Inside view

WASHINGTON — The Republican tide on Capitol Hill has swept some lobbyists inside Congress where they have taken prominent positions on the very committees they used to lobby. Among them is Charles Kahn, who as a top strategist for the Health Insurance Association of America was an architect of the famous "Harry and Louise" TV ads that skewered President Clinton's health plan. On Thursday, Kahn became staff director of the House Ways and Means health subcommittee./8A

Haitian guns down U.S. soldier

Shooting marks first death from hostile fire, officials say

■ Second American soldier was wounded before gunman was killed, embassy spokesman says.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A former Haitian army officer shot and killed a U.S. soldier at a military checkpoint Thursday, the first American death from hostile fire in Haiti, Haitian and U.S. officials said.

A second American soldier was wounded before the gunman was shot and killed, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stan Schrager.

The gunman was a passenger in a white pickup truck that ran a checkpoint just after noon in the village of Bigot, just south of Gonaives, which is 60 miles north of the capital, Shrager said.

Two U.S. soldiers in a Humvee chased the truck, and then approached on foot when it stopped, he said. The Haitian gunman emerged shooting, killing one soldier and wounding the other.

A third American soldier arrived at the scene and shot and killed the gunman, he said. The names of the American soldiers weren't released.

"Apparently it was a criminal activity and not directed at the U.S.," Schrager said.

An angry crowd pursued and captured the driver of the truck, who tried to flee on foot, said Gerarde Elysse, a spokeswoman for the Interior Ministry of the Haitian district where the shooting occurred.

"He was almost killed by the crowd," Elysse told The Associated Press. "He was saved in the nick of time."

Elysse identified the gunman as former Maj. Aurel Frederic, a former member of former dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier's private militia, and the driver as Jules Cesar, a bodyguard to Duvalier's interior and defense minister, Roger LaFontant.

Frederic was kicked out of the military in 1989 in a dispute with then-dictator Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

The U.S. soldiers were part of a Special Forces contingent stationed in outlying towns as part of the multinational force that cleared the way for the return of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September after three years of military rule.

Aristide issued a statement Thursday offering condolences for the soldier's death, and pledging that the incident "will not derail the process of peace and reconciliation" in Haiti.

The surviving American soldier was undergoing surgery for a wounded arm, said Schrager. He said the driver was being questioned.

List for new Lee coach narrows to eight from 18

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Independent School District is moving quickly in an effort to replace Earl Miller as the head football coach at Midland Lee.

Eighteen coaches applied for that job by the 5 p.m. Wednesday deadline and on Thursday that list was trimmed to eight finalists, according to Tim Whalen, Midland athletic director.

The eight finalists in alphabetical order are Bob Alpert, Aldine MacArthur; David Browning, Oklahoma State University; Bobby Etheridge, Texas Christian University; Buster Leaf, Lubbock Monterey; John Parchman, Llano; Kelvin Ratliff, a current Lee assistant coach; Jim Slaughter, Lufkin; and Allen Wilson, Tyler John Tyler.

"We will begin the interview process with those eight coaches next week," Whalen said. "We hope to have a name to present to the school board by Jan. 24."

Miller officially delivered his resignation last December, but had announced in August that this would be his last season at Lee in order to join his wife in San Antonio.

The Miller era, the most successful nine-year run in the school's football history, will now pass on to one of the eight candidates on the short list.

Wilson is a Lee graduate who has won state championships at Class 4A Paris and Class 5A Tyler John Tyler. John Ty-

Developer finds success with first project

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A Midland woman is enjoying success in her first attempt at real-estate development in building the first new subdivision within the city limits in more than 20 years.

Jan Melton, a veteran of the Midland real-estate business, is developing a 100-acre plot of land between Solomon Lane and the Midland Country Club, off Loop 250.

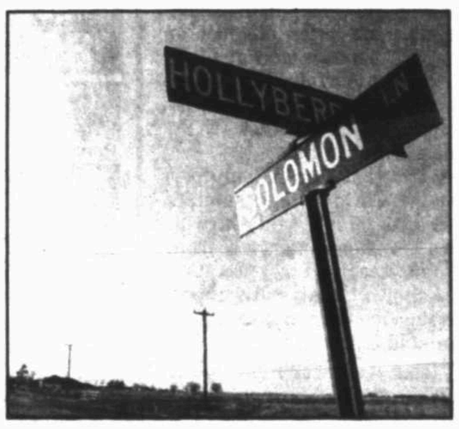

The project is Ms. Melton's first crack at development and is the first such enterprise in Midland in decades, she said. Twelve of the 26 up-scale lots — which cover an average of two acres each — already have been sold, she said.

"It's a good location — one mile off Loop 250," Ms. Melton said of the land she'd been hoping to acquire for some years.

"It's high ground, so you don't have to worry about being in a flood plane . . . You can see the Midland skyline," she said.

Working with the city of Midland, Ms. Melton has had the area zoned "A-E," which means residents in the area can have horses and other non-commercial livestock — such as 4-H animals — on the property, she said.

School board to tackle issue of violence on MISD campuses

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When trying to break up a confrontation between two students, Alamo Junior High School Principal David W. Dennis had his eyeglasses knocked off and his hand slammed into a glass case a few months ago. On Dec. 17, one 16-year-old girl stabbed another four times with a lock-blade knife; a riot followed at Lee Freshman High School. Midland police broke it up. Students have brought weapons to school and teachers for years have complained about verbal confrontations.

"The real dilemma is what to do about this violence," said Midland school board President Jackie Hamilton.

In order to put all the issues surrounding school discipline on the table, sort them out and come up with solutions, Midland Independent School District's Board of Education will attend a retreat Jan. 28.

The public is invited to observe the retreat, but comment from the audience usually is not taken. The retreat is a forum for trustees to take time outside of regularly scheduled meetings to work on specific school district needs. The retreat is scheduled for 8:30-11:30 a.m., but discussion may continue through lunch into the early afternoon.

"We will be discussing discipline, the MISD Police Department, violence on

Pope begins first stage of 11-day tour

MANILA, Philippines (NYT) — He joked on Thursday about the cane that supports him when he walks. He ruffled his security detail by plunging unscheduled into a sea of dancers who pressed close around him. He signaled the stirrings of a new campaign to nurture religious freedom in China.

All in all, on the first day of his first extended foray in 16 months, Pope John Paul II was a man determined to let it be known that 74 years, two surgical operations, and a dislocated shoulder over the last two years offered no reason to shirk the way he sees his duties as the pastor for the world.

Under sultry tropical skies, the pope landed in Manila on Thursday after a 12-hour overnight flight from Rome on the first stage of an 11-day tour that will take him on to Papua New Guinea, Australia, and Sri Lanka. While he has undertaken 62 previous voyages outside Italy since he was elected in 1978, this journey was special — an attempt to redress a difficult year in 1994 when security problems forced him to cancel visits to Beirut and Sarajevo and ill health obliged him to put off trips to Belgium and the United States.

Almost from the start, the pope was at pains to deny suggestions that his papacy is in decline; indeed, he sought to send the message that he was not planning to make a habit of canceled visits or intimations of infirmity.

Speaking to reporters aboard his plane, he appeared rosy-cheeked, robust, and spry — more so, at least, than he has for months — fielding questions in English, Italian, German, Spanish, and French.

"As you see, I'm carrying a cane, and the cane is used to give some people a jab, maybe to some journalists, too," he said, making a pun in Italian on the common root of the words for cane and jab.

The pope began using the cane after hip replacement surgery following a fall in April in which he broke his right leg.

"The leg is not sufficiently strong, and that's why I carry a cane," he went on. "This is the realistic situation."

Well, then, someone asked, did that mean he would gainsay those who speculated about more serious health problems?

After the coming trip, he said, "whoever is still alive will see." And he went on to lay out plans for visits to Belgium and Slovakia and Africa and Austria and maybe Berlin and America. He did not say exactly when these trips would take place but indicated that it would be in the next year or two. Someone else asked if he planned to go to Slovenia.

Russia to help Israel launch new satellite

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — The country that once armed Israel's enemies is now helping the Jewish state launch a satellite.

The Gurwin-1, named after a New York philanthropist, will be launched March 28 from Russia and carried into orbit by a SS-25 ballistic missile of the type once armed with Soviet nuclear warheads.

What's more, the team of Israeli scientists completing work on the satellite in a northern Israel laboratory are mostly immigrants from the former Soviet Union.

"Touch this and die," warns a sign in Cyrillic lettering in the laboratory at the Space Research Institute at Technion University, the engineering school that initiated the project and designed the satellite.

The satellite will serve as a testing platform for 12 hi-tech Israeli firms and will also serve academic researchers. One project involves using the satellite to set up a space-based computer network for about 1,000 users.

The project, which cost $4 million over the past two years, reflects the importance placed on specialized technology by Israel, with its relatively small population and paucity of natural resources.

It also opens a new frontier for Jewish donors, who until now have made do with little plaques on trees, park benches and auditoriums, by immortalizing Joseph Gurwin, a Lithuanian-born businessman from Great Neck, N.Y., who donated $1 million.

"I'm told that I'm the only person in the world with a satellite named after him," said Gurwin, 74, in a telephone interview from his Palm Beach, Fla., vacation home. "But what's really important is showing the world that Israel can build a satellite."

The Gurwin-1's orbit — always facing the sun at an angle 76 degrees from the equator — cannot be achieved by firing from Israel without risking scattering debris on Arab neighbors.

With Russia now interested in turning Cold War hardware into hard currency, the Technion's space center director Giora Shaviv was able to cut a deal to fire north from Russia's nuclear missile test launch site at Plesetsk, 550 miles north of Moscow. Spent rocket stages will fall on the Arctic.

The Israeli government provided grants for the project aimed at solving another challenge of the post-Cold War era: providing employment for the many scientists among the 600,000 immigrants who came here from the former Soviet Union since 1990.

As a result, 13 of 25 permanent researchers are former Soviet Jews.

Russian artillery pounds capital; troops move in

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russian forces bombarded the capital of Chechnya on Thursday with their fiercest attack yet, showering the disintegrating city with waves of artillery and rockets as rebel resistance neared collapse.

Demoralized bands of haggard Chechen fighters resisted the ferocious new onslaught. Incoming Russian troops vowed to take the capital and end the month-long fighting in the secessionist republic.

Rebels retreated house by house from Russian forces closing relentlessly on the battered presidential palace in the city's heart. Russian helicopters sounded overhead for the first time.

Plumes of black smoke spiraled hundreds of feet over the city while shells slammed into buildings. Machine-gun and small-arms fire echoed as Moscow's troops attacked from three directions.

Chechen fighters, who had talked in recent days of defeating the Russian army, were visibly worried and exhausted. Large units had dwindled to a few men, and some groups were seen moving out of the city.

Among the latest refugees were members of President Dzhokhar Dudayev's government, who continued to arrive in neighboring Ingushetia, the Russian government press service said. They planned to fly abroad, it said.

Dudayev's whereabouts were not immediately clear.

Russian troops poured into Chechyna, a mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million in the Caucasus Mountain, on Dec. 11 to crush its independence movement. They encountered fierce resistance, but Chechen zeal has flagged this week.

Rebel officers claimed Thursday that their forces retained the palace, but they acknowledged the fight was not going well. Associated Press correspondents got to within about 500 yards of the devastated building, but furious shelling kept them from seeing who held it.

Chechen fighters, who had talked in recent days of defeating the Russian army, were visibly worried and exhausted. Large units had dwindled to a few men, and some groups were seen moving out of the city.

Rebels were short of ammunition. Several men in their 60s, armed with pistols and daggers, helped fill positions.

Hundreds of Russian tanks, armored personnel carriers and troop trucks were moving on several roads toward Grozny. In villages along the route, Chechens tried desperately to organize defense units but had only rifles and no heavy weapons.

Some Russian soldiers who would not give their names said they would take Grozny with the latest offensive.

Russia clearly has interpreted as a sign of weakness Dudayev's admission that his fighters could not defeat the Russian army. On Wednesday, the war's one-month mark, Dudayev said he was ready for peace talks.

Overnight, the Russian air force dropped dozens of bombs on Grozny, which was nearly deserted Thursday except for small bands of rebel soldiers. Dazed dogs wandered through the rubble.

A bewildered woman, tears streaming down her face, wandered down a main thoroughfare as shells exploded nearby. "Jesus, what are they doing to us?" she asked. "They are not human."

On Thursday night, a shell apparently set fire to a natural-gas pipeline in an outlying neighborhood. The Interfax news agency said a fountain of flames as high as 10 feet was leaping from the ruptured line.

Thousands of people are believed to have been killed in the war, although casualty estimates vary wildly.

The Russian government said 394 of its troops had been killed in the war; a day earlier, a legislator put that number at 1,500 or more. A Chechen spokesman told Interfax that 3,000 to 4,000 Russians had been killed during January.

The ground assault on Grozny began New Year's Eve and has turned the city into a smoking ruin littered with corpses and rubble.

Two small markets remained open in the south of the city, selling bread, dried fish and American soft drinks and candy bars.

Midland to see sunny skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-60s and northwest to north winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be sunny with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 43, Thursday's high reached 68, compared to the record high for that date of 77 set in 1957. The record low was 5 set in 1963.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms rumbled across parts of Texas on Thursday, dropping large hail and prompting a tornado watch for large portions of South and East Texas for most of the night.

Powerful storms tracked across South, East and North Texas during the evening, leaving behind three-quarter-inch hail at Lost Maples State Park.

Several reports of pea-size hail were reported in the northern part of the county near West and reports of dime- to quarter-size hail were reported in Waxahachie.

Most of East Texas remained under a flash flood watch Thursday night as did Kaufman County in North Central Texas. Weather radar estimated 1 to 2 inches of rain had fallen in the town of Kaufman and up to 3 inches had fallen in other portions of the county.

Late Thursday afternoon, a Pacific cold front had moved east out of West Texas. A secondary push of cooler air was entering the northern sections of the South Plains. As thicker cloud cover moved out of the region, partly to mostly sunny were reported in the western sections, while eastern sections were still under mostly cloudy to cloudy skies.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 60s in most areas other than the Panhandle and the mountains, where temperatures were in the 50s.

Friday's forecast for West Texas calls for mostly sunny skies over the region with highs in the from the mid-50s in the Panhandle to the low 70s along the Rio Grande. Lows are expected in the 20s in the north to the lower 40s near Big Bend.

For South Texas, partly cloudy skies are forecast Friday temperatures in the upper 60s to near 70. Winds will be northwest 15 mph to 20 mph.

NATION

Bitter cold had a grip on parts of New England and freezing rain fell in the Midwest on Thursday. Scattered rain fell in storm-stricken California.

More storms were forecast throughout California after 10 days of heavy rain left at least eight people dead and flooded homes and businesses. Showers were reported in the Sacramento Valley and new flood warnings were issued along the Russian River in Northern California, along with watches in southwestern Oregon and Southern California's San Diego area.

For the period of Jan. 3-12, Santa Barbara got 17.19 inches of rain, compared with its normal rainfall of 8.54 inches. Los Angeles received 9.43 inches, compared with the normal 7.84 inches, while Malibu had 13.18 inches, compared with the usual 8.25 inches.

Strong wind howled in the West's higher elevations. Gusts over 70 mph were reported in the northern Sierra Nevada.

Freezing rain persisted in the upper Midwest and parts of the Northeast. Milder air in the Northeast changed sleet and freezing rain to rain, though parts of New England received snow, including a foot in Boston.

Fog caused delays or cancellations of flights in Boston, Warwick, R.I., Madison, Detroit and Chicago.

Temperatures were frigid in northern Maine and New Hampshire, mostly in the 20s and 30s. Snow and freezing rain wreaked havoc on Connecticut highways.

Temperatures were mild in portions of the South, with highs of 79 in Camden, Conway, El Dorado and Fort Smith in Arkansas. Ohio enjoyed a winter warm wave Thursday.

The high in Toledo was 63 degrees and the high in Mansfield was 60. The high also was 60 degrees in Fort Wayne, Ind.

The temperature reached 82 degrees in McAllen, Texas.

Pick 3 Texas

SUCCESS: Subdivision is city's first in 20 years

(From 1A)

Tight deed restrictions are designed to maintain builder's property values, she said. Houses must be 3,000 or 3,200 square feet or more with a minimum three-car garage, she said. Also, there can be no mobile homes and there are some restrictions on storage buildings, she said. Housing on the properties is expected to be in the price range of $175,000 to $400,000. The various lots cost $30,000 to $35,000 each.

There will be a homeowners' association to help ensure that barns and other structures match codes and that junk does not detract from the gently rolling and spacious landscape that is the subdivision's primary attraction, Ms. Melton explained.

Roads for the new subdivision are being cut and paved. The roads are not curbed and are very wide — 71 feet — adding to the rural appearance of the properties, she said.

A five-bedroom model home has been built on the first lot off Solomon Road and is open for viewing on Sundays from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., she said. Ms. Melton plans to build more houses for sale in the subdivision.

The city of Midland supplies water, wastewater and every other municipal service to the lots, thus avoiding many of the hassles of actual country living, Ms. Melton said. Local cable television also is run to the area.

"It's got the country look, but with city amenities," she said.

Cap Rock Electric Utilities provides power to the new subdivision; gas also will be available.

Ms. Melton praised city officials who helped her through the grueling process of creating a new subdivision. "I appreciate the way city (officials) tried to help," she said. "I'm sure that I made their lives miserable," she joked.

Ms. Melton said she was initially lost in regard to the complex processes of securing state and municipal approval for the various construction projects that provide roads and utilities to 26 lots.

But the process is nearly completed and construction is under way, she said. Those who have purchased lots will likely begin building their homes in the spring, she said.

Response has been so promising for the subdivision, Ms. Melton is already moving ahead with another development plan for the area — a section of upscale townhouses to abut the country club land, she said.

Ms. Melton plans to name the townhouses "Thornberry Estates," to continue the theme of the subdivision, which also will be named "Thornberry," she said. New streets in the subdivision will bear names such as "Blackberry" and "Hollyberry."

