Former Police Chief Dropped Dead Saturday

Bill Stapp, widely known peace officer with more than a quarter of century service in North Texas and southern Oklahoma, dropped dead Saturday afternoon at Medicine Park.

The officer, who was 56 years old, was stricken while on duty as a special officer at the resort. He had held the position at Medicine Park since resigning as chief of police at Burk Burnett last October.

He is survived by his wife and several children. Stapp became police chief at Burk Burnett in the fall of 1936 after serving as a deputy in the sheriff's department of Cotton county at Walters, his former home.

He had served in various capacities as an officer for approximately 25 years. Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. Monday from the Walters Presbyterian church with Rev. Moody A. Nicholson, pastor, officiating. Burial was in the I.O.O.F. cemetery at Walters with the Pearson Funeral home in charge.

Lions To Sponsor Old-Time Western Here March 24th

PLAYERS GUILD PRODUCTION

Four lines of action converge in the lobby of Mrs. Moffitt's hotel "Roarin' Dog" in Smith's Pocket when Bummer Smith is foully slain—for Smith's Pocket has one law, and he's "Johnny on the spot" to see that "justice is done" according to the "statutes."

All of which happens in the old western drama, "M'iss, My Western Miss," to be staged Monday night, March 24th, by the Players Guild of Wichita Falls and sponsored by the Burk Burnett Lions club. The high school auditorium has been engaged for the presentation.

The play itself is by Virginia Mitchell, and is based on the Bret Harte story and was a coast-to-coast favorite for many famous American stage stars through a long period. Its most impressive screen presentation was by Mary Pickford in her heyday.

"M'iss" is the old western thriller which used to pack 'em in the town's opera house—or in the big tent if the best stock company carried that equipment. Three of the cast speak more or less orthodox English—the school-master and the two city slickers who are planning to put the skids slyly under Bummer and his innocent, tousle-headed daughter, M'iss. The rest of them talk native vernacular and all Smith's Pocket folks understand it quite well.

Mrs. Harry R. Fuller has an experienced cast for the excursion into the atmosphere of an old west which opened up to the swing and ring of the prospector's pick, and most of them are well known to Burk Burnett.

Judge Guy McNeely has the role of Bummer Smith, the prospector, and Miss Merlyn Mattes that of his tom-boy daughter, M'iss. Mrs. J. Lewis Foster will be the landlady of the "Roarin' Dog" and Mr. Foster the handy man who's hanging around looking for excitement—Yuba Bill.

Arvil Davis, Misses Helen Earle Hardy, Ruth Thomas and Jo Ann Sehmman, Stewart Newlin and A. F. Edwards complete the cast.

Dorothy Warren Named Queen

Miss Dorothy Warren, a member of the senior class, has been elected queen of the Burk Burnett High school band. She was elected from a group of four girls, each representing her class. Frances Peyton, Betty Jean May, and Jackie Henry were the runners-up and will act as ladies-in-waiting at the coronation ceremony.

The ceremony will be held on April 4, the night of the annual band concert. The proceeds of this concert will go to aid the band in going to the state meet at Abilene and to buy needed band equipment.

HUNTERS READY FOR COYOTE CHASE SUN.

Randlett Man Kicked By Horse

Plans are all set for the annual Coyote Chase Sunday morning on Red river, according to local men who organize the hunt. All grayhound and 'floppie' owners are invited to attend. Floppies and horses will be used to run the coyotes out of the salt cedars and grayhounds will be kept in the open.

Hunters from Oklahoma and Burk Burnett will leave from Burk Burnett at 6 a. m. and will meet hunters from the west at the Bell Oil & Gas wholesale station west of town and north of the Gulf tank.

The drive will start just a little west of the Burk Divide office down on the river and will go west and come out near the farms of Walter Kaspar and Homer Meyers north and west of Clara.

All enthusiasts are asked to be on hand early and to leave their guns at home.

The Burk Burnett Golf club association ordered a new mower for course last week. It is a three-gang Worthington, with 30-inch blades and is one of the latest types of mowers. The mower is expected to arrive next week. The tractor has been overhauled, the green and fairways are being put in shape and in a few weeks Burk Burnett will be one of the best and green golf courses in this part of the country.

