82-year-old grad 'lived history,' got degree in it

Big Springer Robert E. "Bob" Hutte, 82, will graduate today from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

By Lana Cunningham

LBJ. JFK. Harry Truman. John Connally. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

To most students graduating from college this spring, these are only names in a history book. For Robert E. "Bob" Hutte of Big Spring, who will graduate today from The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, these people are former acquaintances of his.

"I lived history," said the 82-year-old Hutte. "I decided to get a degree in it."

Graduating cum laude, he will receive a bachelor of arts degree with a major in history and a minor in political science. He also will carve his own little niche in UTPB history as its oldest graduate.

Hutte spent the majority of his life working in the field, as a candidate or a political operative. To him, politics was a hobby; he made a living owning and operating movie theaters.

In 1937, at the age of 20, Hutte departed the state for the Mining and Engineering School in Wisconisin. But, it was the era of the Great Depression and Hutte ran out of money to attend school. He worked, served in the military during World War II, married and found himself in Iowa.

In 1960, Hutte tossed his hat into the ring as the Democratic candidate for state auditor. But that was a minor event compared to what happened next. Two men — John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson — crossed his path and changed his life.

As an active member of the Democratic Party in Iowa, Hutte attempted to teach a large group of people who didn't vote about marking a straight ticket. That effort backfired on

Firefighters unite to battle blaze

■ Officials feel they are close to containing fire in Glass Mountains that has consumed 45,000 acres.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

FORT STOCKTON — After nine days fighting a fire that consumed 45,000 acres in the Glass Mountains, officials were hopeful that the destruction might be near an end.

"If everything goes well," said Texas Forest Service Incident Commander Ernie Smith of Longview, "we will have it pretty close to being contained" by today.

Three lightning strikes ignited the explosive rangeland fire on the night of May 4 at the foothills of the Glass Mountains. By late Friday, 400 firefighters by air and land had the fire in Brewster and Pecos counties about 50 percent contained.

"We will have an awful lot of mop up to make sure it is cold all the way around the perimeter of the fire," Smith said.

Aerial tankers and helicopters dropped "slurry" — fire retardant chemicals — and water on the fire. Bulldozers and other heavy machinery created firebreaks and firefighters started backfires to combat the wildfire.

Dry grassland and pinyon, juniper and mesquite brush fueled the blaze in the rugged canyon country between Fort Stockton and Marathon.

"As dry as it is with the drought conditions, it is burning readily and explosively," Smith said. "We were seeing flame lengths about 100 feet long — very intense, very nasty."

Rancher Richard Newsom lost miles of fence and his spring grass.

"I don't have any fence and the grass is burned out," the 56-year-old rancher lamented.

Wildfires continue across New Mexico

Since May 6, wildfires across New Mexico have consumed more than 68,000 acres, while firefighting crews from across the nation have given precious resources and manpower to attempt to control the extensive damage to National Forest land and private homes.

New Mexico's largest fire has burned 32,000 acres at Bandelier National Monument and spread to destroy more than 100 homes and damage 200 others in the town of Los Alamos, where the atomic bomb was built in federal laboratories. Los Alamos continues to be a premier site for nuclear research, and many of the town's residents work

Nursing home to pay $75,000 in settlement

■ Texas Department of Human Services seeks to revoke Manor Park's license.

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

The Manor Park nursing home has settled a lawsuit that was filed against the Midland facility by Texas Attorney General John Cornyn on behalf of the Texas Department of Human Services in July 1999.

Manor Park will pay $50,000 in penalties and $25,000 legal fees, admits to no violation of any law or regulation and is exempt from future liability for past allegations, according to the March 29 settlement agreement.

The agreement also separates the settlement from a move by the Texas Department of Human Services to revoke the license of the facility.

In the lawsuit brought by the Attorney General's Office, Manor Park had been charged with six regulatory violations, three of which were in connection with the rape of an 84-year-old patient, Faynelle Slaughter. The facility was being sued for failure to meet licensing requirements in the hiring of Clifton Orphry, the five-time felon convicted of raping Ms. Slaughter.

The attorney general's lawsuit also claimed that improper storage of chemicals led to harm of a resident. The lawsuit also contained allegations regarding access by residents to kitchen facilities and alleged unsanitary conditions in some kitchen areas.

The Cornyn lawsuit, originally filed in 385th District Court, followed a 1998 investigation by the TDHS. Manor Park had received 71 complaints or allegations up to that time, 19 of which had been substantiated, but only seven warranted citation, according to TDHS spokeswoman Rosemary Patterson.

Some of the agreements in the document include:

■ The Texas attorney general will not issue a press release nor initiate any press conference regarding the

Lozano collects signatures to qualify for sheriff's race

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland businessman Joe Lozano, in his bid to oppose Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter in the Nov. 7 general election, has collected the signatures of 605 voters in a petition to qualify him as an independent candidate.

"Every one of the 605 I saw personally," Lozano, 40, said Friday.

He submitted the petition before Thursday's deadline to County Judge Bill Morrow who forwarded the petition to Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup.

Mrs. Eastup is to verify that Lozano's petition includes the signatures of 500 qualified voters. Those on Lozano's petition must not have voted in the Republican Party primary election to be counted among the 500 signatures, Mrs. Eastup said, because Painter is running as a Republican.

Smith hears education, immigration concerns

By Lynde Hedgpeth
MRT Correspondent

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, hosted a town hall meeting Friday at Midland College at which citizens voiced their concerns about immigration, education and government affairs.

At 1 p.m., Smith's constituents filled the Davidson Lecture Hall in Midland College's Health Science Building. Most of those in attendance belonged to Midland's community of senior citizens.

Many of those present expressed concern over the growing number of immigrants, both legal and illegal, in the United States.

"I would like to see us grow our own American workers rather than import them," Smith said. He said he is in favor of a bill that would deny citizenship to children born to non-U.S. citizens in the United States. He also said he is in favor of abolishing the Immigration and Naturalization Services, and he has proposed a bill to reform the INS.

In addition, he said he would like to reduce the

More troops arrive in Freetown as funeral held for demonstrators

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — More peacekeepers arrived in Sierra Leone's capital Friday to reinforce against a possible rebel offensive on the city, where as many as 30,000 refugees have gathered to escape guerrilla attacks.

A few hundred more Jordanian soldiers arrived Friday to help shore up the beleaguered peacekeeping force.

The fresh troops came on the same day that President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah paid homage to 19 people killed during a recent demonstration. He said the rebels who broke a peace deal and resumed fighting the government can "never be trusted."

With the coffins containing the victims lined before him, Kabbah told more than 10,000 people crowded into the national stadium that the Revolutionary United Front rebels had intended to overthrow the government when they opened fire Monday on unarmed demonstrators.

"Their deaths have revealed evidence of wickedness toward the government," Kabbah said. "One lesson the events of last Monday have taught me is: One should never trust anybody called a rebel."

The declaration was a sharp contrast to the conviviality on display in July when Kabbah and rebel leader Foday Sankoh signed a peace accord ending a brutal eight-year civil war that not only left thousands dead but included the maiming and mutilation of thousands of Sierra Leonean men, women and children.

The peace accord, already imperiled when rebels took 500 peacekeepers hostage last week, was tattered further when bodyguards for rebel leader Foday Sankoh began shooting in crowds of peace demonstrators in front of Sankoh's home on Monday.

A two-hour gun battle between the rebels and government soldiers erupted, during which some of the victims were slain by rebels execution-style. Sankoh disappeared and his whereabouts remain unknown.

Thirteen civilians and six soldiers were killed, some by gunshot and mortar wounds, others when they were trampled by the panicked, stampeding crowd. The oldest fatality was a 60-year-old journalist; the youngest, a 16-year-old schoolboy.

Thousands lined the route leading from the stadium as the coffins containing the remains of the civilians — each draped with Sierra Leone's green, white and blue flag — were transported aboard an open trailer to a cemetery at Kissy, on the eastern outskirts of the capital. The soldiers were buried at a military cemetery on the opposite side of the city.

Observers make harrowing journey from Sierra Leone

By Alexandra Zavis
Associated Press

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone — Day after day, night after night, the U.N. peacekeepers hunkered down in their compound endured the harassing gunfire and the taunts of rebels who came to their camp gate wearing U.N. uniforms.

"I skinned the guy who was wearing this," one called to the men holed up inside. "You are next."

The three British military observers and one New Zealander wondered what they should do. Unlike the armed Kenyan U.N. peacekeepers holding off the rebels, they had no guns.

Not far away, the rebels were holding hostage hundreds of U.N. peacekeepers from Zambia — their weapons, uniforms and vehicles seized — and clashes were breaking out. The fragile cease-fire in this west African country was nearing collapse.

They decided to make a break for it.

With only a new moon to light their way, the four jumped, unarmed, over the compound wall after midnight on May 5 and escaped through the back alleys of Makeni, the town in central Sierra Leone where they had lived for four months.

"Going over the wall, it was like the feeling when you are standing on top of the high diving board. The difference being, you are not sure if there is any water underneath," said Maj. Phil Ashby, 30, a lean, good-natured British Royal Marine who was among the four.

It was three days and 50 miles later before he felt safe again.

Several times, the four — dressed in camouflage fatigues — nearly bumped into patrols of the rebel Revolutionary United Front, who control Makeni.

Did the rebels see them? They still don't know. Ashby wonders if the rebels saw them and, assuming they were armed, let them pass by.

They slipped out of Makeni, 80 miles northeast of Freetown, and moved into the bush, crossing dense jungle, rice paddies and scrub.

They froze at the slightest sign of life; a glowing cigarette tip, the dying embers of a fire.

When dawn broke, the men hid motionless underneath the brush. As the sun rose, and temperatures soared, sleep was impossible. The heat was enveloping, the humidity choking.

"I spent most of the day trying to decide where the sun was going next and where I could get a bit of shade," said Maj. Andrew Samsonoff, 26, of the British Light Infantry.

Ashby had a portable radio and listened to his favorite team lose a soccer game back in Britain. The others whispered jokes.

"I had to remind myself this was real," said Samsonoff. "There is a big temptation to slip into 'this is just an exercise. The people out there aren't really going to kill us.'"

At nightfall, they resumed their painstaking trek.

But already, they were dangerously dehydrated and weak. They hadn't slept for four days before their escape because of rebel gunfire. Ashby had been ill with malaria until two days before they left, Samsonoff was still recovering from typhoid.

And they'd been able to take few supplies — just a little bit of food and two pints of water each.

Ashby, worn out by lack of sleep and water, began hallucinating. At first it was funny, but as his hallucinations worsened, the men rested. Ashby improved.

Ashby said he was "pretty scared" during the ordeal, but added: "You worry about being tired more than about being scared."

Ashby and Samsonoff had survival training, but the others, Lt. Comdr. Paul Rowland, 31, of the British Royal Navy and Maj. David Lingard, 37, of the New Zealand Army, did not.

Making slow progress traveling at night, they finally approached a farmer who found them a guide.

Philippine kidnappers provide letters written by hostages

By Jim Gomez
Associated Press

JOLO, Philippines — Muslim rebels holding 21 hostages in the Philippine jungle reopened contact with negotiators Friday by delivering letters from their captives, but refused to release two sick hostages.

Abdul Rajab Azzarouq, a former Libyan ambassador to the Philippines who is helping negotiate, called the delivery of letters written by the hostages to their loved ones "a gesture which I hope will lead to a breakthrough."

But the nearly three-week hostage crisis appeared to be far from over.

The leader of the Abu Sayyaf guerrilla group said the hostages — who include 10 Westerners — had been moved by the rebels to a new "safe place" much deeper in the mountains of remote Jolo Island.

The rebels also rejected the government's proposed negotiating team, demanding to deal only with people of their own choosing.

If President Joseph Estrada refuses, said rebel leader Abu Escobar, "we are prepared to hold on to the hostages for a long time."

Contact had been broken since Wednesday, when Azzarouq met with the rebels and asked for two sick hostages — a French man and a German woman — to be released. The rebels said they would reply Thursday, but movements by government troops near the planned meeting place apparently spooked the rebels and they never appeared, officials said.

Negotiator Robert Aventajado, an adviser to Estrada, ordered the military to pull further back Friday to prevent a reoccurrence, and the envoys made brief contact late in the day, he said.

Aventajado said Friday that officials were expecting word from the rebels on Saturday about the sick hostages. But Escobar told The Associated Press that the decision not to release the two was already made.

Officials would not read the hostages' letters to reporters, saying they were personal. They described one from German Marc Wallert as thanking everyone for exerting efforts on the hostages' behalf.

Escobar said the rebel leaders met Thursday to discuss the request for the release of Wallert's mother Renate Wallert, who has hypertension, and Stephane Loisy, a French man with a urinary tract infection.

Abu Sayyaf leaders said Friday they would stick with their demand that negotiators include presidential executive secretary Ronaldo Zamora, ambassadors from the hostages' countries and Libya, and representatives of the United Nations and Islamic nations.

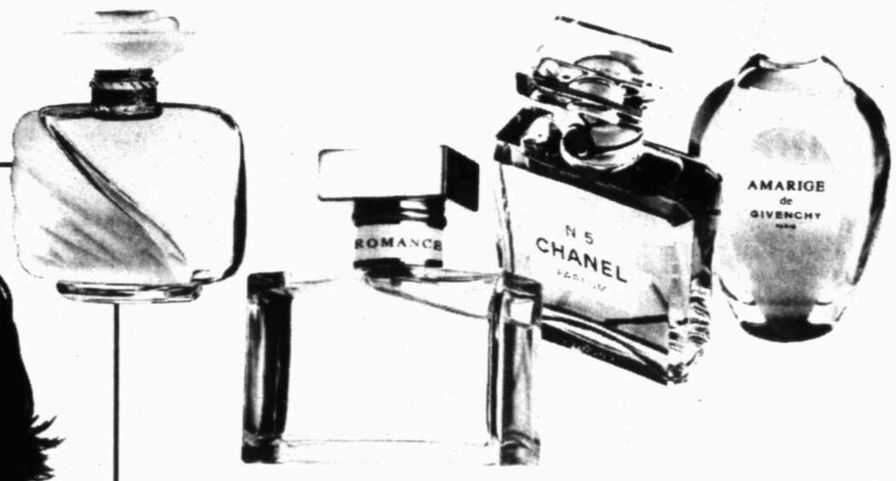

The guerrillas said they no longer want to talk with Azzarouq because he is not the current Libyan envoy and did not deliver on promises made in previous negotiations for the release of other hostages, Escobar said.