LIST: Interview process to begin next week

ler's state crown came just last month in the small school division.

Etheridge, seeking to return to the high school ranks, won a state championship at Class 5A Killeen in 1991. Browning is another coach seeking to return from the college ranks. He last coached high school at Lee in 1984, leaving one year after the Rebels went to the state finals under then head coach Spike Dykes.

Leaf, Parchman and Ratliff all have former ties with Lee. Leaf has been head coach at McCamey, Levelland and Lubbock Monterey where he has placed all three schools in the state playoffs. Parchman left Lee as a defensive assistant coach after the 1993 season to coach at Llano where he put that team in the state playoffs in his first season, ending a long Llano playoff drought. Ratliff is a current defensive assistant coach who knows the Lee system well and has always been well liked by Rebel players.

Slaughter has had playoff teams at San Angelo Lake View, Corpus Christi Carroll and Lufkin. He lost to Plano this past season in the third round of the state playoffs.

Those who have Lee ties and who did not make the final eight cut were Ralph Harris, current offensive line coach who won a state title at Class 3A Sealy and also coached in District 4-5A at Big Spring; Ronnie Stephens, who left Lee after the 1993 season for Burleson as an assistant coach; and Randy Quisenberry, who formerly was an assistant at both Lee and Midland High and is now an assistant at Odessa Permian.

Others who applied were Larry Haynes, Clear Lake; Larry Zierlein, Louisiana State University; Jerry Stewart, Cleburne; Michael Spencer, St. Thomas Aquinas, Fla.; Johnny Ringo, Uvalde; Gary Comer, Ceder Hill; and Jim Mickler, Sinton.

MISD: School board to discuss campus violence

(From 1A)

campus and the drug and alcohol problem," Ms. Hamilton said.

She said board members will listen to presentations from administrators before discussing discipline problems at the elementary and secondary schools.

"We need to talk about what is not working and come up with whatever it takes. Too often, students are being sent to the office and nothing is being done. They just end up back in the classroom," Ms. Hamilton said.

At Tuesday's school board meeting Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said, "The lack of respect for authority in this society is overwhelming." He said some television programs like "Beavis and Butthead" encourage students to act belligerently.

Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary education, said there are varying degrees of discipline problems.

"If a student doesn't bring a pencil to class, that is a discipline problem. If a student calls a teacher a name, that is also a discipline problem," Torres said.

Torres noted that the school board sees the most extreme discipline cases during expulsion hearings, which are scheduled in closed sessions before regular school board meetings.

"The board often sees the extreme cases, not what goes on day in and day out in the classroom," he said.

Nonetheless, Torres said teachers deal daily with different degrees of bad behavior.

In the case of the junior high school confrontation, Principal Dennis said he was attempting to break up a scuffle between two students.

"They didn't stop when I asked them to, and when one of the students swung to hit the other, I grabbed his hand, knocking my hand back into a glass showcase."

Ms. Hamilton said her greatest disappointment in the Lee Freshman High School stabbing incident is that the violence spread across the campus. "Some of the best students, the outstanding students, disobeyed and became argumentative when they were told to go back to class," she said. She said angry students "fed off of each other."

Torres said the bottom line is that when it comes to dealing with students, teachers and discipline problems, it's dealing with human nature. "And dealing with human nature is a far from perfect situation."

Nonetheless, school board trustees hope to find a way to reign in behavior problems.

SHOOT: Second soldier undergoes surgery has produced a crime wave, often blamed on unemployed gunmen who once enforced military rule and now are looking for another way to make a living.

Aristide has slashed the size of the army that ousted him from 6,000 men to 1,500, leaving many former soldiers without work. Last month, scores of discharged soldiers stormed army headquarters to demand back pay, prompting gunfights that left at least four people dead.

Overall, however, the U.S.-led mission has encountered little resistance, and Clinton administration officials earlier this week said the U.S. military would transfer authority to a U.N. force by mid-March.

At the height of the intervention last fall, there were 21,000 U.S. soldiers in Haiti. About 6,000 remain in the 8,000-member multinational force.

Four other Americans participating in the mission have died.

Genetic tinkering promises more ethanol fuel

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The bug that gave you a buzz at the bar may soon power the taxi that takes you home, help clean the air you breathe, and make your garbage useful.

That's the promise in the work of researchers who used some genetic engineering to promote fermentation of a natural substance called hemi-cellulose — a process necessary for efficient mass production of ethanol, or grain alcohol.

"It's not unlike the fermentation that is used to make alcoholic beverages," said Stephen Picataggio, one of five researchers whose work is described in a paper published in this week's Science magazine. "Alcoholic beverages have to come from a grain that is food grade. In this case, it doesn't have to be."

So, instead of a drinking-grade alcohol, the researchers produced an environment-conscious fuel.

Ethanol already is in limited use as a fuel, most often blended with gasoline.

"Companies are contacting us about possible applications," said Charles W. Wyman, director of the alternative fuel division at a Department of Energy laboratory in Golden, Colo. "This is a step toward making ethanol more competitive for blending applications; this is a big step."

Wyman said the magnitude of energy sources made available through the new process for conversion to ethanol is "potentially enough to replace all gasoline."

Researchers at the National Renewable Energy Laboratory genetically engineered a strain of a bacterium called zymomonas mobilis. In its new state it can produce ethanol from all the sugars — not just some, as before — found in agricultural residues such as corn fiber, sawdust and other forestry residues, and energy crops grown specifically to be converted to ethanol.

The raw material, Wyman said, can include waste paper, municipal solid waste, newspaper and other materials discarded as trash.

Burning ethanol instead of gasoline in a car reduces carbon dioxide, the principal contributor to global warming, by 90 percent, Wyman said.

Since 60 percent of transportation fuel is imported, use of ethanol would cut dependency on foreign oil, create 17,000 jobs for every billion gallons and remove automobiles as a cause of ozone smog formation, Wyman added.

The cost of ethanol has dropped from $3.60 a gallon in 1980 to $1.22 and the goal is to get the price down to 60 cents a gallon so it can compete economically with gasoline, he said.

The agricultural and forestry residues suitable for making ethanol are called "biomass" and are composed of cellulose, hemi-cellulose and lignin.

Microorganisms have long been available to ferment the glucose derived from cellulose, which is what chemists call a six-carbon sugar.

Picataggio and his colleagues turned to the zymomonas bacterium, which is used as a natural fermentation agent in producing liquor.

Colombia marvels at survivor of plane crash that killed 52

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — A 9-year-old girl who escaped a fiery plane crash with only a broken shoulder lay in a hospital bed Thursday, unaware she was the only survivor of the plunge that killed her parents and 50 other people.

Colombians were stunned that Erika Delgado emerged alive from the Wednesday night crash that scattered mangled bodies and wreckage of the DC-9 jetliner across farmland and a swamp outside this Caribbean resort.

"I've never seen anything like this," said Civil Aviation Director Alvaro Raad Gomez. "This is a true miracle from God!"

The Intercontinental Aviation jet was descending after dark toward Cartagena's airport when it plunged out of control. The crew apparently didn't have time to radio a distress call before the plane hit a field and exploded.

Erika landed in swamp vegetation. Farmers looking for survivors in the darkness heard her calls for help. At a Cartagena hospital, doctors found she was unhurt except for her broken shoulder and some bruises.

As searchers gathered the mangled bodies of dozens of crash victims and took them to a makeshift morgue at Cartagena's sports arena, Colombia marveled at the young survivor.

'The airplane was descending and suddenly I found myself sitting on some grass.'

—Erika Delgado survivor

Stories in two newspapers about Erika's survival were headlined simply: "Miracle!"

"We have no idea why she is still alive," said Dr. Carmelo Duenas, who treated her at University Hospital.

To spare her further stress, doctors said they haven't told Erika her mother, father and brother died in the crash.

"When we will tell her depends on her psychological state and the advice of her relatives," said Dr. Angelo Alarios.

Air traffic controllers said the pilot of another plane reported seeing an explosion aboard the Intercontinental jet at 14,000 feet.

But the pilot, Jose Luis Sarmiento of the charter service Aerocoral, told reporters Thursday he reported seeing the Intercontinental plane explode on the ground, not in mid-flight.

Investigators refused to rule out any possibility for the crash, including a bomb. Witnesses said the plane was on fire before it hit the ground.

Clues may be found in the cockpit voice recorder, which was recovered Thursday. The flight data recorder was still missing.

Doctors say Erika remembers nothing about the crash.

"The airplane was descending and suddenly I found myself sitting on some grass," she reportedly told Alarios.

Two security guards kept reporters and onlookers from Erika's hospital wing.

"She is in tremendous emotional shock," said Dr. Carlos Garcia.

Erika's parents saved for months to visit relatives in Bogota and were returning home when the plane went down, according to a Cartagena reporter.

Foundation's grant boosts awareness

A Midland-based organization that is achieving tremendous success in educating young people about the dangers posed by illegal drugs got a much-needed shot in the arm Wednesday from Abell-Hanger Foundation — and the result should be expanded drug-awareness for a segment of Midland youth not presently included in existing programs.

D-FY-IT, which stands for Drug Free Youth in Texas, received the $15,000 matching grant from the foundation and will use the funds to expand its drug-education program to youngsters in the 7th-9th grades. D-FY-IT already exists in the 10th-12th grades, and the D.A.R.E. program (Drug Resistance Awareness Education) reaches children in the lower grades, but stops in the 6th grade.

Regrettably, that leaves youngsters in the 7th-9th grades without a drug education program at the time in their lives when, due to the changes of adolescence, they may face the strongest peer pressure of their lives and be the most vulnerable to the temptation posed by illegal drugs. D.A.R.E. and D-FY-IT teach youngsters the dangers associated with use of illegal drugs and how to avoid falling prey to them and the dealers who sell them.

Joan Johnson, executive director of D-FY-IT of Midland, said as much in receiving the grant. She noted, "Those kids (7th-9th grades) don't have a drug program and that leaves them vulnerable."

Through the outstanding grant by Abell-Hanger Foundation, students in all Midland grades will receive the vital drug awareness education that they need and be prepared to resist those who would draw them into the world of illicit drugs.

War in Chechnya could unseat Yeltsin

WASHINGTON — Behind the greater drama of Russia's bloody invasion of the southern republic of Chechnya, a subplot is emerging that could threaten the presidency of President Boris Yeltsin.

Anderson

The ill-fated invasion has hastened the rehabilitation of one of Yeltsin's most formidable political foes, Ruslan Khasbulatov. In a country where former leaders are typically disdained or disregarded, Khasbulatov has used the war in Chechnya as a pretext for a quiet political comeback. Some American intelligence analysts are even saying that Khasbulatov may be well positioned to run for president against Yeltsin in 1996 — and win. If he did, Yeltsin would only have himself to blame.

A doctor of economics in the old Soviet days, Khasbulatov worked in a government ministry until he was selected first deputy chairman of the Congress of People's Deputies in 1990, when Yeltsin was chairman. He was an energetic supporter of Yeltsin during the 1991 coup attempt that brought an end to the old Soviet Union and led to Yeltsin's ascension to president.

In part because of that loyalty, Yeltsin supported Khasbulatov for the chairmanship, or speakership, of the Russian parliament. During 1992, however, Khasbulatov became increasingly hostile to Yeltsin's reform efforts, eventually becoming Yeltsin's primary antagonist. Yeltsin began to view his former ally as a turncoat.

Khasbulatov's long, black leather-coated appearance soon became the very symbol of opposition to Yeltsin. He evolved in his role slowly, often publicly pledging loyalty to Yeltsin one minute and skewering his former patron the next, as one observer put it.

He was king of parliament and knew it. As he once declared, "I don't want to look like a messiah, but it seems to me that if I step down, parliament will simply fall apart."

Yeltsin eventually came to believe the same thing. So when Khasbulatov became too obstinate and seized control of the parliament building in the fall of 1993, Yeltsin sent in tanks and stormtroopers to take it back, bringing down the Parliament. Khasbulatov and friends were unceremoniously tossed into the hoosegow.

When Khasbulatov received a quiet amnesty last May, the speculation was that he would simply fade away. He dabbled in his old professorial profession — until things began to heat up in Chechnya last summer. A native Chechen, Khasbulatov had represented Chechnya in the parliament.

He did this even though he had no stomach for the man leading the breakaway republic, President Dzhokhar Dudayev, a former Soviet nuclear bomber pilot. While in Parliament, Khasbulatov denounced Dudayev and his followers as a bunch of crooks.

After receiving amnesty, Khasbulatov returned to his native village of Tolstoy-Yurt to lead a paramilitary opposition to Dudayev. This caught the attention of Yeltsin's security services, which decided to finance and arm some of Khasbulatov's efforts, our intelligence sources say. Yeltsin personally made the decision to try to unseat Dudayev by covertly supporting Khasbulatov and other opposition groups — which seemed better than a military invasion.

Khasbulatov spent six months trying to mount a coup against Dudayev, but to no avail. That's when Yeltsin, responding to pressure from his political right wing, decided to launch the invasion.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Principle is behind budget cuts, not money

Arguments for preserving the National Endowment for the Arts generally come down to this: Preserving the arts is a Good Thing. So do arguments for the National Endowment for the Humanities, its sister, and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Murchison

Each one is a Good Thing — not to mention fine and wonderful and joyous and the rest of it. But that skirts the question in this day of budget-cutting and mayhem in the new conservative-controlled Congress. We need to be asking ourselves: Are these things federal responsibilities — things the national government ought to be doing? Would someone kindly put a finger squarely on the constitutional provision that makes a Good Thing into a Necessary Thing and then show us all?

While we're waiting breathlessly, a few thoughts on federal funding of the arts and related cultural enterprises.

We know the new Congress has its eye on these things because its leaders have said so. The new Congress, accordingly, is accused of literally uncharitable behavior. NEA Director Jane Alexander suggests that "a lot of these people really don't understand what the endowment does." Supposedly, if they understood, they would all be in her corner.

It can't be the money, can it? Culture's share of federal spending is small: just $167.4 million in the NEA's case. As the New York Times thoughtfully explains, the appropriation "is less than the operating budget of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, which is $316 million this year." So why should we kick?

Because it's not the money, it's the principle. The federal government doesn't need to give a red-hot nickel to culture — or, as should be added at this time, anything else that isn't the business of the federal government.

The endowment dates only from 1965. Observe the year. Lyndon Johnson was president. In the efflorescence of the Great Society he was building in our names, it was fine to fund culture — or anything else the federal government found uplifting or worthwhile.

The escalation of the federal budget, if we think back, dates from that dangerous supposition's taking hold on the national consciousness. We spent in Washington, D.C., only about $100 billion when Lyndon Johnson took over; we are headed currently for the $2 trillion mark. If we don't do something about the Social Security fraud — besides Medicare and Medicaid, which also started under Johnson — we're looking at servitude to the national government: jobs held, taxes paid, lives led essentially to support the government.

But, as I say, it isn't the money, it's the principle. Which sounds all very academic until you remember what comes of supposing that government can do things conventionally forbidden to government. What is meant by "conventionally"? According to once-accepted principles of political science, government can't make us happy or fulfilled, as with the National Endowment for the Arts. All government can do, really, is create the conditions of freedom in which the private sphere of endeavor — headed by supernatural religion — falls to work on the raw material of human hopes and capacities.

This is why the Constitution is modest about the role of government. There are strict, enumerated powers of government — for presidents and lawmakers and judges minded to worry about such things. There is no governmental power to fund the arts. It does not exist. This is why the new Republican majority leader, Dick Armey, can cry out that "the existence of the NEA is an affront to the taxpayer."

It's far from the only one, of course. The majority of what America has or has done since the Great Society affronts the taxpayer — not least the $2 trillion budget. What a lot of Good Ideas we've had — like giving taxpayer money to culture, warring on poverty, providing government-financed health care and so on.

CHARLEY REESE

Cyborg politicians are term limit arguments

If I had to nominate one person as the most likely to be a cyborg — a machine disguised as a flesh-and-blood human being — it would be Rep. Richard Gephardt, the Democratic minority leader.

Reese

I met him once, and he didn't seem real. He was running for president and dropped by my newspaper to talk to the editorial board. He launched into an explanation of the mechanics and tactics of his campaign. After about 15 minutes of this, I interrupted him.

"Why do you want to be president?"

Gephardt did a sort of double-take, gave me the same blank look you can see on television and then, as if desperately trying to come up with an answer, said, "Oh, I want to do something about the deficit."

I immediately pointed out he was already in a better position to "do something" about the deficit than the president. All appropriations and tax bills — the federal budget — must originate in the House of Representatives. He was a leader in that house, and his party had a firm majority. If he wanted to do something about the deficit, why hadn't he done it already, I asked.

Well, he didn't really have an answer. I have never met a person who seemed so empty on the inside.

He isn't a cyborg, of course, but he's something even worse — a professional politician who has no real convictions or passions except to win the next election.

As you know, shortly after the last election, Gephardt announced that he had suddenly become convinced that a middle-class tax cut was necessary. No details but the usual demagoguery about helping the little guy and not rewarding the rich.

It's the same pattern. If Gephardt thought there was a need for a middle-class tax cut, then why had he not done anything about it when his party was in the majority? The answer, of course, is that Gephardt is just playing politics, trying to one-up the new Republican majority in the tax-cut game.

Gephardt and people like him are a great argument for term limits, for cutting the salaries of congressmen and for eliminating their pensions. It is these professional politicians who stand for nothing but re-election, who never engage in a true conversation or dialogue but simply make campaign speeches and utter sound bites, who have brought the republic to its present sorry state.

Why are voters cynical? Because politicians like Gephardt never give them the courtesy of straight talk. Gephardt deliberately upstaged President Clinton by announcing his tax cut proposal before the president could announce his, but when asked if he was trying to distance himself from Clinton, he denied it. He denied the obvious. Truth, to a professional politician, has no meaning. If it exists at all, it is in the category of an inconvenience.

Gephardt is a perfect example of the professional politician's ever-shifting positions as he tries to say what is political advantageous today without regard for anything he said yesterday or may say tomorrow. The professional politician never governs. He campaigns continuously.