Chevrolet Salesmen Attend 'Pep' Rally

Boy Scouts To Go On Hike Sat.

Thirty boys and the Rev. Burns were present for the meeting Monday.

Ineligibles Will Have To Pay For Mattresses

A ruling regarding the amount to be paid to the government by an ineligible family receiving a mattress or comfort under the 1940 or 1941 cotton mattress demonstration program has been announced by R. T. Price, state administrative assistant for the Triple-A. He says, where a family received a mattress or comfort and was later found to be ineligible, the family will be required to pay to the Treasurer of the United States $6.55 for the mattress and $1.35 for the comfort. If the mattress and comfort have not been used by the ineligible family, both may be returned to the government without penalty.

The University of Texas is currently sponsoring a conference on "Education of Youth for American Citizenship."

Randlett Pioneer Drowns In Tank

Funeral rites for Mrs. Ida L. Ford, 61, who was found drowned in a tank not far from her home south of Randlett early Wednesday morning, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Baptist church in Randlett with the Rev. E. Ryan, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating.

Interment was in the Fairview cemetery. Pallbearers were Tommy Campbell, Floyd Wilkerson, Bernard Menz, Arthur Patterson, Homer Uzzell and Clint Dunn.

Mrs. Ford had lived in Randlett since the opening of the Big Pasture. She had been in failing health for some time.

Members of the family missed her about midnight Tuesday and began a search for her. Neighbors joined in the search and when her cane was found on the banks of the tank, the searchers waded out into the water until the body was found.

Survivors include the husband, Jim Ford, and daughter, Emma, of San Diego, Calif., two daughters, Ida and Amelia; three sons, John, James and Joe, all of Randlett.

Burk Boy Hurt In Leap From Burning House

Donald Lohofener, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lohofener, and a student at NTSTC, Denton, was one of several boys injured Wednesday when they jumped from a second-story window to escape fire which destroyed a house in which they were rooming.

Young Lohofener sustained a broken arm, severe abrasions and was slightly burned. He saved part of his clothing but lost all his books and other possessions.

He is here at the home of his parents but is reported to be doing very well and hopes to return to Denton Sunday.

"Dad" Sanders Officiates At First Wedding

"Dad" Sanders performed the first wedding ceremony of his career Wednesday evening at 7:30 and he says that he doesn't know which was the more frightened; he or the bridegroom.

"Dad" has been trying out his marriage phrases ever since his election to the office of Justice of the Peace, but he says now that if they all scare him as bad as the first one he hopes no one else shows up here for him to tie the knot.

C. M. Medaris and Mrs. Jewell Walton of Lawton, Okla., were the happy 'victims' of 'Dad's' first major operation.

Beyond The Reach Of The Voting Citizens Of Texas

Senator Jesse Martin of Fort Worth has introduced a bill at Austin proposing creation of an appointive oil and gas commission, to take over the regulatory functions of the elective Railroad Commission, thus taking out of the hands of the people their right to choose their public servants for this all important task.

Texas is a great oil producing state and the affairs of the oil and gas division of the Railroad Commission have been handled in a very efficient manner. Of course, there have been rulings that have not met with the approval of all of us, but there will never be three men who can please all at all times.

Right now stability in public affairs is of vital importance to the nation's safety and to create an appointive committee to take over a task which is being performed by three men who have for many years made a study of oil and gas in almost every form, and place authority in the hands of new men, would be an act of folly.

The people of the great State of Texas elected the members of the Railroad Commission well knowing that the production and distribution of oil and gas was one of the chief duties of the commission and it appears that the wise course would be to let the people decide as to whether the oil and gas division should be separated from the Railroad Commission and if so whether it should be an elective commission or an appointive one.

In a recent issue of the Houston Post it was pointed out:

"1. A new appointive oil and gas commission would be made up of new men with new ideas. They undoubtedly would not be content to follow the old beaten path of oil regulations with its numerous markers set down by court decisions. In striking out along a new road, they might plunge the oil industry once more into chaotic turmoil of court battles which marked the early days of proration.

"2. It should be obvious that this is no time for arguing about the rules under which oil is to be produced. It is a time for producing oil and processing it in such quantities as may become necessary as the nation builds and mans its defenses.