The rebels also have rejected the government's chief negotiator, Nur Misuari, a former Muslim rebel leader who signed a peace agreement in 1996 in which he agreed to accept limited Muslim autonomy instead of independence.

The rebels have yet to present a list of formal demands, and will do so only to the negotiators they have specified, Escobar said.

Informally, however, they have said they want independence for the region, the establishment of Islamic law, a return to barter trade, and a ban on foreign fishing boats.

HISTORY: 82-year-old Big Springer to be UTPB's oldest grad

(From 1A)

the state's Democrats.

Not only did Hutte lose his race, but so did most of his party's candidates that year. The conservative Bible belt voters didn't like the Catholic Kennedy and voted a straight Republican ticket.

Even though he had his own campaign to worry about, Hutte was sought after by Kennedy and Johnson to be their Iowa campaign managers. He chose LBJ.

There was something about Johnson that Hutte liked. "I guess I was always a person fighting for the underdog."

"I didn't agree with him a lot of the time," Hutte said of Kennedy. "But when you left after talking with him you thought he was the greatest guy in the world."

Of Johnson, Hutte said, "There was no one who knew more about politics than he did. He was very temperamental. Johnson could be the worst S.O.B. one day and the next day he was loveable." Unlike Kennedy, "Johnson would bulldog you into agreeing with him."

Hutte's involvement with presidential politics, however, started earlier with Harry Truman, whose campaign manager was Jake Moore. "Jake was a good friend of mine and the reason I got into politics."

The National Plowing Championship was scheduled for Dexter, Iowa and "Jake arranged to have a team of mules and an old hand plow there," Hutte said.

Truman gave his speech and Moore asked the Missouri farmer if he could still plow a field.

"Of course I can," Truman replied. He took off his coat and plowed a row. Then, he gave an off-the-cuff talk, instead of his prepared speech. "The farmers loved it when the president of the United States plowed a furrow out there for them."

Hutte's meeting with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. came during the 1964 Democratic National Convention when he and other members of a committee were asked to meet with the civil rights leader.

"I met so many different people in my life. I've had a fuller life by getting involved in politics," said the die-hard Democrat. "I might have been wealthy if I had devoted more time to my business."

Hutte came to Big Spring in 1968 and became involved in the Southwest Theatre Association, which included Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arkansas. After serving as president of that association, Hutte went on to be elected president of the National Independent Theatre Exhibitors (NITE). "The fact I had been involved in politics paid off with my lobbying," he said.

Four years ago, Hutte decided to finish his degree and enrolled at UTPB, taking classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"To the young students, LBJ and JFK are just historical names," said Hutte's advisor, Warren Gardner, associate professor of history at UTPB. "They were real people to Hutte."

Encouraging seniors to attend college is another reason for Hutte's efforts to not only graduate but to make high grades.

More colleges and universities should court seniors as students, he said. It's being done in northern states where special on-campus housing is being constructed for senior citizens.

With degree in hand, that could be his role for the next few years. To Hutte, it would life as usual — persuading people to see his point of view.

FIRE: Lower temperatures, winds helping firefighters

at the laboratory.

Officials estimate residents of Los Alamos will not be able to return to the charred town for at least another week.

While firefighters from across the country labored to contain the fire at Los Alamos, another blaze, blamed on a downed power line, sprung up Thursday in Scott Able Canyon, south of Cloudcroft, N.M. That fire has caused the evacuation of many camping areas and small communities near the 28,000-acre blaze — including the small towns of Weed and Sacramento, where some homes have been damaged, said Gwen Shaffer, a spokeswoman at the Lincoln Zone Interagency Prevention team.

Another fire, known as the Cree fire, began last Sunday near Ruidoso, N.M., and burned 8,658 acres, forcing the evacuation of some areas. By Friday afternoon, the fire was 41 percent contained, and evacuees had been allowed back to their homes, said Pat Boss, an information officer in Ruidoso. Boss said officials expect to have the blaze extinguished by Monday.

At Los Alamos, two Type 1 fire management teams, composed of 100 highly-trained firefighters and administrators from across the country, have been deployed to attack the fire. Friday's lower winds and lower temperatures have helped firefighters secure some outer portions of the blaze, and crews intend to focus their efforts on containing the fire's spread to the northeast, said Deb Stefan with the Los Alamos Joint Information Center.

Many organization have come together to fight the fire in Los Alamos, including the U.S. Forest Services, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service, the Federal Emergency Management Agency and "hotshot" teams made up of specially trained firefighters from across the nation.

"You name it, we got it," said Martin Chavez with the Joint Information Center.

Some have feared the fires could destroy facilities at the Los Alamos national labs, where sensitive nuclear material is stored. Officials have insisted that the nuclear material will not be compromised because it is held in buildings built to withstand fires and even the crash of a 747 jetliner.

"There have been some spot fires on the Los Alamos lab property. However, all fires were extinguished quickly," Ms. Stefan said. "No major structures or scientific facilities have been burned."

The Los Alamos national labs and other New Mexico businesses have provided many different services for the evacuees in Los Alamos and across the state. The lab's Web site now includes a list of damaged homes in Los Alamos, so residents can check to see if their home is among those affected.

CONTAIN: 'We all have been working together...working like a team'

Montana pilot Jim Heppner, who was flying the Polish-built Dromedary single-engine air tanker (SEAT), said that the wildfire "was out of control" on Thursday.

"We had a big blowout" in the wind-fueled fire in the canyons.

Efforts to control the fire resulted in one death.

About noon on Sunday, a seasoned pilot, Carl Ray Payne, 66, of Katy died in the crash of his SEAT Air Tractor after he had dumped a load of slurry. The airplane reportedly hit a radio tower's guy wire and crashed.

"The drop that he made saved a ranch house," stated Texas Forest Service Information Officer Shelley Huguley of Olton.

Fellow firefighters "just raved what a good and experienced pilot he was," she said.

At the site of the SEAT landing-strip, the United States and the Texas flags were flying at half-staff in Payne's honor.

Payne was contracted by the Texas Forest Service to help fight the fire.

The Texas Forest Service, the U.S. Forest Service, the Texas National Guard, and the Texas Department of Transportation are among the 15 agencies in the firefighting efforts directed by the Fort Stockton Volunteer Fire Department.

"We all have been working together, giving each other 'the devil,' working like a team," said Fort Stockton firefighter Fred Prano.

Fort Stockton and TxDOT transports were used in hauling water for aerial firefighting in the two-county fire.

"They've done an awesome job, keeping up with the aircraft," Smith said. "Without water, the aircraft would be totally useless."

"The Fort Stockton Volunteer Fire Department has been out here since this thing started," Smith said. "Those guys have just done a fabulous job."

The rugged terrain and lack of roads, except for trails, existing ranch roads and pipeline routes, hindered ground-based firefighters.

Smith cited the "massive amount of effort" by the bulldozers in making firebreaks, the eight civilian and military helicopters, including Blackhawks, the SEAT aircraft, and the ground firefighters, including Native Americans skilled in firefighting.

"The aerial resources can cool the fire down," Smith said, "but it takes the ground troops to really put it out. It's kind of like fighting a war. The Air Force can do a lot, but ground-pounders are the ones that take care of it."

period beginning in the mid-1980s, said that he was the "springboard" in the sheriff's controversial reverse-sting drug operations from the late 1980s into the early 1990s.

"I've done my best to do what's right," said Lozano.

Lozano said that he would focus his efforts as sheriff on serving the people of Midland County and to "clean up Midland County" by attacking illicit drug traffickers and dealers.

Painter, who has been sheriff since 1985, won the 2000 Republican Party primary election by defeating two challengers, former Sheriff's Patrol Sgt. Mike Hall and District Attorney Investigator Pat Bostick.

The sheriff, salaried at more than $50,000 annually, serves a four-year term of office.

When Lozano announced his candidacy earlier in the year, he said, "With the good Lord's help, I will be your next sheriff of Midland County." Without the Lord's help, "I won't succeed."

SETTLE: Agency intends to revoke Manor Park's license

(From 1A)

allegations or the lawsuit;

- Manor Park and anyone connected to Manor Park is exempt from any liability to the state for any civil penalties for any violations up to March 8;
- There is no admission of liability.

The settlement of the lawsuit is not related to the ongoing lawsuit in 385th district court against Manor Park by the sexual assault victim and her family. That trial rested Friday, with the defense expecting to conclude Monday.

In addition to the two lawsuits, The Texas Department of Human Services notified Manor Park management Oct. 13 of the agency's intent to revoke the license of the facility "for failure to have a satisfactory history of compliance with state and federal nursing home regulations."

The health care facility has appealed the decision of the TDHS to revoke Manor Park's license. "Keep in mind that the process is fraught with legal delays. They do get dragged on and there are so many ways of delaying things," Ms. Patterson said.

James Mosely, local attorney for Manor Park, declined to comment on the settlement with the attorney general because of the agreement to make no public statements.

SMITH: 'We are trying to clean up our own act' number of legal immigrants allowed in the United States each year from about one million, the current number, to 550,000 to 600,000, a number proposed by the late Barbara Jordan.

(From 1A)

Smith assured voters that the way to make sure the changes they support get made is to vote for those who will support the same measures. A supporter of Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush, Smith said Bush could reverse some of the executive orders President Bill Clinton has enacted.

Juandelle Lacy, president of the Republican Women in Midland, brought up another major concern of those at the town hall meeting: education reform, especially in Midland.

"Would you be in favor of abolishing the Education Department?" she asked. Others present at the meeting asked if Smith could keep federal judges from enforcing desegregation procedures in the Midland Independent School District.

"Those problems are not going to be solved until we change the administration that enforces those regulations," Smith said.

Smith's constituents had many complaints against the current administrations in the White House and Congress.

"You people up there are running roughshod over the Constitution," Clint Datson said regarding federal involvement with MISD.

At the meeting, Smith, who is chairman of the House Ethics Committee, said he hopes to increase the integrity of congressional operations.

"We are trying to clean up our own act," he said.

At a press conference held earlier Friday, Smith touted a bill he proposed that would add two more federal judges to the Western District of Texas to help convict people involved in drug trafficking across Texas' border with Mexico.

He also said he supports an effort known as Project Exile, which would give a five-year mandatory sentence to people who commit crimes with guns.

"The best way to increase gun control is to control the criminals who use guns," Smith said. "I want to target criminals, not law-abiding citizens."

Indonesian province celebrates landmark peace agreement

By Daniel Cooney
Associated Press

BANDA ACEH, Indonesia — As thousands of people knelt and prayed for peace in mosques across Aceh province Friday, Indonesian government and separatist rebel negotiators meeting in Switzerland signed the first cease-fire agreement in 25 years of fighting.

One of the most striking examples of the positive reaction by the war-weary people to the first ray of hope in the territory came from a rebel stronghold south of the capital, Banda Aceh.

There, dozens of young, heavily armed guerrilla fighters put down their weapons and gave thanks as they heard news that their leaders and Indonesia's reformist government had signed the landmark accord and would begin the three-month cease-fire on June 2.

"This is great news," said rebel commander Tengku Tarzura in the well-camouflaged camp of flimsy bamboo huts. "We will abide by the cease-fire, but we still want independence and will struggle for it."

And there lies the challenge.

Even though President Abdurrahman Wahid, Indonesia's first democratically elected leader in 40 years, appears to have won the tentative trust of Aceh's rebels, few people believe they will ever accept his demand to remain part of Indonesia with limited autonomy.

"We may be celebrating in our mosques, and praying and reading the Koran at home, because the agreement is better than nothing. But we don't necessarily believe the peace will last here," said Abdul Gani Nurdin, a university lecturer and human rights activist in Banda Aceh.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan welcomed the announcement and commended both sides "for the important first step they have taken towards the resolution of the problem in Aceh," U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said.

The secretary-general hopes that a mutually acceptable political solution can be found in the near future through strict adherence to the agreement, "the involvement of the wider Acehnese community and a strong commitment to peace," Eckhard said.

More than 5,000 people have been killed in the fighting in Aceh in the last decade, including 345 this year. Many of Aceh's 4.3 million people know someone who has died or disappeared during the insurgency.

Embittered by a perceived economic exploitation and an Indonesian military crackdown, the rebels are fighting not only for independence, but also for a greater share of the profits from their oil-rich region, and the right to impose Islamic religious laws on the Acehnese people.

Hassan Wirayuda, Indonesia's permanent U.N. representative in Geneva, and Zaini Abdullah, a rebel representative based in Sweden, signed the "joint understanding on a humanitarian pause" at an undisclosed location in Switzerland. The cease-fire will be regularly reviewed for renewal.

"This joint understanding is an early step of a hundred-step journey in the efforts to find a final solution of the Aceh problem," Wirayuda said.

Despite cheaper AIDS drugs, help out of reach for Africans

By Ravi Nessman
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — On an AIDS-ravaged continent where many countries spend only $5 a year per capita on health care, a plan by pharmaceutical companies to reduce sharply the price of AIDS drugs was greeted Friday as a sign of progress — but one that will have little impact on most of those infected.

"Even if the therapy drops from $15,000 a year to $1,000, that's still way unaffordable for most of the continent," said Dr. Gary Maartens, head of the department of infectious diseases at the University of Cape Town.

Five major drug companies announced in Geneva on Thursday they would work with governments in Africa and other poor regions to cut the overall costs of HIV/AIDS drugs by a reported 70 to 85 percent.

However, few countries in sub-Saharan Africa, where 70 percent of the world's 33.6 million HIV-infected people live, have the resources to provide any large-scale programs to their infected populations.

"While the cut in treatment cost is a big step forward, there is still a huge gap in terms of it making a huge difference in the lives of infected persons," said Chinelo Bob-Osamor, spokeswoman for the Nigerian Health Ministry. "Ultimately, it is still about who can afford to pay for treatment. I'm afraid not many people can."

Even South Africa, the continent's wealthiest country, will not be able to make the "triple treatment" used in treating AIDS affordable to its more than 4 million HIV-infected people, Health Minister Manto Tshabalala-Msimang said Friday.

The entire public drug budget of $300 million would buy treatment for only a fraction of those infected, she said.

Maartens foresees the cheaper drugs spurring more realistic plans, such as a program using the drug AZT to prevent transmission of HIV from pregnant women to their children. With an estimated 25 percent of South Africa's pregnant women infected with the virus, the government has previously said it could not afford the program.

