War trials may follow

■ U.S. President George Bush cites "atrocities" in Kuwait as his secretary of defense pledges American troops will patrol the Saudi Arabian desert "as long as needed."

By Ellen Nimmons
Associated Press Writer

President Bush said Monday that Iraqi atrocities in Kuwait could lead to trials similar to those held after World War II, and his defense secretary said U.S. troops will stay in Saudi Arabia as long as needed.

Iraq, meanwhile, insisted it would fight rather than withdraw from Kuwait.

"Hitler revisited," Bush said in Dallas of Iraqi actions in the tiny emirate that Saddam Hussein's troops seized Aug. 2.

"But remember, when Hitler's war ended there were the Nuremberg trials. Every day now, new word filters out about the ghastly atrocities perpetrated by Saddam's forces," Bush said.

Earlier Monday, U.S. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney said Americans would stay "as long as the Saudis want us...as long as it takes to get the job done. No one should underestimate our staying power."

"Time is much more likely to be on our side than it is on his side," Cheney said, referring to Saddam and the U.S.-led multinational force.

Asked if there was the political will in the United States to maintain troops in Saudi Arabia for years, Cheney said: "There certainly is."

The defense secretary, who spoke in London as part of a 10-day tour that also will take him to Moscow, said economic sanctions were only just beginning to hurt Iraq. He stressed that America hopes to avoid war.

Iraq denied it was softening its stance on the gulf crisis.

"Kuwait is the 19th province of Iraq and this fact will not be changed whatsoever even if we fight a long war for that," Information Minister Lafif Nassayif Jassim was quoted as saying.

He told reporters in Baghdad Sunday night that he believes a U.S.-led attack is imminent, but that Iraq would not fire the first shot, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

"We expect the war at any moment and we are ready to fight against the Americans and those who come with them," he said.

An editorial in Al-Thawra, the newspaper of the ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, said Iraqis "are prepared to meet the American troops."

"If they start the war, we will make it a catastrophe for those who ignite it," the editorial said. "The destruction will be total."

War on herbs?

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Willie Nelson says he doesn't care much for politicians, but he's all for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Gatewood Galbraith because Galbraith is all for marijuana.

Nelson

Galbraith wants to legalize marijuana and even use it for food and fuel.

"I'm for the war on drugs," Nelson said Sunday at a Democratic Party rally, to the consternation of more traditional Democrats.

"I'm not in favor of the war on flowers and herbs. Marijuana is an herb and a flower," the country singer said. "God put it here. What gives them the right to say God's wrong?"

Nelson and Galbraith say they are regular marijuana smokers.

Fill 'er up

PINCKNEYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — After tanking up with super unleaded, customers at Braun's Service Station can fill up their stomachs with amaretto-chocolate, peanut butter or banana split fudge.

Sandwiched between the spark plugs and the soft drink dispenser at Don Braun's Amoco station is an assortment of homemade fudges.

Braun, who jokes that he samples almost as much as he sells, offers ordinary chocolate fudge to the less adventurous patrons of his station in southern Illinois about 50 miles southeast of St. Louis.

Fantasy guest

King

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk show host Larry King says his fantasy interview would be with Jesus Christ.

"I would ask him if he believed that he was born of virgin birth, because whatever the answer is changes or reinforces the world," King said in an interview in People magazine's Oct. 22 issue.

King will be host of a new variety show, "Sunday Night With Larry King," beginning Oct. 28 on NBC.

Gorbachev says Nobel reflects value of reforms

By Bryan Brumley
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, his eyes shining with pleasure, said Monday his Nobel Peace Prize reflected worldwide recognition of the importance of his reforms "for the destiny of the entire world."

Gorbachev's $700,000 prize came as he delayed shifting the Soviet economy from a centrally planned to a market system. While the Nobel recognition was bound to raise his international prestige, its effect was less certain in the Soviet Union, which is plagued by consumer shortages and ethnic strife.

"It will be an influence of an emotional and intellectual nature because it is ... an appreciation of the cause we are all working for. All the more so because this award coincides in time with a most crucial stage in perestroika," he said.

"We are on the threshold of deep changes and reforms ... with regard to the economy's transition to a market system."

Gorbachev was expected to propose a new reform package Monday to the Supreme Soviet, but his speech was postponed until Friday.

The Soviet president said he received the news of the award from Norwegian Ambassador Dagfinn Stenseth at the Kremlin. Gorbachev said he would travel to Oslo to accept the award.

He strongly praised the other Soviet peace laureate, the late Andrei D.

World War II bomber lands in Midland between shows

■ A B-17G "Flying Fortress," dubbed "Sentimental Journey" by its World War II crew, arrived Monday in Midland, where it will be based at a new Confederate Air Force Museum when not off to air shows.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Odessan N.G. Nelson couldn't resist climbing aboard the B-17G "Flying Fortress" bomber which descended Monday into Midland International Airport for a two-week stay.

Nelson, 66, a Confederate Air Force colonel, piloted an identical World War II aircraft on bombing runs over Germany in 1944 and 1945.

Nelson was one of more than a dozen CAF and airport officials who stared in awe at the shiny silver aircraft which pulled up next to AMI hangars about noon Monday.

Midlander Joe Mabee, CAF chief of staff, said the B-17G arrived from a weekend air show in Harlingen and will remain here until it flies off to another show in Guadalajara, Mexico, in two weeks.

The aircraft, based in Phoenix, Ariz., will not be open for public viewing, Mabee said. "They can look at it from the highway," he said.

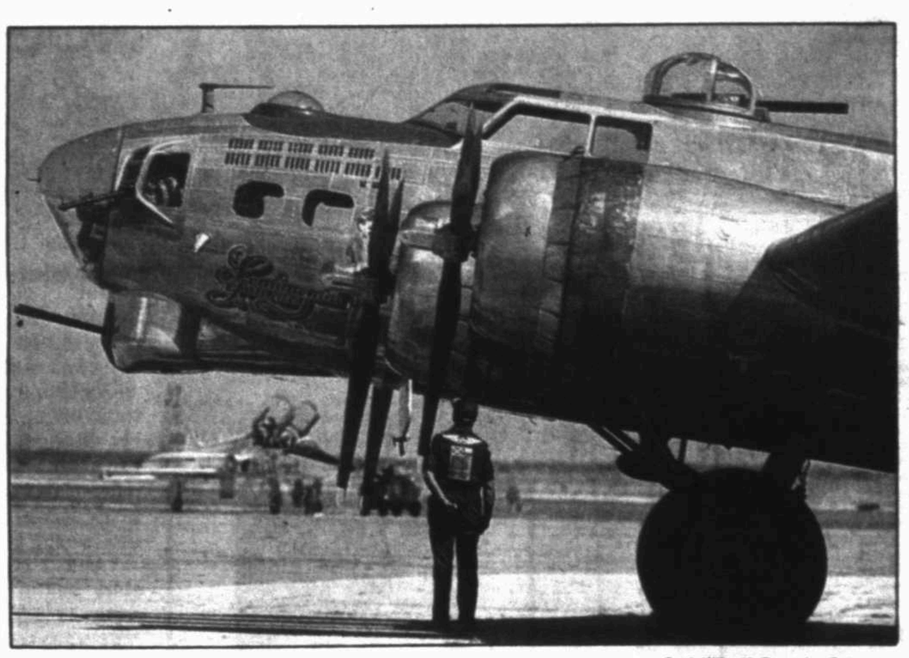

But the bomber, christened "Sentimental Journey," will be among the World War II aircraft exhibited here when the CAF museum opens at Midland International on Dec. 7, 1991, Mabee said. That event is being held in conjunction with the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Mabee said that of the 13,000 B-17s built, only about two dozen are left, nine of which have been restored. The CAF owns two of the restored ones.

A famous B-17 is featured in the movie "Memphis Belle," which opened in theaters Friday. The movie depicts the last combat flight of the Memphis Belle bomber and its crew, which successfully completed 25 missions.

Absentee voting to be conducted Wednesday through November 2

Staff Report

Absentee voting for the Nov. 6 general election begins Wednesday for those registered to vote, Texas Secretary of State George Bayoud said.

During the extended voting period, which runs through Nov. 2, Midlanders may appear at the Elections Administrator's office at 709 W. Washington to cast their ballots between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., including lunchtime, Monday through Friday.

Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert said the office will also be open for absentee voting on the last weekend of the period, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Oct. 27 and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 28.

Under a 1987 state law that relaxed voting requirements, registered voters need not give a specific reason for casting in-person ballots during the 17-day absentee voting period.

"If you have made up your mind on who you are going to vote for, consider taking advantage of the extended period," said Bayoud. "It's real convenient and you can avoid the lines on election day."

"If you are registered to vote, there simply is no excuse to stay away from the polls," said Bayoud.

Oil show to kick off

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Oil Show will kickoff its Golden Anniversary Show Wednesday with opening ceremonies at 9:30 a.m., after which the gates will be open to members of the oil industry. The Oil Show was first organized in 1940 at an Odessa park.

Prior to the opening of the show on Wednesday, Jack C. Vaughn of the United States Department of Energy will be the keynote speaker at a breakfast at the Odessa Hilton to orient foreign visitors to the oil show. The breakfast is being sponsored by the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and the Permian Basin International Trade Forum.

The show, which runs through Saturday, is open to oil industry representatives only on the first two days, but will be open to the public on Friday and Saturday.

The Chuck Wagon Gang will host its traditional barbecue feed on the oil show visitor parking lot at 6 p.m. on Friday, October 19.

Events which precede the Wednesday kickoff include the Oil Show Parade today at 5:30 p.m. and the media and exhibitors party tonight from 7 p.m. til 9 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

Bush helps raise $1.5 million for Williams

By John Gonzalez
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — President Bush on Monday helped earn $1.5 million for the campaign of the Texas gubernatorial candidate and accepted a gift from Williams — a broom with a sign calling for a "GOP Clean Sweep."

The gag presentation came after the president gave a stern speech that touched on Texas politics, the nation's budget crisis and Middle East turmoil before nearly 1,500 Williams supporters who paid $1,000 apiece for lunch at the Hyatt Reunion.

"It's always a pleasure for me to set my silver foot back upon Texas soil," Bush said, a wry reference to Williams' opponent, Democrat Ann Richards.

Williams has made a campaign issue out of the fact that at the 1988 Democratic National Convention, Richards said Bush was "born with a silver foot in his mouth."

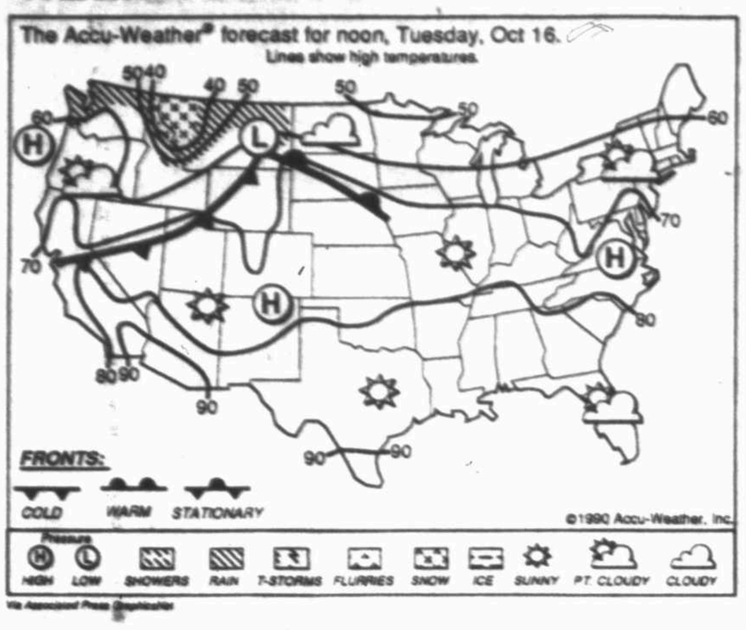

Williams took his own indirect shot at Richards, introducing Bush as "a person with whom I am proud to shake hands." Last week, Williams accused Richards of lying about him and refused to shake her hand when they made a joint appearance here.

It was Bush's second campaign appearance on Williams' behalf, and this time he also attended a brief, closed reception for Rob Mosbacher Jr., the GOP lieutenant governor candidate and son of U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher.

The junior Mosbacher said the president's visit rewarded large donors to Mosbacher's campaign, who expect to raise $750,000 for him in a Houston event on Wednesday. Mosbacher is considered the underdog in his race against veteran officeholder Bob Bullock.

GULF: Aide says U.S. troops may stay awhile

(From 1A)

Should fighting break out, the statement said, "All the American interests and those of its allies inside and outside the region will explode, and the fires will eat them at the first hour of their aggression against Iraq."

The Iraqi statement appeared intended to reassure its citizens and counter reports that Saddam might be wavering in his determination to hold onto Kuwait. Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat met with Saddam on Sunday and said later that the Iraqi president was showing a "certain flexibility" regarding his claims to Kuwait.

Arafat spoke in Tunis after meeting with the French foreign minister. Diplomatic sources in Baghdad said Arafat is trying to persuade the Iraqis to talk with the French, who suggested Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait might be linked to an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Saddam said Aug. 12 that he would discuss a withdrawal from Kuwait only if talks also were held on the Palestinian issue. The West Bank and Gaza are home to 1.7 million Palestinians.

The official Soviet Novosti press agency said Saddam had indicated to Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov that he might remove his troops in exchange for some Kuwaiti territory on the gulf.

"That report is not precise," Jassim said of the Novosti dispatch.

In other developments Monday:

■ Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told Soviet lawmakers the Kremlin has no plans to join the multinational force in the gulf, and assured them any such deployment would require their approval.

"The Soviet leadership has no plan for participation in a military operation," he said.

■ In Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, the wife of the Kuwaiti planning minister said Iraq is fencing off the northern part of Kuwait.

"The Iraqis are setting up a wire fence across Kuwait. They apparently plan to gulp up Bubiyan and the northeastern oilfield," said Fatima Hussein, who fled Kuwait last week and was among 750 businessmen, economists and politicians at a three-day conference on their country's future.

■ The French Foreign Ministry reported Iraqi soldiers have emptied the rooftop cistern holding the water for the French Embassy in Kuwait. The building now has no water, electric or telephone service, and rice is the only remaining food, the ministry said.

Iraq's ambassador to France, Abdul Razzak al-Hashimi, denied that the cistern had been emptied.

■ Spain became the first European Community country to see all its hostages safely out of Iraq when 15 Spaniards reached Jordan accompanied by a five-member private delegation that won their release from Baghdad. Seven Spanish diplomats voluntarily remained behind.

There are more than 600 American hostages in Kuwait and about 300 in Iraq.

■ Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu of Japan said his government is considering whether the constitution can be interpreted to allow deployment overseas of armed Japanese troops under U.N. auspices. The constitution, written during the U.S. occupation after World War II, prohibits the use of force to settle international disputes.

■ The State Department has set up a hotline for people seeking information about the safety of relatives and friends in Kuwait and Iraq. The number for the 24-hour telephone bank is (202) 647-0900.

NOBEL: Soviet leader may see little effect at home

(From 1A)

Sakharov, who was barred from collecting the prize in 1975, a decade before Gorbachev rose to power.

Gorbachev recalled Sakharov from internal exile 18 months into his administration.

Gorbachev said that when he took office, "the world was ripe for change. It had grown tired of the Cold War, the arms race ... the hardships resulting from an overload of current problems facing the world community."

"And I consider that academician Sakharov was in the first ranks of searchers for the answers that agitated people's minds," he said.

Sakharov's widow, Yelena Bonner, who in an interview last week with a Norwegian newspaper compared Gorbachev to Napoleon, declined to comment on the award Monday.

Gorbachev appeared delighted as he stood before reporters, speaking calmly and slowly.

"I am deeply touched. ... I perceive this action ... as a recognition of the immense value and the immense significance of the great cause of perestroika for the destiny of the entire world."

"When we began our perestroika ... we came to the conclusion that we could not continue to live as we had lived, that we needed deep transformations in all spheres of life," he said.

"Even then we wanted to be understood correctly, in that what we were going to do was bound to be of great significance for all countries, for the entire world because it was happening in such a huge country as the Soviet Union, which plays a great role and bears on its shoulders a great responsibility to the world community," he said.

Many Soviets, even those who support reform, are skeptical of Gorbachev's ability to transform the nation.

Historian Roy A. Medvedev, a member of the Supreme Soviet, said of the Nobel prize that "in internal affairs, it won't have much significance."

Most of about 15 Soviets interviewed at random in Moscow said that although Gorbachev may have helped reduce world tension, his contributions to his homeland were mixed.

"In international affairs, I think he's done everything right — it's domestically that there is disorder," said Andrei A. Tatishchev.

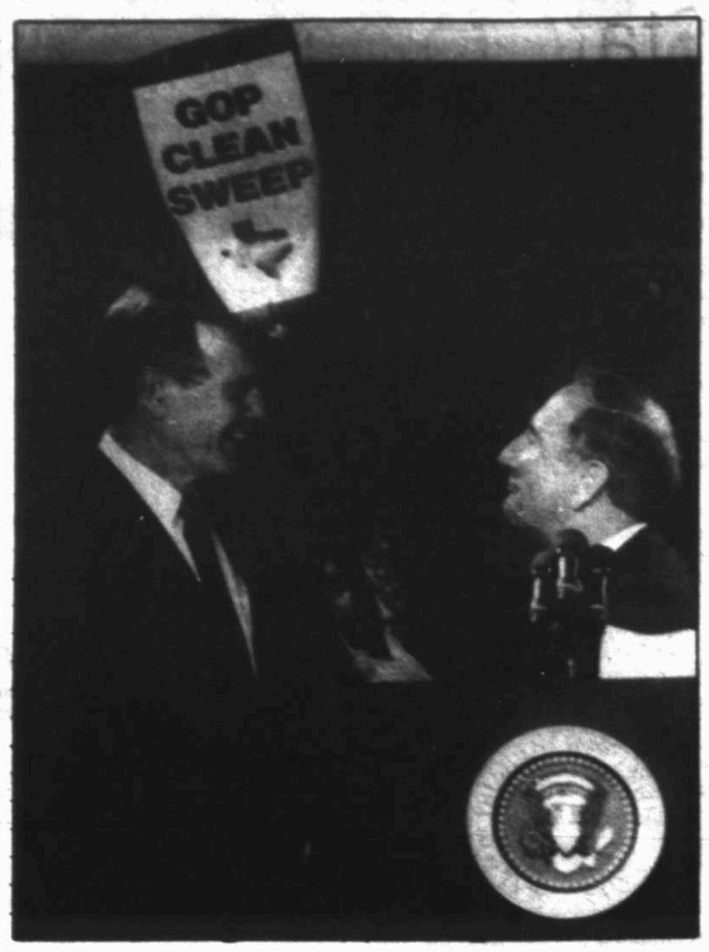

"I would be proud of him if he put things in this country in order. What happens there, outside our borders, doesn't interest me very much as an ordinary Russian person," Tatishchev added.

Shortly after the announcement, Gorbachev gave an interview to Soviet and foreign television reporters. The state news agency Tass carried excerpts.

In the Supreme Soviet chamber, Chairman Anatoly Lukyanov waited 78 minutes before informing lawmakers he had "just learned" that Gorbachev had won.

The announcement was followed by seven seconds of mild applause, comparatively brief in a chamber accustomed to long speeches and adulation.

Medvedev later told reporters that Lukyanov had not wanted to interrupt discussion of a report delivered by Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadaze.

President George Bush accepts a broom — decorated to encourge a "clean sweep" for the Republican Party in November's general election — from gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams.

RACE: Williams calling for GOP 'clean sweep'

(From 1A)

"We're going to propose a constitutional amendment setting term limitations," Williams added. "People in Texas are fed up with the politicans in Austin. We're going to sweep 'em out."

Mosbacher said Williams, the acknowledged front-runner in his race with Richards, will lend him a hand in the closing weeks of the campaign. The two candidates will travel together extensively, he said, especially in East Texas and South Texas.

Bush and Williams praised the inroads other Texas Republicans have made in the state in recent years. They were accompanied at the head table by Gov. Bill Clements and former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

The audience included other GOP statewide candidates, high-profile contributors such as T. Boone Pickens, and several state officials appointed by Clements.

In punchy phrases, Bush said Williams would be another Texan, like Clements, who understands the needs of Texas.

"Texas born and bred. Steady. Strong. Calls 'em as he sees him. Straightforward. Tireless advocate for every hard working Texan," Bush said of Williams.

"I've watched the issues unfold," Bush said. "He's tough on crime. He knows that the handcuffs belong on the criminals and not on the policemen and the courts committed to uphold the law.

"This position meshes perfectly with the no-nonsense crime package that I sent up to the Congress almost a year and a half ago. Claytie is ready to wage a statewide war on drugs and we in Washington ought to be at his side step by step.

"Claytie knows that the best way to win this war is to stop drug use before it begins, and that means education, drug awareness," Bush said. "And he knows from a painful personal experience when it's time for compassion, time to help a drug abuser battle back from addiction and rejoin society."

The president was referring to Williams' son, Clayton Wade, who was treated for substance abuse.

Bush said he and Williams both favor extending the death penalty to drug dealers. He also called Williams "a friend of the Texas taxpayer, a champion for fiscal integrity and fiscal sanity, for a government that is lean and limited. I know he'll fight for that when he gets to Austin. I can guarantee that as governor, no one will work harder for Texas than Clayton Williams."

