Israelis expected to vote out Likud, vote in Labor

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Battered by 400 percent inflation and unsure of prospects for peace, Israelis voted today in an election expected to produce a narrow victory for the opposition Labor Party over Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud bloc.

The results forecast in the final round of opinion polls suggested that small parties would hold the balance of power and produce the kind of unwieldy coalition government that has always governed Israel.

It could take several days of inter-party maneuvering to establish which of the two major parties is able to form a new government.

More than 2.6 million Israelis were eligible to vote at the 4,850 polling booths, choosing among Labor, Likud and 24 other parties ranging from the extreme right to left-wing and communist groups and including a number of religious factions.

Armed Forces radio quoted former Prime Minister Menachem Begin as saying today that he would not vote "for personal reasons." He refused to elaborate, the report said. Begin, the founder of the Likud, had not urged voters to support the Likud.

He told The Associated Press on Sunday that he hoped the Likud would win, but his comment was unlikely to have much impact since Israel radio and television are barred from broadcasting statements that can affect the election outcome.

Shamir voted at a school near his party headquarters in Tel Aviv. "There is only one poll — the election. I am very confident," Shamir told reporters.

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres voted at a school in the Tel Aviv suburb of Neve Avivim.

Asked about pre-election polls that showed Labor's lead dwindling as the election approached, Peres said: "The polls are confused. My feelings in the field are excellent."

Seven hours after the polls opened, about 40 percent of eligible voters had cast ballots. The turnout was about the same reported after seven hours in the 1981 elections, when 78.5 percent of the electorate voted by the end of the day.

Israel radio reported 6,000 police were guarding the polls.

Some 70 percent to 80 percent of the soldiers in occupied south Lebanon had cast their votes in a procedure that began Sunday, Israel radio said today.

Military sources in Tel Aviv said Israel's army closed the crossing points into Israel-controlled south Lebanon along the Awali River, in an effort to provide extra security for soldiers during the elections, when guerrillas might be expected to step up attacks.

At Election Committee headquarters in Jerusalem, officials said they had received two reports of ballot tampering but no incidences of violence. The liberal Shinui Party complained that someone had punched a hole through its pile of ballot slips in Netanya. Likud officials said someone had sprayed their stack of ballots in Kiryat Ono with a sticky substance.

Both major parties mobilized tens of thousands of volunteers and thousands of vehicles to take supporters to the polls.

The Labor Party had promised to withdraw Israeli troops from Lebanon within six months and expressed an interest in opening peace talks with Jordan by offering it control of part of the occupied West Bank.

Two independent polls published Sunday showed Labor winning a plurality but not a majority in the Knesset. One poll showed Labor ahead 46 seats to 40 seats; the other 48-41.

Midland unemployment rate unchanged for June

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

The Midland unemployment rate remained unchanged today, while the state broke a 14-year trend for June employment.

The Midland unemployment rate as reported by the Texas Employment Commission was 3.5 percent for June, making Midland second lowest in the state, tied with Dallas-Fort Worth. Austin, with 3.2 percent unemployment, remained the leader in Texas.

Across the state, it was the first time in 14 years that unemployment decreased in the month of June, when students traditionally join the labor market as part-time workers and graduates enter the labor force full time.

While the civilian labor force increased by almost 3,000, up from 72,300 in May to 75,000 this month, the increase was totally absorbed into the market, while the unemployment ranks were reduced by 100.

"Had it not been for students and graduates coming into the market, the percent of unemployment would have been much lower," said Paul Adams, Midland labor market analyst for the Texas Employment Commission.

Compared to last year's dismal showing of 6.5 percent unemployed, Midland has done an almost 180 degree turnaround. Last year for the month of June, Midland had a civilian labor force of 65,100 with 4,200 unemployed.

Odessa, while recovering, is still short of full recovery. At 4.3 percent unemployment, it is 10th in the state, with 3,400 of a 78,900 work force still unemployed.

At this time last year, Odessa had a civilian labor force of 73,200 with 7,500 unemployed for an unemployment rate of 10.2 percent.

Other cities showing signs of recovery with unemployment were Bryan-College Station and Abilene which tied in third place with 3.7 percent unemployed. San Angelo with 3.8 percent unemployed was fourth.

"The evidence is in all across the state," said Adams, "that recovery is well under way. Things are improving despite the energy situation and devaluation of the peso, which have been the two things most affecting the Texas economy."

Amtrak passenger trains collide in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Amtrak passenger trains crashed head-on today in "a major accident" on an elevated section of track, Amtrak and Fire Department officials said. Scores of people were injured, including four seriously.

A parallel track had been closed for repairs.

"It could be a bad one. A lot depends on just how fast it was going," said John McLeod, an Amtrak spokesman. He said each train carried about 160 passengers.

"We just have very fragmented information right now," McLeod said, adding that he did not know if both trains had been moving before the time of the crash.

"We have a major accident, multiple injuries, no fatalities," said Fire Department spokesman John Mulligan.

"Upwards of 100 minor injuries" were reported, said Ellen Weiman, spokeswoman for the city's Emergency Medical Service, with four of them serious. She said eight hospitals had been alerted.

"A doctor is going up in a cherry picker to treat a partial amputee," said Jim Kerra, executive director of the EMS, who was at the scene. He reported four "multiple trauma" victims in all.

"The rest are basically walking wounded," he said.

The Shoreliner, out of Boston, and the New England Zip, out of Washington, crashed at about 10:45 a.m. at the Sixth Avenue bridge on the Hell Gate line in the Astoria section of the borough of Queens, said McLeod.

"The location is two-track territory and it is reported that number one track had been put out of service for maintenance," McLeod said.

He said the Shoreliner had left Boston at 6:35 a.m. and was due at Manhattan's Pennsylvania Station at 10:44 a.m. The New England Zip had left Penn Station at about 10:10 a.m., on the way to Boston.

"We heard a boom and that's what it was," said Joseph Specht, owner of Etcetera Wallpaper, a store located beneath the elevated tracks. "It sounded like a terrific explosion. I ran out and saw smoke."

He said that from the street, "You can see the two trains. They're banged into each other."

FAA begins probe of copter crash

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — FAA inspectors were expected to be in Ector County this morning to begin an investigation of the crash of a sheriff's department helicopter Sunday morning in a pasture west of Odessa.

Lt. Richard Pate, commander of the helicopter unit, said the copter went down in a pasture one mile west of Loop 338 and one half mile south of Highway 302 at 9:59 a.m. Sunday.

Cause of the crash has not yet been determined. Pate said the deputies in the copter said the craft had experienced power surges, suggesting to him low fuel levels or blockage in the fuel line may have been the cause.

The craft was a total loss. The two deputies were released from an Odessa hospital after receiving treatment for cuts.

The accident leaves the unit without an aircraft. The department's other TH55A needs repairs from what Pate called a "hard landing" last year in the backyard of a county residence. Parts to repair the copter are expected to arrive this week.

Miss America 'violated and angry' about photos

NEW YORK (AP) — Vanessa Williams, who has been asked to quit as the reigning Miss America, says she's gone "from shock to depression" to feeling "violated and angry" in the 10 days since she learned that Penthouse magazine would publish nude photographs of her.

S. Charles

"I don't want to say it's making me feisty, but it's making me want to move on," Miss Williams said in an interview with The Associated Press on Sunday.

Miss Williams was expected to announce this afternoon whether she will give in to the Miss America Pageant's request that she turn over her crown to first runner-up Suzette Charles, Miss New Jersey. It is the first time any of the 57 women to hold the crown has been asked to step down.

Miss Williams refused to say what her decision would be, but her mother, Helen, described the 21-year-old beauty queen as "a fighter."

"If she decides to continue to hold the crown, they'll have to take it off her head," her father, Milton, said. "My personal decision is yes, she should fight."

Pageant executive director Albert A. Marks Jr. told the Philadelphia Inquirer that Miss Williams will not be permitted to attend this year's show, nor will there be any acknowledgement of her reign. Pictures of Miss Williams will not appear in the Miss America program, Marks said.

Pageant promoters said the photographs, published in September's Penthouse, violated her contract regarding morals and upholding the pageant's image.

Miss Williams said the pictures, some posed with another female model, were to be artistic photographs, never to be shown publicly, and that she was told she would not be identifiable. She also said she didn't recall signing a release for the pictures.

"I think it is a violation of my rights," said Miss Williams, the first black woman to wear the Miss America crown. "It's obviously my own fault, but I trusted the photographer."

As Penthouse arrived in newsstands in some cities, vendors reported brisk sales, with nearly 800 copies purchased at one stand in Dallas. Clerks in other cities said they had waiting lists for the $4 magazine.

Newsstands report sellouts, waiting lists for issue

Associated Press

Newsstands across the country are reporting sellouts and waiting lists as people who don't usually buy "girlie" magazines, male and female, clamor to pay $4 for the Penthouse magazine featuring nude photographs of Vanessa Williams, Miss America.

"Penthouse, Penthouse, Penthouse. I only started at 7 o'clock, and 200 people have asked me about it," Nazir Muhammad, a clerk at an independent newsstand in New York's Times Square, said today shortly after midnight.

"I have a list of 78 people, a waiting list," said Curtis Thomas of The Final Edition in University City, Mo. "I haven't seen anything like this since the Joan Collins Christmas Playboy issue."

Penthouse rushed the magazines to vendors ahead of schedule, and nearly 800 copies were sold at one Dallas newsstand and 300 at one in Bridgeport, Conn., over the weekend. Other vendors said the exposure of a beauty queen has sparked brisk sales and those who had yet to receive the magazine said inquiries were unusually high.

The photos of Miss America in intimate poses with another woman, prompted pageant promoters to ask the 21-year-old beauty to resign her crown. She was to announce her decision today.

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday for the West, the northern Plains from the Midwest to the Northeast and for the Gulf Coast and southern Atlantic states. Most areas will be warm.

Fair-to-partly-cloudy skies to reign over Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair-to-partly-cloudy skies will reign over Midland tonight and Tuesday.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a low near 70 degrees tonight and southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph.

For Tuesday, he says the high will be in low 90s. Winds under partly cloudy skies will be southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph.

Sunday's high temperature was 94 degrees, while the record high for a July 22 is 103 degrees in 1981. The overnight low was 69 degrees. The record low for a July 23 is 53 degrees in 1978.

STATE

Clear skies and warm temperatures were reported across Texas again today, but the National Weather Service said scattered showers and thunderstorms could be numerous in South Texas and East Texas tonight and Tuesday.

Light winds from the east and southeast were common across the state, with wind speeds generally in the 5 to 10 mph range. Most Texans awoke to temperatures in the 70s, but afternoon maximums in the 90s were anticipated, with scattered thunderstorms developing in South Texas.

The National Weather Service said the state's clear skies were caused by a high pressure system over the eastern United States that expanded southwestward into Texas.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms continued from Southern California across Utah and southern Idaho to the central high Plains today, while heavy flooding swept areas near Las Vegas, Nev.

One man was killed and three others were missing in Las Vegas while hundreds were evacuated Sunday from the Moapa Valley as the Muddy River backed up into about 150 homes. Lightning knocked out power to about 10,000 customers in the area, including Nellis Air Forec Base.

Summer storms also brought flash floods to Southern California and other parts of the Southwest on Sunday.

Meanwhile, showers and thunderstorms also continued in the southeastern United States mainly over northern Georgia, the central Gulf Coast region, and along the southern Atlantic Coast.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from Mississippi and eastern Louisiana to Florida and southern Georgia.

Showers and thunderstorms were expected from lower Michigan through New York state to northern New England, and from the southern intermountain region to the northern and central high Plains at scattered locations.

High temperatures today were to be in the 90s from the lower Mississippi Valley and the lower Ohio Valley to the southern and central high Plains, possibly above 100 in the desert Southwest, and in the 70s elsewhere.

Police use truncheons on protesters

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police used tear gas and truncheons to disperse 18,000 anti-government protesters today shortly before President Ferdinand E. Marcos addressed the opening session of the new National Assembly.

Marcos told the assembly, which includes the largest opposition faction since he disbanded an American-style congress and imposed martial law in 1972, that his emergency law-making powers make a return to martial law unneccessary.

At least 13 of the anti-Marcos protesters were treated at hospitals for minor fractures, bruises and gas inhalation, but there were no immediate reports of arrests as police broke up the demonstrations, staged at a downtown plaza several miles from the assembly building.

In his speech, Marcos said demonstrations were a "necessary part of our democratic life" but contended they were being infiltrated and manipulated by Communist subversives.

The president, who retains the power to make laws by decree, said the opening of the assembly marked the "full restoration of representative government."

Opponents of Marcos, who had held a maximum of 13 seats in the previous assembly, won 71 of the 183 contested seats during elections May 14, with the outcome of some contests still in dispute. Seventeen of the 200 seats are filled by presidential appointment.

Supporters of Marcos remain in firm control of the assembly and won their first vote today by electing a longtime Marcos ally, Nicanor Yniguez, 68, as speaker.

Marcos warned that the country still faced serious economic problems and a festering Communist insurgency that could exploit these problems.

"If our republic falls, it will not fall into your hands," he said. "It will fall into the hands of those who seek political power through the barrel of a gun."

"The fact of the matter is that the situation is fully under control, and even if the situation should deteriorate, we have precisely installed adequate checks and responses...to cope with this, without having to repair to martial law," Marcos said.

Opposition assemblyman Ramon Mitra said he had heard it all before and did not trust Marcos when he said he would not reimpose martial law.

Several groups protesting Marcos' law-making powers, U.S. involvement in the Philippines, low wages, rising prices and alleged cheating in the National Assembly elections converged on a plaza across the city from the assembly building.

Riot police had formed a wall across the main road leading to the assembly building on the outskirts of suburban Quezon City to keep back the marchers. Led by Agapito Aquino, brother of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, the marchers confronted the troops for nearly an hour before disbanding to join the larger demonstration in downtown Manila.

Police moved in on the protesters about 10 minutes after Manila Police Chief Brig. Gen. Narciso Cabrera ordered the crowds to disperse. He said authorities revoked a demonstration permit earlier granted to the protesters because of intelligence reports they had been infiltrated by communists.

One protester was seen bleeding from the head and a bystander collapsed as police wearing gas masks threw tear gas cannisters from their jeeps, and other officers, swinging sticks, chased screaming protesters from Bonifacio Plaza.

After 2,000 policemen broke up the downtown crowd, about 5,000 demonstrators regrouped and marched toward a university, chanting "Marcos, Hitler, dictator, puppet" as thousands of bystanders cheered them on.

The new assembly opened as the government seeks a restructuring of most of its $26 billion foreign debt, on which it has not been able to make payments for nine months.

Ferraro 'can't wait' to hit campaign trail

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro, enjoying a triumphant homecoming to her Queens congressional district, said she "can't wait to get out on the campaign trail" to prove herself to the entire nation.

The Democrats' historic choice for vice president was returning to her local congressional office today to clean up paperwork that has accumulated since her nomination last week at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco. She is expected back in Congress on Tuesday.

During a weekend of errands and time with her family, Ms. Ferraro demonstrated some of the qualities that have given her success as a congresswoman and are expected by party leaders to spark the presidential ticket headed by Walter F. Mondale to victory in November.

She showed her roles as thrifty housewife, devoted mother, devout Catholic, friend of the middle class and politician.

To the news that a Newsweek magazine poll by the Gallup organization shows the Mondale-Ferraro ticket slightly ahead of President Reagan and Vice President George Bush, she responded: "I think it's wonderful."

She was concerned that the survey also noted that 55 percent of those questioned do not believe she is qualified for the vice presidency. "I can't wait to get out on the campaign trail to show that I really am a good candidate and that I'm going to be a good vice president," she said.

Earlier she said, "The race now begins and in the next 100 days we will focus on the basic American values that Fritz Mondale and I bring to the campaign."

On Sunday, Ms. Ferraro attended Mass and took Holy Communion at Our Lady of Mercy Catholic Church with her husband John Zaccaro and two of their three children, Laura and John Jr.

The priest conducting the Mass, the Rev. John G. McLoughlin, welcomed Ms. Ferraro at the beginning of the service and prayed for her safety.

In addition, the congregation prayed that she would aid "the cause of justice and peace."

Before riding in a motorcade to church, Ms. Ferraro met briefly with reporters and played down reports that the New York City Patrolmen's Benevolent Association was planning to endorse Reagan today.

Poll shows Democrats ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Gallup poll taken for Newsweek magazine puts the Democratic Mondale-Ferraro ticket ahead of President Reagan for the first time in a major public opinion survey.

