BILL CLINTON
42nd President

Clinton sworn in...

Vows 'season of renewal has begun'

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Jefferson Clinton solemnly swore an oath as the nation's 42nd president today with a call for a bold "season of American renewal." Tens of thousands of people witnessed the transfer of power to a new generation of leadership.

With a hand resting on a King James Bible given to him by his grandmother, Clinton pledged to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution."

And by those words — uttered by every incoming president since George Washington — the new Democratic chief executive assumed responsibility for the nation's economic woes, its awesome nuclear arsenal and the management of world trouble spots from Iraq to Bosnia to Somalia.

Clinton's emotions were close to the surface. A tear rolled down his cheek as he sat in a front-row pew at an early morning church service and listened to a soulful rendition of "Holy Ground."

Earlier, it was all business, as the outgoing president dispatched national security adviser Brent Scowcroft to Clinton's pre-inaugural quarters across from the White House for a briefing on the world's trouble spots.

A mile or so away at the Capitol, a crowd that would swell to tens of thousands began assembling in the wintry sunshine in anticipation of the first Democratic administration in a dozen years.

Today's simple rite at noon on the Capitol's front porch — two prayers, two oaths, a speech, two songs and a poem — were the peaceful transfer of power that is the mark and glory of the American republic.

Bush, judged by the voters to be indifferent to their economic worries, was a bystander after his years of power.

The Marine Band signalled the transition, set to play "Hail to the Chief" one final time to the outgoing president shortly before noon, and again to the new president a few minutes after.

Bush, the fifth living former-president, arranged to be in Houston before the sun set on Bill Clinton's Washington.

By then, Clinton and his wife, Hillary, will be donning formal clothes to join the celebrating Democrats at 11 inaugural balls, cheering their return to power after a 12-year drought.

First was the parade, traditional, fun-filled, noisy and quirky — witnessed by the Clintons and daughter, Chelsea, from an en-

In Brief

Charged today

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An airman suspected of shooting his wife to death at the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina was charged with murder today in Brownsville and was awaiting extradition.

Jeromy Willis was apprehended at 10:45 p.m. Tuesday in Brownsville at a motel parking lot, said Sgt. Willie Kingsbury.

Following an arraignment this morning, Willis was transferred to the Cameron County jail, where he will await extradition to South Carolina, Kingsbury said.

A car leased by Willis, which was found Tuesday morning in Brownsville, first alerted authorities that he might be in the area.

The car was one of two vehicles rented by Willis two days before his wife, Marie Willis, was shot to death in the base's legal affairs office Jan. 4, Vella said.

One by split vote...

County board appointments approved

Commissioners approved some 22 appointments to county boards during a two-hour meeting this morning, which included a 45-minute closed session to discuss reappointments to the Board of County Development.

Following a closed session, requested by Precinct 2 Commissioner Roy Idom, the court voted 4 to 1 in favor of re-appointing Tim Riggan and Jack Smartt to the BCD.

Prior to the closed session, Idom questioned whether or not Smartt was willing to serve another term, saying he felt the court should do what is fair for all board members.

Idom contacted Smartt, who said he would be willing to serve again if it did not break the county's board policy.

According to policy established by commissioners last year, board members may serve two consecutive terms, and are then required to rotate off the board for one full term.

Those voting in favor of the reappointments included Idom, C.D. Gray Jr., Jerry Gannaway and County Judge Bob Doolittle. Precinct 1 Commissioner Ralph Trevey voted against the motion, but declined to comment on his objection, saying simply that he "voted his conscience."

Commissioners approved reappointments of 16 members to seven other county boards and committees.

Re-appointments approved by the court this morning include, Rodger Blackard and Dub Buchanan to the airport board, James Aaron, Donna Zalman and Rev. Raymond Duncan to the child welfare board, and Carl Smith and Mrs. Albert Lewis to the county welfare board.

Others re-appointed were hospital board members Ted Crenweldge, Doug Foster and Sue Mize, library board members Mrs. J.W. O'Banion, Nona Williams and Peggy Kennedy, coliseum advisory board members Donald Tate and Joni Gonzales, and Kenneth Wilson, who was reappointed by Judge Doolittle to the veteran's land board farm and ranch committee.

The court named Dale Stuard of West Texas State Bank to the veteran's land board, filling the position left vacant by the death of Charlie Henderson. The court named George Page, Anthony Wofford and E.K. Featherston to the county grievance committee, and James Rinehart was named alternate.

Commissioners discussed a policy observed by the Cogdell Memorial Hospital board, stating that if a board member does not attend three consecutive meetings,

Skies over Iraq quiet as Clinton takes office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq offered no challenges today to U.S. warplanes flying patrols in the no-fly zones and appeared to keep a cease-fire pledge in honor of Bill Clinton's inauguration as America's new commander-in-chief.

Hours before the inauguration ceremony, Clinton got an early morning briefing from Brent Scowcroft, President Bush's national security adviser. Bush was at work in the Oval Office.

In Iraq, U.S. planes flew "routine patrols" over the northern and southern zones where U.S. fighters had skirmished the past week with Iraqi jets and ground-based antiaircraft installations, said a senior Pentagon official.

"There were no Iraqi provocations," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There seems to be more and more government control of everything except the national debt and the budget."

Since today starts a new era in national history, we may want to consider ways to improve the tone of the next presidential election.

But things could be worse. The old-fashioned way to settle disputes was cheaper — and faster. Dueling was common in the past, and the TV media boys wouldn't want to get in the firing line.

Last year, Iowa voters were faced with a constitutional amendment that would repeal a law that barred anyone who had ever been in a duel from serving in a public office. The law had been on the books in Iowa since before the Civil War, but no one is sure if it had ever been enforced.

One state senator who opposed appealing the amendment, suggested that pistols at 20 paces might breakup legislative logjams or gridlocks.

Iowa is not the only state. Public office holders in Kentucky must swear that they have never fought in a duel with a deadly weapon within the state or with a citizen of the state.

In Kentucky, one is barred from being a public servant if a person has ever accepted a challenge for a duel, or even acted as a second to a participant in a duel.

