Working mothers are preserving family living standards in two-parent households that otherwise would have declined substantially, according to a new study.

Honoring veterans

Midlanders join their counterparts across the country today to observe Memorial Day. Locally, services are scheduled for 6:30 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery. Flags are to be placed on every marked veteran's grave at Fairview and Resthaven Memorial Park. The service is to be conducted by Woods W. Lynch Post 19 of the American Legion.

Officers find infant who drowns in area floodwaters

Law enforcement officials found the body of a baby who drowned in floodwaters early Sunday near Big Spring, while Midland and Stanton residents were recovering from a Saturday evening thunderstorm that left homes, trailer houses and automobiles damaged from high winds, hail and heavy rains.

Midland officially received only .18 of an inch of rain Sunday with the heaviest accumulations falling before 6 p.m., according to a spokesman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

In other parts of the city, however, heavier amounts were reported. Residents in northwest Midland reported one and one-half inches during the Saturday-Sunday period and residents in the central part of town reported steady rains early Sunday morning with totals reaching the one-inch mark.

Elsewhere, even heavier rains were reported over the weekend in and around the area including Stanton, Big Spring, Greenwood, Forsan, Loop and Lomax.

Searchers near Big Spring found the body of a baby torn from his mother's arms by floodwaters, authorities said.

The infant, identified as Joshua Phillips, had his first birthday Saturday, said Howard County sheriff's deputy John Wolf.

The body was found about 8:40 a.m. Sunday after the child was swept away Saturday night when the family's pickup became stranded in a low-water crossing about 10 miles northeast of Big Spring, according to a spokeswoman with the Department of Public Safety.

Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders said insurance adjusters in Stanton were estimating initial damage at $2 million following the storm that destroyed six mobile homes and two metal barns and ripped through the high school football stadium.

About 60 percent of the homes were damaged externally due to golfball-size hail and as much as 4 to 5 inches of rain fell in and around this West Texas town located 18 miles east of Midland, authorities reported.

Most of the city was without electricity Sunday as Texas Electric Service Company employees worked to restore power.

In Midland, Fire Department officials said as many as eight trailer houses were overturned along East Highway 80 between County Roads 1130 and 1140.

High winds apparently were responsible for damage done to mobile homes at Wallace Trailer Park, East Highway 80, according to sheriff's department reports.

Another mobile home reportedly overturned at Ranger Station near Greenwood and the roof was blown off an airplane hangar near County Road 60 east of Midland, a sheriff's department spokeswoman said.

Reports that four vehicles were discovered overturned as the result of high winds along Interstate 20 were unfounded, a DPS spokeswoman said.

The NWS's forecast for Midland calls for continued cloudy skies Monday with a 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms today, decreasing to 40 percent tonight and 30 percent Tuesday.

Winds should remain steady, blowing from the east at 5 to 15 mph, through Memorial Day.

Temperatures will be cool with the high today expected in the upper 70s and the low tonight expected in the low 60s. The high Tuesday is expected to be in the low 80s.

Sunday's high of 70 was 31 degrees cooler than the record high of 101 set in 1953. The overnight low of 61 was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of 48, set in 1950.

Organizers estimate 4.9 million people participate in 'Hands'

Associated Press

■ An estimated 620,000 Texans join hands — 3C

Millions of volunteers extended hands to the hungry, the homeless and each other on Sunday, joining Hands Across America in a broken line over mountains and plains, through pockets of poverty and to the porch of the White House.

"This is just the beginning," top organizer Ken Kragen said in New York. "When today is over, roll up your sleeves and go out to work in your community. We have to move from the big event to the person on the street."

The line was thick with people, swaying to the strains of "We Are the World" and holding clasped hands aloft, at its terminals in New York and Long Beach, Calif. In other places, red-and-white ropes and ribbons substituted for humanity.

Race for GOP chairman could 'boil down to personality,' lawmaker says

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The rivals in this political race both belong to wealthy Texas families, have strong conservative credentials, are longtime Republicans, agree on the issues and think well of each other.

The candidates are state Republican Party Chairman George Strake and Diana Denman, the vice chairman of the party who wants his job. The race has been confusing, even for Republican regulars.

Strake, a Houston oilman, said last November that he would not seek another term as chairman. At the time, Strake said many Republican activists wanted the position — but he was wrong.

Instead, only one candidate — Ms. Denman — emerged. Strake waited, and when no one stepped foward to challenge her, he declared himself in the race. Ms. Denman would not have run, she says now, if she had known Strake would seek another term. "I took his word," she said, and decided to stay in the race anyway.

After the Texas Supreme Court decided Republican state Sen. Buster Brown could not run for attorney general, Strake approached Brown about running for party chairman. Brown thought about it, then decided not to accept Strake's offer, partly because being a senator and party chairman could pose a conflict of interest problem.

Then the day after the May 3 primaries, Strake approached U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler — fresh from defeat at the hands of former Gov. Bill Clements the night before — about the chairman's position. Loeffler has signaled, however, that he doesn't want the job.

"I know people everywhere in the state have been talking to him (Loeffler) about" running for chairman, Allen Krawder, an aide to Loeffler in Washington said this week. But Loeffler said he has ruled it out completely and won't run, Krawder reported.

Strake also said Loeffler will not seek the office. And he also said he is through recruiting other candidates to take his place in the race against Ms. Denman. "I'm beyond that point now, and I'm commited to it (the race)."

Ms. Denman, however, will not back out of the race, Strake said. "She has enough in the way of time, money and pride that she will continue," he said.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby retained office by beating Strake — who had been Clement's secretary of state — in 1982 when voters turned Bill Clements out of the governor's mansion and gave Democrats a clean sweep of the statewide offices.

Source says hostages aren't to be released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A French hostage negotiator was in Damascus, Syria, Sunday as reports swirled out of Lebanon that some of the 14 French and American hostages held in Lebanon by Moslem extremists soon would be released.

But an informed source, who insisted he remain anonymous and his location not be disclosed, said: "I am in a position to assure you that all the gossip about the release of any hostage is without foundation at all."

The Beirut newspaper as-Safir said Saturday that eight Frenchmen would be released over the next nine days. The same day, the pro-Libyan Beirut magazine al-Shiraa said three American and three French hostages would be freed soon.

The source said that although French negotiator Omran Adham was in the capital of neighboring Syria, he was on a "private business visit this time." In the last six months, Adham made frequent trips to Syria to try to gain freedom for the hostages.

When Adham checked into his Damascus hotel he found four messages asking him to call President Francois Mitterrand's Elysee Palace, the source said.

"When he did, he was surprised that the Elysee asked him how true were the reports about the imminent release of the hostages. He said he knew nothing of the sort," the source said.

Unconfirmed reports Sunday in Beirut said the French hostages were moved to a secret location in Syrian-controlled eastern Lebanon pending their release in Damascus. A Western news agency reported Beirut's French-language daily L'Orient le Jour said the French captives were taken to Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, but the newspaper did not carry such a report.

Hotels in Damascus were filled with European reporters and television crews awaiting the release of the hostages.

GOP

In 1983 the chairman's job went to Strake and the vice chairmanship to Denman, who has served on two presidential commissions. Republicans voted in 1984 to keep them in office for another two years.

Party insiders don't know yet how the this summer's race will line up. Delegates from all the senatorial districts meet to select a man and a woman for chairman and vice chairman. Then the names go to the nominating committee at the Republican state convention June 28, and the committee recommends which names to send to the floor for a vote.

Former state Republican Party Chairman Ray Hutchison, a Dallas attorney, said party races are hard to predict, because the mood of the delegates, who the local party selects, can change quickly. Hutchison said the Texas GOP has factions, but they rarely differ on the issues, just on the priorities.

Strake has done "a credible job" and Ms. Denman "is a good vice chairman," Hutchison said unenthusiastically. Strake, by virtue of having no real enemies and being the incumbent, is the favorite, he said. But Strake's flip-flops on his candidacy and overt recruiting of other candidates to take his place and run against Ms. Denman could turn some Republicans off, said Hutchison, who lost a bitter race against Bill Clements for the GOP gubernatorial nomination in 1978.

Republican state Rep. Terral Smith of Austin agrees that Strake is the favorite, but acknowledged that anything can happen at the convention. "I think Diana has been there for a long time and knows a lot of people," Smith said. "There's no doubt it could be a close election."

Smith thinks the race will boil down to personality, but said old alliances or deals cut at local conventions could shift support between Strake and Ms. Denman. "We (Republicans) may not disagree on the issues, but we disagree on who should be in our leadership positions," he said.

One of the problems Strake's premature resignation announcement and Ms. Denman's early entry in the race caused is a blurred vice chairman's race. Several men entered the vice chairman's race because the chairman and vice chairman have to be of the opposite sex, and for a while Ms. Denman appeared to be the lone canidate for chairman.

Steve Cosgrove, Greg Hoetzy and Steven Munisteri all entered the vice chairman's contest, and Strake said that when he re-entered the race, Hoetzy asked him to drop out. Kay Danks also wants the vice chairman's job.

Hutchison said with Texas' expanded Republican Party, competition for party seats could be healthy if the contests don't spill over into the governor's or attorney general's race. And Hutchison notes that a little intra-party competition looks good compared to the problems he faced as chairman, when a handful of GOP activists in a one-party state were more worried about fighting the party's Watergate image than electing candidates to statewide office.

Child dies in accidental shooting

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 2-year-old girl was killed Sunday following an accidental shooting at her residence, a police department spokesman reported.

Cassandra Cary, 905 W. 21st St., was pronounced dead at 7:35 p.m. at Medical Center Hospital by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee. She suffered a single gunshot wound to the head, reports said.

According to police reports, the shooting occurred about 7:05 p.m. while the youngster and three other children, ages 1 to 7 years old, were alone in the residence while their mother had left to pick up her husband from a local softball game.

Police reports said the children were playing in a southeast bedroom of the residence when one of the youngsters discovered and removed a .357-caliber handgun from a nightstand next to the bed. While playing, the child cocked and fired the gun, reports said.

No charges are expected be filed, according to police. Martinez Funeral Home was notified for arrangements.

The storm's damage

Barbara Wallace comforts Randy Glossen after viewing the damage to his trailer house located on East Highway 80 near County Road 1140 in Midland County. High winds were blamed for the destruction, however, no injuries were reported.

Bievas trailer after high winds along County Road 1130 caused it to overturn Saturday night, while Cheryl Blocker, above, surveys the damage to her property, located on East Highway 80 near Stanton. Numerous trees were uprooted, according to officials.

HOSTAGES

The influx began after as-Safir reported an alleged breakthrough last week in backstage contacts in Syria, Lebanon and Iran to free the French hostages. The newspaper has not said who is involved in the contacts.

It said, however, that the efforts excluded the five American hostages because of the U.S. air raids on Libya on April 15.

On Saturday, as-Safir quoted unidentified sources as saying eight Frenchmen would be released, four within two days and four a week later. Al-Shiraa carried a one-paragraph report saying that "an informed political source has disclosed that six hostages, three Americans and three French, will be freed shortly." Neither publication identified the hostages to be released.

John Jenco, brother of one of the kidnapped Americans, said the State Department informed him of the report Saturday and told him U.S. officials were trying to confirm it.

President Reagan, asked about the reports at a White House reception Saturday night, said "I have no way of knowing about those rumors."

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa, interviewed Sunday in Damascus on the CBS program "Face the Nation," said his government was working to secure the release of the American and French hostages. But, "I can't feel very optimistc when I don't have tangible grounds for that," he said.

Sharaa added that Syria was unaware of the whereabouts of the hostages because their captors "move them from one place to another and keep their hideout very secret." He said the task had been "complicated" by the American attack on Libya.

Nine Frenchmen and five Americans are missing in Lebanon.

Islamic Holy War, an extremist Shiite Moslem group said to have ties to Iran, has said it kidnapped the Americans and four of the Frenchmen. The group said it killed two hostages, U.S. Embassy political officer William Buckley and French researcher Michel Seurat, but their deaths could not be confirmed.

In addition to Buckley, the Americans are Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, 54, director of the American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, 54, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Besides Seurat, the Frenchmen said to be held by Islamic Holy War are Marcel Fontaine, 45, a French Embassy vice consul; Marcel Carton, an embassy protocol officer; and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffman.

A group calling itself the Revolutionary Justice Organization claimed responsibility for the March 8 kidnapping of four members of a French television crew.

The four, employees of television station Antenne 2, are correspondent Philip Rochot, 39; cameraman Georges Hansen, 45; soundman Aurel Cornea, 54; and lighting engineer Jean-Louis Normandin, 34. Their relatives have received letters and photographs indicating they are well.

The ninth Frenchman, retired car dealer Camille Sontag, 85, was kidnapped May 7. No group has claimed responsibility for his abduction.

In all, 21 foreigners are missing in Lebanon, including two Britons, one Italian, one Irishman, one South Korean and two Cypriots.

HANDS

"I'm here because I'm making history," said Bobby Conner in Clinton, Ky. "I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Organizers had said they needed more than 5 million people to form the chain, and hoped to raise $50 million or more for the hungry and the homeless. Despite frantic work up to the final minute, not all the gaps were closed by 3 p.m. EDT when the line formed.

Based on estimates provided by local organizers, at least 4.9 million people participated on Sunday.

Marty Rogol, the executive director for USA for Africa, the parent foundation for Hands Across America, declined to estimate how much money was raised or how many people participated. "It may take as long as most of the summer," he said in Los Angeles.

New Jersey organizers said that 200,000 people — 80,000 more than needed — completed the state's 88-mile line. Kentucky organizers claimed they filled their 52-mile segment, Illinois at one point reported a solid 65 miles of people in one stretch but later retracted the claim, and the 12-mile link through Manhattan was nine-deep in some places. In the California desert, gaps as long as five miles were seen.

Dennis Walto, operations director for New Mexico, said the turnout of 238,000 people — including some from out of state — amounted to 17 percent of the state's population. There were gaps, he said, but none longer than a mile.

There were no reports of injuries or other incidents in the line. The route was marked balloons, flags and clanging church bells, and weddings, and even a couple of killer whales and a penguin contributed to a party atmosphere.

At the White House, a casually dressed President Reagan stood in line with Nancy Reagan and members of his staff.

"To all those participating: Good luck," Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast on Saturday. "I can wish you nothing finer than the satisfaction of knowing that you have given of yourselves to help others."

"We are not impressed that Reagan is going to come out and clasp hands with someone...because this administration's involvement in housing the homeless and feeding the hungry has been absolutely nil," said Mitch Snyder, chairman of the Coalition for Creative Nonviolence, who formed a competing chain in front of the executive mansion.

Radio Moscow on Sunday accused Reagan of joining the event only to boost his image, and said the president had proposed nothing to deal with "the now-disastrous problems of hunger and poverty in the country."

The western end was anchored by Bill Jones, 34, his wife, Mary, 25, and their five children, who live at the Family Shelter for the Homeless in Long Beach.

"I think its just incredible and I hope this feeling carries on," Jones said. "There is a real need. There are many families worse off than us. It's hard and it's tough."

"The important thing is there is a real consciousness being raised," said actress Shari Belafonte in Long Beach. "My family has been involved in causes since day one. It's awesome. It's being a part of history."

Added actor Ben Vereen: "America, you look beautiful today."

Two British jets collide at air show

MILDENHALL, England (AP) — Two vintage jets collided Sunday before more than 100,000 spectators at an air show, killing two British airmen and injuring two others, the Ministry of Defense said.

The two Royal Air Force jets — a Gloster Meteor and a De Havilland Vampire — were giving a display at Air Fete '86, one of the largest air shows in the world, hosted by the U.S. Air Force.

Suffolk Fire Service said the Meteor, a twin-jet fighter, crashed on a road just outside the base, killing the two crew members. The Vampire, a single-jet fighter, landed in a field in the village of Worlington. Residents reported seeing two parachutes floating down.

"I didn't realize there was anything wrong until I saw a great chunk fly off one of the planes," said planning consultant David Jordan, 43. "There was a spectacular ball of flame as the Meteor hit the ground."

Alan Mayes, a farmer, said he watched the Vampire fly out of control toward the bungalow where his wife and mother were preparing lunch.

"I thought, 'My God, it's going to hit the house!' But then the plane suddenly nose-dived and hit the ground in a ball of flame in a peat field," he said. "There was nothing much to see of the plane, only the tail and a bit of fuselage. The rest was embedded in the ground."

The ministry identified the dead crewmen as Flight Lt. Andrew Potter, 38, a flying instructor, and Cpl. Kevin Turner, 24, an aircraft technician.

A statement from the U.S. Air Force and the British Ministry of Defense said a board of inquiry would be convened to investigate the cause of the accident.

The two jets, known as "the vintage pair," were based at Royal Air Force Scampton in Lincolnshire. A Ministry of Defense spokesman said Meteors were the first British jet fighters and the one in the accident has been flying since 1951. The Vampire involved in the collision was brought into service in 1955.

Mildenhall, about 75 miles north of London, is a Royal Air Force base but is used exclusively by the U.S. Air Force and is the headquarters of the 513th Tactical Airlift Wing.

Nearly 400,000 people were expected to attend the two-day air show.

Security was stepped up after the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya. Thousands of U.S. service personnel were told to wear their uniforms to help deter possible attackers. Some F-111 fighters used in the Libyan raid took off from Mildenhall.

Earlier Sunday, seven women were arrested after they broke into the base and painted peace and anti-nuclear slogans on a plane.

Italian authorities compile new list of Rome airport massacre suspects

WORLD

ROME (AP) — Italian authorities have compiled a new list of suspects in the Rome airport massacre, reportedly including up to 20 Syrians, and international arrest warrants could come early this week, Italian news media reported Sunday.

The reports said that Mohammed Sarham, 20, accused of being the sole surviving terrorist from the Dec. 27 airport attack, helped investigators draw up the list. His testimony, reportedly sometimes contradictory, has been incorporated into a report of some 300 pages.

Corriere della Sera, Italy's largest-circulation newspaper, said from 15 to 20 suspects were named in arrest warrants that would be given to Interpol, the international police agency, "within the first days of this next week."

The paper said the suspects were seemingly all of Syrian origin, including eight Palestinians from the same Bekaa Valley camps in Lebanon where it said the Rome airport terrorists were trained.

Three terrorists were killed in the attack on Leonardo da Vinci airport in Rome.

The Rome daily Il Messaggero said the list of suspects also included Mohammed Khouli, head of military air security in Damascus, Syria.

The news agency ANSA, however, said that while the investigators' list contained Syrian names, any arrest warrants likely would be targeted at "Middle Eastern terrorists already imprisoned in Italy." It did not elaborate. But Il Tempo newspaper said a Libyan now in an Italian jail for another crime may have been implicated by Sarham in the airport attack.

Prosecutor Domenico Sica told The Associated Press in an interview earlier this year that the four airport terrorists trained in the Lebanese camps, then traveled from Damascus to Yugoslavia, before entering Italy. He said they likely had Syrian support and that Sarham claimed he had been accompanied to Yugoslavia by Syrian agents.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa, interviewed on the CBS TV program, "Face The Nation," denied Sunday that his country harbored terrorists.

"We do not allow any terroristic acts...either in Syria or to come from Syria," Sharaa maintained. "The Palestinian offices in Syria have had nothing to do with terorism."

Sica has refused to comment on the latest allegations of Syrian involvement. But Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro has said Syria gave "more than moral support" to the terrorists, although Italian authorities lacked "absolute evidence."

According to widespread media reports, Sarham has said he was backed by the Palestinian terrorist groups headed by Abu Nidal and Abu Mousa. Both groups are known to have support from Syria and Libya.

An international arrest warrant already has been issued for Abu Nidal — whose real name is Sabry al-Banna — whom Sarham fingered as the mastermind behind the Rome attack. In that attack and a near-simultaneous assault at the Vienna airport, 20 people died and scores were wounded.

Sica says authorities blame Abu Nidal's followers for assaults on a fashionable Via Veneto cafe, a British Airways office and the Jordanian Embassy — which killed one person and injured 50 people.

The U.S. administration has accused Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy of being the main supporter of Abu Nidal.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pakistan prime minister to meet with Reagan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo plans to visit the United States July 16-20 for discussions on Pakistan's security and purchases of U.S. weapons, Foreign Ministry officials said Sunday.

Junejo is expected to brief President Reagan on efforts to improve relations between Pakistan and India. He also is expected to discuss with U.S. officials the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, according to a Pakistani official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Soviets have an estimated 115,000 troops in Afghanistan, which borders Pakistan.

The Reagan administration provided Pakistan with a $3.2 billion aid package for the six-year period that ends in 1987.

Gale returns to Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. specialist Robert Gale, who has been treating victims of the Chernobyl disaster, returned here Sunday, as a Soviet newspaper indicated that cleanup workers digging underground toward the destroyed reactor were far from their goal.