The poll, taken as the Democratic convention was winding up on Thursday and Friday and after the candidates had received extensive prime-time television coverage, found the team of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro endorsed by 48 percent of those polled.

Forty-six percent of the respondents said they favored the Republican ticket of Reagan and Vice President George Bush, while 6 percent said they were undecided about who they wanted to win the November election.

The poll results were published in the current issue of Newsweek, which said Gallup interviewed 1,006 registered voters by telephone. The poll's margin of error was 4 percentage points, which means Reagan could be trailing by as much as 52-42 or leading 50-44.

Youth minister's wife says he can come home

ABILENE (AP) — The wife of a missing youth minister says she doesn't want her husband to believe that he cannot return home if he decided to drop out of sight intentionally.

Beth Cox told the Abilene Reporter-News that she planned to return home to San Antonio after eight days of searching for her husband, Wesley Barrett "Barre" Cox, who was reported missing July 13.

Mrs. Cox said she believed her husband had suffered a head injury, but added that if he had left intentionally she and church leaders wanted him to feel like he could come home.

"We love him and whatever he wants is what we want," she said. "Things like this don't change love. Love is always there."

Mrs. Cox said her husband could have been the victim of foul play, but she would not give up hope that he would return.

Cox's ransacked car was found on a rural road in north Jones County, near the small community of Tuxedo, on July 12.

Cox, 33, a former Abilene Christian University staff member, had been youth minister at MacArthur Park Church of Christ in San Antonio since last fall.

Mrs. Cox said her husband had been in Lubbock where he was completing work on his doctoral dissertation at Texas Tech University. She said she last spoke to him on the night of July 11 before he left Lubbock and had expected him in San Antonio on July 13.

"I talked to him Wednesday night (July 11)," said Mrs. Cox. "He said he had a real rough day, but he felt like he got a lot accomplished (on his dissertation)."

She said her husband planned to spend the night of July 11 in Abilene, then had an appointment the next day with the head of his dissertation committee, who was at a Texas Tech art camp in Junction.

But Cox never arrived at either place, and Mrs. Cox quickly traveled to Jones County to join in the hunt for her husband.

Duarte: Nicaragua shipping arms to rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador met with President Reagan today and charged that Nicaragua is continuing to ship arms and ammunition to anti-government rebels in his embattled Central American country.

Denying reports that Nicaragua has stopped the flow of arms to El Salvador, Duarte said, "At this very moment there is an action, an operation of Nicaragua, of sending arms to El Salvador through the sea. There is no question about that. We don't like that."

Duarte met with Reagan for 30 minutes in a meeting underscoring the administration's continued support for El Salvador and kicking off a drive for more aid for the troubled region. From the White House, Duarte headed for Capitol Hill to lobby for additional funds.

Meeting with reporters at the White House, Duarte denied charges by a human rights group that his forces have bombed civilian villages killing up to 1,000 people.

"There might be bombing in areas where they find there is guerrilla actions but there is no aerial bombings in any towns, and if there is one it is against my specific orders and I'll take care of that," Duarte said. "If they give me one case, I'll do it and I'll go personally."

Asked if he was in control of the military, Duarte said, "Oh, definitely."

In his meeting with Reagan, Duarte said they discussed his just-concluded five-nation trip through Western Europe, conditions in his country and Central America, and regional peace efforts known as the Contadora process.

Duarte invited European foreign ministers to attend a meeting in Costa Rica with Central American nations in September.

Part of a story about the Tuesday meeting of the Midland school board was inadvertently omitted in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram in "This Week in Government." The last sentence should have read, "Other items on the agenda include: Consider changing the kindergarten through third-grade day from 8:40 a.m.-2:55 p.m. to 8:15 a.m.-2:30 p.m.; and consider increasing the cost of school lunches by 10 cents."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

WILLIAMS

Outside Miss Williams' Millwood, N.Y., home, about 100 supporters gathered Sunday, chanting, "Vanessa, we love you."

In the interview with the AP, Miss Williams said she'd forgotten the photo session until she found out about the planned Penthouse publication.

When she learned of the ..ns, she said, she went "from shock to depression. Right now, I feel violated and angry."

She said the pictures were shot in 1982, shortly after she took a summer job as a makeup artist and receptionist with TEC Model Registry, and that she had never "made any agreement" with the photographer, Tom Chiapel, or Penthouse to use the pictures.

"I don't recall signing anything with Tom," she said. "I remember signing a stat sheet as a model. Every model at the registry had to fill one out."

According to Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione, who bought the pictures from Chiapel, a Mount Kisco, N.Y., photographer and co-owner of a local model registry, the magazine has a signed release. Guccione has also said the pictures were taken last year before the pageant.

At Chiapel's studio, she said, he asked her to do nude shots. "I was a bit curious, but I didn't know if I wanted to take the chance."

She said she did it after he assured her they would only be seen by her. Of a contact sheet, she said: "I wasn't really thrilled about them. I didn't want anyone to see them."

Sometime later, he asked her to pose with another model "in a silhouette art form. He assured us that both of us would be unidentifiable."

Miss Williams said that when she talked to Marks about the photographs on July 15, he was "very reassuring," adding, "We all make mistakes. He was very supportive and compassionate."

Marks said he told her: "'Don't worry about it.' The girl was in hysterics. I said we'd do everything we could to help."

Plans to reopen McDonald's put on hold

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — Plans to reopen the restaurant where 22 people were slain in the nation's worst single-day mass murder have been put "on hold" following community protests against the idea, a McDonald's Corp. spokesman says.

"Whatever action would be taken is on hold," said Bob Keyser, McDonald's director of media relations. "The concern is for the people, not simply for business."

Keyser added he has "no idea" when the company would make a final decision on the future of the franchise, situated on the main street in this predominantly Hispanic community of 14,000, which is a part of San Diego.

Monetary pledges, meanwhile, poured into a fund set up to help the victims and their families, operators of the fund said Sunday.

On Thursday, a day after the massacre, McDonald's spokesman Chuck Rubner said the company wanted to reopen the outlet because, "We don't want to leave an empty shell as a reminder of this tragic incident."

But the plan sparked protests among San Ysidro residents, who want the restaurant razed and replaced with a "Memorial Park for the Innocent" in remembrance of the men, women and children who died at the hands of James Oliver Huberty, 41.

Before he was fatally wounded by a police sharpshooter, the heavily armed Huberty killed 20 people Wednesday and wounded 20 more. A 21st victim died Thursday. Eight of the wounded remain hospitalized, their conditions ranging from good to serious.

"What has happened here is horrible and we will not forget it," said James Davis, 29, who lives with his wife and infant child 1½ blocks from the restaurant. "This will haunt us the rest of our lives."

"We want them to bulldoze it down and build a memorial park. To reopen this (restaurant) would be a mistake. This has left deep scars on our town. Nobody will eat here," said Davis.

High-tech security planned for convention

DALLAS (AP) — Police will have available for next month's Republican National Convention a highly sophisticated infra-red device that will enable them to fly overhead on a moonless night and see a man crouched in a parking lot as easily as if it were broad daylight.

"It will enable us to check out areas at night, like rooftops and dark alleys," Dallas police Lt. Robert Cormeer of the department's helicopter unit told the Dallas Times Herald.

For local and federal law enforcement officials, the $400,000 device, on temporary loan from Texas Instruments, is only one piece of the futuristic equipment to be used during the Aug. 20-23 convention.

Cormeer said a device, shaped like a basketball, views the ground and instantly sends a picture through a cable to a television monitor inside the aircraft.

Reproduction on the screen is so good that those who view the pictures "can't tell the difference between daylight and dark," said Joseph Keahey, marketing director for Texas Instruments.

Officials say it has been used primarily by the military since its invention 20 years ago. Texas Instruments hopes to modify it for civilian use.

Voice encryptors have been installed in the FBI's command post and in agents' cars so no one outside the agency can listen to the electronically scrambled radio communications.

"For the convention, because of the potential need, everything here is the latest and the best," Dallas FBI spokesman Udo Specht told the Times Herald.

The agency's inventory of security devices, ranging from weapons and walkie-talkies to night-vision goggles, has been increased by loans from other field offices, and all the equipment is undergoing special scrutiny.

"It's fair to admit that everything we've got is being tuned up for the convention," Specht said.

A special FBI computer with massive memory capabilities, on loan from Washington, D.C., will link intelligence data from hundreds of local and federal agencies.

Foreign cars popular in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite the price tag of exotic foreign cars that often cost more than $50,000, dealers in the state capital say they're frequently running short of expensive models such as Jaguars, Mercedes and BMWs.

The cars seem especially popular in Austin, which is enjoying a booming economy and a work force heavy with professionals and entrepreneurs, dealers report.

Stephen Deak of Bob Miller Jaguar said he has 48 people waiting to buy British-made Jaguars, which start at $32,000.

"We push them out as fast as we get them, and we don't (discount) them either," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

Andy Olman of Continental Cars said most of the 200 Mercedes that reach his dealership each year are sold before they are unloaded from the transporter.

"Five years ago, we would be lucky if we sold 30 Mercedes in one year," he said.

"I can't believe the amount of money floating around, and they're mostly cash deals. Sometimes they buy three or four cars at once," said Gene Autry of the German Auto Center, which sells about 20 new Mercedes-Benz automobiles a month.

Autry said sales of new Mercedes cars have increased substantially since he bought the dealership in January 1983.

Chuck Harrison of Motor Cars of Austin, a dealer for the $50,000 British Lotus sports car, said there are few tire kickers in his showroom.

"They know what they want — expensive, high class, sports cars," he said.

Deak characterized his customers as "between 30 and 50, and most have their own businesses.

"They're professionals, such as architects or developers, or high-powered sales people," he said. "I don't think anyone who has bought a car from us has an annual income of less than $100,000."

Dealers said many of their customers have earned substantial amounts of money in Austin real estate.

Deak said the exotic cars often depreciate less than more common vehicles, generally handle and ride better, and have plush interiors.

Wealthy buyers are also attracted to such cars as Porsche, Maserati, Jaguar, BMW, and Mercedes-Benz because the vehicles are not made in large quantities and project an image of wealth and exclusivity, Deak said.

The least expensive Mercedes model, the 190, costs about $14,000 on the German domestic market and about $23,000 in the United States, Autry said.

"I tell people that they're overpriced, but they'll still come out better than with anything else" because Mercedes depreciate less, Autry said.

Some of the new Mercedes sold by Autry are models not normally imported into the United States. To ensure a quantity of cars to sell, he buys directly from European dealers and has a firm in Houston install U.S. pollution and safety components.

Trolley cars to be tested in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Trolley cars, a throwback to the past, may be a key ingredient in solving Houston's future transportation problems, transit officials say.

Houston's Metropolitan Transit Authority will test the popularity of diesel-powered trolleys on certain routes and also has a 90-day lease for a streetcar from the city of San Antonio, Metro attorney Dennis Gardner said recently.

"It's almost got the same appeal as cable cars do in San Francisco. It's amazing because they're not air conditioned, but that hasn't been a deterrent at all," sid Bob Stark, operational planning manager for San Antonio's VIA transit system.

Stark said San Antonio makes no profit from the trolley service, but the city charges a 10-cent fare to discourage undesirables from sleeping on board.

The 26-foot trolley leased by Houston was built by Chance Coach Inc. of Wichita, Kan. It looks old-fashioned and seat 24 people, but Stark said more passengers can climb aboard.

VIA owns about 20 trolleys and ridership is up about 75 percent from a year ago, Stark said.

Metro General Manager Alan Kiepper was not enthusiastic when the Downtown Houston Association last month urged him to use trolleys.

"Something that looks to the future and not to the past might be more appropriate," Kiepper said.

The downtown association recommended the trolleys be funded the same way as in San Antonio, and offered to pay the local costs. Each VIA trolley costs $127,000. The federal government pays 80 percent of the price, the state pays 13 percent and the city pays 7 percent.

Chance Coach marketing director Frosty Johnson said air conditioned trolleys cost $140,000 apiece.

Johnson said trolley systems also are being tested in Austin; Richmond, Va.; Las Vegas; Huntington, W.Va.; and Eureka Springs, Ark.

Austin transit system spokesman Alan Wulkan said the city uses eight trolleys. Austin has taken bids for five trolleys and hopes to get options on six more.

Wulkan said about 1,700 people ride the Austin trolleys each day, a figure that has more than tripled since the service began in March.

"We're very pleased with the service, with the public relations aspect of what the trolley have done for the (transit) system," Wulkan said. "If the people in Houston, at least in the downtown setting, are the same as the people in Austin, I think they're going to find it very attractive."

Austin trolley-riders pay a 25-cent fare, compared to a 50-cent fare to ride the bus.

Fort Worth also has operated trolley routes since 1982, but the system hasn't been popular enough and may be discontinued, officials said.

"The tourist trade out here in Fort Worth is really not what we anticipated at the time of the purchase," said Jo-Anne Kennedy, marketing director for Fort Worth's city transit system.

Reporter on rise goes to another Olympics for ABC

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Since Kathleen Sullivan drew rave reviews for her role in the nightly sum-up of events at the Sarajevo Winter Olympics, she's landed an assignment at the Democratic Convention, an encore Olympic run in an expanded role and a possible part in a proposed new ABC magazine show.

It hardly leaves a person time to think, let alone to contemplate the important questions and mysteries of personal and professional life.

Questions like, What should I be doing five years from now? Where would I go on vacation — if there were time to take one? And how do you find time to water the gardenias?

"The '84 Olympics and the conventions — that's all I'm thinking about," she said recently.

Following a reporting stint at the Democratic Convention in San Francisco, Sullivan was to venture down the coast to Los Angeles.

There she'll team with Frank Gifford to provide daytime coverage of the summer games.

This is a much-expanded role from her stint in Sarajevo, where she earned the TV equivalent of a gold medal while teaming with Jim Lampley to provide the short summaries of the day's events after the 11 o'clock news.

"Rising star" was the term often used to describe her after her smooth, crisp job in Yugoslavia.

Since then, she's continued to co-anchor "ABC World News This Morning" with Steve Bell, has pinch-hit for him on "Good Morning America," commuted to New York to do an in-house pilot for a proposed TV magazine called "Seven Days" and put herself on a strenuous research schedule, lunching with Washington political sources to prep for the convention and reading up on the athletes waiting for her in Los Angeles.

With her enhanced role in ABC's coverage of the summer games, Sullivan becomes part of an ABC effort to restore the Olympics to medal-winning status, in broadcasting terms.

Political encroachments on the games in recent years finally overtook the broadcast side of the spectacle in 1980, when the United States boycotted the Moscow games, and the broadcast industry followed suit.

The winter games garnered such low Nielsen ratings, compared to what was expected, that ABC reportedly extended air time to advertisers later to make up for the smaller audience the Olympics had delivered.

Now the Russians and most Eastern-bloc countries are staying away from Los Angeles, just as the Americans stayed away from Moscow.

"I share a disappointment for the American athletes" that the Russians will not be there, said Sullivan. But their absence will not be the focus of the coverage. "You look for who is there," she said.

While Sullivan and Gifford host the daytime segments of the Olympics, Emmy Award-winner Jim McKay will emcee the prime-time presentations, working in his 10th Olympics. Late-night segments will be co-hosted by Lampley and former Olympic swimmer Donna de Varona.

ABC will open its coverage with a two-hour prime-time preview Friday from 9 to 11 p.m. and close it with a one-hour wrap-up on Monday, Aug. 13, at 10 p.m.

Actual competition begins the day after the network preview and ends the day before ABC's closing highlights.

The dimension of the ABC coverage and the hugeness of the games themselves are not lost on Sullivan.

"Just in track and field there are more events than were held at Sarajevo," she said. "It's the magnitude of the summer games that require more preparation."

Preparing for L.A. has been complicated by the fact that Kathleen Sullivan is on a roll. Since Sarajevo, she's been given awards and has been in demand for charity events and speaking engagements, having to fly out and back for such occasions in the same day.

"It's been hats and horns," said Sullivan. "I feel like a juggler."

Sullivan came to ABC in 1982 from Cable News Network in Atlanta, where she was a news co-anchor. Before that she was an anchor and reporter for 18 months at WTVX, an ABC affiliate in Salt Lake City.

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ98432 ♡7 ◇95 ♣843
Partner opens the bidding with a demand bid of two hearts. What do you respond?

