PROTESTS DO NOT REMOVE TEXAS RANGERS

AUSTIN, June 22.—Ft. Worth legislators in the house of representatives today failed to secure introduction of a resolution asking an investigation and withdrawal of Rangers in the Fort Worth Lone Star Gas strike.

FORT WORTH, June 22.—Texas Rangers continued their vigil at the Lone Star Gas Company shops today as protests rang upon Gov. Allred from city officials and the Gas Consumers Association.

Twelve Rangers were ordered here Monday to "prevent violence" and to assure service work would be done.

Mayor W. J. Hammond shifted all responsibility in the strike to the Rangers.

"Since the Rangers were sent here unsolicited by the city or county authorities and have taken over duties ordinarily performed by city police," he said, "any violence or destruction of property will be their sole responsibility."

BIG RODEO TO BE HELD HERE ON JULY 24TH

Tentative plans have been started in Ranger for a big rodeo, to be held on Saturday, July 24, when two performances will be presented.

Although details have not as yet been worked out, they call for many improvements to be made which will probably increase the crowds and the number of contestants.

A large number of seats will be added at the lighted field, in order that many more spectators can be seated. It was found at the last night rodeo that the crowd overflowed the seats and that many more would be required for future rodeos.

A temporary fence is to be constructed to cut down the side of the arena, as it is now too large for the very best performance. The chutes cannot be improved upon and they are to remain practically as they are.

The rodeo is to be advertised extensively throughout this part of the country in an effort to secure the type of performers that attended the first night rodeo, and it is expected that many more will take part, as those who have entered here have stated that they will bring along other contestants.

Although no decision has been made on the matter as yet, tentative plans have been worked out for a motorcade, sponsored by the Ranger junior college on July 9. If the motorcade is worked up to advertise the college, announcements of the rodeo will also be made along the route.

With the best night rodeo setup between Fort Worth and Stamford, Ranger is in a position to hold the best rodeos that can be staged in this part of the country, it was pointed out, and the one on July 24 will be the forerunner of a big rodeo, possibly a three-day affair, which is being arranged for the Labor Day week-end, early in September.

Ranger has already won considerable fame as a rodeo center, through only one performance, and the one to be held July 24 is expected to be a big boost for the September affair.

A week will be spent in and around Los Angeles, the return trip starting early in July.

Killingsworth is much elated over being one of the winners of this kind of a trip, as well as being one of the ranking Philco dealers in the State of Texas.

Flatwood HDC Hears Talk Upon Canning

"Allow the petcock to remain open until steam escapes for seven minutes, indicating that no air remains inside," said Miss Ramey, county home agent, at the Flatwood Home Demonstration club which met Thursday, June 17, at the home of Mrs. T. E. Robertson.

Maintain a uniform pressure while processing, by regulating the heat. Allowing the pressure to be raised and then lowered, is to be avoided in any case, especially when using jars, as this will result in loss of liquid, the speaker declared.

After removing jars from canner check the seal. Allow jars to cool quickly, putting tin cans in cold water.

A visitor, Mrs. Herman Jordan, was present, and the following members: Mmes. M. L. Foster, J. S. Turner, H. E. Wilson, J. H. Pittman, M. W. Grieger, Cyrus Justice, Tommy Clark, D. E. Webb, W. F. CIO LEAVES NEGOTIATIONS WITH BOARD

By United Press

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Committee for Industrial Organization leaders today concluded, for the present, their efforts to aid the federal mediation board in settling the seven-state steel strike.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 22. National guard troops poured into the Mahoning Valley steel strike center today to enforce military law and prevent reopening of struck plants until the federal mediation board has a chance to settle the seven-states labor conflict.

Called out suddenly last night by Gov. Martin Davey, the militia, 4,800 strong, began arriving in full force shortly before noon. Officers and advance detachments had prevented scheduled reopening of Republic and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company plants.

