FATAL STORM IN MIDDLE WEST BERLIN RIOTS ON EVE OF REFERENDUM BALLOT

HUNDRED JAILED AFTER KAISER IS HANGED IN EFFIGY

35,000 IN DISTURBANCE IN CAPITAL OF GERMANY

ATTACK OFFICIAL DEMONSTRATION PRECEDES VOTE ON ROYAL EXPROPRIATION

By United News
BERLIN, June 14 (Monday).—One hundred nationalists and socialists are in jail following demonstrations in which 35,000 persons marked the beginning of the final week that is to precede a national wide referendum next Sunday on the proposed expropriation of Germany's royal families.

Minor clashes were reported and many of those taken by the police were charged with carrying concealed weapons. The former kaiser was hanged in effigy by one group while another, equally bitter, carried placards which read: "Down with the bolshevist-mad house!"

Beneath a forest of black and white flags, the nationalists met in front of the former imperial palace carrying their anti-socialist placards. Speakers reiterated nationalist arguments that the referendum was an insidious attack on property rights. Numerous bands played the old tunes of the imperial regiments.

Attacks on Hindenburg for his stand against the proposed measure were outstanding features of the radical demonstration. Signs reading "down with Hindenburg" were carried by the socialists. The former kaiser's effigy dangled from a scaffold around which the radical mob surged.

Speakers exhorted the crowds not to submit to "royal blacksmiths."

SOCIALISTS FIGHT POLISH DICTATOR

PILSUDSKI CALLED "ANTI-LABOR" BY HIS OPPONENTS

By United News
WARSAW, June 13.—Comparing Pilsudski of the Polish anti-labor attitude to that of Premier Mussolini in Italy, socialist groups throughout the country are out boldly to attack their leader of a few weeks ago.

Withdrawal of their support from behind the virtual dictator of Poland only suggested by the socialists until now, had added a threatening element to the alignment against him. Already strongly opposed by the crowds which seek autonomy and by those still loyal to the regime, Pilsudski's mobilization of police and troops against the embittered workers of the Ostrowice Metal Works company is the direct cause of his desertion by those radical elements which formed the backbone of his recent coup.

The ticket selling committee for the West Texas chamber of commerce will start out with renewed determination this morning with the big convention only a week off and with Lubbock squarely facing the possibility of making a big failure before West Texas if the special train is not secured.

"Every business firm in Lubbock should buy at least one ticket to the convention," G. P. Kuykendall, chairman of the sales force stated Saturday. "The tickets are selling for $15 which includes transportation, pullman service, and a set of the official Lubbock regalia. It is up to every loyal citizen to buy a ticket and help secure the train and to go to Amarillo with the delegation to assist in Lubbock's fight to bring the 1927 convention to Lubbock."

TINKHAM DEMANDS LAW TO KEEP DRY FROM PAYING SOLONS

By United News
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Demand for immediate legislation to stop the anti-saloon league's practice of hiring members of congress to lecture for prohibition was made tonight by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts. Tinkham announced he would introduce in the house Tuesday a bill to make it a criminal offense for congressmen to receive money for services rendered to any organization investigating legislation.

"The ugly exposure and admission that members of congress have been systematically and clandestinely given of fees from the secret funds of the ecclesiastical and political organization known as the Anti-Saloon League of America demands immediate legislation to prevent the continuance of this nefarious practice," Tinkham said.

"The acceptance by legislators of money or fees from any organization investigating legislation is so vicious that by common consent all honest men condemn it. It takes from the legislator his independent character and impartial action. It takes away the moral sanction behind all law. Practices of this character, instead of wrapping legislation action with nobility expose it to contempt and scorn. It is a corrupt method of procedure."

START FOR SOUTH POLE THIS WEEK

By United News

Those seeking the South pole will be financed by the Falkland Islands government. The 33 members of this party will be made up chiefly of Orkney islanders except for Edmund Semper, of Sheffield, England, who was a member of the Peary and Shackleton expeditions. The whaler which will carry the party is named "William Scoresby" in honor of a Hull adventurer who once attempted a similar trip and never returned.

Lieutenant Darcis' expedition to the North pole will include two airplanes and six motor sledges all equipped with wireless outfits. Darcis says that he expected to be away for 14 months.

LIGHTNING KILLS ELECTRICAL STORM IS ACCOMPANIMENT OF CLOUD BURST

By United News
DES MOINES, Ia., June 13.—Two men were killed, a score of persons injured and property damage totaling thousands of dollars was the toll taken in central Iowa Saturday night and Sunday in one of the most severe electrical and rain storms in the history of the state.

The dead: Thomas T. Walsh, Jr., 31, Des Moines; William Rector, 22, Milburn, Iowa.

Walsh was killed when his automobile collided with another in the blinding rain. He died in a hospital a few hours after the accident.

Rector was killed at Perry, Iowa, Sunday morning when he attempted to crank his automobile in the middle of a flooded street. A short circuited electric cable is believed to have charged the water in the street. He died when he touched the crank to his automobile, falling in ten inches of water in the street.

The storm, although general over the state, was believed to have reached its greatest intensity in the Des Moines area. Six inches of rain fell at Perry, Iowa, according to unofficial report. The weather bureau here reported a precipitation of 3.94 while other gauges placed the downfall at five inches. It was still raining Sunday night.

Boats Ply In Chicago Streets

By United News
CHICAGO, June 13.—A miniature cloudburst drenched Chicago Sunday night. An inch and a half of water fell in less than 30 minutes.

John Capus, 43, was killed by lightning. The force of the bolt ripped the clothing and shoes from his body and he died before help could reach him.

Fire companies answered 100 calls as lightning set fire to frame buildings. Hundreds of basements in all parts of the city were flooded.

One woman on the south side telephoned an emergency call to the police that she was drowning. They found her marooned on a table top with the water rising in the living room of her home.

Storm sewers were unable to carry the water away fast enough. Streets were turned into small rivers. The water backed up at intersections and reached a depth of six feet in some parts of the city, completely paralyzing traffic.

Large chunks of paving blocks were swept away by the force of the swirling floods in the Chicago university district. Students brought out boats and ferried pedestrians across low parts of the campus.

Three hundred homes were reported flooded in the Burnside district alone.

SYNOPSIS

Young Bob Manning is in jail, charged with manslaughter, a car in which he was riding having crashed into another and killed a woman. His father, John Manning, is District Attorney, and declares his duty is to prosecute the boy. Manning is opposed for reelection by Jerome Wallace. Wallace is a former suitor of Eileen, now Mrs. John Manning, and he tells her that if he is elected he will be in a position to help both her and Bob. The offer he makes seems to be her final hope.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

And yet such was Eileen's nature, that loyalty could not be forgotten nor those long years of mutual affection and common aims and aspirations discarded, however vital the object, without a struggle. Alone in her room, hours passed, leaving her in a turmoil of doubt. Without a storm arose as the darkness fell. In her mood Eileen found a sorry comfort standing by a window and gazing forth into the gloom while the wind howled about the eaves of the house and the rain pelted against the panes before her like the spendthrift of some mighty sea.

