Odessa policeman shot about midnight

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 31-year-old police officer, shot during a scuffle with a suspect just before midnight, remained in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital today.

Police spokesman Rusty Baker said Michael Bostick, who joined the Odessa Police Department in September after leaving the U.S. Border Patrol, was shot in the neck with a .22 caliber revolver as he struggled with a 20-year-old man in the 1800-block of McCall Place.

The suspect, identified by Baker as Jimmy Ray Winfield, 303 Wabash, was apprehended a short time later in the 1500-block of East 2nd Street, behind Jones Pontiac, by K9 Officer Bill Anderson and his dog, Frey.

Windfield was held in the city jail overnight and arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly and bond was set at $25,000. He remained in jail in lieu of bond at last report.

Baker said Bostick and several other patrol officers had responded to a call about 11:37 p.m. Monday concerning a suspicious person at McDonald's, 1800 E. 8th St.

The man had left McDonald's by the time officers arrived, Baker said, and Bostick and other units began searching the area for him. Bostick located the suspect and began wrestling with the man in an effort to take a gun away from him. During the scuffle, stated Baker, Bostick was shot in the middle of the left side of his neck at about the collar line. The bullet traveled downward and was removed from near Bostick's left shoulder blade during emergency surgery at Medical Center Hospital, said Baker.

The suspect, subsequently identified as Winfield, fled the scene of the shooting and was spotted a short time later by Officer Henry Jackson near the intersection of East 5th Street and Roosevelt in a 1972 Ford. Jackson managed to stop the vehicle and ordered the suspect out of the car, according to Baker.

The suspect got out of the car and ran until Jackson yelled at him to stop, Baker said. The suspect stopped, turned around and pointed a gun at Jackson, according to Baker, and Jackson fired one shot at the suspect, but missed. The suspect fled the scene and was later apprehended behind Jones Pontiac by Anderson and his dog.

According to Baker, Bostick is the first police officer to be shot in the line of duty since December 1983 when a drug bust went awry at the LaQuinta Motor Inn on East Highway 80.

Odessa police undercover Det. Phil Harrold and Ector County Sheriff's undercover Deputy Jim Dixon were wounded in a shootout that killed 28-year-old Michael Matheny. Matheny's wife and a nephew subsequently faced trial on drug charges and were sentenced to prison.

With 'Order' convictions, Denver considers case

SEATTLE (AP) — With 10 white supremacists convicted of racketeering for waging a racist war against the United States, Denver officials are studying whether they can prosecute some defendants in the slaying of an outspoken Jewish talk show host.

An all-white jury deliberated two weeks before convicting the 10 defendants, members of the Nazi-like group The Order, of conducting a criminal conspiracy in 1983 and 1984 that encompassed two murders; bank and armored-car robberies totaling more than $4 million; counterfeiting and arson.

David E. Lane, the only defendant who returned calls from the Pierce County Jail in Tacoma after the verdict, said the others did not have any comment.

"We will ask for exile to any white nation that will have us and let us live among our own kind," Lane said. "We will never darken the shores of this continent again."

He said he spoke on behalf of most of the defendants but did not identify them by name and refused to say which nations he had in mind.

The jury returned convictions on 38 of 44 racketeering counts brought by prosecutors. "It was the only decision we could make based on the evidence," said jury forewoman Mary Ball. The defendants' "beliefs and all that were never part of it," she said.

At least three defense lawyers said they would appeal the verdicts, which found all 10 defendants guilty of conspiracy to racketeer, and six of them guilty of other federal offenses.

The defendants showed little reaction as U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern read the verdicts. Defendants Andrew Barnhill and Ardie McBrearty winked as they left the courtroom, while Randall Evans said "Christ is king."

The defendants face maximum prison terms of 40 to 155 years when they appear Feb. 6-7 before McGovern, who presided over the 3¼-month federal trial.

Defendants convicted only of racketeering and conspiracy face up to 40 years in prison and $50,000 in fines. Randolph Duey was convicted of 11 counts, the most of any defendant. Other defendants were Bruce Pierce, Gary Yarbrough, Richard Kemp, Frank Silva and Jean Craig.

Their goal, prosecutors said, was to overthrow the government, eliminate Jews and racial minorities and establish an Aryan homeland.

To convict a defendant under the 1970 Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, jurors had to find that the individual committed two separate crimes, or "predicate acts."

In Ms. Craig's case, jurors had to consider her involvement in the machine-gun slaying of Denver radio host Alan Berg.

PEMEX announces changes, retroactive crude price cuts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, the United States' biggest supplier of oil, announced it is changing its pricing system and cutting the price of its crude by an average of 90 U.S. cents a barrel retroactive to Dec. 1.

The state petroleum monopoly PEMEX said Monday night the change was part of an effort by Mexico to maintain exports at 1.5 (m) million barrels a day in an "international market characterized in recent weeks by big and abnormal fluctuations."

PEMEX's announcement said that "as a transitory" measure it will announce new prices at the end of each month, retroactive to the first day of that month. Normally it announced prices during the last week of each month with the prices effective on the first day of the following month.

The announcement said this will continue until PEMEX agrees on a new system containing "mechanisms that should give greater flexibility in fixing prices and guaranteeing their competitiveness," but gave no details.

In Los Angeles, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said the drop would not likely change the price of gasoline at the pump, noting it applied only to light crude, "which is only a piece of a large group of crude oils worldwide."

Lundberg called the decrease "a modest adjustment, not the beginning of a free fall in prices," adding that the value of light crude has been reduced slightly in the United States because of domestic improvements in refinery tehnology that allow oil companies to use greater amounts of heavy grades.

About half of Mexico's sales abroad abroad go to the United States, which make up 13.8 percent of U.S. crude imports and account for 4.8 percent of American domestic needs, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

In a related development, Conoco Inc. announced Monday it was lowering by $1 a barrel the price it will pay for the top grade of U.S. oil, saying the move "reflects our assessment of current market conditions."

It was Conoco's first such cut in six months, and followed bigger price declines in oil markets earlier this month when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said it was no longer willing to reduce production to prop up its official prices.

Each $1 drop in the price of a barrel of crude oil, when entirely passed on to consumers, is equivalent to a 2½ cent decline in the retail price of a gallon of gasoline or heating oil.

Young residents of church-run childrens' homes 'in exile,' pastor says

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — About 200 children who lived in two church-run homes that were the focus of a lengthy church-versus-state fight over licensing have been moved out of Texas, officials said.

The homes are closing rather than comply with a court ruling that they must be licensed by the state of Texas despite their claim to exempt status because of church sponsorship.

Moving the children is but the latest bout in an almost decade-old feud over the homes that began with founder Lester Roloff, a wiry, outspoken preacher who battled for no state control until his death in a plane crash in 1982.

"The Roloff homes are in exile," the Rev. Aubrey Vaughan read from a prepared statement Monday as he stood on the steps of the empty Rebekah Home for Girls.

"They stand empty due to state officials who are more concerned for their political careers than the children," said Vaughan, pastor of Grace Baptist Church of Houston and a longtime Roloff supporter.

The Rebekah Home for Girls and the Anchor Home for Boys in South Texas sent their troubled teen-agers out in a caravan of buses Sunday night after church services, home officials said.

The officials would not disclose the number of children involved, although they are believed to number about 200, nor where the children were sent.

The organization has similar schools in Mississippi and Georgia.

The homes became controversial when some youths complained that they were held against their will and strictly punished for not following Roloff's religious teachings.

But others — including many of the parents who sent their children to the homes — praised them for leading juvenile drug users, prostitutes and other misguided youths away from crime.

The state argued that unlicensed homes, despite their church sponsorship, set a dangerous precedent that could break down state regulation of several industries.

The Rev. Wiley Cameron, who operated the homes for People's Baptist Church after Roloff's death, could not be reached for comment. He was said to be out of state with the children and not due to return until the end of the week.

Mishaps may kill as many as 230

Traffic accidents over the New Year's holiday period may claim between 180 and 230 lives, the National Safety Council says.

The death toll at 6 a.m. EST today was two.

The holiday period this year extends from 6 p.m. Monday to midnight Wednesday, local times.

Last year, when the weekend period lasted four days, 368 people died. In 1985, the highest New Year's death toll was recorded with 584 lives over a three-day period.

Safety Council spokesman Sean S. Clancy said Monday that about 180 deaths could be expected during a similar non-holiday period.

Clancy said the number of holiday deaths might be the same as or lower than that for a non-holiday period because people generally don't travel long distances for New Year's, as many do over Christmas.

He also said there likely will be fewer people in each car over New Year's, unlike holidays such as Christmas and Thanksgiving, when entire families travel together.

The council said alcohol is a contributing factor in almost 50 percent of all motor-vehicle accidents and said wearing seat belts and keeping children in appropriate seating are the best ways to prevent fatalities and injuries.

The council has prepared estimates of holiday traffic deaths since the early 1960s.

Police SWAT team members lead 14-year-old Robert Wardlow to safety after the boy escaped from the house in which he'd been held hostage about 30 hours.

Teen-age hostage freed when ex-convict killed

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — A police marksman's bullet ended the short, unhappy life of ex-convict Dennis Lucas, a self-proclaimed killer and heroin addict who held two teen-age boys hostage for 30 hours, demanding plane tickets and cash for their lives.

One of the boys, Robert Wardlow, 14, escaped from the barricaded rowhouse across the Ohio River from Cincinnati. His brother Larkin, 16, was released unhurt after Lucas was shot to death about 11 a.m. Monday.

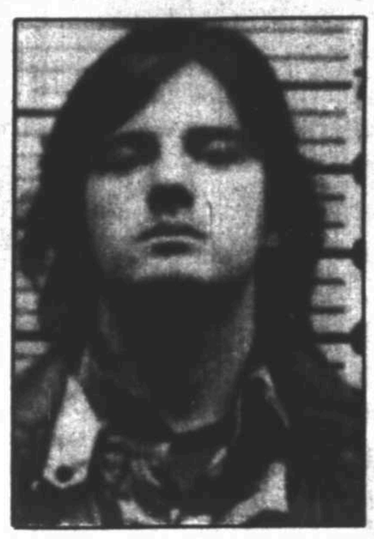

"I think it was wrong. They shot him when he was sleeping, I know that," said Barbara A. Faulkner, 24, Lucas' sister. She said she overheard Robert Wardlow say he woke up while Lucas was sleeping and, before escaping, tried without success to rouse his brother.

State police Sgt. Phil Harney said Lucas, 20, was asleep when he died.

"At the point where his life was taken, he was armed and he was making threats against the life of the boy," Harney said. "If we hadn't moved when we did, there might have been no hostage."

The fatal shot was fired into a first-floor bedroom from outside the rowhouse where the boys live, police said. They would not elaborate.

Lucas, an acquaintance of the boys', had handcuffed Larkin Wardlow to a bed, state police Capt. Dale Fortner said. He demanded airline tickets to England for himself and the hostages, and between $20,000 and $50,000.

Dennis Lucas

"I'm holding these two hostages because I committed two murders. I told them where the bodies are," Lucas said Sunday in a telephone interview with radio station WLW. "If they don't meet my demands, I'm going to tie these two young boys down to the bed. I'm going to pour gas all over them and burn them up."

He claimed to have dumped the body of a teen-age boy in the Licking River, which separates Newport and neighboring Covington, and to have discarded the body of another teen-age boy in Cincinnati, just across the Ohio River.

Police, who had negotiated with Lucas by telephone since he took the hostages about 5 a.m. Sunday, confirmed that they found the body of James Cain, 15, of Covington, in the nearby Licking River.

They said they were investigating the case as a "possible homicide," but had not linked it to Lucas. Cincinnati police searched their city, but found no sign of a second victims on Monday.

Lucas was released from prison in Indiana Oct. 1 after serving 18 months for two April 1984 purse-snatching convictions, authorities said.

"Prison makes your mind sick," Lucas told WLW. "I did 18 months in that prison. I was 18 years old. I got raped by blacks, I got beat up bad and cut."

Police said Lucas burst in on a family in Covington late Saturday night and threatened them before fleeing to Newport and taking the boys hostage.

"I never expected this out of Dennis. He was a good kid in his ways," his sister said Monday. "I believe what provoked him into this was the drugs and that he didn't want to go back to prison."

U.S. will support effort to 'wipe out' terrorist group

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — While President Reagan vacationed with longtime friends in this desert resort, his administration offered its support to any nation that can find and wipe out the terrorist group that killed five Americans in coordinated attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports.

After initially cautioning against a retaliatory strike, the White House called Monday for "an appropriate, measured and focused" response against those responsible for the attacks in which 18 people died, four of them terrorists.

Presidential spokeman Larry Speakes, saying that Libya is believed to be harboring the leader of a radical Palestinian splinter group suspected of masterminding the raids, said the United States is seeking allied support for unspecified action to punish the Libyan government of Moammar Khadafy.

Briefing reporters in Palm Springs where Reagan played golf and dined with many of his old friends from California, Speakes said of those involved in planning the attacks: "If we can find who they are, or if another nation can find who they are and they attack 'em, wipe 'em out, that's fine with us."

Speakes' tough rhetoric was in sharp contrast to the language he used in the immediate aftermath of the attacks on Friday, when he urged Israel and other nations in the Middle East to practice restraint.

Explaining his abrupt departure from the initial U.S. stance, Speakes said, "We have always been firmly opposed to an escalating cycle of violence which contains the seed of broader and more devastating hostilities. In that context, we have urged and will continue to urge all states to avoid taking actions which would only feed that cycle."

But the spokesman added, "At the same time, "it has been our firm policy that terrorism cannot go unanswered. We have always retained the right to respond to terrorist acts in an appropriate, measured and focused way."

"Our policy is that you seek out those responsible and...have at it, go at 'em," Speakes said.

Senior administration officials said the United States was concerned at first that Israel would strike Syrian antiaircraft missile sites in Lebanon or Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunisia to avenge the airport raids on check-in counters of Israel's national airline, El Al.

The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said indiscriminate attacks could threaten the Middle East peace process at a crucial time. But they added officials did not mean for their initial statements to be taken as a policy shift away from the "swift and effective retribution" Reagan has promised as his answer to international terrorism.

Speakes said the United States is prepared to work with other governments to take action against the Khadafy regime. While refusing to disclose what steps might be contemplated, he said military action "is always an option" in combatting terrorism.

Asked if the administration regards Libya as responsible for the airport attacks, Speakes said, "We can't be that specific."

"The evidence is still being analyzed," the spokesman said. "All indications so far point to Abu Nidal's group," a radical splinter organization that broke with Yasser Arafat's Fatah contingent in the PLO in the 1970s.

"Other governments directly concerned share this judgment," Speakes said.

"We also note with considerable interest that the Libyan government has applauded the attacks in Rome and Vienna as heroic acts," he added. "We believe that the Libyan government has given this group a considerable amount of financing and assistance," as well as providing Nidal with an operating base in Libya.

"As far as what the United States would do in retaliation, we never comment on what we might do," Speakes said. "We keep our options open."

Americans become increasingly cautious about taking vacations

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Travel to Europe and the Mediterranean basin generally slows at this time of year, but recent terrorist attacks in Rome and Vienna have made Americans even more cautious about taking vacations in the area, according to some U.S travel agents.

"People are canceling for the terrorists," said Alfonso Vidal, a travel agent for The Travel People in New York City. "Maybe in a few months when things calm down we can start to do it again."

Travel agents contacted by telephone Monday generally reported a decline in the number of bookings for pleasure travel to southern Europe and the Middle East, and several outright cancellations because of concerns over terrorism.

Terrorist attacks left 18 dead, including five Americans, and 113 wounded in Rome and Vienna airports on Friday.

Those attacks revived memories of the hijackings of a Trans World Airlines flight from Athens and the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro earlier this year, which resulted in the killings of two Americans, some travel agents said.

Chris Werth, president of Paul Klein Travel Service in Chicago, said his company was closed over the weekend, but Monday morning he received two cancellations for trips to France and Italy.

"They were very blunt about it," said Werth, who estimated his company did 70 percent of its business to Europe and the Middle East. "They just said, 'We decided travel to Europe is not safe.' There's not much argument you can give against it."

Vidal said one woman scheduled to leave this week for Rome changed her plans Monday morning. "She wants to go to Hawaii now," he said.

Nikki Handros, manager of Empire Travel in Miami, said although many people decided the odds of getting caught in a terrorist incident were small, others were concerned that it could happen anywhere.

Pierce was accused of pulling the trigger, Lane of driving the getaway car and Ms. Craig of doing earlier surveillance in the Berg killing.

Pierce and Duey were convicted in a $43,345 armored-car robbery in Seattle on March 16, 1984, and Pierce, Yarbrough, Duey, Kemp and Barnhill were convicted in a $536,000 Seattle armored-car holdup April 23, 1984.

Pierce, Yarbrough, Duey, Kemp, Evans and Barnhill face another trial in San Francisco on charges stemming from a $3.6 million armored car robbery near Ukiah, Calif. Silva faces an illegal-weapons charge in Arkansas.

In Denver, District Attorney Norman Early said evidence from the racketeering trial would be assessed before officials consider filing state charges in the Berg killing. Prosecutors said they would interview jurors in the Order trial to determine how they weighed evidence in the June 1984 death of Berg, a Jew who often spoke out against hate groups.

Government witnesses, including a dozen former Order members and associates, depicted the defendants as Bible-oriented extremists who plotted a civil war against the government.

They were led by Robert Mathews, a one-time tax protester who became a revolutionary bent on "giving white children a future" and died in a shootout with the FBI on Dec. 8, 1984.

In its April indictment, a Seattle federal grand jury charged 13 other Order members along with the 10 defendants. Ten pleaded guilty before the trial began, and defendant Thomas Bentley changed his plea to guilty at the end of the first week of the trial.

Richard Scutari of Florida, described by witnesses as The Order's security chief, remains at large, and the 23rd, David Tate, was convicted in November of killing a state trooper in Missouri the day the indictments were announced.

"For The Order, it ends it," said Mathews' brother, John. "But there's lots of kooks out there. I'm disgusted that it all happened, that there's people like the neo-Nazis."

OIL

For Mexico, the price cut was an added burden for its crisis-ridden economy, already saddled with a $96.4 (b) billion foreign debt which the country has been having difficulty meeting paying on.

With a daily production of 2.75 million barrels, Mexico is the world's fourth largest producer as well as the world's fourth biggest exporter, but it has had to keep cutting prices to keep its share of the market.

Mexico is not a member of OPEC, although it followed the organization's guidelines in pricing its oil until July, when OPEC's 13 members started undercutting each other to maintain sales.

After its sales plummeted to 800,000 barrels a day, Mexico broke free in July, set varying differentials for three geographical regions and cut its prices by as much as $1.24 a barrel — from $27.75 for its light Isthmus.

Isthmus makes up 40 percent of Mexico's exports, and the heviergrade Maya the rest.

Each drop of $1 a barrel means a loss to Mexico of $547.5 million a year, forcing President Miguel de la Madrid's administration to further cut government spending and impose more belt-tightening measures.

Monday's announcement annulled a raise of 76 cents a barrel for Isthmus that PEMEX had put into effect last Dec. 1. lowering instead the Maya-Isthmus average by 90 cents a barrel in relation to Nov. 1.

Washington's elderly ring in early New Year

By JOAN MOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of this city's oldest residents — ranging in age from 94 to 103 — rang in the new year early with champagne, a turkey dinner, noisemakers and frail renditions of "Auld Lang Syne."

"Go to bed early and get up early," was the advice 98-year-old Irene Keyworth gave on how to live to a ripe old age. The cheery, British-born Mrs. Keyworth said she enjoys parties, music and her friends.

The New Year's bash lasted two hours at a local restaurant-delicatessen, which was decorated with balloons and streamers Monday afternoon.

The guests, many wearing party hats, sat in their wheelchairs at long tables, listening to a barber shop quartet and a local songstress, Mary Rogers.

Mark Lipowsky, the restaurant's owner, said the New Year's tradition of inviting some of the area's oldest residents to a party began six years ago when he and his family wanted to do something nice for the elderly.

This year, 38 people attended, all but four of them women.

For 100-year-old Mary Bryan, the highlight of 1985 was her meeting with Princess Diana last October.

Miss Bryan, who lived virtually her entire life in the fashionable Georgetown section of Washington, said she talked to the princess when she visited the hospice on her well-publicized trip to the nation's capital.

Miss Bryan said there are three reasons she thinks she made the 100 mark: She never worries, she lives one day at a time and she had a devoted father with whom she lived most of her life.

Selma Gordon, a retired nurse on the verge of turning 95, sipped a Manhatten cocktail as she listened to the entertainment and fretted about spilling gravy on her blouse.

A retired nurse from Brooklyn, Mrs. Gordon was reluctant to discuss her age.

Breathing difficulties limit chances for survival of Siamese twin girls

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors at Texas Children's Hospital say chances of survival for Siamese twin girls born over the weekend are less than 50-50 because the babies are having breathing difficulties.

The babies, born Saturday, were listed in very critical condition late Monday evening, hospital spokeswoman Joan London said.

"They're needing increasing breathing support," she said.

The children were on respirators and were sedated, which was part of the usual treatment, doctors said Monday.

The newborns, delivered by Caesarean section, together weighed 7 pounds, ¼ ounce at birth, said Dr. Robert Bloss, a pediatric surgeon at the hospital. They are joined from the breastbone to the umbilical cord, have separate hearts, but share a liver.

"The extent of other joint organs is unknown at this point," he said. "We can't tell you anything further because the babies are too sick."

Hospital officials said they were following the family's wishes and would not identify the parents or say where the parents lived. The babies, however, were identified only by their first names, Danielle and Michelle, Ms. London said.

The infants were about seven weeks premature when delivered. The mother had been hospitalized for about a week when ultrasound tests disclosed changes in heart rates and fetal movement, prompting doctors to deliver the children.

"The decision was made to take a chance with a breathing problem rather than have the babies die in the womb," said Dr. Arnold Rudolph, chief of neonatology. "They have immature lungs. They have marked difficulty breathing. They cannot support breathing on their own."

"Both babies are desperately ill," he said. "Because of their condition, we are concerned with keeping them alive. I think the main point at the moment is to have these babies improve their breathing."

"Their outlook is not a very good one," Rudolph said. "But we've seen babies like this survive."

Asked whether the chances of survival were at least 50-50, he replied, "Less than that."

Doctors said based on previous experiences, they expected the babies would remain in critical condition for the next three to four days.

Bloss said the mother knew about 18 weeks into her pregnancy that the children were attached. She had not been taking fertility drugs, the doctor said.

Chicago council's power may shift

By RAY FORMANEK Jr.

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington, outvoted and outmaneuvered by the racially and politically divided City Council since he became Chicago's first black mayor, has a chance to wrest control of the council now that special elections have been ordered, a political analyst says.

"It will probably be an uphill struggle for the Washington machine" to elect allies from two largely Hispanic wards, Don Rose, who engineered former Mayor Jane Byrne's upset victory in 1979, said Monday.

U.S. District Judge Charles Norgle on Monday ordered special elections March 18 in seven of 50 wards, a move that appeared likely to give blacks and Hispanics increased representation on the council.

"There have been no fair aldermanic or committeemen elections in these wards since the City Council remapped the city in 1981," Norgle said in issuing the redistricting decision.

The new map might increases Hispanic representation in four wards and black strength in three others. Whites now outnumber blacks 33-16 on the City Council. There is one Hispanic.

Washington, who has the support of the 16 blacks and five liberal whites, has often clashed with the 29-member majority bloc led by Alderman Edward R. Vrdolyak in a series of bitter floor flights dubbed "Council Wars."

Vrdolyak Washington

The battles have affected millions of dollars in contracts and federal funds, scores of appointments and, most recently, the ward boundaries.

All seven redistricted wards are represented by council members aligned with Vrdolyak, who has emerged as Washington's chief political foe.

The map approved by Norgle was a compromise put together by lawyers for the minority plaintiffs and Vrdolyak's council bloc, made up of 28 whites and the one Hispanic.

Vrdolyak said in a brief statement he would not appeal Monday's decision.

Chicago's population is about 40 percent black, 40 percent white and 14 percent Hispanic, with Asians and others making up the remainder.

"The special election has the potential, but not the probability, of giving Washington control of the City Council," Rose said. "The vote is now 29-21 against Washington."

"I think it's an historic date," said Ray Romero, an attorney who represented Hispanic plaintiffs in the case. "What this order said today was that the elections in 1983 were illegal. In effect, he's thrown out the aldermanic elections of 1983. It's a remarkable effort to serve justice."

Washington praised the order, calling it a "monumental decision."

"Various constituents now have the right to elect someone of their choice," he said. "All seven wards are held by majority aldermen, so there might be some power shift in those wards."

But the mayor said it would be premature to speculate that the special election could help him if he runs again in 1987.

Even before Norgle's decision, Washington was denying any plans for consolidating his power in the style associated with the late Mayor Richard J. Daley and his monolithic Democratic machine.

"I am not looking to be a boss," Washington said last month. "The nature of the beast called Washington would not tolerate rubber stampism. I am interested in spirited discussion."

While the remap case was pending, one Washington ally, Alderman Danny Davis, already was foretelling the death of the Vrdolyak machine.

"It's been dying ... riven and fighting and casting about," Davis said last month. "First they lost the patronage system, and they couldn't dole out jobs," he said in reference to a 1979 federal-court decree barring political hirings and firings.

"But give Vrdolyak credit," Davis said. "He kept the machine alive, using racism and fear as the glue instead of jobs."

At that time, though, Vrdolyak denied that the remap would have much effect and even predicted eventual gains for his side.

"For one thing, I think the Hispanic wards will come in with some solid judgment, and not go buying the old baloney of black versus white that Washington is always pushing," he said.

Vrdolyak, who said recently he might find it easier to work with a Republican mayor than with Washington, also predicted increased strength for his candidates in the predominately white lakefront wards.

Looking over the bull bison he killed oustide Yellowstone National Park near Gardiner, Mont., is Ed Lammerding, left, of Havre, Mont.

Season's first wild bison felled by Montana hunters

New York Times News Service

GARDINER, Mont. — Just after daybreak Monday, two Montana hunters raised their rifles and shot two bison that had wandered out of Yellowstone National Park.

