Christian concerts create unique experience

By Nick Wendel
nwendel@mrt.com

Once a year, a rock festival spreads itself across a sliver of West Texas landscape, fenced in by a sea of tents and canopies. Tattooed musicians file onto the stage one after the other, urging the crowd to jump and scream along with them.

But Rock the Desert isn't exactly a customary rock concert series. The entrance gate declares "No Smoking." Church groups and families file in one after the other. Soft drinks and snow cones are the most expensive treats on the premises.

This counterintuitive intersection of cultural relevance and morality has delivered a new, unique culture at events like Rock the Desert. This culture is a blend of contemporary, secular styles of music and more traditionally religious messages.

Angelo Mincey, 19, drove four hours from Canyon to participate in his third Rock the Desert show.

"The music has changed. The people have changed. Christians are starting to be into more secular music. The people here aren't going to be singing hymns all the time. These people on stage are just normal people, not preachers, and they have gone through tough stuff, too," Mincey said. "These artists reach a broader audience of people. Even the secular radio stations in my town were giving away tickets as prizes."

Brad and Melody Rikel brought their two children to Rock the Desert for the first time this year from Clovis, N.M.

"We were warned of the screaming music, but one of the kids we brought loves hard rock, so we don't mind it so much," Brad Rikel said.

The aura of the grounds is a foreign hybrid. The audience isn't out of control. Dehydration is the only real threat at this rock concert. But watching the crowd of front-row enthusiasts start a mosh pit makes it obvious this isn't as tame as many concerts either.

"Most churches don't have these styles of worship on a normal basis," Brad Rikel said. "These guys, this culture, they reach a group of people that the churches will never reach."

A pickup and sedan were involved in a rollover accident on westbound Interstate 20 on Friday.

2 crashes occur on interstate

By Tyler White
twhite@mrt.com

Three people were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital with injuries that were not life threatening Friday afternoon after two related crashes involving multiple vehicles on Interstate 20.

Midland police and Department of Public Safety troopers responded to the first crash at about 3:52 p.m. in the 7200 block of Interstate 20.

A DPS trooper at the scene said a sedan, a pickup and a passenger van failed to control their speed in a construction zone and crashed while westbound on I-20.

Three people were transported to MMH from this crash, which troopers said contributed to another crash about 20 minutes later in the 8300 block of I-20.

The second crash involved four pickups; one was hauling a trailer. The trooper said the vehicles were stopped because of traffic congestion, and one pickup struck the others in a "domino effect." He said speed was a contributing factor in the crash.

No injuries were reported in the second crash.

DirecTV pulls plug on CBS-7 after fee dispute

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

CBS-7 has been taken off the air for local DirecTV customers after the satellite television provider and CBS-7 parent company ICA Broadcasting failed to reach an agreement, affecting about 20,000 customers.

ICA, which has to renew its contract with cable and satellite providers every three years, made agreements with every local provider except for DirecTV this year, said Barry Marks, General Manager of CBS-7. The contract's expiration caused CBS-7 to go off the air at midnight on Wednesday.

The conflict stems from DirecTV's refusal of ICA's asking price for carrying CBS-7 on local DirecTV customers' feeds. Marks told the Reporter-Telegram on Friday that he based his price in relation to how much the other cable and satellite providers paid for CBS-7.

In a statement posted to DirecTV's website on Thursday, the satellite provider finds it "indefensible" that ICA would deny "tens of thousands" of viewers in order to bargain for an "excessive and unjustifiable" price for CBS-7.

Marks said the satellite company could want the price to be lower because Midland-Odessa is a small TV market. He also commented on CBS-7's website about the price, saying that it was a significant discount, the lowest he could go.

"This approach confuses me a little bit because I'm fairly certain DirecTV customers are paying pretty close to the same rates regardless of the size of town they live in," Marks said in an article detailing the dispute on the CBS-7 website.

On the national level, CBS Broadcasting Inc. and Time Warner Cable are also in dispute. The ongoing negotiations, and subsequent blackout in major cities such as New York City, Los Angeles and Denver, have affected three million customers, according to the Associated Press.

Although blackouts from failed agreements is nothing new to cable and satellite customers, this is the first time that negotiations between ICA and any satellite or cable providers have not gone as planned.

Marks described the nine customers he directly spoke to about the ordeal as initially angry, but then understanding after Marks told his side of the story. He added that about 50 people have called the station's front desk about the blackout, and more have called the newsroom.

Marks listed several options for customers affected by the blackout, including switching to other

Obituaries

Eva Mae Liles

Eva completed her journey on earth on Monday, July 29, 2013 in Midland, TX. The family will receive friends at the funeral home on Sunday, August 4, 2013 from 5:00-7:00PM. Funeral services will be held on Monday, August 5, 2013 at 10:00AM at Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Tod Brown officiating. Graveside services will be held on Monday, August 5, 2013 at 5:30PM at Fairview Cemetery in Millsap, TX where she will be laid to rest beside her beloved husband, who passed away in March of 1980 after 33 years of marriage.

Eva was born in Rising Star, TX to Frank and Vada (Curtis) Woodell. Her parents moved later to Colorado City where she graduated from high school and went to work for SWBell. When her parents moved to Mineral Wells, TX, she trainsferred with them. There she met a returning sailor, Hollis H. Liles, and they were married Thanksgiving of 1946. Her husband went to work for the FAA, and after moving several times in the course of his career, they moved to Midland in 1969 where he later retired. They were active members of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ. After his death, she attended Midland College and UTPB graduating with an accounting degree. She worked in that field until she retired to take care of her mother.

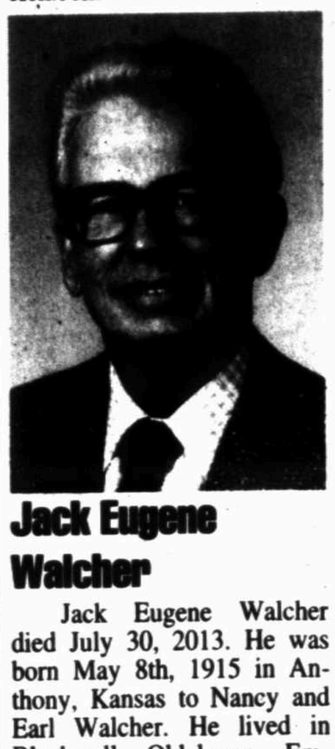
In addition to her husband, she was preceded in death by her parents, an older sister, Ruth Hardegree, and a younger sister, Alma Brown. She is survived by three sons: Richard (Sue) of Lubbock, TX; Randell (Jana) of Hurst, TX; and Douglas (Jeanie) of El Paso, TX. She has eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She is also survived by a younger sister, Helen Todd of Dickenson, TX as well as several nieces and nephews.

After retirement she enjoyed time spent with her sons and grandchildren, traveling and volunteering. She was a Pink Lady at MM's West Campus, did office work at Hospice of Midland, and participated in the Reach to Recovery program for American Cancer Society as long as she was able.

The family appreciates her excellent medical care provided by Dr. David Watkins, Dr. John McKenna, Cindy Marriener, C.F.N.P., and Manor Park assisted living unit. A special thanks to her dearest friends Connie and Ricki who were so faithful all those years to love, encourage, and be there for her.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to Midland Christian School, 2001 Culver, Midland, Texas, 79705, or Hospice of Midland, PO Box 2621, Midland, TX 79702.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory. Online condolences can be made at www.npwelch.com



Jack Eugene Walcher

Jack Eugene Walcher died July 30, 2013. He was born May 8th, 1915 in Anthony, Kansas to Nancy and Earl Walcher. He lived in Blackwell, Oklahoma, Emporia and Wichita, Kansas before moving to Rankin in 1926. Jack attended Schreiner University, and received the rank of Lieutenant and Platoon Commander in the Military Corps and ranked third in class scholastically. From there he went to the University Of Texas and was awarded a Business Administration Degree Cum Laude in 1936. In 1937 he went to work for Mr. Stanley Eddins and later became a partner in the firm of Eddins-Walcher Company. In 1964 he purchased the majority interest in the Eddins-Walcher Company from Mr. Eddins and served as Chief Executive Officer until sale of company on July 13, 2000. American Axle co-founder Richard Dauch dies at 71

BLOOMFIELD HILLS — Richard Dauch, longtime automotive executive and co-founder of Detroit-based American Axle & Manufacturing has died. He was 71.

Dauch died Friday of cancer at his Bloomfield Hills home, according to the Oakland County medical examiner's office.

He co-founded American Axle in 1994 after teaming with two investors on the purchase of GM's axle, forge and driveshaft driveline assets.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with Dick's family and friends. All of us have lost a great friend and leader," the auto supplier said in a statement.

Dauch was known as an innovative manufacturing strategist and entrepreneur. His "Passion for Manufacturing" is used as textbook material at colleges and universities, according to his biography on the American Axle & Manufacturing website.

He joined General Motors in 1964 after graduating from Purdue University with a bachelor's degree in industrial management and science, and later served as group vice president of manufacturing operations with Volkswagen of America.

Dauch also was executive vice president of worldwide manufacturing for Chrysler. He planned and directed Chrysler's just-in-time materials management system and three-shift assembly system capability. He also oversaw the planning and construction of the Chrysler Technical Center in Auburn Hills, north of Detroit.

He is survived by his wife, Sandy; four children and 16 grandchildren.

Michael Ansara, who played original Klingon, dies

The actor who played the original Klingon on TV's "Star Trek" has died.

A longtime friend and spokesman for Michael Ansara said the actor died Wednesday at his home in Calabasas, Calif., after a long illness. He was 91.

Besides playing Kang the Klingon in various "Star Trek" series, Ansara appeared on dozens of TV shows, including "Broken Arrow," "Law of the Plainsman," "I Dream of Jeannie," "Hawaii 5-0" and "Murder, She Wrote."

His film credits include "Julius Caesar," "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and "The Comancheros" with John Wayne.

Ansara was predeceased by his son, Matthew, with former wife Barbra Eden. He is survived by his wife of 36 years, Beverly, a sister and a niece and nephew.

PENNSYLVANIA

Gene Wettstone, former PSU gym coach, dies at 100

STATE COLLEGE — Gene Wettstone, the former Penn State men's gymnastics coach who holds the NCAA record for most team championships in that sport, has died. He was 100.

The school said Wettstone died Tuesday in State College. He coached at Penn State for 36 seasons, winning nine NCAA team titles.

Wettstone's gymnasts also won 35 individual national titles, and three Nittany Lions won the Nissen-Emery Award for the nation's top gymnast during his tenure. Wettstone retired from coaching in 1976.

Penn State said he was considered the "Dean of Collegiate Gymnastics." He was inducted into the U.S. Gymnastics Hall of Fame in 1963.

Wettstone also coached the U.S. Olympic men's gymnastics team in 1948 and 1956. A former member of the U.S. Olympic Committee, Wettstone also served as an Olympic judge in 1952 and 1968.

At Penn State, Wettstone is also credited with helping to revive the Nittany Lion mascot in 1939 following a 12-year hiatus. He wore the outfit for one season before passing on the responsibilities to a student.

NEW JERSEY

Dick Kazmaier, Princeton Heisman winner, dies at 82.

PRINCETON — Dick Kazmaier, the last Ivy League football player to win the Heisman Trophy, has died. He was 82.

Susan Kazmaier said Friday that her father died of natural causes Thursday at a Boston hospital. He had been living in Concord, Mass.

Kazmaier played halfback for Princeton and as a senior in 1951 won the Heisman Trophy in a landslide, receiving 506 first-place votes and 1,777 points, which was a record at the time. He also won the Maxwell Award as the nation's best player, and was The Associated Press male athlete of the year.

In his final two college seasons, the Tigers went 18-0. When he was done playing, he was Princeton's career leader in yards rushing (1,950) and ranked second in yards passing (2,404). His career completion percentage of 59.5 still ranks third at Princeton.

He was voted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1966 and in 2008 Princeton retired his No. 42, a jersey number also worn by Basketball Hall of Famer Bill Bradley.

"Notwithstanding all of the achievements in his athletic, business and philanthropic endeavors, Dick remained one of the most self-effacing individuals I have ever met," Princeton Athletic Director Gary Walters said in a statement. "He never sought the spotlight and always led in a thoughtful and ethical manner."