Suddenly a flash of lightning turned the verge of a wild blue and the thunder reverberated overhead as if a monstrous truck was passing over the arched bridge of the firmament. Eileen leaped back, but only to step forward and, gluing her eyes to a pane, stare forth into the night at some object without which had claimed her attention.

Another lightning flash and what she saw was plain. There, huddled up on the top of the brick wall, she returned this smile with interest—with usury.

Eileen threw open the window before her.

"Marjorie," she called, "is that you?"

The figure on the wall shifted its position, but made no response.

"Come out of the rain, child, come in here to a safe," insisted Eileen, turning and hastening from the room.

Hardly a moment elapsed before she was back, bringing Marjorie Patterson, rain drenched and chilled.

"Come right over here by the fireplace, dear. I'll have these logs going in an instant. Now give me that wet coat so that I can get rid of it for you. Whatever possessed you to expose yourself in this way on such a night? Do you want to catch your death of cold?"

In spite of the flames which were leaping up from the logs, Marjorie shivered, and when she spoke it was with chattering teeth.

Every night—at nine—we meet. It was our hour—just like in a beautiful story I once read. There were lovers in it—lovely lovers.

"You darling," whispered Eileen as if to herself.

"They had troubles, too. But they were always faithful—faithful unto death," continued Marjorie dreamily, only to be shaken suddenly by a great sob.

"I understand, dear. I realize how you feel, but you must give some thought to your health. It is not necessary that you risk your life like that."

Marjorie looked up and there was surprise and even wonder in her big eyes.

"But if you love a person, if you really love them, you don't care what sacrifice you make for them, do you?"

Eileen's eyes rested upon the girl, but in an instant there was a faraway look in them as if she had completely forgotten Marjorie's presence in the verity of her words.

There was anguish, doubt and hesitation in her face and she closed her eyes as if under the stress of intense feeling. But when she opened them there was the certainty of one who has reached a decision and sees her way clear before her, in them, as well as resolution—the great resolution of a mother determined to go to any lengths for the sake of her child.

"You are right," she said, and there could be no doubt but that she was speaking to herself. "If you love a person, you do not care what sacrifices you make for his sake."

CHAPTER IX

There was a festive air about the Wallace apartment and many evidences that Jerome Wallace was entertaining. A simple affair, yes, an informal affair, quite informal. From the table spread before the fireplace Wallace and his guests had dined well, even sumptuously.

Now, in the easy comfort of his lounging robes, Wallace lay back in his chair and considered the world with that contentment which only a well lined stomach and a contented conscience can give. Yet the very intoxicating bit of the world upon which his smiling gaze rested was of a sort which sometimes plays havoc with conscience.

It was a woman. A nice-eyed woman, rounded of cheek, penciled eye and with a luxuriant charm of figure, but thinly veiled by the gown she wore. A student of mankind, Wallace, evidently investigating every strata of society at first hand to fit himself for the office of District Attorney.

However that may be, he did not find his studies unduly onerous, for it was a pleasant smile he gave her, with something of a proprietary air in it. A persuasive smile, too, for as if drawn by its power she stretched her chair closer to his and, thrusting her arm about his neck, returned this smile with interest.

To be more exact, with usury, because it was a provocative, languishing look which she gave him and one with a boldness which took no more account of another guest's presence than if he had been a piece of furniture.

Alas, true genius is often slighted in a careless world. He so cavalierly disregarded was none other than that master mind of politics, Slick Jennings. But, no matter, a good man cannot be downed, and this fellow Jennings was a man of parts. Behold him now in social guise, his hat tilted a bit more rakishly, his cigar slanted at a greater angle and a jovial smile playing over his ruddy, fat face. Ah, who could resist his winning ways as absorbed in his own affairs he was quite oblivious to the fact that he was regarded much in the light of a footstool in a harem.

At the Churches Sunday

First Methodist Church

"Life's Chief Value" was the subject of Rev. E. E. White's sermon at the First Methodist church yesterday morning. He preached to a large audience. At the evening hour he spoke on "A Glorious Awakening."

His morning sermon in part: "A question arises in the minds of many, what is this life for or what do we live? What is life's chief value? One philosopher said that life to him was only a passing accident and that there was nothing permanent about it. His philosophy might be given in these words, 'Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow you may die.' The book of Ecclesiastes sets forth the philosophy of the middle-aged man who had drunk deep from the fountain of wisdom and pleasures. He had had enough satisfaction through great wealth. We see however, the thought of the book his courageous attempt to find himself. In the first few verses the writer seems almost to despair of life and its pleasures and attainments. To him life is a continuous round of repetition. So life seems to revolve in a circle, nothing is ever completed. There is no full satisfaction.

"Soon, however, the character of the book goes out in search of satisfaction. The attainment of wealth becomes his goal. Gold came, wealth was his but it did not satisfy. With wealth the attempt was then to buy satisfaction. We read, 'Whatever mine eyes desired I kept not from them.' The things did not satisfy. Hear what he says, 'I looked on all the works that mine hands had wrought and on the labor that I had labored to do, and behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit and there was no profit under the sun.' How many times have men and women become tired of such life and turned with disgust from it.

"We see them as they flee in despair, disgusted with it all. They have sought but failed to find life's chief value. So this one resolved not to end his search until he found that which would satisfy, turned in his quest to wisdom. Sheer knowledge was his one ambition. I can see him as he brushes the dust from the aged worn manuscript, his whole soul bent on the acquiring of knowledge. Life has lost all its practical value. You have possibly seen them, bookworms who have not time for any task save this quest. It may be science to them, all other subjects fade out compared to scientific knowledge.

"You may take the subject of evolution, its immortality has been over emphasized. What have you gained even if you do find that it is an eternal fact that all life did come from plant cell of lower form. Or on the other hand suppose you prove that the contrary is true, what has been accomplished? It was in the quest of knowledge that Ecclesiastes went, spending himself in constant search again to find himself disappointed. He had not yet found life's chief value. He confesses that he hated life, and what is there after all to such a life?

"He is not satisfied, there is one more possible chance. Back of all knowledge, back of all pleasure, back of all wealth, there is some force, some power. There was one notable thing about the man, his goal was intense. He gave his advice: 'Whatever they hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.' He was no slacker. All the needed was proper direction, a right goal. He needed to find life's chief value.

"That is what men and women need to day. There are those who possess rich gifts; who have wonderful talents, their ability is marked, but their energy is misdirected. If only we could come to the point in life where we could understand our mission, the great possibilities in life, God does not want to deny you, he does not want to stand in the path which leads to legitimate wealth, but he does want unselfish attainment of wealth. God does not want to deny you of pleasures, but he does want yours to be wholesome pleasures. He does not expect you to be guilty of overindulgence. He does not approve of the actions of those who fall in worthwhile tasks and neglect important duties because of over interest in less important and less profitable pastimes.

