OCIE NIX GIVEN 99 YEARS FOR POISONING WIFE

Texas Patronage Quiz Ends In Shower Of 'Nigger Lover' Accusations

G. O. P. BOSSES MAKE AND DENY MANY CHARGES

Creager Answered By Counter Thrust When He Attacks Beck

'PIE COUNTER' CLAIM

Committeeman and Wichita Falls Republican Split Over Issues

DALLAS, July 1. (AP)—The words "nigger lover" were passed at the concluding session of the U. S. senate patronage committee's investigation here today by Rene B. Creager, Republican national committeeman for Texas, who returned to the stand to deny charges made by other witnesses. The committee adjourned finally late today.

Creager also threatened to prosecute Harry M. Wurzbach, former Republican congressman from Texas, for accepting a contribution of $50 toward his campaign expenses from E. J. Keudell, San Antonio mail clerk. Wurzbach was defeated for re-election by a Democratic candidate. He ran without the support of the state Republican organization.

Says $50 Accepted

Wurzbach, Creager charged, accepted a $50 check from Keudell for primary expenses. Wurzbach was indicted but "excused" on the ground that the law did not cover donations for primaries, Creager said, adding he believed it his duty to see that the former congressman is prosecuted for accepting the second check.

At the morning session, Harry Beck, Dallas, charged the state Republican organization was interested only in controlling patronage. He said the Creager "machine" is a "pie counter."

Creager informed the committee that "Beck is a nigger lover."

Beck rose to his feet. "That's false; untrue," he shouted.

Creager Denies Picture

"I've got a picture of you with a negro," Senator Smith W. Brookhart, chairman of the senate committee, interjected.

"No, you haven't", Creager said "No such picture was taken."

"We have other information to substantiate that picture," Brookhart declared.

"You have been informed of lots of things and assert them as true when they are not true," Creager replied.

Bribe Is Related

Allen Bailey, former prohibition agent, had told the committee that Dave Morris, prohibition administrator for this district, took a bribe from a Dallas druggist. Creager said the evidence in that case was placed before Roy Haines, then chief of the prohibition department at Washington, and that Morris resigned but was not prosecuted. He contended it was the duty of the

'SHINER' CLUE IN DEATH CASE

Georgia Educator Described As Quite Drunk

ATLANTA, July 1. (AP)—A well-dressed man with a "black eye" tonight was sought by police in their efforts to explain the death of Prof. A. H. Johnson, of Hartwell, Ga., whose body was found slumped in his automobile in a remote section of the city early yesterday.

Police believe this man with his finger wrote the "driver unconscious" on a glass window in Johnson's automobile after parking it with its owner dead on the front seat.

The man sought was described at a coroner's inquest by W. W. Wise, employe at a garage where Johnson had driven late Saturday. Wise said Johnson "had been drinking heavily, so heavily in fact, I didn't think he should have been permitted on the streets."

The garage man also said Johnson seemed suspicious of his companion, who described himself as a "schoolmate of the professor's at the University of Georgia."

The robbery theory was dampened by Wise's testimony that Johnson paid him for some work, taking a one dollar bill from his wallet which "as far as I could see was a lone one at that time."

The widow, Mrs. Johnson, testifying, said her husband left home at Hartwell before noon Saturday to come to Atlanta for the convention of the National Education association.

"He told me he had only 15 cents," she said, "that didn't worry me as I know he could get a check cashed at either Hartwell or Royston. He wasn't a drinking man and was certainly sober when he left home."

MARLOW MYSTERY NEAR SOLUTION

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—Police believed today they were near the solution of the slaying of Frank Marlow, gangster and gambler. They had David Grosso, alias Daniel Gross, gunman, behind the bars after discovery that a bullet in his possession were similar to those that killed the racketeer. Marlow's body was found in a roadside ditch last Monday night. Grosso's two companions, Nicholas McDermott and James Graham, also are held.

Wooer of Wealthy Texas Widows Held

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—Charles H. Boyles, 68, who police said wooed more than 50 wealthy widows throughout the United States, today was held in $20,000 bail for a hearing Friday. Police said Boyles was wanted in Amarillo, Texas, on charges of bigamy, grand larceny and for jumping a $10,000 bail bond. Boyles was said to have admitted he had married twice in Texas, but claimed to have been divorced both times.

Woman in Distress Leaps to Her Death

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—Leaving a note in which she said she was in distress and was "going out for a little air," Mrs. Eva Thumell, jumped to her death from the window of her room on the 14th floor of the Hotel Victoria today. The note also requested that her brother, Captain Claude Barrow of the British army, be notified.

OIL REFINERY BLAST PROVES FATAL FOR TWO

Baytown Explosion May Take Life of Another Victim of Burns

CRASH INJURES NINE

Fort Worth Ambulance En Route to Accident Hits Another Car

HOUSTON, July 1. (AP)—Two men were killed, one perhaps fatally injured and two others seriously burned in an explosion at the Humble Oil refinery in Baytown today.

The dead:

W. C. Decker, 40, Pelly.

J. P. Owens, 38, Goose Creek.

S. Champagne, 34, of Pelly, was so seriously burned that his recovery was doubtful.

Dave Tomlinson, 21, and J. C. Milligan, both of Baytown, were burned about the face, arms and legs.

A seventh man received slight burns but was dismissed from the hospital.

The cause of the explosion could not be determined, officials said.

Property damage was so small that repairs were completed within less than an hour after the blast.

EIGHT INJURED IN AMBULANCE CRASH

FORT WORTH, July 1. (AP)—An ambulance, en route to the scene of an automobile accident near here in which one person was injured, collided with another car near Hicks station, injuring eight others, several seriously, late today.

The injured:

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Thompson, Cox City, Okla.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. de Long, Murchison, Texas.

Nell de Long, 8, Murchison.

Mrs. L. B. Boyd, Best, Texas.

Layton A. Boyd, 20 months old, Best.

Robert Minton, ambulance driver; Mrs. E. Bevis, Granite, Okla., hurt in the first crash.

The victims were rushed to three separate hospitals.

The most seriously injured was Mrs. Thompson, 73, who received a fractured leg, cuts and possible internal injuries.

The ambulance collided with De Long's car.

It had been called to the aid of Mrs. Bevis, who had turned her machine into a ditch to avoid contact with a speeding automobile.

Youngest Police Chief Dies of Poisoning

LONGMONT, Colo., July 1. (INS)—Ray T. Bennett, 27, one of the youngest police chiefs in the country died here today from botulism. Bennett is said to have suffered the poisoning after eating hamburger sandwiches. He was named chief of police here last year.

Price Revisions in Pennsylvania Oil Raise and Lower Values

PITTSBURGH, July 1. (AP)—Pennsylvania grade crude oil in New York Transit lines and Bradford Oil in National Transit lines were reduced five cents to $4.05 today and Pennsylvania grade crude in National Transit lines was increased five cents a barrel to $4.05.

County Employs Highway Officers For Lake Patrol

Two Deputies Authorized by Commissioners Will Draw $150 Salaries, With Fees Barred

Immediate employment of two additional deputies by Sheriff W. G. Bralley for the purpose of handling automobile traffic on the roads between this city and Lakeside Park was authorized by the county commissioners' court Monday afternoon upon the urgent recommendation of a committee of citizens and Mr. Bralley.

The special officers provided by the action will be placed on straight salary of $150 per month, with equipment and uniform furnished by the county. They will not draw compensation from fines imposed upon traffic law violators, and members of the commissioners' court emphasized the fact that these deputies are being provided as a measure of convenience and safety to the public. Their major objective will be to keep the roads to Lakeside Park free from congestion and reckless driving.

An emergency order was passed by the court in order that purchase of motorcycles and regulation gray uniforms may be made at once. C. L. Bradford, formerly constable in this county, and who also served at one time as motorcycle officer for the city, was appointed by Mr. Bralley during the afternoon as one of the new deputies.

Committee Urges Change

The citizens' committee which appeared again before the court was composed of Lester Jones, chairman; J. T. Harrell, J. L. Jackson Jr., L. L. Allbritton and B. D. Donnell. Different members of this committee stated that since the opening of Lakeside park the Grant street, Holliday street, and Weeks Park roads to the lake have been so seriously congested as to make passage almost impossible, and that the situation constitutes a constant danger to life and property. Discussion of the problem included recommendation that special officers remain on duty in that section throughout the day on Sundays and holidays, and from 5 p. m. until midnight on week days.

Under the motion authorising the employment of the two deputies, put by Commissioner M. A. Bundy, they are to be assigned to the vicinity of Lakeside Park except at such times as emergencies demand their services in other parts of the county. The motion also provided that their employment be for three months unless continued beyond that period by later action of the court.

S. O. Hamm, state highway division officer, was present at the hearing, and concurred in the requests made for supervision of traffic to and from the lake.

More Jail Repairs

Following an inspection of the county jail, the court authorized minor repairs designed to improve the safety of officers stationed there. Iron slabs are to be used

RAINFALL HITS WICHITA AREA

Heavier Precipitation Falls North of Here

Relatively heavy rains which hit several towns northwest of here in Texas, and also touched points in Southwest Oklahoma, were delayed here, reaching Wichita Falls about 8:45 p. m. Monday.

The gust of rain was accompanied by strong winds.

The rains started late in the afternoon at Wellington and at Childress and other intervening points, rainfall in those localities being heavier than that which fell here, the Fort Worth and Denver dispatcher reported.

Several Oklahoma towns in the vicinity of Altus got good rains, the Katy dispatcher was informed.

No rains in the western section, from Stamford to Abilene, had been reported to the office of the Wichita Valley railroad here Monday night.

Only beneficial results had been reported.

Later in the night the rains grew more precipitous here, causing miniature floods on some streets. The water was high on MacGregor street, and several motorists were stranded near the railroad tracks on Brook avenue owing to the high water.

De Priest's Appointee Enters West Point

WEST POINT, July 1. (US)—Alonzo Parkham, the young negro appointed to West Point by Oscar de Priest, recently elected negro congressman from the Chicago district, today was one of 400 future generals to report to the military academy. The new "plebes" were formally admitted to the fourth class by Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the academy, and Col. R. C. Richardson, cadet commander. Parkham is the first negro appointee to the military academy in 15 years.

ASSEMBLY TO CLOSE SPECIAL SESSION TODAY

House and Senate Heal Breach Over Bill For Educational Fund

NEW BILL WRITTEN

Committee Works Late To Finish Task; House Votes Gas Tax

AUSTIN, July 1. (AP)—The 41st legislature was putting its house in order tonight, preparatory to adjourning the second called session sine die tomorrow.

The breach between the house and senate over the educational appropriation bill was healed, the house rescinding its former action placing $16,500,000 as the deadline on the total. The senate had been holding out for $17,000,000.

The conference committee went into executive session and was working tonight on an entirley new bill. In order to get it out in time for action tomorrow, it would be necessary to work the entire night.

The house concurred in senate amendments to its four-cent gasoline tax by a vote of 104 to 14. The Dual bill, levying a four-cent gasoline tax and registration fees against motor vehicles, will become effective immediately if the governor signs it.

The bill provides for a 50 per cent reduction in the schedule of automobile registration fees.

The house adopted conference reports on the eleemosynary and departmental bills. The eleemosynary measure appropriated $10,482,826 and the departmental bill carried a total of $12,638,225.

The house engrossed but failed to suspend the rules to finally pass the bill by Senator Margie E. Neal of Carthage increasing the compulsory school attendance age from 14 to 15 years and the number of days children within the age are required to attend school from 100 to 120.

Opening of Lake Altus Draws Huge Crowd

ALTUS, Okla., July 1. (AP)—Hundreds of persons from southwestern Oklahoma and nearby Texas towns assisted in the celebration of the opening of Lake Altus at Lugert dam today. The lake is being officially opened to the public for fishing and other forms of water sports. The lake is stocked with government fish and offers one of the best fishing points in the state.

BOWIE COUNTY JURY DECIDES FATE OF YOUTH

Trial Ends With State Asking Death Penalty For Slayer

INSANITY IS CLAIMED

Defense Counsel Pleads For Clemency, Pointing Out Paralysis

BOSTON, Texas, July 1. (AP)—Ocie Nix, young Malta farmer, was found guilty tonight of poisoning his 17-year-old wife and sentenced to 99 years' imprisonment.

A courtroom crowd which had dwindled from the pressing throng of 700 which about four hours previously had heard the young man's death demanded received the verdict without audible comment.

Nix smiled slightly when the verdict was returned.

The jury retired at 5 p. m.

Compromise Verdict

Nix was transferred tonight to the Lamar county jail at Paris, where he was held for a time shortly after his arrest.

Date for passing sentence was not set, and it was not indicated whether an appeal would be taken.

The jury's verdict was reported to have been a compromise, 10 jurors desiring to assess the death penalty, one a life term and the other acquittal.

The defense pleaded for leniency on the ground that a stroke of paralysis had left Nix partly disabled and mentally unbalanced.

Speedy Trial

The trial was one of the speediest in the history of the county, having been rushed because of the bitter feeling created by Nix's confessions that he fed a capsule of poison to his wife. Mob violence once was threatened. The confession was not introduced.

The state rested after introducing rebuttal witnesses to refute testimony of Nix's father that the farm youth had been abnormal since suffering a paralytic stroke on 1926. Nix Sr., was the only defense witness. Young Nix's mother, bedfast from nervous prostration since the day of her daughter-in-law's death, was brought into the courtroom but did not testify.

Mrs. Vinitia Nix, mother of a five-months-old baby, died June 15 a few minutes after neighbors heard her screams and found her in convulsions. The finding of Nix's dog dead, its body contorted and the attitude of Mrs. Nix toward her husband while she was dying precipitated an investigation at the order of George Johnson, district judge.

Body Exhumed

Mrs. Nix's body was exhumed from a little country cemetery by lantern light and an autopsy performed.

After four hours of interrogation Nix signed a confession he had caused his wife to take a capsule filled with poison, and also narrated how he had tried to induce her to eat a poison coated sandwich previously.

Nix asserted family trouble prompted him to slay Mrs. Nix, but the district attorney contended a $1,400 life insurance policy taken out three weeks prior to Mrs. Nix's death provided the motive.

Analysis by the state chemist at Austin revealed poison in the stomachs of both Mrs. Nix and the dog, the chemist testified.

LAREDO CASE TO JUEY TODAY

LAREDO, July 1. (AP)—A jury to pass on Tomas Hernandez and Raymond West, former Laredo police officers, enjoyed a recess most of today while attorneys prepared arguments in the trial of the two men for the death of Harry Williams, reporter for the Laredo Times, choked to death Jan. 19, his body thrown in the Rio Grande.

Tomorrow the 12 men will be called on either to uphold the state's contention that West and Hernandez killed the young newspaper man, or declare the ex-officials innocent and relegate Williams' death to the list of unsolved crimes.

SHIPS REFUEL DESPITE FOGS

Cleveland and Los Angeles Planes Still Up

CLEVELAND, July 1. (UP)—Having conquered the airman's worst enemy, fog, the endurance plane City of Cleveland tonight swept on in quest of a new record after a narrow escape from failure today.

Twice the refueling ship established contact with the big monoplane, but not until early afternoon was the first successful contact made, after a lapse of 17 hours. Only a half hour's supply of gasoline remained in the City of Cleveland's tanks when weather cleared sufficiently to enable the refueling ship to get close enough to transfer fuel.

Pilots Byron K. Newcomb and Roy L. Mitchell barely averted failure when engine trouble was added to the adverse flying conditions.

CESSNA BATTLES FOG

LOS ANGELES, July 1. (UP)—After two refuelings today the two-motored Cessna monoplane carrying Leo Nomis and Maurice Morrison passed the 31-hour mark at 2:30 p. m. Pacific coast time in its effort to break the world's endurance record of 172½ hours.

An early morning refueling was of a spectacular nature as a heavy fog prevented the Cessna and a contact ship from finding each other.

The connection was made shortly before the last drop of gasoline was used by the Cessna.

SPANISH AVIATORS NEAR GIBRALTAR

GIBRALTAR, July 1. (AP)—Maj. Ramon Franco, Maj. Eduardo Gonzalez Gallarza, Capt. Julio Ruiz de Alda and Sergeant Pedros Madartaga were nearing home tonight aboard the British aircraft carrier Eagle after floating for a week in the open sea southeast of the Azores islands aboard their hydroairplane Dornier Wal 16.

Their week of privation and danger left them in good health, and they will write a happy conclusion to the first chapter of their attempt to fly from Spain to New York when the Eagle disembarks them here tomorrow.

The Eagle is expected to enter Gibraltar harbor about 9 a. m. but may not dock until several hours later.

King George Given Ovation on Return

LONDON, July 1. (AP)—Welcomed with shouts of joy and tears of affection King George, thin but bronzed, returned to his capital today, signaling recovery from his long and dangerous illness. The sovereign, confident in renewed health rested tonight again in Buckingham Palace, from whence he was borne in an ambulance five months ago a pale and enfeebled man just struggling back from the doors of death.

Painter Sued For Portraying Client In Prison Cell

LOS ANGELES, July 1. (AP)—James Cruze, motion picture director and John Decker, painter, brought a little disagreement over art into court today. Cruze sued Decker for $200,000 damages.

The suit was based on a portrait of Cruze painted by Decker which pictured the director in a prison cell. Cruze refused to accept the painting, whereupon, he alleged, Decker placed the painting in a Hollywood art store window and entitled it: "James Cruze—in prison for debt."

Cruze sets forth that not only was his position in the picture objectionable but that "I was the most surprised man in the world when I saw it. Mouth like a gargoyle; face like a frog; it made me look like an Apache, or something worse."

"I told Decker I wouldn't accept it," Cruze continued. "I told him I wanted a portrait, not a funny picture. I intend this suit as punishment, that's all."

Decker replied: "When a man employs an artist to paint a portrait, it is up to the artist to do his his worst as he sees best.