It wasn't the president's last trip to Texas during the campaign. Bush will return on Election Day to vote in Houston.

Former President Ronald Reagan is slated to campaign for the GOP ticket in Dallas on Oct. 31.

Pranksters hide door to MIT president's office

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — An administrator wanted to show the new president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology the door to his office Monday. But he couldn't find it.

Student pranksters wanted to lay out a welcome for Charles M. Vest, the university's 15th president. They hid the doorway behind a bulletin board with clippings from the student newspaper — the banner headline read "Vest Takes Over Monday."

The "hack" — as such pranks are known at MIT — was so successful that the administrator thought he was on the wrong floor.

Vest, who arrived just after the confusion had cleared, was undeterred. The bulletin board was moved to a place of honor in the hallway. Vest went to work, toting a bottle of champagne given him by the pranksters.

Vest succeeds Paul E. Gray, who had served since 1980.

He served as provost and vice-president for academic affairs at the University of Michigan for two years.

CAF: 'Flying Fortress' arrives

has flown scores of "missions," which are what the aircraft's crew calls visits to air shows and cities nationwide.

The bomber has 11 machine guns, a 35,600-foot service ceiling and a top speed of 302 mph.

Complete with a cheesecake cartoon of Betty Grable painted on each side of the nose, the airplane visits an average of 50 cities annually, pilot Floyd Houdashell said.

Sentimental Journey, which went into service March 13, 1945, performed search-and-rescue missions over the Pacific Ocean. It was retired from military service in 1957.

The aircraft flew thousands of flights to drop borate on forest fires in California from 1959 to 1978, when the bomber was donated to the CAF's Arizona Wing. It took about four years to restore the plane to its original World War II form.

Houdashell, an America West pilot who travels with an eight-member crew of volunteers, attributed Sentimental Journey's excellent condition to years of intensive care. "We have some dedicated people who some an excellent job on maintenance," he said.

For Nelson, who flew 16 missions in his B-17, Sentimental Journey's visit to Midland International brought back a flood of memories from his combat days.

Like the crew of the Memphis Belle, Nelson said he and his fellow fliers faced dangers ranging from anti-aircraft guns to German fighter planes. Nelson said his crew even confronted the newly developed German jets, which saw action late in the war.

"When I first saw one, I didn't know what it was," he recalled. "It was moving so fast that I had to look to make sure we weren't on the ground."

State to bear large share of tax burden

STATE

■ Related story/4A

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is some sugar in the medicine Texans will swallow to help reduce the federal budget deficit. But not enough to cover its bitter taste.

Texas, the nation's third most populous state, will bear a huge share of the $500 billion deficit-reduction burden, particularly if the gasoline tax is raised 9⅛ cents per gallon.

The proposed federal tax increases by 1995 are designed to hit hardest at cigarette, alcohol and gasoline consumption. And, University of North Texas economist Bernard Weinstein notes, "Texans tend to smoke, drink and drive more."

But there is some good news for Texas in the separate tax packages of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees.

Both contain a bigger tax break for the working poor. That will particularly help poor Hispanic families in southern Texas and along the Mexican border, an advocacy group says.

The packages also raise Medicare payments to rural hospitals by gradually eliminating an allowance to urban hospitals.

The plan with the broadest political support, the Senate's, has tax breaks for energy companies when oil begins dipping below $34 a barrel. Those are designed to stimulate exploration and drilling and should help Texas oil companies.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, has played a large role creating the Senate plan as chairman of the tax-writing Finance Committee. He designed the incentives to cushion the effect of the plan's 9⅛ cent gas tax increase on Texas.

The tax is expected to raise about $42 billion from 1991 to 1995 for the federal highway fund. Under a Bentsen provision, 95 percent of the state's contribution to the fund will be returned to that state to improve or build roads.

The gas tax increase is 3 cents per gallon lower than the one proposed by the bipartisan budget summit two weeks ago and rejected by the House. But it should still raise about $3.6 billion from Texans over the five years, according to calculations using the latest consumption figures from the Energy Information Administration.

Texans consume more gasoline — 8.7 billion gallons in 1988 — than residents in any state except California.

The House package does not raise the federal tax on gasoline. But the Bush administration doesn't like that Democratic-sponsored measure because officials say one of its provisions amounts to an across-the-board tax rate increase.

Congress must resolve the budget dilemma by its self-imposed deadline of Friday at midnight or President Bush says he will shut the government down again.

Here's how some of the deficit-reduction plans will affect Texas:

Agriculture: The government plans to save $13 billion over five years by cutting back payments to farmers. In recent years, Texas farmers have collected between $725 million and $750 million in crop payments. In its broadest form, that total will be cut by 15 percent in 1992 and 1993, 20 percent in 1994 and 25 percent in 1995.

Alcohol taxes: In the year that ended Aug. 31, the per capita consumption of beer in Texas was 32.2 gallons, about 57 six-packs, according to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission. Both the House and Senate propose doubling the beer tax to 32 cents per six pack. That means the typical Texan would pay $9 more each year for beer.

College loans: The Guaranteed Student Loan program will no longer be available at schools where more than 35 percent of students have defaulted. That is expected to end the program at about 1,000 schools. Texas had 62 schools where more than 35 percent of students defaulted in 1987, the latest Department of Education statistics show.

Earned income tax credit: This is the tax break to working poor families. Two of five Mexican-American families are likely to be eligible for the credit, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Tobacco taxes: Texans smoked 1.4 billion packs of cigarettes in 1989, according to the Texas Comptroller's Office. At that level of consumption, a 4 cent increase in the federal tax in 1991 and another 4 cents in 1993 would yield $448 million from Texas smokers over the five-year period.

Snuff, cigars and other tobacco would face 25 percent tax increases each year.

Weinstein said the higher U.S. taxes are harmful to the state, which is facing budget problems of its own, by taking away places it can raise taxes.

Texas, which has no income tax, probably moves two years closer to getting one because of the federal government's need to raise taxes, Weinstein said.

Lawmakers to get extra perks

AUSTIN (AP) — When lawmakers convene in regular session in January, this city's not going to treat them like just ordinary residents. At least not if the city council follows its regular routine.

If perks recommended by a subcommittee are approved by the city council, lawmakers won't get a busy signal or get put on hold when they call the city's utility department to get services started.

They can use a special hotline to get through immediately.

If they feel like playing a few holes of golf, they'll be able to get in free to any of the municipal golf courses.

No change for the meter? Lawmakers don't have to worry about getting a ticket if the meter is expired.

Each year, the city provides library cards, free golf fees and other privileges to lawmakers as host city of the Legislature.

Some city council members want to sweeten the pot this year by also helping legislators get discounts on plays, the ballet and dining.

Members of the council's legislative subcommittee say the recommended perks are a way of welcoming lawmakers and making their stay in Austin enjoyable.

The city council will consider the perks at meetings between now and January.

Jim Wright's successor up for re-election

By Mike Cochran

FORT WORTH (AP) — Without the lightning and thunder of former House Speaker Jim Wright, the congressional race in North Texas' 12th District has been a relatively calm affair.

During his 35-year scandal-ended reign, Wright could generate more fireworks running unopposed.

In the Nov. 6 election, Democrat Pete Geren, 38, who won Wright's old seat in a special election last year, faces meagerly financed and little known Republican Mike McGinn, 39, an American Airlines Inc. accountant.

Not surprisingly, debate surrounding the showdown seems to focus on who is the more conservative candidate.

"Pete is wanting everyone to think he's conservative," McGinn said. "But as a matter of fact he consistently makes liberal votes."

Geren, a wealthy Fort Worth attorney, scoffs at such claims. He said he votes in the best interests of his district, which is largely Democratic but heavily conservative.

"That often means," said aide Greta Creech, "that he is voting against the leadership of his party."

Not so, says McGinn.

An avid supporter of President Bush, McGinn insists that Geren yields to pressure from Democratic leaders and seldom strays from the party line in a crunch.

The result, he says, is that Geren plays a little fast and loose with the taxpayers' money: "I don't see any significant commitment from Pete Geren or the Democratic Party to control spending."

On the contrary, says Geren, "I believe over the course of this year I have voted consistently for budget cutting measures."

As a certified public accountant and a wage earner, McGinn maintains he is philosophically and professionally better equipped to deal with economic problems and serve the working populace.

"I have lots of financial training," said McGinn, who lives in Bedford.

Geren says he is particularly proud of his efforts on obtaining research and development funds for the endangered V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft, which is built by Bell Helicopter Textron and Boeing Helicopter Co.

"My campaign is emphasizing what we've been able to get done over the last year, which I feel very good about," he said. "I think we've laid the foundation for effective service and representation for the people of the 12th District."

Geren has worked to obtain federal funds for local anti-crime and anti-drug programs and to finance local education needs.

McGinn points to Geren's inconsistent support of the administration as a clue to his true political philosophy.

In particular, he said Geren opposed harsh economic sanctions against Iraq prior to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, then, along with his Democratic colleagues, jumped on the Bush bandwagon.

Countered Geren: "I've supported the president 100 percent in regard to his Iraqi policies, both pre-invasion and post-invasion."

Supreme Court upholds closing of adult bookstores

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court turned aside free-speech arguments Monday and boosted the federal government's crackdown on obscenity.

The justices, over one dissenting vote, let stand the forced closing of three adult bookstores and nine video rental shops in Virginia under a federal anti-racketeering law.

The businesses' owners, convicted of racketeering and selling obscene materials, had argued that the subsequent seizures of their properties violated their free-speech rights.

The seizures were carried out under provisions of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO). Those convicted under that law may be forced to forfeit all assets and proceeds stemming from their illegal activity.

Justice Byron R. White voted to hear the business owners' appeal, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

In other action Monday, the court:

■ Rejected the appeal of a former Air Force sergeant convicted in Washington state of aggravated assault for engaging in homosexual conduct while knowingly infected with an AIDS-related virus. The sergeant was sent to Wilford Hall Medical Center at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas for evaluation and treatment, and while there received counseling on "safe sex" practices.

■ Set aside a Minnesota man's federal conviction for burning an American flag during a 1988 demonstration in Minneapolis. The justices told a federal appeals court to reconsider the conviction in light of their decision last June in a Dallas case that flag burning is protected political speech.

■ Refused to let Texas, and by extension other states as well, ban deceptive advertising by airlines. The justices let stand an appeals court ruling that only the federal government may regulate airline ads.

■ Unanimously ruled in a Georgia case that state officials need federal clearance, under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, before holding elections for state judgeships.

■ Refused to revive a copyright lawsuit against the publisher of an unauthorized biography of L. Ron Hubbard, founder of the Scientology religion.

■ Turned down the appeal of two Peotone, Ill., policemen who said they were disciplined unlawfully for wearing earrings while off duty.

In the obscenity and racketeering case, the Virginia bookstore and video rental shop owners are the first ever prosecuted on racketeering charges stemming entirely from obscenity crimes.

Obscenity was added in 1984 to the long list of underlying crimes on which a RICO prosecution could be based.

"The court's determination of the validity of post-judgment forfeiture in this case will have enormous impact upon the future of RICO obscenity prosecutions, both state and federal," lawyers for the convicted business owners said.

Dennis and Barbara Pryba, owners of the corporations that operated the bookstores and video shops in northern Virginia, were convicted of selling and distributing obscene magazines and videotapes worth about $105.

An employee, Jennifer Williams, also was convicted on obscenity charges.

Dennis Pryba was sentenced to three years in prison and five years probation, and was fined $75,000. Barbara Pryba was given a suspended prison sentence and fined $200,000. Ms. Williams was given three years probation and fined $2,250.

One of the corporations the Prybas owned also was fined $200,000.

After a separate jury trial, a federal judge ordered that all assets — including corporate stock, inventory, bank accounts, automobiles and even office furniture — be forfeited.

The convictions and forfeiture order was upheld by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last April.

In their appeal, the Prybas and Williams said forfeiture of businesses engaged in constitutionally protected activities — the distribution of materials not found to be obscene — amounts to an impermissible "prior restraint" of speech.

Plan would cut poor families' taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic deficit-reduction plan under attack from the Bush administration would raise taxes on all but the poorest Americans, socking the richest 1 percent with increases averaging nearly $14,000 a year.

The proposal would cut taxes slightly on those with incomes under $20,000 a year, according to an analysis Monday by the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation. Those above the $200,000 income level would face a 7.4 percent tax increase.

For people between those extremes, the legislation would result in tax increases in the 1 percent range. That would result from putting higher consumer taxes on alcohol and tobacco; giving up next year's income tax adjustment to offset inflation, and raising the amount of wages subject to the Medicare tax.

Economists for the House Ways and Means Committee, which wrote the proposal, estimated its tax changes and cost increases for Medicare beneficiaries would cost the average family $352 next year.

Analysts said:

■ The poorest one-fifth of families, with after-tax income averaging $7,316, would get a $14 tax cut.

■ The second-poorest one-fifth, averaging $16,917, would pay $114 more.

■ The middle group, averaging $25,896, would pay $183 more.

■ The second-richest 20 percent, averaging $36,481, would face a $280 tax increase.

■ The top 20 percent, whose incomes average $81,934, would pay $1,173 more.

■ Those with incomes averaging over $428,000 — the richest 1 percent — would face a $13,951 tax increase.

Although other deficit plans are being considered, the House Democratic version is getting most of the attention now because of the administration's opposition and because it seems to have support from most of the party's House members.

President Bush, after meeting with the congressional Republican leaders, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, said Monday that they were "pretty much on the same wavelength" in preferring a different tax increase approved by the Senate Finance Committee. "What I'll do is say the action's in the Congress and I will take a look at what comes out," Bush told reporters on a campaign trip to Texas.

Unlike the House Democrats' plan, the Finance Committee version would avoid changes in income tax rates but would limit itemized deductions for people earning over $100,000.

The Finance panel's plan would raise taxes by just under 3 percent for families in the $20,000-to-$50,000 income range; 1.9 percent for those between $50,000 and $75,000 and 3.5 percent for those between $100,000 and $200,000. The $200,000-plus group would pay 3.7 percent more.

Because differences between the House Democrats' tax plan and the Senate Finance Committee version will take some time to resolve, it becomes more likely that Bush will order the government shut down Saturday morning for the second time this month.

More than two weeks into the new budget year, Congress has yet to enact the first of 13 required appropriation bills. A stopgap spending measure expires at midnight Friday and Bush has said he will not agree to another unless Congress has approved a deficit-reduction plan that the administration supports.

House liberals say their bill would reverse a 1980s trend that saw higher-income Americans take an increasing share of the national wealth. They note a Congressional Budget Office conclusion that the richest 5 percent of Americans saw their after-tax income rise by 5.4 percent between 1980 and 1990 while all other groups lost ground.

The Democratic plan would raise taxes by $148.6 billion over the next five years and require those with incomes above $50,000 to pay about two-thirds of that.

It would raise from 28 percent to 33 percent the top income tax rate paid by those with highest incomes and require those earning over $1 million to pay an extra 10 percent tax. A new 10 percent tax would be levied on part of the price of boats, private planes, furs, cars and jewelry. And the $51,300 maximum annual wage on which the 1.45 percent Medicare tax is paid would be raised to $100,000.

The liberal proposal dropped provisions in other plans that would raise the tax on gasoline and limit itemized deductions allowed people with incomes over $100,000 a year. Keeping hands off the gas tax appeals to rural lawmakers while those from New York and California especially oppose limiting deductions.

To make up revenue that other plans would get from the gas tax, liberals propose to forgo next year's scheduled inflation adjustments in the tax brackets and personal exemptions.

That would mean higher taxes for everybody who files a return. The least impact would be on those with the highest incomes, who — since they already would be paying the highest rate — face no danger of being pushed by inflation into a higher tax bracket.

Well-to-do tenants on rent strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The host of "Masterpiece Theater," the head of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the former editor of The New Yorker have something in common with some slum-dwellers — they're on a rent strike.

The well-to-do tenants are protesting conditions at their tony Fifth Avenue apartment building overlooking Central Park on the Upper East Side.

The 15-story building, where a doorman stands guard in a black-and-white marble tiled lobby with brass fixtures, floral bouquets and tasteful lithographs, does not resemble the apartment houses in sections of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx where rent strikes are common.

Their plight is not likely to elicit pity from the average New Yorker. In a city where a studio apartment can easily cost $1,000 a month, most tenants at 1150 Fifth Ave. pay less than $2,000 a month for their eight- and nine-room apartments, because their rents are limited under the city's rent-control regulations.

They may not live in squalid tenements overrun with drug dealers, but some residents say they've been forced to live with leaky roofs, bad plumbing and broken elevators for months.

"Everything is ruined," said Lucille Turecki, a divorced mother of two daughters, gesturing to the water-soaked hallway carpets and peeling ceilings in her six-room apartment.

Since March, residents in 45 of the 58 apartments have withheld rent to force the landlord to improve conditions. City housing officials say the building has 66 pending code violations.

Striking tenants include PBS television host Alistair Cooke, former New Yorker editor William Shawn and museum director Philippe de Montebello.

The 96th Street building is being converted into a cooperative and apartments much like those for which some tenants are now paying $1,500 a month are on sale for more than $1.6 million, with monthly maintenance fees of $3,200.

The building's owner, Arnold Goldstein, said the rent strike is a typical ploy tenants use during co-op conversions to force owners to sell them their apartments at lower prices.

"They're paying scandalously low rents," said Goldstein. "The system is wrong if a poor working-class man with a family in the Bronx pays more per square feet than Alistair Cooke. He and his wife are two elderly people rambling around nine rooms and a young working man has to live with his family in three rooms."

Drug firm recalls inhalation solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drug company is recalling three lots of a bronchodialator drug product that may have been packaged in mislabeled cartons, the Food and Drug Administration said Monday.

The product is Metaproterenol Sulfate Inhalation Solution, USP 5 percent. Some bottles of the product may have been packaged in an outer folding carton labeled Carbinoxamine Compound Drops, which is used to treat cough and upper respiratory symptoms associated with allergy or colds in children.

The FDA advised parents who have been prescribed Carbinoxamine Compound Drops that the correct medication is purple in color with a grape flavor and grape odor. It uses a dropper with four distinct graduation lines between ¼ and 1 milliliter.

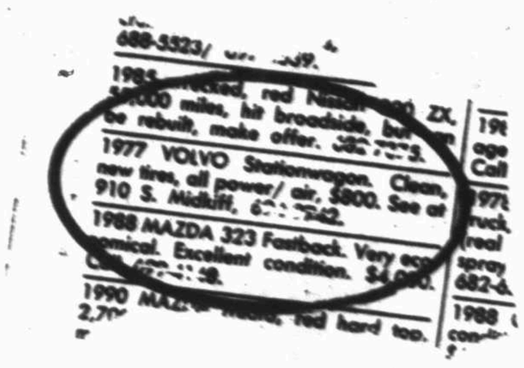

The inhalation solution is pale yellow and its dropper shows measuring lines at 0.2 milliliter and 0.3 milliliter.

If used as pediatric drops in infants, the inhalation solution could cause nervousness, excessively rapid heartbeat, tremor and nausea. It also could cause hypertension, palpitation, vomiting and bad taste.

Both products are made by Pharmaceutical Basics Inc. of Morton Grove, Ill, which issued the recall in cooperation with the FDA.

The recalled lots of Metaproterenol Sulfate Inhalation Solution, USP 5 percent, are numbers 18222K, 18421H and 18421C. Packages of Carbinoxamine Compound Drops with the same lot numbers also are being recalled.

Voters must fill statewide offices

When Texas voters go to the polls to vote in the Nov. 6th general election, they'll be electing top state and local officials including attorney general, state treasurer, comptroller, land commissioner and agriculture commissioner.

Those officials will be responsible for shaping the quality of life in the state in those areas.

Brown best AG choice

J.E. "Buster" Brown spent a decade in the state senate and became known as a tough anti-crime negotiator. He battled for legislation to toughen the penalties for drunk drivers, to make possession of child pornography a crime, to make more information about parole laws available to jurors prior to sentencing, to increase the penalties for drug dealers, to prevent criminal appeals based on technical defects in indictments, and to ease restrictions on oral confessions, among others.

The attorney general is the state's top law enforcement official and a tough, aggressive attorney is needed in that capacity. For years, "Buster" Brown has been preparing himself for the position and says, "I am absolutely dedicated to making Texas the safest place in the nation." We believe him.

Brown's main opponent, former state legislator Dan Morales of San Antonio, is also an anti-crime candidate, but has significantly less actual courtroom experience than Brown.

Voters should cast their ballots for Brown.

Vote for Hutchison

In the race for state treasurer, Kay Bailey Hutchison offers a wealth of experience. As a former two-term state legislator from Dallas, she should be able to work with the Legislature to establish priorities on utilizing the state's credit rating.

Further, she gleaned worthwhile government experience serving as vice-chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board in the late 1970's as an appointee of President Gerald Ford.

The fact that even her former opponents are supporting her election speaks well for the type of campaign Mrs. Hutchison has run. Both San Saba County Judge Tom Bowden and Austin consultant Armando Gutierrez, who finished second and third, respectively, in the Democratic primary have thrown their support to Hutchison.

Texas needs a competent and qualified state treasurer who can help enhance the state's credit standing for the tough economic times ahead. Mrs. Hutchison seems to fill the bill in that regard.