Elitists, mostly liberal but some conservatives too, should stop trying to blame the public. The public has rational, legitimate reasons for its present dour view of government.

The cure is simple: honest talk and honest actions instead of demagoguery and smoke and mirrors. The elitist attitude that the public will not accept straight talk or painful truth is bunk. Who, after all, makes the painful sacrifices for the nation in wars? Don't insult Americans by claiming that people willing to face death in the jungles or deserts in the service of their country are afraid to hear straight talk about budgets from overpaid politicians — many of them draft dodgers.

Vigilante execution gives goal, high price

Terry Cherryhomes (Letters, Jan. 1) is not the first to write abortionists should be aborted. Ovid (43 B.C.-A.D. 17) wrote "the first one who thought of detaching from the womb the fetus forming in it deserved to die by her own weapons."

We want abortion to stop!

Vigilante execution of baby-killers and staff might produce that goal, but at what price? Have not Christians been empowered to stop abortion (and all other evil) by upholding fidelity, integrity, and Jesus? Forget scalpels and scalps and find our faith. Let us not blaspheme the Judge of all the earth. He will do right.

Liberals represent true American goals

The tendency of the electorate to align themselves with the conservative right bewilders me.

I base this statement on the fact that I took the liberty to review the definition of a conservative in the Webster dictionary. They define a conservative as "a political philosophy to preserve what is established." Or in our understanding to maintain the status quo.

Yet, a liberal is defined by Webster as "one who believes in progress, essential good of man, autonomy of individual and protection of civil and political liberties." Or basically what this country stands to support.

My point is now we are seeing a party that is backing out of their promise to change the system. The wolf is taking off the sheep's clothing. Their desire to maintain the status quo is evident based on the speaker's signal of flexibility in the heralded "Contract With America." Or that the terms of the contract will not be abided by. Same old Republican song and dance of promise and no delivery.

In essence I am proud to be considered a liberal and welcome those who reconsider their political affiliation and align themselves with the true meaning of what it is to be a American.

Man should receive punishment for action

I am writing concerning the action of Steven Chilcoat in killing the dog belonging to Jimmy Curley.

Certainly Curley knows that vets spay female dogs every day to keep unwanted dogs from causing an unwanted litter of pups. Having this happen to my registered dog many years ago I now have two females both of whom are spayed.

However, I believe Chilcoat should be punished to the extent of the law. I shudder to think of how many kids play in our alley. Vets also neuter male dogs every day.

Commuters face nightmare on California's wet, muddy roads

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ken Iverson has had seven times more trouble than most drivers as head of a carpool that makes a daily 70-mile round trip on freeways that have been flooded, strewn with boulders and littered with car wrecks.

Iverson drives seven co-workers to work, and that has been no small task in the past week, because of the series of storms that have drenched California.

"It normally takes an hour and it took two hours and 45 minutes," said Iverson, who works in Pico Rivera and lives in Palos Verdes. "It was really miserable."

Heavy rains have pounded freeway-dependent California since Jan. 3. The deluge has opened sinkholes in freeways and covered roads in muck and water up to car roofs. Listening for the radio traffic reports is no longer optional.

"It took me three hours to get home the other night, and I think that's pretty rough," said Alisa Morrise, a foreclosure officer for RESS Financial Corp. in Tustin who has a 45-mile trip from Fontana. "I have a child in day care and it closes at 7. My cellular phone bill is going to be outrageous."

Jesse Sanchez, manager of the Westward Ho market in Malibu, had a scary morning ride down the Pacific Coast Highway during Tuesday's storm: "There were a lot of rocks, big huge boulders on all sides."

At the California Highway Patrol's southern headquarters, the traffic mess was told Thursday in a computer scroll of bulletins:

"SB 14 to SB 5 the trk lanes are now closed unk duration ... NB 110 at Av 26 slow traffic due to bridge repair ... McClure Tunnel is closed due to flooding on PCH ... Topanga Cyn closed until further no escorts are going through ... Topanga to Cross Creek open to residents only at own risk ... WB 105 to SB 405 closed heavy flooding unk duration ... Workman Mill BT crossrds and Channel Woods clsd large sink hole ... Chains SR38 from 7000 foot level."

Translation: Commuting frustration.

California's freeways can be a beauty of engineering in clear weather, with gentle curves, hills and dips. During this week's storms, however, many of those gentle dips turned into reservoirs that caught some motorists off-guard as they plowed into deep water and stalled.

"Southern Californians don't know how to drive in the rain," offered cabbie Fesseha Yilma. "People tend to drive in the fast lane, and that's where the most concentration of water is. Then their cars go out of control."

The rain has meant a lot more business for cab driver Gizaw Lemna.

"They're afraid to drive," he said. "Many have told me they would just rather stay off the freeways when it rains — and that's great for me."

And there's been good reason to keep cars off the roads.

"After the first accident I was tense enough," said Marcie Schmidt, who makes a 20-mile commute from Carson to Los Angeles. "Then just three more miles I was stuck behind another one. It was really stressful."

"I'll never go fast again in the rain," pledged James Little after hydroplaning and spinning his car during a Los Angeles downpour. "I've been really scared to drive since then."

When Fillmore City Councilman Don Gunderson's commute hit a roadblock this week, he flashed his city badge at a highway patrolman. The officer wasn't impressed, and Gunderson waited with everyone else, taking some pleasure in the fate of another driver who took matters into his own hands.

"He tried to cut across the median strip through a break in the oleanders and he immediately sank to his floorboards," Gunderson said. "It was poetic justice."

Flood victims work to cope with aftermath

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hundreds of sheep and cattle that drowned in a bloated river posed a new health hazard in Northern California, while flood victims around the state used a break in the weather Thursday to scrape up the muck.

Storms from California's wine country north of San Francisco to the beaches of Malibu in the south have left at least eight people dead and caused millions in damage over 10 days.

As rain subsided in some areas, officials warned people cleaning up to be careful of what lurks under high water.

"There are so many propane bottles, downed power lines, gas lines that could be leaking, so many things that could endanger people," said Sonoma County Sheriff Mark Ihde.

People cleared debris and fortified sandbag walls in anticipation of more rain over the weekend around the state.

"It's the human condition. You just keep going," said Tony Gatchalian as he and co-workers at an AIDS services agency carried boxes up and down mud-slick steps in Guerneville.

In extreme Northern California, Humboldt County authorities called on the National Guard to help them collect the rotting of carcasses sheep and dairy cattle that floated down the Eel River on Wednesday.

"We still have some significantly high standing water," said sheriff's Lt. Gary Philp. "And it's still raining and not easy to get where these cattle are. Some were swept downstream and deposited in places that are somewhat isolated."

Authorities will probably pick a spot to collect all the carcasses, then bury or burn them, Philp said.

Power to about 17,000 customers in Northern California remained out, but most people in Southern California had service restored by Thursday.

Hundreds of calls streamed into the Federal Emergency Management Agency from storm victims seeking assistance.

"It's going to run the gamut," said FEMA spokesman Alex Newton. "From $1,500 to $3,000 to replace carpets and floorboards, to having to junk the whole house."

Sheri Erlewine, a spokeswoman for the state Office of Emergency Services, said the damage estimate was approaching $200 million statewide, in both public and private losses.

Richard Krimm, a FEMA official in Sonoma County, said inspectors can't tell how much damage flood victims suffered until water recedes. "Unfortunately, very few were insured," he said.

Motorists in Southern California endured a third day of flooded freeways and fender-benders that led to morning gridlock in some areas. But the downpours finally subsided.

In Monterey County, Keith Rede returned to his home of 10 years to survey the damage left by 2½ feet of water that soaked furniture, carpeting, closets and clothing. He found his son's pet turtle safe, floating in a laundry basket.

Looking at his silt-covered front yard, he said, "I had just planted a lawn and put a sprinkler system in."

Prosecutors withdraw some abuse allegations against O.J.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors on Thursday withdrew some of the most explosive domestic-violence allegations against O.J. Simpson, including a claim that he threatened to cut off the heads of his ex-wife's boyfriends.

In all, prosecutors withdrew without explanation 18 of the 61 incidents contained in court papers that they had released on Wednesday as part of a hearing on whether to admit evidence that Simpson beat his ex-wife.

"By crossing these out we're not commenting on the truth of these incidents or the untruth of them or the credibility of any of the witnesses," Deputy District Attorney Lydia Bodin said. The prosecutors reserved the right to introduce the material at trial.

Defense attorneys denounced the tactic of introducing and then retracting the allegations as an outrageous attempt to manipulate public opinion.

"Perhaps they're trying to get at a second jury pool in case there's a hung jury," Simpson lawyer Robert Shapiro said.

The documents, including entries from Nicole Brown Simpson's diary and letters Simpson wrote her, portrayed Simpson as as a fiercely jealous man who beat and stalked his ex-wife. The defense contends such information is irrelevant and shouldn't be presented to jurors.

Ms. Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman were stabbed and slashed to death June 12.

For the first time, meanwhile, prosecutors offered a motive for Goldman's slaying: that Simpson believed he was "a potential suitor" of his ex-wife.

"It is only when you understand the reality, and the jealousy, the possession, that the killing and the brutality of the killing make sense," Deputy District Attorney Hank Goldberg said.

In outlining a theory of the crime at a hearing in September, prosecutors said Simpson went to his ex-wife's condo to kill her and murdered Goldman only when the young man unexpectedly arrived to return a pair of glasses.

Friends and family have said Goldman's relationship with Ms. Simpson was platonic.

Among the allegations withdrawn by prosecutors was actor Eddie Reynoza's account of hearing Simpson threaten to decapitate his ex-wife's boyfriends if they drove his fancy cars. Goldman sometimes drove Ms. Simpson's Ferrari.

Commenting on the withdrawal of that claim, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito remarked: "The news media was ablaze last night with this particular incident. ... I think it should be clear on the record and to the news media that the prosecution is withdrawing this particular incident."

Shapiro said Reynoza, who appeared with Simpson in "Naked Gun 2½," was known to prosecutors for making equally inflammatory and unsubstantiated claims against Michael Jackson during a district attorney's probe of child abuse allegations.

"They were aware of Eddie Reynoza and his lack of credibility," Shapiro said. "Yet they come in and make this statement that goes out around the world and then they withdraw it."

Outside court, Deputy District Attorney Scott Gordon said the judge had been advised that some of the allegations had not been fully developed and might be withdrawn.

Prosecutors may have used the strategy to rattle Simpson's confidence and try to put him in as bad a light as possible so Ito will admit more evidence of prior domestic violence, one legal expert said.

"It could be an attempt to demoralize O.J. Simpson himself," Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley said. "It certainly had a bombshell impact on the public."

But, he added: "It's a dangerous strategy that may backfire. ... The only audience they're playing for is the judge."

Reynoza, 30, defended his story in an interview with The Associated Press. He said he turned down offers of $100,000 from tabloid news organizations for his story because it would have hurt his credibility. Reynoza refused to comment on the Jackson matter.

In other matters, three prosecutors presented complex legal arguments during the hearing in hopes of persuading Ito to admit evidence of prior bad acts by Simpson.

Although past bad acts by a defendant normally are inadmissible, prosecutors contend a series of acts forming a clear pattern of activity leading to murder is evidence the jury should hear.

Lobbyists take jobs on inside

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican tide on Capitol Hill has swept some lobbyists inside Congress where they have taken prominent positions on the very committees they used to lobby.

Among them is Charles Kahn, who as a top strategist for the Health Insurance Association of America was an architect of the famous "Harry and Louise" TV ads that skewered President Clinton's health plan. On Thursday, Kahn became staff director of the House Ways and Means health subcommittee.

The move outrages some who backed Clinton's health care plan and spent the past year doing battle with the insurance industry.

"Now, instead of having to buy Congress, they can work right inside," complained Arnold Bennett, spokesman for Families USA, a private foundation which backed Clinton's efforts.

"It's clear that Congress last year was not willing to take on the insurance industry, and now the insurance industry has taken over Congress," Bennett said.

Kahn disputed the suggestion that his allegiance to the insurance industry would carry over to Congress. He noted that he had worked for the same subcommittee for a decade when Republicans were still a minority.

"I think I was fair with everyone over my 10-year career on the Hill, and I don't see that being any different in the future," he said. "I'm going to do what the (subcommittee) members want to do. ... That's what a staff person's role is. My loyalty is to them."

The phenomenon of Washington political insiders going to work as lobbyists — often for multiples of their government salaries — is well documented. Those who do so are barred for a year from lobbying their former offices. But the path from private sector back to the inside is less worn, and there are no legal restrictions on those who take that route.

Manufacturer seeks to sell anti-herpes drug over counter

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration was asked Thursday to approve the first nonprescription drug for a sexually transmitted disease.

The medicine, acyclovir, would help millions fight genital herpes at lower cost, the company said.

Critics fear over-the-counter use would endanger patients and increase the disease's resistance to the drug.

There is a "clear and present danger to public health," Dr. William Craig of the Infectious Disease Society of America said at an FDA advisory panel hearing.

The manufacturer, Burroughs-Wellcome, wants to sell low doses of acyclovir, which it markets as Zovirax, over the counter to treat attacks of genital herpes and to suppress such flare-ups. It said this would help millions of sufferers who don't have the money or the time to visit a doctor during a flare-up.

If the FDA agrees, acyclovir would become this country's first nonprescription drug for a sexually transmitted disease.

An outside panel of experts spent Thursday advising the FDA on the decision, which is worth millions to Burroughs-Wellcome.

About 5 million of the 55 million Americans who carry the herpes simplex virus take acyclovir, but the company expects that number to double if over-the-counter sales are allowed. Zovirax earns $1.16 billion in world sales annually.

The herpes simplex virus can cause sores on the genitals and painful nerve inflammation. In some people, symptoms remain latent while others experience outbreaks several times a year.

Up to 500,000 new cases are diagnosed annually, an increase of 32 percent since 1978.

Proposal requires bilingual bills

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A proposal from the Texas Public Utilities Commission in Austin that would require utilities companies in Midland, Ector and other counties to provide bills in Spanish, is meeting some resistance from the national English First organization.

The PUC recommendation is that all Texas counties with at least 2,000 people who speak Spanish instead of English should provide bills in Spanish upon request, according to an Austin PUC spokeswoman.

The PUC is currently collecting response to the proposal. This 45-day comment period will end Jan. 17, the spokeswoman said. The commission probably will decide sometime in the spring whether or not to go through with the regulation, she said.

"In the proposed rule, an electric or telecommunications utility serving any of those (37) counties would be required to make Spanish translations available on a system-wide basis to customers who request such information orally or in writing," she said.

Members of the group English First are fighting the proposal, calling the proposed regulation "unpopular, expensive, discriminatory and unfair," according to Executive Director George Tryfiates.

The proposal is discriminatory in that it ignores all other immigrant nationalities who speak neither Spanish or English, Tryfiates said.

The PUC estimates that approximately 45 percent of the 160 utilities they regulate will be affected by the rule.

According to Commissioner Karl Rabago, the Spanish proposal is timely for Texans as utilities experience more competition.

"As we move away from no-choice monopolies toward a more competitive business environment for today's utilities, responsibility for decision-making

Q. What is the oldest fire engine at the Midland Fire Department?

A. A 16-year-old Mack fire pumper is the oldest engine Midland has that is still operational. Delivered in 1979 to the department, it is now a reserve engine housed at the fire training facility. The oldest fire truck is a 44-year-old American LaFrance 100-foot aerial ladder truck that the department has had since 1951. The oldest retired apparatuses, though, are in the fire museum at Central Fire Station . . . one dates back to 1928, the other to 1916.

Education board votes to consider new policy

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education, newly dominated by Republicans, on Thursday gingerly approached the idea of developing a policy on school health education and services.

Board members voted 11-4 to study whether they want to set a policy, despite concern from some conservative groups who testified that the Texas Education Agency has promoted sex education and school-based clinics.

"I strongly feel that you should not begin deliberating on that policy until you understand completely what this agency has been doing," said Stephanie Cecil of the Texas Eagle Forum.

Randy Stevenson, a new Republican board member from Tyler, said sex education should be addressed. But he said, "We don't need mothers and parents to be in a position where they have to deprogram their children when they come home from school every day, and this is happening throughout this state."

Stevenson asked that a decision on whether to develop a policy be put off, noting that he's among four brand-new members on the 15-member Education Board. Others are Republicans Donna Ballard of The Woodlands and Richard Watson of Gorman, and Democrat Rosie Sorrells.

They were among seven board members elected to new terms in November and sworn in Thursday, giving the panel for the first time a Republican majority.

Board member Will Davis of Austin pointed out that the panel will have to deal with health education whether or not it develops a policy.

"You are going to be compelled, like it or not, to deal with the issue of health in the public schools. You can't turn your back on it, and you shouldn't want to," Davis told other board members.

The issue is whether the board has a standard policy "or you just want to deal with it willy-nilly, and go through the same debate every time it comes up," Davis said.

Mayor declares 'band day'

■ Both Midland high school bands were honored by the designation of January 17 as 'High School Bands of Midland Day.'

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

As the Midland high school bands prepared to practice Thursday for the Texas Inaugural Parade next week, Mayor Bobby Burns proclaimed the gubernatorial inauguration day — January 17 — as "High School Bands of Midland Day."

Meanwhile, the $30,000 needed to send the youngsters to the capital for the parade has been raised.

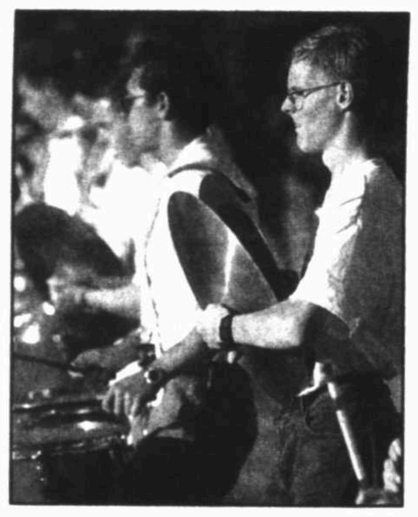

Whistles and yells from approximately 290 band members was the reply when Burns asked: "Are ya'll excited about Austin?"