Scribe Learns About "Hangers" From "Fish Tail" Landing; Trip Gives Fine View of Ozark Stills

By MARJORIE MATHIS
Record News Staff Correspondent

ABOARD THE LOCKHEED Vega, Erle P. Halliburton's personal "Tester," cruising at 176 miles an hour 7,000 feet above somewhere in Texas, July 1.—Now lets see, where were we? That's a lot easier to answer than where are we, because Bob Cantwell has shut himself up in that swanky control cabin, King Young (I'll tell you about him later) is a bit vague about it; and I'll have to admit that all Texas looks alike to me at this distance. Besides we don't seem to linger anywhere long enough to become acquainted.

But we've just left Tulsa and we're almost to Fort Worth, just by way of an insignificant detour from the original tour planned for me. And this is the ship which last year won first place in its class in the transcontinental air races and which flew from Los Angeles to Tulsa, a distance of 1,360 miles, in eight hours and 10 minutes. It has a Wasp 475 horsepower motor and the new Naca cowling, cutting down the resistance. The cowling encloses the motor, giving the ship something of the aspect of a turtle extending the tip of a cautious nose. Which is a most disrespectful comment, but I'll make up for it by adding that the profile view changes the likeness to that of a torpedo. And as for the inside, she's all to the good.

Over Pilot's Shoulders

Believe it or not, I've just been up from peeking over Mr. Cantwell's shoulder and enjoying a view of Red river, Gainesville, and Lake Worth all at once. It seems that there's a contrary sort of headwind that holds our speed to 180 an hour.

Oh, well, its all in the day's work. Even so, I wouldn't go so far as to say just where among that group of landmarks we are, or were a minute ago. But we'll be landing at Meacham field in a few minutes. We left Tulsa at 2:10 and because of this great delay we won't be in Fort Worth until 4:10. Bob Cantwell said he drew himself a straight line to fly by, not troubling with other people's preferences, and that it measured, when properly scaled, about 250 miles.

The ship, which is all upholstered in gray leather, has a heavy rug and plush hangers (I'll explain their use), will carry four passengers in addition to the pilot, but since this is merely a casual little

Father Sentenced For Renting Out Boy as Beggar

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—David Bernstein, 45, today was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary because he rented his 7-year-old son Solomon out as a beggar.

Bernstein would fasten the boy in a wee chair in such a manner that his leg seemed rigid and with his head tilted back over his shoulder as if paralyzed. For $3 a day he would rent the boy and chair out to a negro who would weel them about the city collecting alms. The negro, Harry Waters, who also received a three-year sentence, paid the boy 30 cents a day.

Prospect for Slash In Taxes Seem Bright

WASHINGTON, July 1. (US)—Prospects for tax reduction legislation in the regular session of congress, which convenes in December, appeared bright today. Barring unexpected expenditures for farm relief or other federal projects, a slash of $100,000,000 probably on earned incomes should be possible during the early part of 1930.

Hardinge's Ardor for Tulsa Beauty Was Calmed by 'Jealousy,' He Says

CHICAGO, July 1. (UP)—Jealousy, that perennial enemy of cupid, caused Franklin S. Hardinge, millionaire defendant in a $250,000 breach of promise suit, to doubt the sincerity of the love of Ann Livingston, Tulsa beauty, he admitted on the stand today.

In his third day on the stand, Hardinge told in an animated voice how his quarrels with Ann over her friendship with Charles Nax, St. Louis publicity man, had brought an end to the romance which began on a westbound railroad train and was culminated on the eve of their scheduled wedding.

Hardinge denounced Nax in continuing his version of the shattered love affair. He said it was because of the "third party" he refused to marry Ann and not because she declined to sign an agreement waiving all claims to his fortune other than $100,000.

"Nax came to Chicago about a

JUST THE Baer Facts

By Bugs Baer

NEW YORK, July 1.—Russia is about to have its first golf course.

That's news even if the caddie doesn't bite the duffer.

We know that Mr. Brisbane can refer back to Mr. Greeley on this quotation.

But we do not care to get into a three-cornered argument.

We do not know why Russia decided on having a golf course when it requires something more pleasant to the taste.

From a European angle it is bad. A golf course is one thing that they cannot borrow from America.

The Russian course will be near Moscow which will make it advisable for a golfer to use a niblick to get out of his opponents' whiskers.

The greens, of course, will be served with Russian sauce.

You can go on with this kind of stuff until you are exhausted, which we hope will be almost immediately.

The Russian course will be one thousand versts long. And an extra chorus.

We understand that a verst is a good portion of a mile. Which isn't very long when Ivan the terrible starts putting for distance.

Siberia would make the ideal golf course. In fact, Peter and the Great must have thought it was one. He certainly increased its resident membership.

You can get plenty of distance on a Siberian course if you have the right kind of wolves chasing you.

Owing to the climatic conditions of those outdoor suburbs, winter rules start in June and never stop.

You are allowed to pick up your ball. But not out of another member's bag.

Which is about the entire scenario of golfing in Russia under the czars. Democracy does not improve your game. Especially when it's the caddie who is going Democratic.

You must replace your divot when there is a tree clinging to it. A hardy race, those Siberians.

Colonel Bogovitch for a course is 72 strokes. The last 60 strokes with a whip.

If you want a two-weeks' card for the Siberian golf club, you had better invest your money wisely before you start.

Many a foursome has been busted up by the cossacks.

The people who think that a golf course is going to civilize Russia, have never been on a golf course on Saturday afternoon.

Nevertheless, we are thankful that Russia is going to take up the golfing industry. But dropping a gutta percha ball in a hole is going to seem tame after dropping a czar down a well.

side trip, there's only Mr. Young who is passenger agent and publicity man for the Southwestern Air Fast Express, Mr. Cantwell, their chief pilot and the man who flew the Lockheed Vega in the races, and myself. I would have got around to a little work much sooner, except that Mr. Young needed help with his crossword puzzle. It was a "Judge" crossword puzzle, full of tricks, and I had to tell dicated in the definition "This will set about raising a family." Just like a man not to know that one.

Typewriter on Knees

The Corona, which doesn't seem to feel the altitude, sits fairly steady on my knees, except when Mr. Cantwell reaches for a cigaret. But my ears keep straining to hear the sound of the keys, which is not quite practicable above the buzzing of that wasp out in front. The rigidity of the air (note the apt use of technical terms) this high above the clouds makes any normal occupation, except talking, possible.

It may be that the editor is growing a little curious to know just how I happened to be spread all over this part of Texas when I'm supposed to be looking intelligent at the sight of the oil fields around Tulsa. Well, you see, wait a minute please. Fort Worth is a little way to our left in the mist and we've started down for Meacham field. I've got to help the pilot get us down these 7,000 feet. Whoopee!

Did you ever try "fish-tailing" in? Don't ask me to tell you what it is, but that's when you use the "hanger." The hanger swings innocently above your head as you ride serene, but it seems that my right hand knew it was there and just naturally grabbed for it at the physchological moment.

Somewhere Else Now

Ah, there we are.

Let's alter the date line to read the Texas hotel and take up the next installment. As I was about to say, the S. A. F. E. lines, of which Erle P. Halliburton is president and Bob Cantwell is chief pilot, is staging a little christening down here. The Miss Fort Worth is being put into operation, and Mr. Halliburton, already here, got homesick for the "Tester" and sent for it, along about that time I dropped down, at Tulsa, where the S. A. F. E. headquarters are located, after a short plane ride from Springfield, Mo.

"We're going, but of course if you'd rather not" begins Mr. Cantwell, knotting a handkerchief about his neck.

"What are you waiting for?" I wanted to know. And so.

They won't be flying the "Tester" back, so I'm to take a ship for Oklahoma City in the morning and make connections with the regular Southwestern Air Fast Express there, landing at Kell field tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon. All of which doubling on my tracks is planned to avoid a come down from the air vacation I started.

Meanwhile the association of commerce here is attending the ceremonies incident to the christening. There's a banquet, with as few speeches as is decent (which is mighty doggone few, if you know what I mean).

And that brings me to the summary of previous installments. All the time I haven't been in the air today, I've been posing for photographs and being interviewed.

I've tried to avoid the pitfalls which threatened Lindbergh and I tried hard to be gracious to the intruding press. There was a pretty little blonde girl in Springfield who came to see me at breakfast time this morning, and after that the owner, the publisher, and the editor of the opposing paper, to say nothing of their star reporter.

All helped me with the photographer. We rode to the field at Springfield in the publisher's open car, although the S. A. F. E. transportation man was on hand.

Counts Ozark Stills

The ship refueled there, and we watched them put the high-test gasoline through a giant funnel into the right wing. I had cast a hopeful eye at the accumulation of white, puffy clouds in the sky, anticipating some more play with them, but this wily young pilot, a black headed youth with a seasoned weather eye, would have none of them.

Instead, he stayed close to the earth, and I whiled away the hours as we hovered above the Ozarks by counting the stills as they went by. Flyers in Tulsa said that they, too had not been unobservant, but that there were no convenient landing fields.

This low flying gives a detailed study of the general view obtainable above. Naturally, the passenger gets a much greater sense of speed and I had time to watch the Monday washings appear upon the lines in energetic country homes as we completed the two-hour flight. The rugged hills of the Ozarks were more clearly seen as we flew low above them, and even human beings could occasionally be noted.

We were a little ahead of time at Tulsa, due to the perspicacity of the black headed boy, and I had time for a personal visit to the "Flying Boots" whose box lunches are of squeamish memory.

It was 12:20 (we left Springfield at 10:40) and the student pilots at one of the schools at the field were displaying undisturbed appetites. Later I rode into Tulsa for a glimpse of the S. A. F. E. headquarters there before taking off again for Fort Worth at 2:10.

With me were the couple who were in the ship when it landed at Springfield. They were young things, and I'm convinced they were bride and groom, although I didn't see any rice. Anyway they spent much of the time shouting sweet nothings across the aisle above the noise of the engines. They attempted to act as indifferent to each other as E. H. Eddleman tried to act to flying last Friday, but I still have my ideas about all three.

Now this financial matter has all gone flooey. I never was much at bookkeeping, any way. How am I to estimate vacation costs when here I am 250 miles from where I'm supposed to be? If I had staved in Tulsa, as all good vacationists would do, I'd have had only the fare, a hotel, and an occasional meal to add up. Well the fare would have been $17. The hotel about $4; and the meals the usual $2.50 unless my appetite had grown. That makes $23.50 to swell last night's total. And just one more day to go. I believe I'll make it.

GRAND JURY BEGINS WORK

Less Than 30 Cases Before County Investigators

H. A. Allen of Wichita Falls was named foreman of the grand jury for the July term of the 30th district court when it began its deliberations Monday morning, following a brief charge delivered by Judge Allan D. Montgomery.

Among the less than 30 cases comprising the docket for the present jury, those growing out of alleged violations of prohibition laws will constitute the majority, according to Judge Montgomery. These will include investigation of a case which originated last Saturday, when members of the sheriff's department reported the seizure of a small amount of whisky and a large quantity of bottled near-beer at a house in the residence district.

It was indicated by Sam R. Spence, district attorney, that the grand jury session will be a brief one. Aside from Mr. Allen, the body includes the following:

Will Slaton, Brandon Smith and W. R. Skinner, Electra; B. H. Preston and J. S. Mills, Burkburnett; Carl Williamson, Iowa Park road, and Luke McCrory, Homer Karrenbrock, Harry L. Hunter, Edwin Bebb and Milo Connelley, Wichita Falls.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.—Adv.

VERNON'S JULY 4 CELEBRATION TO DEDICATE NEW BUILDINGS

CITY PROVIDES FULL PROGRAM

Thousands Expected to Attend Entertainment

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, July 1.—Plans for entertaining one of the largest crowds that ever gathered in Vernon are being made for the celebration here July 4, when the new $278,000 Wilbarger courthouse, $100,000 municipal building, Vernon airport and municipal light plant will be formally dedicated. A full program that provides action from the opening of the celebration with a parade at 9 a. m. until the close with a fireworks display late in the evening has been planned. A free barbecue ample to accommodate thousands will be spread at Allingham park at noon.

The celebration, originally planned to observe the completion of the new buildings and airport, has been extended to formally observe the progress made in the county in recent months and is being emphasized as a home-coming for all former citizens. In addition to the Wilbarger courthouse, a new municipal building, light plant and airport just completed, work is going forward rapidly on a new high school plant to be erected at a cost of approximately $190,000. Work on the road program which will give the county approximately 50 miles of paved highway, authorized about two years ago when the voters approved a bond issue for $1,000,000, is nearing completion. And the Vernon Chamber of Commerce is making plans to celebrate progress in general, Secretary Grady Shipp states.

Big Parade Starts

The official program will begin at 9 a. m. with a mammoth parade in which all northwest Texas and southwest Oklahoma has been asked to participate. The Vernon Chamber of Commerce band will lead the parade and a number of decorated floats will be one of the features. Prizes have been offered for the best decorated float, the oldest automobile in the parade operating under its own power, the family in the parade having come the longest distance to the celebration, and the largest family in the parade.

Following the parade, the scene of the program will be shifted to the airport, five miles south of Vernon on the Seymour road, for the formal dedication of Vernon's municipal flying field.

A large number of airplanes will take part in the program at the flying field. Jim Kelly and Reg Robbins, holders of the endurance record made recently at Fort Worth, will take part in the program and they are expected to pilot the famous endurance ship, the Fort Worth, here for the celebration.

M. E. Berry, who is in charge of the services and plane at the airport, announces that planes from Dallas, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Fort Sill, Wichita, Kan., and Wichita Falls will be here for the dedication ceremony. The number will include famous army flyers and their planes from Love field, Dallas, and from Brooks and Kelly fields at San Antonio.

Old Settlers Meet

Following the airport dedication, and possibly during this service a meeting of all the old settlers of Wilbarger county will be held in the district courtroom of the new courthouse.

Immediately after the barbecue at Allingham park at noon, the courthouse will be formally dedicated. A presentation speech will be made by County Judge J. V. Townsend and the building will be accepted by the people by some citizen. Following this program Mayor H. D. Hockersmith will formally present the city with the municipal building erected under the supervision of his administration.

Three baseball games have been scheduled for the city park. The first will be between the Fargo and Oklaunion teams. Harrold and the Phillips Petroleum company teams will clash in the second and the winner of the first game will draw to play Thalia in a third contest.

In the evening the city park will again be the scene of lively entertainment in the form of 40 rounds of boxing that will bring together a number of the foremost glove slingers of Texas.

Fireworks Display

Plans are being formulated for a mammoth display of fireworks during the course of the evening, and the official program will be concluded with a free street dance.

J. B. Lawson is general chairman of all committees working toward the perfection of the plans for the celebration. O. L. Pearson, A. N. Vernon, E. O. Youngblood, S. W. Bailey and Robert Sparks will serve as a general committee, the members of which will be delegated as chairmen of specific committees to care for various phases of the day's program. The program committee consists of J. B. Martin, M. A. McHenry, C. D. Greene, M. R. Sewell and A. J. Schell.

NO RESIGNATIONS

Mellon Denies Reports That Prohibition Chiefs Quit

WASHINGTON, July 1. (AP)—Secretary Mellon this afternoon issued a formal denial of stories that Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman and Prohibition Commissioner Doran intend to resign.

Dispatches to the effect that Lowman intended to resign first were sent out Saturday by the press associations. Subsequent dispatches printed elsewhere said that Doran also intended to resign. The treasury secretary described all such reports as untruthful.

in the elimination of corners and recesses in the run-around which might afford concealment. It was pointed out that the recent attack upon Jailer W. W. Allen in an attempted jailbreak was launched by a prisoner hiding in a dark corner just inside the door to the run-around. Alteration of the walls by use of the iron slabs is purposed to make all parts of the corridor visible to the jailer before his entrance.

Construction of a new driveway designed to lead general traffic past the west courthouse door into Travis street without passing under the jail also was voted by the commissioners' court. The drive under the jail will be reserved for cars of the sheriff's department, it was said.

On the recommendation of Tom McHam, county treasurer, the commissioners issued a formal order authorizing the issuance of a warrant to redeem $5,000 worth of bridge bonds, issued in 1916, at 99.5 per cent of face value.

L. N. Jernigan, superintendent of buildings and grounds for Wichita county, was authorized to have the hot water pipes in the courthouse renewed under the supervision of Voelcker and Dixon, architects.

Drunkenness Blamed For Tulsa Fatal Shooting

TULSA, Okla., July 1. (UP)—Police tonight blamed drunkenness for a gunfight here early today between two brothers in which one of them was killed and the other probably fatally wounded. Vernon Miller, 35, shot his brother, Earl, 26, in the spine, officers said, before he turned the gun on himself and took his own life. Earl was paralyzed and hospital officials said there was slight chance for his recovery.

Creager and Bullington Divide on Issues

department head to prosecute Morris, while Senator McKeller, Democrat, Tennessee, another committee member, said he believed others than the department head should have seen Morris punished.

Answering a question by both Senators Brookhart and McKeller, Creager declared he was in favor of enforcement of the Volstead act and that if another election should be called he would vote for prohibition.

Note Payment Denied

Referring to Bailey's charge that he had gotten liquor at Morris' request because "Creager and Nolte are in town," Creager declared that Morris never had given him liquor. He denied Bailey had paid a $100 note made to the Republican organization. Records, Creager said, showed Bailey paid only $37.50. He defended Henry Zweifel, former United States district attorney at Fort Worth, whom Bailey had attacked failing to prosecute a case.

Assaulting Wurzbach from another angle, Creager said the former congressman had pleaded to support Herbert Hoover for president in the last election, but that Wurzbach wrote a letter to C. C. Littleton of Fort Worth in which he asked Littleton to show a Republican leader literature derogatory to Hoover.

Clash With Bullington

The Republican committeeman took issue with his chief lieutenant, Orville Bullington, Wichita Falls, vice chairman of the state executive committee, who had said he favored repeal of the 14th and 15th amendments. He also read into the record a telegram from Del Rio refuting charges that Roy Campbell, customs collector at Laredo, and Frank Dow, customs commissioner, Washington, were intoxicated at that border town.

Zweifel, now a practicing attorney at Fort Worth, told the committee he had vigorously prosecuted cases which Beck charged the former federal district attorney had neglected.

