian village celebration.

During the course of the evening on Sept. 26 about 300 people filtered in and out of the auditorium, some just arriving at 9:30 p.m. when the dancing was in full swing.

Midlander Panjak "Pierre" Patel expressed amazement at seeing such a large gathering of the natives of India in the Tall City. "Although I was in Dallas the other night, and that festival attracted 3,000 people," Patel said.

Many Midlanders were among the celebrants who gathered together to celebrate Deepavali or Diwali (Festival of Lights).

"Deepavali in Sanskrit means rows and rows of lights," said

Dodds' pay raise

AUSTIN — University of Texas President Larry Faulkner has agreed to a 10-percent salary increase for Men's Athletics Director Deloss Dodds, whose pay already had gone up nearly 32 percent since 1995.

The Daily Texan, UT's student newspaper, reported today that Faulkner approved a raise that will ultimately raise Dodds' pay to $226,687.

Dodds' salary has jumped from $155,534 in 1995 to $206,081 this year, according to figures released by the school's Budget Office. He has spent 18 years at UT and is currently the highest-paid non-coaching employee of the athletic department.

The latest increase of $20,606 will be phased in over several years, said Patricia Ohlendorf, UT vice president for administrative and legal affairs.

UT women's Athletic Director Jody Conradt, who was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame last weekend, also will get a 10-percent increase that will boost her salary to $195,000.

Ms. Ohlendorf said the men's athletic council originally recommended a 20-percent raise for Dodds, but Faulkner rejected that proposal last week.

DeBartolo plea

BATON ROUGE, La. — San Francisco 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr. pleaded guilty today to failing to report an alleged extortion scheme involving former Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards.

As part of a plea agreement, DeBartolo was placed on probation and assessed $1 million in penalties. He agreed to cooperate in any future trials of the former governor and his son, Stephen Edwards, stemming from an investigation of their roles in the state's riverboat casino industry.

The agreement holds no guarantees on DeBartolo's future as an owner of an NFL franchise. League rules allow commissioner Paul Tagliabue broad discretion to ban owners connected to criminal activity.

DeBartolo gave Edwards $400,000 in cash shortly before his company received a casino license last year. He resigned as 49ers chairman and turned management control of the team over to his sister in December, shortly after he was notified by prosecutors that he was a target of the investigation.

Without the plea agreement, DeBartolo faced a maximum of three years in prison. Instead, he was placed on two years' probation. The formal charge was "misprision of a felony" — knowing about a crime and not reporting it.

Neither of the Edwardses has been indicted but both were notified late last year that they were targets of the federal investigation that has gone on for more than two years.

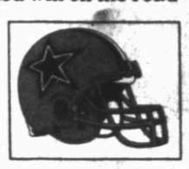
Jason Garrett will once again quarterback the Dallas Cowboys Sunday against the Carolina Panthers. Cowboy head coach Chan Gailey hopes that Dallas can show some consistency and maybe even put together a winning streak before its week 8 bye.

Gailey seeks consistency going into Carolina game

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Coming off a lopsided win on the road over a division rival and heading into a home game against a last-place team should have the Dallas Cowboys feeling pretty good about themselves.



Don't count on it. Just two weeks ago they were in the same situation after routing the New York Giants in Giants Stadium and wasted that momentum by losing to the Oakland Raiders in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys bounced back to beat the Washington Redskins 31-10 at Jack Kent Cooke Stadium this past weekend. On Sunday, they get another chance for consecutive victories — and perhaps take a stranglehold on the NFC East — when the winless Carolina Panthers come to town.

"Consistency is our focal point right now," Dallas coach Chan Gailey said Tuesday. "We need to ... put some things together back-to-back-to-back. It's not mandatory to happen right now, but at some point you've got to put together a string. To be a championship team, you've got to do that."

The Cowboys have not won three straight games since late in 1996. The last time they even won two in a row was the 10th and 11th weeks of last season, which they followed with a five-game losing streak.

This year, Dallas has been consistently inconsistent: win-loss-win-loss-win.

The upcoming schedule offers the perfect tonic. The Panthers (0-4) begin a streak of five straight Cowboys opponents with a total of five wins.

Yanks beat up Indians, win opener

By Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — David Wells and the Yankees made sure payback was swift and brutal.

A five-run first inning blew Jaret Wright right out of the game, leaving the Indians with shocked, blank expressions.

Wells then shut out Cleveland until the ninth, and New York began its revenge for last year's playoff loss with a 7-2 victory Tuesday night in the opener of the American League championship series.

"I was geared tonight. I really wanted this," Wells said. "You win the first game, it can set a tone."

Paul O'Neill, Bernie Williams, Jorge Posada and Scott Brosius all hit run-scoring singles in the first off Wright, who beat the Yankees twice in Cleveland's five-game victory last fall.

Posada added a sixth-inning homer off Chad Ogea, and Williams hit a run-scoring double in the seventh as the Yankees won their fourth straight postseason game and their season-high 11th straight overall.

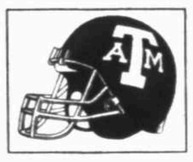
Robnetts to be honored at A&M game

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

COLLEGE STATION — Almost 59 years after winning the NCAA national championship, members of the Texas A&M's 1939 football team will receive commemorative championship rings prior to the A&M-Nebraska football game Saturday at Kyle Field.



Midland's Ed Robnett, who owned the Pipeline Construction Company before his death in 1990, was a member of that A&M squad as a freshman. Ed's brother, Marshall Robnett, who died in 1967, was a junior offensive guard who won All-America honors that season.

Even though the Robnett brothers will miss this golden moment, the Robnett family will accept the rings in their honor. Steve Robnett, who still lives in Midland and who played football at Midland High before graduating in 1971, will accept the ring on behalf of his father, Ed.

Jeff Robnett, who also had a football career at Midland High, graduating in 1979 and was a college running back career at Princeton, will accept the ring in honor of Marshall. Jeff now lives in Dallas.

"I think Dad would have felt like the ring presentation ceremony would be one of the highlights of that team's accomplishments," Steve Robnett said this week before leaving for College Station for this weekend's ceremonies. "I guess they didn't give national championship rings back then, or no one thought about it. I do know they got a ring for beating Tulane, 14-13, in the 1940 Sugar Bowl."

A total of 64 rings will be presented, 26 to surviving members of the team and the rest to family members of deceased

MHS' Nix misses history, still coming into his own

Midland High quarterback Laynce Nix was probably one run and one pass away from stepping into Bulldog football history last Friday night.

Williamson

In fact, tailback Shemond Davis probably cost Nix a place in the history book. It was Davis who broke two long touchdown runs to open the second half to cause coach David Browning to put his starters on the bench.

Davis got his yards. He rushed for 203 yards and three touchdowns, giving him over 200 yards rushing in four of the five MHS games this year.

But when Nix went to the bench, he had 92 yards rushing and 89 yards passing. It is a rare feat indeed to have over 100 yards rushing and 100 yards passing in the same game.

The last time Midland High turned that trick was with quarterback Patrick Mowles in 1989 when he rushed for 106 yards and passed for another 225 against Abilene High. Midland Lee turned the trick in 1993 when Courtney Turner ran for 136 yards and passed for 157 in a playoff game against Amarillo High.

There is no question that Nix would have turned the 100-100 performance against Irvin with a little more playing time. But the game was out of hand and it's certainly understandable why the MHS coaches decided to give playing time to more players when they did. After all, district play starts this week and there were already a number of injuries. Besides, coaches don't keep tabs of statistics during games.