"Make Midland proud," the mayor said after reading the proclamation on the steps of Midland High School.

The Lee Rebel Band and the Midland Bulldog Band will march down Congress Avenue Tuesday afternoon. At noon that day, George W. Bush will be sworn in as the 44th governor of Texas.

District sells trees as windbreaks

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midlanders who wish to plant windbreak trees to prevent wind erosion or to enhance their landscape may order hardwood and evergreen seedlings through the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District.

"They are available to anybody who wants to stop wind erosion or to improve the value of their property," said Dick Hagelstein, coordinator of Sibley Environmental Learning Center, which is owned and operated by the district.

The seedlings, which may be ordered from Hagelstein, are being produced by the Texas Forest Service at Lubbock. To place an order, homeowners can call 684-6827. The seedlings are to be distributed on March 3 at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service near the Midland County Exhibit Building.

'The sumacs are pretty popular. They are good wildlife plants.'

— Dick Hagelstein

Among the hardwood seedlings to be available are Russian olive, sumac and Shumard oak, which is similar to red oak.

"The sumacs are pretty popular," Hagelstein said. "They are good wildlife plants."

Like the Russian olive, sumac shrubs have "berries on them, and they are good for birds and other wildlife. But they are excellent windbreaks. Goats and deer especially like them."

Among the evergreen seedlings are Afghanistan pine, Arizona cypress, red cedar and Austrian

Runners experience unpleasant thrill under fire

You may never know just when that fatal shot is fired, when the guillotine travels down its rails to finality or when the noose is taut and quivering and then stilled.

Todd

So, if you hear the report of a firearm, just keep on running or else head for cover. Maybe you'll be safe and saved.

Well, we kept on running.

Three of us runners, training for yet another marathon, were cruising down a main roadway just east of downtown Midland when a powerfully sharp blast quickly fired up our curiosity.

Backfire?

No.

Gunfire?

Reckon so.

One runner smelt the scent of gunpowder moments after the shot startled us.

Another singled out the vehicle from whence the shot came.

The third runner wondered which one of us finally would feel the bloody impact of the slug.

Fortunately, none did.

Certainly, we figured that the flight of the bullet would exceed the speed of the blast.

"It's the bullet you don't hear that 'gets' you," we recalled of a survivor's old adage.

If, indeed, we were the targets of a random shooting or a malicious scare, we were caught up in that dreadful drama, which excited our attention.

At first, our shock turned into laughter, humor, and relief. All was well in our midst.

"The dirty rat missed (this time)" was our James Cagney stance.

The shot, however, somewhat took us out of our comfortable stride for a spell and our pace dropped a bit. But we kept on running until each of us finished the course.

And the dominant thought that occupied us all the while was this: Why?

Why did the rascal fire our way?

Did the scoundrel not appreciate our running style or, more particularly, those hairy-legged fellows decked out in breezy running garb?

Well, we continued the run and pondered the gunfire amid our laughter and sobriety.

What was behind this mean-spirited act — pot shot or an almost sure aim. (As they say, "almost or close enough only counts in hand grenades and horseshoes.")

Was it indicative of the times? A gross indifference to the rights of others? Moral decadence? Hatred? Boredom? Entertainment? Resentment? Blind vengeance? Nothingness?

You know, men and women who are running up

TODD: Runners pursue happiness, despite shots

and down the streets, highways, back roads, railroad tracks, trails, paths, and fields are taxpayers, too. And they ought to enjoy the right to life, liberty, and the freedom to pursue happiness. Runners, cyclists, walkers and others experiencing the grand outdoors in urban and rural settings rather savor the supposed safety of traveling this great land from sea to sea and border to border.

But we, imagining the idyllic, nevertheless know the reality of our living in an increasingly violent and capricious society in both town and country. None is exempt.

In truth, we know that happiness comes from within our souls. And for us three runners, who on the day of "the shot" ran both within the city and into the countryside, running is part of our pursuit of happiness.

So, what that blasted shot simply means to us is that our running course, which we sometimes vary to take in different scenes and sights, will be plotted with safety in focus. And the other benefits will follow suit: Sight-seeing, training for endurance and speed, camaraderie and a good time.

Mostly, we are out there seeking life's higher planes and enjoying the quest for health, happiness, and an abundant life. All the while, we know that we, like others out there enjoying life, are on the firing line.

must transfer from regulators to customers," Rabago said.

TU Electric Midland District Manager LuAnn Morgan said the regulation probably is not needed. Other than bills, all information — including energy-saving tips and explanation of services — already is provided in Spanish, she said.

Although the bills are in English, Spanish-only residents can still read the amount owed on the bill. Any questions can be answered by calling a toll-free number for TU's bilingual assistance personnel, Ms. Morgan explained.

Tryfiates warns Texans to avoid the problems California is experiencing. That state now requires 26 languages for its drivers exam, he said.

"Spanish-speaking services do not help anyone actually learn English. It encourages people never to learn English . . . Americans, no matter where we're originally from, did not come to this country so the PUC could babysit us. The PUC's attitude is a slap in the face for hard-working immigrants who are learning English," Tryfiates maintains.

Those wishing to comment on the matter can contact the PUC at 512-458-0388, or write to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Austin, 78757.

"All of those do excellent out here," Hagelstein said.

The seedlings, which are about 18 inches tall, are $45 for 30 evergreen seedlings or $60 for 40 plants. Hardwoods are $45 for 100 seedlings.

The Midland Soil and Water Conservation District has been distributing the windbreak seedlings since about 1980. Last year, the district sold more than 8,000 seedlings to Midland County homeowners.

Old-fashioned cattle drive soon to become reality

N.Y. Times News Service

The Great American Cattle Drive is a for-profit event, and the outriders represent a major portion of the revenue. The rest will come from special events planned along the way; there will be concerts, rodeos and sponsorships.

FORT WORTH — The romantic notion of herding 300 Texas longhorns up a paved trail from Texas to Montana will soon become a reality.

With less than 60 days left, leaders of the Great American Cattle Drive are down to counting steers and shoeing horses. They are digging out from under an avalanche of public inquiry and sorting through potential sponsorships to help finance the grandiose adventure.

The cattle drive is scheduled to kick off in Fort Worth with a two-day celebration March 3-4. The 1,500-mile drive begins March 5. It is expected to finish six months later in Miles City, Mont.

It will pass through Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming.

"We have had a lot of response," said Bud McCasland of Azle, the drive foreman and principal instigator of the project. "People have been calling in here from everywhere.

"I can't count the number of newspapers that have written stuff about us," McCasland said. "We're getting a lot of calls from Michigan, Indiana, Iowa. There has been interest from North Carolina and Florida. So far, the majority of the interest has been toward the east."

McCasland said he has received a few inquiries from California, and perhaps a few more from Arizona, but that's about it for the Western states.

People are calling, McCasland said, to become "outriders." The 300-head herd will be moved along state highways and county roads by professional, hired cowboys, but others will be allowed to ride along.

Those "outriders" will pay $100 a day for the privilege of sitting in the saddle all day, then gathering around the chuck wagon for cowboy food and conversation.

No one has signed up for the entire drive, McCasland said, but several people have made plans to join the drive for a month at a time. For those, there is a special rate of $1,500.

The Great American Cattle Drive is a for-profit event, and the outriders represent a major portion of the revenue.

The rest will come from special events planned along the way; there will be concerts, rodeos and sponsorships.

McCasland said the list of sponsors is growing, and he is hoping that there will be many more before the drive heads north.

"I think we can do better than we have," he said. "Our original plan was to get sponsors to cover our entire budget of $2.8 million. Half of that, you understand, is supplies; the other half is cash."

He has about $650,000 in supplies and nearly $400,000 committed in cash.

"We've got an adequate amount to get us the heck out of Fort Worth," he said

McCasland said he has placed the responsibility for sponsorships in the hands of others. And he is convinced that they will deliver within the next two months.

Major sponsors already committed include A1 Steak Sauce (along with six state beef councils and the national beef council), John Deere tractors, Budweiser wholesalers, and Wild Turkey Whiskey.

Locally, Justin Boot Co. and Winn-Dixie food stores are among sponsors. Several trailer and equipment manufacturers have also joined.

Members of the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association are providing the cattle. McCasland said he has received commitments for cattle from ranches in Montana, Kansas, Wyoming, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Mississippi and Colorado.

Most, however, will come from Texas.

"Right now, we're sitting on commitments for about 260 head of consigned cattle," he said. "We only need another 40 to make our 300-head goal."

The cattle will be headed up by 24 cowboys, four from each of the six states the drive crosses. McCasland said he still needs two cowboys from Nebraska, but the others have all been hired and will be in Fort Worth by midmonth.

Most of the cattle are expected to arrive at the drive's north Fort Worth headquarters by then, too, and the cowboys will begin working them up and down local roads.

"There was a time when I wondered if we would ever get this thing off the ground," McCasland said of the drive, which he and a few friends conceived more than four years ago. "But not any more. We're going."

BE CAREFUL WHO YOU TELL!

The lesson is clear now if, for any reason, we didn't understand before. Connie Chung assured Mom Gingrich that "it's just between you and me", and then told the whole world! Most folks agree. When it is told in confidence, it should remain a matter of confidence.

Looking for a place to tell it all, and get a load off your heart? There comes a time when we want to find a new beginning and a better way. Hebrews 4:13 says that "all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him to whom we must give account," So, you can tell Him all, and no one else need know. But remember. Don't play games. It's all or nothing. Trust Him and follow, or tremble and hide.

As New Testament Christians, we learn to "cast all our care upon Him, for He cares for you." Accept our invitation to share personal, Bible-centered worship soon and share our trust in God who knows and keeps our secrets.

"Instead of me fitting a religion, I found a religion to fit me."

"I remember telling my Sunday School class and my father that I didn't believe in God. But it wasn't God I didn't believe in, it was God as an old male Caucasian with long white hair.

"I spent years probably not going to church once. Then, senior year in college, I started looking into a Unitarian Universalist church in town. I was going because I wanted to go, because something was missing on Sunday morning.

"One of the things I value most about being a Unitarian Universalist is being able to question. Unitarian Universalism encourages openness. It encourages dialogue.

"When I tell my friends that, they're amazed it's still considered a religion. And they want to know more about it."

Rape incident shows role of women in many gangs

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press

DALLAS — The alarming story of a teen luring her friend into a violent gang rape offers a look into what law enforcers say are the disturbing rules for females who hang around gangs.

A Tarrant County jury convicted the 14-year-old defendant of delinquent conduct-aggravated sexual assault and sentenced her Wednesday to 15 years behind bars in a youth facility. However, she could be released by a judge when she is 18.

Prosecutors say the 17-year-old victim was coaxed into an apartment by her former friend. But the defendant denied the assertion and said she thought the sex was consensual. She acknowledged later joking with the attackers about their actions, including how they made the victim's head smack against a dresser during the rape.

"A lot of the female role has always been setting up crimes," said Assistant District Attorney Bobbie Villareal, who prosecuted the case.

"We have seen it become more common, I'd say in the past few years, especially in the last few months, we've heard more about the demeaning treatment of women," Ms. Villareal said Thursday. "I don't know why it's happening. I'm not surprised it's happening, though. Gang members are notorious for not respecting women."

Ms. Villareal said she's heard of a half-dozen similar scenarios where victims were lured into rapes by several gang members. However, she said, prosecutors were unable to pursue the cases because of unwilling victims.

In 1993, jurors in San Antonio sentenced a 13-year-old girl to 15 years in a juvenile detention center for her role in the gang rape and robbery of another teen. She was accused of holding down and beating a girl while she was raped by eight to 10 gang members outside a mobile home park. She also was accused of stealing the victim's necklace and earrings after the attack.

Prosecutors called the defendant "an evil little girl" who recruited males to commit the rape, encouraged them to repeatedly assault the victim and then lied about it in court.

The defendant testified the victim was a willing participant, saying she heard the girl encourage the males to have sex with her.

In El Paso, officer Steve Munoz of the police gang intelligence division, said that besides females "gangbangers" agreeing to have sex with numerous gang members as a form of initiation, he's familiar with the role of a female lure.

"It did happen with female gang members setting up a rival or an enemy for her own associates to beat up on," he said. "That was usually through maybe a sexual favor, a friendly favor."

Congressmen are conspicuous by their absence

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Decisions, decisions. What's a brand new, only-been-in-office-eight-days congressman to do?

Accept a White House invitation for a skull session with President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore? Or beg off, citing scheduling conflicts?

Two Texas freshmen faced those questions and answered "No, thank you" to the presidential offer. Since only Democratic freshmen were invited to the Cabinet Room session — and their group numbers only 13 — the absences of Reps. Ken Bentsen and Lloyd Doggett were conspicuous.

The 11 other Democratic freshmen, including Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee of Houston, did turn out for the meeting designed to rally support for the administration's agenda.

Bentsen's administrative assistant, Samantha Smoot, said her boss had to attend the organizational meeting of the House Banking Committee, of which he is a member. The Houston Democrat successfully offered a procedural amendment mandating closer cooperation between GOP and Democratic committee members.

"His first obligation was to be there," Ms. Smoot said: "He absolutely would have gone to the White House had his schedule been amendable."

Doggett, who is in Austin, begged off the White House meeting because of previously scheduled constituent business, said administrative assistant Leo Coco.

State considers retirees' benefits

AUSTIN (AP) — Benefits to the state's poorest retired teachers and supervision of the Teacher Retirement System would both be increased under recommendations adopted Thursday by the commission charged with reviewing state agencies.

The recommendations, adopted by the Sunset Advisory Commission, will now be written into bill form and considered by the Legislature. Leaders of the Teacher Retirement System had objected to the recommendations that call for tighter control of the $38 billion Teacher Retirement Fund.

"It's a good sound system and it doesn't quite need as much oversight as they are recommending here," said Dana Williams, chairman of the Teacher Retirement System Board of Trustees.

"We are battling a perception that we are not very truthful and that our information isn't correct and that our trustees and our staff can't be depended on," Williams said. "Our job is to try to overcome that, and we are going to try our best."

TRS administrators have been criticized recently by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who complained that faulty investment practices by the agency had prompted investigations by the state attorney general's office and the Travis County district attorney's office.

Officials in the Travis County district attorney's office say their investigation is ongoing. A 1993 report by the attorney general revealed that some real estate investments made by the system in the 1980s may have involved conflicts of interest.

The TRS is trying to recover from nearly $500 million in real estate losses.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Paying more attention to your instincts will benefit your career. Artistic and creative endeavors win public acclaim in early spring. Curb a tendency to act self-centered and romance will blossom anew. The more sensitive you are to loved one's needs, the closer your relationship will become! Once the weather turns cooler in late fall, travel for business or pleasure.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Julia Louis-Dreyfus, sculptor Frank Gallo, actor Richard Moll, legendary singer Sophie Tucker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cultivating an independent spirit will help avert romantic confusion. Keep a journal of major events. At work, pay close attention to details and deadlines; your reputation could be on the line. Reduce business expenditures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Resist the urge to roam today. Peace of mind will prove elusive if you ignore your responsibilities. Do what is right. Make your presence felt at a party; you could attract interesting and valuable new friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A financial setback may be due to your own extravagance. Admit your mistakes and promise to do better. Be willing to make temporary sacrifices in exchange for future financial security. Your social life accelerates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your love of beauty often compels you to purchase things you do not really need. Hold some cash in reserve. Pay heed to the advice and writings of those with more business experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Something may not go according to plan today. Communication and transportation delays are quite possible. Ride with the tide. A flexible approach works wonders! Go slow when granting loans or sending money to distant contacts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Steer clear of unpredictable or bossy people early today. You will find it easier to gain their cooperation later on. Talk with wise and trustworthy friends. Continue your search for the right partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push yourself to socialize now; your popularity will quickly soar. Joint ventures will bring you and your partner or mate deeper rapport. A dream could come true for romance-minded singles. Dress your best.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Being reminded of your responsibilities may not be pleasant. Try to fulfill your obligations before someone decides to prompt you. Investments are tricky. Rely on the advice of longtime friends or reliable business associates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Favorable financial developments get the day off to a flying start. A terrific shortcut makes your afternoon easier and more productive. Changes in social arrangements can be jarring if they are unexpected. Give advance warning.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Office politics dominate. Do not count on your associates to be cooperative or on time today. Certain costs may be higher than anticipated. Postpone signing a long-term agreement until you can obtain more data.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Morning hours reveal a delightful trend toward romantic or financial success. Do not let any opportunity slip by to impress partner with your sincerity. Give unnecessary business risks the thumbs-down sign.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful. An emotional explosion could occur when least expected. Try doing something innovative at work. Your mate or partner will become more assertive if you act stubborn. Stick to your diet and exercise resolutions.

Take a good look at the diagram. It might seem that your six-year-old daughter would be able to make 10 tricks at a spade contract, and you probably would be right. However, a world-class player managed to go down! This is what happened.

Four spades was a normal contract to reach, and the auction shown is typical for partnerships who play five-card majors and that a two-over-one response is a game force. The spade rebid in this sequence tends to promise a six-card suit, hence North's raise.

West led the king of hearts, on which East signaled enthusiastically. The queen of hearts was continued, followed by a third heart to the ace, with declarer contributing the jack.

From East's point of view it seemed unlikely that the contract could be defeated legitimately. Declarer could hardly have less that six spades headed by the ace-king and the king of diamonds, so declarer had no more apparent losers. The only chance was to convince declarer that the opponents were looking for a trump promotion.

Suiting the deed to the thought, East led the 13th heart. Declarer discarded a diamond and West ruffed with the nine, forcing the queen from dummy. Declarer decided that East had to have three trumps headed by the jack to adopt this defense, so continued by leading the eight of trumps and finessing the 10. Down one.

12-year-old actress Dunst has grown up views of Hollywood

LOS ANGELES — Kirsten Dunst, Tom Cruise's 12-year-old co-star in "Interview With the Vampire," has a grown-up view of Hollywood.