The two bulls, and a third shot later by another hunter, were the first kills of the first major hunting season for wild bison since 1894, when a federal law outlawed killing them. By then the millions that once grazed the Western plains had been reduced to several hundred. Now there are about 2,000 in Yellowstone, the only wild herd in the United States. They are not considered an endangered species.

The Fund for Animals, a New York-based animal protection group, had said it would try to disrupt the hunt, but a representative of the group only observed the first two kills, along with about 25 reporters.

State veterinary officials assert that bison that stray out of the park must be shot because they carry a disease, brucellosis, that may infect domestic cattle, causing the females to abort their young. Officials of the National Park Service, however, say the threat of brucellosis has been exaggerated.

Because bison show little fear of man, there has been widespread criticism of the hunt as unsportsmanlike.

"We walked half a mile through a foot of snow," said Al Orndorff, 45, a forklift driver at Plum Creek Timber in Columbia Falls, Mont., who shot one of the bison. "Try it. I got tired coming over here. I've never had to walk this far to shoot an elk."

After being shot once in the neck by Orndorff, the first bison dropped to the ground and died. The other was shot three times by Ed Lammerding, of Havre, Mont., before it died.

Noel Larrivee, a lawyer from Missoula, Mont., who was the Fund for Animals representative, said: "It made me sad. When I think of all the people who go through the park to see buffalo, and then to come here and watch this."

The animals were killed as they wandered through the rolling, treeless hills north of the park in search of forage. Last year 88 bison were shot by employees of the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks after they roamed out of Yellowstone Park.

Sportsmen's groups lobbied the Montana Legislature, which authorized a bison season that opened Dec. 1. However, no buffalo left the park until last week.

More than 3,000 people signed up for a lottery to hunt bison. Five hundred were chosen, and each is to be called in turn as the bison leave the park. Park officials say as many as 100 bison may leave the park this year.

Some local ranchers believe the hunt is necessary, but they oppose a public hunt. "It's hardly sporting," said Leonard Sargent, whose ranch abuts the park. "It's like walking up to the green and dropping your golf ball in the hole. Cattle are more defensive than bison."

As Orndorff, who wore a bright orange hat and orange vest, chatted happily with half a dozen reporters, three local hunting outfitters he had hired eviscerated the bison and loaded the carcass on a horse-drawn sleigh. It was taken half a mile to a road and put on Orndorff's pickup truck.

Orndorff said he planned to make steaks and other cuts out of the kill and have the head and shoulders mounted. "I'm a meat hunter," he said. "I never waste an ounce of meat if I can help it."

There may be less hunting this year than originally planned, however. Last week the Fund for Animals signed an agreement with the Church Universal Triumphant, a California-based cult, which owns a ranch near the park. Most bison leaving the park wander onto church land. Eighty-six of the 88 bison shot last year were killed there.

Church officials originally agreed to allow bison hunting on the ranch for a $250 fee. However, a church spokesman said, at the request of the Fund for Animals the church now forbids hunting there. The animal protection group is to pay for a 2½-mile-long log fence on church land, in the hope of keep the bison in the park.

Semi-retired federal judges soon to see incentives to quit working

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's semi-retired federal judges, credited by some with keeping an overburdened judicial system afloat, are about to get a strong financial incentive to quit working.

These senior federal judges will be penalized with higher taxes and, for some, lower Social Security benefits in 1986 if they continue working rather than retire completely.

But the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, which helps run the federal court system, hopes Congress will remedy the situation quickly.

An administrative official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, predicted that most of the senior judges will "honor their commitments" and keep working at least for the first few months of the new year. By then, he said, Congress may have come up with a solution.

At stake, according to Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, could be the ability of the federal courts to keep functioning.

Senior federal judges "annually contribute the equivalent work of about 70 full-time judges," Burger said in a report this week. "Without the work of the senior judges, the federal judicial system would have foundered," he said.

All federal judges — at the trial, appeals court and Supreme Court levels — are appointed for life. But to encourage ill or senile judges to leave the bench, Congress has provided full pay for those who retire at age 65 with at least 15 years service or at age 70 with 10 years service.

Most judges who take "senior" status and maintain a reduced workload could receive the same income by retiring.

But beginning Jan. 1, federal judges are being placed in the nation's Social Security system, which means they must pay up to $3,003 a year in Social Security taxes if they continue to work.

Free rides among anti-drunken driving incentives

Associated Press

A New Hampshire television commerical portrays a grandmother knitting booties while a voice tells viewers the booties won't be needed. The child was killed in a crash caused by a drunken driver.

It is a harsh image, one of many reminders for tonight's holiday revelers, and part of a nationwide New Year's Eve crackdown on drunken driving.

Free cab and bus rides, additional police patrols and programs to encourage a "driver" in a group to stay sober all are part of an effort to avoid traffic fatalities tonight.

In Phoenix, Ariz., billboards placed by Mothers Against Drunk Driving went up Monday showing six people carrying a coffin. The billboard reads, "You should have called for a lift earlier."

Free rides for people who drink too much are available in many cities, including Nashville, Tenn., where nearly 200 people have called for service since Dec. 20. Free cab service is also available in Albuquerque, N.M.; Little Rock, Ark.; Raleigh, N.C.; Lansing, Mich.; Pittsburgh; Kansas City; St. Louis. and a number of Indiana cities.

Colorado state police have 55 patrol teams in 32 counties and plan 10 "sobriety" roadblocks for random checks for intoxication.

New Mexico and Indiana state police will add extra patrols between 6 p.m. and 5 a.m. In Arkansas, troopers who normally handle licensing and inspections join patrols in a New Year's crackdown. In Florida, police will run "holiday squads" and many cities will operate sobriety checkpoints.

"If the person has not been drinking, we'll hand him a pamphlet (on drunken driving) and tell him to have a nice holiday," said Cooper City, Fla., police Sgt. Jacob Saredy. "The whole thing shouldn't take more than two minutes."

Sobriety checkpoints mainly serve as a deterrent, said California Highway Patrol Officer Steve Kohler.

"We don't expect to arrest a great number of people," he said. "The primary impact is the amount of publicity we are generating will make people think twice before driving under the influence."

"People in general are fed up with drunks killing and maiming on the highway," said Lt. Col. John Carmody of the Florida Highway Patrol. "The public awareness is there this year. A lot of alcohol establishments are getting involved too by installing breath test machines."

Jan Bledsoe of the Indiana Governor's Task Force Against Drunk Driving said, "We have a public awareness program called 'Keys to Friendship,' emphasizing host-hostess responsibility. There is more to being a good host than just throwing a good party."

New Year's Eve always produces many first-time offenders, said Sgt. Guy Benningfield in Dallas.

"We get little old grannies. We get a lot of middle-aged and older people who've never been arrested in their lives," he said.

In Pittsburgh, employees of the Aluminum Company of America received disposable breath testers and vouchers for cab rides. U.S. Steel employees were given "designated driver" buttons showing a cocktail glass behind a Ghost Busters-style circle with a diagonal line through it.

In Delaware, the Office of Highway Safety lends breath testers to private groups, but the number of requests outnumbers the 45 testers available.

New York police will set up roadblocks, free coffee will be available at restaurants and gas stations along the New York Thruway, and free rides will be offered on New York City buses and subways and on buses in Albany, Rochester and Buffalo.

The office of Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris, a dedicated teetotaler, has prepared a television message showing a ticking clock and a car careening down a road. When the clock strikes midnight, the car crashes into a telephone pole.

In Columbus, Ga., 19 bars and restaurants are encouraging "designated driver" parties by providing free soft drinks along with badges saying "I'm driving" to drivers who promise to avoid alcohol.

Several Louisiana sheriff's and police departments offer free rides, and in suburban New Orleans, a wrecker service offers free towing to those who believe they shouldn't drive.

However, Louisiana State Police spokesman Mike Roop said, "We'd rather urge moderation and some common sense, rather than getting as drunk as you want and feeling like you have a free taxi ride."

"Traveling dentist" Dr. Ann Setkowicz examines Beatrice Greene's teeth as she makes a house call in North Berwick, Maine. As far as she can tell, hers is the only practice of its kind.

Making house calls fills 'burned out' dentist's day

By JERRY HARKAVY

NORTH BERWICK, Maine (AP) — You can tell Dr. Ann Setkowicz's dental specialty from the license plate on her Jeep: HS-CALL.

In an era when it's tough to find a physician who still makes house calls, Ms. Setkowicz makes nothing else. As far as she knows, her dental practice is the only one of its kind.

"I remember reading about a dentist in Chicago who makes house calls, but he only spends part of his work week doing it," she said. "This requires special equipment, and most dentists wouldn't want to bother."

A general practitioner making house calls can usually fit necessities into a small satchel, but that's not the case in dentistry. Ms. Setkowicz travels with a 40-pound compressor, 35 pounds of portable X-ray equipment and cases containing the tools she needs to do fillings, cleaning, root canals, crowns and bridges, dentures or laboratory work.

"This is exactly the same equipment as in a dentist's office," says Ms. Setkowicz, indicating high-speed and low-speed drills and suction hoses. "There's nothing miniaturized."

"This is my desk," she says, holding up her attache case.

For Ms. Setkowicz, who used to have a conventional office practice in Boston, the switch to mobile dentistry was an outgrowth of her husband's retirement and their decision to move to Maine.

"I was burned out in my practice and he had to retire for health reasons," said the 41-year-old graduate of McGill University's dental school. After spending two years cruising the Caribbean on their 34-foot sloop, they converted their summer place in Ogunquit to a year-round home while she explored ways to get back into dentistry without the pressures of a full-time office.

House calls seemed the perfect solution. Now, when Ms. Setkowicz makes a call, either at a private house or a nursing home, she's accompanied by her husband, Albert Sakey, a prominent Boston criminal lawyer who's begun a second career as a dental assistant.

"It gives us a lot of time to spend together," says Ms. Setkowicz, who launched the practice in July. She and her husband are now on the road three or four days a week, serving patients from Portland to the New Hampshire border.

"Nothing I'm doing is different than what I'd be doing in a dental office," she says. She refers complicated periodontal work and oral surgery to specialists but handles virtually everything else herself.

Ms. Setkowicz and Sakey have taken the practice to all sorts of settings: living rooms, dining rooms, kitchens, bathrooms and physical therapy rooms. "I come fully prepared. All I need is a 110-volt outlet," she says.

She wears a yellow lamp similar to ones used by coal miners around her forehead for illumination.

Ms. Setkowicz has found that her practice serves elderly, handicapped or bedridden patients who might otherwise not receive dental care. Even with travel costs, she says, her fees are lower than those of conventional dentists because she doesn't have to maintain an office.

Frances LaCourse, administrator of the North Berwick Nursing Home where the dentist has made house calls, agrees that demands for services like Ms. Setkowicz's can only grow. She recalls the trouble and expense of transporting residents on a stretcher by ambulance for emergency dental work.

"This is beautiful," said Mrs. LaCourse. "It's going to be a tremendous benefit to our residents. All elderly in health care institutions need this service."

Ms. Setkowicz says one big surprise has been the job's physcial demands.

"I thought this was going to be easygoing, laid back," she said, but it's actually far more exhausting to bend over a patient's bed or wheelchair than an adjustable dental chair.

She said on tiring days she's pleased to have her husband act as chauffeur from call to call.

Administration again predicts economic expansion

Modest increase in inflation also anticipated by president's advisers

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, whose economic projections for 1985 turned out a shade optimistic, is renewing its forecast for a healthy 4 percent expansion in the national economy for 1986.

White House economic advisers, releasing in advance the economic assumptions that will be plugged into the president's February budget request, also predicted a modest increase in inflation in 1986 by nearly 1 percentage point.

Economic growth for 1985, measured by the increase in the Gross National Product minus the effects of inflation, is now estimated at 2.8 percent.

The administration had initially forecast 4 percent growth for 1985, then scaled back the target to 3 in midyear as the economy performed sluggishly — after a rousing 6.6 percent GNP growth the year before.

Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, conceded Monday that new forecast was optimistic, but called it "realistically optimistic."

He said that continued expansion in consumer spending, a gradual improvement in the nation's trade accounts and a further decrease in interest rates because of government deficit reduction will keep the U.S. economy humming.

However, many private economists are projecting slower rates of growth for 1986.

David Wyss, chief economist for Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm, said he expects the economy to grow at closer to 2 percent next year.

"They're exaggerating both growth and inflation," Wyss said of the new White House forecast.

Wyss suggested that, by inflating anticipated tax revenues for next year, the administraton could avoid having to propose even more drastic budget cuts than are already envisioned.

As it is, budget officials have proposed cuts in the vicinity of $50 billion for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1 to meet the deficit-reduction targets of the newly enacted budget-balancing law — cuts that will be formally submited to Congress in early February.

The economic forecast for calendar year 1986 was issued jointly by Sprinkel, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and Budget Director James C. Miller III.

It projects a slight rise in inflation in both 1986 and 1987 — to 3.8 percent in 1986 and 4.1 percent in 1987 compared with an estimated 2.9 percent for 1985, based on an inflation calculation built into the GNP figures.

Short-term interest rates will rise a bit in 1986 before resuming a decline that began earlier this year, the forecast said.

It said that the 91-day Treasury bill rate, now at 7 percent, would rise to an average 7.3 percent in 1986, then drop to 6.5 percent in 1987. Long-term interest rates will continue to fall steadily through 1986, the forecast said.

The administration forecast also projected growth of 4 percent for 1987, tapering off to 3.5 percent by 1991 — although Sprinkel warned against putting too much weight on projections beyond 1986, claiming they were just educated guesses.

"There's nothing out there on the horizon to suggest a recession in 1986. I don't know when the next one will come," Sprinkel told a news briefing.

He also said he didn't want his optimism to be interpreted that "everything is lovely. ... There (still) are problems in the economy."

Sprinkel listed hard times in agriculture and in the steel and some energy industries as some of the problem areas.

Monday's administration forecast is "a little optimistic," said John Hagens, a senior economists at Chase Econometrics, a private economic forecasting firm based in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. The firm is projecting a 2.5 percent growth for 1986.

"We think the economy will continue to muddle through in 1986," Hagens said.

In a related development, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget said Monday it now appears a near certainty that the first budget cuts under the new budget-balancing act — amounting to about $11.7 billion — will take effect in 1986.

NATION IN BRIEF

Another dime withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security system will take an extra dime from every $100 that the average worker earns starting on New Year's Day.

The payroll tax will rise from 7.05 to 7.15 percent when the new year rings in. That means that $7.15 will come off the top of every $100 that most American workers earn, with their employers kicking in an equal amount.

While workers will find their paychecks a tad lighter in 1986, Social Security's 37 million beneficiaries will find their monthly benefit checks 3.1 percent fatter starting Friday.

Four million aged, blind or disabled poor people who get Supplemental Security Income will also get a 3.1 percent cost-of-living increase in their checks, which are being delivered today, a day early due to the holiday, Social Security spokesman James Brown said.

The one-tenth of a point rise in the payroll tax rate translates to a 1.4 percent tax increase for employees. The self-employed will be hit with a 4.2 percent increase in their Social Security taxes, as their tax rate climbs from 11.8 percent to 12.3 percent.

Student's death mourned

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Students and teachers at Chosen Valley High School are mourning the death of an honor student who died wandering away from the scene of a traffic accident and spending 20 hours in temperatures that reached below zero.

"He tried his best in everything he did," football coach Ken Jacobson said of Scott Gardner, 18, of Chatfield. "It's a real tragedy. It's hard to believe.

Gardner, an honor roll student, starting defensive end on the football team and a member of this year's homecoming royalty, died Sunday in the intensive care unit of St. Marys Hospital. Searchers had found him, clinically dead, Saturday in a ravine northeast of Chatfield and rushed him by helicopter the 25 miles to Rochester.

Olmsted County authorities said Gardner wandered away from three friends on a county road early Saturday as they walked to a farm after their pickup truck slid into a ditch.

The friends abandoned the search for him after they checked at a gas station where they thought he had parked his car. Failing to see the car, they assumed he had returned home.

His mother alerted authorities Saturday morning after discovering he had not returned. Chatfield firefighters took up the search and a brother followed his tracks through the snow, finding him unconscious.

His friends learned later that his car was parked at a different gas station.

Textile worker arrested

STAPLETON, Ga. (AP) — A textile worker was arrested early today and charged with kidnapping one of two 12-year-old girls who had been missing for more than a week before they returned home.

Buford Williams Jr., in his early 20s, was arrested at the J.P. Stevens plant near Louisville and charged with kidnapping, Jefferson County Sheriff Zollie Compton said.

Elizabeth Tanner and Jessica Barrow, last seen riding their bikes about sundown on Dec. 22, ran into the Barrow home shouting "We're home, we're home!" about 7:30 a.m. Monday, said Mary Barrow, Jessica's mother.

The girls told authorities they had been released a half hour earlier near where they were believed to have been abducted.

It was "a run for their lives," the Augusta Chronicle-Herald quoted Compton as saying. The sheriff said the abductor told the girls he was going to shoot them, the paper reported today.

Williams, of Stapleton, has been charged only with kidnapping Elizabeth, Compton said.

Disney drawings taken

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Thirteen original drawings from such classic animated Walt Disney films as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Bambi" and "Dumbo" have been stolen from Disney Studios, a company official said.

The 13 "cels," original 8-by-10-inch drawings and paintings on acetate, are valued at $65,000, but the studio regards the artwork as priceless.

"Those drawings can never be duplicated," Erwin Okun, a Disney spokesman, said Monday.

The cels were in a display case that was taken from the studio's Ink and Paint building on Thursday, Okun said. In addition to the Snow White, Dumbo and Bambi artwork, other missing cels were from "Fantasia," "101 Dalmatians," "The Sword in the Stone," "Lady and the Tramp," "Alice in Wonderland," "Peter Pan" and "The Reluctant Dragon," Okun said.

Each cel was estimated at being worth $5,000, but Okun said some could be worth more than others. "A cel from 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' would have a higher value than one from 'The Sword in the Stone,'" he said.

Decorated WWII hero recalls chosing unknown soldier

LAKE WALES, Fla. (AP) — To William R. Charette, getting the Medal of Honor for battlefield valor during the Korean War was a memorable occasion, but having to choose the unknown soldier of World War II was more significant.

"I stood on the fantail of the USS Canberra off Norfolk and looked at the three identical coffins. The middle one was the unknown soldier of the Korean War. I hesitated and started to the left. Then I went to the right and selected that one. I don't know why," said the 53-year-old Charette, who has lived here since retiring in 1977 after 26 years in the U.S. Navy.

He explained that up to that time no selection had been made to represent the unknown dead from World War II. One coffin contained an unknown military man from the European theater of the war while the other was representative of those who fought and died in the Pacific. They were placed on either side of the body that had already been selected from the Korean War.

Charette offers greater detail about his 1958 selection of the unknown serviceman now buried in Arlington National Cemetery than his heroism one morning in 1953 when outnumbered Marines fought against a Red China invasion army above the 38th Parallel.

A Navy hospital corpsman, Charette enlisted soon after finishing high school in Ludington, Mich., in 1951. The Korean War had begun June 25, 1950, when communist-ruled North Korea invaded South Korea.

In January 1953, he was assigned to the 1st Marine Division already fighting above the 38th Parallel. His assignment was to accompany rifle teams and care for those wounded during sorties against the enemy.

"We were fighting a barbaric enemy. They didn't honor the Geneva Convention," he explained.

On the morning of March 27, 1953, Charette was with Company F of the 2nd Marine Battalion. It was defending three hills — Marino, Vegas and Carson — far in advance of the United Nation's main line of resistance. The hills were a critical obstacle in the enemy's main invasion route to Seoul.

He recalls the heavy attack during the night. Already a battle veteran, he'd been under fire many times before.

"Automatic firing didn't bother me; incoming mortars did," he admitted. "Sometimes when there's a good war movie, I get the shakes when the mortars start."

The marines had partially retaken the hills at a heavy cost. Charette repeatedly moved about through a murderous barrage of small arms and mortar fire to tend the wounded, said the citation signed by former President Dwight Eisenhower.

While he was caring for a badly wounded marine, an enemy grenade landed a few feet away.

Instinctively, he pushed his medical bag toward the grenade. At the same time, he threw himself upon the wounded marine and absorbed the grenade's concussion.

"I covered him because he wouldn't have survived that," Charette said.

Grenade damage, said Charette, is from shrapnel. "I looked like a butcher."

Suffering painful facial wounds and covered with blood, he continued to administer medical aid to the wounded marine. He saw four others nearby who were seriously hurt.

His helmet gone with the grenade's blast, he tended the five men while exposing himself to heavy enemy fire.

To protect one of the wounded, he removed his own battle vest and put it on the fallen comrade. Charette remained on the battlefield until he could help carry the wounded to safety.

"His great personal valor reflects the highest credit upon himself and enhances the finest traditions of the United States Naval Service," said President Eisenhower Jan. 14, 1954.

Charette later went into submarine service, where he spent about 20 years and retired a master chief.

He met his wife, Lou, at the beginning of his naval career when she was stationed at Great Lakes Naval Training Center as a member of the Women's Auxiliary Volunteer Emergency Service. The couple have five children.

Charette doesn't see himself as being especially heroic despite having won the nation's highest military honor.

Mob feels it's getting 'bum rap'

By SID MOODY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Working for the Mob is a tough racket.

You spend your business life struggling up the ladder. Breaking arms. Stuffing competitors into trunks of old Pontiacs. Hijacking trucks in all kinds of weather. Trying to collect on overdue loans. Lugging cement bags to make shoes for associates who will try to wade the East River.

When can you relax? In a restaurant? You never know if the waiter is wired like a telephone switchboard...if your next bite of steak is your last bite of steak. You want to look nice? Somebody drills you while you're snoozing under the hot towels in a barber's chair. You get no respect.

So you put in your time, in or out of the penitentiary, make it to the top. And in the end what do you get? A gold watch? No. Dead is what you get.

The Mob's drastic personnel policy surfaced yet again earlier this month when Paul "Big Paul" Castellano was given early retirement in a barrage of gunfire on his way to dinner at a class East Side steak house.

Anybody else, the papers would say Mr. Castellano had been murdered, murdered most foully. But mobsters don't get murdered. They get "rubbed out." They're "hit."

The one thing reporters fear more than a spilled cup of coffee on their trench coats is a libel suit. Except when it comes to the Mob. How can you libel a pug that breaks bones for a living?

Reporters aren't alone. The public has a different set of rules about the Mob, too. Normally a street murder evokes horror; city hall calls for immediate action. But the spot where a fallen mobster breathed his last becomes an instant tourist attraction. Mobsters have an all-year hunting season on each other. A passerby tells a New York Times reporter he likes to eat at restaurants where mobsters have had their last suppers because he figures if nothing else the guys in the gang like to eat well.

America has bestowed on the Mob a glamour they deny to legitimate enterprise like General Motors or U.S. Steel. "The Godfather" was a book and then a movie that made millions. Who'd sit through a film about the president of the Chase Manhattan Bank? Not unless they gave away free popcorn by the bucket.

Americans see romance in gunplay. When Wyatt Earp hung up his six-gun, there was a void. The Mob filled it. Al Capone became something of a folk hero. He Tommy-gunned his way into the hearts of America because he was supplying the same Prohibition hooch millions of Americans were drinking.

America has a double standard about the Mob, says Ronald Goldstock, director of New York's Organized Crime Task Force. "We look at them in movies like we do a drunk driver weaving down the road. It is funny until in real life he hits somebody and kills him. The mobster in a movie breaks someone's kneecap and maybe it's funny. But organized crime has been operating in the United States for 55 years and it is a national disgrace.

"Castellano's death should be the catalyst to get the public to say enough is enough," Goldstock said.

It is customary to describe the Mob as living in families. This conjures up images of devoted hoods gathering around the dinner table with their loved ones after a hard day's drug trafficking.

Mob or Mafia, the boys seem to feel they get a bum rap and not just from grand juries. Some years ago Joe Colombo, a purported biggie in the netherworld, was asked by a reporter for an extended interview. Colombo thought the press always made too much of the Italian connection.

Colombo had the reporter researched to determine he wasn't an FBI stereo set and put a henchman on his tail. Weeks later they met. Colombo, like a godfather in a fairy tale, not Mario Puzo's book, told the reporter he'd grant his any wish plus an interview if he could guess what was the most important thing in Colombo's life.

The reporter, a quick study, contemplated for a moment, then said: "your wife and kids."

Colombo clapped his knee. "Right!" Then, right out of Brothers Grimm, he asked for the wish.

"Get that guy off my tail," said the reporter.

Unfortunately the profile was never written. Soon afterwards Colombo was shot and mortally wounded at an Italian-American rally in Columbus Circle.

Ring in the new

Throughout Midland, there will be plenty of celebrating tonight as the Old Year is bid farewell and the New Year is ushered in. More than a few local residents will join in breathing a collective sigh of relief to see 1985 depart.

Without a doubt, 1985 will go down in the history books as a difficult one at best for residents of the Tall City. Oil prices continued to drop — which is a signal of trouble ahead for a community with an oil-based economy like Midland's.

Furthermore, just about all aspects of the local economy were flat in 1985 and it showed in the lack of vigor in the community. Midland, for all the good efforts of those pushing for diversification, is a community still tied so closely to the oil industry that its economic life is ruled in large part by fluctuations in the industry at large. When that industry is good, Midland reaps the benefits. But when the industry is suffering through the doldrums, the community's vitality plunges.

Not that 1985 didn't have its high points. One of the highest was celebration of Midland County's Centennial. The celebration and the memories that were made during those months of activity will be long remembered as one of the community's finest hours.

And, of course, 1985 brought a heightened awareness of the need for Midland and Odessa — two cities only 20 miles apart with a combined population of nearly 250,000 — to work together more closely to develop the Permian Basin by attracting new industries and businesses, and the resulting job opportunities. That effort will become even more crucial in future years, because of the natural tendency of the two cities to grow toward one another along major thoroughfares.

The new year holds ample opportunity for the cities of the Permian Basin. Certainly there are outside forces that cannot be controlled or can be controlled only minimally. But the opportunities here overwhelmingly outnumber the disadvantages.