Prominent Witnesses

Many witnesses, including Bishop Harry T. Moore, Dallas diocese of the Methodist Episcopal church; H. Bascom Thomas, former Texas senator; George Waverly Briggs, president of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce; Nelson Phillips, a former chief justice of the supreme court of Texas; J. A. Pondrom, S. E. Chitsey and Fred F. Florence, Dallas brokers, and Harry Seay, president of an insurance company, said the reputation of the Republican organization and its leaders in Texas was good.

Referring again to the campaign for $100,000 being conducted by Texas Republicans, Leonard Withington, director of organization, said only $31,514 has been pledged. Of that amount $20,205 was promised by non-office holders.

Brookhart to Return

Senator Brookhart promised further investigation of the Texas situation in a statement before he took them through loops, and on one of the loops witnesses said he barely missed a rooftop.

After the plane crashed investigators in the crumpled forward cockpit found one right shoe caught in the rudder control on one side a left shoe similarly caught on the other side. Castellucio and Harwood had sat together in that cockpit and those reconstructing the accident saw evidence in these unmated shoes that they had been terrified by the stunting and unintentionally had jammed their feet in such position that they had taken control of the ship from the pilot.

It was the fourth fatal accident of planes from Roosevelt and Mitchell fields within a week, the other victims being Francis Philips, son of the late Queens sewer magnate; Jack Ashcraft, endurance flier, and Coporal Elmer Barry, army student flier.

Stultz was 29 and married. He first came to public note when he signed to pilot Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson's plane Dawn across the Atlantic. He disagreed with Mrs. Grayson and resigned from the expedition before the plane flew away a year and a half ago never to be seen again.

Next he was employed by Charles A. Levine and flew Levine and Miss Mabel Boll in a non-stop flight to Havana, later being selected to pilot Miss Boll across the ocean in Levine's transatlantic plane Columbia. He switched from Miss Boll's colors to Miss Earhart's however and landed the Earhart plane Friendship in Wales. Since then he had been privately employed.

It is estimated that the sea contains enough salt to bury the whole dry land under a layer 400 feet deep.

who died a natural death in Berlin last February, all were alive until today. Then Stultz took up a couple of friends to do a bit of stunting and a few minutes later both Stultz and the friends were dead.

They went up in an open biplane owned by John Hay Whitney, Stultz' employer and about 300 feet from the ground they went into a tailspin. The two passengers, Pasquale Castellucio and Edward B. Harwood were dead when pulled from the wreckage, and Stultz died as he was being carried into the hospital in Mineola.

Stultz did not regain consciousness and so he could not tell what had happened, but there were two mute witnesses, a left and a right shoe that did not make a pair, that told the story well enough for those with imagination.

It was the first time Castellucio an Harwood had been up. Stultz

Two Prisoners In Lawton Jail Break Are Back in Cells

LAWTON, Okla., July 1. (UP) Eight of the 10 prisoners who early today sawed their way out of Comanche county jail here were still at liberty tonight.

Two were captured today. Pete Morgan was arrested at 10 a. m. when he attempted to steal a motor car to escape. Fearing he would be shot by posses that were searching the brakes along the Red river, Ray Hill, one of the fugitives, called the Lawton Constitution, local newspaper, and said he was ready to surrender. He was arrested.

Two of the fugitives were awaiting trial on grand larceny charges. The others were serving terms on minor charges. Four of the men were reported near Blue Beaver creek later today where Sheriff George Frampton was searching with his deputies.

Those at liberty were Granville Lattimer, Fred Allison, Fred McGrew, L. Atkins, James Martin, Emerson Gilbert, George Murphy and E. Wilkerson.

Hardinge's Woes Laid to Jealousy

week before we were to have been married," the gray-haired oil burner magnate said, his voice rising to a pitch when he mentioned the other man's name. "I called him 'a dirty skunk' and she became incensed."

The witness then told of the scenes in Miss Livingston's apartments when they quarreled over Nax. Hardinge, who is 62 years old, broke down and cried later when the mention of his son was made by his attorney.

Miss Livingston's attorney called attention of the court to the emotion of the witness similarly to the action of the defense counsel last week when the 29-year-old complainant wept during her testimony.

Wants It Known

"I wish the court to note," her lawyer said, "that Mr. Hardinge is crying."

The witness had been asked by his attorney to identify his son, Franklin Hardinge Jr., in the courtroom. Then when the boy was standing, the lawyer continued:

"Did you ever tell Miss Livingston your son was 'no good,' a 'weakling' and that you 'didn't think much of him'?"

"No," the father replied, tears rolling down his cheeks.

Miss Livingston had testified that Hardinge told her he wanted to marry a young woman that she might preserve his inventive genius for posterity because he was doubtful of his son's business ability.

Returning to his story concerning Nax, Hardinge said Miss Livingston received an expensive traveling clock during the Christmas holidays of 1927.

"I noticed it in her apartment," Hardinge said, "and asked her where it came from.

"'Oh, Charley sent it to me,' she said, and I remarked that it was an expensive clock and must have cost $40 or $50. She said she supposed it was a wedding present."

On New Year's eve, he said, he had planned a party for Ann, Josephine Brand, his housekeeper, and some friends, but he could not attend because of a cold.

"The next day I saw her," Hardinge testified, "and told her I had heard that she toasted Nax at the party the night before. She said that 'everyone was feeling good' and that she was sorry about it."

Under the guidance of his attorney, Hardinge said that he heard she had proposed a toast, "Here's to Charley Nax, my sweetheart."

"Then Josephine (Miss Brand) told her," he continued, "'You had better toast the man who is buying your clothes.' I later heard that there was a row between Ann and Josephine at the party."

In her testimony, Ann accused Hardinge and his housekeeper of "living as man and wife" prior to and following the death of the first Mrs. Hardinge.

Roaches Surely die

Roaches are harder to kill than flies and mosquitoes, but Flit gets them, because it has a greater amount of insect-killing ingredients. Flit drives roaches out of cracks where they hide, so that you can also spray them direct. Roaches may run away and hide, but die later from effects.

Harmless to people, and its vapor does not stain. Be sure to get Flit, in the yellow can with the black band. More for the money in the quart size.

Lamar Baptist W. M. S. Elects Mrs. H. A. O'Neal New President

The annual election of officers of the Lamar Avenue Baptist W. M. S. in an all-day meeting Monday at the church was attended by 75 members of all circles and guests. Mrs. H. A. O'Neill was elected president for the ensuing year, and other new officers were named as follows:

Mrs. A. J. Catlin, first vice president and corresponding secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Riley Rawls, recording secretary; Mrs. W. O. Fisher, Young People's sponsor; Mrs. J. O. Vinson, Intermediate G. A. counselor; Mrs. N. B. Rawls, Junior G. A. counselor; Mrs. C. T. Walters, Sunbeam leader; Mrs. L. C. Blakely, personal service chairman; Mrs. F. C. Paul, benevolent chairman; Mrs. B. B. King, mission study chairman; Mrs. E. A. Turner, mission chairman; Mrs. S. F. Martin, educational chairman; Mrs. G. W. Peters, stewardship chairman; Mrs. R. E. Goode, enlistment; Mrs. E. L. Kemmerly, publicity chairman; Mrs. L. P. Wilson, social chairman; and Mrs. Fred L. Cone, floral chairman.

The business session opened at 9 o'clock, with Mrs. C. F. Somerville, outgoing president, in charge. Circle and committee reports were read and accepted. Following the election of officers, Rev. S. F. Martin, pastor of the church, addressed W. M. S. members on the subject, "The Woman at the Well."

Rev. Mr. Agee, county missionary, dismissed the morning session with prayer, and lunch was served by the Blanch Walker circle.

The Royal Service program was given during the afternoon hours, "Persistent Prayer" being the text book subject. The program was led by Mrs. R. E. Goode, and Mrs. W. G. Collins gave the devotionals.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, July 1. (US)—If you think you have troubles, you might like to look next door at a pretty German girl, an excellently trained servant. She confided to her mistress the other day that her husband, who has been troubled with rheumatism for two years, has taken so much morphine to stop pain he has become an addict.

Three years ago she took him to Germany and returned when the passport was about to expire, because she likes America and can make a better living here.

The husband can't work now. It costs her $2 a bottle for dope tablets. He must be supplied. He's making a great effort to cure himself, but he dare not go to a hospital and ask help. If it is learned he has only his first papers he will be deported.

They are trying to work out their problem the best way they can. With only her salary to work upon their problem becomes increasingly difficult.

In a dress shop this morning. Young snip of a girl with her snip (not so young) of a mother, shopping for chiffon evening gowns.

Shopkeeper says: "That's a lovely thing, and so youthful!" as the girl parades in a dress confection.

The snip glared at her and then stomping her foot in the direction of her mother she snapped: "I don't want to look youthful!"

The mother said nothing.

Another customer, to cover her embarrassment at this show of bad breeding, pretended not to notice, and picked up a pink silk something that lay on a chair in the shop.

It happened to be the silk underslip of the young snip. She saw this and dropped it quickly. The mother saw her. The lady apologized and said: "I'm sorry. I thought it was a dress."

The mother did not answer, did not say it was all right or smile to save the lady embarrassment. Instead she glared at the customer just as the girl had glared at the mother.

And that's how it happens, usually, that we have ill-bred youngsters.

Men who contemplate matrimony certainly can't make any serious mistake when they insist upon meeting the girl's mother early in the game. Although in this case it was hardly necessary.

Which reminds me of a girl of 13. She, her mother and a friend of the mother's were walking down a fashionable boulevard. The girl thought her mother's friend wasn't smartly enough gowned to be seen with the family, so she suggested to her: "You walk on the inside, and people will think you are mother's maid."

The mother laughed.

The girl grew older and married. It turned out exactly as you would expect.

Mrs. Payne Speaks To Christian Endeavorers

Mrs. J. C. Payne addressed members of the Young People's group of the Christian Endeavor at the First Presbyterian church Sunday night on the subject, "Spiritual Evangelistic Use of Music." The origin of spiritual music, from the announcement of Christ's birth in Bethlehem by the angels to the shepherds watching over their flocks, was discussed by Mrs. Payne.

Miss Mildred Anderson played a piano solo, "By the Waters of Minnetonka." Rev. Nat F. Grafton, pastor, led the group in prayer.

The Christian Endeavor societies of the church also had charge of the evening church service. J. B. Hubbard spoke for the junior society, Miss Faye Humphries for the intermediates, Miss Olive Humphries for the seniors, and Miss Ruby Brown for the young people.

A special musical number was given by Leonard Volz, Larry Robertson and Shirley Donnell.

Grant Street W. M. S. Has Business Meeting

The Grant Street Methodist W. M. S. held a business session Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church, with Mrs. W. D. Smithson leading devotionals. Mrs. E. B. Dodson opened the meeting with prayer, and Mrs. H. A. Baker gave the closing prayer.

Those present were Mesdames D. A. James, H. A. Baker, E. W. Reed, E. B. Dodson, J. F. Counts, R. L. Sides and Clarence Gum.

DIX STANDS PAT ON MARRIAGE

Dorothy Reiterates That It's 50-50 Proposition

Does Happiness in Marriage Depend Entirely Upon the Woman?—Why This Girl Should Marry Her Old Sweetheart—An Ingenious Suggestion.

Dear Miss Dix—I am sick of reading about the "poor, discarded wife." You blame the man when you should know that a happy marriage depends almost entirely upon the woman. Nearly every woman wins her husband by what the man imagined her to be. Let the woman have brains enough to live up to his imagination of her. Men have not changed in their ideals of women. Times have changed to the extent that men are no longer willing to slave for women who have been selfish and silly enough entirely to disillusion them. It is up to the woman always. "Good" women can ill afford to sneer at the wiles and charms of the courtesan.—X.

Answer—I do not agree with you that a happy marriage depends almost entirely upon the wife. Marriage is a 50-50 proposition. It is a partnership in which a man and woman must do teamwork if they make a go of it. A woman alone can no more make a happy marriage than a man can make a successful business if his partner fails to do his share of the work and evades his share of the responsibility.

A woman may smile her head off but she cannot make a bright and cheerful home if her husband sits around in it like a gob of gloom. A woman may be intelligent and up-to-date and well read and a regular spellbinder of a conversationalist, but she cannot monolog through a whole evening to a man who only grunts occasionally by way of reply. A woman may be a marvelous cook and her dinner table may be a feast for Lucullus, but she can't make it a pleasant meal if her husband takes that place and occasion to knock her and the children for everything they do and don't do.

A woman may keep herself young and slim and well dressed. She may be as meek and humble as Patient Griselda and as jolly as a sand boy, but she can't keep her husband's eye from roving after other women if she is married to a philanderer.

Indisputably the success or failure of a marriage does lie largely in the wife's hands. Perhaps she is even more responsible for the way the marriage turns out than the man is, because she makes the background. She makes the home and if that is comfortable and peaceful and cheerful, and she is pleasant and amiable and easy to get along with, it goes a long way toward keeping the man contented and preventing his roaming.

But the man has his own responsibility, too. He cannot evade that and lay all the blame, if things go wrong, on the woman. He must help make the cheer of the home. If he does not want it to be dull and stupid, he must bring to it fresh interests. If he does not want his wife to slump, he must keep her on her tiptoes by his praise and encouragement and by keeping her thinking that it is worth while to be a good wife and mother.

And, above all, he must at least make an effort to keep the oath he took at the altar, to be faithful to his wife. No man can be vamped against his will. Every man has plenty of time to stuff cotton in his ears when the siren begins to sing if he doesn't want to listen to her.

As for it being the duty of every woman to live up to her husband's imagination, that is a large order. In fact, it is an impossible one, for no wife has any idea of what her husband's imagination calls for in the specifications of a wife.

Probably every man's imaginations of what a wife should be is an impossible creature who remains perpetually young and beautiful and graceful and svelt; who is always waiting for his return of an evening with a glad, sweet smile on her lips, no matter what sort of a day she has had herself with the children, and the cooking and the washing and ironing; who is always beautifully dressed without running up a clothes bill; who never has any temper or nerves or personal desires or tastes, but who is always amiable and sweet and who thinks that husband knows best, yet who at the same time is witty and vivacious who is chaste as ice herself, but broad enough minded to know that a man must have his fling.

Unfortunately the imaginary wife is an impossibility in a real world where a woman has to contend with such practical things as age and sickness and child-bearing and cooking and bills, etc., and so it is foolishness to tell any woman to attempt the impossible.

Nor do I believe that sensible men marry women for imaginary qualities. I think the man who makes his living by sizing up other men is not much befooled by a woman. He knows pretty well what she is and has very few illusions about her. What we call the "disillusions in marriage" for a man simply mean that he has got tired of the responsibilities of marriage and wants to be free again, and that he has seen some other woman he likes better. He is disillusioned with her just as he is with any other bargain he might make and generally it isn't the woman's fault.

Certainly the good woman can ill afford to sneer at the wiles and charms of the courtesan, because only too often they take their husbands from them, but I doubt if these would work in the home circle. Men like their wives to be "something different."

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Do you honestly think that a girl can make a success of marriage with a man with whom she has acted indiscreetly during the courtship days? I have no excuse to offer except to use the old alibi that "I loved too much." We went our separate ways for a few months and now he has returned and wants to marry me. My best friend says that I should start anew and marry a man who does not know of my past, because if I marry this one he will make life miserable to me by reminding me of it whenever a quarrel occurs. I am still very much in love with him and feel that as long as I am approaching my 30's the man who does not know of my past may never appear. What would you advise?—L. D.

Answer—Marry your old sweetheart by all means. Surely, as you are fellow sinners, you should be able to wash the slate clean and start over again. He has nothing more to forgive than you have to forgive him, and so would have no right to reproach you.

Unless he is a cad he will feel this way about it, and evidently he is an honorable man who wants to make the proper amend, or else he would not come back and ask you to marry him. I do not see any reason for your hesitating in accepting him, or for fearing that your friend's dismal prophecy will be fulfilled.

You will certainly run much less danger of having your past come back and haunt you if you marry this man who was a part of it than if you marry some man who does not know about it, but who might some day find out about it. In that case you will always live in perpetual fear of discovery, and your secret will always be a shadow between you.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am married to a brilliant and interesting woman who is a wonderful housekeeper and a fine cook when she can drag herself away from her books long enough to remember that there is anything about the house to be done. But she is what you might call "a reading addict," and when I come home at night she will look up with horror on her face and exclaim: "Oh, dear, I've forgotten to put on dinner," or else the house will be full of the smell of burning food. How can I bring her down to earth long enough to see that you have to take some time from books to run a house?

Answer—Buy her an alarm clock and tell her that before she sits down to her book to set it for the time at which she must do her household chores. Reading can become a vice, as well as being a virtue. Get your wife to break herself of her bad habit before she degenerates into a bookworm.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Just what blame and responsibility do you place on the young married man who yields to temptation when the pretty young flappers try to vamp him and offer every encouragement for him to pet them up?

—JESSIE.

Answer: I think the young married man who yields to temptation is more to blame than the girl because he is disloyal to his wife, whereas the girl has no responsibilities.

Of course, wives always blame the girl and represent their husbands as poor, innocent, unsophisticated lambs who were taken in and deceived by some scheming adventuress of a woman, but this is just to save their faces. They really know better and are perfectly aware that when a man flees from temptation he always escapes. It is the men who meet temptation halfway who get caught. Every man is vamp-proof who wants to be.

AIRPORT ACTIVITIES

J. I. Staley took off from the Municipal airport on the Burkburnett highway Monday afternoon in a Curtis-Robin for Schumaker, N. M. The trip will be a non-stop flight, it was said, Mr. Staley having received an urgent business call to the place, which is near Las Vegas. Fred Ridenour piloted the plane.

Ten passengers left the airport on the northbound S. A. F. E. and Braniff airliners Monday and six passengers took off in the southbound planes of the two lines. Visiting planes at the airport included a Travelair of the T. A. T. from Fort Worth, on its way to Amarillo, and several other planes, one of which was piloted by Bob Browning, formerly of Wichita Falls, and another by Maj. H. R. Brereton of Fort Sill, Okla.