Also, you would like to give MHS backup Taylor Welch as much playing time as possible in these situations. Welch is a solid quarterback in his own right. And he responded with a 16-yard TD pass to Raji Hickey, his second TD pass of the year.

Oh yes, Nix ended the night with 90 yards rushing. He got in on one more play. The old victory formation for a down-on-the-knee, two-yard loss to end the game.

Statistics are nice when something big happens. Davis has proved that with 1,091 yards rushing in just five games for the Bulldogs.

But the point here is that Nix is beginning to come around with an all-around game, rushing and passing. I don't think there is any way that he won't become a member of the short list 100-100 club before his playing days are over.

And just when Nix is beginning to shine, Bulldog receivers are dropping like flies. Nix suddenly has a depleted list of targets to put a bull's eye on. Tight end Randy Gardner is out for the year with a broken collarbone. Receiver Kreg Lusby is out for the year with a knee injury. Leading receiver Lance King has a shoulder separation and it isn't known when he will return to the lineup.

King is the third leading receiver in District 4-5A with 219 yards on 12 catches and he has scored four touchdowns, standing as the third leading scorer on the team. These are losses that hurt the Bulldogs in a big way as the 4-5A schedule hits prime time.

Also, defensive end Zach Davis has a cracked vertebrae, but could possibly return this week. And, of course, starting safety Joey Kindred is out of the year, suffering an injury in the first game of the year.

El Paso Irvin proved to be an easy victory on the Bulldog schedule in 1998. But it was most costly. Davis better keep churning out 200 yard games and Nix better join the 100-100 club soon if the Bulldogs are going to climb this hill.

After all these mounting woes are added up, MHS still owns major weapons. That's something you couldn't say a short time ago.

ager Joe Torre said.

With their 118th win this year, the Yankees matched the major league record set by the 1906 Chicago Cubs, who won 116 in the regular season and two more in the World Series.

"The message to the fans was unbelievable," Wells said. "They deserve that because they're such dedicated fans. They hold grudges more than we hold grudges."

New York, which had 11 hits, also set a team record with 21 consecutive shutout innings in the postseason, surpassing its 20 scoreless innings against the New York Giants in the 1921 World Series. The Yankees, who swept Texas in the first round, have outscored opponents 16-3 so far in the playoffs.

David Cone will try to extend the domination Wednesday in Game 2, pitching against Charles Nagy in Yankee Stadium's famous October twilight shadows.

"Most teams have one No. 1 starter," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said. "The Yankees are a little more blessed than others."

A year ago, the Yankees also won the first game against Cleveland. But it was hardly dominating, with New York overcoming a 5-0 deficit to win 8-6. This time, the cheers started when Charisse Strawberry, the wife of stricken outfielder Darryl Strawberry, threw out the ceremonial first pitch and they didn't stop.

"To see Jaret go out in the first inning was ... gratifying," Wells said. "When you get five runs, with the way we've been pitching, is plenty."

Wells, who had 23 consecutive shutout innings in the postseason before Manny Ramirez homered in the ninth, may be funky off the field, but on the mound he's strictly business. He struck out seven and walked one, leaving Ramirez's one-out homer, just the fifth hit for Cleveland. He retired 11 in a row at one stretch and 15 of 16.

"He's the one you want to have pitch with a lead because he's going to throw strikes," Torre said.

His five-hitter last year gave the Yankees a 2-1 lead in the series, and New York was four outs away from beating the Indians in Game 4 before Sandy Alomar's tying eighth-inning homer off Mariano Rivera. Cleveland went on win the series and came within two outs of beating Florida in the World Series.

First, Chuck Knoblauch, then Derek Jeter, then an RBI single by O'Neill. Pitching coach Mark Wiley came to the mound, trying to settle the 22-year-old right-hander.

"That was the one that sort of got us over the hump," Torre said.

Wright, chased by two three-run homers in the first-round opener against Boston last week, then gave up another RBI single, this time to Williams.

All were hit hard. Just four batters in and Ogea already was warming up in the bullpen. Whatever magic Wright possessed over New York last fall was gone.

"Everything was up in the strike zone and the middle of the plate," Hargrove said.

Tino Martinez bounced into a fielder's choice and Tim Raines struck out, but Wright made it even worse with a wild pitch to Shane Spencer that allowed O'Neill to score from third.

The hot rookie walked and Posada finished off Wright with another RBI single. Of Wright's 36 pitches, just 18 were strikes.

"That's a letdown for the other team," Torre said. "When you knock a starter out in the first inning yeah, that's a big thing for us."

Ogea gave up an RBI single to Brosius, then held the Yankees until Posada homered leading off the sixth. O'Neill and Williams chased Ogea with consecutive doubles opening the seventh.

Chipper: Braves need to break out of business-like approach

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

ATLANTA — The cackles come from all parts of the park because these San Diego Padres clearly are having a ball.

Andy Ashby hoots after outjumping Wally Joyner for a fly. Jim Leyritz shouts when he launches a drive to left. Carlos Hernandez dances and does his best "Rocky" imitation.

Which once again begs the question, going into Game 1 Wednesday night at Turner Field: Are these Atlanta Braves too even-tempered for their own good in October?

Built for success over the long haul of the regular season — seven straight trips to the NLCS prove that — many have wondered whether the Braves are lacking the emotional element that some say is necessary to win it all.

"I think this business-type attitude hasn't gotten the job done the last couple of years," Atlanta third baseman Chipper Jones admitted.

Pitching and hitting and fielding are no problem, as 106 victories this year attest. But, as only one World Series championship may indicate to their fans and opponents, perhaps these Braves teams are minus one key ingredient.

"You have to have that extra emotion at this time of year," said Leyritz, a postseason hero with six home runs in 36 at-bats.

"Maybe that extra edge is what's missing sometimes," he said. "They have been here before, but they haven't won the World Series that many times."

Of course, it takes more than a lot of rah-rah attitude to win games. Yet listen to Tony Gwynn talk about the Padres' mental state right now: "We're coming in euphoric, man."

Certainly no one would think of "euphoric" when describing the Braves. "Efficient" and "effective," for sure, but not "euphoric."

The Padres partied for 90 minutes after beating Houston in the first round of the NL playoffs, parading around the field at San Diego while pitcher Kevin Brown and others spoke to the fans on the public-address system.

The Braves also celebrated with champagne after their first-round win over Chicago, showing more spirit than in recent years. John Smoltz, 2-0 against the Padres this year going into his start in Game 1, said there was a reason.

Braves manager Bobby Cox contends there's plenty of emotion on his team, even if it doesn't always show. Asked whether Atlanta has anyone who gets as fired up as Leyritz, he answered: "Twenty-five guys on our side."

Then again, remember that Cox made the extraordinary move of pulling Andruw Jones in the middle of an inning this season when he felt the talented center fielder lolly-gagged for a fly ball.

players and coaches. Of the 26 living former players, 22 are scheduled to attend the ceremonies.

"The youngest guy left from that team is 78 years old," Steve Robnett said.

The tribute will include an awards ceremony, a pregame meal at the Lettermen's Lounge and a halftime presentation during the game at Kyle Field. The luncheon is expected to attract more than 400 people.

The 1939 Aggies finished with an 11-0 record. That team still owns the NCAA record for total defense, allowing an incredible 76.3 yards per game. A&M also led the nation in scoring defense and rushing defense that year. It was the only national football championship ever won by the Aggies.

