Hundreds Fight Fire...

Inferno Rages In California

By DAVID EINSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of firefighters battled today to halt a wine-country inferno that charred more than 23,000 acres, drove hundreds of people from their homes and sent up an immense plume of reddish-white smoke.

Four arson-caused fires that were set around 1:30 p.m. Monday had linked into a single blaze by 9 p.m., raging across unpopulated grass and woodland in the direction of Fairfield, about 10 miles away.

Officials said the fire was 10 percent contained early today.

As for full containment, California Department of Forestry spokesman Ed Karmen said, "They're not even talking about that. They're talking about where this fire is going to go and they're talking about locations four and five miles in front of the fire."

It is the largest fire in Northern California this year.

Fire spokesman Nick Fowler of the Lake Napa Ranger Unit said investigators decided the cause of the huge blaze was arson because "we had four, separate fires set within five minutes of each other in one area."

At least 35 to 40 homes, most of them expensive, were among the 65 structures destroyed, forcing hundreds of people to flee.

Seven people, two of them firefighters, were injured battling or watching the blaze. Four were treated and released for smoke inhalation. Three remained hospitalized at Queen of the Valley Hospital in Napa early today. Two had second-degree burns and one had a fractured wrist, Fowler said.

A dozen air tankers that had bombed the fire with fire-retardant chemicals were grounded overnight, but 700 to 800 firefighters continued to struggle against the flames on the ground, said Napa sheriff's Capt. Ken Narlow.

A white plume of smoke rose several thousand feet into the air, clearly visible from San Francisco, 40 miles to the southwest. Thick smoke created an eerie pink evening glow over Sacramento, 70 miles east.

Temperatures of about 100 degrees and southeasterly winds of 20 mph created tinder-dry conditions, feeding the blaze and whipping it onward.

While many residents fled before the flames, hundreds more stood atop roofs armed with garden hoses to douse the rain of sparks.

"I watched my house burn from all sides. I couldn't understand it. There were a lot of explosions," said Raymond Berendsen, who fled the flames and huddled with other refugees in the Napa High School gymnasium.

Supreme Court Nominee Will Not Be A Woman

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, apparently deciding against using his first Supreme Court appointment for the first woman justice, has "already picked out" conservative Southern California jurist J. Clifford Wallace, congressional sources say.

Justice Potter Stewart retires July 3, and sources said Reagan is likely to announce his selection for a successor by mid-July.

Wallace, a 51-year-old Mormon from San Diego and a Republican lawyer with 11 years on the federal bench, "is the administration's frontrunner," one source familiar with the selection process said Monday.

"This guy is already picked out as far as the administration is concerned," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Described as a moderate conservative by various California lawyers, Wallace was first considered for the high court by former President Ford, but John Paul Stevens filled that vacancy.

Wallace is a member of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. He was named to that post by former President Nixon after serving in the U.S. District Court for Southern California.

Wallace, who began a three-week vacation Monday, could not be reached for comment. White House spokesman David Gergen, said reports about any potential nominees are premature.

"We have a growing, not a shortening list," he said.

Other sources said, however, that Wallace is at the top of that list.

After Stewart announced his resignation, effective July 3, Reagan dangled the possibility that his first Supreme Court appointment might go to a woman. He said he was "always" on the lookout for someone to possibly become the court's first female member.

Last Oct. 14, then-candidate Reagan said, "I am announcing today that one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can possibly find."

In a letter to Reagan, Senate Judiciary Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., suggested eight people, including Wallace and three women, as possible candidates to succeed Stewart.

In addition to Wallace, Thurmond suggested Attorney General William French Smith; presidential counselor Edwin Meese III; White House aide Elizabeth Hanford Dole; and four judges, Charles E. Simons Jr., chief U.S. district judge in Columbia, S.C., Cornelia G. Kennedy of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Detroit; Amalya L. Kearse, of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, and C. Bruce Littlejohn of the South Carolina State Supreme Court.

Try To Restore Budget Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of futile attempts to reshape President Reagan's economic program to their liking, Senate Democrats are making one final bid to restore about $1 billion in cuts targeted for social programs.

But whether the effort succeeds or not, Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia says many Democrats will help give overwhelming Senate approval to the $39.6 billion package of cuts the Republican majority is pushing.

The Senate took up the legislation briefly Monday evening to handle some technical matters. Full debate was beginning today, and Republican leader Howard Baker said he expects to take the vote on final passage before Congress begins a 10-day Fourth of July recess Friday.

"In the overall, we have agreed with the president in goals, the goals being to restrain federal spending and balance the budget," Byrd, the Democratic leader, told reporters on Monday as he announced a package of proposed amendments to the budget-cutting bill.

Earlier, he predicted the final vote would be close to the 78-20 tally by which the Senate approved Reagan's budget outline last month. About two dozen Democrats, including Byrd, eventually voted for that one after unsuccessful attempts to change it.

In the House, meanwhile, the Rules Committee was meeting today to determine the procedures for consideration of a companion budget-cutting bill. That debate on the House floor probably won't begin until Congress returns from its recess.

Democratic leaders, after first saying they would attempt to prevent any amendments, now have switched signals and may insist on a number of roll calls, forcing Republicans to vote individually on cuts proposed for popular programs.

The House measure calls for $37.7 billion in cuts for 1982, although Reagan and budget director David A. Stockman have complained that about $9 billion of the total are phony savings that won't actually reduce spending.

The minority Republicans are pushing an alternative in the House that is much more comprehensive than the suggested changes Democrats came up with in the Senate.

The SDN Column

Councilman Ed Thrift raised a question at a city council meeting last week that has puzzled experts for some time. As the council looked over some figures in their budget study, Thrift asked, "How long can we count on sales tax rebates to increase?"

This is important, because the one percent city sales tax has become a significant factor in Snyder's city budget and a steady increase from that source has enabled the city to operate efficiently and even finance some capital improvements without any big surge in property tax rates.

Inflation has played a role in the sales tax increase, of course, but it has not accounted for all of it. Snyder's sales tax rebate so far this year is running about 28 percent above that of 1980. When the city first began assessing the one percent sales tax, the total revenue from that source was projected at about $140,000 for an entire year. For the first six months this year, the actual rebate has totalled $376,000.

How long will the spiral endure? Nobody knows. But the sales tax, regarded by many is the fairest tax of all, has helped ease the burden on property taxes here. For example, a major water main replacement project was recently completed here. There was a time when it would have been impossible to spend $300,000 or so on such a project without a bond issue.

Another question we heard recently was, "How much sleep does a person need.?"

Once, you could get a fairly definite answer, but no more. Experts now say that it depends entirely on the individual. But they have reached one conclusion: Short sleepers (people who get by on six hours or less per night) are more energetic, confident and successful than those who require more sleep.

They say the big factor is the quality of the sleep. Those who can drop off to a deep sleep quickly are able to get the body rest they need in a short time. That's nothing new, of course. Benjamin Franklin told us long ago the virtues of rising early.

