

Weary Glenn Due To Try Again

Shot Foiled By Weather

By REM PRICE

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—U.S. plans to rocket astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. into lifespace and three times around the world were frustrated Saturday by a low-lying, leaden cloud blanket.

After spending five hours and 13 minutes atop a fully loaded and highly explosive Atlas booster, a weary but still smiling Glenn returned to his special quarters where he said simply:

"Well, there'll be another day."

That day won't come before next Thursday or Friday, maybe later.

At a news conference Saturday afternoon, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said the Navy recovery forces reported they could remain at sea through Friday.

"The attempted launch is now scheduled for not earlier than Thursday, Feb. 1, or Friday, Feb. 2, depending on technical evaluation of the space craft and launch vehicle serving requirements," the NASA added.

In any case, there was an unfavorable weather report extending over the next 48 hours.

This was the fifth postponement since Dec. 20 and the dismally disappointing end to a week that was supposed to have been the greatest in U.S. space history.

Probably nobody was more disappointed than the 40-year-old astronaut himself. His friends said he had been anxiously awaiting the "go" signal.

At Palm Beach, where he is weekend, President Kennedy watched the prelaunch preparations on television. He was notified of the postponement two minutes before the formal announcement here.

Pierre Salinger, the President's press secretary, said Kennedy expressed disappointment at the news. And the President was not alone.

In Arlington, Va., Mrs. Glenn was reported "disappointed but looking forward to the next shot."

She had had a busy morning what with talking to her husband by telephone as he waited in his spacecraft and receiving a call from Vice President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson.

There were an estimated 75,000 people strung out along five miles of beach here, some of whom had camped out all night, waiting for the flight.

The postponement decision was made by Walter C. Williams, operations director for Project Mercury, after consultation with a special, three-man weather team.

The postponement was announced by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at 9:10 a.m. This was followed 10 minutes later by a weather advisory which read:

"Although good weather still prevails in the recovery areas, a layer of clouds 7,000 feet high spread over central Florida during the night and early morning. There are some breaks in the clouds, but officials felt this is not sufficient for adequate camera coverage of the Mercury-Atlas vehicle in flight."

"The weather outlook is unfavorable for at least two more days, primarily because of strong wind and rough seas in the western Atlantic."

LIONS CLUB DISTRICT GOVERNOR Jack F. Strong of Lubbock is welcomed on his arrival in Snyder by Wayland G. Holt. Holt is general chairman of the Lions Club Mid-Winter Conference being held today in Snyder. Featured speaker at the 12:15 p.m. banquet will be Aubrey D. Green, second vice president of Lions International. Nearly 500 Lions are on hand for the meet.

Lions Clubs In Midst Of Parley Here

Lions Club members and their wives from throughout District 2-T converged on Snyder late Saturday for the district's mid-winter conference.

Hosts to the gathering are the two Lions Clubs of Snyder and the Lions Clubs in Hermleigh and Ira.

The climax of the conference will come today at a luncheon where the principal speaker will be Aubrey D. Green of York, Ala., second vice president of Lions International.

Activities were launched at 5 p.m. Saturday with a district cabinet meeting at the Town House Restaurant.

Jack F. Strong of Lubbock, district governor, presided at that session and he also will preside at the conference business session at 9 a.m. today.

The first event for the ladies also was held Saturday, beginning at 5 p.m., when Mrs. Wayland G. Holt was hostess at a coffee at her home.

Wayland G. Holt of the Snyder Downtown Lions Club headed up the arrangements for the conference.

THIS POLAND CHINA hog shown by Borden Gray took top honors in the swine division of the Scurry County Junior Livestock Show. West Texas State Bank was the successful auction bidder at 90c a pound.

Neal Rites Set Monday

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Monday for Joseph Ernest Neal, 5600 Avenue P. Mr. Neal, 76, died at 10:20 p.m. Friday at Cogdell Hospital.