Davey mobilized the guardsmen and sent them across flooded Central Ohio roads before dawn to avert a threatened clash between redoubled picket lines and back-to-work marchers.

When whistles cried the signal for reopening of the plant gates only a handful of militia was in the strike zone, but the presence of national guard officers and the military rule proclamation was effective.

Peace officers stopped hundreds of invading union autoists from nearby towns and more than 115 were arrested on open charges or because they carried weapons. Seventy-two car loads, however, reached one main gate and 65 "invading" cars were counted at another gate.

State-Owned Plant To Make Cement Is Being Urged

By United Press

AUSTIN, June 22.— Investigation into the possibility of establishing a state-owned plant to furnish cement for Texas highways and buildings, was asked in a resolution introduced today in the House.

The resolution, by Rep. Alfred Petsch of Fredericksburg, stated that a combination had been formed by Texas cement companies against the interests of the state, and under such conditions the highway department had purchased 10,000,000 barrels of cement in the past seven years and would continue to purchase about 1,500,000 barrels annually.

LEON FLOOD AREA WORK GETS CHECK

Howard McMahon of Austin, state reclamation engineer, arrived Monday afternoon in Eastland to check progress of a crew making a topographical survey for mapping of the proposed lake and damsite near Mangum, Eastland county, in the Leon River Flood Control District.

The work being conducted by the crew of the Texas Reclamation Department will be completed in a month or six weeks. The mapping was at the request of the directors of the Leon River Flood Control District of which Frank Sparks, Eastland, is chairman.

Land being mapped at two-foot contour intervals is estimated as covering 10,000 acres. The maps will be given to the directors following the completion, according to McMahon.

McMahon, explaining the work, stated it served the purpose of bringing the project "into the office" of directors. From the mapping directors can formulate plans for the proposed dam and lakesite without leaving an office. Any engineer could design a project from the work now being conducted, said McMahon.

The ultimate goal of district directors is inclusion of the project in the federal government's list of water conservation and irrigation plans. The district, created by the legislature, is composed of Eastland and Callahan counties.

Pete Ball, technical assistant, is in charge of the mapping. He has four assistants.

The Texas Reclamation Department was created 27 years ago. It acts as a consulting engineering department in flood control work and levee work in Texas.

MAILING FOOD WAS A SCHEME FARLEY SAYS

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 22. — Postmaster General James A. Farley, charged in district of Columbia Federal Court today that efforts of Republic Steel to mail food and clothing to strikebound workers were attempts to involve the government in the steel strike.

Farley's statement was made in answer to Republic Steel's petition for a writ to compel the post-office department to accept and deliver mail addressed to workers in the plants of Republic Steel.

Defending his "full authority" under the constitution and the laws for refusing to accept such mail, Farley said the packages were not offered "in good faith."

"The parcels were offered with the real purpose of involving the postal authorities and employes in the controversy existing between the Republic Steel and its striking employes," said Farley.

MAN CAUSES A SCENE AT PARKER TRIAL

By United Press

NEWARK, N. J., June 22. — A spectator in the courtroom where the Ellis Parkers were on trial, leaped to his feet today, ran to the front of the room, tagged Paul Wendel, the government star witness, and shouted:

"That's the man.'"

He was identified as Philip Moses, taxicab driver, who testified for the defense in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, for murdering the infant son of Charles A. Lindbergh.

"If Hauptmann had not been thought of and had not been tried," said George Silver, defense attorney, as he pointed a finger at Wendel, that's the man who would have been tried for kidnaping the Lindbergh baby."

Then Moses precipitated the commotion.

Man at Wheel Holds Traffic Problem Key

Don't cross your legs when you are riding with a reckless auto driver. This is the advice given by Dr. Robert Funston, professor of surgery at the University of Virginia. And although this may not seem to have much relation to the general topic of traffic safety, the professor had good erason to mention it. He has found that passengers who plant the feet apart on the floorboard and lean well back in the seat are less subject to leg and hip injuries in a crash.

