'Unusual event'

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — An "unusual event" was declared at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant at 10:05 p.m. Monday, a TU Electric spokeswoman said.

The event is the least serious of the four levels of emergency classifications at a nuclear power plant.

"All we know at this point is that the plant is safe and stable," said spokeswoman Pat Nichols.

Souter's stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — As New Hampshire's attorney general in 1976, Supreme Court nominee David Souter submitted a brief in which the state argued against paying for Medicaid abortions and referred to abortion as "the killing of unborn children."

In an earlier case, argued in 1972 when Souter was the state's deputy attorney general, New Hampshire defended its strict anti-abortion law against a constitutional challenge by arguing: "The maintenance of an unborn child's right to birth is a compelling interest which outweighs any rights of a mother to an abortion except when necessary to preserve her life."

In both cases, the extent of Souter's personal involvement is unclear. And from neither — one argued before and one after the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion — is it possible to determine his personal views on abortion, an issue likely to play a major role in his September confirmation hearings.

Chung

NEW YORK (AP) — Connie Chung said Monday that she's putting her new television series on hold while she tries to become pregnant.

The move, which surprised CBS executives when the 43-year-old anchorwoman asked for it last week, marked the second time this year that a female anchor of a network news series has opted for a family over a show.

"We want very much to have a child," said Chung, who is married to "A Current Affair" anchorman Maury Povich, 51.

CBS will replace Chung's show with "The Trials of Rosie O'Neill," a one-hour dramatic series starring former "Cagney & Lacey" star Sharon Gless as recently divorced lawyer who becomes a public defender.

Earlier this year, NBC's Maria Shriver left the "Sunday Today" show she had co-anchored since 1987. She said she wanted to spend more time with her baby daughter and her husband, actor Arnold Schwarzenegger, in Los Angeles.

Hundreds of Liberian civilians slain

■ The government of Samuel Doe denies reports that civilian refugees — 200 or 600, according to varying embassy and witness reports — were massacred by loyalist troops.

Associated Press

MONROVIA, Liberia — Loyalist soldiers of President Samuel Doe burst into a Lutheran church compound Monday and massacred at least 600 civilian refugees, including many children, witnesses said.

However, State Department officials in Washington said late Monday that their information, based on reports from U.S. Embassy staff still in Monrovia, indicates about 200 had been killed by Liberian troops.

In either case, a spokesman for Doe denied the allegations. In a telephone call to the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, the spokesman said rebels wearing government uniforms killed the civilians in the early morning raid.

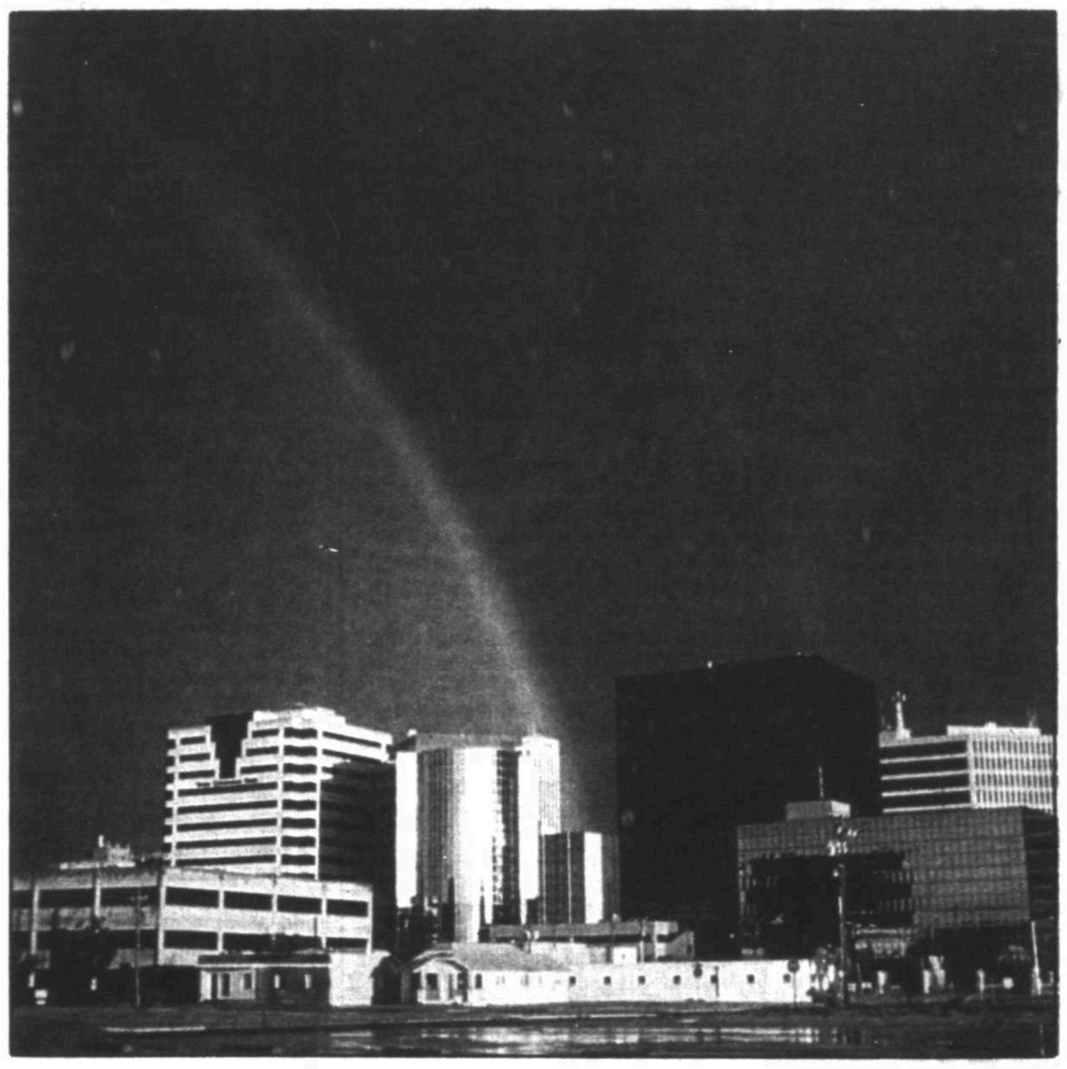

Witnesses said most victims were children and women, some with babies strapped to their backs and others cowering in corners. They had been seeking refuge from the civil war, which began in late December when rebels invaded from neighboring Ivory Coast in a bid to oust Doe.

The rebels accuse Doe, in power since 1980, of rights abuses and corruption.

People who said they escaped the attack alleged about 30 soldiers blasted the church door down with machines guns. They then opened fire on about 2,000 people from the Gio and Mano tribes who had taken refuge there.

Government troops have killed hundreds of Gios and Manos, whose tribes have supported the rebels seeking to overthrow Doe and speak a different language than Doe's loyalists. Most of Doe's troops are from his Krahn tribe and the Mandingo tribe.

Confederate Air Force taxiing right along

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force is taxiing down the progress runway, moving ever closer to its Dec. 7, 1991, liftoff — the grand opening of the CAF headquarters in Midland.

Although the move-in is still a few months away — CAF staffers said spring 1991 is the target date for the adminstrative offices to relocate from Harlingen — Rhotenbery Wellen Architects & Planners is busily drafting a ten-year plan for the facility.

"We all expect the museum to really take off once it's here," said architect Jim Rhotenberry. "Whatever we do now will need to accomodate future growth."

Rhotenberry foresees the CAF complex eventually covering the entire 42.7 acre former Windecker Aviation site.

He paid a visit to the CAF's Harlingen home last week with his associates and described the collection of World War II artifacts and nearly 150 airplanes as "great."

"But their space is really cramped," Rhotenberry said.

"Just in the first phase their administration and storage space for the static museum will go from 7,000 square feet to 20,000 square feet. It's badly needed."

The building project will involve the renovation of existing hangars and office space and the construction of two additional 50,000 square-foot hangars at a total cost of $3.5 million, Rhotenberry said.

CAF chief of staff Joe Mabee said the CAF national steering committee will meet in Breckenridge, Colo., Aug. 16-18 to discuss the theme of the museum.

"We'll have different displays as the focal points and we'll have to decide on the particular battles we want to highlight," Mabee said.

"We have to decide quickly because the displays dictate the interior space design."

Mabee said contracts for the facility's exterior will be bid out in September or October. He anticipates the completion of all exterior construction and grounds work by early December 1991.

The grand opening is set for Dec. 7, 1991, to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

"It seemed significant," Mabee said.

He said the CAF administration would move to Midland in the spring, when the renovation of office space in an existing hangar is complete.

Two CAF office workers have already settled into temporary offices in the Wilco Building, Mabee said.

"The board is very positive about this," he said. "They're looking forward to the construction of the facility over the next few years."

Once the CAF takes off here, it anticipates between 200,000 and 300,000 visitors annually.

The CAF has a 50-year lease on the former Windecker site and will pay the city of Midland $1 a year in rent. Board members signed the agreement with the city on July 4.

Zsa Zsa Gabor now out of jail

Surrounded by about 100 reporters and onlookers and at least one heckler who told her to go back to Hungary, Miss Gabor, 72, said she spent her jail time doing secretarial work that was slightly hampered by her ignorance of the alphabet.

"I had to file, but I don't know the ABCs, so they wrote out the ABCDE for me," she said outside the jail. "I

Oil spill in Galveston Bay upgraded to major disaster

■ Coast Guard officials report that as much at 120,000 gallons of oil has seeped into Texas coastal waters since the weekend collision of an oil tanker and two barges, making it an environmental disaster of major proportions.

By Susan Fahlgren
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON — The U.S. Coast Guard on Monday more than doubled estimates of the amount of oil spilled into Galveston Bay from the weekend collision of an oil tanker and two barges.

'We have upgraded the spill to a major spill and estimate the loss at 120,000 gallons," said Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene.

He said the revised estimate came after salvage crews were able to transfer all the oil from a listing barge Monday. Crews continued to remove oil from a second barge, which has been sunk in the Houston Ship Channel since the collision at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Greene said crews estimated 48,000 gallons of catfeed oil, a heavy refinery oil similar to a No. 5 fuel oil, were missing from the listing barge.

"And oil has been coming out of (the sunken) barge for over two days now, which leads us to believe the spill includes about 120,000 gallons," Greene said. Any spill over 100,000 gallons is considered major, he said.

The spill began in the ship channel where it passes through Galveston Bay when the tanker Shinoussa collided with two of three barges under tow by the tugboat, Chandy N.

Coast Guard officials originally believed the Shinoussa was a Liberian-registered vessel, but were told Monday the 610-foot double-hulled ship is a Greek vessel.

The Shinoussa was damaged in the collision, but has not leaked any of the 29,400 metric tons of jet fuel it was carrying overseas. It remains docked at Bolivar Roads anchorage, pending comple-

Ships stalled in Houston channel boost costs

HOUSTON (AP) — Steamship operators say ships and tankers stalled in the Houston Ship Channel are costing owners $5,000 to $20,000 a day while the Coast Guard oversees an oil spill cleanup in Galveston Bay.

Port of Houston Authority spokesman Lee Vela said the Saturday collision between a Liberian oil tanker and two barges being towed by the tugboat Candy N has stacked up 28 vessels going into and 30 going out of the Houston Ship Channel.

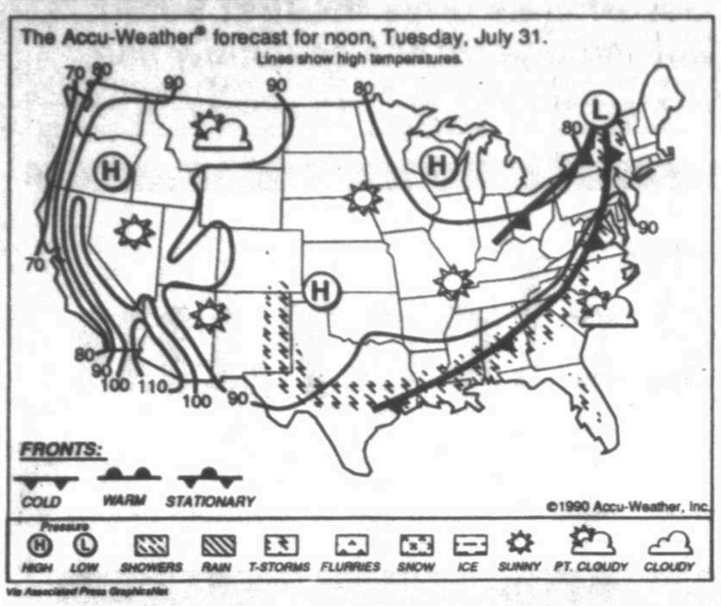

"We're optimistic that the channel will be opened by Wednesday," Vela said Monday. "If that happens, it probably wouldn't be necessary to divert cargo to another port. That would be expensive for them and for us."

The ship channel was closed shortly after the 3 p.m. accident just south of Redfish Island, where the channel runs through Galveston Bay. It was the second time in less than a week that the channel shut down.

"It's a pretty expensive operation just sitting offshore," said Mark Layton, manager of Kerr Marine Steamship Inc. in Galveston. Layton said his vessels have been able to move in and out of Galveston, but the firm's Houston office far-

Rain still a possibility

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and showers with a high in the low 80s and 5 to 15 mph southeast winds, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and showers with a low in the mid-60s, NWS said. Wednesday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high near 90, NWS said.

The record high for Monday's date was 106 set in 1937. The record low of 60 for July 31 was set in 1971. Monday's high was 86, after an overnight low of 67.

STATE

Severe thunderstorms triggered by a weak cold front rumbled slowly across Texas on Monday, dumping hail and heavy rain.

Warm temperatures helped develop the storms, with golfball-size hail reported near Jacksonville and nickel-size hail falling near Vidor in East Texas.

Other severe thunderstorms prompted warnings at San Augustine, north of Tyler and along the borders of Hill and McLennan counties, about three miles northeast of West.

The National Weather Service also issued flash flood watches for the West Texas mountains between the Big Bend and the Guadalupe Mountains through Monday night.

Thunderstorms in the region resulted from an upper-level disturbance that mixed with abundant surface moisture and afternoon heating.

The cold front stretched from the Trans Pecos in West Texas through the Dallas-Fort Worth area anf on to Fort Smith, Ark.

The only rain-free areas in Texas were the far west, Rio Grande plains and the lower and middle Coastal Bend. Skies were partly to mostly cloudy statewide, with winds generally northerly to northwesterly behind the front and turning south to southeast ahead of it at 5 to 15 mph.

Highs ranged from the upper 90s in East Texas and coastal sections to the low to mid 80s elsewhere, with a few mid- to upper-70s in stormy areas and 60s in the mountains.

A continued chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms was forecast for most sections on Tuesday, with highs in the 80s for North Texas, upper 70s in the Panhandle, low 80s in western sections and 90s for the south and southwest.

NATION

In western Texas, the town of Alpine received 2 inches of rain between 4 a.m. and noon, flooding low-water crossings and railroad tracks to the west.

Summer rains caused major flooding over the weekend in the northeastern Iowa town of Finchford on the west fork of the Cedar River.

The flood's crest was expected to reach Waterloo, about 10 miles downstream from Finchford, on Monday, and Cedar Rapids, about 50 miles from Finchford, on Thursday. But the National Weather Service predicted flooding downstream would be less serious.

Showers and thunderstorms fell Monday in sections of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon, Lower Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Alabama, Georgia and northwest Florida. Scattered showers and storms fell over east-central and southern Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, Virginia and Maine.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

did very well."

Miss Gabor said that on returning to her Bel-Air home, "I want to take a hot bath and talk to my dogs and my horses."

Retired custodian Fred DeGrazio, 72, of Hawthorne documented the release with a video camera and running commentary. "I have nothing else to do," he explained.

"She should go back to Hungary and be the aristocrat she thinks she is," he said shortly before Miss Gabor's release.

"Why don't you jump in a coffin?" snapped her husband, Frederick Von Anhalt, who says he's a prince. Von Anhalt, Miss Gabor's eighth husband, said the previous 72 hours had been tough on him.

"My weekend was terrible. My wife, she wasn't home," he complained.

She paid $85 a day to do her time at the El Segundo jail rather than have the county pick accommodations for her.

"I was very happily surprised," she said of her stay in the Los Angeles suburb known for its refineries and aerospace offices and factories. "Everybody was warm and nice and sweet. It was OK. The Beverly Hills Police should come and take lessons from this police."

But there was that moment of terror.

"At first I was petrified," she said. "They even took my makeup away." She also scolded reporters for a weekend story that her husband delivered silk sheets to the jail.

"I didn't have silk sheets. I don't even have silk sheets at home. I was on a horse blanket," she said.

She also declared the food to be "terrible."

One jail stay was enough for the El Segundo Police.

"This is so time-consuming," Lt. L. Lunsford said Sunday, after handling about 60 telephone calls from people with inquiring minds.

Municipal Judge Charles Rubin ordered the jail sentence last May after ruling Miss Gabor had violated probation by failing to perform 120 hours of community service at a shelter for homeless women. He increased the community-service time to 145½ hours.

Along with her jail time and community service, Rubin ordered Miss Gabor to pay nearly $13,000 in fines and restitution.

Miss Gabor's attorney, Harrison Bull of Santa Barbara, said finishing the jail sentence completes the sometime actress' debt to society.

"I filed notice of completion last week. I am going to say she completed more than 200 hours of community service," considerably more than she was asked to do, said Bull.

"This is probably the biggest sentence ever served by anyone for such a minor incident in the history of United States jurisprudence," Bull said with the understatement that has marked the case.

LIBERIA: Doe aide denies government role in deaths

(From 1A)

Earlier Monday, White House deputy press secretary Stephen Hart said U.S. Embassy officials had confirmed government troops slaughtered at least 200 people at the church compound in Monrovia. There was no independent confirmation of the 600 dead figure.

The White House condemned the massacre as a "senseless act of terror" but had no plans to send in troops. "At this point we don't believe that would be a prudent course of action," Hart said.

Witnesses said soldiers broke into the church compound at about 2 a.m. when the refugees were asleep. There was no telephone, so victims had no way of calling for help.

Bodies of some people apparently killed while trying to flee were hanging from window frames of the church building, said one person who visited the camp. "I saw dead bodies all around," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Other witnesses who refused to give their names said they saw women with their heads smashed open or blown to pieces by bullets.

Thousands of refugees fleeing the civil war are crowded into refugee camps in the capital. Their numbers have swelled recently as rebel troops have stormed the city.

The survivors said that after the soldiers had riddled the refugees on the ground floor with bullets they went upstairs and attacked a second group, of 1,000, sleeping there.

"We thought they had come to ask us questions. Then they started killing, and everyone began screaming and trying to hide," said one man who claimed he hid on the roof of the church.

The soldiers were from Doe's Krahn tribe, said the survivors.

The floor of the church was covered with blood stains Monday. Bodies were huddled under the pews where people tried to hide and lay draped across the church altar. More bodies were huddled in the corner.

The bodies of women were strewn on the floor with children still wrapped in shawls on their backs. The ceiling was riddled with bullet holes.

"My people, help me. My son, where is my son? I beg you. Don't leave me," pleaded an injured woman on the church steps. A man nearby, his neck slashed, called out for water.

The compound was filled with the bodies brought outside after the massacre. People passing the church appeared numb at the sight of rows of corpses.

SPILL: Officials double estimates

tion of the initial investigation.

Greene said a slick of oil had spread in thick, black patches of goop and a brown sheen through much of Galveston Bay.

'At this point, no oil has come ashore," Greene said. But he said by Monday afternoon, suspicious oil had been reported on at least two area beaches south of the accident site. Samples of that oil have been sent to a laboratory in Connecticut for testing, he said.

Almost every area surrounding the bay is considered environmentally sensitive, said B.J. 'Buck" Wynne, chairman of the Texas Water Commission.

"While the amount of the spill is less than the Mega Borg, I would say the potential for aquatic damage is more significant," he said, referring to last month's spill of 3.9 million gallons from the Norwegian supertanker some 57 miles offshore from Galveston.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro concurred and hinted that a special session of the Legislature may be necessary to enact oil spill readiness laws.

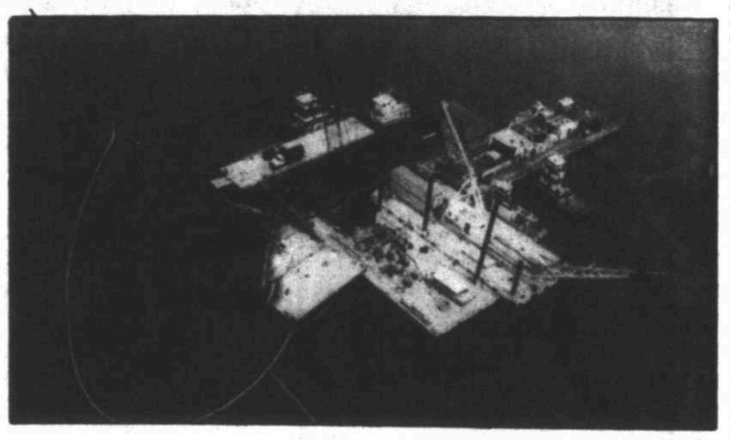

"I think once again it shows that we in Texas really aren't prepared to deal with an oil spill," he said. "This happened Saturday and this is Monday morning and we're still talking about what equipment to put where and where we are going to get the equipment from."

Mauro said state officials are moving forward on preparing legislation for the 1991 regular session, but said, "after this latest spill, I think a special session ought to be considered."

Wynne and Mauro said that the spill would provide an excellent scientific test of biorem ediation.

During the Mega Borg spill, the state conducted a demonstration of the oil-eating microbes and declared they had sufficiently reduced the amount of oil in the test area. But Wynne said the current spill could show the true effectiveness of the microbes.

'These tidal wetlands are very sensitive," Wynne said. 'If oil gets in there, it might be more difficult to clean up with conventional methods."

Containment booms surround the oil leaking from a barge in Galveston Bay, one of three vessels involved in a weekend collision. A Liberian-registered oil tanker collided with two barges on Saturday, producing a spill Coast Guard officials now classify a major disaster.

COSTS: More than 50 ships stalled by spill in channel

ther up the channel has several vessels backed up.

"It can cost between $10,000 and 20,000 a day for owners," Layton said. "If they can't get in or out, it's keeping the ship from doing anything else. The ships that are being delayed can't discharged to another assignment. A lot of the cargos are booked for Houston. There's a lot of the refinery cargo."

Layton said even if cargo vessels and tankers waiting offshore can be diverted to another port and shipped their goods by pipeline, rail or truck, it's time-consuming and expensive.

"It's awfully expensive," Layton said. "If a tanker went up to Texas City to use the pipeline, it's something like an extra 30 cents a barrel. If you're discharging hundreds of thousands of barrels, that's a lot of money."

"Any closure is certainly expensive for the steamship owners and steamship lines," Vela said. "Our customers are the steamship lines, so we want to make sure those people can get their cargo in. We're anxious to get those lines open again."

Earl Smith, operations manager for the Barwil Agency of Houston, said he was monitoring activities for two vessels trapped inside the channel and two more offshore.

"You're talking $5,000 a day and up," Smith said. "These ships don't come cheap."

Smith said there have been longer closures in the channel in the past, "but those were due to Mother Nature — we've had fog for up to a week. But this is a little bit longer than we're used to waiting."

With nearly 5,000 vessels pulling in and out of the Houston Ship Channel each year, officials said the number of closures due to accidents has been minimal.

"With the amount of traffic here, we're pretty fortunate," Smith said. "We've got pretty good pilots here."

Doubt cast on drug cult allegations

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A government Indian rights administrator said Monday authorities slanted publicity in a case against 14 people arrested in connection with an alleged drug cult practicing human sacrifice.

"What they have been putting out is very, very, very tainted," said Carlos Puga Quiroga, assistant director of penal affairs for the National Indian Institute.

Nine men and five youths were arrested July 24 in remote mountain marijuana fields near in Tepic, the capital of Nayarit state, 400 miles northwest of Mexico City.

The nine men were arraigned Friday in Tepic on homicide, arms possession, criminal association and drug charges, a federal crime in Mexico, and are being held in a state prison in Tepic.

The five youths are in juvenile detention centers, under the custody of federal authorities for the protection of minors.

Police have quoted cult members as saying they made as many as 41 human sacrifices over the last seven years to a devil god represented by a 16-inch monkey.

Puga said Indian Institute investigators have been looking into the case and plan to interview each of the suspects, who are thought to be Tepehuano Indians.

He said the authorities handing the Nayarit case apparently were influenced by a 1989 drug cult case in Matamoros.

Bush gives governors pat on back

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — President Bush thanked the nation's governors for a bipartisan "constructive relationship" on education Monday, even as Democrats stepped up their protest against the administration's latest tax proposal.

Bush addressed the governors at their National Governors' Association annual summer conference, speaking by remote telephone hookup from the White House.