Gale, a specialist in bone marrow transplants, returned from a short trip to his home in Los Angeles. He has been helping doctors in Moscow treat the worst radiation victims from the April 26 accident.

Gale told reporters at Moscow airport Sunday he did not know the current death toll from Chernobyl, 80 miles south of Kiev in the Ukraine.

Workers plan to seal the Chernobyl plant's destroyed No. 4 reactor by building a concrete tomb around it.

Red Star, the armed forces daily, said the plant was still strewn with radioactive particles thrown off from the explosion at the reactor, and that the radiation level remains high, but gave no figures.

Bonner arrives in France

PARIS (AP) — Yelena Bonner, wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, arrived in Paris Sunday after a six-month stay in the United States where she underwent heart surgery.

Mrs. Bonner, 64, will stay in Paris three days and visit London, Rome and Oslo before returning to the Soviet Union on June 2 to rejoin her 65-year-old husband in internal exile.

Her daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich, accompanied her. Mrs. Bonner did not speak to reporters at the airport. She was to meet with President Francois Mitterrand and other officials during her Paris stay.

Mrs. Bonner had stayed with her daughter in Newton, Mass. She underwent a sextuple heart bypass operation and another procedure in which doctors cleared clogged arteries in her right leg.

Dogs catch drug smuggler

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — A woman who doused herself with perfume to conceal the scent of heroin she was carrying was caught anyway by drug-sniffing dogs, Italian newspapers said Sunday.

The newspapers, quoting police reports, said Vincenza Cali, 40, was arrested on drug smuggling charges Saturday when she was stopped with 5½ pounds of pure heroin strapped in plastic bags around her waist.

They said she was on her way to New York, ostensibly to visit relatives, when stopped at Punta Raisi airport in Palermo. Her husband also was taken into custody for questioning, the newspapers said.

Italian newspapers said police believed the woman was part of a vast Mafia-run heroin trafficking network from Sicily to the United States. Recent arrests at the airport have netted about 20 pounds of heroin, the papers said.

DEAR ABBY

Song celebrates old-fashioned girl

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I loved the letter from "Millie," who was on the side of girls who held out for marriage. Her letter made my day, especially when she mentioned a song that was popular in the '20s titled "Just a Girl That Men Forget." When I was young, I used to play it over and over on our player piano.

In those days, music was first-rate. The lyrics told a story without repeating a line — a far cry from the repetitious junk one hears today.

In case you want to share all the lyrics with your readers, here they are. — JUANITA HAMMON, LYNWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR JUANITA: I do; thanks for sharing:

My dear little girl, they call you a vamp,
A flapper with up-to-date ways
You may shine brightly, but just like a lamp,
You'll burn out one of these days.
Then your old-fashioned sister will come into view
With a husband and kiddies, but what about you?
You're the kind of a girl that men forget
Just a toy to enjoy for a while
For when men settle down, they always get
An old-fashioned girl, with an old-fashioned smile
And you'll soon realize you're not so wise,
When the years bring you tears of regret
When they play, "Here Comes the Bride"
You'll stand outside, just a girl that men forget.

DEAR ABBY: "Holding Out" wrote to say that she is 27, unmarried, and has chosen to remain a virgin for a variety of reasons we have all heard many times: She will not have to worry about becoming pregnant or getting a disease. And she won't wonder if a guy really cares for her, or if he's just using her for sex.

It's funny how guys still want the girls they marry to be virgins, but if they sleep around, it's OK; they need the "experience."

"Holding Out" says she is keeping her virginity for marriage because she wants to give her husband a very special gift — something she has given to no one else. Goody, goody for her.

And what is HE giving her? A secondhand organ? — LIBERATED IN LAUDERDALE

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter from the 27-year-old girl who was "Holding Out" for marriage. Not to brag, but I'm a popular, good-looking, 18-year-old college student who is also holding out, and I'm proud of it. There is a lot of pressure for me to "conform," but so far no guy has ever succeeded in changing my mind — or my anatomy.

It's really not all that difficult. When a guy asks me to go to bed with him, I just say, "No, thank you, I'm not ready to go that route."

And if he says, "Everybody's doing it," I say, "Fine, then you should have no trouble finding somebody else." — UNTOUCHED IN MADISON, WIS.

DEAR LIBERATED AND UNTOUCHED: Now, let's hear it from a male:

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently married 32-year-old male and I would have seriously wondered about a woman who was still a virgin at 27. Although I slept with many women prior to marriage, I don't think I "used" anyone. I stopped seeing some (and some stopped seeing me), but sex was rarely the reason, and when sex did play a role, that role was not one of rejection because the woman was "giving in" (an interesting notion inasmuch as it assumes that women don't enjoy sex).

Also, and I think I speak for many men, I wouldn't marry a woman I had NOT slept with. Why risk unhappiness and possible divorce by marrying someone who might have serious hang-ups about sex? (This, incidentally, is what I would wonder about a 27-year-old virgin.)

Finally, disease is a serious problem. These days no one should engage in intercourse outside of marriage without a condom. If you don't print this letter, please print those last two sentences — too many people are ignorant of that simple fact. — LIKE A VIRGIN

CONFIDENTIAL TO TWO OLD FOGIES IN BUCKS COUNTY, PA.: Thanks for sending the sheet music for "Just a Girl That Men Forget." I picked it out on my piano, and it's a lovely melody.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Expert: Successful people leave 'good student' mold

Hearst News Service

Life can happen to you, or you can make it happen. That's the message from Julie White, a consultant for CareerTrack, who says "a good rule of thumb is: If you haven't failed at anything lately, your life is too safe."

The San Francisco-based consultant conducts seminars on "Image and Self-Projection" from Arleen LaBella and Dolores Leach's book, "Personal Power," a CareerTrack publication. A major part of her seminars focuses on the differences between how men — who more often are the "achievers" in the business world, and women — who usually are the "sustainers" — present themselves.

"Sustainers are waiting for life to happen," she says. "They resist taking risks because they are caught up in the 'good student mold.' The good student does a good job 70 percent of the time and 30 percent of the time unconsciously waits for recognition. Sustainers work hard and they wait. But because the world is not like school, they spend a lot of their lives angry and resentful.

"Achievers do a good job 60 percent of the time and spend 40 percent of the time using three crucial success-building skills — projecting, positioning and networking — the things that 'good students' were taught to think of as 'cheating.'"

WHITE SAYS THAT when the student gets out of school, this "curriculum for success" comes in the form of three folk sayings:

■ It's not what you know. It's who you know. That is, form alliances by developing good networking skills.

"It's a tricky thing," White warns. "When you need them, it's too late to form alliances. They must be firmly in place."

■ He was just in the right place at the right time. Position yourself and be willing to take risks.

"Biographies of successful people love to tell you how they bought the land before the freeway went in," White explains. "But they were also often at the wrong place at the wrong time. Achievers get involved in many things and one of them will work out."

■ Them that has gets. The "success breeds success" syndrome requires good self-projection skills.

"Employers want proven winners. We have to make the most positive image of ourselves possible. Often people give a negative description of themselves and call it 'honest.' Women often represent themselves as less than they are, and men represent themselves as more than they are."

Men will usually attribute success to themselves and will blame failure on something outside of themselves, she says. When women succeed, they tend to say, "It was easy" or "I was just lucky." When they fail, they blame it on themselves.

"You are less likely to take risks if your life is ruled by luck," White adds. Instead of thinking in terms of luck, she suggests finding out what the boss considers a winner. Then present yourself as the ideal winner.

TO BEST PRESENT yourself, White says it is important to be aware of nonverbal communication. Studies show that 55 percent of the impression you make is based on how you look, 38 percent on how you speak and only 7 percent on the actual words you say.

"Do you have that power that lets people focus on what you have to say?" she asks. "People form an impression of you in 30 seconds, and that impression tends to last."

The first three things people see are skin color, gender and age, but these are processed so quickly that observers are not aware, White says. Bearing — how you use the space around you — is the next thing people notice.

"Powerful people take up some space," White says. To appear more powerful the consultant recommends an authoritative stance, an erect, open body posture — women are inclined to tilt — and open gestures to spell self-assurance.

White also suggests maintaining eye contact 60 percent of the time, lowering the pitch of the voice and shaking hands with palms touching completely. Voice inflection also is important she says. In business dealings, women should practice making statements matter-of-factly instead of ending sentences with a question-asking upward inflection.

Author urges women to play power game by men's rules

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — "She can, but she hasn't decided to," said Pauline Lyttle, co-author of the book, "Why Jenny Can't Lead: Understanding the Male Dominant System."

"Jenny can't lead because she has chosen not to take the power and to be a leader," Lyttle added.

It's a political problem, she said: "A political system is a group of informal rules, policies and decisions that people choose to comply with.

"There are two political systems. The female political system has been very powerful when you talk about families and you talk about small groups in communities, but an organization such as the Army or corporations or entities requires different kinds of skills, which I choose to call the male dominant system."

The female political system works on the premise that women can control the environment, by, for example, putting their energy into legislation, rules and regulations, she said.

"In fact, legislation can be used as a tool," she continued, "but under the male dominant system, it is used very differently, based on the male premise, which is you really cannot control the environment.

"You cannot control earthquakes. You cannot control the outcome of an internal political struggle in the office. What you have to do instead of trying to control it is basically to use what I call the politics of resiliency. Powerful people use whatever is in the environment just the way it is and figure out how to prevail."

Women need to learn this male strategy in order to become effective leaders and to earn a spot on the "team," Lyttle said, adding that women traditionally never learned to be team players.

As homemakers, they were dependent economically and socially on their spouses, so other women were viewed as the enemy because if another woman should interfere with the couple's relationship, the homemaker could lose her security.

"In terms of female politics of exclusivity, women competing with other women was good survival in the home," Lyttle said. "History has demonstrated that survival is predicated on competition of one against the other. A woman's concept of a team is a team of one, which is why women think they have to be perfect. But in an organization, what you do is join ranks because with the other people on your team, whether you like them or not, you back them so you can reach a common goal."

By the mid-1990s, the Census Bureau predicts, women will represent 64 percent of the U.S. work force.

Working mothers preserving living standards, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Working mothers are preserving family living standards in two-parent households that otherwise would have experienced substantial declines in income over the past decade, says a recently released study.

"If more mothers had not gone to work, the loss in family income since 1973 would have been more than three times as great," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wisc., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee.

Income in two-parent families fell 3.1 percent from 1973 to 1984 and would have dropped 9.5 percent if mothers had not increased their earnings.

The report said family income increased on a yearly basis prior to 1973, but the level that year has not been matched since. Median family income in 1984 was 6.2 percent lower than in 1973, it said.

The most dramatic decrease has been among young men, the study said, with a 30-year-old man earning 25 percent less on average in 1983 than in 1973.

"The increasing willingness of American mothers to assume the dual responsibility of a job outside the home and raising a family is a major reason why American families have retained much of the prosperity they enjoyed in the early 1970s," the report said.

Mothers joining the work force at the fastest rate are not single heads of households but those from traditional two-parent households with children under 3 years old, the study found.

Citing Labor Department statistics, the report said the participation rate of single female heads of household in the work force increased from 38.5 percent in 1973 to 44.5 percent in 1985. Over the same period, the participation rate of married mothers with children under 3 rose from 29.4 percent to 50.5 percent.

Although working mothers have averted a substantial decline in gross family income, the study said, additional costs associated with two-earner families have made the effect on net income more modest. It said the extra wages are significantly offset by money spent on child care, additional clothing, transportation and services formerly performed in the home.

"The fact that more and more mothers are, nevertheless, joining the work force appears to indicate the growing degree of economic necessity," Obey said.

School expensive

Americans spent an average of $236 in 1985 on back-to-school items for their children, according to Better Homes and Gardens.

Precious memory

Memorial Day's come and Memorial Day's go but the significance of the holiday never, never changes or diminishes.

The observance originally was established to honor the graves of Civil War dead but has been expanded to include all those who died in wars including the ones outside the United States.

That's perfectly appropriate. Whether soldiers died in France or Germany, Da Nang or Iwo Jima, Gettyburg or Bull Run, they should be remembered for their courage and their devotion to duty.

For all their horror, their devastation and their despair, wars are great "bonding agents" for a nation of people. They call to mind a nation's unity of spirit and purpose, and glorify the greatness of individuals who shed their blood and gave their lives so that Americans can continue to live in freedom.

Today many millions of Americans will go about their busy everyday lives, thinking only in terms of the additional time off afforded by this holiday and missing, for the most part, the reason this day is commemorated. They shouldn't. The blood that was shed was spilled for them.

On this Memorial Day, as taps echoes over American cemeteries throughout the land, take time to recall to mind those who have given so much for this great nation. Cherish the memory of those who have died so that our way of life can continue.

Yes, Memorial Day's come and they go. But don't forget the significance of Memorial Day.

Another View:

Living with reality

The Reagan administration has cried wolf on defense spending once too often.

National security will not wither overnight because the U.S. House of Representatives has passed a 1987 budget setting military spending authority at $285 billion. Congress knows, and the White House knows, that the Senate and the House will compromise on a defense budget somewhere between the House figure and the Senate's $301 billion.

This means that the Department of Defense will get in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 roughly the same amount that it gets this year — about $100 billion more than was spent annually on the military at the start of President Reagan's first term. Even in constant dollars the buildup is massive and ongoing — hundreds of billions of dollars since Reagan took office, heavily weighted toward multiple, often duplicative, new weapon systems.

Thus it is no wonder that the House ignored the president's hyperbolic statement that the passage of the House budget resolution would undo all that had been achieved so far in rebuilding the defense posture since the dark days of the 1970s. "I cannot believe," the president said, "the American people, given the facts, would approve of what the House Budget Committee would have us do."

Members of Congress know that this is not so. Through public-opinion surveys and other means, the people signaled long ago that they thought the defense buildup had reached a high enough plateau. A recent survey conducted by Cambridge Reports Inc. found that fewer than one in four Americans believed that the government needed to spend more on defense. This is not to say that they necessarily favored a retreat, but that it would be sufficient to maintain the status quo at the new higher levels.

Even the proposed Republican compromise in the House, $293 billion, was $27 billion less than the Reagan figure. As for the Senate's $301 billion level, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said: "It doesn't seem adequate to the president, but I believe we can live with it." The president issued dire warnings of the damage to be caused by a smaller defense budget, and threatened big cuts in spending in areas important to critical members of Congress, both Democrats and Republicans.

The president's list was blatantly political, focusing on sensitive areas such as readiness and personnel levels. It ignored costly research and development items such as the $4.8 billion that Reagan wants, but never had a chance of getting, for the Strategic Defense Initiative ("Star Wars").

The administration has brought this problem on itself, in part by such empty cutback threats in the past, by overpromoting the need for a plethora of new weapon systems and by refusing to accept the basic premise that you have to pay for what you get — through new tax revenues if the funds are not otherwise available.

There is a strong case to be made for defense forces that are adequate to meet any reasonable threat, and ready to meet it. But, as we hear it, the administration's case for bigger defense budgets always boils down to a belief that the nation needs more of everything because the Soviets have more of everything. Nor did the administration choose to participate with senators and House members in the budget process this year until the latest round of wolf-crying in the past two weeks.

The Gramm-Rudman deficit-control law set the parameters of this year's budget debate. There still is a $200 billion deficit this year. And the Pentagon will have to live with reality — like everyone else.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 26, the 146th day of 1986. There are 219 days left in the year. This is Memorial Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 26, 1868, the attempt to remove President Andrew Johnson from office failed by one vote in the Senate.

On this date:

In 1521, Martin Luther was banned by the Edict of Worms because of his religious beliefs and writings.

In 1805, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned king of Italy.

In 1865, arrangements were made in New Orleans for the surrender of Confederate forces west of the Mississippi.

In 1913, Actors' Equity Association was organized.

In 1940, the evacuation of Allied troops from Dunkirk, France, began.

In 1969, the Apollo 10 astronauts returned safely to Earth after a successful eight-day dress rehearsal for the first manned moon landing.

Ten years ago: The 24-member countries of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development agreed to a strict code of conduct for multinational corporations.

Five years ago: Fourteen people were killed when a Marine jet crashed onto the flight deck of the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz off Florida.

One year ago: The government of Bangladesh reported more than 1,400 people were killed in a hurricane that had lashed the country the day before. The toll would eventually reach 11,000.

Today's birthdays: Actor Robert Morley is 78. Actor Peter Cushing is 73. Singer Peggy Lee is 66. Actor James Arness is 63. Sportscaster Brent Musberger is 47. Opera singer Teresa Stratas is 47. Singer Stevie Nicks is 38. Country singer Hank Williams Jr. is 37. Astronaut Sally K. Ride is 35. Actress Genie Francis is 24.

Thought for today: "Truth never damages a cause that is just." — Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian political and spiritual leader (1869-1948).

'Spetsnaz' training can prove deadly

WASHINGTON — The Soviet special forces, or Spetsnaz, are an anomaly in the Soviet Union: elitists in a collectivist society, encouraged to operate independently and to improvise, instead of following the strict letter of the rules according to Marx. Their generals must envy them at times.

Jack Anderson

The 30,000 Spetsnaz men and women are "determined, well-trained troops selected for their political reliability, athletic skill and intelligence," according to a secret Pentagon report. Because they are indeed special, they earn more money and qualify for retirement earlier; each year as a Spetsnaz is equated with 18 months of regular military service.

But unlike the special forces of any country, the Spetsnaz earn their perks. Though they train along with regular army officers at the Reconnaissance Faculty of the Kiev Higher Combined-Arms School and at the Special Faculty of the Ryazan Higher Airborne School, once they are assigned to Spetsnaz units they get training that is probably unequaled in its rigors.

A common training exercise is to parachute small groups in totally uninhabited regions of the frozen taiga, hundreds or even thousands of miles from their rendezvous point. They spend days or weeks on their own, scrounging their food and transport as best they can.

Often special troops from the Interior Ministry are put on the trail of the Spetsnaz trainees — who probably have a better chance than most Russians to evade the KGB. An annual three-month exercise in the Kirovograd region of the Ukraine pits the best Spetsnaz units against each other.

Spetsnaz troops risk death during their realistic training exercises, which include the routine use of deadly chemicals, explosive barrages and live ammunition.

According to U.S. intelligence reports, Spetsnaz training includes infiltration techniques; reconnaissance and target location; survival behind enemy lines; language and customs of target nations, like France or West Germany; clandestine communications; sabotage with explosives, incendiary devices, acids, abrasives and bacteriological weapons; hand-to-hand combat and silent killing methods; skiing, mountain-climbing and rigorous physical conditioning and, of course, parachute training.

Spetsnaz parachute training includes conventional static-line drops; high-altitude, low-opening drops, and high-altitude, high-opening drops with directional chutes that allow the troopers to drift, undetected by radar, for 30 miles or more behind enemy lines.

Airborne Spetsnaz units prefer silent, ultra-light planes to glide in on an isolated target. They avoid noisy helicopters if at all possible. Naval Spetsnaz use mini-submarines.

In addition to their rifles, pistols, hand grenades and other standard weaponry, each Spetsnaz unit carries SA-7 anti-aircraft missiles. They are also equipped with R-350M radios with encryption and burst-transmission capabilities — meaning their coded messages are sent in quick, hard-to-detect bursts to a satellite overhead.

Despite reports of Spetsnaz prowess that have come to U.S. intelligence agencies from defectors and other sources, an Army intelligence officer warned that it would be wrong to consider them an unbeatable force that never makes mistakes. "They are not peasants in leg wrappings," he said. "Neither are they 10 feet tall."

In fact, defectors told of one time when the regular army one-upped the Spetsnaz. Staging a sneak attack on a nuclear weapons store in the Far Eastern Military District, the Spetsnaz elite troops were spotted — and humiliated — by the defenders. The alarm sounded and pre-rigged vehicles shone spotlights on the intruders.

UNDER THE DOME: Pentagon officials recently made the mistake of saying no to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas — not once, but twice. Brooks wanted a copy of a sensitive military study that had been done by Congress' own Office of Technology Assessment but that had been seized by the Defense Department. He cornered a high-ranking official who had a copy, ordered him to wait while he conducted some House business and instructed an aide — jokingly, we hope — to shoot the official if he tried to leave. Brooks got the report. In another case, the Army refused to let Brooks see a controversial pistol being considered for mass purchase. Only when he threatened to subpoena the gun did the Army relent.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Remember Samantha Smith, the teenager who wrote then-Soviet leader Yuri Andropov in 1983 and later visited the Soviet Union? Russian officials are ensuring that the plucky little girl, who died in an air crash last fall, will not be forgotten. A large Siberian diamond and a new variety of violets have already been named after her. They may also construct a memorial at the Artek youth camp in the Crimea.