SIXTEENTH SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

WICHITA FALLS BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

June 30, 1929

ASSETS		LIABILITIES
First Mortgage Loans (First lien mortgages on improved real estate, principally homes occupied by the owners. These loans are all amortized by monthly payment of principal and interest.)	$3,980,865.59	Installment Shares (Regular payments made on monthly Installment shares representing systematic saving and practical thrift. This class of share is the basis of the financial security of a Building and Loan Association. Attention is directed that they total more than all the Prepaid and Full Paid combined.)	$1,720,089.45
Stock Loans (Temporary loans made to shareholders on their shares as security. No loan made in excess of 90 per cent of the share's cash withdrawal value.)	56,976.44	Prepaid Shares (Amounts paid at $50.00 per share for compound dividend earning.)	942,074.00
		Full Paid Shares (Amounts paid at $100.00 per share for cash dividend earning.)	648,604.35
Cash in Bank, Subject to Check	72,706.95	Reserve Fund and Undivided Profits (This shows the cash reserve available for the payment of losses. This amount is net AFTER paying dividends due today, June 30th, 1929, totaling $130,663.76 as earnings to shareholders for the past six months. Yesterday, June 29, this item would have shown as $178,846.95.)	54,417.79
Accrued Interest, Secured but Unpaid	14,817.59
		Profits Divided (Dividends credited and paid to all classes of shares, the greater portion of which is accumulated dividends on monthly Installment and Prepaid shares which remain with the Association to earn in a compound manner.)	680,180.98
		Bills Payable	80,000.00
TOTAL	$4,125,366.57	TOTAL	$4,125,366.57

On the basis of the above financial statement the business of this community is solicited, both as to real estate loans and to the investment of money. This institution has shown a conservative gain in assets over its January 1st statement in excess of a quarter of a million dollars. Its total net earnings for the past six months amounted to $138,274.14 from which dividends totaling $130,663.76 were paid to share holders, leaving $7,610.38 to be passed into reserve fund and undivided profits available for the payment of losses if any should at any time occur.

This reserve fund now totals, as you will observe above, approximately $55,000.00 and is added and additional security above all other safeguards for your money invested in this institution.

Eight years ago this building and loan association was organized as the first such institution in Wichita Falls. Since that time it has had many thousands of people to invest their money in it and several thousands of people to own their homes through it and today its record reflects no marring defect or failure to care for the requirements of its investors or borrowers and it has earned a place as one of the great building and loan associations of Texas.

Attention is directed to the fact the legislature last week passed a new law governing building and loan associations in this state. Its provisions have greatly strengthened these institutions by more adequate supervision and control by the state banking department. Complete details will be furnished any interested person on request to this association.

If you have money to invest either at compound earning or to provide an income through cash dividends, or if you wish to save money systematically, this institution with its resources and experience is at your disposal. Your name and address on the margin of this advertisement will bring our interesting booklet "INVESTMENT SHARES" for your full information.

Frightened by a Stubborn Spreading Rash

Los Angeles, Cal.—"My husband had a rash on his body and after using the usual remedies all but one of the spots healed, but that one was very stubborn. We used every kind of a salve we ever heard of, even prescribed treatments, but still the spot spread. I heard of Resinol, and in desperation started to use the soap and ointment faithfully as directed. After using one-quarter of a small jar the spot was completely healed." (Signed)—Mrs. C. E. WHAT A JOY FLAVOR BRINGS

A Little Sugar Can Put Pleasure Into Eating Many Foods

Foods can be bland, tasteless and unappetizing, or they can be so good that everyone at the table, both children and adults, will be tempted to eat enough of them.

The preparation of foods so varied and so appetizing that they will promote the health of the country, is squarely up to women. It takes intelligence and thought to prepare or supervise varied, delightful diets.

Realizing this, a group of nationally known women cooking experts recently conducted a series of now notable experiments high up in a New York skyscraper kitchen. Their results are being announced to women throughout the country in behalf of more tasteful vegetable foods. Cook vegetables in little water. Do not overcook. Add a little sugar to the vegetables while they are cooking.

Try these Glazed Onions recommended by one of the experts. Peel enough medium-size silver-skin onions to make a quart. Prick onions through centers to prevent breaking while cooking. Place in boiling salted water to which a tablespoon of sugar per quart has been added. Simmer until tender and brown. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a pan. Add a dash of granulated sugar. Cook to the bubbling stage. Add the onions and stir until well glazed.

For health eat fruits, vegetables and cereals, sugar-flavored for enjoyment. Remember the value of candy for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

LAMESA SEES STEADY GROWTH IN SIX-MONTH PERIOD

FARM YIELDS ARE EXCELLENT

Cotton, Principal Crop, Is Raised Cheaply

Special to The Record News.

LAMESA, Texas, July 1.—Perhaps no other town with the population of Lamesa in West Texas can parallel the growth and development experienced the past six months. The growth has been steady and of the permanent nature. There has been no boom and fast growth that would hurt in the event of a dull or lax period. The development of Lamesa has been insured by constant growth and development of agricultural interests in Lamesa's trade territory, which comprises more than 1,400 square miles reaching out in every direction from this city.

While agricultural development has been responsible for the greater part of Lamesa's growth there is yet in this great territory at least one-third if not more agricultural lands to go under the plow. These lands are cheap and are fast being settled and improved. It is estimated that 10 per cent of the lands now in cultivation in this area are being added this past season as new lands to the acreage now under the plow.

Cotton Costs Low

In this area cotton is the principal money crop, this crop being raised at about one-third the cost of cotton in other parts of Texas. Close to cotton comes grain sorghums and this feed is not only sold on the open markets to supplement the money crop of the area but is fed to livestock which are sold to the open markets at a greater value than the feeds themselves on the open markets. Next to feeds comes the crop of produce including butter, eggs, cream and poultry. This crop is bringing Dawson county farmers at this time the rate of $500,000 annually. Next to the produce crop comes the livestock market which consists of better dairy types. The section is being fast stocked with the best of dairy cattle, the Jersey leading in the population. Recent surveys reveal that more than 5,000 head of good grade Jerseys are now on the farms of Dawson county and some 15,000 Jerseys are in the area of what is known as the Lower South Plains of Texas. In Dawson county there are now 15,000 head of hogs and pigs. In Dawson county alone there are 150,000 head of good strain hens and turkeys, the survey reveals. On the 2,200 Dawson county farms the farmers are making their living at home and depending on the money crops to serve them extra for land payments, homes, automobiles and luxuries of life.

New Buildings

Last year building receipts show that permits were issued for better than $300,000. This year half this amount has been reached with considerable more under cover at this time. New business homes have replaced the older types of buildings and new structures have been erected to house the new industries that have come here this year. More than 40 new residences have been constructed since the first of January this year and more are now under construction. Lamesa now has 1,100 good residence homes and 120 modern new brick business homes which are amply taking care of the large territory served by Lamesa in the retail way. A new $65,000 telephone system of the common battery type is now busy laying plans to pave all of the resident section of North First and South First streets which consists of 10 blocks and will give Lamesa 27 blocks of brick paving.

New Milk Factory

And now Lamesa is to build the first powdered milk plant in West Texas and among the few now in Texas. Plans are laid for the erection of a $200,000 milk powdered factory which will have a capacity of 110,000 gallons of milk. This factory will manufacture powdered milk of all types and sweet creamery butter. This plant will be able to serve Dawson, Lynn, Terry, Gaines, Borden, Andrews, Martin and Howard counties and will bring to the farmers of this area a close and better market for their products than they have had heretofore.

Grazing Lease Granted On Military Reservation

WASHINGTON, July 1. (INS)—A five-year grazing lease on approximately 1,820 acres of land, covering the Ellington field military reservation at Houston, Texas, was awarded today to J. M. West of Houston, at $1.36 per acre.

Mrs. S. C. Carr

Dallas Lady's Child Came Through Fine

Mrs. S. C. Carr's experience with her little girl is just one of the many cases which we hear about. Mrs. Carr says, "My little Nettie Virginia had something like the flu. When it left, she was puny, had no appetite, and was very cross and feverish. I had known for years that Nature's Remedy is such a dependable medicine and I decided to give her a course of the Juniors. Nobody knows how happy I am to see her eat heartily again, and laughing and playing like she used to."

Very often those simple little chocolate coated Nature's Remedy Juniors (NR Jrs) are all the system of a child needs to straighten it out. Then the wastes can't remain in it to form the acids which sour the stomach, bind the bowels and rob the blood of the red corpuscles it must have plenty of to keep children from becoming puny, feverish and pale. Any druggist will recommend NR Juniors to you for your child. Only 25 cents.

SERVICES FOR FIRE VICTIM

Rites for Iowa Park Boy Scheduled Wednesday

Funeral services for Dellwyn Finch, 8-year-old Iowa Park boy, who died in a Wichita Falls hospital at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon as a result of burns suffered while he was playing in a garage near his home, will be held in Iowa Park at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Complete arrangements will be made upon the arrival of the father, J. F. Finch, from Long Beach, Calif.

The body is in the charge of the Tanner Undertaking company of Iowa Park. The accident which resulted in the death of the boy occurred Friday when he was playing with oil paints in the garage of a house across the street from his home. The oils caught fire from a match he struck and ignited his clothing and part of the oil which had stuck to his hands. He was brought to Wichita Falls for treatment.

Survivors are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Finch, and one sister, Elma.

Fire in Transformer Box Does $150 Damage

The chemical truck from central fire station was called to the alley behind the Kemp hotel about 9:30 o'clock Monday night when a transformer on the electric power lines caught fire from what was probably a short in the wires due to the rain which fell Monday night. The flames were confined to the insulation on the wires. Damage was about $150, unless replacement of the entire transformer is necessary, it was said.

Sparks were thrown in all directions and disconnection of the high voltage wires was dangerous work for the linemen from the Texas Electric Service company who were called to prevent the flames from reaching other transformers and buildings nearby.

TWO GRASS FIRES

Firemen were called to the 1400 block on Sibley street and to the 2800 block on Avenue F late Monday evening when grass fires were menacing nearby houses. No damage was reported in either case, firemen said. The two grass fires Monday bring the number of such fires to nearly 10 within the last week, it was stated.

A brief session of the city council Monday night at the Memorial auditorium resulted in the passage of two motions, one for the approval of the minutes of the last meeting and the other for adjournment.

A short discussion of the plans for the placing of new traffic signals at important intersections in the downtown district and at schools where children cross the streets resulted in deferring action on the plans until next week, after consultation with J. W. Cantwell, city superintendent of schools, as to the advisability of placing the signal lights at school crossings. Such signals would be operated only during the hours when the children were coming to and leaving the school, it was said.

The other proposed signals would be placed at Lamar and Tenth, Indiana and Tenth, Lamar and Eleventh, Brook and Eleventh, Brook and Eighth, and at other busy intersections in the city.

George D. Fairtrace, city manager, displayed samples of street signs and stated that advertisements for bids on nearly 800 of the markers would be made within the next two weeks upon the approval of the city council for the erection of the signs. The markers would be placed on six-foot iron posts and would indicate the names of both streets at the intersections. Action on this matter was also deferred to the next meeting.

Six-Year Old Slayer Is Declared Delinquent

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., July 1. (AP)—Carl Newton Mahan, 6-year-old slayer of his playmate Cecil van Hose, was declared a delinquent today when he was arraigned for the second time before the county Judge John W. Butcher. He was ordered paroled to the custody of the Kentucky Children's bureau, whose functions are of an advisory nature. Pending decision of the bureau as to what disposition shall be made of the boy, he was left in the custody of his parents.

HOUSE SLICES FARMERS' AID

West Texas Boll Worm Fund Cut in Half

AUSTIN, July 1. (AP)—The $300,000 claim of West Texas farmers for damages as a result of the pink boll worm quarantine was cut to $150,000 by the house of representatives today.

Approximately 9,000 farmers in 10 counties were affected by the quarantine, Representative Carl Rountree of Lamesa told the house. Representatives Henry Webb of Odessa and Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo appealed to the house to allow the $300,000 or nothing.

Visitor Here Praises Air Development

F. J. Alberts of New York, superintendent of a promotional crew of the American Chicle company now in this city, Monday night commended the rapid development of air transportation in and out of Wichita Falls.

Mr. Alberts stated that the airports, the services of local airline representatives, and the numerous connections with passenger lines to all parts of the country give Wichita Falls a prominent position in the development of air travel throughout the country. His party will leave Tuesday afternoon for Oklahoma City over the Braniff Airlines, and from that point to Tulsa will ride the tri-motored Fokker diner to Tulsa, he said. Air transportation is used wherever available, Mr. Alberts said. He is accompanied by Rex Schraub and L. W. Winkler.

SHRINE LUNCHEON

Members of Maskat temple will hold their regular weekly luncheon at the Shrine auditorium in the City National bank building at noon Tuesday, with Dr. J. H. Fletcher in charge of the program of entertainment.

Out of town nobles, as well as all local members, are invited to the luncheon, Al G. Ellis, recorder, stated.

McKenney to Deliver Baccalaureate Sermon

Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the First Methodist church and presiding elder of the Wichita district of the M. E. conference, has been selected to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the commencement exercises for the seniors of the high school and junior college summer session on July 24, it was announced Monday morning following the class meeting at the school.

Invitations were selected following the report of Lois Baber, chairman of the invitations committee. A. K. Presson, dean of the summer school, announced that all seniors who had their work in by July 20 would be exempt from final examinations.

Purple and gold were selected as the colors for the graduating class of the college. Further social activities for the seniors will be planned at the regular meeting next Monday, it was said.

Air Line to Provide Special Car to Port

Announcement of arrangements for transportation of S. A. F. E. airline passengers to and from the municipal airport in a private conveyance was made Monday by J. G Groves, local representative

The car will call at the Marchman hotel at 9 a. m., at the Kemp at 9:05 a. m., and at the Holt at 9:10 a. m. for connections with the northbound ship, which leaves Kell field at 9:45 a. m. Passengers for the southbound plane, which leaves here at 3:10 p. m., will be taken from the same hotels at 2:30, 2:35 and 2:40 p. m. respectively.

Pending the arrival of the S. A. F. E. car from Tulsa, Mr. Groves said, a car is being furnished through the courtesy of Boone-Kemp, Inc.

Arrivals on the afternoon plane Monday included Dan Boone, local attorney, who returned from Oklahoma City.

GOING—GOING—GONE!

Daily Editorial

THE ORNATELY carved, golden oak sideboard near the stairs couldn't be manufactured today for a thousand dollars. It won't bring 50 under the hammer.

Recent modes in home decoration resent its flamboyant spirit, so somebody, who can afford to be pernickety in such matters, will obtain a piece of furniture designed for a nabob, at less than the most of the unworked wood.

That onyx pedestal, with its chiseled ormolu capital and basebands, was the pride of a Fifth avenue household before good taste banished over-emphasized elegance, and condemned it to wander from sale to sale, until today it reaches the final degradation of an auction basement.

What-nots and gew-gaws: Victorian horrors in gilded wood and strident plushes: a hand-tufted Austrian carpet woven to special order, but whose cacophonous patterns, mustard yellows, livid reds and browns, defy even the re-dyer's strongest pigments: a marble-topped wash stand, paneled with burled walnut, sound and sturdy as the day it left Trumbull's workshop, but jobless in any home with modern plumbing.

Obsolete wardrobes and a panoply of papier-mache armor, relic of the cozy corner era—all out of step with the times, therefore en route to the hall room, tenement and the junker's bench.

No one debates their quality or doubts the sincerity of the craftsmanship lavished upon them—they don't just conform to present ideas.

And a busy, pre-occupied world hasn't the patience to re-adapt them—any more than it bothers to find holes for the odd-sized human pegs who cling to old-fashioned habits of thought and action, and still wear leg-o'-mutton sleeves and padded shoulders on their brains.

Modern Liners and Era of Clipper Ships

NATIONAL pride is not the husky, crowning thing it used to be. American shipping magnates are laying vast plans for building speedy new ocean liners to capture the cream of the transatlantic passenger trade—but the average American, no doubt, doesn't give a whoop whether they succeed or not. Since the time of the civil war we have not cared very much what happens on the ocean.

Nevertheless, to a man who knows his American history, and takes pride in the old traditions, there is something unusually interesting in the plans of these shippers.

Designs have been drawn for two mighty liners, which the United States lines hope will give them predominance in the transatlantic business.

These ships will be as large as the Leviathan, but will have slimmer lines and will be much faster. They will be able to cross the Atlantic in less time than any other commercial ships afloat, and they will cost upwards of $50,000,000 apiece.

Building ships nowadays is not the same game it was 75 years ago. But the aim—speed—is the same. American ship builders once were in a fair way to dominate the world's shipping because of the amazing speed of the vessels they designed; now, after three-quarters of a century, it is fascinating to see them making the same attempts in the same way.

But 75 years is a long time; and the contrast between the swift clippers that were launched just before the civil war and the enormous liners that are now being designed emphasizes the changes that the passage of that length of time has brought.

The old clippers, that could show their heels to anything afloat, were wooden vessels. They had extremely long and slender hulls. Carrying capacity, comfort, sometimes even safety, were sacrificed to speed. For these clippers were cranky vessels. The man who had one in his charge had to be a real seaman. They could glide along closer to the wind than any other ships on the ocean—but let a flaw in the air catch them aback and they were apt as not to start sailing backwards! They were delicate instruments, beautiful as all precise and specialized things are beautiful; and while they lasted they ruled the seas.

Today's ships are also to be slim and speedy; but there the resemblance ceases. How are you to compare a 2,000-ton clipper ship, leaning over beneath a cloud of white canvas, with a 60,000-ton steamship, knifing its way through the waves with a steel prow and following its course with a serene disregard of the wind? It cannot be done. The two vessels belong in different worlds.

Yet the speedy liners now being designed are, nevertheless, the lineal descendants of the "Flying Cloud" and "Sovereign of the Seas." They are reviving the old tradition. Who that has an eye for the great sailors of our nation's youth can help hoping that these new steamers will be successful?

The Vicious Black Panther

GEORGE BISTANY, wild animal collector, returns from a trip into the wilds of Africa and reports that the black panther is the most desperate and vicious of wild animals; and any man who was properly brought up will find that statement rather consoling.