He pledged continued support for the education reform goals he and the governors agreed on last year, and endorsed their revised plans for a national oversight panel that will grade the states and federal government on progress in meeting the goals. Democrats had insisted on the changes to deny Republicans control of the panel.

"I think it is essential there be some definitive way of measuring progress toward these education goals during the '90s, and this decision ... makes good sense," Bush said. "I want to thank everyone there for the constructive relationship that we've developed."

Washington Gov. Booth Gardner, a Democrat and incoming chairman of the governors, asked Bush to obtain full federal funding for Head Start and early childhood development programs that are part of the education goals. Bush said, "We'll see what we can do."

Democrats, meanwhile, were circulating a letter for signature by the governors that protests in strong terms the administration's proposal in budget negotiations to raise federal revenues by limiting the deduction for state income taxes — a proposal governors say encroaches on state tax bases.

"To eliminate this deduction would result in a double tax on our citizens," said the letter.

It was being pushed by Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whom Bush defeated in the 1988 presidential election, and Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer.

"The notion of putting the burden on the states again for Washington's inability to deal with its fiscal problems is just outrageous," Dukakis said in an interview.

Governors ask for S&L review

Hearst News Service

MOBILE, ALA. — A regional political rebellion is growing among the nation's governors over the high cost of the savings and loan bailout.

Outraged by the potential $500 billion price tag, members of both parties at the National Governors' Association conference are calling for a review of the crisis in the thrift industry and the administration's response.

Many said they just don't believe that such astronomical amounts of money could simply disappear forever into collapsed land deals and Swiss bank accounts.

Led by conference chairman Gov. Terry Branstad of Iowa, a Republican, a bipartisan executive committee unanimously approved a proposal that seeks the creation of a bipartisan national commission to study the problem. The conference will debate the recommendation Tuesday.

The governors appear to be divided more along regional than partisan lines over the thrift issue.

Governors from the Northeast and Midwest, where the thrifts are relatively stable and solvent, argue that their regions should not be expected to contribute as much financially to the bailout as states like California and Texas, where many of the failed thrifts are concentrated.

Gov. Madeleine Kunin of Vermont is seeking signatures on a letter to President Bush and the Senate Democratic leadership urging that regions in which the savings and loan crisis is most dire be assessed a higher proportion of bailout funds than the rest of the country.

Govs. Richard Celeste of Ohio, Douglas Wilder of Virginia and Kunin, all Democrats, estimated that the federal bailout will pump about $80 billion into the Texas economy alone. "This is income transfer," Kunin said.

Celeste added that, since most of the thrifts that failed are state-chartered, the states themselves must shoulder a share of the blame.

Branstad joined them in protesting a uniformly applied tax bailout, which he said made him "mad as hell."

Branstad pointed out that economically depressed states like Iowa had maintained conservative, sound thrift institutions while those in other states were "running amok with little state supervision."

"Now taxpayers in the Northeast and Midwest are being asked to pay about 47 percent of the bailout, although only 5 percent of the lost deposits are in those states. Texas accounts for 72 percent of the losses in state-chartered institutions and will pay only about 6 percent of the cleanup costs," he added.

The bailout will make good on the government's promise to underwrite the safety of the deposits in the failed thrifts.

A Midwest-Northeast congressional coalition introduced a bill last week to spread a higher proportion of the cleanup costs to the states where most of the money would go.

Governors in both parties have voiced opposition to the federal proposal, arguing that limiting the deduction for state taxes to $10,000 would make it more difficult for states to raise their own taxes and put pressure on them to roll back income taxes. They said it comes after states have spent a decade absorbing cuts in federal aid and after most states have had to raise their own taxes.

Dukakis said Bush, who used his "read my lips, no new taxes" slogan so effectively in the 1988 campaign, has made the deficit worse by delaying action and now, in breaking his pledge, is hammering the states.

"If Mr. Bush, no matter how devastating it might have been to his poll ratings, had moved early as everybody knew had to be done ... I don't think we'd be in the kind of mess we're in now," Dukakis said.

The letter pushed by Dukakis and Schaefer went beyond a milder mention that Republican Gov. Terry Branstad, outgoing chairman of the governors' organization, and Gardner made in a letter to Bush before the meeting.

Dukakis' letter said the administration's plan amounts to a suggestion "that our citizens should pay a federal penalty tax for living in a state that has taken responsibility" for paying for its own services.

The deduction issue affects states unevenly, falling heaviest on Northeastern states with high income taxes and not affecting those that have no income tax.

Barry trial in home stretch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors and Mayor Marion Barry's attorneys finished presenting evidence Monday in the mayor's drug and perjury trial, and Barry pleaded with the city's black residents to avoid reacting violently if he is convicted.

"We have grown as a people in the last 20 years, and we are not going to destroy what we have brought back," Barry said after the court session ended. "Those who talk about that don't represent me."

Barry scoffed at conjecture that rioting could occur like that which happened in the nation's capital when the Rev. Martin Luther King was assassinated in 1968.

"Frankly, I really don't see (rioting) happening no matter what happens," Barry said. "I want to say I have heard no serious consideration of anything like that."

The evidentiary phase of the trial came to an unexpected early ending when Barry's lawyers abandoned an effort to call two witnesses they had hoped could weaken the government's case on one of the 10 cocainé-possession charges the mayor faces.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson then set closing arguments for Wednesday morning, providing an extra day to prepare them as Barry's lawyers had requested.

On Friday, prosecutors introduced a document showing city worker Clifton Roberson was absent from his job at the time Roberson said he had accepted a job application from admitted crack cocaine dealer Lydia Pearson.

Pearson had testified that she delivered the application, along with crack cocaine, to the mayor about 10 a.m. Sept. 7, 1988.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said Roberson was absent from his job later in the day but was there in the morning to get the application.

Mundy said he had wanted to recall Roberson but decided against it Monday because the worker couldn't be "dead certain" about what happened on Sept. 7.

At issue is whether Roberson was absent from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., as the form originally indicated, or whether he was away from the office from 8:30 a.m. until 10:30 p.m. The latter time was listed in the margin above the original 4:30 p.m. entry, which had been scratched out.

Mundy said Roberson could testify to being away from work late in the day, but couldn't be as certain about who had made the handwritten change.

Assistant U.S. attorney Richard Roberts opened the day's proceedings by saying the government would not call any more rebuttal witnesses.

Barry has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession, three felony charges of lying to a federal grand jury and one count of conspiracy.

U.S. military action in Trinidad unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Monday there are no plans for U.S. military intervention to bring an end to the Moslem-led insurrection against the elected government in Trinidad.

While refusing comment on reports of U.S. military maneuvers in the area, deputy spokesman Richard Boucher suggested that a military solution had been ruled out.

At the same time, Boucher criticized Libya's involvement with the rebels, saying it has provided some training for the insurgents. But he said there was no apparent direct link between Libya and hostage-taking which occurred last Friday.

Abu Bakr, the leader of a Moslem sect, launched the coup attempt by seizing the Parliament building in Port-of-Spain and capturing Prime Minister Arthur N.R. Robinson and about 40 other hostages.

Robinson and one other goverment minister were believed to have been shot in the leg early in the coup attempt, and both have been getting medical attention, said Bernard W. Aronson, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

Aronson, who spoke in an interview on the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" on PBS, did not identify the other wounded government minister.

He also said people were killed in the coup attempt but said the department did not have a figure on the casualties. He said none of them was a high-ranking government official, but he declined to identify the victims further.

The Trinidad crisis has some of the earmarks of the situation in Grenada seven years ago when a radical leftist movement took power. In that case, the United States and several other Caribbean countries decided to oust the radicals.

As in Grenada, the insurgents have shown a willingness to use extremist methods to advance their cause and have imposed onerous restrictions on the local population, including an 18-hour curfew.

In both Grenada and Trinidad, there were signs of involvement by anti-American elements from abroad. In Grenada, the leadership there had close links to Cuba while in Trinidad, Libya has been allied with the rebels. Also, in both cases, a major concern of Washington has been the well being of thousands of Americans residing in the two countries.

But a major difference between the two situations is that whereas virtually all of the Americans in Grenada were students at a medical school, the 6,000 Americans in Trinidad are dispersed around the island and are less vulnerable to a mass hostage-taking.

The international political climate also has undergone a dramatic transformation since 1983, a period when Cold War tensions were at a peak.

There is little indication that the events in Trinidad will have an impact beyond that country's borders. This was not the case in 1983, when members of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States asked for the dispatch of U.S. troops.

Beyond that, American officials said government officials in Trinidad have indicated a desire to resolve the crisis without outside help.

ACLU files school prayer lawsuit in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal lawsuit filed Monday against two school districts in this heavily Mormon state seeks to forbid prayers at everything from graduations to football games.

Prayers at graduation ceremonies and other school-sponsored activities violate state and federal guarantees of freedom of religion and separation of church and state, according to lawsuit. The suit was filed in U.S. District Court by the American Civil Liberties Union.

"Refusal to participate in this school-sponsored praying leaves students and teachers vulnerable to ostracism, ridicule and discrimination," said Michele Parish-Pixler, ACLU state executive director. "It isn't only at graduation. Many students have complained that students huddle before theatrical performances or in the locker room. If they don't participate, there is peer pressure," she said.

The Supreme Court in 1962 banned organized, school-sponsored prayer sessions for students.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of four students, a teacher and a school counselor in the Granite and Alpine school districts. However, if the ACLU wins, the suit would force all 40 of the state's school districts to stop prayers at graduation and other school-sponsored activities, said ACLU attorney Michael Patrick O'Brien.

'Freedom of religion must also have freedom from religion. It is simply unjust to make me participate.'

— Adrienne Morris, plaintiff

The lawsuit appears certain to escalate a long-simmering debate in a state where some 70 percent of 1.7 million residents are members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

However, O'Brien said Mormons weren't the only target.

"I'm a Catholic and I would bring a suit against the Catholics in Boston," he said. "(Even) nondenominational prayer is still a religious activity."

Mormon Church officials had no immediate comment Monday.

Gov. Norm Bangerter, a Republican and a Mormon, wants the state Legislature to appropriate funds for the school districts to fight the lawsuit, said Budd Scruggs, the governor's chief of staff.

"The districts are in an impossible position right now because they are literally facing lawsuits from both sides," Scruggs said, referring to threatened countersuits by supporters of school prayer.

District officials declined to comment Monday. Granite, based in Salt Lake County, has 76,799 students and is the state's largest district. Alpine, based in American Fork, has 38,192 students.

"I want to be there and see my seniors graduate, but I have felt more and more the injustice of being forced to attend state-sponsored meetings where prayers are said," said Adrienne Morris, a plaintiff who teaches at Orem High School in the Alpine district.

"Freedom of religion must also have freedom from religion," she said. "It is simply unjust to make me participate."

The furor over school prayer erupted here in 1989 when a student at the Jordan School District claimed in a lawsuit that a Mormon-oriented prayer at graduation violated the student's civil rights.

That district eliminated prayer at graduation.

Washington County School District officials said the district is settling a federal lawsuit brought by supporters of school prayer, but declined to describe the proposed settlement.

The South Summit District canceled graduation ceremonies after being threatened with a suit. Instead, a local civic group sponsored the ceremonies, which included prayer.

A majority of Utah residents appear to favor prayer at some school functions, according to a recent poll. The Deseret News-KSL-TV survey found that 72 percent of 605 people questioned favored prayer at commencement ceremonies, while 69 percent said prayers should be permitted in schools.

Nineteen percent said prayer at graduation should be banned, and 26 percent opposed school prayer. The poll had a 4 percent error margin.

Of those who identified themselves as Mormons, 83 percent would accept prayer in the schools, while Protestants and Catholics were split on the issue.

Chicago in dark for third day

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of West Side residents faced a third night without electricity Monday, after a fire in a generator plant left people working by candlelight and scrambling to save food from spoiling.

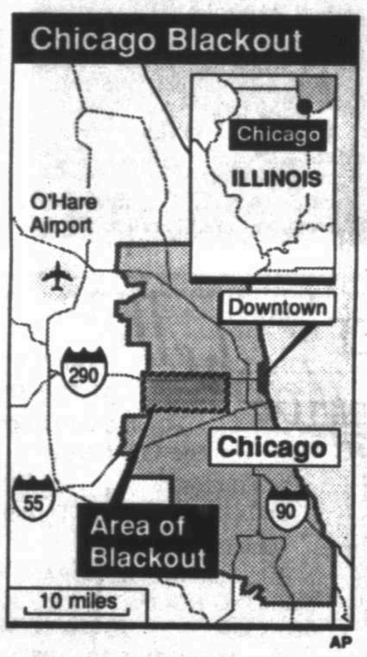

Police said they had 200 extra officers ready to patrol the streets, but didn't expect a repeat of the scattered looting that followed Saturday's blackout of 40,000 electric customers.

"There hasn't been any widespread looting or burglaries in the area, there have been minor type of incidents and they're well under control, well under control," Police Supt. LeRoy Martin said, adding that snarled traffic has presented the most problems.

Commonwealth Edison said it restored power to 4,000 residents by mid-day Monday and continued to work to return service.

Cool weather in the mid-70s forestalled any heat-related health concerns, but ice was a precious commodity for people trying to save food.

The blackout occurred after a faulty transformer exploded, sparking a fire that damaged a plant feeding electricity to a large section of the West Side.

Police said 49 people were arrested Saturday night and 30 Sunday night in looting incidents.

Officials have said it could be days before all power is restored.

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The House Tuesday takes up legislation that would raise the federal debt limit beyond $3.1 trillion so that the government can pay its bills through more borrowing, a periodic event that many economists find increasingly alarming.

The administration has warned that the government faces the prospect of not being able to pay its bills next month unless the debt ceiling is increased.

But legislation that would boost the debt ceiling by $321 million to $3.4 trillion will not be approved without the usual congressional teeth-gnashing. "No one expects it to just zip through," said one congressional staff member.

The present $3.1 trillion federal debt is the net accumulation of government red ink. Adding to this burden year after year has been the federal budget deficit, which now is projected by the White House at $169 billion for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. To fill the gap, the government borrows billions of dollars by issuing Treasury notes and bonds, running up the federal debt every year.

The federal debt is nothing new, according to "Day of Reckoning," a book by Harvard University economist Benjamin Friedman that warns of the adverse consequences.

In 1790, Treasury Secretary Alexander Hamilton reported a $54 million national debt, most left over from the Revolutionary War. The Civil War pushed the debt to $2 billion. Ten straight budget deficits during the Great Depression pushed it to $43 billion in 1940 and by the end of World War II, the debt was $242 billion.

During the deficit spending of the last decade, the debt has more than tripled.

In 1980, it was $914 billion. It passed the $3 trillion mark for the first time in April and exceeded $3.09 billion in early July. By some estimates the debt will reach $4 trillion by 1993.

At the same time the debt tripled, interest payments on it became the third biggest item in the federal budget, after defense and Social Security. In 1980, interest cost the taxpayers $52.5 billion. But this year, interest will total some $175 billion, a figure that would erase the budget deficit with billions to spare.

'We have become a debtor country.'
— Benjamin Friedman, Harvard University economist, author of "Day of Reckoning"

John Cogan, an economist at the Hoover Institution, a think tank based in Palo Alto, Calif., said the growing federal debt is "the most alarming financial trend that exists today."

Friedman added that the indebtedness is sapping the strength of the American economy because it diverts so many dollars from more productive uses.

"It has caused us to invest in plants, equipment and machinery less than we would have and is one reason why our productivity has been so disappointing," he said. "It also causes the dollar to be overvalued and makes it harder for our businesses to compete. It forces us to borrow massively from abroad. We have become a debtor country."

Friedman and other economists argue that the only way to get the debt under control is to slash the budget deficit, estimated at $160 billion this year, by cutting spending, raising taxes or both.

But Edward Hudgins, an economics specialist at the conservative Heritage Foundation, said leaving the debt untouched would be preferable to raising taxes, a course that both President Bush and congressional Democrats now agree must be a part of a new deficit-reduction plan.

Raising taxes will only make the debt worse, Hudgins said, because it will trigger a recession, throw people out of work and cause even larger budget deficits because of lost tax revenue.

"You have to consider the national debt as opposed to what," he said. "You have to say, 'Is the solution going to be worse than the problem?' Given what George Bush is talking about, I'd rather have the national debt."

The national debt is about to go even higher.

Last November, the Congress voted to raise the debt limit from $2.8 trillion to $3.12 trillion for the fiscal year that ends this Sept. 30.

But, according to the administration, that was not enough to get the government through the fiscal year.

Treasury Undersecretary Robert Glauber warned the House Ways and Means Committee earlier this month that unless the debt limit is raised again, the government will on Aug. 15 default on notes and be unable to pay retirement benefits.

He said the debt ceiling would have to be raised to $3.5 trillion to handle the projected deficit through the end of fiscal 1990.

House Speaker Thomas Foley said Monday that the House would on Tuesday take up legislation that would raise the debt limit to $3.4 trillion through Sept. 30, 1991.

Periodic votes to raise the debt limit have traditionally been difficult because lawmakers have used the opportunity to offer amendments pushing pet projects.

Foley said he hoped the debt limit increase would be made more palatable this time around because of an "attractive amendment" that would remove the $70 billion annual Social Security surplus from budget-deficit calculations under the 1985 Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law.

Congressional aides say the debt limit measure could nonetheless be defeated in the House or later in the Senate. Should that happen, the Democratic leadership would offer a shorter-term bill that would raise the limit by a lesser amount as a stopgap.

But Friedman said the country should "limit the deficits and limit the growth of debt."

Rudolph Penner, former director of the Congressional Budget Office, warned that if no action is taken, interest rates would be forced up even higher than they now are "and there would be no hope" of either raising taxes or cutting spending in an amount sufficient to pay off the rapidly escalating debt.

NATION IN BRIEF

Body found in Monroe rubble

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Investigators found a body in the rubble of a gutted downtown block Monday while looking for clues in a weekend explosion that destroyed at least eight businesses, a fedefal agent said.

The discovery of the unidentified man's body was a surprise because no one had been reported missing following Saturday night's blast, said Agent Jerry Turpen of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

"We don't know what we have," Turpen said after the body was discovered.

The explosion in this city of about 13,000 about 10 miles north of the South Carolina line shattered storefront windows nearly the length of Main Street; six people went to the hospital with cuts from flying glass, officials said. Monroe Public Safety Chief Bobby Kilgore estimated losses at $500,000 to $1 million.

On Monday, about two dozen investigators from the State Bureau of Investigation and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms sifted through debris in the search for the cause of the blast.

A man's cache

Cambridge Police Det. Joe Cozza looks over some of the more than 400 weapons confiscated in a raid Saturday at the home of Adolph Stram in Cambridge, Mass. It is believed to be the largest cache ever discovered in the Boston suburb.

Verdict is mixed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former bodyguard for drug traffickers was convicted Monday of kidnapping and other charges in the kidnap-slaying of a U.S. drug agent in Mexico, but was acquitted of murder.

A U.S. District Court jury found Juan Jose Bernabe Ramirez guilty of kidnapping and racketeering in the 1985 torture killing of Drug Enforcement Administration Agent Enrique "Kiki" Camarena.

The jury also convicted Bernabe, 31, of aiding the escape of Rafael Caro Quintero, a drug lord whose Guadalajara, Mexico, home was where Camarena was tortured and slain.

The government alleges that Caro was among those who interrogated and killed Camarena in revenge for the agent's raids on rich marijuana and cocaine plantations.

According to testimony, Mexican law enforcement officers also aided Caro's dramatic escape from Guadalajara Airport. Caro was recaptured, then convicted in Mexico and is one of 20 people serving sentences there in the complex case.

In addition to the specific charge of murdering Camarena, Bernabe was acquitted of conspiracy to kidnap the agent and of racketeering in the kidnap and murder of Camarena's pilot, Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

Bernabe faces up to life in prison for kidnapping and racketeering and 10 years for the other conviction.

Barr sings, apologizes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roseanne Barr sang again, but this time she had accompaniment from back-up singers.

During a talk show taping Monday afternoon, Barr and husband Tom Arnold stood and sang the national anthem with about 300 members of the studio audience.

Hand over her heart, she laughed and sang softly, accompanied by Arnold, the audience and host Sally Jessy Raphael, whose New York-based syndicated program traveled to Universal Studios to interview the couple.

The hourlong talk show, to be broadcast Wednesday, was devoted entirely to the fracas following Barr's screaming version of "The Star Spangled Banner" delivered last week during a San Diego Padres doubleheader against the Cincinnati Reds.

Barr performance was an insult

In Hollywood it must have seemed like a flash of genius to celebrate Working Women's Night at the San Diego Padres game by having Roseanne Barr, the quintessential television working-class woman, sing the national anthem. It wasn't.

Instead, it was a public relations disaster. If officials at ABC were hoping to find where the limits of acceptability are in American society when it comes to mocking patriotism and national pride, they got a crash course at the game.

Barr's television show has enjoyed No. 1 viewer status during most of the past two seasons and has been renewed for this fall. Her fans apparently liked her characterization while others saw her only as a crude, abrasive, and socially offensive comic. Nevertheless, she created a national uproar by butchering the anthem between games at last Wednesday's double-header.

Not only did she perform what one clever headline writer called the "Barr-Strangled Banner," but she also grabbed her crotch and spat at the end of the song, apparently to imitate a stereotypical ball player.

It didn't leave us — nor many of the fans at the game or watching on television — laughing.

Left with egg all over their faces are the new Padre owners, particularly Tom Werner, whose Hollywood company produces Barr's situation-comedy on ABC. What impact the incident will have on the comic's career remains to be seen.

After the incident, Werner apologized in a speech to the San Diego Rotary Club, and Padres President Dick Freeman issued a statement saying, "In the future we will strive to see that the anthem is presented with the dignity it is due."

We certainly hope so. The entertainer's disrespectful performance of the national anthem illustrates how low American society has sunk if it really takes events such as Barr's outrageous performance or flag-burnings to make a "statement."

Those actions may be protected under the umbrella of the First Amendment, but they are indicative of a decadent society and socially must remain unacceptable.

Although Barr herself apologized later during a hastily called press conference, the fact that fans booed her antics so vociferously indicates that to the American public there are still some violations of good taste they just won't tolerate even from someone who has attained the heights of popularity as a television comedienne.

Maybe there's hope, after all.

JACK ANDERSON

Legislators overuse franking privilege

WASHINGTON — Lee and Rose Epstein of New York City liked the politics of Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., enough to send him a campaign donation. He wasn't their man in Washington. In fact, his district was about as far from the Epsteins as one could get and still be in the continental United States.

Anderson

Now the Epsteins are beginning to wonder if getting on Packwood's mailing list was such a good idea.

Since the Epsteins made their donation, Packwood has inundated them with junk mail sent at taxpayers' expense. And he has hit them up for another campaign contribution.

Lawmakers, including Packwood, will adamantly deny that they use their free congressional mailing or "franking" privileges to campaign. But the attention Packwood has focused on a couple who can't vote for him, but can give him money, shows that politicians are skating close to the edge.

The franking perk allows members of Congress to send reams of mail with a signature instead of a stamp, and the taxpayers pick up the tab. The excuse is that constituents in the hinterlands wouldn't know the straight scoop out of Washington if they didn't get it from their senator or representative.

But the Epsteins aren't Packwood's constituents. And Packwood isn't the only member of Congress to deluge them with franked mail. The Epsteins have contributed money to several members of Congress whose politics they support. They are particularly generous to those who push for strong U.S.-Israeli ties.

The thanks they get come in countless form letters and news reports from lawmakers bragging about their support for Israel, their efforts on behalf of Soviet Jews and their fight against anti-Semitism.

The Epstein's pen pals include Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., (1,800 miles away), Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md. (just 250 miles down the road) and Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. (practically a neighbor).

Lee Epstein likes their politics, but not their junk mail. He says their correspondence with him is "an abuse of the government frank." Some use the freebie letters to pat themselves on the back, and then comes the follow-up letter from the lawmaker's campaign machine — that one with a stamp.

Packwood's office told our associate Scott Sleek that the senator's congressional staff and his campaign staff are separate operations, and that the congressional staff doesn't make a habit of sending franked constituent mail to out-of-state contributors. They said that if someone asks to be kept informed on an issue that person would go on Packwood's mailing list. But the Epsteins didn't ask.

The franking privilege masquerades as a communications tool, but it is a self-serving freebie that members of Congress manipulate for their re-election campaigns. Meanwhile the challengers, who are often less well known, must buy stamps to tell their stories to the voters.

Congress is expected this year to top the 1988 record spending spree of $77 million on taxpayer financed mass mailings. The record wasn't broken in 1989, but that wasn't an election year.