Sharp for comptroller

The invaluable experience gained while serving as a state representative, a state senator and a Railroad Commissioner easily makes John Sharp the most capable and qualified candidate for the office of state comptroller.

While serving on the Railroad Commission Sharp has been a leading proponent of natural gas deregulation and has lobbied for the use of Texas natural gas as an alternative to importing more oil or even greater use of petroleum in a world increasing becoming concerned about the effects of pollution.

John Sharp has proven that he is an effective, fair-minded individual who can make a difference on the Texas political scene. He also has been a favorite of the Texas electorate and as such is one of the Democratic Party's star-performers.

Sharp has earned the right to serve as state comptroller and voters should cast their ballots for him.

Ag post needs change

Jim Hightower was elected Texas' commissioner of agriculture in 1982 and since his first term, farmers have been complaining that he isn't representing their interests. It's well past time for a change.

Rick Perry comes from a farming background, has a bachelor's degree in animal science from Texas A&M and has ranched and farmed. What's more in 1985 he was elected state representative from Haskell, a farming and ranching community near Abilene. Perry knows agriculture and its needs.

Regrettably, he is running not only against a political name but also against political history. Farmers and ranchers in Texas have traditionally backed Democratic candidates, but this time the person who really understands the needs of agriculture in Texas is not a Democrat. It is Republican nominee Rick Perry.

If farmers and ranchers want a commissioner who understands their needs and has the political expertise to promote their products in the 1990's, they'll vote for Perry.

Keep Mauro at GLO

Garry Mauro has done a good job as commissioner of the General Land Office since 1983 — expanding land and loan possibilities for veterans, starting the Texas College Savings Bond Program and working to protect the state's environment through a more active role in preventing and cleaning up oil spills along the Gulf Coast.

Mauro also has worked to expand the use of Texas' natural gas as a clean-air alternative fuel and to use oil-eating microbes to clean up oil spills. His work has been impressive and he such programs as the proposed longterm parkland acquisition program show that he is looking to the state's future.

The commissioner has been roundly criticized for some practices, such as land swaps between the state and private parties and, of course, Mauro's part-time personal legal practice, but now that those practices have been resolved he obviously still can offer the state good management of its land resources.

Voters should re-elect Mauro.

How U.S. could clip Iraqi electronics

WASHINGTON — Top U.S. military commanders in the Pentagon and in Saudi Arabia are considering a nuclear option for war with Iraq — not a nuclear bomb to kill people, but a nuclear bomb to knock out all Iraqi electronic equipment.

Anderson

In the early stages of a war with Iraq, a single, high-altitude detonation of a nuclear bomb would shower the land below with an electronically destructive wave known as electromagnetic pulse, or EMP. If strategically placed, EMP might shut down communications systems, missile-launch systems and any tanks or planes that rely on electronic equipment.

The seriousness of the discussions and the careful analysis going on at the Pentagon mark the first time the United States has so extensively studied the use of EMP against any target smaller than the Soviet Union.

The use of EMP against Iraq has drawbacks. It is a nuclear weapon with radioactive fallout, and it would set a dangerous and short-sighted precedent. The United States is not eager to be the first to use nuclear weapons in the volatile Middle East, a region that is likely to have its own nuclear arsenal in the next decade.

Another thing holding back the strategists is the fact that EMP may not be precise. U.S. weapons and equipment would have to be at least 100 miles away from the target area, or they could be knocked out too.

EMP is no sci-fi fantasy. It is an intense burst of energy that travels at the speed of light and hits electrical circuits with more than 50,000 volts per meter, shorting them out and shutting down all major power facilities.

The effect of EMP was first discovered by American scientists in 1962 when a high-altitude atomic test knocked out street lights and power lines in Hawaii, more than 800 miles away.

Hawaii was spared a total blackout because part of its electrical grid was built on an old vacuum-tube concept, and its telephones used electro-mechanical relays. But today most of the world, including Iraq, has been converted to solid-state electronics with micro-circuits that are sensitive to EMP. One expert report we have seen says solid-state circuitry is "a thousand to a million times more easily damaged by an EMP than the older vacuum-tube technology."

U.S. military scientists have tested and honed the effects of EMP in the lab, but most of the tests were geared toward learning the effect on American electronics if the Soviets used EMP as a weapon against the United States.

One highly classified Joint Chiefs of Staff report we have seen warned that America's own military communications systems would be so thrown out of whack by EMP that the "ability to execute a coordinated strategic nuclear response to attack could become questionable."

The Pentagon has spent billions of dollars hardening the president's "doomsday plane" and other nuclear command posts against EMP. But the research on EMP as an offensive weapon has lagged far behind that for other weapons.

That's why, according to our Pentagon sources, the effect of EMP in a war with Iraq is unknown. Nuclear scientists never considered the use of an EMP blast over an area as small as Iraq and Kuwait. Most of the research applies only to a blast over an entire continent.

NO THANKS TO THE BRASS — When they close the books on the analysis of the U.S. invasion of Panama last year, the success of the venture will be owed more to the courage of American GIs than the leadership of the brass. A top priority of the military action was to nab dictator Manuel Noriega. Yet the brass provided no solid intelligence on his whereabouts. The foot soldiers did their job to liberate the country, but it took the desk jockeys two weeks to figure out where Noriega was and arrest him so he could be brought to trial on drug charges.

MINI-EDITORIAL — A private family-planning advocacy group recently tallied the cost to the federal budget of teen pregnancies. It was nearly $22 billion last year for food stamps, Medicare and other federal aid. About one-third of the teens who have babies end up on some kind of welfare program. For years, more conservative parents have resisted sex education outside the home, but if the needed education is going on inside the home, the message isn't getting through.

Nothing new about a 'New World Order'

Americans should pull their heads out of the sand and think hard before they buy into this New World Order that is being talked about so much in Washington and New York.

There's nothing new about it at all. In fact, it's remarkably similar to what came out of the Congress of Vienna in 1814.

Reese

Basically, Europe's monarchies came together after the fall of Napoleon and decided they had had enough of this revolution nonsense. First it was the pesky Americans and then the French, and who knows where it will stop, they said. Therefore, they decided what the world needed was order and stability.

That meant they just divided up the world and the big powers agreed to beat up on anybody who dared challenge the status quo.

The modern version, as it seeps out of the brains of George Bush and James Baker, is that with Japan and Europe's money and the military power of the United States and the Soviet Union, the rest of the world can be kept in its place, using the United Nations as a cover, and stability as the rhetorical rationalization.

That's why Bush and Baker have decided it is so important to beat up on Saddam Hussein who, like many nationalist leaders, has no intention of being an errand boy for the large industrial countries.

There are several things wrong with this New World Order scheme that American and British wealthy types have been dreaming of since the Paris Peace Conference in 1918.

One is that it is by no means certain at this point that the Soviet Union is ready to play, even though it is pretending to do so. I'm not the only one who believes that the Kremlin crowd has not yet given up its own idea of a New World Order in which only they are the top dog.

Secondly, it is immoral. The United States has no legal or moral standing to appoint itself, alone or in alliance with other bullies, the arbiter of the world's affairs. We have jurisdiction only over the United States and its territories. What other sovereign nations do or don't do is their business, not ours.

Thirdly, the New World Order, as define by Bush and Baker, commits the United States to a continuation of the national security state mentality and to a future with endless wars. The rest of the world's people are not going to consent to being dominated by some trilateral federation, nor should they. It becomes clear now why the think-tanks inside the Beltway, both conservative and liberal, have been grinding out all this garbage about LICs — low intensity conflicts.

Fourth, it endangers the safety of the U.S. These idiots will sacrifice the strategic weapons necessary to defend us against nuclear powers in order to finance the conventional forces necessary to fight colonial wars against people who are no threat to us.

Fifth, it threatens the sovereignty of the United States. I don't know about you, but I am an American. My allegiance is to the Constitution and to the United States of America, not to any international organization, and I will not shift that allegiance.

Furthermore, I have to say plainly that if someone attempts, as many would like to do, to sacrifice the independence of the United States for the sake of a New World Order, then I will rebel. It may be the world's shortest and most ineffective rebellion, but I will not consent to the loss of American independence for which over one million of my countrymen have given their lives. That's where I draw the line in my sand and will take up arms.

Voters forget most recent budget mess

The recent budget mess was about jobs. Not people's jobs, but congressional jobs. This was brought home to me by House member Luke Slowly, who lives down the street. He dropped by the other day with a fistful of polls in his hands.

Buchwald

I had never seen him so depressed.

"This could be the end of the planet Earth as I know it," he told me. "I might be shoveling snow by November."

"You're being too pessimistic. Lots of Congresses have been unable to come up with a budget and have still been returned to office in a landslide."

"But this is the big one. The American people are boiling mad because we couldn't cut $500 billion out of the deficit without causing pain. You should see my mail. They are calling me names that I would only use against my opponent."

"What do the people write?"

"They say that the members of Congress are idiots because half of us wanted to give everything to the poor and the other half wanted to give everything to the rich. It hurts to hear my constituents blame me because all I was trying to do was put the American dream on hold. If I lose the election because of this, the voters will have to live with it for the rest of their lives."

"You are taking a dim view. After all, just because you might lose the election doesn't mean that you're completely worthless."

"That's easy for you to say," Slowly muttered.

"But nobody wants a has-been legislator who can't even get on a local talk show any more."

"Slowly," I said, "you'll still be a valuable asset even though you may be out of a job."

He asked, "What could I do?"

"You could become a lobbyist and fight for what you believe in — for a large fee."

"Every congressman who loses in November is going to become a lobbyist. What have I got to sell the vested interests that they don't have already?"

"You could teach them the art of wheeling and dealing," I told him. "Why not take credit for killing all the new taxes on cigarettes and liquor?"

Slowly responded, "But they weren't killed!"

"Who's going to know that? The only ones who will be aware of the taxes are the smokers and the drinkers, and since it's a sin tax, they will be happy to pay it. My advice is to print up cards and call yourself 'Across-the-Board Slowly.' You'll have all the business you can handle."

"Lord knows I was in favor of balancing the budget, but I won't do it on the backs of the American people. I am known for my compassion. I never promised anyone 'blood, sweat and tears.' The president did, but he had no idea how his compromise was going to affect the elections. He talked budget; we talked votes."

"I wonder if Bush will be out of a job in 1992?" I said.

"The people are pretty mad at all of us. It seems to me that the public would feel a lot better tossing out a president rather than a congressman."

"Slowly, one of the newspapers reported that you voted your conscience. Is that true?"

Slowly bristled, "I've never voted my conscience in my life. I always vote the way I'm told. That's why I'm known in the House as 'Go-With-the-Flow Slowly.' "

WORLD

As apartheid dismantled, whites seeking loopholes

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A major apartheid law that barred blacks from public facilities for decades was formally scrapped Monday, but right-wing whites planned to exploit loopholes to maintain segregation.

In a separate development, police said factional fighting left eight blacks dead as rival groups battled with pistols and knives at a migrant workers hostel in Kempton Park, east of Johannesburg.

The Sunday night battle was the worst single incident since relative calm was restored to the black townships around Johannesburg three weeks ago.

The demise of the Separate Amenities Act, a pillar of South Africa's apartheid system, did not have noticeable effects in major cities, where libraries, parks, buses, swimming pools, toilets and other facilities have been integrated in recent years.

But in smaller towns controlled by the right-wing Conservative Party, confrontations were expected between blacks and whites opposed to the change.

In the town of Middelburg, east of Johannesburg, white residents voted to close all public facilities rather than open them to all races.

Other towns planned to charge exorbitant fees for "non-residents." Most of the people living inside town limits are white, while blacks are forced to live outside the town boundaries under remaining apartheid laws that segregate neighborhoods.

For example, the town of Bethal planned to charge an annual fee of $200 to non-residents wishing to use the public library.

Conservative Party member of Parliament Ferdi Hartzenberg said the move to scrap the Separate Amenities Act "destroyed a considerable part of white people's own community life."

Anti-apartheid leaders urged blacks to begin using facilities and threatened strikes and boycotts against towns trying to maintain segregation.

"Entry to public facilities must be unconditional and free. What these councils are planning is an illegal act of banditry," said African National Congress official Joe Nkuna.

Hernus Kriel, federal minister of planning and provincial affairs, warned that towns trying to circumvent the change may face legal action.

Parliament repealed the Separate Amenities Act in June and gave communities until Oct. 15 to comply. The National Party, which has ruled South Africa since 1948, approved the act in 1953 as part of its strict segregation politices.

But since President F.W. de Klerk took office in August 1989 he has instituted a number of racial reforms, released black leaders such as Nelson Mandela, and opened talks with the ANC to negotiate a new constitution giving the black majority a share of power.

The recent violence in townships around Johannesburg has strained relations between the government and the ANC, the leading black opposition movement.

But de Klerk, who returned from a trip to Portugal and Britain on Monday, said, "certain tensions will arise from time to time."

Beirut's 'Green Line' now falling

By Mohammed Salem
Associated Press Writer

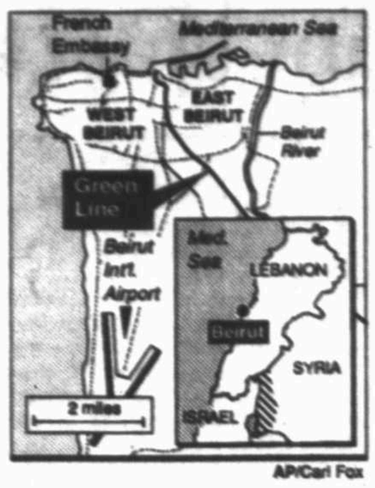

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Elias Hrawi started dismantling Beirut's dividing Green Line on Monday to unify what he hopes will be a militia-free capital after the defeat of rebel Gen. Michel Aoun.

Government bulldozers removed mounds of earth, rocks and other obstacles from the Galerie Semaan crossing, on the highway linking Moslem south Beirut with the Christian suburbs of Hazmiyeh and Baabda.

Motorists then drove across the intersection, waving their hands to helmeted Lebanese soldiers and honking their horns in jubilation.

Lebanese and Syrian army engineering units removed mines from the intersection Saturday, when Syrian and Lebanese troops advanced behind a curtain of heavy air and artillery shelling to end Aoun's rebellion.

Syrian and Lebanese troops crushed Aoun's 11-month mutiny in an eight-hour assault Saturday that killed 160 and wounded 800.

AP/Carl Fox

Aoun remained in refuge in the French Embassy for the third day Monday, with Lebanon insisting that he face trial on a variety of charges, including the theft of state funds.

In Paris, French President Francois Mitterrand said he would reject any Lebanese request to hand Aoun over. Scores of his supporters occupied Lebanon's embassy in Paris and its consulate in Marseille, demanding Aoun's safe passage to France.

Aoun began his mutiny in November 1989 after rejecting an Arab League-brokered peace plan to end Lebanon's 15-year-old civil war and calling Hrawi a Syrian puppet. The peace plan provides for the traditionally dominant Christians to share power with the Moslem majority.

Syrian forces arrested six of Aoun's top lieutenants, including his chief of military intelligence, Col. Amer Chehab. They were interrogating them at the Lebanese Defense Ministry, which was seized from Aoun's troops.

The Galerie Semaan crossing was flooded with cars less than 30 minutes after the army command of Gen. Emile Lahoud declared it "safe" for civilian traffic.

Lebanese army engineering units were removing mines from areas along Beirut's five-mile Green Line in preparation for dismantling it.

The Green Line, which has divided Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors since the outbreak of the civil war, was torn down in the early days of former President Amin Gemayel's term in office in September 1982.

However, Moslem and leftist gunmen regained their positions along the line when they ousted Gemayel's Christian-led army from Beirut's Moslem sector in a bloody confrontation in February 1984.

"The Green Line is expected to be totally dismantled in a week or so," said the police spokesman, speaking anonymously in line with regulations.

Dismantling the Green Line would be the first step toward the creation of a militia-free "Greater Beirut" extending 22 miles along the Mediterranean coast and covering the capital's nearby suburbs at the foothills of the central mountains.

The major obstacles are the presence of Christian, Shiite and Druse militias in that territory.

Shamir accuses world community of hypocrisy

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Monday accused the world of hypocrisy, ignoring murders of Israelis while condemning Israel for killing 19 Palestinians in Jerusalem last week.

He also warned Iraq in a speech to Parliament that any intervention in neighboring Jordan that upset Jordanian stability would bring swift Israeli retaliation.

Shamir defended his Cabinet's rejection Sunday of a U.N. Security Council resolution urging a U.N. investigation of the Oct. 8 deaths on the Temple Mount.

Israel defied the United States on a second issue, announcing a new housing plan for Soviet immigrants that ignores American pleas not to settle the wave of newly arrived Soviets in occupied territory.

Six of eight new residential communities announced Sunday are to be in east Jerusalem on territory captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war and annexed.

America and most other nations do not recognize Israel's annexation. The Bush administration this year approved $400 million in loan guarantees for housing the Soviets on condition it not be used beyond the 1967 line.

Sunday's decision was designed to reinforce Israel's claims to the city.

"The heart of the Jewish people needs to expand faster," said Housing Minister Ariel Sharon. "There is no better answer to the political dangers than strengthening the Jewish population."

Left-wing parties on Monday attacked the Cabinet action regarding a U.N. mission. The largest opposition faction, the center-left Labor Party, said it would join a no-confidence vote against Shamir's conservative government.

Shamir, reacting to the Security Council condemnation, said critics ignored that police charged the Mount only after Palestinians unleashed a barrage of stones at Jewish worshipers at the adjacent Western Wall.

"The citizens of Israel and all Jews everywhere cannot but be astonished and protest at the voices of criticism ... in which what stood out was an absence of any mention of the grave attack on the Jewish people's holiest place," he said.

Shamir complained that the Security Council failed to respond in any way to the murders of 16 Israeli tourists in two attacks in Egypt, one in 1985 by a deranged Egyptian policeman and another last February by unidentified gunmen.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

America now caught up in Middle Eastern labyrinth

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

PARIS — When President Bush ordered American forces to the Persian Gulf following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in August, it looked like a clear response to clear aggression. Nothing could have been simpler or less ambiguous.

But as recent events in Israel and Lebanon have shown, the massive U.S. military deployment against Iraq has entangled America as never before in a dense labyrinth of Middle East politics, winding tortuously well beyond the confines of the Gulf.

"Most labyrinths, no matter how complex, lead to an exit somewhere," as Edouard Boukany, a political specialist on the region, warned not long ago. "In the Middle East, there's none."

Two developments demonstrate how much more the United States bit off when it rose to the challenge of Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein than Bush and his advisers may have realized at the time.

One development was America's vote in the United Nations Security Council to condemn Israel for its handling of the Temple Mount incident in Jerusalem 10 days ago in which more than a score of Arabs were killed.

Syria's destruction last weekend of the Christian Lebanese enclave in Beirut was the second event pointing to the unexpected complications which now confront American policy makers in the Middle East.

Whatever the Israeli police's responsibility for the heavy casualties in the Temple Mount riot, few international observers doubt the U.S. vote of condemnation stemmed mainly from a perceived need to placate the Arab coalition that Bush has erected against Iraq.

"What America's UN vote says to the Middle East," the London Times declared, "is that Bush has become the hostage of his Arab allies."

If Syria felt confident enough finally to wipe out Gen. Michel Aoun's Christian redoubt in Beirut with a pulverizing air and artillery assault after two years of inconclusive skirmishing, it was because, as a member of the anti-Iraq coalition, Syrian leader Hafez Assad believed he could count on tacit acquiescence by the West, including the United States.

The Lebanese Christians' fatal propensity for feuding among themselves admittedly caused western sympathizers to lose patience and to regard their fate with relative indifference.

In cobbling together an alliance against Hussein, America has unwittingly put the Middle East's other expansionist dictator on the road to fulfilling his dreams.

"By defeating Hussein with Assad on our side," a skeptical French diplomat remarked, "we're likely to find ourselves in roughly the same position we were after defeating Hitler with Stalin on our side.

"Just as the Soviets did, it will be the Syrians who garner the greatest political and territorial dividends from victory."

Fears, not supplies, fuel fluctuations in oil price

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Recent rises in oil prices stem solely from fears of a war, not a supply shortage, Kuwait's oil minister said Monday. Analysts said Saudi Arabia, whose reserves have risen dramatically in the past year, will probably help prevent severe price shocks during a war.

The oil minister for the exiled Kuwaiti government, Rashid al-Ameeri, said at a news conference that oil prices would increase in the event of hostilities. But he said they would not skyrocket to $100 a barrel, as predicted recently by a former Saudi oil minister, Ahmeed Zaki Yamani.

Ameeri spoke in the Saudi capital, where his government-in-exile has been established since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

A U.S.-led multinational force has been deployed to Saudi Arabia in response to the Iraqi aggression, and the stand-off is entering its 11th week.

A trade embargo meant to force Iraq out of Kuwait has cut off four million barrels per day of oil exports from Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Industry experts noted Saudi Arabia, which sits on a third of the world's proven oil reserves, would exert itself to stabilize the market. The Saudis already have been instrumental in offsetting the shortfall in the oil market resulting from the invasion of Kuwait.

The kingdom increased its own output by about two million barrels per day to 7.5 million barrels, and convinced other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel to increase their output.