For the man who was properly brought up, of course, read Kipling's Jungle Book as a boy; and no reader of Kipling's Jungle Book ever failed to put Bagheera, the black panther, in his shrine of notables.

Bagheera was perhaps the most fascinating animal in those great books. Kaa, the 30-foot python, was a great creature, to be sure; and Shere Khan, the villainous tiger, was an omen and a portent of the jungle's terror. But Bagheera—black as a midnight shadow, graceful as a kitten and dangerous as a bolt of lightning—Bagheera was the best of the lot.

Now it would be just our luck, in this day of image-smashing, to have some naturalist report that the black panther was really a coward and a sneak thief.

But no! Mr. Bistany finds the black panther just as dreadful as we had always thought him. And every man who read the Jungle Books will be grateful.

Fourth of July Fatalities

THE NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL does a good service for all of us by tabulating the causes of the 239 deaths that the last Fourth of July brought to America, so that we may know what kinds of accidents to avoid on the coming holiday.

Drownings led the list, with 116. Motor traffic came second, with 76. Fireworks were the direct cause of 11 deaths, and contributed to many of the traffic accidents; while firearms, shot off by mistaken patriots in an excess of zeal, took nearly a dozen more lives.

The exercise of ordinary care by each holiday maker would cut the tolls of drowning and motor traffic down to zero. And no man with reasonable forethought will permit his children to use fireworks or guns. Our Fourth of July fatalities, it would seem, are due chiefly to foolishness and carelessness.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS By Fontaine Fox

The GREEN SHADOW - By Herman Landon

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

Police Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of the Picaroon, whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale. Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls to recount a tale of strange happenings at 262 Bank street and requests police investigation. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light. Ferryman is showing the captain a picture when the telephone rings. A voice tells of finding a woman's body at the above address—the dead woman is Ferryman's wife. Summers finds only one clue, a bit of green lens.

Meantime, the Picaroon has written a note to Adele Castle requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. Taken by a mysterious Miss Conway to a strange light through which she could glimpse only the faint outline of a man, calling himself Dr. Moffett, she is told that her father has been connected with a crooked financial deal. Dr. Moffett demands $100,000 for his silence and certain papers.

Adele and Dale meet. He tells her he was present during her strange interview with Dr. Moffett and promises to help her. Dale also meets Adele's friend, Paul Ainsworth. They become suspicious of one another. Dale "on his own" enters the house where the murder occurred and is trapped within by Summers, Ferryman and Axelson, who discover Dale taking a rope of pearls from behind a sliding panel. Dale darkens the room, throws Axelson through a window, and in the resultant confusion escapes.

Dale paid the check and rose. "You will live and learn, Summers."

With that he walked airily away, the picture of a carefree and easy-going soul whose life had been cast to a bright pattern. But outside, as he swung down the sidewalk, some of his jauntiness suddenly deserted him.

On the opposite of the street a lackadaisical idler had stirred himself into inconspicuous activity and was now parelling his course. Summers was having him shadowed, naturally. He had expected that. It was something else that troubled him. For a while last night he had thought himself in a position to bargain advantageously with Dr. Moffett. Then he had discovered that the pearls were Ferryman's property. That had made all the difference. Now—

He turned quickly into a cigar store, entered a telephone booth, and called the Castle house. Miss Castle's voice, usually so clear and bright, was heavy with depression.

"This is Mr. Dale." He spoke in a low voice, out of respect for the neutrally garbed person hovering outside the booth. "Any news?"

Her answer came after a little pause. "Yes—an ultimatum from—but you know. He has given me 24 hours. After that—"

"I can guess the rest," said Dale. His face clouded while he reflected briefly. "Did you—er—hear from him by telephone?"

"Yes, this morning."

Dale reflected again. At the other end of the wire he could picture a brave, lovely girl beset by tribulations. "He will probably telephone you again during the afternoon. If he should do so, ask him to call back at 9 o'clock this evening for your definite answer."

"At 9? What shall I tell him?"

"I'll see you in the meantime. Then we'll decide. Cheerio!"

"Twenty-four hours," Dale thought, as he stepped out of the booth. "Dr. Moffett is getting anxious."

From the telephone booth Dale taxied to his bank, arriving there just before closing time. In exchange for his personal check he received two one-thousand dollar notes and forty-eight one-dollar bills. The accommodating bank clerk selected fresh, crisp currency and snapped a rubber band around it, forming a compact bundle about as thick as Dale's middle finger.

With a careless air Dale dropped the bundle into his inside coat pocket and went back to his taxi. His next stop was 262 Bank street, and here he paid and dismissed the driver. Without expecting a too cordial reception he ran up the steps and rang the bell. It was a new face that answered his summons—the face of a man considerably younger than Axelson. He was dark and lithe and slim, with sharp features and a cautious expression.

"Is Mr. Ferryman in?" he inquired.

"You will find him in the next house, sir, 260."

Dale studied the fellow for a moment. He reflected that Ferryman was not particularly fortunate in his selection of servants.

"You are new here, aren't you? What's become of Axelson?"

"Axelson is no longer here, sir. He left this morning. The servant started to close the door in Dale's face. "I doubt if Mr. Ferryman will see you, sir. He is not receiving callers today. But you might try—oh, here he comes."

A tall, bareheaded man appeared on the stoop of the adjoining house. "Wish to see me?" he asked. "Oh, it's you, Mr. Dale." A chill crept into his voice. "I saw some one from the window, and I wondered. I can spare you a few minutes."

He came down the steps, crossed over to 262, and with frigid politeness motioned Dale to enter. They walked into the library. Ferryman was holding himself a little more erect than yesterday, but traces of shock and grief remained in his fine face.

"Be seated, Mr. Dale. I am rather surprised to see you after what happened here last night."

Dale smiled genially. "I saw Captain Summers at luncheon. Queer sort, Summers, physically and mentally. His head is too large, and there are too many crazy notions in it. He gave me a vague idea of what occurred in this house last night."

Ferryman regarded him suspiciously. "You were here, weren't you, in the role of the Picaroon?"

Dale laughed. "That's one of Summer's refreshingly original ideas. Well, when a man has a head as big as his, he has to fill the blank spaces with something."

Ferryman's eyes were still full of distrust. "Captain Summers telephoned me an hour ago. He had a very astounding report to make."

A frown of perplexity gathered on his forehead. "The pearls have been recovered."

"Congratulations," Dale murmured.

"Oh, I didn't care greatly about the pearls. They are valuable, to be sure, but of what use are they to me now? My poor wife will never wear them again? His voice broke, but in a moment it gathered strength again. "There is only one thing I live for now, and that is to see that the murderer is properly punished."

Dale inclined his head sympathetically. "That's a natural sentiment, Mr. Ferryman. But tell me, you don't really believe that the Picaroon murdered her?"

The other man hesitated. His face showed a conflict between stern emotions and gentle ones, between grief and vindictiveness. "I am not convinced," he murmured. "It is strange that the Picaroon should have returned the pearls. And there are many other incongruities that complicate the matter." He raised his head a little. "I didn't like the way Axelson acted last night. In a twinkling, as I looked into his face, all my former feelings with regard to him changed. All at once I was filled with distrust. This morning I discharged him. I don't know whether or not I was justified."

Dale looked about the room which had been the scene of Miss Castle's interview with Dr. Moffett and of his own exciting encounter with Captain Summers last night. Something seemed to have disturbed its former state of order and neatness. Things were scattered about, the furniture had been disarranged, there were signs of some one's hurried departure.

"Yes, I noticed it this morning," said Ferryman, following his glance. "I called Axelson's attention to it, and he acted sullen and discourteous. Then I discharged him. There is no longer any doubt in my mind but what certain persons have been making improper use of my house, possibly with Axelson's connivance. If so, I hope they are gone for good."

He sighed. "You were inquiring about a certain Dr. Moffett the other day. Lately I have been thinking that perhaps such a person exists."

"You have learned something?" Dale asked quickly.

Ferryman hesitated. For just a moment he seemed inclined to take Dale into his confidence, and then his face closed up again.

"No nothing definite. In fact, I have had only the vaguest sort of inkling. Besides"—with a glance over the confusion in the room—"all that appears to be happily ended now."

Dale frowned a little. Last night's excitement, together with the subsequent discharge of Axelson, had evidently prompted Dr. Moffett to make new arrangements in great haste. This development was not to Dale's liking. His task had not seemed so difficult as long as he knew where the enemy could be reached. Now he would have to trace him to his new quarters.

Doctor Moffett had added elusiveness to his other formidable qualities. That would mean a new problem to solve the consequent delay.

In the midst of his reflections he found Ferryman regarding him with an intent puzzled expression.

"You are a bewildering person, Mr. Dale," he now murmured with a faint, uncertain smile. "I should distrust you, perhaps hate you, even abhor you as a murderer, but as I sit here looking at you I somehow can't feel that way toward you. Either I am a very poor judge of character, or else"—he paused, his eyelids drew together, a frown came—"I don't know," he finished lamely.

Dale laughed. "Afraid to trust your instincts Mr. Ferryman? Well, that's natural. I'll make you a promise. Inside of a few days—within a week at the most—the murderer of your wife will be brought to justice."

He rose, wondering if he had made too rash a promise. Ferryman rose also and followed his caller to the door. There, with still a trace of reluctance in his manner, he offered his hand. Dale shook it. He could see that, although he had not won the elder man's confidence, he had made a good impression.

Half an hour later he was again in a telephone booth.

"Yes, he called only a short while ago," Miss Castle told him. "He is going to telephone again at 9."

"Splendid!" Dale glanced across his shoulder through the glass panel in the door. A lanky person in a snappy gray suit was dawdling at the nearby counter. He lowered his voice. "I'll call at half-past 8, if I may. That will give us half an hour for deliberation."

"Oh, do come!" said Miss Castle eagerly. "I'll go mad unless I can talk to some one."

Dale strolled out into the sunshine again. For a while he amused himself by making divers short turns, doubling back on his course occasionally, dipping into subway entrances and out again, and after an hour of such maneuvers the lanky person in gray was no longer in sight. He laughed at his successful dodge, stopped at an exclusive shop window to inspect a display of neckwear, and in a moment he grew conscious of some one's furtive and deliberate scrutiny.

"Another," he mumbled. "Well, well!"

He turned away and leisurely sauntered down the street, pausing shortly before another shop window. This one had mirrors at three sides, and in one of them he saw a tall, loose-jointed, stylishly garbed person who shortened his steps as Dale stopped.

"Paul Ainsworth, alias Doctor Moffett," he mused. He fingered his jaw and smiled wryly at a recollection. Then he swung round suddenly.

"Oh, hello, Ainsworth!" he exclaimed. "This is luck. I was just longing for the sight of a familiar face. Shall we stroll along?"

"As you please," said Ainsworth with a shrug. His sneering, insolent manner concealed whatever disappointment he might have felt at being thus openly accosted by the person he was shadowing. "Who is the lucky little charmer?"

"The—what?"

"You were looking at a display of sealskin coats in that window. When a man shows an interest in such things, it generally means that he is contemplating a present for his lady love."

"Not necessarily. He may only be wondering how such a coat would look in a green light."

Ainsworth chuckled unpleasantly. "I see the jaw looks natural again."

"Thanks to massage and cold applications," said Dale good-naturedly, glancing at Ainsworth's empty left sleeve. "Shall we turn this way?"

They swung into a side street where the late afternoon traffic was not quite so thick.

"By the way, Ainsworth, where did you learn the art of shadowing?"

The other started uncomfortably. For the moment his supercilious manner was gone. His discomfiture did not last long, however.

"Oh, one learns all sort of things in the course of a busy life."

"Yes, but it's rarely one learns them thoroughly. Let me give you a tip, Ainsworth. When you are shadowing a man and he leads you into a quite side street where there is little traffic and only on occasional taxicab, then look out. Your quarry is going to give you the marry he-ha."

A lone taxicab came cruising along the curb, and Dale hailed it. With a wave to Ainsworth he jumped inside. The cab glided away, turned the corner, and was soon lost among thousands of its kind. Dale leaned back comfortable and lighted a cigar. He had had nothing to fear from Ainsworth's surveillance, but the little episode pleased him.

Soon, however, his face sobered. Ainsworth, with his dual role, was a greater problem than he had ever attacked. Somehow Miss Castle must be informed, but Dale did not relish the part of informer. If only there could be some sort of automatic adjustment, if only Fate would straighten out her own stupid tangles!

After half an hour's aimless roving he dismissed the taxi and dined at a hotel. He lingered over his after-dinner cigar and coffee, then took a walk. At precisely half-past 8 o'clock a servant ushered him into the Castle drawing room.

Adele was there waiting for him. She was in a simple evening gown that yet gave an individual charm to her dark beauty. She looked up at him with a vague smile and gave him her hand.

"Are we alone?" Dale asked, glancing about the stately room.

"Yes, father is still at the office. I have left instructions that I am not at home to any one, but am to be called if I should be wanted on the telephone. Oh, by the way, did you see that horrid editorial in the Sentinel?"

"No. What's the yellow rag howling about now?"

"About the mysterious Mr. Graves. It says he must be exposed and punished in justice to the thousands of poor people he has swindled out of their pitiful savings." Her face flushed. "It says the failure of the police to apprehend him amounts to a public disgrace. It isn't fair! It's cruel! Poor father! He is working day and night so he can make restitution."

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, July 2.—One of the literary lions of the moment is Commander Edward Ellsberg, U. S. N., retired, who was in charge of salvaging the submarine S-51, whose sinking off Block Island was the first of the two major disasters in recent submarine history. The commander's book, "On the Bottom," which tells the thrilling history of that salvage work, has been a best seller.

It is a well written book. More than once I have heard the remark, "Ellsberg must have had a ghost-writer." But I don't have to have his publishers' assurance to know that he wrote it himself.

A Quiet Worker

I first saw Ellsberg when they brought the S-51 to the Brooklyn navy yard. They had almost got it there, when it went aground in East river. All one sweltering afternoon and until sunset I sat on the shadeless deck of the repair ship Vestal and watched Ellsberg get the submarine off Man of War rock. What a complicated business it was, with all the air lines and pontoon valves and big derricks to operate! And how quietly and efficiently he directed it.

The next day I saw the S-51 drydocked; saw the huge hole the City of Rome had rammed in its side. And the day following, after the bodies had been taken out, Ellsberg took me through the wreck. It was an eerie experience. It was dark, moist and hot, and there was a choking smell of chlorine from the batteries. Later I attended the board of inquiry hearings, and heard Ellsberg tell how he had accomplished the job. I marvelled then at how well he could express himself. A thorough technician, he yet had the faculty of making things understandable to the layman. So I know that he wrote "On the Bottom," without the aid of a ghost-writer.

Coincidence

The commander is a demon for detail. When the book went to press, he was on hand to see that everything was just so. The cover, he decided, should be navy blue. The book is dedicated to the men of the navy. So he looked over the publishers' samples of cover cloth, and made a choice. The catalog number of the cloth was S-51.

Toilets' Food

There's a pet shop under the elevated on lower Sixth avenue that displays a huge sign across the show window: "Toilets, 25 cents." Which reminds me of a young man about town whose wife has gone to the country, leaving him the duty of feeding the household pets. Two canaries and a toilet. The other night the young man dined well, and drank part of his dinner. All pleasantly jungles, he went home and fed the pets. He opened a can of white ants' eggs, which are toilets' favorite food, and four or five new-born ants flew out. They went, he assured me, far more terrifying than pink elephants. His wife doesn't like them, either, for tropical white ants eat wood, and she is afraid they may set up housekeeping in the piano.

A New Organ

Reports that Carnegie Hall is to be demolished now appear to be unfounded. The city's most famous temple of the concert is to have a huge new organ, to be known as the Andrew Carnegie Memorial organ. The instrument has been designed by Pietro Yon and Alfred G. Kilgen, and will be dedicated Sept. 30. It will require 12 freight cars to carry the organ parts to New York from the factory.

About Lindy

Most New York newspaper reporters have become decidedly unfriendly toward Charles Augustus Lindbergh. The colonel, they say, has been avoiding them. They resented the incident in Washington when he landed on a muddy field, saw a delegation of interviewers approaching his plane, and speeded up his propeller. The gust of wind blew muddy water all over the gentlemen of the press. Lindy, the reporters feel, has gone completely high-hat. But I know that he hasn't. I first met him some 30 seconds after he landed at Curtiss field on his way from St. Louis to Paris. He was as wary of reporters then as he is now—proof enough that fame has not turned his head.

Just a Babe

Lindbergh was born with a sense of dignity, and he will not do anything resembling a press stunt. One reporter spent several of those first days at Curtiss field trying to get the flier to write an autograph message for the readers of his paper. Lindbergh finally gave in, but insisted that the message itself be typed and only the signature be written by him. He dictated a very dignified message and told the reporter to type it. But the reporter wanted everything in long-hand, so he purposely garbled the message and then gave it to Lindy to sign.

"That isn't what I wanted," said America's favorite aviator somewhat impatiently. "Here, type this." And he wrote another careful message on a scrap of paper. The reporter typed it, and Lindbergh signed it—but it was an easy matter to cut the signature off the typed note and paste it under Lindbergh's long-hand original. Thus came into being the only autograph concerning the Paris flight that the colonel wrote previous to his hop.

How Gall-Stones Form

The formation of gall-stones inside of the gall bladder seems to be brought on by a sluggish condition of the gall bladder caused either by catarrh or a lack of exercise. Three-fourths of all cases occur in women, and most frequently after 30 years of age. It has been estimated that 25 per cent of all women over 60 years of age have gall-stones. Overeating and improper elimination are undoubtedly important causes.

The gall bladder acts as a storage vessel to hold the bile formed by the liver until needed for digestion when it should be discharged by the gall bladder. Naturally, when there is a sluggish condition, or when the bile becomes thickened, it is more likely that the stones will form. Sometimes the gall-stones are single, but they may become very numerous or large in size.

There are two principal types of gall-stones, one which consists of more cholestral bile pigment and the other consisting principally of lime and magnesium salts.