We doubt the value of using deadly weapons to settle disputes, but we know a few guys who grew up in a large family who fondly recall how most disagreements were quickly settled.

One guy claims that a good fist-fight with his brother settled the question and resolved any hard feelings. Plus the issue likely never came up again.

Retired banker Rex Robinson said he wanted us to quit moaning about not getting an invitation to the presidential inauguration.

Robinson was in the office early this week. He handed us an envelope and said, "Here, you can have mine."

We found out Robinson still has some banker left in him. He didn't hesistate to say "no" when we asked him for a loan to make the trip.

Cultures clash at super collider project

DALLAS (AP) — A team of about 30 Russian scientists and engineers are trying to unlock the meaning of both the universe and Texas as they work on the $8.25 billion super collider.

So far, the universe is a snap.

Texas, on the other hand, presents some interesting obstacles.

The scientists and their families welcome the abundant food in this country — but aren't sure what to make of guacamole and other dishes.

"It's an acquired taste," quipped Tonya Mitselmakher, whose husband is a physicist at the superconducting super collider.

Seven Russian laboratories have signed agreements to construct or design parts of the project south of Dallas.

The United States government recently signed a formal agreement with the Russians, designed to make cooperation easier and save $200 million in collider costs.

Scientists and their families said they're enjoying Texas.

"My wife even likes Texas weather," said Stupakov. "She doesn't like cold, and Siberia — Novosibirsk — is certainly cold."

Other wives have had a harder time adjusting to life in Texas, said Gail Heilbrunn, hospitality chairwoman of the Collider's Women's Association.

Spouses of visiting scientists are prohibited by immigration laws from working unless they have been invited to posts at the collider. Foreign wives know little [illegible] drive.

"If you're in new country and you don't know very simple things, and you don't know how to decide this problem, it's hard and makes you tense," said Stupakov's wife, Maya, who taught music in Russia.

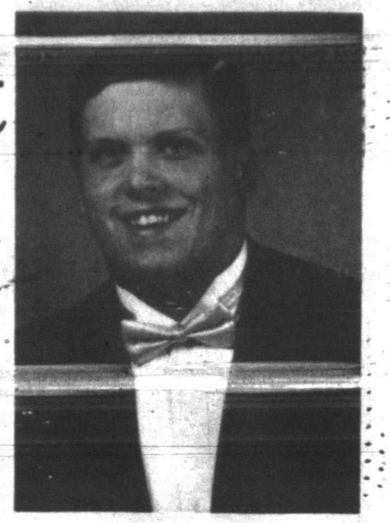

Other wives gave up jobs in education, engineering and other fields to make the move to the Waxahachie area, which the 54-mile underground collider tunnel will encircle.

Valery Mejidzade, an engineer from Novosibirsk, said all the Russians are sending part of their salaries — paid in U.S. currency instead of unstable rubles — home to help relatives.

Physicists from both countries have already learned how to share information — even during the tense Cold War-era 1960s.

"Even when relations on the politics (were) not good, cooperation in physics was steady," Victor Yarba, deputy director at the Institute for High Energy Physics in Protvino, told The Dallas Morning News.

Yarba is spending a sabbatical year at the SSC project.

WILLIAM GALLOWAY

Galloway said in Who's Who

William Galloway has received Who's Who recognition for the fourth time. His biography will appear in the 1992-93 edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students." He is the son of Bill and Lana Galloway.

As a Who's Who student, Galloway will be eligible to apply for a $1,000 scholarship from the $100,000 to be awarded this school year.

Consultants seek advice

AUSTIN (AP) — The project manager for Texas' proposed bullet train says a request for an additional $1 million to conduct an environmental impact study should not be a surprise to the state.

Woodward-Clyde Consultants, the firm contracted by the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority to administer the study, went before the state agency Tuesday to explain why it is seeking from $3.2 million to $3.7 million when the original budget was set at $2.1 million.

Project manager Clint Miller said the company had always planned to reconsider the budget after completing the first phase of the study.

"There's always been an intent to revise at the end of the scoping project, and that's what we're doing now," he said.

Miller said the increase was largely due to the cost of 39 public meetings conducted by the firm on the project.

He said the meetings, which were held last summer in cities around the state, cost about $500,000.

"Going into the project, none of us had any idea it would generate the level of interest that it did," Miller said. "We didn't plan on 4,000 people and answering 10,000 questions."

However, members of the authority questioned the cost of the public forums, which averaged $13,000 per meeting.

"I think maybe we started looking at the public side too much and not the document side," said High-Speed Rail Authority executive director Samuel Goodhope said. "We don't want to exclude public participation, but at the same time we want to make sure it is relevant to what you all are supposed to be addressing."

Woodward-Clyde billed the authority for about $850,000 for fiscal year 1992, but was budgeted for $444,000. The company's budget for fiscal year 1993 was set at $1.2 million.

Overall, Woodward-Clyde has already spent $1.3 million on the study, Goodhope said.

The contract between the firm and the authority does not limit the firm's billings to the amount agreed upon for 1992 and allows for a re-negotiation of the overall fee after the initial phase has been completed, Miller said.

All costs related to operation of the train, including the environmental study, are being paid by Texas TGV Corp., the company selected to build the rail system connecting the state's major cities with a 200 mph train. However, the state must approve any budget revisions.

State law forbids using taxpayer money to fund the bullet train.

Woodward-Clyde will go before the High-Speed Rail Authority Board of Directors Jan. 29 for consideration of budget revisions.

Dog show set Saturday in B-Spring

BIG SPRING — More than 1,000 dogs will be exhibited in Big Spring Saturday and Sunday at the Cotton Cluster of dog shows. The American Kennel Club licensed shows of Big Spring Kennel Club and Concho Kennel Club will be at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Judging begins at 8 a.m. both days and will continue through late afternoon Best in Show competition. An additional feature of the weekend will be an AKC match beginning at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

"Historically, our winter shows in Big Spring and summer shows in San Angelo draw dogs from 20-30 states. Many nationally campaigned champions will be here, including the dogs you may see when the Westminster Kennel Club show is televised from New York Feb. 8-9," said show committee member Carole Owen, Big Spring.