"Indeed, Dick was also the father of six daughters and he became a major force behind the scenes as he helped to implement the Title IX Legislation that was passed in 1972 in order to provide equal competitive opportunities for women in college."

2 enter guilty pleas after plane wreck foils plan

Two people whose plan to sell more than 160 pounds of marijuana was revealed when their small plane crashed earlier this year have entered guilty pleas in federal court in West Texas.

Dorothea Cangelosi, of Waller, and pilot Gregory Thomas, of Sacramento, Calif., each pleaded guilty Friday to charges that include possession with intent to distribute.

Prosecutors said the two were flying April 30 from Sacramento to Houston in a Beechcraft Bonanza when they stopped to refuel at an airport in Plains, near the New Mexico state line. They encountered engine trouble as they departed, causing the plane to flop into a field beyond the runway.

The 50-year-old Thomas and the 66-year-old Cangelosi tried to hide the drugs but were discovered.

Each faces a sentence of 20 years in prison.

BEAUMONT

28 indicted as part of drug trafficking ring

More than two dozen people have been indicted for operating a drug distribution ring responsible for trafficking cocaine, marijuana and methamphetamine in several states.

The U.S. attorney in eastern Texas, John M. Bales, announced the indictments against 28 people on Friday. He said in a news release that the drugs were distributed throughout much of Texas as well as to Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

State and federal investigators began executing arrest warrants last week and successfully arrested 23 of the 28 suspects.

The defendants each face a minimum of 10 years and up to life in federal prison if convicted of one or more drug conspiracy charges.

SAN ANTONIO

Man gets 20 years for carjacking

One of five people accused of participating in a fatal San Antonio carjacking that went unsolved for years has been sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The hunt for suspects in the 2007 carjacking death of 24-year-old Vicente Alvarez Huerta ran cold until 2010.

The San Antonio Express-News reported Augustine Alvarez, 24, was sentenced Thursday after pleading no contest last month to a charge of aggravated robbery. Aaron Alaniz, the accused trigger man, was sentenced in January to life in prison.

Alaniz is the only person believed by authorities to have brought a gun to the robbery, but Alvarez and others were charged under Texas's rule of parties, which allows anyone who aided the crime to also be held accountable.

FEMA approves aid for fertilizer plant blast

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Federal Emergency Management Agency reversed its previous decision and approved additional funding Friday to help rebuild the small Texas town where an April fertilizer plant explosion leveled homes, damaged buildings and killed 15 people.

President Barack Obama issued a "major disaster declaration" for the community of West, just north of Waco, freeing up federal support to supplement state and local reconstruction efforts that are already underway.

Even before the decision, FEMA had provided millions of dollars in aid to West and its residents, but in June denied Texas' original application for major disaster funding, preventing the town from accessing widespread assistance money typically available to victims of tornadoes, hurricanes and other natural disasters.

In its original letter to the state, FEMA said the explosion was "not of the severity and magnitude that warrants a major disaster declaration."

> "We've been living this for three months, and it's been pretty major."
> Marty Crawford, West Independent School District superintendent

That ruling affected both public assistance aid — which provides funding to the city to rebuild — and further individual aid, which provides crisis counseling and other services.

Gov. Rick Perry had vowed to appeal the decision and released a statement Friday calling the reversal "great and welcome news for the people of West." He also thanked the state's congressional delegation for "standing with the people whose lives have been forever impacted to move this appeal forward."

Reached by cellphone, West Mayor Tommy Muska joked: "I think I just missed a call from the White House."

"It's going to throw open the door to federal funding," Muska said, later adding, "I know that they didn't make the right decision, but I'm glad they changed that decision."

A fire at the West Fertilizer Co. the evening of April 17 triggered an explosion that smashed homes, business and municipal buildings and emitted waves of energy so fierce it registered as a small earthquake and left a 93-foot crater. Fifteen people — 10 of them first-responders rushing to fight the initial blaze — were killed and about 200 others injured.

The close-knit farming community was thrust into the national spotlight, and Obama even traveled to Waco to attend a memorial service for the West victims.

The cause of the fire remains unclear, and a criminal investigation is still open. But investigators say the heat of the blaze destabilized tons of ammonium nitrate, a potentially explosive fertilizer, being stored at the plant. The incident highlighted how loosely regulated storage of potentially dangerous chemicals are statewide, and critics say the state government needs to tighten its oversight of such plants.

West Independent School District Superintendent Marty Crawford's voice cracked as he talked Friday about FEMA's aid reversal.

"It's already a little emotional right here. I don't know if I'm in shape to talk to you," he said. "We've been living this for three months, and it's been pretty major."

Parts of three schools were damaged in the blast, and hundreds of older students had to be bused to a Waco-area school district for the last weeks of the most recent school year. Officials are working to level part of the damaged middle school and set up a temporary campus for all classes to resume in West later this month.

Abbott paid $5M so far from injury settlement

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott has received more than $5 million so far from a lawsuit over a felled tree in 1984 that left the Republican gubernatorial candidate paralyzed, according to long-guarded details of the settlement finally made public Friday.

Abbott's campaign released a copy of the 1986 settlement with a Houston property owner and a company that had inspected the oak tree before it crashed onto Abbott, who was then a 26-year-old law student out for a jog when the freak accident pinned him to the road and broke his back.

He was paralyzed from the waist down and has used a wheelchair ever since.

The settlement reveals that Abbott, who is considered the early favorite to replace Gov. Rick Perry in 2014, receives annually adjusted monthly payments for life that are currently worth about $14,400. He is also due 14 lump-sum payments through 2022 that total more than $4.2 million.

If Abbott, 55, lives to see that final lump-sum payment, he will have received more than $9 million from the settlement.

Spokesman Matt Hirsch said a copy of the seven-page agreement was made public because Abbott "wanted to end speculation and provide accurate details of his settlement." He did not comment further; Abbott wasn't available for an interview.

The settlement was first obtained by The Texas Tribune.

Abbott, whose salary as attorney general is $150,000, has been in public office since 1993 when he started his political career as a state district judge in Harris County. But only now has Abbott revealed the worth of the settlement, which has been raised in previous campaigns for attorney general.

When it comes to discussing the actual accident, Abbott has long been candid about his paralysis and how it affects his life. The story was the focus of a 10-city campaign swing last month that officially launched his long-expected gubernatorial run, which is starting with a mighty $23 million warchest.

"In piecing my life back together I realized that our lives don't have to be defined by how we're challenged. Instead we can define our lives by how we respond to the challenges we face," Abbott told supporters during a July 16 rally in Wichita Falls.

As the state's attorney and top law enforcement officer since 2002, Abbott is among the state's Republican leaders who have gone after trial lawyers and tightened rules on civil claims in Texas.

That has given opponents ammunition to paint Abbott as a hypocrite for collecting on his own multimillion dollar civil lawsuit. Abbott has rebuffed that criticism, saying that anyone injured today as he was could still pursue a similar claim.

Republican Tom Pauken, the former head of the Texas Workforce Commission, is Abbott's only challenger so far in the governor's race. Democrats have yet to offer a candidate, though state Sen. Wendy Davis is considering a run following her 11-hour filibuster over abortion restrictions this summer that made her a party superstar.

SAN FRANCISCO

Judge denies class action for Wal-Mart bias lawsuit

A judge rejected on Friday an attempt to file a class action discrimination lawsuit on behalf of 150,000 Wal-Mart women employees in California who claimed their male colleagues were paid more and promoted faster than them.

The lawsuit filed in San Francisco federal court was a scaled-down version of an initial complaint filed in 2001 that sought to represent 1.6 million women nationwide. But the U.S. Supreme Court tossed out that class action lawsuit in 2011, ruling it found no convincing proof of companywide discrimination on pay and promotion policy. The court also said there were too many women in too many jobs at Wal-Mart to wrap into one lawsuit.

After that setback, the women's lawyers filed smaller class action lawsuits, alleging discrimination occurred in different states and Wal-Mart "regions."

On Friday, U.S. District Judge Charles Breyer ruled the smaller suit on behalf of California women employees was still too disparate and wide-ranging to qualify as a class action lawsuit. He also found that the lawyers failed to show statistical and anecdotal evidence of gender bias.

"Though plaintiffs insist that they have presented an entirely different case from the one the Supreme Court rejected, it is essentially a scaled-down version of the same case with new labels on old arguments," Breyer wrote.

ALASKA

Archaeologists uncover site of 200-year-old village

ANCHORAGE — Brown University archaeologists have uncovered the site of a village in northwest Alaska that's believed to be at least 200 years old.

The village dig is in Kobuk Valley National Park, about 20 miles up the Kobuk River from the community of Kiana, according to KSKA.

Arctic archaeologist Doug Anderson estimates about 200 people lived in the village, which he believes was a regional capital. Researchers think the village dates from the late 1700s to the early 1800s, just before initial contact with explorers.

Anderson said he's never seen a site quite like the one uncovered where so many houses were connected by a web of tunnels. He has been an archaeologist for more than 50 years, specializing in prehistory and early history of northwest Alaska.

"In some other areas here, we've found maybe two houses that are connected by tunnels, but nothing like this," Anderson said. "And in other areas, those houses are really quite small compared the houses here; these are gigantic houses."

The dwellings are the size of a one-room cabin and are dug about 4 feet into the ground. The structures are framed by spruce beams and poles with sod and earth walls and a fireplace at the center.

Taylor Swift's childhood home is on the market

WYOMISSING — Taylor Swift's childhood home in Pennsylvania is on the market, but fans looking to "Begin Again" in Pennsylvania may be too late.

Century 21 Gold agent Lisa Tiger said the six-bedroom home in Wyomissing is in contract and expected to close this month.

Swift's parents had rented the home for many years before moving to Nashville when the singer was 14.

The Classical revival home boasts a grand staircase and a sun-filled study where Swift played guitar, according to the $799,500 listing.

Swift's 2012 album, "Red," includes the song "Begin Again."

The 23-year-old Swift has sold more than 75 million albums.

WISCONSIN

Federal judge blocks new abortion law

MADISON — A federal judge on Friday extended his hold on a portion of a new Wisconsin law that requires abortion providers to have admitting privileges at nearby hospitals, issuing an injunction blocking the mandate for another four months.

U.S. District Judge William Conley's order stems from a lawsuit Planned Parenthood and Affiliated Medical Services filed in July. The organizations say the law would force a Planned Parenthood clinic in Appleton and an AMS clinic in Milwaukee to close because abortion providers at both facilities lack admitting privileges.

Conley issued a temporary hold on the provisions on July 8. The organizations asked him to issue a preliminary injunction that would block the requirement through a trial set to begin Nov. 25.

State attorneys defending the law could ask the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals to stay the injunction. A spokeswoman for the state Justice Department said in an email that agency lawyers are reviewing Conley's order and considering their "next step." She did not elaborate. As the case stands now the two clinics can remain open at least until Conley issues a final ruling after the trial.

The judge justified the injunction by finding state attorneys aren't likely to prove the admitting privileges requirement is reasonably related to a woman's health and the organizations probably can show the mandate poses a substantial obstacle to obtaining abortions.

"Given the substantial likelihood of success on the merits and of irreparable harm, the public's interest is best serviced by imposing a preliminary injunction on enforcement of the admitting privileges requirement until this court can address its merits after trial," Conley wrote.

High court won't delay release of Calif. inmates

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The U.S. Supreme Court on Friday paved the way for the early release of nearly 10,000 California inmates by year's end despite warnings by Gov. Jerry Brown and other state officials that a public safety crisis looms if they're forced to open the prison gates.

A majority of justices refused an emergency request by the governor to halt a lower court's directive for the early release of the prisoners to ease severe overcrowding at California's 33 adult prisons.

The decision was met with concern by law enforcement officials.

Covina Police Chief Kim Raney, president of the California Police Chiefs Association, said the justices ignored efforts already underway to reduce prison populations and "chose instead to allow for the release of more felons into already overburdened communities."

Brown's office referred a request for comment to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, where Secretary Jeff Beard vowed that the state would press on with a still-pending appeal in hope of preventing the releases.

A panel of three federal judges had previously ordered the state to cut its prison population by nearly 8 percent to roughly 110,000 inmates by Dec. 31 to avoid conditions amounting to cruel and unusual punishment. That panel, responding to decades of lawsuits filed by inmates, repeatedly ordered early releases after finding inmates were needlessly dying and suffering because of inadequate medical and mental health care caused by overcrowding.

