MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin has resigned "on health grounds" and been replaced by his first deputy, Nikolai Tikhonov, the Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

The 76-year-old Kosygin, premier since 1964, has been ill most of this year, reportedly with heart and circulatory problems. He is said to have suffered at least one heart attack in the past. He was last seen in public Aug. 3 at the close of the Moscow Olympic Games.

Tikhonov, 75, has been performing Kosygin's duties in recent weeks.

Kosygin's resignation leaves President Leonid I. Brezhnev, 73, as the last member of a one-time Soviet leadership "troika" with Kosygin and then-President Nikolai Podgorny. Brezhnev, who is general secretary of the Communist Party, took over Podgorny's presidential post in May 1977.

The "three" had inherited power from Nikita S. Khrushchev when Khrushchev was ousted in 1964.

Kosygin, whose resignation came as little surprise, had gained a reputation as a great survivor of Kremlin infighting.

After Podgorny's ouster, Kosygin occasionally helped Brezhnev with his duties when the Soviet president suffered health problems. But Kosygin's own health became an increasing problem in the past year, keeping him away from public activities for months at a time.

The slightly built economics expert and former mayor of Leningrad became well-known to Americans when he met with President Lyndon B. Johnson at Glassboro, N.J., in 1967. That was the first top-level U.S.-Soviet meeting since the abortive Vienna, Austria, summit of 1961.

The SDN Column

This weekend we're going to get that hour back that we lost last spring.

Daylight Saving Time for 1980 will come to an end officially at 2 a. m. Sunday, which means that we can sleep late Sunday morning.

The change of time, which happens twice each year, never fails to cause confusion, despite the fact that it has been in effect now for several years and each change is thoroughly publicized in advance.

To make certain that we get the message across in this column, we pause to advise that if you want to awaken Sunday morning to the correct time, move your clock back one hour before you retire Saturday night—that is, if you change your clock at 10 p. m. Saturday, move it back to 9 p. m.

As you might expect, the change in the spring—when we go from Standard Time to Daylight Time—usually causes the most problems. Invariably there are people who come into churches just in time to hear the benediction, having neglected to move their clocks up an hour.

But we repeat, this time, you move your clock back, and if you happen to forget, you will merely be an hour early instead of an hour late on Sunday morning.

A few years ago we came out strong in this column for year-round Daylight Saving Time. We got a lot of opposition. But we also found some support. Our real objective was to get a time established that could be used the year round, thus avoiding all of this confusion associated with changing twice a year.

Congress didn't buy it, but they did make it half and half. We preferred Daylight Time over Standard Time because we prefer the extra daylight at the end of the day rather than at the beginning. There were complaints, of course, from people who said they didn't want to go to work in the dark every morning, and schools had their problems. But we had support from those who like to get in a round of golf after work in the afternoons, and for those of us who go to work in the dark every morning regardless of whether we are on Standard or Daylight Time, this factor was of no consequence.

Anyway, we still change times twice a year, and for a few days the coming week, many people will enjoy an extra hour of sleep. That won't last long for some, however, as they quickly become adjusted to the new time.

Then we can begin worrying about having to get up an hour earlier next morning when we go back to DST. That's when the tough part comes.

After Innocent Verdict...

Brilab Defendants Blast Accusers

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and two Austin attorneys lashed out at their accusers in the Texas Brilab trial after the trio was cleared of influence-peddling charges that threatened to scuttle carefully nurtured reputations and careers.

Clayton, Randall Wood and Donald Ray, were found innocent of six counts of bribery, extortion, racketeering and conspiracy by a federal court jury Wednesday afternoon.

The three maintained throughout the trial they had been manipulated and entrapped by convicted felon the FBI hired as an informant to assist the agency in the 10-month undercover sting operation.

Ray was quiet and soft-spoken throughout the lengthy trial, but after the verdict he blasted U.S. Attorney Tony Canales of Houston, who aided the prosecution.

"He is a small-minded politician using this case for his own advantage," said Ray, 39. "I will ask for a U.S. Senate investigation of the FBI activities in the Brilab case."

Clayton, the three-term speaker from the farmlands of West Texas, handed Canales a wooden stake after the verdict. On the stake were two plates.

One was inscribed with a Canales quote from August of this year, "I want to drive a stake into the heart of Billy Clayton."

The other plate read, "Oh Lord, make my words tender and sweet today, for tomorrow I may have to eat them."

"On his way out of the Federal Building Clayton, told reporters, 'I told you news people this would happen. This has been an experience I never expected and don't want again. But the verdict supports my belief in the court system. We are now going away for a few days rest.'"

Wood also chided the federal government and Canales for bringing the case to trial.

"The real tragedy was not the fact we had to go through this mess," said the 36-year-old attorney. "The tragedy was that a jury had to put a stamp of disapproval on what our federal government did."

"There will be from now on some concern about anything done by the FBI and that is a shame. But the responsibility must rest on the shoulders of U.S. Attorney Tony Canales and his assistant, (chief prosecutor) Ron Woods."

Wood said he would have done nothing different and Canales also defended his role in the prosecution.

"This case had to be tried," he said.

Prosecutors contended Clayton accepted a $5,000 bribe and the promise of $500,000 more a year from labor leader L.G. Moore to reopen the bidding on a multi-million dollar state employees health insurance contract.

Clayton denied repeatedly on the stand that he had ever accepted a bribe. He acknowledged receipt of the $5,000 but said he considered it a campaign contribution that he intended to return.

WTC Students Win At Egg Drop Contest

The First Annual Western Texas College Egg Drop was enough to make even the most hardboiled wince.

The contest, sponsored by the college's recreation committee, was to determine whose egg could survive the drop from an airplane flying at 500 feet.

The individual winner was Lori Hollowell, a freshman from Clyde, and the group winners were Scott Crenwelge and Lonnie Blackard, both freshmen from Snyder. Theirs were the toughest eggs.

The eggs could be packaged just about any way by the contestants, but the packages had to be limited to eight square inches. The 20 entries came packaged in everything from axle grease to a stuffed toy animal. Many were parachuted to the ground. One egg, which was entered by Mickey Baird, the college's activities director, was painted with a Superman emblem and had a red cape tied about its oval shoulders.

The drop was made yesterday in a vacant field south of the college. The winners received $25.

Crenwelge and Blackard had the foresight to place their egg in a balsa wood airplane in the hopes the airplane would glide to the ground. It didn't, but still the egg survived. Miss Hollowell had hollowed out a styrofoam ball and filled the hollow center with liquid rubber cement into which the egg was placed.

Although they were the winners from the standpoint of originally, theirs were not the only eggs to survive. Other survivors had been entered by the press club and the residential construction department in the group division, and by Ken Grimm, an Abilene sophomore, and Debbie Nowell, a freshman from Colorado City, in the individual category.

Hostage Release Again Doubtful

By The Associated Press

A hardline member of Iran's Parliament today raised fresh doubts about an imminent release for the 52 American hostages, despite earlier signs of optimism.

Ali Akbar Nateq Noori, a member of the committee that prepared a report on the hostages, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press that "some more conditions may be added" to the four basic terms outlined by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Noori said the conditions proposed by the panel would remain "secret" until they were unveiled to the 228-member Parliament along with the report on Sunday, the hostages' 358th day in captivity.

Asked if the United States was likely to accept the conditions, he said, "Maybe not now that some more will be added, for the conditions may not be limited to the four conditions" of Khomeini.

Noori suggested the whole process may be time-consuming.

"It is unpredictable because opinions vary in the Majlis," or Parliament, he said.