"We love having the champions here, but the backbone of our shows are the dogs that are still working to earn their titles. A dog must earn 15 points to become an AKC champion. Only one female and one male from each breed can win points at each show. Competition is fierce."

Some of the unusual breeds entered are the Shiba-Inu, Harrier, Ibizan Hound, Affenpincher, Chinese Crested, Clumber Spaniel, Sealyham Terrier, French Bulldog, Tibetan Terrier, Pharoah Hound, Pulik and Bouviers des Flandres.

Admission is free.

More dog shows follow the last weekend in January in Odessa. West Texas Kennel Club and Abilene Kennel Cub shows will be Jan. 30-31 at Ector County Coliseum. Call Dottie Slattery, 563-9688, in Odessa for more information.

Bill would close 'revolving door'

AUSTIN (AP) — A state senator is introducing legislation that would prohibit state parole agency employees from representing convicts in parole hearings for two years after leaving the agency.

The Texas Board of Criminal Justice unanimously endorsed such a "revolving door" bill last week. The board said employees of the Department of Criminal Justice's parole division should be prohibited from doing parole-related work for "a reasonable period of time."

That vote followed federal charges filed in Waco against former parole board chairman James Granberry, who was accused of lying under oath about the extent of his parole consulting activity.

Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, said his bill is being introduced because, "We're concerned about someone using the good ol' boy network, and that's what this is designed to stop.

"The people I talk to feel like justice is for sale. It bothers people who are in the system and feel that they can't get a fair shake, and it bothers people whose loved ones have been killed by someone who was let out on parole," Sibley said.

He said the Ethics Commission ruled last October that parole board employees are covered by the state's revolving door law, enacted in 1991, which prevents employees of regulatory agencies from representing clients before their former employers for two years.

Wayne Newton buys mansion

OZARK, Mo. (AP) — Wayne Newton is paying nearly $1 million for a 450-acre spread he'll call home.

"He wanted something very private and that's what he got," said real estate agent Gwen Swearingin. "He's just as welcome as he can be. But it doesn't turn our skirts up or anything, because he's a human being like we are."

The singer will pay $950,000 for the two-story house and land in a wooded area six miles south of Ozark, near Branson, the new entertainment mecca where Newton has a theater, the Springfield News-Leader reported today.

Newton has scheduled 228 performances in Branson this year — twice a day, six days a week, from May through October.

He filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in August with debts totaling $20 million, but he hinted the problems will be resolved by February.

Independent in, Hance out of race

AUSTIN (AP) — Another candidate is in, and one more is out of the special election race for the U.S. Senate.

Lou Zaeske of Bryan, who ran unsuccessfully as an independent candidate for the state Senate in 1990, declared his candidacy Tuesday.

Zaeske, who said he helped coordinate the Ross Perot presidential petition effort in the Brazos Valley region, said he hopes Texans who voted for Perot still are looking for independent voices.

"I am the only candidate in this race who wants to help grassroots Americans take back their government from the party machines, career politicians, lobbyists and special interest groups that have put our government in the mess it is in," Zaeske said.

At the same time, Republican Kent Hance said he won't make the race to succeed Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who is becoming U.S. Treasury secretary.

Hance, who twice has sought the GOP gubernatorial nomination, said his decision was prompted by a combination of business commitments, other Republican candidates and unprecedented Democratic unity.

State Democratic leaders, organized labor and other groups have rallied behind Gov. Ann Richards' appointment of Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger and pledged to support him in the May 1 special election.

"I've been surprised that the Democrats have been so united," Hance said. "I had a lot of business commitments that I just could not get out of. And we've got a lot of good, qualified Republican candidates. I didn't figure we needed another candidate."

Two GOP congressmen, Joe Barton of Ennis and Jack Fields of Humble, have entered the race, along with state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Leta Pool, organizer of Perot's permanent volunteer group, United We Stand America, said they were trying to put together forums for candidates in the special Senate election.

Houston skyscraper is first to use environmentally correct refrigeration

HOUSTON (AP) — The world's most air-conditioned city now has what's being touted as the world's first environmentally correct air conditioned skyscraper.

Managers at the 52-story Texaco Heritage Plaza on Tuesday turned on the last of three 1,050-ton chilling units that have been converted to use refrigerant that is not damaging to the earth's ozone layer.

The completion of the nearly two-year project makes the building the first to be chilled with HCFC-123, rather than CFC-11.

CFC-11 will be banned later this decade under a U.S. Clean Air Act provision that prohibits manufacture of such chlorofluorocarbons.

CFCs are molecules containing chlorine, fluorine and carbon atoms.

Render the enemy harmless

By Phillip Alder

Elsa Maxwell once said, "Enemies are the sauce piquante to my dish of life." She would have been an avid bridge player, particularly enjoying the deals in which it is imperative to keep one enemy or the other off the lead.

In today's deal, you reach three notrump. West leads the heart five and East puts up the king. How do you continue?

First, count your top tricks. There are eight: three spades, one heart, two diamonds and two clubs. You need one more trick.

Seeing that this could come from either black suit, declarer won the first trick with the heart ace and immediately cashed his three top spades. When West discarded a diamond, South continued with three rounds of clubs. However, East won the last and West discarded another diamond. Now the spade jack and a heart through declarer's J-4 produced five more tricks for the defense: two down.

South looked at the West hand. "I knew it," he moaned. "If I had taken my four minor-suit winners and exited with a diamond, West would have been endplayed to give me a trick with the heart jack. Sorry, partner."

"That was a guess," pointed out North. "But you have a much better line available that avoids guesswork. Just cross to dummy in either minor at trick two and play a spade to the eight. You keep East, the danger hand, off the lead and set up a fourth spade trick in the process."

It is important to ensure that the enemy's "sauce piquante" — their strong suit — isn't spicy enough to upset your stomach — I mean, your contract.

Longest survivor with heart pump device dies

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who received a unique portable heart-assist device 16 months ago has died of a stroke, Texas Heart Institute officials said.

Mike Templeton, who died Tuesday, had been the longest-surviving recipient of Thermo CardioSystems Inc.'s HeartMate device.