Court-appointed experts found that the prison system had a suicide rate that worsened last year to 24 per 100,000 inmates, far exceeding the national average of 16 suicides per 100,000 inmates in state prisons.

Brown had appealed the latest decision of the panel and, separately, asked the U.S. Supreme Court to cancel the early release order while considering his arguments that the state is making significant progress in improving conditions. The high court refused Friday to stop the release but did not rule on the appeal itself. Corrections Secretary Beard said the state would press on with that, so the "merits of the case can be considered without delay."

Man falls asleep at the wheel

An Odessan man walked away without injuries from a one-vehicle rollover at about 6:30 p.m. Friday on North Highway 349. The man told Midland police that after falling asleep while driving southbound, he veered off the road across the northbound lane and rolled over a barbed wire fence, according to an officer at the scene. The man's white Mazda landed upright on the passenger's side, and no other cars were involved, the officer said.

Oilfield worker finds human skull; Sheriff's Office is investigating

From staff reports

Sheriff Gary Painter said his office is investigating a human skull that was found Thursday by an oilfield worker.

The Midland County Sheriff's Office and the Texas Rangers responded to the call at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at a Pioneer Natural Resources well lease located at Farm-to-Market Road 1213 and County Road 1160.

Painter said the skull appeared to be old and no other remains were found during the initial search of the area.

There is a hole in the back part of the skull, but it is unknown what caused it, he said.

The skull will be sent to forensic experts for DNA testing, and a forensic anthropologist to determine the skull's origin.

FDA links stomach bug in 2 states to Mexican farm

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration says an outbreak of stomach illnesses in Iowa and Nebraska is linked to salad mix served at Olive Garden and Red Lobster restaurants in those states and supplied by a Mexican farm.

The outbreak of cyclospora infections has sickened more than 400 people in 16 states in all. The agency says it is working to determine whether the salad mix is the source of illnesses in the other 14 states.

"It is not yet clear whether the cases reported from other states are all part of the same outbreak," the agency said in a statement. "The investigation of increased cases of cyclosporiasis in other states continues."

Both Olive Garden and Red Lobster are owned by Orlando-based Darden Restaurants. In a statement, Darden spokesman Mike Bernstein said the FDA's announcement is "new information."

"Nothing we have seen prior to this announcement gave us any reason to be concerned about the products we've received from this supplier," Bernstein said.

The FDA said it traced illnesses from the restaurants in Nebraska and Iowa to Taylor Farms de Mexico, the Mexican branch of Salinas, Calif.-based Taylor Farms. The company, which provides produce to the food service industry, said its facility located about 180 miles north of Mexico City in San Miguel de Allende is the only one of its 12 sites to be connected to the cases.

In a statement on the company's website, Taylor Farms says the Mexican facility is "state of the art and has an exceptional food safety record." The statement said the company is working with FDA investigators who are looking at the facility and that the product is out of the food supply.

The FDA said it had audited the Mexican processing facility in 2001 and found "no notable issues." The agency said it would increase surveillance efforts for green leafy products imported from Mexico.

The most recent known illness in the two states linked to the infected salad was in Nebraska a month ago. The typical shelf life for a salad mix is up to 14 days.

There have been more recent illnesses in other states. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the most recent illness was July 23 but centers did not specify a location.

The agency said its investigation has not implicated any packaged salad sold in grocery stores.

FDA defining what 'gluten free' means on packages

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A label that reads "gluten free" will now mean the same thing for all food, regardless of which kind you buy.

After more than a six-year delay, the Food and Drug Administration has set a new standard for labels that will make shopping easier for consumers on gluten-restricted diets. Until now, the term "gluten free" had not been regulated.

Under an FDA rule announced Friday, products labeled "gluten free" still won't have to be technically free of wheat, rye and barley and their derivatives. But they will have to contain less than 20 parts per million of gluten.

That amount is generally recognized by the medical community to be low enough so that most people who have celiac disease won't get sick if they eat it.

People who suffer from celiac disease don't absorb nutrients well and can get sick from the gluten found in wheat and other cereal grains.

Celiac disease affects about 3 million Americans. It causes abdominal pain, bloating and diarrhea, and people who have it can suffer weight loss, fatigue, rashes and other long-term medical problems. Celiac is a diagnosed illness that is more severe than gluten sensitivity, which some people self-diagnose.

Only a very small number of people wouldn't be able to ingest the amount of gluten that will be allowed under the new rule, FDA officials said.

The new FDA rule also would ensure that foods with the labels "no gluten," "free of gluten" and "without gluten" meet the definition. Manufacturers will have a year to comply, though the FDA urged companies to meet the definition sooner.

Ten years ago, most people had never heard of celiac disease. But awareness and diagnosis of the illness has exploded in recent years. It's not entirely clear why — some researchers say it was under-diagnosed; others say it's because people eat more processed wheat products like pastas and baked goods than in past decades, and those items use types of wheat that have a higher gluten content.

Many companies that market gluten-free foods already meet the standard. But Andrea Levario of the American Celiac Disease Alliance said the federal guidelines will cut down on painstaking shopping for those who suffer from celiac disease.

US rig count up 6 this week to 1,782

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. increased by six this week for a total of 1,782 rigs, according to Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

There were 1,388 rigs listed as searching for oil, down 13; 388 for gas, up 19; and six as miscellaneous, unchanged. At this time last year there were 1,429 rigs searching for oil, a difference of 41, and 498 rigs searching for gas, a difference of 110.

The number of vertical drilling rigs increased by 10, ending the week at 432 rigs. Horizontal drilling rigs increased by six for a total of 1,073. Directional drilling rigs declined by 10, totaling 277.

There were 1,930 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. a year ago this week.

Texas added three rigs this week for a total of 851. At this time last year there were 909 rigs in Texas.

Rounding out the top five states by rig count were North Dakota with 170, down one; Oklahoma with 168, down eight; Louisiana with 108, up five; and New Mexico with 76, down three.

Among the other major oil- and gas-producing states, West Virginia added 11 rigs, Alaska added five and Ohio was up one. Colorado, Kansas and Pennsylvania each lost two rigs. Utah and Wyoming were down one apiece. Arkansas and California were unchanged.

There were 463 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin this week, an increase of one. The Eagle Ford added two rigs for a total of 239. The Granite Wash lost one rig, ending the week at 75. The Barnett added three rigs for a total of 33.

In the U.S. there were 1,699 rigs listed as on land, up three; 25 as in inland waters, up three; and 58 as offshore, unchanged. There were 55 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, up one.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Canada increased by 12 this week for a total of 341 rigs. There were 118 rigs searching for gas, up seven; 223 rigs searching for oil, up five; and zero rigs listed as miscellaneous, unchanged. At this time last year there were 303 rigs in Canada.

The total number of rigs in North America this week was 2,123, an increase of 18. There were 2,233 rigs in North America a year ago this week, a difference of 110 rigs.

NEW YORK

Oil falls after data show tepid US jobs growth

The price of oil fell Friday after two days of big gains, as investors took profits following a report that showed job growth slowed in the U.S. last month.

Benchmark crude for September delivery fell 95 cents to close at $106.94 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil still finished the week up $2.24 a barrel, or 2 percent, due to a gain of $4.81 over Wednesday and Thursday.

U.S. employers added 162,000 jobs in July, the government said, a modest increase and the fewest since March. Although the unemployment rate dropped to a 4 1/2-year low of 7.4 percent, that was one of few hopeful signs in an otherwise lackluster report.

At the pump, the average price for a gallon of gasoline held steady at $3.63. That's up 15 cents from a month ago and 10 cents higher than at this time last year.

NEW YORK

Chevron's 2Q profit falls on lower oil prices

Chevron's latest quarterly profit was huge — $5.37 billion — but down 26 percent from last year due to lower oil prices, less production and maintenance work at some refineries.

The results mirrored lower profit at Exxon Mobil and Shell, and they also lagged Wall Street expectations. Chevron shares fell $1.49, or 1.2 percent, to $124.95 Friday.

Consumers aren't likely to feel sorry for Chevron — not after they fill their tanks at the national average of $3.63 for a gallon of gas. And Chevron's quarterly profit was much fatter than those at Google, General Electric and Johnson & Johnson — like Chevron, they all rank among the 10 biggest companies by stock market value.

But for the second-biggest U.S. oil company, Chevron Corp.'s haul was considered disappointing because a year ago it earned $7.21 billion.

Chevron's profit worked out to $2.77 per share, down from $3.66 per share a year ago. Analysts were expecting $2.97 per share, according to FactSet.

Revenue fell 8 percent to $57.37 billion but came in higher than the $56.01 billion that analysts expected.

Chairman and CEO John Watson said earnings fell "largely due to softer market conditions for crude oil and refined products." He said repair and maintenance work on U.S. refineries was also a factor.

In percentage terms, Chevron's profit decline was only half as steep as those reported Thursday by Exxon Mobil Corp., which earned $6.86 billion on revenue of $106.47 billion, and Royal Dutch Shell. But the causes were similar — lower oil prices and declining production.

The average price that Chevron got for a barrel of oil or natural gas liquids was $92 in the United States and $94 overseas; both were down $5 a barrel from last year's second quarter.

Natural gas prices in the U.S. jumped 74 percent, but that was up from 10-year lows in 2012.

Chevron sold more natural gas in the U.S., but sales of refined products such as gasoline dipped both at home and overseas.

Production of oil and gas fell 1.6 percent, midway between Shell's 1.3 percent decline and Exxon's 1.9 percent decrease.

CALIFORNIA

BLM launches assessment of oil, gas leasing

SACRAMENTO — Federal land managers will launch a statewide scientific assessment of oil and gas development in California, a victory for environmentalists concerned about impacts of hydraulic fracturing nationwide.

The Bureau of Land Management announced Friday that it will conduct the in-depth environmental study of fracking and other oil and gas recovery projects in a cooperative project with the state.

The decision comes after a federal judge determined the BLM violated environmental law by auctioning off the rights to extract oil using the controversial process on 2,500 acres of prime public lands in Monterey County.

The BLM said the outcome of its assessment could establish additional environmental protections on those parcels.

"We're pleased that federal officials are finally starting the full analysis of fracking pollution's dangers that should have been done before these public lands were auctioned off to oil companies," said Brendan Cummings, senior counsel at the Center for Biological Diversity.

Senators offer plan to save cash-strapped USPS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Saturday mail delivery would be ended in a year and the Postal Service could start shipping alcoholic beverages under a plan offered Friday by two key senators seeking to turn around the struggling agency's finances.

Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee Chairman Tom Carper, D-Del., and the panel's ranking Republican, Tom Coburn, of Oklahoma, said they hope Congress can act quickly to help the agency.

The Postal Service lost $16 billion last year, $11 billion of it in congressionally mandated payments to its health fund for future retirees.

The Senate plan includes changes in how pensions and retiree health care costs are calculated in an attempt to stabilize the agency's finances.

It also would impose a two-year moratorium on closing mail processing plants. The agency would be allowed to ship beer, wine and spirits to compete with private shippers such as FedEx, under the proposal.

Door-to-door service for new residential and business addresses would cease to help the Postal Service shift to less costly curbside and cluster box delivery. The measure would require the agency to try to convert residential addresses on a voluntary basis from door-to-door service to curbside and cluster box delivery.

The agency has been moving toward curbside and cluster box delivery in new residential developments since the 1970s.

The House Oversight and Government Reform Committee recently approved a bill by its chairman Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., for the service to gradually shift from door delivery to cluster box and curbside delivery, which includes mailboxes at the end of driveways.

Issa's bill also would end Saturday delivery and change how pension and retiree health costs are calculated to bolster the agency's budget.

The Postal Service has been seeking legislation that would allow it to eliminate Saturday mail delivery and to reduce its congressionally mandated $5 billion annual payment for future retiree health benefits. It missed two of those $5 billion payments last year and is expected to miss another at the end of September.

About 1 in 3 mail customers has door-to-door delivery, which costs the agency about $350 per year. Curbside delivery costs on average $224 per year for each address, while cluster box delivery averages $160.

Earlier this year, the service backpedaled on its plan to end Saturday mail delivery after running into opposition in Congress. It has tried repeatedly over the past several years to persuade Congress to approve ending Saturday mail delivery.