He added it "won't take more than one week" for the first round of debate but that more rounds may be necessary if the full assembly refers the report back to committee for further study or changes.

A flurry of reports from Tehran on Wednesday raised optimism that Iran's revolutionary regime was getting ready to free the hostages, and Carter administration officials were extremely cautious but hopeful.

Floodwaters Threaten Pipeline

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A recently fortified railroad embankment that had held back floodwaters from a breached levee in the San Joaquin Valley gave way early today, threatening an aqueduct system that supplies water to more than a million people.

The Southern Pacific Railway embankment gave way about 2:15 a.m. as a freight train crossed the embankment, said Lt. Fred Wilson of the San Joaquin County Sheriff's Department.

One of the train engines slipped off the tracks into the water, but there were no injuries, he said.

Iranians Say Attack Fails

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

Iran said its forces beat back more Iraqi attempts to penetrate into Abadan, but it admitted enemy gains in neighboring Kharramshahr and said Iraqi tank fire had reached Ahwaz, the capital of oil-rich Khuzistan Province 70 miles to the north.

Iran's official Pars news agency reported heavy fighting Wednesday to the east and south of Abadan, including a battle at the bridge over the Bahmanshir River, gateway to the refinery city on the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway that flows into the Persian Gulf.

But it said the Iranians held off renewed tank assaults on the bridge.

Bid Accepted For Portable Building

Snyder School Trustees awarded a contract Wednesday to Ilcor Co. of Austin for a portable classroom building.

Bids were studied at a special meeting held at Northeast Elementary School, where the building will be put to use to house a class now meeting in a hallway.

The firm bid $14,195 and was one of six received. The bids ranged from $13,200 to $21,843. Ilcor's bid offered several items considered superior to those in lower bids and promised delivery in 10 to 14 days. Delivery dates ranged up to Jan. 5 in the bidding. School officials said the time element was especially important, since the classroom is need immediately.

Also during the special session, Don West of Hugh Boren and Son Insurance Agency, discussed liability insurance coverage with the board. The board had voted at its last regular meeting to acquire insurance to protect the school district from claims which might arise from use of school facilities by outside groups.

Real Believer In United Way Work

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles on the Scurry County United Way. These articles are being published intermittently during the United Way's campaign for funds.

I work with the United Way because I really believe in people helping people. That is what the United Way is all about. When I first got involved in this organization, I worked more for my own enjoyment than because I strongly believed in the United Way goals. I also worked because I enjoyed working with the kinds of people who are involved in the United Way. They are generally community-minded people who are willing to put forth their time and energy to see that our community remains an outstanding place in which to live and raise our children.

But as I worked, I realized that I had come to believe in the United Way itself—in what it does for the community.

Not too long ago, my husband and I were in a West Texas city not too far from here. The headlines in the newspaper indicated to us that certain parts of the city were unsafe at night because of gang wars. The ensuing article told of one teen-aged boy being murdered and various others injured in street fights. The fights were blamed on the fact that the boys had nothing to do to keep them off the streets. They had gotten into the habit of "hanging out" on the streets at a very early age.

certainly eliminate a lot of that," I thought. I came home prepared to work even harder for our United Way.

Good community committees don't just happen. They take committed people caring enough to work and make them good. We fuss and fume about the government getting into more and more of our business. If we don't want this happening, let's get the job done ourselves. We need to support organizations that help those in need, whether they are flood victims being helped by the Red Cross, or boys that use the Boys' Club. The question we must all ask ourselves is, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The answer I have chosen for my life is a resounding "yes."

buyer not so naive

Americans are hardened to advertising, particularly television commercials, as Eskimos are to the cold. A skeptical breed anyway, we have heard Madison Avenue exhortations so long we take advertising with a large pinch of salt. Which is healthy, for it reminds advertisers to put meat on the bones of their ads. A skeptical audience is a challenge to the speaker.

Little do Americans need government protection in the area of advertising. Yet government, ever eager to protect its citizens from their enemies, real and imaginary, sets up rules to ban deception and improve communication.

Such rules have been adopted in Ohio, but both sellers and buyers complain they are ambiguous and impractical. To check on these regulations, Attorney General William J. Brown's office is holding a series of hearings about the state to which consumers and retailers are invited to come and air their criticisms.

One of the rules complained about forbids a retailer to advertise an item at a low price to lure the consumer into the store, where the clerk tries to switch the buyer's interest to a higher priced item. Another is directed at the merchant who advertises a "sale" but in reality marks few or no prices down. A third orders the price-cutter to state in his ad all the conditions the buyer must meet to qualify for the low price.

Such laws imply that the consumer is as innocent as a child. Presumably, he or she is reading the ad or listening to the electronic appeal for the first time, and moreover is not aware that the seller is eager to sell his goods and will use variety of appeals to attract people into his store to buy.

This implication is far from the truth. People as buyers are just as sophisticated as seller, and advertising has helped to make them so.

Nor are shoppers defenseless. In the first place, they act voluntarily. They need not buy at all; no one forces them. When they buy, they have enormous variety of goods, of prices and qualities to choose from.

They also have many stores and outlets from which to buy. These outlets, are competing with one another for the buyer's trade. It follows that each of these competitors is moved to treat the buyer well so he will be satisfied and will continue to patronize the firm's outlet and to advise his friends to do so.

Reputation is a seller's most precious asset. He would not improve it through deceptive advertising.

Laws forbidding uses of speech or press that are clearly fraudulent have been declared by the courts to be allowable, but language is deceptive. What would be fraudulent to one could be merely seductive to another. The authors of the U.S. Constitution knew this; hence they split no hairs but declared flatly that Congress "shall make no laws...abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

Government should keep its hands off the area of language. If one regulation is approved, then another soon will follow. A meddling court could hold that every appeal which is remotely persuasive is an invasion of minds, an unfair and deceptive act.

Let the legislators once start to dictate the seller's appeals to buy and, in time, no one will be safe to speak his mind on any subject.

Half Days Classes Considered...

Judge Extends Temporary Ban On Enrolling Aliens

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Local school officials have 30 days to prepare to resume enrollment of illegal alien children — a move they say may force them to consider half-day classes to handle the extra students.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela extended a temporary ban on the admission of undocumented children to this border district on Wednesday following a 3 1/2 hour hearing. Brownsville School Superintendent Raul Besteiro testified the school system lacked the money, classrooms and teachers needed to educate the additional students a Houston federal judge says must be enrolled.

"I think the evidence is unquestionable that they have problems in Brownsville," Vela said. "But the problems in the Brownsville school district are not only undocumented students but in other categories. For me to give a permanent injunction would be discriminatory and illegal."

The judge said he wanted to take the extra time to read all the evidence before writing an opinion due to "the impact this case may have in the entire state of Texas."

Vela issued a temporary ban on enrolling the undocumented children on Oct. 11. School officials estimated between 30 and 40 children have been turned away since then.

Linda Yanez, an attorney representing a family whose children were denied admission under Vela's earlier order, termed his ruling a "victory" and said other school districts probably would think twice before trying to seek an exemption from a statewide order to educate all children.

Brownsville school officials presented figures showing it has enrolled 557 undocumented children since U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals ordered Texas schools to admit illegal aliens.

But Ms. Yanez said that figure was misleading. "There are really only 170 of that number in which the parent and child are illegal aliens," she said.

School attendance officer Alonzo Perez confirmed under cross-examination that some of the "undocumented" children actually were U.S. citizens whose parents were illegal aliens. Children born in this country are legal citizens, whether their parents are here legally or not.