"Behind these considerations, of course, is the fundamental question of whether or not it is wise to deprive the people of the right to elect officials who control their most valuable natural resource.

"4. In these times of increasing centralization of authority, the people must cling jealously to every right they now enjoy. On every side there are efforts to take away their control over their own affairs. The effort to create an oil and gas commission is a local manifestation of a nationwide trend.

"5. While a great degree of centralization of authority at Washington is necessary in connection with rearmament, that necessity should not be made an excuse for depriving the people of authority over their local affairs, especially since this particular act of centralization would hamper rather than aid the oil industry in meeting its defense obligations."

It appears to us that the time has come when the people should demand that their public officials leave the business of the people within reach of the people and not in the hands of one man. If you believe this way write your State Senator and your Representative today and tell him to vote against an appointive oil and gas commission.—Hawkins Herald, March 6.

Who Are Home Guardsmen?

Save for the occasional spectator who drops in to the American Legion home on Monday nights during the home guard meeting, few Burkburnett residents are aware of the personnel constituting local units of the Texas Defense Guard, which began a few months ago with but a few members and now has a full company of 74 men, including officers.

The visitors to the Legion home finds there on drill nights a warming display of the American spirit which is known as patriotism, and he also gains a wide answer to the question: Who are home guards?

In the military formation, a laborer in blue shirt is seen next to a wealthy oil man, a high school cadet next to a World War veteran, a former National Guardsman next to a city bred man who never has previously shouldered a rifle and finds the command, "right face," is an unusually intricate step for a rookie. Fathers march alongside sons. Company rosters include business men, filling station employees, teachers, well-to-do men in tailored suits, others in work clothes, elderly men and youths early in their teens. A former National Guard sergeant gives military orders to men twice his age, to others who reverse that arrangement in daily life. Discipline is perfect, and the military routines are accepted unanimously.

The home guard units are a convincing illustration of American democracy and its welding together of supposedly irreconcilable elements. The units are roughly composed of persons who are unable to enter other branches of the service and wish to do "their bit" during the national defense emergency. No pay is received by a home guardsman, but he must give one night a week for drill and instruction. The home guard units are an impressive symbol of our national unity, our democracy and the willingness of all classes and ages to make their contribution to national security. They are loyal Americans who have simplified the problems of the present crisis by demonstrating their willingness to serve their country.

Privileges and Freedom of Labor

At this time when labor is demanding a large share in the control of business, it is incumbent upon the public to consider what makes for success in business.

The directors of business possess and exercise no right in directing their business under constitutional industrial freedom that is not possessed and exercised by practically every other American citizen. No normal man in his business relations feels that he is under any sort of obligations, moral or economic, to pay more than the market price for any commodity or service he buys, and no normal citizen demands more than the market price for that which he has to sell.

When men and women offer their chickens and eggs and butter on the market for sale they are as really selling their services as the man who sells his services direct. Commodities are "stored up" services. Who ever heard of a man or a woman on the market insisting on paying 30 cents a pound for chicken when the market price is 20 cents a pound, or the ground that we should pay for commodities and services on the basis of the needs of the seller. If such a "queer" person should make his appearance on the market, he would be in danger of arrest either as an imbecile or a lunatic. No one on the market except a mendicant or a crank would demand more than the market value for what he had to sell on the ground of his needs.

Few if any of those who are demanding that employees in industries be paid more than the value of their services on the basis of their needs do not believe in, accept nor practice this principal in their own business activities. To the extent this is true they are both hypocritical and dishonest in their demands.

The employees assume no responsibility for the success of the business, but are the first claimants on the resources of the business. After all the employees are paid in full and every other claimant is paid in full, if anything is left it goes to profits on the capital. In a very large number of cases not a cent is left to reward those who have taken the hazardous risk. In 1921, 356,397 corporations were required to report to the government for assessment for income taxes. More than one-half or 185,158 of the corporations reporting, reported no net income.