The National Association of Letter Carriers has said ending Saturday delivery would in particular hurt small businesses along with rural residents and the elderly, who depend more heavily on the mail for prescription drugs and other goods.

US issues railroad safety order after deadly crash

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In the wake of a deadly train accident in Canada, the U.S. Federal Railroad Administration has issued a series of measures to be undertaken by all railroads to help prevent trains operating on mainline tracks or sidings from moving unintentionally.

The half-dozen measures in the emergency order take particular aim at trains that move hazardous materials such as crude oil and ethanol. All railroads must undertake the measures within the next 30 days, the FRA said in a statement Friday night.

On July 6, a parked Montreal, Maine & Atlantic Railway train with 72 tankers of crude oil rolled down an incline, derailed and crashed in downtown Lac-Megantic, Quebec. Several tankers exploded, destroying 40 buildings in the lakeside town of 6,000 and killing 47 people.

Only one person had been assigned to the nearly mile-long train, which had been parked overnight. After the wreck, Canadian transportation authorities banned one-man crews for trains carrying dangerous cargo and said such trains will not be allowed to be left unattended on a main track.

The FRA's emergency order didn't ban one-man crews but the Transportation Department, which oversees the FRA, said in the statement that "railroad safety is enhanced through the use of multiple crew members." In a separate safety advisory, the Transportation Department recommended that railroads review their crew staffing requirements for transporting hazardous material and ensure that they are adequate.

Under one of the FRA orders announced Friday, no train or vehicles transporting specified hazardous materials can be left unattended on a mainline track or side track outside a yard or terminal, unless specifically authorized.

Another order mandates that, in order to receive authorization to leave a train unattended, railroads must develop and submit to the FRA a process for securing unattended trains transporting hazardous materials. Included in the order are locking the locomotive or otherwise disabling it, and reporting among employees to ensure the correct number of hand brakes are applied.

Cowboys' Allen will think of mother at Hall ceremony

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

CANTON, Ohio — Larry Allen had one goal whenever he took the field for an NFL game.

"I just wanted to make the other guy give up," he said.

Quite often, Allen achieved his objective. Some defensive linemen, fearing what the man who once bench pressed 700 pounds would do to them, even threw in the towel before kickoff.

"You hear about all the people who got the Allen flu when they were playing the Cowboys," team executive vice president Stephen Jones said.

On Saturday night, Allen will accept first-ballot induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame for his 12 dominant seasons with the Cowboys. His presenter will be owner Jerry Jones, who Allen said is a "great man."

"He made the Cowboys organization what it is today," said Allen, who played for Dallas from 1994-2005, earning a Super Bowl ring after the 1995 season. He ended his career with two seasons in San Francisco.

While Allen holds Jones in high esteem, the most important person in his life won't be at the ceremony.

"It's going to be rough, but I know she will be up there looking down on me," Allen, 41, said of his mother, Vera, who died a year ago at age 59.

As a single-parent, Vera was the one who kept Allen away from the gangs that roamed Compton, the area of Los Angeles where Allen spent his formative years.

"It was well known for street gangs, Crips and Bloods," Allen said. "It was a rough experience growing up there, but it taught me to be a tough person."

When Allen arrived at the East-West Shrine Game after starring at Division II Sonoma State, the game's medical staff was stunned during

Jeffers takes lead in Men's City with a 66

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Jordan Jeffers has always enjoyed Midland, but this weekend could turn out to be one of his most memorable experiences in the Tall City if he continues to play like he did Friday.

Jeffers is the leader of the Midland Men's City Championship after carding a 4-under 66 in the first round on Hogan Park Golf Course's Quail Course. He holds a one-stroke lead on 1995 city champion J.B. Luttrell, while Craig Feuer (68) and Jason Hewett (69) carded the only other scores under par Friday.

All four of those players will be grouped together for today's second round, which tees off at 8:30 a.m. on the Road Runner Course.

Jeffers

"I played well," Jeffers said. "I hit my driver well. It really was just a steady round. I putted well. I made everything I needed to make."

This might be Jeffers' first city tournament in Midland, but he's not new to the Permian Basin. He played golf for Odessa College in 2008 before moving on to Houston Baptist and finishing his education at West Texas A&M in Canyon. Jeffers returned to Odessa College this past November as an assistant coach for the Wranglers golf team, although he lives in Midland and now finds himself in contention for the city championship.

"I enjoy Midland a lot," said the 25-year-old Jeffers, who is originally from Dalhart. "I was always over here when I was in college, so I'm comfortable here."

Hogan Park is a bit new to Jeffers, though. He claims to have played the

Luttrell, Hewett, Feuer follow in close pursuit of leader

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

J.B. Luttrell and Jason Hewett might not be leading after the first day of Midland Men's City Championship, but both players believe they very easily could be.

Luttrell and Hewett are definitely within striking distance of first-round leader Jordan Jeffers, who carded a 4-under 66 on Hogan Park Golf Course's Quail Course on Friday. Luttrell is just behind Jeffers with a 3-under 67, while Hewett shot a 1-under 69. Craig Feuer had the only other score under par with a 2-under 68.

Luttrell

All four players will play together in today's second round, teeing off at 8:30 a.m. on the Road Runner Course.

If the tournament had only been over nine holes instead of 18, Hewett would likely be the leader after a round. He got out to a great start, sinking birdies on five of the first six holes, and finishing 3-under after the front nine.

Unfortunately, the back nine didn't go as well for Hewett.

"I had seven birdies and shot just 1-under," Hewett said. "I just had some unfortunate bounces. I got behind a tree, one bounces into the bushes, ended up with a couple penalty strokes on the back nine. It's OK. It's about how you handle adversity."

Hewett bogeyed the first three holes on the back nine, which halted his momentum. He was coming off what he described as "the best round of my life" in a tournament in Merkel last weekend where

Big 12 unlike others with 10-team round-robin

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

For the first time in three years, the Big 12 Conference has the same teams coming back from the previous season.

While the seven-time defending national champion SEC and the Pac-12, among other leagues, have expanded during all the shuffling of conference affiliations the past few summers, the Big 12 has settled into a 10-team league.

There is no league championship game in early December to determine the Big 12 champion. Instead, every team plays the other nine league schools in a round-robin schedule that stretches over three full months — from West Virginia going to Oklahoma on Sept. 7, until two final regular-season games Dec. 7.

Big 12 projected order of finish

1. Oklahoma
2. TCU
3. Oklahoma State
4. Texas
5. Baylor
6. Kansas State
7. Texas Tech
8. West Virginia
9. Iowa State
10. Kansas

The title is seemingly up for grabs in the league that has lost four teams and added two since 2010.

Consider the curious case of Texas, whose coach Mack Brown responded "Who knows?" when asked about being picked fourth in the Big 12 preseason poll by media who cover the league and as high as fourth nationally by at least one national magazine.

"I do think that we have the most balanced league in the country right now, top to bottom," Brown said. "Everybody else can beat anybody else in the league on a given day, and that's not happening across the country. ... People are confused on who they think may win this conference championship, and that's a compliment to our league."

Oklahoma State is the media's choice to win the league this time around. Kansas State and Oklahoma shared the title last year, with the Wildcats getting the league's automatic BCS berth because of their head-to-head victory over the Sooners.

With Heisman Trophy finalist quarterback Collin Klein gone, K-State is a preseason pick to finish in the bottom half of the league — just like the last two years, when the Wildcats instead finished in the top two.

"I said last year that, if I were given the opportunity, I would have picked us 99th" K-State coach Bill Snyder said. "As I look at it this year where we stand, I'd probably echo the same thought. It's precarious trying to make those kinds of decisions as the season gets started."

5 THINGS TO WATCH

1. QB QUANDARY: Seven of the 10 teams had senior quarterbacks last season, so change is in the air. One of the most experienced QBs in the league hasn't even taken a Big 12

Hooks rally to drop RockHounds for 9th straight time

From staff reports

The Corpus Christi Hooks simply have the Midland RockHounds' number right now.

On Friday, not even six shutout innings, six extra-base hits or two late leads mattered for the RockHounds in the end.

Corpus Christi erased a three-run deficit in the ninth inning and overcame a one-run deficit in the tenth on Jonathan Meyer's game-winning three-run blast to complete a 7-5 victory, the Hooks' ninth straight against Midland.

Meyer and the Hooks' Domingo Santana combined to drive in six runs in the game, going 2 for 2 and 2 for 4, respectively.

Midland went up 3-0 against Corpus Christi in the first six innings as RockHound starter Zach Neal shut out the red-hot Hooks in the early going.

The RockHounds later went up 4-1 in the top of the eighth on a solo shot by Dusty Coleman, Midland's third home run of the game.

Neither team was able to score in the ninth, sending the game to extra innings, where Tyler Ladendorf gave Midland the lead again with an RBI double to right with just one out.

The RockHounds left runners on the corners however, which came back to haunt them in the 10th.

After reliever Mike De Mark fanned Drew Muren to start the bottom of the frame, Preston Tucker slapped a double and Max Stassi walked before Meyer ended the game with his shot to left.

Texas Tech's first 'Masked Rider' dies at 81

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Joe Kirk Fulton, who as a Texas Tech senior became the university's first "Masked Rider" at the 1954 Gator Bowl, has died at his West Texas ranch. He was 81.

Fulton died Wednesday at his home on the Fulton Quien Sabe (kee-YEHN' SAH'-bay) Ranch in the Hill Country near the LBJ Ranch, stepson Larry Fulton told the university.

Going into the Jacksonville, Fla., bowl game, Tech was the only big college football program in Texas without a mascot. Just before the game, Tech coach DeWitt Weaver persuaded Fulton to don a masked rider's costume and roam the sidelines on horseback. The underdog Red Raiders defeated Auburn, 35-13.

Since then, 51 other student riders on 14 horses have filled the role.

Big 12

snap: Before transferring to Kansas and sitting out last season, junior Jake Heaps started 16 of his 22 games at BYU. Texas junior David Ash has started a league-high 18 games while going through plenty of ups and downs. TCU senior Casey Pachall has 17 starts, but played only the first four games last season before leaving school for a substance-abuse program. Even Oklahoma State had two freshman quarterbacks who started multiple games last season, and a third who has since left the team. Iowa State provided Sam Richardson a head start, letting him start a couple of games late in his freshman season.

2. SOPHOMORE SEASONS: West Virginia and TCU both had their Big 12 debuts last season, when each were the reigning champs of their previous leagues. Both started the season in the Top 25 and got through September undefeated. But both finished 4-5 in league play, part of a four-team tie for fifth place. "It's as competitive a conference as there is in college football," said Mountaineers coach Dana Holgorsen, whose team lost QB Geno Smith and nine other offensive starters. TCU returns nine starters from a defense that led the Big 12 in total defense — a staple for coach Gary Patterson's teams through all the conference-hopping the Frogs did after being left out of the original Big 12 lineup in 1996. "I don't think there's any magic formula, but you can't allow offenses to dictate," he said.

3. SPEED FREAKS: Baylor, Oklahoma State and Oklahoma each ran more than 1,000 offensive plays last season, while West Virginia and Texas Tech were within 10 of reaching that plateau. All averaged more than 37 points a game. Expect more of the same up-tempo offense this season. Oklahoma State coach Mike Gundy is talking about going even faster and Oklahoma, even without 50-game quarterback starter Landry Jones, doesn't anticipate much difference. Texas, which had only 891 offensive snaps, plans for co-offensive coordinator Major Applewhite, the former Longhorns quarterback, to help turn up the tempo there.

4. BACK HOME: Kliff Kingsbury excited Texas Tech fans with his big-passing ways as a quarterback from 1999-2002. Now he's back in Lubbock as head coach after spending last season as offensive coordinator at Texas A&M , helping tutor Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Johnny Manziel. Kingsbury will be 34 when the season begins, the youngest head coach in any BCS-automatic qualifying conference. Kingsbury joins Oklahoma State's Mike Gundy as a former standout quarterback now coach at his Big 12 alma mater. Gundy took over as the Cowboys' head coach 16 years after his last game; Kingsbury is back 11 years later.