"'HANDS ACROSS AMERICA' HAS DEFINITELY RAISED MY CONSCIOUSNESS ABOUT HUNGER. WHEN'S LUNCH?"

JAMES RESTON

Government leaks far more than nuisance

WASHINGTON — The top Reagan officials are miffed these days when they read leaks in the press about what they're doing in private, and you can't blame them.

James Reston

For if it ever got out what they were doing, or not doing, in private, they would really be in trouble.

"It's disgusting the way stuff leaks out," Secretary of State Shultz said the other day. "And we've got to find the people who are doing it, and fire them."

George has been around here long enough to know that this is a silly idea, and if he doesn't, Bernie Kalb, his spokesman, can explain that there's no way the official plumbers can stop the leaks.

The executive branch is the only known vessel that leaks from the top. It leaks the baloney it thinks people will swallow, and threatens to sue anybody who publishes information it wants to suppress.

But this plumber's game of stopping the leaks can't last very long. Too many people have to be in on the president's decisions at home and abroad, if they're to be effective.

He has to consult with Congress and talk things over with the allies before he acts, and in the process, everybody talks.

Democracy at home and alliance politics abroad is a gabby business. There's no way to shut people up.

The allies will speak in their parliaments, and bureaucrats here will speak out if they think the people are being deceived.

This is the point President Reagan may have missed. He thinks that what is popular is right, but the Republican leaders in the Senate and House disagree about his budget deficits and are insisting that he compromise or risk losing control of the Senate this year and maybe the White House in 1988.

The administration has a valid point about press disclosure of covert or secret operations. It is put in an awkward position when reporters publicize its efforts to block the Communist intrigues in Latin America, southern Africa or the Middle East.

This is what bothers William Casey at the CIA, who wants to take the newspapers to court for interfering with his covert operations, and even putting his spies and the sources of his information at risk.

Here the press has to be careful, and discuss with the government what is fair or dangerous reporting. So far, this conflict has not been resolved between responsible officials of the government and the media.

The Reagan administration is trying to deal with this problem by dismissing officials who leak information to the press.

It is even demanding that hundreds of thousands of federal employees take lie-detector tests to prove their loyalty to the Reagan administration.

More than that, it has suggested that grants of federal money for scientific research be denied to scholars unless they approve of the administration's "Star Wars" program.

The Freedom of Information Act is now under attack, on the ground that it is interfering with the administration's defense of the Republic.

Strange things are happening here in the name of security. For example, Michael E. Pillsbury, assistant under secretary of defense for policy planning, was dismissed on the suspicion that he had leaked information about sending U.S. Stinger missiles to anti-Communist rebels in Angola, and that he had flunked a lie-detector test during the investigation.

The administration is not kidding about these "leaks." It wants to put lie-detector tests on everybody privy to sensitive security information.

It is really concerned that there are more leaks out of this administration than any other in recent memory and it doesn't understand why.

One reason may be that the administration has not persuaded its civil servants that it's telling the truth. They know the difference between propaganda and truth. In short, they are the inside "lie detectors" and, in defiance of this administration's public relations techniques, are the source of most of the leaks.

The president cannot really deal with this problem by playing the plumber's game to stop the leaks. He cannot preside over a policy without consulting with Congress and the allies. They have to know what's going on, and they will talk, not only among themselves but to the network of communications all over the world.

Also, even his own people here won't play this game. Propaganda is a self-limiting disease. If the president doesn't persuade his own people that he's on the right track, they will oppose him and leak their opposition to the press.

CHARLEY REESE

If you can't afford opium, try liberalism

If you would like to be a liberal — and it's still fashionable in the media, academia, bureaucracy, and among those elites who don't work either because they are too rich or on welfare — you have to develop a talent for selective amnesia and instant brain-shutdown.

Charley Reese

These are the two devices which enable the modern liberal to live with the contradictions his policy positions create.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and full-time thorn-in-the-side of congressional liberals, recently pointed out that in order for the liberal position on the communist government in Nicaragua to make any sense at all, you have to forget the Soviet Union, its history, its use of Cuban proxies, and the Leninist philosophy of expansionism. In other words, if you look at Nicaragua in total isolation — as if the Soviet Union, Cuba and the events of the last 40 years did not happen — then, sure, Nicaragua is no great concern of the United States.

Actually, Gingrich was being kind to his colleagues. Ignoramuses don't have to forget what they don't know and I suspect there are as least as many ignoramuses as there are selective amnesiacs among the liberals who advocate doing nothing to stop the Soviet Union from establishing a beachhead on the North American continent.

You can see an example of the brain-shutdown when you confront a liberal on his position that private citizens should not be allowed to own and carry handguns.

Since the fundamental human right is the right to life, the federal government and all the state governments in the United States recognize the individual's right to self-defense.

But how do you reconcile a belief in the individual's right to self-defense with the position that honest, law-abiding citizens should not be allowed the means with which to defend their lives?

I suppose you could say that only those individuals with the strength, agility, and training to engage successfully in unarmed combat have a right to self-defense. That, however, excludes the handicapped, the young, the elderly, and the frail and, Heaven knows, the liberal does not want to be guilty of discrimination.

How then do you resolve the contradiction? Simple. You shut down your brain. You just mumble, "Well, somehow, and so forth," and walk away.

Gingrich and I have a fundamental disagreement. He believes liberals suffer from cognitive dissonance — that they see a different world than the rest of us see — but I believe they are just immature.

The difference between an adult and a child is that the adult recognizes the gap between his wishes and feelings and an objective reality that exists independent of his wishes and feelings. The adult can override his wishes and feelings with reason. The mature individual does what has to be done even when he doesn't feel like it.

The child, on the other hand, is governed by his emotions. He wants something or he doesn't want something and that's the end of it — neither reason nor explanation can move him. In the normal growth process, the child learns mainly by painful experiences that he must adapt to the world, not vice versa.

The modern liberal somehow escaped the maturation process. He still believes that his own desires are the governing force of the universe. If he doesn't wish to deal with a dangerously expansionist Soviet Union, then there is no dangerously expansionist Soviet Union. People who tell him that there is are just bad grownups who are trying to make him feel bad. That is why he is a lot more hostile to anti-communists than he is to communists.

As you can see, the attraction of modern liberalism is that it is simply a return to one's childhood. Of course, sooner or later reality will shatter the illusion, but if the grownup world is too much for you and you can't afford opium, modern liberalism is a good substitute.

California lawmakers OK no-pass bills

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Assembly and Senate, saying students need more than athletic prowess, have passed bills that would require high school juniors and seniors to earn a C average to be eligible for sports and other activities.

"We have too many kids who all they do is play basketball or football and they come out at the end of the rainbow unable to read or write or do anything to survive in society," said Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, a San Francisco Democrat.

Brown's bill was approved last month by the Assembly and is pending in the Senate. A similar bill by Sen. Joseph Montoya was passed by the Senate last week and sent to the Assembly.

One of the bills likely will be sent this summer to Gov. George Deukmejian, who has not taken a position on the issue. If he signs a bill into law, California would join Texas in setting legal standards for students to take part in non-academic activities.

More than half of California's 1,029 school districts, which have 4.2 million pupils, already have set such standards.

The San Francisco Unified School District in 1980 was the first to require a C average to participate in sports.

The Los Angeles Unified School District has had a policy since 1983 that is tougher than either bill in the Legislature: Students cannot participate in extracurricular activities if they have lower than a C average or if they get one F.

Under the two bills, a student could get an F, as long as the average was a C. The bills would allow districts to maintain stricter policies.

"It has been rewarding for teachers and most of all for students," said Rita Walters, president of the Los Angeles school board and author of the policy.

Texas passed its "no pass, no play" law in 1984 as part of a major school reform package. The law requires students to receive a passing grade in all courses to participate in extracurricular activities.

Year's first hurricanes will be christened Andrew and Agatha

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrew and Agatha will lead off the 1986 hit parade of Hurricanes, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced Sunday.

Andrew will be the name of the first tropical storm or hurricane in the East — the Atlantic, Caribbean or Gulf of Mexico — while the first storm to threaten the nation from the Pacific will be called Agatha.

"Use of easily remembered names reduces confusion when two or more tropical storms occur simultaneously," explained Richard E. Hallgren, director of the National Weather Service, in announcing the names.

These lists are only the latest development in a long series of efforts to sort out confusion in tracking storms — efforts that have included the names of saints and politicians, military nomenclature, latitude and longitude designations, the names of meteorologists' girl friends and names that weather forecasters chose just because they liked them.

Currently, the lists of names are compiled by the World Meteorological Organization in Geneva, Switzerland. They contain a variety of ethnic names, seeking to reflect the nationalities affected by the storms in each ocean.

Besides Andrew, Bonnie and Charley, which open the East Coast tropical storm season this year, others on that list include Georges, Hermine, Otto, Virginie and Walter. Pacific names include Blas, Javier, Newton, Orlene and Paine this year.

Hurricanes are also known as tropical cyclones, meaning large storms that originate in the warm waters of the tropics. They begin as tropical depressions. When sustained wind speeds reach 38 miles per hour they become tropical storms and are given a name.

Tropical storms with winds that reach 74 miles an hour are designated as hurricanes, derived from the West Indian word "huracan," meaning great wind or evil spirit. That name is used in the North Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico, Caribbean Sea, South Pacific and eastern North Pacific.

The same type of storm is called a typhoon in the western Pacific, a baguio in the Philippines, a cyclone in the Bay of Bengal and Indian Ocean, and a willy-willy in the Timor Sea and northwest Australia. In parts of Mexico and Central America, the name cordonazo is also used.

Officially, hurricane season begins June 1 and lasts until Nov. 30, but these huge storms don't always pay attention to the calendar. Historically they have occurred in nearly every month, and reports of such giant storms can be traced back as long as records have been kept.

For much of history the storms were known by the name of the saint's day on which they occurred, such as the Santa Ana hurricane that hit Puerto Rico on July 26, 1825.

At other times, storms received names associated with ships, people or other events involved with the storm. These have included Saxby's Gale of 1869, named for a British naval officer who predicted it; Racer's storm of 1837, because of a sloop caught in it, and such nomenclature as the September Gale of 1815 and the Lighthouse Storm of 1851.

In World War II military weathermen had been using longitude and latitude designations, but that proved both cumbersome and confusing. A few began informally giving nicknames to the storms, such as Big Jack and Dopey. But the confusion was finally sorted out by using the military phonetic alphabet to name storms — Able, Baker, Charlie and so forth.

While easy to follow, that system didn't last. It was replaced in 1953 by the system that has proved most popular — naming storms after people.

Early in this century Australian meteorologist Clement Wragge started naming storms after people — using women's names for tropical storms and those of men — generally local politicians — for non-tropical storms.

The political names didn't catch on, but naming storms after women did, especially since most meteorologists were men at the time. Only in 1979 did complaints result in an even division of names between men and women.

The end result, thus, is this year's collection of names:

The names for hurricanes in the Atlantic, Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico are Andrew, Bonnie, Charley, Danielle, Earl, Frances, Georges, Hermine, Ivan, Jeanne, Karl, Lisa, Mitch, Nicole, Otto, Paula, Richard, Shary, Thomas, Virginie and Walter.

For the eastern Pacific Ocean, the names are Agatha, Blas, Celia, Darby, Estelle, Frank, Georgette, Howard, Isis, Javier, Kay, Lester, Madeline, Newton, Orlene, Paine, Roslyn, Seymour, Tina, Virgil and Winifred.

FBI requests records of current, ex-officers

MIAMI (AP) — The FBI has requested the records of 25 current and former police officers in its investigation into a department that has seen more than a dozen of its officers arrested since December.

Police Chief Clarence Dickson released a federal subpoena that outlines the FBI requests, including records from some of the force's most celebrated cases.

The Miami Herald, which filed suit for release of the document, said Sunday that federal agents are focusing on whether officers profited from or protected at least two enterprises: bolita, an illegal lottery, and narcotics smuggling.

Dickson has promised in the past to weed out corruption and pledged to cooperate with federal investigators.

At least 15 of the people served in the department's Special Investigations Section, which answers directly to the chief and handles major drug cases and other sensitive investigations, the Herald said.

At least a dozen police officers have been arrested since December on charges ranging from theft and drug trafficking to murder. Others have been fired or suspended while under internal investigation.

Reagan to get resolutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Resolutions passed by 109 local governments and four state legislatures urging President Reagan to end nuclear weapons testing are being sent to the White House during the Memorial Day weekend.

Four groups that support arms control — Physicians for Social Responsibility, SANE, the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign and Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament — plan to deliver the resolutions to the White House on Monday.

The resolutions, which have been adopted since March, urge Reagan to end the current round of underground nuclear tests as long as the Soviet Union is not conducting its own tests. The Soviets declared a unilateral moratorium on nuclear warhead testing in August 1985.

The legislatures of Washington, New York, Hawaii and Rhode Island passed the resolutions. Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste endorsed the resolution with a proclamation.

Boat runs into bridge

NEW YORK (AP) — A Circle Line passenger boat struck a bridge between Manhattan and the Bronx on Sunday, injuring 13 people, officials said.

The injured were taken to Roberto Clemente State Park and were being treated by Emergency Medical Service crews, said police Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

Two people were taken to Lincoln Hospital suffering from head trauma, said EMS Capt. Michael Rice. The two were not seriously injured, said Larry Jorgensen, a hospital administrator.

It was not immediately known how many passengers were aboard the Circle Line, which has daily cruises around Manhattan Island.

Nation hit by thunderstorms

Associated Press

Thunderstorms boomed over widely scattered areas of the nation's eastern half Sunday, dropping hail in North Carolina and drenching part of Iowa with more than 3 inches of rain in less than two hours.

By contrast, sunny skies with temperatures in the 60s and 70s prevailed across the Northeast and much of the West, while hot, sunny weather was common over the south Atlantic Coast, the desert Southwest and interior portions of central and Southern California.

Strong thunderstorms in the Carolinas dropped hail in North Carolina in Red Springs and in northwest Mecklenburg County.

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled across the lower Mississippi Valley, where winds gusted to 35 mph and nearly an inch of rain fell in an hour at Jackson, Miss.

Thunderstorms brought heavy rain to northwest Iowa, where 3.32 inches of rain fell in less than two hours at Spirit Lake.

Showers and thunderstorms dampened the southern Plains, the Mississippi and Tennessee Valleys and portions of the lower Ohio Valley.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included nearly an inch at Fayetteville and Harrison, Ark.; about a half inch at San Antonio, Texas, Cincinnati, Beaumont-Port Arthur, Texas, San Angelo, Texas, and Moline, Ill.

Temperatures at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 54 degrees at Laramie, Wyo., and Rochester, Minn., to 98 degrees at Savannah, Ga. The morning low was 24 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from the Mississippi Valley across the southern Great Lakes, the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys to the central Gulf Coast, showers and thunderstorms scattered over the middle Missouri Valley, the southern Atlantic Coast and parts of the southern Plains, rainshowers over the Pacific Northwest and sunny skies over the Northeast and from the Rockies to the central and southern Pacific Coast.

Highs should reach the 70s and 80s over much of the nation, with readings in the 60s from the central Plains across the upper Mississippi Valley to the western Great Lakes, the 90s over northern Florida, southern Georgia, southwest Idaho and from the Rio Grande Valley to interior portions of central and Southern California and between 100 and 110 degrees over the desert Southwest.

HARRISBURG, N.C. — Dale Earnhardt passed a gas-starved Bill Elliott with 15 laps to go Sunday to win his first Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway. Elliott had taken the lead with 59 laps to go in the 400-lap race. Earnhardt's Chevrolet chased him around the 1.5-mile quad-oval for 43 laps until Elliott had to stop his Ford for gas, and Earnhardt took the lead.

Ticket Rush...

HOUSTON — An unruly crowd of more than 6,000 converged on The Summit Sunday in a battle for Rockets playoff tickets that came close to a full-scale riot and resulted in 20 arrests, police said. At least 2,000 people who had waited hours in line were sent home after a timed sprinkler system triggered a sudden rush for the ticket office about 3 a.m.

Police used nightsticks and dogs to control the crowd.

The 4,500 tickets were later sold within 90 minutes, and thousands of disappointed fans packed up their blankets, lawn chairs and coolers and quietly went home.

Celts-Rockets: Clash of big men

NBA Playoffs

NEW YORK — Ever since the big, strong Boston Celtic front line of Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish was put together for the 1980-81 season, and augmented this year with the addition of Bill Walton, it has provided opposing coaches with serious matchup problems.

The Houston Rockets used the 1983 and 1984 college drafts to put together an even bigger front line of Akeem Olajuwon, Ralph Sampson and Rodney McCray, which also creates matchup headaches.

Size is what the four-of-seven-game National Basketball Association final, which opens Monday afternoon at the Boston Garden, will be all about. All games of the series will be televised by CBS. The pattern of games, if it goes to the full length, will be two games in Boston, three in Houston and the last two in Boston.

It will be the Celtics' height and experience against the Rockets' size and much younger legs.

Each team bears the stamp of Bill Fitch, who coached the Celtics for four seasons before moving to Houston.

Coach K.C. Jones of the Celtics made light of the height factor.

"Same as it was against Atlanta," said Jones, referring to the Celtics' Eastern Conference semifinal opponent.

The Celtics and the Rockets finished No. 1 and 2 in the league in best home regular season records. Boston was 40-1 and Houston, after winning its first 20 games at the Summit, finished, 36-5. The Rockets were 15-26 on the road, compared with the Celtics' 27-14. Each team is 7-0 at home in the playoffs.

The two teams are alike in that both like to pound the ball inside, the Celtics to Parish and McHale and the Rockets to the 7-foot-4 Sampson and the 7-0 Olajuwon.

The Celtics defeated the Rockets in their two regular meetings. On March 11 at the Summit, Olajuwon was sidelined with knee injury, and on March 24 at the Boston Garden, Sampson had scored 17 points in the first 22 minutes, before he was injured in a frightening fall that left him with no feeling in his right leg for a time.

But several NBA coaches pointed out that the way the Rockets have been clicking of late, the regular season games should be discounted.

A look at the matchups by position:

Centers

Few will argue that the 25-year-old Olajuwon is destined to become the league's next dominant center. In his second pro season, Olajuwon is quicker than most centers, runs the court well, is a dominant shot blocker and rebounder, especially off the offensive boards where he gets most of his points. His major fault is that he is foul-prone. Parish, who will guard him, will have to play harder and have a great series to make things easier for his teammates. Parish averaged 16.5 points in the two regular season games against Houston. Olajuwon had 29 and 14 rebounds in his one game.

Forwards

The Celtics averaged 115 points in their two regular season victories against the Rockets and 54.5 came from Bird and McHale. Boston is the best passing team in the league and Bird, who averaged 33.5 points and eight assists against the Rockets,

Drivers cross fingers

By MIKE HARRIS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It is, after all, the Indianapolis 500, not the Indianapolis 250. So when the rains wouldn't relent Sunday, the world's richest auto race was postponed for the first time in 13 years.

On the theory that half a race is worse than no race at all, Indianapolis Motor Speedway officials rescheduled the start for 10 a.m. today ABC will try again for the first live telecast of the Indy classic. If that doesn't work, the Speedway said the decision would be day-to-day.

The forecast is actually worse Monday, with an 80 percent chance of rain, but drivers, crews and officials alike said it is worth the wait.

"We wanted to go 500 miles," Chief Steward Tom Binford said. "We can't compromise the integrity of the race. We simply ran out of time today. We need to face that. The plan is to try again tomorrow.

"I hope the weather forecasters are as inaccurate tomorrow as they were today."

Sunday's forecast had called for no more than a 15 percent chance of rain before midafternoon.

The waiting Sunday — four hours and 26 minutes of it — was longer than any Indianapolis race since 1936.

ABC, which filled more than five hours of air time with interviews and taped highlights of previous races, said it, too, would go live again Monday. After that, though, the network was uncertain.

"I think the fact that our first live telecast was rained out was disappointing," ABC spokesman Irv Brodsky said. "However, everybody from the producer to the announcers are feeling up about the job they have done. As our senior vice president for production said, 'It was one hell of a 4½-hour pregame show.'"

Binford said race officials waited as long as possible in hopes of running the race. The cars were twiced rolled out to the pits, but ultimately the Speedway ran out of time to dry the track and still get in the full 500 miles.

"It's better to have a race that's 500 miles, rather than 250 or 300," said Roger Penske, the owner of the elite Penske Racing team, which will field pole-sitter Rick Mears, defending champion Danny Sullivan and three-time champion Al Unser in the race. "It didn't look like they'd have a chance to run the full race and I think they made the right decision. The pit lane wasn't dry. They did a good job trying to get it (the race) in. But you've got to have it dry to have a good, safe race around here."

Three-time winner Johnny Rutherford echoed Penske, saying, "I feel like I would rather have had the opportunity to go 500 miles, rather than get half of it in to satisfy the rules. We came here to run 500 (miles) and that's what we should do."