Ed and Marshall Robnett both played high school football at Cooper High, located in Delta County, northeast of Dallas. Ed had a brief career at A&M (1939-41) while playing fullback. In 1939, Ed played behind All-America fullback John Kimbrough. He ended his playing career at Texas Tech (1944-46).

"Dad thought he was going to be drafted into the military, so he laid out a while," Steve Robnett said. "He ended up failing his military physical for flat feet, so he went to play for Texas Tech."

Ed Robnett went on to get a taste of professional football, playing one year with the San Francisco 49ers.

Marshall Robnett was a major player on the 1939 team, making the All-America team along with Kimbrough, who also finished second in balloting for the Heisman Trophy. As a 6-1, 205-pound guard, Marshall weighed 15 pounds less than the hard charging Kimbrough. Marshall also played four years of professional football with the Chicago Cardinals (1941-44).

Once Jeff Robnett receives the ring on behalf of Marshall, the ring will be given back to Texas A&M for display in the Clayton Williams Alumni Center. The Robnett family will keep Ed's ring.

Howard Shelton, a center on the 1939 squad, is one of the organizers of the ring presentation.

"It will be very, very emotional moment for us all," Shelton said. "I get kind of emotional just thinking about it. I believe it will be the culmination of a great life for a lot of us.

"That team was made up of so many extraordinary individuals. It was a team of incredible integrity and character. It was a very special group, especially when you look at what the guys on that team accomplished after Texas A&M."

Jacks beat San Angelo

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes, thanks to Sami Laine's hat trick, beat the San Angelo Outlaws 7-3 in exhibition action Tuesday at Ector County Coliseum.

■ Exhibition Hockey

The Jacks beat the Outlaws 4-3 in a shootout in San Angelo on Sunday. On Tuesday, Odessa scored four goals in the third period to avoid any possibility of a shootout.

Laine scored a goal in each period, proving he hasn't lost his touch from the 1997-98 season, when he led the team in scoring. Another returning Jackalope, Dan Lavergne, added a late goal plus two assists to Laine.

Christian Wibner, Shayne Lebreton and Terry Flynn added the other goals for Odessa, which is 2-0 in exhibition play.

Billy Pye had 22 saves for the Jacks.

Odessa continues its exhibition season Friday in El Paso against the two-time defending Western Professional Hockey League champions Buzzards.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Midland High's Erica Warren goes after a Midland Lee attack Tuesday night at the Midland High Gym. The Lady Bulldogs played solid defense all night, but the Lady Rebels came away with a 8-15, 15-6, 15-12 victory.

LEE: Robertson records 12 kills; Lady Rebs move to 7-0 in 4-5A

ed paraphrasing the words of junior Andrea Fryrear, spoken in the locker room after the match: "If we can win here, under these circumstances, behind like we were, then we can win anywhere."

Lee scored six straight points to erase that 8-4 deficit and pull ahead 10-4, but MHS took the serve back when Keisha Smith ended one the longest rallies of the night with an emphatic kill. Tiffani King's solo block and kill put the Lady Bulldogs back up 11-10.

The teams traded points, Lee tying the game briefly, then MHS taking the lead back on two straight kills by Porsche Hill. But Lee's Melanie Robertson put down a kill to get the serve back, then Lee got three straight points as MHS wrapped two errors around another Robertson kill for a 14-12 lead. After a trade of sideouts, Lee got two straight kills from Missy Williams — one for a sideout, one to end the match.

"Midland High is a great team," said Lee senior KeKe Strambler, who thanked God for the victory. "They came out playing hard. This is the toughest match we've played all season."

Those sentiments were echoed by Midland High coach Terri McCulloch, whose team fell to 4-3 in district (17-10 overall) but stayed in third place thanks to Abilene Cooper's upset of Abilene High Tuesday.

"We played tough," McCulloch said. "I'm not ashamed and I'm not disappointed. (The Lady Bulldogs) played their hearts out. I can't ask any more out of them."

Midland High grabbed momentum early in the first game and didn't let it go for the rest of the game. The serving of Hill (two aces) and Niki Green (one ace) fueled an eight-point run over two rotations to give MHS an 11-3 lead. Lee scratched out a few more points in the first game before MHS took the game, 15-8.

"They played awesome ball," Alexander said. "They forced us to make some adjustments that we hadn't had to make before. We went to a straight 5-1 (an offense utilizing just one setter, as opposed to the two-setter offense Alexander prefers). On some rotations, we were getting killed."

Lee didn't really get going until the second game. After Lady Rebels collided on each of the first two MHS points, they settled down. Lee pulled away from a 6-6 tie with an eight-point run to take a 14-6 lead, with seven points coming on the effective serve of Annette Oknefski (one ace). After a few sideouts, Lee won the second game on two straight kills by Robertson, who led all players with 12 kills — 11 of those in the second and third games.

JV AND SOPHOMORES: While Lee won the varsity match, Midland High won both of the undercards. The MHS junior varsity downed Lee, 15-10, 17-15, narrowly escaping Lee's attempt to force a third game. The MHS sophomores won in three, 15-3, 13-15, 15-7.

Ripken Sr. has lung cancer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken Sr., a former manager and longtime coach of the Baltimore Orioles and father of baseball iron man Cal Ripken Jr., is undergoing chemotherapy treatment for lung cancer, his family said.

Vi Ripken told The (Baltimore) Sun that her husband was diagnosed last week at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Ripken, 62, began treatment several days ago.

"Doctors found a tumor on Calvin's lung, came up with a plan and started the wheels moving," Vi Ripken said Monday. "The team of specialists seems very optimistic that this treatment will take care of the problem."

She said doctors hope medication will shrink the tumor.

"It's not going to be easy, but they seem sure that this will be a success," she said.

Pack attacked

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers, humbled by the Minnesota Vikings in their own backyard, limp into their bye week with bruised egos and battered bodies, courtesy of the new kings of the NFC Central.

"Whenever you lose going into the bye week it's a bad thing, because you have so much time to think about it," defensive tackle Santana Dotson said.

At least they've got extra time to recover physically and regroup from the psychological pain of their 37-24 whipping at the hands of the Minnesota Vikings.

Mayes was in because Roell Preston had cramps. It was a curious call by Holmgren, what with flanker Robert Brooks hurting. Brooks hasn't practiced in three weeks and is limited in games because of soreness in his post-operative back. Now, Bill Schroeder is the No. 3 receiver.

The Packers also lost their backup quarterback, Doug Pederson, for six weeks with a broken jaw, courtesy of cornerback Corey Fuller, who blitzed with under a minute left and the Vikings up by 20.

He smashed Pederson on the chin with his helmet as the quarterback released a touchdown pass. The Packers expect Fuller to be fined by the NFL.

Linebacker George Koonce sustained a severe hamstring pull, tight end Jeff Thomason got a concussion, safety LeRoy Butler sprained an ankle and was walking with a crutch on Monday.