No. 8 For 1980

Scurry 5th In Overall Petroleum Production

Although it ranked eighth for the year 1980, Scurry County is the state's No. 5 all-time producer of oil, according to figures compiled by the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

In all, Texas had 21 counties producing 10 million barrels or more in 1980, and it now has 12 counties that have produced a total of a million barrels or more over-all.

Scurry County produced 39,377,274 barrels of oil last year. This ran the cumulative total to 1,588,990,857 barrels. The county celebrated production of its billionth barrel of oil in 1973. Production began in Scurry County in 1923. Now, eight years after the billionth barrel was produced, the county has produced well over half of its second billion.

Yoakum County was the top producer of oil in the state in 1980, with 60,771,167 barrels, barely nosing out Gaines County with 60,273,574. Others in the top 10, in order, are Ector, 52,306,753; Pecos, 51,136,629; Gregg, 43,620,782; Hockley, 43,323,526; Andrews, 39,865,476; Scurry, 39,377,274; Crane, 30,398,460; and Refugio, 28,602,661.

Gregg County maintained its position as the all-time leader with a cumulative total of 2,731,115,094 barrels. The only other county with total production of more than two billion barrels is Ector with 2,303,325,078 barrels.

Other counties with more than a billion barrels in overall production, in order, are Andrews, 1,975,877,594; Rusk, 1,645,966,819; Scurry, 1,588,990,857; Crane, 1,318,436,646; Yoakum, 1,268,322,980; Harris, 1,244,709,847; Gaines, 1,231,014,582; Brazoria, 1,153,821,547; Refugio, 1,067,821,289; Pecos, 1,065,876,605.

Howard County produced 14,678,237 barrels in 1980, while Kent County produced 11,316,272; Borden 8,295,936; Garza 7,469,123; Mitchell 6,243,411; and Fisher 3,877,412.

State-wide, production dropped below the billion barrel mark for the year for the first time since 1965. The state's total for 1980 was 960 million barrels, a decline of 46.5 barrels from 1979.

However, last year's total of well completions was 18,697, the biggest total since 1957.

Tax Fight Continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and the Democrats' chief tax-writer in the House, already at odds over the shape of a tax cut, are feuding angrily now over how quickly Congress can deliver one.

Reagan, who wants tax legislation on his desk before Congress begins its August recess, was described as "rather livid" Monday upon hearing a prediction by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., that it might take until the end of September for both the House and the Senate to complete action.

Rostenkowski, who chairs the Ways and Means Committee in the Democratic-controlled House, was no less chafed by administration inferences that he and other Democratic leaders are stalling.

Bani-Sadr Hides

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iran's deposed president, continued to elude capture today. Apparently he put no faith in a promise from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of protection if he threw in with the fundamentalist Islamic clerics who defeated him in a year-long power struggle.

Rumors circulated around the Middle East that the 47-year-old leader of the moderate and leftist forces in the Iranian revolution had escaped abroad. But his presence outside the country could not be confirmed, and sources in Tehran reported earlier that he was moving from hideout to hideout in the Iranian capital.

Inflation Rate Rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp rise in housing costs pushed the nation's annual inflation rate to 8.4 percent in May, more than three points above the previous month's rate, the government reported today.

But for the first time since early 1979, the 12-month gain in the consumer price index was less than 10 percent — a further bolstering of economists' predictions that the double-digit crunch is finally at an end. Prices in May were 9.8 percent higher than in May 1980.

May's rise in housing costs — primarily reflecting higher mortgage interest rates and house prices — accounted for most of the 0.7 percent monthly increase, the Labor Department said in its report.

Refinery Fire

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — An explosion set off a series of fires shortly before dawn today at a Houston Ship Channel refinery, injuring five workers.

About 30 fire units from nearby communities and industrial plants were held on a standby basis nearly two hours before units from Pasadena and Crown Central Petroleum Corp. brought the fires under control. All the fires were out within three hours but firemen continued to wet down smoldering units.

Two of the injured were transferred by helicopter to the burns unit of Hermann Hospital in Houston with burns over about 35 percent of their bodies. Three others were reported in stable condition at Pasadena hospitals.

Hobby Cancels Board Meeting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has canceled the first meeting of the Legislative Redistricting Board, saying the board should wait to see how a court rules on a lawsuit challenging a House redistricting plan.

Hobby had called a Wednesday meeting to start work on a Senate redistricting plan to replace the proposal vetoed by Gov. Bill Clements last Thursday.

"In the event the House plan is invalidated in the lawsuit recently filed, the LRB also may be required to rewrite that redistricting plan," Hobby said in a statement Monday.

State District Court Judge Harley Clark has set a Friday hearing on the suit challenging the House plan.

Hobby said once the board meets it has only 60 days to produce a plan.

Comptroller Bob Bullock already had said Monday he would not attend the meeting of the board.

Asked if he had been consulted before Hobby called the meeting, Bullock replied, "I was not (contacted). That would not be the reason I would fail to attend. The reason I would fail to attend is because of the simple fact that I think that we're acting too hastily in attempting to solve a problem that will last the next decade.

"Remember, we only redistrict every 10 years, and I see no reason to rush into it."

Asked if his statements about Attorney General Mark White might cause problems, Bullock said, "I

Thursday Deadline For Queen Entries

Deadline for entries in the July 4th queen's contest has been set for 5 p. m. Thursday, June 25.

Clubs and other organizations have been invited to enter queen candidates, and they may do so by registering their entries at the chamber of commerce office.

The queen's contest is being held as a fund-raising project to help defray expenses for the fireworks display and other projects for the annual Independence Day celebration in Towle Memorial Park.

The queen candidates and their sponsors will be selling tickets and the winner will be determined by the number of tickets sold. The queen's contest tickets are priced at $1 each.

The July 4th queen will be crowned during evening ceremonies just prior to the fireworks display.

Tickets for the queen's contest are now available at the chamber office.

Tickets also are on hand for advance sale for the July 4th tractor pull. This event will be held on Friday and Saturday nights at the rodeo grounds on West 30th St. The tractor pull tickets are priced at $4 for adults and $3 for children under 12.

rare announcement

"This is a rare announcement by a federal government agency," begins a release from the Civil Aeronautics Board.

And that it is. The CAB is announcing its request to Congress to put it out of business as the regulator of the airline industry as soon as possible.

The airlines have been undergoing gradual deregulation, as you may recall, since the mid-'70s. The first major steps were elimination of federally fixed fare schedules and allocation of routes in the expectation of stimulating competition and, as a consequence, service to the public.

That it did, and both the traveling public and the airlines enjoyed a couple of heady boom years. There were also some problems, such as the loss of service by smaller communities, that are still being resolved.

But essentially deregulation worked. So well that the CAB, scheduled under the original legislation to shut down Jan. 1, 1985, wants its termination to be advanced by possibly as much as two years. Its remaining responsibilities are to be transferred as rapidly as possible to other agencies; for example, consumer protection regulation to the Department of Transportation and policing of questionable trade practices to the Federal Trade Commission.

Ironically, the move to speed up the closing down comes as the airlines themselves are running into rough economic weather. The bloom was off the boom sometime back with increasing energy costs absorbing much of the additional revenues generated by lower fares and more passengers.