Only relatively wealthy countries such as Nigeria, Botswana or South Africa could even consider long-term treatment programs for people with full-blown AIDS, Maartens said.

For the nearly one-fifth of South Africans who have private insurance, and others with steady incomes, the reduced prices make those treatments plausible for the first time.

The agreement brought a flicker of hope to one woman sorely in need of some good news.

Lucia, a 31-year-old resident of Soweto, was diagnosed with HIV in 1995 after she was raped. She declined to give her last name because the stigma attached to AIDS is so great here that she feared her neighbors might kill her if they found out she was infected.

Lucia, who owns part of a janitorial company that employs HIV-infected workers, likely would be able to afford the reduced-cost medicines — but at a stiff price.

"It will be tough for me. I won't be able to buy enough food," she said. And that's her dilemma. "If you are on these drugs, you have to eat a balanced diet. You can't just take drugs without food, they go together."

That is why the government must implement an anti-poverty program that delivers food aid as well as medicine to fight off the illnesses that attack weakened immune systems, said Nkululeko Nxesi, director of the National Association of People Living with AIDS.

"Many people who are HIV positive, they don't die because of AIDS or HIV, they die because of alternative diseases that are curable," he said. "If someone has got pneumonia, and he can't get help to treat that pneumonia, then AZT would be useless."

Jeffrey Sturchio, spokesman for Merck and Co., one of the participating drug companies, admitted there were enormous roadblocks to be confronted before major AIDS treatments can be dispersed to most afflicted Africans. However, he was encouraged by planned talks among the companies, international organizations and the African countries to work to solve the problems.

"This isn't going to make a dramatic difference overnight," he said. "I think things are now moving in a constructive direction ... and we should be able to make progress on those issues. But it is going to take time because they are complex issues."

One issue involves the complex regime of as many as a dozen pills that must be taken at set times daily as part of some AIDS treatments. Health researchers fear that if the program is not strictly followed, the disease could become resistant to the treatment.

For many AIDS sufferers in rural Africa, where roads could be cut off by floods and deliveries might be weeks late, following such a regimen might not be plausible, Sturchio said.

"Those are the kinds of things that we need to address through this initiative," he said. "We don't have all the answers yet, but we are encouraged that at least we have a framework to discuss these questions."

FBI computer problem halts gun sales nationwide

WASHINGTON (AP) — All gun sales have been halted nationwide since Thursday afternoon because an internal software problem in the FBI criminal history database has temporarily halted instant background checks of gun buyers, the FBI said Friday.

The FBI's Interstate Identification Index, a database that has the criminal histories of 36 million people, stopped working late Thursday afternoon. FBI and contractor employees expected to have it working again by Saturday evening or Sunday morning, FBI spokesman Paul Bresson said.

"It was an internal database problem, not the result of a hacking or external attack," Bresson said.

Without background check approvals, gun dealers said that since Thursday afternoon they have been forced to tell their customers to wait for their guns until the system comes back up and the checks can be completed.

The computer failure made it impossible to check the criminal histories for past felony convictions that bar people from buying guns. Also brought down by the software problem was the FBI's automated fingerprint system, known as IAFIS for Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System.

The National Instant Criminal Background Check System, or NICS, established under the Brady law to check whether prospective buyers are legally eligible to purchase guns depends on the Interstate Identification Index in its search for felony convictions.

Even though gunstore owners in only about half the states file their background check inquiries directly with the FBI, the failure affected checks in all 50 states. In states where gun dealers place background check requests with a state police agency, that state agency checks the FBI's criminal histories by computer in addition to its own records before approving or disapproving the sale.

"We can't release any guns to our customers until it's fixed," said Art Harris, owner of The Gentleman Hunter in Bethesda, Md. "We haven't lost any deals yet, but Saturday is our biggest day."

"I suppose some gun buyers are angry over the delay, but our customers have been very understanding," Harris said.

When the system is working, 72 percent of gun purchases are approved within 30 seconds, the Justice Department says. And 95 percent of buyers get an approval or a disapproval within two hours of their application for purchase.

In its first 13 months of operation, the NICS system completed more than 10 million background checks. Only 5 percent required more than two hours to complete the background check.

"We had four prospective sales Friday, but we can't deliver the guns because we can't get approvals," said Tommy Thacker, manager of Loudoun Guns in Leesburg, Va. "We just tell them we'll call them when the system is up."

In Virginia, gun dealers like Thacker are linked by computer with the Virginia state police, but the state police are linked to the FBI computer to check federal criminal history records. "So the state can't give approvals," Thacker said.

"No one has gotten angry so far," Thacker said. "But it could get sticky," because once the sale applications are accepted by the computer for checking, the backlog could lengthen the time it takes to complete the checks.

Bush to give away trigger locks to Texans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days before the Million Mom March for gun control, George W. Bush said Friday he will distribute free trigger locks in Texas while President Clinton announced grants to develop "smart gun" technology.

Filling out the election-year debate, Vice President Al Gore acknowledged that he often voted with the National Rifle Association during his early years in Congress. But he said they parted ways as he watched "the flood of cheap handguns and the wave of gun violence sweep across our country."

Guns and politics took center stage as Clinton, Bush and Gore sat down for interviews on morning television shows, raising their voices on one of the most volatile issues of the campaign season. Recent polls show voters split between Gore and Bush on whom they trust on gun policies.

Clinton dismissed Bush's trigger-lock giveaways, saying the presumed Republican presidential nominee was simply trying to hide the fact that "the NRA will control policy" in the White House if Bush wins. The NRA, the nation's most powerful gun lobby, has led the fight against gun-control proposals pushed by Clinton and Gore.

Bush said he considered Clinton's criticism good news. "I must have them awfully worried for the president to be spending time talking about my campaign," the Texas governor said.

As for the NRA's influence, Bush said, "There's only going to be one person in the Oval Office and that's going to be me. And I'm going to make judgments based upon how I think America can be a safer place."

Gore, meanwhile, denied being a NRA member, as Bush has claimed. But the vice president appeared uncertain. "I don't have any recollection of anything like that. Have they told him something that I don't know about? I sure don't think so."

Clinton talked about guns for more than an hour on ABC's "Good Morning America," first from the Oval Office and then in the Roosevelt Room with an audience of women, most of them supporters of Sunday's march but also a few opponents.

The president briefly tangled with Susan Howard, a NRA board member, who said Clinton "sent shivers up and down my spine" with one of his remarks. She was referring to when Clinton, talking about the death rate of children, said "forget about the crimes, just look at the accidental gun rate."

"You said, 'Let's forget the crimes," Howard said.

"No," Clinton interrupted.

"No, no, no, sir, excuse me," she broke in.

"This is the way the NRA operates," Clinton shot back.

Howard then questioned why Clinton objected to teaching children about gun safety. The president said that, in fact, he had complimented the NRA many times about its gun safety education programs.

Bush announced on NBC's "Today" show that Texas will spent about $1 million a year for five years to purchase trigger locks that citizens can obtain for free at police departments and fire stations. As president, he said, he would ask Congress to expand the program nationwide.

"It seems like to me one of the things we ought to do is be commonsensical about how we deal with gun safety," Bush said. "I think this makes sense."

Big Game winner bought ticket with change from hot dog

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A swimming-pool installer who put down a $100 bill for a hot dog and 98 Big Game lottery tickets stepped forward with his wife and three children Friday to claim half of the record-breaking $363 million jackpot.

"I guess I'd like to start a new job playing golf," said Larry Ross, a 47-year-old occasional lottery player accustomed to working 80 to 100 hours a week in the summer. "We haven't had a summer vacation in 13 years."

Ross and his wife, Nancy, will take their share of the bounty in a lump-sum payment of about $90 million before taxes. They could have elected to take the full $181.5 million in 26 annual installments.

The other winning Big Game ticket was sold in Lake Zurich, Ill., 30 miles northwest of Chicago. That winner has not yet come forward.

The $363 million jackpot was the richest in U.S. history, but the biggest individual payout is still the $197 million awarded last year to a Massachusetts woman.

Ross bought his ticket to Tuesday's drawing at Mr. K's Party Shoppe near Utica, 20 miles north of Detroit. He had stopped in to buy a hot dog, and all he had was a $100 bill. At his wife's urging, "I asked the guy to give me change in lotto tickets," he said.

Ross said he wrote down the winning numbers incorrectly Tuesday night on the way home and didn't realize one of his computer-selected tickets was a winner until he saw it on television Wednesday morning.

"Jesus, they match!" he told his wife. Then, he said, "I invented a new dance — I started doing the lottery dance."

Now, he is looking to retire and buy a boat, a house and maybe that the purple Jaguar that his wife has always wanted. He said he plans to give some of the money to charity.

"We're not going to do anything rash. We're going to invest wisely," he said.

The Rosses have been married 25 years. Their children are: Ian, 21, Eric, 25, Shannon, 12.

Ross paused at the end of his news conference to wipe away tears, but otherwise appeared as "remarkably quite calm" as lottery officials said he was when he first called them Wednesday.

Since then, however, "I haven't slept in three days. I haven't eaten in three days," he said.

Interactive TV allows for shopping by remote

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With a few points and clicks of a remote, consumers could order a pizza with their favorite toppings right off their TV screen, buy a CD during a live broadcast concert or request information from a local dealer during a car commercial.

By unleashing the powers of interactivity, cable operators are turning television commerce into much more than home shopping channels.

"Our medium is very emotional. People love their TV," said Mary Pat Blake, senior vice president of marketing for cable company Charter Communications, at this week's industry convention here. Cable businesses such as Charter are partnering with software and technology companies to translate this special connection into added revenue.

Special software added to cable boxes on consumers' TVs make possible interactive functions such as shopping directly from the screen. So-called "t-commerce" has already taken off in parts of Europe.

In the United States, companies are just beginning to explore the possibilities.

RespondTV, which provides interactive services for programming, did a trial in August by enhancing Domino's pizza commercials aired in San Francisco. Consumers with the special technology built into their cable boxes saw a banner across the bottom of the ad offering them a free pizza. They could click "yes" or "no," and choose toppings — information that RespondTV then transferred to the nearest Domino's location.

Interactivity "is going to be great for certain impulse shopping," said Richard Fisher, president of RespondTV. It can also direct consumers to more information.

For example, a viewer could click on an icon during a national ad campaign for a retail store to get local specifics — like what's on sale at their nearest outlet.

"I don't think it takes that much to turn a passive viewer into an active shopper," said Tom Eagan, a cable and satellite industry analyst for PaineWebber Group. "Surfing kind of reflects the fact that they are participating in what they watch."

Analysts at Forrester Research, based in Cambridge, Mass., forecast that by 2004, interactive TV will yield $11 billion in advertising and $7 billion in sales.

Enhanced TV can give consumers new shopping options while they watch commercials or programming. Music documentaries or videos, for example, lend themselves well to television commerce. Consumers can buy CDs of artists on screen or get coupons for later purchases.

"If the programming is conducive, it's definitely a win-win situation," Maggie Wilderotter, president and chief executive officer of Wink Communications, which partners with cable operators to embed its software in their TV boxes. Programmers or advertisers can then add interactive functions to their shows and commercials, and consumers can take advantage of them by clicking on an icon in the corner of the screen.

"It's all consumer initiated," Wilderotter said.

According to Wink, which has a presence in 200,000 U.S. homes, 42 percent of consumers who have the service have taken advantage of interactive coupons and 20 percent have made purchases from their TVs.

Because cable operators have information about their subscribers, they could even let consumers make purchases with one-click and transmit all of the necessary information to the retailer.

But such transactions — while adding simplicity — could also raise security questions.

"The opportunity to ensure privacy is important to the industry," said Hal Krisbergh, chairman of WorldGate Communications, which creates technology to let cable customers get interactive services.

Errors hurt 'Hounds vs. Express

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Unlike the Midland RockHounds, the Round Rock Express got the timely hits and avoided any errors in Friday's 5-2 win at Christensen Stadium Friday.

The RockHounds outhit the Express, 11-10, but committed four errors in the game. Midland threatened to tie the game in the bottom of the ninth inning with two on and one out but Express reliever Jason Green got Dionys Cesar to ground into a double play to end the game.

"To be honest with you, you had two tired teams out here," said Round Rock manager Jackie Moore. "We did play good defense and we closed it out with a great play. I know that they (RockHounds) do have a good team and the last time we were here they went down to the last inning battling, so we know they're not going to give up."

The lack of timely hitting is frustrating Midland manager Tony DeFrancesco.

"That's a big problem for us right now," he said. "Nobody is coming through with a two-out situation or with a key hit early in the game. We're making good contact but nothing's falling right now.

"We're looking to get on top here. This is a big series for us. We've got to show we can compete with these guys and the rest of the league. Right now we're just gliding along. There's no positive outlook for us. Every game is a battle for us and we've got to find a way to get out of this and get through it."

Even though pitching was the 'Hounds Achilles Heel earlier in the season, it doesn't appear to be so now. Justin Miller (1-2) did his best to keep the 'Hounds in the game through 5 1/3 innings of work, but got very little help from the offense or the defense behind him.

"Pitching has been OK," DeFrancesco said. "It's been good enough to keep us in games. Today, four errors didn't help. Every time we made an error, they took advantage, and that can't happen against a good team like Round Rock."

Midland got on the board in the bottom of the first inning when Eric Byrnes scored from second base off a single by Todd Mensik, who had the third of back-to-back-to-back singles for the 'Hounds.

Midland Lee's Jon Rogers stirs up dust as he scores one of his three runs Friday afternoon at Ernie Johnson Field. Rogers also drove in three runs in the Rebels' 14-2 win over El Paso Jefferson. The Rebels needed only five innings before the 10-run rule was invoked.

Rebels rout Jefferson in Game 1

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee baseball team waited to get things started at the plate last weekend, and it almost proved costly. Back home for the area round of the Region I-5A playoffs Friday, the Rebels made sure not to stall at the starting gate again.

Lee scored more runs in the first inning against El Paso Jefferson than in the first 13 innings of last weekend's bi-district series against Amarillo Tascosa. That was a harbinger of good things to come for the Rebels, who enjoyed three big innings en route to a 14-2, five-inning run rule victory over El Paso Jefferson in the first game of a best-of-three series which continues today at 1 p.m. at Ernie Johnson Field.

Spurred by a huge sense of urgency last weekend, the Rebels rallied from a six-run deficit in the top of the seventh inning to defeat Tascosa 9-7 and force a third game, which they won 15-3 in a five-inning run rule decision. Maybe busting loose with all that offense felt so good that it only made sense to do it again.