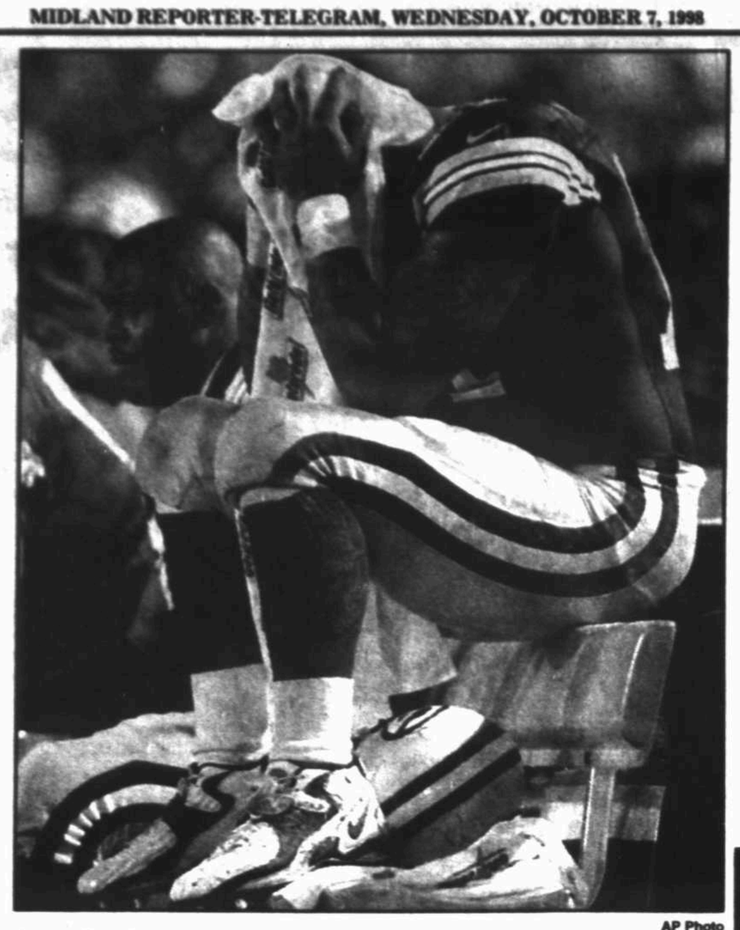
The ineptitude wasn't limited to the defense.

The Packers failed to convert a fourth-and-inches for the third time in two weeks, and Brett Favre threw three interceptions for the second straight week.

The Packers were torched by the lethal combination of no pass rush and a suspect secondary. That allowed Cris Carter, Randy Moss and Jake Reed to combine for 17 receptions for 398 yards and three long touchdowns.

The defense, which prided itself on not allowing big plays, gave up six receptions of 30 yards or more, including touchdowns of 56, 52 and 44 yards to go along with a 24-yard score on a screen pass.

Never before in Holmgren's seven seasons had the Packers allowed four TD passes in one game, and no quarterback had thrown for 442 yards on them.



AP Photo

The feeling that no team can come to Lambeau Field and dominate the Packers is gone. Suddenly, the Packers look vulnerable.

"It was a tough day to come in here and watch that film," Terrell said. "I woke up this morning, and I was like, 'Man, please tell me I was dreaming what happened last night.' But reality is I was not dreaming and we've got to get better."

The Packers insisted this was an aberration and not the first fissures in a foundation of a team that maybe isn't as good as it thought it was.

The Packers had greatness in their grasp. Their home winning streak, which included four playoff victories, was two shy of Miami's NFL record set from 1971-74.

Holmgren, who is 42-5 at Lambeau Field, was eager to break that record, but he feels 29 is worth celebrating, too.

BOYS: Carolina's defense ranks 27th overall

(From 1C)

Carolina's problems have been mostly on defense. Even with Kevin Greene leading the NFL with nine sacks, the Panthers have allowed an NFL-worst 31.5 points per game, including a horrific 51 against Atlanta last Sunday.

They're ranked 27th overall and 24th against both the run and the pass.

"They've given up some pass plays just because they've had so many injuries in the defensive backfield," Gailey said. "They're a tough football team. They fly all around the field."

The Panthers' weakness plays right into Dallas' strength. The Cowboys are scoring 27 points a game, fifth best in the league, and they're ranked No. 4 in rushing and No. 7 in total offense.

Those numbers are especially impressive considering they're using an entirely new scheme and quarterback Troy Aikman has been out with a broken collarbone since the second game.

While most first-year offensive coordinators would gloat over that success, Gailey can't because he's also the first-year head coach.

"I look less at those stats than to the win-loss column," Gailey said. "Yeah, statistics are nice, but the bottom line is did you win the game? That's where our focus is more than yardage or any numbers like that.

"I think our players are doing a good job right now of playing within the schemes our coaches have given them. Everybody is playing a role and doing a good job of playing their role. I think that's why we've had success on defense and offense."

Fractured collarbone to keep Aikman out of action

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys will make a change in the starting lineup for the Sunday's game against Carolina, but it won't be the return of quarterback Troy Aikman, who has missed the past three games with a fractured collarbone.

Acclaimed rookie Flozell Adams will start at right guard in place of Everett McIver, who is expected to be out six to eight weeks with a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right knee.

Aikman, however, was put on hold for at least another week. Though X-rays of Aikman's shoulder taken Monday showed positive signs, Aikman, who's still experiencing pain and soreness in his left shoulder, said the healing progress was not as substantial as he hoped when he targeted the Carolina game for his return.

"I will not play this week," Aikman said. "And with that being the case, the question is whether it's worth the risk to come back for one game. More than likely the decision will be made that it's not. So I would guess that my first game back would be following the bye against Philadelphia."

Coach Chan Gailey said the Cowboys will re-examine Aikman's situation before they play Chicago on Oct. 18. But considering the Cowboys have a bye the following week, Gailey admitted that he would prefer that Aikman not come back until the Nov. 2 matchup against the Eagles.

While Aikman and Gailey admitted that the Cowboys' success with Jason Garrett as the starter gives them a good feeling about what the team has accomplished during Aikman's absence, they said it has no bearing on when he would return.

Garrett, 2-1 as a starter since Aikman was injured, is coming off his best game this season. He completed 14 of 17 passes for 169 yards and a touchdown to lead the Cowboys (3-2) to a 31-10 victory against the Washington Redskins on Sunday.

The bottom line, Aikman said, is how the shoulder feels and "whether I feel I can go out and get hit and be taken to the ground and not be at a considerable risk of re-breaking the collarbone.

"Right now, I don't think that's the case," Aikman said. "I don't feel like it's strong enough to withstand any kind of punishment. I don't want to come back one or two games early and jeopardize the rest of the season."

Cowboys trainer Jim Maurer said he supports a decision to wait until after the bye week — considering that the original prognosis was four to eight weeks and the Philadelphia game would be seven weeks from when he broke it against Denver on Sept. 13.

"Every week you wait, you hope the bone gets that much more solidified," Maurer said. The X-ray, Maurer said, showed some positive things about the way the bone was healing. "He has a higher chance of refracturing it today than two weeks from now. The Philadelphia game would give him an optimal amount of healing time."

Even though guard Mike Kiselak replaced McIver against the Redskins and had a strong performance against defensive tackle Dan Wilkinson, the move to start Adams was no surprise.

The Cowboys indicated the 6-foot-7, 335-pound Adams had the most impressive training camp of any rookie since all-pro tackle Larry Allen debuted in 1994. As a result, Gailey created formations to get Adams on the field, including using him as a blocking tight end.

Gailey praised Kiselak's play, but said Adams, who replaced McIver when he was sidelined with a cut on his neck during the preseason, was the obvious choice in place of McIver.

"We felt Flozell deserved it," Gailey said. "He earned it. He played well when we put him in there in the preseason. He's done a good job. It's not like we're giving it away indiscriminantly."