A PLACE FOR JESSE — Jesse Jackson is once again causing some nail biting in the Democratic Party. Party leaders don't want him to make trouble in the 1992 presidential election. They had planned to write off 1992 as a rout for George Bush, but Bush is starting to look more vulnerable because of the savings and loan scandal. Jackson wants to be the first "shadow senator" from Washington, D.C. — the non-voting post with the primary mission of making the District of Columbia a state. He is already asking for an office on Capitol Hill. But Democratic leaders in Congress may deny him an office. They don't want Jackson to be that visible.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

People no longer respect leaders

Ann Richards' Texas gubernatorial campaign feigns outrage at Clayton Williams' suggestion that citizens might one day decide to "march on the government."

Williams, Richards' Republican opponent, was joshing in East Texas about the need to protect the right to bear arms. He brought down upon himself a fierce scolding from Richards' people, who found unamusing his clear disdain for the democratic process, his "bizarre" choice of words, and so on...

Murchison

The truth is: "Marching on the government" is a notion with broader appeal than either candidate possibly fathoms.

This is odd, in one sense. Alienation from government grows even as opportunities for participation in government increase. Everybody votes who wants to, and candidates beseech us, on a practically non-stop basis, for dollars and votes.

It is nonetheless among the striking features of modern life that people in general no longer respect government in general.

An anarchistic streak, neither particularly liberal nor particularly conservative, grows in the American character. Voting turnout is in sharp decline.

The root of the problem is — well, what? I offer an impertinent suggestion: We have put our trust in princes, contrary to the psalmist's advice, and, boy, have the princes let us down!

Government, in the late 20th century, has been woefully oversold as a good thing, chiefly by those involved in government, or hopeful of becoming involved in it. Government is large and powerful, and so the serpent's sibilant whisper comes: Let us use government to do great things; to spread prosperity, justice, peace, brotherhood, and happiness.

To say the government could have prevented all this is to say too much. To say that government contributed to much of it is to get nearer the truth.

We learned well enough during the '60s and '70s that government can't spend us into happiness. What we should have learned as well is that the only institutions that make life bearable are the non-governmental ones: churches, families, clubs, private charities; not to mention the purely informal, even accidental, groupings like neighborhoods and domino foursomes.

You will have observed how happy are today's Americans, whose national government alone costs them more than a trillion dollars a year!

In fact, the economy is chugging along tolerably well. Yet the papers are full of sad stories. The murder rate in most big cities is accelerating. Families are in disarray. And drugs are destroying inner-city blacks. Test scores in public schools are dismal. This summer's hit films are mostly about carnage.

The main job for civilized men and women in the '90s, indeed, in the new century, is to rebuild the institutions we have lately allowed to fall into ruin or decay; to turn our backs, and our hopes, away from princes, and to labor, not to save the world, but to save the neighborhood, the family, the parish church, the domino game.

If doing all this requires marching on the government, fine. There's nothing like a little marching to get the blood circulating, is there?

CHARLEY REESE

Soviets maneuvering to destroy NATO

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has made a peculiar bargain with the Soviet Union. He has agreed that a unified Germany will reduce its army, forgo weapons necessary for modern war, and pay the cost for the Soviet Union's army to occupy his country.

Reese

This, of course, reveals that retaining membership in NATO is nothing more than a charade to save face. The NATO Gorbachev will allow Germany to be a member of will be a toothless, paper alliance.

Lest we get bamboozled by these semantic maneuvers, let's go back to basics. The North Atlantic Treaty Alliance is a military, not a political or economic alliance. It was created and maintained solely to combat a Soviet invasion of Western Europe.

President Bush, whose intellect apparently rivals that of Warren Harding, recently made a big deal of NATO's announcing that it no longer viewed the Soviet Union as an enemy and that it was not a threat to the Soviet Union.

This was a strikingly absurd statement on two counts. One, if the Soviet Union is no longer an enemy, there is no need whatsoever for NATO to continue to exist. Two, no one in the Soviet Union and no one in the West knowledgeable about military affairs ever for one moment viewed NATO as a threat to the Soviet Union. For 30 years the debate has been about NATO weakness. Its forces have never been adequate for, configured for, or trained for an offensive operation against the Soviet Union. For the last 10 years, NATO commanders themselves have publicly admitted NATO forces could last no more than a few weeks against a Soviet offensive before nuclear weapons would have to be employed.

You won't find in Eastern Europe any defenses against a western invasion. All you will find are communist forces equipped for and trained for an offensive against the West.

Therefore this nonsense about reassuring the Soviet Union of our peaceful intentions is nothing more than barnyard refuse designed to cover up the truth. The truth is that the Soviets with brilliant strategic maneuvering are destroying NATO and Bush doesn't know how to stop them. The Soviets finally produced leaders smart enough to figure out that when it comes to Lady Europe, seduction works better than rape.

The end result will be the same. Europe and the Soviet Union will be in bed. The United States will be standing alone.

We can stand alone provided we elect a Congress that will modernize and strengthen our strategic nuclear forces, the Air Force, and the Navy. The present Congress will not do it, and without strong strategic nuclear forces, a powerful Air Force and Navy, the U.S., without allies, will be the ripe plum Lenin described.

Lenin's statement of strategy was that communism would secure the Euro-Asian landmass, isolate the United States, and then it would fall into their hands.

Nothing Gorbachev has done indicates to me that the Soviets have deviated from that strategic goal one inch. All that has changed are tactics.

I recognize naturally that this is a minority opinion. Many conservatives are eager to proclaim victory in the Cold War in order to claim credit on behalf of Ronald Reagan. In fact, however, Reagan ran out of steam and never completed the modernization of our strategic forces. The Soviets have two mobile missile systems deployed. The U.S. is still debating the subject. And Reagan fell for Gorbachev's new ploy as easily as a country bumpkin loses his money in New York City.

Many liberals are eager to proclaim victory in the Cold War because they've never wanted to spend money on defense anyway and because being socialists themselves, they've never thought the Soviets guilty of anything except bad manners and an occasional excess.

Future events will settle the matter. Certainly, I hope and pray I'm 100 percent wrong. If the Soviet Union turns out to be our peace-loving brothers, I'll buy the crow and we'll all have a party while I dine on it. In the meantime, I will plan on the coming disaster.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Gadgets that make life easier aren't easy

A great many Americans are severely impaired when it comes to operating modern day gadgets.

I've read that 68 million American households have VCRs but 80 percent have no idea how to operate them.

Grizzard

I'm afraid I fall into this category. I have two VCRs. One sits on the top of my bedroom television. I have another on top of my living room television.

A friend came over and hooked them up. Afterwards, he showed me how to set the timer and insert the tapes and all that.

For a fleeting moment I thought I had it. I set the timer to tape a movie the following afternoon so I could watch it in the evening.

But I must have put the tape in backwards. All I got was a lot of black, squiggly lines on a field of fuzzy gray. Stewart Granger was in there somewhere but I couldn't find him.

I was afraid to use either of my VCRs after that. Others go to video stores, rent movies and then bring them home and enjoy them on their VCRs.

I use mine for something to set house plants on.

I believe God is responsible for the fact I am mechanically impaired.

The day before I was born he was telling the angel in charge what sort of personal traits to give me.

"OK," God began, "Grizzard. Let's see. Give him skinny legs, poor eyesight, but allow him to still have his hair into his 40s.

"One other thing. Don't give him the ability to operate any thing more complicated than a comb."

Unfortunately, a lot of people aren't smart enough to operate the gadgets that are supposed to make our lives easier.

Here are some other things I can't do:

■ Remember to put the plastic top back on my coffee pot, so the coffee will float into it from the automatic coffee maker.

What happens in that case is that coffee stays in the filter holder and then runs out and makes a mess. I would use instant coffee, but I don't know how to turn on my stove to boil water.

■ Operate my electric toothbrush. I put toothpaste on it and turn it on and it begins to vibrate violently and slings all the toothpaste onto my bathroom mirror.

■ Successfully remove a cork from a wine bottle by using a corkscrew. I now buy my wine in cans. Are you supposed to sniff the pop tops?

■ Open a child-proof container of aspirin.

■ Set a digital alarm clock.

■ Remember how to hold dental floss correctly.

■ Operate any sort of typing mechanism you have to plug in.

■ Turn on a Jacuzzi.

■ Remove the top of a can of dog food with my electric can opener. Luckily black Labs can eat right through a can.

■ Operate the fax in my office at home, the one I got for Christmas when what I really wanted was some new 33-rpm Big Band records for my Victrola.

■ Dance the lambada.

But I still have my hair and I probably will be able to keep it as long as I never try to dry it in my microwave again.

Prime minister reports accord achieved in Trinidad

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Prime Minister Arthur N.R. Robinson and the chief negotiator for Moslem extremists said Monday they reached agreement to end a 4-day-old hostage siege in this Caribbean island off Venezuela.

Robinson, other Cabinet ministers and lawmakers are among 41 hostages reported held by black Moslem extremists who stormed the Parliament building and the government television station on Friday. Robinson suffered gunshot wounds in both feet.

Selwyn Richardson, the justice and national security minister who spoke by telephone from inside Parliament, said the agreement called for Robinson's immediate resignation with elections to be held within 90 days.

Richardson said the government granted amnesty to rebel leader Abu Bakr and the Moslem radicals involved in the insurgency, which has left at least nine people dead and led to looting on this island-nation of 1.3 million residents.

The official said, however, that the agreement was contingent "upon the safe return of all members of Parliament" now held hostage.

It was unclear when the hostage release would occur.

The announcement came hours after government and military spokesmen said negotiations with the radical Moslem group had collapsed.

Earlier Monday, security forces exchanged gunfire with the rebels at both the parliament building and the state-run television station, the two buildings were hostages were being held.

Speaking from inside Parliament late Monday, Robinson said the agreement was reached after "very difficult bargaining."

The prime minister said he instructed Col. Joe Theodore, head of the Trinidad and Tobago Defense Force, to "make necessary arrangements for the evacuation (of hostages and rebels) as soon as possible."

Chief rebel negotiator Bilal Abdullah, speaking next on the telephone, said: "I wish to totally corroborate what Prime Minister Robinson has just said."

The rebels claim Robinson's government is corrupt and responsible for widespread poverty in this once oil-rich country. They claimed on Saturday to have wired Robinson with explosives and threatened to blow him up if a rescue attempt was made.

Government spokesman Gregory Shaw said Robinson was shot in both feet and Richardson was shot in one leg when rebels stormed Parliament.

Army spokesman Maj. Dave Williams reported that the Moslems were armed with AK-47 assault rifles, pistols and grenades.

In the first official casualty count, Williams said at least nine people had died in the fighting since Friday. He said Anglican negotiator Knolly Clarke told him additional bodies were inside the parliament building, but it was not known how many.

The two sides nearly reached agreement earlier Monday but a government official said negotiations stalled over conditions for releasing the hostages, who include eight Cabinet ministers.

Shaw said 41 hostages were being held and about 100 rebels were involved in the siege.

He said 16 hostages, including the government ministers, were being held in the parliament building. The remaining 25 hostages are all employees of the government TV station, he said.

Among the dead were six rebels, two police officers and one civilian, Williams said. Six rebels were known to be wounded. Williams said three soldiers were wounded.

The State Department said Monday in Washington there are no plans for U.S. military intervention in Trinidad. Deputy spokesman Richard Boucher refused comment on reports of U.S. military maneuvers in the area, but suggested a military solution was ruled out.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Man tried suicide days before rescue

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A man rescued Monday 14 days after an earthquake buried him in the basement of a luxury hotel said that while trapped in the darkness he often wished he were dead and even tried to kill himself.

Pedrito Dy, a cook and part-time fitness instructor, was the third survivor pulled since Friday from the ruins of the Hyatt Hotel in the northern resort of Baguio. He is one of the longest survivors of an earthquake on record.

Dy, 27, was flown to Manila for medical treatment. One doctor, Raul Morena, said Dy's athletic build protected him from serious injury in the July 16 quake that killed about 1,600 people. Doctors said he suffered only from dehydration and low blood sugar, which caused disorientation.

Speaking from his hospital bed, Dy said that while trapped he lay on his back beneath a cushion, which protected him from the debris that shifted repeatedly in aftershocks.

He said he survived by drinking urine and rainwater.

The July 16 earthquake measured 7.7 on the Richter scale. Besides the 1,653 people killed, 1,000 are missing and presumed dead, 3,000 were seriously injured and 110,000 were homeless.

Impasse reported

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Spanish diplomat said Monday there is no solution in sight to a conflict with Cuban authorities over 18 asylum-seekers at the Spanish Embassy in Havana, the Notimex news agency reported.

The Mexican government agency quoted Fidel Sandagorta, first-secretary at the embassy, as saying there was no indication anything could lead to a quick end to the impasse, which has strained relations between Spain and its former colony, Cuba.

The refugees at the Spanish Embassy are the last remaining of dozens who sought asylum in Swiss, Czechoslovak, Spanish and Italian missions starting July 9.

On Saturday, four Cubans left the Italian ambassador's residence in Havana after President Fidel Castro promised not to prosecute refugees who fled.

Flood toll reaches 65

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Fourteen people drowned in flood waters Sunday, raising the death toll to 65 in a month of flooding that has also left 2 million homeless, officials said Monday.

Nine of the weekend casualties were children, relief officials said.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 25 of Bangladesh's 64 districts have been inundated by monsoon rains and overflowing rivers.

Brazilian dam bursts

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Torrential rain burst a dam and caused dozens of homes to collapse in northeastern Brazil, killing at least 27 people, fire officials said Monday.

Ten members of one family were buried alive when a mudslide hit their house on Sunday, fire department Maj. Neyff Souza said by telephone.

"So far, we know of 24 victims buried under mud or rubble and three who drowned," Souza said.

Bomb kills British lawmaker

■ Ian Gow, who knew his name was on an Irish Republican Army assassination "target" list, was a personal friend of and former secretary to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press Writer

HANKHAM, England — A bomb hidden under a car exploded Monday, killing a Conservative Party lawmaker and confidante of the prime minister who was on an Irish Republican Army assassination list, police said.

Ian Gow, chairman of the Northern Ireland committee in the House of Commons, died of injuries minutes after turning the ignition key in his car outside his house, authorities said.

Scotland Yard's chief anti-terrorist officer, George Churchill-Coleman, said the attack appeared to be the work of the IRA. No one else was injured, and no one immediately claimed responsibility.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher viewed the car, with its roof on the driver's side peeled back and all the glass blown out.

"I could talk to him like nobody else," she said of Gow after visiting his wife.

GOW, 53, HAD been warned he was on a list of 100 lawmakers, judges and civil servants found in an IRA bomb factory in south London in December 1988, Churchill-Coleman said.

Friends and neighbors in Hankham, on England's southeast coast, said Gow took few precautions. "It would be easy for terrorists to get him," said Jane Birch, a neighbor.

It appeared that a device packing about five pounds of explosives was placed under the driver's seat, set to go off when the ignition was turned on, Churchill-Coleman said.

"My impression is that it was some sort of tilt switch. Once you turn it on, it explodes immediately," he said.

Gow was Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's parliamentary private secretary from 1979 to 1983. He was also a close family friend and political ally to whom she turned for advice in moments of difficulty.

GOW RESIGNED from her government in 1985 to protest the Anglo-Irish Agreement which guaranteed Ireland a say in the province's affairs. He saw the accord as undermining British authority in Northern Ireland.

Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey and Britain's Roman Catholic Cardinal Basil Hume joined politicians in condemning the attack, the fourth slaying of a British lawmaker since sectarian violence broke out in Northern Ireland in 1969.

The IRA has claimed responsibility for a series of bombings in England, including one on May 16 that killed Sgt. Charles Chapman at a British army recruiting office.

Other recent targets have included London's Stock Exchange, the Carlton Club, a traditional Conservative Party watering hole, the Stock exchange and a Royal Air Force base in northwest London.

In Washington, the State Department condemned the killing and offered condolences to Gow's family.

Gow's killers were "plain, common murderers," Mrs. Thatcher said after spending nearly an hour with Gow's wife, Jane, at the couple's home near Eastbourne, 60 miles southeast of London.

MRS. THATCHER went to a special private service for Gow.

She said the Gows and their two sons spent some Christmases with the Thatchers and that the families were close.

The prime minister, who narrowly escaped an IRA bombing that killed five at a hotel in Brighton during a Conservative Party meeting in October 1984, said public officials should take all precautions suggested by Scotland Yard.

"Most (members of parliament) want to lead an open life, but I must renew the plea in view of what happened here in a quiet village — everyone must have regard for their own stafety and the safety of their staff and family," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Police scoured the area trying to discover whether the bombers stayed in the locale before the attack.

NEARLY A DOZEN bouquets of flowers were placed near the gate to the drive. The large brick house stands behind a high wall across the street from a primary school, closed for summer vacation.

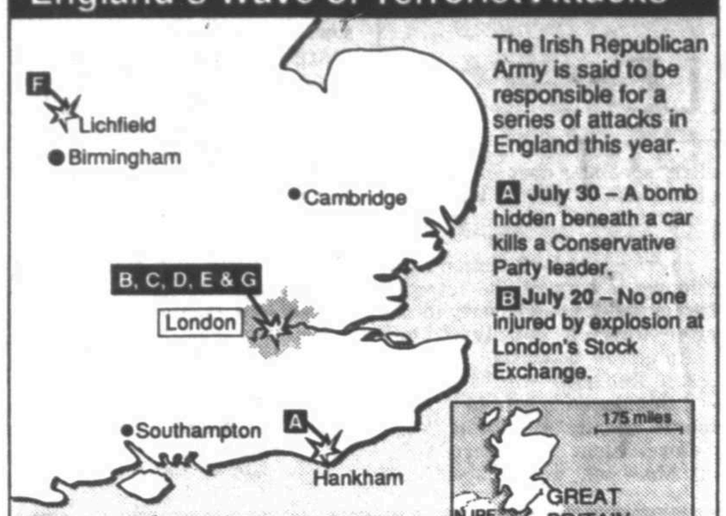

"I think if Ian had been here he would have been the first to say, as he did on countless other occasions when such atrocities occurred, we should not give in to intimidation," said Conservative lawmaker Charles Wardle. "It is vitally important that nothing should change people's minds — no atrocity, no murder, no bullying."

Neil Kinnock, leader of the opposition Labor Party, called the slaying "a terrible atrocity against a man whose only offense was to speak his mind."

Last Tuesday, after an IRA bomb killed three police officers and a nun in Northern Ireland, Gow expressed his anger at IRA tactics.

"These murders are as odious as they are f[illegible]e," he said. "Once again, wives have been turned into widows and children into orphans, and for what purpose?"

England's Wave of Terrorist Attacks

The Irish Republican Army is said to be responsible for a series of attacks in England this year.

C June 25 – Bomb at the Carlton Club in London severely injures two men, and nearly 20 other people suffer less serious injuries.

D June 21 – Bomb destroys a small building at a Royal Air Force base at Stansmore, northwest London. No injuries.

F June 1 – British army Pvt. William Davies is shot to death at Lichfield railway station.

G May 16 – Sgt. Charles Chapman is killed by a bomb outside a British army recruiting office in Wembley, north London.

Worker electrocuted in channel tunnel

LONDON (AP) — A worker on the British side of the Channel Tunnel being bored between England and France was electrocuted, police said. His was the ninth death on the project.

Police said Charles McCourt, 45, died Sunday night, but they gave no further details.

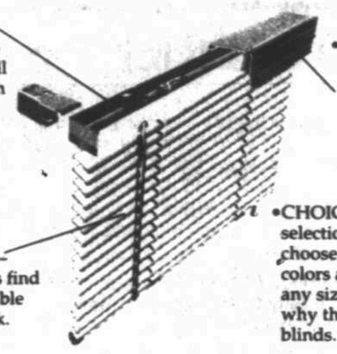

The death comes less than three weeks after Transmanche Link, the Anglo-French construction consortium of 10 companies building the tunnel, pledged immediate action to improve safety standards. The move came after Britain's Health and Safety Executive demanded tighter safety controls.

There have been seven deaths on the project's British side and two on the French side as workers dig the 31-mile tunnel.

Workers are boring three tunnels through the channel, two for trains and a smaller maintenance tunnel. They are expected to break through on a first tunnel in November.

Rod Mayberry has taken a shine to meteorology as a result of his internship with the National Weather Service in Midland. His interest in weather and forecasting could land him a scholarship after he finishes at Midland High.

NWS volunteer says he might make the weather a career

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The 16-year-old Midland High School junior knew he liked math, but this realization had precipitated no career plans.

But after nine months of volunteering at the National Weather Service office at Midland International Airport, Rod Mayberry believes he has divined his destiny.

"I'd like to work for the weather service, but I'm not sure what I'd like to specialize in," he said. "I'd kind of like to forecast, I think. But there's a lot of people that want to forecast, so I might go into something different."

Meteorology is not high on the list of career choices among high school students these days, but Rod said his time at the weather service has piqued his interest in atmospheric science.

"(I like) learning how the weather works and why things happen the way they do — why thunderstorms happen and stuff like that," he said. "It gets pretty busy around here when they put out warnings and stuff and it's kind of exciting to watch and be a part of."

Rod, who suffers from cerebral palsey, said he decided to participate in the weather service's Student Volunteer Service Program program after receiving a call from John V. Wright, meteorologist-in-charge.

"He said it would be a golden opportunity if I was interested in meteorology," said Rod, who spends about four hours per week at the weather service office.

Wright said he got in touch with Rod through the Midland Cerebral Palsey Center. A cerebral palsey victim himself, Wright said he travels the state letting disabled people know about weather service career opportunities.

"I did go out to the CP center and I simply asked if they knew of anybody out there interested in being a volunteer," he said. "I figured, of all the handicaps, since I know that one, I can relate to these people. But I'm not going to restrict myself to that."

Wright said the volunteer program is open to any "motivated" high school student, but applicants have been scarce.

He said Rod has been the only high school volunteer at the weather service office since Wright came to Midland more than a year ago.

Unpaid volunteers who graduate from high school can qualify to become paid weather service summer aides, Wright said.

Fire department alerted to 79 home fires so far this year

■ Local fire department officials list precautions to reduce risk of home fires and fire-related injuries.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The average household can expect about two fires serious enough to alert the fire department in the average individual's lifetime, according to the National Fire Prevention Association (NFPA).

In the city and county of Midland, the Midland Fire Department was alerted to 79 residential and mobile home fires in the first six months of 1990. As a result of those fires, two people died and eight sustained injuries.

Despite statistics, some precautions can be taken to help reduce the risk of home fires and fire-related injuries, local fire officials said.

According to the NFPA, heating equipment fires are the number one cause of fires in the nation.

In Midland though, no one type of home fire can be pinned down as more prevalent than others, Lon Dominguez, assistant fire marshall said.

"We have a variety from children playing with matches to kitchen fires ... ," Dominguez said.

But one thing can be attributed to most home fires, Dominguez said.

"Most of the fires we are called to are caused by carelessness or lack of attentiveness ... people getting in a hurry and not taking time to prevent a fire," he said. One example, Dominguez said, is leaving the kitchen with the stove on to answer the telephone.

Cooking appliances are the number one cause of home fire injuries in the United States, according to the NFPA.

Some recomendations to avoid kitchen fires and injury include: don't wear clothing with big sleeves that dangle while cooking, turn pot handles away from yourself, and just be careful and take your time, Dominguez said.

In the case of a grease fire in a cooking pan do not carry the pan outside — which may lead to injury. Cover the pan with a lid smothering the fire and turn the stove off.

One of the best defenses against a home fire is a smoke detector, Dominiguez said. According to the NFPA, a smoke detector in the home reduces the chances of dying in a home fire in half.

"We would be more than happy to go out and recommend to people where (the best place is to) put their fire detectors," Dominguez said.

"The best defense (though) is to teach the family to get out of the home and where to meet in case of an emergency ... have a plan," Dominguez said, adding that once out of a burning home, stay out.

According to Midland Deputy Fire Chief Dean Williams, the same escape plan should be followed even when a fire is suspected. Then call the fire department.

"Over 200 items in a normal house give off toxic fumes when heated to ignition tempertures," Williams said. Therefore inhaling fumes in a house that is not overcome in flames may be just as fatal.

"It you suspect it and it's real to you it's real to us," Williams said.

The following is a list of other fire safety tips:

Fire ant extermination to be demonstrated

Staff Report

The Texas Department of Agriculture will hold a free public demonstration on the safe extermination of the Red Imported fire ant at 5 p.m. Tuesday on the front lawn of the Ector County Coliseum.

The Red Imported fire ant has made its presence known in northern Midland and Ector counties with its fiery bites, but it is mainly entrenched in 135 east Texas counties, according to Texas Department of Agriculture district director Jo Anne Noble.

Getting rid of the tenacious pests has been as difficult as coping with them because of the toxicity of the chemicals used against them. But now the Texas Department of Agriculture has developed a more environmentally sensitive regimen.

Noble advised applying the growth-regulator fenoxycarb, a relatively non-toxic chemical that acts as birth control for the queen ants, to the ant mound. After the treatment, worker ants go through their normal life cycles and die a natural death. Their numbers are not replaced by new ants because the new queen ants are sterile.