The gall bladder seems to be able to hold some of these stones without special symptoms other than attacks of inflammation and a slight yellowness of the skin. The patients never appear perfectly healthy, however, and usually have a feeling of fullness or oppression in the stomach or right side. They may not even realize that they have any trouble until a gall-stone tries to pass through the gall duct, when a sudden pain will occur, so severe as to double them up. They often believe that something they have just eaten causes the attack of colic.

Many cases of urticaria or nettle rash, accompanied by indigestion, are really caused by gall-stones.

The patients sometimes recover from an attack after a few days and do not notice more symptoms for several months until another attack occurs.

It is possible, of course, in passing gall-stones, for ulceration or perforation into the peritoneum to occur which may be very dangerous and perhaps produce death. During an attack, the patient often rolls about in agony, vomiting and sweating profusely. There is generally a marked tenderness in the region of the liver, and the gall bladder may become so enlarged as to be felt. Jaundice usually occurs, but not always.

It is possible for the gall bladder to become so greatly enlarged as to be thought a tumor. An X-ray study is of value, but the stones made of cholesterol do not show in the X-ray plates. It is sometimes difficult to determine whether the attack is caused by catarrh or stones. As a general rule, these conditions can be cleared up without an operation, but there a few cases where the stones have become very large or where the gall bladder has become very much distended, in which an operation seems a good recourse. I have, however, seen numerous gall-stones passed by a fasting and dieting regime accompanied by hot applications over the gall bladder area. With a series of X-ray pictures, it is sometimes possible to observe the gall-stones dissolving while still in the gall bladder. This is probably because the bile becomes thinner and more solvent under a fasting regime.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Ludwig's Angina

Question—S. P. writes: "My boy has Ludwig's Angina. What do you advise for this condition?"

Answer—Your son's condition is too serious for me to advise you about a treatment through this column, but as you did not send your name and address I cannot reach you in any other way. Most of these cases are curable, and the most rapid results take place under a fasting treatment. The best way is to take the orange fast in the way I recommend it so much in this column.

Edible Tubers

Question—Mrs. R. I. L. writes: "In taking up an ornamental grapevine, I found many large tubers, some of them weighing as much as four pounds, the inside of them looking very much like the meat of coconuts. Would like to inquire if they are edible."

I have no way of knowing the name of the tubers you write about. I would advise you to take them to a seed man or nursery man who will no doubt be able to tell you what they are, and whether or not they are edible.

Reducing Blood Pressure

Question—L. E. asks: "What is the physiological and chemical reaction on the system when taking orange juice for the reduction of blood pressure? Two days after the commencement of a five-day fast a well marked reduction is noticeable.

Answer — The most effective means of restoring the blood pressure to normal is through fasting and dieting. The quantity of blood is decreased and its quality improved. Those with tense nerves relax more easily and where calcification of the arteries exists, a marked change takes place in the loss of some of this calcium. This makes the arteries more elastic and in this way lessens the blood pressure.

Lew Wentz Finishes Three Months Trial

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 1. (UP)—Lew H. Wentz, chairman of the state highway commission, today had finished his three months "trial" of the highway job and as he refused to comment on the question it was understood he will remain for the time being at least as a member of the commission.

At the time Wentz was appointed he told Governor Holloway that he would try the job for three months and see whether it interferred too much with his private business.

Two Men Killed When Train Hits Automobile

KINGMAN, Kan., July 1. (UP)—Two men are dead today and one is in a hospital here as a result of a Missouri Pacific train hitting their car at a grade crossing near here yesterday. Wilbur Wagner, 21, and Walter Wagner, 20, cousins, were killed. Thalle Green was injured but is epected to recover.

Men More Practical

"Men are more practical-minded, and do not seem to want serious plays. Of course, this comment does not apply to the professional or artistic-minded man."

"Will you travel by airplane at all on your tour?"

"I have been up in airplanes several times but I am not exactly air-minded," she answered. "You see, I am the mother of children and my theater company also needs me—so I have to be careful."

SCHOOL OFFICIAL DIES

EXPORTERS BEST SPUDDERS IN ANOTHER HITFEST, 9 TO 6

VICTORY GIVES SERIES TO FOE

Turgeon, Fitz, Hermann and Kelly Clout Homers

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Ball clubs can't win pennants by losing to second division teams. And they can't beat second division nines, which after all are about as tough as any of them, without pitching. The Spudders again had no chucking yesterday and for the second consecutive series here Beaumont left town last night with two wins in the three contests.

The Exporters won the rubber game yesterday, 9 to 6, in another free-hitting affair in which the hostiles came from behind to overcome a three-run Spudder lead. The game yesterday was curtailed to seven innings to permit the Spudders to catch a train.

O'Neal Again Hit Hard

Skinny O'Neal, making his second start for the Spudders, was hammered off the hill as in his previous appearance with the homelings. O'Neal gave up 10 hits and nine runs when he was relieved by Bill Goff in the fifth inning with one out. The other tally and three more hits were made off Goff. O'Neal was charged with the loss of the pastime.

Wichita Falls pounded Newman hard and Walter finally was replaced by Grimm, the stocky right-hander. Grimm halted the Spudders in the sixth with two on bases and none out and prevented scoring the rest of the way.

Hermann Has Big Day

Kelly, Turgeon, Fitzgerald and Hermann clouted home runs, the second in two days for all except the latter. Kelly also biffed a pair of singles. He drove home two comrades with his circuit blow.

Hermann also hit his homer with two men on the base lines and singled to share Spudder honors with Fitzgerald and Crouch, who smashed a triple and single. Petrie Lamb and Davey, the latter the new Beaumont catcher from Toronto of the International league, were other leading batters.

Hermann featured with some excellent fielding and Duke had quite a day to indicate he has shaken off the slump that attacked him soon after joining the Spudders recently.

Both Score in First

Swanson started the pastime with a double but was left on base and the Spudders also failed to tally in the first, though they had hits by Fitzgerald and Bennett and a base on balls to Benton.

Both clubs tallied in the second. Akers walked after one was out, moved to second on Petrie's hit through third and tallied on Davey's single to left. Hermann started a fast double play that possibly prevented further scoring.

Hermann led off the Spudder half with a single to center and scored on Crouch's triple to far center.

Lamb doubled and rode home on Kelly's home run over the left field wall in the third.

Spuds Clout Three Homers

The Spudders got into the home run parade in their third, three circuit drives scoring five runs. Turgeon and Fitzgerald led off with homers. Bennett walked and advanced to third on Stapleton's two-base hit. Hermann drove his comrades home with his Ruthian smack. All home runs were clouted over the left field barrier. Sullivan beat out a hit to Akers but Lamb made a diving snatch of Crouch's drive and doubled Dick at first.

Beaumont scored three in the fourth to tie it at 6-all, after two were out. Akers walked, Newman got an infield hit and Swanson strolled, filling the bases. Lamb singled to right, his second hit, scoring Akers and Newman and sending Swanson to third. Swanson and Lamb worked a double steal, Swanson scoring.

Fitzgerald walked and stole second but was left there.

Benton made a barehand grab of Kelly's sharp bounder to hold it to a one-base hit to start the fifth. Kelly went to second on a passed ball and to third on Akers' single to left. Kelly scored and Akers took second on a double steal. Petrie doubled to left, tallying Akers. Goff replaced O'Neal. Davey hit to right and went to second on a wild pitch but was trapped, Goff to Turgeon. Stapleton smothered Newman's liner. The Exporters led, 9 to 6.

The Spudders went out in order.

Grimm Halts Spuds

Philbin walked with two out in the sixth. Kelly slashed his third hit, a single to left, and Philbin was out at the plate on Bennett's throw to Crouch.

Goff singled and Benton walked so Robbie called Grimm to take up the mound burden. Which he did. And very well. Turgeon struck out. Fitz hoisted to Easterling. Philbin fumbled Bennett's bounder, filling the bases. Lamb came in for Stapleton's lift.

Petrie whaled his second double and third hit in the seventh but two were out and Hermann threw out Davey.

Sullivan walked after one was out and went to third on Crouch's hit to right but Lapan, batting for Goff hit into a double play, Akers to Kelly.

The Spudders play at Shreveport today and tomorrow and a double header Thursday at Fort Worth and return home Friday.

Chuck Bennett Missing In New West Point Class

WEST POINT, N. Y., July 1. (AP)—When military academy authorities checked over the list of some 400 newcomers to West Point today they found no trace of "Chuck" Bennett, University of Indiana halfback and All-Western conference star, whose candidacy for entry here attracted attention last fall.

Bennett, after closing his career at Indiana by being officially recognized as the most valuable player to any Big Ten eleven, was named for appointment to West Point as an alternate, but evidently changed his plans.

NEW YORK, July 1. (UP)—Harry Blitman, Philadelphia featherweight, was forced to withdraw today from his bout with Pete Nebo, Seminole Indian, at the Queensboro stadium Tuesday, because of injuries received in training. Jackie Cohen will substitute for Blitman against Nebo

Pitches With Head and Arm

Eight straight victories before he was beaten were scored by George Payne, Spudder right-hander. Lots of stuff on the ball and the ability to use his head to think with make Payne one of the leading hurlers in the Texas league.

LOTT DEFEATED AT WIMBLEDON

Borotra Eliminates American in Three Sets

By HENRY CAVENDISH

WIMBLEDON, England, July 1. (US)—The gray clouds that hung over Wimbledon today gave the world's foremost tennis championships a touch of bleak December weather, and seemed to mourn the absence of King George, who has been such a familiar figure in the royal box. The king, however, returned from Windsor to London today to be acclaimed by thousands.

There were other mourners, too—the American colony in the Wimbledon stands. They mourned the passing of George Lott, Chicago wonder and youthful Davis cup star. Lott went downe to defeat before the masterful volleying of Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, to the tune of 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Helen Easily Wins

At the same time, Helen Wills went merrily on her way to enter the semi-finals in defense of her title, and Helen Jacobs, America's only other girl to survive the tense quarter-final round, made her way into the lower bracket.

Tilden, by virtue of his victory over Pierre Landry, of France, remained the only American in the men's singles semi-finals.

Tilden slowed up a bit today, and seemed tired after his strenuous campaign. His shots were not as accurate as usual, and he was not the same man who five years ago would have trounced Landry in love-sets. Nevertheless, there is the chance he may wend his way into the finals, but he'll have to subdue Henri Cochet to get there.

Borotra Meets Austin

Borotra will play J. C. W. "Bunny" Austin, England's flash—and the experts believe the men's final will be all-French and the womens all-American.

The best tennis of the meeting was provided by the match in which California's Helen defeated Miss Bobbie Jelnie, 6-2, 6-4. It was a battle from the start, and at 4-all in the second set, it seemed Bobbie was about to extend Helen to extra games.

Shreveport Rakes Messenger for 15 Blows

SHREVEPORT, July 1. (AP)—The Sports made a clean sweep of their series with the San Antonio Indians today. They bunched hits off Messenger to score 10 runs while Tiny Owens was holding the visitors to three. At times the Texans gave Messenger ragged support, making five miscues behind him. Score:

STEERS TROUNCE CUBS

DALLAS, July 1. (AP)—Every man on the Dallas team hit safely at least once today and scored as the Steers made it two straight from Waco, 17 to 4. Si Rosenthal, Dallas gardener, continued his sensational hitting streak with three singles in four trips.

By winning the Mavericks maintained their one-game lead. Score:

International Race May Be Run in U. S.

NEW YORK, July 1. (UP)—Reigh Count, 1928 Kentucky derby winner, and Inversnin, the 7-year-old English horse which beat the American colt by two lengths in the Ascot gold cup race at Ascot, Eng., June 20, may meet in an international race at Arlington Park, Chicago, if the plans of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz are realized.

Mr. and Mrs. Hertz, owners of Reigh Count, said on their return from Europe yesterday that they are eager to have Reigh Count meet Inversnin in a match race next year.

Whether the race is run is up to Reid Walker, owner of Inversnin, but with a likely purse of $100,000 offered by the American National Jockey club for such a race, the English owner is certain to give the match serious consideration.

If the owner of the British horse agrees, it will be the third invasion in recent years of a foreign thoroughbred. Papyrus, Epsom derby winner, invaded this country in 1923 for a match race with Zev, then 3-year American turf king, and was beaten at Belmont Park.

In 1924 Epinard, hailed as French champion, came here for a series of international races and was beaten three times by Wise Counsellor, Ladkin and Sarazen.

YANKS SHADE RED SOX, 3-2

Paschal's Homer With One On Lets Champs Cop

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—The pinch hitting prowess of Ben Paschal enabled the Yankees to nose out the Boston Red Sox today, 3 to 2.

Paschal was sent in to hit for Pennock in the seventh inning, after Koenig had doubled, and came through with a home run into the left field stands that spelled victory. Score:

Tennis Courts Free In Playoff of City Tourney

No charge for the use of the tennis courts at the Municipal Golf club will be made during the playoff of the city tennis tournament, it was announced Monday by C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent. The usual fee for the courts is 25 cents.

The courts now under construction at the Junior college will be open to the public within the next week, it was said. These courts will be used in the state-wide tournament under the direction of the Amateur Athletic federation late in July, and every effort has been made to provide the most excellent type of court, Mr. Bunnenberg said.

TEXAS MOGULS CONFER TODAY

Important Matters to Be Settled at Dallas

DALLAS, July 1. (AP)—Texas league officials will meet in executive session here tomorrow to thresh out various phases of the 1929 campaign, including, possibly, the split season.

Although the eight clubs presidents have been polled frequently the last two weeks on their reactions to a divided schedule, and almost all have said they were against it, there is no one who can say what they will do when they meet tomorrow. The consensus is, however, that there will be no split.

There will be no reporters at the session, thus making it possible for the magnates to speak freely. In all probability there will be no announcement of how the owners voted on the split.

The question of a possible successor to President J. Doak Roberts is expected to be brought up. The veteran prexy has been ill since the present season opened and doubt has been expressed that he ever will be able to take active charge of the league again. For sentimental reasons, though, baseball men doubt the clubs owners will vote to oust Roberts. He has been in there too many years.

Poisoning of 37 Blamed On Cake Eaten at Wedding

BROOKFIELD, Ill., July 1. (UP)—Thirty-seven persons who partook of the wedding cake at the marriage of Louis Assaro and Edith Comara were confined to bed today by food poisoning.

The home of the bridegroom's father, where the wedding and the feat were held, was transformed into a hospital, to accommodate the stricken newlyweds, families and guests. Nine children were among those affected by the poisoning.

Four physicians were in attendance. Immediate administration of emetics prevented possible deaths, doctors said.

Physicians and health authorities learned the 10-pound wedding cake had been prepared by a bakery. Crumbs of the cake's colored frosting were collected for analysis.

SCHMELING REGARDED AS FOREMOST HEAVYWEIGHT CONTENDER

SHARKEY NEXT FOE FOR MAX

German Impresses in Decisive Win Over Paulino

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright 1929 by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, July 1.—M. Georges Carpentier, the Lily of France, changed his mind on Herr Max Schmeling last Thursday night in about two shakes of a rhinosceros' tail. M. Georges Carpentier, himself quite a slicker in the days of his pugilistic pussiance, now says Herr Max is nobody's noddy, although about two weeks ago, M. Georges thought Her Max very much Leiderkranz, indeed.

That was when M. Georges Carpentier and this affiant went to Lakewood to glare at the Black Uhlan of the Rhine in training. I have witnessed many a sad spectacle in a gymnasium, but Herr Max was the saddest. I was well nigh moved to tears. As for M. Georges, he faced the inquiring reporters with a bewildered expression, and asked:

"Do you want that I shall say something nice, or do you want that I shall tell the truth?"

In the end he said something that was about 50-50, but en route homeward he remarked to me:

"Damon, the man is bad. No?"

Well, the Black Uhlan certainly was bad that day, although his cheering section said it was the worst day he had in training, and subsequent events indicated that this statement might be true.

Georges Is Surprised

The morning after the fight M. Georges Carpentier said of Herr Max:

"He was a revelation to me. I had no idea he is as good as he showed himself against Paulino. He is an exceptionally smart fighter.

"His opening move demonstrated that he can think. I am told that he does most of his own planning rather than taking corner advice, and if that is true, he is indeed a heady fellow. He walked right into Paulino and stuck in close to him, beating the Basque at his own game. He made no mistakes. He is a very, very good fighter."

And, oddly enough, some of the lookouts Thursday night think Herr Max suggests M. Georges in fighting style, but I doubt if the Black Uhlan is as fast as was the Lily of France.

Her Max is dropping that slow motion weave that he displayed so frequently in his early fights in this country, and which is vaguely reminiscent of Jack Dempsey's style. In fact, Herr Max admitted he adopted it after seeing the Manassa man mauler in the movies.

With Her Max it is just a weave, while Dempsey used it to mask punches, and to get a leverage to his left hook. He punched from the weave, whereas Herr Max just weaves and weaves. When Herr Max punches he has to straighten up, so the weaving isn't worth a nickel to him. I noticed he didn't do so much weaving against the Old Beesark of the Basque, and eventualy Herr Max will be boxing straight up, for that is his natural style.

He is the first heavyweight we have had around for quite a spell who has two good hands. Dempsey at his best was mainly a left hooker. His right wasn't so devastating, for all it was called "irne mike." His left hook did all the damage.

Mr. James J. Tunney, formerly Gene, had a good left hand. His right was only so-so, and he confined the use of it largely to driving for an opponent's heart. His left was his best duke—a snappy, cutting left, used as a spear more than as a hook.

Sharkey One-Hander

Louie Angel Firpo, the celebrated wild bull of the Pampas, wouldn't have been greatly inconvenienced in his battles if he had checked his left hand at the gate. Tom Gibbons, of St. Paul, was a left hand poker. His left to the kidneys was his Sunday punch, as the boys say. M. Georges Carpentier's best chuck was his right hand. He hit Tommy Loughran with a left hand one night that astounded Thomas, and everybody else, who had never heard of a left hand on M. Georges before.

But the Black Uhlan already has a damaging jab behind his left hand, while his right is dynamite. I predict that Herr Max will eventually display one of the best left hands the dear old manly art has ever known.