Kiselak, who is in his first year with the Cowboys and played in the Canadian Football League last year, will continue be the Cowboys' top reserve on the offensive line.

Cowboy Notes

IRVING — The site of Dallas Cowboys running back Chris Warren high-stepping into the end zone with 1:06 to go in a 14-point ball game may have offended some Redskins fans.

But running up the score was not what Cowboys coach Chan Gailey was thinking about.

"Points in the division — that can determine if you make the playoffs," Gailey said Monday.

REVIEWING THE FILM

OFFENSE: Tight end David LaFleur finally had a breakout game against the Redskins, recording a career-high four receptions. And although he netted only 29 yards, the catches came at crucial times. Two were for first downs. And his last one, an 8-yarder, set up Warren's first touchdown run, giving the Cowboys a 24-10 lead.

DEFENSE: Defensive end Kavika Pittman continues his swift improvement.

The Cowboys led 10-7 when the Redskins faced third-and-one. Quarterback Trent Green faked a pitch left and rolled right. He had wide receiver Leslie Shepherd running free down the field. But Pittman, who was not fooled by Green's fake, dropped the Redskins quarterback for his third sack of the season. The sack forced the Redskins to punt.

SPECIAL TEAMS: Safety Charlie Williams committed two penalties on special teams, including a holding penalty that wiped out Deion Sanders' 71-yard punt return for a touchdown. But because the unit has played well this year, Gailey said he does not feel as though Sunday's performance is a sign of things to come.

INJURY REPORT

MC women rout field in Oklahoma

Staff Report

WEATHERFORD, Okla. — The Midland College women's golf team is having no problems starting a new program.

The Lady Chaps won the Southwestern Oklahoma State University Invitational Tuesday. They didn't just win the crown, they covered the opposition, winning by 88 strokes (638-726) over second place Tyler Junior College in the Junior College Division. MC also won the University Division by 43 strokes (638-681) over Northeastern Oklahoma State.

MC's Linzi Morton won medalist honors with a two round 78-74-152 while MC's Pam Mackey took second with a 79-78-157. In fact, MC also pulled off the medalist sweep as Krystal Mehaffey, a former Midland Lee star, took third with a 77-83-160. Mehaffey was the medalist leader after the first day of action.

The Lady Chaps also got a Top 10 finish from Lisa Ball with an 84-85-169, placing eighth overall. Vanessa Cody, another Lee grad, scored a 97-91-188.

Other schools participating in the tournament were Tarleton State, Howard Payne, Nebraska at Kearney, McMurry, Southwestern Texas and West Texas A&M.

MC will travel to Temple next week for the Mary Hardin Baylor Invitational.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Crude oil was little changed on expectations that a weekly industry report would show Hurricane Georges had only a limited impact on inventories last week, leaving them still above the year-earlier level.

The report after trading from the American Petroleum Institute was expected to show inventories dropped 0.3 percent last week because of production disruptions in the Gulf of Mexico caused by Georges, according to analysts surveyed by Bloomberg News. That would leave the supplies about 4.5 percent higher than a year earlier.

November crude oil was little changed at $15.50 a barrel, up 11 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Petroleum products also were little changed. November heating oil rose 0.48 cent to 42.37 cents a gallon on the Nymex, while November gasoline rose 0.48 cent to 47.37 cents a gallon.

The API report, issued after trading, showed a greater-than-expected inventory decline of 3.92 million barrels to 319.1 million barrels, compared with 308.2 million a year earlier.

KMID set

As part of an ongoing makeover, KMID-TV's Big Two News has unveiled a new set that features more modern colors and the news anchors seated before a background of the Midland skyline. News Director Jerry Vazquez said the makeover has been an ongoing program that includes new graphics and a new logo design that brings back the "Big Two" slogan. He said the goal is to represent the local community while modernizing the station and giving it a big-market feel.

Dollar sinks

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply against the yen Tuesday as Japan's prime minister pledged to fight for early passage of a stimulus package to boost an economy now in its second year of contraction.

The dollar slipped against the German mark, which gained strength as traders sold off dollars to buy yen and marks.

In late New York trading, the dollar weakened to 1.6300 German marks, down from 1.6315 late Monday. The dollar also was changing hands at 130.85 yen, well below 134.25 yen Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.3400 Swiss francs, down from 1.3417; 5.4670 French francs, down from 5.4721; 1,612.85 Italian lire, up from 1,612.00; and 1.5490 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5583.

AT&T service

NEW YORK — Lucky Dog Phone Co. may sound like some mom-and-pop start-up, but it's actually Ma Bell talking.

In an unusual twist to the telephone wars, AT&T Corp. has decided against using its venerable name for a new service — Lucky Dog — that lets customers make cheaper long-distance calls. By disassociating itself from the new brand, AT&T aims to fend off less-expensive rivals without losing too many people who use its existing services.

Print and television advertisements for the new service, unveiled Tuesday, don't mention AT&T, just Lucky Dog, a fictitious company that's really just a brand name. The ads feature dogs talking and acting like people, trying to entice viewers with a chance to win a $1 million grand prize and 345 smaller prizes.

Dow rides roller coaster to small gain

■ Dow rides 154-point gain into negative territory before closing with 16 point gain.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Blue-chip stocks escaped with a slim gain, but most stocks fell Tuesday despite a decent start to the flow of company reports on the just-ended quarter.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished just 16.74 higher at 7,742.98 after shedding an early 154-point gain and briefly dipping into negative territory.

The technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index took thebiggest hit again, initially recovering 40 of the 78 points lost in Monday's tailspin, but falling another 25.80 to 1,510.89 by the close.

"The market is still trying to find direction," said Don Hays, director of investment strategy at Wheat First Union of Richmond, Va. But, he added, the huge rally in the Treasury bond market, a traditional haven in jittery times, helps support stocks by lowering borrowing costs and making the payoff on bonds less attractive. Bond prices slipped a bit Tuesday, ending a five-session streak of 30-year lows on long-term bond yields.

"It's significant that the last couple of days, including this one, that the market's tried to move down to the previous low and bounced up nicely," said Hays. "There's been a tremendous improvement in (interest) rates the last week or two that more than justifies the support in the market."

The opening strains of third-quarter reporting season were mildly encouraging, but the latest results posted by Alcoa and Motorola were hardly robust enough to alleviate worries about a global economic slowdown.

Profits fell 5 percent at Alcoa compared with the same quarter last year and Motorola lost $42 million, but both companies beat Wall Street's deflated expectations.

The Dow, which is almost 1,600 points below its July 17 peak of 9,337.97, would have broken even on the day if not for Alcoa, which surged 4 5/16 to 72 1/2 following Tuesday's report by the aluminum maker. Likewise, Motorola's gain of 3 1/4 to 41 13/16 was masked by another day of steep losses in the technology group.

The Dow lost 58 points on Monday after rallying back from a 232-point slide, but most stocks fell sharply amid doubts that this week's multinational talks in Washington will produce any concrete plan to stabilize the global economy.

President Clinton on Tuesday emphasized the need for concerted action as he addressed officials from 182 nations who are attending the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

Analysts said the markets would be watching closely to see if U.S. officials succeed in working out a multibillion-dollar rescue package for Brazil, the latest country to be threatened by the financial turmoil in Asia and Russia.

The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 3.97 to 984.59, the NYSE composite index fell 0.93 to 491.51, and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.12 to 593.09. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 4.25 to 332.55.