In addition, Saudi oil officials refer to the four strikes made between June 1989 and April 1990 in a previously untapped central region of the kingdom. During that period, official estimates of the kingdom's proven reserves jumped by about 50 percent to 252 billion barrels.

Cheney said U.S. ready for 'long haul'

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney on Monday said Washington is prepared for a "long haul" in the gulf and Americans are willing to keep troops deployed there for years.

At a news conference after talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Cheney rejected the notion of a quick strike or any deadline for sanctions to force Iraq from Kuwait.

British Defense Secretary Tom King also said his nation is prepared to keep forces in the gulf indefinitely.

Cheney arrived in Britain on Sunday at the start of a 10-day European tour to discuss the gulf crisis. He goes to Moscow on Tuesday and then to Paris.

"No one should make the mistake of assuming this is the kind of operation which will be over in a very short period of time," said Cheney. "The United States is prepared for the long haul if that is what it takes to get the job done."

"The pressure is going to tell," King said. "It was never going to be a quick fix, a two-week wonder."

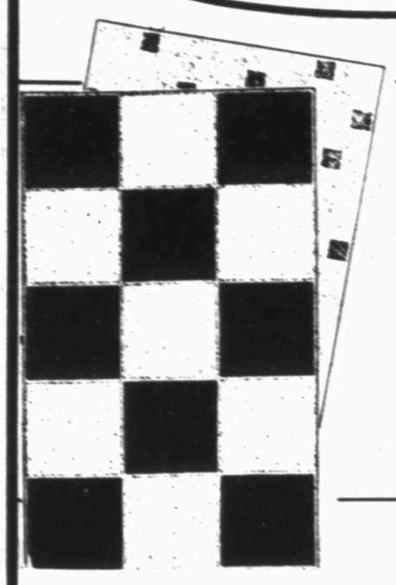

But Cheney said he was certain sanctions were working.

Teachers' advocate enthralled with being at controls of plane

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Kay Walling is one female pilot who usually has both feet firmly planted on the ground, so to speak.

The petite 38-year-old brunette is bubbly, but attentive, opinionated, but informed and open-minded, yet unwavering in her decisions. While those qualities may sound conflicting, Ms. Walling manages to balance them in such a manner that makes her appealing to other pilots and education professionals.

Whether in the courtroom or in the pilot's seat of a Cessna 1-72, Ms. Walling handles the toughest situations with aplomb, and does so in such a way to make those around her feel at ease.

As the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) UniServ representative, Ms. Walling serves as a teacher advocate for educators in both Midland and Odessa. She lives in Odessa, but maintains a Midland office.

When organizing workshops for teachers, Ms. Walling doesn't stop with just overseeing the necessary arrangements to bring a speaker to Midland/Odessa. If the speaker has transportation problems or time constraints, she has been known to fly out in the wee hours of the

Two new assistant DAs committed to community

■ While one of the county's new assistant district attorneys has never prosecuted a case before, the other newcomer was on Al Schorre's staff in the mid-1980s.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

George Patterson, a 44-year-old Midland County assistant district attorney, has never prosecuted a case.

Not that he doesn't want to.

"I want to contribute as much as I can as soon as I can," said Patterson, who joined the district attorney's office in September.

After 20 years as a corporate attorney dealing primarily with oil and gas law, Patterson decided it was time to fulfill a longtime dream: criminal prosecution.

"I had no prosecuting experience," he said. "It's something I've always wanted to do ... I was attracted by the challenge of it, the opportunity to learn a completely different area of the law."

Patterson quit his job at Texaco a year ago because he didn't want to accept a transfer to Denver. After several months of itinerant corporate work, he applied to District Attorney Al Schorre for a job.

Schorre said Patterson, despite his lack of trial experience, promises to be an asset to the prosecution staff.

"It's always nice to have someone who has an extensive background in civil litigation," Schorre said. "Particularly when we're dealing with white collar crimes, etc."

Chuck Roades, another recent addition to Schorre's prosecutorial staff, said the district attorney's office needs attorneys like Patterson.

"George brings a lot of maturity to this job," he said. "A lot of these judgments call for maturity — you have to size people up. It shouldn't be an internship for law school graduates."

Roades, who joined Schorre's staff in August, is no stranger to either prosecution or the Midland Coun-

Lamesa's memories, history reflected at Dal-Paso Museum

LAMESA — While the old Dal-Paso Hotel has faded into the past along with Lamesa's chicken-fried-steak story, its memory has been updated into the present by the Dal-Paso Museum.

Certainly, the museum doesn't tell all but reflects enough to whet the interest in hotels and cafes.

For instance, museum promoters bill the old hotel as, more or less, resplendent — the finest hostelry between Dallas and El Paso.

"It was supposed to be the best hotel between Dallas and El Paso," said Wayne Smith, a Dawson County historian and a museum-board member. "But I don't know if it was. Each town had something that was supposed to be the best of whatever."

With Lamesa, a town imbedded in cotton and now working well into oil, the best inn around was

New law geared toward improving nursing home care

■ The new law regulates use of physical and chemical restraints and the number of staff members.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Local authorities are calling the Federal Nursing Home Reform Law, which went into effect Oct. 1, the most sweeping change in nursing home care in 20 years.

The law, part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (OBRA) of 1987, reaffirms a patient's rights as an elderly person in a nursing home and implements regulations that should improve care in facilities receiving Medicaid and Medicare refunds, officials say.

New OBRA requirements include decreasing the use of physical and chemical restraints in nursing homes, unless the patient's doctor has specifically ordered them; assessing the "whole person," not just the medical history of patients on admission; increasing staff numbers and tightening certification for nurse aides.

Bob Stokes, the ombudsman for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission's Area Agency on Aging, said he was pleased with the nationwide changes.

"Overall, the laws are good," he said. "But we're going to have problems with the increased staffing due to a lack of nurses and nurse aides in West Texas."

The law mandates that each home have at least one licensed vocational nurse on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and a registered nurse on duty during day shifts.

OBRA stipulates that prospective nurse aides pass a minimum 75-hour training and competency testing program before being placed on a statewide registry of certified nurse aides.

Stokes also expressed concern that families of nursing home patients would not understand the restraint limitation law.

"Apparently some places in the nation, individuals were being restrained because the nursing home didn't have the staff to supervise them; restraints were used for the convenience of the staff, not the necessity of the patient," he said.

Under the OBRA regulation, the doctor, the nursing home, the patient and his family will discuss the use of physical restraints or drugs to confine the patient before implementing them, Stokes said.

Stokes praised the new national assessment policy that will be used to develop a plan of care for the patient within four days of admission to the home. Patients must also be reviewed annually.

OBRA requires the home to "provide services to attain or maintain the highest practicable physical, mental and psychosocial well-being of each resident."

"It's a total care package for the total person, not just a medical assessment," Stokes said.

To provide holistic care, nursing homes with more than 120 beds will have to hire a full-time social worker. A medical director on staff and increased physician involvement are included in the OBRA laws.

"Under this law, the nursing home will have to depend on the community to get more involved with the facility for providing the social aspect of the care," Stokes added.

He said the only negative aspect he saw in the mandated regula-

Engineer says Dresser 'shorted' Parker & Parsley

■ Oil company claims that they were cheated in the materials used in fracturing oil wells.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A consulting engineer for Parker & Parsley Petroleum Company testified in federal court on Monday that Dresser Industries "shorted" the company on downhole materials, sand and chemicals, used in fracturing oil wells in the Spraberry Oil Field in the 1980s.

"They were shorted — no question in my mind about that," the engineer, Preston Moore of Norman, Okla., testified under examination by Parker & Parsley's Dallas lawyer, Jerry Jones.

The Midland-based oil company is seeking more than $100 million in lost production and $20 million for fracturing work on 523 oil and natural gas wells from 1983 to 1988.

Moore claimed that Dresser, which in 1983 was fairly new in fracing, used about a third less sand, jell and chemicals in fracing — breaking up tight formations to release oil, to increase permeability and to yield greater production.

"They hauled less sand to the jobs than was ordered," said Moore, who based his claims on 1983-88 studies he had made on the fracing of Parker & Parsley wells. "Some of the acid was diluted. The buffer (in cases) was left out."

Instead of the 450,000 pounds of Brady sand ordered by Parker & Parsley, the Dallas-based Dresser would haul in 350,000 pounds but would invoice for 450,000 pounds, Moore said.

Even so, "I don't think that any of us know from time to time what is the optimum frac amount" to produce the highest oil yield, he testified.

Dresser Industries, which Moore termed a "name-brand" service company "on the order of Halliburton" and which is "respected the world over," brings "expertise to the table."

Production companies often use "brand-name" companies, Moore said, "even though they could get the job done cheaper by independents."

By practice, Parker & Parsley engineers ask fracing company representatives for advice on the optimum types and amounts of materials to send downhole under high pressure. "But it's up to Parker & Parsley," Moore said. "If you frac in the wrong zone, you might not get any oil."

Dresser got into the fracing business in 1981 when it bought Cardinal Chemical Company, a small fracing company in Midland. In 1984, Dresser went into joint ventures with BJ Services of Houston as BJ-Titan. Two years ago, in 1988, Dresser sold its fracing interests to Hughes Tool Company of Houston. By that time, Hughes had merged with BJ Services to form BJ-Hughes.

LAMESA: Museum reflects memories

the downtown hotel.

"The lobby was the meeting place in town," said Lois Merrick, a museum booster.

The hotel lobby and the adjoining drug store were forums for exchanging "social news" — gossip — from in town and from the cotton patch which, in Dawson County, is pretty big.

The Western Union office was there. The bus station was at hand.

From time to time, the old hotel held physician offices and barber chairs. Rooms were upstairs.

Some rooms had private baths. For guests in other rooms, the tubs and showers were "down the hall," Mrs. Merrick noted.

Guests ranged from inside and outside the community: cowboys, ranchers, cotton buyers, barkers, hawkers, baseball players, and, in the 1930s, Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) workers.

By mid-century, about the time the rural schools in the communities began to fall victim to good roads and school buses, the old hotel fell victim to motels, which became travelers' convenient way station, the telephone, and the television, which seemed to make folks less sociable.

By the 1960s, the hotel, which was losing its well-heeled and fairly middling clientele, was taking in other roomers: laborers working mostly in the cotton fields.

Eventually, the hotel fell into neglect, abandonment, deterioration and virtual ruination.

"It just had fallen into disuse," recalled Mrs. Merricks.

"The thing was just sitting there," said Smith. "It was deteriorating. It was downtown and highly visible.'

Downtown Lamesa, like many downtowns across America, was on the economic slide. Many business were moving away from the courthouse square.

In 1982, about 25 community leaders got together on preserving the old hotel building and "kind of kicked the idea around," said Smith. "It was such an eyesore by the way it had deteriorated."

The philanthropic Mabee Foundation agreed to fund $100,000 toward restoration if the community would raise $150,000, said Smith. The community put up $180,000. Renovation began in 1984. Museum artifacts, formerly in an old mail-order house that was shipped in by rail, were moved in. And the Dal-Paso Museum was opened in late 1987 at a 1920s flapper-type party.

Today, the museum reflects the origin of Lamesa: from 1905 when the community battled, at the voting boxes, with neighboring Chicago on which community would be the county seat.

Lamesa won.

Museum displays depicts Lamesa's and Dawson County's foremost enterprise: cotton farming, picking, pulling, stripping, ginning, grading, shipping.

Ranching is highlighted.

Petroleum, for Dawson County, is a late-comer.

Now-faded communities, including Sparenberg, are celebrated. Throughout the years, Dawson County had 42 independent community schools and 31 at one time, Smith said. Now there are four: Klondike at Patricia, Sands at Ackerly, Dawson at Welch, and Lamesa at Lamesa.

The museum includes Indian artifacts from the edge of the Caprock.

The Henningsen dried-egg plant, one of Lamesa's contributions to the war effort, is remembered. Mrs. Merrick's mother, Olene, worked a shift there; her father farmed.

Back then, in World War II, Lamesa was site of a U.S. Army glider pilot-training school.

Mrs. Merrick, then just a girl, would drop by on weekends and watch the gliders — the "silent wings" — take off and land.

And then, more myth than truth, is another story, which trumped-up legend says that Lamesa in 1911 became home of the original chicken-fried steak.

Except, as it turned out, the story turned out to be only a story.

An Austin writer, seeking an article to appease an editor, drummed up a figment, a short-order cook named Jimmy Don Perkins, at Ethel's Home Cooking eatery.

Jimmy Don couldn't read so well, the writer wrote. So when he got the waitress' written order, "chicken, fried steak," the cook took it as one order, not two, and battered and fried a beef steak.

Later, the story goes, Jimmy Don was fired in a dispute over the affections of a waitress, turned to drinking and died.

"It was kind of an off-the-wall story," Smith figured. But most people believed the tale, it seemed, and hailed Lamesa as "home of the chicken-fried steak."

"That just shows the power of the press," Smith said.

Years later, there was a retraction. And people, particularly those in cafes, ceased linking Lamesa with chicken-fried steaks.

"He (the writer) had a good sense of humor," Smith reasoned. "Anytime you put something in print, people tend to give it some authenticity."

Aubrey Davis, a retired schoolteacher who is the museum's coordinator of docents and who, once in his boyhood, pulled 1,000 pounds of cotton at 30 cents a hundredweight in one day, figured the story has its place in the museum: "It makes good conversion piece."

WALLING: Flying enthralls teachers' advocate morning and pick them up.

"When the regional TSTA manager wanted to see the area, flying sure came in handy," Ms. Walling said. "We flew to San Angelo, Lubbock, Pecos, Synder and Alpine. Flying not only gave him a good idea of the size of the area, but by saving driving time, he was able to spend an hour or two with the local leaders at each stop."

Ms. Walling said she became enthralled with flying at an early age. "My father was a fighter pilot in World War II," she said. "He kept flying after the war and later was a crop duster." She still has a cap and goggles (carefully wrapped in cloth) which her father wore in WWII. "I only wear them in an open-cockpit," Ms. Walling said. "Otherwise the propeller wash blows my hair in my face."

Ms. Walling's no-nonsense attitude also carries over to flying. "I guess you could say I'm a conservative pilot," she said, since she will only fly in the best weather conditions.

"My father has often said, 'Watch out for the weather, it will bite you,' or, 'Watch out for those clouds. They have rocks in them' — meaning to use caution when flying near mountains," Ms. Walling said.

When the weather turns bad, Ms. Walling said deciding whether or not to fly is usually "a judgment call."

"If I can go around a thunderstorm, I will," she said. "If there is a whole line of thunderstorms then I will stay on the ground." Not one to sit idly by when grounded, Ms. Walling uses the time to do needlework.

On a recent sunny day, Ms. Walling rented a Cessna 1-72 from Roadrunner Aviation at Schlemeyer Field in Odessa and gave a morning flying lesson to a student.

"I love days like this, when you can take off at one place and see the next place before you land," Ms. Walling said.

"I don't like flying in the afternoon," she added. "Once it gets hot, all those thermals rising and updrafts make for a real bumpy ride."

Once in the airplane, her penchant for organization becomes obvious as she requests maps and pencils from a passenger. Without ever glancing back from the pilot's seat, Ms. Walling could request an item from a particular pocket of her briefcase or an area of the plane knowing exactly where it was neatly tucked.

Ms. Walling said she flies about 75 hours a year. "It's an expensive hobby," she said.

After teaching for 14 years, she said her other hobby — lobbying and getting involved in political action in the teaching profession — became her career once she took the TSTA job in Midland almost two years ago.

Her duties include associate training, encouraging site-based decision making for teachers and implementing other concepts outlined in Senate Bill 1, developing the appraisal instrument which will be used in appraising teachers for the career ladder and organizing various workshops to benefit students as well as teachers.

She also intervenes to resolve conflicts and files grievances. "Even professionals are going to have their differences," she said. "But there is no reason not to resolve differences positively in a win-win situation."

Although she is now single, Ms. Walling said she has her cat to keep her company. Named "Trooper," short for paratrooper, Ms. Walling said her cat is so-named because he likes to "climb up to the highest point he can find and launch himself into space."

Trooper has yet to fly in the Cessna alongside his owner. But Ms. Walling's young nieces have all been aboard. "They make ideal passengers," Ms. Walling said. "I just set their car seats on the seat and buckle them in. Once we get airborne they fall asleep."

Ms. Walling has one six-month-old niece who hasn't been aboard the Cessna. "She hasn't been flying ... yet," she says, with a gleam in her eye.

OBRA: Law reforms nursing home care

tions was that some nursing homes would feel like the added expense was forced upon them.

"It will cost more money, but they'll cause such a drastic change that it will be worth it," Stokes said.

Connie Skrivanek, the associate general counsel for Texas Health Enterprises, which owns Terrace Gardens and Terrace West nursing centers in Midland, described the regulations as "excellent."

"Anyone who's in this industry is there to take care of the elderly," she said. "Yes, it's a money-making business, but we wouldn't do it if we didn't care. While the regulations have changed, our standard of care is always high," Ms. Skrivanek said.

She approved of the legislation's enhanced protection of senior citizens' rights. "This will carry over into every aspect of care," she said.

Linda Cudd, the acting administrator of Terrace West, said implementation of the laws has been straightforward.

"We haven't had much trouble," she said. "With the restraints off, we've had more patients falling, but it's working well once they get used to not having them."

She said the biggest expense of the program was hiring a social worker, "but that's working out well for the residents and the families."

Laura Lyons, the administrator of Trinity Towers Retirement Center, had mixed feelings about the regulations, which do not affect her not-for-profit private facility.

"The nurse aide training is wonderful, but the evaluation requirements don't give the home enough time in four days to make a patient's plan of care," she said. "Anything less than a couple of weeks is not appropriate."

"I personally feel that there's a lot of good intentions and requirements for positive change and that OBRA will do a lot toward making the industry more professional, but some of it is not thought through," Ms. Lyons said.

William Saxton, chief executive director of Trinity Towers and Manor Park, added that part of the new admissions process disqualifies patients with mental retardation and mental illness, except for Alzheimer's disease, from nursing home residency.

"Several states are trying to oppose the requirements because of the MHMR problem," Saxton said. "Where will those people go?"

For OBRA to work for residents, Medicaid reimbursement rates will have to rise, said Sandy Durrow, president of the Texas Association of Homes for the Aging, an Austin-based group that represents 120 not-for-profit facilities in the state.

The law requires the states to raise rates to compensate for the new requirements' costs. The federal government estimates that $700 million in state and federal Medicaid payments will cover OBRA's expenses.

"My guess is those figures are low," said Derrow. "In Texas, for this fiscal year, the agencies are estimating $100 million.

"About half of that will be for higher reimbursement to providers and the other half in state agency expenditures. But if those dollars get translated into better care for our elderly population, then they'll be dollars well spent."

DA: New assistants committed to Midland

ty District Attorney's office.

He was an assistant district attorney here from 1984 to 1987 before going to work for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and, later, a San Angelo tax collection firm.

"We're always tickled when we can talk him into coming back," Schorre said of Roades, who replaces Hoot Gibson on the eight-member prosecutorial staff. Patterson replaces Randy Fluke, who left in July to take a job with the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Schorre said Roades and Patterson both fit the profile of successful prosecutors: Experienced lawyers who are "genuinely motivated to protect the community against felony offenders."

Roades, 40, said that while the pay is better in corporate practice, nothing compares with the excitement of criminal law, or the gratification of protecting the community.

"The subject matter is human drama instead of paper," said Roades, a 1980 graduate of South Texas Law School in Houston. "This involves murder, rape, mayhem and stealing — the stuff that television dramas are made of."

He said that although prosecution is a noble pursuit, the job's rewards are mostly "psychic."

"You're a public servant and you get paid like one," he said. "It's a very important job in the community and the (county) commissioners ought to have a program that rewards experience and pays for it."

The starting salary for an assistant district attorney in Midland is $25,740. Prosecutors with five or more years of experience can make up to $41,808 a year.

Patterson, a 20-year Midland resident with a wife and two children, said he was attracted by the service aspect of the prosecutor's job.

"You get an overall sense of community you don't get working for a company," he said. "I know that in the two jury trials I've had occasion to participate in...I got a sense of satisfaction out of the results."

And while he has yet to try a criminal case on his own, Patterson said he is already experiencing some of the frustration which seems common among prosecutors.

Patterson and Roades said the state's lack of prison space means much of a prosecutor's work is for naught.

"The prison end of the system right now is not working very well," Roades said. "There is a sense of futility in your work, knowing that those criminals won't spend anywhere near the time they should spend in prison."

He said that in addition to not keeping prisoners for their full sentences, the state fails to provide adequate treatment for imprisoned drug offenders.

"The prison system needs some sort of drug rehabilitation program," he said. "I feel like we're doing our part to punish those who violate our drug laws. What's frustrating to me is that I don't know if our prison system works very well in treating these people."

Patterson, who earned his law degree at Baylor University in Waco, said his frustration with the system is tempered by sadness over burgeoning crime rates in this country.

"I am real concerned that as a country we accept crime rates that 10 or 20 years ago would have been unthinkable," he said. "We accept drug use...and we accept all these things that people shouldn't have to accept."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Drug arrests

Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force and Midland Police Department's Drug Interdiction Team arrested two Hobbs, N.M., men on drug charges Monday, Task Force Commander Tom Finley said.