Out at Iowa State College, practical research has shown that slight defects of vision may cause serious traffic accidents. Other scientists contribute the information that color blindness causes even conscientious drivers to run through red lights and cause costly collisions.

These interesting items do not prove that science alone has the answer to our enormous traffic problem. There is no one thing that can ever control a transportation mechanism which kills 36,000 and injures more than a million persons in the United States every year. But they do indicate that we are improving our teamwork and are adding to the sum total of knowledge needed to banish the traffic evil.

Other inklings that we are absorbing workable ideas in traffic accident prevention are provided by the national safety education program in schools. It has been proved possible, through classroom teaching, to raise the average age of pedestrians killed or hurt in traffic from the school child level to above the 50-year-old level within 12 months' time. This feat is marred only by the fact that no way has yet been devised to bring adults into classrooms for daily safety lessons.

In the engineering field, great strides have been made. A few years ago a red pin on a map was considered record enough for a traffic mishap. Now, thanks largely to Franklin M. Kreml and his pioneer work in Evanston, Ill., officials may preserve the minutest evidence of an accident. These thorough records enable experts to eliminate street and road hazards, fix rsponsibility for the crash, obtain a higher percentage of convictions, and give the blameless driver a better deal in court.

* * *

Scores of other ideas are being tried. Overpass crossings, high level sidewalks, road straightening and leveling, better lighting, improvements in tires and car equipment all are worthwhile trends toward the common goal.

But mechanical ingenuity never will replace personal judgment, and the issue of life or death on the road always will lie principally in the hands of the man at the wheel.

Summer, bringing its glut of cars on the streets and highways, swings this problem into sharp focus and emphasizes the responsibility of individual drivers and pedestrian. It is a good time to decide whether we shall restrict the auto to its proper sphere in transpotation, or allow it to grow on up as a murderous juggernaut.

E.T.C. of C. Forms Leadership School

By United Press

LONGVIEW, Texas—The East Texas Chamber of Commerce, through its general manager, Hubert M. Harrison, has announced the establishment of a bureau for discovering, training and placing young men in the field of community leadership.

Because the supply of trained executives to direct civic activities, especially in the smaller towns, is small, chamber of commerce management offers a promising field of opportunity to young men of today, Harrison said.

The East Texas Chamber of Commerce has solicited applications of men who have shown activity and interest in civic activities by actual work in their home towns, and who have the proper background to qualify for chamber of commerce management in order to provide East Texas communities with competent chamber of commerce managers, Harrison explained.

The chamber announced that it will accept applications through its Apprentice Secretaries Bureau in order to meet the demands for service on the part of many small communities. Applicants must be between 25 and 35 years of age, be of good character with an aptitude and interest for civic activities and must know something of agriculture and general business.

Three men will be selected from the list of applicants, the chamber announced, and will be sent to the Southwestern Chamber of Commerce School in Dallas, July 19-23.

MEN BEST AT ROLLING "MAKIN'S" SMOKES—

They agree that this tasty guaranteed "makin's" is swell for rolling 'em!

THERE are two things you notice about the roll-your-own smokers of this section: 1—What swell cigarettes they roll. 2—Most of 'em roll Prince Albert. P. A. assures a fast, neat, firm cigarette because it's "crimp cut." Doesn't spill or blow away, and it's easy to shape. Due to the "no-bite" process, P. A. smokes extra-mild. It's milder, tastier for pipes too!

I FIND NOTHING ELSE LIKE P.A. FOR RICH-TASTING, MILD, MELLOW 'MAKIN'S' CIGARETTES

"YES, SIR—Prince Albert is my best-selling brand. Almost all the roll-your-owners around here go for it. I smoke it myself."

"WELL, that's easy to figure out. Prince Albert's got everything—easy to roll, cool and mild on the tongue, and, boy, what real body and taste!"

Copr., 1937, R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

70 fine, roll-your-own cigarettes in every 2-oz. tin of Prince Albert.