The treatment results in a minimum 90 percent kill rate.

One to 1½ pounds of fenoxycarb should be applied to each acre when the ground is dry, with no morning dew, sprinkler system activation or rain expected in the next few hours. The ground temperature should be between 70 and 95 degrees. The application should be repeated each year.

For more fire ant erradication tips, call the local Texas Department of Agriculture office in Odessa at 337-0491.

Law enforcers receive new aerostat for Marfa

MARFA (AP) — A helium balloon was shipped to this West Texas town, replacing one that was destroyed by high winds in April.

The balloon arrived Thursday, site manager Gary Metzger said Monday.

The radar-equipped balloon and others like it stationed around the nation are considered the backbone of the nation's "war on drugs." The radar is designed to detect low-flying drug-smuggling aircraft that often evades conventional radar.

Metzer declined to say when he expected the balloon to be inflated. The two U.S. Customs spokesmen familiar with the balloon's operations and authorized to speak to the media were out of their offices Monday.

The Marfa aerostat, manufactured by General Electric Government Services, has been grounded since last December, when another aerostat afloat over Eagle Pass, Texas floated away. GE said the design of the balloon's tether, which was supposed to keep the balloon from floating away, was flawed.

Ellis County educators create program about SSC

■ The SSC curriculum ranges from what the collider is to electricity and superconductivity.

Associated Press

WAXAHACHIE — A pilot program to teach schoolchildren about the superconducting super collider is being expanded this fall to include 10,000 students in Ellis County's 10 school districts.

A Fort Worth high school also will use the collider curriculum, starting in kindergarten through fifth grade and eventually moving into high schools.

"The super collider is going to make a big change in these students' lives," said Esther Stolley, who teaches fourth grade at Marvin Elementary School in Waxahachie.

"By the time they get it put in the ground, some of these kids are going to be getting out of high school. It's going to change their community and their school," she said.

The $8 billion collider, which is expected to reveal new information about the nature of matter and the origins of the universe, would hurl beams of protons toward each other inside a 54-mile oval tunnel to be built in Ellis County, south of Dallas.

One contraption used in the pilot program was Ms. Stolley's model collider, fashioned from plastic tubes, metal ball-bearings and magnets.

Her kindergarten students crashed the ball bearings together, simulating the collision of protons that would occur in the collider.

"They liked playing with it," Ms. Stolley said. "I had some kids who were really interested in it and could tell you a lot about it."

Collider and school officials met last year to draft a program for youngsters about the giant physics project. But there were no models for such a curriculum, forcing Ellis County educators to write one from scratch.

The job wasn't easy.

"We are not rocket scientists," said Diane Smith, a fifth grade teacher at Waxahachie's North Side Elementary School. "Trying to put it on their (students) level is very difficult. We had to relate it to something they knew or experienced."

Teachers even had kindergarteners draw an oval in the sand to show the shape of the tunnel.

Sheryl Carter, a fourth grade teacher at Midlothian's J.R. Irvin Elementary School, said planning the curriculum was intimidating.

"I'm not a physicist so I felt limited in my knowledge about the collider," Mrs. Carter said.

Last summer, after reading everything she could about it, Mrs. Carter joined teachers from Midlothian, Waxahachie and Ennis school districts and outlined the pilot program.

Last spring, two teachers each in kindergarten through fifth grade in three districts taught the curriculum.

"The kids were just knocked out about it," Mrs. Carter said. "They just loved it."

Gary Don Dreyer, a fourth grader at Irvin, said he didn't know anything about the collider until the course began.

DEATHS

Gladys Cleveland

LAMESA — Services for Gladys Maye Cleveland, 76, were at 2 p.m. Monday at Northside Baptist Church with the Revs. Cecil Foster and Ronnie Marley officiating. Burial followed at Lamesa Memorial Park.

Mrs. Cleveland died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born Oct. 14, 1913, in Wortham. She married H.R. Whisenhunt Sr., in 1928 in Levelland, and married Ernest Cleveland in 1948 in Big Spring. Both preceded her in death.

She moved to Lamesa in 1947 from Levelland, and then to Seminole. There she was the owner of Jo's Restaurant from 1963-68, and then moved back to Lamesa in 1968.

She was a member of Northside Baptist Church for 22 years.

She was preceded in death by a sister, Loretta Henig.

Survivors include: five sons, Raymond Whisenhunt of Denver City, Rayford Whisenhunt of Roswell, N.M., Ira C. Cleveland of Bakersfield, Calif., Arley Cleveland of Midland, and Wilbur Cleveland of Lake Kiowa; two daughters, Lynda (Graham) Riggan of Lamesa, and Lina Ruth Long of Lovington, N.M.; two sisters, Lucille Mooney of Rowlett, and Maxine Shipley of Garland; 20 grandchildren, and several great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

James Stahlbaum

Services for James Stahlbaum, 64, are set for 2 p.m. Thursday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at a local hospital.

He was born July 1, 1926, in Kentville, Calif., and spent his early life in Marin County, Calif. He served in the U.S. Navy in the South Pacific before attending San Francisco College then Ecol Deltoteliere in Lausanne, Switzerland.

He began his career in hotel management and worked in a number of hotels in California, including the Sheraton Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Before moving to Midland in 1978 he worked in San Antonio and Dallas.

He worked at the Sheraton, Ramada and several other inns which he managed. He was officer of both the Midland and Texas Hotel Association. He was also a member of the Confederate Air Force.

His survivors include his son, Jim S. Stahlbaum of Fair Oaks, Calif.; one daughter, Anne Katrin Stahlbaum of Euless; and one brother, Thomas Stahlbaum of Glenn Ellen, Calif.

Leonard Mills

Services for Leonard E. Mills are set for 3 p.m. Tuesday at First Baptist Church with the Rev. Jim Denison, pastor, and Dennis Burris, chaplain of the Dallas Fire Department and Texas State Association of Firefighters, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Jerry Koonce, Harold Herring, Chip Balzer, Larry Stewart, Ed Parks, Billy Young, Reginald Rankin, Jimmy Kniffen, Mark Fields, and Russell Brooks. Honorary pallbearers are all past and present members of the Midland Fire Department.

Dorothy Sims

Services were Monday in Grove, Okla.

Survivors include: her husband, Gerald Sims of Bartlesville, Okla.; two daughters, Mary Lou Walker of Gallup, N.M. and Carol Newman of Grove, Okla.; 11 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Vernon Brown

Willie Noble

Services are pending with Baker-Jackson Funeral Home.

$850,000 bid not accepted for emerald

HOUSTON (AP) — A plum-sized emerald valued at millions of dollars remained unsold Monday night after its owner called the highest bid of $850,000 unacceptable and removed it from an auction.

Touted as the world's finest, the 83.1-carat gem went on the auction block at the Ritz-Carlton Houston. But the stone was removed from the auction "with reserve" after the highest bid received fell short of hopes.

"That (bid) was not acceptable," said Rob Plumer.

Nicknamed "Denise" after the fiancee of the Los Angeles owner, the emerald was the main attraction of a sale that featured hundreds of other gemstones and Soviet artwork.

The sale, estimated to bring $10 million, began Sunday and continued at 7 p.m. Monday.

Plumer, who declined to describe his connection with the gem other than to say "it's part of the family," said the owner would consider whether to offer it for sale at a later date.

"We had mixed feelings about selling it anyway. We really don't know now," he said. "We love good art. It is art and is the prime example of the only one in the world.

"When you have the only one in the world, it is hard to give it up."

He said the gem was valued at more than $3 million. He said the minimum acceptable bid for the gem would have been $1.5 million.

In an auction "with reserve," owners retain the right to remove items from sale if bids are deemed insufficient.

A last-minute phone-in bid was received for the stone, but its amount was not disclosed.

"The family will re-evaluate it and decide whether to keep it or put it up for sale again," said Plumer.

The emerald was retrieved from the famous Muzo Mine in Colombia, considered the finest emerald mine in the world, said Sandy Reid, executive vice president of Greystone Galleries of Toronto.

It is "the largest ever gotten out of the mine," said Ms. Reid.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Store robberies

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two aggravated robberies of convenience stores occurred early Monday morning and another Sunday night, police said.

About 10:40 p.m. Sunday, a Hispanic man, with a towel cut in strips wrapped around his head, entered the EZ Mart, 1607 W. County Road. Armed with a three-inch bladed knife, the suspect ordered the clerk, Tracey L. Paul, 19, to lay on the floor and then demanded money from the cash register.

Paul complied and was ordered to lay on the floor again. The robber then fled with an undetermined amount of cash and two packs of cigarettes.

In a second incident, the 7-Eleven store, at West 42nd Street and Golder Avenue, was robbed about 1:15 a.m. Monday, according to police reports.

A Hispanic male, also armed with a knife with a blade about 3 inches long, is said to have entered the store, grabbed the clerk, Elivina S. Telles, 48, on the shoulder and demanded money. After the clerk complied, the suspect fled with an undetermined amount of cash.

According to police, Telles said the robber was wearing a cloth wrapped around his face to apparently conceal his identity.

In the third incident, another 7-Eleven store was robbed. According to reports a man ran into the store, armed with a knife and demanded money. The clerk, Dale R. Coon, 29, opened the register and put the money on the counter.

The robber then insisted that Coon put the money in a bag which he did, and then forced the clerk to the drink cooler where he demanded and took a 12-pack of beer before fleeing.

The suspects in all three cases were similarly described as a Hispanic male, in his late 20s, between 5 feet 9 inches and 6 feet 3 inches tall, about 150 to 175 pounds, and shoulder-length or ear-length black hair and brown eyes.

Sexual assaults

ODESSA — Police are investigating two separate aggravated sexual assaults that occurred over the weekend, officials said.

In the first incident, a 16-year-old girl reported to police about 3:10 p.m. Sunday that she had been raped by two men Saturday between 10 and 11 p.m.

The victim was reportedly in the parking lot of the 7-Eleven, 1231 Crane Ave., when she was approached by the suspects, who forced her in their vehicle. She was then driven to the west side of Ector Junior High School, at Crane Avenue and Clements Street, where she was raped.

According to the victim, one of the men threatened her with a knife prior to the assault. He was described as a Hispanic, about 19 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, 180 pounds with shoulder-length black hair.

The other suspect, who reportedly had a handgun tucked in the waist of his pants, was described as Hispanic, about 18 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 160 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

The vehicle, driven by the second suspect, was described as a dark brown four-door Ford.

The victim said she did not report the incident until Sunday because she was afraid.

In the second incident, a 32-year-old woman reported an aggravated sexual assault that occurred about 1 a.m. Sunday in the 1300 block of E. 7th Street.

According to the victim, the suspect, who she was aquainted with, pulled a handgun on her when they were in a car together in an apartment complex parking lot and made sexual demands.

The assault was interupted when police and residents scared the suspect away after hearing shouts from the victim.

The suspect was described as a white male, 23 years old, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, 180 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes. The suspect is not in custody and the case is under investigation, police said.

Drug bust

ODESSA — Four people are in Ector County Jail and two more arrests are expected in connection with a Permian Basin Task Force undercover narcotics bust Monday, task force officials said.

After a week-long investigation agents confiscated 100 pounds of marijuana and $64,000 in cash from four people arrested about 6 p.m. on State Highway 385 south of Odessa, said Tom Finley, task force commander.

The bust was made as the drug deal was in progress, Finley said, adding that the street value of the marijuana is about $240,000. In addition, three vehicles were impounded, he said.

SSC: Students will be learning about super collider

(From 1B)

Now, he talks about protons and atoms, and said he also learned that "protons would be traveling very fast" in the oval tunnel. But he said he wasn't sure whether he wanted to work on the collider when he grew up.

The curriculum will be taught in seven parts. Students begin by learning what the collider is and end the course by learning about electricity and superconductivity.

The program will be expanded to the sixth, seventh and eighth grades next year.

"After eight years of this, I would hope that some kids that are really interested in science begin to look seriously at a career in science," said Dian Cooper, elementary curriculum director for the Waxahachie Independent School District.

FIRES: Blazes blamed on carelessness

(From 1B)

■ Don't store flammable liquids inside of the home. Do not store such items in the garage if the water heater — which may ignite fumes — is located there. A separate storage area is preferable.

■ Teach children if they need help as in the case of fire or other emergencies to dial emergency 911.

■ Tell children about fire prevention at a young age so it will stay with them their entire lives. Children should be taught to "stop, drop and roll" in cases of catching fire.

■ Burns should be cooled with room temperture water — not hot or cold.

■ Homes should be armed with a fire extinguisher, preferably two — one in the kitchen area and one near heating units. A extinguisher with a UL rating of A-B-C is recommended. ("A" rating is for wood, paper and cloth fires; "B" is for flammable liquids; and "C" is for electrical fires.)

■ Be aware of possible fire hazards.

NWS: Student enjoys weather

(From 1B)

"That can cover almost their entire college tuition," he said.

Rod said he will continue to volunteer at the weather service until his graduation in two years. Then, he plans to study meteorology at Texas A&M University.

"When I get there, I'll have a little bit of an edge on most of the other people who have just graduated from high school," he predicted.

Wright said Rod is gaining valuable insight into what a career in meteorology is like, and getting hands-on experience as well.

"It's a really tough program in college," he said. "If you come out here and get experience in what we're doing, then college is going to be easier because at least you'll know what you're interested in."

He said Rod spends his time at the weather service entering data into computers, answering phones, and making announcements on the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weather radio.

"He does a good job on the NOAA weather radio," Wright said. "He's already got a strong interest in computers, which is good because the weather service is becoming more and more computerized."

Rod, who also works 30 hours per week at a Midland fast food restaurant, said weather service personnel have treated him well. And, he said, his disability has not hindered his efforts in school, on the job or at the weather service.

"Most of the kids down there (at the Cerebral Palsey Center) are in pretty bad shape and need the therapy," said Rod, who quit therapy about two years ago. "I can drive a car and do about anything else anybody else can. I've had some problems with people understanding it and all, but nothing really big."

MIDLAND CRIME STOPPERS 694-TIPS

Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of the following fugitives. In Midland, call 694-TIPS. In Odessa, call 333-TIPS. All callers can remain anonymous.

WANTED

Johnny Ramirez, 23, is wanted for burglary of a motor vehicle. Ramirez is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs about 135 pounds with black hair an brown eyes.

Darrell Raymond Jordan, 19, is wanted for burlary of a habitation. Jordan is 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighs about 170 pounds with brown hair and brown eyes.

Vicky Lynette Coleman, 34, is wanted for forgery. Coleman is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs about 230 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

Tommie Lee Gentry, 39, is wanted on a charge of felony DWI. Gentry is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds with brown hair and blue eyes.

Smith's challenger to hold town meeting

Staff Report

Kirby Roberts, the Democratic candidate for Congressional District 21, will hold a town meeting at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in the county courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

Roberts is challenging incumbent Republican Lamar Smith for the congressional seat.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

MISD board will hold special meeting

Staff Report

There will be a special Midland Independent School Board meeting at 7 p.m. today.

The meeting will be at the central administration board room located at 702 N. N St.

Two major items to be discussed will be the tax rate and staff salary proposal.

Graves found in path of highway

AP Laserphoto

Texas Highway Department worker Mark Stelmas works to locate unmarked graves at Freedman's Park in Dallas. Archaeologists are preparing to relocate hundreds of unmarked graves belonging to generations of former slaves and black Dallas settlers.

DALLAS (AP) — Archaeologists are toeing a sensitive line as they prepare to relocate hundreds of unmarked graves belonging to generations of former slaves and black Dallas settlers.

The excavation was supposed to uncover fewer than 30 graves and take a few weeks to complete. That was three months ago.

"That was a naive estimate I made last spring," said Jerry Henderson, the archaeologist overseeing the project for the State Highway and Transportation Department.

The task has mushroomed into a major undertaking that may take more than a year to complete.

Twine highlights about 800 areas at Freedman's Cemetery where caskets were lowered into the ground. The lot is dotted with patches of transparent plastic laid over portions of caskets, wooden markers and gravestones cracked by a backhoe clearing the path for highway improvements through the heart of Dallas.

The grave count will likely exceed 2,000 by the time the excavation ends, Ms. Henderson said. But she said no more than 500 graves will have to be moved to make room for North Central Expressway's expansion.

The relocation will be difficult because most of the graves are bunched together in what appear to be families, Ms. Henderson said.

"We don't want to disrupt the internal integrity of the organization," Ms. Henderson said. "For example, we don't want to move the mother right here and then move the baby over there."

The sensitivity Ms. Henderson and her crew have displayed is one of the reasons the excavation hasn't sparked a controversy. In fact, local historians and preservationists say they're excited by the prospects.

"The thing that impresses me about that project is that the people working with it have gotten some input from the community that has more of a relationship with that cemetery," said Harry Robinson Jr., director of Museum of African American Life and Culture.

Funerary objects such as shells, ceramic figurines, glass vials, marbles... have been found...

Funerary objects such as shells, ceramic figurines, glass vials, marbles and even a watch have been found atop some graves.

Items unearthed at the site will eventually be put on display, Robinson said. The project will provide more immediate benefit to a group of youngsters.

"This summer we have a junior archaeological camp where kids will help to wash the finds," Robinson said. "Of course no bodies will be bothered. If they were doing that then people would say 'What's going on out there.'"

There is little written record of the cemetery but Ms. Henderson estimates that most Dallas blacks were buried there from 1861 to 1925. The cemetery was converted into a city park in the mid 60s.

"When you're looking at black history, it's very difficult to track down because you have no paper trail to follow — unlike white history," said Steve Mabry, a local preservationist.

The cemetery is in an area that more than a century ago was dubbed North Dallas Freedmentown for the emancipated slaves who lived there, Mabry said.

Many of the community's residents worked on the nearby railroad.

Freedmentown was virtually wiped out in the 1940s when North Central Expressway was built right through the middle of the cemetery.

"It's an emotional, archaeological and historical issue," Ms. Henderson said. "You didn't do it and I didn't do it, but let's face it: the people who were buried here were wronged."

Former accountant finds profits in antique business

HOUSTON (AP) — Four years ago, Pamela Parker was sure of two things. She hated her accounting job, and she loved antiques.

On her way to and from work each day, she eyed a little English-style cottage on Westheimer Road and dreamed of turning it into her own antique shop.

"One day I saw a 'For Lease' sign on the building, and I immediately pulled over," Ms. Parker recalled. "The man said it would be $300 a month, take it or leave it.

"I took it," she said. "I didn't ask anyone about it. I just did it."

That leap of faith helped catapult Ms. Parker out of accounting and into her own antique business. Today, she plies her trade in the Galleria — the Olympus of Houston retailing.

"This woman thinks big," said Galleria spokesman George Lancaster. "She goes to Europe and buys big. Then she comes back here and really moves the merchandise."

Ms. Parker's antique business — called Krispen — has just moved into newly renovated quarters on the Galleria's third floor.

Krispen still will operate a small shop on the first floor of the Galleria. Ms. Parker and Galleria managers hope the first-floor location can help steer customers to the larger, more out-of-the-way store on the third floor.

Fashion jeans bring Mexican quarry jobs

TULANCHINGO, Mexico (AP) — Clad in ragged pants, old rubber boots and a gimme cap emblazoned with the word "Champion," Euleferio Lopez doesn't look much like a slave to fashion.

But — unwittingly — he is.

Lopez wields a machete all day beneath the dusty sun in this central Mexican state, cutting up soft volcanic stone from the biggest pumice mine in Mexico. He earns little more than $4 a day.

And all the rock he quarries is shipped to the United States where it's used to stone-wash blue jeans — the process that makes new denim look fashionably old.

"All I know is that it all goes north, to the United States," Lopez said while sitting with his wife and two children in the bottom of the vast quarry. "For what? Who knows?"

About 1,000 other miners like Lopez — including children and women — dig, chop and sort volcanic pumice at Tulancingo's huge open quarry. The mining venture has blossomed in recent years as U.S. garment companies turned to Mexico for the stones used to pound and bleach denim into pliable style.

The quarry itself is a quarter of a mile across. In places its canyon-like walls are almost 100 yards deep. Dust devils whip up abrasive volcanic dust in its belly. The workers — school-aged kids wearing goggles, wrinkled farmers' wives and a few Indians in rainbow-stitched skirts — mill like ants about the few pieces of heavy machinery.

"When the machines break down, we dig by hand," explained Lopez, who, like all the miners, is paid 40 cents for every gunnysack full of sorted stone.

The quarry is the nation's single largest pumice producer; about a third of Mexico's production of the spongelike rock is gouged from its hillsides. But the open-pit operations actually supply only a tiny part of the U.S. garment industry's demand.

Alejandro Trejo, an analyst with Mexico's Committee for the Promotion of Mining, says Mexican pumice accounted for just 7 percent of the total 270,000 tons of the stone imported by the United States in 1989. The bulk of the imports came from Greece, Turkey and Italy.

Nevertheless, the worn look in jeans remains king of the fashion hill, and the Mexican share of the U.S. market is exploding — from 1,500 tons in 1987 to 20,000 tons last year.

The Mexican rock wholesales at about 10 cents a pound, as little as a quarter of the price of its Mediterranean competitors.

"The reason Americans use Mexican rocks to bleach their blue jeans is simple geography," Trejo said. "The European rock is considered higher quality, but it has to be shipped all the way over the Atlantic by the boatload."

So proximity and the unquenchable U.S. taste for broken-in denim transformed provincial Tulancingo, a quiet town of 200,000, into a mecca for cheap, hard labor.

Many of the 1,000 workers and their families who scrabble through the town's open quarry are Indian farmers from the surrounding countryside and unemployed laborers from Mexico City, 90 miles away.

"Here, there's plenty of work, years of work," said neophyte pumice miner Jesus Castillo, a 31-year-old former bricklayer from the capital.

They say there's safety in numbers.
How about $95.00?
No one would argue that a comprehensive, reliable home security system makes perfect sense. It's the price that often seems unreasonable. Fortunately, Westinghouse Security Systems cuts the cost of home security to a low, one-time installation fee of $95. At that price, you can protect your home and family with Westinghouse Smart Protection, and receive:
• 24-hour, 365-day-a-year security
• Panic buttons
• Professional monitoring through our Central Monitoring Facility
• Fast, effective response to your emergency calls
Using the most advanced technology available, Westinghouse brings you a basic system that includes three sensors, a master control keypad, motion detector and an interior siren. Once your system is installed, monthly monitoring is only $19.50 per month. To get your Westinghouse Smart Protection, call 1-800-SMART-25 today. Because when it comes to affordable safety, we've got your number.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, JULY 31, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You appear to have been dealt an excellent hand for the months ahead! Make the most of a unique opportunity in September. Your loyalty and sense of fair play guarantee you many friends and admirers. Romance will be especially important to your sense of well-being in December. Children play a key role in many of the decisions you make in early 1991. Set a good example. A timely investment could pay off handsomely in April or May.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Geraldine Chaplin, economist Milton Friedman, sportscaster Curt Gowdy, actor Don Murray.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Not a good day for launching new projects. Review accounts and answer correspondence. Emotional matters will require careful handling. You may be cast in the role of mediator.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A loved one helps you discover hidden resources. Keep your emotions in check. Hasty decisions could work against you. Do not expect your coworkers to be understanding. Spend more time with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Community work holds special appeal now. Your reticence in business affairs will work to your advantage. You benefit from changing your plans to accommodate others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Higher earnings are only part of the good news this week. A personal relationship improves beyond belief! Friends prove helpful where your private affairs are concerned. Follow up any hunches.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You need cooperation from key officials to move forward. An old project may have to be redone; rising costs could necessitate a budget revision. Assert your independence. Correct a bad habit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your relationship with a new colleague shows signs of improvement. Be patient. Some good news may be announced today. Say "yes" to a loved one's suggestion for evening entertainment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The acquisition of a luxury item will bring you much pleasure. Sign contracts and legal documents. Your income is about to rise. Devote more effort to your personal relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial pressures ease. Recycle an old idea to reap new profits. Be willing to test your theories. The agreements you make now will bring rewards in the near future. Share your thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take the lead in correcting a distressing situation. Meet your coworkers more than halfway. A platonic relationship takes on new overtones. Keep a tight rein on your purse strings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day to tie up loose ends. Tend to your interests and contacts abroad. Get in touch with experts who can help you market a creative idea. Jointly owned funds grow steadily.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Flexible people find new opportunities for career growth now. Teamwork is the key to greater financial gains. Do not be afraid to take calculated risks. Only you know if a personal choice is right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day to analyze your financial holdings. A stranger who comes to your aid is not inspired by romance. Show your gratitude appropriately. New social doors begin to open to you.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a tendency to boss other small fry. This can spell trouble! Concerned parents should teach these Leos to use their leadership responsibilities wisely. Quick-witted and charming, these youngsters have a knack for getting their own way both at home and in school. Career progress will come easier once they learn that they cannot and should not dominate every discussion and situation.