The services will be held at the Trinity Methodist Church with the Rev. David Hamblin officiating. Burial will be in Snyder Cemetery under the direction of Bolger Funeral Home.

Alvin Neal of San Diego, Cal.; four sisters, Mrs. Cleo Shaver of San Antonio, Mrs. Pete Hargis of Detroit, Tex., Mrs. J. Q. Hammett of Dallas, and Mrs. Agnes Brown of California; three brothers, Albert Neal of Lubbock, John Neal of San Antonio and George Neal of Buchanan, Tex. Three grandchildren also survive.

Mr. Neal was married in 1906 in Detroit, Tex., and moved to Scurry County from Detroit in 1924.

Palbearers will be Martin Murphy, Doc Griffin, Jim Farr, Ivan (Bunker) Hill, Charlie Noble, and E. M. Jack-Inman.

C. T. Williams Rites Today

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m. this afternoon for Mr. Charlie Tillman Williams, 85, Mr. Williams died at his home at 2408 Avenue L Saturday at 10 a.m.

Mr. Williams was born May 16, 1876 in Tupelo, Miss. He was married in 1901 in Venus, Tex., and came to Snyder in 1902 from Johnson County. He was a member of the Northside Baptist Church, and was a retired farmer.

The services will be held at the Northside Baptist Church with the Rev. Jack Dean, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Snyder Cemetery under the direction of Bolger Funeral Home.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Lula Hart Williams; one daughter, Mrs. Bill Snider of Snyder; two sons, A. J. Williams of Snyder and Johnny S. Williams of Mt. Pleasant, Tex. Two grandchildren also survive.

Palbearers will be Ben Lenoir, Herman Doak, Joe York, Doug Burney, J. E. LeMond and Dewey Moore.

Saturday Weather Is Near Perfect

Near perfect weather covered Texas Saturday.

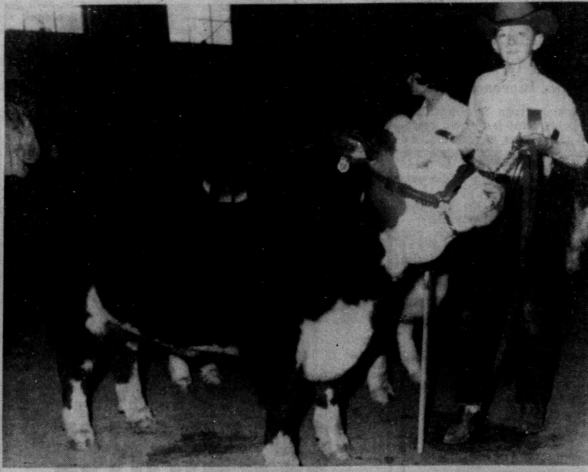

Skies generally were clear and temperatures were mild for January. A few clouds lingered late in the day in East Texas and along the coast but the great bulk of Texas was fair.

Most afternoon temperatures were in the 50s and 60s.

Rain, fog and drizzle dried up in East Texas and no more moisture was indicated for any part of the state through Sunday.

Fresh northerly winds made Central and East Texas slightly cooler than on Friday.

Jerry House, a member of the Snyder Chapter of the Future Farmers of America, displays his lightweight fine wool lamb which was named Grand Champion of the sheep division of the Scurry County Junior Livestock Show. Snyder Co-op gin was the purchaser.

THIS HEREFORD steer shown by Bob Daugherty of the Fluvanna 4-H Club took top honors in the beef division. It was purchased by Snyder National Bank for 85c a pound.

Livestock Show Judge Has High Praise For Animals

Judge L. M. Hargrave of Texas Tech described the Scurry County Livestock Show as the best ever held in Snyder, and mentioned that entries that placed third or fourth this year easily could have been grand champions in previous years.

A capacity crowd was on hand for the final judging Saturday morning, and an almost equally large crowd was on hand for the auction Saturday afternoon. The

Time Extended On Cuba Resolutions

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—The deadlocked inter-American foreign ministers Saturday night postponed for two days their deadline for resolutions on how to deal with Fidel Castro's Communist Cuba. The move will carry their conference well into a second week.