PRINCE ALBERT THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

The early bird gets the worm . . . if he knows where to look!

Watch a robin on the lawn some sunshiny morning. A few hops, then a pause. A few more hops, and he listens again. Then, triumphant, he pulls out a fat, wriggling worm.

A silly bird, you would say, if he merely pecked here and there, hoping to strike it lucky.

Reading the advertisements is for you what cocking his head is for the robin. Advertisers tell you just where are the juicest buys.

Cock your eye on the advertisements in this newspaper. They may save pecking on barren ground.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CORAL CRANDALL, heroine and senior at Elton College.
DAVID ARMSTRONG, Elton chemistry professor and Coral's husband.
DONNA ALLEN, Coral's sorority roommate.
HOYT MARQUIS, Coral's one-time fiance.

Yesterday: David and Coral, suspected of selling the secret chemical formula, defend themselves. Their secret marriage, however, establishes the motive for the theft.

CHAPTER XII

THE silence which followed Professor Maxwell's words hung heavy and deep over the six people in the room. No one seemed willing to break it. At last David spoke, addressing himself to Bendorff, Maxwell and President Norton.

"Granted, that we disobeyed the university's wishes in the matter, I am still unable to see how our marriage provides the motive for the theft of the process. Even if I were forced to leave Elton, I feel positive I should be able to gain another position which would enable me to support my wife." He glanced proudly at Coral and held her hand tighter. "The money gained from selling the process to a chemical manufacturer without the permission of my two colleagues would be in no way necessary to us. Besides, to the best of my knowledge, no attempt has been made to sell the process."

Professor Bendorff spoke quietly. "I have said nothing about this to anyone since the letter only arrived this afternoon, but I received a letter from the Allen Chemical Manufacturing Company in Chicago, signed by the president who is Donna Allen's father, saying that he had received a letter from someone at Elton signing himself DAVID CRANDALL, offering the process for sale. Mr. Allen had heard of the discovery through his daughter and felt sure that the letter was in some way spurious, since he knew that both Maxwell and myself were also instrumental in the discovery. The price asked for the process was $15,000." He pulled the letter from his vest pocket and handed it to President Norton. "David Crandall, is of course, a not very ingenious combination of the names of the two culprits."

* * *

CORAL and David were too stunned to speak, to answer by even a gesture of denial the accusing looks of Bendorff and President Norton. Professor Maxwell sat at the desk, his head in his hands, too deeply shocked by this last revelation to act further.

Then Donna spoke. "I can clear up the matter of why they needed the money. Coral's father was $10,000 to the father of Hoyt Marquis, the boy whom she's tried to drag into this affair with me. He and Coral had been engaged for a long time, and when she tried to get out of it after meeting David, he threatened to have his father call in Mr. Crandall's loan on the day Coral graduated. Hoyt told me this himself, and Coral confirmed it. Obviously, if Coral could get the money she could save her father from financial ruin. The extra $5000," he glanced at Coral maliciously, "would just about pay for a nice, long honeymoon trip around the world until the storm blows over."

These words stung Coral out of the black lethargy of despair into which she had sunk. She rose to her feet. "I know that all these things piled together seem to point to our guilt. But I tell you it isn't so, that we are innocent. Don't condemn us without another chance. Let me talk to Donna right here before all of you, with no interruptions except from David. Give me 15 minutes. If, by the end of that time I haven't proved our innocence, do what you like." All nodded assent and Coral moved over near Donna.

Coral went on, imperturbably. "Donna, isn't it true that after I left you that Friday afternoon, you took Hoyt to the lab? Didn't you tell him about the process as you walked over there, and get him interested in talking to David about it?"

"Suppose I did," answered Donna in a low voice. "That doesn't prove anything. The process was stolen Thursday, and David Armstrong lent you his keys so that you could get into the lab and take it."