"God delights in seeing the acquisition of knowledge and attainment of wisdom, but he does not have patience with that over-jealous person who makes his attainment his god. From these quests Ecclesiastes tried to find God. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. 'Fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man.' Every age has found a group of honest, earnest men and women who were diligently searching in their quest for the right. They are not malicious, sometimes deceived, but very active, not satisfied until they find God. Some extreme religious people are not satisfied. Why? Their religion is at fault. They merely have the theory of religion, but not the heart, the soul of the unselfish teaching of Jesus Christ. We have been a long time in coming to his point of view in dealing with our fellow men. May God hasten the day when men and women will be ready to take the principles of Jesus Christ and make these their rule and guard in their attitude toward humanity and toward God."

First Presbyterian Church

"Can We Get What We Ask For?" was the question answered in the sermon of Rev. Jack M. Lewis at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning. He read from the scripture, Matt. 7:1-11 and took his text from Matt. 7:7.

His sermon in part: "Ask and ye shall be given unto you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you. Is this true? Is it possible for that promise to be fulfilled? If such is the case, then the possession of an oil well that belches forth its stream of black gold, making thousands of barrels daily, is a small thing in comparison to it. If it is true that gold or diamond mine fades into nothingness when compared to it. Even Aladdin's magic lamp is of small moment. If we can ask and get it, then we are living in fairyland where all should be, seek the desire gratified. There is no particular Masonic word to get hold of, nor is there any Eleusian mystery to solve. It is simply, asking-receiving, seeking-finding, knocking-and it shall be opened to our appeal.

"Ask and ye shall be given unto you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh, receiveth, and he that seeketh, findeth, and he that knocketh, it shall be opened. If you want your income increased, if you want your health improved, if you want your Physician-God. If you want to advance in life, knock at the door, and while you are knocking, it shall be opened to you. There seems to be no condition specified; there seems to be no class of persons identified with the favored set. If you want increase, health, joy, satisfaction, advancement, riches, honor, and so on, you shall receive, for every one that asketh receiveth. Why sit we around like paupers while the riches of heaven and earth are ours for the asking? Why remain poor, dumb, blind of intellect, failing in health, when nothing lies between us and what we want but application. Surely we have not because we ask not. Be careful of nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, make known your requests unto God. Never mind who you are, what you are, how you are living, you have simply to ask what you like and you shall have it.

Certainly that is what the text seems to say.

"That our asking must be the vehement expression of intense, anxious and passionate desire. There must not only be an asking, a simple exercise of expression; there must also be a seeking, a searching out as if to find something of incalculable worth; there must be a knocking, a last frantic effort to have the door opened.

Some one has said that, "Prayer is the most intense act of the life." Prayer is not the weak expression of a feeble desire but it is the vehement expression of a consuming passion of the life and soul. The poet was unquestionably correct in the following verse.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, Uttered of unexpressed, The motion of a hidden fire, That trembles in the breast."

There is a gradual development revealed to us in the three significant words of the text, ask, seek, knock. We first give expression of our desire in words, next we seek earnestly for an answer to our prayer thus expressed, and finally we knock eagerly on the very door of heaven. It is one grand prayer, beginning with the ease of a child's communion and ending with the resoluteness and the violence of a man who feels keenly that time is dying and opportunity closing swiftly.

Is your prayer just an easy exercise or does it strain the soul and awaken the highest efforts? Does your prayer actually express the dominating desire of your soul? If it does, then you are in a fair way to receive an answer to your prayer. Such prayer always tends towards an answer. It organizes all the powers within the man and many forces outside to work for the answer. Fervent, zealous prayer availed much.

This is expressed, one of the conditions to the fulfillment of this wonderful promise, "Ask and ye shall receive."

The second condition may be thus expressed, "That we must bear the proper relationship to the Giver of every good gift if this text is to be true in our experience."

"We read in verse nine, 'What man is there of you whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?' etc. What is the relationship we find here? It is the relationship of a son to a father, a filial relationship; if I sa child praying to a father, it is not on a whim, a stranger, a rebel; it is an heir, that one can claim the promise who is able to address him as father."

Of course there is a class distinction. Not every one can cry out, "Father give" and expect to receive the answer. Only a member of the family of God is thus highly honored. When the Master says, "Ask and receive, seek and find, knock and it shall be opened," He is not throwing that which is holy unto the dogs. He is addressing himself to His own, and expecting his sons and daughters to receive the blessing of the promise.

There are many blessings which fall upon the just and the unjust alike. However there is no blessing that the unjust can claim because he has asked for it. He is a stranger and a vagabond upon the face of the earth. He has no vital relationship with God. He is a stranger and God knows him not. The unregenerate, the undisciplined child has no claim on the Father. It becomes necessary for one to be born again, and this time in the family of God, if he is to receive any thing for his asking. He must be able to look up and cry out, "My Father" and hear the answer returned, "My Child," if he would "Ask and receive, seek and find, knock and have the door opened unto you."

The next condition laid down in the text is that what we ask for is good. "What man is there of you whom if his son ask bread, or fish or egg, why these are necessary things and if necessary then of course they are good. The son has a right to express earnestly any necessary desire of his life and that request will be granted. Naturally there are many requests refused because a granting of them would be unnecessary and often times detrimental to our own welfare."

We can claim as many of the good things of life as are necessary to our own advancement and to the glory of God through our own lives. Can we ask for a double income, a larger house, a greater business, if it is good we can, and if it is necessary then it is good. Paul says, "All things are yours." They are ours for the asking to the extent that we need them in the carrying out of the plans and purposes of God through our lives.

We can claim as much of life as we need to carry on the work that God has given us to do. I believe that a man is immortal until his work is done. We can ask God to allot unto us as many years as are necessary and our request will be granted.

The son who asks strenuously for the things that are necessary can rest assured that he can, "Ask and receive, seek and find, knock and the door will be opened."

"If ye give evil counsel how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father in heaven give good things to them who ask Him." He is far more ready to give than we are to ask. We often by complaining his character. Pilate called him "the man without fault." Napoleon called him, "the Emperor of Love." John Stewart called him "the genius to humanity." The testimony of each of these men is the highest thought and tribute that can come from mortal man. But for the standard we must go to the old Book, which in a word says, "He is the first; and the last, the king of kings and the lord of lords. The hope of Glory."

Again He is king because He draws by cords of love and redeems and saves the human soul. Nothing is more characteristic of Jesus than His power to cause people to love Him. If disciples had been asked why they followed him, they would not have said "It was because of his theology or because of His deity," but they would have declared that it was simply because He somehow made them love him and they could not do other than follow Him. He makes men love Him and when love lights it knows no retreat, it dies for its beloved. Thus Christ appeals to us from an intellectual standpoint and we love him and save our souls. And so well we will give our lives to Him and love and serve Him and from the depths of our souls sing over and over again, "All hail the power of Jesus name, let angels praise thee, bring forth the royal diadem and crown Him Lord of all."

First Christian Church

"Christ, the King" was the subject of Rev. W. P. Jennings' sermon at the First Christian church yesterday morning. He chose his text from John, 18:37. "Pilate therefore said unto him, 'Art thou a king then?'"

Jesus answered, "Thou sayest that I am king. In fact I was born, and for this cause I came into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth heareth my voice."