Acting on a tip, the officers arrested Johnny Hamilton, 21, and Thomas Quintana, 20, at 4:15 p.m. on County Road 1788, one mile north of Highway 80 as they drove towards Hobbs.

Officers confiscated a quarter-pound of a substance believed to be powdered methamphetamine, Finley said.

A third man, who was driving the car when the officers made their bust, was not arrested because he was not aware that he was transporting drugs, he said.

Finley said the task force and the MPD team had been working on the case with the Hobbs Police Department.

Quintana and Hamilton are being held in the Midland County Jail on twin charges of possession of a controlled substance.

Venue change

ODESSA — A change of venue has been granted for the trial of Jose and Ninefa Castillo, the parents of Gloria Castillo, 8, whose strangled body was found April 21, a week after her mysterious disappearance, according to Ector County officials.

The case was scheduled to come up today in Ector County Court before the change of venue was granted. The trial is being moved to Austin but a date has not yet been set, according to an official for the Ector County Attorney's Office.

The Castillos face misdemeanor charges of abuse of a corpse for allegedly moving the girl's body after her death, and allegedly making false reports to the Ector County Sheriff's Department concerning the girl's disappearance.

Suspect identified

ODESSA — A 19-year-old Odessa man arrested Sunday in connection with an early Saturday morning murder has been identified as Steven Flores Garcia, 1206 Drury Lane, police officials said.

Garcia remained in jail Monday under a $150,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace E.H. Hendrick.

Garcia was arrested in connection with the shooting death of Raul Herrera, 22, of Odessa. Herrera was found in the parking lot of the Lambada Club located at 5th and Hancock streets suffering from three gunshot wounds at about 1:40 a.m. Saturday.

OIL: Parker & Parsley claims it was cheated

(From 1B)

Moore said Parker & Parsley trusted Dresser.

"I think trust plays an important part in all transactions," Moore said. "There's no such thing as 'blind trust.' I think Parker & Parsley trusted them completely."

Under cross-examination by BJ-Titan's attorney, Ronald Secrest of Houston, Moore admitted that "Parker & Parsley's company man supervises the frac job."

But Moore questioned the lawyer: "Are you supposed to catch somebody cheating?"

In perusing company records and depositions, Moore said that "every fact I read said 'They cheated.' "

Under cross-examination by Dresser's attorney, Christopher Pappas of Houston, Moore said Parker & Parsley field engineers, including Danny Kellum, trusted the fracing company.

"If believing them and not catching them cheating, then I was wrong," Moore said.

Parker & Parsley is to present its case this week before a civil jury in U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court. Next week, Dresser is to present its defense in the litigation.

Parker & Parsley witness Michael Hyman, who had worked as a service engineer for Cardinal Chemical Company and later for BJ-Titan after Dresser contracted the frac work for Parker & Parsley, testified that the supplies ordered "did not match" the sand and chemicals delivered to the well site.

"There wasn't quite enough there," said Hyman, who lives in Odessa.

He noted repeated instances of the discrepancy.

"I said something about it to another treater on location," Hyman said.

Hyman said that most of the "skimping" on fracturing occurred in treating the "lower" Spraberry formations.

"Did they (Parker & Parsley) appear to you to trust you?" asked Jones.

"Yes," replied Hyman.

In his job reports, Hyman said that "whatever they had typewritten in there" on the materials delivered to the well site was what he reported as, in fact, delivered for use in fracing even if the amounts conflicted.

"I think more than anything," Hyman said, "it was laziness on my part. I'm not trying to figure out what's what or what's not."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look for greater personal fulfillment and job satisfaction in the months ahead. Romance and travel will make December one of the most exciting months of 1990. Your business interests will widen by February 1991, bringing significant monetary rewards. Always gregarious and hospitable, you will make some wonderful friends next April. A class reunion next summer puts you in touch with an old pal. Plan a special trip for your family.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: basketball star Dave DeBusschere, actresses Angela Lansbury and Suzanne Somers, poet Oscar Wilde.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid taking chances where your savings are concerned. Keep your money where you know it is safe. Luck enters the romantic picture through a social introduction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel may be part of your plans. Financial pressures should be off for a while. Discoveries made through reading and conversation set an important matter straight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your mate or partner realizes your true feelings now. Better communication will ease your financial concerns. News about a festive occasion strikes a pleasant note. Be more outgoing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A minor change at work will increase your responsibilities. Greater financial rewards are in the offing. Teamwork is favored. Luck and good timing will improve a romantic situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Share your dreams and goals; others are willing and able to help you! You may feel especially vulnerable or nostalgic later today. Plan a relaxing evening at home. Romance flourishes on consideration.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although your associates may not agree with all your ideas, they are supportive. Teamwork will boost profits. Influential person is impressed by your talents. A raise or new position is possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A surprise gift could change your whole outlook today. Romance will be especially happy for someone who has been feeling left out. Focus your attention on family matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your workload may lighten now. If so, find time for amusement and romance. Adopt a more nurturing approach to your co-workers. A young person you know would make a good mother's helper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A change of scenery is advised. If outdoor activities beckon you, try to finish your work early. Happily, your powers of concentration are at a peak. Admiring glances will come your way!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day for finalizing business negotiations. Those who have taken certain positive steps will soon see their incomes rise. Your wish for better family relations is coming true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone's dissatisfaction or supercritical perfectionism could upset your applecart. Realize that this person's discontent has very little to do with you. A new haircut will lift your spirits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A truly fulfilling day unfolds. An unexpected windfall brings bliss. Plan a trip. Those engaged in sales should do spendidly. You will be pleased with yourself when you look in the mirror!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are optimistic, sociable and kind. Their generosity wins them friends they will keep for life. Art, music and drama will hold special appeal for these Libras — providing a wonderful outlet for their volatile emotions. They long to know how others think and feel.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

One of the frustrations of bridge is there are often several valid lines of play for a contract that, mathematically, are almost on a par. Sometimes all roads lead to Rome; once in a while, only one will succeed.

Take a look at this deal from the final round of a major pair tournament, by which time the contenders had been whittled down to a select few. Six spades was a popular contract, reached via an auction such as above. The one line discarded by all declarers was to bank only on a finesse in either hearts or clubs. All managed to improve considerably on that chance.

The straightforward souls won the first trick with the ace of diamonds, drew trumps and then cashed the ace and king of hearts. When the queen did not drop, those declarers fell back on the club finesse—down one.

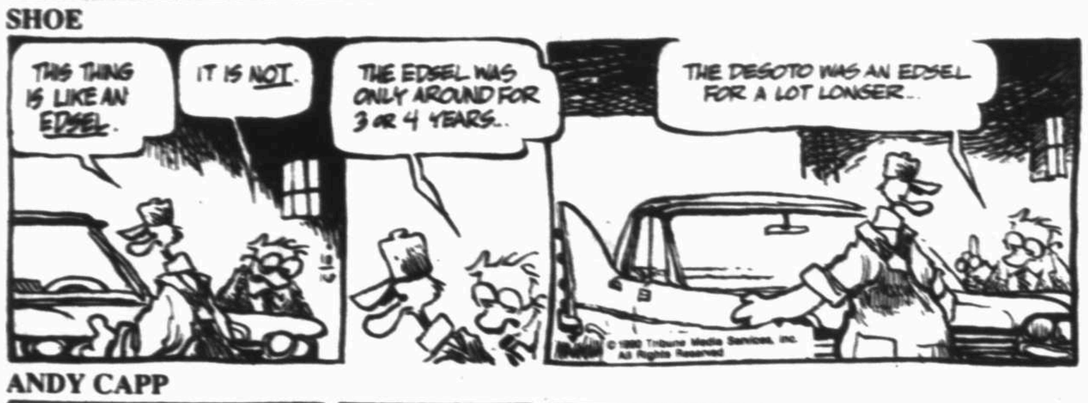

Others opted to ignore the possibility of a 4-1 heart break in favor of winning the ace of diamonds, cashing the ace and king of hearts and, when the lady failed to appear, ruffing a heart high. Next came two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. Had spades split evenly, declarer would have been able to take two discards on hearts for an overtrick. When trumps turned out to be 3-1, they also had to try the club finesse, with the same result.

The successful declarers won the first trick, cashed the ace and king of hearts and ruffed a heart high. When both defenders followed to a low trump to the seven, they continued by leading a winning heart, discarding a diamond from hand. West could ruff, but a diamond return would be ruffed in the closed hand and a trump to the queen enabled those declarers to draw the last trump and discard the queen of clubs on a good heart. Making six-odd.

Which was the right line? It's really too close to call.

Travis may ride into role

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Since riding the range with cowboy star Roy Rogers for an upcoming cable special, country music singer Randy Travis has decided he would like to do a western movie.

"If I was going to do something like that, I would be the most comfortable in a western," Travis said recently. "Like the cattle drive, that was just a natural thing for me to do. Riding was no problem and I knew how to work cows; I'd done that before."

The cattle drive Travis and Rogers took part in was for "Randy Travis — Happy Trails," a special recorded for the Nashville Network cable TV service last summer in Montana.

The show airs Wednesday and also features country singers Holly Dunn and Michael Martin Murphy with veteran actor Denver Pyle.

Rogers is also a partner with Travis on his new album "Heroes and Friends."

LONDON (AP) — Actress Goldie Hawn says that she would like more children, even though time is against her.

Hawn

"I'm too old to have another child, but I'd love to have more," Hawn, 44, told "Woman's Own" magazine in a story published Monday.

"I love being pregnant and I'd like to be so again. It's doing exactly what we were meant to do, the way God intended," she said.

Hawn has three children: Oliver, 13, and Kate, 11, from her former marriage to singer-actor Bill Hudson, and son Wyatt, 4, with her partner, actor Kurt Russell.

Hawn also said she would consider plastic surgery if she felt it was needed.

"I'm pretty vain and I like to look good, so if I thought it would make me feel better about myself then I would use it," she said.

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — It was a lot milder than his Lethal Weapon movies, but police said actor Mel Gibson smashed a camera when a photographer refused to quit taking pictures.

Gibson

Gibson was in the parking lot of a local nightclub, the Easy Street Lounge, when free-lance photographer Richard Reeves began snapping photos of him Saturday, police were told.

According to the police report, Reeves ignored a request to stop, so Gibson grabbed the camera and smashed it against the pavement. Gibson then apologized and told Reeves he would pay for the damaged equipment, valued at $650, witnesses told police. No arrests were made.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Watching the autobiographical documentary "Listen Up" hasn't been easy for producer Quincy Jones.

"When the film was being shot, I had a few bad moments. But when I first saw the whole thing on the screen, it hit like a sledgehammer," Jones, 57, said in a telephone interview from Toronto published in the Sunday Tennessean.

"I can hardly stand to watch the movie. I may have to see it 10 or 12 times before I will be able to decide whether it's good technically."

The documentary chronicles Jones' career as producer of albums for Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Miles Davis, Frank Sinatra and Michael Jackson.

Jones said the movie forced him to face things he had blanked out most of his life.

"I never did that before. When you see 57 years condensed to an hour (and) 30 (minutes), it's very dramatic. I never was much of a husband or father."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some were dressed in black tie and evening gown. Others wore slacks and munched popcorn. But they rose as one to cheer tenor Luciano Pavarotti into five encores.

More than 11,000 fans were held spellbound by the 55-year-old opera great during a two-hour performance Sunday at Thompson-Boling Arena.

"In the 50 stadiums we have been singing in, never have we found such a beautiful audience," Pavarotti said. "Or such an incredible smell of popcorn."

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Forget those rumors about sour notes between musicians Rick James and M.C. Hammer.

Hammer, who borrowed the melody from James' 1982 hit "Super Freak" to create this summer's smash single "U Can't Touch This," got together with the man he called his idol backstage before performing Saturday at Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium.

The stars, who had never met, promised to work with each other somewhere down the road.

"I used to go to your concerts," Hammer told James. "I felt good using music from a person I idolize. Y'all used to come out and do a show! Then I'd do my thing at the club to 'Super Freak.'"

"Keep doing it!" said James.

LONDON (AP) — The art collection of Hollywood legend Greta Garbo is expected to raise around $24 million when it comes up for auction in London and New York next month.

The main part of the Swedish-born star's collection, including three Renoir paintings and one by Pierre Bonnard, come under the hammer at Sotheby's in New York in November.

Recipe contests asking for entries

By Linda Anderson

Now that the weather is getting colder (well, some of the time anyway) and staying indoors where it's warm is a more desirable option, many family cooks are coming down with a seasonal "bug" that makes them want to haul out their pots and pans and start turning out homemade goodies. At our house, the urge to make chocolate chip cookies or homemade rolls or "from scratch" chicken noodle soup is almost overwhelming at times.

Anderson

Luckily, you can indulge your urge to fix homemade foods and win prizes at the same time. Quaker Oats has discovered this time of year to be a good time for recipe contests too:

■ The Third Annual Quaker Corn Meal "Contemporary Classics" Recipe Contest is a showcase for original contemporary recipes which contain at least ½-cup Quaker corn meal.

Each recipe must be in one of five categories: main dishes, breads and coffee cakes, dressings and stuffings, desserts, and microwave recipes. Participants can enter as many recipes as they wish, but each entry must be sent in a separate envelope.

To enter a recipe, legibly write, print or type the recipe on a sheet of paper (8½x11-inches) with your name, complete address and contest category on the upper right-hand corner. In the recipe, list all ingredients (use exact measurements), complete directions, cooking times and temperatures, how many servings, sizes of pans and special utensils. Include a proof-of-purchase seal from Quaker Corn Meal (or Aunt Jemima Corn Meal if Quaker Corn Meal is not available).

Mail entries to Quaker Corn Meal Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 11317, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Entries must be postmarked by midnight Jan. 31, 1991, and received by Feb. 8, 1991. Prizes are $5,000 grand prize; four $1,000 first prizes; and 100 runner-up prizes each consisting of coupons for two free packages of Quaker Corn Meal.

■ If you want a recipe contest that's even more contemporary, try the Quaker Oats It's The Right Thing To Do Recipe Contest. The mandatory ingredient in this contest is — you guessed it — Quaker Oats (at least ¾ cup). The general idea is to take a family recipe (that has not been published or won a prize in another contest) and make it healthier — you know, cut the fat content or use some kind of whole-grain flour instead of ordinary flour or substitute spices for salt — stuff like that.

Anyway, to enter any newly-renovated recipe (categories are main dishes, breads and muffins, desserts and cookies, and snacks and appetizers), use an 8½x11-inch piece of paper with your name, address and zip code and telephone number (with area code) and the recipe on it. Include a statement telling what changes were made to the submitted recipe to make it more healthful.

Recipes entered in this contest must include category, recipe's name, how many servings it makes, list of ingredients with specific measurements, complete directions for preparation, cooking time and temperature. Include a proof-of-purchase from a Quaker Oats package.

Entries must be postmarked by Nov. 30 and received by Dec. 7. (Participants must be at least 18 years old and not employed with or related to employees of Quaker Oats or any other company connected with this contest)

Mail entries to quaker Oats It's The Right Thing to Do Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 530, Barrington, Ill. 60011. Prizes are $10,000 grand prize, four $5,000 first prizes, four $2,500 second prizes, 10 $1,000 honorable mentions, and 25 runner-up prizes of Quaker canisters.

PINK PIGGY BANK COMMERCIAL
AGE: Three weeks
BORN: Mid-August, 1990
DIED: Early September, 1990

Bombeck

For those of you who blinked and missed it, it was a commercial for Arby's 99-cent roast beef sandwich. It depicted a little pink piggy bank hiding in a closet when a Jack Nicholson shadow came looking for him. His little eyes rolled around in pig terror as he ran fron one hiding place to another. Finally he was found, and we are left to assume he became an entree.

Actually, that death would have been humane compared with the flak from a few animal rights activists, some parents who were offended by the commercial's violent nature, and a smattering of feminists who charged male abuse of females. (The pig is pink.)

Right away when I saw the commercial, I said to myself, "This is not a real pig. It has a slot in its back and it holds money. Real pigs don't do that."

I didn't see violence. I saw a parallel between the piggy bank and my own kids. If their piggy banks had had any sense (and legs), they'd have hidden from me, too. There wasn't a week went by that I didn't relentlessly pursue them with a blunt object. When I found them, I'd shake the animals to death to get loose change for something.

Mark Stine, who is vice president of communications at Arby's in Atlanta, said, "It was a very small percentage of complaints, but Arby's is not into condoning violence or offending customers." The commercial was removed from the air. The irony is that it appeared just before a CBS "48 Hours" of crime in the streets. Somehow, a broken piggy bank didn't seem that violent.

When I was active in promoting equality for women under the laws of this land, I was always annoyed a flap was made over Mickey Mouse stuff like whether or not men opened our car doors or called us Miss, Mrs. or Ms. I was for lightening up. Who cares? Forget that and get on to the big stuff, such as whether we are going to make the same money for the same job.

There's a lot of violence out there that needs to be called to our attention. It is usually in the realm of reality. There is a place for watchdogs in this society, but if we are going to waste time trying to end the slaughter of innocent ceramic piggy banks, where will it all end? Shall we take on the Energizer rabbit? How old is he? How much does that drum weigh? Are his wages being protected until he is of age? And he's pink, you know. Is that how we perceive women? As baby machines?

Safeguards help avert credit card fraud

By Bobbi Ignelzi
Copley News Service

The cost of credit card fraud — to card holders and card companies alike — is more than half a billion dollars a year. However, even those who are not defrauded end up paying higher consumer prices, interest rates and annual fees.

While theft is the most obvious form of credit card fraud, misappropriation (using someone's card number without permission) is on the rise.

The Federal Trade Commission offers some suggestions to help protect yourself against credit card fraud:

Sign your new cards as soon as they arrive.

Carry your cards separately from your wallet. Keep a record of your card numbers, their expiration dates, and the phone number and address of each company in a secure place.

Keep your card in view, whenever you can, after you give it to a clerk. Retrieve your card promptly after using it.

Avoid signing a blank receipt whenever possible. Draw a line through blank spaces above the total when you sign card receipts.

Void or destroy all carbons and incorrect receipts.

Save your card receipts to compare with your billing statements.

Open billing statements promptly and reconcile your card accounts each month, just as you would your checking account.

Report promptly and in writing any questionable charges to the card issuer.

Notify card companies in advance of a change of address.

In addition, here are some things you should not do:

Never lend your cards to anyone.

Never leave your cards or receipts lying around.

Never give your number over the phone unless you are initiating a transaction with a company you know is reputable. If you have questions about a company, check with the city attorney's office, the district attorney or the Better Business Bureau before ordering.

If your credit cards are lost or stolen, call the issuers immediately. Most card companies have a toll-free number for reporting missing cards and some provide 24-hour service. By law, once you report the loss or theft, you have no further liability for unauthorized charges. Your maximum liability under federal law is $50 per card.

If you suspect that someone has illegally used your account number, send the card issuer a letter that includes your name, account number and the charges you question with your reasons. You must direct your letter to the billing error address on your statement and it must reach the creditor within 60 days after the first bill containing the error was mailed to you. If you send your letter by certified mail, with a return receipt requested, you will have proof that the card issuer received your letter.

If you decide to call the card issuer for faster action, use the special phone numbers that many card issuers list on their statements, but follow up your phone call with a letter. Only a letter protects your rights under federal law.

Retail predicted to dwindle in future

Associated Press

As Americans spend much less time and money on "recreational shopping," bankruptcies and mass store closings will accelerate.

Half of today's retailers will be gone by 2000. The resulting scramble will perpetuate rampant price competition for most every type of product and create new shopping choices for years to come.

Malls will stagnate. Few new ones will rise, and owners will either close tired ones or remodel them into mixed-use complexes. Shoppers are becoming jaded by crowds, security concerns and monotonous merchandise.

Strip centers will get bigger and jazzier, with larger home centers, supermarkets and pharmacies, plus specialty outlets that up to now have preferred to operate at enclosed malls.

Foreign retailers, such as France's Galeries Lafayette department store and Sweden's Ikea, will expand.

Factory outlet and off-price center expansion will slow as stores overlap. But these places have built up enough customer loyalty and awareness to assure a strong future.

DEAR ABBY

Aids victim urged to share private plight with family

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Suramericano" who wanted to know if he should tell his family that he had tested HIV-positive for the AIDS virus. I cast my vote for a resounding YES!

Van Buren

Our son tested positive nearly three years before he felt any ill effects from the disease. I, his mother, learned about his illness only 23 days before he died. He had lost a little weight — that's all.

When he first learned that he tested positive, he told his sister, who was his best friend. He swore her to secrecy because he didn't want to worry me. I could never understand why he had episodes when he would run a high fever, miss a day or two of work, and be fine the next day. He had his own home, so I didn't know the suffering he endured. If only he had told me, perhaps I could have helped him physically and spiritually. He needed no financial help because he was a very successful decorator and had the best insurance available. God took him from us a year ago.

I know that he thought it best that I didn't know, but it hurt me more not knowing. He deprived me of the opportunity to tell him how very proud I was of him and how much I loved him. — STILL GRIEVING

DEAR GRIEVING: My readers voted overwhelmingly in favor of telling the family. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Suramericano's" letter wondering whether to tell his family that he had tested positive for AIDS, I can offer the viewpoint of a family member who wasn't told until it was too late.

My dear cousin chose to tell only his parents and siblings, and then only after the AIDS virus had become active. By the time he died, I could only guess why he was ill, but felt helpless not being able to cross the line that he had drawn between us.