Ms. Yanez said there were other instances of children being considered undocumented when they simply lacked proper papers to prove they were citizens or lawful what's the difference?

The president of the United States has limited authority. He does not, cannot "run the country."

In our system of checks and balances the president's power is necessarily limited.

Congress can thwart him, even override him.

And the courts can overrule them both.

Then what difference does it make who's president? A big difference.

The prerogatives of the presidency which are of most lasting significance involve his power to make appointments.

For example, to appease the professional environmentalists President Carter let Ralph Nader pick so many people for the EPA that he, the president, lost control of that department of government.

Most important, however, are the president's picks for federal judgeships — and particularly his selections for the Supreme Court.

Whatever his other attributes, President Eisenhower most altered the course of history and influenced our daily lives with his selection of Warren as Chief Justice.

He later confessed he had no idea Warren would "turn out that way."

That happens. When President Madison selected James Story — when President Wilson appointed James McReynolds — those presidents were subsequently disappointed.

For the most part, however, presidents select for the Supreme Court individuals whose basic philosophy parallels their own.

I believe that, confronted with a Supreme Court vacancy, Jimmy Carter's first choice would be former Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

However, should the president have to make a choice between now and Election Day, it's more likely he would name a woman or a black. The pragmatism of partisan politics would dictate it.

The Republicans sought in their party platform to ensure constructionist choices for the High Court. The platform calls for the appointment of judges who "have the highest regard for protecting the rights of law-abiding citizens" and whose philosophy is consistent with belief in the decentralization of the federal government and efforts to turn decision-making power back to state and local elected officials.

In his acceptance speech, Gov. Reagan said, "I ask you not simply to trust me, but to trust your values — our values — and hold me responsible for living up to them."

The next president of the United States is going to make two — possibly as many as five — appointments to the Supreme Court.

For a generation behaving Americans have been victimized.

Hopefully, the next High Court appointee will bring the scales of justice back in balance.

Why spend all that money to go disco-ing, when you can go to bed, think about your problems and have the jitters for free?

It's "in" to carry your lunch in a brief case, but you're truly "in" if you brownbag and don't care who sees you doing it.

Telling him that laughter is the best medicine is going to get you absolutely no laughs from your friendly family healer.

Our neighbor says he's all for equality, but when his frau talks of spending one night a week with the boys, that's too much.

"FUNDING FOR DEFENSE cannot be looked at in isolation," says Defense Secretary Harold Brown in criticizing recent congressional efforts to raise Pentagon spending above the administration's request. Adds Brown, "It (defense funding) must be balanced with non-defense funding requirements and with the need for fiscal responsibility."

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The debate over whether U.S. armed forces are ready for combat has recently become public and, with the election nearing, political.

But the charges and countercharges being traded by the presidential candidates and their surrogates are only part of the story. A more important debate is going on behind the scenes at the highest levels of the Pentagon.

Several reports leaked to the press in recent weeks have questioned the combat readiness of critical elements of our armed forces. One cited six of 10 Army divisions as unprepared for battle; another found that many key naval units are not ready for combat.

This information came from the readiness reports filed monthly by all operational commanders. These individual assessments are tabulated at the Pentagon and forwarded to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who then produce a single readiness report for the White House and certain members of Congress.

The leaked reports have become politically embarrassing to President Carter as Ronald Reagan and his advisers have cited them as proof of the disrepair into which the military has fallen under the current administration.

The Republican charges led Defense Secretary Harold Brown to make a major political speech disputing the leaked assessments. "Our Army is ready to go to war," insisted Brown. "Our forces are ready." The problem, he explained, was that the press misinterpreted the leaked information.

Despite his defense of our forces and despite statements from his department to the contrary, Brown is taking steps to insure that future reports reflect improved preparedness — whether or not the military is actually better prepared for combat.

This column has learned of a confidential memorandum sent by Brown to the Joint Chiefs within the last two weeks. In that memo, Brown reportedly complained that the guidelines used in preparing the readiness reports produce a "false" picture of U.S. combat readiness and ordered that no more reports be filed until the guidelines "can be studied."

In turn, Army Gen. James Johnson, who is on the staff of the Joint Chiefs, wrote an internal memo to operational commanders that said: "The secretary of defense has expressed concern that our current readiness reporting formats only emphasize the negative aspects of our military readiness. The secretary has asked that we re-examine our readiness reporting system to develop a reporting format which places greater emphasis on the positive factors of our readiness." In the meantime, he added, no new reports should be filed.

When this memo was leaked, Pentagon spokesman Tom Ross quickly declared that Johnson had "misinterpreted the secretary's views." Ross denied that Brown wants to "change the readiness reporting system."

But a Pentagon source, who saw the secretary's original memo counters that "Johnson's interpretation is the only one possible from the (Brown) memo."

"They are playing semantics," says this insider.

"It is true that the secretary does not want to change the system. What he wants to see change are the standards by which the degree of readiness of individual units is judged. The system would remain the same, but the standards would be eased."

While Brown is arguing that the current readiness standards are "too" stringent, agreement is growing at the Pentagon, especially among officers close to the operational levels, that the standards already are too loose and are producing an overly optimistic picture of U.S. military preparedness. Those sharing this view include officers who have gone into the field to audit previous readiness reports.

Says the Pentagon source: "Many officers, especially those attached to our quick-response force command, are convinced that our current readiness standards are measuring simply the ability of a unit or a command to get off the ground. What they do not measure is the probable effectiveness of the unit once it arrives at a target or the probability of its being able to return."

"So at the same time the secretary is worried about the standards giving too gloomy a picture, the operational people are worried that they give too optimistic a picture because they do not measure a unit's ability to accomplish a mission on a return safely."

The Joint Chiefs are caught in the middle: Their political boss wants the reporting standards revised to reflect greater readiness while their lower-level commanders are counseling that the standards are already too lax.

NEW YORK (AP) — Be careful, or those old Series E government bonds you bought during World War Two might cost you a pile of taxes, conceivably even more than the face value of the bonds.

What it amounts to is that your contribution to the war effort in 1941 might be your tax liability in 1981. No need to rush things, because you have at least until 1981 to decide what to do, but be forewarned. The situation develops because the U.S. Treasury has indicated it plans to retire the bonds when they reach age 40, instead of extending their maturities again as it has done several times in the past.

The decision means Uncle Sam will pay bondholders the money he owes them, that is, face value and accrued interest, and many bondholders then will repay Uncle Sam the taxes they owe on the interest.

For example, a $1,000 bond bought in 1941 for $750 has a value today of about $3,000, and the $2,250 difference between the purchase price and the current value could be taxable as ordinary interest income.

Not everyone will face a tax liability, since some bondholders long ago chose to pay annual taxes on the interest as it was earned. Most buyers, however, accepted the option of deferring tax payments for the life of the bonds. That life is now coming to a close, and so the tax deferrers are facing a day of reckoning, albeit with a choice.

The choice is to reinvest proceeds from the Series E bonds in Series HH bonds, which continues the process of deferring tax payments until a later date, when the owner might be retired and in a lower tax bracket.

There are, however, at least two big differences between Series HH and the popular Series E bonds — known as war bonds in the early 1940s and savings bonds since then.

1. Unlike Series E bonds, which were sold at a discount from face value — remember, a $25 bond sold for $18.75 — Series HH bonds are sold at face value and earn semiannual interest payments, paid by check.

2. Taxes must be paid each year on the interest earned on Series HH. Note, however, that the reinvested funds themselves remain sheltered, at least for the 10-year life of the Series HH bonds.