A.—You have a long, broken spade suit, but this is not the time to show it. When partner opens with a forcing two-bid, your first responsibility is to tell him whether or not you have a positive response. Since you don't, respond two no trump.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡AQ973 ◇AK854 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Dble	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—It is seldom wise to pass partner's low-level penalty double with a distributional hand. This is especially true if you have a void in the enemy suit, because you will never be able to attack declarer's trump holding. Bid two diamonds.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ94 ♡AJ10 ◇853 ♣K92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—It is a close decision between a rebid of one spade or a raise to two hearts. There are many problems that could arise if you introduce your spade suit. Suppose, for example, that partner would take a preference to two clubs. If you now bid two hearts, you are showing an unbalanced, somewhat stronger hand. On the whole, the immediate raise to two hearts should keep you out of trouble.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ953 ♡A1098 ◇62 ♣AQ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	3 ◇

What action do you take?

A.—Had there been no intervening action, your hand would be good enough for a game try of either three hearts or three spades. Now, however, you cannot afford to bid three spades only — that would be a purely competitive action. We would take our chances and jump to four spades, but we won't criticize a game try of three hearts. The important point is that you must make some positive move with your hand.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK762 ♡KJ ◇953 ♣Q82
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have found your eight-card fit. On this sequence partner guarantees a six-card suit. You have good support and the values for game, so jump to four hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠876 ♡5 ◇AKQ1062 ♣AK8
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Jump shifts are ususally made with one of two types of hands: where you have a fit for partner's suit, or where your suit is self-sustaining. Since partner can't have anything in diamonds and very little in clubs, his spades must be good. Bid three spades. First set the suit, then probe for whether you should settle for the small slam or whether partner's trumps are good enough for a grand. Obviously, you will cue-bid clubs at the next opportunity.

Are network documentaries endangered?

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Are network documentaries becoming an endangered species?

Pam Hill, executive producer of ABC News' "Closeup" documentary unit, says the long-form broadcast has fallen on hard times, but it's not near extinction yet.

"It's a struggle," said Ms. Hill. "The pendulum on documentaries always has swung back and forth, although I've never seen it as low as the last year and a half. But I really do believe the pendulum will swing back. If it doesn't, I think the genre will be in danger."

She added that "the networks bear the public responsibility" and have always found room on their entertainment-filled schedules to do some hard-hitting issue-oriented programs "that don't make money."

In the 1984 election year, ABC's documentary time was cut in half to six hours. CBS, where the high standards for documentaries were imprinted by Edward R. Murrow, has switched its prime-time news emphasis away from the single-subject show.

AT CBS, ONLY Bill Moyers, in an occasional hour-long documentary and on some of his "Crossroad" segments, keeps Murrow's legacy alive. "Bill shares our concerns," Ms. Hill said. "He's one of the few in our industry still targeting the major issues of our time."

Ratings, the kind that show up at the bottom of the weekly Nielsen rankings, are the major reason why documentaries are in trouble. The networks know they can reach larger audiences with prime-time newsmagazines that mix investigative reports with the broader personality profiles and trendy pop-culture segments.

Ms. Hill said governmental watchdog panels in Washington, ultimately, might decide whether the newsmagazines are satisfying the networks' obligation to use their airwaves to discuss important public-affairs issues.

In the 1984-1985 season, Ms. Hill said, ABC's documentary allotment will return to the pre-election 10-12 hours, and, in a sharp contrast to TV's trend toward shorter segments to meet the public's shorter attention spans, "Closeup" will have as many as three 3-hour documentaries.

THE FIRST, scheduled for Sept. 4, will focus on the deteriorating state of the nation's public school system. One point this program will address, Ms. Hill said, is how TV itself "has shattered attention spans" and has produced a self-fulfilling programming need for "ever shorter bursts."

ABC's other multi-hour broadcasts will be on nuclear power, tentatively scheduled for March, and one examining the underclass in America next summer. The documentary unit still will continue to produce a few one-hour programs, such as the "Closeup" on the Supreme Court in December.

Notice that none of the programs will be shown during the fiercely competitive ratings sweeps months of November, February and May. If past programming practice is any guide, documentaries at all three networks will be scheduled on throwaway nights, such as the low-viewership holiday periods.

Ms. Hill said she pushed for the longer programs for "both idealistic and pragmatic reasons." The idealism centered on "my belief that it is of grave importance to target the kinds of issues that change the quality of life or affect the way our children are growing up."

Then she adds: "I also wanted to survive."

The corporate folks at ABC, like at CBS and NBC, are never happy when documentaries receive their usual microscopic ratings. The ABC brass decided that concentrating the three-hour documentaries in fewer nights would be better than having 10 low-rated hours, depressing prime-time audiences for 10 nights.

"They would disrupt less hours," Ms. Hill acknowledged.

Another recent development affecting interest in documentaries is that audiences may feel they're getting their serious issues through the lenses of the networks' entertainment divisions. The movies, "The Day After" and "Something About Amelia," were the highest-rated programs of 1983-84.

"TV movies, even the ones that are well done, deal with sex and violence," said Ms. Hill. "That does not diminish our news obligation to inform on today's more profound news issues."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, July 24, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: South American liberator Simon Bolivar, author Alexandre Dumas and aviatrix Amelia Earhart were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Lynda Carter ("Wonder Woman"), basketball's Walt Bellamy, comedienne Ruth Buzzi, author John D. MacDonald, textile designer Vera and Boston Patriots quarterback Steve Grogan. Over and over, your originality helps you solve difficult problems. You come up with solutions others never even thought of. Capitalize on your knowledge; insist on being paid for your expertise. Affectionate and outgoing, you have many friends and admirers. A career in one of the performing arts could bring you lasting fame. Romance soars to new heights.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let others criticize while you withhold judgment until all the facts are known. A mystery will be cleared up by the weekend. A romantic interlude becomes even sweeter when mate confides secrets.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A child needs to spend more time alone with you. A positive experience gives you high hopes for a business venture. Cut vacation costs by renting a place with friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A draining emotional attachment could be holding you back. See things as they really are. Proof of your financial dependability helps you obtain a loan.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Express your true feelings now and someone will find a way to assist you. Creditors will be cooperative if you are candid. Financial pressures ease. Set a new timetable for romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Not a good day for signing papers. Try to postpone negotiations for a while. Romance looks promising. Let family members in on a secret that could affect them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strike a better balance between work and play. A financial problem will not disappear by itself; you and your loved ones must take action. A phone call brings good news regarding romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are happiest now when doing things with a group. A change in vacation plans could mean greater fun for all concerned. Romance becomes more fulfilling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Courageous go-getters win major victories today. Emphasis is on forgetting past grievances and getting on with life. Have faith in yourself; others will follow your lead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Being able to set your own schedule boosts your spirits. What is important to you may not be important to someone else. Seek out those who share your interests and high ideals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are about to enter one of the most fascinating periods of your life. Have confidence in an old friend. He/she will protect your good name.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do some traveling this summer. Seeing more of the world will give you a wider perspective. A unique business opportunity arises. Seize it! A phone call puts you on the right track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have great influence with a family member. Choose your words and actions carefully. A cautious financial approach puts you on the road to greater security. Reduce stress; romance will blossom.

Power restored

Intelligence is a double-edged sword. An organization such as the Central Intelligence Agency is an essential tool for gathering information an carrying out covert operations — particularly since the "other side" functions in the same way. The other side being the Soviet Union, of course.

But an intelligence operation, by its very nature, can easily overstep the bounds of what is acceptable practice and fall out of favor. That happened in the 1970s with the CIA and much of the agency's power was stripped away. Now the agency has undergone a revitalization, though, and is back in glory.

A recent edition of U.S. News & World Report presented an overview of the rebuilding of the CIA. In part, it said: "After a four-year program to beef up the Central Intelligence Agency, the results can now be seen — a spy service with new muscle and influence to match. Flush with money and manpower, the CIA is back at work worldwide, operating on a scale not seen since the Vietnam war. Even its mission has been expanded. On top of espionage, intelligence analysis and covert operations, the agency has joined the wars on terrorism, international drug traffickers and Soviet theft of U.S. technological secrets."

All those involvements can make a big difference in the direction of U.S. foreign policy. Through its work on intelligence matters and covert operations, the agency can make the world a safer place for all of us. But in the 1970s there was a different philosophy in place and a lot of Americans didn't stop to think about the consequences of dismantling the agency's worldwide activities.

Just because the CIA was stripped of its power and support, though, does not mean the KGB was similarly throttled. On the contrary, the Soviet agency continued to operate with virtually unrestrained zeal.

But now the CIA is back doing what is should have been doing all along. And, of course, the possibility of abuses of its power is back, too. That's a risk we believe is worth taking.

Soviet guilt showing?

For all the snarling arrogance they displayed after shooting down that Korean airliner last September, the Russians, it turns out, were genuinely disturbed over what they might have got themselves into with this tragic stupidity. The extent of their worry has been disclosed in the chance remark dropped by a U.S. Air Force colonel stationed in Alaska.

An Associated Press story describing the operations of U.S. airmen posted in Alaska to intercept any Soviet military craft straying into our air space quotes the colonel as stating that for almost four months after the Korean airliner outrage, not a single Russian plane ventured near Alaska. "Maybe they were nervous about what we might do," he said.

Certainly, the Russians were taking no chances after bringing the censure of the entire free world upon themselves for the despicable act. But as time passed and no reprisals were taken, the Russians decided to brazen it out further by insisting the Korean civilian plane was on a spy mission when it strayed into Soviet air space. They have even refused to accept a U.S. diplomatic note asking compensation for the families of the 61 Americans who perished, with 208 others in the attack.

In Alaska, the U.S. airmen stationed at small, forward bases form what one officer described as "the top cover for America," to warn the nation of imminent attack. The American pilots work in pairs, one providing cover while the other flies to within 500 feet of an intruding plane. One of the pilots, a Texan, has turned back three Soviet planes nearing Alaska in only a year.

To these sentries of the air, the people of Alaska and the continental U.S. owe full support — and gratitude.

Another View:
Ending child abuse

Child abuse is a crime that sickens most Americans. Yet, it is a crime that we unquestionably need to know more about to protect families and loved ones.

First, the alarming statistics: More than 1 million children are abused or neglected each year in this country. This figure includes as many as 200,000 children who are physically abused and as many as 100,000 who are sexually abused.

Child abuse sometimes kills. In almost every case, it scars. The scars can be physical or emotional, or both, and they often never completely heal. Child abuse, especially sexual abuse, once was a taboo subject. Now, the taboo has at last been lifted, which alone may eventually save thousands from being victimized.

Children today are being taught to forcefully say "no" to overfriendly older persons, including family members and friends. Many are being taught self-defense by screaming, or even by hitting and kicking.

Perhaps more important, children are being taught to tell somebody when they suspect someone is trying to abuse them. And parents are being taught to listen.

Child abuse laws have been toughened, and more laws to protect our children are being introduced in legislative bodies around the country.

A disheartening finding by a Sacramento County study group, however, was that six of nine local school districts reported that personnel were sometimes hesitant to report suspected child abuse.

Any teacher knows the reason for such hesitation: Conditions in the child's home don't change, and there is fear of just making things worse for the victim.

Child abuse not only must be reported, it must be dealt with once it is reported. Our society's inherent reluctance to interfere in family matters must be put aside in cases of child abuse. No one is doing a child abuser a favor by protecting him or her. Such a person needs help.

And there is no question that the children need help.

JACK ANDERSON
Hatfield helps promote scheme

WASHINGTON — Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., whose re-election effort is supported by peace and nuclear-freeze groups, has used his considerable influence in Washington to promote an oil pipeline project hatched by an international arms merchant.

Jack Anderson

Hatfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, has continued his helpful efforts even after being warned that the Greek munitions dealer, Basil Tsakos, had a criminal record. In fact, Hatfield's string-pulling occurred at the very time that Tsakos was trying to sell attack helicopters to Iran from his Washington office, in apparent violation of U.S. law, according to a document obtained by my associate Corky Johnson.

I have also learned that other well-known Washington figures, including CIA Director William Casey, were involved with Tsakos' pipeline scheme.

Hatfield was introduced to Tsakos about two years ago by Carl Shipley, a prominent Washington attorney and former member of the Republican National Committee. Shipley had been working with Tsakos and his American partner, Joe Rosenbaum, a friend of Casey and a former intelligence agent, on the idea for a pipeline across Central Africa from the Red Sea to the Atlantic. This would allow Saudi Arabia to ship its oil to the United States without having to send it through the Persian Gulf.

Shipley said he disengaged from the project when he learned of Tsakos' alleged criminal record in Greece. Shipley gave Hatfield an intelligence report, contained in CIA files and marked "strictly confidential," which summarized material taken from Greek government files.

Tsakos "was given a sentence of imprisonment for 45 days for withholding and pilfering of (Greek) government fringe benefits and funds," the report stated. It said he also was sentenced to jail in Athens for the "stealing of foreign funds."

The report also accused Tsakos of dealing in "black market" arms through a Geneva company, and of exporting antiques illegally. The report also said Tsakos has used forged passports for his arms dealings in Europe, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Argentina and other countries.

None of this, apparently, deterred Hatfield. The two men and their wives socialized regularly at private dinners in Tsakos' Watergate apartment and the Hatfield home in Georgetown. In a lengthy interview with my associate, Hatfield said he became interested in the arms merchant's trans-Africa pipeline project as an alternative to possible U.S. military action in the Middle East.

Hatfield confronted Tsakos with the derogatory information. Tsakos reportedly was furious, told Hatfield the report was false and produced a document that showed he had only one minor traffic violation.

Hatfield asked his attorney to check out Tsakos, and was told that he was "clean."

Meanwhile, Hatfield used his clout on Tsakos' behalf. He phoned Energy Secretary Donald Hodel and asked him to give Tsakos and his pipeline project personal attention. The three men had dinner in the Senate dining room, according to sources. Hodel saw that the pipeline project was given careful evaluation, but the Energy Department staff didn't think it was worth pursuing.

Hatfield also lined up an appointment for Tsakos with Exxon President Howard Kauffmann in New York. A company spokesman said Kauffmann met with Tsakos only because Hatfield had asked, but that the pipeline project has not been given serious consideration by Exxon.

Last November, Hatfield discussed the pipeline project with the president of Sudan, Mohammed Gaafar Nimeiri, who was visiting Washington. Nimeiri promised to meet with Tsakos and the pipeline representative in Sudan, where the pipeline would start.

Hatfield outlined his discussion with Nimeiri in a two-page letter on Senate stationery, addressed to Tsakos. Tsakos sent the letter back and asked the senator to re-address it to the Trans-African Pipeline Co. Hatfield obliged.

Sources said that Hatfield was also informed about a lawsuit between Tsakos and his partner Rosenbaum in which plans to pay off U.S. officials and former officials for their help on the pipeline project were discussed.

SYNFUELS UPDATE: President Reagan recently called for a $9 billion cut in funds for the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp., but the costly boondoggle's influential friends in Congress have rushed to protect its full $15 billion funding.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, has successfully stymied a growing movement among Democrats to cut back on Synfuels unproductive spending. Even though more than half the House members have signed as co-sponsors of a bill that would at least delay Synfuels spending, the full House won't get a chance to vote on it. Under heavy pressure from Wright, the Appropriations Committee killed two amendments that would have trimmed the corporation's extravagance.

EVANS & NOVAK
Hart campaign's last scheme

SAN FRANCISCO — On the night before presidential balloting here, Sen. Gary Hart's campaign considered but rejected an 11th-hour scheme that might well have led to a draft movement for New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Under the plan, Hart in his Wednesday night speech would have called on all delegates to vote their conscience in hopes of achieving a winning ticket. With sentiment for Cuomo running high after his Monday night keynote, Hart's appeal would have been coordinated with efforts by his whips to peel loose enough Mondale delegates — especially New Yorkers — to stop his nomination on the first ballot.

If Mondale were stopped, Hart might still have a chance in a convention of maneuver. But his strategists feared the most likely beneficiary would be Cuomo. Rank-and-file Hart delegates during the convention were talking about a 1988 Hart-vs.-Cuomo presidential showdown.

MONDALE WOOED LANCE

Contrary to speculation that Bert Lance pushed himself into the post of Democratic national chairman, Walter Mondale confided to Jimmy Carter in Minnesota three weeks ago that he very much wanted the former president's friend leading the party.

Mondale told a surprised Carter that although he had not known Lance well during the Carter administration, they had established a close relationship during his campaign for the presidential nomination. He described Lance as "a man of honor, great intelligence and a good Christian."