I respect my cousin's right to make this decision, but knowing now that he was gay and died of AIDS doesn't cause me to cherish his memory less. However, many things continue to haunt me — the visits I would have made, the things I might have said, the understanding that was never achieved. Was he ashamed? Or did he think I would be ashamed? Was it really necessary for him and his immediate family to be so isolated during his final ordeal?

My choice as a family member would have been to know the truth (however painful) and to have dealt with it. It would have been far better to have been there, offering words of love, knowing I did everything I could — than to have been shut out. — HURT IN SAN FRANCISCO

READERS: The few letters I received advising "Suramericano" not to tell his family were different variations on the same theme:

DEAR ABBY: Before giving "Suramericano" any advice, I would have to know what kind of relationship he has with his family. If it's anything like mine, I would vote no. Here's my story:

I am a gay male. I've always been a good son and didn't want to live a lie, so when I was 17, I told my parents I was gay, hoping they would not judge me. Our priest came with me for moral support, explaining that no one chooses his or her sexuality — it is something inborn in all of us. They refused to believe him. Instead they quoted Scripture, labeled me a sinner and told me I was no longer their son.

I envy my gay friends whose parents accept and love them just the way they are. Unfortunately I wasn't that lucky. — RESIGNED IN RICHMOND, VA.

Rethinking insurance cost

Associated Press

The cost of term insurance dropped 50 percent or more during the 1980s for just about everyone — men and women, the young and middle-aged, even smokers. Credit longer life expectancy, strong investment results, consumer awareness and competition.

The 1990s will be different. Premiums for annual renewable term (ART) insurance have leveled off. By 1995, they could be 15 to 25 percent higher. One reason: Reinsurance carriers are demanding the industry bolster its reserves. Another is a lot of insurers think they lowered prices too much in the 1980s.

Pats fined

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Irving Fryar and Hart Lee Dykes were fined Monday by the New England Patriots for missing team meetings and practice last week after an early-morning altercation outside a nightclub.

The team said the fines against the starting wide receivers were identical and in accordance with its published schedule of fines. Each fine was believed to be about $1,000.

Dykes, who suffered an injured left eye in the incident was expected to miss Thursday night's game at Miami. Fryar, who reportedly came to his teammate's aid, had a gash on his head but was expected to play.

Dykes gave his first public account Monday of the incident outside the Club Shalimar in Providence, R.I., at about 1:20 a.m. last Wednesday.

Dykes, who was hospitalized for about 36 hours, said Monday the vision in his left eye was still blurry. Rookie Greg McMurtry practiced in his place.

Reds tout the A's

■ Cincinnati players are hoping to keep things close in the World Series, which begins tonight in Riverfront Stadium.

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Clearly, the Oakland Athletics are the best team at the World Series. Just listen to the Cincinnati Reds.

Like Norm Charlton.

"It's a real honor for me to pitch against some of their hitters like Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire and Rickey Henderson," he said Monday. "Now, people get asked about how it was pitching against Hank Aaron and Roberto Clemente and maybe 20 years from now, people will be asking me how it was to pitch to Canseco and Henderson."

Or Paul O'Neill.

"I know they have some awesome players. All we can do is go out, play hard and have fun," he said. "Hopefully, it will be a close series."

Or this by Rob Dibble, from a few days ago: "No one expected us to do much this season. We won the National League pennant and no one can take that away from us, no matter what happens."

Suffice it to say, the Athletics are not happy just to be at the World Series. And the only fun they want is the kind that comes with winning it all.

"It is nice when you have expectations, and when they're high ones," Oakland manager Tony La Russa.

Certainly, the A's expect to win when Game 1 starts Tuesday night. Clear skies are forecast for the matchup between Dave Stewart and former A's pitcher Jose Rijo.

The A's will be without shortstop Walt Weiss, whose left knee was torn up on a hard slide by Ellis Burks in Game 2 of the playoffs. Weiss has not played since then and Oakland, allowed to replace an injured player on the World Series roster, activated infielder Mike Bordick.

On Monday, during workouts at Riverfront Stadium, the Reds engaged in one of the most-universal practices in sports — chatting up the other team.

"Everyone talks about their size and intimidation, but that doesn't win you games. You win games with wit and skill, and that's what they have," Eric Davis said.

A guy, say, like Jose Canseco.

"He's a great athlete with a lot of confidence in what he does," Davis accurately assessed. "If I had the ability he has, I

Chaps second, Wranglers third behind new golf champs

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Odessa College officially surrendered its 1989 National Intercollegiate Invitational golf championship to Central Alabama Community College Monday, and the Alabamans proved very worthy of the title.

CACC shot an 870 team total — a whopping 26 strokes better than second-place Midland College's 900. OC was third at 906.

CACC, the 1989-90 Nationl Junior College Athletic Association golf champion, held a six stroke lead after round one, a lead which ballooned to 20 shots after round two.

MC's Dean Robertson tied for tournament medalist honors with CACC's David Bathgate. Both finished with 215s. Bathgate and Robertson both hail from Great Britain; Bathgate from England, Robertson from Scotland. That the two are close friends and have played against and with each other on several courses around the world was the reason the two did not press for a playoff to determine the outright individual championship.

"If it weren't for he being my friend, I would've" wanted to have a playoff, Robertson said.

CACC also had to catch a relatively early flight back home which also made a playoff unlikely.

"We've had the best group of freshmen, and I guess this pretty much proves it," MC head golf coach Delnor Poss said. "They showed they've got the character to overcome the freshmen-itis they experienced in the first round."

J.C. Hernandez and Sean Bishop, both freshmen out of San Angelo Central High School had impressive scores, especially during Sunday's opening nine (which counted toward the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race) and during Monday's final round in the NII.

Hernandez had a 35 during Sunday's first half and a 74 Monday. He finished the tournament with a 77-77-74—228, 12 over for the three-day tournament. Bishop shot a 38 Sunday and 71 Monday and finished with an 81-76-71—228 also.

Robertson's 71-71-73—215 was good for one-under par. he and Bathgate's scores were the only two sub-par scores for the 54-hole tournament. Robertson had five bogeys and six birdies for the tourney

Triathlete Karen Hagner

Hagner peddles to top

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Four years ago, Karen Hagner was like many other young women — married, two children, and not particularly active in athletics.

But it was about that time that Hagner started walking for fun and exercise.

Then she started running.

She hurt herself running, so she started riding her bike.

Soon, she was swimming, too.

Guess what? Now she's one of the top female triathletes in the state — after only four of the swim-bike-run competitions.

Hagner, 31, will compete in the Las Vegas (Nev.) Challenge, one of the U.S. Triathlon Association's Bud Light Series. She qualified for the invitation-only competition by finishing second in her age group at the state competition in August at San Angelo.

Mike Moylett of Midland is also slated to make the trip to Vegas.

The Vegas Challenge includes a 1,500-meter swim in Lake Mead; a 24.8-mile bicycle ride from Lake Mead to Boulder City; and a 10-kilometer run. Hagner doesn't expect to set any records Saturday, but she does have definite goals.

"I'd like to complete the swim in 27 minutes and run 8:15-8:20 mile pace in the 10K," she said.

Hagner, a Midland Lee graduate, competed in gymnastics from eighth grade through high school, and still coaches Alamo YMCA gymnasts. She attended Lamar University for one year, before settling down to marriage and family, i.e. husband Mark and daughters Suzanne, now 8, and Kimberly, 5.

But she always lingered on the periphery of athletic competition.

"I've always been sort of active," she said. "I did a little bit of gymnastics when Mark and I first got married, and I did some aerobics."

Like many runners, Hagner got started by walking on a treadmill.

McWilliams kept his cool

■ The Texas Longhorns moved into the Top 20 with their 14-13 win over Oklahoma.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas coach David McWilliams said Monday he never lost confidence that his team could move the ball against Oklahoma's nationally ranked defense even when Texas had 91 yards to cover with 7:12 to play.

Texas put together a 13-play drive and scored the winning touchdown with 2 minutes to go on a fourth-down, 16-yard pass from quarterback Peter Gardere to Keith Cash.

Cash's twin, Kerry, scored Texas' first touchdown on a Gardere pass in the 14-13 victory against the Sooners, who yielded only 232 yards in offense.

It was the first time in four years that the Cash brothers had caught a touchdown pass in the same game.

The victory raised previously unranked Texas, 3-1, to No. 19 in The Associated Press college football poll. The loss dropped Oklahoma, 5-1, from No. 4 to No. 16.

Until Texas' final drive, McWilliams said it seemed "like one of those days where we get things going pretty good but all of a sudden we stop ourselves." Texas had four turnovers.

McWilliams said, however, he remained confident because of his players' attitude. "I was going a lot by the sideline. There didn't seem to be a lack of confidence ... the talk was good."

"I just had a good feeling that we were going make a drive there," he said. "I felt like we were finally getting the blocks we need, we were getting the throwing, we were reading things right ... "

After the scoring pass, McWilliams told his weekly news conference, he "couldn't relax" until an Oklahoma field goal attempt sailed wide as time expired.

Linebacker Boone Powell hurt his elbow, and McWilliams said he was 99 percent certain Powell would miss the Arkansas game here Saturday.

Playoff talk in Dallas proves absurd

Sounding as though he were a first cousin to Jethro Bodine, Dean Hamel fueled expectations of postseason play for the Dallas Cowboys prior to their loss Sunday in Phoenix when he said, "there's no reason this team can't make the playoffs."

Wyatt

That's what the Pokes' defensive tackle said before the Cardinals accepted a 20-3 momento of the meeting, a token that Dallas all but gift-wrapped for their hosts. Now, we must assume, Hamel would have us believing that the Cardinals are the team to beat in the NFC East.

But Hamel had best do a little ciphering before he addresses further playoff possibilities. The only reason that the Cowboys didn't lose by an additional 20 points in Phoenix is because the Cardinals are a terrible football team in their own right.

The Cards played virtually the entire first quarter inside Dallas territory and scored just seven points. Phoenix quarterback Timm Rosenbach entered the game as the NFC's worst passer. And five NFL teams have combined to scorch the Phoenix defense for 121 points.

The Cowboys can lay claim to only three of them, accumulated on exactly 100 yards of total offense. Phoenix had given up an average of 351 yards a game previous to Sunday's walk and was ranked last in defense in the NFC going into its open date the week before.

While ex-Dallas quarterback Steve Walsh was back guiding a contender to victory with three TD passes for the New Orleans Saints Sunday, Troy Aikman was once again startled to look across the line of scrimmage and see something other than a Pac 10 defense.

And the way the Dallas offensive line played, well, the Washington Huskies might have been able to deliver the four sacks that Phoenix heaped on Aikman.

The Cowboys managed just nine first downs and gave up 23. Phoenix runners blasted for 223 yards through the porous Poke defense, and Johnny Johnson became the first Cardinal to eclipse the 100-yard mark since 1988.

For the Cowboys, it was an across-the-board breakdown against a team that may not win again until it visits Dallas Dec. 15.

Hamel, probably to the chagrin of Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, made mention of the playoffs after the Cowboys raised their record to 2-3 with a 14-10 home-game win over Tampa Bay.

The possibilities were indeed exciting for a team that finished 1-15 in 1989 and already had two victories in the early going of the present season. But the Cowboys ought to have left their playoff bags unpacked and concentrated on their visit to Phoenix.

Here are the reasons the Cowboys can't make the playoffs in 1990: Washington, New York, Philadelphia...and now Phoenix.

If Hamel were really a first cousin to Jethro Bodine, his mother would be a Clampett, something he should do with his mouth the next time the Cowboys sneak by a middle-of-the pack team in Texas Stadium.

Cincinnati pitcher Jose Rijo works on his bunting skills during batting practice Monday at Riverfront Stadium. Rijo is scheduled to start for the Reds tonight when they open the World Series against Oakland. Dave Stewart will pitch for the A's.

SERIES: Eckersley serious about Reds

wouldn't be afraid to say anything, either."

Whaddya say, Jose?

"The ball is really going to be carrying so you'll see a lot of extra-base hits and, hopefully, some home runs mixed in," he shrugged. "I think we're going to get spoiled playing there."

Canseco did not lavish any praise on the Reds. None of his teammates did, either. They talked more about themselves.

"I take them seriously," Dennis Eckersley said, as if maybe some of the others did not.

If the A's are confident, they should be. This is their third straight World Series, so there are no jitters. They won the championship last season, so they know how to do it.

If the Reds are awed by the A's aura invincibility, who could blame them? Toronto, San Francisco and Boston were the last three teams to challenge them in the postseason, and Oakland won 12 of 13 games.

"I definitely think there's more pressure on Oakland," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "They're talking about dynasties over there. They are a great club and they are expected to win. We think we can win.

Moon passes for over 20,000 yards, again

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Warren Moon became one of a kind Sunday — the only quarterback to pass for 20,000 yards in the NFL and Canadian Football League.

The Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot also came of age, leaving Coach Jack Pardee looking for more victories Monday.

"That should be a good game to build on," Pardee said of Sunday's 48-17 victory over Cincinnati. "If we take that game and get better, we can play with anyone. After the first three plays, we played well and made fewer mistakes."

The Oilers got a double benefit from the victory. They evened their record at 3-3 and cut Cincinnati's (4-2) AFC Central Division lead to one game.

The Oilers host New Orleans Sunday and Cincinnati travels to Cleveland.

Moon threw two incomplete passes under a heavy Bengal rush and was intercepted on his third pass before shredding Cincinnati's defense for 369 passing yards, giving him 20,204 NFL passing yards. He threw for 21,228 yards for the CFL Edmonton Eskimoes.

Moon is the 49th NFL quarterback to surpass 20,000 career passing yards. Moon's precise passing helped Houston roll up 514 yards, the most since they gained 555 against the New York Titans on Nov. 19, 1961.

"Once he gets in a groove, I don't think there is anyone better than he is at getting rid of the ball," Pardee said.

Moon completed five touchdown passes to five different receivers, completing 21 of 33 passes after his slow first series. The Oilers scored on their next seven possessions after Moon's interception taking them into the fourth quarter.

At that point, backup Cody Carlson came on and led the Oilers to a 23-yard Tony Zendejas field goal.

The Oilers quietly atoned for a 61-7 loss to the Bengals last December in which Coach Sam Wyche had Jim Breech kick a field goal in the closing seconds while leading 58-7.

The Oilers defense never let Boomer Esiason get on track for too long Sunday, holding the Bengal quarterback to 130 yards on 12 of 21 passes for 130 yards.

"Our defense kept Boomer contained because when he runs out of the pocket and throws back to the hole in the zone, he's very effective," Pardee said.

Pardee resisted any urge to leave Moon in the game after taking a 45-17 lead with 12:08 to play to give backup Cody Carlson his first playing time of the season.

"We had accomplished our goal and Cody certainly needed some playing time," Pardee said. "We rotated our receivers throughout the game and to have a chance to give Cody playing time was something we had to do."

Moon said he was pleased with the progress of the run-and-shoot offense and the return of the big plays.

"When you make a big play, it means you've done a lot of little things right," Moon said. "Besides the execution, we wanted to remain intense and not give them a lot of breathing room.

"They have a lot of home games to end the season so hopefully, someone will knock them off on the road between now and then."

Cincinnati plays at Cleveland Sunday and at Atlanta Oct. 28 to complete a 5-game road trip. The Bengals will have six home games in their final eight games, including the Oilers on Dec. 23.

Dallas offense turns ugly

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys sent out a search party for their offense at Valley Ranch on Monday after tallying a club record low 100 yards against the Phoenix Cardinals.

"It was as ugly as it can get," admitted offensive coordinator David Shula. "It's a major step backwards."

Phoenix defeated the Cowboys 20-3 although the Cardinals ranked 24th in league defense. It was the fewest points the Cardinals had yielded in a game since 1981.

Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman hit only 9 of 25 passes and one was intercepted by linebacker Garth Jax, a former Cowboy.

Aikman had no immediate answers for what happened.

"I wish I could say what went wrong, but I can't," said Aikman who was sacked four times.

Coach Jimmy Johnson had no immediate solutions.

"Our guys just didn't play," Johnson said. "We didn't protect the passer and we didn't make the throws. We didn't make the catches, either."

Dallas got 108 yards against the New York Giants last December.

The Cowboys' 34 yards passing was the low for any NFL club this season.

Johnson said he could see it coming after the Cowboys defeated Tampa Bay. Some of the players were talking playoffs.

"I could see it all week," Johnson said. "But it's hard to be an alarmist."

Offensive tackle Nate Newton said, "It's the same thing week after week. We're always trying to explain how we are losing."

Phoenix running back Anthony Thompson tries to score over Dallas defenders Issiac Holt (30) and Eugene Lockhart (56) during first-quarter action Sunday.

Only a 37-yard field goal by Ken Willis saved the Cowboys from the embarrassment of a shutout.

Backfield coach Joe Brodsky said it's a mystery what happened to Dallas' offense.

"I don't understand it," he said. "Everybody gave outstanding effort."

Montana schools Falcons

Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons convinced themselves they had what it took to stop San Francisco's NFL record 12-game road winning streak.

It didn't take long for the magic of Joe Montana and Jerry Rice to shatter that confidence.

"It's a learning experience, and we had the best teacher in the business handing out the lesson plan," Atlanta's Bobby Butler said.

Montana passed for career highs of 476 yards and six touchdowns, an NFL record-tying five of them to Rice, who had 13 receptions for 225 yards, as the 49ers rolled to a 45-35 victory over the Falcons Sunday.

"If this game had a statement, it was that the best team in football and the best quarterback in football came in and beat up a team striving to be the best," said Butler, who had guaranteed an Atlanta victory last week.

"It was vintage Montana today," John Taylor of the 49ers said. "He was putting the ball on the money. What a great game!"

Montana completed 32 of 49 passes and had two intercepted, one that bounced off Rice's chest. The touchdowns to Rice covered 24, 25, 19, 13 and 15 yards, the first two against an Atlanta blitz. Rice became only the third player in NFL history to catch five scoring passes in a game.

Montana also connected with Mike Sherrard on a 48-yard scoring play, leaving him one touchdown pass shy of the NFL record.

"I don't think I played up to the standards I did in the Super Bowl," Montana said. "There were times when I didn't hit people today. And then sometimes no matter how I threw it, it was getting to people. I went through streaks more than anything."

"It was just one of those days," Rice said, adding that it wasn't his best game because he made four or five mental mistakes. "I don't compare games."

Mike Holmgren, San Francisco's assistant coach, also wouldn't call it the best performance he's seen from Rice.

"Rating his best games is like trying to say which paintings are the nicest," Holmgren said.

The 49ers remained unbeaten in five games this year despite having no threat of a running game. With Roger Craig sidelined with an injury, San Francisco netted only 50 yards on 24 attempts. With Montana completing so many passes to Rice, it hardly mattered.

"What a player," Craig said of Montana. "Joe proved that you don't even have to have a running game with him in there. He's just the best."

"Let's face it," Atlanta's Tim Green said. "He ate us alive. He really did."

"We're not the first team that Joe Montana's done that to and, I'm sorry to say, we probably won't be the last," Bill Fralic said.

"We ran every blitz we could to keep pressure on him, but he was fantastic," Atlanta's Tory Epps said. "I've never seen a quarterback who totally dominated a game like he did. He was incredible."

"I don't know of a quarterback that can play any better," Falcons coach Jerry Glanville said. "He gave us a lesson."

Teen pleads innocent to beating a fan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A teen-ager pleaded innocent Monday to assault and battery counts in the beating of a fan last month during a Los Angeles Raiders football game.

Shane Geringer, 19, of Agoura Hills, freed earlier on $30,000 bail, pleaded innocent to assault with a deadly weapon and battery with serious bodily injury.

He was ordered by Municipal Court Judge Candace Beason to return for a preliminary hearing for Nov. 19.

Geringer was arrested for the beating on Sept. 23 of Paul Albrecht, 35, of Tucson, Ariz., who was hospitalized for more than a week after the attack.

The incident prompted a police crackdown at Raiders games and a one-time ban Sunday on the sale of alcohol at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

More than 80 people were cited Sunday for bringing alcohol into the stadium in defiance of the ban.

A few fans hoisted signs decrying the policy but otherwise the crowd was peaceful, police said.

Officials said containers of beer sold at the Coliseum from now on will be 16 ounces, not 20 ounces.

Beer won't be sold after halftime, and the allowable alcohol content will be dropped to 3.2 percent from the current 3.6 percent.

The results after a one-game beer-sale ban imposed at Sunday's NFL game at the Los Angeles Coliseum:

- Raiders 24, Seahawks 17;
- Attendance 50,624, beer sales 0;
- Police citations outside stadium 84, fan incidents inside stadium 1;
- People caught with alcohol at gate 24, tickets confiscated 24, tie.

Foyt released

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A.J. Foyt was released Monday from Methodist Hospital and headed home to Houston to begin rehabilitation of his injured legs and feet.

Foyt, 55, sustained the most serious injuries of his racing career Sept. 23 when his brakes failed and his car slammed into a mound of dirt at the Road America race in Elkhart Lake, Wis.

He was transferred to Methodist the next day and underwent two operations.

Foyt is expected to return to racing next season, he said.

Unbeatens clash in 9A

Staff Report

Area Football

Football heated up in a hurry at the all-important district level throughout West Texas, and some big games with playoff ramifications are slated for this Friday.