"I've got to remember why I'm in this," Dunst, who played an adult vampire trapped in a child's body, said in a recent interview. "I don't know why people don't stay grounded. I'm aware of what happens to some young actors, but I don't know why. I mean, they act and then they think they're hot. It's really stupid."

And what did she like best about being a vampire? Biting people.

"I thought it was so funny," said Dunst, who also co-starred in "Little Women." "There'd be these tubes that were all covered up, and they'd pump up all this gross, fake blood through them, with sugar and dye and red food coloring. It was really sick."

NEW YORK — "State Fair," the only musical Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote specifically for the movies, is headed for Broadway.

The cast will be led by John Davidson, Kathryn Crosby, Donna McKechnie and Andrea McArdle, who played the world's most famous orphan in the original Broadway production of "Annie."

"State Fair" will arrive in New York in early 1996 after a tryout tour that begins in August in Des Moines, Iowa.

The movie opened in 1945, two years after the songwriting team scored their first big Broadway success with "Oklahoma!" In 1962, Pat Boone, Bobby Darin and Ann-Margret starred in a second film version.

The score, which includes "It's a Grand Night for Singing," will be expanded for Broadway with several rarely heard Rodgers and Hammerstein standards from other shows.

SEATTLE — Coming this summer to a field near you: Pearl Jam.

The hot Seattle-based rock band is planning a two-month American tour despite its unresolved war with Ticketmaster, the nation's largest ticket agency, manager Kelly Curtis said.

Pearl Jam canceled all performances last summer because of the dispute over service charges on tickets. The Justice Department launched an antitrust investigation of Ticketmaster after two band members testified before Congress about ticket prices.

The dispute has cut off Pearl Jam's access to most of the nation's major concert venues, leaving Curtis to look for concert sites wherever he can get them — even racetracks and open fields.

A mail order ticket distribution is being considered for the tour. Dates have not been made final.

Pearl Jam is appearing in concert this weekend in Washington at a Voters For Choice benefit in Constitution Hall. The $25 tickets were sold through a drawing of cards mailed in by fans.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bashful Brother Oswald is making it official after nearly six decades.

Roy Acuff's sidekick, whose real name is Pete Kirby, has been playing the Grand Ole Opry radio show unofficially for 56 years. That will end Jan. 21 when Oswald joins the cast of the longest-running radio show as its 72nd active member.

"It feels pretty good," he said. "I've been there quite a while, but it sure surprised me a lot."

Oswald, now 83, was known for his dobro, orange hat, bib overalls and oversize shoes. When Acuff died in 1992, several members of his Smoky Mountain Boys left the show, while Oswald remained.

"I thought about it (becoming a member) before Roy died," Oswald said. "But I knew there was no use thinking about it then. They couldn't make me a member while he was living. I was just a sideman."

NEW YORK — They're probably the most famous braids around. So naturally, wannabes want to know all they can about Janet Jackson's 'do.

Since Jackson wore her shoulder-length, black braids in the movie "Poetic Justic," they have gained immense popularity.

It takes about eight hours to intertwine about nine bags of No. 8 and No. 6 (light and medium reddish brown) synthetic hair, which is styled at a cost of $150. The ends are then dipped into boiling water to stay sealed and soft.

FAMILY MATTERS

Siblings' squabbles can be serious problem

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: We just spent the week of Christmas with my in-laws and something came up that I need some advice on. We have two children, a boy, 7, and a girl, 6. My son does pick on his sister all of the time, but I thought that was pretty normal. One of my sisters-in-law has two children about the same age, but they get along much better. After on especially loud encounter where my son wound up hitting his sister several times, my sister-in-law said that I should take them to see someone. She said that it wasn't "normal" for a brother to treat his sister like that.

May

My husband never has thought that it was any big deal, the way the children act, and neither have I. He wasn't there when all of this was going on, so when we discussed it he got really angry about what she had said. He wanted to tell her off, but I wouldn't let him. I think that my sister-in-law meant well, but now I'm confused. My husband says that boys always act like that and are much more physical in trying to get their way. I don't know if that's right because he comes from a family of three boys and I come from a family of two girls.

I've thought a lot about this, especially on the ride back home. I've really started noticing how my son treats his sister. While she does do some things to him, she mostly says things to him that seem to make him mad. Then he starts calling her names, and if I don't get there quick enough, he hits her, sometimes really hard. I tell him not to do that, but I've always tried to let them work things out on their own.

Am I doing the right thing or should I be doing something else? I really do want them to get along and have a good relationship, but now I'm worried about letting this go on for so long. Maybe my sister-in-law was right and I do need to take them to see someone. What do you think I should do about this situation, if anything? CONFUSED NOW

DEAR CONFUSED: I definitely think you should take action. One child should never physically dominate the other. I don't believe that children are capable of "working things out" when physical force is involved. While gender differences exist between girls and boys, physical responses are not appropriate from either. We need to teach all children, especially boys, to resolve problems with words rather than physical violence. I also believe in the importance of teaching girls never to tolerate physical violence from boys. These lessons need to be learned early in life.

A possible first step might be for you and your husband to discuss the situation and agree on an approach. For example, you may agree that you both will teach both children a "problem resolution model" that does not involve name calling or physical violence. Such a model would naturally involve the two of you at first. One model is: "Name the problem, brainstorm possible solutions, try one, modify if necessary."

Establish a significant consequence for hitting. For example, you could use a "time out chair" for any violence. The person who hits would have to sit in the time out chair — not in his or her room — for one minute for each year of age. This would be repeated as often as necessary until he or she alters the behavior. You may find Don Dinkmeyer and Gary McKay's book, "The Parent's Handbook," to be of value in the process of developing positive problem solving behaviors.

As a practical matter, you may also wish to actively develop a friendship group for each child. When children are close in age, parents have a natural tendency to let them play together and not cultivate other friends, but developmental age and gender differences usually prevent this from working. Developing separate friends and keeping them separated often works better.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON "OPEN COMMUNICATIONS" ARE PRESENTED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Open communications between parent and child teaches that the child is valued.
- An attentive parent is demonstrating respect for the child.
- Allowing children to have a voice in family affairs and decisions provides a basis for children to develop a high sense of self-worth and self-reliance.
- This is the same inner strength that enables children to have the courage to say "no" to peers who are pushing them to try drugs and other inappropriate behaviors.

DEAR ABBY

Man separated from wife won't join lover at altar

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been in a relationship with a man who is 18 years my senior. We are not spring chickens — I'm 48 and he will soon be 66. I love him very much and he says he loves me. We are living as husband and wife.

Van Buren

The problem: He is married, but he and his wife have been separated for nearly 14 years. He says he stays married to her because his religion does not condone divorce. I say mine does not condone adultery.

Abby, is one commandment more important than another? I really love this man, but I think I deserve a commitment. Please advise me. — H.P.

DEAR H.P.: The Ten Commandments were not handed down in order of their importance. All are equally important.

If marriage is your highest priority, prepare to move on, since this man's excuse for remaining married while living with you is fear of divine retribution. You could find yourself waiting a long time — and by the way, the longest wait in the world is waiting for someone to get a divorce.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Ted" for eight years. How long should it take to be accepted by his family? I never feel like I quite measure up to the wife they think Ted deserves. And of course, my children, the "step"-grandchildren, will never be worthy of "belonging."

Ted is a wonderful man, and the children could not ask for a better stepfather. He loves them very much, and they think he is the greatest. But when it comes to his family — especially his mother — he is blind.

Ted's family loves to sit around the dinner table reminiscing about old times, trips they all took, etc. And when the old home movies are shown, including Ted and his first wife, I have to leave the room. When we meet strangers, my mother-in-law feels it's her responsibility to inform them how long my children and I have been in the family. I have thought about suggesting name tags. My children and I could be labeled "Outsiders," and the rest could say "Real Family."

I know I sound bitter, but I have been holding this in for a long time. — FEELING SECOND-RATE IN DALLAS

DEAR FEELING SECOND-RATE: Diffuse your bitterness by letting Ted and his family know that you are hurt. It may not help — but getting it out of your system will make you feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in regard to something you printed several years ago pertaining to people who have neglected to file tax returns for several years.

I haven't filed mine since 1983, and now I'm afraid if I come forward and try to make things right, I'll end up in jail. I am a widow who runs her own small business. Please help me. I am not dishonest — just neglectful. — WORRIED IN ARIZONA

DEAR WORRIED: It will be to your credit that you come forward before your negligence is discovered. There are severe consequences for failure to file income tax returns. Because the IRS is now using a more sophisticated approach in auditing taxpayers, you can't "hide" from it anymore. The penalty will be less severe if you come forward voluntarily.

For a free information brochure and referral to help in your area, call 1-800-424-4339, or write to the National Association of Enrolled Agents (NAEA), 200 Orchard Ridge Drive, Suite 302, Gaithersburg, Md. 20878. All correspondence is confidential. Enrolled agents are independent businessmen and women who are knowledgeable about tax matters. They have no formal affiliation with the IRS. Their fees vary according to location and services.

Be assured that those who come forward voluntarily will not face criminal prosecution.

Curriculum 'invigorates' teacher

By Tim Whitmire

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — After almost 40 years, teacher Walter Blanchard has stopped giving grades, correcting tests or flunking students. And he's not even retired.

He's teaching at a new school where none of those things matter. It's the Alan Shawn Feinstein High School for Public Service, where the "three Rs" and other venerable traditions of American education, like letter grades, paper-and-pencil tests and the ninth through 12th grades, aren't found.

Instead, there are "stages" of learning, self-evaluation and real-world lessons outside a regimented classroom. The public service-based curriculum is believed to be the first of its kind in the country.

"I feel invigorated," said Blanchard, 61, who considered retiring last summer before getting a job at Feinstein. "This is what people like Tolstoy were talking about back in the 19th century ... mixing life and reality."

Students at the school, which opened in September, will be evaluated in writing by their teachers and will progress through three stages — explorer, master and major — by demonstrating their abilities through a multimedia presentation combining the written and spoken word and visual displays.

"From the first planning meeting, we've talked about Feinstein as a 21st- century school," Principal Anthony Milano, 50, said.

If Feinstein is the future, not everyone is gleefully looking ahead.

"When people start talking about real-life experience as though classrooms weren't real and as though studies in the academic disciplines weren't real they've already got it wrong," said Dr. Edwin Dellatre, dean of the Boston University School of Education.

BUT SOME of the school's students said they like being educational pioneers.

"I think it's great," said Vaughn Baker, 14. "Just to get out of the old way of high school and get into community service."

Sokhoeuth Sim, 13, agreed.

"Public service is a way to help other people, instead of playing sports all the time. You can make a good example of yourself," he said.

Sitting in an office filled with unpacked boxes, Milano called Feinstein's curriculum a work in progress.

The school's enrollment is 170, and it will grow to 400 over the next three years. Students apply for admission and are interviewed by school administrators.

Feinstein was started with a gift from Cranston philanthropist Alan Shawn Feinstein, who also is funding the creation of a public service studies major at Providence College.

The high school's interdisciplinary curriculum combines traditional classroom learning with volunteer work. On a typical day, students might spend the morning in the classroom discussing humanities — on a recent morning students watched a segment of the television miniseries "Roots" and discussed it. In the afternoon, they might head into the community, volunteering at a hospital, soup kitchen, elementary school or community center.

THE STUDENTS are expected to keep journals of their experiences and participate in discussion groups.

"We want students to use concepts from traditional fields to help them get a handle on questions that are important to the community," Milano said. "By the time they're ready to exit Feinstein, hopefully they'll present a solution of some sort.

"They are lofty expectations," Milano acknowledged. "But we believe ... there are problems that are within the reach of high school students or a team of high school students."

As an example, Milano said, Feinstein students might help a community agency assess the needs of its neighborhood by conducting a survey. Students would be involved in interviewing residents, organizing the data, analyzing it and writing a final report.

Dellatre questions such projects.

"(Feinstein's planners) propose to send out students to do work that's intellectually trivial before they have done the work that they have to do to develop the habits of a rigorous and knowledgeable mind," he said. "There's a certain arrogance in that."

MILANO WORKED for 17 years as a teacher and adviser at Providence's Alternative Learning Project, a program for students who had problems learning in the city's large high schools. There, he saw the positive effect of public service on students, raising their self-esteem and community awareness.

"I thought ... how great would it be for a whole school? How do you get an urban kid who feels disenfranchised ... to go down and care about feeding an elderly person?" he said.

Dellatre argues that abandonment of traditional educational measurements, like letter grades, amounts to "low expectations for the possibilities of the young.

"You have to make schools that are great ... in their ability to inspire the young to form serious intellectual and moral habits.

Grief period no time for financial woes

DENVER (AP) — The death of a spouse or the news that a spouse is terminally ill is one of the most traumatic events most people will ever face.

The unfortunate reality of this situation is that, on top of the inevitable and necessary grieving period immediately following such a loss, the surviving spouse will, without question, be faced with a host of difficult and some irreversible financial decisions.

These generally include issues surrounding insurance policies, pension and Social Security benefits, estate planning, and health care decisions.

"During such a stressful time, the fewer unknowns there are, the better it is," said Kathryn Ioannides, assistant director of academic programs and courses at the nonprofit National Endowment for Financial Education.

"I cannot emphasize enough the importance of advance planning. Not only should plans be made prior to a loss, but the couple should sit down together and discuss a financial strategy for the surviving spouse," she said.

One of the most important elements of a "plan ahead" strategy is an accurate, complete filing system detailing all assets, liabilities and estate planning-related materials. This information is crucial, but often, in the midst of grieving, is the last thing on someone's mind.

Ioannides recommends including the following information in your files as a bare minimum: life insurance policies with agents' names and how they can be contacted; disability insurance policies; auto and home insurance policies, and umbrella liability policies; any special liability policies; employee benefits information; copy of any wills or trusts; list of all active credit cards; list of all financial assets and their location (such as rental property, etc.); loan and mortgage papers.

"Additionally, if either spouse owns a business, there should be advance planning about how to dispose of that business upon the death of the owner, or how to sell the business before it begins to lose money," said Ioannides.

Assuming there is some advance knowledge of a terminal illness, a couple should meet with an estate planning attorney to review wills and trusts and make any necessary changes and additions to those documents. This is also a good time to investigate how property is owned, discuss how bank accounts are titled (will the survivor have unencumbered access?) and review life insurance policies to ensure that they name the correct beneficiaries. Many states also have a method by which personal property, such as jewelry, can be passed on without going through a lot of formalities.

"Precautions should also be taken in the event that either spouse is rendered incapable of making independent financial decisions and their own medical decisions," said Ioannides. The best way to prepare is with a durable power of attorney for financial matters plus a medical durable power of attorney (sometimes called a health care proxy).

The financial durable power of attorney gives someone the ability to deal with your financial assets prior to your death should you become unable to yourself. A medical durable power of attorney allows you to select someone to make difficult medical care decisions for you should you lapse into a coma or otherwise be unable to communicate your wishes. Almost all states also honor living wills, which allow you to decide ahead of time if you want extraordinary means used to extend your life in a terminal situation.

You should also inquire about Social Security benefits to determine when you will have access to them and what level of benefits to expect.

Ioannides also urges couples coping with long-term illness not to neglect taking advantage of even small amounts of insurance, often offered by credit card companies and credit unions.

Even small amounts of insurance can come in handy when bills begin to accumulate. Also converting employer-provided group term life insurance to an individual policy should be explored if the terminally ill spouse quits work.

Another extremely important thing to remember is to maintain your insurance premiums. "If you miss even one premium payment on term insurance, you may have no insurance. Whole life and other cash value life insurance generally have extended insurance benefits even if a premium is missed but policies differ, so check yours," said Ioannides.

If, despite exploring all other options, you still find yourself in desperate need of money, it is possible sometimes to collect accelerated death benefits from a whole life insurance policy.

Finally, consult with a financial planner about your particular situation. Many planners specialize in geriatric care and they know what's available as far as medical benefits and cash resources are concerned (both before and after the death of a spouse).

Taking care of skin important for seniors

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Page

Following is a horrifying example of aging epidermis, being of sufficient degree to cause my concerned wife to exclaim, "Dear, you are outliving your skin."

So here goes a personal account of the year 1994, which I survived by the veritable "skin of my teeth." The happy outcome was due in large part to the skill and patience of one Dr. Barkley — not only a dermatologist but also a decorated war veteran accustomed to landscape devastation. My car was parked so often at his door that neighbors surmised that I was going steady with someone therein.

The year commenced with removing of more than 50 crusty excrescences from various body parts. A few weeks later, horns sprouted on top of my head and had to be dug out. Then every so often new batches of growth popped up here and there, and without their removal another "Barnacle Bill the Sailor" would have graced Midland society.

Subsequently, some superficial cancers developed and threatened the removal of the left ear. Happily they were completely extirpated. During all this, multitudinous giant hives mysteriously blossomed, covering the entire body (idiopathic urticaria). Now at year's end, warts make an appearance here and there — but they at least help cover old "liver spots."

So here we are, feeling as Tom Sawyer was wont to say, "fine as frog hair." Could it be that the frogs played a role in the above? Suffice to say that without professional help, another "Phantom of the Opera" would have been created.

Gentle reader, don't fret over a few wrinkles. They indicate maturity, wisdom and character. Face lifts indicate vanity. Protect your fragile dermis from direct sunlight, particularly during those hours of the day when ultraviolet radiation is at its highest. If you do get a skin lesion, let a doctor determine its significance. Remember that the skin constitutes one of the body's vital organs. As the old paint advertisement slogan admonished: "Save the Surface and You Save All!"

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Officials charge Malcolm X's daughter in plot to kill Farrakhan

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A daughter of Malcolm X was charged Thursday with trying to hire a hitman to kill her father's rival, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

Qubilah Shabazz, 34, who was with her father when he was murdered nearly 30 years ago and whose family has long suspected Farrakhan's involvement in the assassination, surrendered this morning. She faces charges of using the telephone and crossing state lines in the course of trying to hire the hitman, U.S. Attorney David Lillehaug said.