Studying him at close range, I would say that he hasn't any of the personality of Dempsey, or M. Georges, but as Mr. Pat Frayne, the San Francisco scribe observes, very few young men of 23 have developed much personality. Dempsey himself, Mr. Frayne argues, didn't have a lot of personality at that age.

Max Is Precise

Herr Max in the ring has far more precision that Dempsey, or any other heavyweight of recent years. I do not bar Mr. Tunney, whose precision was tinctured with much caution, where Herr Max uses precision not for protection so much as to get in where he can use that deadly right.

For his next opponent, Herr Max himself says he would like the terrible Sharkey man, because Sharkey stands up straight, and Herr Max figures he would get a good crack at the Sharkey chin. The lookouts are almost unanimous in the opinion that Herr Max would stiffen the terrible Sharkey man in what you might call jig time, which is very fast time, indeed.

I never saw a cooler man in the ring than the Black Uhlan. Cool, and patient. And precise. Of course we have yet to see him tagged on the chin by a right good tagger. We have yet to see him on the floor listening to the doleful dirge from the timekeeper's hammer. And until we have thus seen him, we must reserve final judgment on his ability.

But he looks mighty good.

Unique Racing Plant to Open

Chicago Social and Financial Leaders Back Track

By BERT DEMBY

CHICAGO, July 1. (UP)—Chicago's social and financial leaders tomorrow embark on a horse racing venture, unique in the Middle West in that it means operation of a $3,000,000 plant on a non-profit basis and with the sole aim of improving racing in view.

The plant is the result of acquisition of the Arlington park racetrack, the most spacious in the country, by a group of civic, social, financial and industrial leaders which includes the most important names in the city.

1,200 Stalls Occupied

So wholeheartedly have horsemen responded to the offers of big stakes and good purses that every one of the 1,200 stalls has been reserved and more than 800 applications refused.

Headlined by the $50,000 American classic, to be run July 13, the list of stake races includes 11 events which have purses of $5,000 or more. Besides the classic they are the American national handicap, July 1, $7,500; Stars and Stripes handicap, July 4, $15,000; Post and Paddock, July 6, $10,000; Cherry circle, July 10, $5,000; Lassie stakes, July 13, $15,000; Arlington handicap, July 20, $20,000; Hyde Park stakes, July 24, $5,000; North Shore handicap, July 27, $7,500; Midsummer Claiming stakes, July 31, $5,000; City and Suburban handicap, Aug. 2, $7,500.

The classic is expected to draw all the great three-year-olds of the country and plans are to continue it annually as one of the leading stake events of the years.

Leading Stables Entered

The list of owners who have nominated horses for the meet includes all of the prominent of the East; and practically every leader in Kentucky, the Middle West and far West.

The capacity of the plant, combined with the color surrounding the present meeting, is expected to result in financial success, but all profits will be turned back into the grounds with a view to "making Arlington occupy the same position in America which Royal Ascot and Epsom Downs held in England.

Vice President Charles Curtis will attend the opening program tomorrow as a guest of Albert D. Lasker, member of the Arlington board of directors, Managing Director Carruthers of the track announced.

OFFICIAL GRID GUIDE IS ISSUED

Code Book Published Early To Benefit Coaches

NEW YORK, July 1. (UP)—The official football guide, edited by E. K. Hall, chairman of the football rules committee, made its appearance today several months in advance of the 1929 playing season. Publication at the earlier date was decided on to permit the coaches in schools throughout the country to have the amended code available for their use and allow players more time to familiarize themselves with the new rules.

The most important change in the rules concerns a ball which has been muffed or fumbled and then recovered by the opponents after striking the ground. Under the new rules the ball may not be advanced, but is dead at point of recovery.

Another important change concerns the try-for-point after touchdown which will be made from the two-yard line this year instead of from the three-yard line.

Another change has to do with the "screened-pass" and regulates the movements beyond the line of scrimmage of players who are ineligible to receive the pass.

Flier to Attempt Hop From Brownsville

MARSHALL, Mo., July 1. (AP)—Barney Zimmerman, Marshall flier, today took off for Brownsville, Texas, where he expects to begin an attempted nonstop flight to Winnipeg, Canada, probably Wednesday.

He left here at 10:30 a. m. and expected to stop at Dallas and San Antonio, Texas, en route, arriving at Brownsville tomorrow morning.

WIN NET TITLE

HAVERFORD, Pa., July 1. (AP)—Benjamin Gorchakoff and Arthur Kussman, Occidental college, today won the intercollegiate tennis doubles championship by defeating Gregory Mangin and Emmett Pare, Georgetown, in the final round, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

The SPORTLIGHT

By GRANTLAND RICE

POUGHKEEPSIE, 1929

There's gold upon the Hudson underneath Poughkeepsie Bridge,
The varnished shells are creeping to their lanes;
Four miles of open water . . . heart and muscle slaughter,
To the music of the observation trains.

There's a motion of a finger and the starter's gun has spoken,
Eight blades answer . . . flashes in the sun;
Coxswain's voice bellows and your struggling with your fellows,
Nineteen minutes' torture till your done.

Eight backs bending as the stroke oar beckons,
Catch the silver, mix it with gold;
Keep the beat a-goin, and it's rowing . . . rowing . . . rowing,
Listen to the numbers and be bold.

Your heart cries for mercy and your back is breaking,
Think of them before you and . . . noblesse oblige;
Now's the time for striving . . . keep-a-driving . . . driving . . . driving,
The first mile is over, if you please.

The sweat will nearly blind you, arms like leaden furies,
The fiend at the tiller lashes you ahead;
If the other ones can do it, your heart will see you through it,
Does it matter if your lips run red?

The beat goes higher and somehow your arms have answered,
A little more than muscle is pulling you along;
Your fingers ache and crackle, but the job is there to tackle,
To the rhythm of the coxswain's song.

Beyond man's comprehension is the spirit that inspires you,
Painful stabbing moments . . . now you're through . . .
And the victory of rowing comes with that honest knowing
That your blade was worthy of the crew.

There's gold upon the Hudson underneath Poughkeepsie Bridge,
Splash your face and breathe the misted air;
You're a fighter to the core and you pulled a worthy oar—
Salutations, sailor . . . you are there!
ROBERT NORMILE ROSE.

The Duffer After the Open

I saw it with my open eyes,
Yes, I was there to pipe the fun,
Their smashing irons from divot lies,
Their mighty blows against the skies,
I saw it with my open eyes,
And still I say it can't be done.

I followed Hagen, Jones and Smith,
From tee shots to the pitch and run,
I saw the clubs they hit 'em with,
I knew their scores were not a myth,
I followed Hagen, Jones and Smith,
And still I say it can't be done.

Making it Look Easy

One of the chief general comments you hear after any open golf championship is this: "They make it look too easy. And it isn't that easy."

Good golf is usually easy. Or easy golf is usually good. Bad golf is hard work. Form might be described as the easiest way to do a thing and get results. The duffer's golf is usually bad because there is entirely too much effort in everything he does. He grips too tightly. His body is over-tensioned. He tries to dig his feet into the ground. His neck is stiff. There is no flexibility to his wrists. He thinks in terms of effort and not in terms of ease.

The good golfer's play looks easy because he is much better balanced than the average golfer ever is. He knows how to let his weight move with the swing. He swings with his weight—not against it.

The good golfer's play looks easy because he knows how to use his hands and wrists without calling on his body too much—because he swings the clubhead without violent body and shoulder lurchings.

The clubhead only weighs a few ounces, so it doesn't have to be handled like a piano or even a 16-pound hammer.

Easy looking golf is the only type of golf that will get results. Walking would be hard if one walked stiff-legged and refused to let the body work in harmony with the legs.

It is over-effort that wrecks most golf strokes. As suggested before—watch almost any duffer flick a dandelion head. Then watch him hit a golf ball. The two swings are totally different.

Advance Tip to the Army

Dear Sir: Bob Zuppke will have 20 letter men back in harness when football is resumed at Illinois in September. A good nucleus for the powerful team that will be needed to ride through the schedule George Huff has built for the Illini.

Among the veterans Zuppke will have are Crane and Wietz, guards; Gordon and Burdick, tackles; Jolly, an end, and Timm, Mills, Humbert, Walker and Peters, backs. Frank Lanum, who won a letter in 1926 at quarterback, also will return. He is an exceptional punter and passes and strong in backing up the line. Zuppke will have 65 in his first squad and Mike Tobin relates the material coming up from the freshman team is very good.

—F. J. P.

Why Mr. Mack Is Leading

Dear Sir: Three of the five leading batters in the American league are Athletics; one of the leading runners is a Mackman and three of the top pitchers draw their pay at Shibe park. There is the answer to why the Athletics are making a race track of the American league.

The Athletics finally have gained confidence. Connie Mack declares they would have won in 1928 had they possessed the same confidence they have now. Watch the Mackmen at the plate. All of them grip the bat down at the end and wade into the ball like every team was a bush league outfit.

They hit everything; field well and have good pitching. It looks as if Connie were nearing the goal he has sought since 1914.

—RANDOLPH.

The Greatest College Sport

The crew doesn't draw the ballyhoo and the hullabaloo that a university football team picks up, but crew racing comes fairly close to being the greatest college sport.

From the amateur viewpoint it has no equal. You never heard of a crack oarsman figuring in a proselyting case. Eager alumni are not out on the trail of star young oarsmen, as they often are after crack young football players. There has been no whisper of professionalism in connection with any prominent oarsman. They have not been forced to give up their college sport because some professional organization lured them away.

A four-mile race calls for more stamina, for better physical condition and fore more team play than a big football game demands. For these and other reasons, Columbia university deserves its full share of applause for one of the greatest rowing seasons any college has yet known, practically on a par with the Yale crew of 1924 and the California crew of 1928.

Young Dick Glendon's three-year record at California, from 1927 through 1929, has been one of the star features of rowing history. He has had fine captains and material that had both the power and the courage to round out three exceptional years and thereby bring the Blue and White to the highest point it has ever known upon the water.

Before long it will be a big news event when some outfielder catches a fly ball—a fly ball that happened to start its descent in the confines of the ball field.

Jones Is Called Greatest Golfer

Bobby Lauded in Receiving Open Trophy

WINGED FOOT GOLF CLUB, Mamaroneck, N. Y., July 1. (UP)—Bobby Jones is the "greatest golfer that ever lived," he was told yesterday when Findlay Douglas, president of the United States Golf association, presented him the large cup symbolic of the national open title.

"One would think," Douglas said, "from having read Mr. Jones' name in the paper so many times that he is a very old man. But Mr. Jones is a very young man. But I might say that I believe that there never was a more ideal sportsman than Mr. Jones."

Bobby himself drew a big cheer and after chiding Douglas for "making a speech at me" said that the past week has been a most happy one.

Douglas then referred to Al Espinosa and said that the pro was "up against unbeatable golf today." He said that Espinosa's game was not the sort of which Al is capable.

Fairmount Jockey Club Purchased by Syndicate

FAIRMOUNT PARK, Collinsville, Ill., July 1. (UP)—The Fairmont Jockey club was sold to a syndicate of New Orleans and Canadian horsemen at a meeting here today. The consideration was not announced but a previous report spoke of a down payment of $350,000.

Lyman T. Hay of St. Louis was reelected president of the club and T. D. Watkins vice presiden.

Robert S. Eddy Jr., of New Orleans, one of the purchasers, will take over the general management of the club July 10, from C. Bruce Head, present manager.

EASTER'S WELL SETS RECORD

It Marks Fourth Strike For Kelly Concern

Kork Kelly and associates, better known as the Easter Oil company, have probably established a record in Wilbarger county oil development by the bringing in of four successive wildcat wells on its various leases in that county.

The latest of these was completed Saturday when No. 1 W. T. Waggoner located in the northwest quarter of section 22, block 4, H. & T. C. R. R. survey, encountered a sand at 1916 feet and in the first three hours on the swab produced 120 barrels.

The well, which is in wildcat territory, being one and a quarter north of the Easter Oil production in section 39, block 4, Waggoner, and one and a quarter east of the Greyback pool, is in a section where dry holes abound in all directions from the producer. The sand was barely scratched and more sand will be drilled in the next day or so.

Women's Shoe Trade in Peril

Tariff Revisers Hear Manufacturers' Claims

WASHINGTON, July 1. (AP)—A wide variety of commodities ranging from shoes to cast iron pipe occupied three groups of senatorial tariff revisers today as they continued hearings on the house bill.

The metals and sundry sub-committees of the finance committee were in possession all day taking testimony of more than a score of manufacturers and importers. The silk group called a dozen witnesses to testify late in the day.

Raymond V. McNamara, Haverhill, Mass., shoe manufacturer, told the sundry sub-committee the women's shoe industry in this country would be obsolete in 10 years unless an adequate tariff were placed on foot wear, now on the free list. He said imports, largely from Czechoslovakia, were increasing at an alarming rate.

Regarding the Haverhill situation he declared factories were operating far below capacity, the population had fallen off 8,000 in eight years, 1,700 tenements were vacated 20 plants had been forced to liquidate last year, and 8,000 workers were now on strike for a 10 per cent wage increase and five day week.

McNamara told Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, that even with a tariff higher than the 20 per cent proposed in the house bill the manufacturers would be unable to meet the workers' demands because other factories, here and abroad, would be working longer hours and paying less wages.

Texas Committee Will Talk Sooner Boundary

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 1. (UP)—A committee from the Texas legislature will come to Oklahoma July 20 for another conference on the Texas-Oklahoma Western boundary dispute, the attorney general of Texas today notified V. P. Crowe assistant attorney general.

The Oklahoma legislature will adjourned before that time but provisions have been made for the joint senate and house committee to represent the legislature of conferences after final adjournment.

Arguments in Rate Equalization Case Start

AUSTIN, July 1. (AP)—Oral arguments in the Houston-Galveston rate equalization case were made before the railroad commission today. Commercial interests of Galveston and Texas City made application to have the same rates apply from these ports as apply from Houston to all points more than 100 miles distant.

A long hearing on the application was held last winter. The commission will take the case under advisement following argument.

ART METAL CONSTRUCTION COMPANY INC.

The Art Metal Construction Company, Inc., makes metal furniture, steel filing cabinets, bronze railings, grill work, interior equipment for banks and libraries and hollow metal doors and partitions. The company as at present constituted is a result of consolidations of firms in similar lines. It has four plants at Jamestown, N. Y., and has branch offices in 21 cities in the United States and one in London, England, as well as agents and dealers in other principal cities.

The volume of sales of the company increased in 1928 but profits were about 3 per cent less than in the previous year owing to competition and narrower profit margins. Net income in 1928 was $746,617 which compared with $769,941 in 1927 and $906,866 in 1926 which was the company's best year.

Funded debt consists of $81,000 in mortgage bonds on the New York office building. Capital stock outstanding consists of $3,205,700 in shares of $10 par value. Dividends have been paid with some lapses since 1913. The present rate is 37½ cents a share quarterly. On Jan. 10, 1929, an extra dividend of 50 cents a share was paid. In 1920 an extra stock dividend of 100 per cent was paid.

As of Jan. 1, 1929, total current assets were $4,811,623. Current liabilities amounted to $586,962 and net working capital was $4,224,661. Book value of the capital stock outstanding amounted to $19.41 a share excluding $484,076 for patents.

STAR OF STAGE GAINS POWER

Ethel Barrymore 'Fears' New Control

By DAVID P. SENTNER

(Copyt. 1929, International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 1.—A strange, supernatural power has been added within the past few months to the genius of Ethel Barrymore, high priestess of stagecraft.

Today she feels it and fears it.

Her recent theater audiences have been mass exhibits of the weird phenomenon. Under the new and old Barrymore spell, they sit like so many sphinxes with 10,000 ears. They forget to move, to cough, listening with all their hearts.

It's in Her Heart

"I have noted the difference in the past few months," said Miss Barrymore. "I have been able to hold them tighter than ever. Something in here makes me do it." She pressed her heart, "I believe it is a psychic force that has visited me recently. And I am afraid of it."

I told her of a rare manifestation of mass psychology I had seen with my own eyes at one of her performances of "The Kingdom of God."

At the height of her drama, chunks of plaster from the balcony frieze rained down on those below in the orchestra. Yet nobody stirred. The accident was ignored for the intensity of the Barrymore performance.

"It was a great tribute to a great actress," I said with no flattery aforethought.

Those remarkable eyes of Miss Barrymore were veritably shining like two liquid stars.

"It is strange how I can hold them," she said. "Yes, it is psychic. I have been able to divine certain things recently before they happen. I know it may sound silly but it is so. I often know when somebody is going to telephone me, for instance. I am very much afraid."

To Tour Nation

Miss Barrymore is leaving on July 4 for a transcontinental tour in which she will appear in "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel." She opens in Colorado Springs, Colo., next Monday. Her itinerary includes Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco, following which she will play through the Northwest. The remainder of her trip will probably carry her over into January.

Contrary to the average theatrical star, Miss Barrymore is looking forward to her tour.

"Out of town audiences," she declared, "New York is truly a hick town with so many of the men and women trying to appear blase. When I see some of the men down front at the theater wearing that mask of sophistication, I feel like shouting to them: 'Go and see your leg show, I do not want you.'

"In the cities beyond the Hudson, the people are starved for good drama—one plays to the extremes of the social scale, the cultured and the farmer. Both sit intense throughout the play. It is a joy to work for them."

Gangster Sheds Tears

She told of the gangster who held the hand of his sweetheart in the front row of a Detroit theater.

"In the big scene, this obvious member of the underworld let the tears run unashamed down his cheeks," said Miss Barrymore.

"And one of my company who has been with me since I made my debut at 13 overheard a tattered derelict coming out from one of my performances in Washington. He said: 'Jesus, I didn't know there was any good left in me.'

"When I can affect people like that, I feel very, very happy."

"Is there a difference in the reaction of men to plays compared to women?" I asked.