In his introduction Brother Jennings stated that the world has never given due emphasis to the fact that Christ was King. He has been thought of as the gentle and humble shepherd searching for the lost sheep, we have pictured Him as the earnest supplicant at the door of the heart, and we have preached Him as the great burden bearer with the savior of the world, weeping through his soul and serving humanity. It is all that he has been proclaimed, for in all these roles, he was the one shining star of the first magnitude.

From the very beginning of the human race, men have wanted one who would have supreme authority, they have wanted the great high priest, they have wanted the prophet, above all they have wanted and demanded a God to interpret their spiritual longings. No lawyer is ever weary seeking in God Christ simply in the realm of theology; but it wants a Christ seen and felt in all realms of human activity, and most of all in the practical side of every day life of the living, throbbing, pulsating humanity. The world has gotten tired of the old ways of dogmatic superstitions, it is weary for the faith of the old set over for the new type. It wants to see a rift in the clouds a glimpse of at least the infinite bliss of heaven, a vision of the Father and the Son, and recognize Him as the King of the universe. When the millennium are shining "Hosanna to the King" and the priests protest and endeavor to quiet the people, Jesus does not hesitate to proclaim his essential kingship by saying, "If these were to hold their peace, the very stones would cry out." And to Pilate he states emphatically, "I am King." If we see Christ as he has always existed and will continue to have being for all time to come, we must see Him in the majestic and authoritative position. He holds in His hands the destinies of nations and of all true progress and the world has advanced in no other way than through the way and method of Jesus.

Again Christ is king in the intellectual and moral realm. Whoever is to be king, our master, must satisfy the intellectual demands of humanity and his character must be above reproach. He is a literary master. He manifests his intellectual genius in the way he puts things. That is to say, in a few words Jesus put in a great truth in such perfect literary form that it has gripped the intelligence of centuries. There is a certainty in all his utterances that show the supremacy of His mind. He spoke not of the scribbles but as one of authority. In the realm of moral character He is king. His name alone is synonymous with moral perfection. He is the only person who walked this earth who could defy even his enemies to pick out a single flaw in his character or convict him of a single sin or unworthy deed. The unbelievers, the so-called skeptics of the world have vied with each other in upholding his character. Pilate called him "the man without fault." Napoleon called him, "the Emperor of Love." John Stewart called him "the genius to humanity." The testimony of each of these men is the highest thought and tribute that can come from mortal man. But for the standard we must go to the old Book, which in a word says, "He is the first; and the last, the king of kings and the lord of lords. The hope of Glory."

19th Street Methodist Church

Rev. D. C. Ross preached the morning sermon at the 19th Street Methodist church yesterday morning. His message was especially to the young people of the audience. He spoke to about 30 students who were assembled in the front of the church. He chose as his text, "Remember thy creator in the days of thy youth."

In his introduction Brother Jennings stated that the world has never given due emphasis to the fact that Christ was King. DAVIDSON WILL STUMP NORTHWEST

CANDIDATE PLANS ADDRESSES FROM WEATHERFORD TO STAMFORD

DALLAS, June 13.—Lynch Davidson arrived at state headquarters here this morning after a strenuous week of campaigning in south central Texas. The gubernatorial candidate wound up Saturday night with a huge meeting at Hempstead. He was given an ovation at Groesbeck, his boyhood home and good crowds attended his at Hillsboro, Waco, Calvert, Hearne, Bryan, Caldwell, Somerville and Brenham.

Beginning Tuesday, Davidson will carry the first in northwest Texas, he said. An all western rally has been arranged for Wichita Falls, Friday night and delegations from Quanah, Vernon, Electra, Childress and Henrietta will attend. Davidson leaders in Wichita Falls are planning to take care of the largest crowd of the campaign the candidate said.

Davidson's itinerary for the week is as follows: Weatherford, Tuesday afternoon; Mineral Wells, Tuesday night; Breckenridge, Wednesday afternoon; Albany, Wednesday night; Gore, Thursday morning; Stamford Thursday afternoon; Haskell, Thursday night; Seymour, Friday afternoon; Wichita Falls, Friday night; Bowie Saturday afternoon; Decatur, Saturday night.

Commenting on the outlook in the gubernatorial race, Davidson expressed optimism and declared that he had gained 75,000 votes within the last three weeks. He said the voters are disgusted with the campaign of hate and personal abuse indulged in by his opponents.

"Two things have brought Texas up for nation-wide attention recently—good business and bad government," Davidson said. "If Texas wants to speed that great industrial expansion for which we are all hoping, the first thing we must do is to flash the news to the world that good business is going hand and hand with business government."

Declaring that he had learned the vital need of capital through his own experiences as a poor boy and through observation in his later business life, Davidson said that he is determined to "give Texas such an administration as will bring capital in the great amount needed for the expansion that we expect. But do not believe it necessary to surrender our natural resources entirely to the hands of any monopoly such as the Standard Oil company to bring this about."

Davidson said he had been able to win financial independence under the "beneficent laws of the state of Texas" and that he had made a "solemn pledge" with himself that he would offer his services to the state, to pay the debt of gratitude. There was a time, he said "when the honor and the name of the office appealed to me, but, although it is a great honor, that time is long since past. I want to be governor for the power that it gives to put new efficiency into state affairs, the state of Texas—in better administration and lower taxes."

Asserting that the average "neant stand has a better check on its finances than the state of Texas today, Davidson said that an auditing system is imperative to check the $60,000,000 spent by the state. "We cannot build $20,000,000 worth of roads a year by oratory, or by voting for one man just to beat another," Davidson said "ninety five percent of the governor's work is purely business, and has nothing to do with legal matters or mud-slinging oratory. The money spent on our roads is as much as the Southern Pacific railroad spends in this state and they hire the best brains in the nation to spend it."

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Troop Four—"Always There"
Well, boys, we have some good news for you. Felix Ballenger, who has been on probation, was admitted to the troop as a full fledged member. He lacks only his first aid on his second class, and he can't get that until June 19. He came down to Clapp's with his hair all slicked down with cup grease and in a brand new uniform. He is some high stepping baby, and he's all ready to make the other boys hump to keep up with him.

Beginning Tuesday, Davidson will carry the first in northwest Texas, he said. An all western rally has been arranged for Wichita Falls, Friday night and delegations from Quanah, Vernon, Electra, Childress and Henrietta will attend. Each patrol is making a knot-board, with fifty knots on it and each member of the patrol must be able to tie any knot on their board. This will be in the form of an inter-patrol contest.

The Raven Patrol had charge of the games and they had one good game, the Candy Hunt. We vote that the Ravens have charge of the games all the time.

The tree contest, which has been running three weeks, was ended with Murray Ballenger as winner of individual honors and the Raven Patrol as winner of patrol honors. Murray had sixty-two kinds of trees and the Raven Patrol had ninety. Johnny Hopper won second place in the individual contest with fifty-two varieties. One hundred five different kinds of trees were found inside the city limits, some very uncommon ones being discovered.