GM announces major reorganization

■ Reorganization designed to make automaker more responsive to world markets.

Associated Press

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. promoted G. Richard Wagoner Jr. to president and chief operating officer Tuesday in a major reorganization aimed at making the biggest automaker more responsive to markets worldwide.

Jack Smith, who gave up the president's title, remains as chairman and chief executive officer. The move raises Wagoner's visibility in the competition to replace the 60-year-old Smith when he retires.

Effective immediately, GM will merge its two big, independent automotive units for North America and the rest of the world into one unit called GM Automotive Operations. Wagoner will head it.

As the most bureaucratic automaker among the Big Three, GM has long been criticized for the time it takes to develop new vehicles. Smith said a simpler organizational structure was needed to get new products to market faster in response to rapidly changing tastes and needs.

"Intense competition, diverse global markets and the speed with which the world is changing politically, economically and technologically call for a faster and leaner General Motors," Smith said.

The new automotive unit will be divided into four regional divisions: North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific and Latin America-Africa-Mideast. Each region will have its own president who will report to Wagoner.

"This theoretically should make GM much more fleet of foot on the product-development side," said analyst Joseph Phillippi of Lehman Brothers. "It just streamlines the organization."

But Phillippi said the reorganization, while needed, will not address GM's biggest problem: "At the end of the day, they still have too many divisions, too many brands and too many models."

Smith has said he is committed to keeping each of GM's six North American sales divisions. Phillippi said he expects GM eventually will merge some of those divisions, as it did in 1996 with Pontiac and GMC.

The consolidation of the North American and international automotive operations had been expected. GM recently moved the headquarters of its International Operations unit to Detroit from Zurich, Switzerland, in anticipation of the move.

The change is part of the steady streamlining that began after Smith took control of GM in a boardroom coup in 1992 after the automaker's brush with near-bankruptcy. It is similar to the consolidation of No. 2 Ford Motor Co.'s North American and European automotive operations four years ago.

"It doesn't fall into the category of leapfrogging the competition," said analyst Gregory Kagay of McDonald & Co. "Rather, it's catching up with the competition."

The merger of the automotive units coincides with GM's cost-saving efforts to produce all its vehicles from just seven global "platforms," the common chassis and parts used for a variety of different cars. GM now has 16 platforms, but they are not used globally.

AP Photo

General Motors Tuesday promoted G. Richard Wagoner Jr., right, to president and chief operating officer of the corporation and consolidated two divisions into one in a major restructuring. Current chairman and chief executive officer John F. Smith is at left.

"Since they're going to global platforms anyway, having two organizations competing with each other really did not make much sense," Phillippi said.

The first of GM's global platforms, code-named "Delta," will support a line of small cars starting in 2001 in the United States.

As part of the reorganization, GM will replace the powerful President's Council by consolidating it and several other management boards under the GM Automotive Strategy Board. The intent is to reduce the layers of approval needed for new products. Wagoner, the regional automotive presidents and 13 other top executives will sit on the new board.

"We need to clarify our decision-making process and we need to pick up the pace," Wagoner said. "To satisfy this intent, we've come up with a structure that will be much simpler."

Wagoner, 45, currently heads North American operations, GM's largest and most profitable unit. Well-respected on Wall Street, Wagoner comes from a financial background rather than the engineering side of the car business.

Critics often point to the preponderance of financial types in GM's executive suite for the lack of exciting vehicles in its product portfolio. But GM's most recent models generally have been better-received.

Smith said the consolidation would not result in any significant job cuts, though some early retirements may be offered in cases where there are redundant positions.

Wal-Mart says sales increase 9.5 percent

■ Analysts say consumer not dead, Wal-Mart strength boosts other retail stocks.

N.Y. Times News Service

BENTONVILLE, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the world's biggest retailer, said sales at stores open at least a year rose a better-than-expected 9.5 percent in September as shoppers shrugged off concerns about a slowing U.S. economy and the slumping stock market.

"The consumer is not dead," said money manager Thomas Buynack at Society Asset Management, which owned 1.29 million shares as of June.

The retailer also said it will add, remodel or relocate as many as 426 stores next year, accelerating its expansion because of strong sales. About 150 will be its lucrative Supercenters, which are warehouse-sized stores that sell everything from tires to groceries. Another 75 to 80 stores will open outside the U.S.

Wal-Mart rose 2 1/4 to 59 1/2. The strong sales boosted other retail stocks, which had been falling on fears the U.S. may follow Asia and other emerging markets into a recession. Also, demand for cool-weather clothing at chains such as Federated Department Stores Inc. and J.C. Penney Co. is expected to pick up after unusually warm weather hurt sales in September.

"It could be that the back-to-school season was simply delayed," said senior portfolio manager Timothy Ghriskey at Dreyfus Corp.

Retailers that sell goods other than clothing are reporting higher sales, as well. Circuit City Group today said September same-store sales rose 11 percent.

"Joe Six-Pack is still spending fairly strongly and sales of non-apparel merchandise look pretty darn good," said portfolio manager Brian James of Loomis Sayles & Co., which owned 1.32 million Wal-Mart shares as of June.

All of Standard & Poor's retail industry indexes rose, led by the specialty store index's gain of 4.2 percent.

Bentonville, Arkansas-based Wal-Mart's same-store sales were higher than its plan of a 6 percent to 8 percent increase and more than double the 4.3 percent a year ago. Sales rose 9 percent at discount stores and 11.4 percent at Sam's Clubs.

Top sellers included electronics, household products and health and beauty aids, said spokesman Jay Fitzsimmons.

The higher sales prompted Wal-Mart to accelerate its plans for new stores.

Mall welcomes new store, to host March of Dimes benefit

By Mella McEwen

RAVE has opened its doors in Midland Park Mall, offering fashions from denim to khaki. The store is located next to Gymboree.

McEwen

The mall will host a "Mini-Grand Prix Race" benefiting the March of Dimes Saturday in the east parking lot between Fuddruckers and Sears from 10 a.m. until the last race is won. The race is sponsored by Cox Communications.

Author Janet McGill will sign her book "Widowed Without Warning" at WALDENBOOKS from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Odessa-based ACCENT DESIGN has opened a showroom in Uptown Consignments, 404 Andrews Highway.

Dr. Michael E. Mileski has just opened ACCENT CHIROPRACTIC at 1115 Andrews Highway Suite 4, offering chiropractic care, acupuncture and nutritional counseling.

He also has an office in Ozona at 801 Avenue E Suite A.

Midland hours are 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Evening and weekend hours are available by appointment.

Two local fabric stores are operating under new names.

Fabric Warehouse, 15 Meta Drive, is now HANCOCK FABRICS after undergoing an expansion of its decorator department. The Tupelo, Miss.-based chain has expanded this department, carrying an increased and wider decorator fabric selection in addition to apparel fabrics and notions.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Cloth World, owned by Fabric Centers of America, is now JOANN'S but will continue to carry its apparel fabrics and nations, craft and seasonal items.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Now open in a much larger location is OCCASION JEWELERS, found in The Colonnade, 4610 N. Garfield St.

Owner Mike Fleck says the new location, across the parking lot from the old location and behind Julian Gold, has three times the showroom space of its last location.

The additional space, he said, has allowed it to add a silver department and expand its gold and diamond departments. Too, the store has added Crabtree & Evelyn sleepwear to its line of Crabtree & Evelyn soaps and lotions. The store also carries a large selection of gift items, including Scully leathers and Seagull pewter.