"Very much," she replied. "Women are undoubtedly the strongest element behind the theater. They influence the men in what play to see. Women are quick to respond to shades of feeling as portrayed on the stage.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—Favorable weather and crop reports combined with relatively easy Liverpool cables were reflected by liquidation together with considerable local and southern selling in cotton today. Prices made new low ground for the present movement, with October contracts selling off to 18.27 or 40 points below Saturday's closing quotation. The close was at the lowest, with the tone barely steady at net declines of 25 to 40 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 20 to 30 points in response to the easier cables and reports of favorable weather in the South over the weekend.

Four more of the private end-June crop reports were published and showed differences of opinion both as to acreage and condition.

A few July notices were reported early but at the close July was only 32 points under October compared with a difference of 47 points at the close Saturday.

Private cables reported London and continental liquidation in Liverpool.

Port receipts today 2,504. U. S. port stocks 778,183. Exports today 21,641, making 7,994,889 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 1. (AP)—Cotton eased off from $1.50 to $2 a bale today under extensive liquidation on the favorable weather and some long selling induced by the rise in call money to 15 per cent. October eased to 18.06 and closed at that figure for a net loss of 40 points. The general market closed easy at net declines of 35 to 40 points. There was an opening decline of 11 to 12 points here. Prices continued to ease after the start under selling on the favorable weather over the week-end and the forecast for more continued favorable conditions. October soon traded to 18.26, and December 18.44, or 20 points below Saturday's close.

After mid-session the market became decidedly easier under selling on the rise in call money to 15 per cent with the prediction that the rate would reach 17 per cent.

Four private estimates were issued with condition averages ranging from 69.4 to 75.0 per cent of normal and estimated acreage increase from 1.9 to 3.3 per cent.

Receipts 2,075, for week 4,099; for year 9,326,887, last year 8,464,475. Exports 7,013; for week 9,318; for year 7,713,650; last year 7,273,274. Stocks 780,093; last year 858,454. Stock on shipboard 58,586; last year 86,212. Spot sales 2,315; last year 7,081.

Westbrook Is Urged for Post

AUSTIN, July 1. (AP)—Governor Moody today received a communication signed by 40 members of the Grayson county bar association, urging the appointment of Senator Ed. Westbrook, Sherman, as chairman of the industrial accident board to succeed the late James W. Swayne.

Senator Westbrook in 1915 was one of the sponsors of the bill creating the board and in 1917 was responsible for changes in the act. He has been a member of the senate 12 years.

New York Stock Market Undaunted By Flurry in Call Money Rates

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—The stock market failed to take fright in another flurry in call money today, and moved forward vigorously, total sales again crossing the 4,000,000 share mark.

Some profit taking came in, particularly in the utilities, as money mounted to 12 per cent soon after mid-day, after renewing at 10, but almost coincident with a jump to 15 per cent late in the session a vigorous rally set in.

Rails Buoyant

The rails were buoyant throughout the session, some 10 issues reaching new high ground in gains reaching a maximum of 8½ points in Delaware and Hudson, and this tended to steady the market. The Associated Press price index of 20 rails rose nearly two points to a record level.

The call money rate was sent soaring by withdrawal of about $80,000,000 by banks and it was reported that 20 per cent was bid in the outside market for a short time, but funds soon appeared and it became evident that the official rate would be held at 15 per cent.

A factor in the money pinch was expiration of rights for approximately $215,000,000 in American Telephone bonds. In addition, the banks which borrowed heavily at the Federal Reserve bank last week required funds for the semi-weekly settlement at the reserve institution.

Time Loans Ease

Although this was the most severe flurry in call money since the middle of May, it was not particularly disturbing, as it was accompanied by a further ease in time loans, in which even the shorter maturities commanded a flat rate of 7½ per cent, against 7¼-⅜ on Friday.

The statement of the National City bank in its July bulletin that the mid-year money pinch should prove temporary "as banks have indicated an intention to prevent extreme fluctuations," was reassuring. Bankers, however, held out little hope of easier money for the rest of the week, at least.

NEW YORK, July 1. (AP)—Sales (in hundreds) high, low and closing quotations on the New York stock exchange today.

Capuchin Monk Is Elevated to Blessedness

VATICAN CITY, July 1. (UP)—The first series of beatifications which Pope Pius will make during 1929 was concluded with the elevation to blessedness of Francesco da Camporosso, a Capuchin monk who did charitable work among the Genoa dock workers. The pope bestowed the honors of the altar at the customary ceremonies at St. Peter's cathedral Sunday. Don Bosco, founder of the Salesian order, was the first beatified this year.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, July 1. (AP)—Curtailed receipts stimulated demand for killing classes of cattle at most all points around the 11-market circuit. Trade, however, was slow, due to strenuous efforts of packers to keep prices from advancing too rapidly. Killing classes were unevenly steady to 25c higher, better grades of native grain feds showing the most gain. Choice heavy steers in Chicago established a new top for the season of $15.85. Good Texas cake fed steers averaging 1,228 pounds at Kansas City cleared at $13.70. Stocker and feeder classes little changed.

Hogs found a moderately active outlet at generally steady to 10c higher prices. St. Louis however, out of line Saturday,

MOTORMAN IN MAYOR'S RACE

Street Car Pilot Would Aid Gotham's Drunks

NEW YORK, July 1. (INS)—Mr. Axel T. Fredlund, former street car conductor and public school teacher, has tossed his Leghorn headpiece into the mayorality race as "independent Democratic candidate." If he is elected, he promised today, he will bring about many innovations for New York City.

For example, he will see to it that men who occasionally or habitually fall off the water wagon are accorded better treatment.

"If I am elected mayor," he said, "I shall establish recuperation stations at convenient places throughout the city. Intoxicated men will be conveyed to these places by policemen and there they may obtain rest and, if necessary, medical attention."

It is a deplorable fact, Mr. Fredlund pointed out, that many drunks fall into the rivers surrounding New York. Therefore, he proposes to have fences constructed at all dangerous points along the river fronts to protect these men.

He has elaborate plans for improving transportation, including lengthening of all subway platforms from two to four blocks, scrapping of street cars, and elimination of all elevated lines and their replacement by double-decked motor speedways.

And, incidentally, his scheme of doing away with the thousands of speakeasies is simplicity itself. He would license the sale of liquor at all soda fountains. The fountains would undersell the speakeasies, automatically driving them out of business.

Mr. Fredlund said he holds the degree of A. M. and B. S. from Columbia university.

Arkansas Income Tax Law Held Constitutional

LITTLE, ROCK, Ark., July 1. (UP)—Constitutionality of the Hall income tax law, passed by the last Arkansas general assembly, was upheld by the state supreme court today by a vote of four to three.

The law, upon which the Parnell administration depends largely for state revenue, had been attacked upon the ground it had been altered and an emergency clause inserted after being adopted by the legislature.

PARK VODVIL PLANS READY

'White-Face' Minstrel Main Number on Program

In order to give the public an opportunity to see what Honey Boy and Sassafras look like in real life, it has been decided to give the minstrel show scheduled for the free vaudeville program at Bellevue park Wednesday night as a white-face instead of a black-face show, according to C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent.

Radio listeners in Wichita Falls and vicinity have long wondered about the appearance of all the KGKO artists, and especially about Honey Boy and Sassafras, and this occasion has been taken to make a public appearance before a visible audience. The two black-face comedians, starred in the minstrel bill, should feel at home before the audience, since they were both on the stage before coming to Wichita Falls last September.

That typical Irishman, George Hodgins, will play his usual role of interlocutor, with five actors to his right and five to his left. The Texo quartet, composed of Fred Meyer, first tenor, Ernest Reeves, second tenor, Paul von Allman, baritone, and H. W. Graves, bass, will furnish several songs for the show. Other members of the bill will be Frank Shepherd, Al Beattie, and the dancing pair, Dale and Dick Dancer.

Music for the program will be furnished by the Burkburnett Boys' band, under the direction of E. L. Nichols, one of the best bands in the state and well known in Northern Texas and Southern Oklahoma for its excellent programs. The band won several prizes at the last West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention and was presented with a silver loving cup by John Philip Sousa, America's greatest director. Arrangements for the special band were made when it was decided to present the unusual program at the park this week.

City Quarantines For June Show Decrease

Releases from quarantine during the month of June exceeded the number of cases put under quarantine, according to the monthly report of the city health department, with 29 cases of contagious diseases confined and 32 cases released.

Chicken pox was at the head of the list with 12 cases quarantined and 15 released. Other diseases confined during the month were, smallpox, with 7 quarantined; scarlet fever, 1; measles, 3; mumps, 1; and whooping cough, 5. Two of the smallpox patients were sent to the county farm, the report showed. Investigation was made in 44 cases and 131 miscellaneous visits were made by the health department.

Dr. J. M. Farrell, chief inspector, investigated 297 calves, 17 cows, 238 hogs and 12 sheep. Food inspections were made at 828 places and 25¼ pounds of meat and one-half bushel of fruit were condemned.

Tax Collections For Month Total $3,970

Collections of delinquent taxes during the month of June amounted to $3,970.42, according to the monthly compilation of tax figures at the office of W. R. Hyer, city and school tax assessor and collector. This figure indicates much slower payment of taxes than was reported in the corresponding month in 1928, when $8,014.56 was collected.

Collections of school taxes for June amounted to $2,838.44 as compared with $8,305.14 for June a year ago, the report showed. Occupation taxes came to $140 this year, indicating the only increase over the June collections last year when $63.50 was collected for permits for the sale of cigarets and similar commodities.

Wichita Brick Used In Plains Buildings

Brick from the Acme Brick company's Wichita Falls plant is being used in the construction of two large buildings now being erected in plains cities.

For the addition of five stories to the old six-story Lubbock hotel at Lubbock, 150,000 face brick, 300,000 common brick, and about 60,000 pieces of tile were secured from the plant here.

At Plainview, 400,000 Wichita Falls bricks are being used in the construction of the Hinn building, which will be a combination theater and hotel, it was said.

Iowa Park Woman Advised by Relatives to Take Orgatone Gains Daily

"My brother-in-law never did me a greater kindness than when he gave me a bottle of Orgatone, for now my troubles are all gone and I am feeling like a different woman," said Mrs. M. A. Whitaker, residing near Iowa Park, Texas, who is the wife of a well known farmer.

"I was troubled for about six months with a disordered stomach and was in such a low-spirited, run-down condition my life was made miserable," she continued. "I had no appetite and what I did eat caused me more harm instead of nourishing and doing me good. I was so nervous and had severe headaches, so bad I never rested well and would wake up in the morning all tired and worn-out and hardly able to get up.

"When my brother-in-law told me about the good Orgatone had done him and gave me a bottle, I decided to try it. Before I had finished my first bottle I felt like a different person, and my troubles began leaving me. I will praise Orgatone every day just as long as I live and I am telling all my friends about it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy, but a new scientific preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

Arizona's Senior Senator, Former Cowboy, Excels as Word Wrangler

Veteran Solon Ropes Words With Same Skill and Agility That Marked His Use of Lariat

By FRASER EDWARDS
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Henry Fountain Ashurst, senior senator for Arizona ever since she has been a sovereign state, was a cowpuncher in his youth.

His dexterity with a lariat gave him the same control over cattle as his present agility and facility as a word wrangler gives him over the English language.

Traces Derivations

Beginning with a blue-backed speller, in which he wrote in childish chirography, "Henry Fountain Ashurst, United States Senator," when he was 10 years old, Hank has studied words. In his relentless pursuit of philology, he has paid particular attention to etymology. He has worn the calf-skin cover off of one of Mr. Webster's well-known dictionaries in tracing each and every word in the English language to its source and prying into its intimate family relations with the Greeks and the Romans.

Hank has mercilessly ransacked Roget's treasures from A to Z, until there is not a word between its cover that he has not roped, hog-tied and branded for his own. If there are any mavericks straying around, it is just a matter of time before he corrals them and sears the nicety of their meaning into his brain.

Bewilders Gallery

With all the words in the English tongue mobilized under his command, Hank cracks his intellectual whip and the words obediently trot out and jump through his oratorical hoop to the amazement and admiration of his colleagues and to the complete bewilderment of the gallery gods who have not compiled any dictionaries.

Out of this cyclopedia of words, Hank has fashioned a style, which, while partaking somewhat of the courtly diction of the 18th century, has a flavor all its own. It is not only filled with polysyllabic words of Latin and Greek derivation but with curt, telling Anglo-Saxon and expressive Americanisms.

"I am a veritable peripatetic bifuscated volcano in behalf of Democratic principles," Ashurst once remarked with becoming modesty. "And, if occasion arises, I believe in rising above principle. In all events, I am for the people even if it defeats me."

Keeps Diary

Beneath all the weight of those eight-dollar words, Hank conceals one of the rarest and most delightful senses of humor harbored in the senate. He is a keen observer and there is little of the sham and humbuggery that goes on about him that he misses. Much of this is set down for his own satisfaction in a diary which he has kept meticulously for a quarter of a century.

That diary would make juicy reading matter for the general public if Hank's regard for his colleagues, past and present, could be overcome and that curious and convulsing commentary put into print. Occasionally, Hank will permit a friend to con a few chapters—in strictest confidence—but that is all.

It is betraying no confidence, however, to give a slant on the cynical view taken by Ashurst on some of the "strange things going on around here," as Tom Heflin says, by repeating Hank's comment on the world court fight. He said:

"Whenever the two great parties hypocritically support any measure, you may be sure that it will pass."

Thief Takes Clothing From Railroad Car

A quantity of wearing apparel and personal articles was stolen from a group of bridge workers living in caboose No. 65 of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas lines late Sunday night, it was reported at police headquarters Monday morning.

The loot consisted of three suits of clothing, two grips, one pair of gold rimmed glasses, one safety razor, one hat, two pair of shoes, one pair of pants and other articles belonging to the men. Officers are working on the case.

GREAT GOLFERS GO TO CHURCH

A Few Interesting Items About People

MAMARONECK, N. Y., July 1. (AP)—Two well-known gentlemen ran into each other Sunday in the lobby of a hotel. "Oh, Al," said Bobby, "I'll be a bit late. Mrs. Jones and I are going to church." And Al replied: "That's all right, Bobby. Mrs. Espinosa and I are going to church too. I'll be late myself." And thousands waited for the start of the playoff for the national open golf title.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—John Coolidge of New Haven, alumnus of Amherst and rising young railroader, is enrolled in the Harvard summer business school.

SPRING VALLEY, N. Y.—Mrs. Rosa Peters, 44, and her 17-year-old daughter have been graduated together at the Spring Valley High school. Mrs. Peters, wife of a Congregational minister, took a four-year course in order to qualify for a position as music teacher in the public schools.

NEW YORK.—A hero and a heroine seem destined to make a record for an endurance kiss. Homer Croy's typist, at work in her home, had just reached the point in his incompleted novel when the lips touched. Scarlet fever invaded the house and it was quarantined for a month with contents, including the manuscript. The author is unable to proceed.

BANGOR, Maine—Salmon seem to be obliging in Bangor pool. Lathrop Caldwell of Brewer says an 11-pounder, unhooked, leaped right into his boat.

HAVANA.—The city's last hack is gone after a valiant struggle. It disputed the right of way with a taxi, its motive power, a horse, was seriously injured. The hack, built in '89, was wrecked. Jacinto Baldez, 76, the driver escaped.

SILK URGES DEEP OIL TEST

Kiwanis Club Hears Talk On Wichita Outlook

The future of Wichita Falls depends upon the development of oil production from a depth of around 6,000 feet in this territory, according to an address given Monday noon by W. W. Silk before the Kiwanis club.

Stating his opinion that property values here will decrease tremendously unless deep oil be found in the producing territories near this city, Mr. Silk urged that local business men underwrite the drilling of at least 10 wells to a depth of 6,000 feet. Geological structure of the country surrounding Wichita Falls to a radius of 60 miles indicates an abundance of deep oil, he said.

More extensive advertising of the oil producing possibilities of Wichita county also was recommended by the speaker.

Homer F. Sanderford, president of the club, gave a brief report of the Kiwanis International convention which he recently attended in Milwaukee, Wis.

Former Millionaire's Wife Seeks Insurance

DETROIT, July 1. (INS)—Lois Dodge Manning, former wife of Horace Dodge, Detroit millionaire, today filed suit in federal court against the Commercial Union Assurance company, London, England for $15,000 which she claims is due her on a policy insuring her jewelry. On Feb. 7, 1927, the suit sets forth, Mrs. Manning paid the company $728 premium for insurance of the gems. On Sept. 28, 1927 she lost a brooch valued at $1,200 and a bracelet valued at $10,600 in Honolulu, according to the suit.

RAIL MERGER FIGHT LOOMS

Wabash Seeks to Acquire New System

WASHINGTON, July 1. (INS)—A hot fight for control of a number of strategic railroads in various consolidation plans loomed today, following the presentation to the interstate commerce commission of the Wabash railroad's plan for a fifth and independent trunk line system. The fight will center particularly for control of the Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, and the Western Maryland.

The Wabash plan is the third now before the commission for consideration, the Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio plans having been filed some months ago. In each of these plans the three minor roads mentioned play an important part in linking up the systems. In some quarters it is believed that the Wabash plan has the tacit approval of the Pennsylvania.

On top of this the Taplin brothers, of Cleveland, who control the Pittsburgh and West Virginia, want to get the Wheeling and Lake Erie and the Western Maryland and they intend to put up a battle royal against the Van Sweringens, who control the Chesapeake and Ohio, Daniel Willard, guiding hand of the Baltimore and Ohio, and the Wabash crowd.

The Wabash plan contemplates the acquisitian of the Lehigh Valley, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Western Maryland, Lehigh and New England, Akron, Canton and Youngstown, Elgin, Joliet and Eastern, Toledo, Peoria and Western, and the Chicago and Illinois Midland.

Origins Plan Goes Into Effect Despite Hoover

WASHINGTON, July 1. (UP)—The national origins basis for America's selective immigration quota system became effective today over the protest of President Hoover who opposed the plan as impracticable. The outstanding changes effected by the new system of allocating quotas are to reduce potential German immigration by half and to increase British and Northern Irish immigration by about the same margin. Immigration from Scandinavia will be reduced about one-third by the new program.

Most people are born with imperfect sight, according to the Eye Sight Conservation Council of America.