Troop Three
The meeting began with a lively spirit. After inspection a few games were played on the lawn. A short business session was held in the basement of the Baptist church and the Wolf Patrol was appointed to secure a flag pole for the colors and the Tigers to secure flag boxes. Each patrol then held a separate meeting to discuss plans for the future. Immediately after all patrols re-assembled.

The Tigers gave a short demonstration of first aid, in which they are specializing.
All business being over, a few games, such as Herds and Tails and an Antelope Race between the Tigers and the Rattlersakes. The Tigers won. The meeting was then dismissed.

PUBLIC OPINION

TREND FOR BETTER PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Our general system of electing public officials, for our various political units of the efficient administration of hundreds who are mentally equipped, professionally trained and really anxious to serve the people through Federal, State, County or Municipal office. Our most successful officials are those who have gained knowledge of public affairs and experience through appointment to clerkships or positions as deputies because of their peculiar fitness for the work assigned.

It is not that the system of popular election is wrong but rather, that we do not fairly interpret the desire of all who aspire to public office. Because there may be some outstanding cases of individuals continuously seeking office after once being elected we should not relegate all who persist as candidates to one class. Consideration should be given to ability and fitness rather than political influence or bias.

There are indications of an encouraging change in the attitude of the public which prompts the hope that there is a decided trend to seek out individuals who are peculiarly qualified to handle our government business. Such change will make available for public service those successful in private business and professions who heretofore have hesitated to run the gauntlet of political whims.

An inspiring note was sounded recently by Professor Edgar Furniss of the Yale Political Science Department who declared "Soon there will be a change in governmental activities in the United States, and public service will be raised to a higher plane. The time is not far off and when it does come, a life of politics will meet with more approval than it does at the present time."
The professor recognizes the fact that existing conditions in this country demand men of political ability

HOLLAND ARMAMENT

Representatives from Holland at the preliminary arms conference in Geneva have suggested that pigs, fogs and winds all deserve to be ranked as armament, because they are elements of potential war strength or factors in warfare.

Perhaps they deserved the implied rebuke of the American delegation, which immediately declared that "a common-sense conception of reducible armaments" could not possibly include all the things suggested by the Hollanders.

It was right to summon that wordy and rambling conference back to a practical business basis. At the same time, be those Dutchmen serious or humorous, their suggestions start a line of thought which properly followed might accomplish something. Wouldn't the world be a whole lot better off and wouldn't half the dangers of war evaporate if people would stop figuring out ways to kill each other and apply brain power to such problems as improving livestock, dispelling fogs and making better use of the winds?

For those who insist on a continuance of hostilities Holland could furnish plenty of wind-mills to fight.

WILD LIFE VANISHING

Dr. William T. Hornaday, veteran director of the New York zoo, looking backward over half a century of intimate association with the wild life of America, sounds a note of warning. "The grinding power of civilization," he says, "is sweeping our wild life out of existence at a frightful rate. Continuous harassments and injustices, both natural and otherwise, are combining to exterminate wild life. Several species are already on the brink of extermination." Thus many beautiful and interesting beasts and birds are being lost forever to mankind and thus the fine balance of nature is being disturbed. Aside from human interest in wild creatures, often the economic loss attending their extinction is irreparable. Dr. Hornaday recommends the establishment of more game sanctuaries and further limitation of the hunter's bag limit. This is good as far as it goes. But couldn't there be some limitation too, on the number of hunters? Most hunting is a farce nowadays anyhow. The average hunter gets so little for all his ammunition and effort that it isn't worth the trouble unless the by-product of healthful exercise is reckoned. And there would be just as much health in playing golf or baseball or hunting in more civilized manner, with camera or field glasses.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

It was believed a while ago that radio patrons would have to pay directly sooner or later for their entertainment. The problem was to find some way to make them pay. As time passes there is less and less indication of that. David Sarnoff, general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, says he does not believe it will ever be necessary to make a direct charge. The problem is working itself out. Broadcasting is expensive but there is a waiting list for the privilege of the air on the present basis. There are six ways Mr. Sarnoff explains by which the expense of broadcasting will be met without direct burden to the public. The radio industry will continue contributing to its support, because without broadcasting the industry cannot exist. Commercial broadcasting with its frankly paid for advertising will provide considerable revenue. Other support will be found from educational institutions, from social welfare organizations, from city governments desirous of community broadcasting and from newspapers, department stores and other organizations which seek thereby to cultivate prestige and good will. This is reassuring to radio fans as well as the radio industry. Radio will probably continue to be the one great institution that virtually gives the public entertainment for nothing.

TO SAVE THE COAL INDUSTRY

There is no mystery about the difficulty the coal industry is having in England and America. It is simply a big industry, highly capitalized and highly manned, whose market is failing it. Strangely enough the tremendous increase in industrial activity is requiring less coal rather than more. The American mining congress finds that the increasing use of water power and oil has deprived the coal industry of a market it would otherwise have for 100,000,000 tons of coal a year.

The amount of water power substituted for fuel is going to increase steadily. The use of petroleum for fuel, now growing rapidly, may wane with the exhaustion of oil deposits, but there is no telling when that will come. There is however an obvious remedy for coal troubles. American power interests have found that they can produce electrical power cheaper by establishing their power plants the mouth of coal mines and burning the coal on the spot than they can produce it from any but the most advantageous water power sites. England, if industrial statesmanship were applied to the coal industry, would probably do this on a vast scale. There would be no difficulty from an engineering standpoint in producing enormous electrical power at the British mines, distributing that power by wires throughout the British Isles, supplying all the energy needed in manufacturing centers and electrifying the whole country. That would save the British coal industry and might bring in a new era of industrial prosperity for Great Britain. But unfortunately such matters are determined by political considerations, not engineering wisdom.

PERSONALITY AND SUCCESS

Everything is "personality" nowadays. Every salesman is supposed to have it in abounding degree. The educator, the business executive, the statesman, is nothing without it. With it we impress others, with it we accomplish our best. The country is full of experts preaching the power of personality and telling us all how to develop our own. "Personality is a reality," says one of these experts. "The ultimate measure of personality is ability to meet and master life's issues, especially in its emergencies. Personality is a complete cross section of the individual." All this begins to grow confusing. Is personality really such a big, all-inclusive thing? Or are we using the wrong term? There are careful thinkers especially those familiar with oriental psychology who make a clear distinction between personality and individuality. Those who believe in reincarnation speak of the personality as merely a group of superficial qualities assumed for a single life, while the individuality is the real self which persists life after life—the basic character which makes a being what he really is rather than what he seems to be. Most people in this part of the world do not believe in rebirth; but isn't there something in this distinction just the same? Isn't it our individuality—the fundamental part of us that makes us really us, different from all other people—which we ought to be developing? The old Romans seem to have looked at it so. Personality comes from the Latin word, persona, which means, a mask. Is a mask so terribly important as our success experts seem to think?