It is the first time since 1973 that the race has been postponed because of rain and the first postponement of a complete race because of weather since 1915. In 1973, when the start was aborted by a crash just before the rain, the race wasn't run until the third day, and then it was shortened by rain to 332½ miles. It also was stopped and resumed the next day in 1967, and it was shortene d by rain five other times, most recently in 1976.

"We're here to run 500 miles and we want a shot at 500," said Al Unser Jr. "Whatever day God is willing for us to race, we're going to race."

The rain, which began overnight, let up just before the 11 a.m. scheduled starting time. The 2½-mile oval was almost dry and ready for action when it began raining steadily again at about 2:15 p.m. Speedway officials officially announced the postponement at 3:26 p.m., an hour and 10 minutes later than last year's race ended.

The 33 drivers and the 350,000 fans who fought traffic and contended with both the rain and an infield that turned to a pool of mud also were disappointed by the postponement.

"Frankly, I didn't see how they were going to run the whole race before it got too dark anyway," said Bobby Rahal, who will start on the inside of the second row, fourth in the field. "I do really feel sorry for all the people who made all those plans in advance, then had to sit around in the rain all day and didn't get to see us race."

Would a shortened race have made it more dangerous?

"It's pretty much a sprint race nowadays, anyway, so I don't think it would have been any more dangerous than usual."

"It's a real letdown," said Mario Andretti, the 1969 Indy winner and a veteran of 20 races here. "You're almost programmed to go (on race day) and now you have to reprogram and get it going again the next day. It's kind of tough."

Angels try two today

Rain ends RHCC Stampede

From Staff Reports

When you plan Memorial weekend sports activities in Midland, Texas, the last thing you expect to dampen the day is rain.

But rain washed away the Texas League doubleheader between the Midland Angels and the Arkansas Travelers Sunday as well as the final round of the large Stampede partnership golf tournament at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

In addition, Sunday's fireworks display, which was scheduled after the twinbill at Angels Stadium, was also postponed.

The Angels and Travelers will try it again today with two seven inning games, beginning at 5 p.m., and Sunday's fireworks will hopefully still be dry when those teams finish playing.

Since Sunday's doubleheader was forced because of a rainout in Little Rock earlier this year, the Angels and Travelers now face three consecutive nights of doubleheaders. The only good news for the pitching staffs of those two teams is that they will play 12 less innings over that span than if they played single games. In the Texas League all doubleheader games are seven innings.

The doubleheaders Tuesday and Wednesday will have 6 p.m. starts and the seventh game of the series will be a 7 p.m. contest Thursday.

As far as the Stampede is concerned, there is no today. Saturday's second round leaders were named champions as golf clubs were packed on Sunday. That means that Jamie Winkle and C.E. Boyd will reign for a year as the Stampede champions after a two-round score of 134, one stroke better than two contenders.

Craig Winborn and Tim Peden had a 135 after Saturday's round as did Bob Young and Chris Brown.

It's already been quite a year for Boyd on the partnership links. Boyd teamed with Craig Campbell to win the Midland Country Club's partnership title and now has added the RHCC crown. He also was on the winning foursome in the Angels Booster Club scramble event this year. That leaves the Green Tree Country Club partnership to shoot at.

ABC's worst fear, no race, only rain

By FRAN RICHARDSON

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — ABC's worst fear for its first live telecast of the Indianapolis 500 was realized Sunday: no race, only rain.

The network was forced to fill about 5½ hours of air time with live and taped interviews and highlights from past races.

And just like the Indianapolis Motor Speedway itself, ABC said it would come back Monday. What happens after that, however, is still undecided.

"Beyond tomorrow, I don't know enough to know what's good or right for us," producer Chuck Howard said after the race was postponed. "Talking beyond tomorrow is purely speculative."

Although ABC is committed to showing the race live Monday if the green flag is waved, Howard said rain delays would be handled differently.

"We would only stay on a few minutes to tell what's going on, but we don't have to stay like we did today," he said. "We can bail out. ... There's the soaps."

Although he called the rainout "frustrating," Howard said he was pleased with ABC's coverage — especially with how the crew filled lag time with in-depth interviews of 18 drivers, racing families and others involved at Indy.

Howard said he believed those interviews may have sparked the interest of viewers who normally aren't racing fans and will prompt them to tune in again Monday.

Despite ABC's satisfaction with Sunday's job, officials said the postponement was a costly one, though they wouldn't put it in dollars and cents.

"Yes, it's got to cost us in terms of production costs, of keeping people over another day," ABC spokesman Irv Brodsky said.

"I was a little nervous. In Oklahoma City, I was batting in front of a thousand and tonight I get up there in front of 20,000" — Texas' Bobby Jones, recently recalled from the minors, after his two-run single in the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday gave the Rangers a 3-2 victory over Boston.

Hey, Lakers were ready

It's only the Rockets:

"The Lakers, even though they've called off practice the last three days when there weren't games, are one of the best prepared teams. When they got off the plane in Los Angeles Friday morning after Thursday's victory against Dallas, each player was handed a personal scouting report on the Rockets," said the USA Today story. Now the well-prepared Lakers can take the rest of the season off....

For those who wondered, yes, the MRT is billing Goodrich. And for others who questioned the blimp's markings, the MRT's bill to Goodyear will be double that of Goodrich. It's amazing the kind of publicity a company can get without even having its named mentioned....in case you missed Suzan Conder's graphic last week....

Before Saturday's game, Texas League President Carl Sawatski was chided, "What are you doing walking around with an umbrella? This is West Texas, not Little Rock. We haven't had rain since October."

Carl's explanation, "I play it safe. Rain follows me around." Okay, I'm convinced....

Remember Troy Aikman, who quarterbacked the University of Oklahoma to victory over Texas last season? He's transferring to UCLA. Seems after Troy got hurt last season, Barry Switzer found somebody else...

76ers GM Pat Williams on Manute Bol: "He looks like he went to the blood bank and forgot to say when."...

And from Frank Layden of the Utah Jazz while ruminating on his hometown, Brooklyn: "We had all the nicknames—Greasy, Rocky, Scarface, Toothless, the Lip— and these were the girls."....

Aren't the Chicago Cubs and National League counting their chickens in ordering that the National League club will play its home postseason games in St. Louis? Or has there been a decree as to a desirable NL West winner?....

Did you notice that Lamesa's Jerry Mason was named to the National High School Coaches Association-Converse All-America boys team?....

I didn't realize the MRT reached or carried such impact in Iowa, but they took the suggestion here that the pole vault be outlawed to heart. Iowa high schools voted 339-69 to ban the event....Now about artificial turf and baseball in multi-purpose stadiums....

The George Hoffman Memorial Triathlon is coming up June 7...running, swimming and biking, but apparently all triathlons aren't alike. In Vermont the Tucker Hill triathlon consisted of a 6-mile canoe ride, 2¼ mile cross-country run, 8-mile bike ride, finishing off with a 3-mile uphill run....And in Oregon they have something called the Pole, Pedal and Paddle Pentathlon....A downhill ski race, a 10K cross-country ski race, a canoe race, two bikes race, 22 and 5Ks...

And a parting shot from Frank Layden on attending Boys High School in Brooklyn, "Great athletic program, wonderful teachers, strange proms."...

Sutton keeps poise, despite roars for Golden Bear

By BOB GREEN

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Hal Sutton knew the meaning of those resounding roars that came rolling over the hills of the Muirfield Village Golf Club.

"I'm familiar with those roars," Sutton said.

He knew that Jack Nicklaus was on the move, reeling off birdie after birdie just as he did in his record sixth Masters triumph last month.

But Sutton was prepared for it.

"I'd made up my mind that Jack would get hot sometime during the round," Sutton said Sunday.

"I'd thought it out the night before. I knew he'd get hot and I was prepared to answer him.

"I was going to try to answer whatever he dished out. He dished out a lot, and, fortunately, I was able to answer him," Sutton said.

And he did.

Nicklaus' string of six consecutive birdies was not enough to overtake the front-running Sutton, who went on to a relatively easy four-stroke victory in the Memorial tournament.

Leading all the way, Sutton shot a final-round 68 and won with a record-breaking 271 total, 17 under par and nine shots better than the old tournament scoring record held by Nicklaus, David Graham and Andy Bean.

The victory was the seventh of Sutton's five-year PGA Tour career and his second this season. It was worth $100,000 from the total purse of about $577,000 and pushed his earnings to $318,500 for the year.

It also enabled him to join Fuzzy Zoeller, Calvin Peete and Bean as the only multiple winners this season.

Don Pooley eventually took second with a 69 and a 275 total. He was followed by Johnny Miller and Mark O'Meara at 276. O'Meara shot a 66, six under par on the Muirfield Village Golf Club course. Miller had an eagle-3 in his round of 68.

1906 — Ed Walsh of the Chicago White Sox tossed a five-inning no-hitter against the New York Yankees, winning 8-1.

1929 — In a free-swinging game, pinch hitters Pat Crawford of the Giants and Les Bell of the Boston Braves both his grand slams. New York prevailed 15-9.

1930 — Joe Sewell of the Cleveland Indians, who fanned only three times during the season, was struck out twice in the same game by southpaw Pat Caraway of the Chicago White Sox. He never struck out again in his major league career.

1956 — Cincinnati Reds pitchers John Klippstein, Hershell Freeman and Joe Black combined for 9 1-3 hitless innings, but still lost an 11-inning decision to the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

1959 — Harvey Haddix of Pittsburgh pitched 12 perfect innings before losing to Milwaukee 1-0 in the 13th on an error, a sacrifice, and Joe Adcock's double.

1976 — Joe Niekro, pitching for Houston, beat his older brother Phil, hurling for Atlanta, 4-3. Joe also hit a home run off his brother.

Larry Bird will find way

By IRA BERKOW
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — On the night of April 29 when Roger Clemens of the Red Sox struck out 20 Seattle batters to establish a major league record, Larry Bird said, "I could get a hit off him."

A little smile played on Bird's face — a Mona Lisa smile. There was the possibility that he was serious. There was the possibility that he was kidding. There was the notion in the minds of the listeners that if Larry Bird said it, Larry Bird could do it.

Bird was in the locker room of Boston Garden, a few miles across town from Fenway Park, when he was told of Clemens' feat. Bird had done some routinely terrific stuff himself that night.

When the game got close, the Celtics seemed to say, Here, Larry, here's the ball. Now win the game for us. Again.

Some players hate the responsibility. Bird says he loves that pressure, and he proves it.

The Celtics were leading the Atlanta Hawks by 1 point, 105-104, with less than four minutes to go in the second game of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division semifinal playoffs. Bird then hit a basket inside, and one outside, and one in the middle, and another one from someplace else — maybe a rafter — and sank two free throws, and got rebounds and stole the ball. He scored 10 of the team's 12 points in the last four minutes, and dished off for the other hoop, as the Celtics held the Hawks scoreless in that span and won, 119-108.

THIS COMES to mind now as the Celtics and the Houston Rockets prepare to tip off Monday afternoon in the first of their four-of-seven series for the NBA title. Bird says he is determined to have the championship trophy returned to the Garden, after having relinquished it to the Lakers last season.

A good deal of deserved praise has been lavished on the Houston team, particularly its powerful center, Akeem Olajuwon. His counterpart, the 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, is more of a question mark. Despite his riveting play down the stretch in the deciding game against the Lakers Wednesday night, and the implausible, twisting shot that won the game with one second remaining, Sampson sometimes goes for long, arid stretches on the court.

Yet the twin towers are formidable. A television announcer called them the "two twin towers," which makes four towers — to opponents and some broadcasters, they occasionally make people see and speak double.

IT IS doubtful that they will transfix Bird, or the Celtics as a whole, into such a state of oral or visual duplication. The Celtics have played the Rockets twice this season, and won both times, but in each case, Sampson or Olajuwon didn't play the full game because of injury. Would it have been different had they played the full game? Will it be different in the playoffs?

The guess here is no. The Celtics will win in five games. The Celtic front court, with Kevin McHale, Robert Parish, Bill Walton and Bird, will prove too strong, too experienced, too wise for the fresh-faced Olajawon, Sampson and Rodney McCray.

Certainly, Coach K.C. Jones of the Celtics will not make the mistake that the Laker coach, Pat Riley, did, and allow the Rockets to bring the ball easily upcourt, where Robert Reid can hurt an opponent. Not just by his outside shooting, but by his ability to get the ball inside to Olajuwon, in particular.

THE CELTIC guards, Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge, we can be sure, will be pressuring Reid all over the court, and try to have his tongue hanging with exhaustion when the final crucial moments of the game are at hand.

It is inevitable that the Rockets' time will come, but now is not their time. In the end the difference, though, will be Bird. He is playing as well as he has ever played. Anyone who watches basketball has a favorite Bird move.

His confidence seems unbounded. Maybe just to keep his interest at a peak, he'll make bets with players and the press about something he plans to do in a game. Not long ago, he told a reporter that he'd make a 3-point shot off the backboard in the first quarter. "OK," said the reporter, "five dollars."

Bird made the shot, just as he said he would. And he ran past the press table with five fingers out. The Celtic bench, aware of the bet, rose laughing and each player turned to the reporter and held up five fingers.

Another time this season, the opponent was taking the ball out of bounds after a basket. Bird's back was to him. And just as the player released the ball to his teammate, Bird turned, grabbed the pass and put in a layup. He sensed the pass. The inner rhythm of the consummate artist was at work.

Arthur Rubinstein once told of getting up in the morning and starting to play a symphony of Brahms in his head "better than any orchestra." Then the phone rang, and he was interrupted. When he went back he was, he said, somehow in the third movement.

"Incredible!" Rubinstein said.

Rubinstein turns and finds the third movement, Bird turns and finds the basketball. Incredible.

Red Sox whiff ace thwarted by Texas in no hit bid

Associated Press

Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox, who entered the record books earlier this season for strikeouts, almost got there again Sunday.

Clemens held Texas hitless for 7 2-3 innings before Oddibe McDowell singled and wound up with a two-hitter as Boston beat the Texas Rangers 7-1.

"The win is the most important thing," Clemens, 8-0, said. "I didn't want to think about the no-hitter. It will come if it's supposed to happen."

"The sky's the limit," Clemens said after striking out eight and taking over the major-league lead with 81. On April 29, he struck out 20 Seattle batters in setting a nine-inning record.

Wade Boggs hit his first career grand slam, giving Clemens all the support he needed in Texas.

Clemens had retired 15 straight batters before McDowell's sinking liner fell in front of center fielder Steve Lyons, who had been inserted into the game as a defensive replacement. Lyons charged the ball and dove, but trapped it.

"I was aware he had the no-hitter, but it wasn't on my mind when I went up there," McDowell said.

Clemens lost his bid for his first shutout of the season when Darrell Porter hit a two-out home run in the ninth inning.

Clemens walked four, including three in the third inning when he escaped trouble by striking out Pete Incaviglia with the bases loaded.

Boggs hit his grand slam in the second inning. With two outs, Marc Sullivan, Rey Quinones and Marty Barrett singled off Mike Mason, 4-1. Boggs then connected for a drive over the right-field fence, his fifth home run of the season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Royals 2, White Sox 1

Jim Sundberg hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 17th inning, leading Kansas City over Chicago in a marathon that lasted 4 hours and 53 minutes.

Jamie Quirk doubled with one out in the 17th and a single by Greg Pryor and an intentional walk to Darryl Motley loaded the bases. Sundberg followed with his sacrifice fly to deep left off Bill Dawley, 0-3.

Scott Bankhead, the fourth Kansas City pitcher, was the winner in his major-league debut. Bankhead, recalled Wednesday from Class AAA, pitched four innings and allowed two hits and struck out five.

George Brett of the Royals singled in the fourth inning for his 2,000th major-league hit.

Yankees 8, Angels 5

Willie Randolph's two-out, two-run double broke an eighth-inning tie and New York won its fifth game in a row. The Yankees, who squandered a 5-0 lead after three innings, sent California to its fifth straight loss.

Singles by Butch Wynegar and pinch-hitter Ron Hassey set up Randolph's double off Doug Corbett, 0-1. Don Mattingly singled home Randolph.

Rickey Henderson led off the Yankees' first with a home run. Mike Pagliarulo hit a two-run homer in the second and a two-run double in the third.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 1

Rookie John Cerutti pitched two-hit ball over eight innings for his first major-league victory and Damaso Garcia, Tony Fernandez and Rance Mulliniks hit home runs, pacing Toronto past Cleveland.

Cerutti, 1-1, and Bill Caudill combined on a two-hitter. Garcia led off the game with his first homer of the season, and Fernandez led off the second with his first homer. Mulliniks added a two-run shot later in the second.

Tigers 2, A's 1

Walt Terrell, 6-1, pitched a four-hitter and Darnell Coles hit a sacrifice fly that broke an eighth-inning tie, leading Detroit past Oakland.

The Majors

Tom Brookens singled in the eighth and continued to third when the ball got past A's left fielder Jose Canseco for an error. Coles then hit his sacrifice fly.

Twins 4, Brewers 3

Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer and Mike Smithson scattered 11 hits as Minnesota held off Milwaukee. The Twins have won just three of their last 14 games, all of the victories against Milwaukee.

Hrbek's seventh home run keyed a three-run first. Smithson pitched his league-leading sixth complete game.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Mets 4, Padres 2

New York scored two runs in the 11th inning on Lance McCullers' bases-loaded wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Jesse Orosco to beat San Diego.

More Sports, Page 6B

Darryl Strawberry led off the 11th with his third hit, a single off Craig Lefferts, 3-2, and stole second with one out. Mookie Wilson walked and Strawberry and Wilson worked a double steal and Howard Johnson was walked to load the bases. McCullers took over for Lefferts, but threw a wild pitch allowing Strawberry to score. Winning pitcher Orosco, 1-2, followed with a sacrifice fly.

Giants 11, Expos 3

Mike LaCoss held Montreal to four hits in eight innings and also went 4-for-4 as San Francisco cooled off Montreal.

LaCoss, 5-1, yielded a three-run homer to Tim Wallach in the first inning, the 100th home run of Wallach's career, then did not allow another hit until Wayne Krenchicki's pinch-double in the eighth. The Expos lost for only the sixth time in its last 21 games.

The Giants got 16 hits, including a two-run double by LaCoss.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 2

Bill Madlock hit a tie-breaking two-run single through third baseman Mike Schmidt's legs in the seventh inning and Los Angeles beat Philadelphia.

Winning pitcher Orel Hershiser, 5-3, started the seventh with a one-out single. Steve Sax walked and both runners advanced on Ken Landreaux's grounder up the first-base line that wasn't handled by pitcher Kevin Gross, 3-5, before Madlock's tie-breaking hit.

Reds 7, Pirates 4

Eric Davis homered and rookie Wade Rowdon and Eddie Milner hit run-scoring doubles as Cincinnati sent Pittsburgh to its fourth straight loss.

John Denny, 3-5, beat the Pirates for the second time in nine days and is 6-1 against them in the last two seasons. He allowed a run and six hits until Pittsburgh scored three times in the eighth.

Braves 6, Cardinals 2

Billy Sample homered on the game's first pitch from St. Louis' Tim Conroy and later hit a sacrifice fly as Atlanta beat the Cardinals in a game shortened to 5½ innings by rain.

Astros 3, Cubs 1

Mark Bailey hit a two-run double in the 11th inning, lifting Houston over Chicago. Bailey's double came after two walks by Lee Smith, 2-4.

Astros reliever Charlie Kerfeld, 4-1, pitched two innings and Dave Smith worked the 11th for his 11th save.

has helped make the Celtics that. He is the captain and heart and soul of the Celtics and Fitch knows that. McHale, with long arms and a fine shooting touch, is one of the toughest players in the league to match up against. He has proven his agility in the playoffs, successfully guarding the high-scoring Dominique Wilkins of the Hawks and Terry Cummings of the Bucks. McHale will match up with Sampson, who can score from the inside and outside. What about Bird? Fitch has two choices. He can try 6-8 McCray and should that fail, he might try 6-8 Robert Reid, who had good success against Bird in 1981 when the Celtics and Rockets were paired for the title, which Boston won in six games.

Guards

When John Lucas suffered his drug relapse in mid-March and was dropped from the team, it left the Rockets without one of the league's top playmakers. Fitch compensated for the loss by moving the 6-8 Reid into the backcourt and using him as what has become known as a "point-forward." It was a tactic that Coach Don Nelson of the Milwaukee Bucks employed successfully with Paul Pressey. Reid, who is likely to be matched against Danny Ainge, teams with 6-6 Lewis Lloyd, who will play against Dennis Johnson. Both are good outside shooters with range.

Reserves.