Carter, in Mondale's home state to receive an award, was thrilled. What both Mondale and Carter inexplicably ignored was Lance's unacceptability to party leaders. But Mondale's true feelings about Lance were not in question. When the storm rose, Mondale insisted that he be kept in the campaign.

CADDELL'S ADVICE IGNORED

The Mondale camp, after soliciting advice from pollster-consultant Patrick Caddell, ignored his proposal to move Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's convention speech to Wednesday from its scheduled slot just before Mondale's Thursday acceptance speech.

Caddell, a key adviser to Sen. Gary Hart, warned that Kennedy's speech introducing Mondale could only detract from Mondale's acceptance speech. But putting Kennedy on the rostrum after Jesse Jackson's speech Wednesday would provide a counterpoint for Jackson's emotion-charged address.

Given with the best of intentions, Caddell's warning that Teddy Kennedy might badly upstage the presidential nominee went unheeded — possibly because of hostility toward him by Mondale strategists. Caddell has made no secret he feels the "old politics" of Fritz Mondale is not the right Democratic medicine for 1984.

MISSING DEMOCRATS

Sen. John Glenn was requested on Monday to speak in Tuesday's platform debate, the first contact with the Mondale campaign since March. He declined, adding his name to the list of prominent Democrats who did not address this convention.

Former Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss was never asked. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's platform appearance was scrubbed when Mondale compromised instead of battled a Hart plank. California State Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, the most powerful Democrat in the nation's most populous state, canceled after he was given a 1:30 p.m. speaking slot.

The highly regarded Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey was here for two days, preaching his modified flat-tax plan to state delegation caucuses. But no speaking time for him was found on the podium of a convention that largely ignored tax reform.

JACKSON VS. WASHINGTON

Before Chicago's Mayor Harold Washington threw his uncommitted delegates to the Rev. Jesse Jackson's presidential candidacy, Jackson whips were instructing their delegates not to sign petitions that would have permitted Washington to be placed in nomination as a favorite son.

Washington's failure to meet the deadline for signatures and inability to get consideration of his urban jobs platform plank made him a big loser at the convention among black politicians. So was another Jackson rival, Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, shaken when black delegates booed him for opposing the Jackson platform plank against runoff primaries.

Although Jackson emerged from San Francisco as the nation's top black politician, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley was a winner with his effective Mondale nominating speech. The fact that Mondale campaign chairman Jim Johnson seriously boosted Bradley for vice president also enhanced his prestige among insiders.

CHARLEY REESE
Judgment on attitudes not morality

A reader in Athens, Pa., has raised a question that deserves an answer. He wrote that I appear to be so anti-Communist that I refuse to see the other side of the coin, specifically the sins of right-wing dictators. It deserves an answer because it is an issue every American must address.

Charley Reese

Morally, there is no appreciable difference between right or left totalitarianism. If we Americans did not have to deal with the rest of the world's governments we could simply say to all dictators, a pox on you.

Unfortunately the realities of survival in today's world do not afford us that luxury. Of the 151 nations which are members of the United Nations, less than 25 could be considered democracies. The rest are ruled by despots of the left or right.

I have argued before that if we wish to base our foreign policy strictly on morality then to be moral we must be consistent and apply the same standards to all governments. Simply applying the same human rights standards liberals wish to apply to El Salvador would mean no relationships with China, the Soviet Union, the Arab world, most of Latin America, Africa and Asia. I don't think this is realistic.

Selective morality is foolish. It makes no sense to act morally indignant about human rights abuses in Central America while making deals with Red China where over 27 million people have been murdered by a government which doesn't need death squads because it itself is an institutionalized death squad.

What approach can you take? Well, you can get into the business of judging the degrees of evil and there are certainly are differences. Many dictators are essentially gangsters. They will kill or torture those who directly threaten their hold on power but otherwise leave people free to go about their business. Marxist-Leninists, on the other hand, want to control not only people's actions but their thoughts as well. That is essentially the approach of Mrs. Jeane Kirkpatrick who has written on the differences between what she calls authoritarian and totalitarian regimes.

I prefer another approach to foreign policy. I prefer to base our foreign policy strictly on America's national interests which means basing our relationships with foreign governments strictly on reciprocity. Crudely put, you scratch our back and we'll scratch yours. You threaten us and we'll threaten you.

To me that is the most logical approach to foreign policy and is the same approach our Founding Fathers took. Thus we judge another nation not on the morality of its government but on its attitudes toward us and its relationship to our interests.

Now if you do that you will find that present circumstances are such that most dictators which are hostile to the United States are left-wing. Morally there may be little difference between the dictator of Cuba and the dictator of Paraguay. The dictator of Cuba, however, has allied himself with our principle enemy, the Soviet Union, and says and does things which are hostile to United States interests. The dictator of Paraguay, on the other hand, minds his own business.

Liberals who try to claim that communism is not monolithic are kidding themselves. Communists share a common ideology, the basic premises of which are the necessity of war with capitalism and viewing the United States as the number one devil to be destroyed.

Power plays and tactical differences within the Communist bloc notwithstanding, the general rule is that a Marxist-Leninist government will view the United States as an enemy. Moreover, Marxist-Leninist governments and guerrilla movements generally ally themselves with one of the two Communist superpowers, the Soviet Union or China, and depend on them for arms and other support.

I don't know of any other logical way to approach the world except to support those governments which support us and oppose those governments which oppose us.

Those who argue that we should always be on the side of the good guys fall into two categories: Socialist who equate other socialists as good guys and all non-socialists as bad guys or naive Americans who imagine that the world's jungles and deserts are just full of Tom Jeffersons and James Madisons eager to bring our unique vision of liberal democracy to their own countries.

Thunderstorms flood towns, force hundreds to evacuate

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thunderstorms flooded city intersections with racing waters that swept cars away like toys, killing one man and leaving up to three others missing today, while 450 people evacuated from Moapa Valley homes sought refuge at Red Cross shelters.

The overflow from the Muddy River spread into up to 150 homes in the valley, 50 miles northeast of Las Vegas. Hundreds of people were evacuated, and lightning knocked out power to about 10,000 customers on Sunday, including Nellis Air Force Base.

In Overton, support timbers for a Union Pacific railroad trestle were washed out and deposited 150 feet away, leaving the tracks suspended 10 feet in the air.

"The water is very, very high and it's extremely dangerous," said Irma Monjaras, a spokeswoman at the Moapa Fire Department. Valley residents sandbagged houses and scrambled to stock up on flashlights and kerosene when the blackout hit.

Summer storms also brought fierce rains and flash floods to Southern California and other parts of the Southwest on Sunday. A U.S. Border Patrol plane spotted a tornado 5,000 feet high in the Imperial Valley of southeastern California, but it apparently did not touch down in any populated areas.

The thunderstorms extended into Wyoming, where hail fell 6 inches deep north of Laramie.

Two cars were swept away by floodwaters in streets east of downtown Sunday night, and at least one car was overturned by the force of the water. One body was found inside, police Lt. William Gilbert said, and witnesses said there may have been three other passengers.

A search for additional bodies was planned today.

"This is not a really well-organized storm," said Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the Severe Storm Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "The moisture is coming from the Pacific — it's the time of year they get thunderstorms out there."

A stationary front in the Southeast brought heavy rain to parts of the Southeast, he said, and hail the size of golf balls pelted Atlanta on Sunday afternoon. There were also scattered showers in Michigan.

Alleged kidnapper called 'Southern gentleman'

Rosenkranz

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Houston piano teacher arrested in the kidnapping of wealthy bridge player Edith Rosenkranz from a tournament here was described by his bridge partner as being a courtly and polished financial consultant who at times seemed "the stereotype of a Southern gentleman."

Mrs. Rosenkranz, 60, wife of pharmaceutical millionaire and tournament bridge player George Rosenkranz, told a news conference Sunday how she was kept blindfolded and threatened with death for two days of captivity.

Computer programmer Georgiana Gates said in an interview she flew to Washington a week ago to play in the tournament with Glenn I. Wright, 42, an aspiring concert pianist arrested Saturday night when his van drove into a swarm of FBI and police cars minutes after Mrs. Rosenkranz was freed.

Miss Gates, 39, said she and Wright were accompanied on the flight from Houston by Orland Dwaine Tolden, who was arrested in a hotel 12 blocks from where police converged on the van and recovered what they called a "substantial" ransom.

FBI agent Leroy Cornett in Houston said Wright and Tolden shared a Houston apartment. Agents searched the apartment Sunday.

Houston police Sgt. G.T. Neely said Sunday that Wright's former roommate, 23-year-old Tony Ivey of Niagara Falls, N.Y., had been found shot to death in Wright's apartment last year in a case that has never been solved.

Wright found him dead in the bathroom and called police, Neely said. Ivey apparently was shot several times with a handgun but police found no signs of forced entry, he said.

A third man, Dennis Moss, 26, also was arrested when the van was stopped three blocks from the White House. The FBI reported Moss' address as Cocoa, Fla., but a relative there said Moss had moved to Houston 18 months ago after his house in Florida burned.

All three suspects were being arraigned on kidnapping charges.

Miss Gates called Wright a friend of 15 years but mostly on the bridge circuit. She said he had been her stockbroker and recently opened a financial consulting firm. She said he "basically sold tax shelters."

Elderly residents flee late-night fire; Ten hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 200 elderly people fled a late-night fire that erupted at a construction site and roared into their adjacent 12-story retirement home.

Ten people, including several elderly women, were hospitalized.

Sixty of the 232 evacuees suffered smoke inhalation Sunday night, but most of them were treated at the scene or taken to hospitals for observations, Fire Department spokesmen said.

The fire, which firefighters said was of suspicious origin, caused an estimated $755,000 in damage to the condominium construction site, the Fickett Towers retirement residence and a building across the street at the First Baptist Church of Van Nuys. Fickett Towers is affiliated with the church.

Nearly 200 firefighters were summoned at 10:18 p.m. Sunday and put out the flames at 11:30 p.m. Fifteen Ficket Towers apartments facing the construction site were gutted, said Tony DiDomenico, a Fire Department spokesman.

"The heat was so intense it broke out the windows in the second to eighth floors," DiDomenico said. Windows were blown out in a building at the church across the street.

Residents, clad in pajamas and nightgowns, were taken across the street to the Baptist Church gym. Relatives picked up some, but about half returned to undamaged apartments by 1:30 a.m. An estimated 30 to 40 had to be housed elsewhere.

DiDomenico said the quick, successful evacuation was "absolutely phenomenal."

"There was a big fire going right outside their windows and that's what got them going. If this had happened at 2, 3 or 4 in the morning it would have had quite a different outcome," he said.

West German minister says Iran wants to restore ties with West

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's revolutionary Islamic government wants to restore ties with Western nations, but not necessarily with the United States, West Germany's foreign minister says.

West German sources in the delegation accompanying Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said many leaders in the Iranian government oppose ties with "the devil, the United States."

Genscher said Sunday it is still "open" whether the Iranians are thinking about returning to speaking terms with the United States, which is considered by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime as an enemy of the Islamic revolution.

He made his comments at a news conference here before he returned to Bonn, ending a two-day official visit to Iran.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that some in the Iranian leadership, particularly Parliament President Hashemi Rafsanjani, appear determined to move Iran out of its isolation and try to improve overall relations with the West.

Genscher is the first foreign minister from a European Common Market country to visit Iran since the 1979 revolution that toppled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

He said his "important" and "useful" talks with Iranian officials succeeded in "intensifying" political links between West Germany and Iran. The two countries have maintained favorable economic relations since the revolution.

Genscher said his government is concerned because Iran has fallen behind in oil deliveries to West Germany during the Persian Gulf war. But Iranian officials said the problem was not about to be solved.

Officials in the Genscher delegation, speaking on condition they not be identified, said Iran wants to improve its trade balance with West Germany with a long-term agreement on oil deliveries.

They also said that Iran wants to send people to West Germany for specialized training in various fields.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, in an interview on Tehran radio, also spoke of Iran's interest in gaining technical know-how.

Velayati and Economics Minister Hossein Namasi met with Genscher, who said they promised to visit West Germany in the "foreseeable future."

Tehran agreed on to have a West German-Iranian conference to examine purported abuses of human rights, Genscher said.

Genscher did not elaborate, but Velayati told Tehran Radio that they "discussed the problems created for our students in West Germany by that country's government and police during the past months and years."

Amnesty granted to ease sanctions, ex-prisoner says

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A Solidarity leader, one of hundreds of political prisoners granted amnesty by the Communist government, says the move was made only to woo Western nations into easing economic sanctions.

Justice Ministry officials said the first of the 652 political prisoners covered by the amnesty bill could be released today and that all of those eligible for freedom would be out of prison within 30 days. They said women and young people would be among the first to leave prison.

An adviser to Cardinal Jozef Glemp, leader of Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church, said the primate viewed the amnesty with "great satisfaction" but wrote a letter to Parliament expressing certain reservations.

Other church sources, who like the adviser spoke on condition of anonymity, said the episcopate indicated that authorities should allow the return of free trade unions, in the style of Solidarity, and reinstate those dismissed from jobs or schools for political reasons.

One of those criticizing the amnesty was Andrzej Gwiazda, a leader of the now outlawed Solidarity union. He was let out of prison Sunday on a three-day furlough to visit his ailing 77-year-old mother in a hospital.

In a telephone interview, Gwiazda said authorities arrested some of the people in the crowd who gathered to greet him outside his home in Gdansk, the Baltic port where Solidarity was born.

The amnesty, he said in the interview, "is a gesture of conciliation, but not with us nor with society," said the 49-year-old engineer. "This amnesty is only to get some dollars," he said, referring to the possibility the West would ease sanctions.

West Germans escort Soviet truck to border

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German police escorted a Soviet truck to the East German border early today, ending a 10-day standoff over electronic equipment and other cargo which the Soviets insisted was "diplomatic baggage."

The Mercedes truck headed for Moscow, instead of its original destination, Geneva, Switzerland, less than 24 hours after Moscow bowed to West German demands to open the sealed trailer.

West German Customs and Finance Ministry officials checked the labels on the 207 bags and cartons inside the rig against an inventory provided by the Soviets, but did not open them.

According to the Soviet list, the containers carried radio transmitters and receivers and coding devices as well as other goods for furnishing a new building at the Soviet mission to the United Nations in Geneva.

Youths surrender with arm

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Two youths who surrendered "with one arm, two hangovers and lots of apologies" ended the mystery of who had sawed off the right arm of the Little Mermaid, Denmark's most famous statue, police said today.

The two 18-year-old Danes admitted they had cut off the bronze statue's 16-inch arm with a hacksaw as a drunken prank early Sunday morning. Their names were not disclosed by a duty officer, who said they were charged with vandalizing public property and were released pending trial.

American sent to prison

Ballesteros pars 17th in final round to win British Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — It's called The Road Hole, perhaps the most famous hole on the most famous golf course in the world.

It's the 17th at the Old Course at St. Andrews and is listed at 461 yards in length, par 4.

But, says Seve Ballesteros, that's not entirely true.

"Par is like a birdie," Ballesteros said after he'd won his second British Open title Sunday, besting Tom Watson in a duel down the back nine that leads back to the great stone pile of the clubhouse of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews.

No. 17, the Road Hole, was — as it has been so often in the past — the turning point.

Ballesteros mastered it when he had to. For the first time in the week, he made 4, two-putting from long range. Watson fell victim when he couldn't afford to. He made 5, getting his second shot into a position that even Watson's uncanny up-and-down magic could not handle.

"The old lady got me," he said. She's gotten many before him.

IN THE previous British Open played here, in 1978, Simon Owen of New Zealand was attempting to turn back Jack Nicklaus in the final round. He made bogey. Nicklaus made par and went on to win by one.

J.H. Taylor, who won five British Open titles around the turn of the century, once took 13. Arnold Palmer once fell from a contending position with a pair of 7s there.

And there were the adventures of Tommy Nakajima. He had it on the green in two and was putting for birdie. But he got a little too bold with the putt, it fell off a ridge and into the deep pit of the Road Bunker. It took him four swings to get it out of the sand and he eventually staggered away with a 9. (In the years since that adventure, some have come to call that bunker the Sands of Nakajima.)

IT IS not the only bunker with a name. Well to the left is a tiny little trap called "Cheape's." It is, the English journalist Bernard Darwin said, "only large enough for an angry man and his niblik."

Cheape's bunker did not come into play, insofar as Ballesteros and Watson were concerned, in this latest British Open.

But the Road Bunker did. Ballesteros, on one occasion, took two to get out of it, but saved bogey with a one-putt. It was one of three bogeys he made on the hole in the first three days.