The 48-hour extension decision was reached at a meeting of all delegation chiefs who sought desperately to hammer out a formula for punishing Castro that would be satisfactory to all.

But they continued wrangling on how and when to throw the Castro regime out of the councils of the American family of nations.

Earlier the ministers agreed to brand Castro's regime a Western Hemisphere outlaw but this apparently was the only major point approved by all 20 ministers.

The original timetable of the conference—which began last Monday—was shattered for the third straight time by Saturday night's action. There were two previous 24-hour extensions for presenting resolutions to be included in the final conference declaration.

The meeting, originally scheduled to end Monday, now probably will end Wednesday.

U. S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, leading the drive for tough action against Castro, told reporters the first week's deliberations had achieved progress. He expressed confidence the delegates during the week may be able to clear up what he called the few points still unsettled.

The crux of the debate causing the deadlock is a policy declaration sought by the United States and 12 other members reading Cuba out of the Organization of American States.

But a seven-nation go-along bloc, led by Brazil and Mexico, stubbornly opposes quick action. The seven argue there is now no legal basis in the charter of the OAS for eviction of an offending member.

They want a delay of perhaps 60 days or more for a committee study of how to go about ousting Cuba from OAS agencies.

The impression was growing in conference circles that a prolonged deadlock may make it necessary for the opposing groups to draft separate declarations. One would include points obtaining general approval, such as the incompatibility of the Havana regime with the inter-American system.

But disputed points such as immediate steps for expulsion and the application of sanctions against Cuba, could be contained in a tough-line document sponsored by the 13 nations under U. S. leadership. Thirteen votes would be one short of the number needed for OAS action.

Purcell Wins Easy Victory

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP)—Graham B. Purcell, a Democrat in the tradition of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson and the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn, captured a seat in the U. S. House Saturday night.

He beat Republican Joe Meissner, 38, in a special runoff election. Meissner pegged his campaign to a solid conservative viewpoint.

A late count showed Purcell with 20,867 ballots and Meissner with 12,102.

The vote count left no doubt that the district had elected the 42-year-old Purcell from the moment the first returns flowed in. Purcell led at the start and stayed there.

President Kennedy issued a plea to voters of this sprawling North Central Texas district to elect Purcell.

Saturday night's results assured Kennedy of two additional House votes more in line with the administration viewpoints than that of the southern Democrats' block.

Kennedy picks up the second supporter Tuesday in Texas' 4th District when two administration Democrats are in a similar special election runoff.

SNYDER AREA OIL

Walter Young has completed No. 3 L. A. Strain as a producer in the Sharps Ridge (1,700-foot) field of Mitchell County.

It pumped 36 barrels of 30-gravity oil, plus 82 per cent water, daily from perforations at 1,554-1,602 feet, which had been fractured with 20,000 gallons. Gas-oil ratio was nil.

Total depth is 1,642 feet, with 4½-inch casing set at 1,640 feet.

The venture spots seven miles northwest of Colorado City on the south edge of the field and 330 feet from the property line and 660 feet from nearest completed well in section 3, block 27, T&P survey.

Robert L. Wood of Midland and others will drill No. 1-B Bibby Wallace in the East Clairmont (Strawn) field of Kent County.

Location is five miles northeast of Clairmont and 660 feet from south and east lines of section 55, block 96, H&C survey. Contract depth is 6,700 feet.

Sun Oil Company has completed No. 2 G. W. Rodgers on the northeast edge of the North Clairmont (Strawn) field of Kent County.

It pumped 121.73 barrels of 30.6 gravity oil from perforations at 6.1 574-66 feet which had been washed with 500 gallons of mud-calc. Gas-oil ratio was 151-1.

Total depth is 6,636 feet, with 3½-inch casing set at 6,626 feet.