"That's not true, Donna, and you know it. I'll tell you what happened. Nobody was in the lab on Thursday. The process was not stolen till Friday. You and Hoyt went to the lab. David wasn't there, he was outside smoking, but the door was open and you went in. You showed Hoyt around, and just for fun, showed him the secret drawer in David's desk which you had seen at some time when you were working in the lab. You didn't notice that the paper on which the process was written was in the drawer, but Hoyt, while your back was turned, noticed it, pulled it out and read it, and was putting it in his pocket when you turned around and saw him. Isn't that true?

"No! No!" Donna cried hysterically. "It's all lies."

* * *

"LET me finish," said Coral "Just then, David came back to the lab and you didn't have time to say anything to Hoyt. Later, when you had left the lab, you accused him of taking it. He probably denied it at first, but when you kept at him, I think he must have admitted it and told you he was going to use it against me. For instance, put the theft on David if I refused to marry him in spite of his other threats. He didn't know, then, that I was married. You agreed to keep quiet about it and nothing more happened until the next morning when you had breakfast with him."

Donna still kept her terrified silence and Coral went on. "The next morning, he outlined all his plans to you and you promised to keep the process for him. You didn't hide it in a very good place, and tonight I found it." She drew a long breath. "Can you deny that, Donna? Isn't that just about as it happened? Don't look away, Donna. It's true, isn't it? Answer me!"

Donna burst into a storm of tears. "All right, I'll tell the truth. It is true. Hoyt did take it. It was all about as Coral said. The reason I wrote the letter to my father was this. Hoyt told me he had some gambling debts which had to be paid soon. They came to about $9000. He told me that if I'd write the letter to my father offering to sell the process, he'd give me the extra money. I said I would, because I wanted to get away . . . travel . . . and I knew Dad wouldn't give me the money because I hadn't worked here this year and had gotten into trouble with the dean, besides." She began to cry again. "I don't know what Dad'll do to me when he hears about this!"

"You should have thought of that before," Professor Bendorff said sternly. He turned to Coral and David. "I feel that I owe you both a very special apology, for after I received that letter I was convinced of your guilt. Please forgive me."

Coral went over to Donna and slipped her arm around her shoulders. Please don't be too hard on Donna," she begged them.

President Norton smiled at her. "You're a remarkable girl, Coral. As for Donna's punishment . . . we'll decide that later."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The Supreme Court plan is way up in the air and so are the Supreme Court aspirations of Senator Joe Robinson.

The question is whether they will come back down and, if so, how.

One of these days Robinson will go back to the White House with the results of his effort to see what kind of a compromise on the Roosevelt plan can be worked out in the Senate.

Perhaps he will go bearing a big red rosy apple with only a few soft spots. Or maybe just a couple of little apples, rather greenish and somewhat tart. Or perhaps the skeleton of a very dead fish on the end of a string.

The nature of the Robinson report will determine Roosevelt's future course. The senator went to the White House one night and said he wanted to be sure the President was going through with the court fight. Roosevelt said he was. Robinson then asked if he could check through the Senate and figure out how he could best get Roosevelt what he wanted, after which he could come back with the proposal for approval. The President told him to go ahead.

If the President can't see enough nourishment in what Robinson brings back he may give up his intention of forcing the issue to a vote at this session. Or he might accept a poor compromise in the Senate in the hope of getting a much better bill from the House.

At any rate, the word has gone around that "old Joe" is on the spot and working pretty hard. One administration insider explains that "there's no chance of Joe being a bride unless he gets some bridesmaids to stand up with him." Meaning that if Joe can't wangle some appointments to the court for Roosevelt, he can hardly hope to land on the court himself.

WISE politician Roosevelt is wondering what his big issue will be for the 1938 congressional elections.

The President is not of the shy, retiring type so he hopes to shape the 1938 issue, even though he isn't running.

The issue, he hopes, will be one which will help defeat various anti-New Deal members of Congress in next spring's primaries. That means he will turn to the left for a liberal, progressive or radical issue.