Club members had, over the years, learned that a trump stack was not grounds enough to double a Trump Coup Tommy contract. Indeed, it was only a bad trump break that brought out the best in Tommy—the rest of the time "mediocre" flattered his playing ability.

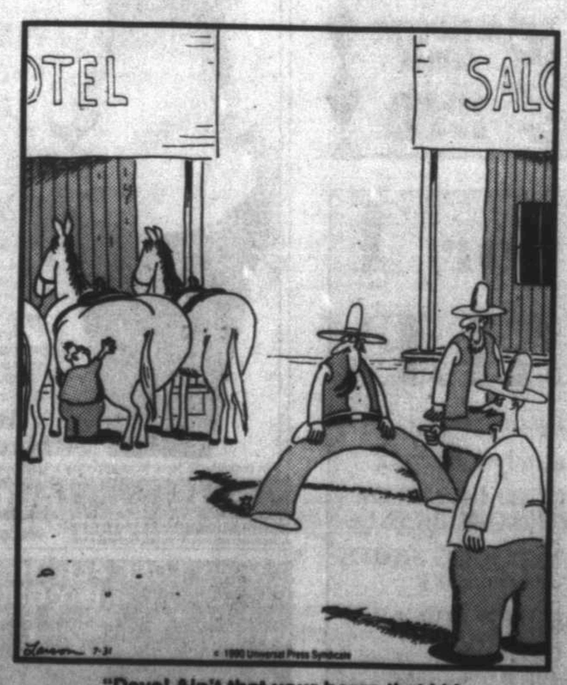

Once in a while, however, a stranger would wander into the bridge club, watch Tommy butcher a few easy hands, then double him on the strength of what seemed like a couple of trump tricks. That was the case on this hand when West, a peripatetic Pakistani on a visit to Tommy's club, thought that partner's opening bid combined with his four trumps headed by the queen-jack would provide ample ammunition to blow Tommy's contract out of the water.

West dutifully led partner's suit, and even Tommy realized that West was not doubling on high cards, but on trump tricks. Forewarned, Tommy did not make the error of cashing even one round of trumps. Instead, he allowed the jack of hearts to win the first trick and captured the continuation with the ace. Next came a diamond to the ace and a diamond ruff, a heart trumped with the four of spades and another diamond ruff.

After cashing the king and ace of clubs, declarer led the table's last diamond, hoping that West would hold the last diamond and that it could be ruffed low. Unfortunately, East followed to the diamond and Tommy had to switch to Plan B.

Tommy ruffed the diamond with the king of trumps as West discarded the queen of clubs, then led the remaining heart. That put an end to the defense. West delayed matters momentarily by ruffing with the jack of spades, but then was forced to lead away from the trump queen into declarer's combined A 10 tenace. Tommy scored two trumps, four ruffs and four winners in the side suits—10 tricks in all.

Now, McCartney's happy to answer that question

CHICAGO (AP) — After the Beatles broke up, Paul McCartney hated being asked: "Are you happy?"

McCartney

But as he closed out his 102-concert world tour Sunday, he said the question no longer frightens him.

"I used to really dread that question," McCartney told reporters before the final stop in the 10-month tour Sunday at Soldier Field, where he played to a sold-out crowd of 53,000.

But now, "I'm really happy. I've got a great family, a great band, and we seem to be selling some tickets," he said.

McCartney jokingly referred to his "great venerable age" of 48 and refuted speculation that this might be his last tour.

"I just would like to continue making music," the former Beatle said. "I want to get better — that's always been my goal. If the next album's better than the last one, that's all that really interests me."

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Tennis star Jimmy Connors has found a new racket — riverboat gambling.

Connors

Connors and his brother, John, are hoping to secure construction financing for a four-level riverboat that can carry up to 2,500 gamblers. Illinois law says the design of the boat must be a replica of a 19th-century vessel.

Nine other partners will be responsible for financing other portions of the project, John Connor said Monday.

Construction of the boat won't begin until a license is granted by the Illinois Gaming Board, and that decision is not expected until later this year.

John Connors said the boat would offer a variety of entertainment besides gambling.

"We're not just looking at it as gambling. Some people might come to the boat to see a show and not gamble," he said.

Although riverboat gambling legally may begin Jan. 1, partner J. Thomas Long said his group probably would not start until Sept. 1, 1991 — if they get a license.

ROXBURY, Conn. (AP) — Actor Richard Widmark was in satisfactory condition Monday at New Milford Hospital, recovering from leg injuries suffered in a weekend lawn-mower accident, a hospital spokesman said.

"He picked a fight with his lawn mower," said Hank Fanberg.

Widmark, 75, was taken to the hospital Sunday and underwent surgery on his lower left leg and foot, said Fanberg. He did not know the extent of injuries or other details of the accident.

Widmark has owned a home in Roxbury for years.

He has appeared in more than 30 films, including "No Way Out," "Judgement at Nuremberg" and "How the West Was Won." His more recent screen credits include "Murder on the Orient Express," "The Swarm," and "Against All Odds." He starred in the television series "Madigan" in 1972.

NEW YORK (AP) — Basketball player Mark Jackson of the New York Knicks has married Desiree Coleman, a singer and actress.

Jackson

Jackson, 25, was the National Basketball Association's Rookie of the Year in 1987-88, and an all-star in the 1988-89 season.

But last season, Jackson went from a regular season starter to a seldom-used reserve in the playoffs, and was heartily booed by Knick fans.

None of Jackson's Knick teammates attended Sunday's wedding.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jeb Magruder, who spent seven months in prison for his role in Watergate, has been chosen by the First Presbyterian Church congregation to become its senior pastor.

"I think the church in Lexington is a highly intelligent kind of congregation, full of people ready to deal with substantive issues of faith and how it relates to their everyday lives as Christians," Magruder said in a telephone interview from his home in Columbus, Ohio.

The vote Sunday was 254-5. "I think that's about as close to a unanimous vote as any bunch of Presbyterians ever gave a new minister," said the Rev. Victor Priebe, interim minister of the church founded in 1784.

Magruder, 55, pleaded guilty to conspiring to obstruct justice in the Watergate scandal, which eventually led to President Nixon's resignation in 1974.

Daughter of S&L fraud trial defendant goes on trial

AMARILLO (AP) — The daughter of a defendant in the nation's largest savings and loan fraud trial kissed a juror and talked about a future romance with him, prosecutors said Monday.

Pamela Faulkner Tomalin, the daughter of D.L. "Danny" Faulkner, is accused of jury tampering in the 1989 trial of her father on charges he defrauded five savings and loans.

Mrs. Tomalin, 27, went on trial here Monday for allegedly trying to influence juror Samuel Vera, 27.

"Ask yourself why Mrs. Tomalin was kissing Mr. Vera. Because she is in love?" Mark Nichols, assistant U.S. attorney, said during opening statements.

"Or is it because her father is on trial, facing over 300 years in jail and more than $200,000 in fines?" Nichols asked.

A federal grand jury indicted Mrs. Tomalin on charges she "communicated, conversed and made contact" with Vera. Before the trial, she pleaded innocent before U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson.

"I am not guilty," she has said. "I will not plead guilty. I will not allow the government to hold me ransom in order to get my father. We will not submit to blackmail."

Robinson moved Tomalin's trial from Lubbock to Amarillo because of publicity.

Nichols said Mrs. Tomalin and Vera met several times during the seven-month trial in Lubbock.

"As time went on, Mrs. Tomalin told him how much she liked him and his good looks," Nichols said. "He was totally taken and infatuated."

Nichols said in the final month of the trial Vera "wanted to have sex" with Mrs. Tomalin. "She said no, not now — later," Nichols said.

But, both sides said Mrs. Tomalin and Vera did not discuss the case when they were together.

Mike Fawer, Mrs. Tomalin's attorney, said Vera pursued a relationship with her, leaving her in a helpless situation.

"She was worried and didn't know what to do. She does not want to blow him off because he stalks her and knows where her children are," Fawer said.

"This case has nothing to do with the corruption of a juror," Fawer said. "What it is about is a young man stalking Mrs. Tomalin."

Fawer told jurors that Vera staked out a location near the school that Mrs. Tomalin's 2½-year-old child attended and sometimes followed Mrs. Tomalin when court was adjourned.

Fawer accused the government of prosecuting Mrs. Tomalin because its case against her father ended in a mistrial.

"The charge is not that they flirted or even kissed," Fawer said. "The charge is that Mrs. Tomalin knowingly corrupted him in his attempt to make a decision .... The facts will not bear this out."

Vera was replaced with an alternate juror by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings after he was seen talking with Mrs. Tomalin around the courthouse. Prosecutors also had complained he was not paying attention to testimony. Vera was not involved in deliberations.

Faulkner and six other men were accused of inflating appraisals and loans for condominium developments in Dallas County and stealing more than $100 million from five thrifts in Texas and Arkansas.

A mistrial was declared Sept. 15 after jurors deadlocked 11-1 in favor of guilty verdicts.

Prosecutors say they will retry the case.

Faulkner, who attended the trial with his wife and son, declined to comment Monday.

He has said previously: "I have been under attack by the U.S. government for eight years ... They are attacking me through ... the only way a parent can be attacked, through my daughter."

Judge bemoans growing caseload

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge says drug defendants here soon will have no place to go but out the courtroom door, if he doesn't get some help handling a burgeoning caseload, a newspaper reported.

"Growth in the criminal docket is so large that if another judge doesn't come in the next two or three years, in that case, there are people who are going to walk," U.S. District Judge James Nowlin told the Austin American-Statesman.

Under the Speedy Trial Act, those accused of federal crimes must be prosecuted according to a strict timetable or their cases will be dismissed.

Nowlin said he hasn't had to dismiss a case in nine years on the Austin bench, but that could change.

In 1988, prosecutors in the Austin division of the Western District of Texas recorded 28 convictions in drug cases. The number grew slightly, to 34, in 1989.

This year, the caseload skyrocketed, the American-Statesman reported. Through the first five months of the year, there were 135 convictions. Another 161 cases were still pending as of May 31.

By year's end, court officials say convictions will exceed 300, the newspaper reported.

PUC to consider Bell's refusal to bill callers for Parmer fund raising

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission this week will consider Southwestern Bell's derailment of U.S. Senate Democratic candidate Hugh Parmer's telephone fund-raising efforts.

Parmer

The telephone company says it won't bill customers for calls to a 900 number being used by Parmer to try to raise money for his campaign against incumbent Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Bell officials said they have a policy against billing to raise money for political campaigns.

Parmer blasted Bell officials as "bozos." He accused them of trying to interfere in his efforts to unseat Gramm.

"We're not going to stand for it," Parmer said Monday. "This is just pure politics and an effort on the part of this big monopoly to back their boy."

Parmer referred to campaign finance reports filed with the Texas Secretary of State which showed Gramm getting $2,950 this year from Bell's political lobbying group, and $1,000 from the Bell South federal political action committee.

Discussion of Bell's 900 number billing and collection practices was added as an emergency item on Wednesday's PUC agenda, said commission spokesman Bill Dunn.

Parmer said if he doesn't get satisfaction from the PUC, he will go to state or federal court.

The 900 number, which has been advertised in Parmer's television commercials, will keep operating, Parmer said.

He said he thinks he will prevail, and customers eventually will be billed $10 each for calls in the fund-raising effort. Of the money, $7 would go to his campaign.

Gramm and unsucessful GOP gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance both have used 900 numbers to raise funds, Parmer said.

Richard Dietz, Southwestern Bell assistant vice president for rates, said his company contracts to do billing for long-distance companies that offer the 900 service.

But Dietz said Bell's policy is to not bill for political fund-raisers. Long-distance companies can find alternative ways of billing, such as credit-card charges, Dietz said.

"We have a policy that we do not do billing and collecting for Democratic or any political fund-raising ... That has been a consistent policy applied consistently regardless of what the political affiliation is," Dietz said.

Of Gramm and Hance, Dietz said, "We can't always monitor who these services are being offered to."

He said Southwestern Bell talked to MCI Communications, which provided Gramm's 900 number, and that MCI found a different way to do billing and collection.

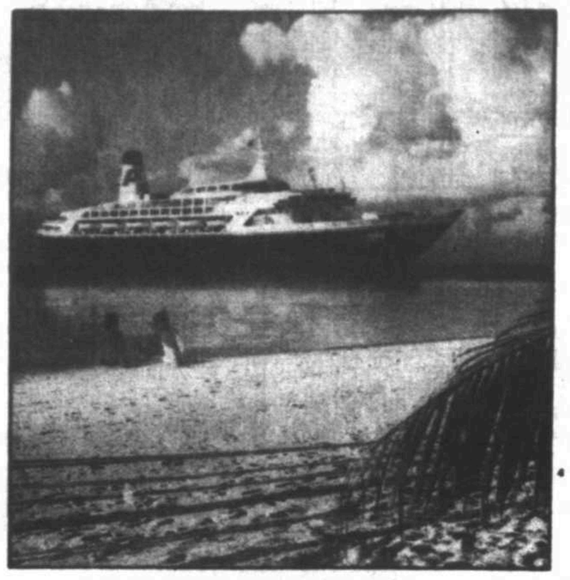

Hance's number was discontinued by the time Bell found out about it, Dietz said. He said Bell billed and collected for Hance.

In other political developments Monday, Clayton Williams, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, demanded that Democratic opponent Ann Richards provide "a full explanation" of her deposits as state treasurer into savings and loans.

An Open Records Act request garnered a letter from the treasurer's office saying records are destroyed after three years, Williams' campaign staff said. That means there is a "black hole" of information for 1983-86, they said.

Ms. Richards' campaign didn't return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Plano man looks forward to getting roaches in mail

PLANO (AP) — Michael Bohdan can't wait to open his mail every day. He might get a cockroach in a casket or one dressed up as Batman — or is it Batroach?

Bohdan is field director for the World's Largest Cockroach contest, the annual tongue-in-cheek competition that allows people to make sport of one of nature's least-appealing creatures.

'I think the mailman is having a lot of fun, too. He likes to stick around until I open the boxes.'

— Michael Bohdan

His offices at The Pest Shop serve as the collecting point for cockroaches from around the world, thus bringing the World's Cockroach Capital title to Plano, a suburb of Dallas.

The biggest number of entries this year have been in the most creative presentation category, Bohdan told the Dallas Times Herald.

"We've had some imaginative entries in this category in the past, but this year they are even better," he said. "I look forward to the mail every day, because you don't know what to expect."

For example, there's a beach scene diorama submitted by a Florida artist. It has a cockroach wind surfing, another drinking a beer in a beach chair and a third lying on a beach mat in sunglasses.

Others are in palm-size caskets or dressed up in costumes.

"I think the mailman is having a lot of fun, too. He likes to stick around until I open the boxes," Bohdan said.

The contest went international for the first time this year, and Bohdan said he expects entries from Bermuda and South America.

But U.S. citizens needn't be concerned that this will pave the way for giant cockroaches from the Amazon jungles, Bohdan said. The only eligible species are American cockroaches (or Palmetto bugs, scientifically known as Periplaneta americana.)

Bohdan uses digital electronics to measure the roaches. Last year's winner, at 1.88 inches, came from Brooklyn.

Bohdan has some advice for those trying to trap the biggest bug:

- Don't smash it. No squashed cockroaches are allowed.
- Don't be ashamed at catching the creatures in your home. Bohdan said cockroaches are as inevitable as death and taxes.

The largest cockroach is good for a $1,000 cash award. The winner of the most creative presentation category gets $500. Deadline is Aug. 15, and roaches must be mailed in a box, not aluminum foil as has sometimes happened.

There are also categories for the biggest Texas roach and the biggest found in the Western region of the United States.

INS pleased with sanction compliance

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens or fail to document employee eligibility are working better than expected, immigration officials said.

"We have a much higher compliance rate for not hiring illegal aliens today than when the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 began," said Gary Renick, chief investigator for the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in San Antonio.

So far, San Antonio area employers have been fined more than $1 million, for immigration law violations, the San Antonio Express-News reported Monday.

Before the 1986 law, the INS raided construction crews and factories where up to one-third of the workers often were undocumented aliens, Renick said.

"Now, a check of those places almost always shows 99 percent are documented," Renick said.

The businesses fined have included dude ranches, working ranches, restaurants, painting companies, landscaping firms, construction companies, plumbers, bars, janitorial services, masons, hotels and auto parts shops.

The INS has cited employers since June 1988, and the U.S. Border Patrol has done so since November 1988.

Man dies, another wounded in bar robbery

DALLAS (AP) — Police arrested two teen-agers and searched for three others suspected of robbing 26 patrons at a piano bar, a heist that left one man dead when he confronted the bandits, thinking they were shooting blanks.

Kirk Sheldon Lee, 18, of Dallas, was charged with capital murder and aggravated robbery Sunday afternoon. He was arrested at his home Friday night.

A 16-year-old boy, whose name wasn't disclosed because he is a juvenile, turned himself in Sunday night, police said. The boy was charged with capital murder.

Police issued murder warrants for three others, who range in age from 15 to 25.

Lee's bail was set at $25,000 for the robbery charge. No bail was set on the murder charge. The 16-year-old was being held at a juvenile detention center.

Police say bandits burst into the Inwood Tavern about 12:30 a.m. Friday and began shooting at about 35 patrons.

Two bullets struck customer Jerry Wayne Poag, 31, in the abdomen. He died about five hours later at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Another bullet grazed piano player Philip Looney's forehead. He was treated at Parkland and released later that day.

Tavern customers said Poag was shot after he refused to obey one of the suspects' orders to get on the floor. Witnesses said Poag then yelled out that the men didn't have real bullets and urged other customers to help him apprehend the robbers.

The gunmen fled in a 1977 Plymouth van stolen from a Dallas man in the parking lot of a nearby restaurant shortly before the robbery, police said. The van was found later Friday about a block from Lee's house, police said.

Homicide Detective Bobby Hammer said Lee, the 16-year-old boy and the other suspects live near the Inwood Tavern. All have a criminal history, but police refused to elaborate on their records.

Police said two of the other suspects were teen-agers and one is 25 years old.

"Hopefully, we'll get the others before the day's out," Hammer said.

The heist hasn't been linked to a series of armed restaurant robberies that have plagued late- and all-night eateries in the area.

Tavern customers said (Jerry Wayne) Poag was shot after he refused to obey one of the suspects' orders...

AP Laserphoto

N.Y. Times News Service

BASTROP — The Houston toad's treacherous trek across Texas 21 may be less treacherous thanks to a proposed set of tunnels and breezeways.

The structures would guide the amphibians under the highway as part of a Texas Highways and Public Transportation road improvement project initially proposed for human protection only.

"We will maintain the scenic beauty of the road by holding the number of cut trees to a minimum," said Randall Dillard, Highway Department spokesman. "We will improve the safety for humans and now improve the safety for Houston toads as well."

The traffic safety project among the majestic loblolly pines was the focus of citizen protest last year when initial plans called for cutting almost a thousand trees. A compromise saved all but 160 trees.

Median work is completed, but the toad study was required before work on the highway shoulder could start.

Dillard said construction costs associated with protection of the toad will be $51,250. Cost of the study was $18,496.

The toad proposals, delivered to the Highway Department last week, will be reviewed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, which is responsible for protecting endangered species. The toad was placed on the federal government's endangered species list in 1965.

The toad tunnels, designed by a British firm, are used in Europe, but the Bastrop County project is believed to be unique in Texas and possibly the United States.

The polymer concrete tunnels and plastic arched fencing — similar in design to awnings found on some shopping complexes — were recommended after a dozen toads were determined to be traffic fatalities earlier this year.

The arched breezeways would run parallel to the highway. Tunnels would ideally be placed every quarter mile, according to the study.

Eighteen toads were sighted by researchers. Study leader Andrew Price said several thousand toads live in Bastrop County.

Toads are unable to traverse the fencing, said Price, a zoologist for the Texas Fish and Wildlife Department.

Lifespans of canines to double

Hearst News Service

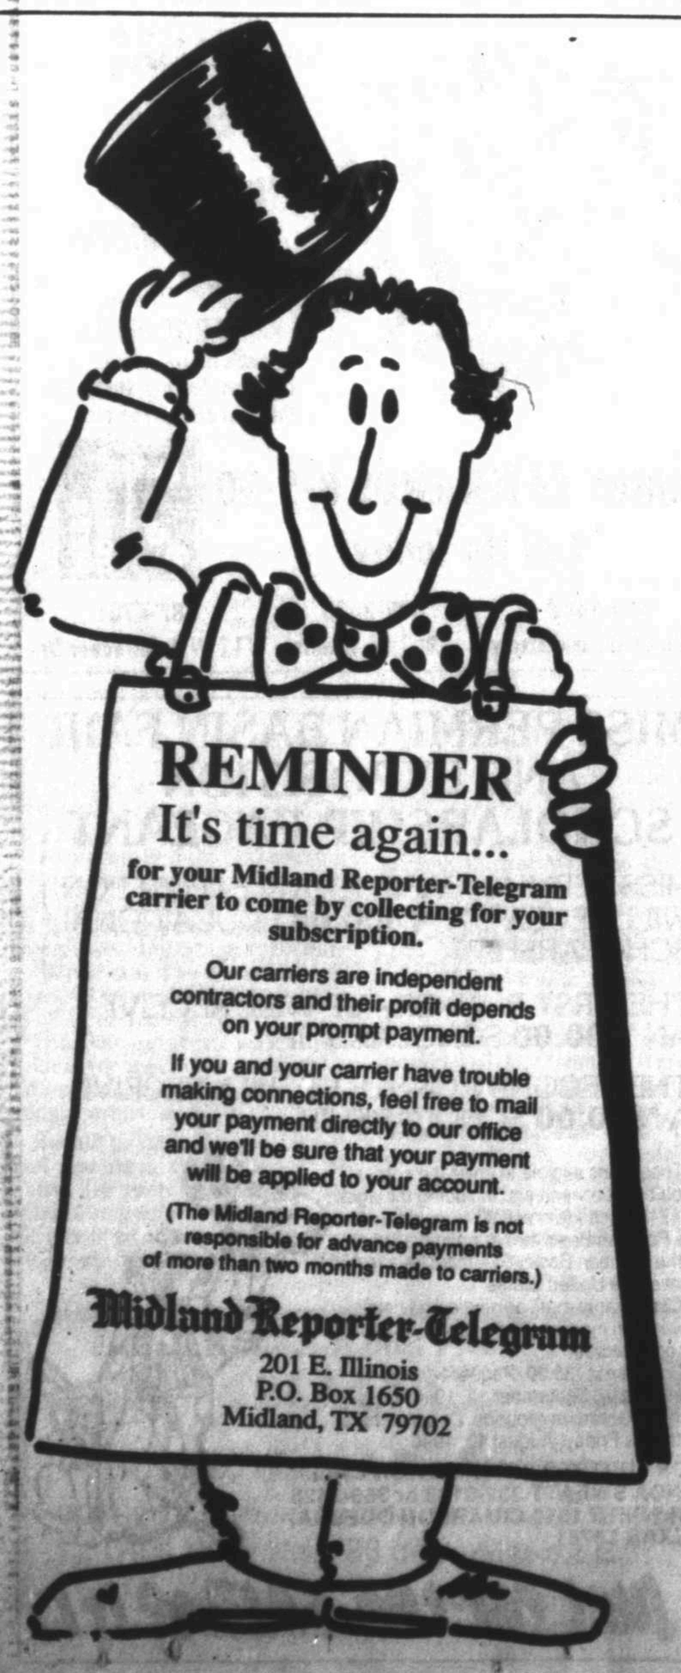

SAN ANTONIO — By 1995, the average lifespan of dogs will double to 19 years, said one specialist in San Antonio for the recent American Veterinary Medical Association's 127th annual conference.

"That was unheard of a few years ago. Before, it was 10 years," said Janet Grace, a veterinary expert from Topeka, Kan.

Reasons for the aging animal population include a new focus on preventative veterinary care, including healthier diets. An increased social acceptance of people who show human emotions to their animals is another reason, Grace said.

Steinbrenner forced to resign

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner's turbulent reign as New York Yankees owner all but ended Monday when commissioner Fay Vincent forced him to give up control of the team for paying a gambler to dig up dirt on Dave Winfield.

"Mr. Steinbrenner will have no further involvement in the management of the New York Yankees or in the day-to-day operations of that club," Vincent said in announcing the decision.

The agreement came following a day-long meeting in the commissioner's office and was the result of a four-month investigation into Steinbrenner's $40,000 payment to Howard Spira.

Steinbrenner must resign as general partner by Aug. 20, when someone will be appointed to take his place, subject to the approval of Vincent and the other major league teams.

The 60-year-old Steinbrenner will be allowed to consult on major business decisions involving the Yankees, but cannot participate in player deals. He must also ask Vincent's permission to attend games.

"For all purposes, Mr. Steinbrenner agrees that he is to be treated as if he had been placed on the permanent ineligible list," Vincent said. "I hope this sad episode is now over."

Steinbrenner also agreed not to contest the decision in court.