"This is something good they did early," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez of his lineup, all of whom had at least one hit or scored at least one run. "I told them they had to have a little patience today because we didn't have of them (Jefferson's pitchers) on the radar gun any higher than 80 (miles per hour)."

LEE

Midland Lee	14

Pitching, on the other hand, isn't something Lee (23-12) has worried too much about in the postseason, especially when you consider that senior right-handers Collin Gilliam and Jon Rogers, Lee's top two pitchers, couldn't pick up wins against Tascosa and the Rebels still won the series. Neither got much run support in that series, so the outburst with the bats against Jefferson was welcome, especially from Gilliam.

"Whenever we jump out and hit the ball early; we win," said Gilliam.

Against powerhouses El Paso Socorro and Duncanville in last year's playoffs, Gilliam gave up only two earned runs in 12 innings. He

MHS gets one chance to beat Franklin

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

For the past 11 days, the Midland High baseball team should have had the right to bask in the glow of the city's diamond spotlight, especially since the Bulldogs claimed the No. 1 seed in the district for the first time in 12 years.

But in the time that Midland High was enjoying its bye, things didn't exactly go as planned in the baseball world of Region I-5A. For one thing, crosstown rival Midland Lee grabbed its share of attention by staging a comeback for the ages in last week's bi-district round, rallying from the brink of elimination with eight runs in the top of the seventh inning to tie its series with Amarillo Tascosa before winning Game 3 in lopsided fashion.

M

El Paso Franklin vs. Midland High

While Lee was pulling off its astonishing revival at Lubbock's Moegle Field, MHS coach Barry Russell was watching El Paso Franklin defeat El Paso Hanks 4-1 to advance to this weekend's area round. Russell knew his team would be playing Franklin, but didn't know for how many games or where.

Against Russell's wishes, the Bulldogs (23-6) are playing Franklin in a one-game playoff, today at 11 a.m. at Zachery Field. Unlike Lee and El Paso Jefferson, who are engaged in a three-game series with Lee presently holding a 1-0 edge, all it will take is one win — or one loss depending on your point of view — to determine the brackets for the next round.

"I like two of three because you can find out who the better team is," said Russell, echoing the preference of most coaches in the region. "It gives you a playoff atmosphere. Anybody can win on any given day."

Niehues takes 3rd at state

By Stewart Doreen

AUSTIN — Garden City's M'Lynn Niehues had a good Friday night.

She ran in her first-ever night session at the UIL state track meet in front of 20,000 people. She competed well, finishing with one of her best times of the year. She even got to take in some of Austin's sights.

Niehues

"I like running at night. The capitol is all lit up," Niehues said glancing toward downtown Austin.

The night got even better for Niehues. Sometime after Niehues gathered her stuff and went back into the stands, she was called to the awards stand. She was not only going to take back memories of the Capital City, but some state hardware.

Niehues finished her Class A 400-meter race in fourth place, but when the official results came out, one of the girls ahead of her was disqualified, sending the junior home with her third medal in as many trips to state.

Niehues had anchored the Lady Bearkats' mile relay each of the last two years. In 1998, they took second. Last year, Niehues came through with a blistering last leg as Garden City won its first gold medal at the state track meet in quite some time.

This year, Niehues got bronze, completing a sweep of the three kinds of medals. She did say it was different, running by herself.

"First you have to deal with blocks," Niehues

Lutheran North ousts Midland Christian, 5-4

By Stewart Doreen

TEMPLE — A battle of two private school heavyweights had a very familiar ending Friday at the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 4A State Softball Tournament.

Just like a year ago, the Midland Christian Lady Mustangs, the defending state champs, and Houston Lutheran North Lady Lions, who won three state titles from 1996-98, battled to a 5-4 score in the TAPPS semifinals.

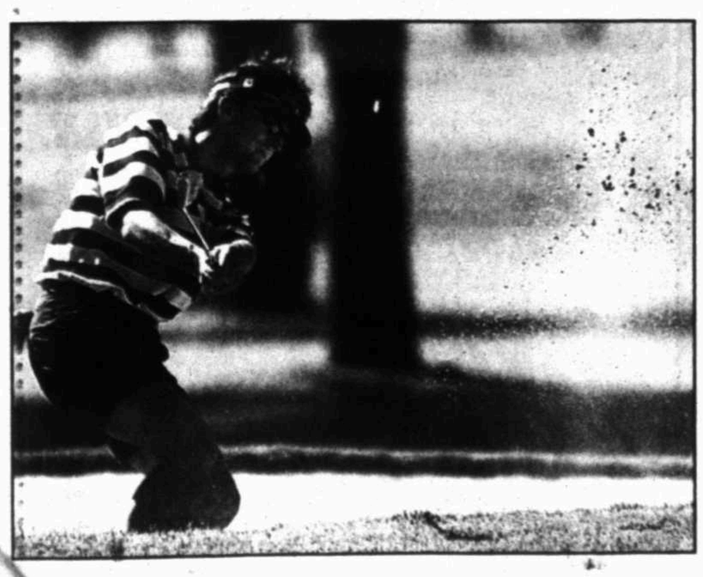

Same score, same round, the same four teams (MCHS, Lutheran North, Concordia Lutheran and Waco Reicher) had even advanced to the 4A semifinals.

There was just one major difference; the winner. Friday, it was Lutheran North Lady Lions, who one-upped the state champs to put themselves back in the state finals. Lutheran North (16-13) will play the winner of Waco Reicher and Concordia Lutheran in today's 2 p.m. final at Baylor University. Midland Christian ends its season with a 19-15 record.

Actually, there was one other difference.

Ellis, Rashell advance to sectionals

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The long journey to the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif., got a little closer for two golfers Friday during the local qualifying round at Midland Country Club.

Amarillo's Ralph Ellis and Seattle's Rob Rashell are headed to the sectional qualifying round after they both shot a 2-under par 70, four strokes better than Andrews' Mark Burgen, and Lubbock's Travis Deibert, who will serve as first and second alternates, respectively. Midland's Randall Strickland, who shot a 77, is the third alternate.

Leon Van Rensberg hits out of a sand trap at Midland Country Club during Friday's local qualifying for the U.S. Open. Van Rensberg, a former Midland College golfer who is now living in Lubbock, did not make the cut.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

■ U.S. Open Qualifier

Even though the wind did affect some golfers, it didn't seem to bother Ellis or Rachell very much. Being from Amarillo, Friday's breeze was nothing for Ellis.

"I hit a lot of greens and I made a lot of four and five-footers for pars and I think I only took three birdies," said Ellis, Friday's medalist by virtue of a coin flip. "I also hit it pretty good off the tees. I think I only missed two fairways all day. That's what you've got to do out here. It's just tees and greens. Hopefully, you hit it close enough to make some putts. I kept myself out of trouble, which was the big thing."

"The wind was blowing so I was just grinding it out," Rachell said. I hit a lot of irons off the tees, hit the middle of the greens and stayed real patient."

For Ellis, who's in the oil business, this was his first try at a U.S. Open qualifier.

Reese's three-run poke beats Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pokey Reese's first homer of the year and pitcher Danny Graves' first hit of his career lifted Cincinnati.

Reese hit a three-run home run in the 11th inning and Graves followed with a solo homer, rallying the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

The Reds won their fifth straight game and for the fifth time this season in their last at-bat.

"Everybody in the dugout went crazy," Reds manager Jack McKeon said after witnessing Graves' hit. "That was a shocker but it couldn't happen to a nicer guy."

Aaron Boone and Alex Ochoa walked off Mike Maddux (2-2) to start the 11th inning. Gookie Dawkins sacrificed the runners before Reese hit his first home run of the season to give the Reds a 6-3 lead.

"The thing that was so good about this was is that it helped us get a win," Reese said. "I just wanted to get the ball out of the infield and hit it deep enough to get a run home. I got a fast ball up and I just put the bat on the ball."

Graves, who was 0-for-11 in his career, hit the next pitch over the left-field fence. Graves (5-0) pitched three innings for the win.

"That's a once-in-a-lifetime thing," Graves said. "It's way more exciting than my first win or my first save. I don't even hit home runs in batting practice. I won't sleep tonight."

The Astros took a 3-2 lead into the ninth inning with closer Billy Wagner on the mound.

Aaron Boone, who hit a game-winning, two-run homer in the ninth inning of Cincinnati's 11-9 win over San Diego on Thursday, doubled to left field to start the inning. Pinch-hitter Alex Ochoa followed with a double off the left-field scoreboard to tie the game.

"This is a tough one to lose," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "It's in our division and we had the lead in the ninth. With Billy on the mound, that's usually one in the bank but Billy can't do it every time."

MHS: Bulldogs play once vs. Franklin

(From 1B)

While Franklin coach Steve Mims got his wish to play only one game by virtue of winning a coin flip, Russell got some consolation out of not getting the best-of-three by winning the flip to host the game. And he's trying to look at the bright side of the situation.

"On the other hand, you don't have to make as many pitching decisions," said Russell of the one-game format. "The best thing is that it's here. Playing here is a big point in our favor.

"That was a bigger flip than the one which decided one game."

Franklin (20-7-1) presents an unusual package for the Bulldogs, in that the Cougars have mostly left-handed pitching. Oddly, the one exception, right-hander Jason Armendariz, picked up the victory over Hanks.

What could be a key in a one-game playoff is who makes the plays in the field, and what worries Russell is Franklin's ability to do so.

"Their defense was solid," said Russell of Franklin's performance against Hanks. "The plays they made were outstanding. Their pitchers covered the bag and backed up home plate. They did all the things you need to do to win playoff games."

Armendariz, a junior who was a tailback for the football team which lost to Midland Lee in the playoffs last fall, plays center field when he's not pitching and hits leadoff. Shortstop Tristan Venable and catcher Jeff Gabbert lend support in the lineup.

Mims was noncommittal over who he would start today against the Bulldogs.

"We've got some pitching depth but it's hard to evaluate that depth in the El Paso area so I really felt I could beat Midland High in one game," said Mims. "We're going to have to get the same type of pitching effort we got against Hanks."

Russell said freshman right-hander Casey Zachry will be the likely starter today, although since it is a one-game playoff, the entire pitching staff will be on call.

While entrusting the season to Zachry might seem like a gamble, it doesn't hurt that he will be backed up by some experience in the MHS lineup. The Bulldogs figure to start at least five players who were starters on last season's playoff team. Their not-so-secret weapon is senior center fielder Laynce Nix, who in his playoff career is hitting .618 with nine home runs and 23 RBIs.

"It's fun to come out and knock a team off every week," said Nix, who has played on a team which has won at least one playoff series in each of his two previous seasons. "This is a time everyone can show what they're capable of and everybody should perform at their best right now."

In Midland High's last game, the Bulldogs defeated Lee 9-2 at Christensen Stadium to claim the district's top seed. Nix and Cotey-Joe Cswaykus both homered and Zachry picked up the win, and such a formula repeating itself could mean the Bulldogs will advance.

"It's game three of a two out of three series," said Russell of today's game. "It makes everything a lot more precious. I look at it as if we play as well as we did against Lee we'll be all right."

Bay City's Jones pulls another double championship

AUSTIN (AP) — Chandi Jones' gold medal streak has finally run out.

Not because she lost, but because the Bay City senior just can't win any more medals at the Texas state high school track meet.

Jones won the Class 4A long jump and triple jump on Friday, marking the fourth consecutive year she has won state titles in both events.

Competition was suspended at 10 p.m. because of severe thunderstorms with several events yet to be run. Events were scheduled to resume at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Teams standings when the meet was suspended had Austin Reagan leading both the Class 4A boys (30 points) and girls (41). Fort Worth Wyatt and Houston Forest Brook were second in the boys standings with 28 points each. Fort Worth Wyatt also was in second in the girls' teams standings with 32 points.

Trent led Class 1A boys team standings with 30 points on the strength of

Love stays hot at Nelson

Associated Press

IRVING — Davis Love III knew the wind was dying when sweat dripped off his brow from the suffocating Texas heat. A better indication was how he began making birdies to take control of the Byron Nelson Classic on Friday.

While tamer conditions gave late starters like Tiger Woods a break, Love made the most of it by shaking off a bogey-bogey start with nine birdies on his last 16 holes at Cottonwood Valley.

He finished with a 7-under-par 63 for a 4-stroke lead over John Huston, the largest 36-hole advantage in tournament history.

Two nearly flawless rounds put Love at 11-under 129 and gave him even more confidence that he can win for the first time in more than two years.

"I need to keep doing what I've been doing the last two days," Love said. "I've been feeling a long time that if one or two things right happen, I can get going again. I want to start moving back to the top. The only way to do that is to win. The only way to keep up with Tiger is to win."

Woods was the least of his worries — so far.

Love will be paired Saturday with Huston, who had a bogey-free 65 on the TPC at Las Colinas and was at 133. The group at 135 included Jesper Parnevik (65) and former PGA champion Mark Brooks (66).

Woods, in his first tournament since the Masters, flirted with missing only the second cut of his career until he finally holed a couple of putts on the back nine of Cottonwood Valley for a 67 that left him at even-par 140.

"I don't know if he's ever far enough behind," Love said. "But I'm playing my game.

ROCK: Four errors cost Midland

(From 1B)

The Express responded in the top of the third as Carlos Maldonado reached with a double and then scored off a throwing error by Miller, who was trying to throw out Kyle Logan at first.

Round Rock got two runs in the fifth as David Matranga doubled in Maldonado all the way from first base. Matranga then gave the Express the lead at 3-2 when he scored off a left field single by Eric Cole.

Round Rock made it 4-2 in the sixth when Aaron McNeal, who reached on an infield error, advanced to second on a single by Kevin Burns, went to third off a fly ball by Morgan Ensberg, then scored off a fielder's choice by Colin Porter.

The rest of the night belonged to Express starter Brian Braswell (3-1), who pitched seven solid innings to get the win as he allowed just two earned runs off eight hits.

"He was outstanding," said Moore about his starting pitcher. "He pitched very well. That's really the strong suit on our team. If our starters take us into the seventh inning, our bullpen will do the job for us."

To hold the RockHounds to just two runs in their own park is never an easy task. Along with great defense, a solid pitching performance from Braswell, the Express had the wind blowing in from the outfield as an aid.

"That flag was blowing in and keeping the balls in," Moore said. "The last time we were here, the wind was blowing the other direction and it was a street fight. We caught a break with the wind blowing in tonight."