"While living at the hospital for the past 16 months, Mike had become part of the extended family of St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital and the Texas Heart Institute," said Dr. O. Howard Frazier, chief of cardiopulmonary transplantation at the institute and one of Templeton's physicians. "His Death is a great personal loss to all of us."

Templeton, 34, of Humble, had suffered from cardiomyopathy, a slow deterioration and dilation of the heart and was awaiting a heart transplant. Physicians said Tuesday that strokes are a common occurrence among patients with cardiomyopathy.

Physicians inserted the battery-powered left ventricular assist device on Sept. 3, 1991, when Templeton became too ill to survive for more than a week without it.

Wannstedt accepts head coaching job

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Someday, Dave Wannstedt and Jimmy Johnson will be opposing coaches and Wannstedt, the new head coach of the Chicago Bears, needs to understand one thing: Johnson held back a few tricks.

"The master never teaches too much," Johnson said Tuesday after his good friend and defensive coordinator was hired to replace Mike Ditka.

Johnson gave special permission to the Bears to hire Wannstedt and asked that it be done soon before distractions crippled the Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl preparations.

"I'm proud and happy for Dave," Johnson said. "We've been around each other off and on for 16 years and this is an emotional time for Dave and myself. He will do an outstanding job."

Johnson said he gave Wannstedt permission to chase the Bears job "because I didn't want him to wait until after the Super Bowl. Once he relayed to me which way he wanted to go I wanted it done the first day.

"My mind was on the inevitable," Johnson said. "It was inevitable that he would become a head coach and when it became obvious he would be I wanted it done."

Johnson said he knew it was unusual for an assistant to be allowed to chase a head coaching job in the middle of Super Bowl preparations.

"We haven't always followed the accepted pattern around here," Johnson said. "I knew Dave had a career and a family to think about. I've had to adjust my staff before but of course this will be tougher."

Wannstedt will stay on with the Cowboys through the Super Bowl and Johnson will name a new defensive coordinator later. It was expected to be either line coach Butch Davis or secondary coach Dave Campo.

Offensive line coach Tony Wise could be going with Wannstedt to Chicago, but he won't comment on it until after the Super Bowl against Buffalo in Pasadena, Calif.

Wise and Wannstedt are very close. They even do a radio hamburger commercial together in Dallas.

"That's something we can discuss after we play Buffalo," Wise said. "I haven't talked with anyone about going anywhere."

While the New York Giants were after Wannstedt, it became apparent that he wasn't going to accept a job in the same NFC East division with the Cowboys.

In fact, Johnson said that scenario might have severely tested their friendship.

"I wanted Dave to go where he would have been happy and New York would have been fine," Johnson said. "But, looking back at it, our relationship would have deteriorated if he (Wannstedt) had been in our division. He is one person who understands me probably better than I understand myself. I think our relationship would have diminished."

Johnson gave the players Tuesday and Wednesday off.

"Once Dave gets back here we're talking Buffalo, no more Chicago talk," said Johnson. "We've got to get all of our hard work done here. We've got to get in our game plan. We've heard at the Super Bowl there are more distractions than you every imagined. That's why we want to put everything in this week. We may add a few wrinkles next week but we want the game plan down."

NBA roundup...

Mavericks end losing streak

by The Associated Press

The Dallas Mavericks don't win very often — once a month is their average so far — and when they do, even a veteran like Derek Harper can't resist bringing out the animal metaphors.

"Every dog has his day," Harper said after the Mavericks improved their record to 3-30 with a 113-103 victory over the Detroit Pistons on Tuesday night. "Our team really needed this badly."

The Mavericks avoided a club-record 16th consecutive loss with the upset of the Pistons behind Harper's 26 points and 11 assists.

"Our young guys were really starting to hang their heads and they needed some confidence," he said. "After five or six losses, I was ready to get the monkey off our backs."

Dallas interim coach Garfield Heard, who replaced Richie Adubato on Jan. 13, won for the first time after three defeats.

"I'm the most excited guy in the whole place," Heard said. "Our guys never doubted themselves down the stretch."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Atlanta 102, Charlotte 100; Indiana 116, Washington 96; Portland 119, Milwaukee 92; San Antonio 121, Denver 110; and Houston 102, Sacramento 96.

The Mavericks are still on a pace to break the NBA record for futility in a season, 9-73 by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers.

"They were going to get somebody and we happened to be here," Pistons coach Ron Rothstein said.

The Pistons, who have lost three straight, are playing without leading rebounder and defensive stopper Dennis Rodman, out with a torn calf muscle. In Rodman's absence, Terry Davis had 18 rebounds, the most for Dallas this season.

Doug Smith scored eight of his 18 points during a 27-12 spurt that put Dallas in front for good in the third quarter.

After leading by as many as 14 points early in the final quarter, the Mavericks watched their lead dwindle to 93-89 with 4:48 to play on two free throws by Bill Laimbeer.

But Mike Iuzzolino hit a 3-pointer with 3:18 remaining and Harper followed with a fallaway jumper with 2:50 left to push Dallas' advantage to 102-93.

Isiah Thomas scored 19 points and Joe Dumars 18 for Detroit.

Rockets 102, Kings 96

Houston extended its winning streak to six and Sacramento lost its third forward and third consecutive game at home.

The Kings trailed just 97-96 following Rod Higgins' free throw with 33 seconds left, but Hakeem Olajuwon, who had 27 points and 15 rebounds, converted a three-point play with 7.7 seconds remaining, pushing the Rockets' advantage to 100-96.

Olajuwon finished the scoring with two more free throws after being fouled at the buzzer by Mitch Richmond, who led the Kings with 21 points.

Spurs 121, Nuggets 110

David Robinson had 29 points and 10 rebounds as San Antonio defeated Denver for its seventh consecutive victory, one shy of the franchise record.

Area cage tilts called due to winter weather

Tuesday's winter weather forced the postponement of several area high school basketball games including Snyder's road battle at Plainview, the Class A Ira-Westbrook clash at Westbrook, and Hermleigh's hosting of Highland.