But the problems are not ones that are suceptible to solution through regulation. On the contrary, in the CAB's opinion. It believes that going out of business itself is the best means of removing some of the industry's burdens.

It may be right. It certainly is right about this being a rare event.

on the other side

One does not endorse murder, of course. Still, it is interesting to see the outraged reaction of a terrorist group when one of its own leaders falls prey to the sort of brutality the organization routinely practices.

The Palestine Liberation Army (PLO) has blamed Israel for the shooting death of a PLO official in Brussels.

Murder tends to breed murder, alas, but it might be instructive for the PLO to realize how it feels to be on the other side of the gun.

WASHINGTON (NEA) —Although the Israeli air attack on an Iraqi nuclear power plant has provoked an intense and protracted international debate, one of the most important questions raised by the incident has received little attention.

The issue is one so terrifying that until this month it has been almost unthinkable — the designation by one country of a hostile nation's commercial nuclear facilities as strategic military targets.

The unique circumstances surrounding the Israeli mission provide an excuse for those whose head-in-the-sand approach to such problems involves little more than the wishful assumption that they will disappear if ignored.

That's because the object of the Israeli raid, the Osirak commercial nuclear facility outside Baghdad, was still under construction when bombed and was not scheduled to begin operations until later this year.

Although more than 25 pounds of highly enriched, weapons-grade uranium was on the site at the time of the attack, that element poses little danger in terms of dispersal in the environment leading to radioactive contamination.

The process of nuclear fission, necessary to produce energy from such a reactor, also releases dozens of "daughter products" — many of them isotopes known to be lethal in even the most minute quantities.

"Under such circumstances (if the plant had been operational) no government of Israel could contemplate bombing the reactor," the attackers explained.

But Israel has, in fact, opened a Pandora's box that never again can be closed. It is now possible — if not probable — that at some future time a desperate nation will bomb or sabotage another country's operating reactor and cite the Israeli precedent as partial justification for its action.

That danger is more than hypothetical because throughout Europe — an especially likely locale for the outbreak of a future war — more than 100 commercial nuclear power plants already are in operation and almost twice that number are under construction or being planned.

The Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry promotional organization, boasted earlier this year of "the extent to which nuclear energy is advancing abroad" although there has been virtually no growth in the United States in recent years.

In France alone, five new reactors began operation last year, with a new nuclear power plant scheduled to come "on line" every two months throughout the early 1980s.

The world's first full-scale fast-breeder commercial power station — the 1,200 megawatt Super Phenix reactor — is being built by a French-German-Italian consortium on the banks of the Rhone River east of Lyon, France, near the small town of Creys-Malville.

Fifteen commercial nuclear reactors are in operation in West Germany, with another 25 planned or under construction. More than 30 units are operating in Great Britain, while dozens of others dot the landscape in Belgium, Finland, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

A similar pattern is evident in Eastern Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia heavily committed to nuclear power.

The potential those reactors hold for destruction is outlined in a somber article on "Catastrophic Releases of Radioactivity" written by a pair of physicists from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and published in a recent issue of Scientific American magazine.

Assuming that a typical, 1,000-megawatt generating station is struck by a one-megaton bomb, the article concludes that an "attack on a single reactor with a single nuclear weapon could devastate a substantial part of Europe."

The authors estimate that "the lethal zone for the detonation of the weapon on the reactor would be more than 500 square miles" while "an area of 180 square miles would continue for more than century... (to) be a permanent monument to the catastrophe" because of continuing contamination.

Once absurd, implausible or inconceivable, that scenario today is one step closer to reality.

a life for a life

"Thou shalt not kill" is cited as a Biblical admonition by those opposed to capital punishment.

Scripture, translated more precisely from Greek, reads instead, "Thou shalt not commit murder."

There is a significant difference.

Does the law have a right to ask "a life for a life"? It has and it does.

The United States Supreme Court decreed in 1976 that individual states may enforce "the death penalty."

The death penalty is constitutional, is legal.

Since that landmark ruling in 1976, more than 30 of the United States have enacted capital punishment statutes.

In those states more than 750 killers have been sentenced to die.

But only four have died.

In a courageous confrontation with his own colleagues, Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist has accused the Supreme Court of contributing to making a "mockery" of the criminal justice system.

He cites the High Court's sluggish handling of death penalty appeals.

What teed him off was when a Georgia death row inmate--convicted of the torture-slayings of six people in 1973--delayed his execution by appealing all the way to the Supreme Court.

The High Court could have disposed of this case promptly and decisively and thus established a precedent of enormous significance--but refused to consider the appeal--left the question unresolved--left the convicted killer in limbo.

Meanwhile, violent crime is increasing with New York City, Los Angeles and Miami suffering a pandemic of murder.

Newsweek's most recent survey shows Americans two-to-one in favor of the death penalty.

Whether the penalty is a deterrent can be argued, but a typical American surveyed was satisfied that with the death penalty "at least one criminal does not kill any more!"

Chief Justice Warren Burger has urged acceleration of the judicial mill, says, "trials and appellate review should take place within weeks of a defendant's arrest."

Justice Rehnquist blames the situation in Atlanta on the indefiniteness of our courts.

"When people begin to believe that organized society is unwilling or unable to impose upon criminal offenders the punishment they deserve, then there are sown the seeds of anarchy, vigilante justice, lynch law."

President Reagan has promised that on his priority list--just as soon as he gets our economy under control--he will focus his efforts on doing something about crime.

The consensus of responsible jurists is that swift and certain justice is the best deterrent.

Anyway, we've tried mollycoddling criminals and that policy is killing us.

NEW YORK (AP) — In meeting the bills and schooling the kids, and fixing the house and otherwise seeking to tame an often hostile world, there is plenty to occupy the mind.

If not, dwell on these thoughts:

—The trouble with many companies, says Jay Hall, is the boss. Hall goes further: Bosses, as well as inflation or lack of capital or some other reason, can be a cause of international declines in productivity.

Hall, president of Telometrics International, a personnel testing and training firm based in The Woodlands, Texas, declares that competence may be our most wasted resource. It need not be so, he says.

In "The Competence Process," a book he published himself, Hall declares there is "a vast reserve of talent and desire to perform on the part of workers that most organizations have yet to tap."

People, he says, have the capacity to do good work. Moreover, they have a need to do good work. He believes people, "as individuals, and in groups, are competent." Competent, but often frustrated.

Competence, he feels, cannot be fully expressed unless those who manage provide a supportive environment, "a context for competence," by encouraging worker participation, commitment and creativity.

Think about it the next time you hear the boss complain that "nobody wants to put in a good day's work anymore."

Maybe, Hall suggests, the boss should use his head; he insists the effort can be productive. The book is available from Telometrics, Box 7437, The Woodlands, TX 77380.

—In May, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced, the jobless rate rose to 7.6 percent from 7.3 percent in April. Who are these people without work?

Janet L. Norwood, Bureau of Labor Statistics commissioner, posed the question and then gave this data to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress:

In May, 43 percent of the unemployed were adult men, 35 percent adult women, and the remaining 22 percent were teenagers.