The Express closed out the scoring with a run in the top of the ninth as Maldonado scored for the third time in the game off a single by Keith Ginter.

Miami wins on wild shot, ref's reversal

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Anthony Carter's incredible shot from behind the backboard — which didn't count until an offensive goaltending call was waved off — gave the Miami Heat a 77-76 overtime victory over the New York Knicks on Friday night.

In a strange finish to one of the best Knicks-Heat playoff games, the fickle bounce of the ball and a rare reversal of a referee's call gave the Heat a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Carter, playing the entire overtime as Tim Hardaway was ineffective, drove along the baseline and faced such a tough angle that he had to launch the ball over the top corner of the backboard. Rising 15 feet in the air, the shot hit the front rim, bounced high and fell through with 2.2 seconds left.

Referee Danny Crawford immediately waved the basket off, ruling that Alonzo Mourning tipped the ball in, bringing Miami's coaching staff sprinting onto the floor. The other referees pulled Crawford aside and told him he made the wrong call, and the basket counted.

The Knicks had one last chance, but the inbounds pass was deflected away from Latrell Sprewell into Jamal Mashburn's hands as time ticked away.

It was one of the oddest endings to any of the 20 playoff games between these teams, which is no small thing in a rivalry that has featured fights, suspensions and last-second bounces — but never a shot quite like this one by Carter.

The loss was an excruciating one for the Knicks, especially Patrick Ewing, whose basket with 2.6 seconds left in regulation forced the overtime.

But with a chance to give New York a two-point lead with 13.7 seconds left, Ewing could only make one of two free throws.

The Heat then inbounded and swung the ball around to Carter for the game-winner in the first overtime game the teams have ever played against each other in the postseason.

For the first four quarters, the defense was so tight and the offenses so flustered that it looked like it would be the lowest scoring playoff game in NBA history. The record for fewest combined points is 142.

It would have earned that distinction if Mashburn had hit an open 20-footer at the buzzer in regulation, but he missed to send the game into an extra period tied at 68-68.

UTPB players honored

ODESSA — The Red River Athletic Conference named four members of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to the women's All-Conference softball team.

Andrews' Kasey Hill, a senior catcher with a .423 batting average, was named Offensive Player of the Year.

Other UTPB players were sophomore Kacey Huckabee of Monahans, a catcher/outfielder (.371); Marfa senior shortstop Crystal Simpson (.312); and Coahoma senior first baseman Stepanie Stone (.305).

Huckabee was the Spirit Award winner from the UTPB Alumni Association. Simpson was UTPB's MVP for the season and Stone was last year's MVP and Offensive Player of the Year for UTPB.

game between the two teams) drove in the winning run," said Pam Heath, coach of the Lady Lions.

Lacey Heath, who left the winning run on third base last year, belted an RBI single to drive in Patti Hutton from third. It also came one half-inning after Midland Christian scored two runs in the top of the seventh to tie the game at 4-4.

"They (the Lady Mustangs) are a good team, and we had a lot to prove after last year," coach Heath said. "We wanted to advance because we didn't make it last year."

Although MCHS won the only previous meeting between the two teams, they felt they still had something to prove, being state champions and all.

"Both teams had something to prove," said Midland Christian coach Byron Myers, whose Lady Mustang teams have advanced to the state semifinals the last six years. "It was a heavyweight fight. It was a shame that these two teams were on the same side of the bracket."

Midland Christian almost put together an improbable comeback. In the top of the seventh, the first three Lady Mustangs reached base thanks to an error, a single and fielder's choice, setting the table for Sarah Lemons, who had a two-run single to left to tie the game.

With runners on first and second, Danna Sheppard followed with a single to right, but MCHS' Bobbie Vaughan was thrown out at the plate, keeping the score 4-4. Pitcher Whitney Heath got out of the inning with a strikeout and pop fly to the catcher.

"If we would have been the home team, we would have gotten them," said Myers, speaking of his team's offensive momentum late in the game.

Heath (16-11) showed some guts in her second game of the day. Aside from two innings, she held the MCHS bats at bay, fighting off a fever and strep throat.

Sarah Lemons was 3-for-4 with a double and two RBIs.

The only other time the Lady Mustangs touched Heath was in the fourth inning. Jessica Vallee blasted a triple, Holly Lemons followed with an RBI single and later in the inning, Edna Balerio blistered an RBI triple.

The Lady Lions got on the board first with three runs in the second. Jessica Hudek and Carly Wolfram had back-to-back doubles. Wolfram's went for two RBIs. Also, Hatton added an RBI single.

Sarah Lemons (10-10) took the loss, scattering 10 hits over seven innings. She also struck out seven.

In the Lady Mustangs' first game of the day, a surprise opponent, Dallas Bishop Dunne not Garland Christian, was at the Wilson Complex to meet MCHS. Apparently, the wrong score was reported to TAPPS. It didn't really matter though.

MC erupted for seven runs thanks in part to a handful of Bishop Dunne errors in the first inning. Still, Sarah Lemons and Sheppard were good enough to hold their opponents to next to nothing offensively.

In the game, MCHS' Sarah Lemons was 3-for-4 with three RBIs. Summer Dodd was 2-for-4.

Mihm will enter NBA draft

AUSTIN (AP) — The lure of the NBA was too strong for Chris Mihm to ignore.

Texas' All-American center announced Friday he will skip his senior season and enter the June 28 NBA draft.

Considered the best pure center college basketball last season, the 7-footer is projected as a top-five pick.

"In the end, the timing just seemed right," Mihm said. "I realize I have a lot to learn, but I'm ready for the next challenge. I feel I'm ready to fulfill my lifelong dream."

Mihm averaged nearly 18 points and 10.5 rebounds in leading the Longhorns to a 24-9 record and into the NCAA tournament. He holds the school record with 264 career blocks and ranks second with 945 rebounds.

GOLF: Two advance to sectionals

(From 1B)

"I've made a couple of amateur qualifiers before. I just felt, what the heck, I'll give it a shot," Ellis said.

Unlike Ellis, Rachell is a touring professional. Prior to coming to Midland for the qualifier, Rachell was on a mini tour in California. While driving across country to West Palm Beach, Fla., to play the Golden Bear Tournament, he stopped in Midland to play a little golf for a chance at the U.S. Open. This is his second try to qualify for the U.S. Open. Last year, he failed to get out of the local qualifying round.

"You just have to stay patient because you never know what can happen," said Rachell about the sectional round.

Ellis will next head to Lake Merced Golf Club south of San Francisco for the sectional qualifier.

"I don't know about my chances," he said. "You play with guys like Rob and all these touring pros, you don't have much of a chance. But I'm going to go, I don't care."

Friday's qualifier was one of 90 taking part across the nation. Of the 12 sectional qualifiers across the country, 88 golfers will join the 68, who are fully exempt from qualifying at the U.S. Open June 15-16.

Here are the results of the United States Golf Association's U.S. Open local qualifier held at the par-72 Midland Country Club on Friday. *Denotes qualifiers.

LEE: Rebs need one win today

wasn't quite at that form in his two most recent starts this season, lasting only four innings in Game 2 last week against Tascosa, prior to which he lost a nine-inning decision to San Angelo Central in the District 4-5A finale.

On Thursday, though, Benavidez decided to go with Gilliam over Rogers (who started Game 1 against Tascosa) to open the series against Jefferson.

"I just wanted to throw him (Gilliam) today," said Benavidez. "He'd been throwing all right in the bullpen in practice and he gave me the thumbs up. He was in a zone where he was more or less hitting spots."

The Rebels gave Gilliam all he needed in the bottom of the first when Josh Haney's double, Jon Rogers' triple and Joe Frazier's single all brought home runs off Jefferson starter Max Tellez for a 3-0 lead.

Lee truly broke the game open in the bottom of the third, which started badly for Jefferson (15-14-1) when centerfielder Heberto Perez dropped a lazy fly by Rogers to start the inning. That opened the floodgates for six runs by the Rebels — five of which were unearned — off Tellez, as Rogers scored on a wild pitch, Jordan Cooper had a two-run single and Frazier drew a bases-loaded walk to conclude the barrage which made it 9-0.

The only drama remaining was whether or not the Rebels could score at least one more run to invoke the 10-run rule and send everybody home early. They did that with five runs off reliever Jorge Morales in the fourth, highlighted by a two-run triple by Rogers, who along with Frazier drove in three runs on the day.

Gilliam finally showed some chinks in his armor in the top of the fifth, giving up back-to-back singles to lead off the inning, both of whom eventually scored, along with hitting a batter and issuing his only walk of the day.

"This past week after not throwing well in Lubbock I wanted to come out and get control of my pitches," said Gilliam, who scattered six hits and struck out six. "(After getting in trouble in the fifth) coach Benavidez said just throw a double play ball and get us out of it."

That Gilliam did on the next pitch as Tellez grounded into a double play which, appropriately enough, ended the game.

Rogers will throw in Game 2 today, which should give the Rebels an edge. However, recent history has told Benavidez not to take a series win as a given.

"I don't think we will go in there overconfident," said Benavidez. "I think you have to consider the San Angelo game and what happened in the first game against Tascosa and guard against that."

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

New era in leadership begins for local stake

The Odessa Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints recently restructured its leadership, an event that occurs only once every nine years.

David Powers, contract geologist for Unocal and majority owner of Putt-Putt Golf and Games, is the new president. Steven J. Vore, a partner in Mesa Engineering of Odessa, and Bruce Williams, an attorney and partner in the law firm of Cotton Bledsoe Tighe and Dawson, will serve with Powers as first and second counselors, respectively.

Powers and Vore assured that there will be no radical restructuring of the church in West Texas.

"As president, I will do what the Lord impresses on us to do," Powers said. "I'd like to see the church grow in this area so that one day there's a temple here. But I'm not anticipating or setting a time table for that."

Powers explained that the three-member presidency is charged with the responsibility of "every individual within the boundaries of the 45,000-square-mile stake, whether a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or not. This stake covers approximately 45,000 square miles from Snyder on the east to Lamesa/Seminole on the north to Van Horn on the west to Alpine/Marfa on the south and Big Lake on the southeast."

Vore said that the presidency is not a paid position, although some expenses are paid by the church.

"All the service we give is on our own time, at night or on weekends, and amounts to at least 30 hours per week," he said.

Both Powers and Vore are converts to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, commonly referred to as Mormons.

Vore said he converted while a student at Texas Tech.

"I was dating a (Mormon) girl at the time, and we thought that we would get married," he said. "I was Presbyterian, and I had thought that changing churches would simply be a matter of moving my membership over. But I did want to learn more about her religion, so I went to the Tech library and found there wasn't much information there.

"I contacted the missionaries and met with them and they began to teach me the principles of the Gospel. I was attracted to the principles and the doctrine of the plan of salvation and knowing where we came from and what we can become, with the focus on Jesus Christ."

Vore said he was especially taken with the doctrine that families are sealed for eternity.

"You ask a lot of people if they and their family are going to be together forever and they'll say yes, but when you ask where the doctrine says that in their church, it isn't there. But in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, it's there."

Vore said he didn't marry the girl who had begun his journey toward conversion; he married another convert.

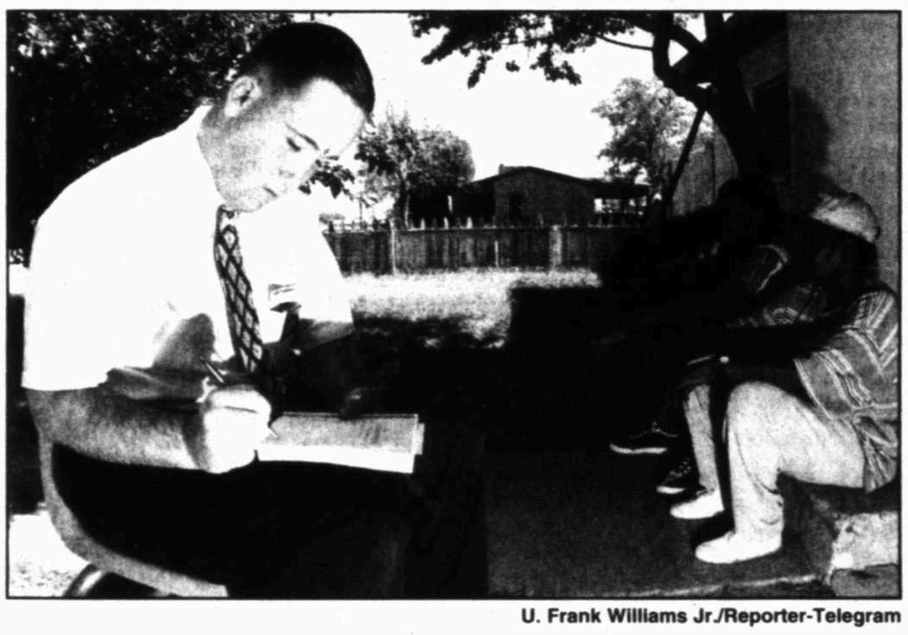

Powers also learned of the Mormons through an acquaintance with a girl.

During a conference of the Odessa Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the leadership was reorganized. David Powers, center, was called to serve as president, Steven Vore, left, will serve as first counselor; Bruce Williams has been called as second counselor.

U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram

Elder Anthony Asquith writes some information in the Book of Mormon before giving it to Tommy Banks and his mother, Gloria Banks, far right. Asquith is a Mormon missionary and he was visiting recently with the Bankses outside their Midland home.

Young men spread word of Jesus at home, abroad

One of the traditions in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is that when a man reaches the age of 19 he goes on a 24-month mission.

The mission is to share the word of Jesus Christ with any one who will listen at home and abroad.

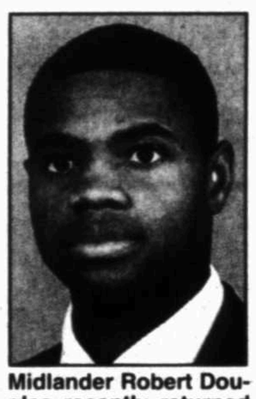

LDS missionaries are highly visible. They often ride bicycles or walk; they always wear conservative white shirts with dark ties, dark pants and spit-shined dark leather shoes.

They do their mission work by talking to people about the message of Jesus Christ wherever they encounter them: on the street, in laundries or restaurants, while waiting at air terminals, by knocking on doors. They refer to themselves as "elders" and wear nametags identifying them as such.

Missionaries pay their own way during missions work.