Snyder has rescheduled it's Tuesday contests for Thursday. Boys' and girls' cage action will start at 5 p.m. with junior varsity games at Bulldog Gym.

District 2-4A was able to complete just two sets of games Tuesday. Levelland swept Lamesa, taking a 78-69 win in the boys' game, and a 65-40 victory in the girls' contest, while Frenship posted two wins over Estacado, 97-83 in boys' action, and 63-34 in the girls' game.

Ira will make up its games against the Wildcats on Feb. 15, beginning at 6:30 p.m. and Hermleigh and Highland are still deciding on a make-up date.

District 27-A's other Tuesday game, Blackwell and Loraine, will also have to be rescheduled.

Baylor falls to UH in SWC cage clash

by The Associated Press

Charles Outlaw scored 21 points to help the Houston Cougars remain unbeaten in Southwest Conference play while two other SWC teams were 1-1 in non-conference play.

Outlaw, a juco transfer from South Plains College in Levelland, helped the Cougars take an 83-77 victory over Baylor on Tuesday night. The Cougars are 10-2 overall and 3-0 in SWC play. The Bears lost their five game winning streak and fell to 10-3 overall and 2-1 in conference play.

In non-conference action, No. 15 Nevada-Las Vegas edged Texas A&M 98-96 in overtime and the Texas Longhorns snapped a five-game losing streak with a 79-74 victory over Murray State.

In addition to Outlaw's offensive output, Derrick Smith added 16 of his 18 points in the second half to help the Cougars.

Houston kept pulling away from Baylor, but the Bears wouldn't stay down. They stayed close in the final minute when injured Aundre Branch hit two of his four 3-pointers.

Outlaw ended the threat by blocking a final 3-point attempt by Branch with 22 seconds to play, sealing the Cougars' 10th straight home victory.

J.R. Rider scored 38 points for the Runnin' Rebels in their close-call victory over the Aggies. Dexter Boney added 18 points for UNLV (10-1).

Texas A&M (5-9) scored the game's first six points and led by as many as 14 points before settling for a 46-33 halftime advantage.

The Aggies extended their lead to 15 points in the first minute of the second half before the Rebels began their comeback.

David Edwards had 26 points for the Aggies, including 11 in overtime. Damon Johnson had 22 points and Chuck Henderson hit 21 for the Aggies.

Michael Richardson, formerly of Western Texas College, scored four of his 35 points in the final 45 seconds to lead Texas to the victory over Murray State.

Murray (8-7) went up 74-73 with 2:29 left on a free throw by Maurice Cannon.

But the Longhorns (6-7) regained the lead at 75-74 on two free throws by Richardson with 45 seconds to go. After a turnover by the Racers, Tommy Penders also hit a pair of free throws to give Texas a 77-74 lead with 18 seconds left.

Australian Open...

Seeded players wilt in heat

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Michael Chang and Richard Krajicek wilted in the heat while Jim Courier lost his cool as the sun sent temperatures and tempers boiling at the Australian Open today.

It was a day more fit for sunbathing by the pool than tennis. A half-dozen fans fainted and another 30 or so sought treatment for heat exhaustion as the mercury hit 129 degrees at courtside.

No. 6 Chang, who looked sharp in his first-round match Tuesday, ran into an old nemesis to become the fourth men's seed to lose in three days. He fell 6-4, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 to unseeded David Wheaton, who now holds a 5-1 advantage in head-to-head confrontations.

No. 9 Krajicek, the hard-serving Dutchman, was the third seeded loser when American Todd Witsken, fresh from the snow of Indiana, pressured him from the beginning and took a 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4 second-round victory.

Courier's only real problem in downing Robbie Weiss 6-2, 7-5, 6-4 was with the linesmen. Known for his quiet demeanor, Courier was fined $1,000 for an obscene gesture and also cursed chair umpire Wayne McEwen during his 14-ace performance.

Serving for the match at 5-3, Courier disputed two line calls, cursing angrily, and watched Weiss save two match points enroute to breaking Courier's serve.

At 0-40 on Weiss' serve, Courier complained about another call and was warned by McKewen for an obscene hand gesture. Two points later, Courier ended it with a shot that Weiss, ranked No. 122, couldn't reach.

In other action, No. 8 Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic became the first women's seed to fall, losing to American Robin White in three sets.

No. 1 Steffi Graf and No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini breezed into the third round, losing a combined three games. Also advancing were No. 6 Conchita Martinez, No. 10 Mary Pierce, No. 13 Nathalie Tauziat and No. 16 Zina Garrison-Jackson among the women and No. 7 Petr Korda and No. 15 Sergi Bruguera among the men.

Washington lets its hair down for inaugural

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's getting wild in this normally staid city.

At hotels, convention centers, trendy restaurants and private homes, champagne corks are popping and party gowns swishing. Fleets of limousines line the curbs, traffic is clogged, sidewalks are teeming, but nobody minds.

IT'S A PARTY.

The pulsing inaugural celebration is only stopping long enough today for Bill Clinton's solemn swearing-in before revving back up to a fever pitch with 11 formal balls tonight.

Tuesday night there were parties for causes — animal rights, the homeless — and parties just because.

The Clintons were treated to an extravaganza of Hollywood talent — Jack Lemmon, Barbra Streisand, Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase, to name just a few — joining performers on stage at evening's end to dance to Clinton's theme song "Don't Stop Thinking About Tomorrow," performed by the temporarily reunited Fleetwood Mac.

Hollywood also was well represented at the Animals Ball, a $250-ticket dinner dance hosted by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The sign at the coat check room said it all:

"No furs unless on their original owners."

There were no furs, and very little else, on the waiters and waitresses who sashayed barefoot among the tables in short, backless plastic aprons on which was written: "I'd Rather Go Naked Than Wear Fur."

That point was well illustrated by Elvira, Mistress of the Dark, a pop culture icon and host of horror movies who bared just about all in a low-cut sequined black dress slit to the thigh. "Skin is beautiful whether on animals or humans," she purred.

Elvira, otherwise known as actress Cassandra Peterson, said she doesn't eat meat, doesn't apply cosmetics that have been tested on animals and wears vinyl shoes.