The first E bonds to reach the 40-year retirement date will be those issued during May 1941, which suggests that holders have until next spring to decide whether to bite the bullet or continue deferrals.

Thereafter, Series E bonds issued through April 1952 will be retired as they reach age 40, leaving their owners with one year in which to get the funds reinvested in Series HH bonds.

Which will it be: To face the sting of outrageous tax payments now? Or take shelter in the new Series HH bonds, and thus delay again the day of reckoning?

Bondholders, it's your choice.

The Ira PTA met in regular session with 28 attending and Mrs. Donnie Dunn, president, presiding.

Sue Parham gave a devotion entitled "Analysis of a Child's Well Being."

The unit accepted the recommendation of the executive committee to update the luncheon prices for the Fall Festival as follows: chili, $1.25; bowl of beans, 35 cents; hot dogs, 85 cents; cake, 60 cents; pie, 60 cents; chicken salad sandwiches, 65 cents; pimento cheese sandwiches, 65 cents; coffee and tea, 35 cents.

Mrs. Dunn noted a change in festival bankers which includes Shirley Taylor, grades 5-8, and Beverly Clements, grades K-4.

Without the ace of hearts, South would merely rebid two spades. With the ace of hearts, South feels that he can afford a real heart cue bid.

North sees some slight slam possibility and bids four diamonds. South raises to five at which point North looks carefully at his singleton club and jumps to six spades.

West could have saved a lot of time if he had opened a club. East would take the first trick and that would end the proceedings. After the heart lead, South played out the hand to the end, but had no way to avoid losing the last trick.

Ancient Weaving Art Exhibit Coming Here

The art of weaving is very old—so old that it had its beginning before history was recorded, says Star Shelton.

Mrs. Shelton will be exhibiting her weavings in the Sevier County Museum from Nov. 9 through Nov. 25. Garments she has made from her hand-woven fabrics will be modeled in a style show and luncheon in the museum on Nov. 8, and tickets for that event are to be purchased by Nov. 4.

Until the industrial revolution, the making of cloth was an intimate part of daily life for most people. Mrs. Shelton commented, "Our ancestors sheared sheep, harvested flax and cotton, and went through many steps to ready the yarns which were dyed with plants gathered in the forests and on the plains."

Cards for combing fibers, distaffs, spindles and spinning wheels and looms and shuttles were in general household use. During the last century, we have lost contact with the many processes involved in transforming raw fiber into finished fabric, but today there is a growing awareness and appreciation of these arts.

Mrs. Shelton weaves her fabrics on looms, inherited from her grandmother and uses natural fibers (cotton, silk and various types of wool) almost exclusively.

Her creations have been included in the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair in Kerrville in 1979-80, and she has presented programs on weaving for many civic groups. She is a member of the South Plains Fiber Arts Guild and the South Plains Designer-Craftsmen, the Contemporary Handweavers

Silent gallstones

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 87 years old and have some large gallstones. The doctor says my condition is too poor for an operation. Is there anything I can do to help this condition? What do you think my life expectancy would be under these conditions?

DEAR READER — You may not need to have the stones or the gallbladder removed. Many people have large silent gallstones and never have any difficulties with them.

If you were younger and were in good health, even if the stones were not causing any symptoms, it might be wise to remove them, but the surgery is not entirely without risk.

Unless you have symptoms from the gallstones, I would not recommend doing anything about them. If you do have symptoms it depends upon what kind and how severe they are. If you have a little gas now and then that is one thing but if you have symptoms of inflammation of the gallbladder and it might rupture like a ruptured appendix that is another.

You could live out your life and never have any trouble with silent gallstones. No one can say. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-9, Gall-Stones and Gall Bladder Disease, to give you more information that might apply to your particular situation. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My sister is 53 years old and according to our mother she was born as a blue baby.

Could you explain this term to me? During our teen years she would lose her breath while walking against the wind. For many years now she's had numbness in both hands which comes and goes. And she also has pain in her arms and shoulders. I'm very concerned about her but she refuses to see a doctor.

DEAR READER — It's often difficult to know exactly what parents might mean by saying that one of their children was a blue baby. In medical circles it usually refers to a patient who has a birth defect of the heart. Some of these can be relatively mild and are consistent with a relatively normal life span. It literally depends on what type of defect (if any) is present.

Blue blood is venous blood. It's really not blue but it looks that way when you see it through the surface of the skin in your veins. It has that color because it doesn't contain as much oxygen as arterial blood which is bright red.

In some birth defects, the blue blood is shunted to the left side of the heart and mixed with the normal red.

Big Operation For Surgeons

SAN PASQUAL, Calif. (AP) — The nurse was stunned when the surgeon handed her a three-quarter-inch industrial drill with reversible speed control and said: "Sterilize this."

And there was nothing routine about the operation — or the patient.

Mandav, a 7,000-pound African bush elephant, was in a cast and "hopping around" Saturday after she underwent surgery to repair her broken leg, said San Diego Wild Animal Park veterinarian Lester Nelson.

She injured herself when she fell into the moat surrounding the elephant enclosure at the park.

It took 17 medical people to put the elephant's leg back together in what consulting surgeon David Gershuni described as "certainly one of my bigger operations last week."

Gershuni was one of the orthopedists summoned from three local medical facilities in nearby San Diego to help.

Defense Attorney Recreates Murder

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Accused ax murderer Candace Montgomery sobbed openly as her attorney swung a baseball bat over his head in a dramatic recreation he says, demonstrates his client acted in self defense when she hacked her ex-lover's wife to death.

Don Crowder substituted the bat for a three-foot ax believed to be the murder weapon as he told jurors Mrs. Montgomery was fighting for her own life when she killed Betty Gore, a fellow church choir member.

You don't know who attacked whom with the ax, do you?" he asked several law enforcement officers called as witnesses during Wednesday's testimony.

Raising the bat over his head, Crowder said Mrs. Montgomery could have wrested the weapon from an attacker while the weapon was raised in an unwieldy position.

The 30-year-old defendant, a mother of two, was visibly shaken by the demonstration and wept during much of the testimony.

As prosecutors paraded four lawmen across the stand, Crowder repeatedly intimated that the killing was sloppy because it was unplanned and because his client was fighting for her own life.

Police photographs introduced Wednesday show Mrs. Gore, 30, was struck squarely in the face with the ax.

"She must not have been defending herself," Crowder said.

Crowder had stunned spectators during jury selection Monday by admitting that Mrs. Montgomery killed the fifth-grade schoolteacher in self defense.

Spectators line up daily to jam the 200-seat courtroom in the century-old Collin County Courthouse, reopened because the new courthouse couldn't accommodate the turnaway crowds.

The curiosity-seekers — mostly older ladies — show up early with sack lunches, knitting and binoculars and stay late to watch as the auburn-haired defendant is whisked out a courthouse door into a waiting car.

In other testimony Wednesday, neighbors described a blood-spattered scene they found when they entered the Gores' unlocked residence and discovered the mutilated body of June 13, a Friday.

"I saw a massive amount of smeared blood on the floor and an ax on the floor," Lester Gaylor testified.

Allan Gore, the 33-year-old husband of the slain woman, previously testified he asked neighbors to go to his house when his wife did not answer his repeated phone calls. The reserved businessman also told jurors Mrs. Montgomery instigated an 11-month affair that ended before the slaying.

He said he never told his wife of the liaison.

He said that his wife was distressed the morning he told the house because she believed she might be pregnant and she did not want another child.