They are required to pay the church $375 a month, or $9,000 total, which is channeled through mission offices and then apportioned to the missionaries to cover their rent.

For lifetime Mormons, who know from their early childhood that they will one day be going on mission trips, gathering funding is much like the old-time dowry, or even a hope chest, for a bride.To fund the missions, some of them begin working at part-time jobs when they are very young. But converts, who must come up with the money in a relatively short period of time, are often supported by family and friends.

Midlander Robert Douglas recently returned from a 24-month mission in Florida, Jamaica and the Bahamas.

They don't have a voice about where they will serve their mission , or who their partners will be; partners are routinely changed about every six weeks.

Women may also serve as missionaries if they so choose.

Midlander Robert Douglas, a convert to the church who was baptized in 1992, recently completed a mission trip through the Florida Keys, Jamaica and the Bahamas.

He was converted after opening his door to a pair of Mormon missionaries.

"I converted because of the happiness and peace that I felt when they brought the Gospel and its teachings," he said. "My grandmother was also converted, although at a different time, and I can't tell you the difference it has made in our lives."

Douglas, now 21, said his mission trip was the greatest experience of his life.

"On an average day in the Bahamas, you can knock on a door and be invited in, then spend hours there, just talking about the Bible. Everybody likes to talk about the Bible."

However, Florida was a different story, Douglas said.

Student seminary

Teens learn about their faith

For more than 100 Mormon students and their teachers, class begins about 6 a.m. every school day.

The students range in age from 13 to 18. The classes, called seminary, are part and parcel of the life of teenagers throughout their high school years and will provide them with a thorough grounding in the Old and New Testaments, the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants — another essential of the faith of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints.

Performing a skit about hiding in the Garden of Eden are Andy McClain, from left, Megan Adams, Taylor Wynne and Melanie Bushman.

Seminary teachers at the church on Gateway Street are Jana McClain, Kay Little, Stephanie Sparkman and Ona Marie Snow. They each have between 11 and 15 students. They said they try to keep the classes interesting and lively but that the students know the importance of the subject matter.

"They wouldn't be here if they didn't believe in this," said Ms. McClain. "They are all required to read their Scripture and we cover it in-depth."

On one recent morning they were studying the Old Testament book of Jonah.

Before the kids arrived, the teachers had set the scene by placing on the tables opened cans of tuna fish, hymn books and books that combined the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.

"We spend at least three hours every day preparing for the next day's classes," said Ms. Little. "It takes some ingenuity to get the point across at this time of the morning."

The students file into the classrooms wearing school clothes, band clothes or sweats and fuzzy slippers.

"Some of these kids are so busy that they won't get home until 10:30 tonight. Then they'll be here again in the morning at six o'clock," explained Ms. Little.

Down at Ms. McClain's classroom, after beginning class with a prayer and a song, students were doing a "Scripture chase."

Ms. McClain gives the class a clue. "Love thy neighbor as thyself!"

The students flip through Bibles. "Got it! Got it!" they shout. She hands one of them a slip of paper — a "Scripturebuck," redeemable for rewards at the end of the year. Other clues are met with the same quick responses and Ms. McClain hands out more slips.

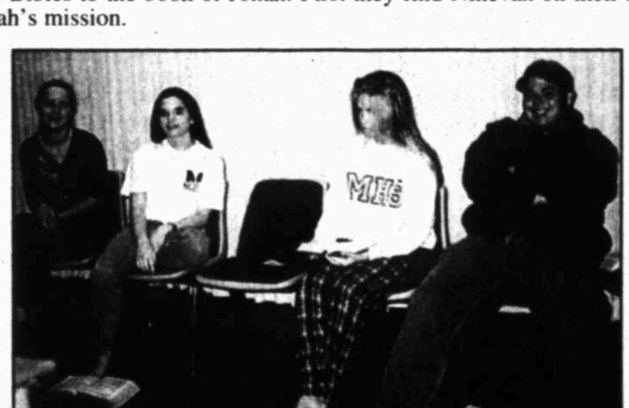

She directs them to open their Bibles to the book of Jonah. First they find Ninevah on their maps, then they begin to read and to discuss Jonah's mission.

"What on earth is stinking in here?" asks Ms. McClain. "Does anybody smell fish?"

As the story goes on to the inevitable throwing of Jonah into the sea, Ms. McClain gets ready to turn off the light. "I'm going to walk around and tap you on the shoulder, and when I do, imagine you're Jonah. Tell me what you're thinking."

The nearest student to the door flips a switch and darkness is instant, deep and thick with the smell of tuna.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

Lives are determined by 'kairos' moments that exist for eternity

You're only as old as you feel. Ha! Every spring, when my daughter turns another year older, she bounces home gaily from her birthday party, while I (because I'm almost five times her age) stagger back to the bedroom, collapse among the pillows, and call my mother:

"In case I never thanked you for giving me all those birthday parties, I'd like to tell you now."

Actually, I've learned a lot about giving birthday parties: Always have a helper; confine the children to a space with only one exit; and serve the cake last, so the full effects of the sugar occur on the way home.

The birthday party from hell happened at Fasken Park when my daughter turned 5 and she invited every single squirming body from both her pre-school and Sunday School classes. New to Midland, we failed to factor in the wind. Gathering mid-afternoon, we arrived laden with party favors (which blew away), napkins (which blew away), trash bags (which blew away), a pinata (which rocked dangerously from the branch of a tree), and cake served on Styrofoam plates (a piece of which literally flew out of her hands and smack dab onto the shirt front of one very startled girl.)

Williams

This is to say nothing of the fact that 30 children on a sugar high kept wandering away to the fringes of the park, where as every mother knows, child molesters, drug dealers, and reckless drivers lurk, just waiting to damage our precious ones. I spent two miserable hours herding the little wildebeests and chasing trash.

My husband remembers this same party as a great time.

At any rate, these annual social fiascos mark the passing of each year, and my children actually look forward to these events. Personally speaking, when my birthday rolls around each year, I'm just grateful to be alive. All I ask in the way of a celebration is to sleep late and have someone else cook supper.

Faster and faster these birthdays come, in relentless succession. I see my life as a little boat making its way from year to year through chronos, measured time, like the locks of the Panama Canal, passing from one designated space to the next. As the numbers stack up and my knees get creakier, I have to remember there's another kind of time, coexistent with the rigidity of minutes, hours, days, years: the ocean of kairos. In the flux of God's time and God's measurement, there is no "before" and "after" in the same way. The moment we learn to love our neighbor, the moment we give our lives to Christ, the moment we forgive an enemy, these are kairos moments and they belong to eternity.

As we pass through the locks of our days, it's good to remember the ocean of God's love that keeps us afloat and moves us along — the ocean we were born from and will die into.

We may not always be as young as we feel, but in God's time, it doesn't really matter.

ERA: Two of the leaders are converts

(From 1C)

"I was a senior in high school and I knew nothing about the church whatsoever, not even the name. I met a girl through ROTC who was a member of the church, and as I got to know her family through visits, I knew that I wanted a family like theirs. I had a great family of my own, but they had something that we didn't have.

"I went off to college and met a man at college who was really searching. He had been baptized three times before in different churches. He and I went to the missionaries together and asked to learn. When they began to talk about the plan of salvation and man's search for happiness, he and I looked at each other and smiled. We were baptized on the same day."

Powers said what struck him was that the missionaries invited him to read the Bible and the Book of Mormon and find out if what it says is true.

"As I read the Bible and the Book of Mormon, I knew that the Book of Mormon bore the testimony of Jesus Christ. The first thing I wanted to do after being baptized was go on a mission."

He was assigned to China, where he spent two months learning Mandarin, and lived there two years. Now, 28 years later, he has a son and a daughter who are missionaries.

"When my son opened his envelope and started to read, 'You are hereby called to serve as full-time missionary for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints,' then he got to the part where it said 'Your area of assignment is... Brazil,' he just had to quit talking for about 20 or 30 minutes because he knew that was where he needed to go," Powers said. "We believe that everything in the church is done by revelation."

They said the church has for years been subject to the spread of half-truths and misinformation by outsiders who don't investigate the facts.

"We do believe in the Bible. We read the Bible. We believe in Jesus as our savior," said Vore. "Being a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is an everyday thing. Everyone is welcome to learn about the church, take lessons and be baptized."

Not everyone, however, is able to serve in the stake presidency, or first presidency, the highest organizational post of the church. Only males can attain the priesthood, an honor that confers with it the obligation and privilege of serving communion, baptizing and acting as bishops, counselors, or presidents.

'I was attracted to the principles and the doctrine of the plan of salvation and knowing where we came from and what we can become, with the focus on Jesus Christ. ... You ask a lot of people if they and their families are going to be together forever and they'll say yes, but when you ask where the doctrine says that in their church, it isn't there. But in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, it's there.'

— Steve Vore, first counselor of Odessa Stake

Powers said that women have their own position in the church's relief society, "the oldest, largest women's organization in the world. The sisters have their own presidents, and they run that organization. Women have the sacred calling of motherhood, something that we (men) will never have, but we have the sacred calling of administering the Gospel.

"Prayers are offered by the sisters in the church. Every month, we have a ward council meeting where the women come and the bishop comes, and everyone comes and counsels together."

When asked whether restrictions upon women might one day be lifted — men of color were allowed to assume the priesthood for the first time in 1978 — both Powers and Vore insisted that priesthood for women would never be an option.

"It's biblical," said Powers.

"Besides, why would they want to?" Vore asked. "The priesthood is a service. Women perform other services."

Among services performed equally by men and women in the church are classes for children.

High school age members attend seminary, which is scheduled 6 a.m. to 7 a.m. every school day. The Bible, the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are taught on a rotating basis, with one book being covered each year.

Seminary is continued for college students in a program known as institute.

There are also primary classes on Sundays for children 3 to 12 years old. Class members as young as 3 years old are expected to pray and give talks at church meetings, and by the age of 12, they are giving talks during sacrament meetings, the LDS equivalent to the liturgy in liturgical churches.

Boys, if they demonstrate by their lives that they are worthy, are authorized to administer communion, consisting of bread and water.

LDS members are enjoined to be self-reliant. Like the wise virgins of the parable with their store of oil, Mormons maintain a year's supply of food in the family pantries and have storehouses in central locations throughout the world filled with supplies not only for church members but to fill the needs of the world's hurting people.

Powers said Mormons everywhere are in the midst of relief efforts wherever disasters, either natural or otherwise, occur.

"We were there after the tornadoes in Oklahoma City and Fort Worth; the Women's Relief Society sent thousands of handmade quilts to Kosovo; our missionaries clean up after hurricanes and earthquakes. We work with other agencies such as the Red Cross and Catholic Charities. We're always in the midst of the communities in times of trouble."

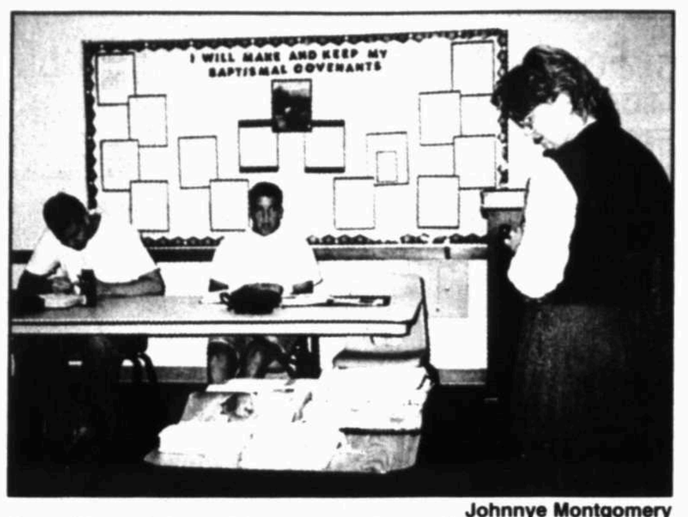

But they don't stand back waiting for disaster before they come forward in the community.

"The church is the largest sponsor of Boy Scouts in the country," Powers added.

"And the young women's program has an award like the Eagle Scout award in that they set goals over six years, and they can receive a Young Women's Recognition award, which is the highest award a young woman can receive."

Vore said in keeping with the church's strong emphasis on the family, Monday nights are devoted to family activities.

"The church is locked on Monday nights and we're instructed to hold family home meeting on that night." he explained. "We're supposed to go home and spend the whole evening with our families, and this has been going on since the early 1800s."

TEENS: Class covers sacred texts

(From 1C)

"I can't see a thing inside this fish," says a voice. "God, are you going to let me die?" says another. "Ooh, I'm scared," says a third.

Meanwhile, down the hall, Stephanie Sparkman has deviated from the Jonah lesson for the benefit of her 17- and 18-year-old students who missed a previous lesson. Ms. Snow's class is remarkably quiet, with heads bent over Bibles and fingers following the words.

In the other direction, Ms. Little's class, whose trip into the belly of the fish took place in a room adjoining their classroom, has returned. One student has settled in his chair and has laid his head on the table.

"What lessons do you think Jonah learned from being swallowed by the fish?" Ms. Little asks.

"Don't go near the water," says one student. "Don't try to get away from God," says another.

When the hour ends, the students scatter to pick up backpacks and books, and head out the doors, leaving Ms. McClain and Ms. Little to set up for the next day's lessons.

Ms. McClain said that most teachers sign up for at least four years in order to cover all four sacred texts. "It's very rewarding, because we learn those books in-depth by spending three hours a day preparing for our classes."

They said the students, who approach their seminary classes with varying degrees of devotion, will go on to attend once-a-week institute classes while they're in college to further prepare them for adult lives in the church or as missionaries.

"My sleeper is planning to go on a mission," said Ms. Little. "He'll make it, but he'll have to work."

They said that the dropout rate for their students was extremely low.

"I think this is a really positive way for kids to start the day," explained Ms. McClain.

"They're exposed to some really severe problems in school these days and coming here first, they get a chance to feel good about themselves and their choices, and it prepares them for the rest of the day."

WORD: Missionaries' aim is to serve people of the community where they live

(From 1C)

"In some areas of Florida, you could work for two or three hours and knock on as many as 20 to 30 doors, and maybe get in three doors."

He said that once someone expresses interest, the customary procedure is to make an appointment to return.

"I think everybody is receptive to the Gospel, but first you have to spark their interest," he explained. "We talk to everyone, young and old, in all walks of life. I had a lady of 87 who stopped us one day where we were riding our bikes. We talked to her and she accepted the Gospel; it was just wonderful."