Fleck said that Randy Burrell of Randy's Fine Jewelry has recently joined the store.

Occasion Jewelers has been in Midland 10 years and Fleck said this is the store's third location. "We've always expanded and grown."

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

PERMIAN BEHAVIORAL HEALTH CENTER, 501 Andrews Highway, is now under the management of Desert Springs Medical Center. It will continue to operate as a partial hospitalization facility offering outpatient treatment to the community. A grand opening reception and ribbon-cutting will be held at 4 p.m. October 15.

Midland radio stations KENT 920 AM and 90.5 FM have been purchased by Family Life Broadcasting System Inc. The company also purchased stations in Amarillo, Lubbock and Lake Charles, La.

The stations had been receiving programming from Family Life Radio under a lease management agreement with Marantha Radio Inc., former owner of the stations.

Family Life Broadcasting is a Christian ministry based in Tucson, Ariz., and its programs include a blend of practical teaching, inspirational music and local programming.

How To Read The Market in Review

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.

PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.

How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE exceeds 99. dd – Loss in last 12 months. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. q – Closed end mutual fund; no PE calculated. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1998:
Deep feelings emerge with others. Often, you are irritated, but you are unsure why. You have a tendency to internalize anger. Express your feelings before they take a toll on you and others. You can earn more money through associations. Loved ones, children and flirtations take many unexpected twists. Being open will bring success. Your imagination comes through for you, with great ideas. If you are single, romance will thrive. Your love life will be unstable yet exciting. Don't count on anything being long-term just yet. If attached, feelings deepen. You reignite the old sparks that initially marked your relationship. TAURUS helps you budget.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Emphasize money and work. Tighten your belt, and make sure your procedures work. Be realistic about a friend's unpredictability. Unexpected, positive news allows you more freedom to pursue your goals. Excitement surrounds a long-term desire. Tonight: Go shopping.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Your smile goes a long way in putting others at ease. Be more forthright in your dealings. Bosses give you more space than you need at work. Remain centered. Recognize your limitations with someone. Your steady work style wins friends. Tonight: What makes you happy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Take a back seat, and stay mellow. Listen to someone's advice; the feedback enlightens you. Consider making a change in your personal life or style. Go within to make a decision. A new friendship could develop into a lot more, if you desire. Tonight: Curl up with a good book.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Aim for what you want; don't sell out. Remain positive, and be direct. Make calls, and reach out for others. A partner proves unpredictable, especially when the problem is a financial one. Question recent choices. Come from a secure, loving stand. Tonight: With your friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Respond to the moment. You want to make a major expenditure. But consider how many hours it took you to make this amount of money. Assume a leadership role. A partner balks but eventually comes over to your way of thinking. Tonight: Compliment someone you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Reach out for others, and be willing to take a risk. Your high energy makes a big difference. A co-worker first reacts negatively to an idea. The unexpected occurs. Your willingness to spend money on a project cheers up the people working with you. Tonight: On the computer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ One-to-one relating works. Listen to a loved one who expresses feelings outrageously. You might not like what you hear, but you know how to talk to the person. Your softer side emerges with someone. Inject more romance into your relationship. Tonight: Spice up your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others present another point of view. Expect teamwork to bring you the results you want. A family member creates an uproar. Listen carefully to your intuition regarding this person. Be understanding, and follow through with a caring gesture. Tonight: Do what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Dig into work. Your ability to cruise through projects upsets someone who has a harder time accomplishing things. Screen out superfluous chatter, to get the job done. A friend comes through for you. Make time for an important meeting. Tonight: Work late, if needed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Let your creativity come out. Reach out for someone, and make long-distance calls. Finances take wild swings. Be a careful investor. A boss or someone who respects you applauds you. Accept the compliments and acknowledgment. Tonight: Go with excitement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You unpredictability shakes people up, whether you intend to or not. A partner comes to the rescue and is more than willing to chip in. Be more in touch with your feelings. Explore a new idea. Join in, and take off. Adventure suits you fine. Tonight: Happy at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Unusual insights have you acting strangely. Calm down, and have a long-overdue discussion with a dear friend. Listen carefully to the feedback, and keep communications flowing. Others are finally prepared to be more assertive. Tonight: Chat up a storm.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
Pass	2♠	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣

The urge to win a trick as cheaply as possible is hard to resist. A many-time world champion succumbed to temptation instead of counting tricks, and paid the price.

North opened with a reasonable weak two-bid in spades and South decided that game in hearts was where the hand should be played, and got there via the most direct route available.

West led a low club, and dummy's queen was allowed to win the trick. Declarer then ran the jack of diamonds, but West was quick to shift to a trump. Unable to ruff a diamond in dummy and faced with a normal 4-2 break in trumps, declarer ended up losing three diamond tricks against careful defense — down one.

All South had to do to make the contract was to count winning tricks. Allowing for a heart loser, declarer should have no trouble coming to five trump tricks, three clubs and two aces. Declarer has only to play low from dummy on the opening lead and win in hand with the ace.

After drawing three rounds of trumps, declarer leaves the master trump outstanding and reverts to a club, forcing out East's king. South wins the diamond return with the ace, crosses to the ace of spades and discards two losing diamonds on dummy's clubs. This line succeeds whenever the defender with four trumps holds at last three clubs — a not unreasonable expectation considering the opening lead.

Jackson: 'Just say no' to Civil War comedy

LOS ANGELES — The Rev. Jesse Jackson has joined the protest against "The Secret Diary of Desmond Pfeiffer," a controversial new TV comedy set during the Civil War.

Jackson joined the Brotherhood Crusade outside Paramount Studios on Monday in a protest against the show, which debuted Monday night on UPN.

"Just take it off the air," he said. "Just stop it. Just say no."

Jackson and other black leaders say the show makes light of slavery. Officials at UPN deny the charge and say the main character, a black English nobleman who moves to the United States and becomes butler and adviser to President Lincoln, is the smartest character on the show.

Jesse Jackson says a new UPN comedy makes light of slavery.

UPN bumped the "Desmond Pfeiffer" pilot, which contained a joking reference to slavery, in favor of another episode. The network said it is reviewing the pilot but has stood by the series, saying it is not racist.

"When I'm a mommy, I'm a mommy, but when I'm a rocker, I'm a rocker," Phair said in Monday's Newsday.

Phair won critical acclaim four years ago with her debut "Exile in Guyville," sexually charged album that made her one of the dominant voices in female alternative rock. Since then, Phair got married and gave birth to a baby boy.

Married life and motherhood haven't tamed Phair much, as she shows on her new album, "whitechocolatespaceegg." Still, it's presented her with new challenges.

"I'm winging this whole career-path-slash-motherhood bit," she said. "But I'm proud of attempting to do what a lot of women are doing right now; juggling jobs and family and their own personal sense of being sexy, grown-up women charting their own destinies."

The actor and director joined 60 people in a ceremony Sunday as he dedicated 860 acres above his Sundance resort as a nature and wildlife preserve. Redford and his family donated a permanent conservation easement to the Utah Open Lands Conservation Association, safeguarding the scenic habitat and watershed.

The Redford family will continue to own the land while Utah Open Lands acts as its conservator.

"It can never be developed," said Wendy Fisher, the nonprofit organization's executive director. "These trees, these colors, these mountains that we're standing on today will remain just as they are today — untrammeled."