THE NEW DRY RULING

It will be very interesting to follow the experiences of various states in trying out the new booze ruling by President Coolidge which empowers the appointment of state officers as federal prohibition officers. California will likely be the first place that the idea will be tried out, but meanwhile the ruling itself has caused a veritable spasm throughout the country. It has created violent discussion with opinion being either definitely for or definitely against the plan, which was put into effect by President Coolidge on the suggestion of Colonel Lincoln C. Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement. The scheme would call into enforcement service all state, county and municipal officers, those being used in the liquor service receiving a small retainer from the federal government in addition to their regular pay. The plan is under a grand barrage of disapproval, the wets being afraid that it really will make prohibition effective. Aligned with the wets are those who believe that the president has no right to promulgate such a ruling. The first thing to be decided is whether it really is a legal ruling. After that we approach the question as to its appropriateness or its effectiveness. On the latter point there will be nothing as conclusive as a trial and error procedure such as is about to be staged in California. Upon the result of a trial therefore we can base proper judgment on this latest move in advance is just so much idle vaporing.

THE EGYPTIAN ELECTION

Perhaps the most significant feature of the recent Egyptian election, the first on a basis of manhood suffrage, was the absence of much disturbance. At only one place was there any disturbance whatever. The second feature of note was that Zaghlul, the enigma of Egyptian affairs, buried the entire government party under a landslide of votes. To a student of affairs in the Near East the significance of this news is at once apparent. Just what effect will the result of this election have on the interest of Great Britain in Egypt? That is the momentous question to be answered and, up to the present time the victor is not planning an immediate clash with the British since he has slated Adly Pasha, a liberal constitutional leader, instead of a nationalist like himself, for the premiership. This would seem to indicate that the new master of Egyptian destinies is willing to "play ball" with the British, at least to begin with, although to what extent he will cooperate can not be foreseen. There is no doubt that the situation will be tense for some little time until the final outcome of the results of the election can be accurately gauged but it is certainly to be hoped that the status of affairs can be maintained on a peaceful plane to the end that that section of the world at least may not be embroiled in profitless controversy.

So Think We

We think there is no need to be in such a hurry about signing away the gas franchise. We want gas, but the committee investigating should take plenty of time to investigate everything thoroughly if it takes a month to do it. The people of Lubbock have a right to demand that they be protected in every way necessary.

We think that when the temperature never gets higher than 109 in the shade in the summer time and lower than 104 in the sun in the winter that it is not a very bad climate. That is the South Plains.

We think the ole swimmin' pool these days is all right provided you stay under the water and do not let the sun get to you. Otherwise it's a blister.

We think that for the county commissioners to send printing to out of town concerns just for the sake of saving a few dollars a year in preference to giving it to one of the six job printing concerns here is false economy after all. All we fellows are supporting the county by taxes, and are deserving of the patronage, and there is not much difference in the prices either, and even if it seemed to be more some times it is not as much when you take into consideration everything.

We think the county commissioners have violated the law for the past years in their failure to print a financial statement. If we are wrong about this we will give double the amount of space that it has taken to make this statement.

We think there is no use for mud slinging in any of the races for county offices, or state, so far as that is concerned, but people should at least know some facts. But when are you going to know that some of the statements are facts.

We think now is time for public work to be done. It is a time of year when there is not much doing in many places and work can be done cheaper, and at the same time help a lot of people through a dull season.

We think that "Home Sweet Home" lost its universal appeal.

We think that the man who doesn't want his name in the paper is dead. We have heard fellows say they did not, and under some conditions they might be right.

We think there are a few homes that have not been operated on.

We think there would not be near so many foolish men if there were not so many women to make them foolish.

We think that we may have a good road between here and Slaton soon. We hope so at least.

We think it is not wise to lie awake nights planning your work for you are liable to go to sleep on the job the next day.

We think that Lubbock should at once drill for gas.

We think there is a lot of cleaning up that should be done in Lubbock.

We think that brick veneer is pretty nice, but we have never been able to figure out that face veneer is so appropriate.

That Montana is going to vote on the repeal of the dry laws. It would seem more appropriate if they were going to employ Hatfield the rainmaker.

That Grover Bergdoll is very much peeved at the American government. We can't see how he could be when they have taken on over him like they have.

That about the only one that is safe from an automobile collision is the policeman.

That a certain minister was heard to say a few days ago that everyone should be happy that we do not get all that is coming to us.

That a snake bite serum is soon to be used in America. It has been successfully used in Brazil for a number of years. We do not know whether it will take the place of the so-called "snake medicine" of Texas or not.

That some of the people of Floyd county are moving away for fear that their children will get lost in the rank field crops of that county.

That 2170 automobiles were registered in Floyd county for 1926. More than half of them being jitneys.

That a Sweetwater employer asked his bookkeeper to take a little more interest in his business, and as a result the bookkeeper now owns the business.

That the best man will win in the race for governor. This of course does not include the three women either.

That Lynn county is preparing to have a county fair again this fall. That is fine, and we hope they will have an exhibit here during the South Plains fair.

That Dan Moody is the only political candidate that has a local club organized this year.

It is reported that Lubbock is going after the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Convention in dead earnest, and we expect to get what we go after.

MUSCLE SHOALS DELAY

It now appears certain that no action toward the final disposition of Muscle Shoals will be taken before Congress adjourns, so that this long-standing question must remain unsettled for another indefinite period. Committee after committee has been appointed to study and report on various bids for the property, yet no committee has ever been able to reach a unanimous agreement nor has any majority recommendation so far been able to command sufficient support to carry it through both houses of Congress.

The influences exerted by conflicting interests and the mixing of politics with what ought to be a simple business proposition has created a situation which can only be viewed with utter disgust. If any further proof were needed to convince the public of the impotence of Congress to handle business on a large scale, its record with respect to Muscle Shoals should amply supply that proof. Yet, there are some who would have the government engage in various other waterpower development enterprises, with money supplied by the taxpayers and involving the creation of innumerable additional political jobs.

A GUARDED PROPOSAL

Lorenzo Dow, an American evangelist who went to Ireland in 1799 to endeavor to convert the Catholics of that country to Protestantism, was a bold spirit in many respects, but it appears that he was extremely cautious in matters in which women were concerned. His tentative proposal of marriage, written to a young woman of his acquaintance, is a masterpiece of conservatism. He wrote as follows:

"If I am preserved, about a year and a half from now I am in hopes of seeing this northern country again; and if during this time you live and remain single, and find no one that you like better than you do me, and would be willing to give me up three years out of four to travel in foreign lands—for if you should stand in the way I should pray God to remove you, which I believe he would answer—and if I find no one that I like better than I do you, per-

ACCEPTANCE

As it's given to me to see,
I have come to this conclusion:
Telling God what ought to be
Is impertinent intrusion.
So when I get down to pray
I just ask what is best
And the strength to face the day
And the faith to meet the test.

As I run my own life through,
"Spite of all the pains I'm taking,
I'm ashamed to sit and view
All the blunders I've been making
I've so bungled my affairs,
Doing what I thought was wise,
That I've ceased to put on airs
And I fear to criticize.

As it's given me to see,
I have come to this conclusion:
Telling God what ought to be
Is impertinent intrusion.
Since I can not wisely run
All these small affairs of mine,
Surely I am not the one
To resent the will divine.