He promised he would make par there in the final round. He did.

Watson played it 4, 5, 6 for the first three days.

"You can only hope for a 4 there," he said.

ON THE final round — in a tie with Ballesteros and needing a par there to keep alive his dreams of a record-tying sixth British Open title and a unique sweep of the Scottish courses used for this ancient event — he took a bold approach.

The drive is over some reconstructed sheds. There is rough on the left, along with the hidden Cheape's Bunker. Greater disaster is to the right — the paved road that gives the hole its name and the low, out-of-bounds stone wall beyond it.

Watson went to the right, which gives a better approach to the green that is set at an angle to the fairway and is guarded by the Road Bunker.

He used a 2-iron for his second shot and, he said, "pushed it."

The ball drifted right, skipped off the hard green, bounced off the road behind the green, bounced off the wall and came to rest only inches from the wall. With his swing restricted, Watson could only punch it back to the green with a 7-iron, and the ball skittered 30 feet past.

As he crouched over the putt, a 30-footer for par, a roar went up from the 18th, signalling, without question, a Ballesteros birdie.

That roar, Watson said, "told me what I had to do. I had to make that putt to have any chance."

He missed it.

And the Road Hole had claimed another victim, had determined again the outcome of the British Open.

"So be it," Watson said.

Strawberry's homer powers Mets

Houston's Craig Reynolds leaps over Montreal's Mike Stenhouse to complete a double play.

Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry says he's "not mad at the Cincinnati Reds." It only seems that way.

The New York Mets outfielder has hit 15 home runs so far this season and six of them have been against Cincinnati, including Sunday's two-run blast in the eighth inning that powered a 7-6 triumph over the Reds.

"I just think it's time to get myself into a groove where I can help this ballclub win. We're in a pennant race now, and it's important for me to do well," said Strawberry, whose heroics gave the Mets a 2½-game lead in the National League East over the Chicago Cubs, 11-5 losers to San Francisco.

The Mets have won 13 of their last 16 games, going 17-4 in the month of July for an overall 55-37 mark. The last time the Mets were 18 games over .500 was June 1972.

Strawberry's homer off reliever Keefe Cato, 0-1, gave the visiting Mets a 7-5 lead and helped them withstand a ninth-inning homer by the Reds' Gary Redus off Jesse Orosco.

Reliever Tom Gorman, 2-0, earned the victory despite giving up a two-run homer to Dan Driessen in the seventh that tied the game 5-5. Mets starter Ron Darling struggled through the six innings, scattering four hits and walking seven, but left with a 5-3 lead.

Giants 11, Cubs 5

Joel Youngblood socked a homer, double and single and pitcher Mike Krukow had two hits, including a run-scoring double, to lead San Francisco over Chicago.

Youngblood hit his ninth homer in the fourth inning and doubled and scored on a single by Scot Thompson in the sixth. Krukow then doubled to score Thompson.

The visiting Giants jumped on Steve Trout, 9-5, for three runs in the third inning when Krukow singled with one out, and later sewed up the game with a five-run ninth capped by Bob Brenly's three-run homer.

Padres 5-2, Pirates 1-3

Ed Whitson and two relievers combined on a five-hitter and a pair of early Pittsburgh errors set up San Diego runs as the Padres took the first game of their doubleheader. Steve Garvey and Graig Nettles each drove in a run during a two-run sixth inning and Tony Gwynn had two RBI.

Doug Frobel's one-out double off Goose Gossage drove in Tony Pena with the winning run in the 11th inning as Pittsburgh rallied to win the second game.

Royals Slaught(er) Orioles, 8-4

Associated Press

When Don Slaught steps to the plate, the world champion Orioles are just so many pigeons.

The catcher, with a double, triple and two singles, turned in his second four-hit game against the Orioles in three days Sunday to help the Kansas City Royals to an 8-4 victory over Baltimore.

Slaught reached base 12 times in 16 plate appearances over the weekend as the Royals took three out of four from the Orioles. Slaught is hitting .257 overall this season, .457 against the Orioles. He batted .529 against them last year.

"Things like that happen. You can't explain it," said Royals Manager Dick Howser. "The Orioles probably have the best five-man rotation in the league. But one thing is the fact that Slaught is starting to hit the ball well and we've been playing Baltimore. When he's swinging the bat well, he can hit anybody."

"I just wish I knew why Slaught decided to get hot against us," rued Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli. "He's a good contact hitter. I don't think we'll be the only team he beats up on."

Slaught traces his current hot streak to a series at Oakland just prior to the All-Star break.

"You wait for it to happen and then when it does you say, 'Oh, boy, let's keep it going,'" he said. "I've always felt good hitting against Baltimore. They have a few left-handers and it always seems to come together for me against them."

Slaught singled amid a five-run fifth-inning outburst that buried Scott McGregor, 12-8, and handed the victory to Larry Gura, 10-7. Greg Pryor and Darryl Motley stroked two-run singles in the onslaught.

Joe Beckwith and Dan Quisenberry pitched the final two innings for the Royals.

A's 5, Brewers 4

Oakland fell behind 4-0, but Dave Kingman's 28th home run in the fourth inning brought the A's within 4-2 and Bill Almon's leadoff blast in the seventh ruined the Brewers.

"I think the key in this series was not to get ahead early," said Almon.

On Friday night, the A's blew an early 7-3 lead and lost 9-7. They were ahead 4-1 after seven innings on Saturday and fell 7-4 to Milwaukee.

Improving Cubs return to Midland

From Staff Reports

In the first half of the Texas League West Division race, the Midland Cubs were out of contention from the word go. They lost 16 of their first 20 games for a .182 win percentage and were 13 games off the pace of eventual winner Beaumont.

Though still in last place in the West, the Cubs are an improved ball club, sporting a 12-16 record (.429) and at least within shouting distance of Beaumont. The Golden Gators are once again out front (by eight games) and are threatening to run away with the second half crown as well.

But, that's a lot closer than it was in the first half and with a 10-game home stand starting tonight at 7:30 p.m., the Cubs have a chance to cut that margin a bit.

Shreveport, with the Texas League's worst record in the second half at 8-20 (.286) is Midland's first opponent. The Captains took 3-of-5 in a series against Midland 10 days ago to help their record, but have won little since.

The Cubs follow with the Jackson Mets on Saturday, a team they just finished playing in Jackson where they also dropped 3-of-5.

Discounting pitchers, the Cubs are led at the plate by Jeff Jones with a .309 average and is the team leader in home runs with 14 and RBIs with 65. He's followed by Dan Norman with a .288 average and the team's top double hitter with 25. Norman is third on the list in homers with 10.

Tony Woods follows at .280, Paul Noce at .273 and Darrin Jackson, the team's No. 2 man in homers with 12, at .268.

On the mound, Doug Potestio has the best earned run average with a 3.03 and is one of only three pitchers with a record better than .500 at 5-4. Jorge Carpio, 3.52, has been the most effective in wins with a 6-3 mark while Tandy Charley, 3.33, has won 3-of-5 decisions.

Name the two Major League players who hold the record for consecutive hits?

Did You Know?...

Cy Young, the all-time major-league leader among pitchers with 511 victories, pitched 7,356 innings, also a record.

No sir, professionals are not allowed

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Olympic Games are safe, protected from professionals like Renaldo Nehemiah and Willie Gault, two top track and field athletes who committed the crime of signing National Football League contracts.

Certainly, you never would expect athletes who play for anything as crass as money competing here. That simply would not do.

But if Nehemiah and Gault can't be here, how come Kathy Horvath and Andrea Jaeger can? They are top tennis stars, each earning a comfortable income playing the pro tour. Both are entered in the Olympic tournament, perfectly acceptable participants in this citadel of amateurism.

Shamateurism would be a better description of what goes on in the Olympics. Any resemblance between some of the athletes battling for medals at these Games and legitimate amateurs is purely coincidental.

The problem is a patchwork formula devised by the International Olympic Committee that permits the individual sports federations to determine eligibility. That produced the thinking banning players who had signed National Hockey League contracts and played in that league from the Winter Games, while permitting players from the old, and every bit as professional, World Hockey Association to participate.

FOR THE Summer Games, we have a fistful of professionals, including seven players from the North American Soccer League Cosmos in the soccer tournament. In fact, the only pros banned from Olympic soccer are veterans of World Cup play.

William Simon, president of the United States Olympic Committee, has long campaigned for some resolution of the eligibility issue. So far, his pleas have been largely ignored.

For years Soviet athletes, missing from this Olympiad, have been derided as state-supported professionals. "The Soviets are no more professional than we are," Simon said this weekend.

"We must remove the hypocrisy and contradiction from the eligibility issue. It's time to remove the sham. It saddens me that the Olympic ideal is shrouded by hypocrisy."

Simon's solution, which seems sensible here, is to open the Games to all athletes, amateur and pros alike. Or, allow athletes to maintain their amateur status in any sport in which they have not signed pro contracts.

Take for example, sprinter Gault and hurdler Nehemiah, who will spend the Summer Games in NFL training camps, barred from the Olympics by their ability to catch footballs, even though there's no punt, pass and kick competition in the Games. Both sued to be allowed to compete and lost their cases. They are professionals. "Ineligible," says the IOC.

But the trust funds that are set up for the other track and field athletes are perfectly OK by Olympic standards.

SIMON WONDERS about that kind of reasoning.

"Skeets Nehemiah can't compete here," the USOC president said. "If you want an explanation of the rationale behind that, you'll have to ask somebody else for it."

"What about the athletes on scholarships?" Simon asked. "Are they amateurs? How about those in the job opportunity program" Seventeen percent of the United States team comes from the armed services. Are they amateurs? The examples go on and on."

Clearly, the Simon Pure image, protected so zealously in the past by Olympic officials that it caused Jim Thorpe to be stripped of his medals for more than half a century because of a brush with professionalism, seems archaic now.

"Realistically speaking I think they're already open Games," Simon said. "Athletics has become big business. We all know that. If we can't have a return to absolute, honest amateurism — if that ever existed — then open it up. Accept the world as we have it today.

"It's time to bring the Games into the 20th century."

Now, that would be a new approach.

Hoch ties own Quad Cities record with run-away victory

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Scott Hoch fired a 4-under-par 66 Sunday to run away with his second Quad Cities Open golf tournament title and pick up $36,000.

Hoch finished with a 72-hole total of 14-under-par 266, which tied the tournament record he set in 1980 and that was equaled last year by Danny Edwards and Morris Hatalsky.

Hoch was five strokes better than Dave Stockton, Vance Heafner and George Archer, who tied at 271.

Hoch also set a record for the tournament's biggest victory margin. The previous 3-stroke record was set by Hoch in 1980 and Sam Adams in 1973.

Hoch, 28, of Orlando, Fla., won this tournament 1980 for his first tour victory. He and PGA Commissioner Deane Beman are the only players to win the event twice.

Hoch's other tour win was the 1982 USF&G Classic in New Orleans.

"It's a great feeling to find out you can still win," he said.

Sunday's earnings pushed Hoch to $150,186 on the year and marked the third year in a row he has won more than $140,000.

He was steady throughout the tournament with scores of 67-67-66 the first three days. And he stormed out of the gate to easily win Sunday.

Hoch began the day tied for the lead with Heafner at 10 under par and birdied the first, sixth, 10th, 15th and 16th holes. He bogeyed 17.

Archer, a 21-year PGA veteran, came out of the pack to fire a blistering 64 to move into second. Archer, 45, shot five birdies on his front nine and added another on the 11th hole to pick up $14,933.

"This is the 21st year of my career, and I'd like to make the most money ever," he said. Archer's best year was 1968, when he won $150,972. He now has won more than $134,000 this year.

Heafner, 29, who had shared the lead after the first and third rounds, slipped to 71 Sunday.

Is Donley tough enough to play full-time in NFL?

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Not only must Doug Donley replace the leading receiver in Dallas Cowboy history this training camp, but he has to put up with daily questions about his toughness.

Donley has played sparingly in four National Football League seasons but Coach Tom Landry has given him a starting position with the retirement of Drew Pearson.

The speedy former Ohio State star has a tag of being injury prone.

He has a seven-letter, one-word response: "Baloney!"

Donley, the second fastest player on the team behind Tony Dorsett, said "I can tell you right now I'll go over the middle like Drew did. I've had some muscle pulls and things like that early in my career but nothing major."

Donley said he is no Pearson but he's not bad.

"It's unfair to expect me to do the things that Drew did for 11 years," Donley said. "But I'm looking forward to going across the middle. Throw it and I'll be there. I won't be shy."

Donley admits it will take some time to establish himself on the wing where Pearson made NFL history with some incredible catches.

"It will take awhile to earn a reputation," said Donley. "I might drop some balls, but I've been waiting for this for four years and I'm not going to let it get away."

He keeps running plays over and over in his mind.

"I keep envisioning these plays where I catch a ball over the middle, break a tackle and score," he said. "I can't wait. I wish we played our opener tomorrow."

Donley raised some eyebrows when he reported to camp wearing gloves.

He suffered a severe turf burn on one hand that limited his play toward the latter part of last season.

"I wanted to start wearing the gloves early so I could get used to them," he said. "You catch the ball with your fingers, anyway not the palm of your hand.

"I have racquet ball gloves that are cut down below the knuckles. Coach Landry said he didn't mind as long as I started out at first wearing them."

Donley has caught the ball expectionally well in early camp.

Landry is revising his offense so he can make use of the blazing speed of the receiver everyone calls "White Lightning."

YARDS AHEAD OF THE COMPETITION.

• Honda quality throughout.
• Exclusive Honda overhead valve 4-stroke engine delivers maximum performance while using considerably less gas and oil.
• Exclusive Honda Roto-Stop™ system stops the blade but not the engine when handle lever is released.
• Electronic ignition is maintenance-free.
• 21" cutting width cuts any workload down to size.
• Quiet operation.

AMERICAN

Bill Krueger, 7-6, allowed only five hits over 8 1-3 innings, giving up only a single after Milwaukee collected four hits in a four-run second-inning rally. He retired the final 14 batters he faced before Bill Caudill came on for his 20th save.

Kingman's homer gave him 87 RBI in the 85 games he's played.

Tigers 2, Rangers 0

Dan Petry and Willie Hernandez combined on a four-hitter and Dave Bergman smacked his fourth home run of the season as the Tigers completed a sweep of the four-game series in Detroit.

Petry, 13-4, helped the Tigers to their ninth win in their last 10 games. He became the American League's first 13-game winner. Hernandez got the last out for his 20th save.

Charlie Hough, 10-8, came out on the losing end despite allowing only three hits.

Indians 4, White Sox 1

Neal Heaton also pitched a three-hitter but won, allowing no hits over the final 6 1-3 innings while retiring 18 of 19 White Sox batters. Heaton, 7-9, had won his previous start, giving him consecutive victories for the first time this season.

George Vukovich lined a two-run single in the decisive sixth inning. Tony Bernazard and Julio Franco singled in insurance runs in the seventh.

Carlton Fisk belted his 10th home run in top of the third.

Red Sox 3, Angels 0

Dwight Evans and Tony Armas homered to back Bob Ojeda's three-hit pitching as the Red Sox swept a three-game series in Anaheim and won their ninth in 12 against the Angels this year.

Ojeda, 8-7, threw his fourth shutout of the season, most in the AL. Evans, who has driven in 17 runs in Boston's 12 games with the Angels, hit his two-run shot, his 19th, in the sixth. Armas led off the seventh with his 27th.

Yankees 6, Twins 5

Willie Randolph lined a single to right with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning and Bobby Meacham scored from first when right-fielder Tom Brunansky allowed the ball to get past him. Brunansky's error let in sixth unearned run of the game.

Joe Cowley, 1-0, gained his first American League victory with four innings of hitless relief. Dave Winfield stroked a three-run homer for New York.

Blue Jays 5, Mariners 3

Cliff Johnson celebrated his 37th birthday with a three-run homer that highlighted a five-run fifth inning. Johnson's 10th homer was his fourth in 13 at-bats.

Toronto right-hander Doyle Alexander, 8-4, scattered six hits over seven innings. Roy Lee Jackson pitched the last two innings for his eighth save.

Seattle took a 2-0 lead in the fourth on Ken Phelps' 15th homer, into the Kingdome's third deck.

NATIONAL

With the score tied 2-2, Pena walked in the 11th before Frobel lined a shot into the left-field corner at Three Rivers Stadium. Gossage, 4-3, took the loss despite holding the Pirates to three hits over 4⅓ innings.