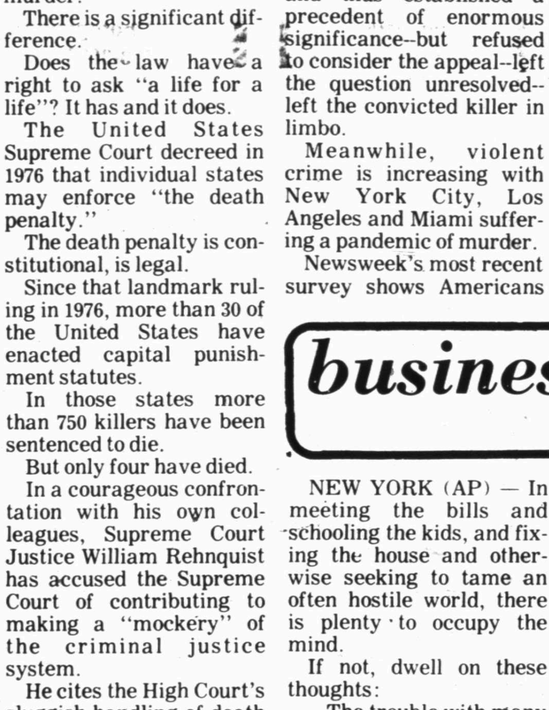

Half the unemployed in May had lost their most recent job. Of these, about one-third were on layoff expecting to be recalled, and the other two-thirds had been permanently separated from their former employer.

Twelve percent of the jobless had voluntarily left their most recent job. And 38 percent of the total resulted from persons newly entering or reentering the labor force.

Nearly 15 percent of the jobless in May had been without work for more than 26 weeks, and another 13 percent for 15 to 26 weeks. But 40 percent of the total was without work for fewer than five weeks.

There is considerable turnover: In any month, about half the unemployed are new to the situation. In the following month, a quarter of them will have found jobs, and almost as many will have left the labor force: to attend school, become homemakers, or retire.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone could make you feel quite insecure about your work or career today. Instead of going to pieces, double your efforts. Prove him wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friendships could be jeopardized today if you put material considerations above good will. Don't let anything transpire where money might be an issue.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Associates must be handled with extra tact and diplomacy today. If you alienate them, they might turn and work against you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Double-check all facts and figures today. You could have to explain your work. You won't want any mistakes credited to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best to avoid any money-related matters with friends today. If things don't work out, either you or your pal could wrongfully feel taken advantage of by the other.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Avoid getting into any arguments or debates today, especially with any member of your family. A serious rift not easily corrected could result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have to confront challenge or resistance from coworkers today. If possible, sidestep any unpleasant issue. Tomorrow will be a better day to tackle the situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may appear that someone with more material worth has enticed a friend away from you. Don't get uptight. The situation will be short-lived.

Psychic bidding

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is a real old-time freak hand. It was played in the summer of 1932 in an exhibition at West Point. Lieutenant Alfred Gruenther, who was a math instructor there and who had become the best and most popular bridge tournament director in his spare time, persuaded a bunch of expert players to give an exhibition at the Academy and this was one of the hands.

When young Oswald Jacoby, who sat South, failed to bid at his first turn there was a slight gasp from the audience. When he bid six clubs at his second turn a senior officer's wife said in a loud whisper, "That's one of his famous psychics."

It wasn't psychic. Jacoby wouldn't mind going down any number of tricks undoubled. He could always run to diamonds if clubs got doubled and he was setting up a defense against a potential spade grand slam.

The late Charles Lochridge, sitting West, did not bother to double six clubs and simply bid six spades. Then when Jacoby bid seven diamonds, he knew that a club would be opened by North and ruffed by South if seven spades were bid, so Charley had to double seven diamonds and settle for a mere three-trick set.

The Mona Lisa, completed by Leonardo da Vinci in 1503, is considered the most valuable painting in the world. Legend says its subject was Mona Lisa Gheradini, whose husband disliked the painting and refused to pay for it, but it is more commonly believed that it portrays the Duchess of Milan. However, it has never been definitely established just exactly who the model was.

Why has the cost of electricity increased so much?

Mainly, fuel. Mainly, natural gas. We still have to use it to make more than half your electricity. Our fuel bill in 1980 was $198,900,000*; our estimate for 1981 is $450,000,000.

As the graph shows, Texas Electric's customers paid much lower fuel costs on their electric bills throughout the '70s. But now our biggest contract for low-cost gas has expired, and we have to pay the going rate.

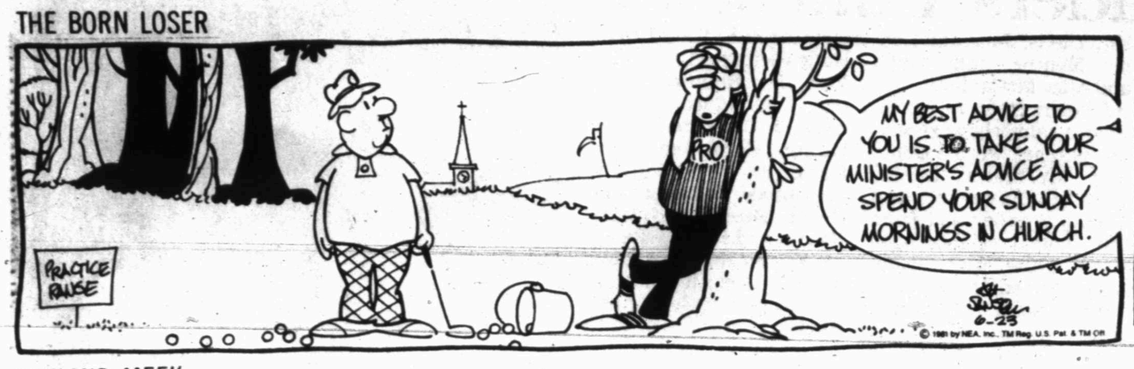

Our lignite-fueled generating plants (and our nuclear plant in the future) will help protect our customers from rising gas prices.

You can help hold down your electric bill by conserving at home; learn how at one of our free Tighten-Up workshops, or request our conservation tips booklets.

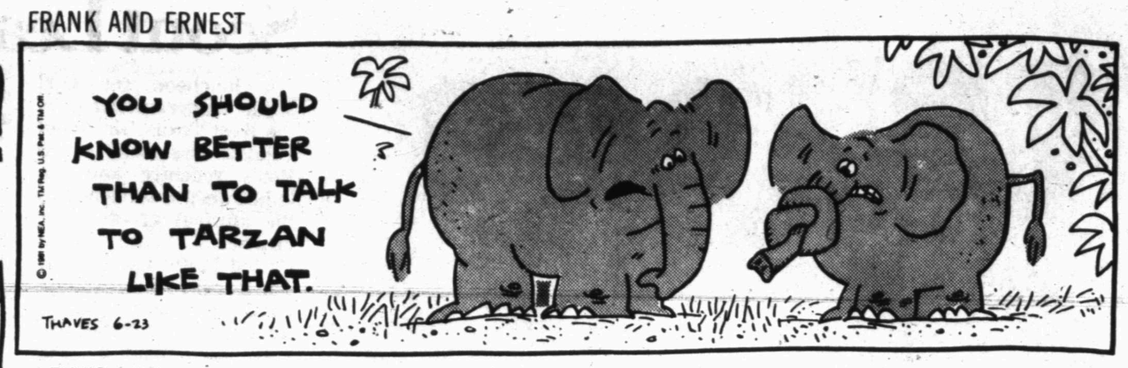

* The amount we have to pay for fuel to make electricity is the exact amount we charge our customers for fuel.