There will be few reasons to regret seeing 1985 pass into history. But there is a feeling of anticipation that 1986 will bring good developments for this area.

Ring out the old year; ring in the new.

Another View:

'Star Wars' fallout

The Reagan administration's determined effort to enroll Western Europe's political and technological resources in the "Star Wars" program, which is officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI, is making progress.

Great Britain broke the ice by signing the first government-to-government agreement providing a framework for participation by British companies. Now the West German cabinet has conditionally agreed to let private companies enroll in the research, and Italy is expected to be not far behind. Even in France, where the government is sharply critical of SDI, nothing is being done to discourage participation by individual French companies.

The fact remains, however, that allied governments remain deeply skeptical about the Star Wars program. With good reason, they suspect that it may do more to undermine European security than to enhance it. Americans have equally good reasons to wonder whether the evolving terms of European participation are in the U.S. interest.

The Europeans were disturbed at President Reagan's failure to consult them before announcing his Strategic Defense Initiative in March 1983 despite the abrupt change that the SDI program represented from alliance-approved doctrines of nuclear deterrence. The president consulted hardly anyone in his own government, for that matter.

The more substantive European concerns were that the Star Wars program would derail arms control and trigger a new arms race, that its enormous prospective costs would divert money from other arms programs of more immediate relevance to European security, and that the controversial program would play into the hands of Europe's pacifists and anti-Americans.

Those concerns have not gone away — far from it — but they are moderated by the knowledge that the Soviets are pursuing an ambitious anti-missile program of their own and by worry that if Europe does not sign up it will miss out on technological breakthroughs that might have important commercial applications.

The major European allies agree that Washington should pursue research into strategic defense as an offset to Soviet work in the field. They know that if Star Wars worked it could be used to protect Western Europe from medium-range Soviet missiles. But they insist that the research program be kept within the bounds of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. They also make it clear that European governments plan to share in any new technologies that result from research, even though they will refuse to invest any money in it — a proposition that isn't very attractive to the American taxpayer.

Even among Europeans who are inclined to view SDI favorably, there is justifiable concern that, as the program matures and costs grow, its U.S. funding will be at the expense of the American share in financing the enormously important modernization of the conventional, nonnuclear forces facing the Warsaw Pact in Central Europe. Both U.S. and European military leaders warn that, unless these conventional capabilities are beefed up, the alliance will be dangerously dependent on the early use of nuclear weapons in event of a Soviet invasion.

It seems clear that Star Wars, far from bringing the United States and its allies together in a common enterprise, will serve as another, possibly serious, source of disunity and contention. That ought to be worrying the administration as much as it concerns staunchly pro-alliance politicians in Western Europe.

Mengele longed for faded glory

WASHINGTON — Taped recordings of Dr. Josef Mengele merrily singing Christmas carols in his South American exile present a supposedly human side to the Nazi "Angel of Death," who consigned hundreds of thousands of Jews to the gas chambers at Auschwitz.

Jack Anderson

But transcripts of other Mengele tapes, obtained by our associate Lucette Lagnado, give a different impression of the homicidal quack. The conversations, recorded in Brazil in December 1969 and August 1971, reveal Mengele as a rather tiresome old crank, still spouting Nazi racial garbage and bemoaning the downfall of Hitler's 1,000-year Reich after only 12 years of slaughter.

If it weren't for the substance of Mengele's pontifications, and his record as a coldblooded Nazi who performed hideous experiments on helpless prisoners, one might almost feel sorry for this aging fanatic, who had seen his dreams go up in smoke. But the dreams were too sick to inspire sympathy.

"There are no more elites," Mengele mourned in one of the long, wandering discussions with two sycophantic German fellow exiles, Wolfgang Gerhard and Wolfram Bossert. "They should exist again. ... Ten thousand Spartans terrorized 300,000 Helots. Why should that not be possible over here?" The Helots were ancient Greeks enslaved by the Spartans who served as role models for the Nazis.

Mengele's drinking companion, Gerhard, offered a lugubrious observation on the sad state of Brazilian society: "Only here there are no Spartans, only Helots."

Mengele agreed. "That's the problem. The problem isn't the law or the masses, but the fact that there are no more giants. That's the question."

A woman's arrival with drinks revived Mengele's spirits. "Long live those who bring us drinks!" he cried.

The irony of Mengele's situation never seemed to dawn on the old Nazi. He was contemptuous of the Brazilian society that had given him refuge. He apparently couldn't bring himself to admit that the racial mixing that was anathema to the Nazis had produced a robust, tolerant nation that daily contradicted Hitler's dire predictions of what "mongrelization" must inevitably bring.

"The races will always mix," Mengele admitted glumly. "Nothing positive will be achieved. On the contrary, the more they mix the more disharmonic they will be."

The mulattoes who make up a substantial part of the Brazilian population were singled out for Mengele's crocodile tears. When blacks and whites intermarry, he said, "the result is a weaker mulatto."

Even more ironically, Mengele, toward the end of his life, fell in love with a Brazilian mulatto and begged her to come live with him. But she declined, making it clear that she required a wedding ring as part of any arrangement. This was apparently more than Mengele was willing to offer.

Mengele repeatedly voiced his contempt for postwar Germany, where "the true values have been destroyed." He defined these as "race, nation, class, social status." Instead, he said sadly, modern Germans are concerned with "human beings."

After one three-hour discussion with his fellow Nazis, Mengele acknowledged the futility of their blatherings. "We are not getting anywhere," he said irritably.

A Justice Department Nazi-hunter put it more succinctly with a single Yiddish word. The contents of the Mengele tapes, he said, are "dreck" (rubbish). We couldn't agree more.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Hard-line fans of former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick miss her sorely. Mrs. Kirkpatrick's replacement, Vernon Walters, is more a diplomat than an ideologue, and he evidently hasn't provided enough rhetorical red meat to satisfy the voracious appetites of arch-conservatives, who used to howl in glee at Mrs. Kirkpatrick's denunciatory anti-Soviet speeches. Walters prefers to operate quietly and effectively behind the scenes. Even his unquestioned skills are cause for griping. "He is inarticulate in seven languages," grumbled one critic who pines for the glory days of Mrs. Kirkpatrick's tough talk.

OLYMPIC GOLD: Mary Lou Retton isn't the only one to profit from the 1984 Olympics. The U.S. Olympic Committee recently reported to Congress that it has accumulated $42.5 million in profits from the sale of silver and gold commemorative coins minted by the Treasury. The money will be used to train future Olympic athletes and to support amateur sports programs. The committee already has given $6.4 million to amateur sports groups. And the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee used $29 million from its share of coin sales to offset the expenses of the Games.

Banning racial quotas on hold

WASHINGTON — After six months of internal debate and delay, the proposed directive by President Reagan banning racial quotas is becalmed — a case study of what ails his presidency.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

No one doubts Reagan would choose to make affirmative action voluntary in public and private hiring should the matter ever reach his desk. But the White House staff under Donald T. Regan has been trying for administration consensus on a compromise executive order that would soften supposed political repercussions. It would be better still, in the view of some aides, not to have any presidential order and instead adopt new Labor Department regulations.

New delays blocking action in the foreseeable future have led supporters of the executive order inside the White House to gloomily declare it dead. Indeed, it probably would be, save for implacable support from Atty. Gen. Edwin Meese III. Still, how is it that five years of Ronald Reagan have passed without changing the quota system he has railed at for years?

The answer is the president's aloofness from the decision-making process. Rarely will he dispute a consensus recommendation from senior advisers. Seldom does he initiate policies on his own, despite conspicuous exceptions in national security areas. With the administration unable to reach consensus on affirmative action, the White House staff has not even sent an option paper into the Oval Office for Reagan's decision.

That is not because Don Regan is a closet liberal with a secret agenda. Rather, administration insiders consider him sympathetic to the executive order but overly worried about its political fallout, a worry that frequently plays too large a role in White House decision-making. Complicating matters even further is that Regan and many of his aides are neophytes whose political careers only began five years ago.

Accordingly, when Secretary of Labor William Brock opposed the Justice Department's proposed executive order last July, alarm bells sounded in the West Wing. Those bells did not differentiate between opposition to the order from the president's enemies inside the Washington Beltway and support from his friends outside it.

With the Justice and Labor Departments unable to agree, it was presumed that a non-consensus option paper would reach the president's desk for his decision shortly after Labor Day. However, the delay game was only beginning. First, it was the Geneva Summit postponing everything else. Then it was a last-ditch effort by Cabinet Secretary Alfred H. Kingon for a Justice-Labor compromise.

According to one administration source, agreement was near when the Dec. 23 edition of U.S. News & World Report announced a deal making Brock the "winner" and Meese the "loser." This, contends the source, led Asst. Atty. Gen. William Bradford Reynolds, as Justice Department negotiator, to block the agreement.

Reynolds calls this nonsense. In truth, all parties agree that two words — "voluntary" and "mandatory" — have blocked agreement. While adamant against "mandatory" racial hiring goals, the Justice Department has brought up a third word: the government would "encourage" affirmative action on a "voluntary" basis. So far this is unacceptable to the Labor Department.

After six months of deadlock, the White House wants one more stab at compromise to be negotiated at the highest level — between Bill Brock and Ed Meese. But personal tragedy has intervened. Brock spent most of the Christmas holidays at the hospital bedside of his wife, Muffet, seriously ill and until recently in intensive care.

That makes doubtful whether Brock will be available to conclude these talks one way or another beginning the week of Jan. 6 as the Justice Department hopes. Nobody wants to issue the order close to the Jan. 20 observance of Martin Luther King's birthday. Moreover, the White House wants to act during a congressional recess. The current congressional vacation ends Jan. 21. Soon thereafter will come predictable warnings against acting too close to the elections next fall.

Although it is no wonder that some supporters of the executive order smell permanent stall, Meese is determined to see the battle through. He will not buy revised Labor Department regulations, as suggested by the White House. Contrary to published reports, a sizable majority of the Cabinet supports the Attorney General.

Brock, outnumbered, has yet to unlimber a piece of heavy artillery: Secretary of State George Shultz, who as Richard Nixon's Secretary of Labor nearly 20 years ago fathered affirmative action. The forthcoming decision will thus symbolize whether President Reagan slips back to the caution of previous Republican administrations or uses the three years he has left to carry out the original purposes of the Reagan revolution.

CHARLEY REESE

Hungarian poet cries for freedom

Remember how all that day the Danube was lost in fog, how blood streamed in the gutters like water..."

Tibor Tollas, Hungarian poet and journalist, remembers. He was there in Budapest 29 years ago when Soviet tanks manned by Asian troops butchered the youth of Hungary and trampled the flower of freedom which had bloomed for 10 glorious days.

Charley Reese

It would be well if we remembered, too, with that disgusting circus of Geneva still a fresh stain, how many times must we betray the dead by sitting at tables with their murderers? What must young East Europeans who risk their lives to speak for freedom think of timid men in the Free World who sit nervously on the edge of their chairs, like old women, fluttering their hands in a pained desire to hear some word from the Soviet dictator that will ease their fear?

Almost 29 years ago to the day, I spent my one day off in London packing supplies for Hungarian refugees while Tollas fled toward the Austrian border. Now, sitting across from him in an American living room, I am ashamed at how little I have done for freedom. Tollas, who now lives in Munich where he publishes a newspaper in five languages, has never let the sun set on a day not devoted to freedom.

Such men always make me ashamed. To see him with his mangled hand torn by a Soviet tank, to see those luminous eyes that endured nine years in a communist prison, to see him at 64 energized and purposeful makes me ashamed of every hour I have wasted, of every petty complaint I have ever voiced or thought.

Tollas likes to quote the Polish poet and Nobel Prize winner, Czeslaw Milosz, who said those "who are alive receive a mandate from those who are silent forever."

He keeps faith with those who died in Budapest, with those who died in prison, with the new generation in Hungary which, he says, are fighting a quiet revolution.

"They are not afraid," he says. "They know nothing of the butchery, but they confront their communist masters and the communists don't know how to handle them. They say, 'We are a product of your system but we want answers.' "

Tollas does not see another open revolt and says with earned bitterness, "We don't wish it. We had enough bloodshed and nobody helped us." But he says Eastern Europe is seething with this new generation's dissatisfaction while the Soviet Union's economy is collapsing. Down the road, he sees nothing but increasing difficulties for the Soviet Union.

Annually, Tollas makes a tour of the cities in North America where 1.6 million Hungarians live. They support his newspaper which serves the double purpose of getting information behind the iron curtain and of getting news about the communist countries through what he calls the paper curtain to the West.

Tollas will go on speaking for the dead and the living dead who have no freedom. It's sad that in the few free places left his voice is drowned out by the cries for money by any means and for peace at any price.

The Hungarian poet I quoted at the beginning ended his poem by saying, "...we shredded our sons away, and blood matted the glossy heads of our girls, not love's kisses."

Let us take care lest we someday sing that dirge for our sons and our daughters.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martins and Howard counties: Tonight: fair with lows in the mid 30s. Wind northwest 5 to 10 mph.

New Years Day: mostly sunny with highs in the mid 60s. Wind west 5 to 15 mph.

New Year's Day should be cool

From Staff and Wire Reports

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are calling for cooler temperatures on New Year's Day with a high in the lower 60s predicted.

Fair skies, temperatures dipping into the lower 30s, and southerly winds at five to 10 mph are the conditions expected in the Permian Basin tonight. Wednesday's winds are expected to shift to the southwest at 10 to 15 mph with fair skies remaining.

Monday's balmy high of 73 was 9 degrees cooler than the record high set in 1951. This morning's low of 38 was 24 degrees warmer than the record low of 14 set in 1976.

STATE

A weak Pacific front moving southward through Texas early today brought colder temperatures statewide and dense fog that prompted travelers advisories along the middle Gulf coast and lower Rio Grande Valley.

The front extended from Texarkana through Waco and westward to San Angelo at 4 a.m., the National Weather Service said. Temperatures behind the front fell into the 30s over the Panhandle and High Plains and the 40s across most of North Central Texas.

Ahead of the front, very moist air kept temperatures in the 50s and 60s over south and south Central Texas. low clouds and fog covered much of Southeast Texas, the coastal plains and the lower Rio Grande valley. Locally dense fog reduced visibility along the coast and lower valley to near zero, prompting a travelers advisory, the National Weather Service said.

Scattered heavy thunderstorms also developed along the upper coast from near Galveston eastward into Louisiana.

NATION

Gusty winds whistled across the upper Midwest today to push wind chills down to 25 below zero and temperatures dipped into the low 30s in Florida.

Snow was scattered from eastern Colorado into western Kansas, across southeast Idaho and around the Great Lakes to North Dakota. However, no measurable amounts of snow were reported during the 6 hours up to 7 a.m. EST.

Rain spread from northwest New Mexico into northeast Arizona. Rain and occasional thundershowers reached from Tennessee and Alabama across the lower Mississippi Valley and the upper Texas Coast, and sleet and freezing rain iced highways in western North Carolina and southeastern Tennessee.

Seminoles find young hero, beat Cowboys 34-23

GATOR
Jacksonville, Fla. Dec. 30
Oklahoma St. vs. Florida St., 7 p.m.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden, who said his team needed to discover a new star in order to win Monday night's Gator Bowl football game, found the hero he was looking for in seldom-used receiver Herb Gainer.

Quarterback Chip Ferguson was named the most valuable player after passing for 338 yards in Florida State's 34-23 blitz of Oklahoma State, but Bowden saved most of his praise for Gainer, who caught seven passes for 148 yards and two touchdowns.

"No question about it, the biggest surprises were the two wide receivers, Gainer and (Randy) White," Bowden said. "If they hadn't played the way they did we couldn't have done it. We were determined to come out and throw the ball whether we had a receiver or not."

The Seminoles were expected to stress the running game because their top receiver, Hassan Jones, had been suspended for selling complimentary tickets and their No.2 and No.3 pass-catchers were injured.

Bowden said Sunday that the only way the Seminoles could beat the Cowboys was if a new star evolved during the game. Gainer "had shown me he could do it before, but he hadn't had a good game for us," Bowden said.

In fact, Gainer had caught only five passes this season and White, who caught four for 87 yards against the Cowboys, didn't have a single reception to his credit. But the reserves played like seasoned veterans in front of a crowd of 79,417.

"I thought it would be a little tougher," Gainer said. "But we have a pretty explosive offense if we're executing."

OKLAHOMA STATE Coach Pat Jones said the only thing that surprised him was his team's inability to stop the Seminoles.

"They didn't do anything that we didn't think they'd do," Jones said. "We expected them to pass it despite the problems at wide receiver. But we thought we could stop them and we didn't."

Ferguson hit 20 of 43 attempts, with touchdown tosses of 39 and 19 yards to Gainer. He capped Florida State's scoring with a 1-yard dive with 10:43 left in the game.

Gainer literally stole a 39-yard touchdown in the second quarter by outbattling Cowboy defensive back Demise Williams for a pass thrown into the end zone. He snared a 29-yarder to give the Seminoles a 27-3 lead with 4:51 left in the third period.

The Seminoles, 9-3, also scored on a 3-yard run by Cletis Jones and field goals of 23 and 39 yards by Derek Schmidt. Florida State tailback Tony Smith rushed 24 times for 201 yards.

Oklahoma State, 8-4, managed only a 33-yard field goal by Brad Dennis until exploding for 14 points in 93 seconds late in the third quarter. Tailback Thurman Thomas ran 29 yards with a screen pass to make it 27-10 with 2:52 left. After a fumble recovery by Harry Roberts on the third play following the kickoff, Thomas passed 12 yards to quarterback Ronnie Williams on a flea-flicker to make it 27-17 with 1:19 left in the quarter.

The Seminoles put an end to the Oklahoma State rally by rolling 55 yards in nine plays to Ferguson's touchdown run. The Cowboys finished the scoring when Williams passed 31 yards to Hart Lee Dykes with 10 seconds to play.

On the unusual first-half touchdown play, the pass from Ferguson hung up as Gainer and Demise Williams jostled each other in the end zone. Each got a hand on the ball, popping it up a few feet, and Gainer reached out and grabbed it for a touchdown.

Late fumble saves Huskies from Buffs

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A season of unfulfilled aspirations ended on a positive note for the University of Washington football team.

The Huskies, behind touchdown runs by David Tony and Anthony Covington, edged Colorado 20-17 Monday in the second Freedom Bowl football game at Anaheim Stadium.

"It's a good finish," Washington Coach Don James said. "The thing is, we were looking at 6-6. Somebody had billed this game as the underachievers (Washington) against the over-achievers.

"I'm proud of our guys. They got ready to play."

REGARDLESS OF how ready the Huskies were, it took a fourth-quarter fumble two yards from the end zone by Colorado's Mark Marquez to derail the Buffaloes.

"I didn't think we were going to stop them, and that would have put pressure on our offense," James said.

When asked whether Marquez was down, James replied, "I don't know. I don't care. I won't know until I see the films.

"A lot of things went against us, too, like 13 penalties."

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney, whose team was 1-10 a year ago, was proud of what his team accomplished, even in defeat.

"In general, we had a chance to win it and just didn't do it," McCartney said. "The thing I was proudest of is that we were in position to win despite being down by 10 at one point."

With the game tied, Covington dove into the end zone from a yard out to put the Huskies up 17-10 with 5:35 left in the third quarter.

An 18-yard field goal by Jeff Jaeger on the first play of the fourth quarter extended Washington's advantage to 20-10.

Colorado, with momentum going the other way, turned to some chicanery to get back into the game. The Buffaloes converted a fake field goal into a 31-yard touchdown pass from punter Barry Helton to tight end Jon Embree.

With the extra point, Colorado was back within three points with 11:05 to play.

THE BUFFALOES were within two yards of a go-ahead touchdown with five minutes left when Marquez's fumble near the goal line was recovered by Washington linebacker David Rill, who was credited with 17 tackles in the game.

"It came at a good time," Rill said. "I was a little out of position, but Joe Kelly made a good hit, the ball popped out, and I was closest to it."

"I found a seam and was trying to drive into the end zone," Marquez said. "The ball rolled out as I was going down and they called it a fumble."

Washington had taken a 10-7 lead on Toy's 3-yard touchdown run with 30 seconds left in the first half. The score culminated an 80-yard, 14-play drive kept alive by a fourth-down offside penalty against Colorado.

The Buffaloes tied the game on their first possession of the second half with a 33-yard field goal by Larry Eckel.

A 1-yard scoring plunge by Anthony Weatherspoon had given the Buffaloes a 7-3 lead with 5:59 left in the second quarter. Colorado's touchdown was set up by a 28-yard punt return by Jo Jo Collins to the Washington 26-yard line.

The Huskies had taken a 3-0 lead on a 30-yard field goal by Jaeger with 3:58 left in the first quarter.

Washington sophomore quarterback Chris Chandler completed 15 of 26 passes for 141 yards and one interception. He also gained 72 yards on seven carries to lead the Huskies in rushing.

Marquez led Colorado with 80 yards on 10 carries.

Chandler was voted the game's most valuable player. The 6-foot-3½ sophomore took over as the Huskies' starter in the 10th game after senior Hugh Millen suffered a shoulder injury the week before.

After the late fumble by Marquez, Colorado got the ball back two more times but was unable to threaten, failing to gain even a first down.

COLORADO, WHICH finished ninth in the nation in rushing, could gain just 69 yards on the ground in the first half and 190 in all. The Buffaloes averaged 259.8 yards rushing per game during the regular season.

Colorado was limited to 234 total yards, compared with 348 yards for Washington.

Colorado quarterback Mark Hatcher completed just one of eight passes for 13 yards, and added 36 rushing yards on 17 carries

Prior to the fumble by Marquez, the only turnover was an interception by Colorado linebacker Barry Remington in the second quarter.

Washington was penalized 13 times for 88 yards in the game, Colorado four times for 20 yards.

The game drew a crowd of 30,961 to 69,007-seat Anaheim Stadium.

UTEP only new member in Top 20

Associated Press

North Carolina, which won its two games last week by a combined 136 points, remained atop The Associated Press Top Twenty today, receiving 46 of the 63 first-place votes from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

The Tar Heels, who hold the top spot for the sixth straight week, won the Orange Bowl tournament and improved their record to 12-0 with a 129-45 romp over Manhattan and a 115-63 rout of Brown.

Following North Carolina, which finished with 1,143 points, were Michigan, Duke and Syracuse, the same top four teams as the last three weeks. Georgetown, however, fell from Top Ten heights after a 14-point road loss to Texas-El Paso, the only new member of the Top Twenty.

Michigan, 12-0, received 13 first-place votes and 1,183 points, while Duke, 11-0, had the other four first-place votes and 1,134 points. Syracuse, 8-0, had 1,055 points.

Kansas, Georgia Tech, Oklahoma, Louisiana State, Memphis State and St. John's each improved one spot from last week's ranking to round out the latest Top Ten.

Kansas, 12-1, which won the BMA Classic over intra-state rival Wichita State, had 997 points. Georgia Tech, 10-1, which won the Cotton States Classic with easy victories over Texas and Navy, was next with 941 points, 105 better than Oklahoma, 11-0, champion of the All-College Tournament.

Louisiana State, 12-0, was eighth with 742 points, followed by Holiday Classic champion Memphis State, 11-0 and 727 points, and St. John's, 12-1 and 689 points, winners of the ECAC Holiday Festival.

Georgetown's loss to Texas-El Paso was its first of the season but the Hoyas still fell to 11th with 661 points.

"Sometimes things like this just happen. I'm glad it happened to me. I think I can smile for a little while now. I can be proud and walk around with my head in the sky for a couple of days — maybe get a cheap bottle of wine." — Kansas City Chiefs wide receiver Stephone Paige, who caught eight passes for an NFL-record 309 yards on the final Sunday of the NFL regular season.

Singletary named NFL defender of year

Chicago linebacker second Bear to be honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Singletary, the middle linebacker whose wide-ranging play is the most important element in the Chicago Bears stifling defense, was named today the NFL's defensive player of the year by The Associated Press.

Singletary was chosen over defensive end Howie Long of the Los Angeles Raiders and linebacker Andre Tippett of the New England Patriots in voting by three writers or broadcasters representing each of the NFL's 28 franchises.

"They couldn't pick a better one," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, himself the winner of the coach of the year award after guiding Chicago to a 15-1 record this season.

Singletary, a 6-foot, 228 pounder from Baylor, was selected by the Bears in the second round of the 1981 draft, lasting that long because he was thought to be too short for an NFL linebacker.

But the Bears' defensive captain has made up for that with speed that allows him to cover from sideline-to-sideline in the Bears' "46" defense, which often leaves him alone in the middle of the field. He also makes up for it with outstanding hitting ability and rarely misses a man once he has him in his sights — he's led the team in tackles for the past three years.

"I think it's a reflection on our defensive coordinator, Buddy Ryan," Singletary said. "Everything we do as a defense reflects Buddy Ryan. He gets the game plan together. It's not designed for one particular individual to do it all.

"I'm blessed to be in the right place at the right time. Any time I receive any honors at all I look at my defensive linemen and even the defensive backs I work with. I'm grateful we work together as well as we do."

SINGLETARY, WHO has played middle linebacker since high school, credited high school Coach Oliver Brown at Houston Worthing with teaching him "it's not always how big or how fast, it's the desire you have to be the best."

At Baylor, linbacker coach Corky Nelson showed me "what playing line is all about, being smart, tough and aggressive."