5. WHEN DOES BASKETBALL START?: The Kansas football team has lost 21 consecutive Big 12 games since 2010. For his second season, Charlie Weis has more than 20 junior college transfers on the roster. That's not a long-term fix, but more a short-term necessity for a coach who has dismissed 29 scholarship players for a variety of off-the-field issues. "Not one of those players did I get rid of because they weren't any good. You can't do it for that reason," said Weis, who was 1-11 his first season. "So now I took a team that already wasn't very good, and I made them worse talent-wise. So that led to we need to fill the holes right now." The Jayhawks basketball team shared its ninth consecutive Big 12 title earlier this spring.

City

From 1B

Road Runner Course for the first time Thursday, and said he's only played Quail twice since returning to the Permian Basin.

His lack of familiarity with the course didn't keep him from getting out to a strong start, though. Thanks in part to an eagle on par-4 No. 3, Jeffers finished the front nine 2-under.

"I hit it well all day long. I didn't hit any bad shots. I was hitting the fairways, hitting the greens," Jeffers said. "I had a little trouble with my short game today, but what kept my round going today was I made short, 6-, 7-foot putts all day long."

Jeffers did run into a bit of trouble to start the back nine, however, picking up bogeys on 10 and 11. However, he managed to turn it around with three straight birdies on 13, 14 and 15, and finished his day with a birdie on 18.

Now, he only hopes he can continue to play as well as he did Friday, and that it's enough to get him the city championship.

"I'm hoping to do the same stuff. I just want to keep steady, keep patient," Jeffers said. "I don't want to get impatient, because I haven't played much lately. I kind of figure I will (get impatient) eventually, but I'm trying to keep patient."

Pursuit

he shot an impressive 59.

He thought he might be headed for a similar performance Friday.

"I thought it was going to come again," said Hewett, who is 37 and originally from Midland, although he only moved back to the Tall City last year after spending eight years in Dallas. "I was 5-under after six, but just had some bad bounces. That's golf."

Despite having the second lowest score of the day, Luttrell came in feeling like he had left about 10 strokes out on the course.

"I really felt like I hit it pretty well most of the day," said Luttrell, 37, who won the city championship as a 19-year-old in 1995. "I just missed a couple putts. I feel like I left like 10 (shots out on the course). Yeah, probably 10 shots."

Luttrell had just two bogeys the entire day with the first coming at No. 4. He managed to birdie No. 6, though, and finished the front nine at even par. The former city champion and Midland Country Club golf pro finally got in a groove on the back nine, picking up birdies on four of the final six holes, although a bogey at No. 17 was mixed in as well.

Luttrell says this was the best he hit the ball in "a long time," but also admits he's got to make some of the short putts he missed Friday if he wants to overtake Jeffers and win his second city championship.

"If I do what I did (Friday) again (today), then there's no telling how much worse off I could be," Luttrell said. "But this is the best I've hit in a while. I'm just trying to stay focused, play it hole by hole and make birdies. There's some guys out here who can really shoot low. I've got to continue to shoot low as well."

Lochte wins 2 golds on epic night of swimming

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Wearing fluorescent orange sneakers, Ryan Lochte eased out of his seat and moved gingerly toward the exit of the Palau Sant Jordi.

It was the first time he was slow all night.

"My whole entire body is hurting," Lochte moaned. "There's no other way to put it — I'm sore."

No kidding.

On a night when Missy Franklin finally lost, Lochte turned in an epic performance at the world championships Friday. He swam three races in less than two hours, coming away with two gold medals and the top time in an event he's competing in for the first time at a major international meet.

Certainly, this grueling triple was worthy of a "Jeah!" — Lochte's silly catchphrase that echoed through the arena every time he dove in the water.

"Unbelievable," said no less an authority than Bob Bowman, Michael Phelps' former coach. "An incredible night of swimming."

No one could find any record of someone competing in three races in the same session at either the worlds or the Olympics. Phelps, for all his accomplishments, never did it at one of the major international meets.

Bowman was asked where Lochte's performance ranked in swimming history. He immediately thought of the night in this same arena, a decade ago, when Phelps broke world records in different events on the same night.

"It's up there with stuff like that," Bowman said.

Lochte won the 200-meter backstroke, posted the fastest time in the semifinals of the 100 butterfly, and put the Americans ahead to stay with a strong leg in the 800 freestyle relay. Not bad for a guy who took a long break after the London Olympics and slacked off on his training while filming a reality television show, "What Would Ryan Lochte Do?"

MLB faces Monday drug deal deadline

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez was back with the Trenton Thunder on Friday and hit what might be his last home run in a while.

Pressure to get suspensions over with before the playoffs could force an end to negotiations in baseball's latest drug scandal.

Monday appears to be the deadline for Rodriguez and 13 others to accept suspensions for their ties to the Biogenesis of America anti-aging clinic. While A-Rod is expected to get a lengthy ban, a penalty starting that day would allow Texas All-Star outfielder Nelson Cruz to return for October.

Major League Baseball is prepared to issue two simultaneous announcements no later than Monday, a person familiar with the process told The Associated Press on Thursday. One would list players who accept suspensions; the other would name those disciplined without deals, but who could challenge penalties before an arbitrator.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because no statements were authorized.

Most players face 50-game suspensions for their links to the now-closed Florida clinic, which has been accused of distributing banned performance-enhancing drugs.

But baseball is threatening to kick Rodriguez out for life unless the three-time AL MVP agrees to a long ban, perhaps around 200 games.

Rodriguez appeared ready to talk Thursday as he was leaving the team's minor league complex in Tampa, Fla., waving a group of writers to his car in the parking lot and rolling down the window. However, when he saw a second group with TV cameras approaching, he said: "I'll talk to you guys, but no cameras."

Rodriguez closed the window and waited a moment, then left without saying another word.

Baseball's highest-paid player with a $28 million salary, Rodriguez played in a simulated game and saw 31 pitches over six at-bats, played third and ran bases.

The Yankees expect A-Rod to be accused of recruiting other athletes for the clinic, attempting to obstruct MLB's investigation, and not being truthful with MLB in the past. Baseball has considered suspending him for violations of its labor contract and drug agreement, which would cause him to start serving his penalty before the case would go to arbitration.

Sidelined following hip surgery in January and then a strained quadriceps, the 38-year-old third baseman hopes to return to the Yankees in a few days. He is to play Friday and Saturday at Double-A Trenton, putting himself in position to rejoin New York for Monday's series opener at the Chicago White Sox if he's not banned.

Barring a rainout this weekend, Cruz's Rangers would have exactly 50 games remaining before they play at the Los Angeles Angels on Monday night. If he files a grievance, as a first offender, the penalty would be delayed until after a decision by arbitrator Fredric Horowitz. But the lengthy legal process likely would risk his eligibility for the playoffs and the start of next season.

Cruz said Thursday he hadn't made any decision about a possible appeal. Asked whether he was told specifically what penalty could be forthcoming, Cruz responded, "No, I cannot tell you. Sorry."

TWINS 4
ASTROS 3, 13 INNINGS

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Dozier's third hit of the game scored Clete Thomas in the 13th inning to lift the Minnesota Twins to a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Right-handed pitcher Kevin Correia pinch-hit in the 13th to sacrifice Thomas to second base. Dozier followed by punching a single to right field for his second RBI of the game to snap Minnesota's four-game losing streak.

ORIOLES 11
MARINERS 8

BALTIMORE — Chris Davis hit his major league-leading 40th home run and Nate McLouth contributed his first career grand slam to a power display that carried the Baltimore Orioles past the Seattle Mariners 11-8 Friday night.

Ryan Flaherty also homered and had a career-high three hits for the Orioles, who never trailed but had to withstand four homers by Seattle.

METS 4
ROYALS 2, 11 INNINGS

NEW YORK — Eric Young Jr. homered with two outs in the 11th inning and the New York Mets overcame a blown lead to beat Kansas City 4-2 on Friday night, snapping the Royals' winning streak at nine.

Young slammed a 3-1 pitch from Luis Mendoza (2-6) over the right-field fence for his first career game-ending hit and just his second home run of the season. It scored Omar Quintanilla, who had walked.

TIGERS 2
WHITE SOX 1

DETROIT — Doug Fister pitched eight impressive innings, Austin Jackson homered and Jose Iglesias drove in a run in his Detroit debut to lead the Tigers over Chicago.

The White Sox lost their eighth straight, while AL Central-leading Detroit has won 10 of 11.

Associate: Hernandez put guns in basement

Associated Press

ATTLEBORO, Mass. — New court records say that an associate of Aaron Hernandez told police the former New England Patriot put guns in a box in his basement after returning from the industrial park where his friend was fatally shot.

An affidavit released by Attleboro District Court says Carlos Ortiz told investigators Hernandez put firearms in the black box after Odin Lloyd's killing. The document indicates one was a small gun Ortiz handed Hernandez after they returned home with another associate, Ernest Wallace. Ortiz said he earlier saw Hernandez with an additional "large handgun."

Hernandez has pleaded not guilty to murder in the death of Lloyd, a 27-year-old Boston semi-professional football player whose body was found June 17 about a mile from Hernandez's North Attleborough, Mass., home. His attorneys have said the case against him is circumstantial and they are confident he will be exonerated.

Authorities believe Lloyd was killed with a .45-caliber Glock, which hasn't been recovered. Prosecutors say video surveillance from Hernandez's home before and after the killing shows him holding a gun that appears to be a Glock.

Police divers have been searching this week in a lake in Bristol, Conn., Hernandez's hometown. Authorities have declined to comment on the search, but have confirmed it is linked to the investigation.

Prosecutors have not said who fired the fatal shots. But court records released in Florida say Ortiz told investigators Wallace said it was Hernandez.

Ex-NBA player Craig Ehlo out of jail

Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. — Former NBA player Craig Ehlo was released from jail Friday and ordered to stay away from family members and his rural Spokane County home.

Superior Court Judge James Triplet set Ehlo's arraignment for Aug. 14 on a charge of first-degree reckless burning, a Class C felony, the Spokesman-Review reported.

Ehlo also was ordered to stay away from fire-starting materials and remain in Washington state.

His lawyer's name wasn't immediately available Friday night.

The 51-year-old Ehlo was arrested early Thursday at his home. Court documents say sheriff's deputies found him being held down by family members near a pile of his burning clothes. The gasoline-fueled fire reportedly damaged an awning and siding at the home. The documents did not provide additional details.

Ehlo was treated for undisclosed injuries before being booked into jail.

Deputy Craig Chamberlin said earlier that deputies learned Ehlo had argued with his wife Wednesday night. Chamberlin said family members reported that Ehlo subsequently piled up clothes next to the garage and set them afire.

The charge he faces carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine, the newspaper said.

He played at Washington State University from 1981 to 1983 and was drafted into the NBA by the Houston Rockets. He played for 14 seasons with the Rockets, Cleveland Cavaliers, Atlanta Hawks and Seattle SuperSonics.

Tiger Woods makes run at 59 at Bridgestone

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — Tiger Woods had a shot at making history with a magical 59.

He swore he wasn't disappointed to come up short.

"Disappointed? Absolutely not," he said.

Then he cracked, "A 61's pretty good. I'm not bummed."

Like a pitcher having to settle for a shutout instead of a perfect game, Woods could console himself by tying his career best and building a seven-shot lead Friday through 36 holes at the Bridgestone Invitational.

Pursuing his eighth victory at Firestone Country Club, Woods opened birdie-eagle — stuffing an approach to 3 feet at the first hole and holing a 20-footer for 3 at the par-5 second. He had two more birdies on the front nine, and had four in a row to start the back nine in a light rain.

Needing to go only 2 under over his last five holes, he missed birdie putts inside 10 feet at 15 and 17. He saved par on the last with a 25-footer after an errant drive and a shot that hit into the trees and ended up in a bare spot short and right of the green.

"How about just pleased?" he said, when asked to rate the round. "I'm very happy I was able to post that. I just kept thinking, whatever lead I had, 'Let's just keep increasing it.' It's at seven now, I believe. So that's not too bad after two days."

The 61 — matching his career best at the 1999 Byron Nelson, 2005 Buick Open and on the same Firestone course back in 2000 — left him at 13-under 127.

Defending champion Keegan Bradley and Chris Wood, playing the tournament for the first time, were tied for second. They each shot 68.

Bradley finished well before Woods, but was asked if it was disheartening to take the lead and then have Woods retake it after the opening two holes.

Tiger Woods celebrates a birdie putt on the 12th hole during the second round of the Bridgestone Invitational on Friday at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio.