When he couldn't reach her that night, he said the thought of suicide entered his mind.

The neighbors found the body of the 30-year-old schoolteacher in a pool of blood in the utility room of the home. An autopsy showed she had been hacked at least 15 times with an ax.

As the spectators in the courtroom craned their necks to see, the state introduced as evidence Tuesday an ax with a three-foot handle, which Gore identified as belonging to him.

Gore said he telephoned

Mrs. Montgomery after his wife's body was discovered because his daughter was staying with her. He said the defendant was "shocked and surprised" the normal shock reaction to something like that.

Later, District Attorney Tom O'Connell asked Gore, Did she tell you she had to kill her, but it was self defense?"

"No," answered Gore.

Crowder had said earlier he would outline the self-defense strategy during his opening remarks to jurors.

However, he did not mention the subject and instead opened his presentation by stating that Mrs. Gore was physically healthy and bigger in stature than Mrs. Montgomery.

Suggests Change In Competitive Bidding Rule

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Purchasing and General Services Commission went behind locked doors Wednesday to receive a report that recommends a partial dismantling of Texas' competitive bid system for buying state government equipment. Paul Wrotenbery, Gov. Bill Clements' budget director, presented the report by his "Operational Audit Committee."

The 48-page report, if implemented by the three-man commission, would make drastic changes in Texas' system for buying millions of dollars of supplies and equipment each year.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the report from sources outside state government.

Meanwhile, a non-profit organization called "Association for Open Business Practices" said it would incorporate to fight any move away from competitive bidding.

"A lot of people are concerned about this," said Jim Lawson, a founder of the association and an executive of an Austin firm that sells business equipment to the state.

He said businesses that have done well under competitive bidding would suffer while those which have refused to lower their prices to get state business would benefit if the commission accepts the report's recommendations.

Most state purchase contracts go to the lowest bidders whose products meet specifications set by agencies that will use them.

Items costing less than $500 can be bought without competitive bidding. So can major pieces of equipment if an agency certifies that only one company makes what it

The report's key recommendation would establish a system of "multiple awards." Instead of the lowest bidder meeting all of an agency's requirements for say, electric typewriters, several companies could qualify if the agency wanted more than a single level of quality.

Some agencies feel that the present contract (competitive bid) system too often results in the purchase of items of less than satisfactory quality.

Typewriter ribbons are frequently cited as an example, the report said. The multiple award contract system is considered to be the most expedient and economical way to provide acceptable materials of more than one quality level to user agencies.

A draft of the report cited the federal government's use of the multiple award system as evidence of its success. But Lawson said it had been, in fact, "very scandal-ridden."

Another major recommendation would rotate the commission's purchases from one commodity to another.

That would keep people from building ties with vendors and from getting into bed with them inadvertently, Wrotenbery said.

Lawson said, however, rotation would sacrifice the kind of expertise that can smell out specifications designed to guarantee that only one bidder can qualify.

"It would be rubber stamp approval," he said.

The operational audit team included people from Wrotenbery's staff, state employees and volunteers recruited from private industry.

The report said if there had been any dishonesty in the commission, the auditors would have uncovered it.

It is noteworthy that no evidence of malfeasance was found, the report said.

The auditors said they found an "adversary relationship" had developed between the commission and a "significant number of agencies" that feel purchasers are uninterested in their needs when buying goods and services for them.

They recommended repeal of the commission's "Texas preference" rule that allows a Texas firm to win a purchase contract with a bid as much as 2 percent above that of a non-

Texas bidder.

"It has been argued that preference is unconstitutional and is a barrier to interstate commerce," the report said.

Wrotenbery and the operational audit team met with the commission in a locked room and refused to admit either reporters or Lawson and his companions.

Wrotenbery insisted that the closed meeting did not violate the Texas Open Meetings Act because it involved "one-way communication" and no deliberations by the board.

In a similar case last January, District Attorney Ronald Earle refused to accept criminal charges after Texas' Southern University regents met with Clements, and his staff to discuss a special audit report.

Earle said then that a loophole in the Open Meetings Act allows state boards and commissions to meet secretly if they do not deliberate on policy questions.

'80 Heatwave 1 Of Deadliest This Century

WASHINGTON (AP) — The summer heat wave of 1980 was one of the deadliest of this century, killing 1,265 people, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reports.

The heat wave that came boiling out of the Southwest in June and clung on into September in the East and Midwest also caused $20 billion in damage, the weather agency said Wednesday.

In this century only three other heat waves have taken a higher toll of lives.

The highest reported heat death toll in this country was 9,508 in 1901. There were 4,678 heat deaths in 1936 and 1,401 in 1952.

By comparison, in a normal year about 175 Americans succumb to the stress of summer heat.

The NOAA said that most of those who died from the heat this summer were either elderly or poor and lived in homes or apartments that were not air-conditioned.

With 311 deaths, Missouri had the highest toll in the nation, although other states had higher temperatures for longer periods.

The heat wave broke temperature records in more than a half-dozen states.

In Dallas, the mercury climbed over 100 degrees each day from June 23 to Aug. 3. And in one day, July 13, temperature records were set in three cities: Augusta, Ga., had 107 degrees, Atlanta 105 and Memphis, Tenn., 108.

NOAA officials said their analysis was based on information collected from federal agencies, private organizations and the 26 states most affected by the unusual weather between June and September.

Besides the fatalities, the weather agency's Environmental Data and Information Service reported that:

Electrical energy use was 5.5 percent above normal, a record which cost Americans some $1.3 billion more than they would otherwise have spent.

Crops and livestock suffered significant damage.

Hundreds of miles of major highways buckled.

The coral industry in Hawaii accounts for about $10 million in retail sales each year and about 800 jobs. Worldwide, the precious coral industry is worth an estimated $500 million.

Young Hookers May Reflect Trend

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Growing numbers of hard-eyed hookers prowling San Francisco's seedy Tenderloin are middle-class teen-agers fleeing abusive homes to a life of "horror upon horror" on the streets, a new study says. And the study's director says that may indicate a national trend. Criminologist Mimi Silbert, who directed the year-long study of 200 San Francisco streetwalkers for the National Institute of Mental Health, said the study found that almost 70 percent of the city's prostitutes were under 18 and a number of them were 10 and 11 years old.

The Delancey Street Foundation study probably indicates a national trend toward younger prostitutes from wealthier homes, said Ms. Silbert. In San Francisco, "we tend not so much to be different, but to be earlier," she said. Prostitutes in the study were volunteers located by the street-walk drug rehabilitation foundation. Police files were not used because "we found that poor people and minorities in our studies were arrested more than twice as often as middle class or white people," she said.

Two basic paths to prostitution emerged — poor, minority women desperate for money and middle-class white teenagers desperate to escape a troubled home, Ms. Silbert said. Sixty-eight percent of the prostitutes said they came from families with average or higher incomes. Usually, they said they had been beaten and sexually molested by male relatives. "Three-quarters of them had a religious upbringing. They were sent to church while their parents had drinking problems, drug problems, a lot of family violence," she said. "They run away because they don't know else to cope." They traded the violence of the home for the violence of the street.

Nearly two-thirds said they had been beaten by customers, an average of 4 1/2 times in their careers. Three-quarters said they had been forced into perversions; an average of 17 times. Seventy percent said they had been raped, "totally unrelated to their work, mostly because they are on the streets," Ms. Silbert said. "The majority never told anybody about the rapes."

Police Handle Two Accidents

Two minor traffic accidents were worked by city police Wednesday.