Utah Open Lands has helped place about 3,000 acres into conservation easements with another 12,000 to be set aside this year.

WALTHAM, Mass. — Ed Koch is going from the courtroom to the classroom.

The former New York City mayor, who acts as judge on the TV show "The People's Court," will spend next spring at Brandeis University as a visiting professor.

Koch will teach an undergraduate course about major city government and national and world issues.

Koch was mayor of New York for 12 years. Among the cases he's heard as "The People's Court's" judge include the bachelor who claimed he was injured by a stripper's breasts and the woman who sued the owner of the snake that ate her Chihuahua. Koch sided with the stripper and the Chihuahua owner.

———

ALBANY, N.Y. — The world may know him as "Grandpa" from "The Munsters," but in New York, he's just plain ol' Al Lewis.

A judge says Lewis, who is running for governor of New York as a candidate of the Green Party, cannot add "Grandpa" to his name on the November state ballot.

State Supreme Court Justice Joseph Teresi claimed Lewis was using "tortured logic" in his battle over the name.

Lewis called the judge "a fool" and said he will appeal Monday's ruling.

"If I went with that judge to Tokyo, Mexico City, Milan, Rome, London, Paris, Marseilles, Copenhagen, Prague — we walk out of the hotel, everybody would yell 'Grandpa,'" Lewis said.

WHAT IS THERMACARE?

ThermaCare™ is an innovative heat wrap that you wear. For penetrating, low-level, consistent heat that relieves stiffness and relaxes painful muscles for up to 8 hours. Ultra thin ThermaCare is worn discreetly under your clothes—with book and loop fasteners to keep it snug to your body. For knee, neck and back, ThermaCare can ease painful flare-ups. Even on those days when you thought nothing else could.

HOW DOES THERMACARE WORK?

Just open the pack and air-activated ThermaCare warms up to reach a temperature of approximately 101 degrees. For a consistent level of therapeutic heat that lasts for eight hours. No shaking, no microwaving, just natural air-activated heat which remains at a consistent temperature all day.

WHEN IS A THERMACARE DAY?

It's a day you would never want to miss, because of a sore back or a stiff knee. You can wear ThermaCare virtually anytime and anywhere minor muscle pain and stiffness erupt. And get the penetrating warmth of a heating pad without the hassle.

WHY THERMACARE?

Because ThermaCare goes wherever you do to soothe your achy muscles while you go naturally about your day. So wherever you look for pain relief, look for ThermaCare. For more information on ThermaCare, call 1-800-323-3383.

It's Heat. It's Therapy. It's ThermaCare.

Oklahoma football coach John Blake, seen here arguing a call in the Colorado game, said Tuesday that walk-on quarterback Patrick Fletcher, who has now played in three of the four games this season, is "part of the game plan" as the Sooners prepare for the University of Texas.

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

■ Texas-OU Week

NORMAN, Okla. — Patrick Fletcher's days as a last resort for Oklahoma's offense may be over.

Fletcher, a walk-on who has played in three of the first four games, is "part of the game plan" as the Sooners (2-2, 0-1 Big 12) prepare to meet Texas in Dallas, coach John Blake said Tuesday.

"There's a package in our offense for Fletcher and I think that that's very fortunate, that teams have to work on two quarterbacks, defend both quarterbacks," Blake said.

Fletcher came off the bench in the second quarter of the opener after Brandon Daniels got hurt. He had been the No. 3 quarterback, but moved up on the depth chart because second-stringer Jarrod Reese was serving a one-game suspension.

With Daniels still injured, Fletcher got the start and shared time with Reese in the second game, against Texas Christian. Fletcher didn't play the following week, against California. Instead, the coaches used Reese for the final series, when the Sooners needed to move down the field late for a chance to win.

Reese was kicked off the team a few days later, leaving Fletcher as the firm No. 2 behind Daniels. Fletcher came on in the fourth quarter against Colorado last week, with the Sooners trailing 20-12. He threw an interception that was returned for a touchdown, but also threw a touchdown pass in a 27-25 loss. He finished the day 4-of-7 for 130 yards.

"One thing about Fletcher, he can win games for us," Blake said. "He can do certain things, and I think he's very good when you bring him off the bench."

Blake said there is a chance Fletcher could be called upon "at any time," and not just in clear passing situations.

"We'll make adjustments and do whatever it takes to win the game. He's a part of that adjustment, part of that package, part of our program."

That was welcome news to Fletcher.

"I think I've made an impression on the coaches, that I'm a playmaker and that I'm going to give it everything I've got and will learn from my mistakes," he said.

The talk about Fletcher, however, shouldn't be construed to mean Blake or any other coaches are dissatisfied with the job Daniels has done. While Daniels was only 5-of-17 passing against Colorado, Blake said he threw the ball well and continues to gain confidence.

"I think our offense has shown we can move the ball," he said. "We need to put the ball in the end zone a couple times and be more consistent. But the effort is there and I can see we're getting better."

SOONER NOTES: Blake said Oklahoma would continue to use two placekickers, Jeff Ferguson and Matt Reeves.

Ohio State trying to stay No. 1 all season

By Richard Rosenblatt
AP Football Writer

Since the AP initiated the preseason poll in 1950, no team — not even Nebraska — started on top, stayed there through the regular-season and finished as national champion.

The Cornhuskers came closest, holding the No. 1 spot opening the 1983 season before losing to Miami 31-30 in the 1984 Orange Bowl. The Hurricanes finished No. 1.

There were three other near misses:

—In '93, Florida State was No. 1 from the start until a loss to Notre Dame on Nov. 13. A week later, the Seminoles regained the top spot and held it the rest of the way for their first national title.

—In 1972, Nebraska was the preseason No. 1, but Southern California moved into the top spot in the first week and held it all season.

—In 1971, Notre Dame was the preseason No. 1, but Nebraska took over in the first week and held it the rest of the way.

This season, the Buckeyes (4-0) have beaten three Top 25 teams and their next six opponents have a combined record of 13-15. The regular-season finale, though, will be a toughie — against Michigan, which is 8-1-1 against Ohio State the past 10 years.

"We've never had a problem with the work ethic of the players," Cooper said. "I don't know of many games we've gone in overlooking somebody. We haven't lost many games where we've been favored to win."

The Buckeyes, though, may want to beware of 36-point underdog Illinois on Saturday as they try to remain No. 1 for a seventh consecutive poll. In 1970, the Buckeyes were No. 1 for seven polls before the Illini beat them, 48-29.

In 1969, Ohio State was No. 1 for the first 10 polls, but lost to Michigan 24-12 and Texas ended up winning the national title.

SWAC changes prior decision on Prairie View

PRAIRIE VIEW (AP) — The Southwestern Athletic Conference, only a day after suspending the entire Prairie View A&M athletic department, reversed course Tuesday and withdrew the sanctions pending a review.

A release from the league said Commissioner Rudy Washington had "agreed to place the suspension in abeyance until further review."

The decision clears the way for the school to go ahead with this weekend's homecoming festivities and the first home football game since Prairie View snapped an NCAA-record 80-game losing streak.

Prairie View was suspended for not following the SWAC's earlier two-game suspension of its marching band after a halftime brawl with the Southern University band. The band remained out for one game but participated in the Prairie View-Grambling game last Saturday at Dallas.

The league statement said SWAC university presidents had unanimously upheld Washington's decision on an indefinite suspension for Prairie View athletics. But Washington decided to suspend the suspension.