To all depositors, creditors, and stockholders of the Farmers State Bank, Burkburnett, Texas, notice is hereby given that on December 24, 1940, the Board of Directors of the Farmers State Bank, Burkburnett, Texas, adopted a resolution in favor of closing the business of the Farmers State Bank, Burkburnett, Texas, as of December 31, 1940, as a voluntary liquidation, and therein provided a fund for the purpose of paying all sums due each and every depositor and creditor of the Farmers State Bank, Burkburnett, Texas.

This, therefore, is to give notice to you, and request you to come in to the office of said bank at any time within six months, and receipt for all sums of money lawfully due you by said Farmers State Bank.

This by order of the Board of Directors.

TREE ENEMIES

By J. S. GORE

Aphids or plant lice, which commonly attack the apple are the Grain Aphid, the Rosy Aphid and the Green Apple Aphid. Plum trees are sometimes damaged by small dark colored Aphids resembling the small ants.

The above aphids usually cluster on the new green tips or buds and on the under side of the tender leaves, causing them to curl up and look sooty, due to the exudation of honey dew.

Control of aphids require a contact insecticide and they are easier to hit and kill, just after they hatch and begin forming in clusters on the buds. Before they become too numerous, only a few sprays with black leaf 40 will kill or paralyze them. After leaves put out, several sprays are generally required and it is necessary to use a lot of soap in the spray for a spreader, being sure to coat both sides of each leaf upon which there are any aphids, as it only kills those hit by the spray.

Woolly Aphids, which is distinguished by cotton-like masses on the bark, twigs or roots, frequently damage trees, especially if water is allowed to stand around the body of the tree and run down to the tap root. This method of watering leaves the earth too soft and the wind keeping the tree in motion until the soil dries, leaving a space one-half to over one inch between the edge of the soil and the base of the tree. This open space helps dry out roots, lowers the vitality of the tree and makes an ideal housing for the woolly aphids, wood lice, termites and common borers.

Hot Fight Coming
Discussion of the proposed separate oil and gas division will wax hot on the floor of the house as the bill, authored by Houston McMurray et al, was voted out of the State Affairs committee of the House last week. Debate before the committee during three days of open hearings presaged what may be expected when the bill hits the floor of the House where members will be privileged to say what they please about personalities without being liable for such statements.
At the final hearing of the committee, Representative Taylor White of Odessa openly charged misconduct in the present administration of the oil and gas laws by citing the case of the R. R. commission employee who was tried last summer and convicted of receiving a bribe at Midland. It was brought out, however, that the commissioners helped with the prosecution of their former employee who was fired immediately at the time of his arrest by rangers.

On the other hand, high praise was given the present members of the commission by speakers for the opponents of the bill. Jack Blalock, Houston attorney, praised Ernest O. Thompson very highly after proponents had brought out the fact that the colonel had run for state office four times during the eight years he has been in the office and that he is even now on active duty with the Army although he is Chairman of the Railroad Commission. While ex-Speaker Robert W. Calvert of Hillsboro, leader of the opponents of the bill, predicted at the weekend the bill will be killed on the floor of the house, proponents, led by former Senator Clint Small of Amarillo, were rejoicing over the victory they had won in getting committee approval of the bill.

Legislator Dallas Blankenship of Dallas, in opposing the bill before the committee, declared "bringing out this bill with a favorable report will disgrace this entire committee before the State of Texas and I shudder to think of the results when it is debated on the floor of the House."

Discussion among members privately over the weekend indicated the fight that will wage around this bill will be one of the hottest at this session, if not actually the most bitter of all of them, including taxes and old age pensions. Every member of the railroad commission now are against the bill although Ernest O. Thompson advocated it in his unsuccessful campaign for governor last summer. Efforts have been made also to prove both of the other commissioners, Olin Culbertson and Jerry Sadler, have at one time or another advocated the separate control for oil and gas.

Balancing Of Parts Important Factor In Buick

The importance of balance in vibrationless operation, not only of engines, but also in many other vital elements of the car, is emphasized in a new phase of the manufacturing program of the Buick Motor division disclosed today by Loy McClure, local Buick dealer.

As a result of developments along this line, the balancing of parts going into the manufacture of current models and the design of special machinery and equipment for balancing purposes, has become a major element both in manufacturing processes and designs of the parts to be produced, Mr. McClure said.