The first occurred at 10 a.m. in the 1700 block of 23rd St. and involved a 1978 GMC pickup owned by Hoy Hamilton and a 1975 Ford flatbed owned by Homco, Inc. Working the accident was Kerry Pritz.

The other wreck took place in the parking lot of Taco Villa and was worked by Buddy Kinney about 2:30 p.m. There, a 1975 Ford driven by Beth Bowen was in collision with a 1978 Chevrolet driven by Robert Ramirez Jr.

Dear Abby

Memory Disease Can't Be Forgotten

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: About two years ago I began to notice a change in my husband. He became increasingly forgetful and easily confused even though he was only 50. He had a physical checkup and was found to be in excellent health, but his memory got so bad it wasn't safe to let him drive anymore. Then he had to quit work.

We saw several doctors before one finally seemed familiar with my husband's condition. He told us he had Alzheimer's disease, for which there is no known cure. Alzheimer's disease occurs in people as young as 40 and 50 as well as in some older people.

Abby, my husband is too young for a nursing home, and besides, he is completely healthy otherwise — only his mind is affected.

I fear for his safety and have to watch him every minute. For a while he seems perfectly normal, then he becomes dependent and forgetful.

Have you ever heard of Alzheimer's disease? I feel so helpless. How do others cope with this affliction?
DESPERATE IN N.Y.

DEAR DESPERATE: You are not alone. Approximately one million people in the U.S. suffer from Alzheimer's disease. There are now groups of concerned friends and relatives who have banded together to provide support, develop and disseminate helpful information, and encourage much needed research on Alzheimer's disease.

Send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, 32 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10004 for up-to-date information. It's free.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 8-year-old girl who has had a bed-wetting problem all my life. I'm smart in school and have tried to stop wetting, but nothing helped.

My mother saw a letter in your column concerning a "Wee Alert Buzzer" and she showed it to me. Then she bought one and it has helped me tremendously. Thank you very much. Don't use my real name, but it's OK to say I live in San Rafael, Calif.

DRY BED

DEAR DRY: Your letter is proof that you are indeed a smart girl. Your penmanship is excellent and your spelling flawless. But equally important are the good manners you showed by writing to thank me. P.S. Readers: Bed-wetting alarms can be purchased through the catalogs of Ward, Sears, etc.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are getting married after the first of the year. We recently announced our engagement and are making our plans. We foolishly told our friends about these plans, and now three other couples have suddenly decided to get married, too!

My gripe: Our friends are stealing all our ideas. We found a hall that we thought was very original. One couple has now booked it for their wedding. Another couple is using the same colors we picked for our ceremony. One of the brides even ordered the same wedding dress I had selected. What really makes me mad is that they are all getting married before we are, and it is going to look as though we got all our ideas from them, when actually it's the other way around.

Maybe I'm being childish, but I wanted our wedding to be different from every other wedding we've seen. We can't move the date up. What do I do now?
FRANTIC FIANCEE

DEAR FRANTIC: If you don't want your wedding to look like a rerun, change your plans. And this time don't broadcast them!

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Hogs Fall!

by Bill McClellan

Boy, if I pick 'em this week like I bowled last night, I'm in trouble!

This is one of those weeks where you just know there are going to be some upsets. Trying to figure out who is going to upset whom is no small order, though. Last night was one of those nights where you knew you were going to ride the gutter every once in a while. If I'd known it was going to be everytime I tried to pick up a spare, I would have stayed home.

Of course, the problem with picking upsets is obvious: If you're right, you're a marvel. If you're wrong, you're an idiot. I feel pretty good about these picks, but just in case, I'm making room on Monday's page for Sunfry Smith and friends.

Last week's tabulations were 14 right, 6 wrong for 700 which brings me to 97 right, 43 wrong, or .693 for the season.

Let's get on with it:

1. Snyder at Ector (Saturday): A case of who wants it the most. Snyder has wanted one this year, Ector none. Go with the local bunch... SNYDER 20, ECTOR 18.

2. Sweetwater at Monahans. Beating the Lobos in Monahans is no easy trick, and Sweetwater is flying (too?) high after five straight wins. Still, Monahans' loss to Andrews will play an important role. Look for the Lobos to start out fine, but the Mustangs to win in the final minutes... SWEETWATER 23, MONAHANS 22.

3. Lake View at Pecos. The Chiefs are capable, but Pecos is hoping against the odds that they'll somehow get back in the district race. That will be enough incentive. A close one though... EAGLES 21, CHIEFS 14.

4. Andrews at Fort Stockton. Nope, no upset here. The Mustangs keep on rolling along... ANDREWS 24, FT. STOCKTON 14.

5. Highland at Ira. Highland has five speedsters, Ira has three. Five minus three equals two... HORNETS 42, BULLDOGS 10.

6. Borden County at Hermleigh. The Coyotes got upset last week. Guess who's to suffer Friday night? BORDEN CO. 45, HERMLEIGH 15.

7. SMU at Texas. After watching the Mustangs play Houston, Texas could get overconfident. But the 'Horns were idle, so they'll come out smokin'... TEXAS 35, SMU 20.

8. Rice at A&M. Just another "who cares" game. Wilson needs his job, though... AGGIES 17, RICE 14.

9. Baylor at TCU. How can you stay up after swamping A&M 46-7? Answer: Play TCU the next week... BEARS 21, TCU 10.

10. Arkansas at Houston. Watch Frank and Earnest smile on this one. My (hopeful) theory is that Arkansas hasn't been tested of late, and Houston beat SMU last week despite giving them a bundle of chances. If my thoughts are right, the Cougs will have to have grown up fast. Wonder how many will go with me on this one? COUGARS 13, ARKANSAS 10.

11. UCLA at California. California just hasn't developed like many expected them to. Pick it... UCLA 23, CALIFORNIA 20.

12. Michigan State at Purdue. It is soooooo tough to beat the Boilermakers at home... PURDUE 19, MICHIGAN ST. 17.

13. Pitt at Tennessee. I haven't missed Tennessee yet this year that I can remember. You can call this one an upset if you want, but my guess is the unranked Vols are simply the better team. I can hear Snuffy's footsteps as I pick it... TENNESSEE 23, PITTSBURGH 21.

14. Stanford at Washington St. Could be a good matchup, this one. I'll hesitantly pick... STANFORD 21, WASHINGTON ST. 14.

15. Rutgers at Syracuse. Another good battle. The home field is not enough for Syracuse though as Rutgers rebounds from two straight losses... RUTGERS 18, SYRACUSE 17.

16. Chicago at Philadelphia. Chicago is playing better and Philadelphia comes off that important win over Dallas. Still, the Eagles should prevail... EAGLES 28, BEARS 21.

17. Cincinnati at Houston. The Bengals are playing some of their best ball ever. Houston, meanwhile, has been taking a ho-hum look at things. Not this week... OILERS 27, BENGALS 14.

18. San Diego at Dallas. Some prognosticators are picking this one in favor of San Diego, underdogs by three points. I started to join the group, but this is one of those "I've got a feeling" situations, and my feelings tell me... COWBOYS 21, CHARGERS 20.

19. Pittsburgh at Cleveland. This one's a toss-up. Remember that Pittsburgh had to play Monday night and has one day's less preparation time. Remember also that Cleveland is playing its stripes off. But can Pitt lose three in a row? Doubtful... STEELERS 20, BROWNS 17.

20. New Orleans at Washington. Washington nails the Sains before a rowdy crowd of Redskin fans... SKINS 27, NEW ORLEANS 14.