Missionaries Ryan Bitton and Anthony Asquith are presently serving in the Midland area and drive around in a Ford Taurus in lieu of bicycles. They are both nearing the end of their missions; Bitton is in his 23rd month, and Asquith is finishing his 22nd month.

Bitton, a Pocatello, Idaho, native, is a lifetime Mormon. Asquith is a convert who came to the church three years ago.

They said that although they are rejected in about 95 percent of the attempts they make to talk to people about the Gospel of Jesus Christ, they don't take the rejection personally.

"It's the message of Jesus Christ they're rejecting," said Asquith."But in West Texas, they're awesome. They're always polite, even when they're saying no."

When they're not knocking on doors the two of them are usually involved in community service.

"Our whole aim is to serve people," said Bitton. "(Recently), we served in the Midland Soup Kitchen. I also teach classes in computer basics at Casa de Amigos. Probably the most fulfilling thing anyone can do is to serve somebody."

Asquith said the fundamental message is always the love of Jesus Christ.

"We do believe in Christ, who is the savior of the world, and to go along with that, we believe in a young boy by the name of Joseph Smith, who was 14, who had a great deal of confusion."

Smith is among those who organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on April 6, 1830, in Fayette, N.Y.

"Joseph wanted to know which of all churches were right. All the churches taught out of the Bible, but they taught different things. Joseph didn't know a lot about men who were acquainted with the world, but he wanted to know the truth. He read the Bible and in the book of James 1:5, he found a way to overcome his confusion. He read, 'If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.'

"That Scripture penetrated his heart and he decided to act upon it and to pray, to find out what was right," Asquith said. " He said he went into a grove of trees near his home and he knelt down in prayer, fully expecting God to answer his prayer. He said, 'I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me. When the light rested upon me I saw two personages whose brightness and glory defied all description. Standing above me in the air, one of them spake unto me by name and said, pointing to the other, 'This is my beloved son.'

"In answer to his prayer, he was visited by the heavenly father and his son, Jesus Christ. Joseph asked which churches were right, which were established by Jesus Christ. They told him not to join any of the churches right then, but to remain faithful, and that he would be prepared and called as a prophet, like Moses.

"That helped to clarify a lot of confusion about the divine personage of the heavenly father and his son, Jesus Christ. I'm thankful for the humility this young boy had. He was the prophet of the restoration of Christ's church.

"We share that message with everybody we can. I share it because I know it's true. I've prayed to know."

Former Midland Christian School janitor indicted for sexual assault

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

A former Midland Christian School custodian was indicted by a 238th District grand jury May 3, on three counts of sexual assault of a child.

Thomas Boyd Bowen, 69, of Midland, was arrested March 6 on two of the charges and again on March 13. He was released on bond in both cases, a total of $35,000 for the two arrests.

Bowen was arrested in connection with two reported incidents involving two 5-year-old girls at the school. The alleged assaults are believed to have occurred Feb. 29.

The arrests followed an investigation after one of the girls told a family member that a man known to her had assaulted her.

Police were notified March 2 and began an investigation.

If convicted, aggravated sexual assault of a child is a first-degree felony with a sentence that can range form five to 99 years in prison and a fine up to $10,000.

MISD teacher arrested for injury to disabled student

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

A Midland Independent School District teacher has been arrested and charged with injuring a special education student during an off-campus field trip April 19, according to Tina Jauz, Midland public information officer.

Ann Beverly, 44, was arrested Friday in connection with the suspected injury of Brandi Johnson, 18, in a school bus in the parking lot of a bowling alley on West Wall Street, said Ms. Jauz.

"I can only confirm that an employee from Midland High school has been suspended with pay pending the outcome of the case," said Barney Welch, MISD communications officer.

Welch said April 20 that "the district is investigating the incident to determine if proper intervention methods were being used by the teacher."

Ms. Johnson is a special education student with Down syndrome and Ms. Beverly is a special education teacher. The incident occurred in a school bus during a field trip to the bowling alley, Ms. Jauz said.

A member of Ms. Johnson's family called police April 19 and reported that Ms. Beverly struck Ms. Johnson on the back of the head. The young woman was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Injury to a disabled person is a third-degree felony.

Six people killed in small plane crash at Hobby Airport

HOUSTON (AP) — Six people headed for a fishing trip to Louisiana were killed Friday when their twin-engine airplane crashed and burned after stalling during takeoff at Houston Hobby Airport.

Houston Aviation Department spokesman Ernie DeSoto said the plane was about 300 feet in the air just before noon when the engine stalled and the plane nosedived into a grassy area next to runways.

"Apparently it exploded on impact," DeSoto said.

"It was a very violent crash scene," said J.R. Flanagan, a Houston Fire Department assistant chief.

All the passengers — six men all at least 35 years old — were ejected on impact and bodies and luggage were strewn about the wreckage, he said. The bodies were still identifiable despite the fire.

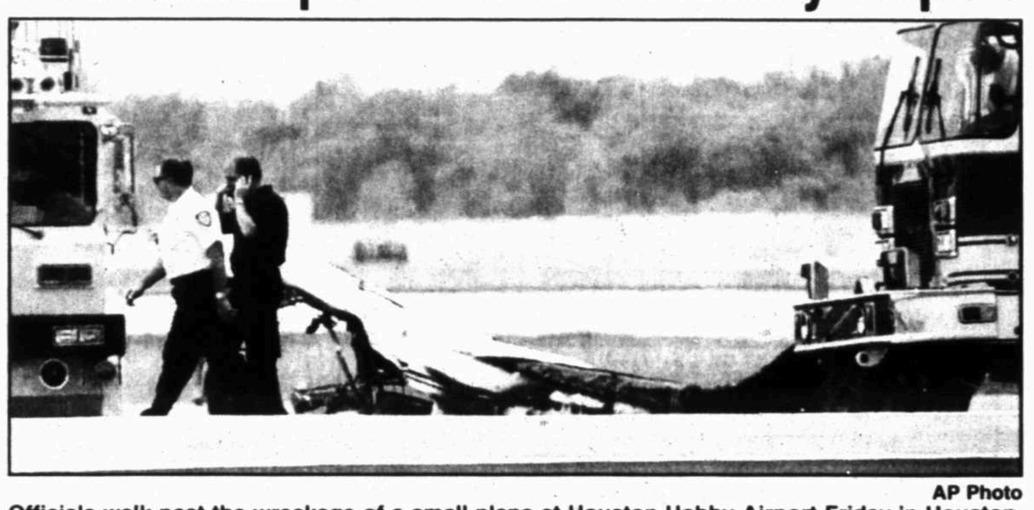

Names of the victims were not being released until relatives could be notified, DeSoto said. Most of the victims were believed from the Austin area although one or two of the men were picked up in Houston and could be from the city.

He said there was no distress call but witnesses said the engine stalled at least twice before the plane crashed.

The plane was climbing at 40 to 50 degrees when it should be about 15 degrees, Dana Van Loan, a pilot who saw the crash, said.

"The guy couldn't get the nose down," he said.

The plane, a 1970 model Beechcraft Baron 55, has a six-person capacity and also was filled with gear. DeSoto would not speculate on whether the aircraft was overloaded, saying that would be determined by investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board.

AP Photo
Officials walk past the wreckage of a small plane at Houston Hobby Airport Friday in Houston. A private twin-engine plane crashed shortly after takeoff, killing all six people on board.

The plane, with a wingspan of nearly 38 feet and capable of flying up to 225 mph at just under 20,000 feet, had arrived from Austin and refueled at Raytheon Aircraft Services shortly before takeoff, taking on 45 gallons of fuel.

"We'll provide whatever technical assistance is needed to determine the cause of the crash," Jim Gregory, director of corporate relations for Raytheon Aircraft Co., said from his Wichita, Kan., office.

He did not know if any maintenance was performed on the plane while it was being refueled.

"This aircraft has an excellent safety reputation," Gregory said. Beechcraft is now owned by Raytheon.

Because of the crash, no arrivals or departures for allowed at Hobby Airport for about 30 minutes. Regular airline traffic resumed about 12:30 p.m., DeSoto said.

Federal investigators were at the scene shortly after the accident.

"We're all getting our initial walkthrough," Jason Ragogna, an air safety investigator from the NTSB office in Arlington, Texas, said. "We'll do that for the next day to three days."

The team looking into the crash included two investigators from the NTSB, one from the Federal Aviation Administration, one from the manufacturer of the plane and one from the maker of the engine. The wreckage likely would be moved Saturday, he said.

The focus of their investigation would be cockpit instruments, flight controls, signs of whether both engines were producing power and looks at the aircraft's maintenance record and the pilot's training record, he said.

"The entire investigation takes six months to a year," Ragogna said. "When I leave here, when the entire team leaves here, we will not have a probable cause."

Asked if he could determine anything from his first look at the wreckage, he replied: "It would be premature to speculate."

DeSoto said the plane was headed to Galliano, La., about 40 miles southwest of New Orleans.

Hobby Airport, south of downtown Houston, is one of two major airports that serve the nation's fourth-largest city. The larger Houston Bush Intercontinental Airport, on the north side, is the other airport.

Poll: Most law enforcement agencies do not consider gangs a serious problem

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly three in four Texas law enforcement offices said gangs were either not a problem or not a serious problem, according to a new report issued by the Texas Attorney General.

"This report contains useful information to anyone engaged in the ongoing battle against crime," Attorney General John Cornyn said Friday.

The attorney general's office has published the results of its survey of law enforcement attitudes toward gangs since 1991, said Heather Browne, a spokeswoman for the attorney general.

Gangs, as defined by the penal code, are groups of three or more people who share common symbols and gather regularly to commit crimes.

The annual report shows there are four basic kinds of gangs: delinquent youths, street gangs, gangs primarily organized to make money and gangs gathered around an ideology, like racism or Satanism.

Police departments in six major metropolitan areas and one major metropolitan school district reported 2,215 gangs and just over 55,700 gang members, according to the report. It did not include detailed information about gang activity in individual cities or jurisdictions.

The attorney general's office surveyed 1,295 police chiefs, sheriffs, criminal district attorneys, county attorneys and school district police departments in 1999 for the report. Overall, 34 percent of the agency returned their surveys, and 82 percent of those who responded were from jurisdictions with 50,000 people or less.

Browne said the preponderance of small jurisdictions in the report suggested that gang crimes are not a major problem in small towns but still a priority in major cities.

Victor Bond, president of the Texas Gang Investigators Association, said the report downplayed the significance of gang crime because many small towns don't track it and only the largest law enforcement agencies have dedicated gang units.

"I think people in Texas would be shocked by the number of gang crimes in this state," said Bond, who also is a detective with the Harris County Sheriff's Office.

He said small towns will probably start tracking gang crime in the future as gangs keep spreading out from major cities, through suburbs and into small towns.

"They don't know how to recognize it and they don't know what to do," he said of the small towns.

Commissioners approve changes to Lotto Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Lottery Commission on Friday unanimously approved changes to Lotto Texas that are expected to make the twice-weekly game harder to win, but make for larger jackpots that spark more sales.

The three-member commission voted to add four balls to the 7-year-old game in an attempt to increase sales that have been consistently declining for the past three years.

Lotto Texas sales of $11.2 million for the first 36 weeks of the fiscal year were down 23 percent compared with the same period last year.

"We hope the people Texas like this new game," said Commissioner C. Thomas Clowe of Waco. "We're enthusiastic about the results that are being created here today and they will benefit all."

Commissioners Betsy Whitaker, of Dallas, and Anthony J. Sadberry, of Cypress, voted without comment.

Before the vote, the commission heard testimony from the president of the Texas Lottery Retailers Association, who said a survey of members showed they favored the change.

Not everyone was excited about the increased odds.

"I think the Lottery Commission has made a bad mistake. I believe Texans will quit playing with the four balls," said Dawn Nettles, publisher of the independent Lotto Report in Dallas. "I hope the people will now act. I hope they all quit."

Nettles said her subscribers have told her that if the balls were added and the game became harder to win, they would stop purchasing tickets.

The harder-to-win game could begin as soon as mid-July, the commission said.

Increasing the number of balls to 54 in the Lotto will shrink the odds of winning the jackpot from 1 in 15.8 million to 1 in 25.8 million.

With fewer winners, the commission predicts the average jackpot will increase from $11 million to $19 million in a year while increasing overall ticket sales by $111 million annually.

"The odds for winning the top prize will be a little more difficult than what they were but as you saw during the record Big Game jackpot, nobody played for the odd. Everybody played for the jackpot amount and that's what we believe will be happening here in Texas," said lottery spokesman Keith Elkins.

Last Tuesday's the multistate Big Game $363 million jackpot was the largest in U.S. history. No multistate games are played in Texas.

Under the Lotto changes approved Friday, players who match five of six numbers will win an estimated $2,500, up from the current $1,500. Four of six numbers will reap a $105 prize, up from the current $100, and the three of six prize will increase $2 to $5, according to the commission.

Elkins said no specific marketing plans were in place yet, but that the commission will place emphasis the anticipated higher jackpots.

Psychiatrist: Resendiz thought he was on mission from God

By Lisa Teachy
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A defense psychiatrist testified Thursday that Angel Maturino Resendiz at first thought his victim looked like a beautiful angel as she slept, but after he found signs of evil in her house God told him to kill her.

Drawn to the suburban West University Place home by "evil forces," he found in the study of Dr. Claudia Benton, a pediatric geneticist, pictures of children with birth defects and an African carving he thought depicted an evil deity who persecuted Jews, Dr. Bruce Cohen testified.

During the second day of defense testimony in Maturino Resendiz's capital murder trial, his mother, Virginia Maturino Resendiz, testified that she had given birth standing up and her newborn son fell on his head. He also suffered several blows to the head growing up and witnessed her being attacked by a man wielding a machete, she said.

Other family members testified that as a child Maturino Resendiz was sexually abused by a stranger.

Cohen described the Mexican national as a paranoid schizophrenic, a condition that had been caused by a combination of head injuries, drug abuse and a family history of mental illness.

The defense is trying to prove those traumas led to a diminished mental state that ultimately sent him on a mission to destroy "evil people."

"At the time of that offense, as a result of schizophrenia, he did not know that his conduct was wrong," Cohen testified.

"Up to this day I don't feel guilty," Maturino Resendiz told Cohen. "I feel for the families, but I will tell you I feel like somebody else did it and not me. ... I know it was me, but I can't point the finger and say it was me. ... I know the jury won't like hearing this, but how can I feel sorry for evil."