Unbeaten Bronte visits Garden City at 7:30 p.m. Friday, where both teams will put unblemished District 9A marks on the line. Bronte is 2-0 in league play and coming off of a 42-6 breeze over Roscoe.

Garden City, 4-1 for the campaign, is 1-0 in the loop. The Bearkats have scored 230 points thus far, 46 points per game. Bronte has permitted just 36 points en route to its 6-0 season record.

District 6-2A

Iraan, Wall and Ozona share first place in 6-2A with perfect 3-0 records, and each plays a district rival Friday that has no better than a .500 record for the season.

Stanton (0-6, 0-3) visits Iraan at 8 p.m., and coach Dale Ruth will be looking to get the Buffs' offense untracked. Stanton tried a shotgun formation last week against Ozona, but came away with a 29-14 loss and has now been outscored 87-26 in district play.

Forsan, which has allowed 201 points and holds a 1-5, 0-3 record, will visit Wall. Wall is 5-1 overall and boasts the highest point total in 6-2A competition with 105 in three outings.

McCamey, trying to stay in the playoff hunt, has a 2-1 mark and travels to Ozona (3-3, 3-0) for an 8 p.m. affair.

District 6-3A

Greenwood continues to be the surprise team in 6-3A and will carry a perfect 6-0, 1-0 record into Friday's game with visiting Crane (2-1-2, 1-0).

Coach Bob Purser's charges defeated a tough Reagan County team 12-7 last week, and the Rangers are off to a solid start, outscoring their opponents 141-55 thus far.

District 2-4A

State ranked and undefeated Lubbock Estacado, at 6-0, 1-0, is the team to beat in 2-4, but Levelland and Wolfforth Frenship also have 1-0 loop slates.

Lamesa, a 43-22 loser last week to Frenship, plays host to Estacado this week in a pivotal game for the Tors.

The Estacado defense has allowed just 53 points. The Tors have scored 129 points along the way to a 3-2-1 overall mark.

District 3-4A

Monahans and Sweetwater command 3-4A with 2-0 district records, but that should change Friday when the co-leaders meet in Monahans. Trying to take advantage of that clash will be Big Spring (3-1-1, 1-0) and Andrews (3-3, 1-1).

The State-ranked Steers host Fort Stockton (2-3, 0-2), while Andrews hosts Pecos (2-3, 0-1).

District 8A

League play gets started in 8A Friday when Rankin (3-2) visits Wink (1-4) and Sanderson (3-2) goes to Grandfalls (3-2).

Eagles bounce Vikes

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Rich Gannon and Cris Carter threatened to turn the NFL's Survival Bowl into a homecoming Monday night.

Seth Joyner, William Frizzell and some funny bounces spoiled it.

The Philadelphia Eagles beat the Minnesota Vikings 32-24 Monday night, scoring twice in a 59-second span late in the fourth quarter to overcome deficits of 12 points at halftime and nine with four minutes to go.

But then Randall Cunningham threw a 40-yard touchdown pass to Fred Barnett that bounced off both Michael Brim of the Vikings and Calvin Williams of the Eagles. Then Joyner sacked Gannon and Clyde Simmons recovered the fumble on the Minnesota 6 and Anthony Toney burst in for the winning score with 4:01 left.

And Frizzell, who earlier had recovered a fumble and stopped a drive with a sack, clinched it with an interception he returned 33 yards to the Minnesota 5 with just over two minutes left and set up Roger Ruzek's clinching field goal with 1:53 left. The 19-yarder was Ruzek's fourth of the game.

Gannon, who has started the last three games for the injured Wade Wilson, was 18-for-35 for 270 yards.

Prices fall

Prices for light sweet crude continued to fall on the New York Mercantile Exchange, with November contracts falling $1.74 to $37.95 per barrel.

The contract had closed at $39.69 Friday, down 73 cents.

The decline prompted local crude oil purchasers such as Permian Corp., Texaco Trading and Transportation and Sun Refining and Marketing to lower their posted price — the actual price paid for a barrel of oil — to $36.75, down $1.75.

T-Bills same

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were virtually unchanged in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $9.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.18 percent, down from 7.19 percent last week. Another $9.4 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.22 percent, up from 7.21 percent last week.

Gold plunges

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold prices fell more than $12 Monday, driven by a drop in the price of oil and by rumors of a negotiated settlement in the Middle East. The dollar finished higher against all major currencies except the Japanese yen.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery fell $12.50 to settle at $375 a troy ounce.

Iraq on Monday denied it was softening its stance, but traders said the news from the Middle East helped drive down the price of gold.

Also affecting prices was the energy futures market, where the near-term contract for oil settled at $37.95 a barrel, down $1.74 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar finished up against most major currencies, after also rising overseas.

One British pound fetched $1.9498, less expensive than $1.9675 on Friday. In London, the pound fell to $1.9545 from $1.9740.

However, the dollar fell against the yen across the board. In Tokyo, it fell to a closing 128.83 yen from 129.98 yen Friday.

Other selected late dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday rates included: 1.5262 German marks, up from 1.5243; 1.2905 Swiss francs, up from 1.2860; 5.1120 French francs, up from 5.1055; 1,143.00 Italian lire, up from 1,142.25; and 1.1540 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1471.

Venezuela to market coal in place of oil

■ A new form of liquefied coal can be burned in generating plants to reduce dependency on higher priced fuel oil.

N.Y. Times News Service

MORICHAL, Venezuela — With oil prices surging, some electric power company managers are seeing some relief through the huge bitumen reserves in eastern Venezuela.

Using the label "liquid coal," Venezuela started marketing a bitumen and water emulsion this year that is liquid and easy to handle like oil but priced like coal — a cheap and stable commodity.

Patented under the name Orimulsion, the fuel comes from Venezuela's vast Orinoco Heavy Oil Belt and can be burned in power plants as an alternative to coal or to the international standby, Heavy Fuel Oil No. 6, after a plant has been modified.

The most expensive part of the modification is adding scrubbers to smokestacks to remove Orimulsion's relatively high concentration of sulphur, which causes acid rain, from emissions.

After two years of successful tests in power plants in Canada, Britain and Japan, the world power generating industry appears to be optimistic about the product.

One reason is the price. Depending on contracts, Orimulsion is sold at $8 to $9.50 a ton, or about $1.10 to $1.30 a barrel. In contrast, heavy fuel oil is now selling for about $19 a barrel, sharply up from $10 a barrel at the end of July.

"We have 11 plants that can be converted to Orimulsion — it could mean $3 to $5 billion in fuel savings over 15 years," said Ray Golden, a spokesman for Florida Power and Light Co., in an interview.

"Orimulsion is a win-win situation," he added. "It's stored, transported and burned like oil, but priced like coal."

His company expects to be the first American utility to conduct trial tests, probably in December, and feasibility studies are under way at power companies in Maine, Massachusetts, Puerto Rico and Virginia.

But test burns in the Florida company's 400-megawatt unit in Sanford will depend on the Environmental Protection Agency's granting a temporary waiver of air emission limits to allow the burning of 2.5 million barrels of the new fuel.

"Once the Middle East crisis hit, my phone started to ring," said Blair A.

Credit rates to remain stable

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Despite mounting evidence of a recession, long-term interest rates are likely to remain mired around 9 percent for some time, credit analysts say, unless the confrontation in the Middle East is suddenly resolved.

A hint of the kind of tonic a Persian Gulf settlement could be was seen Friday, when speculation that President Saddam Hussein of Iraq was considering a withdrawal from Kuwait was picked up by credit market participants at the end of a volatile, agitating week. Bond prices rallied by more than a point on the talk, and the gains were sustained even though the rumors were subsequently debunked.

"It seems clear to me that the crisis in Iraq is holding up rates higher than they otherwise would be," said David H. Resler, chief economist at Nomura Securities International. "And if we could get a full percentage point drop in interest rates quickly, it is conceivable that we could avoid or minimize the damage of a recession. But that prospect hinges on what happens in the Middle East."

A solution to the crisis in the Middle East would almost certainly give the market more help than an agreement on the federal budget, analysts said.

"Eventually, probably after the election, Congress will pass a budget that cuts the deficit by $40 billion," said Donald J. Fine, chief market analyst at the Chase Manhattan Bank. "But given all that has happened in the past few weeks, I am wondering if the market and the Fed reaction then will be the same as it would have been a week ago. I don't expect a major improvement in long rates for awhile."

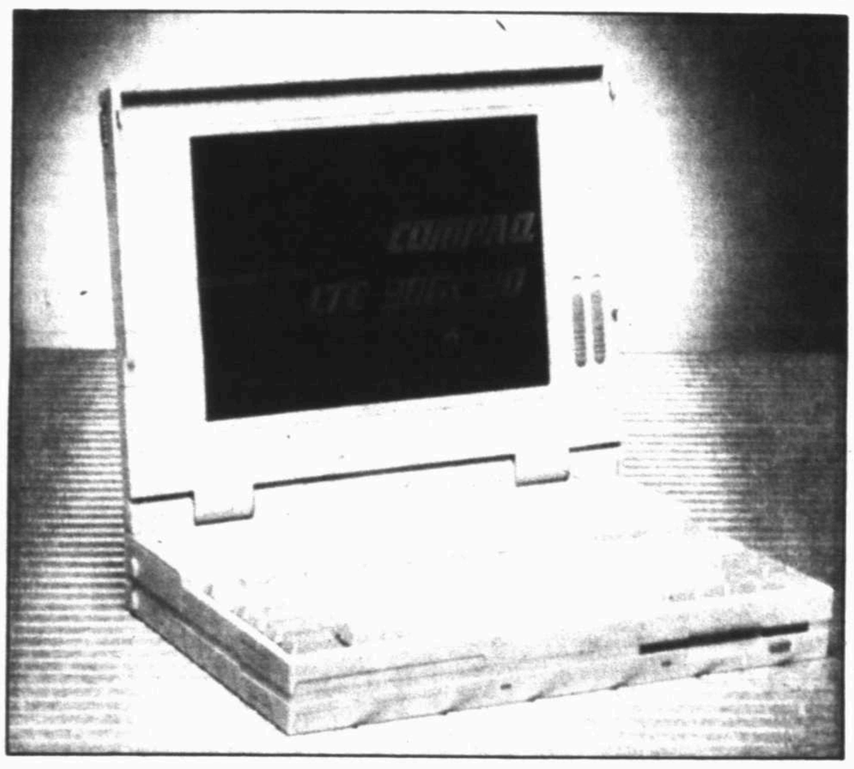

News reports said last week that members of the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee voted in early October to ease monetary policy once a budget package was passed by Congress and signed into law. But since then the policy makers have gotten further evidence that inflation remains a serious problem, including a report last Friday that showed that producer prices rose by 1.6 percentage points in September. As Fine suggested, those fresh facts are likely to make the Fed less generous than it might have been earlier.

"Larger issues still constrain the Fed," Robert V. DiClemente, an economist at Salomon Brothers, wrote in the firm's weekly "Comments on Credit."

"Gathering evidence of recession will set its own timetable for substantive Fed easing," he said. "In the interim, policy makers will likely seek to contain unsettled markets by stalling."

Aside from inflation worries, long-term interest rates most likely will have to remain high if the Treasury is to sell what likely will be a record amount of securities in the fourth quarter. Particu-

Compaq's new half-pound, laptop is expected to put the Houston company in the lead in that category.

Compaq unveils super laptop

HOUSTON (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. introduced a notebook-sized personal computer Monday that observers say will catapult the company past the competition in laptop models.

The Houston-based personal computer maker was expected to unveil in New York today the product that uses several innovations to squeeze an 80386SX microprocessor into an 8½-by-11-inch, 7½-pound package.

The new LTE 386s-20 notebook computer has a suggested retail price of $6,999 for a model with a 60-megabyte fixed disk drive and $6,499 for one with a 30-megabyte drive. It will sell in the range of $5,000 at Compaq dealers.

"I think it's a damn exciting product," said Seymour Merrin, president of Merrin Information Services, a computer consulting firm in Palo Alto, Calif. "Every piece of it is designed so well, it's just exquisite."

Management by guerrilla tactics

■ Former Midlander Barry Harrin has authored a book suggesting business managers would benefit from guerrilla tactics.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

How do you survive in the cut-throat business world? By knowing how to fight the battle, says author Barry Harrin, a former Midlander and former employee of ClayDesta Communications.

Now vice president of operations at NTS Communications in Lubbock, Harrin has written a book that provides a detailed plan for winning in the battle of business management. It's called: A Manager's Guide to Guerilla Warfare.

The book has a lot of the basic how-to-do-better information. This includes: staying informed, looking good, speaking and writing well, staying organized and making friends.

But among the chapters of sound advice which is written with a combat view, Harrin also sprinkles war-like advice and quotes.

Some of it is pretty graphic. For example he advises: "When confronted by a lunatic, run as fast as you can or take him out of the game immediately." That means, of course, take him out of the business picture — not kill him.

He also borrows graphic quotes, like this one from General George Patton: "The object is not to die for your country, but make the other poor bastard die for his."

Raised in the ghettos of New York, Harrin gives advice on how to identify the really bad boys. "It's not always so obvious in the business world," he notes.

He also offers advice on how to meet with the "big boys" without getting chewed up, and how to forumulate a network for gaining friends and information.

The telecommunications executive points out that the reason the Japanese are beating America in the business world is because they are half warrior and half businessmen.

Harrin, in his 40s, says he wrote the book to provide a guide of common sense techniques and strategies for business success in a simple and effective format.

"I was not a part of the good ole boy network, and decided to do my small part to give others a shot at the gold ring."

He says the book, which he describes as a manual to getting "boot camp" tough for the business world, is selling well. The first printing of 2,000 copies sold out within two weeks, and a second printing of 2,500 copies is half sold out.

Harrin says he wrote, published and distributed the book himself, because he "didn't want to be told no by a bunch of publishers."

JANE BRYANT QUINN

The dreaded "R" word won't go away

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK — The R word — recession — is turning up increasingly on the lips of economists who had been predicting only a "slowdown." If we aren't in a recession now, we are very likely on the cusp.

Quinn

Two things make this recession more unsettling than most: the prospect of war in the Middle East and the failure of the voters (as reflected in the panic of our legislators) to reach agreement on how the nation's money should be raised and spent.

Iraq is the Doomsday Machine. Any interruption of production from the Saudi Arabian oil fields might send oil to $100 a barrel and threaten the functioning of the world's economies. Economically, war is often thought of as "good," because of the lift given to the economy by the jolt of military spending. But this war, if it happens, risks intense inflation and deep recession on the home front.

The battle of the budget also carries recessionary risks.

Irwin Kellner, chief economist of Manufacturers Hanover Trust, calls it "Hooveresque" to raise taxes or cut spending on the eve of an economic downturn, because that would make the downturn worse. He supports deficit reductions, but not beginning in 1991. He thinks the bite should start in 1992, when the recession presumably will have passed.

By contrast, Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Company, would take deficit reduction now, even though he says it would cause the economy to lose an extra half-point of growth. The country would still endure only a "moderate recession," he says, and would emerge from the downturn with less inflation built in.

Sinai assumes that budget cuts would lead to lower short-term interest rates, as promised by the Federal Reserve. Lower rates would prevent the downturn from getting too bad–although he concedes "it's a lab experiment." Not since the 1930s has the government tightened the budget, rather than loosened it, as a recession began. Under these conditions, the cushioning effect of lower interest rates is plausible but still theoretical.

Without budget reductions, however, the recession might bring deficits to the $300-billion range–which could easily cost $21 billion to $24 billion a year to finance. Increasingly, our taxes go toward paying interest on money borrowed before, rather than on, programs the country needs.

For the budgeteers, a potential escape hatch is in the making.

The proposed tax increases and spending cuts are being forced by the Gramm-Rudman law, which requires deficit reduction. But Gramm-Rudman can be suspended if the economy grows at the rate of less than 1 percent for two quarters in a row.

Last quarter, the economy grew by 0.4 percent. This quarter, it quite likely scraped the bottom again. We'll find out Oct. 30, just days before the elections, when the Commerce Department releases its preliminary third-quarter numbers.

If the economy has indeed slumped, a resolution automatically goes to the Congress suspending the Gramm-Rudman deficit limits. However, the resolution has to be passed by the Congress and signed by the President–which, at the moment, seems unlikely. How this game plays out depends not only on politics at home but also on how weak the economy appears to be.

If the budgeteers reach no agreement, the automatic Gramm-Rudman budget cuts take effect. They'd slash defense by 41 percent and domestic spending by 37 percent, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

Such cuts, if allowed to endure, would indeed be Hooveresque, probably sending the economy into a deep slump. Under the law, Congress can't formally rescind a Gramm-Rudman spending cut currently in effect, but it can pick up the slack with extra spending bills.

Venezuela is the only country to produce the fuel commercially, but plant managers do not appear to be overly worried about becoming dependent on a single supplier.

Once boilers, pipes and pumps have been modified, a plant can switch back and forth in the same day between Orimulsion and heavy fuel oil.

announced a 386SX-based notebook computer, Compaq will be the first to ship it when its dealers begin receiving the product later this month, industry experts said.

Several industry observers said the new machine may prove pricey, particularly at a time when the economy may be entering a recession and when several competitors are poised to introduce lower-priced notebook machines.

"I think it's an exciting product, and I think it's an exciting technology, but at that high of a price tag I'm not sure ... ," said Linda Kiley, research analyst with the BIS-CAP International market research firm in Norwell, Mass. "I think it's a little high priced."

lars of the Treasury's quarterly refunding auctions will not be announced for two weeks. Still, some market participants are already fearful that with the dollar falling and confidence in the United States shaken, foreign demand for the new Treasury issues will be modest at best, and that interest rates may have to go even higher to sell the new issues.

Worries about foreign participation received new urgency last week, when the Treasury struggled to sell $8.5 billion of new seven-year notes. The overseas appetite for securities of that maturity has never been strong, but last week, market participants said, it was non-existent.

Some analysts have argued that the seven-year auction was an aberration. Others said that, even if foreigners did not participate, interest rates were not likely to rise by much, because domestic customers, worried about credit quality and with few alternatives, would take up the slack.

"The seven-year auction took place in an environment of maximum uncertainty on every front," Nomura's Resler said.

QUINN: Week of cutbacks might help

(From 4C)

For a nation that tends to feel that most of its tax money is being wasted, a couple of weeks under Gramm-Rudman budget cuts might not be a bad idea. With airline flights cut, certain social benefits slashed, parks closed and few personnel to process Social Security or Medicare claims, taxpayers would see that--occasional spending scandals aside--there really is a government honestly at work.

Jane Bryant Quinn's column, syndicated by Washington Post Writers Group appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Tuesday and Friday.

United Airlines places record order

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines Monday announced a $22 billion order for 128 Boeing aircraft, the largest airplane order in aviation history.

The agreement includes firm orders for 34 Boeing model 777s and 30 Boeing 747-400s, plus options on 34 model 777s and 30 model 747-400s.

United, the nation's biggest airline, had come close to placing the order earlier this year but postponed it in July at the request of UAL's labor unions, which are trying to buy the company.

This is United's third major aircraft order in 18 months. Its last order, for 370 Boeing jetliners, came in April 1989.

"This purchase will allow United to replace older aircraft as well as expand both its domestic and international services," said Stephen Wolf, chairman of UAL Corp., the parent company of Chicago-based United. "In short, it will ensure that this company is positioned to compete aggressively around the world."

The agreement represents the first order for Boeing's model 777, Wolf said.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 18.32 to 2,416.34 on top of Friday's 32.92-point gain.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange, with 793 up, 741 down and 440 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 164.98 million shares, against 187.94 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.42 to 165.84.

Analysts said investors seemed to be hypersensitive to any weak spots in corporate third-quarter earnings reports, which are due to reach their peak flow over the next couple of weeks.

A prominent case in point was provided today by International Business Machines, which posted a third-quarter profit of $1.95 a share, up from $1.51 a share in the corresponding span last year.

The figure came in toward the lower end of advance estimates, and IBM shares fell 1¾ to 98½ as traders combed through the data.

Eastman Kodak, also among the volume leaders, rose 3¼ to 37⅛, while Polaroid tumbled 6⅝ to 22⅝ after a delayed opening.

Late Friday a federal judge in Boston ordered Kodak to pay $909.5 million, much less than analysts had expected, to Polaroid in a prolonged case involving patents on instant cameras.

Boeing, which received a $22 billion aircraft order from UAL, gained 1¼ to 45¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 1.74 to 166.16. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.01 at 292.96.

Brokers said investors' spirits got a lift from declining oil prices. Otherwise, they said there wasn't much in the news to support the advance.

The figure came in toward the lower end of Wall Street estimates.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

The greater the risk, higher the interest

By Bill Doyle

Q. I put a large amount of money into a "thrift investment certificate." Photocopies of the certificate contract and the first monthly statement of interest credited to my account are enclosed.

I hope I made a wise choice. This thrift investment certificate pays a high rate of interest. But is it as safe as a certificate of deposit?

A. No, because of the simple fact that it is not covered by federal deposit insurance. And that is a basic reason why the thrift investment certificate pays higher interest than a CD. The rule of thumb goes as follows: The greater the risk, the higher the interest.

Doyle

The company that issued the thrift investment certificate had to pay high interest in order to attract investors. Most of the investing public has become very "yield conscious." People shop around for the highest interest rates obtainable, consistent with degrees of safety and risk.