Phillies 6, Braves 2

Steve Carlton pitched two-hit ball over eight innings as Philadelphia won in Atlanta. The only hits allowed by Carlton, 9-4, were a two-out double by Dale Murphy in the fourth inning and a single by Glenn Hubbard in the eighth, when the Braves scored on a wild pitch. Al Holland pitched the ninth for the Phillies, giving up a homer to Bob Watson.

Carlton's victory, the 309th of his career, enabled him to break out of an 11th-place tie with Charles Radbourn on the all-time victory list.

Cardinals 7, Dodgers 6

Tito Landrum and Darrell Porter each knocked in two runs in a six-run seventh inning as host St. Louis rallied to beat Los Angeles.

With Alejandro Pena protecting a 4-1 lead, Landrum singled in the first two runs of the inning. Steve Braun's pinch double made it 4-4 before Terry Pendleton singled home the go-ahead run. Porter capped the rally with a two-run double that gave the Cardinals a 7-4 lead.

Bob Welch, 6-11, was victimized by the Cardinals rally, while Danny Cox, 4-8, gained the victory.

Astros 6, Expos 1

Joe Niekro pitched a five-hitter and Denny Walling knocked in two runs to pace Houston over Montreal.

Niekro, 10-8, pitched his fourth complete game of the season. Bryn Smith, 8-8, was the loser, pitching 2⅓ innings and giving up five earned runs on seven hits.

The host Astros broke open the game with a four-run third. The runs scored on singles by Walling, Jose Cruz, Ray Knight and Niekro.

Gary Carter, who ranks second in the National League in home runs with 19 and first in RBI with 69, knocked in Montreal's run with a fifth-inning homer.

Tall City cowboy holds CFD steer roping lead

In steer roping's second go-round of the 88th annual Cheyenne Frontier Days rodeo, the leader was Kennard Windham, of Midland with a time of 14.5 seconds, followed by Sam Falks, of Amarillo, in 17.1 seconds.

AUTO RACING — Harry Gant fought off Cale Yarborough and Bill Elliott during the final 16 laps Sunday to win the Like Cola 500 by a car length at Pocono International Raceway.

Gant slipped inside of Elliott and Yarborough, who were battling for the lead, as the trio raced down the long straightaway in front of the grandstand. He then took the lead in the first turn of the 2½-mile track, with Yarborough holding onto second. Time and again, Yarborough and Elliott tried to improve their positions during the final 40 miles of the 500-mile NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National race. But neither one was a match for Gant, who led nine times and 102 laps to earn $34,605...

Mario Andretti held off Tom Sneva in the closest finish in Indycar history, then had to defend his driving tactics over the last few laps of the crash-punctuated Michigan 500. A series of wild crashes Sunday, one of which left driver Chip Ganassi in critical condition at University Hospital in Ann Arbor with severe head injuries, was overshadowed at the end by a duel between Andretti and Sneva.

Some call Andretti's tactic blocking. But Sneva, the 1982 Indy 500 winner and a two-time national driving champion, called it "Saturday night speedway-type stuff." Sneva's March moved within one second of Andretti's Lola on lap 237 of 250 at Michigan International Speedway. Several times over the last eight laps on the two-mile, high-banked oval, Sneva tried to squeeze by Andretti, but each time the March moved up alongside, Andretti's Lola stayed in front...

BOXING — In a split decision, Charlie "White Lightning" Brown gave Louie "Sweet Lou" Burke his first defeat in a 10-round nationally televised lightweight bout Sunday in Las Cruces' Pan American Center. Both men went into the match undefeated. Brown, 19, of New Jersey, is now 23-0 with 17 knockouts while Las Crucen Burke, 23, dropped to 18-1, 11 by KOs...

TENNIS — Veteran Jose-Luis Clerc, bidding for his third Longwood crown in four years, and teen-ager Aaron Krickstein, looking for his first major title, charged into Monday's championship round with victories Sunday night in the $200,000 U.S. Pro Tennis tournament.

Clerc, working on one his favorite clay courts but seeded only third in defense of the U.S. Pro championship, swept past second-seeded Andres Gomez 6-4, 6-4 after Krickstein became the youngest finalist in the tournament's 58-year history. Krickstein, who will be 17 on Aug. 2, upset pal and practice partner Jimmy Arias, the No. 1 seed, 6-4, 6-3 in the afternoon, then came back to oust Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil 6-3, 6-4 under the lights...

Whitworth wins Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth says there were times she thought she and Sam Snead might be linked forever in the record books with 84 professional golfing victories apiece.

"When you don't win for awhile you begin to think you never will again," she said Sunday after disproving her own pessimism with a victory in the $200,000 Rochester International LPGA tournament at Locust Hill Country Club.

Whitworth fell four strokes behind Rosie Jones on the first six holes Sunday, but rallied to tie Jones er after 18 with a 3-under-par 69. Then she tapped in a par putt on the first hole of sudden death and watched as Jones got in trouble in the left rough and bogeyed.

Jones hit her approach shot at No. 1 into the left rough, left her chip about seven feet short and missed the putt to save par by inches.

"Now that that's over, I don't have to think about getting to 85. I just have to worry about the regular things," Whitworth said.

Whitworth, 44, a Hall of Famer who has been on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour for 25 years, had not won since the Women's Kemper Open in March 1983.

"Time is not on my side. It's getting harder and harder to win out here," she said after defeating Jones, a look of relief on her face.

Contacted at his home in Hot Springs, Va., Sunday night, Snead said, "That doesn't bother me. I hope she wins a hundred. ... She's a real nice person."

Snead, 72, figures the PGA has failed to credit him with about a dozen tournament victories, mainly invitationals, including four Crosbys, one Hagen and six at White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., an invitational now known as the Sam Snead Festival.

Whippet-racing becomes popular

Hearst Feature Service

Whippets are those teeny, weeny, itsy, bitsy, skinny dogs that look just like greyhounds. Perhaps you've stopped to ask a person on the other end of the leash about the little cutie, or perhaps you just read an owner's T-shirt: "Yes, it's a whippet. No, it's not hungry. Yes, it's fast."

Whippets are very fast — up to 35 miles per hour. If you happen to own a whippet, one of the fun things you can do with it, say some whippet-owners, is race it.

Lure coursing, as whippet-racing is called, is becoming popular across the country. It is not racing per se. The whippets do chase a little mechanical rabbit, but the winner is judged not entirely on speed, but also on form and style. Gambling is prohibited.

LURE COURSING in the United States is staged by the American Sighthound Field Association, an organization that puts on over 250 events a year, drawing over 10,000 entries. According to a spokesperson from the association, people travel all over the country and Canada to enter their whippets in the competitions.

"I have never seen a hobby which so completely absorbs people," says Betz Leone, who judges lure coursing and attends to her own whippets full-time. "These are some crazy people. They hold these events on Christmas, Easter — you name it. These people really love their dogs."

The top of the rock in lure coursing events is what is called the Lure Coursing Merit Title. To enter that competition, the dog must have accrued 300 points in competitions throughout the year or won four first-place wins.

Owning a whippet doesn't mean instant obsession. Many people choose a whippet simply because they want a nice pet. Some choose one specifically for competition. Others just sort of get into it.

One owner who "just sort of got into it" is Peter Block of San Francisco.

"I was first attracted to whippets because they were small; they have no odor and they're good for a house in the city," he says. "Now, my whole life is built around them with the lure coursing. My friends see the way I live and think I'm strange. I spend easily $1,000 a year on vet bills and food and taking them around to the events. They are like my best friends. They're loyal. They never argue with you. Everywhere I go people ask me what they are. It's owning a unique item."

BLOCK INSISTS that whippets are a misunderstood breed. "Because they are so slender, people assume that they are neurotic, hyper dogs who bark a lot," he says. "They are quiet, warm and very gentle dogs. They're wonderful pets."

One of Block's whippets, Geiza, is a champion. He began training her with a sock on the end of a stick in his backyard. Eventually, he bogught his own lure coursing equipment, and now trains the dog every weekend in a park near his home.

Raising whippets for competition can mean a real commitment — not just time, but also money. Betty Blalock, a lure coursing field trial secretary, says that a whippet that isn't highly bred could be purchased for somewhere in the neighborhood of $150 to $200. One more suitable for showing starts at $300 and goes up.

YOU'D HAVE to look far to find a group of people more dedicated to their dogs. Whippets need to be walked and/or run daily.

Dogs can rescue persons

From Staff Reports

LOS ANGELES — Kal Kan, manufacturer of pet care products, has launched a national campaign to increase public awareness of search and rescue (SAR) dog units. This little-known free service can mean the difference between life and death.

Special training and an acute sense of smell, sight and hearing make one SAR dog as effective as 20 or more human searchers, according to information from the pet supply manufacturer. These dogs and their handlers are on call 24 hours a day to help find lost, injured or kidnapped persons in all types of terrain. The dogs can even detect someone buried in an avalache or underwater, the manufacturer said.

A national network of about 30 SAR organizations worked with public agencies in more than 200 cases last year.

The work of SAR units requires intricate training and close cooperation between the dogs and their handlers. Trainers are usually skilled in all aspects of a search, including map-reading, wilderness survival, first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation. SAR units reach their search destination by land vehicles, boats and sometimes helicopters, information from the manufacturer said.

DEAR ABBY

'Letter to God' praised, panned

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

TEEN-AGER'S LETTER TO GOD GETS PANNED AND PRAISED

DEAR ABBY: For years, the first thing I used to read in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat was your column, but you have just lost a reader.

Why? Because I hate your reruns! These people who ask you to print a letter because they think it's so good, let them get a scrapbook and save the ones they like, so the rest of us won't have to be bored with them. "Please, God, I'm Only 17," about the dead teen-ager in a car wreck, is one I really hate. I don't feel sorry for some jerk kid who kills himself doing 80 mph in a souped-up jalopy. I see kids like him every day around here, bouncing up and down in their seats, hitting the roof of the car with their heads. Most of them are either so high on dope or drunk on beer they can't feel a thing. And they all turn up their radios so loud you can hear them a block away.

This may sound cold to you, but if they kill themselves, it's fine with me; there's just one less nut on the road.

Like I said, Abby, you just lost a reader in St. Louis. — FRED D., ELDON, MO.

DEAR FRED: Sorry, I hate to lose a reader, but I've heard from hundreds of readers (mostly teen-agers) urging me to run that letter every year. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old boy, and I usually have fairly good control of my emotions. I mean, it takes a lot to make me cry, but when I read that letter in your column, "Please, God, I'm Only 17," I couldn't hold back the tears. I just never had anything hit me like that letter did.

It made me realize a lot of things. For one, it made me realize how much it would hurt my parents and grandparents if I ended up like that kid did, all because I chose to drive faster than I should.

It also made me promise myself that I would never, never take a drink of anything — not even beer — and then get behind the wheel of a car. I also promised myself that if I am in a car and the driver starts to drive recklessly or foolishly fast, I will try to talk some sense into him — or her — and if I can't, I will insist on being let out of that car no matter where I am or what time it is.

Thank you, Abby, for printing that letter. Please run it every spring just before the kids have their proms because that's the time most kids get killed in car accidents.

I never realized how much one letter could change my life. Keep up the good work. — RICK IN INDIANA

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column about weddings that were stopped when the question was asked, "If there is anyone present who knows why this couple should not be joined in holy matrimony, let him speak now or forever hold his peace."

I would like to add my own experience: I was a 19-year-old bride in 1933. The man I was about to marry was 26, and we had gone together for two years.

We walked down the aisle of a little country church filled with friends and relatives. When the preacher asked if anybody present knew why we shouldn't be married, I spoke up and said, "I cannot marry Allen (his real name) because when he asked me to marry him, I told him I would on the condition that he never take another drink of whiskey again. He swore he wouldn't with his hand on a Bible, but as we were walking down the aisle I smelled liquor on his breath!"

The guests were shocked, the wedding was called off and my daddy said he was proud of me. Allen left town, and two years later I married a nice non-drinking man. Next May we'll have been married 50 years. — TRUE STORY FROM NORTH CAROLINA

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

A veritable arsenal of guns is on "hold" in the property room of the Midland sheriff's department.

Confiscated and catalogued

Guns, whiskey, musical instruments and sundry other items await their rightful owners or a court appearance as evidence in criminal cases.

Question: What do guns, whiskey, beer, CB radios, TV sets, stereo equipment, lawn and garden equipment, drugs and drug paraphernalia, a pair of dentures and an expensive Western hat with a bullet hole through it have in common?

Answer: They're all catalogued and contained under one ceiling in the property room at the Midland sheriff's department.

Also included in the list of what might wind up being sold at public auction someday — except for the guns and contraband — are tools, clothes, suitcases, office equipment, a bullwhip, a plastic bottle containing $7.55 in dimes and nickels, fur coats, iron-on transfers, record albums, tow ropes, a guitar and even a sign that says: "Not Responsible for Lost or Stolen Articles."

The items — including a brass door knocker with "The Howards" on it — are in storage until their owners can be located or are being held as evidence in criminal cases, according to sheriff's investigator Caroline Boyd and her supervisor, Sgt. Keith Turner.

Disposing of lost or recovered stolen property, said Ms. Boyd, "depends on the circumstances. If it's a suitcase, for instance, and we exhaust all leads in finding the owner, it's considered unclaimed.

"We have to hold it 30 days, by law, then advertise it one time. The owner then has six months to claim the property or it's sold at auction. If the owners are known, we send them a notice by certified mail and they also have six months to claim it."

In the case of evidence, it's held until the appeals process is over — something that could take years, according to Ms. Boyd. It's then disposed of in the same manner as lost or recovered stolen property.

"We get a court order and burn the drugs and paraphernalia ," she added. "I take a witness along and burn them in a 55-gallon drum."

According to Texas law, said Turner, legal weapons that go unclaimed can be destroyed or forfeited to the state for use by the law enforcement agency that has custody of them.

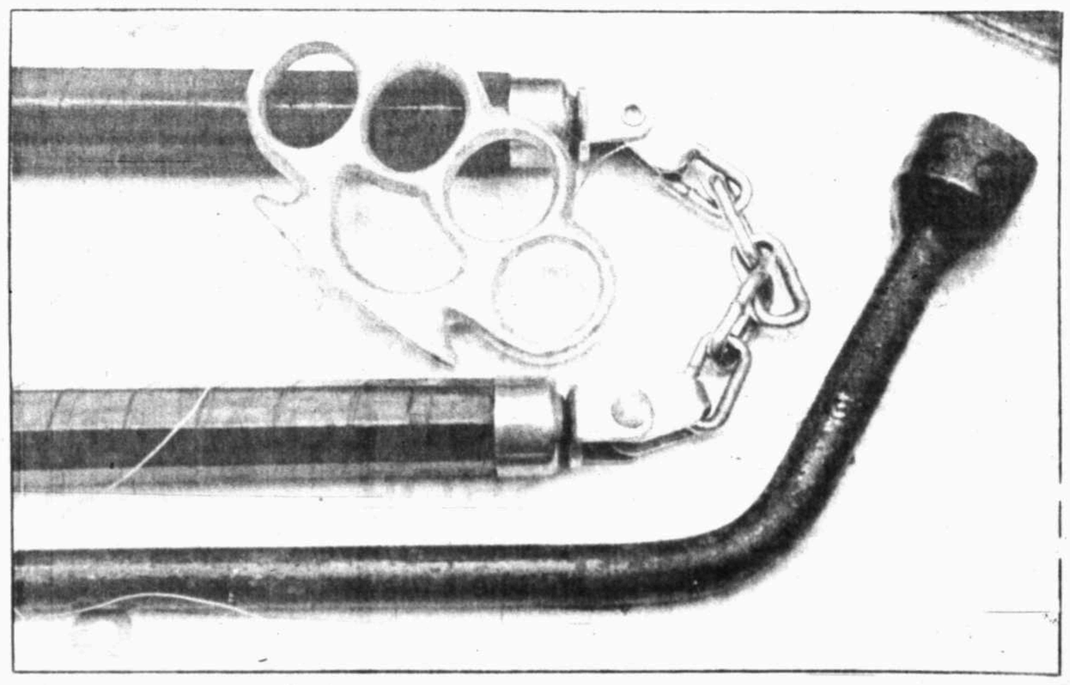
While the law apparently does not specifically preclude the sale of weapons to the public, a gun could be defective or it could be used to commit a crime.

As a result, noted Turner, most law enforcement agencies destroy weapons to keep from having to face a defective product suit or to keep from "looking bad" if it came out in the news that the gun used in a holdup or murder had been purchased from the police.