Dear Abby

Daughter Ready to Trade Mother for Old Model

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please tell those readers who write in and wish that their dear departed parents were still with them that I will be glad to trade my 91-year-old, childish, vindictive, contrary, mean, ungrateful mother for their dead relatives.

Your bereaved readers are fortunate that their loved ones passed on while still in possession of their true personalities; they left pleasant memories behind them and they are rightfully missed.

My mother has lived 20 years too long. She is not the same person she was, and by the time she dies, I will be glad to see her go, because her present self is not at all attractive, and is in fact hardly bearable. In a few more years, her abusive and unkind conduct will have erased all the good memories of the years before she changed.

Your bereaved readers should thank God for taking their relatives while they were still lovable human beings for whom one could shed a loving tear.

LOVES HER BUT HATES WHAT SHE'S BECOME

DEAR LOVES: I know yours is a heavy cross to bear, but is it possible that your 91-year-old mother once cared for a childish, vindictive, contrary, mean, ungrateful child — namely you — for several years? Apparently she didn't abandon you when you were abusive, unkind and not at all attractive. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please clear something up in your column? Most people think a military school is some kind of correctional institution like a reform school. Abby, this is not true! I am tired of people asking me why I got sent to a military school. A military school is a college preparatory school. There are no fences around this place.

In some cases, a person who comes to a military school has not done well in public schools and needs a little more individual attention. The military part just develops self-discipline, which comes in handy later in life. I am not pushing military schools. I'm just trying to set the record straight. Under our uniforms, we're just average, normal kids.

CADET CORPORAL, HOWE MILITARY SCHOOL, HOWE, IND.

DEAR CORPORAL: Thanks for writing. I'll bet you make sergeant in no time.

DEAR ABBY: This is for all those people who refuse to give cash as a wedding gift:

Our daughter and her husband struggled through years of poverty earning their college degrees. When they graduated, neither had any savings, although our daughter did have all the necessary cooking and housekeeping items.

Their most appreciated gifts were those from their practical friends and relatives who gave them money. After years of commuting by bus to classes and work, they were finally able to make a down payment on a car.

Most of their wedding gifts — pottery, wok pans, ceramics, pictures, trays, glassware, wine racks, knick-knacks, etc. — are still stored in my attic. All these are items for which they have no space and little use, and don't even remember receiving.

I am so worn out after six years of moving and cleaning all these dust collectors, I am tempted to haul the whole lot to Goodwill.

Unless the couple is already on easy street, no gift at all is better than one that ends up stored in Mom's attic. And registering isn't the answer either — they got four Crock Pots!

What do people have against giving money?

TIRED MOM IN MANITOWOC, WIS.

DEAR MOM: Maybe they don't want anybody to know how much they spent.

Hike In Meat Prices Could Fuel Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Easing food and fuel prices should give Americans more relief from torrid inflation this summer, but the cooling trend could heat up later in the year if meat prices increase as expected, analysts say.

Fresh news on how the fight against inflation is being waged was due today with the scheduled release of the Labor Department's consumer price index for May.

In advance of the report, private economic forecasters predicted inflation would continue to be moderate, not far above April's 0.4 percent increase.

April's increase, the best monthly performance since last July, worked out to a compounded annual rate of 5.1 percent. It was 10 percent above the rate in April 1980.

For the first four months of the year, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 8.4 percent, well below the 12.4 percent rise of 1980.

Since the spring of 1980, inflation has declined slowly but steadily. The decline has prompted some economists to express optimism that the nation may finally be coming out of its double-digit crunch.

The Reagan administration is predicting a 10.2 percent inflation rate for the year, measured from December 1980 to December 1981.

Donald Ratajczak, director of the Economic Forecasting Project at Georgia State University, is predicting consumer prices will rise 8.5 percent.

Edward Yardeni, chief economist and vice president of the brokerage house E.F. Hutton & Co., forecasts an even smaller, 5.1 percent rise.

"Our projections on the CPI for May and June indicate that the moderation in April was not a fluke," Ratajczak said in his May forecast.

He predicted moderate increases in food prices and a continued weakness in energy commodities. Mortgage interest rates also are rising at a slower rate, Ratajczak said.

Meat prices had been expected to rise by now because ranchers have been slaughtering their herds to keep from paying the high cost of upkeep. That rise has only been delayed, not put off entirely, economists say.

Pope Recovers From Pluerisy

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II's fever is subsiding as he recovers from an attack of pleurisy, the Vatican says.

"The preliminary tests following his admission to Gemelli Hospital have demonstrated the regression of this pulmonary affliction," the Vatican said Monday. "His fever is going down. Other tests are being made. When these are completed, a medical bulletin will be issued by the pope's attending physicians."

The statement was the first since John Paul was returned to the hospital Saturday after running a temperature for two weeks. He had been discharged June 3 after three weeks of treatment for gunshot wounds received in an assassination attempt May 13 in St. Peter's Square.

There was no indication of how long the 61-year-old pontiff would stay in the hospital or what treatment is being given him.

Pleurisy is an inflammation of the membrane enclosing the lung.

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer of the hospital, told The Associated Press the pope is eating a normal diet. He said his fever was normal Monday morning but rose to 100.4 during the day.

The Vatican statement was issued after a rash of unattributed reports on the pope's condition in the Italian press. The papers said he had a mysterious virus, persistent fever, loss of appetite, liver and lung complications and was depressed. He was also said to vomit often and rarely smile.

"Only the official bulletins are reliable sources of information," the Vatican said. "All other information which has been circulated is neither authorized nor reliable."

The newspaper accused the Vatican of issuing sketchy, misleading bulletins on the pope's health.

In the past two weeks, when doctors now say the pope was running a fever, the Vatican Radio in its daily report gave no hint of trouble.

Dead Roaches Can Bother People

CHICAGO (AP) — Dead roaches can bother people just as much as live ones, an allergy specialist at Mount Sinai Hospital in Chicago says.

The remains of dead roaches can turn to dust and enter a patient's lungs, aggravating asthmatic conditions such as wheezing, coughing and choking, said Dr. Bann Kang, who has studied the roach-asthma connection for six years.

Ms. Kang said when she began practicing in Chicago she began seeing more asthma cases than during her training at the University of Michigan.

"You have to look at environmental factors. And I saw more roaches in Chicago than I did at Ann Arbor," she said in an interview published in today's editions of the Chicago Sun-Times.