Maturino Resendiz, 40, is charged with the December 1998 slaying and rape of Benton, one of six Texans he has admitted to killing, as well as two others in Illinois and one more in Kentucky over a two-year period.

The self-described "half angel, half man" has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, claiming God had told him to destroy abortion clinics, but along the way an evil presence led him to kill at random.

Cohen said Maturino Resendiz is an organized, higher-functioning schizophrenic able to carry out his delusions by stowing away on freight trains to move from town to town looking for abortion clinics. At each city he spent the day searching for clinics and at night tried to find a place to sleep near the tracks.

That's what he was doing the night he attacked Benton, Cohen said. He was particularly drawn to Houston, which he called Sodom.

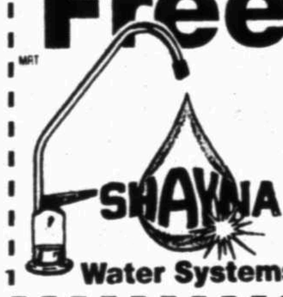

Maturino Resendiz was diverted that night by a sudden feeling that he should walk along the railroad tracks.

"And then I found the doctor's place," Cohen testified Resendiz told him during examinations, and a "cold chill" filled his head. Earlier witnesses testified he forced the garage door open and entered the home from there.

"Something told me to go in and led me to the computer room and I saw the evil pictures of experiments she was doing on babies," Maturino Resendiz told Cohen.

Benton did no such experiments. She was preparing a report on her work on Angelman syndrome, a condition that causes retardation, and had left her computer on when she went to bed.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 13, 2000:

When something feels off kilter to you, be courageous and change it, especially in your profession. Think about how many hours you spend working each day, each week, each year. Honor yourself, your real skills and your talents. Talks with children and loved ones are fruitful. If you are single, romance becomes even more important than it's been in past years. Intense communication flourishes. You are a natural romantic. If attached, your relationship grows because of the time, care and communication between the two of you. Take that special vacation together. LIBRA reads you clearly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You might be coming off a difficult night's sleep. Lounge around; take your time. By afternoon, others seek you out. Popularity runs high. Don't mull over problems — take action. Join friends. Allow more fun into your life. Tonight: Out to dinner with a group.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Pressure intensifies with a boss or parent. You might feel like someone is blocking you. Recognize your limits with a child or loved one. Relax, call a friend and get into a game of tennis or racquetball. Sharing a pastime brings closeness. Tonight: Easy does it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Problems occur, but how many stem from your own rigidity? Be honest with yourself. Discussions prove to be fruitful, and they allow you to move on. Call a dear friend and get together for some fun times. Do what you love. Tonight: Let the good times roll.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Reach out for another. Express what is on your mind. You might have felt blocked by a partner or friend. Discuss what is happening. Loosen up. Spend time with family and relax with loved ones. Recycle and recharge. Tonight: Order in; watch a movie.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Confusion marks a relationship. Partners do the unexpected. Take charge if you want your weekend to go as you wish. Make calls; seek friends. Get together; catch up on news; run errands. Socialize, as you do so well. Tonight: Out and about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Let others see the real you. Don't allow those who are simply out of sorts to mar your day. Get some exercise to relieve stressed-out nerves. Brainstorm. Make plans that suit you. Let go and indulge. Worry less about the cost. Tonight: Treat another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ This morning, take a back seat. Another might have very different ideas than you have. Communicate, and let a partner know very clearly where you are coming from. This afternoon, follow through on a natural impulse. Let your personality speak. Tonight: Your wish is another's pleasure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Focus on a friendship early on. Make calls and talk to friends. Slacken your pace, as you could be on overload. Slow down and relax. Another might mean well, but he doesn't quite understand your need to pull back. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ What starts out as a debacle could work out if you keep talking. Listen to a friend. Make plans to get together. Talk about what you want. Another does everything he can to make it happen. Visit; munch on a meal; flirt and laugh. Tonight: Out and about.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Discuss an upcoming get-together. Schedule a special outing with a loved one at a concert, or spend the day in a favorite place. A boss or higher-up needs you to fill in and take charge. Another clearly respects you. Indulge someone. Tonight: A must show.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ One-on-one relating builds better understanding with a family member. Call a friend; make plans for a day trip. Getting away from the same environment helps you feel better. Let your imagination speak. Do something different. Tonight: Try a new spot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Sort through plans. You might need to cancel something because of a personal matter. Give yourself permission to do what you need to do, for a change. Get together with a loved one. Go to a favorite restaurant and reconnect. Tonight: Could be dreamy.

Jesse Ventura's life to take stage

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Watch out Broadway, here comes Gov. Jesse Ventura.

Ventura has signed over the rights to a musical based on his life to Pierre Cossette, a TV, music and theatrical producer whose credits include "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "The Will Rogers Follies."

The show is tentatively titled "The Body Ventura," and Cossette said he has begun to think of scenes and songs from Ventura's colorful life as a professional wrestler and politician.

"You open with the damnedest tag-team match you've ever seen," he said. "I can see 'Jesse For President.' ... What a production number that is."

Although millions of dollars would have to be raised before a show could be produced, Cossette said every show he has developed has reached Broadway. Cossette would not say how much Ventura stands to earn, except that it would be "a very, very tiny percentage" of the show.

NEW YORK — Baseball's Yogi Berra spent part of his 75th birthday christening a New York Waterway ferry named in his honor.

"It's a lot nicer than the boat I was on in the Navy," the Yankees great said as he smashed a ceremonial bottle of champagne across the bow of the 79-foot catamaran.

Berra took a short cruise on the ship's maiden voyage from Manhattan's Pier 17, the departure point for ferries to Yankees and Mets home games. He said he offered the captain some advice from one of his famous malapropisms:

"I told the captain, 'When you come to a fork in the river, take it.'"

BOSTON — George Bush will be the first president honored by the Kennedy Library Foundation with its Distinguished American Award.

The late president's daughter, Caroline, will present Bush with a bronze bust of JFK on May 21 at the library.

The award honors those who have played significant roles in American public affairs. Past recipients include Betty Freidan, John Kenneth Galbraith, Henry Kissinger, Marian Wright Edelman and Archibald Cox.

Bush will participate in a discussion of his published collection of letters, "All the Best," in a session moderated by John Seigenthaler, former aide to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and chairman of the Freedom Forum at Vanderbilt University.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — An all-girl school won all-boy band LFO for an evening by collecting 2.1 million pennies for charity.

LFO will perform for Holy Angels Academy as the grand prize in a penny drive sponsored by a radio station. More than 90 schools vied for the concert. The $21,000 in pennies will be donated to the Hospice Foundation.

Orlando, Fla.-based LFO's songs include "Summer Girls" and "I Don't Wanna Kiss You Goodnight."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Robert Fuller, star of TV westerns "Laramie" and "Wagon Train," said he doubts those thrilling shows of yesteryear will be coming back to prime time.

"Nobody in power in this business knows how to make a decent western," he said Thursday during the opening of the 15th annual Knoxville Western Film Festival.

As proof, he pointed to the short-lived "Magnificent Seven" TV series a few years ago.

"None of the actors could ride a horse," Fuller said. "You're not going to get a western on the air that way."

Fuller, who later starred in the 1970s medical drama "Emergency," recently made a guest appearance on "Walker, Texas Ranger," one of the closest things to a western now on the small screen.

AUSTIN — Minneapolis Vikings owner Red McCombs now has his name on the business school of his alma mater.

The Texas businessman on Thursday donated $50 million to the University of Texas' business school. The university called it the largest single donation in its 117 years.

The UT Austin College of Business Administration and Graduate School of Business was renamed the Red McCombs School of Business. He studied business administration at the university in the late 1940s.

"I believe strongly in the quality of leadership at the University of Texas, or I wouldn't be making this gift," said McCombs, 72. "I decided to make this gift now because the timing is right — both for me and for UT."

PRESTIGE LUXURY: 2000 Cadillac Eldorado Coupe

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

With all of the industry hoopla concerning pickup trucks, minivans, and sport utility vehicles these days, it is difficult to remember that plenty of new automobiles are also bought and sold every year. General Motors knows this well, continuing a 47-year tradition with its Cadillac Eldorado.

Built exclusively at the Detroit-Hamtramck Assembly Center, Detroit, Mich., Cadillac bills the Eldorado as the only luxury coupe built in North America. Available in two versions, ESC and ETC models, the Cadillac coupe is powered by two versions of the improved Northstar 4.6L V-8 engine bolted to the silky smooth 4T80-E four-speed automatic transmission.

Additional Northstar technology, including Magnasteer variable- assist power steering and independent four-wheel suspension, makes driving this car an impressive experience.

Cadillac did not skimp on the creature comforts either, redesigning displays and controls as well as improving the feel of the front seats. The cumbersome digital dashboard was redesigned back in 1997 with big, easy-to-read analog gauges. The positioning of the climate controls has been moved to the center console and buttons have been redesigned for easier usage.

The ETC adds such powerful performance and control goodies as the StabiliTrak control system and a continuously variable road-sensing suspension combined with electronic level control.

Rear-seat passengers were not neglected, with "B" pillar-mounted grab handles to aid in entry and exit. The rear seat is a roomy place that features an armrest and two cupholders. Two adults are easily accommodated without problem. A low lift-over highlights the trunk opening, with slightly more than 15 cubic feet of nicely finished cargo area available.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers for the two versions of the Northstar 4.6 V-8 are as follows: 275 hp at 5,600 rpm and 300 ft/lbs of torque at 4,000 rpm (ESC coupe) and 300 hp at 6,000 rpm and 295 ft/lbs of torque at 4,400 rpm (ETC coupe). EPA fuel economy is 17 city/28 highway. Underhood fluids easily accessible but not clearly marked.

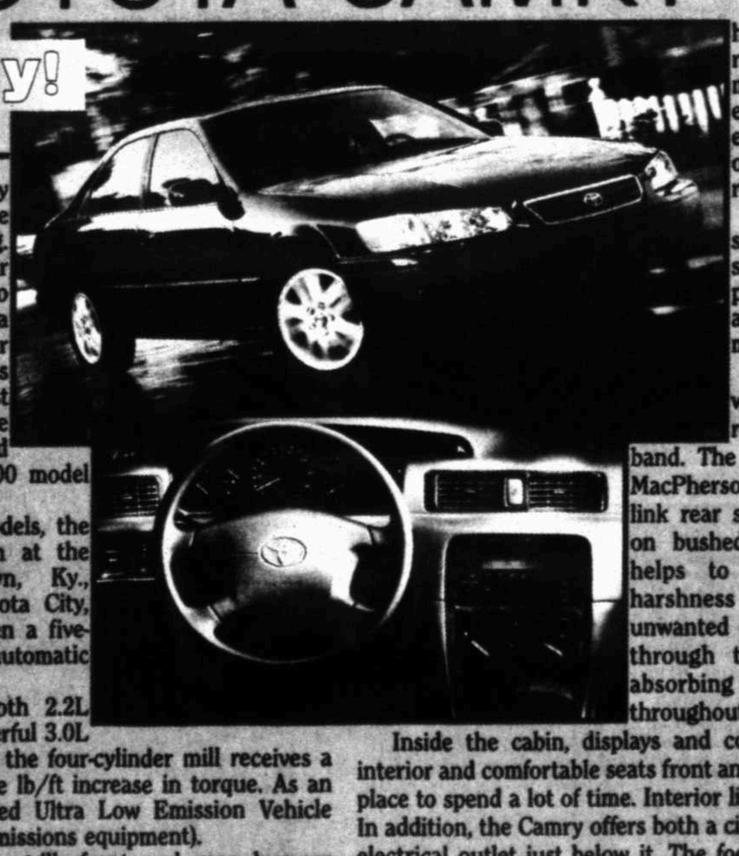

Standard safety equipment includes dual front airbags, four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, all-speed traction control, daytime running lights, fog lamps, PassKey II theft deterrent system, front cornering lamps, retained accessory power, automatic programmable power door lock system and remote keyless entry. ETC adds StabiliTrak chassis control system, continuously variable road-sensing suspension and Rainsense wiper system.

Optional safety equipment includes StabiliTrak chassis control system (ESC) $495. The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price for the Cadillac Eldorado begins at $39,120 for the base model and $42,695 for the ETC. Destination charge adds $720. Dealers report an average supply of the Eldorado on the ground, so finding one should not be a problem. There are no rebates.

Improving value: 2000 TOYOTA CAMRY SEDAN

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Competition in the front drive family size sedan segment of the automotive marketplace is fierce and unforgiving. Consumers are demanding more of their daily mounts while expecting to purchase the new sheetmetal at a modest price. Woe to the automaker that does not appease this group. As America's best selling car for the last two years, Camry improves the value with a number of exterior, interior and mechanical improvements for the 2000 model year.

Available in CE, LE, and XLE models, the Toyota Camry is manufactured both at the automaker's sprawling Georgetown, Ky., complex and Tsutsumi Plant in Toyota City, Japan. Consumers can choose between a five-speed manual (CE, LE) or four-speed automatic transmission (CE, LE, XLE).

Engine choices are a silky smooth 2.2L DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder or a powerful 3.0L DOHC 24-valve six-cylinder. For 2000, the four-cylinder mill receives a bump of three horsepower and a three lb/ft increase in torque. As an added benefit, this motor has received Ultra Low Emission Vehicle (ULEV) certification (with California emissions equipment).

Exterior upgrades include a new grill, front and rear bumper redesign, multi-reflector headlamps, combination taillights with wider horizontal reflectors and a redesigned side protection molding. All Camrys are now equipped with new damper-assist engine hood struts for easier opening and closing. No more prop rod!

Grocery bag hooks on both sides of the trunk are now standard for all models to help prevent bagged items from moving about when the vehicle is in motion.

On the road, the 3.0L V6 was silky, smooth and very responsive throughout the power band. The Camry chassis is equipped with MacPherson strut front/independent dual-link rear suspension components, mounted on bushed subframes. This configuration helps to reduce noise, vibration and harshness (NVH). This reduction of unwanted elements is further accomplished through the use of energy and sound absorbing materials strategically placed throughout the passenger compartment.

Inside the cabin, displays and controls are excellent. The roomy interior and comfortable seats front and rear make the Camry a very nice place to spend a lot of time. Interior lighting has been greatly improved. In addition, the Camry offers both a cigarette lighter plus and additional electrical outlet just below it. The foot rest for the driver's left foot is very comfortable.