HUBBERS STORM BEAN IN SEVENTH AND NINTH INNINGS AND WIN FROM FAST LAMESA CLUB YESTERDAY 6 TO 3

It was a seventh inning storm and a ninth inning rally that saved the honors for the Hubbers crew as yet being undefeated in a game with the hard Lamesa club, defeating them by a score of 6 to 3 before a 1500 crowd. For the first time this season has it been that the Hubbers were forced to come to the front—the Lamesa nine scored the first run in the sixth inning with Sheppard's first bobbie for the season followed by two singles off of Hudspeth brought in the first score.

Hubbers Take Seventh by Storm
After chopping at the fast ball of Bean's the Hubbers continued their hard chopping and finally connected, with the young ace, with four hits and three runs—Jackson the first man up in this season rapped out one for two bases; Sheppard tried advancing Jackson to third base; Connelly laid one down scoring Jackson and advancing Sheppard to third base; Gaither drove one to left field scoring Sheppard; Hamilton was hit by pitched ball; Lassiter singled scoring Gaither; the route taken by the Hubbers for the three runs in the seventh.

Lamesa Tie Score in Eighth
After being under for two scores the Lamesa club battered Hudspeth in the eighth and scored two men. Anderson caught both L. White and Gus Ragsdale out with wonderful catches and Koyelski came to bat; Hudspeth had Koyelski with two strikes and one ball, the next he pitched hit Koyelski and he took his base—Adams came up and drove a hard one over the rightfield fence scoring Koyelski ahead of him which tied the score on.

Hubbers Rally in Ninth

YANKS WIN WHILE Helen Says Will Pursuers Fail

The flying Yankees turned the tables on the St. Louis Browns Sunday afternoon, defeating them 6 to 3 and gaining a full game on the second place Athletics, who took a 4 to 1 beating from Cleveland. Uhl allowed the Macken but two hits. Al Thomas pitched sensationally for Chicago, shutting out the slipping Senators and giving them two outs while his team mates garnered three runs.

The Boston Red Sox avenged Saturday's defeat by Detroit, beating the Tigers in their own fair 7 to 3, in a free hitting game. Regan, the Red Sox second baseman, made four singles.

In the only two games played in the National League the Giants trimmed Cincinnati 19 to 3 and Brooklyn administered a 6 to 5 defeat to Chicago.

Burleigh Grimes was credited with the Dodger victory but Jess Petty, the crack left hander, had to pull the husky spit baller out of the hole in the ninth inning when he faltered.

COMPLIMENTS COUNTY LIBRARY

MISS DIMMITT OF AUSTIN TELLS IN ARTICLE OF LUBBOCK BOOK LOANS

AUSTIN, June 13.—In the last issue of the "Library Journal" is an article on "Library Extension in Texas" by Miss Lillian Dimmitt, chief of the Public Loan Library of the University of Texas. In tracing the development of this phase of library work in the state, Miss Dimmitt says:

"In Texas the establishment of county libraries is a fairly recent movement. The first workable county library law was passed in 1919. Under that law seven county libraries are now in operation—three in Cooke, Dallas, Harris, Potter, Tarrant, Wheeler, and Lubbock counties. An eighth county—Deafton—has very recently voted that the amount of $2,500 per year is to be used for the equipment and maintenance of a library.

"The Lubbock library is the newest of the county libraries, having only been in operation since last January. The petition for its establishment which was presented to the Commissioner's court was said to be the biggest petition ever presented in the entire history of the county."

Miss Dimmitt explains the various kinds of extension service offered by public libraries, the State Library and the University of Texas. Regarding the popularity of the package loan libraries sent out by the University of Texas, Miss Dimmitt says:

"The demand for the kind of service offered by the Loan Library Bureau is shown by the large circulation and its steady increase. During the last biennium the circulation amounted to 25,020. The circulation of the year just ended was more than double that of five years ago and almost ten times as large as that of ten years ago when the library had been in operation for about a year and a half. The circulation is not confined to any particular section of the state. During the two years material was sent to all but four of the two hundred and fifty-four counties in Texas. The seven counties not reached are very sparsely settled, only two of them having a population of more than six hundred. It is impossible to tell how many people use the package libraries sent out, as many of them are used by groups of people. It would be a very conservative estimate to say that they were used by about 100,000 persons during the biennium. As there is an average of fifteen items in each package sent out, we can say that 1,500,000 pieces of literature were circulated among about one hundred thousand people during the biennium."

New York Finance

By E. WALTER MOCKLER, NEW YORK, June 13.—If the evidence of last week's stock market can be regarded as a fair guide for the immediate future, the country has little cause to worry about business. Last week's stock market rise in steel, however, centralized in specialists or in the young speculative investors, since doubt might have been cast on the genuineness of the movement. However when steel of the Colliers Central Atlantic Coast Line, L. & N. Du Pont General Motors, Westinghouse Montgomery Ward and others of this character assume the leadership, it is hard to escape the belief that the strong backing interests which sponsor these corporations are very optimistic.

Each steel and General Motors are closely allied with the Morgan interests. That both are fit to take a very favorable action on their own stocks at a time, a few weeks ago, when the entire stock market was gloomy, is accepted as proof that further generous allotments of profits may be made.

While much Wall street's anticipation is for the steel and General Motors is based on its history, there seems an even chance that at least one of the two may make an important change in its capital structure before the end of the year. Followers of steel are hoping for a split in the stock, which might take the form of a 50 per cent stock dividend with all common stock then on a six per cent dividend basis or a hundred per cent stock dividend with the new stock on a five per cent dividend basis. Compared to the present 7 per cent basis the new setup would be equal to 9 and 10 per cent respectively on the present stocks.

There is no question as to the ability of either steel or General Motors to assume this higher annual dividend as both corporations have ample surplus and working capital and are earning at a very good rate right now.

Wall street would not be so optimistic of the prospects were it not for the fact that one of the big bridge bays in the Grand Central district which is considered closest to the leaders in steel, put out a very remarkable brochure covering steel's past, present and future with a generous hint as to the future. As this brochure was not known to have published before, this action, coming at a time when steel common had been electrifying the market with a sharp daily advance, was accepted as highly significant.

WOLFFARTH, Texas, June 13.—W. D. Leard, chairman of the board of trustees, says that he will soon be in a position to announce through The Lubbock Morning Avalanche a full and complete program of the Lubbock community picnic. It is the desire of this committee to have a picnic that will furnish enjoyment for both young and old. Please let all who are interested watch The Avalanche for further notices referring to same.

Considerable excitement is being manifested in Wolffarth real estate property just now. Several residences as well as business lots have been sold. W. H. Mockler is contemplating building a block with shop and residence in the near future.

SPECTRE OF TRAGEDY HANGS OVER HOUSTON PRISON FARM, TO BE ABANDONED BY CITY MONDAY

By United Press.

HOUSTON, June 13.—The stark spectre of tragedy hangs over the city prison farm, where Wiley Zeigler, an inmate, died on June 4 with cruel stripes and welts lashed upon his flesh.