Thus far Roosevelt hasn't been able to think of a more attractive campaign issue than that of the Supreme Court and its powers over legislation. And unless he can win something from the present court fight he now plans to carry the battle over into 1938.

* * *

LUKEWARM or antipathetic administration leadership, with plenty of vigor and hard work on the other side, has figured importantly in the court plan deadlock.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn persuaded Roosevelt to launch the struggle in the Senate after House Judiciary Chairman Hatton Sumners went cold on the plan.

Joe Robinson's friends explain that he was "ill" during the crucial period, but the ailment hasn't been diagnosed. None of the administration's real fighters were on the judiciary committee.

Chairman Henry Ashurst, who had declared vehemently against the court-packing plan and then flip-flopped, spent the time making jokes about himself and everybody else. When the White House tried to cut the hearings short, it failed. The publicity was too pleasant. Senator George Norris supported the bill in committee, but didn't like it well enough to fight for it.

Sport Glances. . . . . .By Grayson

BY RICHARD McCANN
NEA Service Sports Writer

DON'T mean to be suggesting that there ought to be a congressional investigation, or anything like that, but have you been noticing what's come over our shortstops of late?

Time was when a shortstop was just a guy with a glove and a hole in his bat. Maybe he'll get a walk, was the manager's silent prayer every time the shortstop at bat went to bat. He was about as hard to put out as a match.

But now—well, sir, old Mr. Shortstop must be sort of scandalized at the way the young gadabouts are carrying on in this day and age.

One of them, for instance, is leading the National League in home runs, of all things; another is the defending champion batsman of the American League; three others are pushing and shoving right up there, bold as you please, among the leading batters of the American; and still another is battling for the National batting lead.

Ten years ago they used to ask for a saliva test any time a shortstop hit more than .300. In 1927 only one shortstop in the National League and only two in the American managed to carve out a better-than-.300 average.

Travis Jackson batted .317 for the New York Giants to wind up 14th among the league hitters.

Heinie Sand, the Phillies' shortstop, was just outside the charmed circle with a .296 average.

The other six regulars were deep down in the .200 well.

Over in the American League, Joe Sewell of Cleveland was first among the shortstops and 25th among the league batters with a .316 average. Joe Boley of Philadelphia had .311. But the others . . .?

Well, Wally Gerber of St. Louis pounded the poor pill at a pitiless pace of .224, and Bill Hunnefield of the Chicago White Sox batted .285, and the rest were scattered here and there.

* * *

ON the other hand, today you will find Mr. Arky Vaughan, already one-time winner of the National League batting championship, hot on the base-hit-strewn trail of Joe Medwick. The Pirate shortfielder is hitting almost .400.

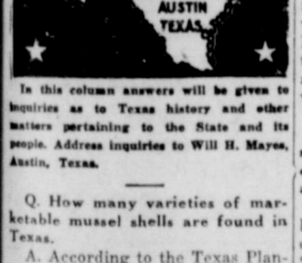

And leading the parade of National League home run hitters is Dick Bartell, who last year got only eight home runs and hit .298.

Lyn Lary, rescued from the dismal dunes of St. Louis, where he slapped out a .289 batting average last year, is on the warpath with the Indians this year, banging the ball for better than .350 and scoring more runs than a splintery chair at a sorority meeting.

Joe Cronin is running neck-and-neck with Lary, while Cecil Travis of Washington is whacking away after a luckless start.

Luke Appling, the defending champion, was floored in the first couple of rounds, but he's starting to take up where he left off last year and the Chicago White Socker will be up among the leaders in a jiffy, as they used to say in Honus Wagner's time.

And of course there are Frankie Crosetti of the New York Yankees, Bill Knickerbocker of the St. Louis Browns, and Bill Rogell of the Detroit Tigers, dangerous hitters all.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. How many varieties of marketable mussel shells are found in Texas.

A. According to the Texas Planning Board, Texas streams produce 21 varieties of marketable shells of kinds used in making so-called pearl buttons.