"Tiger, those first couple holes out there are definitely birdie holes, so I'd expect him to do that," Bradley said. "You know, I hope he doesn't go too low."

Sorry, Keegan.

Woods, a four-time winner this year, needed only 22 putts, eight fewer than he had Thursday in an opening 66. He hit 10 of 14 fairways and was on in regulation on 16 of 18 greens.

The next best score on a threatening day with a slate-gray sky and precipitation was a 66.

It seemed every fan on the course took notice as Woods started stacking up birdies. The magic number 59 — shot five times on the PGA Tour — dominated conversations.

"Oh, they were excited," Woods said. "You could hear it more than feel it. You definitely could hear it. They were into it."

Asked if that kind of electricity helps out a player, he joked, "It's nice to be playing in front of people who are excited like that, especially people who aren't yelling just because your ball gets in the air. You know, we are pros."

How good were things going for him? He yanked a drive into the trees at 13, but it ricocheted into the middle of the fairway. From there he hit an iron to 15 feet and drilled the putt.

At the 14th, Woods hit his drive on the other side of the cart path beneath a canopy of huge trees to the right. He was forced to hit a low, hard, slicing shot to the green that ran to the back fringe. From there, he chipped 10 feet past but rolled in the par putt.

The gallery seemed to swell with each hole, the crowds growing in hopes of seeing history.

He stepped off his shot into the 216-yard, par-3 15th because he was bothered by a bug, then hit an iron 10 feet short of the pin. After playing partner Hideki Matsuyama of Japan putted out, Woods missed his birdie putt on the right side.

Johnson wins 2nd pole of the season

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa. — Jimmie Johnson needed multiple attempts to make it through pre-qualifying inspection, then set a track record with a lap of 180.654 mph to win the pole Friday at Pocono Raceway.

Kyle Busch? He could only think the five-time Sprint Cup champion and crew were up to no good.

Johnson went 29th instead of his scheduled 24th spot, and the later start under the clouds as the track got faster may have given him an advantage over the cars that went out under the sun. Johnson had inspection issues last month at New Hampshire and used another late start to qualify third until his time was scrapped after the No. 48 failed inspection.

Are Johnson and crew chief Chad Knaus just working around the rules? Or can they simply not get the car in tune in time for inspection?

"A lot of these other teams figure out how to play by the rules," Busch said. "It seems like there's one that's sometimes late. Quite often, more than the rest."

Busch will start second and Carl Edwards third. Ryan Newman, last week's race winner at the Brickyard, starts fourth. Kurt Busch is fifth.

Johnson is tied with Matt Kenseth with a series-high four wins this season and he leads the points standings as he chases his sixth championship. Johnson is in position to go for the season sweep at Pocono, where he won from the pole in June. Johnson took that pole after the field was set on points because rain washed out qualifying.

Johnson took the top spot this time after a second pass through inspection. NASCAR determined the tow on his Chevrolet was off by one-thousandth of an inch — just enough to make Busch suspicious.

"There's been some times this year where those guys go through four, five, six times and they're always late," Busch said. "Every time they're late, they're always fast. Maybe we need to be late."

Johnson, never one to exchange in a verbal spat, brushed off Busch's comments.

"It's only (a few) spots, now. It didn't make a difference," he said. "I wish there was some master plan behind it all. They're welcome to try it. They're welcome to experience the stress that goes with it. My heart was pounding out of my chest trying to get in the car and beat the clock. I don't wish that kind of stress on anybody. ... It's not what I want to go through."

Maybe not. But it worked at Pocono.

Johnson seemed poised to win the pole last week at Indianapolis until Newman topped him on the last qualifying attempt of the day. This time, he would not be denied as NASCAR saw its 11th track qualifying record set this season by the Gen-6 car.

Joey Logano's old mark of 179.598 mph was topped by six drivers, including Logano. Johnson also set the track record at Martinsville Speedway this season. He now has 31 poles in 420 career Cup starts.

"Track records are cool," Johnson said. "It makes all the drivers and teams smile."

Just not an irked Kyle Busch.

"I wish we went later," he said. "I think we would have had a better racetrack that was 10 degrees cooler, at least."

Johnson had the car to beat last week in Indianapolis until Newman spoiled the day with a surprise win. Johnson's crew botched the final pit stop that allowed Newman to pull away.

"It absolutely stung. It wasn't fun for any of us," Johnson said. "But the best thing we could do is get back to our jobs and, fortunately or unfortunately, forget about Indy and move on. The faster we move on from that the better we are going to do here."

IndyCar updates rules heading into Mid-Ohio

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ohio — IndyCar has updated its rulebook following a series of late-race issues last month in Toronto. The new rules will go into effect this weekend at the Indy 200 at Mid-Ohio.

Under the new guidelines, when there is a restart with 15 or fewer laps remaining all lapped cars will move to the back of the field.

Also, if a penalty is called during the race but cannot be served due to circumstances, the race director will have the right to review the penalty after the race's conclusion. The race results will be considered provisional until the review is completed.

The policies regarding tire usage were also modified. Under the new policy, if a tire is damaged during the race, the two-lap requirement for that type of tire will be fulfilled.

MLB faces Monday drug deal deadline

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez was back with the Trenton Thunder on Friday and hit what might be his last home run in a while.

Pressure to get suspensions over with before the playoffs could force an end to negotiations in baseball's latest drug scandal.

Monday appears to be the deadline for Rodriguez and 13 others to accept suspensions for their ties to the Biogenesis of America anti-aging clinic. While A-Rod is expected to get a lengthy ban, a penalty starting that day would allow Texas All-Star outfielder Nelson Cruz to return for October.

Major League Baseball is prepared to issue two simultaneous announcements no later than Monday, a person familiar with the process told The Associated Press on Thursday. One would list players who accept suspensions; the other would name those disciplined without deals, but who could challenge penalties before an arbitrator.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because no statements were authorized.

Most players face 50-game suspensions for their links to the now-closed Florida clinic, which has been accused of distributing banned performance-enhancing drugs.

But baseball is threatening to kick Rodriguez out for life unless the three-time AL MVP agrees to a long ban, perhaps around 200 games.

Rodriguez appeared ready to talk Thursday as he was leaving the team's minor league complex in Tampa, Fla., waving a group of writers to his car in the parking lot and rolling down the window. However, when he saw a second group with TV cameras approaching, he said: "I'll talk to you guys, but no cameras."

Rodriguez closed the window and waited a moment, then left without saying another word.

Baseball's highest-paid player with a $28 million salary, Rodriguez played in a simulated game and saw 31 pitches over six at-bats, played third and ran bases.

The Yankees expect A-Rod to be accused of recruiting other athletes for the clinic, attempting to obstruct MLB's investigation, and not being truthful with MLB in the past. Baseball has considered suspending him for violations of its labor contract and drug agreement, which would cause him to start serving his penalty before the case would go to arbitration.

Sidelined following hip surgery in January and then a strained quadriceps, the 38-year-old third baseman hopes to return to the Yankees in a few days. He is to play Friday and Saturday at Double-A Trenton, putting himself in position to rejoin New York for Monday's series opener at the Chicago White Sox if he's not banned.

Barring a rainout this weekend, Cruz's Rangers would have exactly 50 games remaining before they play at the Los Angeles Angels on Monday night. If he files a grievance, as a first offender, the penalty would be delayed until after a decision by arbitrator Fredric Horowitz. But the lengthy legal process likely would risk his eligibility for the playoffs and the start of next season.

Cruz said Thursday he hadn't made any decision about a possible appeal. Asked whether he was told specifically what penalty could be forthcoming, Cruz responded, "No, I cannot tell you. Sorry."

Associate: Hernandez put guns in basement

Associated Press

ATTLEBORO, Mass. — New court records say that an associate of Aaron Hernandez told police the former New England Patriot put guns in a box in his basement after returning from the industrial park where his friend was fatally shot.

An affidavit released by Attleboro District Court says Carlos Ortiz told investigators Hernandez put firearms in the black box after Odin Lloyd's killing. The document indicates one was a small gun Ortiz handed Hernandez after they returned home with another associate, Ernest Wallace. Ortiz said he earlier saw Hernandez with an additional "large handgun."

Hernandez has pleaded not guilty to murder in the death of Lloyd, a 27-year-old Boston semi-professional football player whose body was found June 17 about a mile from Hernandez's North Attleborough, Mass., home. State: Bar that served Cowboys may have violations

By Nomaan Merchant
Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas nightclub where former Cowboys player Josh Brent last stopped before being involved in a fatal crash that killed a teammate may have over-served patrons that night, state liquor authorities said Friday.

The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission said its investigators found "sufficient evidence" that Beamers Private Club in Dallas sold alcohol to an already intoxicated person either late Dec. 7 or early Dec. 8 and conducted "practices that promote excessive consumption by patrons."

Brent is charged with intoxication manslaughter in the Dec. 8 crash that killed Jerry Brown, a practice squad player and Brent's college teammate. He is scheduled for trial next month, and faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted, though he could also get probation.

TABC did not name Brent, but acknowledged that it wouldn't continue its case against Beamers until Brent's criminal case ends. The agency declined to release its full report.

Lt. John Graham of TABC said investigators think Beamers Private was Brent's last stop before the crash in the Dallas suburb of Irving. TABC did not interview Brent, but spoke to others who were at the bar that night, Graham said.

Beamers Private could lose its liquor license as a result of the investigation, Graham said.

Owners of Beamers Private did not immediately return an email and a phone message.

Brent retired from the Cowboys last month after his career was placed on hold.

"I am at a point where my main focus is all about getting the priorities in my life in order," Brent said in a statement provided by the team last month. "Those priorities are more important than football. Doing the right things in life are more important than football. I love the game very much. I love my teammates, but this is the right thing for me to do."

Irving police have accused Brent of driving with a blood-alcohol content more than twice the legal limit the night of the crash. His attorney, George Milner, has filed a motion to have the blood test performed on Brent thrown out. A judge has not yet ruled on that request.

Cowboys scrambling as injuries decimate OL

By Schuyler Dixon

OXNARD, Calif. — The Dallas Cowboys are suddenly so thin on the offensive line, they grabbed a player who lives 10 minutes from training camp in California.

Good thing they at least had James Nelson in rookie camp in May, even if they decided not to sign him then. Funny what a little personnel emergency can do for someone who went to high school in nearby Ventura after finishing his college career at Texas-El Paso.

"They called and asked, 'Hey, are you in Oxnard,'" said Nelson. "I said, 'Yeah.'"

Nelson will be in Canton, Ohio, on Sunday night, and should play in the preseason-opening Hall of Fame game against Miami — three days after he signed. He says coaches told him to expect to play in the fourth quarter.

It would probably be even earlier if Nelson played guard. The Cowboys don't have many healthy ones after starter Nate Livings underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee for the second time in six months on Friday.

Livings had recurring problems with the knee about the same time Kevin Kowalski, a backup, was sidelined with a bruised knee.

Dallas even lost a guard they signed along with Nelson on Thursday. Jeff Olson, a rookie from TCU, sustained a possible concussion in his first workout and his return was uncertain.

It's unlikely Kowalski will return before the end of camp. Livings, who missed the first week of camp with a cut on his foot, may not be ready for the season opener Sept. 8 against the New York Giants.

"We don't think it was too severe," coach Jason Garrett said. "We just want to clear that thing up. It's very early. Better to address those things right now and give those guys a chance to be ready for the start of the season."

There was a bit of good news Friday with the return of Mackenzy Bernadeau, the other starting guard. He has missed all of camp after straining a hamstring in the pre-camp conditioning test.

Garrett and Bernadeau said the guard's return had nothing to do with the dire circumstances at his position.

"We play it safe," Bernadeau said. "It's unfortunate that we have had a lot of injuries along the interior line. But I am at a comfort level where I feel all right and I will take some days off afterwards."

Bernadeau won't play in the opener, but Garrett still hasn't officially said whether quarterback Tony Romo will play. He suggested to the team's flagship radio station a week ago that Romo would sit because the Cowboys have an extra preseason game.

He offered some of the same reasoning Friday when asked whether injuries on the offensive line would keep Romo from playing.

"Typically (starters) don't play a lot in the first preseason game of the four-game preseason schedule," Garrett said. "Certainly the environment you have for any of the players you are playing, you want it to be favorable."