Ms. Kang's research showed 60 percent of her asthma patients were sensitive to cockroach remains. Patients who inhaled toxins from roaches suffered asthma attacks, she said. And injection of the material caused rashes, Ms. Kang reported.

Most asthmatics she tested also were allergic to other allergins, but she reported that some were allergic "only to roaches."

Inquiry Into Drownings Opens Today In Mexia

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — A court of inquiry into the deaths of three youths who drowned after being arrested at a weekend Juneteenth celebration here opens today.

State District Judge Putnam Reiter of nearby Groesbeck will preside over the hearing, set to begin at 9:30 a.m. Reiter on Monday named Larry W. Baraka as special prosecutor in the case.

Baraka, 31, is a black former Dallas County prosecutor recommended for the job by the NAACP, which has also asked the FBI to investigate the deaths.

Steve Booker, 19, Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, drowned when the 14-foot boat in which they and three Limestone County sheriff's deputies were riding capsized in Lake Mexia, just east of Waco.

The officers were unhurt, although Chief Deputy Bill Fletcher said Deputy Kenny Elliott was "hysterical" after the incident, had been treated for shock, and was too upset to work. Elliot has been relieved of his duties until further notice, Sheriff Dennis Walker said.

Reiter said the purpose of the inquiry is to provide a "public airing" of testimony about the incident. He said the evidence may be turned over to a grand jury, or he may issue an arrest warrant if he finds criminal actions have occurred.

"My concern is that there has been so much speculation, implication, and innuendo ... since last Friday, and yet the community — black and white — has remained profoundly calm and unemotional about it," Reiter said. "I think everybody deserves to have the possible witnesses come into open court and tell what they think happened."

Accounts of the causes of the incident have differed.

"I suspect we'll just find out it was just an operation in gross ignorance," Judge Reiter said.

Deputies first said the boat tipped over after Booker jumped out in an escape attempt and two deputies followed him. Later, deputies said the boat started to sink because it was overloaded, and Booker was trying to swim to safety.

Witnesses have claimed that the youths were handcuffed when their bodies were found, but authorities deny the allegations and autopsies showed no unusual marks on the youth's bodies or wrists. The causes of death were listed as drowning.

Animal Manure Has Many Uses

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Americans might be able to solve their energy problems if they take "waste not, want not" literally and follow the advice of a Tarleton State University professor.

Dr. Edward Fulton has found a way to convert animal manure into biogas, a fuel that can be used to generate electricity or run internal combustion engines. He's demonstrating his technique to large and small farms, and says farmers may be able eventually to sell excess power to utility companies.

Biogas is 60 percent methane and 40 percent carbon dioxide. Fulton's technique uses two airless digestion systems to ferment the manure and produce the gas. Biogas can be used to do the same work as natural gas, which is itself mainly methane.

Chicken, swine or cow manure can be used to make biogas, said Fulton. Besides producing biogas for use as fuel, his technique nearly eliminates the problem of waste disposal, he said.

The digestive process leaves a residue that is almost odorless. Fulton said the stuff makes a good fertilizer or pretty fair food supplement for livestock.

Controllers Expected To Ratify Contract

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the air traffic controllers union predicts his 14,800 members will ratify a new contract that falls far short of what they sought.

A tentative contract agreement was reached in the pre-dawn hours Monday, just two hours before the controllers scheduled a strike that could have crippled the nation's air transport system at the start of the summer travel season.

"We're glad it's over," said Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization. "I am pleased with the agreement, and I don't believe I'll have any trouble selling it to the members."

Poli said copies of the contract and ballots will be sent to members next week and that the full ratification process should take about two weeks. Parts of the contract dealing with pay, fringe benefits and some working conditions also must be approved by Congress because the controllers are federal employees.

The agreement, hammered out in all-night negotiations, was a victory for President Reagan, who declared last week that the government would not offer any more money than the $40 million package it placed on the table two weeks ago.

PATCO originally sought $770 million. But under pressure from the administration and Congress, it agreed to the government figure after redistributing the money within the package. The actual figure for the first year of the 42-month pact is $39.3 million.

Under the terms, the controllers, who now average $34,000 a year, would receive a first-year salary increase of about $4,000, including the negotiated raise and the one due all government employees. PATCO had asked for $10,000. The union also would gain something it long has sought — a voice in the Federal Aviation Administration's policy decisions on controllers.

Iowa is known as a farm state. But it has industries that produce three times the dollar volume of its farms. Many of these are farm-related, however, and make agricultural implements or process food.

Help Is Available For Potential Homebuyers

EDIITOR'S NOTE — More and more young families are being priced out of the housing market. Here, in the last of a four-part series, is a report on efforts to help.

——— By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Buying that first home is harder than ever, but a new type of mortgage can help young families over the early hurdles.

The graduated payment mortgage, also known as the GPM, is designed for people who do not earn enough right now to qualify for a regular mortgage, but whose income is expected to rise sharply over the next few years.

In exchange for lower monthly payments during the early years of the GPM, the buyer pays a higher total price over the long run than he or she would with a traditional loan.

High interest rates and high prices have pinched young buyers in particular because they do not have the profit from the sale of an existing home to reinvest in a new house.

A survey by the U.S. League of Savings Association showed that in 1979 first-time homebuyers made up less than one-fifth of the market. In 1977, more than one-third of the homebuyers were purchasing their first house.

Those buyers who did manage a first home in 1979 generally earned more than the average. Almost 45 percent of them had a median income of over $25,000, while median family income for the country as a whole was just under $20,000. Almost two-thirds of the first-time homebuyers had two incomes in the family.

The graduated payment mortgage was developed by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The program was introduced in 1977, but originally applied only to those mortgages which were insured by the Federal Housing Administration. Late in 1978, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board authorized federally chartered savings and loan associations to offer GPMs and the concept spread.

There are no figures available on the number of graduated payment mortgages outstanding. But Tom Bacon of the Department of Housing and Urban Development said that the FHA had insured 271,670 of the mortgages since 1977, including almost 100,000 in 1980 alone.

With a graduated payment mortgage you are, in effect, borrowing more money during the early years of the loan in order to reduce those monthly payments. That money is added to the oustanding principal and is paid off in the later years through the higher monthly payments.

There are five types of graduated payment plans. The monthly payment can increase to its maximum over a period of anywhere from 5 to 10 years and it can rise by anywhere from 2½ percent to 7½ percent annually.

The most frequently used plan provides for 7½ percent increases for five years. Here is an example from Bacon of how it would work:

Suppose you borrow $67,000 — the maximum allowed — for 30 years at 16 percent interest. With a conventional mortgage, your monthly payment would be $907.71. Your payments over 360 months would total just about $326,776.

Here is what your monthly payments would be with a graduated payment mortgage:

First year: $715.
Second year: $769.
Third year: $826.
Fourth year: $888.
Fifth year: $955.
Sixth through 30th years: $1,026.

Over the 30-year period, you would pay $357,636 — almost $31,000 more than you would with a conventional mortgage. In exchange, however, during the first five years of the GPM you would pay just under $50,000, compared to the approximately $54,500 you would need for a conventional mortgage.