Site is seven miles north of Clairmont and 467 feet from south and west lines of section 50, block L, H&C survey.

Dilbi-Taylor Oil Corporation of Midland is drilling below 4,900 feet in lime and sand on a 7,700-foot Ellenburger contract in a Scurry County wildcat, No. 1 Travis Rhoades.

The venture is two miles northwest of an Ellenburger failure, 7½ miles northeast of Snyder and 660 feet from east and 1,900 feet from south lines of section 151, block 2, H&C survey.

Mallard Petroleum, Inc., of Midland is drilling below 7,515 feet on an 8,800-foot Ellenburger contract in No. 1 Griffin, Garza County wildcat.

It spots seven miles north of Fluvanna, 1½ miles north of the Fluvanna field and 230 feet from south and east lines of section 16, block 6, H&C survey.

GOP Slates Primary In 1st District

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP)—For the first time in more than a third of a century, the Republican party will hold a primary election in the 1st Congressional District of Texas.

James A. Timberlake, 43, a Texarkana business man, will be a Republican candidate in the 1st Congressional District, opposing the veteran Democrat, Rep. Wright Patman.

The Republican primary will be held May 5, the same day as the Democratic primary.

Timberlake said he had observed that the conservative vote of the 11-county district had gained with each election, "and as a Republican candidate for this office, I plan to run on a conservative platform."

"Being a conservative I make this venture into politics as a member of the Texas Republican party, whose leadership is vigorous and conservative," he said.

"For the past 20 years I have watched outside influences and certain pressure groups gain control of our government. We have lost a major portion of our God-given freedoms and I hope that it is not too late for our returning to and embracing the Christian principles upon which this country was founded."

To avoid any conflict of interests, Timberlake has resigned as a director of the Texarkana National Bank to which he was recently elected. Timberlake, a hardware dealer, was born and reared here and educated at Texarkana College and at Southwestern University at Washington, D. C. He was with the FBI for three years and was with the Army during World War II.

Timberlake and his wife have four children, aged 4 to 10.

Korth Tells Of Navy's Objectives

MIDLAND (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth said Saturday night that under the proposed defense budget the Navy would be spending about $42 million a day during the new fiscal year.

He made this estimate on the basis of the proposed $52 billion over-all defense budget of which he said the Navy expects to receive 30 per cent.

In a speech to a Chamber of Commerce dinner, Korth sketched in some things for which the Navy would use the funds:

To maintain a force of 665,000 Navy men and 190,000 Marines; to build 37 ships, including 14 atomic powered submarines; to overhaul and rehabilitate 30 older ships, mostly destroyers; and buy about 800 planes.

"While we will buy the most modern ships, missiles and aircraft available," Korth said, "we must recognize that we are in a constant race with scientific advancement. Research, therefore, must be done. That is why we plan to spend about $1.5 billion on research and development during the coming year."

Korth said he believes that all our nuclear war is improbable, but that nevertheless "we must insure and strengthen this improbability by maintaining a strong deterrent to the deliberate initiation of an all-out war by the communists."

Korth, a Texan, praised the man who preceded him, John Connally, who resigned the Navy secretaryship to seek the governorship of Texas. Both are from Fort Worth.

Korth said of Connally: "His year in office as secretary made lasting impacts on the Navy that are good for our nation as well. I am grateful to him, as I know you are, and my earnest desire is to continue the splendid work he started so well."

Judge Proves He Has Better Memory

MUSKOGON, Mich. (AP)—Ralph Sodernick apparently doesn't remember faces, but Muskogon Municipal Court Judge William Caughey does.

Sodernick, 48, approached Caughey in downtown Muskogon Friday and asked him to "break loose with a little change."

The judge recognized Sodernick as a man he had sentenced 10 days earlier for panhandling. Sodernick is back in jail, this time for 30 days.

about his appearance or his outward manner to set him apart. He is of medium height, he wears glasses and he is lean like most Japanese. Married three years and the father of an 11-month-old daughter, Oishi at 28 is strictly average—and likeable. His neighbors think so, too, as they see him busily shuttling to and from his shop on pickups and deliveries, a huge wicker and canvas basket tied to the rear of his motorcycle.