Consequently, unclaimed weapons at the sheriff's department are "cut up with a torch," said Ms. Boyd. "To my knowledge, we've never misplaced a piece of evidence."

Asked what would happen if evidence in a major case were lost, she sighed and said: "I don't even want to think about it."

Illegal weapons, such as these switchblade knives, are destroyed after their usefulness as evidence is exhausted.



Unlike brass knuckles and an Oriental fighting device called nunchaku, tire irons are not designed to crack skulls or heads. But this tire iron may have been used for just that purpose, since it's tagged as evidence.

John Frazzell

John Frazzell of Temple and formerly of Midland died Sunday following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Sheffield Funeral Home Chapel in Temple.

Frazzell was born Nov. 14, 1912 in Mart. He had worked for Gulf Oil Co. for 38 years, including stints in Midland and Fort Worth.

He was a member of First United Methodist Church of Temple.

Survivors include his wife, Florence Frazzell; a daughter, Elizabeth Gallagher of Houston; a brother, Charles Frazzell of Spring; a sister, Barbara Frazzell of Mineral Wells; four step-children; 10 grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

The family requests memorials be made to the Cancer Society or the First United Methodist Church of Temple.

Jack Rodgers

Dr. Jack Rodgers, 72, president emeritus of Odessa College, died Saturday, in an Alamogordo, N.M., hospital.

Memorial services will be conducted at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Hamilton Funeral Home in Alamogordo. The family has requested that in lieu of flowers contributions be made to the American Cancer Society or to favorite charities.

Rodgers was born July 29, 1911, in Bogata, was graduated from Bogata High School, earned the bachelor's degree from East Texas State University and the master's degree and the Ph.D from The University of Texas. He did post-doctoral work at the University of Colorado.

Rodgers taught in public schools in East Texas for seven years and was a teacher and principal in Odessa public schools from 1936 to 1949. He joined the Odessa College administrative staff in 1949. He was dean, registrar and vice president before he was named college president in 1960. He served in that post until 1970, when he was appointed chancellor of the Permian Junior College System. He was chancellor until 1973, when he returned as Odessa College president. In late 1973, he was appointed president emeritus of the college.

He was a Presbyterian.

Rodgers has been honored in academic circles and in 1968 was named Outstanding Man of Odessa.

Survivors include his wife, Ruth.

Anna Stewart

Services for Mrs. Anna Fredericka Stewart of Midland were to be held at 1:30 p.m. today at Ellis Chapel with Rev. Allen Whitman, pastor of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Pallbearers were to be Thomas Pool, James Windham, James Gillham, William R. Doreen, James Shock and David Canady. Honorary pallbearers were to be Bert Gillham, Edward Lundquist and Raymond Shaw.

Mrs. Stewart died Saturday at her home.

She was born Dec. 25, 1896 in Dodge County, Neb. Her early life was spent there on a farm. She was married to Leonard E. Stewart in Perry, Okla. They moved to Midland in 1937 where he was drilling superintendent with Noble Drilling Co. He died in 1964. Mrs. Stewart was a member of the Midland Garden Club.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Virginia Pool of Midland; a brother, Otto Iske of North Bend, Neb.; three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Joyce McMillan

Mrs. Glen (Joyce) McMillan, 54, of Midland died Sunday in a Midland hospital following an extended illness.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of West Kentucky Avenue Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. McMillan was born June 3, 1930 in Iraan, was married to Glen McMillan on Oct. 21, 1949, in Iraan. The couple moved to Midland in 1971. Mrs. McMillan was a Baptist, a gardner and a horticulturist.

The family has requested that memorials be made to the Leukemia Foundation.

County hospital offers unique birthing program

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 10 percent of the thousands of births at the county-operated Jefferson Davis Hospital are being handled through a nurse-midwife program that provides home-like settings, hospital officials say.

The Birth Center, established in 1981, is the only such program in the country, said Lois J. Moore, a Jefferson Davis administrator.

"The fact that the majority of our patients are poor wouldn't deprive them of a beautiful birthing process," Ms. Moore said.

More babies have been born at the county-operated hospital this year than at any other American hospital. At least 18,000 infants are expected to arrive at Jefferson Davis this year.

"What's most important is that the nurse midwifery program has taken some of the strain off our increasingly overcrowded labor and delivery areas while at the same time giving some of our young couples perhaps the most meaningful time of their lives," Ms. Moore said.

The center handles more than 10 percent of the hospital's deliveries, Ms. Moore said.

"When I first started working here, we were elated to have more than one birth a week. But now we're averaging 180 or more a month," said Susan Wente, the center's director and administrator of the midwife program for Baylor College of Medicine.

Pregnant women visiting the center for the first time are given the option of midwife services if they are in good health and at a low risk of developing complications, said Ms. Wente, who started the program with funding from the March of Dimes and Baylor's sponsorship.

"Should any problem arise during labor or delivery, we have immediate backup in the form of obstreticians and neonatologists who are only moments away," Ms. Wente said. "We have a special hotline into the neonatal intensive care unit, for instance."

Midwives certified by the American College of Nurse Midwives have training in nursing and midwivery and always "work very closely with physicians to assure the highest quality of obstetrical care to mothers and to give their babies the best possible start in life," Ms. Wente said.

Biology book criticized for instructions in sex

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A high school biology book that gives graphic sketches of male and female genitals, describes stimulation during sexual intercourse and includes sections on abortion will be debated before the Ector County school board.

The book, "Biology, Second Edition," has been earmarked for adoption by the State Textbook Committee for second-year biology high school students for the 1985-86 school year.

Controversial portions of the book may violate school board policy, two board members of the Ector County Independent School District said.

Trustee Mickey Jones said pictures and paragraphs on sexual stimulation and birth control "kind of circumvents our policies on sex education

"We usually ask the parents' permission to teach" sex education, he said.

Sam Gipson, another school trustee, agreed.

"It sounds like it might be advanced for high school students," Gipson said. "I'm a strong supporter of sex education, but I don't think that this should be done in mixed company, especially at the age group (high school seniors) we are talking about."

A Garland woman, Clova Wood, has been a major opponent of the book since it came up for consideration in Texas.

The book's discussions concerning abortion make "no reference to the dangers of abortion," Ms. Wood said.

In reference to the "different types of birth control," she said, abortion is offered "flippantly" as an option with "no warnings" about the dangers involved.

Ms. Wood, a research analyst for the Educational Reform Foundation, also objected to "the line drawings or sketches of the female anatomy, on her back, with her legs apart" and "the male standing sideways with an erection."

"This is not sex education," she said, and "it's not a form of biology. It's sex instruction. It has two paragraphs devoted on how to stimulate each other."

One of the sections that concerns Ms. Wood describes precisely what happens during human copulation, including anatomical changes before and during orgasm.

An orgasm is characterized as "an increase in heart rate and blood pressure, engorging of various tissues with blood, and faster and deeper breathing, which finally result in an explosive burst of muscular contractions."

However, Billie Rush, who is a member of the local textbook review committee and is science consultant for the county school district, said "there's no question" the state will adopt the book for the 1985-86 school year.

Ms. Rush said she and other members of the local textbook committee "don't have any reservations" about the sketches. Before accepting her present position with the county school district, Ms. Rush taught biology at Odessa High School for 21 years, she said.

Whether the Ector County school district will use the proposed book remains to be seen, Ms. Rush said, but she noted that trustees have never refused books recommended by the local textbook committee.

To qualify for state funds for textbook purchases, local school districts must use books recommended by the state textbook committee.

Odessa High biology instructor Barbara Starnes, a member of the local textbook committee, said she wasn't bothered by the diagrams, but added that "probably the part about human copulation can be left out, and when it lists abortion as a method of birth control, I'm not in agreement with that. I don't think they should mention abortion as a means of birth control.

"The paragraph on abortion seems to be leaning toward abortion, favorable to it, and it seems they ought to be able to give both sides of it," she said.

Candidate plans fight to hold school board seat

HOUSTON (AP) — A former school teacher who won the GOP nomination to a place on the State Board of Education says she'll keep fighting for the post — even though the Legislature has decided to replace the board with an appointed panel.

Mary Bishop, 38, upset longtime board chairman Joe Kelly Butler in the May Republican primary. At the time, Mrs. Bishop called her unexpected win an example of public demand for new educational leaders.

"I won fair and square," she said. "I ran on educational reform, and I definitely have a constituency out there."

Mrs. Bishop was the only board candidate to defeat an incumbent in the primary, and she has no Democratic challenger in the November election.

Gov. Mark White recently signed a bill converting the board to an appointed panel. The Justice Department is reviewing the law for potential conflicts with the Voting Rights Act. According to the measure, the members White appoints must run for election in four years.

"I'm not bitter," Mrs. Bishop said. "It's a whole new ball game, and I understand that."

But she said she will fight to remain board representative for District 6, which includes all or parts of the Houston and eight surrounding school districts.

She went to Austin near the end of the special legislative session to let state officials and representatives know she wants to keep the District 6 post.

One champion of her cause is Republican state Sen. Don Henderson, who must approve White's nominee for his senate district.

Vandal fires shot in building; Church air conditioning stolen

From Staff Reports

An unknown vandal caused damages totaling $1,400 when shots were fired at Cardinal Electric, 2800 W. Front. According to police reports, the front glass door and windows on either side of it were shot out between 11 p.m. Sunday and 3 a.m. today. A desk was also damaged.

And the pastor of St. Mark's United Methodist Church reported a window air conditioning unit was stolen from the church, located at 1701 N. Main, between 5 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Value of the unit was estimated at $400, and $100 worth of damages was inflicted on the window frame, reports stated.

Search canceled for missing hiker

PAGOSA SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A search for a missing Texas teenager has been called off Sunday and won't resume "unless we get some kind of lead," Hinsdale Deputy Sheriff Ed Toner said.

Sheriff Burt Smith had said earlier that the search Sunday would be a "last ditch" effort to find Chris Harvey, 15, of Andrews, Texas.

The search moved from northern Archuleta County where the youth was last seen into southern Hinsdale County after fruitless efforts early last week northwest of here.

"We've found no evidence of anything and there is no reason to continue. Unless we get some kind of lead to act on we're dead in our tracks," Toner said.

The search began July 11 after the youth disappeared near the trailer vacation home of his family at the edge of the San Juan National Forest.

Harvey, described to authorities as "an excellent backpacker," was wearing a tan-checked, long-sleeved shirt, jeans and tennis shoes when last seen.

The youth was not carrying any backpacking or other survival equipment when he disappeared, said Toner.

Hinsdale County straddles the Continental Divide in southern Colorado. The search was being concentrated in the rugged San Juan Mountains, a branch of the Rockies.

Incoming director hopes to upgrade TCLU image

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Gene LaMarche, the incoming director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union says he wants the organization to emphasize its role as a protector of citizens' rights, though he admits that he'll personally have a tough time gaining acceptance.

"The Constitution and the Bill of Rights really is a conservative document," he said. "What we want to protect is less government interference with individuals. Rights do not enforce themselves."

But LaMarche, a native of Rhode Island, says that his Northern heritage may hinder him from being accepted in Texas.

"An obvious liability is that I am not from Texas and, for that matter, I'm a Yankee," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview. "I am going to be trying very hard to pick up whatever I can about Texas culture and politics before I start."

LaMarche, who turns 30 next month, starts Sept. 5 with the Texas chapter of the American Civil Liberities Union. The ACLU describes itself as a non-partisan group dedicated to protecting the Bill of Rights.

He replaces John Duncan, who quit last spring after 11 years of guiding the 6,000-member group.

LaMarche has been associate director of the New York chapter since 1979. His experiences in New York should help him understand some conservative attitudes in Texas, he said.

"People would be amazed by how much Texas is like parts of rural New York," he said.

LaMarche spent much of his time in New York organizing affiliates and making the organization's presence felt. He said he wants to do the same in Texas by adding chapters in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and in East Texas.

Issues he expects to tackle in Texas include the death penalty, criminal justice problems, illegal immigration questions and church-state separation.

"We've been successful in fighting the death penalty in New York, because we don't have one," he said. "We haven't done well in Texas, because we have one there. We've been in the posture of damage control over the past several years."

Working in a state with a death penalty might become personally challenging, he said.

Auto strike?

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's top two automakers and the United Auto Workers have a lot of compromising to do in the next eight weeks to avoid a strike, with some analysts saying they consider a walkout almost inevitable.

Contract talks between the UAW and General Motors Corp. begin today, and the UAW and Ford Motor Co. start bargaining Tuesday. The union and both companies are working against a deadline of Sept. 14, when contracts covering 465,000 workers expire.

Large profits reported by the major automakers "certainly whets the appetite of the workers," UAW President Owen F. Bieber said today on the "CBS Morning News"

A major union demand this year is job security, keeping automaking operations from being moved overseas.

"What we are talking about is not only the future of the auto workers, but the future of our country and the future of basic industry here," Bieber said.

Several areas of deep disagreement separate the companies and the union from the talks' outset, said Arvid Jouppi, an independent automotive industry analyst based in Detroit.

"Traditionally, the companies have come to the bargaining table and said, 'This is how much money we have, so if you take it in one area, you have to give it in another'," Jouppi said.

But this year, union members want their first base-rate pay raise in three years plus guarantees that GM and Ford won't move more of their operations overseas.

Those goals conflict, Jouppi said, because wage increases will spur the companies to rely more on overseas manufacturing.

The automakers, meanwhile, want big changes in fringe benefits — most notably health care, which they say add $10 an hour to their labor costs. The UAW has said it would resist any such move.

Jouppi said those differences made it impossible for him to envision a settlement without "a strike of some duration."

Auto talks at a glance

DETROIT (AP) — Here, at a glance, are the issues in the United Auto Workers union labor contract negotiations with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.:

BARGAINING

Bargaining begins Monday at GM in Detroit and Tuesday at Ford in Dearborn, Mich. Contracts at both companies expire at midnight Friday Sept. 14.

WAGES

The UAW is seeking restoration of the guaranteed raise in base pay won by the UAW in 1948. The raise, 2 percent a year until it was increased to 3 percent in 1973, was given up in 1982.

Base pay for an assembler, the biggest UAW job category, has been frozen since December 1981 at $9.63 an hour at GM and $9.64 an hour at Ford.

However, cost of living increases have increased the total average pay to $12.64 an hour at GM and $12.65 at Ford. The UAW is demanding continuation of protection against inflation.

JOB SECURITY

Not since 1970, when the union won its "30 and out" pension plan, has the UAW put such emphasis on a single demand. Its membership has shrunk from a peak of 757,000 autoworkers in 1978 to 567,000 as the car companies have made their operations more efficient. The companies also are exporting work overseas.

The union will, in effect, be trying to write into its contracts a form of domestic content legislation that would require a certain percentage of a car's content be U.S.-made. Such legislation, originally aimed at the Japanese, has been bottled up in Congress.

PROFIT-SHARING

GM and Ford instituted profit-sharing for union workers in 1982. GM workers received profit-sharing checks this year averaging $660; Ford workers got an average of about $440.

GM and Ford are expected to offer to increase the size of plans at the bargaining table this year, but at the expense of pay increases. The UAW says it will resist such a plan.

HEALTH CARE

Both GM and Ford say worker health care costs have skyrocketed to several hundred dollars for each car built.

Even the UAW says the price of family health coverage for the average GM worker has risen 28 percent in two years, to $328 a month. But it says its "members do not make the medical decisions that push up health care costs."

The UAW says it will fight making workers share in premium payments. It has agreed to joint use of cost-cutting measures like health maintenance organizations and to "look to alternative ways of bringing about more competition" among insurers.

PENSIONS

Union activists from the Cleveland area have worked hard to establish a 30-15-84 Committee. It wants the present 30-and-out retirement plan to include a guarantee of a $15,000 yearly pension.

The UAW leadership has said "pension benefits have become inadequate and must be increased." But with 400,000 retired members receiving benefits, the union has avoided outright support of a proposal that could cost the companies millions of dollars.

OVERTIME

Auto plants have been running all out because of the auto sales boom. But the companies generally have been reluctant to open plants that closed during the four-year sales slump that ended in 1983, fearing a dip next year would result in the laying off of workers again at full benefits.

Their answer has been heavy dependence on overtime. But the UAW sees the current overtime levels as excessive and is pledged to seeking curbs on it.

The UAW claims the overtime worked from January to April would have provided 97,000 full-time jobs, more than the 80,000 members awaiting recall.