You also would need a much smaller annual income to qualify for the loan — about $35,000 based on a monthly payment of $715 versus more than $43,000 based on a monthly payment of $907.71.

The GPM, like conventional mortgages, has gotten much more expensive in recent years. Only two years ago, the example used by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to explain the graduated payment plan involved a $50,000, 30-year mortgage at 9 percent. The monthly payment for the first year of the loan was just under $304, less than half the monthly payment in the current example.

A growing number of lenders are combining the graduated payment mortgage with the flexible rate feature of other types of loans, offering a sort of hybrid called the GPAM.

As with the GPM, the initial monthly payments for the GPAM are lower than they would be with a conventional mortgage. But the interest rate, instead of remaining fixed, is allowed to fluctuate according to a fixed schedule, usually every three four or five years. There is also generally a ceiling on the amount by which the monthly payment can increase in any given year.

Another, less widespread alternative for families who cannot afford a traditional loan is the shared appreciation mortgage or SAM, which is being offered by lenders in some states.

The borrower gets a mortgage at an interest rate which is below the market rate, but, in exchange, agrees to give the lender a share of the profits when the house is sold. The exact interest rate and the lender's share vary, according to individual contracts. If the borrower does not sell the house within a fixed period, the lender generally must refinance the balance of the mortgage at prevailing interest rates.

Steps to control foot odor

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I wanted to comment on the problem of sweaty feet. I had this problem until about two years ago. It can be horrible. My niece told me to put a little baking soda in each shoe before putting them on. It stopped the odor but my feet are still wet when I take my shoes off. I work six hours a day in a cafeteria so I have to wear enclosed shoes.

DEAR READER — Thank you for trying to help others. Baking soda will absorb some odor. Not everyone may tolerate it as well as you have so I would advise a limited trial first for anyone who wants to try this remedy. I have received many home aid suggestions about controlling foot odors since my first column on this subject and many of them are useful.

Regardless of what you use the first step in controlling foot odor is frequent bathing of the feet, at least twice a day, and changing socks as often as you can, again, at least twice a day.

It is also useful to change shoes every day so one pair can be at home airing out while you are wearing the other pair. Open shoes are helpful. So is going barefooted at home where you can do so comfortably.

I have discussed some of the aspects of controlling foot odor in The Health Letter number 11-8, Your Feet and How To Care For Them, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Socks that absorb moisture are also useful. And there are commercial preparations that can be used to help, too. With a combination of the aids available, most foot odor problems can be helped if not completely controlled.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 73-year-old woman and I work very hard. In addition, I started a walking program two years ago and walk three miles a day. About a month ago I started having some chest discomfort, a dull ache that bothered me. It would come and go and sometimes hurt for a day or two, then I wouldn't feel it for several days.

I had X-rays and they found I had an ulcer, which didn't surprise me as I've had them before. The doctor did a stress test and said the results were not too good, and I was out of shape. So he put me on Donnatol and Propanolol and told me to get more exercise to tone up my heart. I told him I walk three miles a day but he doesn't believe me. Now I'm wondering if the machine can tell the difference between an overworked heart and not enough exercise? I'm now exercising two hours a day plus all my other work and I am tired. I think that is too much for a 73-year-old woman.

DEAR READER — I agree. No, that test is not that accurate, particularly for women. Ask your doctor for me to review the article on the national study of stress tests that appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine, Aug. 2, 1979.

He will find that in 175 women who had pain suggestive of heart disease only nine had coronary artery disease but 33 had positive stress tests. False positive tests in women are common. Perhaps he will let you go back to only one hour of exercise plus your other work when he reads this.

Borg Leads Top Seeds Through Opening Round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Bjorn Borg, one match behind him in his bid to win the Wimbledon tennis title for a sixth straight time, says he is now even more determined to win the U.S. Open.

It is the one major title that has eluded the 25-year-old super-successful Swede.

Borg opened his 1981 Wimbledon campaign with a solid 7-6, 6-3, 6-1 triumph over American left-hander Peter Rennert and said afterward: "My biggest remaining ambition in the game is to win at Flushing Meadow."

Rennert hung in for the first set but was then overwhelmed by the improving defending champion, who ran his winning streak at Wimbledon to 36 consecutive matches.

Borg said he was under even more pressure this year.

"Always I'm under pressure," he said. "Even when I'm not the champion, I'm under pressure. I don't feel I have to win every match, but people expect it."

The excitement, however, is not diminished.

"Every time I look forward to Wimbledon. It is special, the greatest tournament to play. It is tradition. Wimbledon always has been No. 1," he said.

If the seedings hold, Borg would meet volatile American left-hander John McEnroe in a repeat of last year's thrilling five-set men's singles final. But the seedings didn't hold completely on Monday.

McEnroe and third-seeded Jimmy Connors both recorded straight-set victories, but three seeds were defeated on an opening day full of surprises.

Charlie Fancutt, an Australian ranked 194th in the world, defeated No. 4 seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Eric Fromm of Glen Head, N.Y., upset 13th-seeded Yannick Noah of France 6-4, 6-4, 6-3, and Texan Bill Scanlon ousted 11th-seeded Victor Pecci of Paraguay 7-6, 6-0, 6-0.

Fancutt and Fromm both are 22-year-olds who have reached the main draw at Wimbledon for the first time.

"Grass is an equalizer," Fancutt said. "I got all fired up because this is Wimbledon."

Fromm was taken aback by the attention he received from the media. He walked into a crowded interview room and joked: "I only expected a couple of people."

Connors, champion here in 1974, wasn't joking about his intentions.

"If my expectations had changed, I wouldn't be here," Connors said.

"I want to win it. If I didn't think I was prepared, eager and in the right shape, then I would have no business here," he said after his 6-1, 6-2, 6-4 victory over fellow American Dick Stockton.

McEnroe, expected to be the main challenger to Borg, was at his petulant worst during his 7-6, 7-5, 6-3 victory over Tom Gullikson. At one stage, he broke his racket and called an official "an incompetent fool."

"I suppose it was my fault because I was feeling jittery," he said later. "I was definitely wrong and I will no doubt pay for it."

Baseball Talks Silent; 'No Reason For Hope'

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

There will be no baseball strike negotiations today and a number of players are becoming increasingly concerned that nobody will be talking or playing for a long time.

A ray of hope glimmered on the horizon Monday when federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, who had just helped avoid a nationwide air controllers' strike, called for another negotiating session between the striking Major League Players Association and management's Player Relations Committee, headed by Ray Grebey. But, three hours later, Moffett canceled the session.

"I just had a change of heart," said Moffett. "I needed more time to think about things. I might do something in the next day or two."

Cincinnati Reds pitcher Tom Seaver, who was a part of the aborted negotiations last week, said that Moffett canceled the meeting "out of fatigue.

"My expectations now are the worst," Seaver said. "It's been awful. Absolutely nothing has been done. There has been no reason for any hope."

Asked if he expected the strike to last longer than two months, Seaver said, "At least!"