With extensive fields of cotton and broad acres of corn, rustling lazily in a gentle breeze sweeping across the prairie from the gulf, the farm presents the picture of a southern plantation—a haven of domestic tranquility—to the casual observer.

But a second glance reveals the pall of death about the place. All is silent, and the barrack-like prisoners' quarters, with iron bars at the doors and windows, are deserted.

Near the manager's quarters which nestle apart in a grove of giant shade trees, a small group of weary, unkempt men shamble heavily toward a mess house, followed by a prison guard—booted and spurred.

It is the chief caretaker, farmers, the futile troubled glance of the remaining inmates, that suggests the evil balm which witnesses have sworn, cracked to the backs of prisoners while they plodded the fields in the vertical rays of the sun. Zeigler, the witness declared, was eaten severely prior to his death.

Most of the prisoners have been removed to a jail in Houston since the city announced the abandonment of the farm. Further information as to the re-establishment of such an institution, is withheld pending the reports of the Harris county grand jury, which began an investigation of prison farm conditions, following Zeigler's death.

McConnell, W. T. Hill, guard, indicted for murder of Zeigler, who was serving out a $15 fine at the farm, is held in the city jail in default of $10,000 bail. Early trial will be sought by District Attorney George Soale and Hill's attorneys have announced that they will request a change of venue.

Witnesses said that not only Hill

Funeral services for D. J. Gasaway, who died Saturday at his home here, will be conducted this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Broadway church of Christ, the following being pall bearers: T. E. May, A. M. Hall, Luther McCrummen, Frank Bowles, J. A. Barton, L. H. Simpson, C. M. Hayes, B. Sherrod. Burial will be in Lubbock cemetery.

Mr. Gasaway was born in Bun County, Alabama, almost 61 years ago, and was reared in Arkansas, coming to Texas at the age of 18. His parents died when he was very young. He lived for some time in Upsher county, at which place he married. Later he moved to Bosque, Hamilton and other places. He moved with his family to Lubbock county 3 years ago, and lived on the farm two miles south of Idalou for 3 years, where he managed to make good crops, regardless of his afflictions, from which he had suffered from 2 years before. He later sold this farm and moved to his present address and most of the time has been confined to his bed or wheel chair.

He was baptized into the church of Christ at the age of 32 years, and in all his moving, he has been a very prominent member in the church.

AGGIE FORESTRY WORK GROWS

TREE SERVICE MADE MAJOR ACTIVITY AT TEXAS A. & M.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, June 13.—State forestry activities, under the administrative control of the A. B. M. College of Texas, now constitutes one of the four major divisions of the college as the result of a ruling in a recent meeting of the board of directors of the college. E. O. Siecke, head of the department, has been designated director of the new division. It has been given the same official rank as the extension service and the experiment station divisions of the college.

In commenting on the action of the board of directors, Mr. Siecke, who has been state forester for eight years, said:

"The action of the board will be extremely gratifying to the members of the Texas forestry association and to many other persons who are interested in the forestry development. A realization that our forestry problems must have attention and that a wise forestry policy must be prepared and inaugurated is rapidly spreading among the land owners, general legislators and other interests."

Inaugurated by the legislature in 1915, state forestry has made consistent progress and the personnel has grown to five technical and 44 non technical employees. Chief lines of endeavor embrace forest fire prevention and suppression work, general efforts to speed development of a constructive state forestry policy and the rendering of a constructive state forestry policy and the rendering of assistance to Texas farmers in the proper management of their timberland and the establishment of windbreaks and farm groves. Approximately 95 per cent of the work of the department is done in the field.

In the opinion of Mr. Siecke, there is a large field for forestry development in the state, as the timber industry of Texas is exceeded by that of only six other states. "A special forestry committee, authorized by the legislature and appointed by the governor, has submitted comprehensive suggestions as to a state forestry policy and it is expected that a constitutional amendment necessary to inaugurate this policy will be submitted to the people of Texas by the next legislature," Mr. Siecke said.

He believes that economic factors will force Texas to adequately support state forestry activities on a par with similar departments in the leading forest states.

"Nig," Army Cat, is Deserter Again

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Three desertions in various parts of the world have been charged against the army record of "Nig" but all will be forgiven if the wandering ship's cat of the United States steamer Albatross comes trotting home again.

When the army transport put in here for repairs, "Nig" appearing serenely content with his lot as father of a playful family of six, was aboard. But this was "Nig's" home port and his domestic responsibilities were shed like rain water as he blithely went over board for a gaudy shore.

"Nig" came aboard the Meigs two years ago. With the transport he went to Manila and Japan. In the harbor of Manila he jumped the ship and joined the crew of a Swedish vessel.

Eight months later an affectionate Nig, somewhat battle scarred, met the transport at Honolulu, headed straight for the cook's quarters and the "chow" that was promptly forthcoming.

All went well until the Meigs touched at Panama, east bound. Again Nig went shore side without leave and the boat sailed without him. But on the return Nig was waiting and was welcomed back to the transport cat colony.

But now Nig's sea going instincts have caused him to desert again while Mrs. Nig and the little Nigs wait patiently for his return.

FLOYD HARVEST NEARLY READY

750 MACHINES WILL RE IN WHEAT FIELDS BY JULY 1

Special to The Avalanche.
FLOYDADA, June 13.—250 harvesting machines will be in operation in Floyd county wheat fields by July 1, according to local machinery dealers who have up-to-date sold more than $100,000 worth of harvesting machinery, including tractors and combines.

The use of modern machinery had reduced the labor question considerably as practically all the machines sold now are combines, cutting, threshing and harvesting the wheat in the field. The greater part of the labor that will be needed will be wheel haulers and tractor men.

Local dealers have been "head over heels" in work the past ten days, getting in machinery and parts, putting them up and carrying them to the fields. The machines will average harvesting three acres per day and estimates place the acreage at 80,000.

It will be remembered by many that Floyd county produced more wheat in 1924 than any one county in the State earning the name of being "The Banner Wheat Producing County of Texas."

VATICAN INTERCEDES TO HELP LEAGUE

By United News

GIRLS FAST AND HIKE.
SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Fasting nothing but carrots and milk, Vivian and Hilda Nyberg are hiking from Los Angeles to Chicago as a scientific experiment.

RALLS ACREAGE IS INCREASED

FEED AND GARDENS ARE BOTH BIGGER AND BETTER IN COUNTY

RALLS, June 13.—The number of acres under cultivation in the Ralls county has greatly increased this season. Only a few large tracts of plains land remain unbroken. The acreage in feed is greater this year and the gardens are better and larger this year than ever, and farmers are producing nearly all foods for their table. Poultry is the rule at every farm house; hogs have increased in number during the past 12 months; dairy cows are to be found in larger numbers on every farm in the county. The produce houses are kept busy handling cream, chickens and eggs, and with the present prospects for a good crop prosperity will prevail in the Ralls country for the farmers will not owe all their crop will make.

In 1924 Crosby county produced 40,990 bales of cotton and the average is 50 per cent more this year, and it is not impossible for Crosby county to be among the banner cotton counties of the state.