Houston Texans safety D.J. Swearingen, right, hits tight end Adam Schiltz, left, during the team's training camp Tuesday in Houston.

Swearinger's swagger a boost to Houston secondary

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texans rookie safety D.J. Swearinger doesn't know exactly what makes him so confident. He's had a swagger since he was little.

His fearlessness was helped by an encouraging mother and her karate teacher who shared what he called a warrior's creed with a young Swearinger. That creed, which is tattooed on the back of his right triceps, begins with the words: "I am never defeated."

It's a mantra that has helped the South Carolina standout throughout his football career, and has served him well as he's wowed the Texans in the early days of training camp.

"You can't think twice about anything," Swearinger said. "If you think twice about making a tackle or an interception, it messes with your mind a little bit. You've got to go through everything with confidence."

The second-round pick is already behaving like a seasoned veteran. That's something the Texans could need if Ed Reed isn't healthy by the season opener and Swearinger has to start in his place. Coach Gary Kubiak isn't surprised by his development and said his maturity is one of the reasons they drafted him.

"We knew that's what we were getting from our interviews with him and being around him, but I don't think we had any idea he was this mature in what he does as a football player," Kubiak said. "We expected it, but with Reed being out, it's been even more. He's going to be a big part of this team."

Swearinger has long looked up to Reed and can barely believe that he has the chance to be teammates with the nine-time Pro Bowler. Though Reed isn't yet practicing, the rookie is constantly peppering him with questions and trying to soak up his knowledge.

Swearinger joined the Texans after starting for four seasons at South Carolina where he developed a reputation as one of the hardest hitting defensive backs in the Southeastern Conference. He had 79 tackles, two interceptions, seven pass breakups, two forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries last season for the nation's second-ranked defense. He finished his career with 244 tackles, six interceptions and four forced fumbles in 52 games.

He believes his time playing for coach Steve Spurrier prepared him for success in the NFL.

"In college I played every position in the back end so it helped me a whole lot," Swearinger said. "Coach Spurrier threw a lot of things at us and I guarded (receivers) in the slot too so it helped me a whole lot. Just a lot of different looks from coach Spurrier and me playing a lot of different positions helped me with the game mentally over all."

Along with his reputation as a hard hitter, Swearinger's also known to talk a lot of trash on the field when he's making plays. He wouldn't share any of the go-to lines he uses on opponents, but flashed a wide smile when asked about it.

"I have been talking trash with football all my life since little league," he said. "Whenever I am taking trash that's me having fun and me being myself."

He's also found a way to funnel that affinity for trash talking into a favorite hobby. Swearinger is an aspiring rapper and has even released a mixtape with a friend on a popular rap website.

On the album, he goes by the name Jungle Boi and raps about life on an off the field, even including lines about his hard-hitting style.

Though he loves to rap, he probably won't have much time to work on his craft during the season.

"It was just something fun to do," he said. "Now I'm concentrating on football."

Eclectic group to enter Pro Football Hall of Fame

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — While his six other classmates for this weekend's enshrinement sported blue golf shirts given them by the Pro Football Hall of Fame, Cris Carter was dressed in suit and tie.

He might never take them off.

"Man, I am in the Hall of Fame. I am wearing a suit every day," Carter said Friday as the 50th anniversary festivities for the hall began.

Carter will join Jonathan Ogden, Larry Allen, Bill Parcells, Warren Sapp, Dave Robinson and Curley Culp as the newest inductees today. He was, by far, the most emotional during a news conference Friday as festivities began for the 50th anniversary celebration of the hall.

The only member of the Class of 2013 who didn't win an NFL title, Carter used a handkerchief to wipe away the tears when asked about his career and the fact it took six tries to get elected.

"Minnesota fans didn't judge me when a lot of bad things were being said about me," Carter said, frequently pausing to regain his composure. "They always cheered for Cris. The only thing I really wish is we could've won that championship for those people. What they did for my life, every day I went out there, I played for those people."

Carter was exiled from Philadelphia in 1989 after off-field problems, including drug and alcohol issues. The first one to call him and offer a job was Parcells.

Carter even told his agent he wanted to go to the Giants, but he wound up with the Vikings, who had a stronger need for a wide receiver. All Carter did the rest of his 16-season career was wind up second at his retirement in 2002 behind Jerry Rice for all-time receptions and touchdowns. He's fourth in those categories now.

As he mentioned, though, he doesn't have that championship. For the other six, those Super Bowl rings will have a blinding shine to them tonight.

Parcells was a winner of two NFL titles as a coach and master of the franchise turnaround. Ogden, one of the premier offensive tackles of his time, grabbed a Super Bowl ring in 2000. Larry Allen, a 1995 champion with Dallas, was the rare equal of Ogden on the offensive line in their era.

Sapp, an outstanding defensive tackle with a personality as big as any football stadium, won the 2002 championship in Tampa Bay. Robinson, a major cog in Green Bay's championship machine under Vince Lombardi, won the first two Super Bowls. Culp, one of the original pass-rushing demons at defensive tackle, got his ring with the 1969 Chiefs.

Quite a group, and a record 121 hall members are expected to attend the ceremonies.

"It's somewhat overwhelming," said Ogden, the Baltimore Ravens' first-ever draft choice and the first team member elected to the hall. "You look around and there's Joe Greene and Joe Namath — heck, they are all there, you can't stop naming names."

Ogden, Allen and Sapp have the distinction of making the hall in their first year of eligibility. It's all the more impressive considering all three were linemen.

Allen became the anchor of the Cowboys' blocking unit for a dozen seasons, then finished his career with two years in San Francisco. He made six All-Pro teams and 11 Pro Bowls, playing guard and tackle.

"It's great, great company to be in," said Allen, who Cowboys executive vice president Stephen Jones believes "would have been a Hall of Famer at guard or tackle, and either side. He was special like that."

Adds Curtis Martin, the Jets and Patriots running back who was inducted last year: "If there were two guys I would have wanted to run behind, it would be Larry and Jonathan."

Sapp, whose induction speech might be the most anticipated because he's liable to say anything, was a cornerstone of Tampa Bay's powerful defense that was the key to winning the Buccaneers' only title after decades of futility.

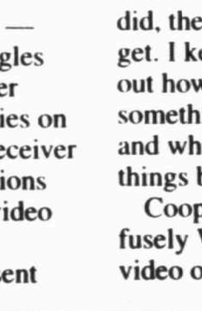
"We took a place where they said careers came to die to a place that's become a destination," Sapp said, noting the Tampa 2 scheme is now played by defenses everywhere.

Eagles excuse Cooper from team after racial slur

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles excused Riley Cooper from all team activities on Friday as the wide receiver deals with repercussions of being caught on video making a racial slur.

Cooper has been sent away from the team to get help with his issues, something the player and the team agreed upon. Coach Chip Kelly made it clear after Friday's practice, however, that Cooper would be back with the team when he's ready.



Cooper

"There has never been any question of cutting Riley," Kelly said. "His status with us is not in question."

Cooper said the last few days have been incredibly difficult and he will step away to seek counseling.

"My actions were inexcusable," he said. "The more I think about what I did, the more disgusted I get. I keep trying to figure out how I could have said something so repulsive, and what I can do to make things better."

Cooper apologized profusely Wednesday after a video of him using a racial slur at a Kenny Chesney concert last month surfaced on the Internet. The Eagles immediately fined him.

"Right now, I think it's important for me to take some time to reflect on this situation," Cooper said. "The organization and my teammates have been extremely supportive, but I also realize that there are people who will have a tough time forgiving me for what I've done. The best thing for me, and for the team, is to step away for a period of time."

'Football-playing dude' has fond memories of Parcells

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

CANTON, Ohio — Bill Parcells once called Dat Nguyen "a football-playing dude," a huge compliment that implied the linebacker was committed, smart, tenacious and tough.

But it wasn't always that way. When Parcells became coach of the Dallas Cowboys in 2003, he cast a skeptical eye at Nguyen, believing the former Rockport-Fulton and Texas A&M star was too small to be an effective, starting NFL linebacker.

Naturally, Nguyen had his suspicions about Parcells as well. But it didn't take long for him to realize the two-time Super Bowl champ was different from any coach he'd ever had.

"I learned more football in four years being around Bill Parcells than I did in the previous 15 that I played," said Nguyen, who played for Dallas from 1999 until injuries forced him to retire in March 2006.

Nguyen had some of his best seasons under Parcells, leading the team in tackles in 2003-2004.

Today, Parcells will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. His lengthy career included four seasons in Dallas, where he turned the Cowboys into winners after three straight 5-11 seasons.

"We weren't a good team (when Parcells arrived in 2003), but we believed in him and feared him," said Nguyen, who remains friends with Parcells, who has twice appeared on the sports talk show Nguyen co-hosts on San Antonio's KZDC-AM.

In addition to admiring Parcells' knowledge, Nguyen marveled at his ability to connect with players.

"He was unique in that he could relate to everybody," said Nguyen, the NFL's first Vietnamese-American standout. "It didn't matter if you grew up in a single-parent home, or with no parents or what your nationality was."

Tony Romo has similar memories. The quarterback became a starter in 2006 after Parcells benched veteran Drew Bledsoe.

"Bill had a big influence on me," Romo said. "He taught me a lot about the game. He had great wisdom in a lot of areas. It wasn't just about how to manage the team. It was about people. It was his ability to know little things you might be thinking. He's pretty gifted at that."

Nguyen remembers Parcells learning about players by roaming the weight room.

"We are taught to lift weights with a two-minute rest between sets," Nguyen said. "Bill would come in and talk to you — 'How you doing? How's the family?' — all the time knowing you have only two minutes to talk. So it came down to: Are you going to sit there and B.S. with him or you going to work?

"It was his way of finding out if he could trust you. He was thinking, 'If I can't trust this player to be committed to doing this, lifting weights, how am I going to trust him when it's fourth and one?' So when he came in, I'd avoid him. There were others that would be like, 'Hey, coach, how you doing?' They were his best friends. But those were the ones he learned he couldn't trust."

ALLEN

a physical to see all the stab scars on his 6-foot-3, 325-pound body.

"I was stabbed when I was 10 years old in the head and shoulder about six times by my next door (12-year-old) neighbor," he said.

Fortunately for Allen, his mother steered him away from further trouble.

"When I was young, I tried to join a gang and my mother found out," he said. "She sent me to the rival gang's high school and said, 'We'll see how bad you really are.' That kept me out of gangs."

Selected by Dallas in the second round, Allen excelled early at tackle. But he played most of his career at guard and is considered one of the two best players to play the position, with New England's John Hannah being the other.

"Larry would have been a Hall of Famer at guard or tackle, and either side," Stephen Jones said. "He was special like that. He has to be one of the strongest guys to play the game."

Dat Nguyen will attest to that. The former Cowboys linebacker faced Allen in practice for seven seasons.

"He made me a better player because I had to do everything right when I faced him," Nguyen said. "If you didn't have the right technique facing Larry Allen, you were going to be on your back."

Nguyen remembers a drill Bill Parcells ran during the first 10 minutes of practice called "five across" that placed the offensive linemen and front-seven defenders across from each other 5 yards apart. Parcells would go down the line, blowing the whistle to trigger collisions.

"Whenever I drew Larry, I would shake my head because I knew it was going to be a long day," Nguyen said. "But any time I drew anybody else, it was going to be easy. I knew my practice would be better because I wasn't going to be wearing myself out in the first 10 minutes of practice, hitting a brick wall."

Former teammates, friends and family hope the famously shy Allen doesn't hit any brick walls in his speech Saturday night.

"My oldest daughter is working with me on it," Allen said. "It's about seven to 10 minutes…It's going to be rough."

But not nearly as rough as it was for those who faced him in NFL trenches.

Teen mom bemoans influence boyfriend has on her mother

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who lives with my mother and my mother's boyfriend. This man has changed my world, and not for the better. The one person I ever cared about has practically turned against me.

My mom tried killing herself for this man and chose him over me after she was released from the institution. I have been diagnosed with depression and have also tried to kill myself. I also have a habit of cutting myself. I stopped, but lately I have been wanting to start again. The only thing that has held me back is her threats of committing me to an institution.