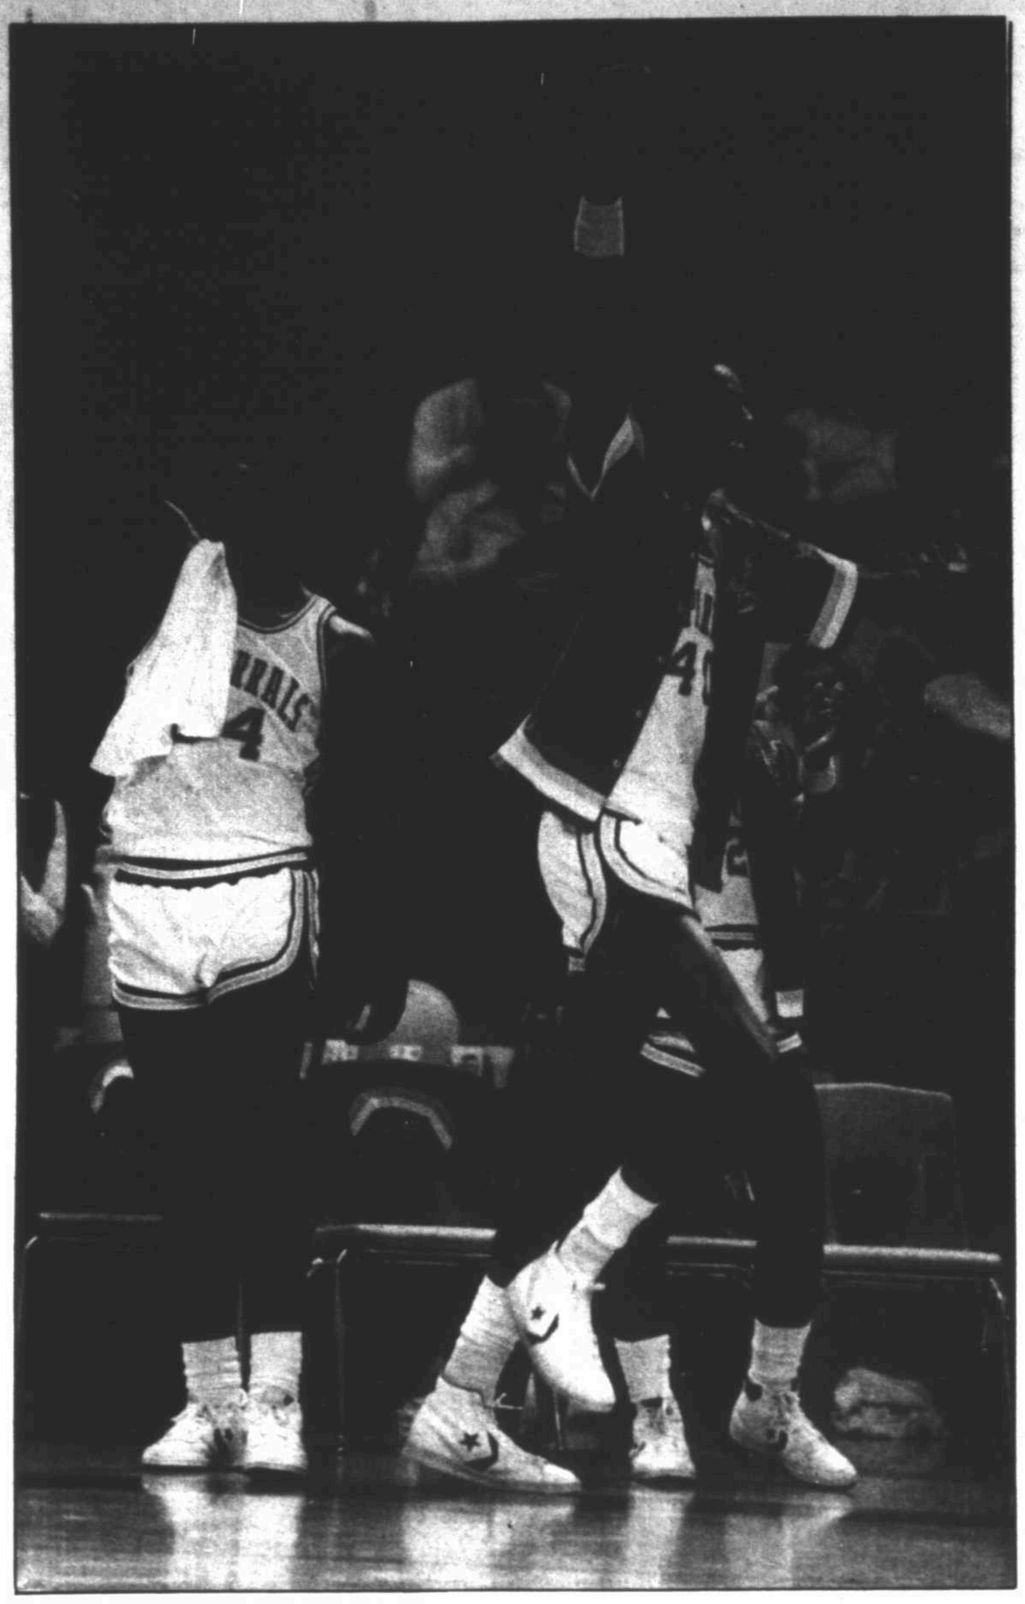

"He's a great example of what a football player should be," Ditka says of Singletary, whose horn-rimmed glasses make him look more like a college professor.

"He works harder than anyone we have on the team," says Ditka. "He's a joy to be around. He enjoys it and he works at it and it rubs off on the young people when he watches extra films and shows leadership in other areas."

UTEP rallies to win Sun Bowl crown

Associated Press

Texas-El Paso 74, Alabama 62

EL PASO — Juden Smith scored 17 points to lead Texas-El Paso in a 74-62 come-from-behind victory over Alabama in the championship game of the Sun Bowl Classic Monday night.

Smith and Alabama's leading scorer, Buck Johnson, both were ejected after a fight with 7 minutes remaining in the game. Johnson, with 21 points, made the all-tournament team, however, and Smith was chosen most valuable player.

Nebraska beat Ohio State 69-66 in the consolation game of the tournament earlier Monday.

The Miners were down by as much 20 points in the first half. The Crimson Tide led 39-30 at halftime.

In the second half, Texas-El Paso outscored Alabama 15-6 to even the score with 10:17 remaining. The Miners never trailed after that.

Smith also led the Miners in rebounds with eight. All-tournament guard Hernell "Jeep" Jackson scored 14 points for UTEP. Forward Dave Feitl had 13 points and six rebounds.

Guards Jim Farmer and Terry Coner also scored in double figures for Alabama with 14 and 10, respectively. Alabama center Derrick McKey had a game-high nine rebounds.

The win, UTEP's 11th straight, improved its record to 11-1. Alabama dropped to 7-2.

Baylor 51, UT San Antonio 50

WACO — Brandon Taylor scored 17 points as Baylor, playing without seven players suspended by the NCAA, withstood a strong second half by Texas-San Antonio to defeat the Roadrunners.

Baylor, now 8-3, led at halftime 33-23 but was outscored 27 to 18 in the second half.

UT-San Antonio, now 2-9, was led by senior guard Anthony Stewart's 14 second-half points. Stewart finished the night with a team-leading 16 points.

Tyrone Thigpen hit a 12-foot jumper to give the Roadrunners a brief 2-0 lead as the game opened. But Baylor battled back to take a commanding 10-point lead at the half.

In the second half, the Bears led by as many as 14 points, 45-29, with 9:55 left. But UT-San Antonio outscored the Bears 21-6 from then on.

Taylor led all scorers with 17 points and seven rebounds as Baylor shot 48 percent from the field, while the Roadrunners finished at 38 percent.

The seven players, including starters Carlos Briggs and Darryl Middleton, were suspended after an NCAA investigation of recruiting violations under former coach Jim Haller, who was fired last season.

The Pointers' record drops to 3-5.

The Raiders benefitted from a distinct height advantage with the 7-foot junior Wojciechoski also pulled down five rebounds. He was joined in double figures by teammate Greg Crowe with 11 points.

The Pointers' Tim Naegeli led all scorers with 19, and pulled down seven rebounds.

Texas Tech took a 32-25 halftime lead and came out in the second half to score 10 unanswered points before Stevens Point answered with 15:33 left in the game. Crowe scored six of the 10 points in the run.

Lamar 79, Washington 61

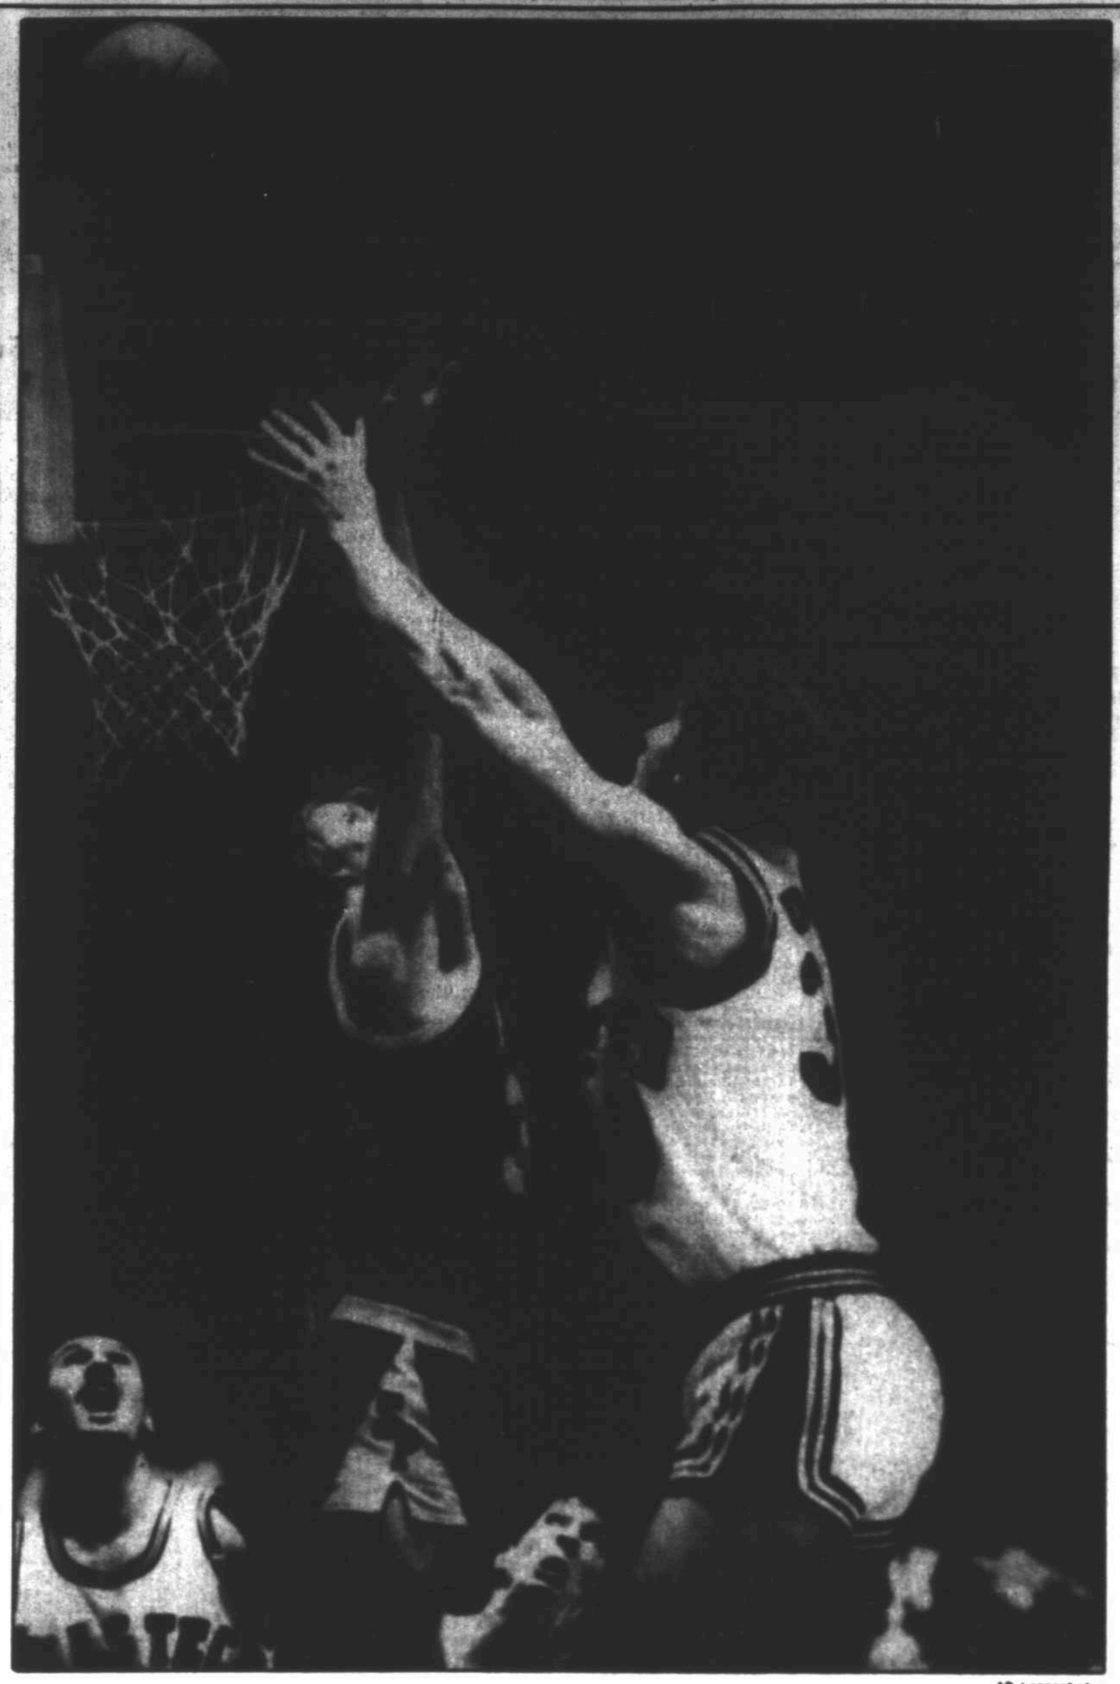

BEAUMONT — James Nance scored 18 points to lead Lamar as the Cardinals broke a two-game losing streak with five starters scoring in double figures to beat the University of Washington.

Nance was followed closely by teammate Greg Anderson with 17 points as Lamar, 7-4, shot 55.6 percent from the field.

High scorer for the Huskies, 6-6, was Chris Welp with a game-high 22 points.

The Cardinals broke away in the end of the first period to take a 24-12 lead on a turnaround jumper by James Gulley. But the Huskies came back and tied it at 32 on a reverse layup by Paul Fortier with just under two minutes left in the period.

Early in the second half, the Cardinals scored eight unanswered points to take a 42-34 lead and it was all Lamar from then on.

Sam Houston 63, Hardin-Simmons 52

ABILENE — Guard Greg Way scored 19 points to lead Sam Houston State to a victory over Hardin-Simmons.

Sam Houston improved to 10-1, while Hardin-Simmons fell to 6-4.

Hardin-Simmons pulled within four points in the final four minutes, but Sam Houston, which shot 82.4 percent in the second quarter, executed a 9-2 scoring spree in the final two minutes.

The game was close throughout the first half, with Hardin-Simmons leading 29-28 at intermission.

With 6:20 left in the second half, a fight erupted between Hardin-Simmons forward Craig Sladek and Sam Houston guard Lorenzo Duncan. Both benches emptied, and officials called time out but assessed no technical fouls.

Free Throws save Illinois from Cyclones

Associated Press

Tony Wysinger sank three clutch free throws in the final 46 seconds to lift Illinois to a 64-62 victory over Iowa State Monday night in college basketb all action.

The Illini made good on eight of nine free-throw attempts in the final four and a half minutes.

"I could not have asked for a better player than Tony because he loves being in a pressure cooker," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said.

Wysinger's free-throw efforts overcame a strong second-half surge by the Cyclones, who trailed by one point with just 27 seconds left.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, third-ranked Duke took a 78-55 decision over Northwestern; No. 4 Syracuse crushed C.W. Post 88-68; No. 7 Georgia Tech romped over Richmond 90-64; ninth-ranked Louisiana State downed Oral Roberts 82-64; No. 13 Kentucky swamped VMI 93-55 and No. 18 Notre Dame turned back Creighton 80-64.

Top Twenty

Johnny Dawkins scored 21 points and Mark Alarie added 15 to lead Duke over Northwestern. The Blue Devils took a big early lead, then survived some poor ballhandling and bad shooting in the second half to win their 11th straight game without a defeat. Duke committed 25 turnovers, most of them in the final 20 minutes.

"I was really happy with the first half," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Then in the second half, we just didn't play as well. We didn't score and we just let them outhustle us."

Syracuse improved its record to 8-0 with an easy victory over outmanned C.W. Post, which didn't have a starter taller than 6-foot-6. Rafael Addison paced Syracuse with 17 points, Wendell Alexis added 15 and Howard Triche and Dwayne Washington scored 12 apiece.

The Pioneers used a scrappy, man-to-man defense and the 22 points of 6-foot-5 Glen McMillan to keep the game close until the second half.

Bruce Dalrymple scored 22 points and shut down Richmond star John Newman as Georgia Tech took an early lead and romped over Richmond.

Dalrymple, a 6-foot-3 guard who also plays forward, got most of his points from the outside as the Yellow Jackets could not get their inside game going. Fellow guard Mark Price added 21 points.

On defense, Dalrymple held Newnan, who had been averaging 22.9 points a game, to 14 points.

"The tempo started out a little quicker than we wanted," said Spiders Coach Dick Tarrant. "They gave us the opportunity to run by sending four guys to the boards. We would have had what we wanted early if we had been a fast-breaking team."

Nikita Wilson had a team-high 19 points and eight rebounds to lead Louisiana State over Oral Roberts. The victory was the 12th for the unbeaten Tigers.

Louisiana State led by as many as 23 points midway through the second half and the Titans managed to whittle that lead to 13 with just over two minutes to play.

Kenny Walker scored 18 points, mostly with outside jumpers and slam dunks, as Kentucky routed VMI. Kentucky's pressing defense forced VMI into 10 first-half turnovers and made five steals that the quicker Wildcats converted into easy layups.

The Wildcats led 39-20 at intermission, then sewed up the game at the start of the second half by outscoring VMI 19-2 in the first 6:30.

"I did feel we got a little ragged late in the first half and I told them at the half, we have a fantastic player in Kenny Walker whose only had three shots," said Wildcats Coach Eddie Sutton. "When you've got an All-American, you better get him the ball."

Ken Barlow scored 15 points, including his 1,000th career point, as Notre Dame defeated Creighton. The Irish led from the opening basket by Tim Kempton, who finished with nine points.

Notre Dame's balanced scoring attack included 10 points each from David Rivers, Scott Hicks and Mark Stevenson.

Tackling technique prevents injury

CHICAGO (AP) — Educating young football players to the dangers of head-first tackling could end disabling spinal injuries, says a medical researcher and athletic trainer who cited a study showing that such injuries dropped 75 percent after certain tackling practices were barred.

"Ending those kinds of injuries is going to be difficult, but I think it's possible," said Joseph Vegso, a staff member at the University of Pennsylvania Sports Medicine Center in Philadelphia.

Vegso said his confidence was buoyed by a recent study at the center showing that such disabling injuries have declined by three-fourths since rule changes in 1976 outlawed "spearing" and other styles of head-first tackling.

The results of the study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, also showed a more modest decline of 22 percent in the number of deaths resulting from head injuries after 1976.

"Kids think they're invincible, that their head is just another part of the body to tackle with," said Vegso, who was head athletic trainer at Temple University before joining the center.

"The burden now is to educate the parents, coaches, school administrators and the kids themselves before the bad habits become ingrained.

"You hate to look at a tragedy and say maybe this will help, but what happened to Marc Buonoconti is the kind of thing that focuses attention on the problem."

Buonoconti, son of former pro football star Nick Buonoconti and linebacker at The Citadel, has been hospitalized, paralyzed from the chest down, since damaging his spinal cord making a tackle Oct. 26. Thanks to his father's efforts, considerable attention and more than $400,000 has been raised to study and find a cure for paralysis from spinal-cord injuries.

Vegso said researchers studied slow-motion films of more than a dozen tackles that resulted in disabling injuries, and calculated that the force exerted on the spine during such collisions ranges between 400 and 800 pounds.

The study compared statistics compiled by a previous researcher for the years 1959-63 with those from the Football Head and Neck Registry for the years 1971-75 and 1976-84.

The last two reporting periods followed significant improvements in the strength and protection afforded by helmets and face masks.

"As a result, the use of the head as a primary point of contact in blocking, tackling and head butting occurred," the authors said.

An average of six players each year suffered neck injuries resulting in cervical quadriplegia, or permanent paralysis below the neck, in 1959-63. That number rose to an average of 20 players each each year by 1971-75.

In 1976, the first season in which the National Collegiate Athletic Association's rules modification went into effect and were adopted by the National State High School Athletic Associations, the number of paralyzing injuries was 34.

But by the 1977 season, as more coaches and referees became familiar with the rules, that had dropped to 18, beginning a steady decline that totaled just five such injuries in 1984, or a decrease of 85 percent since the rule went into effect.

THE SEMINOLES marched 73 yards in 12 plays for their first score, a 23-yard field goal by Schmidt. Florida State displayed a slick two-minute offense at the end of the half, moving 59 yards on eight plays to set up Schmidt's 39-yard field goal with two seconds left for a 13-0 halftime lead. The drive started with 1:17 left at the Florida State 18-yard line.

The Cowboys moved 63 yards in 12 plays on their first possession of the second half before settling for a 33-yard field goal by Dennis.

The Seminoles answered with a 12-play drive of their own covering 73 yards. The big play was a 25-yard pass to Gainer on third-and-11. Jones ended the march with his TD run.

An interception by Deion Sanders set up the next Florida State score. Sanders returned the theft 28 yards to the Oklahoma State 38, and the Seminoles needed just five plays to score on the 19-yard pass to Gainer for a 27-3 lead.

The Seminoles rolled right through the vaunted Oklahoma State defense, which had given up an average of only 293 yards per game and had allowed more than 19 points only once all season. The Seminoles finished with 571 yards.

Akers' status at UT top question

HOUSTON (AP) — It should be the crowning moment for any college football coach, watching his team go through its final warmups before an appearance in a bowl game.

It should be a moment for a coach to reflect on a job well done over a long season against some of the top teams in the nation.

But as Texas Coach Fred Akers sent his Longhorns against 10th-ranked Air Force, 11-1, in the 27th Bluebonnet Bowl at Rice Stadium, he had to wonder whether it would be his final game as coach of the tradition-rich and victory-hungry Longhorns.

Akers has taken the Longhorns to bowl games in each of his nine seasons and his record of 81-24-2 — a winning percentage of 76.6 — compares favorably with the man he succeeded, Darrell Royal, who won 77.4 percent of his games.

Akers' 1985 team was chosen for a second-division finish in the Southwest Conference but the Longhorns posted an 8-3 record and were in contention for the SWC title until the final game of the season.

The Longhorns went into today's game with only two bowl victories during Akers' tenure and, win or lose, his performance will be scrutinized after the season.

During preparations for the Bluebonnet Bowl, Akers patiently answered more questions about his job security than his team.

"All you can do is win," Akers said. "There are always going to be rumors. There have been rumors that I was leaving to go to another team.

"One year I was supposedly going to the New Orleans Saints. There have been rumors that I'd be fired. It's strange, though, that most of these things come at recruiting time."

Akers says he likes college football and has no plans to get out.

Detractors point to Akers' bowl record, which includes an embarrassing 55-17 loss to Iowa in last year's Freedom Bowl, marking Texas' third consecutive bowl defeat. And they point to a 44-14 loss to Southern Methodist this year and, most damaging of all, a 42-10 loss to arch-rival Texas A&M in the season finale.

A victory over A&M would have sent the Longhorns to the Cotton Bowl, but the one-sided loss instead harkened back to a 37-12 loss to the Aggies at Austin in 1984.

"I'd rather be at a school where a lot is expected of you," Akers said. "But I'll just have to keep saying this over and over, the only pressure involved is what you put on yourself.

"I learned a long time ago that I can't control what people think or reporters write. I don't spend a lot of time thinking about it."

Players have also heard the rumors, and have reacted differently.

"We don't try to go out and win one for the coach," kicker Jeff Ward said. "We don't think about that. We just try to win."

Texas center Gene Chilton said the players accept the pressure.

"We all expect to be on top at Texas. That's why we came to Texas," he said.

Akers has six years remaining on a contract that pays him $91,600 annually, and he hopes to be around to earn it.

Dollar, gold down

LONDON (AP) — Modest commercial selling pushed the dollar lower today in light year-end trading on European exchange markets. Gold bullion prices also drifted lower.

A few hours after markets opened, the dollar was being quoted at lower levels against all major currencies except the British pound.

Trading volume was extremely light, with most European markets effectively closing at midday because of the New Year's holiday.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Monday:

—2.4593 West German marks, down from 2.463

—2.0753 Swiss francs, down from 2.0755

—7.545 French francs, down from 7.56

—2.7715 Dutch guilders, down from 2.776

—1,678 Italian lire, down from 1,679

Against the market trend, the British pound fell in relation to the U.S. currency. The value of sterling was quoted at $1.43875, down from $1.44.

In Tokyo, where trading ends just as European markets open, the dollar ended the year at 200.60 Japanese yen, down from 201.10 yen Monday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 200.675 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $327 a troy ounce, unchanged from the opening bid and down 50 cents from Monday's late bid.

In Zurich, the precious metal was bid at $326.80, down from $327.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 56 cents to close at a bid of $327.05.

Administration predicts improved economy

Economic indicators up slightly; home sales down

Associated Press

While the Reagan administration is predicting improvement in the U.S. economy next year, the government's main economic forecasting gauge made its smallest advance in five months during November.

The Index of Leading Indicators rose just 0.1 percent last month, and would have fallen 0.3 percent if not for a rally in the stock market, the Commerce Department reported Monday.

The increase was the seventh consecutive rise in the index, but it was short of 0.4 percent gains for September and October.

The small November increase was seen by many economists as an indication the economy would continue growing in 1986, although only slightly faster than this year. Many analysts have said they expected economic growth as measured by gross national product to rise 2.5 percent to 3 percent next year.

Preliminary estimates indicate the U.S. economy grew 2.4 percent this year, compared with the strong 6.6 percent growth rate of 1984.

The Reagan administration on Monday released its revised 1986 growth forecast, projecting 4 percent growth in 1986 and the following two years.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, in Palm Springs, Calif., with the vacationing president, said the Commerce Department's figures "continue to show steady, moderate growth."