Walton, Scott Wedman and Jerry Sichting have been the Celtics' primary reserves. Wedman suffered two broken ribs in the clincher last Sunday against the Milwaukee Bucks. How much Wedman, an excellent offensive player, will be able to play — if he plays at all — could be a factor. He usually replaces Bird. Walton, voted the league's top sixth man, has given Parish more rest and has made him more effective. The addition of Walton, an outstanding rebounder and passer, has enabled Jones to play two big men all the time and three if he chooses to play Bird in the backcourt. Sichting, the third guard, is an outstanding outside shooter.

Al Unser, who has won this race three times in 20 starts, said, "It isn't the first time something like this has happened to us. There isn't any reason to get excited until the green flag comes down, so I'm just going to take it as it comes."

Michael Andretti, Mario's son and at 23 the youngest driver in the race, also took the situation philosophically.

"We're ready and I'm sure everybody else is, too," he said. "It's very disappointing, but what can you do? We'll wait."

When the race is run, it will feature the fastest lineup in auto racing history. The starters averaged 210.279 mph, topped by two-time winner Rick Mears' record qualification speeds of 217.581 for one lap and 216.828 for all four laps. It was the third time in his nine-year career that Mears qualified for a pole-position start.

Mears teammate with Penske Racing, defending champion Danny Sullivan, was set for a start from the middle of the first row, and Michael Andretti was on the outside of the first row.

"We can't do anything about it," said Sullivan, hoping to become the first repeat winner since Unser won the 500 in 1970 and 1971. "We'll just have to go through the same process again.

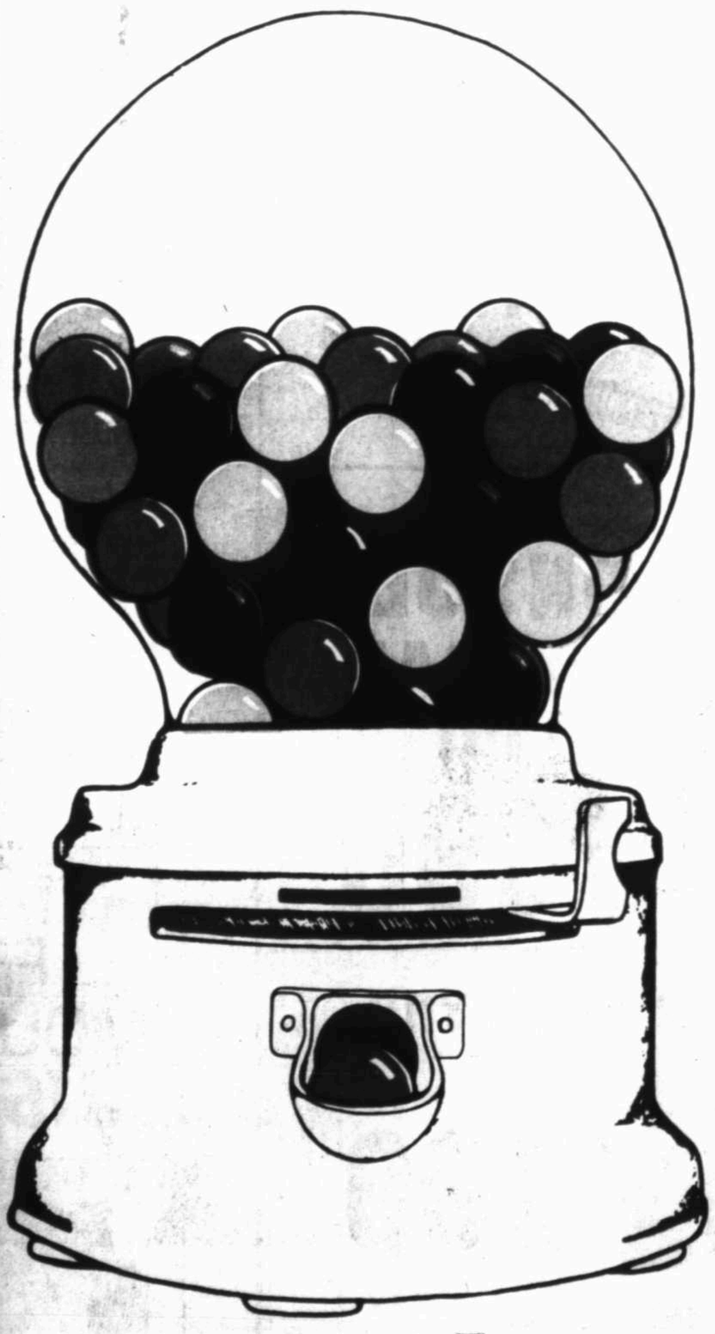
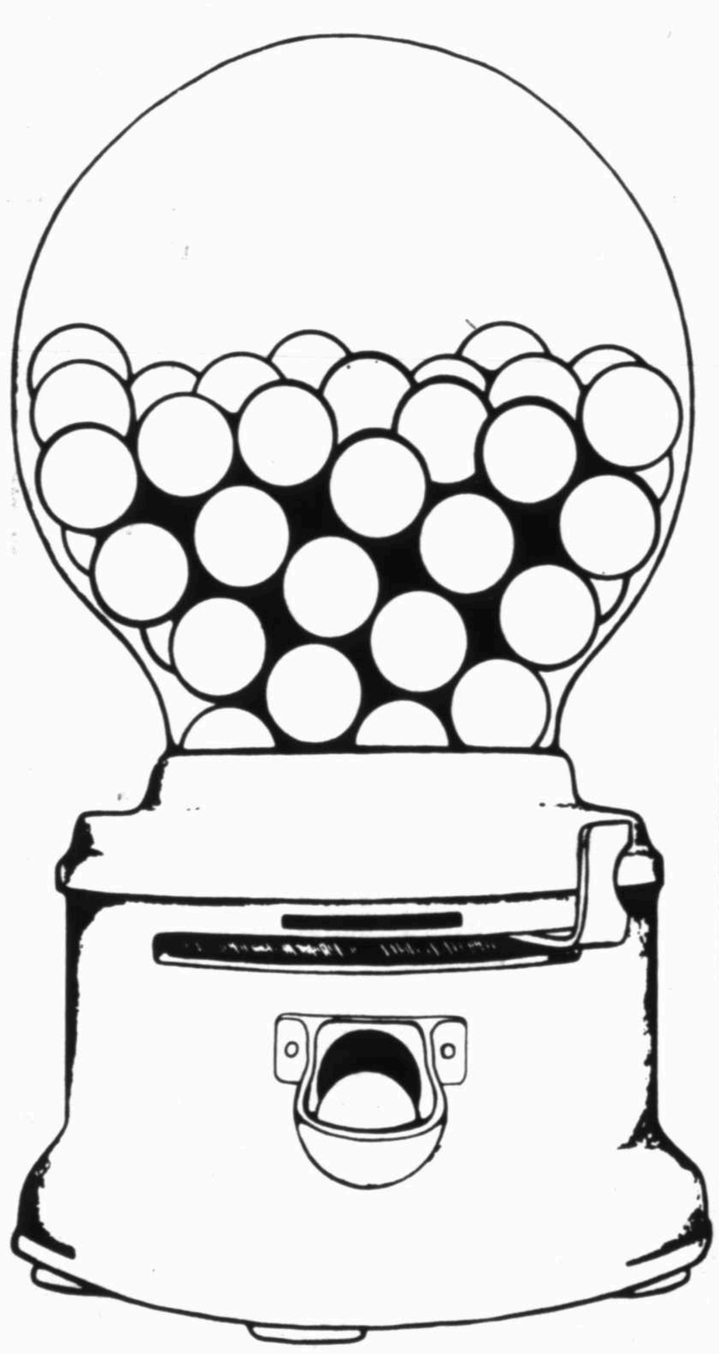
Which one would you put your nickel in?





It's no contest. The one on the left wins hands down because the eye is naturally attracted to the vivid, bright colors.

Color in advertising works the same way. While black and white newspaper advertising still packs a bigger and better wallop than ever when it comes to bringing customers into your store and moving merchandise off the shelves, carefully controlled comparative test have proven conclusively that the addition of a single color to a newspaper ad increases sales by an average of 41.4%.

But color is only one part of the creative selling capacity of the Midland Reporter-Telegram Advertising. Put your nickel where it will do you the most good. Call 682-5311 today. One of our advertising sales experts will be happy to color your sales a more profitable green.

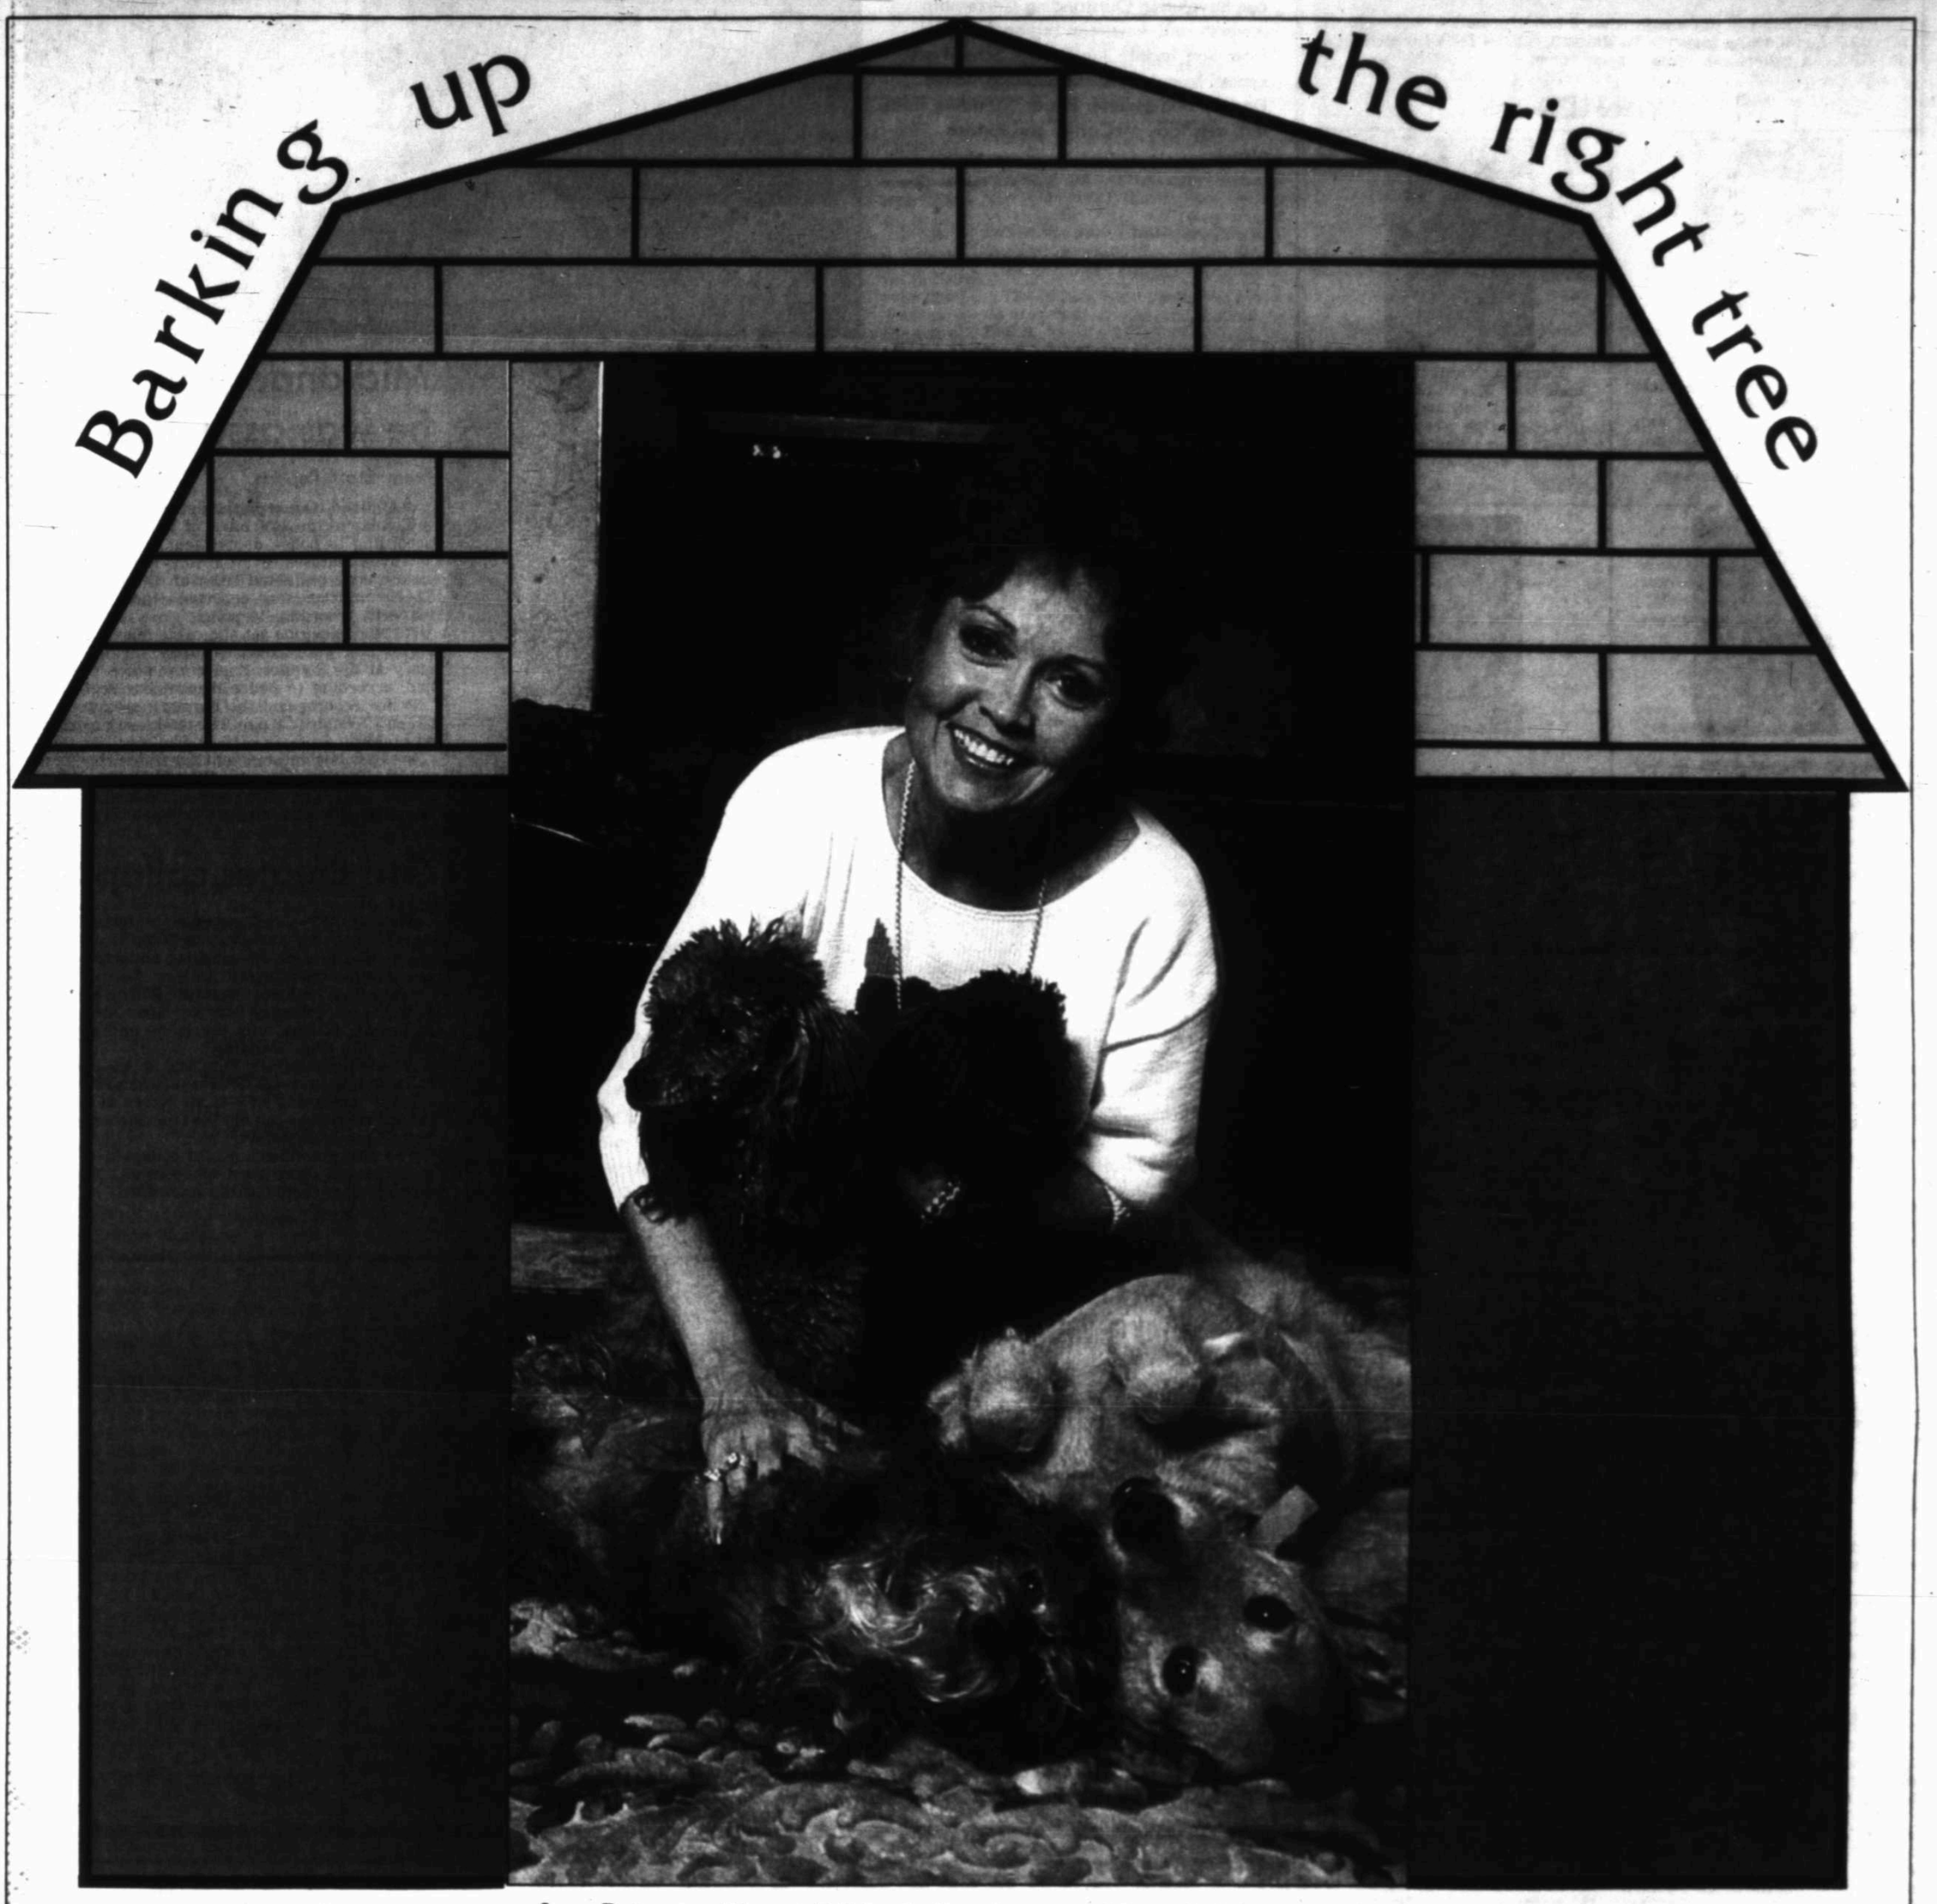
Barking up the right tree



June Dotson, a "fanatic" friend of animals, gathers about her some of her good friends. Her tail-wagging companions, clockwise from the right, are Hub Cap, a pound hound; BB, another pound hound; GG, a pure-bred silver poodle, and Baby, a blind poodle who came into her fold via the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Text by Ed Todd

Graphic by Suzan Conder

God loves us enough to take us where He finds us and loves us enough not to leave us there.

Animals, especially dogs and cats, are special critters.

And June Dotson is simply adamant about animal rights — their rights to live contented and abuse-free lives and their rights not to reproduce their own kind when the supply outstrips the demand and their offspring would go uncared for and unloved.

"Their only 'crime' is that there is not enough homes for them."

To her, animals are to be respected.

"I always thought it was interesting how God used animal sacrifices until Jesus came for atonement," she said. "A lot of people thought it was cruel, but I think that was God showing the importance of animals until Jesus Christ came. It was animal sacrifices that atoned for our sins. I'm a fanatic about Jesus and animals."