Shabazz was released on $10,000 bail during a brief court appearance before Magistrate Jonathan Lebedeoff on Thursday afternoon. A second hearing was scheduled for Wednesday.

Lebedoff told Shabazz to keep in touch with authorities and stay within Minnesota. He also appointed an attorney to represent her when she indicated she needed one.

The nine-count indictment against Shabazz follows a seven-month FBI investigation. If convicted, she could be sentenced to 90 years in prison and fined $2.25 million.

Prosecutors said before the hearing they had no plans to insist that Shabazz be held until trial because she has been cooperating with authorities.

"We have been in contact with her and her attorneys this last week," Lillehaug said.

"She has voluntarily checked into the courthouse each day. She surrendered voluntarily today (Thursday)."

Shabazz, formerly of New York City, has lived in Minneapolis since September.

The indictment said eight phone conversations occurred in July and August, and that Shabazz traveled from New York to Minnesota. After arriving, she made a partial payment to the person she hired to kill the 61-year-old Farrakhan, the indictment said. It said the killing was to occur in Illinois, where Farrakhan lives.

The identity of the person allegedly hired to kill Farrakhan was not disclosed in the indictment. At a news conference, Lillehaug said the would-be hitman was not believed to be a member of the Nation of Islam. He said the person is cooperating and is expected to be a trial witness.

Lillehaug said other information, including Shabazz's motive, would not be released before trial.

"There will not be a drumbeat of publicity from this office," Lillehaug said.

Members of Malcolm X's family have long suspected that Farrakhan was involved in his slaying in the Audubon Ballroom in New York City's Harlem section. He was shot to death on Feb. 21, 1965, as he gave a speech to followers. Shabazz, three of her sisters and their mother were in the crowd. She was about 5 at the time.

Malcolm X, who had been the voice of the Nation of Islam under Elijah Muhammad, was exiled from the group in 1963. He subsequently came under verbal attack from other members, including Farrakhan, who was chief minister of the Nation's Boston mosque at the time.

Malcolm X's widow, Betty Shabazz, said as recently as last year that she believes Farrakhan was involved in the shooting.

Farrakhan, who was recruited into the Nation by Malcolm X, wrote in the Dec. 4, 1964, issue of Muhammad Speaks, the organization's newspaper: "The die is set and Malcolm shall not escape. . . . Such a man is worthy of death."

Farrakhan, who couldn't be located for comment Thursday, has said attempts to link him to the assassination are part of a continual conspiracy to discredit black leaders. However, in an interview last year, he acknowledged he helped create "the atmosphere" that encouraged the assassins.

Nixon's lawyers blamed secretary for tape gap, Watergate papers say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's White House lawyers secretly told a judge that Nixon's secretary Rose Mary Woods caused the 18½-minute gap in a crucial tape recording, and did it intentionally, a newly disclosed Watergate document asserts.

"There is no 'innocent explanation' of the gap or erasure," the document quotes the lawyers as telling federal Judge John Sirica.

The claim, charging destruction of critical evidence, is contained in a legal memo among 35,500 pages of Miss Woods' White House files made public Thursday by the National Archives. Miss Woods has always denied being the culprit in the biggest remaining mystery of the Watergate saga.

Efforts to reach her Thursday night were not immediately successful.

The erased tape carried part of a conversation between Nixon and his chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, three days after the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office complex.

Three times the attorneys, ostensibly representing Miss Woods' interests as well as Nixon's, "secretly entered her office in her absence searching for proof to support their felony charges," the newly released document says.

It is headed "Memorandum to Research Staff" and dated Jan. 10, 1974. It appears to have been prepared by Miss Woods' lawyer, Charles Rhyne, now retired, or his assistants. But it carries no letterhead or signature.

Rhyne became her attorney after White House lawyers Leonard Garment and the late Fred Buzhardt made their accusation without informing her and, on the following day, advised her "that she should secure another attorney," the memo said.

Garment, in an interview Thursday, denied that he and Buzhardt accused Miss Woods of creating the tape gap. He said they merely reported to Judge Sirica, handling the Watergate case, and to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski that a gap existed.

"We made no charges against her," Garment said. "We did not go in and say, 'This diabolical woman, who I've known for years and who is a dear friend, is a criminal."

He said he advised Miss Woods, through Haldeman's successor, Alexander Haig, to get a lawyer. He said he and Buzhardt represented the presidency rather than Miss Woods. He also said he had no recollection of entering Miss Woods' office although Buzhardt may have. In any event, that would not have been improper, he said; "it was government property."

"I'm not sure to this day who monkeyed with the tape," Garment said.

He said he and Buzhardt felt it was vital to go to Jaworski and Sirica to report something was amiss.

"We did not talk to her because she may have been in collaboration with you-know-who," Garment said, referring to Nixon. "She was there. He was there. ... The suspicious set of facts put us on notice that we should be careful about what we say to her or her to us."

Rhyne could not be reached for comment. Sirica and Jaworski are dead.

Garment said he assumed Rhyne was the memo's author. "He was very agitated about the fact that Rose Mary Woods was getting a bum rap," Garment said. "He went very much on the attack against Fred and myself from early on. I felt for him. It was not a happy time."

In August 1974, Nixon, desperately fighting impeachment, lost vital Republican support in Congress after the release of another tape made a few days after the 18½-minute gap tape. It showed he had been part of the coverup conspiracy almost from the start.

On Aug. 9, 1974, he became the first president to resign. He died last year.

Miss Woods, who served Nixon through most of his political life, always denied causing the 18½-minute gap (which the documents refer to as an "18¼-inch" erasure), although she testified in court that she accidentally erased four or five minutes of the tape by pushing the record button while taking a telephone call at the time she was transcribing.

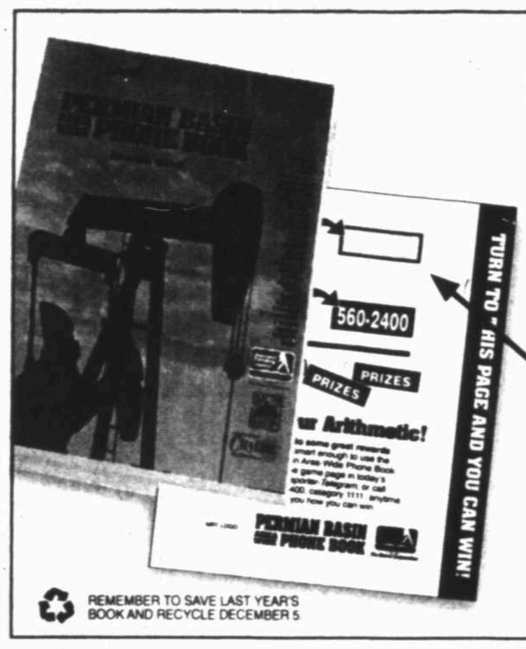

A picture of her reaching for the telephone while awkwardly keeping her foot on the pedal-control of the transcribing machine — a posed re-creation of how she said she made the erasure — became a famous photograph of that era.

The Archives' memo says that Sirica conducted a secret hearing after receiving the Garment-Buzhardt allegations.

"The testimony of Miss Woods refuted the secret felony charges in an overwhelming manner," it says.

Higher cancer survival rates are associated with a sense of coping, and lower rates are associated with depression and/or helplessness. Studies reflect that those who were extremely satisfied with their lives had 1/10th the rate of serious illness and death suffered by their dissatisfied peers.

Emmitt watch

IRVING — Running back Emmitt Smith showed continued improvement from his pulled hamstring on Thursday as he bounced around the Dallas Cowboys lockerroom at Valley Ranch.

At one point, Smith had electrodes that had been attached to his left hamstring in his hand.

"Need to get these re-attached," he said.

Smith has vowed to play in Sunday's NFC championship game against the San Francisco 49ers even if the playing field is a swamp.

"I'm a pretty good mudder," Smith said. "But I'll be out there."

Reggie Roberts of the NFL office said "the field is still a little wet right now but we think it could be fine on Sunday."

Carter the best?

NEW YORK — Rashaan Salaam beat out Ki-Jana Carter for the Heisman Trophy. The order probably will be reversed in the NFL draft.

Dave-Te Thomas, editor of the NFL Draft Report, said Carter should be the first running back taken.

"He's the only franchise player," Thomas said. "He's a great all-around back like Marcus Allen. He can get you those tough yards up the middle, break a long run and make the clutch reception."

Round II between Midland, Odessa comes tonight

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Round II of the Midland vs. Odessa District 4-5A basketball series resumes tonight with four games on two fronts and Midland teams are hoping this round is a repeat of Round I.

All four Midland boys and girls teams pulled out a rare one-night sweep against Odessa last Friday and the result proved to be a standings bonanza for all four Midland teams.

On the boys front, Midland Lee, alone at the top of the 4-5A standings with a 3-1 record, plays host to 1-2 Odessa Permian at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center. The Lee girls, tied for the league lead with Midland High at 4-1, will meet 3-2 Permian at 6:15 p.m. in a key outing for the Lady Rebels.

■ District 4-5A Basketball

Meanwhile, the Midland High boys, tied for second place with Abilene Cooper, San Angelo and Abilene High at 2-1, travels to 0-4 Odessa High at 8 p.m. while the 4-1 Lady Dawgs play at 6:15 p.m. against 3-2 Odessa High in a key match for both of those teams.

And even though Midland teams swept the Odessa teams last Friday in all four matches, the games tonight see a switch of opponents.

Lee defeated Odessa High by a meager one point on the road last Friday. Cooper then beat OHS Monday by 50 points. Lee then took the league lead Tuesday with a double overtime win over San Angelo, the previous league leader.

Permian's boys lost to Midland High Friday and to Abilene High in overtime Tuesday to fall out of the early league leadership while MHS posted wins over Permian and a non-conference notch against Class 4A Lamesa.

The Lee girls had a huge week last week with a sweep of league favorite MHS and playoff contender OHS and then added San Angelo to its list of victims Tuesday. MHS rebounded from the loss to Lee with a key win over Permian Friday and was open Tuesday. Permian fell out of the league lead with losses to both MHS and Abilene High. It was an expensive week for Permian.

MC shocks OC twice

■ Midland College rallies from 18 points down to upset third-ranked Odessa College 78-74.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Thursday night it was agony and ectasy for Midland College sophomore guard Kevin Rice.

Rice tried not to show the agony of a pulled groin to the enemy that he suffered in Monday's game against Frank Phillips. Pain aside, Rice put together his best game as a Midland College Chap with 11 second half points and five steals to lead Midland from a 18-point first half deficit to defeated third-ranked Odessa College 78-74 at the OC Sports Center.

The win keeps Midland in a tie for first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with a 2-0 record while Odessa, 17-2, drops to 0-1 in conference with its second straight setback of the season.

"It hurts bad, but I wasn't going to let the pain affect me through this game," said Rice. "I was trying not to let them know how hurt I was. I just tried to come out and play. The first half I didn't play that well but the second half..."

Rice and company overcame the shooting storm of Odessa College which came out of the gate blazing. Bang, bang, the Wranglers were up 10-0 after eight points from Desmond Greer and a three-pointer from Larry Johnson in the first 1:54 of the game.

Greer, who is averaging 16.5 points per game, hit his first six shots from the field and scored 18 of the team's first 26 points as the Wranglers bolted out to an 18-3 lead with 15:25 left in the first half on a Johnson three-pointer.

Midland weathered the storm and then began the slow climb back into the game.

"I think Midland adjusted to Rice's injury better than we did," said Odessa coach Dennis Helms. "We were aggressive enough to put just five fouls on them in the first half. Midland thought, 'hey, we can take it to these guys.' When they took it to us we had no fight. I give them all the credit for what they did. They came over here with very few players and Rice not healthy and get up off the deck and just kicked it to us."

The Chaps trimmed the OC lead to 12 at half and turned up the defensive pressure to start the second half.

The Chaps' defense limited Odessa to just six points in the first eight minutes of the second half on 2-of-12 shooting from the field.

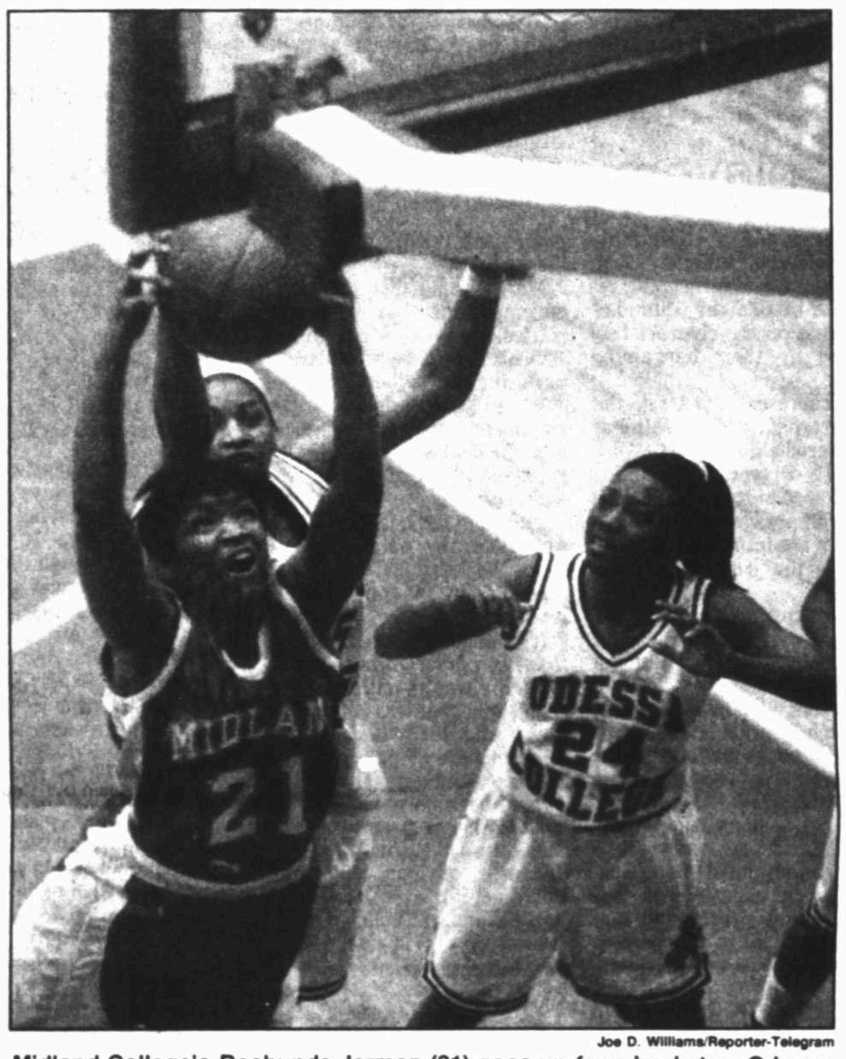

"We knew that Greer is a very good shooter but he can't shoot it if he doesn't get it. Kevin did a great job of denying in the second half because he had such a great first half," said MC coach Pat Rafferty.

Greer was held to eight points in the final 29 minutes of the game and Johnson scored six in the second half.

Midland chipped away until they took their first lead of the game, 55-54, with 7:08 to play after a Rice drive. It was the only lead change of the game as Midland built a 10-point lead, 69-59, on a Baker basket with 2:05 left.

"We came out a little flat. Our freshman had heard so much about the rivalry, I think we were a little in awe and just didn't attack their pressure to start the game," said Rafferty. "No. 4 (Rice) showed a lot of courage and gave us a big spark and energized us and did a good job on Greer in the ODESSA — It had all the makings of a fierce battle. Archrivals located 20 miles apart, fighting for territorial bragging rights and a first conference win of the season.

In the end, the Midland College women's basketball team had taken the fight to the Odessa College Lady Wranglers, handing them their fourth-straight loss Thursday with a 93-66 win at the Odessa Sports Complex.

"We were focused tonight," Midland College head coach Ron Jones said. "It was important to get the first conference win early. It was important for us not to take another step back."

The focused Lady Chaps, 15-4, 1-1, came out and pressured Odessa College throughout the match, forcing 31 turnovers (Odessa averages 19.2 giveaways a game). Midland's intensity level was a result of the loss at the hands of Frank Phillips College Monday night at home.

"We knew we had to be prepared to play," freshman guard Roslynn Dunn said. "Everybody was looking forward to tonight's game. We didn't want to go down 0-2."

Success was not only happening on the defense but also on the offensive side of the ball. The Lady Chaps abused the Odessa's man-to-man defense, achieving dominance inside. Sophomore post Joanna Kailahi was the hot hand early, scoring 13 of her 23 points in the first half, but more importantly, putting the Lady Wranglers in foul trouble. Kailahi also had a team-high 12 rebounds.

"We wanted to take what the defense (of Odessa) gave to us and take adavantage of that," Jones said.

Another result of the strong inside game was the kick it gave to the perimeter players. Dunn highlighted what was a second half shooting barrage that included a 7-10 mark from outside the three-point line. Dunn scored 20 of her game high 25 points in the second half when the Lady Wranglers tried double teaming Midland's inside game. Freshmen guards Pam Hicks and Shanon Jordan also came up big in the second half, hitting double figures with 12 and 11, respectively.

"We had to double team and they (Midland) made their three's," Odessa College head coach Ken Hefner said. "When you gamble, leave someone open and they shoot like that, you're going to get beat."

Suspected marijuana particles found in Blaylock's car

ATLANTA — Police say suspected marijuana particles were discovered in Mookie Blaylock's vehicle when the Atlanta Hawks guard was stopped for speeding early Wednesday morning. Blaylock is a former Midland College player.

Lt. George Hatfield of Cobb County police said Thursday the particles, along with cigarette papers, were found in a wood box. The particles were sent to the state crime lab for analysis, a process that takes up to three weeks.

Blaylock was stopped at 4:33 a.m. Wednesday for going 80 mph on a 55 mph stretch of I-75. He was charged with driving under the influence.

Blaylock denied that he was intoxicated or that he was drinking while driving.

"I stopped off," he said after practice Thursday. "I had a beer. I wasn't drunk. The only think I have to be sorry about is I was speeding. I should never have been doing that."