While many analysts look for some pickup in the economy next year, they also believe the country's huge trade deficit will restrain growth as U.S. manufacturers continue to suffer from stiff foreign competition.

In a separate report, the National Association of Realtors said sales of existing homes dropped 3.4 percent in November, the biggest decline since a 4 percent setback in February. The group blamed poor weather for the decline and noted that sales were still above the 3 million mark at an annual rate for the ninth consecutive month.

In other economic news:

—The stock market posted a gain as a session ending rally erased declines of earlier in the day. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 7.46 to 1,560.46 as technical factors apparently touched off the late rally after a day of light, pre-holiday trading.

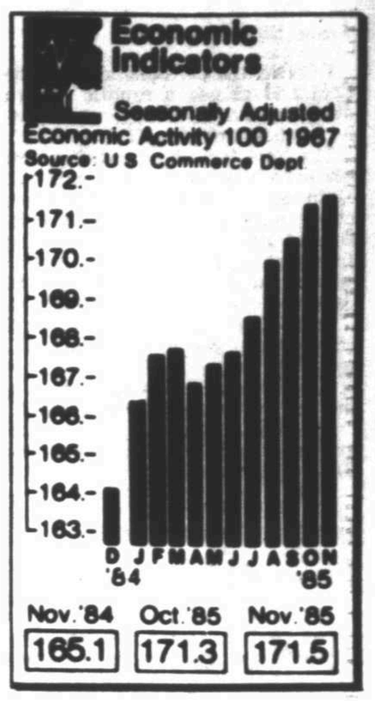

—The nation's business executives believe business activity in the first quarter of 1986 will be virtually the same as the final quarter of this year, according to a Dun & Bradstreet Corp. survey. The study of 1,468 executives indicated uncertainty over how the economy would perform next year, the financial information company said.

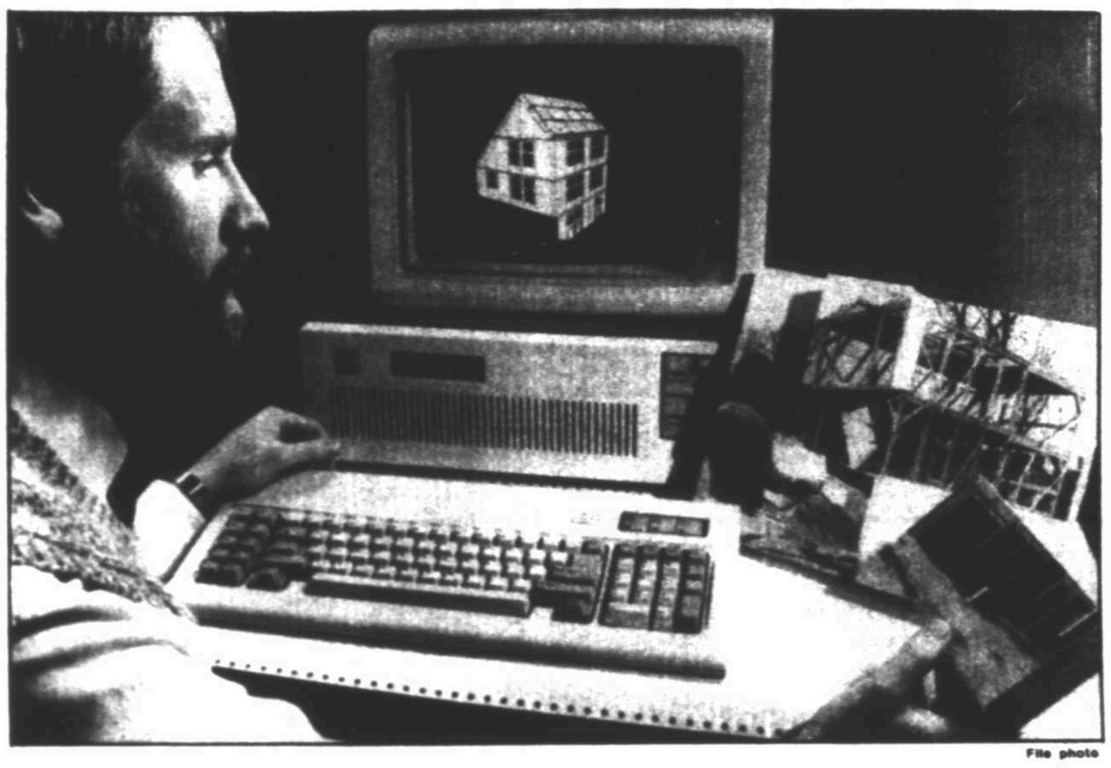

—The volume of help wanted advertising in 51 major newspapers nationwide rose in November to its highest point of 1985, the Conference Board said. The business research group said its Help-Wanted index rose to its highest level of the year last month, indicating improvements in labor markets despite a national unemployment rate which has been relatively unchanged over the past several months.

— The Treasury's weekly auction of three-and six-month bills resulted in slightly higher average discount rates. The average rate on the 90-day bills rose to 7.04 percent, from 7.02 percent the previous week, while that on the companion six-month bills rose to 7.07 percent from 7.05 percent.

In the secondary market, however, current 90-day bill rates fell six basis points, to 6.91 percent, reflecting what some dealers said was a temporary parking of funds in these short-term instruments. The rate on the current six-month bill rose eight basis points, to 7.08 percent, with the one-year bills up five basis points at 7.10 percent.

Most of the declines occurred late in the day when the federal funds rate jumped as high as 12 percent from 7.75 percent.

New 'family' television station to open in Basin

By DEANNA NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

A new television station expects to be operating in the Permian Basin by June 1986. The station, using the call letters KPEJ, will be an affiliate of Southwest Multi-Media Corp. of Houston.

According to Alan Barrows, station manager, the station which has no network affiliation, will be offering mainly family-oriented entertainment. "We will be programming a fair amount of movies, some first-run programming produced for syndication, some local and regional coverage, some religious programming and cartoons.

"The station should give viewers a change from the local network affiliates and we expect to create a whole new market of television viewers."

The station's license will cover 26 counties in West Texas and New Mexico and reach over 138,000 households. "We will be installing a 1,134-foot tower in the Hackberry Lake area this spring. Our signal will transmit from Big Spring to Monahans, and we will be working with all major cable companies in the outlying areas of West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico to get folks in those areas an opportunity to view KPEJ," Barrows added.

The station's $475,000, 8,000 square foot complex, to be located in Odessa at I-20 and West County Road, is being built by Abbott Building Co. A sales office will also be located in Midland, and of the 35 expected employees, Barrows plans to draw around 30 from the Midland/Odessa area. The station has an estimated payroll of $400,000 per year.

Southwest Multi-Media also owns the ABC affiliate in Abilene as well as the NBC affiliate in Brownsville. Billy R. Goldberg serves as chairman of the board and Lester Kamin is president of the corporation.

"The company has great confidence in the future of West Texas and especially in the Midland/Odessa area. This is a solid opportunity for the company and we are excited about our future in Midland/Odessa," noted Barrows.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Union Carbide gets boost in takeover battle

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge gave Union Carbide Corp. a boost in its battle to avoid a hostile $5.1 billion acquisition by GAF Corp., raising hopes for other companies fighting takeovers.

U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack on Monday refused to stop Carbide from buying back up to 70 percent of its own shares. He also refused to bar Carbide's directors from giving as much as $800 million in surplus pension assets to the company's employees and pensioners in the event GAF gains control.

GAF said it will appeal Pollack's rulings.

GAF unlikely to change its acquisition plan

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — GAF Corp. is unlikely to change the strategy of its bid for Union Carbide Corp. in spite of a federal judge's ruling that upholds anti-takeover defenses by Carbide, the nation's third-largest chemical company, analysts said.

GAF's loss in federal court Monday was expected, the analysts said.

They predicted most Carbide shareholders would tender their stock to Carbide for a combination of cash and debt by a midnight Tuesday deadline, then wait and decide whether to tender their cash-debt packages and accompanying rights to GAF for $74 each.

Social Security checks to increase 3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nearly 40 million Americans who get Social Security or Supplemental Security Income checks will begin receiving a 3.1 percent increase in benefits this week.

But the new year also will bring an average 1.4 percent increase in Social Security taxes. The self-employed face a 4.2 percent increase. For the 7 million workers earning $42,000 or more, the maximum payroll tax will rise 7.5 percent to $3,003.

The 31 million elderly or disabled persons with Medicare coverage will pay more out of pocket for hospital stays in 1986 as deductibles rise.

Department calls budget act unconstitutional

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department told Congress it considers part of the new balanced budget act unconstitutional because it infringes on President Reagan's budget-making authority.

Also Monday, the department asked a federal court to dismiss a suit brought by a group of congressmen who are challenging the disputed sections on other grounds.

Unlike the Justice Department, the congressmen say the sections are unconstitutional because they limit the power of Congress to make budgets.

Existing home sales fall during November

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing single-family homes fell 3.4 percent in November, the sharpest drop in nine months, a real estate trade group said.

The National Association of Realtors said Monday that previously owned homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.49 million units in November, following a 2.9 percent rise in October.

Even with the decline, sales were still 21.2 percent above a year ago.

Drop in airline flights hoped to be temporary

NEW YORK (AP) — Travel agents are hoping that a drop in airline bookings, prompted by customers' concerns about terrorist attacks in Europe and the Mediterranean basin, will be temporary.

Travelers have been made wary by terrorist attacks which left 18 dead and 113 wounded in Rome and Vienna airports on Friday, following hijackings of an airliner and a cruise ship in the Mediterranean earlier this year.

A Los Angeles travel agent said he expects travelers will get over their nervousness eventually and return to business as usual.

Judge to hear drill bit patent fight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Climaxing a 13-year legal fight, a federal judge will decide a Texas toolmaker's request for $1.2 billion from an Orange County company that infringed on its patent for a rock drilling bit.

With the infringement question settled, the non-jury damage portion of the case between Hughes Tool of Houston and Smith International of Newport Beach, Calif., is set to begin Thursday before U.S. District Judge Harry Hupp.

"The basic question at this point is the worth of this particular invention and how much it has been used," said Richard Stone, attorney for Smith International.

A federal appeals court has overturned a District Court decision that favored Smith, instead ruling that the Orange County firm infringed on Hughes' patent for the drill bit.

Hupp will decide the amount of the damages.

"It's been a long time getting here," said Ed Galle, Hughes' vice president of engineering and research who invented the drill bit.

The focal point of the infringement suit was the exact use and design of the rubber seal on the drill bit made by Smith.

"They (Hughes) claim this rubber ring is worth $1.2 billion, and we say we don't think so," Stone said.

Smith reportedly set aside a $22.8 million reserve fund in June but estimates an award against it might run as high as $62 million.

Smith sold 460,640 rock bits between 1971 and the end of 1984, netting about $1.3 billion, according to company records filed in court.

The case has been fought in various federal courts in California for 13 years and has generated hundreds of volumes of documents.

Chevron target of conservative campaign

Group tries to oust company from Angola

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Chevron Corp. is the target of a conservative group's campaign to force it to shut down its oil operations in Angola, on grounds that the company's presence is bolstering the Soviet-backed government.

In San Francisco, spokesmen for Chevron said the $1 million campaign announced by the Conservative Caucus on Monday was ill-founded. They said the corporation, whose Cabinda-Gulf subsidiary has been in Angola for 30 years dating to Portuguese colonial days, maintains "a position of strict neutrality" with the Marxist government.

Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, told a news conference that "Americans who love freedom can no longer regard with indifference activities on the part of Chevron-Gulf, which have had the effect of furthering the Soviet Union's multibillion-dollar campaign for military domination of Angola and all sub-Saharan Africa."

Phillips asked President Reagan in a letter to "issue an executive order requiring American banks and corporations to promptly discontinue their operations in, and commerce with, Soviet-occupied Angola."

Michael Guest, a White House spokesman on foreign affairs, said he was unaware of the letter, but the question would be "part and parcel of the administration's debate and deliberation on policy in Angola, which is still in review."

Phillips told reporters that Gulf operations in the Cabinda province of Angola generate "more than $2 billion per year in hard currency to keep a Soviet puppet regime in power," including helping to pay for Cuban mercenaries and Soviet weaponry.

Moreover, he said, "Gulf's corporate executives have ... been lobbying in behalf of the Soviet Union in Washington, urging Congress to reject U.S. aid to the UNITA freedom fighters led by Dr. Jonas Savimbi."

The Conservative Caucus claims about 200,000 paying members and counts an additional 600,000 people, including former members, as "supporters" of the group.

Chuck Wootton, an international affairs spokesman for Chevron, said Phillips "is obviously misinformed. We're not lobbying on behalf of the Soviet Union in Washington and that sort of thing. We have not taken a position on U.S. aid to UNITA. We have pointed out our commercial interests ... but we do not take positions on foreign policy questions."

Wootton said the reason that Chevron has "a long record in Angola is because we have stayed out of politics."

Chevron, which acquired Gulf last May, is "obviously a large factor in the economy" of Angola, Wootton said, though he questioned Phillips' figures. But "the U.S. government has supported our being there," he said, noting a State Department statement last year that said "U.S. business participation in Angola is in the long-term interests of both our nations, and of all Angolans."

"There are many fine, decent Americans who work for Gulf Oil," Phillips said. "They probably don't know that their corporate headquarters is working hand in glove with Fidel Castro and Mikhail Gorbachev to consolidate Soviet military control of southern Africa."

The Cabinda Gulf Oil Co., jointly owned by Gulf and the Luanda government, has about 200 offshore wells that make Angola the second-largest oil producer in sub-Saharan Africa, after Nigeria. Production by Cabinda Gulf is running about 170,000 barrels per day, Wootton said, with Chevron getting 83,000 barrels and the government 87,000 barrels.

Phillips said his organization also was:

—Purchasing Chevron stock in preparation for a proxy campaign against the Angolan operations.

—Mailing appeals to Gulf credit cardholders asking that they protest.

—Asking members to visit Chevron and Gulf service stations to deliver "fact sheets" to employees about the Angolan activities, and to mail postcards to Chevron executives saying that "patriotism must come before profit ... The billions of dollars in revenue your company generates (for Angola) ... have made you an ally of America's enemies."

Triton announces increased reserves in French oil field

DALLAS (SWN) Triton Energy Corp. reported that proved oil reserves from the Villeperdue oil field in France increased from 30.6 million barrels at May 31, 1985 to 43.5 million barrels at November 30, 1985.

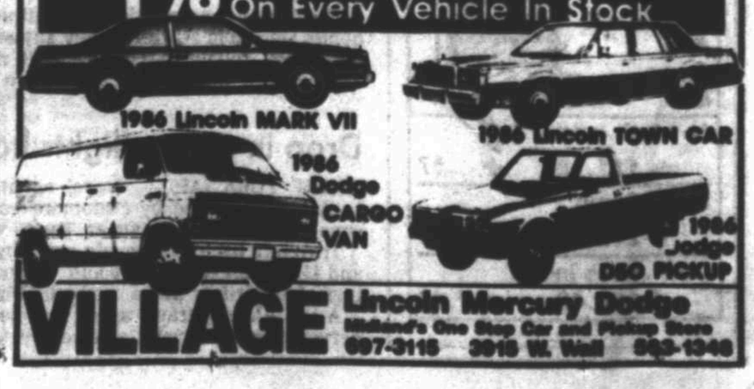

The increased proved oil reserves resulted from successful drilling activity during the first six months of fiscal 1986. Probable reserves, which may be produced from areas where the field has yet to be delineated, are estimated at a further 17.1 million barrels. It is important to note that a 17.5 percent recovery rate was used by independent engineers in calculating Villeperdue proved and probable reserves, whereas historical recovery rates for older oil fields in the Paris Basin have been substantially higher. Triton is confident that Villeperdue proved reserves will increase, based on longer production history coupled with an active delineation program.

Dick Liley's goal is still to provide first-class hospital

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Leaning back in his executive's chair, Dick Liley stared out the window as he reflected on the events which led him back to the helm of Midland's only private hospital.

"It's good to be back," he admitted. "But my goals haven't changed from what they were when I first came here. Midland still needs a first class private hospital to give people a choice of where they can go to get their medical treatment."

Following a late-May resignation from Parkview Hospital, Liley spent a suspenseful six-month period which saw him not only regain his former directorship of the newly named Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, but also the presidency of the corporation which controls it.

"And when we get the new hospital constructed, I will probably be president of it as well," he added.

Taking charge of shaky health facilities is nothing new for Liley, who first came to the financially troubled Parkview in May 1981.

"When I came here, American Medical Centers had owned Parkview for just six months and the hospital was losing money," he said. "Within 45 days, it was making a profit."

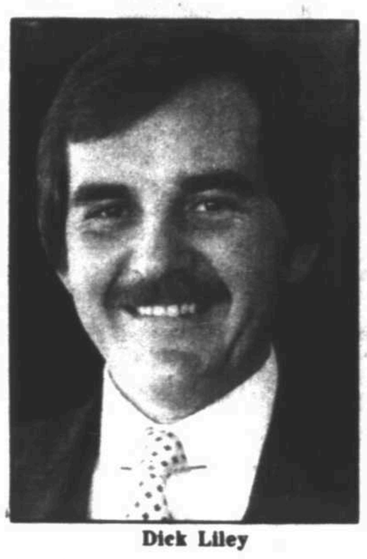

Liley added that he was the 15th administrator in the facility's history, while AMC was the eighth owner.

Liley, a troubleshooter for hospital corporations "from Florida to California," made a two-year commitment to Parkview. He also set some personal goals for the facility.

"AMC at that time saw no future for Parkview as an acute care facility and began plans to convert it to a psychiatric hospital," he recalled. "Of course, Midland Memorial Hospital wound up getting the certificate of need and eventually built Clearview."

"When we lost that CON, I was happy," he said. "I was happy because I was convinced that there was a need for another first-class hospital. As a result of that loss, I had the opportunity to prove to AMC that Parkview could operate for a profit and that there was a need for a second hospital in Midland."

It was at this time, said Liley, that the idea for the Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin first came up.

Dick Liley

The hospital, to have been built on 10 acres of land near Loop 250 and Preston Drive, would have offered gourmet food, luxury rooms and speciliazed surgical procedures. Everything looked rosy for Liley's plans to build a first-rate, competitive hospital, until AMC was purchased by Hospital Corporation of America in April, he indicated.

It was HCA's acquisition that led to managerial problems and Liley's eventual resignation. According to Liley, HCA had anticipated a future ruling by the Federal Trade Commission which would require it to divest itself of Parkview. In preparation, HCA negotiated with Summit to manage Parkview with the option to buy it should the FTC require the sale. The FTC ruling came in July.

"The problem I had was when Summit began managing the hospital," he said. "They are a California-based corporation and let me tell you, West Coast corporations are extremely different from those in Midland. They're much more cut-throat and aggressive, while Midland business is much more conservative. There was a good deal of communication problems."

"Absenteeism ownership does create certain problems for persons who are in charge of a local hospital," he said.

Dissatisfaction with Summit led to Liley's resignation, which came at the last Parkview medical staff meeting he attended on May 28 at Greentree Country Club. It was following that meeting that the idea for a physician-owned hospital began to germinate.

"After I announced my resignation, I was out in the parking lot of Greentree with several of the physicians," said Liley. "We had an impromptu meeting that evening and exchanged ideas."

The meeting led to other meetings during June with Drs. Tulsi Singh and Louis Barkley taking charge and holding the gatherings at their offices.

"Other physicians were invited to a series of the meetings and eventually they were asked for contributions for a feasibility study to look into construction of a new hospital."

Liley suggested that he was not alone in his opinion of Summit.

"While the purpose of the meetings was to see if it was feasible to put up a hospital by ourselves, general dissatisfaction with Summit was the catalyst," he said.

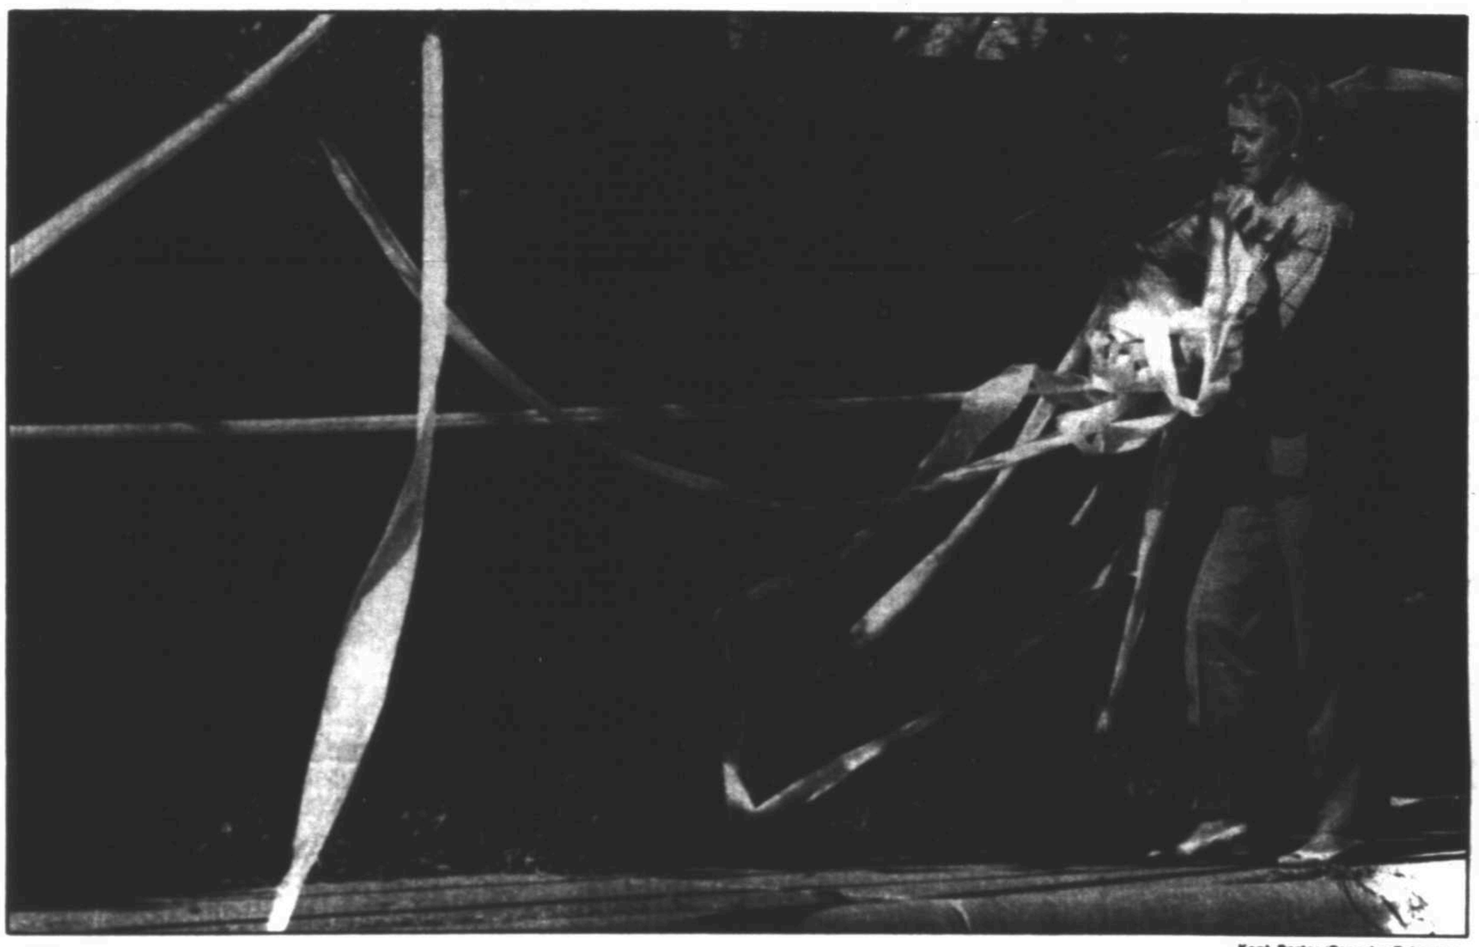

The group had no intention at that stage, to purchase Parkview, said Liley.

"The idea for the feasibility study came about solely with the new hospital in mind," he said. "The purchase of Parkview was just a good idea to rid Midland of Summit and to introduce new patient services while awaiting the construction of the new hospital."

The physicians group entered into a corporate arrangement with ClayDesta Corp., in July to form the ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corp. ClayDesta owns 30 percent while the physicians control the other 70 percent. Plans call for a tentative $22 million hospital to be constructed in the vicinity of ClayDesta Plaza within the next two years. The group bought Parkview for $2.75 million from HCA.

The sale was finalized Dec. 13 at MBank in Dallas after a three-month scrutiny period by the FTC.

Currently, CRMPC is awaiting results from the feasibility study and continuing with renovations at Physicians and Surgeons including a cardiac catheterization laboratory to be opened in late January.

City establishes health programs for its employees

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Many large corporations have known it for years.

But city governments, like Midland, are just now getting into the act of saving health care dollars by providing their employees with health programs.

Midland is one of three cities in the state that provides a nurse and a health program for their employees, says Carmen Edwards, an occupational nurse working full time with civil servants.

"For private industry it's not that uncommon, but for municipalities, I think it's kinda rare," says Beverly Wingo, safety and risk management coordinator.

Ms. Wingo proposed the nursing and employee health program which was established in October by the City Council. Waco and Fort Worth have similar programs for their employees.

"I just felt we could really save a lot of money in having someone treat minor injuries," Ms. Wingo said.

After examining job-related injuries, Ms. Wingo said she found that most injuries were minor and could be treated "in-house."

Before the employee health program was set up, minor injuries were costing the city with expensive trips to the emergency room.

Injuries like cleaning a cut was costing between $40 to $75, Ms. Wingo said.

The program was also set up to meet the demands of a growing health conscious population, she said. Along with treating minor injuries, the nurse will conduct and coordinate programs on nutrition, physical fitness, heart disease, substance abuse and smoking.