Detroit Lions Looking At Burton Lawless

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions Coach Monte Clark says he's trying to carve a spot in the club's 45-man roster for Burton Lawless, a former Dallas Cowboys offensive guard who was cut after he was traded to the Miami Dolphins.

Lawless, a six-year National Football League veteran and part-time starter for Dallas, performed for Clark after the Lions' practice Wednesday.

"Don Shula (Miami's coach) gave me his name. I brought him in and liked what I saw," said Clark, who is struggling with an injury-plagued offensive line.

Lawless, 26, earned a starting job with the Cowboys in his 1975 rookie season but minor injuries forced him to share the spot. He started six games for Dallas in 1977, when the club won Super Bowl XII with a 27-10 victory over Denver.

The Cowboys sent him to Miami on a conditional trade during this season's training

Meyer Benches Ford; Will Name New QB

DALLAS (AP) — The former national total offense leader in college football has taken a back seat at Southern Methodist University, where Coach Ron Meyer says he will announce today who will replace junior quarterback Mike Ford in Saturday's game against No. 2-ranked Texas.

Victimized by eight interceptions in SMU's losses to Baylor and Houston, Ford said he's been told by Meyer the No. 1 quarterback job belongs to either sophomore Mike Fisher or freshman Lance McIlhenny.

"Life will go on," Ford said. "I did the best I could my first two years and I've done the best I can for these first six games, but apparently it wasn't good enough." Ford injured a knee last year and underwent surgery. He has not been at full speed since.

"Mike has been the starter since he was a 10th grader at Mesquite High School," said Meyer. "But he also understands that he's not playing very well."

"We thought the situation would iron itself out but his performance hasn't been progressing the way any of us expected, including Mike."

"I wish this wasn't happening," said McIlhenny, an all-stater at Highland Park. "I wish we were 6-0 right now. I guess some people don't think he (Ford) is doing the job, or else they're trying to psyche him up. Mike has been doing a super job."

Fisher said he wasn't expecting the move.

"I'm not completely sure of the situation," he said. "I definitely think I deserve a chance to get in there and see what I can do."

Prestige At Stake In SWC Battles

DALLAS (AP) — A little national prestige and a lot of regional pride will be at stake Saturday in four Southwest Conference football games.

Saturday's schedule in order of starting times with full-season and SWC won-lost records in parentheses:

SMU (4-2, 1-2 in SWC) at TEXAS (5-0, 2-0 in SWC), 1 p.m. - Longhorns going for 6-0 start - last four times they've done that, they finished with perfect regular seasons, winning national championships in '63 and '69. Texas currently ranked second in AP poll. Teams meeting for 60th time with Texas holding a 36-19-4 series lead, winning the last 13. Mustangs' last win over Horns was their 1966 championship year. Texas has won 20 of last 21 at Memorial Stadium, has lost only five at home since Mustangs did it 14 years ago.

RICE (2-4, 1-2 in SWC) at TEXAS A&M (2-4, 1-2 in SWC), 7:30 p.m. - Teams renew rivalry for 65th time as Owls make first visit to expanded Kyle Field where record crowd is expected. Aggies trying to rebound from 46-7 loss to 11th ranked Baylor last week. Rice lost close one at home to Tech, 10-3. A&M leads series 35-26-3 with a six-game series winning string to protect. Last Rice win was 1973.

BAYLOR (6-0, 4-0 in SWC) at TCU (0-6, 0-3 in SWC), 2 p.m. - Bears seek to become first Baylor team in history to win first seven games after tying record of six straight shared by five other Baylor teams. Bears ranked 11th in Associated Press writers poll - which is nothing new for TCU: Baylor is Frogs' fifth foe to be ranked at some point this season. Bears lead SWC and fourth nationally in total offense (459.2 yards per game), also lead SWC in total defense (247.7), rushing offense and defense (274.5 and 115.3), and passing offense (184.7). Baylor has won last six against Frogs, longest streak for Bears in series that began in 1899. TCU has all-time lead at 42-37-7 and leads in SWC series by 30-20-3. ARKANSAS (4-1, 1-1 in SWC) at HOUSTON (3-3, 2-1 in SWC), 7:30 p.m. - Last year's Southwest Conference co-champions meet for seventh time, looking to break 3-3 series deadlock. Both teams trying to avoid fatal second loss, which history shows eliminates a team from championship hopes. Cougars appear recovered from 1-3 start with back-to-back SWC wins over A&M and SMU. Arkansas riding four-game win streak after Sept. 1 loss to Texas on national television. Razorbacks ranked 15th in AP writers poll, and third in SWC. Cougars have won two straight from Arkansas after Arkansas won first two SWC meetings.

Injuries Still Plaguuing; Better Times Predicted

Larry Dunaway's Western Texas College Westerners continue to battle the injury bug, but the coach contends better things are just over the hill.

"We keep getting them hurt," he said of his players, whose number dropped to 11 recently. "It seems like we have a new ankle or knee injury everyday. We're still trying to get people healthy."

The injuries - as yet not anything serious - include sprained ankles and knees, mixed with illness that seems to be hitting the high school and college campus alike.

Adding to the list of players unavailable for full-time workouts was the decision of two athletes to quit the team. The pair are Bo Williams, and Joey Rosales, one of three players returning from last year's squad. Rosales, a 5-8 sophomore from El Paso, was not a starter last year, however.

Their absence leaves the squad only 11 strong. Seventeen players made up the original group.

Dunaway expressed regret of the loss, but noted, "It's not un-normal in our situation, where you have almost an entire new ballclub and a new coach (WTC returned only three players from last year's NJCAA national championship squad, and none were starters). Fortunately, you don't normally have 14 new kids every year. You have six, seven or eight returning each year and you have a nucleus to work with. They are able to explain to the new ones what is expected of them and so on. Once we get levelled off, that will be our position," he added. "These two (Williams and Rosales) were the only two who quit, the rest we sent home. It wasn't their decision, it was mine (with the other four)."

Numbers aside, Dunaway feels things will turn WTC's way.

"We're starting to make some good progress in our workouts. We're starting to see a lot of improvement in our offense and defense. We've installed some new things, and running more smoothly. Now we've got to get healthy. Hopefully we'll be ready to do what we need to do in a week and a half."

In a schedule change, the Westerners open the 1980 season by hosting McMurry junior varsity at 8 p.m. in the SHS Gym. Nov. 1, their second game, in a double header with Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters, will be held Nov. 3, also in the high school gym.

The gym will be utilized because the court floor will not be laid out in the coliseum until a later date.

Cats Take On 'Stangs
Snyder's Cats are slated to meet Sweetwater's Mustangs this evening. The local eighth graders take on the Ponies here, while the frosh and JV teams travel to Sweetwater.

Starting time for the local double header, to be held at Travis Field, is 5:30. Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Snyder freshman open a twin-bill at Sweetwater, taking on the Mustangs at 5:30. The junior varsity game will follow at 7:30. Ticket prices are expected to be the same for those games.

Von Erich To Wrestle Here

Kevin and David Von Erich highlight a night of wrestling at Scurry County Coliseum this evening, beginning at 8. Reservations and ticket information may be obtained by calling the coliseum box office at 573-9811.

Tonight's main event features wrestling superstar Kevin Von Erich going against American Champion Gino Hernandez, managed by Gary Hart. Another top match will pit David Von Erich against another Hart wrestler, Gary Young.

Other bouts will stage Sweet Brown Sugar against El Diablos No.1, managed by James Dillon, and El Diablos No.2 versus Bryon Blair.