Dallas Cowboys' 'D' not just chopped hamburger

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — According to most analyses, Steve Young and the San Francisco 49ers are supposed to hand the Dallas Cowboys their helmets in Sunday's NFC title game.

Understand, the Cowboys defense is not chopped hamburger. It ranked No. 1 in the NFL in the regular season. Still, it gets little respect.

"All we have around here is each other," said safety Darren Woodson. "Everybody just talks about our offense. We play pretty good defense, too."

There is the perception, backed by some solid performances by Young and wide receiver Jerry Rice, that the 49ers offense is unstoppable.

When San Francisco beat Dallas 21-14 in the regular season, the Dallas defense forced the 49ers to punt eight times. Handicapped by three interceptions off the arm of quarterback Troy Aikman, Dallas permitted three touchdowns.

"I'd take the same kind of performance again," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "The offense put the defense in the hole in that game. We're not going to be worried about our defense on Sunday."

Defensive coordinator Butch Davis said the 49ers are always going to move the ball.

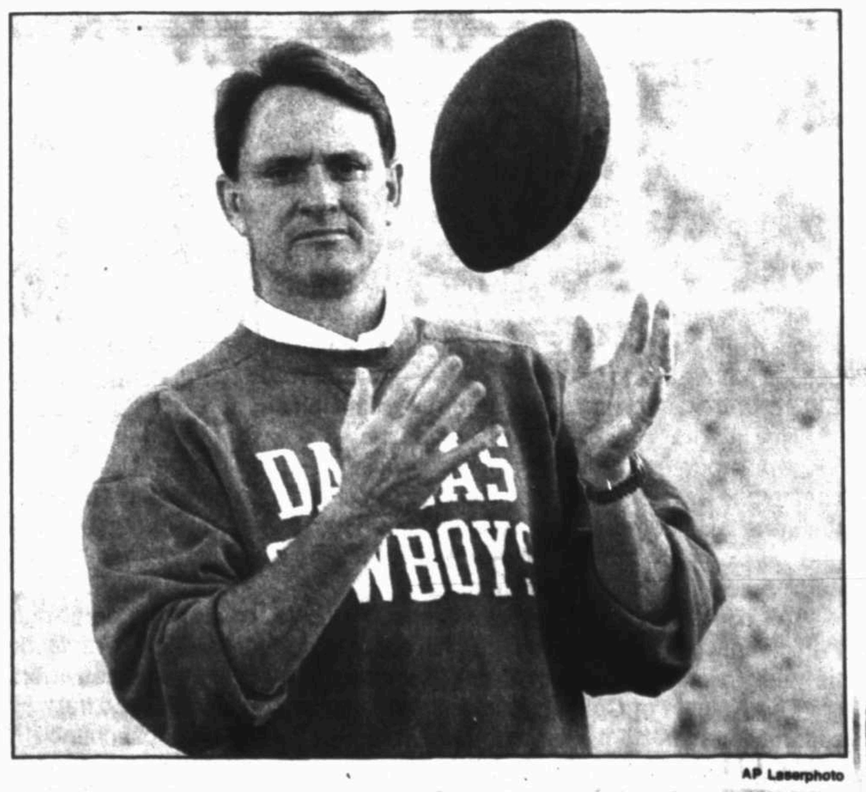

"They are always going to get three, four, five yards with their controlled passing game," Davis said. "The thing you have to guard against is letting Rice catch a 10-yard pass and turning it into a 30-yarder. San Francisco can burn you fast."

Safety James Washington said the Cowboys got caught sitting back against the 49ers earlier in the season.

"We have to attack their offense to be effective," Washington said. "We can't let them attack us."

Davis, in his second year as defensive coordinator after Dave Wannstedt left for the Chicago Bears, said the Cow-long way from the form that brought them a national title in 1991. The team is on its way to repeating the 0-4 conference start of a year ago that cost the Lady Wranglers a playoff berth.

"Everybody is fighting for their lives while we were going through the motions," Hefner said.

Midland never trailed in the game, extending a 38-24 halftime lead to the 27-point lead at the end, their largest of the game. The Lady Chaps will look for a repeat performance on Monday when they host Ron Jones' former school, Western Texas College, at Chaparral Center at 7:30 p.m.

The Wink JV boys nipped the 2-6 Charger boys 71-66 as Jason Burta had 17 points while Josh Haines and Tim Lana each had 13. Trinity's Brad Glasscock led all scorers with 21 points while Jay Leonard added 14 and Matt Dickman 10.

Trinity jumps back into TAPPS league play Saturday at home with 5:30 and 7 p.m. games against Abilene Christian.

No. 1 Mass keeps rolling

Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — Top-ranked Massachusetts, undaunted by poor first-half shooting, hit three 3-pointers in the first 3½ minutes of the second half and pulled away from Rutgers for an 85-68 victory Thursday night.

The Minutemen (10-1, 3-0 in the Atlantic 10) led just 36-33 at halftime after making only one of eight 3-pointers and only two outside shots. But they came out firing in the second half, taking five of their first six shots from 3-point range.

Mike Williams, who had 16 points for Massachusetts, made the score 39-35 with a 3-pointer 54 seconds into the second half. Derek Kellogg followed with a 3-pointer and, after Williams missed one, Tyrone Weeks's layup and Kellogg's 3-pointer gave the Minutemen a 47-35 lead with 3:28 gone.

Rutgers (4-7, 0-2), which scored the first basket of the half, didn't get its next one until 8:34 had elapsed. Charles Jones, who led Rutgers with 19 points, made a dunk to cut Massachusetts' lead to 60-42.

Donta Bright then sank another 3-pointer, giving the Minutemen their biggest lead, 63-42. The closest Rutgers came after that was 14 points, the last time at 75-61 with 2:56 remaining.

Lou Roe added 17 points for the Minutemen, who won their 37th straight at their campus gym — the second longest home winning streak in the nation behind Indiana's 50. Rich Ashmeade added 14 points for Rutgers.

Massachusetts' Marcus Camby, who had all 15 of his points in the first half, was ejected when he picked up his second technical foul with 16:08 left.

No. 6 UCLA 75, Washington 57

LOS ANGELES — Charles O'Bannon scored 18 points, Ed O'Bannon had 15 and No. 6 UCLA used a 16-2 second-half run to beat Washington.

Washington (4-7, 0-3 Pac-10) kept it close for much of the first half and trailed by just 3 at halftime, but Charles O'Bannon scored UCLA's first two baskets and his brother had 7 points in the decisive spurt that gave the Bruins (8-1, 2-1) a 48-31 advantage with 13:20 to play.

The Huskies never got closer than 13 points the rest of the way.

Bryant Boston led Washington with 14 points and Mike Amos added 12.

Stanford 91, No. 12 Arizona St. 75

STANFORD, Calif. — Dion Cross scored 22 points and David Harbour came off the bench to score 15 to lead Stanford to over No. 12 Arizona State.

Brevin Knight added 21 for Stanford (11-1 overall, 2-1 in the Pacific-10), which led throughout the second half and never let the Sun Devils get closer than 3 in the final 20 minutes.

Mario Bennet and Ron Riley scored 17 points apiece for the Sun Devils (11-3, 1-1), who trailed 35-29 at the half and watched Stanford use a 9-2 run to open a 44-31 lead with 16:13 left.

No. 17 Missouri 64, Notre Dame 56

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Paul O'Liney overcame early foul trouble to score 20 points as No. 17 Missouri pulled away for a victory over Notre Dame.

It was a sluggish effort for Missouri (11-2), which had its 16-game Big Eight unbeaten streak snapped on Monday in a loss to third-ranked Kansas. The Tigers shot just 33 percent against Notre Dame (9-5) and narrowly avoided losing consecutive games for the first time since late in the 1992-93 season.

Notre Dame also lacked spark, shooting 42 percent, but had an excuse. The Fighting Irish had to take a bus from Chicago to Columbia on Wednesday due to fog at O'Hare Airport.

Jason Sutherland added 11 points for Missouri and reserve Corey Tate had nine points and 11 rebounds.

NHL players concerned with 'loose ends'

NEW YORK (AP) — NHL players, still concerned with the "loose ends" of their labor agreement, reviewed the settlement Thursday before voting on the contract recommended by their bargaining committee.

Player representatives say the owners' proposal will be ratified, but not overwhelmingly.

The NHL Players Association scheduled a conference call with its player representatives Thursday. It was not immediately clear when the actual vote would take place.

"We want to make sure all the players are well informed," said Larry Murphy, player rep of the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The players will hold a secret vote, official announcement of which presumably will be made Friday. A majority vote is needed for approval.

An NHL spokesman said it was hoped commissioner Gary Bettman and union head Bob Goodenow will hold a joint news conference in New York, but not before the results of the vote is known.

Murphy said this vote is more encompassing than the one that settled the 10-day strike in 1992.

"This won't be a walk in the park like it was then," he said.

While Murphy doesn't expect a ringing endorsement, he was confident the deal will be ratified by the rank-and-file, ending the 103-day lockout.

"It's not the deal we had hope for," Murphy said. "We made many concessions, but the deal turned out to be fair and reasonable."

It is, though, more complicated than the players first thought.

"There was an initial reaction of relief, that that was it — we had a deal," said Randy Ladouceur, captain of the Anaheim Mighty Ducks. "But then you realize that they've been bargaining for three months. There's a lot more loose ends than I thought."

It was obvious how Murphy would vote.

"I have full faith in our negotiating committee," he said. "I believe in backing the committee."

It's possible not all of the some 700 NHL players will vote. Some may still be in Europe, where they have been playing.

"If there seems to be a vast majority of guys that ratify it, they may not get everybody in," Ladouceur said.

The agreement was worked out during three days of negotiating this week involving Goodenow and Bettman.

"It was tough fight," Murphy said. "But it was a package that we can live with."

Many teams expect to start training camp this weekend, some as early as Friday. Bettman said a 48-game season would start by the end of next week, presumably the following Friday. The 48-game schedule will be the shortest in the NHL since 1941-42, which was the 11th and final season in which 48 games were played.

Players stepped up informal practices in anticipation of getting back to serious competition.

Fame Finalists

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Thumbnail glances at the 15 finalists for induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame:

Dan Dierdorf
Offensive Tackle, Center
St. Louis (1971-83)

Although he never played in a Super Bowl, Dierdorf was a perennial all-star. After being drafted in the second round out of Michigan, he played in six Pro Bowls and was selected as an All-Pro five times. Three straight years he was picked by the players association as the best blocker in the NFL. If inducted, it would be a homecoming: he was born at Canton on June 29, 1949.

Carl Eller
Defensive End
Minnesota (1964-78), Seattle (1979)

As one of the anchors of the Vikings' "Purple People Eaters" line, he made a habit of harassing opposing passers. Over a three-year span, he had 44 sacks. He helped the Vikings win 10 division titles.

Jim Finks
Administrator
Minnesota (1964-73), Chicago (1974-1986), New Orleans (1987-93)

A former Pittsburgh quarterback (1949-55), as the Vikings general manager he hired Bud Grant as coach and the team won five NFC crowns and played in two Super Bowls. As the Bears' general manager, he helped build a Super Bowl winner. He also presided over the Saints' first winning season in 1987. He died May 8, 1994, at age of 66.

L.C. Greenwood
Defensive End
Pittsburgh (1969-81

A 10th-round pick out of Arkansas AM&N, he spent two years as a reserve before teaming with Hall of Famer Joe Greene to form the left side of Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain defense. Through 13 seasons and four Super Bowl victories, he totaled 73½ sacks and recovered 14 fumbles.

Ray Guy
Punter
Oakland-L.A. Raiders (1973-86)

Only once in 14-year career did he average less than 40 yards per punt. He led the NFL in punting three times and was All-Pro six years in a row from 1973 to 1978. A first-round draft pick out of Southern Mississippi, he played in seven AFC title games and three Super Bowls.

Mike Haynes
Cornerback
New England (1976-82), L.A. Raiders (1983-89)

Over 14 seasons after being taken in the fourth round out of Arizona State, Haynes intercepted 46 passes and was All-AFC eight times. He returned punts 89 and 62 yards for touchdowns in 1976 and returned two interceptions for touchdowns, including a 97-yarder against Miami in 1982. Played out his option after 1982 season and started and intercepted a pass for Raiders in 1984 Super Bowl.

Charlie Joiner
Wide Receiver
Houston (1969-72), Cincinnati (1972-75), San Diego (1976-86)

Although 92 players were taken before him in the 1969 draft, the Grambling product finished his NFL career with 750 catches for 12,146 yards and 65 touchdowns. Seven times he caught 50 or more passes in a season and three times he topped 70 receptions. He played more seasons as a receiver than any player ever and is fourth in all-time receptions.

Henry Jordan
Defensive Tackle
Cleveland (1957-58), Green Bay (1959-69)

An anchor at right defensive tackle for 11 years for the Packers, Jordan was six times All-NFL. Seven times he played in NFL championship games, and he also starred in the first two Super Bowls. He missed only two games in his first 12 seasons. In the 1967 NFL Western division playoff game, he had four quarterback sacks. He died in 1977 at the age of 42.

Steve Largent
Wide receiver
Seattle (1976-89)

A fourth-round pick by Houston, the former Tulsa receiver was traded after only four preseason games for an eighth-round pick. He caught 54 passes as a rookie and went on to catch at least 50 passes in nine more seasons — and 70 or more six times. He totaled 819 receptions for 13,089 yards and 100 touchdowns, and caught passes in 177 straight games. He held six major career records at the time of his retirement. Largent was elected to Congress in 1994.

Tom Mack
Guard
Los Angeles Rams (1966-78)

Although he never made it to a Super Bowl, Mack was a frequent postseason player. He was selected to play in Pro Bowls 11 times in 13 years. One reason was his durability; he never missed a game because of injury.

Mel Renfro
Cornerback, Safety
Dallas (1964-77)

An All-America halfback and track star at Oregon, he excelled in the secondary and as a kick returner for the Cowboys. He was selected to the Pro Bowl his first 10 seasons. He had 52 interceptions, and fueled the Dallas offense with more than 3,000 yards in kick returns. His final game, fittingly, was a victory in the 1978 Super Bowl.

Lee Roy Selmon
Defensive End
Tampa Bay (1976-84)

After winning both the Lombardi and Outland trophies at Oklahoma in 1975, he was Tampa Bay's first draft pick ever. In a nine-year career, he led Buccaneers in sacks eight times, totaling 78½ career sacks. Selmon was picked for six Pro Bowl games in a row and was a three-time All-Pro choice.

Dwight Stephenson
Center
Miami (1980-87)

A second-round draft pick out of Alabama, where he was an All-American selection, Stephenson was All-Pro and All-AFC every year from 1983 to 1987. He was selected to play in five Pro Bowls. He started at center for the Dolphins in two Super Bowls and three AFC championship games. His career was cut short by a knee injury.

Lynn Swann
Wide Receiver
Pittsburgh (1974-82)

In only his second season, and first as a regular, he had 49 catches and league-high 11 touchdowns, then won MVP honors in the 1976 Super Bowl with four receptions for 161 yards. His 364 receiving yards is a Super Bowl career record. His 336 catches in nine seasons included 53 touchdowns.

Kellen Winslow
Tight End
San Diego (1979-87)

Winslow was the prototype of a fast tight end who could turn a short pass into a long gain. Twenty-six times in nine years, he had more than 100 yards receiving in a game.

4-5A: Locals hope for Odessa sweep repeat

(From 1C)

"Permian poses some problems for us because everyone says they have the best athletes in the league," said Lee coach Jon House. "We need the win because we won some big games last week and we need to keep the momentum. And you always want to win the games you play at home."

San Angelo's 6-6 post B.J. Townsend posed a problem for the Lee defense Tuesday and now the Rebels face Permian post Dustin Franklin, who suffered from foul problems in the loss to MHS Friday. Lee is still hot from three-point land, owning 145 this season. Shane McCulloch hit two amazing treys to tie San Angelo Tuesday in regulation and Mark Holly scored 11 points in two overtimes to pace the four-point win. McCulloch is on an every other game scoring binge. He had no points against ei-..er Abilene High or Odessa High. He needs to break that trend tonight.

The Lee-Permian girls will throw in a key 4-5A matchup between posts Krissy Woodard of Lee and Angie Brazil of Permian. They are the top posts in the district.

"Since Permian plays mostly a man defense, I expect that Krissy and Angie will be seeing a lot of each other Friday," said Lee girls coach Elise Kail. "This is a huge game for us and our kids know that and are excited about playing the game. If we could win this one, we could be in pretty good shape. We will be playing with only eight players since Lisa Chapman hurt a knee against San Angelo and is out. She's been our perimiter shooter and I hope that doesn't throw us off."

The MHS boys appear to be no worse for wear after an upset loss to Lee last week. Senior Jumon Hailey has responded with back-to-back 30-point games as the Bulldogs roared again. Still, MHS coach Jack Stephenson isn't resting easily even though the Bronchos haven't won in district play.

"Last year Jumon forgot his glasses and we played a terrible game over there," Stephenson said. "Odessa has three or four starters back and they have their backs in a corner. There is a concern, because if we play like we did over there last year, it might take a three-point shot at the buzzer to win. But I feel like our kids are focused. I wouldn't change a thing about what we have done this year. I feel good about the team."

MHS girls coach Jim Raughton knows his outing is key. MHS and OHS were picked in pre-district as the top two teams. Since then MHS has suffered an upset to Lee and OHS has fallen twice to Lee and Abilene High.

"This is a scary game for us," Raughton said. "OHS is as good as any team in the league. They've lost two games at the buzzer and could easily be 5-0 in district right now. This is a key back-to-back week for us since the game with OHS ends the first half and then we have Abilene High there on Tuesday to open the second half and Abilene already is sitting with a 4-2 record for the first half since they are open today."

So, even though Midland had the Odessa sweep a week a go, don't expect that mark to come easily again. No matter what sport you speak of, Odessa teams don't like to lose to Midland — and vice versa. That's why this night is always one to look forward to — unless you are a coach.