By promoting employee wellness, the city also hopes to cut down on absentee days and employee compensation, Ms. Edwards said.

"Companies spend most money insurance-wise for health care. If they can keep employees healthy, they will be more productive on the job as they become more knowledgeable about how to take care of themselves," Ms. Edwards said.

A series of non-smoking seminars for $3 per person are beginning Monday for city employees and family members wanting to quit, Ms. Edwards said.

"It was just one of the first things out of people's mouths, 'Lets start a non-smoking program,'" she said.

"A lot of them say they would give anything to be able to give up smoking," Ms. Edwards said.

About one-third of the city employees chew tobacco and smoke, she said.

High blood pressure and obesity are some major health problems, Ms. Edwards said she has noticed among the almost 1,000 city employees, which need to be addressed.

"There sure are some big tummies walking around the city of Midland," she said.

Pilot building plane with VW engine

LUFKIN (AP) — When David Hackett says he'll stake his life on his work, he isn't just flying off at the mouth.

Not content with a pilot's license and his own two-seat Cessna, the 53-year-old woodshop teacher is now building his own "Volksplane" — an open-cockpit plane with a Volkswagon engine.

Hackett has been working on the craft since September and hopes to have it ready to take up in May.

The Lufkin High School teacher has no doubts it will fly. "I'd stake my life on it, as they say."

Since there's only room for one, no will be asked to second the vote of confidence.

An Army veteran, Hackett airlifted wounded soldiers by helicopter during the Korean War, but he earned his airplane pilot's license only last year.

"When the children were growing up, I couldn't afford it, so I decided I'd get back into it again." The transition from helicopter piloting was easy, he said.

Hackett, a native of New Hampshire, uses his Cessna for trips with his wife, Allegra, and their Siamese cat, Cuddles.

Last summer, the couple, along with Cuddles, flew to Maine for their daughter's wedding. Mrs. Hackett serves as navigator, alerting her husband to power lines, approaching planes and other dangers.

Hackett also participates in flying contests as a member of the National Experimental Aircraft Association and the association's Crockett chapter.

But apparently all this wasn't enough.

So last year Hackett answered a magazine advertisement from another aviation enthusiast who had begun building a plane but didn't have time to finish it.

"It's basically my play toy," says Hackett. "It's the fun of building it and the fun of flying in the open cockpit.

"Anybody with any knowledge can go ahead and build it and fly it." Hackett consults a 70-page instructions manual put out by the plane's designer, Evans Aircraft of LaJolla, Calif. The craft is properly called the Evans Volksplane 1.

It has two floor pedals that operate the rudder and a control stick that moves the wing surfaces. "Really, the basic aircraft hasn't changed that much," notes Hackett, who is converting the VW engine to air use.

The frame of spruce and aircraft plywood will be covered with fabric and painted.

All together, Hackett expects to have about $2,000 invested in the flying machine, which will be registered an "experimental aircraft" if it passes two Federal Aviation Administration inspections.

Hackett plans to fly the plane in experimental air shows before selling it to help buy a more conventional four-seater.

That's still a long time ahead on the horizon. By then, Hackett hopes to have his students working on building a plane at school. He and others could provide the materials, thereby releasing the school district of legal liability, he says.

Hackett claims the project would stir enthusiasm and teach students a marketable skill. But so far, he says, students seem more excited by the idea than do wary school administrators who have yet to give permission.

"They kind of take a step backward and go 'Oh...An airplane?'"

Woman clowns around on the job

AUSTIN (AP) — The first time Kelly Van Cleave went to the circus, she couldn't wait for the show to end because she was bored.

Now, as a 1985 graduate of the world's only clown college, the 23-year-old Lago Vista resident is part of the big top — and she doesn't find it the least bit boring.

"The big thing is to go out and have fun," said Ms. Van Cleave, who graduated from the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Clown College in Venice, Fla. "You have to want to do this, and I do. As long as I'm happy with what I'm doing I've got no complaints."

Ms. Van Cleave said she decided to become a clown after she attended another circus performance where she saw how the crowd reacted to the clowns and how much fun the performers were having.

Getting into clown college was anything but easy for Ms. Van Cleave, a graduate of Southwest Texas State University and a substitute teacher and volunteer firefighter when she isn't clowning around. The college accepts as many as 60 out of 1,000 candidates who apply every year.

Ms. Van Cleave failed in three attempts to get into the school.

"They told me to work in front of an audience and to get jobs clowning," said Ms. Van Cleave, who worked at benefits, birthday parties, and store openings to get on-the-job training.

On her fourth try, she was accepted into the 49-member class after a brief audition. She learned how to tumble, ride a unicycle, juggle, pantomime, walk on stilts, improvise, design and build costumes, and create a clown face. Classes were held 14 hours a day, six days a week, Ms. Van Cleave said.

Learning to be a clown is hard work, as Ms. Van Cleave said she found out just after classes began.

"I sprained my ankle the second day, but I was afraid to tell anyone because I thought they would send me home," Ms. Van Cleave said. "Two people were sent home with torn cartilage in their knees."

However, the most difficult part of the 10-week course was not the physical exertion, Ms. Van Cleave said. The hardest thing was trying to "be funny all the time" for the instructors, circus veterans who were not easily impressed.

"Clowning is something that takes a lifetime to do," Ms. Van Cleave said. "The class was only 10 weeks and we had a lot to learn to do."

The moment of truth came at the end of the course, when Ms. Van Cleave was called into the office of Ken Feld, the circus president and producer. Feld told the nervous student that her gags were awful and that she had been miscast in skits.

Then he gave her a job.

"He said I had a strong, upbeat personality," Ms. Van Cleave said.

Maura McNamara, who handles public relations for the circus, said that as a First of May — the term for new clowns — Ms. Van Cleave has a lot to learn before she becomes a master of her trade.

Man reports burglary of items worth $9,350

From Staff Reports

A rural Midland man reported the loss of property worth about $9,350 in a Monday burglary of his home, in one of several burglaries and thefts reported to local law-enforcement agencies.

Mark Wayne Sanford, Route 9, Box 233, reported missing stereo equipment worth about $5,500 and 28 laser discs worth about $560 from his home on County Road 125 West, reports said. Among the other missing items were two Colt Python pistols worth $750 and $600, respectively, and four sports coats valued at a total of about $1,560.

In other reports, a 17-year-old Midland man was arrested about 5 a.m. Sunday after allegedly stealing a car and getting involved in an accident.

According to police reports, the man was driving a 1981 Chevy pickup belonging to James Darrell Russell, 907 Bedford, when he tried to drive away from police investigating a minor accident. The man was intoxicated, according to police reports. The pickup, valued at about $5,000, was impounded.

A $14,000 1985 GMC pickup was reported stolen by William Rhea Womack, 3203 Cimmaron. The pickup was taken Sunday from the parking lot at Bennigan's while Womack was watching a movie inside the nearby Midland Park Mall, reports said.

David A. Moon, 4420 Harlowe, reported the loss of about $7,500 in property in a burglary which occurred sometime between Thursday and Sunday. Taken were a $2,000 camera, about $950 worth of stereo equipment, 200 tapes worth $1,400, 65 laser discs worth $1,040, a $900 shotgun, a $550 diver's watch, a $250 television, a $250 gold necklace, a $200 cable converter box and a $75 telephone, reports said.

A $1,300 ring was reported stolen by Catherine Cathey, 1907 McDonald. The ring was taken sometime between Nov. 23 and Dec. 13, reports said.

West Texas Tool Products, 1303 S. Midkiff, reported the loss of a $410 staple gun in a Monday burglary, reports said.

Waco blacksmith ready to hit Sesquicentennial trail

WACO (AP) — Mike McGuffey is getting antsy. He's about to embark on a trip that will last six months and cover 3,028 miles, and he's ready to go.

McGuffey, a north Waco resident, isn't taking a luxury cruise and won't be visiting any foreign countries. In fact, he won't leave Texas.

What he will be doing is looking at the back end of two huge Percheron horses — Joker and Ace — and plenty of countryside as he moves his covered wagon through 150 Texas towns such as Ponder, Tahoka, Orla, Poteet, O'Donnell, Kermit, Turkey, Tornillo and Cuero.

McGuffey and several hundred other hearty souls will leave Sulphur Springs Thursday on a dust-and-leather odyssey called the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train that is part of the state's 150th anniversary celebration.

The train will move at four miles per hour every day come "rain, sleet or snow," according to rules laid down by the Texas Wagon Train Association, which is coordinating the event.

McGuffey, 35, is a large man with thick shoulders, a shock of red hair and a full beard. He gives the appearance of a blacksmith in a rough-and-tumble frontier town.

He lives up to that image by shoeing horses for a living. And, yes, there is enough business in the Waco area to keep him busy, he says.

Asked what he most looks forward to in his upcoming trip, McGuffey replied, "the going." He said he's been waiting for an opportunity like this since 1976, when he missed his chance to join several wagon trains that traveled cross country during the nation's bicentennial.

"I was going on this one if I had to ride a horse with a pack mule," he said with a laugh.

Instead, McGuffey, who said he has been going on trail rides since he was 7 years old, will take an old Studebaker wagon. He thinks it was made by the same company which built the Studebaker car.

"It had been sitting behind a liquor store in Sherman," McGuffey said of the wagon for which he paid $100. "In 1969 or 1970 my dad asked me if I had any use for it. A buddy of mine from Dallas said 'let's rebuild it,' so we took it apart piece by piece."

McGuffey said another friend gave him the harness he will use.

Originally, McGuffey planned to convert his Studebaker into a huge "medicine show" wagon that he could live in for six months. It would be pulled by four Percheron horses and there would be plenty of room for his wife, C.J., to accompany him.

He thought he could make enough money shoeing horses along the way to pay the cost of the trip for C.J. and himself and keep the bill collectors satisfied back home.

But that was before the rules were changed and a limit of 150 was placed on the number of wagons that could roll, and the number of horseback riders was limited to 300.

With fewer horses, McGuffey said he isn't sure he can make the money he needs, so he has scaled down the size of his wagon and C.J. will stay home. She will visit him on the trail.

At one time, McGuffey said registration was open to anyone, and between 300 and 500 wagon trains were expected to enter.

AP Laserphoto

Mike McGuffey stands beside the wooden Studebaker wagon he plans to live on during the next six months when the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train begins its trek this week. McGuffey, who paid $100 for the wagon plans to mount a wood-burning stove and hopes to pay for the trip by shoeing horses along the way.

Quinten McGown with the Texas Wagon Train Association said a limit had to be placed on the number of entrys because many of the smaller communities were concerned they wouldn't be able to accommodate the entire train if it were any larger.

McGown said the wagon train still will be the largest single train ever assembled, adding that 23 states will be represented.

Preparing for this undertaking, McGown said, gives one a better perspective of the "mind-boggling" hardships that settlers and cowboys had to face on the range 100 years ago.

Hay, feed and water will be provided for the animals and a Longview firm will provide three square meals a day for those who want to buy their grub. Otherwise, the trip will be "primitive," McGown said.

Participants must come prepared to cook on portable cooking units. Campfires won't be allowed. McGuffey doesn't like the rule, saying "one of my favorite things on a trail ride is the camaraderie of sitting around the campfire."

But he'll abide by the rule — sort of. He plans to put a wood-burning stove, which he found in a pasture and rehabilitated, in the back of his wagon.

"I figure it's portable," said McGuffey. "I can pick it up and carry it." The stove weighs about 90 pounds.

The smoke created by the stove will be funneled out a hole in the sheet that will cover McGuffey's wagon. His wagon cover is made of nylon reinforced vinyl and is being manufactured for him by Aquila & Priscila Tent Makers of Waco.

McGuffey said he will spend approximately $300 to rebuild the bed of his wagon for the trip, $150 for the sheet and $50 for metal wagon bows to support the sheet.

He'll carry plenty of canned goods to eat on the trail, but adds that many of the towns through which the wagon train will travel have promised big celebrations and food for the caravan.

"A lot of towns are planning parades to coincide with their arrival," C.J. said. Many of the smaller stops have scheduled their entire sesquicentennial celebration around the wagon train.

Quite a few school-aged youngsters have made plans to join the wagon train. McGuffey said two teachers will make the trip, which ends July 3, and will hold classes in a portable one-room schoolhouse.

McGuffey said Texas history classes should really come alive as students learn the facts about each town they pass through.

Walt Garrison, a former running back for the Dallas Cowboys football team and a spokesman for Skoal smokeless tobacco products, is the honorary state wagon master for the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train.

Honorary assistant wagon masters include Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry; Gib Lewis, speaker of the Texas House of Representatives; Billy Bob Barnett, owner of Billy Bob's Texas, a Fort Worth nightclub; and Glen Courson, owner of an Irving sporting goods store, who donated office space to the Texas Wagon Train Association to plan for this event.

Ratcliff

JASPER — John Merwin Ratcliff, 84, retired veteran news editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, died early Monday in a Lancaster hospital following an illness.

He had lived in Waxahachie since 1982.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Stringer & Griffin Funeral Home Chapel in Jasper. Burial will be in the Jasper Cemetery.

Ratcliff, born on Nov. 7, 1901, in Jasper, was the son of a pioneer East Texas dentist, grew up in Jasper, and received a bachelor's degree in chemistry from The University of Texas in 1923. He suffered through the "black-flu" epidemic in the winter of 1918-1919 and was a school teacher in 1921-22. He was a football coach, science teacher and principal at Alvin.

He edited and published the weekly Jasper News-Boy from 1924 until 1947, when he sold the newspaper and moved to Midland to join the Reporter-Telegram's editorial staff.

"I went through the Big Depression and the war," Ratcliff recalled in 1980, "and that was a pretty tough job. During the war, I couldn't get any help, and after the war," he jested, "I was too cantankerous to keep any."

Ratcliff retired at age 79 in 1980.

His friends and colleagues had praised Ratcliff for his editing skills, wit and intelligence, political astuteness, gentleness and thoughtfulness.

"Old Merwin was always intelligent, and he was always a gentleman," said Texas author-playwright Larry King, who was the Midland newspaper's sports editor in the 1950s.

Reporter-Telegram Editor Jim Servatius said Ratcliff's "attention to detail in both editing newspaper copy and in planning newspaper pages is unexcelled." He termed Ratcliff a "true professional."

Ratcliff and his wife, the former Myrtle Blue, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1982 in Midland just before Mrs. Ratcliff became ill. She preceded him in death on March 15, 1983.

Lamar Smith vows to disclose mailing costs

From Staff Reports

Lamar Smith, Republican Congressional candidate for the 21st district called Monday for full disclosure of mailing costs for the House of Representatives. In response to the recent publication of Senate mailing costs, Smith pledged to abide by his own full disclosure rule and make public his mailing costs.

Smith pledged, "When I am elected I will disclose my expenditures so that my constituents will know exactly how much I spend on newsletters. I can get my message to the people without running up such outrageous bills.

"With estimates that the House will run up an $88 million bill in the current fiscal year, we must make our representatives accountable for these incredible amounts. Full disclosure makes accountability possible," Smith said.

The projected total annual expenditures by Senate and House mass mailings is equal to the combined income tax payments of 1,815,000 people assuming a family of four with an annual income of $20,000. That represents almost three times the number of people in the entire 21st district alone, Smith said.

Skeletons may be those of three aliens who died last year

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Three skeletons found on a ranch near Eagle Pass could belong to illegal aliens who died in an unusual snow storm last winter, Maverick County Tom Bowles said Monday.

The bones were discovered along with a compass, canned goods and a Mexican driver's license identifying a Zaragosa, Mexico, man.

Hunters discovered the bones on Saturday on the La Paloma Ranch about 14 miles east of Eagle Pass. Bowles said the skeletons probably had been there six months to one year.

KCRS radio to change to 'hit country' format

From Staff Reports

KCRS radio will have a new sound when listeners tune in Wednesday morning, station officials announced today.

KCRS, which celebrated it 50th anniversary Dec. 20, adjusted its music format from "adult contemporary" to the new "hit country" sound that will feature music by such popular country artists as George Strait, The Judds, Crystal Gayle and Willie Nelson.

The AM radio station reaches listeners throughout the Permian Basin and Eastern New Mexico as well as Abilene and Amarillo. In addition, KCRS plans to expand its Midland/Odessa service to include surrounding communities such as Stanton, Monahans, Fort Stocton, Lamesa, Andrews, Crane, McCamey, Pecos, Big Spring, Kermit and Alpine.

Community involvement throughout West Texas and Southeast New Mexico also will be a priority for the new KCRS, according to spokesman Ed Clements.

KCRS Operations Manager Dick Baze said the music format change will not affect the station's news and sports programming, but it will increase the station's use of "on the air" personalities. Included in the line-up are Dave Williams, Clements and Jo Ann Bagwell, mornings; Chuck Wolfe, middays; Pat Quiros, afternoons; Matt Santee, evenings; and Herman Hines, overnight.

STATE IN BRIEF

Phone service to be studied

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has appointed a special committee to study local measured telephone service, chaird by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

Local measured service has been proposed in the past as an experiment by Southwestern Bell. The proposal never has won Public Utility Commission approval, and each time Bell made the proposal, it brought heated opposition from consumer groups.

Under local measured service, local calls would be billed according to duration, time of day and distance. Bell officials have claimed it is a fair way to bill consumers for the amount of service they use.

Also named to the Senate committee were Ike Harris, R-Dallas, Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth and Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford.

Fire damages building

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An early-morning blaze at a three-story office building caused heavy damage to the structure, and officials say an explosion may have preceded the fire that caused one minor injury.

Firefighters responded shortly after midnight today to a four-alarm blaze at the Atrium near Northeast Loop 410. A fire department spokesman says one firefighter was treated by emergency personnel after a brick fell on his wrist.

Damage to the structure was estimated at about $2.5 million, said fire department spokesman Joe Montanez. He said fire officials were told that residents heard an explosion as the fire began.

He said the blaze was reported at 12:36 a.m. Residents of a nearby apartment complex were awakened by authorities and warned of the fire.

Mauled women file suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston women mauled by pit bulldogs in attacks last month are seeking $1.5 million in damages in lawsuits filed against the dogs' owners.

Frankie Trahan and Raylene Smith were attacked Nov. 23. Ms. Smith required five hours of surgery to treat her wounds.

Named in the suit as owner of the dogs were Roma and Betty Walker.

Mrs. Walker said Monday one of the women provoked the dogs, prompting the attack.

Police shot and killed the dogs shortly after the attacks.

Waco blacksmith ready to hit Sesquicentennial trail

WACO (AP) — Mike McGuffey is getting antsy. He's about to embark on a trip that will last six months and cover 3,028 miles, and he's ready to go.

McGuffey, a north Waco resident, isn't taking a luxury cruise and won't be visiting any foreign countries. In fact, he won't leave Texas.

What he will be doing is looking at the back end of two huge Percheron horses — Joker and Ace — and plenty of countryside as he moves his covered wagon through 150 Texas towns such as Ponder, Tahoka, Orla, Poteet, O'Donnell, Kermit, Turkey, Tornillo and Cuero.

McGuffey and several hundred other hearty souls will leave Sulphur Springs Thursday on a dust-and-leather odyssey called the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train that is part of the state's 150th anniversary celebration.

The train will move at four miles per hour every day come "rain, sleet or snow," according to rules laid down by the Texas Wagon Train Association, which is coordinating the event.

McGuffey, 35, is a large man with thick shoulders, a shock of red hair and a full beard. He gives the appearance of a blacksmith in a rough-and-tumble frontier town.

He lives up to that image by shoeing horses for a living. And, yes, there is enough business in the Waco area to keep him busy, he says.

Asked what he most looks forward to in his upcoming trip, McGuffey replied, "the going." He said he's been waiting for an opportunity like this since 1976, when he missed his chance to join several wagon trains that traveled cross country during the nation's bicentennial.

"I was going on this one if I had to ride a horse with a pack mule," he said with a laugh.

Instead, McGuffey, who said he has been going on trail rides since he was 7 years old, will take an old Studebaker wagon. He thinks it was made by the same company which built the Studebaker car.

"It had been sitting behind a liquor store in Sherman," McGuffey said of the wagon for which he paid $100. "In 1969 or 1970 my dad asked me if I had any use for it. A buddy of mine from Dallas said 'let's rebuild it,' so we took it apart piece by piece."

McGuffey said another friend gave him the harness he will use.

Originally, McGuffey planned to convert his Studebaker into a huge "medicine show" wagon that he could live in for six months. It would be pulled by four Percheron horses and there would be plenty of room for his wife, C.J., to accompany him.

He thought he could make enough money shoeing horses along the way to pay the cost of the trip for C.J. and himself and keep the bill collectors satisfied back home.

But that was before the rules were changed and a limit of 150 was placed on the number of wagons that could roll, and the number of horseback riders was limited to 300.

With fewer horses, McGuffey said he isn't sure he can make the money he needs, so he has scaled down the size of his wagon and C.J. will stay home. She will visit him on the trail.

At one time, McGuffey said registration was open to anyone, and between 300 and 500 wagon trains were expected to enter.

Mike McGuffey stands beside the wooden Studebaker wagon he plans to live on during the next six months when the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train begins its trek this week. McGuffey, who paid $100 for the wagon plans to mount a wood-burning stove and hopes to pay for the trip by shoeing horses along the way.

Quinten McGown with the Texas Wagon Train Association said a limit had to be placed on the number of entrys because many of the smaller communities were concerned they wouldn't be able to accommodate the entire train if it were any larger.

McGown said the wagon train still will be the largest single train ever assembled, adding that 23 states will be represented.

Preparing for this undertaking, McGown said, gives one a better perspective of the "mind-boggling" hardships that settlers and cowboys had to face on the range 100 years ago.

Hay, feed and water will be provided for the animals and a Longview firm will provide three square meals a day for those who want to buy their grub. Otherwise, the trip will be "primitive," McGown said.

Participants must come prepared to cook on portable cooking units. Campfires won't be allowed. McGuffey doesn't like the rule, saying "one of my favorite things on a trail ride is the camaraderie of sitting around the campfire."

But he'll abide by the rule — sort of. He plans to put a wood-burning stove, which he found in a pasture and rehabilitated, in the back of his wagon.

"I figure it's portable," said McGuffey. "I can pick it up and carry it." The stove weighs about 90 pounds.

The smoke created by the stove will be funneled out a hole in the sheet that will cover McGuffey's wagon. His wagon cover is made of nylon reinforced vinyl and is being manufactured for him by Aquila & Priscila Tent Makers of Waco.

McGuffey said he will spend approximately $300 to rebuild the bed of his wagon for the trip, $150 for the sheet and $50 for metal wagon bows to support the sheet.

He'll carry plenty of canned goods to eat on the trail, but adds that many of the towns through which the wagon train will travel have promised big celebrations and food for the caravan.

"A lot of towns are planning parades to coincide with their arrival," C.J. said. Many of the smaller stops have scheduled their entire sesquicentennial celebration around the wagon train.

Quite a few school-aged youngsters have made plans to join the wagon train. McGuffey said two teachers will make the trip, which ends July 3, and will hold classes in a portable one-room schoolhouse.

McGuffey said Texas history classes should really come alive as students learn the facts about each town they pass through.

Walt Garrison, a former running back for the Dallas Cowboys football team and a spokesman for Skoal smokeless tobacco products, is the honorary state wagon master for the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train.

Honorary assistant wagon masters include Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry; Gib Lewis, speaker of the Texas House of Representatives; Billy Bob Barnett, owner of Billy Bob's Texas, a Fort Worth nightclub; and Glen Courson, owner of an Irving sporting goods store, who donated office space to the Texas Wagon Train Association to plan for this event.

Lamar Smith vows to disclose mailing costs

From Staff Reports

Lamar Smith, Republican Congressional candidate for the 21st district called Monday for full disclosure of mailing costs for the House of Representatives. In response to the recent publication of Senate mailing costs, Smith pledged to abide by his own full disclosure rule and make public his mailing costs.

Smith pledged, "When I am elected I will disclose my expenditures so that my constituents will know exactly how much I spend on newsletters. I can get my message to the people without running up such outrageous bills.

"With estimates that the House will run up an $88 million bill in the current fiscal year, we must make our representatives accountable for these incredible amounts. Full disclosure makes accountability possible," Smith said.

The projected total annual expenditures by Senate and House mass mailings is equal to the combined income tax payments of 1,815,000 people assuming a family of four with an annual income of $20,000. That represents almost three times the number of people in the entire 21st district alone, Smith said.

Skeletons may be those of three aliens who died last year

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Three skeletons found on a ranch near Eagle Pass could belong to illegal aliens who died in an unusual snow storm last winter, Maverick County Tom Bowles said Monday.

The bones were discovered along with a compass, canned goods and a Mexican driver's license identifying a Zaragosa, Mexico, man.

Hunters discovered the bones on Saturday on the La Paloma Ranch about 14 miles east of Eagle Pass. Bowles said the skeletons probably had been there six months to one year.

This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information on the armed robbery of a Merit service station at 721 W. County Road in Odessa.

About 7 a.m. on Nov. 18, a man entered the store carrying a blue steel handgun and demanded all the money from the cash register. He took an undisclosed amount of money and fled on foot toward the southeast corner of the building.

The suspect is described as a black male in his early 20s, standing about five feet three inches tall with a slight build, brown hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a shower cap, a navy windbreaker and blue jeans.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 cash this week only for information leading to the arrest and felony indictment of the person responsible for this robbery. Crime Stoppers will pay cash rewards for tips on other felony crimes. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa, and remember callers need not reveal their identities.

KCRS radio to change to 'hit country' format

From Staff Reports

KCRS radio will have a new sound when listeners tune in Wednesday morning, station officials announced today.

KCRS, which celebrated it 50th anniversary Dec. 20, adjusted its music format from "adult contemporary" to the new "hit country" sound that will feature music by such popular country artists as George Strait, The Judds, Crystal Gsyle and Willie Nelson.

The AM radio station reaches listeners throughout the Permian Basin and Eastern New Mexico as well as Abilene and Amarillo. In addition, KCRS plans to expand its Midland/Odessa service to include surrounding communities such as Stanton, Monahans, Fort Stocton, Lamesa, Andrews, Crane, McCamey, Pecos, Big Spring, Kermit and Alpine.