Q. From what place was Gen. Felix Huston?

A. From Natchez, Miss., reaching Texas too late to take part in the Battle of San Jacinto. He remained and in the summer of 1836 succeeded Gen. Thos. J. Rusk in command of the Army. When President Houston sent Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston to succeed him, a controversy ensued, followed by a duel, in which Johnston was severely wounded. Huston remained in Texas some years and was in command at the Battle of Plum Creek, near the present town of Lockhart, in 1840, soon afterward returning to Natchez where he died in 1857.

Q. How much land has the Resettlement Administration acquired to carry on its work in Texas and how is it being handled?

A. During its first year, recently closed, options have been accepted on 34,090 acres, of which 22,625 acres have been paid for. Buildings are under construction on 125 farms, on which families are now living in temporary quarters. Most of these will be given opportunity to buy land on 40 years time at three per cent interest.

Q. What distinguished man from Natchez, Miss., arrived at San Jacinto with a company after the battle, and immediately returned home?

A. Gen. John A. Quitman, for whom Quitman, Wood county, was named. He was captain of the "Natchez Fencibles," resigned his command, organized a small volunteer company and left April 5, 1836 for Texas. He reached San Jacinto with his command, which had increased to about 70, two days after the battle. Some of the men remained in Texas and some, including Capt. Quitman, returned home, reaching Natchez, May 27. Quitman afterward was governor of Mississippi and also served his state in Congress.

Q. What was the flag of the New Orleans Grays," and by whom was it presented?

A. It was of bright blue silk and was given one of the companies by Texas ladies when the company entered Texas at the banks of the Sabine river. On it was the inscription: "First Company of Texas Volunteers, from New Orleans. God and Liberty." The other company of New Orleans Grays came to Texas by boat.

Q. How long did the first Gonzales settlers remain there and why did they leave?

A. While some of the few colonists were away on various missions, others started, on July 2, 1826, to a Fourth of July celebration on the Colorado, and while camped at night were attacked by Indians, one of their number, Brazil Durbin, being severely wounded. They returned to Gonzales and found John Wighman had been killed and scalped. A note on Major Kerr's door informed them the others had gone to the Colorado. The entire party then hurried to the Colorado and no attempt was made to return to Gonzales until fall.

"Sing and Be Happy"

Texas May Have a Warm Springs as a Rival to Georgia's

HOUSTON.—The famous Warm Springs of Georgia will soon have a rival, according to Jack Blackwell, who, under the title of "Suffer Little Children," tells of the projected warm springs foundation of Texas in the June issue of Texas Parade, official organ of the Texas Good Roads association.

"Few things," says Mr. Blackwell, "are as inspiring as a happy, healthy child, and one of childhood's greatest boons is the opportunity to run, to play childish games, to develop physically as well as mentally.

"Texas only recently has discovered the health giving qualities of a God-given flow of mineral waters in the valley of the San Marcos river, and a group of public-spirited citizens have joined in the movement to develop a warm springs foundation where the crippled children of Texas may find surcease from pain and a chance to build strong, healthy, useful bodies.

"The site for the foundation is at Ottine, a few miles from Gonzales, where pools and streams of warm mineral water lave placidly at shores lined with luxuriant tropical growth. Nearby, at Palmetto state park, has already been provided auxiliary facilities that will make of the area a traveler's mecca.

"Texans who have visited the area believe that its full usefulness has not been reached in making of it only a recreation spot and that provision of additional facilities for the care of crippled children, together with the improvements already installed by CCC workers, will make it one of the most beautiful as well as the most valuable from a health standpoint in Texas. The move to build this convalescent and rehabilitation center for the state's unfortunate children is being sponsored by the Gonzales Warm Springs Foundation, whose membership and directorate includes leading Texas citizens.

"The foundation hopes to be able to finance the construction of therapeutic pools for warm water exercises, administration buildings and small modern cottages for the use of physically handicapped children and their parents. The foundation is incorporated by the state as a benevolent institution and has the endorsement of the Texas and International Societies for Crippled Children.