Your thrift investment certificate is a debt security. When you put money into it, you loaned money to the company that issued the certificate. That company is your debtor. You are its creditor.

If all goes well, the company will meet the scheduled interest payments and redeem the certificate on its maturity date. The risk of default is not great. Nonetheless, it is present. Many companies borrow money by issuing various types of debt securities. The vast majority have turned out to be good investments. But you should be aware such securities are not risk-free, as are federally insured CDs.

Q. I invested $50,000 at 8.85 percent interest and received $375.82 for the first 31 days. Is that the correct amount?

A. It is, according to my handy little calculator and assuming interest is based on a 365-day year. Annual interest on $50,000 at 8.85 percent is $4,425. Divide $4,425 by 365 and then multiply by 31 and the answer if $375.82.

In some cases, interest is figured on 360-day year. That produces slightly higher dollars and cents interest.

Q. We will soon move 100 miles from where we now live and need to know how to judge or evaluate a new bank. Are there specific things we should ask about when we visit new banks?

A. You definitely should ask about services and costs.

In recently years, more and more banks have been charging for services that formerly were free. Every bank should be able to provide a list of services offered and fees charged. Steer clear of any bank that isn't businesslike enough to have a printed list to hand out.

Services and costs vary from one bank to another. Obtain lists from a number of banks and compare.

Convenient location near your home or place of employment can be a deciding factor, although it often should not be. Fast service, especially during busy times of the day, can be more important. That's why it's smart to check out banks during lunchtime.

As long as you stay within federal deposit insurance limits of $100,000 per depositor, you have no worries about safety. However, it can be an inconvenience when a bank you are using goes bust. So, pick a bank with a strong balance sheet and a current record of profitability.

Freeport-McMoRan settles suite with Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Freeport-McMoRan Oil & Gas Co. will pay Alaska $331,000 to settle a lawsuit alleging the company underpaid the state for its royalty share of North Slope oil, the state announced.

New Orleans-based Freeport is the third company to settle with the state in what is known as the Amerada Hess case, after the first of 12 companies named in the lawsuit. Amerada Hess Corp. settled last year for $318,624 and ARCO Alaska settled last month for $287 million.

Acoma community shifts readily from present to past

By Richard Benke
Associated Press Writer

SKY CITY, N.M. (AP) — An autumn chill now hangs over Sky City, a sun-hardened citadel of clay and rock that is said to be the oldest continuously occupied community in the United States.

On a recent day, hundreds of Indian dancers and potters displayed their talents as the Acoma Pueblo community observed the 350th annual San Estaban Feast Day, with sprinklings of cornmeal to bless the Earth.

Afterward, most Acomas returned to their homes in the valley below. But a few, mostly potters, are staying on for the windy winter atop this sandstone stronghold 7,000 feet above sea level.

"Up here on top of the mesa there are 12 to 15 families that live all year long," says Camille Pasquale, a potter who helps guide tourists through the ancient fortress, which survived a 16th-century Spanish invasion.

Survival cost dearly — 100 men killed, scores enslaved and many others punished by having their feet severed.

It's quiet now. The stillness soaks up sound. Voices 10 feet away vanish like steam. A little boy, following his dog down narrow lanes, shyly sneaks glances at strangers. Every other doorway displays pottery.

Every year the tribe chooses "field chiefs" who live here with their families, each generally representing one of Acoma's 14 clans.

The Acomas say they have been here more than 1,000 years. They first settled on neighboring Enchanted Mesa, which was later abandoned, and then 800 years ago moved to Sky City, a 367-foot-high mesa that was declared a national landmark in 1960.

Water is still carried in, not piped. No wires bring in phone calls or electricity. No gas lines here.

Like the ancient timbers used in the village's 17th-century San Esteban Mission Church, the firewood for heating and cooking is hauled here from as far away as Mount Taylor, 40 miles to the north.

San Esteban Feast Day, Acoma's big fall celebration, marked the end of the hot weather and the summer tourist season that brought in 200 to 300 visitors a day.

On Sept. 2, a procession carried the carved wooden statue of St. Stephen from his church on the southwest corner of the mesa to a shrine on the central plaza. The shrine, as always, was decorated with cuttings of corn, aspen and wild daisies, flanked by guards bearing muskets dating back more than a century.

Inside the shrine, tribal leaders formally accept the Acomas' offerings of food to the saint.

Then the white-buffalo dancers, each carrying a multicolored lightning bolt, begin their celebration, their bells and silver jewelry jangling. Three men in white skins, skirts and brown leggings and three women in wrapped white buckskin leggings and floral print shifts, black skirts and white sash vests dance to the beat of a single drummer.

Following them, a succession of other troupes enter in turn from different corners of the square, two by two, each performing in front of the shrine — the women with large red dots on their cheekbones, the men with rust-colored swabs, for protection. Fox pelts dangle from their belts. Fir boughs adorn their sleeves.

The church dominates the southwest corner of the mesa. The Acoma women helped Franciscan missionaries complete it from 1629 to 1640, just as they prepare it every year for the fiesta.

"The women and children brought the sand from the valley up in baskets," says Fran Torivio, a Sky City guide and cashier at the Acoma office below.

The walled courtyard in front of the church is a cemetery. The wall is topped with weathered adobe busts of warriors.

"These are the soldiers that guard the cemetery," Pasquale says.

The soldiers are restored annually before the fiesta with new potsherds for their eyes, and new smiles carved into the clay.

Acomas would lock themselves in the church when under attack by Navajos or Apaches, usually around harvest time, Torivio says.

Tourists still can climb down the ancient stairway carved in the mesa's northwest face, or they can ride a tour bus.

Acomas say their ancestors arrived here from Mesa Verde in what is now southern Colorado. According to legend, they were told by Iatiku, mother of all Indians, to seek a mesa resembling the tip of an ear of corn, which symbolizes Iatiku.

When they saw Enchanted Mesa, they believed they had arrived at the center of the Earth.

By various accounts, Enchanted Mesa was abandoned after earthquakes and-or rainstorms destroyed its ancient staircase, stranding a few residents on top. Some died jumping or falling, others starved. Most were already down on the valley floor, farming. They began anew at Sky City, leaving ruins on Enchanted Mesa.

Acomas say they've been at Sky City since about 1200.

In 1540, Spaniards came looking vainly for gold in the fabled Seven Cities of Cibola. It is said the golden glint of mica window panes reflecting the sunset attracted the Spaniards to Acoma.

"They thought this was the seven cities of gold, and they could see shining stuff in the rocks, but it's all sandstone," Torivio says.

Juan de Onate, Spanish governor of New Mexico, claimed Acoma for the king. The affable Acomas greeted him warmly in 1598, but eventually decided to resist.

When Onate's nephew, Juan de Zaldivar, stopped here shortly afterward for provisions, he and 12 of his men were massacred. Zaldivar's brother, Vicente, with a force of 70 men, quickly avenged their deaths.

Besides the 100 Acoma men slain, 60 young girls were taken to Mexico as slaves and the young men and women who remained here also were kept in servitude. Each adult man had a foot severed.

In the succeeding century, the Indians sometimes took their frustrations out on priests, throwing a couple of clerics off the cliff behind the church. But Acoma has been peaceful since 1680.

Spanish is not a language the Acomas generally speak, although many have Spanish surnames. They speak Keresan, an ancient Pueblo tongue, and English.

Most Acomas today live in villages such as Acomita and McCartys in the 30 miles between Sky City and Interstate 40, about 50 miles west of Albuquerque.

"Our total population is about 4,000 people, but they live in other villages because our other villages have electricity and running water," Torivio says. "That's where we have all the modern homes. That's where we have the TV, the shower and the microwave."

In the old days, Acoma potters got their clay from the mountains and mixed in ground-up shards from old pots. They made their pots by hand and fired them in wood-fueled adobe kilns.

The yucca stem is chewed so that a few fibers form a primitive brush. The fewer the fibers, the finer the brush line. The thin, repetitive lines represent rain — until recently Acoma's only source of water, collected in natural rock cisterns around the mesa.

During the peak tourism periods of summer, 20 to 30 potters sell their wares here, including Sky City's oldest resident, Concepcion Faustine, who is at least 80 years old.

"I've been here since 1909," she says. This day, she is selling Indian fry bread and small handmade pots painted with brown and black designs.

Decorate your home for the holidays with the big selection of pumpkins, corn shuck wreaths from Honduras, geese, fall leaves and foliage in hues of orange, yellow and rust. For a beautiful fire in your fireplace this year, try fire starter baskets, mesquite wood chips and Hearth Color Flames.

Ellen has a Christmas section with nativity scenes, carolers, angels, musical glitter domes (20 percent off through October 20), other decorations and Santa Clauses of all shapes and sizes for your home.

Two new shipments of windsocks with bright decorations for all occasions are hanging from the ceiling. Windsocks appropriate for the season include turkeys, birds, candy canes, Christmas trees and flowers.

Another terrific decorating idea that Ellen has in the store for you are miniature bicycles, golf clubs and bags, tandems and unicycles made to scale. You could display these on a coffee table or in a favorite bookcase or shelf.

Whiting and Davis bags and jewelry leather belts, bags and satchels and other delightful accessories are in stock.

Lots of greenery in the form of silk trees and plants, decorated bird cages, mushroom birds and brass containers, candlesticks and planters are are another great idea for the holidays. Try a custom designed centerpiece, wreath or swag designed by Charisie Van Liew, formerly of Fancy Fans and Lexene Weaver, who also works for the Midland Memorial Hospital gift shop as a floral designer.

Beautiful linen handkerchiefs, potpourri, afghans, very special soaps, natural bath sponges, snood barrettes, elegant powder puffs, wool dusters with natural lanolin, crystal, tapestry and needlepoint pillows and fancy picture frames are all in the new store.

Shop at SonSilks for an excellent selection of decorative and functional Root and Yankee Candles, potpourris and oils to brighten up and give your house a delightful scent. A simple yet elegant way to change the seasons is by changing colors of candles and candle rings, especially incorporating candles into your holiday floral arrangements.

No matter what fragrance you enjoy, from peach to cinnamon to blueberry to spiced apple and lots in between, SonSilks has the candle and candle accessories for you. SonSilks is a great source for other home fragrances in cones and sprays. Try a basketful of Inglenook cones on your fireplace hearth. As they warm beside the fire, the heat activates the tantalizing aroma. Look for the new soft sculptured baby toys such as stuffed playhouses and books that teach little ones how to zip and tie, Raggedy Ann and Andy dolls, charming dresssd up bears, cookbooks, old antique and collectible silver such as magnifiers on a chain, shell pendants, baby rattles, bubblers, spoon rings and bells.

A new shipment of handmade Lee Middleton original dolls is on display. The Daydream babies are priced at just $39.50. Also in is the Christmas Angel. These collectors dolls increase in value every year.

Another great decorating or gift idea is SonSilks selection of fine milled soaps, gels, bath salts, bath oil beads, lotions and natural sponges in bright colors.

Diet Center: A success story, call now for special weekly price

After she decided to quit smoking, Midlander Myrna Morris found herself gaining weight and she wasn't very happy about it. "I absolutely could not stop the weight gain on my own," she recalled. She felt that the diets she knew about were either too complicated, too slow or possibly even dangerous. She had tried walking, too but even that wasn't enough to stop the gain.

In April of this year, Ms. Morris saw an advertisement for Diet Center and called for more information.

That phone call led to a weight loss of 17½ pounds and almost two full dress sizes.

"The Diet Center plan is simple, nutritionally sound and works because of the daily weigh-in," she said, adding that the daily weigh-in "keeps you vigilant."

With a vitamin supplement, nutritional eating and daily guidance from her counselor, Diet Center owner Tina Blake, Ms. Morris reported, "On the program, I never had any problems with energy; I wasn't hungry since I had supplements and I ate on schedule."

Furthermore, she attributed her weight loss and keeping it off to sensible eating selections. "It's the choices you make in your diet that make you fat. With Diet Center, you learn what you can and cannot do."

Ms. Morris has reached her goal weight and is currently involved in Maintenance, a year long program which includes weekly private counseling and weigh-ins.

Myrna Morris, left, and Diet Center owner Tina Blake are both thrilled at the progress that Ms. Morris continues to make on the Diet Center program. Call Diet Center at 684-5081 for more information.

"The Diet Center plan suits me well," she assessed. "The food choices and the simplicity make it work for me. I didn't even have to stop eating out — I just learned to make the correct food choices and use portion control."

"It was even convenient for me when I was coming for daily weigh-ins — I just came in the mornings on the way to work."

Diet Centers across North America have helped more than 4,000,000 men, women and children lose weight. In fact, when dieters take full advantage of the Diet Center program, they lose an average of 16 to 25 pounds in just six weeks. Male dieters can lose up to one pound per day.

Diet Center surveys show that dieters also experience an inch loss (overall body measurement) of one inch per pound lost because 92% of all weight lost is from adipose tissue.

This rate of weight loss can be continued safely until ideal weight is reached.

Diet Center helps individuals to learn the techniques of personal, lifelong weight management. Radical medical procedures, reliance on prepackaged foods or liquid formulas, pills, hypnosis or anything else which reduces the need for personal commitment presents only a short term solution for weight loss.

The Diet Center program provides the perfect long term solution to weight loss. The underlying prinicples are:

- stabilization of the blood sugar concentration
- a combination of sound nutrition principles with a focus on complex carbohydrates, naturally occurring sugars, fiber and bulk

Ms. Blake guides her clients through four necessary stages of the weight loss program and teaches them how to maintain ideal weight permanently. These stages are Conditioning, Reducing, Stabilization and Maintenance. Nutritional eating habits are established for lifelong weight maintenance.

In addition to an average weight loss of 16 pounds, the nutritional diet of the Diet Center Life Management program has been proven to effectively reduce blood pressure by 7% systolic and 14% diastolic; to decrease total cholesterol levels by 13%; to reduce total cholesterol to HDL cholesterol ratio by 11%; to lower LDL cholesterol by 16% and to reduce triglycerides by 55%.

These results are based on an 8 week evaluation study commissioned by Diet Center, Inc. and undertaken by 15 overweight and obese individuals at the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center in Provo, Utah.

Is Diet Center for you?

There are no contracts to sign or hidden costs at Diet Center. A one-time registration fee is $50. Now through November 30 you pay only $39.95 a week. This all-inclusive weekly fee covers private daily counseling and weigh-in sessions as well as the daily nutritional supplement.

Call Tina Blake today at 694-5081 to arrange an appointment for a free consultation. Or come by Diet Center's new location at 2034 W. Cuthbert, across from Memorial Stadium. Hours are from 7:00 a.m. to 12 noon and 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Find out how Diet Center can change your life. What do you have to lose?

Chaparral Wash & Lube: Get free car wash with oil change

Prepare your car for fall and winter driving with an oil change and car wash from Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, 2300 N. Big Spring. Your car is one of your most valued possessions and you need to properly maintain it inside and out during the change of seasons.

You won't have to lift a finger when you drive in to Chaparral Wash and Lube Center. Just sit back and let the friendly, dedicated technicians pamper your car for a fresh, clean look for fall. Chaparral Wash and Lube Center offers the terrific combination of a quality quick oil and lube change and maintenance check with a free car wash.

Chaparral Wash and Lube has been well known for years for the best car wash Midland has to offer. Service and meticulous attention to detail are Chaparral trademarks. Chaparral owner, Texas Tech graduate and Midland businessman Leon Jeffcoat invites you in to measure the difference that this centrally-located wash and lube center has to offer.

Jeffcoat recommends an oil change for your car every three months or 3,000 miles. If you can't remember the last time you had an oil change, then it's surely time to have one. A free car wash is offered with each oil change in the Chaparral lube center.

Prices for the oil change and lube range from $16.50 to $22.50. Pennzoil, Quaker State, Havoline and other major brands of oil are available. You can count on more than just an oil change and lube in the Chaparral lube center. Technician C.C. Banks enjoys a reputation for being friendly, knowledgeable and able to trouble spot car problems. "C.C., in addition to being personable, has many years of experience in car maintenance," explained Jeffcoat.

Depend on the Chaparral technicians to examine your battery, tires, belts and hoses. Your vehicle is also checked for important proper fluid levels, including brake, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if your car needs it. For an additional charge, Chaparral can install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills. The friendly professionals at Chaparral Wash and Lube can help give your car the look and feel you want for one of your most valuable possessions.

Come by soon and pamper your car with some of the extra Chaparral services you can combine with your car wash. Check out the advantages of a professionally administered detail job from Chaparral. "We offer our service for a low price, in comparison to other businesses," commented Chaparral manager Steve Thompson.

A detail job includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, glazing, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices for this service range from $49 to $79, and a staff member can drive you back to work or home and pick you up when the job is complete.

A full service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Standard vans and Suburbans are just $2.00 extra. Each car is treated to a thorough wash down before it is cleaned gently by the brushes. Vacuuming, hand drying and window cleaning are included in the low price.

Save time while getting your car washed and have your car filled with Texaco gasoline and get a discount towards the wash. Fill up with more than 18 gallons and your wash is free.

Generally open on rainy days, Chaparral's lube center and gasoline pumps are at your service. With the purchase of gasoline or an oil change, if the clouds are threatening, you'll receive a rain check for your next car wash.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center customers are return customers because the service is consistently professional and friendly. Stop by 2300 N. Big Spring for an oil change and a free car wash soon. From left are Chaparral owner Leon Jeffcoat, lube center technician C.C. Banks and Chaparral customer Charles Coleman.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is conveniently located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer Drive. Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover cards are accepted. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for more information.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Many questioned on assassination

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Search for killers of Egypt's Parliament speaker continued for a fourth day with hundreds of suspects rounded up Monday, including Iraqis, Palestinians and Jordanian extremists.

The Cabinet of Prime Minister Atef Sedki meanwhile recommended stricter security measures to safeguard against terrorist attempts after reviewing a report by Abdel-Halim Moussa, the interior minister in charge of police.

Moussa said in his report that the killing of Speaker Rifaat el-Mahgoub, his driver and four security men Friday in Cairo was carried out by Arabs who infiltrated the country by using facilities provided to Egyptians returning from Kuwait and Iraq, according to the state-run newspaper Al Gomhouria.

The leading state-owned newspaper Al-Ahram said Monday that security authorities have evidence the killers were Arabs who had sneaked into Egypt.

The government has accused Iraq of sending saboteurs to spread terror in Egypt to punish it for its opposition to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

TB growing with AIDS

GENEVA (AP) — Tuberculosis-related deaths should increase sharply because of the "parallel epidemic" of AIDS, the World Health Organization warned Monday.

A survey by the Geneva-based group estimated that almost half of the 6 million to 8 million people believed infected with the virus that causes AIDS also have TB, which claims about 3 million lives annually and is the No. 1 killer among contagious diseases.

Data collected by WHO suggest those with both TB and the HIV virus develop acquired immune deficiency syndrome "dramatically" faster.

Radio man ambushed

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The co-owner of a radio station, known for his leftist views, was ambushed by gunmen in three cars and shot to death in the capital Monday, authorities said.

The Fire Department said in a statement that Humberto Gonzalez Gamarra, 49, co-owner of Radio Nuevo Mundo, was found severely wounded in his car in the southwestern section of the city but died a few minutes later at the hospital.

Police said they had no clues who assassinated Gonzalez, or why.

Witnesses said assailants in three vehicles chased Gonzalez's car for several blocks, one of them blocked its path at the entrance of a shopping mall, and the other two pulled up alongside, according to the news release.

The men then opened fire and fled, the news release said.

Firecrackers explode

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Twelve people were killed Monday in accidents involving the manufacture of firecrackers for this week's Hindu "Festival of Lights," a news agency reported.

A one-year-old boy, his mother and 90-year-old grandfather were killed by an explosion at an unlicensed fireworks factory in the south Indian vilage of Villupuram, Press Trust of India said.

The boy's father, who owned the factory, was badly injured.

A second firecracker accident in Villupuram, 85 miles south of Madras, killed three adults and a child, Press Trust said.

In New Delhi, three teen-agers were burned to death while making firecrackers, the news agency said.

In Lucknow, 250 miles southeast of New Delhi, two people were burned to death and three others were seriously injured when fire broke out in a firecracker shop, Press Trust said.

Throughout the country, illegal backroom factories are making firecrackers for Thursday's celebration of Diwali, the Hindu festival marking the day when Lord Rama returned home victorious from battle and was crowned king.

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Monday appealed to people who left East Germany to return home and help repair that part of the new united Germany.

His remark came as Kohl hailed his party's Sunday election victories in now-defunct East Germany, where his Christian Democrats won the most votes in four out of five states.

The victories strengthened Kohl's already good chances of winning united Germany's first national parliamentary vote seven weeks from now.

He told reporters steps should be taken to "encourage those who left the DDR (East Germany), whenever and for whatever reason, to return."

He said that would be a "very important contribution to rebuilding" former East Germany, which is beset by skyrocketing unemployment and other formidable problems.

WATER WHEEL
The soft splash of water tumbling over a water wheel creates a cool and rustic retreat right in your own backyard. There's a full-size traceable section for the wheel and the base is an easy-to-build box made from marine-grade plywood. Your plants will love the mist created by the slowly turning wheel. Drainage holes allow the water to return to the recirculating pump (available at most hardware and home centers).