Community involvement throughout West Texas and Southeast New Mexico also will be a priority for the new KCRS, according to spokesman Ed Clements.

KCRS Operations Manager Dick Baze said the music format change will not affect the station's news and sports programming, but it will increase the station's use of "on the air" personalities. Included in the line-up are Dave Williams, Clements and Jo Ann Bagwell, mornings; Chuck Wolfe, middays; Pat Quiros, afternoons; Matt Santee, evenings; and Herman Hines, overnight.

STATE IN BRIEF

Phone service to be studied

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has appointed a special committee to study local measured telephone service, chaird by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

Local measured service has been proposed in the past as an experiment by Southwestern Bell. The proposal never has won Public Utility Commission approval, and each time Bell made the proposal, it brought heated opposition from consumer groups.

Under local measured service, local calls would be billed according to duration, time of day and distance. Bell officials have claimed it is a fair way to bill consumers for the amount of service they use.

Also named to the Senate committee were Ike Harris, R-Dallas, Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth and Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford.

Fire damages building

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An early-morning blaze at a three-story office building caused heavy damage to the structure, and officials say an explosion may have preceded the fire that caused one minor injury.

Firefighters responded shortly after midnight today to a four-alarm blaze at the Atrium near Northeast Loop 410. A fire department spokesman says one firefighter was treated by emergency personnel after a brick fell on his wrist.

Damage to the structure was estimated at about $2.5 million, said fire department spokesman Joe Montanez. He said fire officials were told that residents heard an explosion as the fire began.

He said the blaze was reported at 12:36 a.m. Residents of a nearby apartment complex were awakened by authorities and warned of the fire.

Mauled women file suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston women mauled by pit bulldogs in attacks last month are seeking $1.5 million in damages in lawsuits filed against the dogs' owners.

Frankie Trahan and Raylene Smith were attacked Nov. 23. Ms. Smith required five hours of surgery to treat her wounds.

Named in the suit as owner of the dogs were Roma and Betty Walker.

Mrs. Walker said Monday one of the women provoked the dogs, prompting the attack.

Police shot and killed the dogs shortly after the attacks.

Midland Minor Emergency Center offers quality care, convenience

When you are sick and need minor medical care there are a number of things you need. First on your mind is quality medical care, but you also want understanding - understanding of how you feel and of the demands of your schedule. Midland Minor Emergency Center, which has a friendly and professional staff, meets these needs when you have a minor medical or surgical emergency.

Midland Minor Emergency Center has two convenient locations: 2310 W. Ohio (across from the Midland Memorial Hospital Emergency Room) and in Westwood at 4334 W. Illinois.

Marsha Anastasio and the rest of the staff at Midland Minor Emergency Center offer professional care in a friendly atmosphere. For your convenience there are two locations: 2310 W. Ohio (located just North of the Midland Memorial Hospital Emergency Room) and Westwood Plaza at Illinois and Midland Drive.

Quality medical care is provided by Dr. Charles Chalfant and Dr. Bob Gross. Both have been practicing medicine for approximately 26 years.

"We spend as much time as we need to with each patient... We try to emphasize the quality and do practice good medicine," Chalfant says. He also explains that they don't hesitate to refer their patients to the proper specialists when necessary.

Laboratory and X-Ray facilites are on the premises.

The friendly staff at the center across from the hospital emergency room is ready to serve you 7 days a week from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. The hours at the Westwood location are Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dr. Chalfant explains that they want to meet patients' schedule needs as much as possible.

No appointment is required at either location, and waiting time is usually 20 minutes or less according to Chalfant. This helps individuals get the medical care they and their children need, without having to miss many hours of work.

Pre-employment and insurance physicals can be easily taken care of at either location. The pleasant office professionals at both locations will gladly handle your workman's compensation claims and medical insurance claims (once your deductible has been met). MasterCard and Visa are acceptable forms of payment.

The entire staff at Midland Minor Emergency Center goes the extra mile. "We try to be friendly and open and receptive to their (patients) problems. We want them to be happy with the service we provide," Chalfant continues.

Minor emergency centers are a relatively new concept. Designed to augment hospital emergency rooms, these centers handle minor emergencies and illnesses.

"We fill a gap because conventional doctors are not in their office all the time," says Chalfant. While conventional doctors must make rounds at the hospital, physicians at the Midland Minor Emergency Center can be totally dedicated to the patients at their office.

Moreover, "we don't feel like we're really in competition with the hospital emergency room. We fill a need for the minor problems and they fill a need for the major problems," Chalfant continues.

Thus, Midland Minor Emergency Center helps you keep the cost of minor emergency care down and the waiting time as short as possible.

Lewellen offers discount on items that qualified for energy tax credit

Are you one of the people that has waited too long to take advantage of the energy tax credit?

Lewellen Construction offers you a second chance at the savings. During the month of January, Bill says they will give a 15 percent discount on items, such as storm windows and doors, which were covered by the energy tax credit. The same restrictions which applied to the tax credit apply here. With an opportunity for 15 percent savings on up to a $2000 purchase, you can save up to $300 by taking advantage of Lewellen's special.

Bill and Joan are also proud to announce that Steve Becker has recently joined the company as a sales assistance. Steve brings with him many years of experience. He has spent 1½ years running a construction company and another 4½ years in construction sales, specializing in siding. His knowledge of home improvements and commitment to good workmanship, quality materials and ethical practices qualify him to assist you with your selection of siding, storm windows and doors, replacement windows and doors or patio covers at Lewellens.

Steve joins a strong tradition of quality work and customer satisfaction at Lewellen Construction. Lewellen Construction is a local company, where quality comes first.

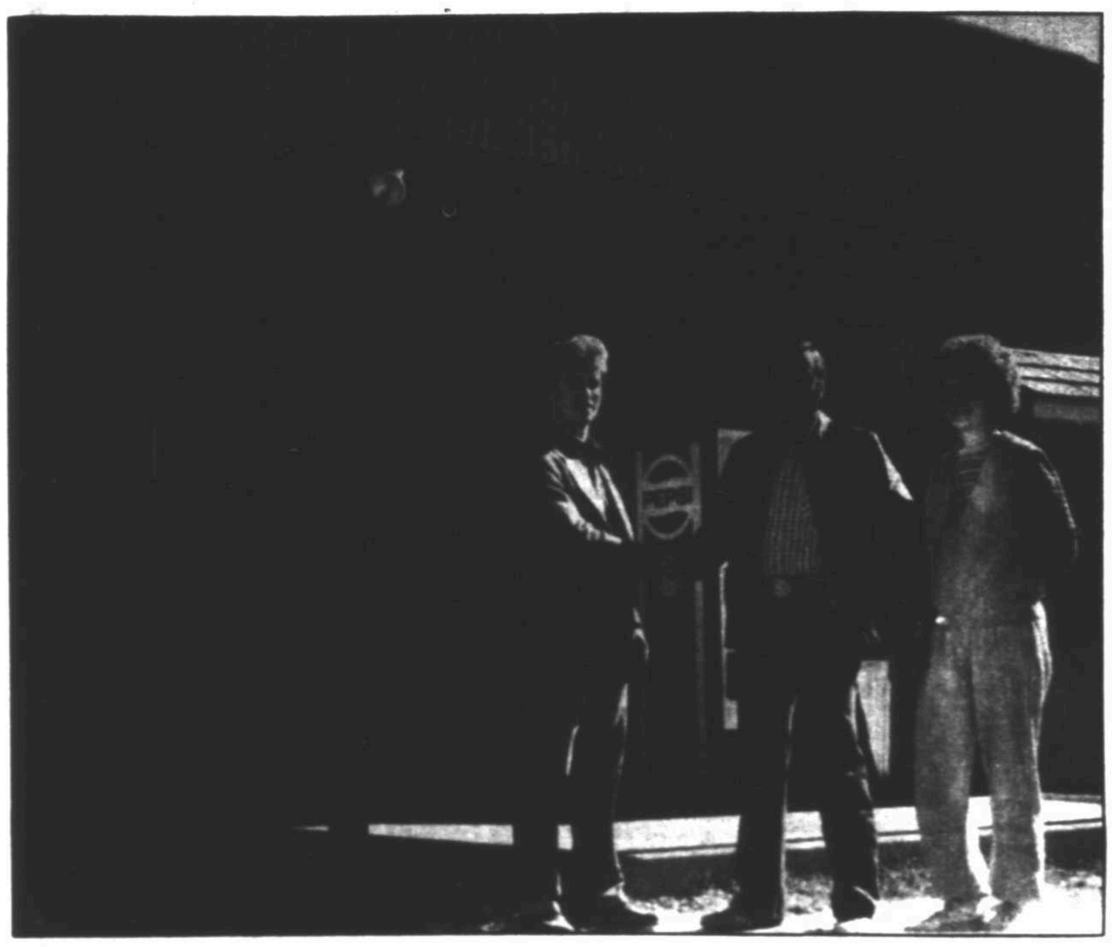

When it comes to a home improvement like siding, soffit or fascia which can make your home's exterior maintenance free for years to come, it is important to find a company with high standards and quality materials.

A few hundred dollars difference on a product that is guaranteed to last your lifetime is not nearly as significant as the proper installation of that product. Bill Lewellen began as an installer and knows the importance of proper installation of high quality siding. That's why he personally supervises every job and carefully seeks out employees, like Steve Becker, that will be equally dedicated to top quality work.

Lewellen's storm windows and doors by Diamond and Peerless are installed with the same special care they give to siding installation. Bill and Joan's motto "Quality First!" is well deserved.

Call 686-8007 and take advantage Lewellen's special discount on storm windows and doors during January. Also, be sure to ask Steve about the quality siding, soffit and fascia which can eliminate constant repainting and improve the appearance of your home.

If you want to go by Lewellen Construction, they are now located at County Road 1185 and County Road 130, just ½ mile east of Ranking Highway.

Bill (center) and Joan Lewellen of Lewellen Construction welcome Steve Becker as a new sales assistant. Steve has six years experience in the home improvement field. If you missed out on the energy tax credit, call Steve at 686-8007 and find out about Lewellen's special 15 percent discount during January.

James Vines (left) and Robbie Bullock, Midland Hilton employees, were recently recognized for their special effort to stop the theft of some large plants and objects of art which adorn the lobby and hallway.

Midland Hilton gives special recognition to two employees

"It takes positive, upbeat employees to bring guest satisfaction," says Marshall Hill, general manager of the Midland Hilton.

Conrad Hilton recognized this need when he started the very first Hilton. That's why he worked hard not only to recruit good people but also to give his employees recognition for their outstanding accomplishments. His personnel philosophy still reigns at Midland Hilton. Hilton employees' willingness to go the extra mile has made the Hilton famous for guest satisfaction.

Robbie Bullock and James Vines, two alert individuals on the banquet staff, were recently commended for their willingness to go the extra mile on the job.

"We got off work around 2 a.m. I went up to my room on sixth floor." Then, James explains that he saw some people going out the west side doors with the huge plants which adorn the beautiful Hilton lobby and hallway.

James met Robbie, who was also just finishing work, on the elevator and they both ran out to stop the theft. By the time they had stopped the car, a number of other Hilton employees had joined them and the proper authorities were called.

Needless to say, it was not the average night in the life of the banquet staff. Robbie and James, like other dedicated Midland Hilton employees, showed their understanding that being a part of the Hilton team is more than just performing a specific job description - rather, it is being attentive to the special needs that arise day and night.

Food and Beverage Director Charles Clamurro says, "Both are excellent employees. I'm really proud to be associated with them."

At a party given in their honor, Robbie and James each received a savings bond and a plaque.

Robbie, who has served as Banquet Captain, is leaving the Midland Hilton, in order to attend school in North Carolina. "I hope and wish for his best success. I hope he stays in the hotel business; He's good at it," Clamurro says.

Clamurro also says that he is proud of James's sensitivity to guest needs.

Getting acquainted with Hilton people like Robbie and James, makes it easy to see why Hilton is known for customer satisfaction.

Whether you are planning a banquet, a special dining experience at Charlie's, or a stay at the Midland Hilton, you will enjoy the attentive service of employees like Robbie and James.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, January 1, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This is not the year to go looking for the fast buck. Build for the future. Seek out positive friends and hard-working business partners. An unexpected gift or new job will boost your financial fortunes. Prominent people are impressed by your reputation for being fair and thorough. Although you often lend money, you hate to borrow. Your independence makes you dislike the idea of ever being in debt! CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Sens. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) and Ernest Hollings (D-S.C.), writer J.D. Salinger, Dana Andrews, Xavier Cugat, the Padres' LaMarr Hoyt, boxer Rocky Graziano, Hall of Fame slugger Hank Greenberg, FBI director J. Edgar Hoover.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Happy New Year to you and your loved ones! Make 1986 truly unforgettable; start this very morning to accomplish those things you want most. Keep diet and exercise resolutions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The New Year beckons brightly. I wish you every success! Love is the most important investment you can make now. Mate and offspring make this a special time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Happy New Year! Put your best foot forward when making your social rounds. Someone you meet today could become an important ally. Let a relationship develop at its own pace. Get some rest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romance has an excellent chance of success this year. Do not let an age difference prevent you from doing what you know is right. Love conquers all! Save money for investment purposes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): 1986 promises to be a very special year for you. Know your priorities and stick to them. Plan something special for a loved one. Your friends need nurturing too. Travel could be hectic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Making and keeping responsible resolutions will help you get the most from this wonderful new year. Do not let football come between you and your mate. Schedule dinner for before or after the game.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Happy New Year to you and those you hold dear! Talking over old times with family members brings back happy memories. Refuse to dwell on anything gloomy. The best is yet to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Focus on children and those who need you. Many wonderful experiences lie ahead. Romance takes on a special glow when you and your partner discuss the future. Lay your cards on the table.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get ready for a year of success and fun! Loved ones will be supportive if approached in the right way. Show respect for your heritage; preserve a family tradition. Romance looks highly promising.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Happy New Year! 1986 should bring you both extra money and new honors. A quiet day at home may be just what you need after the hectic holidays. Call someone who lives alone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The new year gets off to a happy, productive start. Mix family activities with your football viewing and everyone will have fun. The tantalizing aroma of home cooking fills the air.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep a special New Year's resolution and you will find the success you have always wanted. Those who have eaten too much holiday food are ready to start a diet. Enlist mate's cooperation.

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 9 6 5 4 ♡ Q 8 3 2 ◇ A ♣ J 10 7 3
WEST ♠ 8 2 ♡ 9 ◇ J 10 8 5 4 2 ♣ K 8 6 2		EAST ♠ K Q J 10 7 3 ♡ J 10 4 ◇ K 7 6 ♣ 4
	SOUTH ♠ A ♡ A K 7 6 5 ◇ Q 9 3 ♣ A Q 9 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

Let's see the old year out with a play problem. Cover the East-West cards with your thumbs and plan your campaign at six hearts after West leads a spade.

With a fit in both suits, your hand is worth a move toward slam. When partner responds to your spade cue-bid by showing the ace of diamonds, you venture to six hearts.

You win the spade lead perforce and cash the ace of diamonds. You correctly return to hand with the ace of trumps and ruff a diamond in dummy. What next?

Since you can claim the slam if trumps are 2-2, you should cash the queen of hearts. West shows out on this trick. How do you proceed?

Come to hand with a spade ruff and trump your last diamond. You have a possible club loser and still have to get back to hand to draw the last heart. What do you intend doing?

You cannot ruff a spade and draw the remaining trump, because then if you lose a club trick, the opponents will be able to run tricks in hearts and diamonds. At the table, declarer tried the club finesse and went down when that lost and West returned a club for East to ruff.

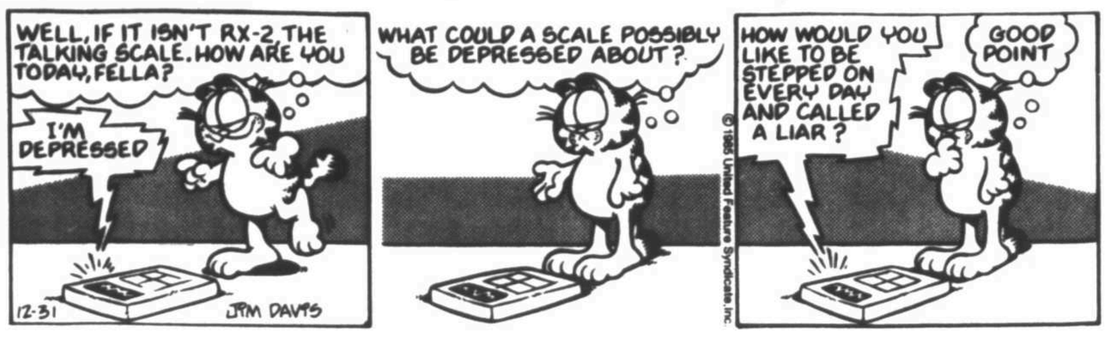

The solution is so easy declarer could have kicked himself. He should simply have led a club to the ace, drawn the last trump and then conceded a club - his only loser. Declarer still has a trump to protect against the opponents' cashing tricks in the side suits.

We expect that you all got this one right. Next year's problems will have to be tougher!

'Sandy' safe with 'Daddy Warbucks'

MIAMI (AP) — This is the heart-warming story of how Sandy, the canine sidekick of Little Orphan Annie, fled the home of Daddy Warbucks into the perils of the foggy, perilous night but was returned safely to his master.

Sandy, a 3-year-old golden retriever and canine star of the musical "Annie," was staying at the home of actor Doug Carpenter, who plays the tycoon Warbucks in the revival's eight-week run at the Marco Polo Hotel in Sunny Isles, north of Miami Beach.

It was a dark and foggy Saturday night. During the confusion of house guests arriving and departing Carpenter's home in Cutler Ridge, Sandy apparently heeded the call of the wild and disappeared.

"About 45 minutes later I thought, 'Where's the dog?'" Carpenter said. "I was thinking: One, the show; two, is he safe, because it's foggy and he chases cars."

Word of the disappearance circulated by newspaper and TV, and theater officials said they got more than 50 calls, some from as far away Fort Lauderdale, about 10 miles to the north, and South Miami, 10 miles south.

As it turned out, Sandy's odyssey had taken him only about a block and a half from Carpenter's house, where a kindly woman took him in and fed him.

Sandy makes his final curtain call Saturday, after which he returns to duty as the mascot for the Humane Society of Greater Miami.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS is adding a third night of movies and temporarily dropping "Trapper John, M.D." and Flip Wilson's new comedy, "Charlie and Company," the network announced Monday.

The new movie, on Sunday nights beginning Jan. 12, will go head to head against movies on ABC and NBC.

"Trapper John," in its seventh year and faltering in the ratings, will be taken off the air but will return later, the CBS announcement said. In recent weeks, the series frequently has been pre-empted for movies and specials.

The medical drama starred Pernell Roberts as Dr. John McIntyre, a mature version of Trapper John from the hit comedy series "M-A-S-H." Gregory Harrison, who starred as Dr. George "Gonzo" Gates, dropped out of the show in the current season.

"Crazy Like a Fox," which stars Jack Warden and John Rubenstein, will move to 9 p.m. Wednesday on Jan. 15. It will replace "Charlie and Company" and the previously canceled "George Burns Comedy Week." CBS said the Flip Wilson show also would return at a later date.

Princess Anne

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, a tireless campaigner as president of Save The Children Fund, was named "Person of the Year" in a listeners' poll, the British Broadcast Corp. announced today.

The princess, only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, also won "Woman of the Year," while pop star Bob Geldof, who sparked international fund-raising efforts for African famine relief, was chosen "Man of the Year."

The princess, recently returned from a three-week tour of Africa, has traveled widely to publicize the plight of children in Third World countries.

Second place in the woman's category was British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who won the title the past two years. Terry Waite, the Archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy working for the freedom of Americans held hostage in Lebanon, was a close second.

More than 10,000 people mailed in votes.

Donaldson

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Television correspondent Sam Donaldson, defending his aggressive interviewing techniques, says "presidents like reporters who get in there and play."

"This president — he was an actor — he likes people with the knack," the ABC journalist said in an interview in the Jan. 4 issue of TV Guide.

"I'm not advocating rudeness or impertinence for impertinence's sake," he said, "but I'm far more worried about the reporters who are either too afraid or too disinclined to ask questions and to fight for answers than I am about the reporters who may be overzealous."

As for people who don't think a president should be questioned so sharply, "I guess they want a king or a pope," Donaldson said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mother Theresa and Pete Rose are among the year's "10 most inspiring people," a private group says.

Calling the winners "heroes for our time" the Millennium Society said the Nobel Prize-winning crusader, the baseball star and eight others "helped fuel the hopes of so many young people looking with confidence to the future."

Geldof

The other eight are: Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, "for his faith in young people;" Irish rock musician and philanthropist Bob Geldof; Titanic explorer Robert Ballard; Uli Derickson, purser on the TWA jet hijacked to Beirut, "for grace under pressure;" Soviet chess champion Gary Kasparov; South African dissident leader Winnie Mandela; entertainer Bob Hope; and Ebelia Gasca Rosas, an infant survivor of the Mexico City earthquake selected "for the miracle amid the ruins."

The Millennium Society is a charitable group founded in 1979 by Yale University students and claiming 3,600 members worldwide.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Singer Peggy Lee, recovering from complications that occurred after double-bypass heart surgery, has checked out of the hospital, a spokeswoman said.

Miss Lee, 65, had surgery Oct. 7 in New Orleans and was operated on again two weeks later when an infection developed.

She was flown Dec. 9 to Los Angeles and checked into St. John's Hospital, where she remained until this past weekend, hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller said Monday. "I am not sure which day it was."

The smoky-voiced singer is known for such hits as "Is That All There Is?," "Fever" and "Why Don't You Do Right?"

• • •

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard J. Flynn, a American businessman released from a Mexican prison following a three-year battle by his family, has died of heart disease eight months after his release.

Flynn died Saturday at his suburban Riverdale home, said Susan Keegan, an attorney who worked on his case.

"He hadn't been able to do much. He's just been trying to recuperate," she said Monday.

Flynn, 50, suffered three heart attacks during his 37-month imprisonment in Mexico, said family spokeswoman Pat Miller. After returning to the United States in April, he was diagnosed as having congestive heart failure and severe coronary artery disease.

Doctors at state facilities highest paid, survey shows

AUSTIN (AP) — Physicians, scientists and administrators of the state's largest universities — not politicians — are paid the highest state salaries, a survey of state pay shows.

Close behind are a handful of college football coaches, led by Texas A&M University's Jackie Sherrill, whose annual salary of $110,865 — plus meals and two cars — tops Gov. Mark White's $94,348.

Sherrill's actual income is more than double that when fringe benefits are included, making him probably the highest-paid employee of a state agency in Texas, The Dallas Morning News reported Monday.

Of the state's 100 highest-paid employees, 95 are on the faculties of state medical schools and hospitals in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth, the survey found.

The salary comparisons complied by the News were drawn from the state's 1986-87 Appropriations Act and from the budgets prepared by the individual institutions.

Dr. Charles M. Balch, a world-renowned expert on the treatment of cancer and chief of surgery at the University of Texas System Cancer Center in Houston, tops the faculty-college administrator list with a salary of $181,300.

Dr. James H. "Red" Duke Jr., a renowned trauma surgeon, is second at $179,000 a year. He is a professor of surgery at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston.

Only a portion of Balch's and Duke's salaries, like those of other higher-paid medical school faculty members and administrators, comes from state tax dollars. Their state salaries — $110,200 in Balch's case — are supplemented by grants, private donations and income from their patients.

Texas Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth is the highest-paid state employee not affiliated with a state college or medical school. His $110,000-a-year salary is heavily supplemented by federal funds.

State Education Commissioner William N. Kirby is paid $108,862 a year.

Four university coaches and athletic directors earn more than $90,000 a year — Sherrill; University of Houston football coach Bill Yeoman, $100,000; University of Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds, $91,875; and Texas football coach Fred Akers, $91,600.

Their salaries are paid primarily with earnings from sports events.

The size of the coaches' salaries doesn't sit well with a lot of state employees and their representatives.

"That bothers me a lot," said Jim Pearson, director of the Texas State Employees Union. "I've got people caring for the mentally ill and mentally retarded who are working short-shifted and also being asked to do more because of a federal court ruling, and they can't get a decent raise."

He said the 3 percent across-the-board increase approved earlier this year was eaten up by an increase in employees' medical insurance.

A 1984 report by the U.S. Census Bureau ranked Texas and Iowa at No. 19 in pay for public employees, excluding those in education, with average monthly earnings of $1,704. Alaska was at the top of the list with average earnings of $2,656 a month. Mississippi was at the bottom with $1,168.

White, who also gets the free use of the Governor's Mansion and utilities, makes substantially more than that of his four fellow chief executives in the surrounding states, according to a study compiled last year by the Council of State Governments.

But two of the state's most powerful political figures, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, would qualify for food stamps if they were forced to live on their state salaries. Both men, who are paid $600 a month and are provided with an apartment in the Capitol, are independently wealthy.

Lewis, who owns a label company in Fort Worth and has extensive business and real estate holdings, said he couldn't serve as speaker if he had to live on his state salary.

He said the low pay has prevented a lot of Texans from running for speaker and lieutenant governor, and he plans to introduce legislation during his last term as presiding officer to raise the salaries for both offices.

"There are probably only a half a dozen people in the Legislature who can afford to be speaker," Lewis said. "This is a full-time job."

Texas's other non-judicial elective officials each make $73,233 a year.

Plan could cost Texas $304.8 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm's balanced-budget plan could cost his home state of Texas $304.8 million in fiscal 1987, the biggest percentage cut of the 10 most populous states, according to an analysis by a Washington research group.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget reduction proposal was signed into law by President Reagan earlier this month. It sets federal budget ceilings for each fiscal year until outlays equal revenues in FY 1991.

If Congress and the president fail to stay within the spending limits, the law mandates automatic, across-the-board cuts, except for certain protected programs, such as Social Security, Medicaid and food stamps.

Federal Funds Information for the States, a research group for the National Conference of State Legislatures and the National Governors Association, assumed that the automatic cutbacks will go into effect.