"I will not comment on the decision," Steinbrenner said. "I'm very happy it was resolved. I'm very satisfied with the resolution, and that's all I'm going to say."

As one baseball's more fiery characters, Steinbrenner was famous for his hiring and firing of managers, particularly the late Billy Martin, and for feuding with his players, including Reggie Jackson and Winfield.

Winfield was one of Steinbrenner's many high-priced free agents, but Steinbrenner turned on the star outfielder after he went 1-for-22 in the 1981 World Series loss to Los Angeles. Later, Steinbrenner derided Winfield as "Mr. May,'" saying he only came through when it didn't count.

Hogs bolt SWC for Southeastern

■ After 76 years, the University of Arkansas is apparently leaving the Southwest Conference in favor of the Southeastern Conference.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks are set to jump from the Southwest to the Southeastern Conference.

On Wednesday, Arkansas expects to join the SEC, a move that would end the university's 76-year alliance with the SWC.

"It's not good news. Arkansas has been a valued member of the conference and we're sorry they are taking that position," SWC commissioner Fred Jacoby said Monday.

The move marks the second time a major conference has taken in a new school. In May, the Big Ten Conference added Penn State, a football independent but a member of the Atlantic-10 Conference in other sports.

Arkansas president B. Alan Sugg said the school's board will meet Wednesday in Fayetteville, Ark., to discuss the SEC's proposal. Sugg said both he and Fayetteville campus chancellor Dan Ferritor would recommend then that the Razorbacks leave the SWC.

SEC commissioner Roy Kramer would not confirm the move. "They (Arkansas) have the prerogative to make those statements. We'll have no comment," he said.

Ferritor said, "I met with President Sugg today and gave him on behalf of the Fayetteville campus a strong, positive recommendation that the University of Arkansas enter the Southeastern Conference."

Sugg said Ferritor offered three reasons for the move, which would give the SEC an 11th team.

"His comments to me were that he feels the overall competition level will be stronger, that there will be a greater fan interest in the program if we participate in the Southeastern Conference, and he feels that while the television revenues are really a small part of the budget, there's a better chance for television revenue to remain the same if not be enhanced with the SEC," Sugg said.

Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles, who has spent 36 years in the SWC, said he was pleased by Ferritor's recommendation.

Ryan gets 2nd crack at 300

■ Texas Ranger pitcher Nolan Ryan hopes the cooler climate of Milwaukee will be more conducive to getting his 300th major league victory.

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Nolan Ryan's first attempt for career victory No. 300 produced more than personal disappointment for a man who enjoys sharing his success.

Not only did Ryan give up three homers, seven runs and 10 hits against the New York Yankees before leaving after eight innings, he let down the home folks who were eager to share in another piece of history.

The Texas Rangers rallied to win the game last Wednesday, but the 43-year-old Ryan failed to get the victory that would have made him the 20th major-league pitcher to win 300 games.

Now in a different stadium 1,000 miles away, one that will be filled with fans rooting for and against him, Ryan will try again on Tuesday night.

Ryan, who said Monday he welcomes the cooler climate of Milwaukee, doesn't want to prolong his quest.

"I'd like to get it over with as soon as possible. I don't want to disappoint people. I have a lot of people coming to this game. It's an inconvenience for them but they want to be a part of it. They've shared in my career," Ryan said at a news conference on Monday.

He admits there is some pressure to get the 300th victory, especially after his poor outing last week.

"The only one I had to blame was myself. I made bad pitches. I hope that doesn't happen again. Because of that you probably do put more pressure on yourself," he said.

"But you have to put it in perspective and take the approach that you go out and pitch the same. Prior to warming up you are feeling pressure, but once you get into the game, you're concentrating on what you have to do. If it were me, I'd just as soon be pitching tonight."

Of the last nine pitchers to get 300 victories, five accomplished it on their first try. Don Sutton, the most recent member of the 300 club in June 1986, needed two starts. Phil Niekro, who made it in October 1985, needed five.

Ryan, 11-9 lifetime against the Brewers with a 3-5 career record at County Stadium, hasn't pitched in Milwaukee since April 12, 1989.

That night he was overpowering. He lost a no-hitter in the eighth inning but won the game and struck out 15. That was victory No. 274. Ryan was 2-1 last season against the Brewers but

Dog days will leave teams panting

Woof, woof.

That's right, we're about into the dog days of summer. Happily, there seems to be the potential for pennant races in three of the four major league baseball divisions.

Grimes

A tight pennant race is just another thing that makes baseball special. Other sports have them, too, but it just seems more meaningful in baseball.

Sure, you have parity in American football, but so what? You also have a week to wait for the next game — and that's too long.

You have the occasional race in pro basketball, too, even though parity seems to treated as a dirty six-letter word in the Land of Stern. How many teams have won the NBA finals since 1980?

Come to think of it, how many different teams have won Super Bowls since 1980? I haven't researched it, but I feel certain it's a pretty disgustingly low number.

1. Now, how many teams have won back-to-back World Championships in major league baseball since 1980? Too tough? How 'bout this one? 2. How many teams have won more than one world championship since 1980.

Answers: 1. None. 2. One. The Los Angeles Dodgers in 1981 and 1988.

One of the beauties of baseball is that you never know what's going to happen from one season to the next.

So here's my predictions for races in each division, albeit with the benefit of 100-odd games already having been played:

AL EAST: This is by far the tightest of the four divisions year-in and year-out. Expect the same this season, with Toronto looking awfully tough, Boston hanging in there, and Baltimore, Detroit, Cleveland and Milwaukee knocking on the door until nearly the end. Give the nod to Toronto, but expect the Jays to have to win it on the final weekend.

AL WEST: Bob Welch can get his 20, Jose Canseco could hit a home run every day, and Dennis Eckersley could go the rest of his life without walking another batter, but I just have a gut feeling that Oakland is going to have trouble shaking the Chicago White Sox, who will continue to rely on outstanding middle relief and Ozzie Guillen to make it close.

NL EAST: The Pirates have made a great run, but I think the Mets just have too much going for them to be denied. You can't count Montreal out in this one, either.

NL WEST: Print the LCS tickets, Marge, your Reds are getting in. San Francisco's the nearest pursuer, but the Giants are just having too much trouble keeping people well.

I wonder how Midland's own Randy Velarde feels, now that the New York Yankees have offered outfielder Deion Sanders a multi-million dollar contract, even though Velarde is outhitting him by 40 points — which isn't saying much, because Velarde is still

Clemens hurting, but still fires shutout

Associated Press

Two-time Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox is hurting — and it's probably a good thing for opposing batters.

"I'm throwing zeroes, but I've been fortunate," Clemens said Monday night after he posted his second consecutive shutout in the Red Sox' 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Taking a regular turn despite occasional right shouler pain that "feels like a cramp in the back of the leg," Clemens (14-5) scattered nine hits, struck out eight and didn't issue a walk in his 23rd career shutout that extended his scoreless string to 23 innings.

"I'm just praying I can work myself through this," Clemens said after throwing 125 pitches despite the shoulder strain. "I've had to quit a little throwing on the side, but I'm making good pitches. Maybe I'm more of a pitcher now."

Clemens, who spurned the news media the last couple of weeks, admitted he had tried to conceal his ailment.

"I've been pretty upset the last couple of weeks since word got out," Clemens said. "I don't want anyone to know when I'm hurting. Once word gets out other teams have an advantage on me. And I don't like that."

Clemens worked out of trouble, retiring Chicago in order in just three innings, in his fourth complete game in 23 starts.

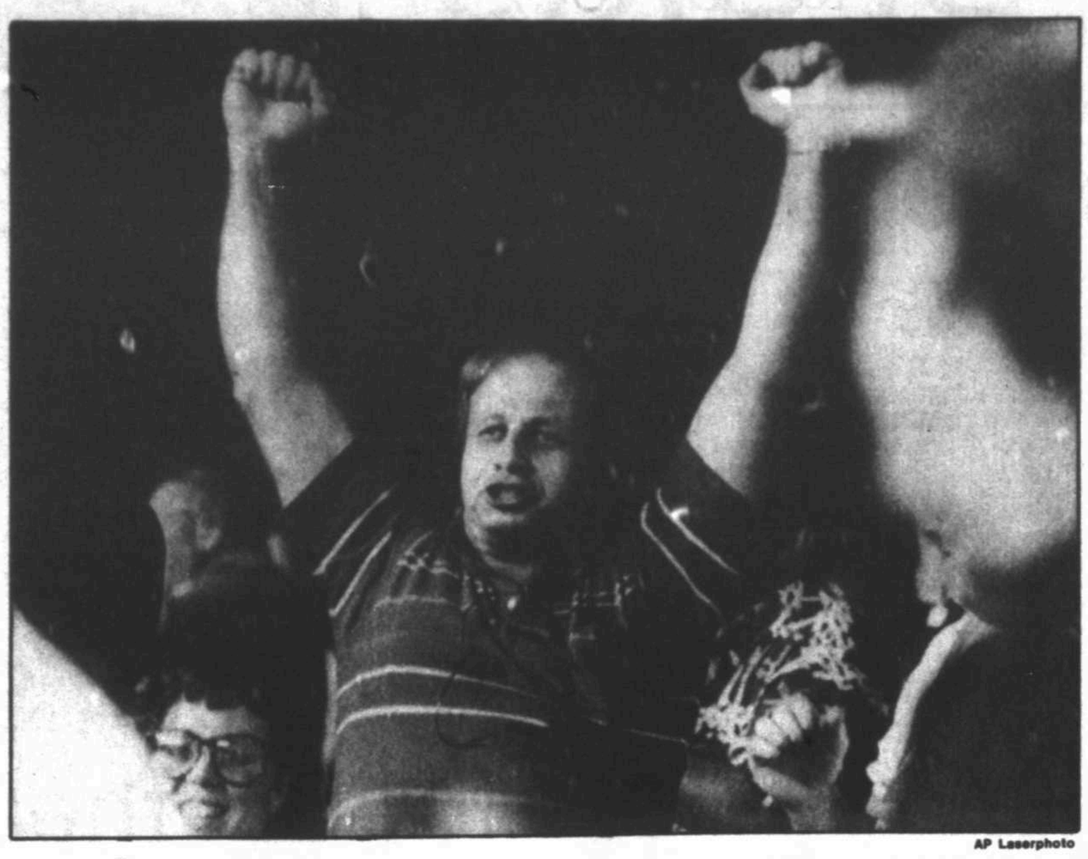

"We had seven hits off him in the first three innings, but no runs," Chicago manager Jeff Torborg said. "When he had to reach back and get 'em, he got 'em."

The Red Sox, returning home from a 4-8 road swing, remained one game behind Toronto in the AL East. Chicago began the night two games behind Oakland in the AL West.

Wade Boggs had two doubles, driving in one run and scoring one, and Carlos Quintana hit a solo homer, his seventh, in helping Clemens beat Chicago's Adam Peterson (1-3).

Clemens, who allowed two runs in a loss at Kansas City on July 20 before beating Milwaukee 2-0 for his first 1990 shutout last Wednesday, survived a shaky start in his fourth complete game in 24 starts.

With one out in the first, Robin Ventura singled and took third on Ivan Calderon's double. However, Dan Pasqua struck out of and Carlton Fisk lined to third to end the threat.

AP Laserphoto

An exultant New York Yankee shouts 'George is gone' after hearing that Yankee owner George Steinbrenner had been forced to resign as general partner.

The White Sox left runners on first and second in the second. Fisk opened the fourth with a double, but became the second out of the inning when he was struck by Scott Fletcher's grounder to the left side.

Clemens retired the next seven batters before Steve Lyons blooped a double to shallow left to start the seventh. However, Lyons remained at second as Clemens retired the next three batters.

The eight strikeouts increased Clemens' total to 150, tops in the AL.

Rangers 3, Brewers 1

Witt, 5-0 in July, raised his record to 9-8 on the night before teammate Nolan Ryan was scheduled to try for his 300th major league victory. Texas has won 15 of its last 21 games.

Witt allowed only four hits, struck out five and walked three in seven innings before giving way to Brad Arnsberg, who notched his second save with two innings of hitless relief.

Kunkel broke a 1-1 tie with a homer in the fifth, his first since September of last season and his first on the road in more than three years. The homer came off Bill Krueger (5-6).

Harold Baines added insurance for the Rangers with an eighth-inning homer, his 11th this season and 200th of his career.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first on back-to-back two-out doubles by Rafael Palmeiro and Ruben Sierra.

Royals 7, Indians 6

Gerald Perry homered to start a four-run fourth inning and Andy McGaffigan won his second straight start for Kansas City.

Pat Tabler and Mike Macfarlane each drove in two runs for the Royals, and Macfarlane had three hits.

McGaffigan (2-0) gave up one run on five hits in 5 1-3 innings, walking one and striking out four. The start was his second in six days, after he had made 225 consecutive relief appearances.

Traded by Montreal during spring training and released by San Francisco in April, he has a 1.71 ERA in nine appearances with Kansas City.

The Indians made things interesting at the end by scoring five runs in the last two innings. They scored three in the eighth on a run-scoring single by Brook Jacoby and a two-run double by Corey Snyder, and two in the ninth on a sacrifice fly by Candy Maldonado and RBI single by Sandy Alomar before Jeff Montomgery shut the door for his 15th save.

Rookie Jeff Shaw (1-2) took the loss in his first appearance since being recalled from Class-AAA Colorado Springs.

Blue Jays 9, Orioles 2

Kelly Gruber had three hits, including a two-run homer, and Todd Stottlemyre allowed six hits over six innings to snap a four-game Toronto losing streak.

George Bell hit his 200th career home run and Pat Borders hit a two-run homer for the Blue Jays, who had 12 hits, including three by Mookie Wilson.

The victory moved first-place Toronto five games ahead of Baltimore in the American League East and foiled the Orioles' bid to reach .500 for the first time since June 12. The Blue Jays maintained their one-game lead over second-place Boston.

Twins 7, Angels 3

Gaetti opened the scoring with a solo homer in the second. He singled in a run in the sixth and doubled in two more in the seventh.

Tapani (11-5) was starting for the second time since missing two starts with a bruised shin suffered when he was hit by a line drive July 13.

He cruised until the seventh, when the Angels staged a two-out rally, punching out four straight hits to score three runs. Donnie Hill's two-run triple and a run-scoring double by Kent Anderson made it 4-3. Reliever Terry Leach ended the rally when he got Brian Downing to line out to Gaetti at third.

Yankees 6, Tigers 2

Oscar Azocar and Jesse Barfield drove in three runs each to back the six-hit pitching of Dave LaPoint for New York.

Cecil Fielder accounted for both of the Tiger runs with his major league-leading 33rd homer following Alan Trammell's double off LaPoint (6-7) in the fourth inning.

RYAN: 43, still credits 'fortune'

has not faced them in 1990.

Ryan said he expected a mixed reaction from a large crowd at County Stadium, estimated to be around 40,000.

"I think the local fans will be there with some interest in the ball game from my standpont. But I think they will be pulling for the Brewers. But as in Oakland with the no-hitter, the fans were very supportive of me toward the end of the game. Their allegiance changed in that they were pulling for the no-hitter ... I wouldn't anticipate any difference from the fans here."

The Rangers considered delaying Ryan's next start two days so he could go back to Texas and try for No. 300, but manager Bobby Valentine decided to stay with his regular rotation. Ryan, with a 10-4 record, has been bothered by a stress fracture in his back and will be pitching with an extra day's rest after throwing 141 pitches against the Yankees.

"It's more of a nagging than a threatening injury," said Ryan, who has major-league record 5,211 career strikeouts and six no-hitters.

"I feel about like I have the last three days. I don't anticipate the back being a problem," he said.

Ryan's quest to join one of baseball's most select lists is one that has been well documented.

That won't change Tuesday night when more than 200 reporters come to County Stadium, along with ESPN and the Rangers TV network.

"In a summer where all the baseball news hasn't been outstanding, it's nice to have Nolan Ryan to talk about," said Milwaukee general manager Harry Dalton, who engineered the trade that brought Ryan from the Mets to the California Angels.

"He's a real bright light. You don't pitch into the 40's just because you have solid ability. He was always a workhorse."

Star watchers expect strong passing game

Prep Football

HOUSTON (AP) — Pass-oriented quarterbacks Steve Clements of the North and Jeff Granger of the South will lead their teams Tuesday in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game in the Astrodome.

"We anticipate throwing the ball and making it an exciting ball game," North coach Bob Ledbetter of Southlake Carroll said. "We'll have two offensive groups. We want everyone to get a chance to play."

Clements, who set a state passing record with 8,204 yards during his career at Huntsville, will lead the passing group and quarterback Kyle Maxfield of Sudan will run the wishbone.

Granger, a two-sport star at Orangefield, and Aldine's Doug Womack, will share quarterbacking duties for the South, coached by Marshall's Dennis Parker.

Parker also plans to use Houston MacArthur quarterback Steve Emerson.

"You can tell Granger and Emerson have great arms," Parker said. "We'll run a lot of formations."

The North won the 1989 game in Dallas 29-20 and leads the series 31-20 with four ties.

"There's just so much talent on both teams," said Clements, who will attend the University of Texas. "As a quarterback you have to make an adjustment working with these receivers."

Clements will be throwing to Odessa Permian's Lloyd Hill, who will attend Texas Tech. Hill, considered a top college prospect, caught 79 passes for 1,599 yards and scored 15 touchdowns as a senior.

Angels let another one slip by in 12

Staff Report

JACKSON, Miss. — The Midland Angels snatched defeat from the jaws of victory in a 6-5 loss to the Jackson Mets in 12 inning Texas League action here Monday.

The Angels have now lost three straight extra-inning games to Jackson. On the current road trip, Midland is 1-7. Five of those seven contests have been decided by one run, and four of those five games have gone extra frames.

In the bottom of the 12th inning and the Mets down 5-4, Jackson's Al Jiminez walked and went to second on a Jamie Roseboro single. Designated hitter Steve Davis hit a sacrifice fly to advance Jiminez and Roseboro to third and second. Both runners then came in on a single by catcher Todd Hundley to end the game.

With the loss, Midland fell to 13-23 on the second half and is now 11 full games behind division leading San Antonio.

Astros nudge sloppy Giants

NL Roundup

Associated Press

Danny Darwin pitched eight strong innings and the Houston Astros, aided by two San Francisco errors, scored five runs in the ninth in a 6-1 victory that ended the Giants' five-game winning streak.

Houston broke a 1-1 tie when right fielder Mike Kingery misplayed Rafael Ramirez's bases-loaded sacrifice fly. The Astros loaded the bases with one out on a single by Craig Biggio and walks to pinch-hitter Terry Puhl and Franklin Stubbs by reliever Steve Bedrosian (5-6).

Pinch-hitter Carl Nichols hit a bases-loaded single to left, scoring two more runs. The final two came home when Matt Williams misplayed a routine grounder by Bill Doran.

Darwin (8-1) won his fourth consecutive start by holding the Giants to four hits while walking three and striking out two. Dave Smith pitched the ninth inning.

Dodgers 4, Reds 1

Mike Morgan pitched 6 1-3 perfect innings en route to his first career two-hitter as surging Los Angeles handed punchless Cincinnati.

The Reds, held hitless for 8 2-3 innings Sunday at San Francisco by Scott Garrelts, did not reach base against until Barry Larkin singled with one out in the seventh.

Morgan (9-9), who had lost four of his last five decisions and not reached the seventh in five of his last six, struck out seven and walked one. He recorded his sixth complete game and 30th in 159 starts since breaking into the major leagues with the Oakland A's just one week after his 1978 high school graduation.

GRIMES: Prospects shine

under .200. Still, the former Midland Lee star has committed only one error in extensive action at third base, and spot play at shortstop and the outfield.

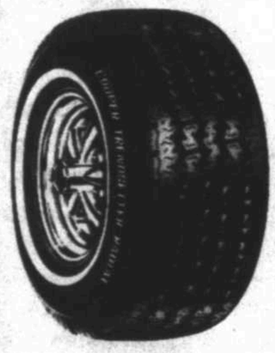

And how about some of the former Midland High standouts who are looking to move up in the minor league ranks? There's Mike Timlin, who is 7-2 with 22 saves for Toronto's Class A farm at Dunedin, Fla.

Kevin Rychel is another ex-Bulldog making a name for himself in A ball. Rychel is 9-3 despite a 4.47 ERA at Pittsburgh's Class A farm in Augusta, Ga. The 1989 MHS grad has fanned 89 batters in 106⅔ innings, but has also walked 72.

And Mike Gonzales is another MHS-ex on his way up. Gonzales was recently promoted to Cleveland's Class A farm at Kinston, N.C. after a strong stint at Watertown, N.Y. in short-season A ball.

OPEC may be seeing lasting changes

■ Iraq's actions last week to force fellow OPEC members to curb production and raise oil prices has changed the make up of the cartel that could have lasting — and troubling — consequences.

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

GENEVA – Iraq's political campaign to corral OPEC's excess producers has shifted the make up of the oil cartel in ways that could have lasting and troubling consequences.

In the 1980s, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, with an arsenal of oil they could unleash on the market to starve other members into submission, were the powerhouses within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

But at last week's meeting in Geneva, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's threats of military aggression drove home to Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates his position that overproduction and the low oil prices it brings simply won't be tolerated.

At the meeting, Iraqi oil minister Issam Abdul Raheem Chalabi was instrumental in getting the group's target price increased to $21 a barrel.

"In the last month he (Hussein) changed the rules of the game for world oil. OPEC now has an enforcer," said Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

Iraq's threats were privately welcomed by some countries just as hungry for higher prices and utterly frustrated over the failure of more civilized attempts to get cooperation.

"I think they probably are lauding secretly what Saddam Hussein is doing, although no one will admit it publicly," said trading analyst Nauman Barakat with Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York. Other analysts say that his tantrums are only hastening a shift in OPEC behavior that began with the new decade.

Paul Mlotok with Morgan Stanely & Co. in New York agreed that pressure from Iraq has helped boost crude oil prices in the last two weeks.

But OPEC already had been slowly moving its focus from trying to grab a bigger share of the oil market to raising the price of its crude to satisfy its members' revenue needs, he said.

A formal policy adopted last week signals the important shift made in the way OPEC plans to do business: Each new production ceiling increase must be considered in tandem with a price increase.

While OPEC members downplay the effect of the political disputes between Kuwait and Iraq, they must be a little worried, observers say, about the ramifications of having a police atmosphere within the organization.

Report shows surge in machine tool orders

■ The Association for Manufacturing Technology reported a 27.2 percent jump in machine tool orders, but economists cautioned that doesn't mean significantly higher spending on capital improvements.

By Jonathan P. Hicks
N.Y. Times News Service

Reflecting a surge in exports, orders for American-made machine tools rose 27.2 percent in June from the level of May, the industry's trade association says in its monthly report.

But economists cautioned the rise did not reflect significantly higher spending on capital improvements in the United States.

According to the report, which is being released Monday by the Association for Manufacturing Technology, machine tool orders rose to $262.65 million in June from the May level of $206.4 million.

The June figures reflect a 9.1 percent increase from the level of new orders in June of last year.

For the first half of 1990, machine tool orders were down 4.8 percent, compared with a year earlier.

Machine tools are power-driven devices that cut or shape metal parts used in products ranging from appliances and vehicles to aircraft and construction materials.

The strength of tool orders generally reflects the strength of industrial production, and economists consider patterns of machine tool sales to be important indicators of capital spending by manufacturers.

The level of new orders has fluctuated widely in the last few months. After in-

Personal spending posts sharp increase in June

■ Personal spending jumped 1 percent in June while personal income posted a smaller increase.

By John D. McClain

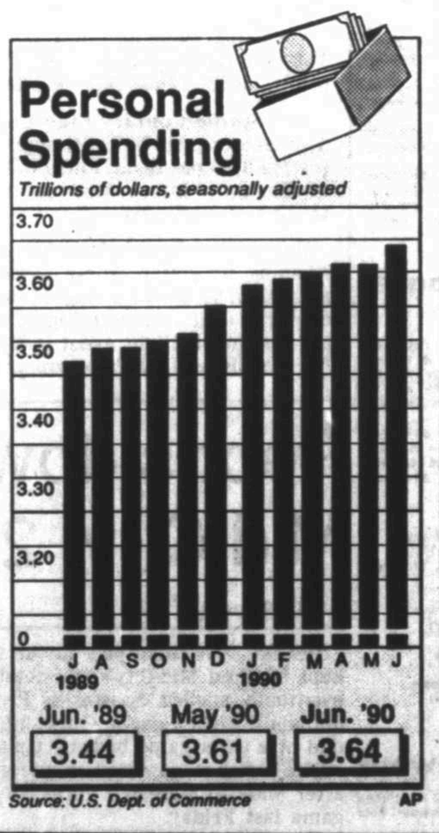

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal spending rose 1.0 percent in June, the strongest gain in five months, the government said Monday in a report suggesting that consumers are keeping the nation's weak economy alive.