Seaver was one of the major leaguers who expressed a deeply pessimistic view of when an agreement to end the first midseason player walkout in baseball history might be reached.

NFL Begins Defense In Raider-Suit' Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The National Football League, sued by the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission and the Oakland Raiders for refusing to allow the Raiders to move to Los Angeles, was scheduled to begin its defense today in U.S. District Court.

The first witness was expected to be NFL treasurer William Ray. He was expected to testify about the history of professional football, its organization and its finances.

Later in the week, the lawyers were expected to argue motions for "directed verdicts." The NFL's defense is expected to take about two months.

Maxwell Blecher, attorney for the Coliseum Commission, and Joseph Alioto, attorney for the Raiders, rested their case on Monday, at which time the NFL asked Judge Harry Pregerson to dismiss the antitrust case. Attorneys for the league claimed there was a lack of evidence.

Judge Pregerson gave no indications when he might rule on the NFL motions for dismissal.

The motions, filed over the weekend by lawyers for the NFL and Los Angeles Rams, asked the judge to throw out the case. Defense lawyers commonly file such motions, but it is rare that judges grant them, opting instead to let the juries decide the case.

The final witness for the plaintiffs, economist Louis A. Guth, concluded his testimony Monday, saying the Raiders would make much more money if the team were permitted to play in the Los Angeles Coliseum, which was vacated by the Rams when they moved in 1980 to nearby Anaheim in Orange County.

The antitrust action involves a series of allegations against the NFL and has proceeded 29 court days.

Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, charges that NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle breached an oral contract that would have allowed Davis to move his team to Los Angeles, and that rule 4.3 in the NFL constitution, providing that team owners approve a franchise move by a three-quarters vote, is illegal.

Davis also has accused Rozelle of conspiring with Rams' owner Georgia Frontiere and San Diego Chargers' owner Eugene Klein, preventing him from moving the Raiders.

Winfield Denied Access To Grounds

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Racing Association denied horse owner Malcolm Winfield and his son, Nigel, access to the NYRA grounds, requesting the removal of their horses from the premises by June 29.

In separate letters to the Winfields, James P.Heffernan, the NYRA president, citied previous action by the State Racing and Wagering Board, which ruled that Malcolm Winfield's horses may not run in New York because of the hidden majority ownership of Nigel Winfield.

In turn, the younger Winfield's application for an owner's license was denied by the Racing and Wagering Board.

'Wounded Women' Set To Challenge Wimbledon Today

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - The walking wounded of women's tennis come face to face with the challenge of Wimbledon today.

Three of the top five seeds are fighting to overcome nagging injuries, while Tracy Austin is playing only her 13th competitive match since spending five months on the sidelines with a painful back injury.

Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd has been treated for a painful injury to her right knee. Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, the No. 2 seed, has pulled out of the women's and mixed doubles because of back trouble, and two-time champion Martina Navratilova is hoping to have recovered from pulled stomach muscles.

Austin, 18, and 16-year-old Andrea Jaeger were the only top women's singles competitors who could be completely happy with their fitness.

Austin proved her recovery was complete by defeating Jaeger 6-3, 6-4 in the BMW championship at Eastbourne last Saturday.

Austin opens her Wimbledon campaign with a first-round match against IvatBudarova of Czechoslovakia, while Jaeger faces Nerida Gregory of Australia.

Longest Game Slated For Finish Today

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) - Marty Barrett thinks it would be "kind of neat" to score the winning run.

After 32 innings, two months and four days, it would be a relief for anyone to score the winning run.

The longest game in professional baseball history resumes, and may end, tonight when the Rochester Red Wings visit the Pawtucket Red Sox.

Before their regularly scheduled International League game, the teams will resume their marathon that started at 8 p.m. on April 18 and was suspended at 4:07 a.m. April 19 after 32 innings with the score tied 2-2.

Barrett, his 2-for-12 output for the game on hold, is the scheduled leadoff hitter in the bottom of the 33rd against Rochester's Mike Boddicker.

"I'm going to try to do anything just to get on base and then hopefully someone can knock me in," the Pawtucket second baseman said. "Maybe I'll use one swing to try to hit it out."

That was virtually impossible in the first 32 innings when a strong wind from center field kept hard-hit shots from going out of McCoy Stadium and 19 diehard fans inside to the inconclusive conclusion.

Infielder Doug Flynn of the New York Mets pitched briefly in the minor leagues.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — To produce wood bats for amateur players, a leading manufacturer takes about eight seconds. For major-league players requiring custom design and hand crafting, it takes about 20 minutes to transform a billet of ash into a bat.

Soviet Planes In Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet planes bombed rebel strongholds in parts of Kandahar, Afghanistan's second largest city, and hundreds of people were believed killed, an Afghan who claimed to have seen the bombing reported.

"It looks like a place destroyed by earthquake," said the 35-year-old executive of an Afghan government corporation who arrived Monday.

He said Soviet tanks entered Kandahar, southwest Afghanistan, and two nearby villages after the bombing Friday, and fighting between rebels and Soviet and Afghan government troops continued through the weekend.

The sources said he lived in Kandahar and requested anonymity, fearing reprisals against his relatives still there.

Couple Asks For Millions In Damages

DALLAS (AP) — An Irving couple has filed a $7.6 million malpractice suit against five doctors and three hospitals, contending their collective negligence caused a man's leg and hip to be amputated and left him crippled for life.

The suit, filed Friday by Charles Floyd Jones and his wife Jerry Gail, says Jones was admitted into Professional Hospital in Irving in January 1980 for removal of a kidney stone. Nine days later, doctors amputated his left leg at mid-thigh after discovering a blood clot had cut off circulation, the suit states.

Jones lost the rest of his leg and left hip six days later because of continuing circulation problems and concern that Jones was in danger of heart failure, says the suit.

As a result, Jones has been unable to to pursue his work as an electrician, the suit states.

Named as defendants were Drs. Samuel Bashour, Melvin Gross, Wyatt E. Collins, E. Howard Parsons and Gonzales Lopez and Professional Hospital, Pioneer Park Medical Center and Irving Community Hospital.

Test Tube Baby Has Problems

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Doctors say Australia's seventh test-tube baby, born three months prematurely, has underdeveloped lungs, a condition common among premature births, but otherwise is in stable condition.

The 2.4 pound girl named Sharna was born Saturday to a 27-year-old woman who requested anonymity, said officials of Queen Victoria Medical Center.

Sharna was the sixth girl in seven Australian births fertilized by the test-tube procedure, in which an egg is removed from the womb, fertilized in a glass dish and returned to the womb. The process, pioneered by two British physicians, is used when the mother's Fallopian tubes are blocked.

Hundreds Die In Fighting

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of people have died in fighting between Nanumba and Konkomba tribesmen in northern Ghana, the official Accra Radio says.

A broadcast Monday night said the fighting occurred around the town of Bimbila, 250 miles northwest of Accra, the capital. The broadcast said the cause of the feud was not known. But an earlier broadcast on April 28 said six people had been killed in fighting that broke out after a Konkomba stabbed the son of the chief of Bimbila and shot and killed his secretary.