The research group estimated the effect on the states' share of federal money for such programs as highways, education, energy, environment, urban development and general revenue sharing.

FFIS said Texas could lose $43.6 million in fiscal 1986, the first year the law is in effect, and could have the biggest percentage loss of federal money among the 10 most populous states in fiscal 1987.

In FY 1987, Texas could lose 6.3 percent of the federal money it currently receives, compared to a loss of 5.7 percent for California and 4.4 percent for New York.

The average 1987 state reduction in federal money would be 6.3 percent, the group said.

California's share of federal money was predicted to be cut in fiscal 1987 by $562.7 million, and New York's by $510.2 million.

Tony Proffitt, director of tax information for the state comptroller's office, said Texas budget officers have different theories about where the ax will fall, but agree that it will.

He said the states cannot make definite plans until Congress and the president act.

"I guess it's inevitable," Proffitt said. "If they don't cut it back, then the automatic cutbacks go into effect."

The Texas Legislature won't be in session to deal with the expected FY 1986 cuts, so those losses will "go by the boards," Proffitt said.

"If federal funds don't show up, you can't substitute state money" under law, he said.

Fiscal year 1987 and its expected cutbacks start in October 1986, giving the Texas Legislature, which meets in January, several months' in which to act.

Texas can expect to suffer the biggest loss for the next two fiscal years in social services block grants and highway money, according to FFIS.

According to the group, Texas could lose $4.2 million of its social services block grant share in fiscal 1986 and $38.2 million in FY 1987. The state's share of highway money could drop in fiscal 1986 by $4.2 million and $35.9 million in fiscal 1987.

The next highest cuts would be in compensatory education for the disadvantaged, with an estimated $4.2 million reduction in 1986 and $35.9 million in 1987; and low-income home energy assistance, expected to be cut by $2.4 million in fiscal 1986 and $11 million in fiscal 1987.

Predicted loss of federal funds to states listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of the 10 most populous states followed by the predicted dollar figure and percentage losses in federal funds they would have in fiscal 1986 and fiscal 1987 if the Gramm-Rudman automatic cuts go into effect, according to Federal Funds Information for the States:

1. California — $87.7 million, 0.7; $562.7 million, 5.7.
2. New York — $75.1 million, 0.6; $510.2 million, 4.4.
3. Texas — $43.6 million, 0.7; $304.8 million, 6.3.
4. Pennsylvania — $44.8 million, 0.8; $290.1 million, 6.2.
5. Illinois — $40.1 million, 0.7; $265.8 million, 5.9.

Texas Tech sophomore named Maid of Cotton

DALLAS (AP) — A 21-year-old Texas Tech sophomore will begin her duties as the cotton industry's ambassador New Year's Day after being named 1986 Maid of Cotton.

Sherri Moegle of Lubbock, who is majoring in management information systems at Texas Tech, was crowned at Cotton Maid ceremonies at the Majestic Theater in Dallas Monday night.

She replaces the reigning Maid of Cotton, Michelle Pitcher, 22, of St. Louis, Mo.

Named as first alternate was Haden Holman, 21, of Dothan, Ala., a senior at Auburn University majoring in foreign language.

Second alternate was Meg Wilson, 21, of Dallas, a senior at the University of Texas majoring in journalism.

The contest, which opened Saturday, included 20 finalists representing 10 states in the Cotton Belt.

The 48th Maid of Cotton will make her first official appearance in the Cotton Bowl parade and football game in Dallas on New Year's Day. She receives a $10,000 scholarship award from Ciba-Geigy Corp. and a wardrobe of all-cotton fashions.

During the year, the Maid of Cotton makes appearances worldwide as a goodwill ambassador for the cotton industry, including a Far East tour.

Six women from Texas competed for the honor this year. In addition to Ms. Moegle and Ms. Wilson, they were Kari Adams and Catherine Carter, both of Dallas, Nanci Carroll of Grand Prairie, and Faith Edwin of El Paso.

The event moved to Dallas last year from Memphis, Tenn., with its sponsor, the National Cotton Council of America, noting Dallas' growing reputation as a fashion center and its Cotton Bowl game were the lures.

Anti-smoking ban may be extended to offices

DALLAS (AP) — Smoking is becoming a more-restricted habit in Dallas, and if an anti-puffing group has its way, lighting up a cigarette will be even tougher.

A new city ordinance recently was enacted that restricts smoking in most large stores and restaurants, and a number of companies are taking steps on their own to ban or limit smoking on their premises.

Further, the group that pushed through the anti-smoking ordinance says it plans to seek a similar ban on smoking in Dallas office buildings.

"There seems to be a very large number of people who would favor guidelines in the workplace about where smoking should and shouldn't be allowed," said Joe Guida, chairman of a non-smoking lobbyist group, the Joint Committee on Smoking in Public Places.

Guida said his group will begin pushing for the new restrictions as soon as residents "are comfortable" with the new ordinance, which takes effect Feb. 1.

According to Action on Smoking and Health, a non-smoking lobby based in Washington, D.C., an estimated 200 companies nationwide have instituted some type of smoking restrictions.

A number of them are in Dallas.

• American General Fire and Casualty Co. will remove ashtrays from offices and pay employees to attend smoking classes after its ban begins next month.

"We anticipate some turnover as a result of it," a company spokesman said.

• Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. will forbid smoking in its offices, effective Jan. 1, and has spent $20,000 to provide free nicotine-flavored chewing gum to workers trying to quit smoking.

• Aetna Life & Casualty, which will prohibit smoking in all corporate offices as of Feb. 1, will offer to double life insurance for workers who quit.

• Air traffic controllers at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport voted by a 2-1 margin to ban smoking in the radar room and to allow only two people at a time to smoke in the control tower.

• Boeing Electronics Inc., a Dallas subsidiary of the Boeing Corp., prohibits smoking within three feet of anyone with a no-smoking sign on the desk.

• Corporate Express of suburban Irving, which operates 12 smoke-free airport shuttle vans and a limousine service, requires any employees who wish to smoke to retreat to an unheated service garage for cigarette breaks.

"I don't offer them any amenities," Corporate Express president Charles Tenney said. "In the summertime, the garage is plenty hot, and in wintertime, it's plenty cold. When I got to the point where I was the boss, I put in the changed policy."

Rock star to sing for cleanliness

AUSTIN (AP) — Rock star Stevie Ray Vaughan of Austin will begin preaching highway cleanliness during New Year's Day bowl game telecasts, state officials said Monday.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is waging a $20 million campaign against littering. Vaughan is featured in the TV ad, in which he plays his arrangement of "The Eyes of Texas."

Research conducted recently showed that the "primary litterer" in Texas is male, aged between 18 and 34.

"Vaughan was selected to star in the first TV commercial because of his appeal to this target audience," said Don Clark, the highway department's director of information services.

The commercial will air throughout Texas in January, premiering during the bowl games.

Also Monday, the highway department selected an Austin firm to produce Spanish language materials to encourage seat belt use. NuStats Inc. will develop a program including printed materials and television and radio ads.

New fabrics improve '60s styles

By LUCRETIA STEIGER

The '60s
Third in a Six-Part Series

The hottest new fashion for women in New York designer collections for the late winter/early spring season is — you'll never guess it — bell-bottom pants.

And what's for sale in stores all over the United States? Miniskirts. Not to mention op-art patterns, psychedelic prints, fishnet tights, English mod paisley jackets and Edwardian ruffled shirts.

The '60s are back in fashion today, giving teenagers who have never seen a Nehru jacket or Jackie Kennedy pillbox hat a taste of what Mom and Dad wore when they were feelin' groovy.

In fact, Bloomingdale's in New York set up a shop called "Feelin' Groovy" this summer, which was packed with "clothes that reminded you of the 1960s," according to Holly Kounitz of Bloomies.

But while the new '60s style may look remarkably like the past, improved fabrics and finishing techniques have made today's '60s-inspired designs comfortable decendants of their more structured predecessors of yesteryear.

The straight little miniskirts created several years ago by Mary Quant, Rudi Gernreich, Betsey Johnson and Courrege, among others, have been replaced by soft and comfortable short skirts with Lycra and nylon threads for more stretch, designed more for the body than the original minis and sewn with better finishing techniques.

"It's not retro, not like going to the attic," says New York designer Betsey Johnson, famed in the '60s for her bell-bottom pants and miniskirts, who is cutting bell-bottom pants for late winter/early spring from her old patterns. "It's like going back to the future."

There are many theories as to why the '60s fashions are doing so well.

"Fashion takes an evolution about every 15 or 20 years anyway," says Nanci Washburn, a model in the '60s who now owns Artist Management Agency in San Diego and sends models out on fashion assignments, "but when it comes around again it's in a more modern form. It's an excuse for the designers to come up with something new for the new market.

"It occurs because the public demands change. The public likes change and fashion is change. Fashion is always changing; it always has since the days of Cleopatra."

Peggy Matthews, with The Broadway department store, traveled around the country in the '60s as an editor putting on back-to-college fashion shows for Mademoiselle magazine. She thinks fashion today parallels the fashions then.

"I think we have more flexibility today, because you can do short skirts, miniskirts and also long, so we aren't all frozen into one look as we were. The '60s was an interesting era to be involved in fashion because there was such a dramatic change with the Vietnam War.

"Then, it was mainly a young protest."

These '60s styles were enthusiastically received at the "Rudi Gernreich Retrospective: Looking Back at a Futurist."

Remember the '60s? Microminis. Twiggy lashes. Pale lips. "Laugh-In." Peace symbols and love beads. Fashions of that period weren't overly concerned with taste, sophistication or even quality. Fashion then was fun, funky and gone tomorrow.

But you no longer have to look at old fashion magazines to see signs of that time. The '60s — or a reasonable facsimile thereof — has returned to haunt us.

We already are seeing Gidget's stirrup pants and Audrey Hepburn-style scarf-wrapped heads with Ray Ban sunglasses, along with bodysuits, big hoop earrings, patterned hose and ankle boots.

And after years of body wave hairdos, Vidal Sassoon's sleek geometric haircuts look new again. Wigs and hairpieces are on the comeback, as well — in psychedelic pinks, purples and greens.

Sportswear designers already are gearing up for next spring, and guess what's in store? Bell-bottom pants — the kind Cher used to wear. Itty-bitty minis. Bare "I Dream of Jeannie" midriffs. Sleeveless turtleneck "poor-boy" sweaters.

For the Los Angeles Fashion Group, the timing is perfect. In August, this group sponsored the Rudi Gernreich Retrospective: Looking Back at a Futurist, an extravagant showing of Gernreich's designs, produced by Yvette H. Crosby, fashion director of the California Mart.

The audience's reaction was so overwhelmingly positive, the show will be presented in New York City later this year to an expected crowd of 2,000 top fashion industry executives. Most will come looking for a little inspiration, and they will find it in Gernreich's prophetic designs.

But in reaching back to the '60s for inspiration, today's designers are not repeating the past verbatim. Thanks to technological advances, '60s fashions look better than ever. Double knits have become elegant — even in polyester. The first pantyhose, originally developed to be worn with Mary Quant's miniskirts, were heavy and bagged at the knees and ankles. They now hug the leg like a second skin, thanks to knitted-in "memory" yarns.

The '60s look is only one of several prominent trends this season. It is a fun and exciting look, with all the verve it had in the '60s.

DEAR ABBY

Resolutions simply kept one day at a time

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published some New Year's resolutions. I cut that column out and taped it on my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I want you to know that it has helped me to become a better person. I am not saying that I kept every one of those resolutions every day, but I kept most of them, and they have now become habits that have made a remarkable improvement in my personality and character.

I hope you will run it every New Year's Eve. I'm sure it will benefit many others as it has me. — NEVER TOO OLD

DEAR NEVER: The "resolutions" column has become an established annual tradition:

DEAR READERS: These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Alcoholics Anonymous. I have taken the liberty of using that theme with some variations of my own:

Just for today I will live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

Just for today I will be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will change those things that I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

Just for today I will improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to cut down. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know is fattening. And I will force myself to exercise — even if it's only walking around the block or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

Just for today I will be totally honest. If someone asks me something I don't know, I will not bluff; I'll simply say, "I don't know."

Just for today I'll do something I've been putting off for a long time. I'll finally write that letter, make that phone call, clean that closet or straighten out those dresser drawers.

Just for today, before I speak I will ask myself, "Is it true? Is it kind?" And if the answer to either of those questions is negative, I won't say it.

Just for today I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as good as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today I'll not improve anybody except myself.

Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

Just for today I will have a quiet half-hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will get a better perspective on my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace! — LOVE, ABBY

P.S. If you are driving tonight, don't drink. And if you're drinking, don't drive.

Neo-'60s looks listed

Copley News Service

The fashions of the '60s involved a variety of styles.

It began with Jackie Kennedy's sheath dresses with pearls and bouffant hairdo and ended with flower children in ethnic dresses or blue jeans protesting the Vietnam War. In between were such trends as Nehru jackets, miniskirts, pantsuits, bell-bottoms, psychedelic prints and the Beatles' mod look.

Here's a roundup of some of the major '60s looks that you may see revived in stores next spring:

- The Jackie Kennedy Influence: First lady Jackie favored neat little suits with short jackets, skirts just covering the knee, or simple sleeveless sheath dresses with a simplicity foreign to the full-skirted sundresses or skirts with poodle appliques of the 1950s.
- Hippie Style: Tight, faded blue jeans with narrow-ribbed tops and long flowing hair, sometimes ironed straight on an ironing board. Embroidered gypsy dresses with full skirts and flounces. Hand-rolled and decorated "love beads" for the neck or wrist.
- Feelin' Groovy: Nehru jackets, skinny rib knits with miniskirts, bell-bottom pants and turtlenecks.
- Psychedelic: Wild and crazy prints. Lots of color mixes, such as pink with orange.

Winnie Mandela released on bail

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A magistrate today freed black activist Winnie Mandela on bail after she defied a government order banning her from Johannesburg and the nearby black township of Soweto, but it was not clear if she planned to ignore the ban again.

In another development, the government radio announced today that 74 organizations have been barred from holding meetings for six months.

The South African Broadcasting Corp. reported the ban affects all the major anti-apartheid organizations and takes effect today.

Today's hearing was the second time in nine days that Mrs. Mandela was freed by a court after being arrested for violating the government order. She has had a home in Soweto for years.

Her lawyer, Gilbert Marcus, said the effect of the ban "is to render Mrs. Mandela homeless."

During a 35-minute hearing in Magistrate's Court in Krugersdorp, 18 miles from Johannesburg, Magistrate Chris Eksteen set bail for Mrs. Mandela at the equivalent of $190 and said she was forbidden from entering the Johannesburg area or nearby Roodepoort. He scheduled her next court appearance for Jan. 22, the same day she is to appear on the original charges of violating the order.

At that preliminary hearing, the prosecution is expected to outline its case against Mrs. Mandela and a trial date could be set.

The prosecution today did not oppose the bail or conditions.

Mrs. Mandela smiled and waved to friends after the hearing. With lawyers and supporters, she drove to Kagiso, a nearby black township that is not barred to her under the government order.

Black activist Winnie Mandela, wife of imprisoned leader Nelson Mandela, is surrounded by police, reporters and friends after she was arrested for the third time in nine days.

She went into the home of a friend, Aubrey Mokoena. About 300 young blacks gathered on the street and in the yard, cheering and clapping.

Mrs. Mandela is the wife of black guerrilla leader Nelson Mandela and a widely-respected opponent of apartheid in her own right. Mandela remains the most popular leader among South Africa's 24 million blacks, even though he has been imprisoned since 1964 on charges of plotting sabotage.

Apartheid is South Africa's system of racial segregation, under which 5 million whites deny the vote to 24 million blacks.

Mrs. Mandela, 50, was arrested arrested Monday in a fracas with security police on a highway near the Johannesburg airport. She was returning from visiting her husband in a Cape Town prison, and was heading for her home in Soweto.

Police surrounded her car and tried to get her to surrender peacefully, but she refused to move and pushed away police who tried to pull her out of the car. She was held overnight in a Krugersdorp police cell.

Mrs. Mandela first was charged Dec. 23 with violating the banning order. From 1977 until recently, Mrs. Mandela was banned to a remote rural town, Brandfort. For the past six months, she repeatedly has defied the order, and the government amended it Dec. 21, saying she could live anywhere but Johannesburg and its environs.

Marcus, who is white, told Eksteen that Mrs. Mandela could not return to Brandfort because her home there was burned down by arsonists in August.

"There is not a shadow of doubt that Mrs. Mandela's life is in danger if she returned to Brandfort. People do not fire-bomb houses and raze them to the ground for nothing," Marcus said.

Another attorney for Mrs. Mandela, Amichand Soman, said the government held today's hearing in Krugersdorp rather than in Johannesburg in an effort to avoid publicity.

Authorities have never said why they try to isolate Mrs. Mandela, but over the years, she has become an inspirational leader among blacks.

Soviet woman doesn't want to leave daughter

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet woman who has been waiting 11 years to join her American husband said today she has been told her exit visa is ready, but her daughter might not be allowed to leave with her.

Irina McClellan said she would not leave without her 26-year-old daughter, Lena.

"I'm not going to divide the other part of my family," she said.

Mrs. McClellan was among 10 people who U.S. officials have said are to be allowed to leave the Soviet Union, including eight who are married to Americans. State Department spokesmen in Washington have said the 10 names were given to the United States before the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva.

Two of those said to be on the list, Helle Frejus and Tatyana Bondareva, already have been reunited with their American husbands in Los Angeles and Baltimore, respectively.

U.S. officials in Washington said Monday that the Soviet Union has told them 36 more people with relatives in the United States will be allowed to leave. Jaroslav Verner, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy here, said the embassy had no comment on the report.

Mrs. McClellan married University of Virginia Professor Woodford McClellan in 1974, two years after they first met while McClellan was touring the Soviet Union.

McClellan returned to the United States in August 1974, but the Soviets refused to give his wife the necessary exit visa.

On Dec. 5, Mrs. McClellan said she was told she would be given a visa, but that she had to start her application process over again with an invitation from her husband, who lives in Charlottesville, Va.

She said Monday that the Soviet visa agency, known by its acronym OVIR, told her the visa was ready to be picked up.

"But they said Lena's question is not decided," Mrs. McClellan said. "For me that's a problem."

Verner said the embassy could not comment on individual cases like Mrs. McClellan's.

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot newspaper on Monday quoted McClellan as saying that Soviet officials in Moscow had called him to say his wife would be issued a visa.

McClellan said there was some doubt about his stepdaughter's release.

"This is so delicate," he said. "I don't want to say anything wrong."

Extra British soldiers temporarily in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — An emergency battalion of 550 British soldiers is being sent to this tense province to strengthen security at the border with the Irish Republic and around six police stations being rebuilt after IRA bombings, the army said.

A spokesman at army headquarters in Lisburn said Monday that reinforcements from the 2nd Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment would arrive in a few days for temporary duty.

The British army maintains about 9,000 soldiers in Northern Ireland, down from a peak of 21,266 in 1972. Soldiers first were deployed in the province on Aug. 14, 1969, to back up the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the 18,000-member police force.

James Molyneaux, leader of the Official Unionist Party, the province's biggest Protestant party, called the troop reinforcement a "strange contradiction" to the Anglo-Irish agreement signed Nov. 15 by Prime Ministers Margaret Thatcher of Britain and Garret FitzGerald of Ireland.

The agreement, which gave the predominately Roman Catholic Irish Republic a role in governing the mostly Protestant province, was designed to reduce terrorist attacks through increased cooperation between Dublin and London.

Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King, said it was "obviously rubbish" to suggest the accord would halt terrorism overnight. But he said both governments were determined to use the agreement to combat terrorism.

"We know that the IRA is very worried about the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement, that they do see it as a threat," King said.

Molyneaux is one of 15 Northern Irish Protestants who resigned from the British Parliament to protest the agreement. Elections to fill their seats are set for Jan. 23.

The British-Irish agreement also guaranteed long-term British sovereignity over the province, prompting the anti-British Irish Republic Army to attack six border-area police stations with rockets and gunfire. One attack killed two police officers.

The IRA has threatened to kill civilian contractors who help rebuild the stations.

The army spokesman said duties of the extra British soldiers "may include...the safeguarding of the rebuilding of police stations damaged by terrorists."

The last time an emergency battalion was ordered into Northern Ireland was during the 1981 hunger strike, when 10 Irish nationalist guerrillas starved themselves to death at Maze Prison outside Belfast, spawning widespread violence.

A new hunger strike was begun this month by two anti-British guerrillas imprisoned at Maze on murder convictions.

American naturalist to be buried in Rwanda

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Dian Fossey, the American naturalist slain last week by blows from a machete, was to be buried today in a cemetery she built for her beloved mountain gorillas at an isolated camp in Rwanda.

Ms. Fossey, 53, was killed at the mountain camp, where she studied the threatened species of ape for most of the past 18 years. She built a cemetery there for gorillas slain by poachers.

Police have not made any arrests in the case but reported Monday from the northern town of Ruhengeri they had identified several suspects. They gave no other information.

Helen Picard, information officer at the U.S. Embassy in the Rwandan capital of Kigali, said by telephone that Ms. Fossey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Price of Atherton, Calif., had given permission for the burial to take place in the Central African country.

Ms. Picard's husband, journalist Sean Kelly, later said Ms. Fossey would be buried today at Karisoke, her camp on the upper slopes of 12,175-foot Mont Visoke in Volcanoes National Park.

Mrs. Price told The Palo Alto Times Tribune in California that a Rwandan official informed her the government plans to set up a shrine in honor of her daughter at the mountain camp.

The Rwanda Embassy official said the shrine "will always be maintained and remain a wonderful memorial for her," Mrs. Price said.

There are no roads to the camp, and participants in the funeral and porters bearing the coffin will have to make a two-hour hike up what Ms. Picard described as a "very rough" trail.

Ms. Fossey was a physical therapist in California before she began working in Central Africa in 1967.

In a 1970 article for National Geographic magazine, she described the gorilla as "one of the most maligned animals in the world." Contrary to its reputation for belligerence, she said, the animal was gentle and dignified.

Colleagues credit her with being the first scientist to accustom the mountain gorillas to the presence of humans, a feat which has enabled impoverished Rwanda to develop a profitable tourist industry based on trips to see the animals.

Through her articles and a 1983 book, "Gorillas in the Mist," Ms. Fossey campaigned to protect the animals from poachers who sell their heads and hands as curios.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mexico chamber condemns terrorists' airport attacks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The federal Chamber of Deputies, in its final session of 1985, condemned last week's terrorist attacks in two European airports that killed 18 people, including two Mexicans.

The deputies also observed a minute of silence during Sunday's session for the victims of the attacks, particularly Gen. Donato Miranda Acosta, who was Mexico's military attache in Italy, and his secretary, Genoveva Jaimes Cisneros.

The two were in Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport on Friday when Palestinian terrorists opened fire, targeting the ticket counter of Israel's El Al airline.

The bodies of the two were arrived Monday at Mexico City's international airport, where a brief homage to Miranda Acosta was held.

At the urging of a deputy from the Popular Socialist Party, the chamber approved a document calling on other legislatures around the world to work to avoid nuclear war and to respect the United Nations' designation of 1986 as the International Year of Peace.

Rebels kill mayor-elect

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — Rebels of the Shining Path guerrilla movement hanged the mayor-elect of a town in this poor Andean province, police said Monday.

Officials said the body of Marcelino Torres Martinez, a member of the governing Aprista party, was found Thursday hanging from a rope strung around a tree branch.

They said a group of 15 to 20 insurgents shooting revolvers and submachine guns and throwing sticks of dynamite had entered the town of San Pedro de Hualla and dragged Torres out of his house. He was taken to a nearby town to be killed because the rebels feared resistance by San Pedro de Hualla's 300 residents, police said.

Authorities said a card was found on Torres' body which read: "Traitor of the popular cause. Puppet of the government."

Bakery explosion injures 19

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — An explosion at the Gamesa cookie and cracker plant here Monday injured 19 people, the government news agency Notimex reported.

It said the explosion was believed to have taken place when an employee entering the plant turned on a light switch and ignited gas that had been gathering from a leak during the night.

Notimex said the explosion took place in the warehouse portion of the plant. The injured, mostly suffering second-degree burns, were treated at the Red Cross Hospital in this northern industrial city, it said.

Gamesa is one of Mexico's major producers of baked goods.

Bank group donates aid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The African Development Bank Group and its staff have donated $2.4 million for emergency food aid and short-term drought recovery in Africa, the World Food Program announced.

The World Food Program, a U.N. agency based in Rome, said it would use the donation to improve the movement, storage and distribution of food aid.

It said $100,000 of the donation came directly from the staff of the banking group and the rest from the organization as a whole.

The group consists of the 50-nation African Development Bank, the African Development Fund, and the Nigeria Trust Fund. It provides concessionary loans to members for agriculture, capital improvements and other development projects.

Korean students sentenced

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Seven students have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from 10 months to 2½ years on charges stemming from anti-government and anti-American protests, court officials said.

However, the Seoul District Criminal Court, which issued the sentences on Monday, suspended sentences for three of the seven students found guilty of violating the National Security Law.

The students were arrested in August after holding protests against their government and the United States in and around the U.S. Embassy.

Two were caught inside the embassy compound trying to break into the main building with an American flag and a small bottle filled with gasoline, the court said. Others scattered leaflets, unfurled placards and burned American flags outside the embassy, it said.

Workers extend strike

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — More than 1,600 Greek employees of foreign airlines using Athens International Airport say they will extend a three-day-old strike until Sunday.

An airport spokeswoman said at least 20 of 39 scheduled flights by foreign airlines were canceled Monday. But she said Olympic Airways, the Greek national carrier, would add extra flights to accommodate stranded passengers.

"We decided to extend our strike for six more days to punish our employers. We want our salary increases," said Potis Pannousis, president of the Foreign Airline Workers Union.

We see the tragic results of drunk driving too many times not to be concerned. Drinking and driving is a deadly combination, one that can turn you into a killer, one that can ultimately change your life and the lives of others. During this holiday season, don't put yourself on the road to disaster.

DON'T DRIVE WHILE INTOXICATED.