So does "Saturday Night Live" TV star Kevin Nealon — size 13, if you please — who says finding stylish non-leather shoes is so hard he's thinking of having his custom made.

"Animals don't have a voice to protest cruelty. So we have to do it for them," Nealon said.

Actresses Lindsay Wagner and Kathleen Turner — who said she occasionally wears fur but doesn't eat meat — said they were hopeful their cause would be taken up by the new vice president, Al Gore, a committed environmentalist.

Passing the torch and the problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 35-word oath at noon today, and suddenly it's Bill Clinton's budget deficit — and his unwieldy federal bureaucracy and his battle with Saddam Hussein, too.

All presidents present themselves as ready to go on Day One. But soaring inaugural rhetoric aside, Clinton is likely to find that a tall order, as have presidents before him.

The first president to begin a full term since the end of the Cold War, Clinton also is the first to come to power with American forces in combat since Richard Nixon in 1969.

The renewed hostilities in Iraq mean that the Democrat who vowed to focus on the economy must make immediate decisions as the nation's commander in chief.

For instance: Can Clinton respond any other way than with force if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein continues to nibble away at U.N. resolutions? Dare he do less than Bush? But does he want his first act as president to be a belligerent one?

The crises in Somalia and Bosnia are also distracting from Clinton's hopes of giving his full attention to the economy. Already, Clinton's earlier vow to present an economic package by Inauguration Day has slipped by at least a month.

AP news analysis

The first baby boomer to become president, the third youngest man to occupy the White House, Clinton inherits the problems of an aging industrial democracy: a still wobbly economy and a national debt that has soared to $4 trillion.

The nation is in the grips of banking and health-care crises. And foreign competition and cutbacks by U.S. companies have left many of Clinton's fellow baby boomers — and others — on unemployment lines.

Nearly all presidents in their inaugural addresses speak of change and renewal, of remaining strong abroad to remain strong at home, of healing political wounds and drawing together as a nation, of working to end poverty and improve education.

But few presidents are able to live up to their lofty themes.

After a landslide victory, Lyndon Johnson in 1965 talked of "the excitement of becoming — always becoming, trying and always gaining."

Three years later, he was so bogged down in the Vietnam War that he chose not to seek a second term.

Richard Nixon talked of working for change in 1973 after serving four years. "Building a new era of progress at home requires turning away from old policies that have failed," he said.

Ronald Reagan came into office vowing to balance the budget by 1982, then 1984. And he told the nation upon being sworn in in 1981: "We must act today to preserve tomorrow. And let there be no misunderstanding — we are going to begin to act, beginning today."

But the national debt quadrupled in the 12 years that Reagan and Bush held power.

Bush in his 1989 inaugural asserted that "the American people await action. They didn't send us here to bicker. ... And so there is much to do; and tomorrow the work begins."

Yet Bush accomplished little on the domestic front in his four years, getting into increasingly bitter partisan battles with a Democratic-controlled Congress.

For Clinton, Day One has arrived.

Pleas for better security go unheeded until violence erupts

DALLAS (AP) — Courthouse workers who interact daily with litigants angry about the disposition of their cases say pleas for beefed-up security are rarely heeded until violence occurs.

"That's the way it is all over the country. We wait until the horse is out of the gate and then we shut it," said Tarrant County Sheriff's Capt. Tony Wise.

It happened again Tuesday when a man opened fire in the hallway outside the 304th State District Court in Dallas, shooting his wife, who later died and a teenage bystander, before turning the gun on himself as attorneys and others scrambled for cover.

The gunman remained in critical condition Tuesday night and his wife expired about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, said Liz Winter, a Parkland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman. The third person was in good condition with a gunshot wound to the left leg.

The man's wife was waiting outside a courtroom for a hearing on a restraining order she had on her husband when the shooting occurred.

Security has been on the minds of Texas judges and attorneys shaken by last year's shooting spree at the Tarrant County courthouse in Fort Worth. Police say a man upset after losing custody of his son and being charged with sexually abusing the youngster opened fire, killing two lawyers and injuring two judges and another attorney in the July 1 incident.

Judge Clyde Ashworth, who was struck in the buttocks by a bullet, on Tuesday refused to comment on the Dallas shooting, saying he was serving as a witness in the ongoing capital murder case in Amarillo against George Lott.

Dallas County commissioners went into closed session Tuesday to discuss the shooting. Afterward, the five-member panel voted 3-2 in favor of allocating $200,000 for security measures.

The money will pay for lease costs of hand-held metal detectors and other measures until more money can be alloted.

The George Allen Sr. Courthouse, which handles the often-contentious family and juvenile cases as well as other civil cases, had only bailiffs in place as its main security measure, said Jim Ewell, spokesman for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

He said the department has been pressing the commissioner's court for several months for an interconnective radio system which would allow deputies to communicate from court to court.

Currently, the only metal detector Dallas County owns is used at the Frank Crowley Courts building, which houses the criminal courtrooms and is about a mile away from the George Allen building.

Assistant District Attorney Holly Schreier had written county commissioners in July urging airport-type security.

"The cases handled by my office often involved convicted felons, mentally unstable individuals, violent youths and parents who are quite disturbed that the State has intervened in their lives.

"It is not uncommon for parents in our cases to make threats of violence," Ms. Schreier wrote.

County Commissioner John Wiley Price responded a month later, saying he "empathized" with Ms. Schreier, but that he didn't support airport-type security.

Price did not immediately return a phone call Tuesday from The Associated Press, but a copy of his letter states: "The recent tragedy in Fort Worth has resulted in increased anxiety. We must remain calm and rational ... I consider any measures to increase security to be extreme and unnecessary."

He also stated the courthouse is "staffed with bailiffs and armed individuals who are prepared to handle the most critical situations."

An angry District Judge Hal Gaither balked at that assessment.

"That's not security. Bailiffs are reactionary. Security means you prevent the problems, not reacting when it's too late," said Gaither, who interrupted the commissioners court meeting Tuesday morning to demand tighter security.

"(The Allen Court Building) is where people lose family members. Families are broken up. People have decisions go against them, they get angry, and sometimes that results in violence," he said.