She threatened my boyfriend with the police if he ever spoke to me again after we broke up. When I confronted her, she insisted that she was right and someday I'd understand. She has turned into this person I hardly know, and it's because of her boyfriend's influence. Before, when she was upset she would just not talk to me, but now she calls me the most horrid things and won't apologize unless someone besides me tells her.

I feel so alone. I honestly do want to kill myself, but I haven't because I know it isn't the right thing to do, even if it may seem right. I have tried talking to her. She won't listen to me. What should I do? — HOPELESS AND ALONE IN FLORIDA

DEAR HOPELESS AND ALONE: Because you honestly do want to harm yourself, contact the doctor who diagnosed you with depression. However, if this is about your mother breaking up your romance by threatening to involve the police, you need to understand that the tactic wouldn't have worked unless he had something to fear.

The level of conflict in your home is not healthy. If you are still in school, discuss this with a trusted teacher or school counselor. In one more year you will be 18 and able to make decisions for yourself, but they shouldn't be based on your mother or her boyfriend. They need to be about what is truly best for you.

DEAR ABBY: I hate funerals. My grandfather died when I was 6, and one of my relatives held me over the casket and made me kiss his cold, dead face. It terrified me, and it's all I can remember of my grandfather. I force myself to recall any of the good times we had together, but that event still taints the good memory.

Since then, every funeral I have been to has had the same poisoning effect, no matter what the service was. Funerals are for the living, and I understand that many people feel the need for closure and the sharing of grief to begin healing. But I need to keep my grief and my faith private in order to heal.

I'm sure some people think my not showing up at a service is a sign of disrespect or just not caring. Nothing could be further from the truth. I prefer to remember the good times with the loved one, not the passing. My way of honoring that person is to keep my happy memories untainted.

Am I wrong? Selfish or lazy? Weird or crazy? Please let me know because at my age I'm sure more of these events will happen. — KEEPING MY DISTANCE IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR KEEPING YOUR DISTANCE: You are none of the above. People grieve in different ways. An appropriate way to express your respect for the deceased and your support for the survivors would be to write a condolence letter expressing those feelings and sharing a happy memory with the grieving widow, widower or child. No rule of etiquette demands that you show up to a funeral — unless it happens to be your own.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 3, 2013:

This year you will experience a lot of good luck if you are able to center yourself and follow your instincts. In fact, you might be surprised at how well you land. If you are single, the people you attract could be emotionally unavailable. Remember, it takes only one person to be the right one. If you are attached, the two of you make an excellent couple. Sometimes you enjoy going off together without anyone else; other times, you like having your own downtime. CANCER understands you better than you do!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You could be met by some resistance, even if you have good intentions. Focus on your family, specifically one or two individuals. If you have had a lot of difficulty with a particular person lately, today is not the day to smooth things over. Tonight: Stay close to home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You could be overwhelmed by everything you want to get done. The good news is that you will enjoy crossing tasks and responsibilities off your to-do list. Someone might be upset if you do not make plans with him or her. Reach out to this person. Tonight: Talk up a storm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Head to a fair or maybe a casino, as you naturally will have a great time around a lot of people. The observer in you will be delighted by the eccentric crowd around you. Keep to your budget, and don't allow your spending to get out of control. Tonight: Make it your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You have a warmth about you that few people would think to doubt, as you are so genuine. Your natural charm draws in exactly what you desire. Through a loved one, you could meet someone very interesting who could become a long-term friend. Tonight: Just be yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Touch base with a loved one with whom you don't often have time to visit. Taking off for the day together could be immensely rewarding. You even might be tempted to cancel other plans you made for later in the day. Tonight: Remember, you don't need to share everything!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Once you join friends, whether it's for a community project or at a ballgame, you will have a great time. You'll discover a new sense of camaraderie with one of your friends or perhaps someone new. A loved one could become jealous. Tonight: Don't play into a control game.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Know when to defer to an older friend or relative. You could be overwhelmed by everything you want to accomplish, especially when it comes to fulfilling others' wishes. Listen to news openly, and if you believe someone is wrong, avoid getting into an argument. Tonight: At home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Be more forthright when dealing with a sibling or loved one. You might want to rethink a situation more carefully. Your awareness of what is needed probably will not be appreciated by this person. Try to take a step back and observe more. Tonight: Go where there is great music.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Plan on spending some time with a friend or loved one you have not seen in a while. Whether it's running errands or seeing a movie together, you will bond on a deep level. One-on-one time keeps this connection close. Tonight: Say "yes" to a fun invitation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ For a while, you might be OK with someone stealing the stage, but as the day goes on, you will notice that your temper starts to flare up. Try not to give so much of yourself away, and focus on staying levelheaded. Tonight: Claim responsibility for your share of a problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You have certain plans and projects that you feel you must complete no matter what. To your delight, you will complete them with ease, and you also will be able to fit in some fun shopping or join friends for a spontaneous get-together. Tonight: Choose a favorite stressbuster.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Allow more of your creativity to flow. You might not recognize your limitations in a situation involving friends. Do not accept a leadership role, even if it is something as simple as throwing a party. In fact, remain as uninvolved as you can. Tonight: Tap into your imagination.

2100 Bradford Ct.

Looking for a house with all the extras? Do you like the sound of a quiet street, corner lot, Plantation shutters and blinds, tall ceilings, pocket doors, built ins, beautiful tile, plush carpet and wood flooring? 2100 Bradford Ct. has all this and more! Located in Polo Park Estates, it was built in 1992 with 3101 square feet (per MCAD) and features five bedrooms, three full baths, one half bath, two living areas, two dining areas, a three car garage and covered porch. Schools for this area include Santa Rita Elementary, Goddard Jr. High and Midland High.

Constructed of red brick, the front is surrounded by flowerbeds full of mature shrubs, while oak trees shade the yard. As you enter, you will notice the beautiful wood flooring, tall ceilings and the warm paint colors used in the rooms. This home has been well taken care of by the owners! To the left of the entry is the formal living area where a fireplace is at one end and opposite are built-in bookshelves and cabinets. Arched windows surround the fireplace and provide a view of the front yard. To the right of the front door is the formal dining area where there is a modern decorative chandelier. A stone insert in the floor is just the spot for your dining table!

Ahead of the entry is the warm and inviting den where there is a second fireplace! Bookshelves, cabinets and two closets provide areas for keeping items tucked away. Pocket doors have been used throughout the home and one leads back to the formal living area; another takes you to a hallway where there is a full bathroom and two bedrooms. Both bedrooms have ceiling fans and walk-in closets. These bedrooms also have windows looking to the side yard.

Another doorway off the den takes you to a half bath and the spacious laundry room complete with a skylight. Cabinets, a sink and hanging space make this a great work area!

You will also find access to the three car garage; a door in the garage leads to the back porch.

Your new kitchen is open to the den so you can always be included in activities! White cabinets and countertops, stainless appliances, center island and skylight make this a kitchen where you will enjoy cooking! Windows look out to the covered porch and a breakfast nook provides seating. A built-in desk with shelves makes a great organization center.

To the right of the entry is a hallway leading to the remaining three bedrooms. Two are connected by a Jack and Jill bathroom with dual sinks and cabinets for storage. Both rooms have ceiling fans, blinds and walk-in closets.

The spacious master is at the end of the hall with windows looking to the side of the house as well as a door leading to the covered porch. The bath is bright and cheery with a skylight, dual sinks and dressing areas and a huge wrap around his and hers walk in closet.

Additional amenities to this home include: covered patio, automatic sprinkler system, two fireplaces, skylights, crown molding, corner lot, beautiful tile, wood and carpeting. This immaculate home is listed at $389,000. More information may be obtained by contacting Sandy J. Hanson at (432) 638-3819. MLS#95261.

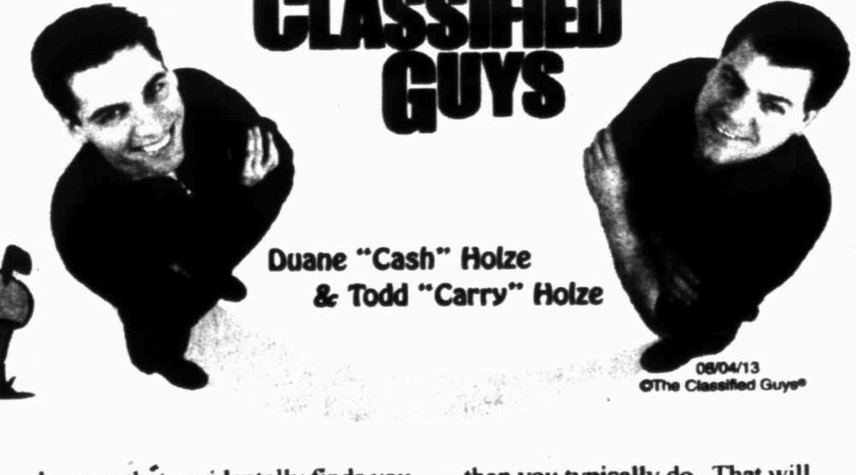
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
I don't get it. Luck just seems to follow my friend Samantha when it comes to yard sales. When I was redoing my living room, I told her I needed several three-foot wide curtain rods. The next week, she handed me seven of them that she found at a yard sale for only a dollar. When she had her baby, she furnished the entire nursery for less than $50, all from yard sales. She had one of the most beautiful cribe I'd ever seen. Then, when her church was starting a day care center, she donated a massive amount of toys in great condition, again from yard sales. I've asked her several times how she comes across these items so cheap. She says it just happens. I go to a few sales, but all I ever seem to buy is someone's old coffee pot or used coffee mugs. I want to find these great bargains too. How can I increase my luck?

Carry: It can be frustrating to see someone else find all the deals, but look at the bright side. You should never have a shortage of coffee mugs.

Cash: While many people believe luck is just something you have or that accidentally finds you, nothing could be further from the truth.

Carry: What you may consider "luck" is more that just accidental. Lucky people are typically those who are good at keeping an open mind or putting themselves in situations that create opportunity.

Cash: For example, your friend may be good at picking yard sales from the classified ads that list items of interest. When she gets there, she probably sees lots of opportunity among all the things, rather than focusing on just the coffee mugs.

Carry: It also sounds like your friend visits a lot more yard sales than you typically do. That will naturally increase her odds of finding a good bargain.

Cash: If you want to increase your luck, start by looking for yard sale ads that match your interests. If you were looking to furnish a nursery, there would be a lot of opportunity shopping a yard sale that lists baby items for sale.

Carry: You could also tag along with your friend on her yard sale excursions. In addition to shopping, you can see first hand how "lucky" she is.

Cash: Although it is possible you're the lucky one. After all, how many people have friends who will shop for them?

Fast Facts

Your Number's Up

The luckiest day of this century may arguable be July 7, 2007 (a.k.a. 07/07/07). Not only did the gaming industry see a rise in participants, but the real fortune was for people getting married, or maybe those in the wedding industry. July 7, 2007 was one of the most popular wedding days in history. An estimated four times as many people tied the knot on that day than any other Saturday. Even celebrities got in on the lucky day. Desperate Housewives star Eva Longoria got married, as did celebrity chef Wolfgang Puck.

Jackpot

When it comes to the lottery, everyone wants to be lucky. About one-half of all adults collectively spend $45 billion annually on 35,000 different lottery games nationwide. But before you pick your next numbers at random, consider this. Many of the state lottery commissions and lottery enthusiasts publish which numbers are most and least common. In Arizona, for example, the numbers 1, 2, 5, 8, and 13 are drawn the least. Of course, maybe the luckiest people are those who save their dollar.

Problem Solved

Every Sunday a bunch of us guys get together to play softball for a few hours. Last week our first baseman, Jim, didn't make the game. Wondering why he missed it, I decide to give him a call.

He immediately apologized and told me that he forgot about the game. Apparently while holding a yard sale, he accidentally sold his wedding video in a box of old VHS tapes.

"My wife was so furious she wanted me to sleep on the couch," he said. "So I had to fix the problem."

"Did you get the video back?" I asked.

"Not quite," he replied. "But I did sell the couch!"

(Thanks to Andy G.)

KEEP THE LIGHT ON PUBLIC NOTICES

When local governments make decisions they are required to publish a newspaper notice to let you know. But that could change.

Local governmental entities across the state want to bury their public notices on little seen, rarely visited government websites.

What you don't know will affect you personally!

If it is not in the newspaper, you won't know about it.