The manager announced that to further the progress already achieved, by which Buick has gone to balancing of the complete engines after assembly in addition to numerous balancing operations on engine parts, detailed study of the whole subject will be carried out in manufacturing divisions with view to further perfection.

"Smooth as the watch on your wrist" is a phrase men in the engine plant apply to Buick engines. It is a statement of relative fact, tests having shown that in relation to weight, the big 165-horsepower Buick engine, held in production to vibration limits of less than 1/4-oz. in., actually comparable in balance to the finest wrist watches.

According to Mr. McClure, the balancing of Buick engines after assembly is the latest step in the campaign for perfectly balanced motor cars and he announced that improvements in special equipment have permitted reducing the calibration tolerance to as low as 3-16 oz. in., the fine balancing to which the average Buick engine is held.

Technically, the balancing operation is regarded as a complete safeguard against the possible production of a "rough" engine. Engineers point out that with rotating and reciprocal parts held to within fractional plus or minus limits of perfect balance, the completed engine is normally "on the money." It is possible, however, to have a stacking up of limits in which all of the fractions would be on the plus or all on the minus side. This could result in a "rough" engine, according to Buick standards. The after assembly balancing operation, the engineers point out, eliminates this possibility and places each engine in perfect balance within limits of 1/4 oz. in.

The study of balance is not a new one in automobile manufacture, although the scope of that planned by Buick is believed to be without precedent in the industry, according to Mr. McClure.

With the development of high compression, high power, high performance automobile engines, the question of fine balance in all engine parts as well as the various chassis units, and including even the bodies, has become of relatively greater importance.

Locker Storage Is Answer To Need For Budget Saving

Austin, Mar. 12—Wouldn't you like to cut your family food budget by $100 a year?

That's the saving University of Texas engineers figure the average family could make by using locker storage for meats, vegetables and fruits.

At a special Food Preservation conference, to be held at the University March 13 and 14, detailed information on centrally located frozen food depots—locker plants—will be recounted by Texas' most experienced authorities in the field.

Equipment will be described, services outlined for large and small users, for rural and urban communities.

Representatives of industrial concerns who will speak are J. W. Stockham, chief refrigerating engineer, Texas Power and Light company, Dallas; Capt. Bernard Gussett, San Antonio Public Service company, San Antonio; C. A. Smith, Whitten Sales company, Austin; A. F. Ramsey, York Ice Machinery Corporation, Houston.

Other speakers on locker storage are Miss Grace I. Neeley, extension service specialist in food preservation, A. & M. college, who will discuss "Locker Storage Uses by the Home-Maker"; P. T. Montfort, also of A. & M.; and W. L. McGill, Governor's Industrialization Committee.

Use of modern refrigeration techniques in the dairy industry in processing, storing and transporting fruits, vegetables, meats and seafoods will also be discussed by authorities in these fields.

The world's greatest storehouse of petroleum information is being assembled at the University of Texas in a library of the driller's "logs" for every oil and water well in Texas. More than one million samples from 15,000 wells are now on file at the University and are available for citizens of Texas to study.

I Give You Texas

By Boyce House

The top av the mornin' to yez—and how about a joke or two in the St. Patrick's Day spirit?

This is one about two Irishmen who were named Mike and Pat, instead of Pat and Mike, for a change. Mike fell into a gulch and Pat yelled, "Are ye killed? If ye are, speak to me," Mike replied, "I ain't killed but I'm speechless."

A variant:

After Mike had fallen, his friend asked, "Are ye killed?" to which Mike replied, "That I am." Pat said, "You're such a liar I don't know whether to believe ye or not." And Mike rejoined, "That proves I'm dead because, if I wuz alive, ye wouldn't dare call me a liar!"

The Irishman speaks in amusing contradictions as shown by his remark about the flea, "When ye put yer finger on him, he ain't there" or his description of a frog, "When he walks, he jumps and when he stands up, he sits down."