OTHER ISSUES

GM claims absenteeism still is a problem in some of its plants.

Other issues include health and safety, changing job classifications, apprenticeship, and production standards — considerations such as the speed of assembly lines.

Fine wire

Mike Ferreri, a technician at the Cabot Corp. KBI Division in Boyertown, Pa., uses a micrometer to check thickness of fine tantalum wire which is manufactured at the facility. The wire which can be made to the thickness of hair, is used in the electronics industry in the production of capacitors. Tantalum is metallic chemical element found in many minerals and is also used in missle components, surgical instruments and other applications requiring high corrosion resistance.

REAL ESTATE BRIEFS

Non-residential building becoming dominant

NEW YORK — As rising interest rates bring the housing cycle to a premature end in the second half of this year, non-residential building will grow increasingly dominant. Its momentum will help carry 1984's total construction contracting to a record $210.9 billion, it was reported by the nation's leading authority on the construction market, McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

FNMA publishes consumer guide booklet

WASHINGTON — In an effort to help homebuyers better equip themselves to shop in today's home financing marketplace, Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) has announced it has published a "Consumer Guide to Adjustable Rate Mortgages." The booklet explains how this popular mortgage works, and points out what to look for when considering an ARM. It can be obtained by writing Fannie Mae Consumer Guide, P.O. Box 23867, Baltimore, Md. 21203.

Management development course offered

AUSTIN — A three-part management development program focusing exclusively on real estate investment analysis will be offered soon by The University of Texas Graduate School of Business.

Planned for real estate investors, the course is entitled "Microcomputer Analysis of Real Estate Investment." It will meet on the UT campus August 23-25, September 14-15 and October 12-13.

Completion of all three sessions will provide 45 hours of continuing education credit from the Texas Real Estate Commission, Society of Real Estate Appraisers or the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

Firm reports completion of real estate sales

HOUSTON — Adams Resources & Energy Inc. has announced that it has completed it's previously announced real estate sales and utilized the proceeds of such sales to reduce its bank debt to $13,145,000. K.S. Adams, Jr., chairman, stated that the company also has executed a restated loan agreement with its lending banks for up to $20 million in bank credit lines. Adams also indicated that the company intends to reduce its outstanding bank debt to $12 million by year end and that any excess borrowing capacity would be utilized only for business expansion.

Construction materials, labor costs hiked

NEW YORK — The cost of construction materials and labor across the nation increased an average of 3.8 percent in 1983, it has been reported by the Cost Information Systems Division of McGraw-Hill.

The price information is based on a semi-annual surey of building trade unions, contractors and materials' suppliers in these cities. The greatest cost jump for the period, 6.3 percent, was in the 16 cities in the Metropolitan New York/New Jersey region. The lowest increase, 2.3 percent, was registered in the other areas of the Northeast and in the North Central states.

Economy growing; Inflation still checked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at an unexpectedly strong annual rate of 7.5 percent this spring even as inflation remained in check, the government reported today.

The growth figure released by the Commerce Department for economic activity in the April-June quarter was sharply higher than the preliminary estimate last month of 5.7 percent.

Today's revision followed the pattern the economy set early in the year — confounding experts who persist in predicting slower growth as the recovery from the 1981-82 recession begins to lose steam.

Growth in the second quarter was slower than in the first, which was revised today to an astonishing 10.1 percent annual rate — matching the best performance in three years.

However, both growth rates were well above what economists had predicted. Originally, the consensus forecast was for growth below 5 percent in each quarter.

Growth, as measured by the gross national product, the total output of goods and services, turned in a performance in the January-March period unmatched since a similar 10.1 percent increase in the first quarter of 1981.

Often such strong growth at this stage of an economic recovery would signal a return of inflation. But that has not been the case this year.

The goverment reported today that a GNP-linked inflation measure was rising in the second quarter at an annual rate of 3.2 percent, lower than the 4.4 percent rate posted in the first quarter. The smaller increase was attributed primarily to food prices, which dropped in the second quarter after rising sharply in the January-March period.

Many economists have expressed concern that the strong growth being shown by the economy could eventually choke off the recovery by inspiring heavy business and consumer borrowing, which would drive up interest rates and trigger inflation. However, while interest rates have risen, inflation has remained in check.

Less demand seen for OPEC oil, this century

PARIS (AP) — The International Energy Agency, in a report issued Monday, said there will be less demand than previously thought for OPEC oil the rest of this centrury and the supply and demand for crude should remain balanced through 1990.

The conclusions by the 21-nation organization said the oil market should remain "soft" through the end of the 1980s, and large oil price increases are unlikely during the period unless there is a major supply shortage.

But the agency warned that because of declining oil production in the industrialized nations, the oil market could become tight beyond 1990, meaning oil prices may rise. There could be massive price jumps if there are even minor supply problems, it said.

The Paris-based agency, whose members include most of the Western industrialized nations, said the tightening of energy and oil markets that had been projected for about 1990 is now expected later.

David Jones, director of long-term cooperation and policy analysis at the agency, said the new lower demand estimates were due partly because of the success of energy conservation policies and efforts to switch to alternative energy sources.

He said two years ago the agency predicted the demand for oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would rise to 30 millions barrels daily by 1990, and would reach 38 million barrels by 1995.

The agency now projectes demands of 24 million barrels daily in 1995 and 29 million in the year 2000.

The report suggested, however, that the market could become tight before the mid-1990s if the world economy grows more rapidly than exepected or if oil prices fall significantly in the next few years.

Declining oil production in the industrialized nations, especially in the North Sea and in the United States, will cause their net oil imports to start rising again over the rest of this decade, the oil analysts said.

Net imports by the member-countries are expected to reach 17.6 million barrels per day by 2000, compared with 14.6 million in 1983 and a peak of 24 million in 1979.

At the same time, oil production by member countries is expected to decline steadily from 15 million barrels daily last year to 14.4 million in 1985 and 12.9 million in 2000.

Production of natural gas by member nations also is expected to rise to the equivalent of 671 million tons of oil in 1990 from 600 million tons at present. It then will drop to an annual rate just under 600 million tons by 2000.

The agency expects the demand for oil in the Western industrialized nations to remain at the 1982 level over the next two decades and possibly decline in 2000, despite a one-third increase in total energy requirements over the period.

Jones stressed that the agency's brighter energy outlook over the next 15 years hinges on a "big improvement" in the efficiency of energy use and far more production and use of alternative energies, especially nuclear and coal.

Dollar sets record; Gold slips

LONDON (AP) — The dollar took off on a record-breaking rise in early trading today, hitting new peaks against the French franc and Italian lire. Gold prices plunged by some eight dollars an ounce.

Dealers said the already strong dollar soared on expectations the U.S. second quarter gross national product figures, due later today, will show a sharp rise.

Paul Volcker, chairman of the U.S. Federal Open Market Committee, was also expected to announce the Fed will keep its monetary policy firm.

The dollar's surge, which included 10-year highs against the West German mark and Dutch guilder, depressed gold by attracting investors away from bullion markets, dealers said.

Gold opened in London at $338.20 bid an ounce, down from $340.75 late Friday.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a sharp drop today amid concern over continuing rapid growth of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 12.15 to 1,089.22 by noontime.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 4 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the Commerce Department said the Gross National Product grew at a 7.5 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the second quarter of the year.

That marked a substantial upward revision from the earlier "flash" estimate of 5.7 percent for the April-June period. At the same time, the department raised the economic-growth figure for the first quarter from 9.7 to 10.1 percent.

Strong growth is good news for many individuals. But many Wall Streeters fear that the more rapid the pace of the economy, the sooner it will outrun its capacity, reviving inflation or precipitating a new recession.

Analysts are also worried about strains on the credit markets and upward pressure on interest rates. Long-term interest rates rose in the bond market this morning.

Among today's early volume leaders, General Motors dropped ⅞ to 66⅞; General Electric lost ¼ to 48⅞, and International Business Machines was down 1⅛ at 105⅝.

The NYSE's composite index fell .94 to 85.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.52 at 189.60.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.59 million shares at noontime, against 35.96 million at the same point Friday.

Nicaragua economy straining

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — From a scarcity of beans to a widening trade deficit, the strains on the Nicaraguan economy are showing more now than at any time since the leftist Sandinistas came to power in 1979.

The government blames the deterioration on continued attacks and sabotage by U.S.-supported rebels, but private economists also point to bureacratic snarls and government economic programs that have aggravated already serious problems.

The allotment of a large share of the national budget to the military appears to be playing a part.

The Defense Ministry officially receives 25 percent of the $1.9 billion budget for 1984, but military and civilian government sources say the actual amount channeled to defense is closer to 40 percent.

Junta coordinator Daniel Ortega said recently that many education and health projects would have to wait "in order to keep our army supplied with top quality food, shoes and uniforms."

"The first thing that has to be done is think of the defense of the revolutionary power, so that later we can think about the economic development of the country," added junta member Sergio Garcia Ramirez. "Meanwhile, all our resources will be bound to our combatants."

BUSINESS MIRROR

Institutional members urged to go 'beyond disclosure'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While the dream still sparkles in their eyes, a good many rather new homeowners are receiving invitations to reality in their mail. Their mortgage rates are going up.

For many, the damage won't be great, since a 1 percent increase in a 13 percent adjustable, 20-year, $40,000 mortgage comes to less than $30 a month. But some home loans are going up as fast as the borrower's blood pressure.

Those who were teased or seduced into taking first-year rates at 9 percent, for example, might find themselves broadjumping 5 percentage points after just a year, which works out to a potentially devastating $137.50 a month.

Such teasers, says Felix Beck, this year's president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, are no good for anyone, an opinion not likely to be contested by either borrower or lender. Bad loans give both a bad time.

Teasers aside, adjustable rate mortgages still give a bad time to many borrowers and a bad name to many lenders, and Beck therefore is urging his 2,000 institutional members this year to go "beyond disclosure."

Beyond disclosure means putting all the information, the good and the bad, on the table. It means telling borrowers about such things as negative amortization. It means helping them equate loan to income. It means educating borrowers.

And more. Typically, a lender gives about 45 days notification that a borrower's rate will be going up. Beck wants to see it extended, the purpose being to allow borrowers to adjust and prepare for the higher payments.

This, many people will argue, is only fair because, in marked departure from five decades of practice, there has been a shift in risk from the lender to borrower. More like a sharing of risk, to be sure, but a shift nevertheless.

In the "old" days, two years or so ago, most loans were made on the basis of fixed interest rates. Thus if interest rates soared, the buyer was protected though the lender might be threatened with bankruptcy.

As recently as the first quarter of 1982, for example, the percentage of fixed to adjustable rate mortgages was 3-to-1. But by May of this year, 62 percent of all mortgage loans made were at adjustable rates.

Some critics view this as an anomaly. In keeping with the trend toward more consumer protection, they say, almost every industry in American has taken on added responsibilities for such things as product safety and quality.

Some of this, of course, has been forced upon them by legislation, but much has been willingly assumed because, reasonable people agree, the purchaser is essentially an amateur while the seller is usually a professional.

In contrast, according to critics, which include many in Congress, development of the adjustable rate mortgage has transferred more risk to the amateur buyer and lessened that of the professional lender.

But the adjustable rate loan has done many things "for" — as opposed to "to" — both buyers and lenders. Most importantly, it has enabled many buyers to get into houses they wouldn't have had a chance of buying just a few years ago, and it has kept the lending industry alive and ready to make loans.

Beck, who heads Margaretten & Co., mortgage division of Berg Enterprises of Iselin, N.J., contends that if Americans have had a love affair wth the fixed-rate mortgage, they have something more than an infatuation with ARMs.

But, he agrees, that infatuation must be backed by facts. He feels that the worst thing for either lender or borrower is for the latter to wake up too late to the details of his loan and then blame the lender.

What the borrower wants, he asserts, are 1. a relatively low first-year rate, 2. a qualification rate less than that being charged on fixed-rate loans and 3. consumer safeguards in the form of interest rate caps.

The interest rate caps would apply both to the number of percentage points by which the rate could rise during the adjustment period — generally one, three or five years — and a lifetime cap as well.

Both borrower and lender, for example, might agree to the fairness of an existing loan on which the adjustment cap was set at 2 percent and the lifetime cap at around 16 percent, said Berg.

But, he says again, if the mortgage industry's integrity is to be retained, it behooves lenders to spell out the conditions for borrowers, make sure they understand, and educate them if they do not.

Speech therapy valuable for persons who had stroke

Dear Dr. Solomon: In one of your columns you mentioned something about the value of speech therapy for someone who has had a stroke. An uncle of mine who had a stroke was definitely helped by speech therapy, and I think your readers should know this. — Mr. D.W., Boston, Mass.

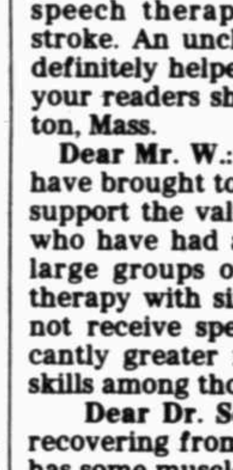
Dear Mr. W.: A number of speech pathologists have brought to my attention various studies that support the value of speech therapy for persons who have had a stroke. These studies compared large groups of patients who received speech therapy with similar groups of patients who did not receive speech therapy. All showed significantly greater improvement in communications skills among those who did receive therapy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a nephew who is recovering from bacterial meningitis, but he still has some muscle weakness. What are the chances that it will improve or remain the way it is? — Ms. M.S., Roanoke, Va.

Dear Mrs. S.: You realize, of course, that I cannot predict what will happen in a particular case. However, Dr. Ralph D. Feigin, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, says that the deficits associated with bacterial meningitis often disapper completely or show significant improvement with the passage of time.

For Denni, Jersey City, New Jersey: According to the Alan Guttmacher Institute, sterilization is the preferred method of contraception in the United States. Close to 12 million couples rely on sterilization, while about 10 million women depend on oral contraceptives.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.



INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Gift worries grandma

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a 62-year-old grandma who mistakenly purchased a bank savings certificate and had it registered in my name, as custodian for my granddaughter's name, under the gift to minors act of the state in which we live. I did this to avoid paying income tax on the certificate interest.

Now, I realize that the certificate and the interest belong to my grandchild and that I will be required to turn it over to her when she reaches the age of adulthood.

At that time, I planned to explain this bad situation to her. And, as she will be allowed to do as she pleases with the money, I will ask her to give it to me. Can the Internal Revenue Service squawk if she voluntarily gives this money to me?

I have sick headaches and visions of imprisonment after thinking about this.

A. Grandma, stop worrying. You're not going to the slammer. You'll comply with the rules by turning over to your grandchild everything in the gift to minors account when she reaches the age at which that is required in your state.

What your granddaughter does with the money after that will be her decision. If she gives it to you of her own free will, the IRS will have no kick coming. However, if the IRS comes snooping and determines your grandchild's gift to you to be other than truly voluntary, the results could be quite different.

It's hardly any secret that some families put money into children's names in gift to minors accounts in order to evade taxes — with the parents, grandparents, uncles, aunts, etc., taking the money back and never really turning it over to the kids. They do this because the children have such little income that they are in low income tax brackets or pay no taxes at all.

Anyone caught using that ploy can expect to be nailed to the wall, while the revenooers extract back taxes and fat penalties.

Q. You wrote, "Under the gift to minors acts of all 50 states and the District of Columbia, the custodian (of a gift to minors account) must turn over to the minor all custodial property when the minor reaches the age of majority."

I do not believe that statement is correct for "all" states. In the state in which we live, if the gift was made prior to July 1, 1973, the custodian must keep control until the minor reaches 21 — even though the age of majority is 18 in this state.

A. You're right. Most states have lowered the age of majority for voting and certain other purposes to 18, but some have rules such as you cite. In those states, gifts made to minors before the dates on which the age of majority was lowered must be held by the custodians until the minors reach age 21.

To further complicate mtters, some states hve lowered the age of majority for most purposes to 18, but have pegged age of majority under their gift to minors acts at either 21, 20 or 19.

Sorry, readers, I don't have the space here print the gift to minors age of majority rules for all states. If your broker or banker can't tell you the rule in your state, you can check with the secretary of state's office in your state capital.

Q. We bought stocks for our daughter, in a gift to minors account. She is approaching the age at which we must have the stocks registered in her name, alone. She is attending an out-of-town university and wants us to continue to manage her investments. How can this be arranged.?

A. Have a power of attorney drawn up, giving you discretionary authority over your daughter's investments. After she signs that document, you'll be able to buy and sell securities for her.