Mrs. Dotson is a member of Friends of the Animals. It's a bond which links those who treat animals with kindness and who respect animals for their intended role in this world. "You don't ever attend meetings or pay dues. You just be a friend of animals."

In addition, Mrs. Dotson is an outspoken supporter of the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which harbors homeless pets, adopts out the animals, investigates cruelty cases, educates people on animals' roles in society and their relationship with people.

Mistreatment, including neglect and abuse, of animals pangs her just as it does Dalton Byerly, SPCA director. "I know that his main concern is animal welfare," Mrs. Dotson said of Byerly.

DISCARDING animals, such as kittens and pups, in the country is a callous form of cruelty.

"They either get eaten by something bigger, such as predators," Mrs. Dotson said, or "they get run over or shot. Or they starve to death."

"They just don't make it," said Byerly.

The concern which Byerly and Mrs. Dotson have is for those rejected tamed creatures: The ones domesticated by man.

Midlander reports he was assaulted

From Staff Reports

A Midland man reported he was assaulted early Sunday in the 3400 block of West Wall Street, according to police department reports.

Wayne Natusek, 811 Canyon, told police the assault occurred about 2:15 p.m. at 3421 W. Wall St. No injuries were reported. There were no suspects, according to police.

A color television set and cable television converter box were stolen Saturday during a burglary at the Stephen Engler residence, 801 Goliad, according to police department reports.

Police reports said the burglary occurred between 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. The total loss is estimated at $500.

In other law enforcement reports, a representative of Airline Grocery, West Highway 80, reported a video cassette recorder, valued at $300, was stolen during a burglary between May 19 and Sunday.

Old theater collapses

BRYAN (AP) — A 77-year-old theater that had become a downtown landmark buckled under the weight of a caved-in ceiling and crashed to the ground, officials said.

No one was injured when the Palace Theater, built in 1909, collapsed Saturday after the ceiling gave way, leaving only the lobby and an area behind the stage standing.

Maintenance man Ed Ford said he was alone in the building at about 11.30 a.m when he heard strange noises and saw small pieces of plaster falling. He said he ran out the front door seconds before the collapse.

The entire auditorium roof collapsed at once and knocked down most of one wall, dumping piles of brick rubble on the sidewalk.

SPCA

And the poignancy of that relationship was singled out in the Midland SPCA's newsletter, "The Animal Advocate," in which Antoine de Saint-Exupery, the French aviator-writer, was quoted from his novel, "The Little Prince":

"Men have forgotten this truth," said the fox (to the Little Prince). "But you must not forget it. You become responsible, forever, for what you have tamed."

"If you domesticate an animal," said Byerly, "you are responsible for it. It's not wild. You have changed its whole character. We are responsible for those animals."

AND ONCE A person has adopted an animal from a shelter, that person has "got to be willing to commit" himself to all of that animal's needs, to care for the pet when it's sick, to nurture it, and console it if it is emotionally injured.

"You may have to work some things through with the animal and spend some money," Mrs. Dotson said.

"They should be committed to that adoption," Byerly noted.

"There's got to be a commitment," Mrs. Dotson said.

As does Byerly, Mrs. Dotson advocates control of animal population through sterilization — spaying and neutering. Certainly, both appreciate the city of Midland's Animal Control functions to keep animals from running rampant in the city and protecting the public health.

"This town could get along without SPCA," Mrs. Dotson said, "but it couldn't get along without Animal Control, because the animals would run rampant. But the animals need it (SPCA) desperately for a better lifestyle."

Sounded off Byerly: "You could no more do without Animal Control than you could do without garbage collecting...for the sake of human health and sanitation."

Mrs. Dotson advocates the control of domesticated pets, such as dogs and cats, through sterilization and not through extermination.

"If ever I had a slogan," Mrs. Dotson said, "it would be: 'When are we going to stop killing and start controlling?' "

"ANIMALS ARE going to reproduce in cycles," she said. "That's the way they were put together. They are just doing what nature called them to do. It's the call of nature."

Mrs. Dotson contends that, perhaps through instinct, "Mothers of cats and dogs are more compassionate mothers, more caring mothers, than human mothers. They care for their young and push them out — like eagles do" when the animals, particularly in the wild, approach maturity. "They (the parents) are not aware they (the offspring) don't have a home."

She has particular affinity for animals.

"Ever since I can remember, I've liked animals better than I have people," Mrs. Dotson said. "Now that I've opened up a little, I'm getting fonder of people."

Byerly sees a close connection between Homo sapiens and others in the animal kingdom.

"We are just like animals," he said. "They are just like us. We are equal. We experience joy and pain. We are identical. The only difference is that they (pet dogs and cats) can't take care of themselves, and we can't just talk to them."

Mrs. Dotson referred to the Bible's book of Genesis in which God gave mankind "dominion...over all the Earth" and its creatures.

"God put you in charge of them," Mrs. Dotson said of mankind. "You need to take care of them."

"I'm not advocating that we never eat another cow or another chicken," she said. "God meant for us to eat them, but He did not mean for us to abuse them or exploit them through greed." And her role as an animal advocate will continue. "We're not ever through 'til the fat lady sings."

And animals can satisfy emotional needs in people. "If you feel lonesome," she said, "just get out amongst the dogs and cats and old folks. You can find love, and you are welcomed. They always reach out to you."

Volunteer firefighters train in Midland

By JIM BROWN

Volunteer firefighters from all over West Texas and Southeast New Mexico were in Midland last week participating in training sponsored by Midland College and the Midland Fire Department. Some 50 volunteers were in attendance for the two-day school. The curriculum included four three-hour courses including ventilation practices, aircraft fire protection and rescue, fire service ladder practice and fire hose practices. We congratulate all those who completed the course.

The city-wide Spring Cleanup was a huge success again this year. Over 1,632 tons of garbage were picked up from 850 locations within the city in an effort to beautify our community. This annual program is a joint effort of the City and Clean Midland, Inc., and a great example of cooperation between government and volunteer organizations.

• • •

Reconstruction of North A St., between Scharbauer Drive, and Dorman Avenue, is well under way. The same project will also include Neely Ave., between A Street, and Spruce Avenue, and Ventura Avenue, between A and I streets. This effort is designed to improve drainage of these areas and thus add durability to the streets. The work should be completed next fall.

Midland was recently host to the 59th annual Convention of the Southwest Division of the International Association of Fire Chiefs. Over 300 attended the event representing New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, as well as Texas. Congratulations to Chief Roberts and the entire Fire Department on hosting a very successful convention.

• • •

Retiring this month from the Fire Department was Roy Wallace. He joined the Midland Fire Department in 1965 and served the city for 21 years.

• • •

Johnny Vaughn, interim Fleet Services service manager, has been appointed to the Automotive Technology Advisory Committee of Midland College. He will serve as a program advisor to the college to assure that the automotive curriculum meets the needs of the community.

Man dies before he sells guru's Rolls

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — Former bail bondsman Bob Roethlisberger became an instant celebrity when he bought 85 Rolls-Royces from followers of the Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

The $6 million deal was flashy even by Texas standards and won national attention for the foreign car dealership that grew from a backyard enterprise.

But Roethlisberger's empire, built on his soft-spoken yet flamboyant personality, was crumbling — and he knew it. He was in a race with cancer — a race he lost on April 24, less than six weeks after a brain scan revealed the deadly tumors, friends said.

"Bob thought he had six months. He really believed he had six months," said friend Robert Lively.

Roethlisberger's last days were spent in the same whirl of wheeling and dealing that had occupied his time since Thanksgiving, when he bought the posh fleet of Rollses at the guru's commune in Oregon.

"He was like a horse. He never stopped," said Barbe Trevino, his office manager.

Roethlisberger was even selling cars from his room at the cancer hospital where he died little more than two weeks after his 40th birthday.

Half of the cars were unsold. He also left behind a wife, a child and no will.

"I think he decided, 'I'll either make or won't make it and the hell with it,' " said Randy Campbell, Roethlisberger's closest friend.

But friends knew little about the car dealer's background before he came to Dallas seven years ago. Even his mother, Juanita Roethlisberger of Lima, Ohio, said she "lost track of him for a while."

From friends and relatives, the Dallas Times Herald was able to piece together an outline of Roethlisberger's life.

He attended Ohio State briefly before joining the Marines and fighting in Vietnam. After moving to Dallas he opened the Lone Star Bonding Co., but ran afoul of the law himself.

In 1979, Roethlisberger was indicted on two counts of theft over $200, the Times Herald said. In February 1980, a charge of promoting prostitution was added.

He pleaded guilty to the three charges and received five years' probation.

From then on, Roethlisberger "straightened out his life," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Joe Revesz, a former assistant district attorney who had prosecuted the bail bondsman.

Four years ago, he started a new business, selling sports and luxury cars out of his back yard. The demand was so great that he opened an office and began making trips to Europe to stock up on Ferraris, Mercedes Benzes, BMWs and Rolls-Royces.

Then Roethlisberger heard about the Bhagwan's abrupt departure and the problem of the 85 cars he left behind. He went to Oregon and talked the guru's followers into selling him the entire lot — even hiring some as public relations consultants.

The Rollses were loaded on a dozen transport trucks and hauled to Dallas.

"Bob was very excited," said Charles Lindamood, whose transport company handled the shipment. "He had made a once-in-a-lifetime deal."

Less than five months later, Roethlisberger's life ended.

Someone dressed like the State of Texas walks down Main Street in Dallas Sunday afternoon while participants lined up for "Hands Across America."

Estimated 620,000 Texans join hands

DALLAS (AP) — Red, white and blue balloons soared into a sunny Lone Star sky Sunday as an estimated 620,000 Texans joined hands in the biggest link of a coast-to-coast charity chain.

The line was two or three deep in front of the Dallas office of Hands Across America, where people held their joined hands aloft, singing and swaying to the project's anthem "Hands Across America."

Texas, with 621 miles of the 4,100-mile chain, had the biggest link among the 16 states that joined to raise money for the nation's hungry and poor.

Rain had at first threatened the event that came less than 24 hours after the area was pounded by heavy storms. But the sun popped out shortly before 2 p.m. CDT, when the nationwide order was given to join hands.

In Wichita Falls, northwest of Dallas, the line had to wind through town instead of a straight stretch because so many people wanted to join in, event spokeswoman Carol Edgar said.

Department of Public Safety officials said that in the six counties west of Tarrant and east of Childress, an estimated 106,000 people showed up. Along the Texas-New Mexico border, an estimated 10,000 turned out to be near country singer Kenny Rogers, Ms. Edgar said.

Paper: Houston police lose 100 calls daily

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police dispatchers are not answering more than 100 calls a day and at times lose as many as 100 calls an hour — an extemely high average compared to other police departments, The Houston Post reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, The Post said the findings came from three weekly reports from late April and early May that tabulate calls received and calls lost. The reports show numerous time periods when calls for help went unanswered.

For example, dispatchers didn't answer 401 calls between 1 and 5 a.m., Saturday, May 10, records showed. On April 22, 80 calls went unanswered between 4 and 7 p.m.

During the second week of May, an average of 147 calls a day to the Houston Police Department emergency dispatch number went unanswered while the week before, an average of 94 calls per day were not answered.

"Any number of lost calls is unacceptable to me. Anytime someone picks up the phone in need of police, they should be able to get through."
— Don Hollingsworth of dispatch division

The figures represent an extremely high percentage when compared to police departments in Dallas, Miami and Atlanta, the Post reported.

Miami officials said they lost about two calls a month.

Dallas dispatchers said the problem was minimal, with lost calls numbering less than 100 per 30,000 calls, or .3 percent of their total calls. Houston's rate is 10 times higher, the Post reported.

Don Hollingsworth, the police department's civilian manager in charge of the dispatch division, at first said there was no problem regarding lost calls.

But when shown the weekly reports, Hollingsworth said, "Any number of lost calls is unacceptable to me. Anytime someone picks up the phone in need of police, they should be able to get through."

He said he didn't know whether the unanswered calls were caused by staffing or technical problems. But other officials said the problem stems from a lack of workers, the Post reported.

Department personnel records, city records and a dispatch lieutenant indicated that between 38 and 42 vacancies exist in the budgeted staff of 193 positions for 1985-86.

"We agree the (vacancy) problem is critical and we're working on it right now," said Joe Weikerth, the city's assistant personnel director.

Dispatch Lt. D.D. Frazier said his department is "far below" the level of a full staff.

"When you are trying to meet the demands of the call load it causes a lot of frustration and a lot of problems, which leads to burnout," he said.

"Essentially, each shift in dispatch is at the breaking point and some shifts have reached the breaking point, where workers are constantly being asked to work overtime to relieve other workers who just can't work any more overtime," said Lt. Paul Duggar, a dispatch supervisor since April.

Police dispatchers receive about 30,000 calls a week, the Post reported.

Handicapped inmate will have no place to go

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Antonio Rivera, an illegal immigrant who suffered severe brain damage in an unsuccessful prison suicide attempt, is posing an unusual problem for authorities as he becomes eligible for parole.

There is literally no place for him to go.

"We have never seen anything like this where there are no resources available, said John Byrd, executive director of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The 34-year-old Salvadoran requires constant and expensive nursing care for the brain damage caused by choking off oxygen during an attempted suicide.

In March of 1985, Rivera tore strips from a mattress cover and looped them around his neck and through a ventilation grate in his cell. Several minutes later, he was found by guards, who managed to revive him.

He's alive, but requires a wheelchair. Unable to feed, clothe or bathe himself, Rivera spends the day sitting next to the nurse's station in the corridor of a small prison hospital inside the Beto I unit in Palestine.

He cannot walk without aid and speaks only scattered words of Spanish.

Rivera, who received a 10-year prison sentence for brandishing a shotgun in a Bay City restaurant, is described in medical records as being in a "persistent vegetative state."

He becomes eligible for parole in July, and his sentence expires soon. Either way, Rivera would have to be turned out in a world that has no place for him.

Because he is not a U.S. citizen, Rivera is not eligible for Medicaid or Social Security benefits.

His own country also has no way of helping him, either in the United States or by bringing him home.

In accordance with the wishes of Dr. Herbert Cavenaugh, deceased, all the files and medical records of his patients are transferred to:

PUBLIC HEARING
You Are Encouraged To Attend A 1986-1987 Community Development Program Public Hearing by The City of Midland

The City encourages all interested organizations and individuals to participate in the planning of the Community Development (CD) program. Your suggestions, recommendations or comments are welcome and will be received at a public hearing to be held by the Planning and Zoning Commission in the Council Chambers, City Hall, beginning at 7:00 p.m., June 5, 1986. Citizen's views and proposals will provide a basis for the Planning and Zoning Commission to recommend and for the City Council to determine the best uses for the funds available. During the coming year the City expects to receive $659,000 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the CD program. In addition, there may be funds remaining from previous years that may be reallocated towards this year's program.

Examples of activities eligible to be undertaken with CD funds include the following: repairing substandard homes; sidewalk and street improvements; acquisition and development of parks; conducting general neighborhood clean-up programs; land use planning; making public buildings and facilities more accessible to the handicapped; and providing human services which are not duplicated by existing agencies. In addition, there are many other technical requirements pertaining to the use of these funds. Information about these regulations may be obtained from the City's Planning Division. If you have any questions concerning the Community Development Program, please contact Bob Miklo in the Planning division office at 683-4281 extension 408.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Financial solutions are easier to find now. New business and employment opportunities beckon. The best offers come in the fall and in early 1987. A romantic relationship becomes everything you have hoped. Marital ties grow stronger. Spend more time with offspring. Your honesty and keen intellect win respect. Curb a tendency to be sarcastic with those closest to your heart.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actor-art expert-gourmet Vincent Price, foreign policy expert Henry Kissinger, actor Lou Gossett, Bruce Weitz of "Hill Street Blues," author Herman Wouk, Vice President Hubert Humphrey, dancer Isadora Duncan, Wild Bill Hickcock.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Luck plays an important role in your career or finances now. People at a distance are overconfident. Put family life first and communication improves.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more discriminating when choosing business or romantic partners. An expert's advice is worth the fee. A shaky relationship is more apt to deteriorate than improve. A liaison with an older person works.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your strong views surprise others. You may have to pull back a bit. Influential people are impressed by your ability to get along with others. Contact with a former flame or friend proves pleasant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those who work in the arts receive great news today. Share the limelight with deserving loved ones. A willingness to forgive and forget helps you avoid a major confrontation at home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance should be exciting and varied. However, a career or financial venture requires greater effort. Your creative talents win new admiration. An unusual offer perplexes at first but makes sense later on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Constructive criticism starts you thinking along new lines. Do your homework diligently and a business success is a certainty. Your willingness to compromise makes you a winner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An improvement in your personal appearance makes someone influential see you in a new light. Job performance is still the most important factor in career advancement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Adopting a more realistic attitude will help you accomplish more. Take the initiative in business and you will be given new opportunities. Expand your social circle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your partners and associates may be overly optimistic where career or financial matters are concerned. They need your down-to-earth leadership. Well-meaning friends could offer the wrong investment advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go slow if thinking about making a permanent commitment. Your timing could be wrong. Be careful not to overreact to something a loved one says.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Marriage could lead to new financial rewards, as could a partnership with an older person. Insist on being consulted about authorizing expenditures. A platonic relationship begins to intensify.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Indiscretion is an unnecessary risk in business or romance. Stick to tried-and-true methods to get the greatest return on an investment. Tie up loose ends to guarantee your continued independence.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK109432 ♡KQ5 ◇6 ♣A2
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This is the time to throw science to the winds. As far as we're concerned, all we need to know is how many aces partner holds. So we would wheel out the old Blackwood four no trump and, if he shows two aces, gamble on the grand slam. Even if he doesn't have a king, we would bet on the spade suit taking care of partner's club losers.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡QJ65 ◇9872 ♣AQ84
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—In our opinion, it is simply a matter of whether to jump to three hearts or four. Since we have only one ace and no king, and to allow for the possibility that partner opened a bit light in third seat, we think that three hearts is sufficient for the moment.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK4 ♡J10632 ◇J6 ♣984
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ◇	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't let that fifth heart get you over-excited! You have a balanced hand that is rife with losers. All you can do for the moment is bid two hearts. If there is game in this hand, partner should have enough to make some move over your response.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A875 ♡J93 ◇AQJ987
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—This hand has slam potential, but as yet you can't even guarantee game. Therefore, we suggest you take matters quietly. Don't bypass the spade suit in favor of a jump to three diamonds. You will learn more from partner's reaction to a simple bid of one spade.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ107 ♡6 ◇AJ83 ♣K987
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Although we don't like to sell out too cheaply, when the opponents are playing in our best suit it is usually wisest to pass. We can't double because partner almost surely will bid hearts, so the only other action is a balancing bid of one no trump. We prefer to pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J65 ♡9852 ◇QJ9 ♣AK8
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	3 ♠	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have too much to take no action at all—it is next to impossible to hope that partner can act again. However, we don't like bidding four hearts with such an emaciated suit. The solution is to double—partner should realize that you are acting on general strength rather than with a trump stack, so he can take out if necessary. Four hearts is a close second.

Selleck gets to work out with Tigers

Selleck

DETROIT (AP) — If he ever made the Detroit Tigers' roster, his entry would read: No. 14, Tom Selleck, 41, 2B, 6-3, 190, B-L, T-R.

Selleck, who wears the Tigers' cap on his "Magnum, P.I." television series, put on the entire uniform and worked out with the team before Detroit's game with the Oakland A's on Sunday.

And guess what? He can hit. Taking his turn in the batting cage with several Tiger regulars, Selleck blasted two balls into the right field seats.

"This is better than dinner with the president," Selleck told Detroit batting coach Vada Pinson.

Selleck, who was born in the Motor City, came to Detroit from Washington, D.C., where he had participated in a tennis tournament hosted by Nancy Reagan in conjunction with her anti-drug campaign.

Selleck, who played baseball in high school and college, said he called Tigers' president, Jim Campbell, on Saturday and asked for permission to work out with the team. Campbell cleared it with Baseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth, and Selleck returned to the park after a 20-year absence.

"I'm 41 and I can still reach the seats," Selleck said. "But I'm weakening fast."

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Denmark's Crown Prince Frederik celebrates his 18th birthday today in ceremonies marking his new duties and status as the successor to the throne in Europe's oldest ruling monarchy.

Queen Margrethe II, Denmark's monarch since 1972, is to formally present her son to government officials and ride with him through Copenhagen in an open carriage escorted by mounted hussars.

The quiet, dark-haired prince makes his first official speech tonight at a banquet in Copenhagen's Christianborg Palace.

The popular queen also plans to name her son her deputy on the state council, which links the largely powerless royal family to the Danish government.

Still a student at a private school in suburban Copenhagen, Prince Frederik's coming of age is being marked by a special coin and postage stamp. He also becomes entitled to his own flag.