Thomas Jefferson once remarked that no system will work of itself—that its efficiency depends upon the individuals who administer it. With this observation of the founder of the Democratic Party in mind, an independent oil man comments on the proposal for a separate oil and gas commission: "How could you expect to get three appointive commissioners better qualified by experience than the three members of the State Railroad commission? Leaders of the move do not deny that Col. Ernest O. Thompson is one of the best-informed men on oil in the world nor can they deny that Jerry Sadler learned the industry 'the hard way', as a worker on the derrick floor, in laying pipelines and as a refinery worker before becoming a successful independent operator. And Judge Olin Culberson, admittedly an authority on gas, is also fully conversant with oil. So here you have three men, who know the oil industry up one side and down the other, and they are working in harmony for the good of Texas. It's an old baseball maxim. Don't break up a winning team."

An Irish philosopher said, "Single misfortunes never come alone, and the greatest of all possible misfortunes is generally followed by a greater." A salesman said, of some window sashes: "These sashes will last you forever; and, after that, if you have no further use for them, you can sell them as old iron." A lover said, "It's a great comfort to be alone, especially when yer sweetheart is wid ye." A debater, upholding ancient architecture as compared with the modern, demanded, "Show me a single modern building that has lasted as long as the ancient ones?"

Then there was the Irishman who enlisted in the 33rd regiment because he wanted to be near his brother, who was in the 34th. And there was the inlander who visited a port and stood for hours looking at a ship's anchor because "I want to see the feller who swings that pick." And there was an Irishman who saw a hunter shoot a duck high overhead and the bird spun over and plunged to the ground, whereupon Pat said, "Ye wasted yer powder; the fall would have killed it." And an Irish jury brought in this verdict, "We find that the man who stole the mare is not guilty." Hearing that a man had bought a marble coffin, Mike exclaimed, "Shure and a marble coffin would last a man a lifetime."

Some son of the Emerald Isle summed it up with, "Not more than half the lies they tell about the Irish are true."

Here and there:
In a brilliant speech recently,

Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas pointed out that the United States has become "the great arsenal of democracy" and that the lend-lease bill "enables us to gain the time necessary for the development of our own defensive armament. The struggling democracies need aid; we need time. Under it, Congress retains the power of the purse."

One witness at a recent hearing in Austin on the scientific load limit bill pounded the desk and yelled that the trucks don't belong on the roads, according to press reports. The United States Postal Service uses 14,000 trucks; should they be put off the highway and the farmer receive his mail twice a week by horse-and-buggy? The railroads themselves have 63,000 trucks and the Railway Express (controlled by the railroads) has 10,000 trucks. Units of government—State county, city and school—have 208,000 trucks. Probably one-half the pupils in the school system of which the witness is the head are brought to school each morning in buses, which are just a form of trucks.

Cooking School-

this demonstration very helpful, and will take home many new menus, recipes, and time-saving cooking ideas.

The latest model CP Gas ranges and a streamlined Gas refrigerator will be demonstrated at the school by Mrs. Pearl. She will talk about the many ways this modern equipment can be of service to the homemaker, and will show how modern cookery saves time, fuel, and money in the home today.

"Modern CP Gas cookery," said Mrs. Pearl, "features the unlimited heat control that makes waterless cooking and slow roasting possible. This modern way of cooking permits food to retain all the healthful, bodybuilding vitamins and minerals.

"Among the specific types of cooking that will be carried on for the audiences attending the school will be 'waterless' cooking of vegetables, broiling, baking, and various types of stove cooking. Modern kitchen methods," Mrs. Pearl said, "are great time-savers for the busy housewife. Automatically controlled oven temperatures eliminate constant watching of roasting and baking. Heat control of top burners that will allow extra slow cooking on the simmer burner or fast 'hurry up' cooking on the giant speed burners does away with the constant vigil necessary when outmoded ranges are used. These features alone will save many hours of the housewife's time.

"We want Burkburnett housewives to know all about these marvelous developments. That is why we are presenting these demonstrations here on Wednesday and Thursday. We hope every Burkburnett homemaker will attend this school," said Mrs. Pearl.

Members of the Rotary club were told Tuesday by Sidney Kring, manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, that any housing problem created in Wichita Falls because of the air corps technical school will probably spread to Burkburnett.

Plans were discussed for the party in honor of the Wichita Falls club which will be sponsored here sometime soon and Walter Riley, chairman of the Inter-City meeting committee, reported that an interesting program is being planned.