Dallas isn't alone in using bailiffs as a primary source of security. For example, the Cameron County courthouse in Brownsville has a bailiff in each courtroom and two others roaming the building. A portable metal detector is used outside a courtroom during capital murder cases, as they are in Dallas during high-profile criminal cases.

The situation is much the same in Hidalgo County at the courthouse in Edinburg.

The Tarrant County courthouse, which once used bailiffs and armed security officers, in August began using three walk-through metal detectors and two X-ray machines, Wise said. Security for the county's seven civil and criminal facilities and an administrative building cost a little more than $1 million.

Metal detectors are in operation at the Harris County criminal courthouses and family law center in Houston.

USDA restructuring plan not off mark, Stenholm says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's far-flung operations nationwide must be streamlined, says Texas Congressman Charles Stenholm.

The Stamford Democrat says he favors congressional passage of a restructuring plan close to one proposed Tuesday by outgoing Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan.

In fact, he said, the changes proposed by Madigan may not go far enough.

Madigan, in his last full day on the job, unveiled a plan that would eliminate 1,205 USDA field offices nationwide. Of those, 78 would be in Texas, the third largest total behind Georgia and Tennessee.

"There is nothing in the recommendation of Secretary Madigan that suggests to me that it is far off the mark as yet," said Stenholm, the new chairman of the House agriculture subcommittee that oversees how well USDA operates.

"I think you're going to see something fairly close to this" when Congress acts, Stenholm said Tuesday.

But, he added: "Don't be surprised if in the final analysis we are not looking at considerably more mergers and consolidations."

There is no question that consolidation of field offices is needed, said Stenholm, who served last year on a congressional task force that examined restructuring. "I found that from the field offices themselves," he said.

The question, he said, is whether the field restructuring goes far enough in terms of revamping the USDA. "At this stage of the game, I'm more likely to say let's simultaneously look at restructuring at the top and working down," he said.

To that end, Stenholm plans to hold hearings both in Washington and elsewhere to examine what restructuring is needed at USDA.

"I would anticipate there will be some field hearings on the entire question of reorganization through the year," he said.

The Washington hearings could come as early as next month, once incoming Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy has had a chance to make some staff appointments, Stenholm said.

Stenholm predicted that the plan eventually approved by Congress would find favor both with lawmakers and the farm community.

"I think you are going to find by and large tremendous support in the agricultural community for a legitimate reorganization," said Stenholm, who is himself a rancher.

Proposed amendments to the 1992-93 appraisal and collection budgets were approved by the board. After discussion, the audit report for tax collections was accepted. Davis, Kinard and Company, P.C., of Abilene performed the independent audit.

Bills payable and collection reports from October to December, 1992, were approved by the board.

Under old business, Peveler noted the mapping situation was satisfactory and had recently produced maps for the local fire department as well as floodway maps for a city in New Jersey.

Attending were board members Billy John Voss, Carl Smith, Ross Carroll and Walter Stirl. Harold Lacik was absent. Others in attendance were Larry Crooks, Theresa Conner, Lisa West and County Tax Assessor Rona Sikes.

Clinton takes oath

closed reviewing stand in front of their new home on Pennsylvania Avenue. The marching will go on for hours, with participants from every state, including the high school band from a place called Hope, Ark. Clinton was born there 46 years ago.

He was William Jefferson Blythe IV then, but his father died in an auto crash before his birth. As a teen-ager, he took his stepfather's last name.

Twenty minutes were allotted for Clinton's inaugural address, spelling out his presidential vision — his concept that citizens must give to society as well as draw benefits from government.

But Clinton is notoriously incapable of staying within such limits. And this is the culmination of a lifetime's quest that began with a teen-ager's handshake with President John F. Kennedy.

Clinton gave a foretaste in a spirited address Tuesday to 150 former, present and incoming governors, many of them colleagues from his 12 years as governor of Arkansas. He asked them to "please, please" let him know when he goes astray.

He said the government must find a way to experiment, to adopt what works and reject what does not.

And he pledged again to enact a law within a year to replace a health care system that is out of reach for millions but still threatens to bankrupt government.

Before the day is over, the new president is expected to start putting his own stamp on the government.

Awaiting action are a sheaf of executive orders. They would carry out some of Clinton's campaign promises and reverse the policies of 12 years of Republican rule that viewed active government as a costly obstacle to the free enterprise system.

One order will put into effect Clinton's new ethical standards for his appointees. Another will create a national economic council, a step in fulfillment of Clinton's promise to put the country's economic problems at the forefront.

On Friday he is expected to mark the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision by rescinding Bush's restriction on abortion counseling at federal clinics.

Officers arrested a 43-year-old man in the 400 block of Coliseum Drive at 7:40 p.m. on warrants for failure to appear and a traffic violation.

At 10:36 p.m. Tuesday, police transported a 38-year-old woman from Municipal Court to the county jail to lay out fines on 15 traffic violations.

Son of prominent resident gets 32 years for assault in '89 case

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to 32 years in prison for the sexual assault and kidnapping of a 15-year-old girl in 1989 and a separate robbery that same year.

James Willie Myart III became the center of controversy last year when it appeared he would get probation after pleading guilty to rape and several other felonies.

Myart, the son of attorney and East Side anti-crime activist James Myart Jr., pleaded guilty to aggravated sexual assault of a child, two counts of aggravated kidnapping and two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Those charges stemmed from the 1989 abduction and rape of a 15-year-old girl.

He also pleaded guilty to aggravated robbery charges involving another crime in 1989.

The sentence was handed down Tuesday by state District Judge Pat Priest. Myart will be eligible for parole in eight years, Assistant District Attorney Mary Green said.

District Attorney Steve Hilbig said the agreement that led to Tuesday's guilty plea and prison sentence was approved by the victims.

"We looked at the law, and we looked at the evidence, and this was the best resolution we could come to," Hilbig said.

"This is certainly a more justifiable punishment," said Bonnie Blaney, president of Save Our Children, a local group that monitors sexual assault and abuse cases involving children.