Fight Broadcast Is Not to Interfere With Softball Games

The fight broadcast will not interfere with the softball games, it was announced here today.

A radio, with loud speaker, is to be installed at the softball field so that those who wish to attend the games can also hear the fight broadcast.

The games will be started at the regular time, and when the fight is being broadcast, the games will be halted and the radio turned on.

On tonight's schedule are two good games, the first between the Elks and Caddo, and the second between Strawn Merchandise and TeePee.

Query About Early Texan Brings Out Musty Old Records

By United Press

HOUSTON. — A query from the Seneca county clerk of Waterloo, N. Y., to the Harris county clerk here concerning John R. Harris, Texas pioneer, brought out musty records.

The old records, same written in faded Spanish, revealed many sidelights on acquisition of old Spanish land grants.

The New York clerk wanted information about "a man named John R. Harris and his wife, Jane, who left this county to settle in Texas in 1837."

Harris was a member of a prominent family which founded Harrisburg, Pa., the query said. Records showed that the New York clerk's dates were mixed.

John R. Harris, who came to Texas in 1837, was the son of the couple mentioned. The original Harrises, John and Jane, received a Spanish land grant in 1824 as members of Stephen F. Austin's colony.

The elder Harris' settling in Texas caused Harris county and the city of Harrisburg, once the state capital, to be named for him.

Harris obtained a grant of "one sitio" or league on the south bank of Buffalo bayou, now famous as Houston's ship channel. It was witnessed by Baron de Bastrop and Empresario Estevan F. Austin. The grant was described in age-worn Spanish script.

In the old Spanish form, it was recorded that the grantors "did take him by the hand over it and tell him in loud and perceptible tones" that the land was his. Harris "shouted, pulled grasses, threw stones, planted stakes and performed the other necessary ceremonies" of taking possession.

Harris died in New Orleans in 1829, according to his great-grand - daughter, Miss Annie Hume.

MOTHER HELPED BY KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

"I have suffered from terrible constipation since the birth of my first child. I tried everything. Very reluctantly, I tried your ALL-BRAN with no faith in it at all.

"Much to my surprise, I have not had to take any medicine since starting to use ALL-BRAN."— Mrs. Doris Lyre King, 16 Abbey Road, Oxford, England.

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies this needed "bulk."

Within the body, this cereal absorbs twice its weight in water, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood.

Enjoy this food instead of taking weakening pills and drugs. Serve as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes.

ALL-BRAN is sold by your grocer. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Killingsworth, Cox Wins a Lulu From Elks In 10 Innings

It took 10 innings to do it, but Killingsworth, Cox won a honey of a ball game from the league-leading Elks to topple them out of their exclusive position as the only 1.000 per cent team in the league.

Not only did Killingsworth, Cox win, but the Elks, though they scored four runs, did not score an earned run throughout the 10 innings, all being presented to them by errors, one that was good for four bases and the tying run in the sixth inning.

The feature of the game was the hitting of Harbin, second baseman for Killnigsworth, who connected for five hits out of five trips to the plate, his blow in the 10th breaking the tie that had existed since the sixth. Matthews, at first for the winners, did not fare so well, striking out four times on four trips to the plate.

Killingsworth, Cox scored in the first inning and the score was tied at one-all in the second, was tied at 2-2 in the third, the Elks led by 3-2 in the fourth and it was tied at 4-4 in the sixth, which was the score until the winners staged a four-run rally on four hits and a walk in the 10th.

Lone Star won an easy victory over Dr. Pepper in the nightcap, which was featured by an unassisted double play by Walko, playing right field for the losers. With one out he ran in almost to the infield to scoop up a Texas leaguer and then ran on to first to step on the bag for the unassisted double play by an outfielder.

Dr. Pepper was practically defeated when they went on the field, as their star pitcher was not in the game and the fielding was erratic, because the players were uneasy about the pitching and gave Stewart little support.