The Danish crown prince, whose full name is Frederik Andre Henrik Christian, will eventually rule as Frederik X.

Since last Christmas, he has received instruction in government procedures and functions.

In September, he is to join the elite Royal Lifeguards, a military unit with a 300-year history, for training as a reserve officer.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former child movie star Haley Mills and Pulitzer Prize winning author William Kennedy signed much-sought-after autographs at the American Booksellers Association convention here.

Ms. Mills, still petite as she was in her 1950s pictures, put her signature and a few kind words Saturday on virtually hundreds of photos of herself, advertising Magic Video Theater's new line of half-hour animated shows.

Kennedy and his teen-age son Brendan autographed posters hawking "Charley Malarkey and the Belly Button Machine," which they wrote together.

Leo Buscaglia, whose books are said to have elevated the hug to an art form, was selling "Loving Each Other," and in so doing, practiced what he preaches. Every admirer got at least a warm, two-handed embrace.

But bad-boy former New Orleans Saints quarterback Ken Stabler passed out his autographed copies of "Snake" like he was handing off to a half-back. His line moved faster than any other.

Kennedy

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was among five rain-soaked crew members aboard a sailboat skippered by his son, Ted Kennedy Jr., on the first day of the JFK Regatta in Boston Harbor.

The Kennedy boat, the 33-foot "Orange Blossom," placed seventh out of nine boats, after 4½ hours of slow racing on the windless, but wet, 13.5-mile course Saturday, said race spokeswoman Louisa Dineen. Bob Sheppard of Marblehead aboard "Mr. Smooch" came in first.

"They all came back drenched — it was pouring," said Ms. Dineen. "The Kennedy boat looked like they had very few raincoats aboard."

However she said the Kennedys were of good cheer and said they hoped to do better Sunday, the second day of the annual event sponsored by Friends of the Kennedy Library, named for President John F. Kennedy.

Also crewing were Ted Jr.'s girlfriend, Heidi Dunn; his cousin Mark McMurray, and friends Jennifer Dennis and Aaron Gershonberg.

Ted Jr. has helped develop programs for the handicapped since he lost a leg to cancer at age 12. The 24-year-old borrowed the "Orange Blossom" from the New England Handicapped Sports and Recreation Association, for which he has worked, Ms. Dineen said.

The race is to be held annually, Ms. Dineen said.

Bowles

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — Former Ambassador Chester Bowles, a liberal Democrat who was a top presidential adviser and served as governor and congressman during a public career spanning more than 25 years, died Sunday. He was 85.

Bowles died at his home at 12:30 a.m. of complications arising from his long bout with Parkinson's disease, said Lise Stone Heintz, a spokeswoman for the Bowles family. He also suffered a stroke last week, she said.

Bowles, who gave up a successful career in advertising for politics, began his public career under the tutelage of Eleanor Roosevelt, who assisted him in winning a spot as a delegate to the 1940 national Democratic convention.

From that beginning, he went on to become a key federal administrator in wartime and a presidential adviser in peacetime.

After the 1960 election, Bowles hoped to be named secretary of state, but was passed over in favor of Dean Rusk. Bowles was instead named under secretary, but his outspoken criticism of the Bay of Pigs invasion and U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia soon resulted in his being named Latin American adviser and later ambassador to India, a post he held for six years until his retirement.

Bowles was as well known as an author and lecturer as a statesman, using his persuasive skills to argue for progressive causes.

U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, whose father was a Bowles' contemporary, said: "Governor Bowles was not only a great friend of mine and my family, but he was also a model of what a statesman can and should be."

Bowles' career crossed the paths of such political luminaries as Roosevelt, Adlai Stevenson and John Kennedy.

Statewide, locally durable sales hit by economy, slower migration

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Traditionally, Texans have tagged a larger portion of their total retail purchases for durable goods than other Americans. However, slowing migration into the state and weakened economic conditions are changing that tradition, according to Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock.

In 1985, consumers — both in Texas and nationwide — used 37.4 percent of their total retail expenditures to acquire durable goods, those expected to last three or more years. The notable difference is the direction from which the state and the nation arrived at that number.

The preceding year, Texans bought automobiles, appliances, furniture and other durable items with nearly 39 percent of their retail purchasing dollars, and the state's durable goods share has exceeded 35 percent every year since 1971. Nationally, the percentage which ranged from 29 to 34 percent during the 1970s, has risen significantly the past two years, from 31 percent in 1983 to last year's total, topping 37 percent.

Retail sales of durable goods in Midland are holding up well through the first four months of the year, according to Don Byerly, store manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co. at Midland Park Mall. "Durable goods have long been the strongest portion of our market and they are holding steady as a percentage of total sales."

"Although sales growth has slowed considerably, overall sales totals continue to be strong," he notes.

Historically, Texans' greater durable goods spending could be attributed to the expanding job market resulting from escalating oil prices. New residents, establishing new households, require a disproportionate amount of durable items — particularly appliances, furniture and other high-ticket household goods.

As the job market constricts, particularly in oil-dependent areas of the state, a greater share of spending is for disposable retail purchases — the lower-cost, short-lived items needed to maintain a household. Bullock expects sales of durable goods in the state this year to register a decline as oil price conscious Texans adopt more cautious spending habits.

As a result, for the first time in at least 16 years, Texans in 1986 will be likely to spend less of their money on big-ticket items than other Americans.

Last year, Texans spent $37.1 billion for durable goods, out of total retail expenditures of nearly $100 billion. Nationally, $476.9 billion in high-ticket items were sold out of more than $1.27 trillion in retail purchases.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures for total orders of durable goods released this week showed a slight decline of 0.8 percent in April, the third straight monthly decline.

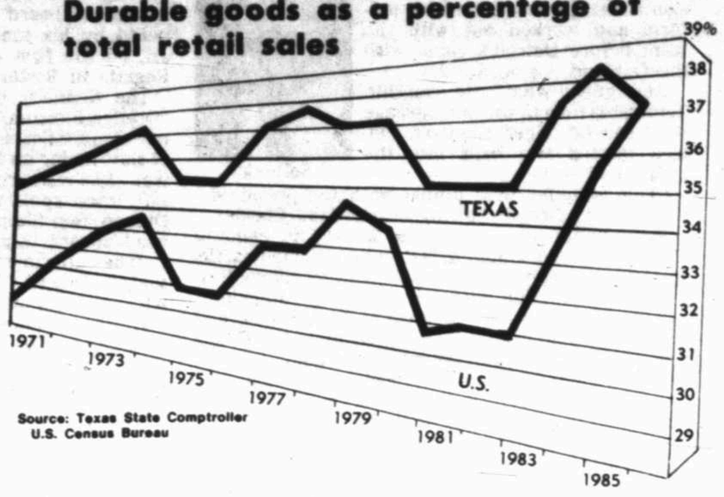
However, consumer-oriented durable goods orders showed strength, with April factory orders for autos, lumber and wood products, as well as for furniture and fixtures all posting gains, Commerce Department reports say.

Orders for durable goods totaled $104.3 billion in April, compared to $105.2 billion in March.

An unusually hefty level of defense items ordered during March ($10.4 billion) was the primary cause of the overall decline in orders. If defense items were excluded from the two months' figures, durable good orders would have increased 2.1 percent in April over the preceding month.

Several major industries showed declines last month: machinery orders were down 4.6 percent; orders for transportation equipment declined 2.7 percent; and, orders for primary metals fell 2.9 percent.

Economists note that demand for American manufactured goods should pick up later this year as the weakened dollar makes domestic manufacturers more competitive with foreign products. Durable goods order totals have been extremely volatile this year.



Americans as a whole have finally caught up with Texans in their durable goods spending patterns. For the past 15 years, Texans have dedicated at least 35 percent of the total retail expenditures for long-lasting high-ticket items. This year, national and state figures are each 37.4 percent.

No help for steel

NEW YORK (AP) — The steel industry may not benefit much from the nation's improved economy, steel executives have been told.

"There's still hope out there for the manufacturing sector, and the steel industry in particular," said Irwin L. Kellner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York, the nation's fourth largest bank.

"The manufacturing sector has been the source of most of the productivity gains in the United States in the last few years," he said. "This is indicative of a healthy sector, not a dying sector."

Kellner said the economy was being stimulated by a 35 percent decline in the dollar's value compared to other currencies, making U.S. goods cheaper and imports more expensive. It is also being helped by slowed inflation, cheaper credit, lower oil prices and the creation of nearly 11 million jobs since the 1982 recession.

But, Kellner said, that has not been a boon for the steel industry.

U.S. steelmakers have not been participating in the recovery because in the 14 months since the dollar began its fall, foreign manufacturers have not raised the price of their steel as much as the currency exchange rates would suggest they should, he said. That prevents domestic steelmakers from raising prices enough to capitalize on their recent gains in productivity and profit margins.

A recovery by the steel industry also is being held back by slack demand in several key areas, said Kellner and Edward E. Yardeni, economics director for the securities firm Prudential-Bache Securities, who appeared in a panel discussion at the 50th annual convention of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

For instance, the average car is 700 pounds lighter compared to 1976 models, and 80 percent of that weight loss is in steel, Kellner said.

Houses, which contain steel doors, window frames, nails and some structural parts, are also getting smaller, fewer office buildings are being build, and more multifamily homes, which contain less steel per unit, are going up.

And the petroleum industry needs less steel pipe because low oil prices do not justify drilling. Farmers are buying less machinery because commodity prices are low, and many business executives are delaying purchases of machinery because they are uncertain how Congress will change the tax benefits associated with such capital investment.

It all adds up to little demand compared to steelmaking capacity.

Another economist, however, predicted that steelmakers could begin to enjoy a rise in demand later this year.

David A. Levine, chief economist for the securities firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., predicted that the gross national product will grow 6 percent to 7 percent. Sueh growth, double the rate predicted by most economists, would include increased spending for new factories, machinery and other products containing steel.

American adopts new operations

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines Inc. has adopted a new operations and communications system to lessen delays and flight cancellations in stormy weather, the airline announced.

The changes were spurred by chaos created by storms April 19 near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. On that day, 32 flights were diverted to other airports, 56 inbound and 74 outbound flights were canceled and passengers aboard 30 parked planes waited more than four hours for available gates.

"It was a classic spring thunderstorm," said Robert W. Baker, the Dallas-based airline's senior vice president-operations.

Weather didn't cause the only snags. A computer used to track the location of 300 airplanes and crews failed due to telephone problems in Annapolis, Md.

Then the airline ran short of flight crews to fly the planes. Its hub-and-spoke system of connecting flights was disrupted.

To make future problems less severe, American retrained flight and ground crews in procedures to use in case the computer tracking system fails. Employees had to relearn ways of recording by hand departure and arrival times and hours worked by crews.

In addition, the airline tightened its rules governing what to do when flights are delayed. All incoming flights must be delayed by the same amount of time so passengers can make connections.

Amoco picks contractor for plant

Amoco Production Co. has chosen M.W. Kellogg Co. as the prime contractor for building the Wasson ODC Unit Carbon Dioxide Removal Plant in the Wasson Field, Yoakum County, near Denver City.

Engineering on the 80 MMcfd plant will begin immediately. Site work and construction will begin in July, with completion expected about a year later.

This is the second carbon dioxide removal plant Amoco has built in Texas for recycling carbon dioxide used in its field-scale carbon dioxide enhanced recovery projects. The first was the Mallet Carbon Dioxide Removal Plant in the Slaughter Field, Hockley County, near Sundown. That plant, with a 100 MMcfd capacity, began operations in July, 1985. Recycling the carbon dioxide improves the economics of enhanced recovery projects by reducing the amount of carbon dioxide that must be purchased.

The purpose of the Wasson Plant is to remove the carbon dioxide from the sour casinghead gas produced with the oil from the Amoco-operated Wasson ODC unit. Injection of carbon dioxide began on November 17, 1984, and 35.7 billion cubic feet of carbon dioxide was injected through 135 wells in the first year.

When fully operational, an estimated 73 MMcfd of carbon dioxide will be recovered and reinjected at approximately 1,800 pounds per square inch pressure. Other products from the plant include about 14 long tons of sulfur each day, more than 3,000 barrels per day of natural gas liquids, and nearly 5 MMcfd of residue gas.

Manpower levels for the construction project are expected to peak at about 360. While the number of area residents employed for the project cannot be predicted, Amoco encourages its contractors to use qualified local personnel where possible.

The major steps in the process of the plant are compression, sulfur removal, hydrocarbon recovery, carbon dioxide removal and finally, carbon dioxide dehydration and repressuring for injection. This last step uses both compressors and high pressure pumps.

The inlet compression system will consist of four compressors totaling 21,000 horsepower and the reinjection system will consist of compressors and pumps totaling 3,400 horsepower. Supplying supplemental power as well as process heat to the plant and its related facilities on the 100-acre site will be a 20.6 megawatt cogeneration system.

Refining saves day for oil companies

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — At a time when depressed industry conditions have forced some energy-related companies to cut or even reduce dividend payments, the refining and marketing part of the oil business has emerged as a shining star. In past years, these so-called "downstream" operations typically were far less important than the "upstream," or production side, as profit centers.

"Refining and marketing is now the driving force behind many oil companies," Eugene L. Nowak, senior energy analyst for Dean Witter Reynolds, said on Friday. "It is the one area of the business showing continued strength and improvement."

This turnabout essentially reflects the industry's pricing mechanism. The price of crude oil, which is running between $13 and $14 a barrel in the second quarter, is half of what it was a year ago.

But downstream operations have benefited, chiefly because the cost of the raw material — crude oil — has been falling faster than the rate of decline in the finished products.

As a result, Ashland Oil Inc., the leading independent petroleum refiner and supplier to independent marketers, has emerged as a favorite of some Wall Street analysts.

Bernard J. Picchi, of Salomon Brothers, who has been recommending purchase of Ashland shares since mid-April, raised his earnings estimate last Thursday. He increased his profit projection for this year to $5.60 a share, from $5.20, and for 1987 to $6.80 a share, from $6.30. The company, based in Ashland, Ky., earned $4.12 a share last year.

In April, when Ashland's stock was trading at 50⅜, Picchi upgraded his investment opinion on the company. He continues to believe the shares will outperform Standard & Poor's 500-stock index over the next six to 12 months. During this period, the analyst added, "the stock could trade at between 10 and 11 times earnings."

Last week, Ashland's shares gave back some of their recent gains, finishing at 56½, down 3 points. But earlier in May, the stock sold at a record price of 59¾, compared to a low of 35½ in January.

Also last week, in an unusual move for an oil company in the present industry environment, Asland raised its quarterly dividend to 45 cents a share, from 40 cents.

"Ashland has a low-cost and extremely flexible crude oil supply system," Picchi said in his appraisal. "Its refineries are highly efficient and well integrated with the company's retail marketing system. Moreover, the company owns several non-refining businesses, including chemicals distribution, road construction, motor oils, and convenience stores. These businesses require little capital and experience high growth."

Nowak, of Dean Witter, in a research bulletin entitled "Happy Motoring," concluded in early May that "the ingredients are present for excellent performance by the refining and marketing industry in the United States." So far this year, he added, gasoline demand has increased by 3.6 percent, to 6.85 million barrels daily. And retail gasoline prices have started to show "definite" increases lately, climbing as much as 8 to 10 cents a gallon in some areas.

Among independent refiners, "only Ashland still merits aggressive purchase," William D. Hyler of Oppenheimer & Co. said on Friday. When the stock was selling recently at 53, the analyst reiterated his long-standing "buy" recommendation.

His second choice in the refining group had been Total Petroleum (North America) Ltd., described by the analyst as "an efficient refiner and marketer in the middle states." But because of a price runup in the stock — up some 60 percent from its April low — Hyler now rates it as a "hold."

Some analysts are favorably disposed toward the Southland Corp., the largest operator of convenience food stores and a major independent gasoline retailer. But Hyler favors swapping Southland's stock into Ashland. He estimates Ashland earnings at $6 a share this year and at $6.80 in 1987.

Oklahoma bill to help drilling

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma Senate has passed a bill to encourage the search for new reserves of oil and gas and give manufacturers a tax credit for using more natural gas.

The bill, passed by the Senate on Wednesday, now goes to the House for action.

The measure would be in effect from July 1, 1986, until the end of 1988.

Explorers who find new reserves would be entitled to a tax credit equal to what they pay in gross production tax on the new reserves, said Sen. Ray Giles, D-Pocasset.

Giles said the bill would provide an incentive to drill, even if the wells do not produce much oil or natural gas.

Under the bill, any industrial consumer of natural gas would get a tax credit for any increase in natural gas over the amount it used in 1985.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Engineers say schedule too tight for redesigning booster rockets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Engineers at the plant that developed the space shuttle's booster rockets say pressure from NASA to quickly complete a redesign of the boosters may override safety concerns.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has said it wants a shuttle launch with a redesigned booster by July 1987. But some engineers at Morton-Thiokol in Brigham City, Utah, say that schedule is too tight, according to the Los Angeles Times.

The pressure focuses on the O-rings that join the segments of the solid-fuel shuttle booster rockets. The rings were believed to have failed to expand in cold temperatures during the shuttle Challenger's Jan. 28 launch. Investigators think this permitted superheated gases to escape and burn into Challenger's main fuel tank, causing the explosion that killed seven astronauts.

"The schedule seems to be driving us into early commitments to make decisions. They are trying to turn around quickly so they'll be able to show everyone that they could turn around quickly," said one engineer who insisted on anonymity before agreeing to be interviewed by the Times.

Until three days ago, the engineers were told they had until May 28 to submit a "final redesign selection recommendation" to NASA. On Friday, they were told the deadline had been postponed.

"We're going too fast," the engineer was quoted as saying in the interview, published Sunday. "We don't even have time to evaluate test data before we're being asked to recommend something."

The company has forbidden employees to speak to reporters since it was revealed that Morton-Thiokol engineers had objected to launching the Challenger in cold weather. The engineers were overruled by Morton-Thiokol vice presidents under pressure from NASA.

Officials could not be reached for comment at any of Morton-Thiokol's business numbers in Chicago, and an answering service said no company spokesmen were on call over the weekend. The home telephone number for spokesman Thomas Russell could not be located.

NASA witnesses told the presidential panel investigating the Challenger explosion about their redesign plans in private testimony May 2. Pressed by the commission, NASA a few days later agreed to create an independent panel to oversee the redesign.

"Management is worried about deadlines. It's real disappointing because we're not getting the time we'd hoped for," one engineer told the newspaper.

But some Thiokol sources said the concerns were exaggerated.

"We're going to have a safe design," one was quoted as saying. "We have a contractual obligation to solve this problem; (NASA's) Marshall Space Flight Center has an obligation to see that we do it right; then this outside panel's going to have to bless it — everyone in the whole world is going to have to bless this...solution.

"But at some point we're going to have to do it — quit considering options and just get on with it. That's what the deadline is for," the source said.

Report: Jails operate at 102 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Large local jail systems are packed with inmates and yet are being forced to take additional convicts from other overcrowded corrections facilities, a Justice Department report issued Sunday concludes.

Large city, county and township jails were operating at 102 percent of their rated capacities in mid-1984, said the report issued by the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

A total of 621 large local jails housing nearly 75 percent of the nation's jail population held a total of 173,100 inmates on June 30, 1984, while they were designed to hold a maximum of 169,900. Some 134 of the jails were under court order at the time to reduce their population. Large jail systems were defined as those with more than 100 inmates.

The study found that 24 percent, or about 150, of the nation's large local jails were forced to house extra inmates transferred from other crowded correctional facilities in 1984, the latest year for which figures are available. In 1983, 130 such facilities were put in a position of handling spillover from other jails and state and federal prisons.

About three-fourths of the 150 jails that held inmates because of crowding somewhere else in 1984 were holding them for state authorities.

The number of inmates held because of crowding elsewhere rose 41 percent to 6,200 during 1984 compared to the previous year, while representing 4 percent of all inmates in jurisdictions with jail populations of over 100, said the study.

"Prison overcrowding has reached crisis proportions in many areas because of short-sighted public policies which require tougher sentencing and longer prison terms, while neglecting to adequately staff our correctional facilities," Gerald W. McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said in response to the report.

"Policymakers are insisting on tougher criminal justice, but in many cases are not willing to pay the price for new jails and additional personnel required to run the facilities," McEntee added.

The AFSCME union represents 50,000 corrections employees nationwide, most of them guards.

"The study continues to indicate that there is excessive crowding in all correctional facilities," said Charlotte Nesbitt, policy project director of the American Correctional Association, a group of 20,000 corrections professionals. "We hear quite a bit about overcrowding in prisons, but crowding in jails is as serious."

She said the resulting "excessive workloads...threaten public safety."

Nesbitt said that although some people are "uncomfortable talking about alternative sentencing," she suggested that it is one answer to the problem of overcrowding. Alternative sentencing includes detention in residential facilities and the operation of work release programs.