"I am glad to hear that he's going away for a longer time than just boot camp. I just don't think boot camp is appropriate for sex offenders. And I encourage victims and others to write the parole board to make sure he serves that full sentence."

In December 1991, Myart struck a plea bargain in which he would spend 90 days in a prison boot camp and, depending upon his behavior there, would have been eligible for 10 years in prison or 10 years of probation on the sexual assault charge. The judge also was going to consider deferred adjudication on the remaining charges.

After hearing of the quietly conducted plea agreement, the victims expressed outrage.

But Myart's father Tuesday accused the judicial system of not honoring its commitments.

Couple's Open-Door Policy Is Brought to Quick Close

By Abigail Van Buren

1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your letter about the woman who locked her doors when leaving the house to go to the mailbox brought back some painful memories.

We have always kept our front door locked day and night. One day, when my wife was out raking leaves in the front yard, she left the back door unlocked. While she was outside, someone slipped into our house, went directly to our dining room buffet, took $2,000 worth of silver, then went into my wife's purse and took $200 of her money and $250 of her sister's money. Then the thief went to a bookcase drawer where I had hidden $1,700, which was to be deposited in the bank that day.

Believe me, Abby, from then on, when we take a nap, work in the yard or do anything outdoors, we lock our doors!

I was 27 years old before I slept behind a locked door, but these days, you can't be too careful!

HOWARD CHILDRESS, MURFREESBORO, TENN.

DEAR HOWARD: One doesn't have to be a Sherlock Holmes to deduce that the thief was familiar with your house and knew exactly where to find your money. And you're right, one can't be too careful these days.

As a parting shot, the best place for one's cash is in the bank. Banks also rent safe-deposit boxes where clients can keep valuables, important documents, and irreplaceable photographs and memorabilia. There they are safe from fire, floods and thieves.

DEAR ABBY: We work for a small company of 10 employees, all female except for the owner. The director, whom we'll call Betty, got married recently. She invited everyone in the office to her wedding, except for three of us. Although the three of us probably wouldn't have attended the wedding, we were offended and hurt that we weren't invited. To top it off, she paraded her wedding dress in front of us at the office and continually spoke of her wedding arrangements.

Abby, please let us know what the proper procedure is for wedding invitations when working in a small office like this.

NOT INVITED IN CINCINNATI

DEAR NOT INVITED: Nowhere is it written that a bride must invite all of her co-workers to her wedding. You say that you and the others would not have attended had you been invited, in which case you should have felt relieved that you weren't.

DEAR ABBY: The poem you attributed to Dorothy Parker was written by Ogden Nash. It was slightly misquoted; here's the correct wording:

"Candy is dandy
"But liquor is quicker."

However, it was Dorothy Parker who wrote:

"Men seldom make passes
"At girls who wear glasses."

My own contribution:

"Avoid death if you can;
"It can kill you."

YOUR TENNESSEE FAN

DEAR FAN: Add this:
"Men who seldom make passes
"At girls who wear glasses
"Are asses."

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not impose yourself upon little groups or cliques today where you do not feel welcome. Today's developments within the group could make you feel even more uncomfortable than usual.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try not to make being on the top of the heap your primary objective today. If this is your motivation, you might be tempted to use tactics that will prove counterproductive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Just because an acquaintance was lucky doing things a certain way, it doesn't necessarily follow that his or her procedures will work the same wonders for you today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are seeking business or financial advice today, be sure to go to people who really know what they're talking about. Poor counsel could be very costly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An old standby who is usually supportive of your positions might turn out to be an adversary today. Be extremely careful how you deal with others on a one-to-one basis. Take no one for granted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be severely disappointed today if your purpose for helping others is merely to feather your own nest. Events will penalize your selfishness or insincerity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not become involved in intrigues with friends today, because they could misfire. If you are identified as a precipitator, you may have to bear the brunt of their wrath.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unless you are certain that you can follow through effectively, don't make promises to others today. A failure to honor commitments will tarnish your image.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might not be at your best today in managing programs that involve others as well as yourself. Don't take on something you're not equipped to handle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of rejecting proposals made by your mate today that you believe to be extravagant, you might unwisely consent and later be blamed for the financial debacle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In a team effort today, take pains to be cooperative. If you fail to hold up your end, you will arouse the animosity of those with whom you're involved.

Cold-causing viruses may linger

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: How can a person determine when someone with a cold is no longer contagious? Most of our friends think we cannot pass on germs after three days. I question this since a person can still be coughing and blowing at that stage.

DEAR READER: Colds are probably not contagious once symptoms begin to diminish, usually in three or four days. Nonetheless, I always urge caution because once in awhile, people continue to shed cold-causing viruses in the nasal secretions for longer periods. Therefore, I agree with you: Assume a cold-sufferer is contagious as long as he or she is sneezing, blowing and coughing.

Remember, too, that these viruses can be spread in ways other than through the air, such as on fingers and eating utensils. This is one reason handwashing is important.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a Baker's cyst on the back of my knee. I understand this can be operated on but since it is an area with many small veins, I am fearful. What information can you provide?

DEAR READER: A Baker's cyst (named after William Baker, a British surgeon) is an encased pool of fluid behind the knee. The fluid leaks from the joint and becomes trapped in a sac that is adjacent to the membrane that encloses the joint. Baker's cysts are not ordinarily painful, but they are annoying and can interfere with normal activities, such as running and walking.

Removal of the cyst is easy — it's bread-and-butter surgery for orthopedic specialists — and should not be hampered by the veins in the skin. I believe your fears are unjustified. Discuss this with your doctor or with an orthopedic surgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 73 and have a growth that is filling my entire vaginal cavity. There is no pain. What type of specialist should I see, and what could my problem be?

DEAR READER: You should be examined by a gynecologist because the "growth" could be a tumor that should be removed. On the other hand, you might have an innocuous condition called uterine prolapse. Many years after bearing children, some women experience a "dropped uterus": deprived of its supporting tissue, the womb can sag into the lower pelvis and, in advanced cases, actually begin to protrude through the vagina. This can easily be repaired surgically.

Because you need a diagnosis — and, probably, treatment — I believe a gynecologist would be your best resource.