'D': Sights set for 49ers

(From 1C)

boys will have a simple key to go by against San Francisco.

"We need to remember the game will be won on the scoreboard and not on the stat sheet," he said. "We can't worry about first downs and yardage. The 49ers had over 400 yards against us in the NFC championship game but we kept them out of the end zone. That's what counts."

The Cowboys beat San Francisco 30-20 in that game and went on to win their first Super Bowl under Jimmy Johnson.

The Dallas defense has frustrated the 49ers receivers. Last year in the NFC championship game in Texas Stadium, Rice and cornerback Kevin Smith got into a pushing and shouting match before the game started.

"I think it threw Rice off his game," Smith said. "I think he was so mad he couldn't concentrate like he usually does."

Dallas won 38-21 as the 49ers again had a big day moving the ball but had trouble scoring points. Young hurt Dallas in the regular season with a bootleg off a running back fake.

Secondary coach Dave Campo said the Cowboys will be ready for it this time.

"We'll be watching for it," Campo said. "This should be something. I think San Francisco has a little swagger about them now. I don't think they can be intimidated any more like we might have done in the past. I noticed when they had a fight against Chicago, Jerry Rice was one of the first to join the fray."

Davis said the defensive players have good vibes about playing in San Francisco as seven-point underdogs on a sloppy field.

"It's the same feel as two years ago," Davis said. "We have an older more confident team this time than we did. We know we've won out there before. We know what we can do."

And what the Cowboys have done in the past is give San Francisco yardage but keep the 49ers away from the scoreboard.

Jerry defends Switzer move

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says the team might not be a victory away from a third straight Super Bowl appearance if Jimmy Johnson were still the coach.

"I don't think we'd be here at all" if Johnson were still the coach, Jones told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for Thursday's editions.

"This Jimmy-Jerry thing was not going to die. No way the sports world would let it die. Plus, I didn't see what I needed to see in Jimmy that would allow him to let it die."

"Maybe we could have tolerated another year together and had great success," Jones said.

Gas prices fall

NEW YORK — Natural gas prices finished at their lowest levels in nearly three years on Thursday, continuing a slide fed by warmer-than-normal temperatures and heavy supplies.

February natural gas contracts settled at $1.343 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 9.4 cents. It was the lowest close since April 15, 1992, when the near-term contract finished at $1.34.

Persistently mild weather in key parts of the Midwest have been sinking gas prices. At the same time, supplies have been running well ahead of year-ago levels.

After the market closed, Chevron said it has closed about 10 percent of its daily natural gas production because the fuel had gotten too cheap. Earlier in the day, Andarko Petroleum said it was shutting down some natural gas production.

Analysts said the news of tighter production plans could lift natural gas prices in coming sessions.

Other markets were little changed at the end of the day. Light sweet crude for delivery in February finished at $17.72 per barrel, unchanged from Wednesday.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar plunged to a seven-week low against the Japanese yen and declined moderately vs. the German mark on Thursday as traders fretted about the broader impact of Mexico's financial crisis.

Fading hopes for a sharp increase in short-term U.S. interest rates later this month also deterred investors, analysts said.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 98.65 yen, down from 100.00 late Wednesday and the lowest level since Nov. 29.

The dollar also was changing hands late in New York at 1.5285 marks, down from 1.5365 and the lowest rate since Nov. 9.

The Canadian dollar, which hit a nine-year low against the greenback on Tuesday, weakened further on Thursday. The U.S. dollar was worth 1.4176 Canadian dollars in late New York dealings, up from 1.4108 on Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.2810 Swiss francs, down from 1.2885; 5.2905 French francs, down from 5.3065; and 1,625 Italian lire, up from 1,618.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK — Stocks finished Thursday's session on a mixed note, as concerns about the weakened dollar and higher interest rates blunted the positive effects of a comeback in Mexican stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 3.03 at 3,859.00. The blue chip index hovered at slightly lower levels for most of the session, as cautious investors sold or took to the sidelines in the face of several cross currents.

Perryman predicts another oil boom in Texas

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Noted Texas economist Ray Perryman said Thursday that Texas stands to experience another but milder oil boom within the next ten years, with oil prices improving by about 75 percent.

Speaking to the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Perryman, who gave his views and predictions on a number of economic issues impacting the state, said increased demand for energy from emerging third world nations would drive such a boom.

"All the fundamentals for oil to move forward are in place, and an upturn could begin sometime in the second part of this decade. The economic strength of developing nations will double this decade and that means the demand for energy will double."

Perryman said third world nations are investing hundreds of billions of dollars in building infrastructure. "When they have highways, they will want to drive on them."

On the issue of trucking deregulation, he said Texas would be better off as a result of deregulation, which is expected to be complete sometime this year. He said regulated trucking was costing Texas about $700 million a year, because higher shipping costs made Texas firms uncompetitive and because it kept other firms from locating in Texas. He noted that several hundred thousand jobs had been lost in the state as a result of trucking regulation and that about 4,100 jobs were in the Permian Basin.

Perryman, the husband of Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman, said that NAFTA and GATT would be good for the Permian Basin and Texas in general, despite the recent peso devaluation that will likely cost Texas $2 billion annually in imports.

He said the devaluation was predictable and the crisis surrounding it could have been prevented, had the government announced its plans. Perryman said the peso, which is tied to the dollar, would eventually float to its true level and the crisis would be worked out in the marketplace.

Perryman, who counts many of the state's top corporations as clients, said the Republican contract with the people was good overall, but not as good as promised.

"The $8 billion specific cuts announced so far are about as effective as giving up one "Big Mac" a year to reconcile a $500,000 debt," he commented.

In other PBPA business, PBPA Executive Vice President Bob Kiker said the association was moving forward on two programs that would be critical to the Permian Basin.

One is an educational program called NEED that teaches fourth- and fifth-graders about the oil and gas industry. Kiker said the program, which is already being successfully taught in other oil communities in Texas, was needed to give balance to the learning of youngsters who will be the future leaders of America.

The association is also working with the Center for Energy and Economic Development to create an oil industry computer network for the Permian Basin. "If we don't do this as an association, someone else will do it for a profit," said Kiker.

Cobra Electonics Corp. of Chicago, introduced an "intelligent" radar-/laser detector, center, a CB base station and the Safety Alert transmitter, foreground, in mid-December. The detector features a digital alphanumeric signal readout, while the CB includes constant NOAA weather channel emergency alert reception. The Safety Alert is designed to warn motorists with radar detectors of oncoming emergency vehicles and roadside hazards.

Gas utility agrees to settle complaint

■ Proposed settlement would prevent El Paso Natural Gas Co. from requiring gas well owners to buy metering equipment, gathering services from it.

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — El Paso Natural Gas Co. has agreed to allow natural gas well owners in the San Juan Basin to use the utility's competitors to hook up new wells to the company's pipelines, federal officials said.

"This settlement will inject competition and could lower the cost of natural gas production in the San Juan Basin by millions of dollars over its (five-year) term," said Assistant U.S. Attorney General Anne Bingaman, who heads the U.S. Justice Department's antitrust division.

El Paso Natural Gas operates the largest gas pipeline system in the basin of northwestern New Mexico and southern Colorado.

The proposed settlement would prevent the utility from requiring gas well owners to buy metering equipment along with natural gas gathering services from the utility. The meters measure the volume of natural gas flowing from the wells into the utility's pipelines.

Meter installation — necessary to connect a well to the company's gathering system — includes construction and installation of metering equipment and a line to connect the well to the system.

The antitrust division filed a complaint Thursday in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., alleging the company left gas well owners little choice but to pay the utility to tap into its lines.

The complaint alleged the utility's requirement would effectively raise prices for meter installation and, in many instances, slow the pace at which the installation is completed.

Competition could save well operators and producers thousands of dollars on each installation and weeks of time in bringing their natural gas to market, the Justice Department said.

A proposed consent decree was simultaneously filed with the complaint.

Southwest plans service to Omaha

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines Co. on Thursday said it will start flying to Omaha, Neb., which the carrier said fits the profile it likes: underserved and overpriced.

Southwest also said it will establish a new pilot base at Oakland International Airport and beef up some Midwestern routes.

The airline, which specializes in no-frills, short-haul service, said it would begin serving Omaha, its 45th destination, on March 4.

"They needed what we offered, namely low fares and point-to-point service," Southwest spokesman Ed Stewart said.

The initial schedule will include five daily nonstop flights to Chicago, two to Las Vegas and two to Phoenix. Southwest ultimately will employ about 40 people at Eppley Airfield.

Weekly jobless claims jump by 17,000 to six-month high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of newly laid-off Americans filing claims for jobless benefits jumped by 17,000 last week to the highest level in nearly six months, but analysts blamed the increase on difficulties in adjusting claims for seasonal variations.

The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment insurance totaled a seasonally adjusted 355,000, highest since 390,000 first-time claims were filed during the week ended last July 16.

The increase during the week ended Jan. 7 came on top of a similar 17,000 advance during the week ended Dec. 31, when new claims totaled a revised 338,000. The original estimate had been 335,000.

The 17,000 increases also were the largest since the week ended July 16, when they surged by 25,000.

Analysts had attributed the year-end jumps to a seasonal quirk and noted similar volatility often occurred at the end of previous years. Many expect the increase to be reversed in coming weeks.

"At this point, we view this rise over the last two weeks as a result of seasonal pressures and nothing more," wrote economist Michael P. Niemira in the Weekly Economic Indicator Report published by Mitsubishi Bank in New York.

These analysts note other signs of a strong labor market, including the creation of 256,000 new jobs in December, when helped lower the jobless rate to 5.4 percent from 5.6 percent in November and 6.7 percent in January 1994.

The closely watched four-week moving average of weekly jobless claims totaled 334,750, up 8,000 from 326,750 during the period ended Dec. 31.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Invest money only with reputable institutions

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: Back in 1988 I resigned from my job of 11 years to stay home with my son, who was ill at the time. I withdrew my pension money and invested the $5,700 in an individual retirement account with a private company run by my accountant. He gave me the papers to sign, and I gave him the money.

I recently requested my money because of financial difficulties. I've been getting the runaround for months. So, I called the police, the FBI, county prosecutor and no luck. They all told me to get an attorney. I got an attorney, and he said he couldn't do anything for me.

My IRA should now be worth more than $10,000, and I can't get my hands on it. Who can I turn to?

A: You might be involved in a case of securities fraud. You should get in touch with your state securities regulatory agency, which can be found in the phone book under the state listings.

Because an accountant sold you an IRA administered by his company, you should also call your state's board of accountancy. Ask both agencies if they have received other complaints about the accountant. If there's any money left in your account, they might help you get it back.

The lesson I hope you have learned is: Never invest money in an IRA, or anything else, with other than reputable institutions, such as banks, mutual fund companies and well-known brokerage firms.

Even if you know the person who is selling an investment product, check him or her out with your state securities regulatory agency. According to the Securities and Exchange Commission, lots of fraudulent deals take place between people who supposedly know each other.

Q: I read your column regularly and have become interested in learning all I can about the financial business you write about. Maybe some day I can get my broker's license and work independently or with a financial firm. How does one go about entering this profession?

A: According to successful stockbrokers, you should start out by getting a job with a well-established brokerage firm. You would start as a trainee.

There are government and industry tests you have to take to get your license. Many good-sized brokerage firms pay for the training courses involved in the licensing process.

Whether you can get a job with a top brokerage firm depends on your age and your work experience. Top firms are unlikely to hire someone who appears too young, because investors are often uncomfortable with a broker who has a youthful appearance.

The top firms also like to see some experience in the business world on your resume. It would help if you had some experience in selling nontangibles, such as home-equity loans, insurance or advertising.

Q: I have a sizable annuity I want to give to a university as a gift. How can I give the annuity and proportion the charitable deductions out over X number of years?

A: One thing you can do is ask the development manager at the university to send you brochures on the various gift options. One option would be to enroll in a charitable-remainder trust program. It's sort of like having your cake and eating it too. The university gets your money, and you get some tax deductions and income from the trust until you leave this vale of tears.

However, putting an annuity in a charitable-remainder trust is not a good idea, because you already have a tax deferral on the growth of the annuity. You would be better off putting some highly appreciated asset, such as stocks, into the charitable trust. You wouldn't have to pay a capital gain and you'd get a tax deduction plus some income for life.

Elliott, Del Negro kick Spurs in high gear with season highs

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Sean Elliott's 32 points and Vinny Del Negro's 27 — both season highs — made up for the absence of David Robinson as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Miami Heat 113-108 on Thursday night.

The Spurs won their sixth straight and 13th in their last 14 games with leading scorer Robinson out with a muscle strain in his lower back. The center's status is listed as day-to-day.

San Antonio emphasized its outside game in Robinson's absence, tying a franchise record with 10 3-point shots.

Avery Johnson added 17 points and 10 assists, and Dennis Rodman had 11 points and a season-high 22 rebounds.

Kevin Willis paced Miami with 30 points before being ejected with 3:49 left after elbowing Rodman while scrambling for a rebound.

Elliott, who had 19 second-half points, keyed an 8-0 run early in the fourth quarter, enabling San Antonio to extend its lead to 96-87 with 6:51 left.

Miami battled back to 99-94 on a basket by Glen Rice, who finished with 23. The Heat dropped its fourth straight game and eighth in its last 10 games.

Strong outside shooting by Del Negro in the second quarter boosted San Antonio to a 57-52 halftime lead. Two of his 3-point shots keyed a 14-3 San Antonio run which gave San Antonio its first extended lead.

Nuggets 94, Mavericks 78

DENVER — Rodney Rogers scored 16 points and Dikembe Mutombo had 15 points, 12 rebounds and seven blocked shots, leading Denver over cold-shooting Dallas.

The Nuggets, rebounding from a 114-88 loss to Utah on Wednesday that was their worst setback of the season, also got 13 points apiece from Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf and rookie Jalen Rose.

Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn led Dallas with 15 points each, but the NBA's fourth- and fifth-leading scorers shot just 5-of-14 and 6-of-21 as the Mavs finished at 37 percent.

Doug Smith came off the bench to score 14 for Dallas, which has lost eight of its last 11 games.

Dallas was without its leading rebounder, Popeye Jones, who did not make the trip because of back spasms. Denver was missing starting point guard Robert Pack, who did not suit up because of a lower back strain.

Rogers had nine points in the first quarter, including a 3-pointer that capped a 7-0 Denver run mid way through the period.

Late in the half, Denver outscored Dallas 12-2. Abdul-Rauf, who replaced Pack in the starting lineup, had eight of those points, including a pair of 3-pointers, and the Nuggets had a 47-34 lead at intermission.

Dallas shot only 31 percent in the half (13 of 42) and made just one field goal in the final seven minutes of the half.

Mutombo's hook shot with 8:53 remaining gave Denver its biggest lead, 79-58.

Cavaliers 107, Suns 96

PHOENIX — Terrell Brandon scorched Phoenix with a career-high 30 points, and Chris Mills blocked three shots in 1:21 of the pivotal third quarter as Cleveland beat the Suns.

It was only the second home loss in 18 games for the Suns, who had the NBA's second-best home record.

Brandon had 18 points in the first quarter, when the Cavs took the lead for good. Cleveland's league-leading defense (89.6 points-allowed average) kept the Suns, whose 112.3-point scoring average is No. 2 in the league, from getting closer than five points again.

By late in the third, Cleveland had a 75-56 lead, and the Cavs were up 82-65 starting the fourth.

Tyrone Hill, ejected for getting his second technical with 1:53 left, had 19 points and 10 rebounds for Cleveland, and Tony Campbell had 17 points off the bench.

Danny Manning scored a season-high 33 points for Phoenix, and Charles Barkley had 15 points and 13 rebounds.

Trailing 82-65, Phoenix made a fourth-quarter run to close to 82-73 after 3-pointers by Dan Majerle and Barkley, who created the 9-point deficit with a 12-foot turnaround.

But Mills, who had 14 points, stopped the run with basket and a three-point play with 9:30 remaining. Cleveland was back to an 82-75 lead, and the Suns missed a series of 3-pointers down the stretch.

In the third, Mills blocked shots by Majerle, Manning and Barkley, the latter getting a technical which Mills converted with 6:29 to play.

Furyk goes bogey-free

Associated Press

HONOLULU — Jim Furyk and Keith Fergus, playing in the first and last groups on a windy day, shot 5-under-par 67s Thursday to share a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $1.2 million Hawaiian Open.

■ Golf Roundup

With 35 mph winds gusting over the Waialae Country Club course, Furyk, in the first group to start the tournament, birdied the 539-yard first hole and was off and running.

In compiling a bogey-free round, he added three more birdies in the 10- to 12-foot range before capping the day by rolling in a 3-footer after blasting out of a sand trap on the 552-yard 18th.

"The last time I played in wind this hard, I was in Hawaii," he said. "I feel pretty comfortable here."

Fergus, in the last group to tee off, was 1-under through 15 holes, but finished with a flurry with birdies on the 16th and 17th and closing with an eagle on the 552-yard closing hole.

"That was good," said Fergus, who is returning to the PGA Tour after a seven-year layoff. "That was fun."

He added: "When I looked out this morning, I said to myself, 'Boy, this is going to be fun. Just go out there and don't do anything stupid."

Trailing the co-leaders by a shot were Steve Jones, Mark Brooks, Tom Lehman, Clark Dennis, Yoshinori Mizumaki of Japan.

LPGA-T of C

ORLANDO, Fla. — Powered by a hole-in-one on the 17th hole, Barb Mucha shot a 4-under-par 68 Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the first round of the Tournament of Champions, the year's opening LPGA event.

Playing in her hometown, Mucha toured the Jack Nicklaus-designed Grand Cypress Resort course at 36-32, despite making bogey on No. 18 following her second LPGA career ace.

"I hit a 6-iron kinda fat," she said of the hole-in-one on the 164-yard hole. "It hit about six paces on the green and kept rolling. I really thought it was going to be short but it was dead on line. Then it just kept rolling and rolling and then it was, 'My God, it went in.'"

One stroke back was Beth Daniel, the 1994 LPGA Player of Year.