"This seems to indicate the consumer is not dead," said Mark M. Zandi, an economist with Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa. "As long as the consumer hangs in there, I believe we will avoid a recession."

The Commerce Department said consumer spending totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.64 trillion, the biggest jump since a similar 1.0 percent gain last January.

"This does not indicate we're going into an economic recession," agreed Sung Won Sohn, chief economist with the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. He noted that consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

First Saturn car rolls off assembly line

By Phil West

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The ceremonial first Saturn automobile was driven off the assembly line Monday by Roger Smith, the retiring chairman of General Motors Corp., the automaker announced.

In a ceremony that was closed to the news media, Smith drove the car off the line accompanied in the metallic red, four-door "Job One" sedan by Owen Bieber, president of the United Auto Workers union.

They were joined by GM Executive Vice President Lloyd E. Reuss and UAW Region 8 Director George H. Smith, plus Saturn President Richard G. LeFauve.

"Today's milestone signals both the determination and enthusiasm of Saturn team members to achieve our mission — to market a high-value, world-class quality car which will compete in the small car market against the best of the Japanese competition," LeFauve said.

He said the ceremony was private because of Saturn's plans to focus national attention on the car's launch come fall. He said it also provided a chance for team members to talk with Smith.

The public in October will get its first authorized look at the Saturn line, GM's first new nameplate since Chevrolet in 1917.

GM has tried to cloak the Saturn project in secrecy since its inception eight years ago. Pictures and details about the Saturn project have leaked, prompting GM to offer a reward at one point for information about the leaks.

Smith introduced the project in 1983 as a boxlike subcompact car that would sell for $6,000 to $8,000. GM planned to challenge Japanese imports with a peppy, 60-mpg small car. Early plans called for a production capacity of 500,000 cars a year.

Today's Saturn has more interior room, a longer wheel base and more features. It now is aimed to compete with the Honda Civic and Toyota Corolla — with a $10,000 to $12,000 price tag and a 35-mpg rating.

Production workers operate under a separate contract from that being negotiated by the UAW and the Big Three automakers.

Only 120,000 cars a year will be built at first, with a peak production level of 240,000 a year.

Futures higher

The contract for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 17 cents to $20.21 a 42-gallon barrel after losing 26 cents on Friday.

Meanwhile, in natural gas trading, the September contract settled at $1.430 per 1,000 cubic feet, down from $1.439 on Friday. Later contracts were mixed.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell broadly against major foreign currencies Monday, continuing a drop prompted by a weakening U.S. economy and the prospect of lower interest rates.

Gold prices were mixed.

The British pound climbed against the dollar, following up on a more than 2 cent rise on Friday. Sterling rose to $1.8465 in New York from late Friday's $1.8375. In London earlier, the British pound rose to $1.8440 from $1.8350 late Friday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.6040 West German marks; 1.3602 Swiss francs; 5.3725 French francs; 1,174.25 Italian lire; and 1.15245 Canadian dollars.

The dollar fell to 147.83 Japanese yen in New York from 149.10 late Friday. Gold fell 20 cents on the Commodity Exchange in New York to $367.60 a troy ounce. Republic National Bank of New York later quoted a bid of $367.70, up 40 cents from Friday.

Silver prices were mixed. Silver for current delivery slipped 2.9 cents to $4.803 a troy ounce on New York's Comex.

Junk bonds

NEW YORK — During the first quarter of this year, savings and loan associations disposed of "junk bonds" with a face value of $1.3 billion, according to a study by K.H. Thomas Associates, a bank and savings industry consulting firm in Miami.

The sales reduced the total amount of junk bond holdings by savings institutions to $9.2 billion, from $10.6 billion at the end of 1989, the report said.

This is down from the highest level reached in March 1989 when savings institutions owned junk bonds with a face value of $14.4 billion.

Bailout vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress could avoid voting on a $100 billion savings and loan bailout for 1991 until next year by passing a stopgap bill for no more than $10 billion, a Bush administration official said Monday.

The proposal, which would postpone action on the larger appropriation until after the November election, was raised by Treasury Undersecretary Robert R. Glauber.

JANE BRYANT QUINN
The 'KISS' principle: Keep It Simple Stupid!

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK — You have all heard of the KISS principle in business affairs–Keep It Simple, Stupid!

Quinn

Nothing makes me happier, professionally, than to be KISSed by a bright idea that makes money easier to manage and to understand. And today, I have two to pass along. They're for readers who invest in stocks and bonds, or who would like to.

The newest idea is from the no-load (no-sales-charge) fund group, T. Rowe Price in Baltimore (800-638-5660). It's a just-announced pair of Spectrum Funds–one invested for current income and preservation of capital, the other one invested for growth.

What qualifies it as a KISS is that you don't have to decide which kind of growth you want (aggressive? growth-and-income? small-company? international?). Nor do you have to make choices among income funds (long-term bonds? intermediates? Ginnie Maes? international bonds?).

The Spectrum Funds do all that for you. If you tell T. Rowe Price "I'm a growth investor," Price will invest your money in up to seven of its own no-load growth funds, ranging from blue-chip dividend-paying companies to an aggressive small-company fund. Income investors get the same range of risks. You pay no extra fee for Spectrum. Your only costs are those charged by the underlying funds themselves.

What gave rise to the Spectrum funds? T. Rowe Price's research found that many would-be investors don't feel confident enough to choose among all the funds available. So they leave their savings in a money-market mutual fund, which is a dreadful investment choice. Over time, money funds are decimated by inflation and taxes.

With the Spectrum Funds, you might want to make an allocation decision–say, 65 percent of your money in growth investments and 35 percent in income investments. But after that, you can go fishing.

The other KISSable idea was invented, for individuals, 14 years ago by the Vanguard no-load fund group of Valley Forge, Pa. (800-662-7447), and is finally catching on in a big way. I'm talking about the index fund.

An index mutual fund never tries to "beat the market," which most fund managers can't do anyway. Instead, it invests in the very stocks from which a market index is compiled. So its performance matches the market, minus annual costs.

Vanguard's classic is its Index Trust "500 Portfolio," invested to match Standard & Poor's index of 500 large companies. If you also want to own some smaller stocks, you can add Vanguard's "Extended Market Portfolio." It mimics the action of the Wilshire Index's 4,500 smaller and medium-sized companies.

For these two portfolios, Vanguard's expenses–the lowest in the industry–are 0.2 and 0.23 percent a year respectively. The 500 Fund has beaten 73 percent of all of the general equity funds over the past ten years, as measured by Lipper Analytical Services.

Recently, KISS investing even moved abroad–thanks to Vanguard's new international-index funds. Its European Portfolio buys nearly 600 companies in 13 European countries. The Pacific portfolio (around 90 percent of which is invested in Japan) owns more than 400 companies in Asia and Australia.

Index funds get you into foreign markets more cheaply than if you buy managed funds, says Gus Sauter, Vanguard's vice president of Core Management. His international funds aren't yet old enough for performance comparisons. But he expects his annual costs to run at 0.32 percent, compared with around 1 to 2 percent for actively managed international funds. Over time, that should give him an edge. Shareholders in Vanguard's international and Extended-Mar-

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Co-ownership avoids the probate process

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have $100,000 in U.S. Treasury bills and about $40,000 in certificates of deposit. I purchased these T bills and CDs in my name but I used the word "or" to include the names of those I wish to receive them after my death.

I have been told that these T bills and CDs need not be mentioned in the will I am having drawn up, because they automatically will go to those named. Is that true?

Also, unless the market retreats, my estate will go over the $600,000 mark. Will my T bills and CDs be counted as part of my estate?

Doyle

A. Indeed, what you were told is true. By registering each T bill and CD with "or" between your name and another person's name, you put them into co-ownership form. When you leave this vale of tears, the surviving co-owner will become the sole owner of the security on which his or her name appears as co-owner.

Each T bill and CD will pass to the surviving co-owner outside your will and will not have to go through the probate process.

The same story applies to securities, bank accounts and other assets in joint ownership — in your name "and" another name — as well as things you have in trust and custodial form, which pass directly to the named beneficiary.

That leads to what you will probably count as an unhappy answer to your second question. Co-ownership, joint ownership, trust and beneficiary forms do not necessarily remove assets from your estate.

You bought those T bills and CDs. They will be counted as part of your estate for "death tax" purposes. Assuming you are not married, everything you leave in excess of $600,000 will be subject to federal estate tax. A married person can leave unlimited amounts to his or her spouse, free of that bite.

Q. My wife and I have all our property held jointly, so as to be readily available to the other when one of us dies. We own all our stocks as "joint tenants," with either "&" or "and" between our names and "JT TEN" after our names. Some certificates also have "WROS" after our names. I believe that means "with right of survivorship."

Should we be sure that all our stock certificates have "JT TEN WROS" after our names?

A. That's not necessary. Both "JT TEN" and "JT TEN WROS" stand for "as joint tenants with right of survivorship and not as tenants in common." The use of initials simply results in less clutter on stock certificates.

OPEC: Recent shifts raise many questions

(From 4C)

– and its guns, soldiers and tanks are not its only weapons, political and economic analysts say.

The country also is sitting on the second-largest underground store of reserves within OPEC – about 100 billion barrels. Saudi Arabia is first, with about 250 million barrels.

With those huge reserves and a share of OPEC output already more than twice that of Kuwait and the Emirates, its long-term position is strong.

"What (Hussein's) actions have done is restored some of the confrontation to world oil, which some countries have been trying to squeeze out of oil," said Yergin of Cambridge Energy. "They put politics back into the oil market."

Making Hussein's threats effective is the fact that with the exception of Venezuela, most of the spare capacity in OPEC is in the Persian Gulf and within his reach, Yergin said. The errant producers are financially strong but militarily weak.

"There is no question this reintroduces unease on the part of consuming countries," Yergin said. "It undercuts the balance of power and spirit of cooperation between consumers and producers."

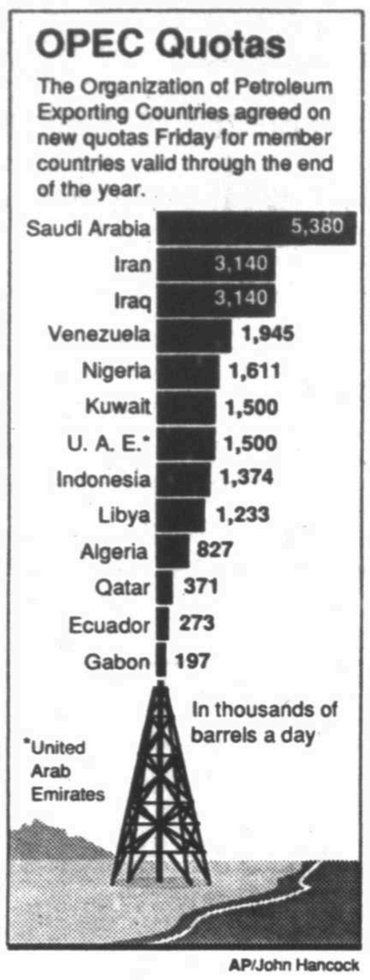

Iraq's new activism stems from big problems at home. With $80 billion in foreign debt, limited access to Western credit and a poor reputation among lenders, the country is in dire financial straits.

Iraq is almost entirely dependent on oil revenues for hard currency, and it needs hundreds of millions of dollars to develop additional production capability. OPEC sources say it even has asked several Middle East countries – including Kuwait – for financial assistance.

How long Hussein can maintain the new "enforcer" role in OPEC is unknown.

If his political threats fail to rein in Kuwaiti and Emirates production, said one oil trader observing the meeting last week, "what are you left with?"

So far Hussein has not acted on his threats, to the relief of his Arab brothers. He spent last week trying to ease the political pressure he has built up.

Administration hints at S&L vote delay

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress could avoid voting on a $100 billion savings and loan bailout for 1991 until next year by passing a stopgap bill for no more than $10 billion, a Bush administration official said Monday.

The proposal, which would postpone action on the larger appropriation until after the November election, was raised by Treasury Undersecretary Robert R. Glauber.

He told the House Banking Committee that $5 billion to $10 billion would keep the bailout going through January or February. He stopped short of endorsing the idea.

The apparent trial balloon was floated as committee members noted angry voters are pressuring them to oppose more bailout funding.

"Perception is reality ... and it's the perception on the part of the American people — 'Give me a break, I'm not paying,'" said Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio.

The administration is not disputing regulators' estimates that as much as $100 billion in new bailout money is needed for all of 1991.

Glauber said the stopgap plan also would have to include an administration proposal to exploit an error in last year's bailout bill that would allow $18.8 billion more in bailout borrowing than Congress originally intended.

The S&L bailout is an important issue in budget summit talks between the White House and congressional leaders, who are trying to fashion a package before Congress leaves Washington in October to campaign.

The stopgap plan would let Congress and the administration postpone until next year long-term funding for the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC), a year-old agency created to close and sell failed thrifts, along with a proposal to reform the deposit insurance system.

Glauber also repeated two previous alternatives: giving the administration unlimited authority to spend whatever is needed to finish the bailout or providing what is needed for 1991.

RTC Chairman L. William Seidman told the panel his agency would need to spend $80 billion to $100 billion in fiscal year 1991.

SPENDING: Income also increases

(From 4C)

Consumer spending had been a source of concern in recent months. Spending rose just 0.2 percent in February and April and 0.3 percent in March. Spending was unchanged in May.

As measured in the gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, second-quarter personal spending actually fell 0.3 percent.

But Sohn said the June personal consumption figure, which includes everything except interest payments on debt, indicates third-quarter spending will be a source of strength for the economy.

The Commerce Department also said personal incomes rose 0.4 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.64 trillion after 0.3 percent gains in April and May.

But the higher spending level resulted in a drop in Americans' savings rate — savings as a percentage of disposable income — to 4.9 percent. It had been 5.4 percent in May and 5.1 percent in April.

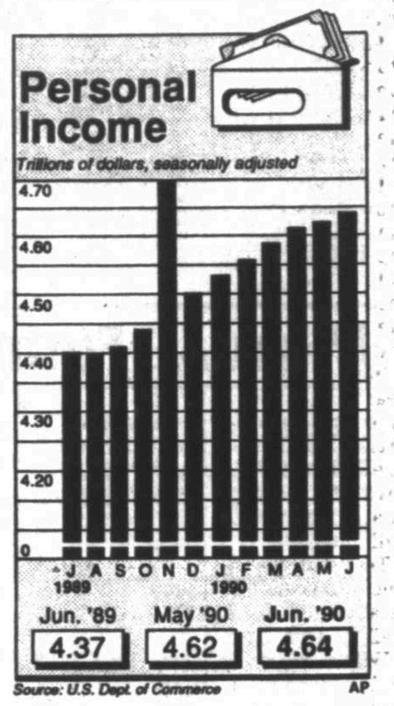

A higher savings rate means less dependence on foreign capital since funds thus would be available domestically for business investment.

All of Monday's figures reflected major changes in last year's numbers as a result of the Commerce Department's annual revision announced last week. The biggest change involved the department's $57.9 billion overestimate in wages and salaries, which resulted in lowering the 1989 savings rate from 5.4 percent to 4.6 percent.

Americans' income after taxes increased 0.5 percent, up from a 0.3 percent gain a month earlier. Wages and salaries rose $13.0 billion in June after a $10.1 billion increase in May.

Personal consumption rose $34.5 billion, including a $9.6 billion gain in spending on durable goods — items expected to last more than three years. This included a robust $6.1 billion rebound in automobile sales, which had been sluggish for much of the year.

Spending on non-durable goods rose $8.2 billion, the first advance since February. Spending for services increased $16.7 billion, the largest jump since a $20.4 billion advance in March.

ket portfolios also pay a one-time 1 percent of the sum invested to cover the cost of buying their position.

During short periods of time, international investments are very much at the mercy of the changing value of the dollar. A rising dollar hurts your investment; a falling dollar helps it.

But over longer cycles, these changes can average out. Over the past ten years, Sauter says, Morgan Stanley Capital International's index of international stocks yielded a compounded 19.8 a year if you didn't hedge against the dollar and 19.2 percent a year if you did–not much difference there.

Maybe you'd call international index funds more of a KISSS–as in, Keep It Sorta Simple, Stupid–rather than a straight KISS. But for the average investor, they still get my vote.

TOOLS: Order Increase viewed with caution

(From 4C)

creases in March and April, some analysts said the gains reflected slight rises in capital spending by domestic manufacturers, particularly in the aircraft industry.

But economists cautioned that a single large order by a single company or from any large foreign customer could affect the overall picture on orders.

They said the June figures continued to show American manufacturers were reluctant to raise their spending on capital investments from what had been sluggish levels.

"The level of new orders for machine tools indicates that the sense of sluggishness is being ratified," said Neal M. Soss, chief economist for First Boston Corp.

Soss said recent weakness in corporate profits was likely to translate into a continuation of lower capital spending and weakness in tool orders.

In recent months, auto makers have sharply curtailed tool orders because of slumping sales. That has particularly affected tool producers, because the auto industry typically accounts for about a third of domestic tool sales.

New orders from foreign customers rose 75.5 percent in June, compared with May's figures. Domestic orders were up 20.5 percent in June.

For the first six months of the year, foreign orders increased by 35.5 percent, compared with the period a year earlier, and domestic orders dropped by 10.5 percent.

Shipments of machine tools climbed 28.3 percent in June, to $350.2 million. Domestic shipments rose 27.8 percent and foreign shipments were up by 32.5 percent.

For the first six months, shipments of machine tools increased 10.6 percent, compared with the period last year. Shipments to foreign customers increased 16.9 percent while domestic shipments rose 9.7 percent for the first half of 1990.

"We are very pleased to note that both foreign and domestic orders were strong in June," said Albert W. Moore, president of the association.

But he added that interest rates continued to cause concern in the industry.

Consumers believe privacy threatened

By Chris Burritt
N.Y. Times News Service

The (credit-reporting) agencies 'are no longer just repositories of credit information. They have gotten into the marketing business — and people resent it.'

— Janlori Goldman
American Civil Liberties Union lawyer

Ray Moody has the routine down pat. "When I get the mail, I walk straight to the garbage can and start throwing the catalogs away," he said.

The 48-year-old accountant from Stone Mountain, Ga., said that on some days his family receives as many as eight catalogs. "I hate them; I think it is an invasion of my privacy," he said.

To a growing number of consumers, an even greater invasion than a mailbox full of junk mail is the ease with which mail-order retailers, telemarketers and other direct-marketing firms can obtain their names, addresses and information about their buying habits.

Indeed, that concern is at the heart of a brewing national privacy debate. Three bills have been introduced in Congress to strengthen what many consumer advocates consider to be inadequate federal laws protecting individuals.

The issue goes far beyond magazines' and catalog companies' well-established practice of selling mailing lists.

What's especially troublesome to American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Janlori Goldman is the growing practice by credit-reporting agencies of pairing information from credit reports with other data, such as public information from the U.S. Census Bureau and the U.S. Postal Service and proprietary consumer marketing by the agencies.

EVEN THOUGH creditworthiness, income and other personal information about individuals isn't divulged by the agencies, they nonetheless produce sharply focused consumer profiles that help marketers target potential customers.

And the agencies — including the three largest, Equifax Inc. of Atlanta, TRW Inc. of Orange, Calif., and Trans Union Corp. of Chicago — aren't required by law to notify consumers that information about them is being sold for a profit.

Equifax and Lotus Development Corp. plan later this year to introduce "desktop marketing" software that will allow small-business owners to narrow lists of potential customers by targeting their estimated household income, age, marital status and even type of shopper — such as "prestige shopper" versus "coupon clipper."

Equifax's main consumer data base of 120 million people — which is kept separate from its credit-reporting data base — puts consumers in 50 categories, with names such as "Upper Crust," for older families with very high estimated income and educational levels; and "Stars and Stripes," for young military families with moderate estimated income and education.

The agencies "are no longer just repositories of credit information," said Ms. Goldman, who heads an American Civil Liberties Union study of the impact of technology on individuals' privacy. "They have gotten into the marketing business — and people resent it."

SOME PEOPLE liken the growing practice to strangers peeking in their underwear drawers. "It's the fear of Big Brother watching, the psychological issue of 'I don't like people to know that much about me,' " said Todd Barr, director of direct-marketing services for Kurt Salmon Associates, an Atlanta-based management consulting firm.

But such criticism isn't going unchallenged by the credit-reporting agencies and the direct-marketing industry. They're scrambling to explain their position on the highly complex and emotional issue.

Last week, Equifax announced the creation of a high-level Office of Consumer Affairs. Larry Clemente, a corporate vice president who was appointed to head the office, said he'll serve as "an inspector general" to make sure the marketing products the company sells don't infringe upon consumers' rights.

Equifax is "seriously considering" making summary marketing reports available to consumers who want to understand how their names are being used, company spokesman John A. Ford said.

Consumers actually benefit from the building of elaborate profiles, TRW spokeswoman Jennifer Sanchez said, because they're more likely to receive solicitations for products they may want to buy. "We don't want you to get mailings about baby furniture when you are a senior citizen," she said.

Further, direct marketing is growing more popular, especially among time-pinched, dual-income families who'd rather shop by mail than go to the mall, said Lisa V. Caugherty, director of the Direct Marketing Association's Shop at Home program.

BUT FOR those who wish, the New York-based association offers free services that remove consumers' names from the lists of national direct mail and telephone marketers. And the top three credit-reporting agencies said they agreed recently to notify one another when consumers request that they be withheld from marketing lists.

But the companies' willingness to withhold names has done little to improve the generally negative image of credit reporting. "We used to be located in the basements and didn't want people to know about us," said Clemente, explaining that agencies once viewed their job as "the protection of the creditors from the deadbeat consumers."

But the role of credit-reporting agencies has changed greatly. The Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1970 required the agencies to share credit information with consumers. And with the growing concern over privacy, the agencies are trying to take a lead in shaping public opinion.

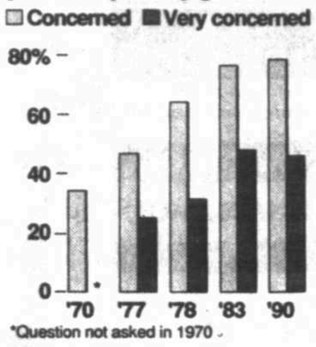

Equifax paid Louis Harris & Associates to conduct a national poll on privacy as a way to contribute to the debate. The results, released last month on the eve of congressional hearings, showed that seven in 10 Americans think that "consumers have lost all control over how personal information about them" is used.

But the poll also showed that Americans are pragmatic about the use of their personal information to obtain the benefits of credit, insurance, employment and direct marketing. More than 75 percent of Americans would be upset if they could not obtain credit based on their record of paying bills, according to the poll.

Pancake mix contains 'goodness of oat bran'

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

Recently Martha White Foods sent a box of the company's new Oat-Stax oat bran pancake and waffle mix, to be checked out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Pancake mix is not something I normally buy, because it seems to be so limited — other baking mixes have more than one purpose, but with a pancake mix, all you can make is pancakes (or waffles, if you have a waffle iron, which I don't).

But never let it be said that I turned down a chance to sample a new food (and for free!). The Oat-Stax pancakes were dutifully checked out.

According to information from the company, suggested retail price is 99 cents for a 9.5-ounce, two-pouch box (each pouch is supposed to make eight to 10 pancakes or eight waffles).

As with many other companies introducing other new products, the manufacturer tended to get gushy with its praise of Oat-Stax: "unlike other pancake mixes, Oat-Stax are a great source of dietary fiber — six grams per serving. ... and for those watching cholesterol intake, cholesterol-free instructions are included on the package."

And that's not all (not by a long shot): "The new Martha White Oat-Stax Oat Bran Pancake and Waffle Mix makes light fluffy pancakes and crispy waffles that combine the healthful goodness of oat bran with great taste and convenience. ... The mix contains only natural ingredients like unbleached flour and has no preservatives, animal fats or saturated tropical oils."

Then, the company made an advertising claim that really bothers me: "Taste so good you'll never guess they're oat bran!" Haven't food manufacturers been trying for years to convince us that oat bran tastes good? Is this just another variation of the old belief that if something tastes bad, it's good for you, and vice versa?

Anyway, in the taste-test, Oat-Stax pancakes were found to be pretty much like ordinary pancakes. There's a little bit of an oatmeal taste to them, but not enough to worry even the most dedicated oat-hater. And if they're all covered up with syrup, who can taste the pancakes anyway?

But I have to question the company's claim that each pouch will make enough batter for eight to 10 pancakes — I guess it all depends on the size of the pancakes you make, and if you like them teeny-tiny, maybe you can get eight or 10 pancakes from each envelop. I only got three out of the pouch I used. Granted, one of the pancakes was pretty big, but the other two were regular sized. So if you like your pancakes bigger than bite-sized, expect to get four or five pancakes from each pouch.