The study was compiled by surveying one of every three jails across the country. It also found that:

- In 24 percent of the large jails of more than 100 population, an inmate died during 1984, with 126 suicides and six homicides as well as 136 natural deaths. Suicides were down by four from the previous year and homicides were up one.
- Males constituted 93 percent and females 7 percent of inmates in all local jails.
- An estimated 1,482 juveniles, were being held in adult jails, down from 1,736 a year earlier.
- At midyear 1984, local jails of all sizes in the United States held an estimated 234,500 people, 5 percent more than a year earlier.

Statewide, locally durable sales hit by economy, slower migration

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Traditionally, Texans have tagged a larger portion of their total retail purchases for durable goods than other Americans. However, slowing migration into the state and weakened economic conditions are changing that tradition, according to Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock.

In 1985, consumers — both in Texas and nationwide — used 37.4 percent of their total retail expenditures to acquire durable goods, those expected to last three or more years. The notable difference is the direction from which the state and the nation arrived at that number.

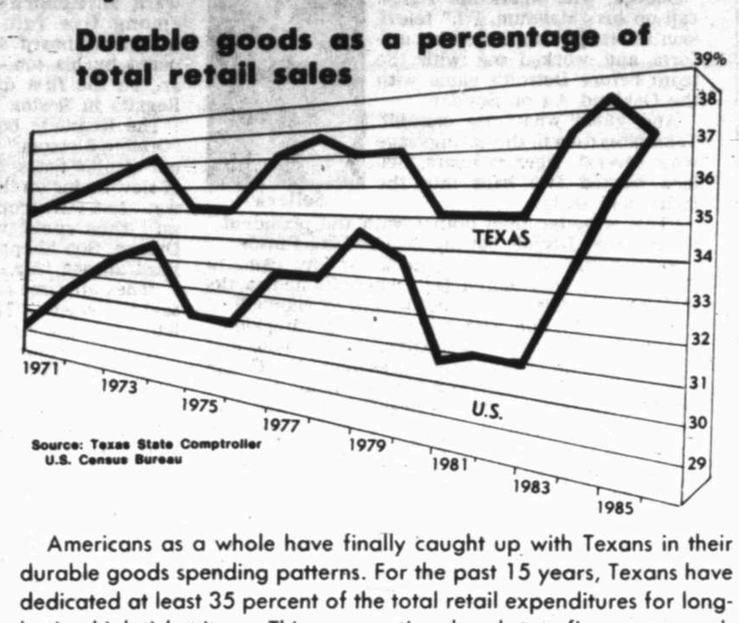
The preceding year, Texans bought automobiles, appliances, furniture and other durable items with nearly 39 percent of their retail purchasing dollars, and the state's durable goods share has exceeded 35 percent every year since 1971. Nationally, the percentage which ranged from 29 to 34 percent during the 1970s, has risen significantly the past two years, from 31 percent in 1983 to last year's total, topping 37 percent.

Retail sales of durable goods in Midland are holding up well through the first four months of the year, according to Don Byerly, store manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co. at Midland Park Mall. "Durable goods have long been the strongest portion of our market and they are holding steady as a percentage of total sales."

"Although sales growth has slowed considerably, overall sales totals continue to be strong," he notes.

Historically, Texans' greater durable goods spending could be attributed to the expanding job market resulting from escalating oil prices. New residents, establishing new households, require a disproportionate amount of durable items — particularly appliances, furniture and other high-ticket household goods.

As the job market constricts, particularly in oil-dependent areas of the state, a greater share of spending is for disposable retail purchases — the lower-cost, short-lived items needed to maintain a household. Bullock expects sales of durable goods in the state this year to register a decline as oil price conscious Texans adopt more cautious spending habits.



Americans as a whole have finally caught up with Texans in their durable goods spending patterns. For the past 15 years, Texans have dedicated at least 35 percent of the total retail expenditures for long-lasting high-ticket items. This year, national and state figures are each 37.4 percent.

As a result, for the first time in at least 16 years, Texans in 1986 will be likely to spend less of their money on big-ticket items than other Americans.

Last year, Texans spent $37.1 billion for durable goods, out of total retail expenditures of nearly $100 billion. Nationally, $476.9 billion in high-ticket items were sold out of more than $1.27 trillion in retail purchases.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures for total orders of durable goods released this week showed a slight decline of 0.8 percent in April, the third straight monthly decline.

However, consumer-oriented durable goods orders showed strength, with April factory orders for autos, lumber and wood products, as well as for furniture and fixtures all posting gains, Commerce Department reports say.

Orders for durable goods totaled $104.3 billion in April, compared to $105.2 billion in March.

An unusually hefty level of defense items ordered during March ($10.4 billion) was the primary cause of the overall decline in orders. If defense items were excluded from the two months' figures, durable good orders would have increased 2.1 percent in April over the preceding month.

Several major industries showed declines last month: machinery orders were down 4.6 percent; orders for transportation equipment declined 2.7 percent; and, orders for primary metals fell 2.9 percent.

Economists note that demand for American manufactured goods should pick up later this year as the weakened dollar makes domestic manufacturers more competitive with foreign products. Durable goods order totals have been extremely volatile this year.

No help for steel

NEW YORK (AP) — The steel industry may not benefit much from the nation's improved economy, steel executives have been told.

"There's still hope out there for the manufacturing sector, and the steel industry in particular," said Irwin L. Kellner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York, the nation's fourth largest bank.

"The manufacturing sector has been the source of most of the productivity gains in the United States in the last few years," he said. "This is indicative of a healthy sector, not a dying sector."

Kellner said the economy was being stimulated by a 35 percent decline in the dollar's value compared to other currencies, making U.S. goods cheaper and imports more expensive. It is also being helped by slowed inflation, cheaper credit, lower oil prices and the creation of nearly 11 million jobs since the 1982 recession.

But, Kellner said, that has not been a boon for the steel industry.

U.S. steelmakers have not been participating in the recovery because in the 14 months since the dollar began its fall, foreign manufacturers have not raised the price of their steel as much as the currency exchange rates would suggest they should, he said. That prevents domestic steelmakers from raising prices enough to capitalize on their recent gains in productivity and profit margins.

A recovery by the steel industry also is being held back by slack demand in several key areas, said Kellner and Edward E. Yardeni, economics director for the securities firm Prudential-Bache Securities, who appeared in a panel discussion at the 50th annual convention of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

For instance, the average car is 700 pounds lighter compared to 1976 models, and 80 percent of that weight loss is in steel, Kellner said.

Houses, which contain steel doors, window frames, nails and some structural parts, are also getting smaller, fewer office buidings are being build, and more multifamily homes, which contain less steel per unit, are going up.

And the petroleum industry needs less steel pipe because low oil prices do not justify drilling. Farmers are buying less machinery because commodity prices are low, and many business executives are delaying purchases of machinery because they are uncertain how Congress will change the tax benefits associated with such capital investment.

It all adds up to little demand compared to steelmaking capacity.

Another economist, however, predicted that steelmakers could begin to enjoy a rise in demand later this year.

David A. Levine, chief economist for the securities firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., predicted that the gross national product will grow 6 percent to 7 percent. Such growth, double the rate predicted by most economists, would include increased spending for new factories, machinery and other products containing steel.

American adopts new operations

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines Inc. has adopted a new operations and communications system to lessen delays and flight cancellations in stormy weather, the airline announced.

The changes were spurred by chaos created by storms April 19 near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. On that day, 32 flights were diverted to other airports, 56 inbound and 74 outbound flights were canceled and passengers aboard 30 parked planes waited more than four hours for available gates.

"It was a classic spring thunderstorm," said Robert W. Baker, the Dallas-based airline's senior vice president-operations.

Weather didn't cause the only snags. A computer used to track the location of 300 airplanes and crews failed due to telephone problems in Annapolis, Md.

Then the airline ran short of flight crews to fly the planes. Its hub-and-spoke system of connecting flights was disrupted.

To make future problems less severe, American retrained flight and ground crews in procedures to use in case the computer tracking system fails. Employees had to relearn ways of recording by hand departure and arrival times and hours worked by crews.

In addition, the airline tightened its rules governing what to do when flights are delayed. All incoming flights must be delayed by the same amount of time so passengers can make connections.

Amoco picks contractor for plant

Amoco Production Co. has chosen M.W. Kellogg Co. as the prime contractor for building the Wasson ODC Unit Carbon Dioxide Removal Plant in the Wasson Field, Yoakum County, near Denver City.

Engineering on the 80 MMcfd plant will begin immediately. Site work and construction will begin in July, with completion expected about a year later.

This is the second carbon dioxide removal plant Amoco has built in Texas for recycling carbon dioxide used in its field-scale carbon dioxide enhanced recovery projects. The first was the Mallet Carbon Dioxide Removal Plant in the Slaughter Field, Hockley County, near Sundown. That plant, with a 100 MMcfd capacity, began operations in July, 1985. Recycling the carbon dioxide improves the economics of enhanced recovery projects by reducing the amount of carbon dioxide that must be purchased.

The purpose of the Wasson Plant is to remove the carbon dioxide from the sour casinghead gas produced with the oil from the Amoco-operated Wasson ODC unit. Injection of carbon dioxide began on November 17, 1984, and 35.7 billion cubic feet of carbon dioxide was injected through 135 wells in the first year.

When fully operational, an estimated 73 MMcfd of carbon dioxide will be recovered and reinjected at approximately 1,800 pounds per square inch pressure. Other products from the plant include about 14 long tons of sulfur each day, more than 3,000 barrels per day of natural gas liquids, and nearly 5 MMcfd of residue gas.

Manpower levels for the construction project are expected to peak at about 360. While the number of area residents employed for the project cannot be predicted, Amoco encourages its contractors to use qualified local personnel where possible.

The major steps in the process of the plant are compression, sulfur removal, hydrocarbon recovery, carbon dioxide removal and finally, carbon dioxide dehydration and repressuring for injection. This last step uses both compressors and high pressure pumps.

The inlet compression system will consist of four compressors totaling 21,000 horsepower and the reinjection system will consist of compressors and pumps totaling 3,400 horsepower. Supplying supplemental power as well as process heat to the plant and its related facilities on the 100-acre site will be a 20.6 megawatt cogeneration system.

Refining saves day for oil companies

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — At a time when depressed industry conditions have forced some energy-related companies to cut or even reduce dividend payments, the refining and marketing part of the oil business has emerged as a shining star. In past years, these so-called "downstream" operations typically were far less important than the "upstream," or production side, as profit centers.

"Refining and marketing is now the driving force behind many oil companies," Eugene L. Nowak, senior energy analyst for Dean Witter Reynolds, said on Friday. "It is the one area of the business showing continued strength and improvement."

This turnabout essentially reflects the industry's pricing mechanism. The price of crude oil, which is running between $13 and $14 a barrel in the second quarter, is half of what it was a year ago.

But downstream operations have benefited, chiefly because the cost of the raw material — crude oil — has been falling faster than the rate of decline in the finished products.

As a result, Ashland Oil Inc., the leading independent petroleum refiner and supplier to independent marketers, has emerged as a favorite of some Wall Street analysts.

Bernard J. Picchi, of Salomon Brothers, who has been recommending purchase of Ashland shares since mid-April, raised his earnings estimate last Thursday. He increased his profit projection for this year to $5.60 a share, from $5.20, and for 1987 to $6.80 a share, from $6.30. The company, based in Ashland, Ky., earned $4.12 a share last year.

In April, when Ashland's stock was trading at 50⅜, Picchi upgraded his investment opinion on the company. He continues to believe the shares will outperform Standard & Poor's 500-stock index over the next six to 12 months. During this period, the analyst added, "the stock could trade at between 10 and 11 times earnings."

Last week, Ashland's shares gave back some of their recent gains, finishing at 56½, down 3 points. But earlier in May, the stock sold at a record price of 59¾, compared to a low of 35½ in January.

Also last week, in an unusual move for an oil company in the present industry environment, Asland raised its quarterly dividend to 45 cents a share, from 40 cents.

"Ashland has a low-cost and extremely flexible crude oil supply system," Picchi said in his appraisal. "Its refineries are highly efficient and well integrated with the company's retail marketing system. Moreover, the company owns several non-refining businesses, including chemicals distribution, road construction, motor oils, and convenience stores. These businesses require little capital and experience high growth."

Nowak, of Dean Witter, in a research bulletin entitled "Happy Motoring," concluded in early May that "the ingredients are present for excellent performance by the refining and marketing industry in the United States." So far this year, he added, gasoline demand has increased by 3.6 percent, to 6.85 million barrels daily. And retail gasoline prices have started to show "definite" increases lately, climbing as much as 8 to 10 cents a gallon in some areas.

Among independent refiners, "only Ashland still merits aggressive purchase," William D. Hyler of Oppenheimer & Co. said on Friday. When the stock was selling recently at 53, the analyst reiterated his long-standing "buy" recommendation.

His second choice in the refining group had been Total Petroleum (North America) Ltd., described by the analyst as "an efficient refiner and marketer in the middle states." But because of a price runup in the stock — up some 60 percent from its April low — Hyler now rates it as a "hold."

Some analysts are favorably disposed toward the Southland Corp., the largest operator of convenience food stores and a major independent gasoline retailer. But Hyler favors swapping Southland's stock into Ashland. He estimates Ashland earnings at $6 a share this year and at $6.80 in 1987.

Oklahoma bill to help drilling

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma Senate has passed a bill to encourage the search for new reserves of oil and gas and give manufacturers a tax credit for using more natural gas.

The bill, passed by the Senate on Wednesday, now goes to the House for action.

The measure would be in effect from July 1, 1986, until the end of 1988.

Explorers who find new reserves would be entitled to a tax credit equal to what they pay in gross production tax on the new reserves, said Sen. Ray Giles, D-Pocasset.

Giles said the bill would provide an incentive to drill, even if the wells do not produce much oil or natural gas.

Under the bill, any industrial consumer of natural gas would get a tax credit for any increase in natural gas over the amount it used in 1985.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Engineers say schedule too tight for redesigning booster rockets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Engineers at the plant that developed the space shuttle's booster rockets say pressure from NASA to quickly complete a redesign of the boosters may override safety concerns.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has said it wants a shuttle launch with a redesigned booster by July 1987. But some engineers at Morton-Thiokol in Brigham City, Utah, say that schedule is too tight, according to the Los Angeles Times.

The pressure focuses on the O-rings that join the segments of the solid-fuel shuttle booster rockets. The rings were believed to have failed to expand in cold temperatures during the shuttle Challenger's Jan. 28 launch. Investigators think this permitted superheated gases to escape and burn into Challenger's main fuel tank, causing the explosion that killed seven astronauts.

"The schedule seems to be driving us into early commitments to make decisions. They are trying to turn around quickly so they'll be able to show everyone that they could turn around quickly," said one engineer who insisted on anonymity before agreeing to be interviewed by the Times.

Until three days ago, the engineers were told they had until May 28 to submit a "final redesign selection recommendation" to NASA. On Friday, they were told the deadline had been postponed.

"We're going too fast," the engineer was quoted as saying in the interview, published Sunday. "We don't even have time to evaluate test data before we're being asked to recommend something."

The company has forbidden employees to speak to reporters since it was revealed that Morton-Thiokol engineers had objected to launching the Challenger in cold weather. The engineers were overruled by Morton-Thiokol vice presidents under pressure from NASA.

Officials could not be reached for comment at any of Morton-Thiokol's business numbers in Chicago, and an answering service said no company spokesmen were on call over the weekend. The home telephone number for spokesman Thomas Russell could not be located.

NASA witnesses told the presidential panel investigating the Challenger explosion about their redesign plans in private testimony May 2. Pressed by the commission, NASA a few days later agreed to create an independent panel to oversee the redesign.

"Management is worried about deadlines. It's real disappointing because we're not getting the time we'd hoped for," one engineer told the newspaper.

But some Thiokol sources said the concerns were exaggerated.

"We're going to have a safe design," one was quoted as saying. "We have a contractual obligation to solve this problem; (NASA's) Marshall Space Flight Center has an obligation to see that we do it right; then this outside panel's going to have to bless it — everyone in the whole world is going to have to bless this...solution.

"But at some point we're going to have to do it — quit considering options and just get on with it. That's what the deadline is for," the source said.

Report: Jails operate at 102 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Large local jail systems are packed with inmates and yet are being forced to take additional convicts from other overcrowded corrections facilities, a Justice Department report issued Sunday concludes.

Large city, county and township jails were operating at 102 percent of their rated capacities in mid-1984, said the report issued by the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

A total of 621 large local jails housing nearly 75 percent of the nation's jail population held a total of 173,100 inmates on June 30, 1984, while they were designed to hold a maximum of 169,900. Some 134 of the jails were under court order at the time to reduce their population. Large jail systems were defined as those with more than 100 inmates.

The study found that 24 percent, or about 150, of the nation's large local jails were forced to house extra inmates transferred from other crowded correctional facilities in 1984, the latest year for which figures are available. In 1983, 130 such facilities were put in a position of handling spillover from other jails and state and federal prisons.

About three-fourths of the 150 jails that held inmates because of crowding somewhere else in 1984 were holding them for state authorities.

The number of inmates held because of crowding elsewhere rose 41 percent to 6,200 during 1984 compared to the previous year, while representing 4 percent of all inmates in jurisdictions with jail populations of over 100, said the study.

"Prison overcrowding has reached crisis proportions in many areas because of short-sighted public policies which require tougher sentencing and longer prison terms, while neglecting to adequately staff our correctional facilities," Gerald W. McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said in response to the report.

"Policymakers are insisting on tougher criminal justice, but in many cases are not willing to pay the price for new jails and additional personnel required to run the facilities," McEntee added.

The AFSCME union represents 50,000 corrections employees nationwide, most of them guards.

"The study continues to indicate that there is excessive crowding in all correctional facilities," said Charlotte Nesbitt, policy project director of the American Correctional Association, a group of 20,000 corrections professionals. "We hear quite a bit about overcrowding in prisons, but crowding in jails is as serious."

She said the resulting "excessive workloads...threaten public safety."

Nesbitt said that although some people are "uncomfortable talking about alternative sentencing," she suggested that it is one answer to the problem of overcrowding. Alternative sentencing includes detention in residential facilities and the operation of work release programs.

The study was compiled by surveying one of every three jails across the country. It also found that:

- In 24 percent of the large jails of more than 100 population, an inmate died during 1984, with 126 suicides and six homicides as well as 136 natural deaths. Suicides were down by four from the previous year and homicides were up one.
- Males constituted 93 percent and females 7 percent of inmates in all local jails.
- An estimated 1,482 juveniles were being held in adult jails, down from 1,736 a year earlier.
- At midyear 1984, local jails of all sizes in the United States held an estimated 234,500 people, 5 percent more than a year earlier.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

PART 2: The Development of the auto in Europe

The 1985 German Benz, one of the 1st Autos ever.

by Tom Cooper

The development of the gasoline powered automobile was the result of the work of many individuals. Karl Benz and Gottlieb Daimler are generally credited with building the first commercially successful cars. Each of these men built a car independently in 1886. Unlike their predecessors they did not stop after building one or two cars but continued and merged companies in 1926 forming the company that today is known as Mercedes-Benz.

Although Merceds-Benz is the oldest auto company in Germany, perhaps the most famous is Volkswagen. This small, economical "people's car" was developed in the 1930's by Ferdinand Porsche upon order from Adolph Hitler. After designing the Volkswagen, Porsche formed his own company which still exists today as a producer of expensive sports cars.

At about the same time Benz and Daimler were working on their creations in Germany, several well known individuals were doing likewise in France. Armand Peugeot and Louis Renault are two whose names still survive today on the companies they began. Renault at present is one of France's leading auto producers, and both models enjoy some popularity in the United States.

At the turn of the century Italy, too, was involved in automobile production. Fiat and Alfa Romeo are 2 major Italian companies that were formed in 1899 & 1910. Fiat is the largest in the country with a line of basically small inexpensive cars. Alfa Romeo, on the other hand, is known for it's racing tradition and produces a line of sporty cars. Enzo Ferrari got his start in the 1930's driving Alfa Romeo racing cars. After World War II he began to build his own cars and by the 1950's was able to present some formidable competition to the racing machine market.

Automobile development in England began later than the rest of Europe. This can be attributed to the locomotive act of 1865 which limited speeds in town in 2 miles per hour and in rural areas to 4 miles per hour. It also required that a man predede a steam carriage by 60 years carrying a red flag to warn of its approach. This legislation was not repealed until shortly before the end of the century and it severly limited the development of the automobile in England.

The automobile was off to a quick start with many of those whose names are famous today involved in the dream. Mankind had experienced the ailement that is still around today, and that would soon spread the United States, "Automobile Fever."