Felines Try

Odessa Ector

Snyder volleyball teams return to the local high school gym tonight to take on Odessa Ector at 6:15 and 7:30.

The varsity unit will be attempting to grab its 52nd straight at-home victory, its 42nd consecutive district win, and its fifth win in District 2-A AAAA round-two play.

The Felines need only a win tonight and a victory over Lamesa Tuesday to wrap up another district championship and enter regional playoffs.

Snyder junior varsity is 20-3.

Clements Outlines His Opposition To Carter

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he has opposed President Carter since 1977 when he learned Carter was making decisions of the "utmost importance" without consulting members of the National Security Council.

"That's when I decided that he was bad for this country and he was making decisions that I could not live with and did not agree with," said Clements.

The Republican governor was asked if his opposition to Carter over national security issues had contributed to Clements' decision to run for governor in 1978, and he replied:

"Absolutely. Clements, Texas campaign chairman for Ronald Reagan, was interviewed for the radio-television program, "Capital Eye," which will be broadcast Sunday.

He dated his opposition to Carter to October 1977, not to 1976, when the president was elected.

A member of the interview panel, Winston Bode, said Clements stated that he had learned through sources that Carter made his decision to cancel development of the B-1 bomber without consulting the secretary of defense, secretary of state or chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Clements left his job as deputy secretary of defense in January 1977 but said he continued to go to Washington "on a fairly regular basis like once a month" to meet with Secretary Harold Brown and Deputy Secretary Charles Duncan at their invitation.

Name Game May Lead To Confusion At Polls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1980 races for Congress have produced a few attention-drawing and unusual campaigns.

In California, for instance, the suburban San Diego seat of retiring Republican Rep. Bob Wilson is being sought by a Democrat whose name is also Bob Wilson, although there is no relation between the two.

In fact, retiring congressman Wilson supports GOP candidate Bill Lowery and has appeared in local advertisements urging his constituents not to vote for him again — that is not to vote for anyone on the ballot named "Bob Wilson."

Similar confusion may arise in New York, where incumbent Republican Rep. S.

William Green is seeking re-election from Manhattan's East Side district against Democratic challenger Mark J. Green, the former director of Ralph Nader's Congress Watch.

And in Kansas, Republican Rep. Jim Jeffries is being challenged by Sam Keys, who is the former husband of the woman Jeffries ousted from the seat two years ago; Democrat Martha Keys.

While in Congress, Martha Keys divorced Sam Keys and married Rep. Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind. But that hasn't stopped Jeffries from calling Keys a "carbon copy" of his ex-wife.

Back in California, the Democratic woman challenging Republican Rep. Dan Lungren has only one name — Simone — and that's how she'll appear on the ballot. If the 51-year-old lawyer from Los Alamitos wins, it will present a new challenge for the keeper of the vote tote board in the House chamber.

In Indiana, Republican David G. Crane is mounting his own effort to complicate the tote board. If he beats incumbent Democrat David W. Evans, he'll be the third Crane listed, joining brothers Philip Crane and Daniel Crane, both Republican congressmen from Illinois.

The 1980 House campaigns also include three candidates repudiated by their own parties — one in California and two in Michigan.

In southern California, the Democratic candidate is Tom Metzger, grand dragon of the California Ku Klux Klan. He faces Republican Rep. Clair W. Burgener, who is favored. State Democrats quickly moved to disassociate themselves from Metzger after he won the nomination.

A similar race is in Michigan's 15th District, where the Republican candidate seeking to unseat incumbent Democrat William D. Ford also preaches white supremacy.

The candidate, Gerald R. Carlson of Dearborn, is a former member of the Nazi Party, the John Birch Society and the Ku Klux Klan.

And in Michigan's nearby 17th District, the Republican nominee is Alfred Lawrence Patterson — who was a patient of a local psychiatric hospital when he won an unexpected landslide victory.

Man Surrenders In Couple Killing

DALLAS (AP) — A man accused of killing a Dallas couple in front of their horrified children has turned himself in, authorities said.

Robert Lee Brown, 25, walked into the Dallas County sheriff's office Tuesday night and told a deputy he was turning himself over to law officials.

"I'm Robert Brown and I'm wanted for murder," he told Deputy Elizabeth Matter.

"No, sir," she responded. "You're wanted for capital murder."

"Is that worse than murder?" Brown asked.

He reportedly burst into tears when told he could receive the death penalty if convicted. He went quietly to jail and was held on $100,000 bond, Ms. Matter said.

Brown is accused of shooting David and Shirley Owens to death and seriously wounding Roy Clark in the couple's home Sunday night while the Owens' two young children looked on, police said.

The two boys, Baron Ross, 10, and Cedrick, 6, ran from the house after seeing their parents killed, said police, who have placed the children with relatives.

Brilab Defendants Sound Off

The International Operating Engineers Union, also was indicted on the charges and is to be tried later.

The government's presentation relied heavily on secretly recorded tapes of conversations between the defendants, FBI informant Joseph Hauser and Moore.

But jury foreman Tye Holman, a retired rancher, said it was the tapes that convinced some jurors to vote "not guilty."

The panel spread eight hours of deliberations over two days, spending much of Wednesday listening to five government tapes.

"There were some who were pro-conviction," Holman said. "I was in the three to four category. We would ask them 'what is bothering you about it?' After we listened to the tapes the second time, it started to clear up."

The trial centered around a Nov. 8, 1979 meeting between Clayton, labor leader Moore and Hauser, who was posing as a representative of Prudential Insurance Co.

At that meeting in Clayton's office, the speaker accepted $5,000 in cash from Moore.

The government claimed Clayton accepted a $5,000 bribe to reopen the rich state employees health insurance contract, one that has annual premiums of between $84 and $105 million.

The San Francisco earthquake struck California April 18, 1906. It shook the area from Los Angeles north to Coos Bay, Ore. The quake killed 452 people and caused an estimated $20 million in damage to San Francisco.

Inflation Erodes Income Gains

WASHINGTON (AP)—The median income of American families rose by 11.6 percent last year, but inflation eroded all but a fraction of the gain, the Census Bureau said today. The median family income was $19,684 in 1979, compared with $17,640 the previous year, but inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index rose by 11.3 percent, the bureau said. That left little significant increase in spending power. The median is the point at which half the families had higher income and half had lower.

Income doubled from 1970 to 1979 but adjustment for inflation left the median family with only 6.7 percent more purchasing power over the decade.

The Census Bureau said 28.7 percent of families had incomes below $12,500 a year and 65.4 percent showed incomes of less than $25,000.

Analysts said the growth of median income was affected by an increase from 1970 to 1979 — from 11 percent to 15 percent — in the proportion of families headed by a woman with no husband present. Another factor was an increase, from 28 percent to 30 percent, in the number of families headed by persons under the age of 35.

More than 25 million Americans — 11.6 percent of the population — were below the poverty level in 1979. The number living in poverty, defined as below $7,412 for a non-farm family of four, rose slightly from 1978.

The number of poor elderly persons living in poverty rose from 3.2 million in 1978 to 3.6 million last year.

The report said there were no significant changes in 1979 in the relative incomes of white, black or Spanish-origin families. Whites had a median income of $20,520; blacks, $11,650; and Spanish-origin families, $14,320.

Bumblebee and humblbee are both names for a family of large, hairy, social wild bees, and both names mean the same thing. The humming sounds are made by their rapid wing movements. The humblbee is kin to the Dutch "hommel" bee and the German hummel bee.