I'm not convinced that oat bran is the answer to all the dietary questions ever asked (in the past few years oat bran has been added to everything from potato chips to beer), and I'm not convinced that pancake mix makes better pancakes than baking powder mixes like Bisquick. I'll admit that for pancakes, the Oat Stax were tasty, but I'd rather stick with products that are more versatile than that.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's introduction fans feminist's fire

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to the woman who asked how to introduce her ex-daughter-in-law, Annie, really angered me.

Van Buren

You said, "Just introduce her as 'Annie, my son's former wife.'" Why should poor Annie continually be explained as someone's "whatever"? Annie is a person in her own right. She is not an appendage. "My friend, Annie" would have been sufficient.

Your answer puts you in the category of people who think a woman has to belong to some man or she's a nobody.

I work in an airline reservations office. And nothing infuriates me more than when I ask a lady her name and she says, "Mrs. John Smith." I always say, politely, "The airline prefers that you use your own name when traveling."

I have been happily married for many years and am "Mrs. John Smith" only on social occasions that include both of us. If I am alone, I am "Ilene Smith."

Please rethink your answer. — ILENE IN DESOTO, MO.

DEAR ILENE: Lay that pistol down, please. Never have I believed that a woman had to "belong " to some man — or she's a "nobody."

I suggested introducing Annie as "my former daughter-in-law" only as a means of imparting that bit of information to someone who obviously was not aware of it. In introducing strangers to each other, it's sometimes helpful to know more than just the name.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "No Excuses," the pharmacist who became a police officer because he was sick of all the excuses his customers used, I had to write because I, too, am sick of excuses.

I teach in a large suburban high school, and some of the excuses we hear would make you scream. We have students who miss 20, 30, 40 or more school days per school year, and they have the most unbelievable excuses. Worse yet, rather than do battle with parents, we accept these excuses.

When the public outcry, "What is wrong with our public schools?" is heard, most of the teachers already know the answer. Students are absent so much, they can't possibly learn anything. No wonder the foreign students are so much better educated than ours. Our children are not any less intelligent, but they haven't been taught the seriousness of attending classes daily. Their parents let them skip school, then send a note from their "doctor" — or come up with some other phony reason for their absence.

Of course, the parents are to blame for being a party to this deceit. I hope this wakes up a few parents who do their children no favors when they cover for their absences. Please withhold my name and location; I am not looking for trouble. — A TEACHER OF MANY YEARS

DEAR TEACHER: Thanks for an honest but rather discouraging letter. It is no secret that the highest grade averages are earned by children whose parents take an active interest in their education and will not aid and abet truancy.

Skipping school is nothing new — it happened when I was a student, too. But back then, most kids made up their own excuses and signed their parents' names. Are you sure that's not still the case?

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it refreshing that the top Oscar-winning film, "Driving Miss Daisy," was a movie containing not one dirty word, not one steamy sex scene, or one hint of violence or crime?

I have enjoyed the film twice and would go again. It handled the issues of human relationships and prejudice beautifully.

I wish the film industry would wake up and realize that a large segment of our society would flock to see a good movie without a lot of trash. I've gone to three films in two years, and walked out on one. I'd go more often if I knew it was something worth seeing, and I'm no prude. I'm sure there are many others who feel the same. — MRS. WALTER E. NAYLOR, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR MRS. NAYLOR: Please include me.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning that father who refused to let his son take piano lessons because he was afraid the boy would grow up to be gay or a sissy:

I would like to ask that father if he has ever heard of the following "sissies": Billy Joel, Jerry Lee Lewis, Paul McCartney, Jackson Browne, Nat King Cole, Ray Charles, Stevie Wonder and Dudley Moore.

In addition, let's not forget two former presidents of the United States, Richard Nixon and Harry S. Truman. I rest my case. — JOE B. IN CLEVELAND

New youth won't be wasted on the young

By Erma Bombeck

Forget President Bush's new lips on taxes, Donald Trump's financial problems and Nelson Mandela's worldwide love-in. For one brief, shining moment recently, Americans thought they were living in Camelot.

Bombeck

Dr. Axel G. Feller of Chicago Medical School co-authored a study in which human growth hormone could reverse the aging process. So what if it is experimental, may have risky side effects and has only been tried on men? It sure beats the picture I've got aging in my attic that every day looks more like Manuel Noriega with a bad permanent.

The real kicker to this new procedure, however, is that it has no effect on failing eyes and dying brain cells. In other words, you may look youthful on the outside, but inside you're still aging.

How will you be able to tell a man who is on this hormonal trip? Easy. He's the Arnold Schwarzenegger look-alike who goes to the beach but never travels two feet away from the restroom. Or the 70-year-old Ramboesque entry in the New York Marathon who looks like a winner but can't remember which way to run.

We were talking about the story in the supermarket checkout line the other morning, and someone said, "Taking shots to stay young is too crazy to even imagine." What's crazy about it?

When face-lifts were introduced, women had their faces sectioned off with Magic Markers and looked like a steer on a poster in a frozen food locker. When liposuction came into being, it pumped away cellulite like an oil rigger that had hit the mother lode.

When it comes to the pursuit of youth in this country, nothing is too ridiculous. I had an aunt who once bought a mail-order jumpsuit made out of parachute silk. She was supposed to lose weight if she wore the suit and attached it to the hole in her vacuum sweeper and turned on the switch. The hot stale air would fill the garment until she looked like the Goodyear blimp. This would either burn off the fat or blow it off. No one was really sure of the dynamics.

I've been on diets where you eat one kind of fruit one day and the next day pig out on another kind of fruit. I've bought jars of mud from the Dead Sea that supposedly would take the tire marks out of my skin. My body has been pounded, slapped, steamed, baked, kneaded, iced, basted and greased. So don't tell me about crazy.

Scientists are onto something. I feel it. One of these days there will be an 80-year-old woman occupying the centerfold of Playboy magazine. The staple may be holding a hip joint into place, but she won't have a single wrinkle.

Fleas considered health menace to pets, their owners

Associated Press

Fleas are the No. 1 canine health menace and American dog owners spent nearly $400 million last year combating them.

Fleas carry a host of blood-transmitted diseases, including bubonic plague, according to an article in the June issue of Sports Afield, and require more preventive treatment than all other canine ailments combined.

Despite advertising to the contrary there is no way to eliminate fleas. But you can control them and keep your pet and its environment relatively free of them.

Flea collars, flea traps, ultrasound devices, soaps, shampoos, sprays, dips and insecticidal powders each can play an important role in flea prevention, but none of these products can do the job alone and none can be more than temporarily effective.

A flea collar can kill only fleas that come within its limited range. Some shampoos, soaps, dips and powders are more powerful than others, but they also may be unsafe. The safe ones kill fleas when they are fresh, but their strength lessens with time. They wash off when the dog gets wet or rolls on the grass.

As for ultrasound devices, independent testing does not support the manufacturers' claims. Household insecticide foggers and yard sprays help control fleas when used regularly, but your dog will always bring home more. You can't spray the world.

The canine flea produces large numbers of tiny eggs that drop from the dog wherever it goes and lurk in places such as carpets, floor cracks, furniture and dog bedding, waiting in a dormant state that can last many months.

The eggs hatch when it becomes warm and humid and the flea passes quickly through stages until it becomes a hard-cased adult with the ability to jump many feet to a host. If a dog is present, the fleas will attach themselves to it. If not, they will attack humans.

If you cannot eliminate fleas, here's how to control them.

After vacuuming, spray your carpets and furniture with a household insecticide designated for flea prevention. Your veterinarian can recommend a spray that is safe and effective.

Disinfect the dog's kennel by removing all bedding and burning it. Wash the kennel with detergent.

Now, treat the dog. Shampoo the dog with a flea soap recommended by your vet. While the dog is wet, rinse with an insecticide dip designated for flea prevention. Avoiding eyes and ear canals, work the dip into the skin on the dog's head.

Fotowerks open for glamour photos

Have you ever dreamed of having a glamorous photograph of yourself such as those on the covers of fashion magazines such as Elle, Ultra and Cosmopolitan? Contrary to what you might think, you don't have to be a model to achieve that million dollar look, nor do you have to travel to a studio in New York or Los Angeles.

Have you ever wanted to enter a contest that required "model-look" photo such as the current Dove Beauty Soap Contest? Fotowerks can do the job.

Now you can go beyond the limits of conventional portrait photography at Fotowerks, Midland's own fashion, glamour and commercial studio.

"We bring out the beauty in ordinary people," said Fotowerks owner Reuben Miller, who was a recent winner in the Images photo contest. "People want to feel good about themselves and look great. We give the same primping and pampering that models get in their fashion shoots." He specializes in one-of-a-kind black and white as well as color fashion and glamour photography.

Miller brings his talent and keen eye to Midland with a splash of activities celebrating the grand opening of his studio at 4328-B W. Illinois (in the Westwood Village across from Chinese Kitchen).

Visit Fotowerks open house festivities Saturday and register for Miller's complete beauty makeover and glamour fashion photography session, valued at $295.00. Additionally, five lucky winners will be eligible for unlimited sittings for six months — with no minimum print purchase.

Entry boxes are also located this week at KCRS, 1001 S. Midkiff, Satin Silk & Lace in Odessa's Santa Fe Square, Hair Fitness at The Midlander, Mail Boxes, Etc., 4706 N. Midkiff, and Gili's Restaurante y Cantina at Garfield and Wadley and at 4411 W. Illinois.

Why are people excited about having a glamour look? "People are very fashion conscious through TV and magazines," explained Miller. "They want it and we offer a personalized fashion shoot right here in Midland." Miller's typical customer is female, 30-years-old, who wants an extra special gift for the man in her life. Fotowerks is geared to that specialty market, catering to women. "In fact, 90 percent of our customers are women, but we photograph men, couples and children eight-years-old and up."

So what is a typical session like? It depends on what kind you choose. For a regular portrait sitting, you do your own hair and makeup and Miller creates the rest of the magic. Sessions begin with a light beverage such as wine or champagne and upbeat music creates a fun mood. You choose three or four outfits from your personal collection and the sky's the limit — bring whatever you want to help you look your very best. Include everything from furs and boas to lingerie, jewelry and hats.

The fashion sessions, on the other hand, are a minimum of two hours in length, (up to four for outdoor or other locations) and include makeup and hairstyling by Scarlette Butler of Hair Fitness in Midland. "Our formulas are personalized to get the best results," Miller noted. "It turns out to be a lighter face, a true fashion look. The nose or the complexion does not stand out."

No, it's not an everyday look. "If our clients look the way they always look, then we aren't doing our job," Miller said.

Several different looks include casual, with a simple background, color portraits with an array of fashion backgrounds and romantic looks, usually taken with lingerie.

Black and white photography differs from color, Miller said, since "we can get an extremely dramatic transformation with black and white through makeup, lighting and developing. Our client's complexion takes on a porcelain look through makeup, and that brings out the natural features. It's simple, clean and bold."

In addition to fashion and glamour photography, Fotowerks can expertly handle commercial jobs, such as four color printing, brochures, business cards, posters and overhead graphs. "We will do location work in the oilfield, at gas plants, whatever," said Miller. Coming soon is slide transfer to videotape. Miller also has access to specialized photo services such as Duratran and Cibachrome.

Fotowerks is open Monday through Saturdays and Sundays by appointment. Miller will gladly make night appointments. Call 689-7589 for information. Reuben Miller and Fotowerks are not affiliated with Rubin's Studio of Photography, Inc.

Lose weight: Diet Center purchased by Midlander Tina Blake

Tina Blake, new owner of Diet Center at 2500 N. Big Spring, suite 190, announces the upcoming move August 4 of her business to 2034 W. Cuthbert (across from Midland Memorial Stadium). For a free consultation, call Tina to arrange an appointment at 684-5081.

Midlander Tina Blake, who attributes a 30 pound weight loss to the Diet Center program, has purchased the Midland franchise. Diet Center is located at 2500 N. Big Spring Suite 190 and will move to a new location Saturday at 2034 W. Cuthbert. As a successful dieter, Ms. Blake's goal is to help others lose weight safely, and more important, teach them how to keep it off.

"Losing 30 pounds at Diet Center changed my life," she explained. "When I got the opportunity to purchase the business, I jumped at it. I believe Diet Center is the safest and best weight reduction/maintenance program available today. I'm thrilled to be a part of it."

The bottom line is this: Diet Centers across North America have helped more than 4,000,000 men, women and children lose weight. When dieters take full advantage of the Diet Center program, they lose an average of 17 to 25 pounds in just six weeks.

Male dieters can lose up to one pound per day. Diet Center surveys show that dieters experience an inch loss (overall body measurement) of one inch per pound lost. This rate of weight loss can be continued safely until ideal weight is reached.

Diet Center helps individuals to learn the techniques of personal, lifelong weight management. Radical medical procedures, reliance on prepackaged foods or liquid formulas, pills, hypnosis or anything else which reduces the need for personal commitment presents only a short term solution for weight loss.

The Diet Center program provides the perfect solution to weight loss. Combining the principles of sound nutrition with a focus on complex carbohydrates, naturally occurring sugars, fiber, bulk and the motivation of private, daily counseling. Diet Center promotes optimum health while producing maximum weight loss.

Ms. Blake guides her clients through four necessary stages of weight loss and teaches them how to maintain ideal weight permanently.

Diet Center®
The weight-loss professionals.®

The Conditioning Phase prepares the dieter both physically and mentally for reducing. Individuals make the transition from their present eating patterns to a diet based on a moderate-caloric range, which features lean meats, whole grain and fresh fruits and vegetables and polyunsaturated oils.

The Reducing Phase combines a nutritionally balanced diet with daily supervision. This supervision includes private counseling and weigh-in sessions where progress in monitored and motivation is instilled through positive reinforcement. Ms. Blake provides counseling from the viewpoint of someone who knows what it is like to diet.

The final phase, Maintenance, includes weekly consultations for one full year. Nutritional eating habits are established for lifelong weight maintenance.

With involvement from the client's personal physician, Ms. Blake can adjust the program to meet dieter's individual needs.

There are no contracts to sign or hidden costs at Diet Center. A one-time registration fee is $50. An all-inclusive weekly charge of $45 covers private counseling and weigh-in sessions as well as the daily nutritional supplement.

Is Diet Center for you?

Call Ms. Blake today at 684-5081 to arrange an appointment for a free consultation. Find out how the Diet Center Program can change your life.

Dental implants can improve quality of life, restore natural feeling

Missing teeth and a tax audit are both looked upon as truly bothersome irritations. In addition, both are much less of a problem, as long as they happen to someone else! In fairness to the tax auditors, it could be said that at least they leave you a chance for a refund, but not so with teeth! It is estimated that 38 million people in this country have lost all their teeth.

In addition, it has been stated that among those over 65 years of age, over half are without their natural teeth.

This represents a considerable impairment of chewing function, considering that a properly fitted new denture, placed upon an ideal jaw ridge, can at best, exert only 12 percent of those chewing forces generated by natural teeth. The result of this reduced chewing function upon the digestive process is indirect, but nevertheless immediate. Proper chewing is the first and critical step of digestion. One need only look at the number of products that are marketed as denture adhesives and digestion aids, to see that there is a serious, and significant problem for those people affected.

Fortunately, there are now different answers. Dental implants can offer many benefits such as beautiful, natural looking teeth replacements without the constant inconvenience and discomfort of unanchored, removable dentures.

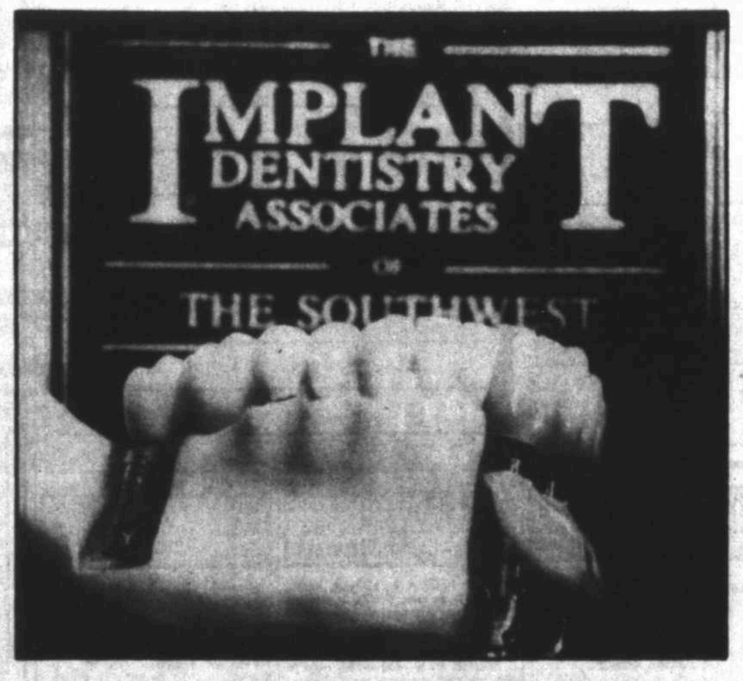

Dental implants can provide a method to anchor individual replacement teeth, or serve to replace a partial or full denture with fixed bridgework. That is to say, dental implants can replace a single tooth or several teeth, even teeth that have been lost through athletic or industrial injuries.

The overall quality of life is felt to have improved by many who have experienced the reduction of frustrations associated with dentures or removable bridgework. They also feel that dental implants not only improve their chewing ability, but also restore a feeling of more natural tooth function. If you are missing one, a few, or even all of your teeth, doesn't the placement of dental implants deserve your consideration?

For your implant treatment program, the Implant Dentistry Associates of the Southwest is a group of dentists who affiliate, or work together as a team, in the delivery of comprehensive care in the field of Dental Implantology. These dentists share neither corporate or formal unity, nor any financial relationship. They are united only by common values and a deep, firmly held devotion to the best long term interests of the patient.

Each team dentist holds a personal commitment and interest in the field of dental implantology as well as a professional appreciation for the direct and practical benefits that dental implants can provide for the patient.

In addition, each dentist has an overall willingness to share knowledge with other dentists whose orientation and interests are compatible and coupled with a willingness to work cooperatively.

The single implant on the left is supporting a conventional "fixed" replacement bridge that is cementable to place using standard dental techniques. On the other side, the multiple implants are carrying replacement teeth, which are "fixed" by screws that are "detachable" by the dental implant team at The Implant Denistry Associates of the Southwest. This has been called a "Fixed-Detachable" type.

It is also important to know these dentists are sufficiently experienced to understand that no one single type, from any manufacturer's so-called "implant system" will best serve the long term interest of all patients.

These dentists have freely associated together in their studies of dental implantology and continue to actively share a knowledge base as they cooperatively develop and execute the comprehensive treatment programs: however, as noted previously, there is a cooperative team approach but there is no sharing of costs or fees. Those matters are handled directly with the specific dental office involved.

This selected group of dentists have been referred to as The Implant Dentistry Associates of the Southwest and the founder and director of this group is Dr. Millard J. Kimery, who is a specialist in the field of periodontics. He has maintained a practice in the Permian Basin that is now in its 18th year.

Throughout that time Dr. Kimery has continued an intensive program of post-doctoral studies in order to deliver the latest in technological advances. It may be of interest to note that he is one of the very few periodontists providing techniques in laser surgery as well as dental implantology.

Periodontics is a field of dentistry that is especially concerned with preserving the natural teeth, or dentition. This orientation, coupled with the required background field of study, uniquely qualifies the periodontist for the work in dental implantology. From the earliest onset of training, the graduate student in periodontics is steeped in the concepts of cellular physiology, metabolism, tissue integrity and their ongoing maintenance.

The preserving of the natural dentition is the overriding, long term goal. Such orientation has been contrasted to other fields of study in which those concepts seem to be, at best, given only indirect attention. It has also been said that still other fields seen more orientated to prompt removal with as little trauma as possible.

Dr. Kimery's interest in the field of Dental Implantology had its origin in the late 1960s. Dr. Kimery has successfully completed an intense, comprehensive written examination provided by the American Academy of Implant Dentistry and has achieved over 450 post-doctoral credit hours of training in the study of dental implants.

In summary, if you are considering dental implants and are concerned about the adequacy of comprehensive training, please call The Implants Dentistry Associates of the Southwest. Dr. Kimery can be reached in Midland at 683-6384 and in Abilene at (915) 698-6426. The staff will be most happy to provide you with a copy of an informative brochure on how and what dental implants can do for you.

Pennsylvania abortion law contested

READING, Pa. (AP) — The fight over the toughest state abortion law in the nation entered federal court Monday as a group of doctors and abortion clinics asked a judge to throw out key sections of the law.

The case is being watched by activists on both sides of the abortion debate because of its potential to present a challenge to the landmark Roe vs. Wade decision that in 1973 established a woman's right to have an abortion.

The class-action suit argues that abortion controls passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1988 and 1989 unconstitutionally infringe on the rights of women to obtain abortions.

Among the provisions in dispute are requirements that a woman notify her husband before obtaining an abortion and that she wait 24 hours between visiting a clinic and receiving an abortion.

Other contested sections require that doctors provide counseling to women seeking abortions and that minors obtain the written consent of one parent or a court order to receive an abortion.

The law has been temporarily blocked by a federal court order pending a ruling.

Only Guam, a U.S. territory in the Pacific, has adopted more stringent controls. Its law also was temporarily blocked.

Kathryn Kolbert, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney representing the plaintiffs, said the law allows the state to interject itself into the private affairs of women and their doctors, eroding privacy rights established under the Roe ruling.

"This act puts government in the operating room and at the kitchen table with women making decisions on abortion," she said.

"It questions the ability of women to make independent decisions," she added.

One doctor testified that criminal penalties in the 1989 law might deter other physicians from performing abortions. The law, as revised last year, carries stiff penalties for doctors who violate its provisions.

Dr. Thomas Allen of Women's Health Services of Pittsburgh, one of the clinics filing suit, said malpractice insurance typically covers civil but not criminal cases.

"They are a little more afraid" of the prospect of criminal charges, Allen said. "It may deter some of my colleagues from providing the service."

This is the second time Senior U.S. District Judge Daniel H. Huyett III has been called upon to rule on the constitutionality of the Pennsylvania abortion law.

Some sections of the law are similar to those ruled unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court in a 1986 Pennsylvania case. That ruling came after Huyett upheld challenges to a 1982 abortion law.

Illegal immigration continues to rise

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Illegal immigration continues to climb as the U.S. Border Patrol reports a 30 percent increase in arrests so far this year in the San Diego sector, officials said.

Nationwide, the apprehension rate — the major indicator of illegal immigration — also is swinging upward after several years of decline.

The flow of undocumented aliens is an indication of the apparent failure of the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, which was suppose to substantially cut illegal immigration by prohibiting employers to hire undocumented workers. But the proliferation of false documents and the inability of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to completely monitor employers has enabled undocumented aliens to continue finding employment.

Border Patrol officials attribute the steady crossing of undocumented aliens on poor economic conditions in Mexico and Central America and the availability of false documents. The Border Patrol estimates that for each undocumented alien apprehended, three enter the United States.

About 1 million undocumented aliens are expected to be apprehended crossing the southern U.S. border this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. In fiscal year 1989, the Border Patrol made 850,000 arrests, the lowest number since 1986, when 1.6 million undocumented aliens were apprehended.

"We're concerned with the trend that started a year ago," said Duke Austin, an INS spokesman in Washington D.C. "The trend is not in the right direction."

But the increase in apprehensions is also due to the increased number of Border Patrol agents. There are 767 agents in the San Diego sector, compared with 722 at this time last year.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC SALE

Notice is hereby given that Beth G. Konig, acting on behalf of NORTHAMPTION PRODUCTION COMPANY, a Texas corporation (the "Secured Party"), intends to sell at public sale in accordance with the provisions of the Texas Uniform Commercial Code, for cash, the following described property (the "Collateral"):

The Sharing Ratio (as hereinafter defined) of Dasa Holdings, Inc., a Delaware corporation under that certain Joint Venture Agreement (the "JV Agreement") of Northampton/Dasa Joint Venture (the "Joint Venture") entered into effective as of November 1, 1985, between Northampton Production Company and Dasa Holdings, Inc. "Sharing Ratio" shall have the meaning set forth in the JV Agreement under Section 1.06. The Secured Party holds a security interest in the Sharing Ratio of Dasa Holdings, Inc., which was granted by Dasa Holdings, Inc. pursuant to Section 6.04 of the JV Agreement.

The public sale will take place in the offices of Baker, Brown, Sharman & Parker, 1200 Smith Street, Suite 3600, Houston, Texas on Friday, August 10, 1990, at 10:00 A.M., Houston, Harris County, Texas time. The JV Agreement is on display and available for inspection at the offices of Baker, Brown, Sharman & Parker.

Secured Party reserves the right to bid for and purchase the Collateral and to credit the purchase price against the expenses of sale and any and all amounts due and payable to Secured Party, pursuant to the terms of any and all indebtedness secured by the JV Agreement.

Prospective bidders are advised that the Collateral will be sold only in a single block and will not be split up or broken down.