But Oishi is obsessed with what to him is a horrifying thought. Someday his neighbors may find out that he was a crew member of the ill-fated fishing boat Lucky Dragon that was showered with radioactive dust from the U.S. thermonuclear test at Bikini in 1954.

Oishi is terribly afraid that if this happens he will be ostracized, looked upon as abnormal, a man to be pitied, the potential communicator of some horrible disease.

Oishi is not alone in this fear. Several of the Lucky Dragon's former crewmen have buried themselves in anonymity for the same reasons. Some changed their names because employers refused them jobs when they found out who they were. Others accept their dubious claim to fame with resignation.

There were 23 men aboard the Lucky Dragon on that 1954 voyage southward from Yaitu, the boat's home port in central Japan, to the tuna grounds of the central Pacific—a voyage they say was jinxed from the start. A cable line broke as the 100-ton boat pulled away from her pier. The weather was unusually rough. Many of the boat's fishing lines were severed and lost.

Tuna was so scarce the captain decided to head farther south into the Marshall Islands. There, on March 1, the serenity of the night was shattered by a blinding, orange-red flare on the horizon.

Oishi was in charge of putting the tuna into cold storage below deck.

He recalls: "Several hours later, white ashes descended on us. (The Lucky Dragon at the time was less than 100 miles from Bikini where the H-bomb was exploded.) We were puzzled at first and then scared. The ashes covered our boat and our bodies. I guess I was lucky because my job was below deck which exposed me less."

As the Lucky Dragon headed home, the crew members began suffering from a peculiar loss of appetite, a confusing listlessness. Some experienced a strange yellow discharge from their eyes. Others found their badly burned skin breaking out in sores. Hair began falling from their heads in large chunks.

The national uproar that followed their return, and the crisis in U.S.-Japanese relations it set off, were the greater because of the atomic bombs of World War II. The aftermath of the atom bombs had imprinted in Japanese minds an overwhelming, emotional fear of radiation sickness. Japanese, anxiously hovering over the Lucky Dragon's victims during their long convalescence, wondered what would happen to them.

Would they die of leukemia or some other disease they had heard could be induced by the "ashes of death"?

Would their offspring be abnormal like the deformed vegetables that had been found growing in soil subjected to heavy atomic radiation?

What girl would want to marry such a risk?

When a crewman, Aikichi Kuboyama, died six months later, it was the clincher for many—notwithstanding some doubts as to whether radiation had been the immediate cause of his death.

The remaining 22 crew members were discharged from the hospital after a year, and were given compensation by the United States. Japanese doctors pronounced them well but cautioned them against hard work. They were required to undergo medical checkups once a year.

Of the 22, one has not been heard of since he left home in 1954 suffering from a nervous breakdown. Five have returned to fishing. The rest have turned to other jobs.

Of the Lucky Dragon's crew, 17 have married since the Bikini blast and have 12 children among them. Their doctors say they know of no abnormal births. Oishi, who was married in 1959, has a healthy 11-month-old daughter.

Seated cross-legged in a back room of his tiny shop, Oishi spoke hesitantly of his experience. He had been reluctant to be interviewed at all.

Though Oishi admits that he feels well physically, except that he perhaps tires easily, the fear in his mind persists.

"How would you feel," he asked, "if you found that girls did not want to marry you because they thought you were different from others?"

He says he went through several unsuccessful "mials" (the formal introduction of man and woman through a go-between with matrimony the object) before the final "mial" at which he met Nobuko.

"She is a very understanding girl," he said.

Pondering on the voyage of the Lucky Dragon, Oishi said: "The doctors say we can lead normal lives. But then, doctors (at least in Japan) tell their patients very little. I want to feel I'm normal. I so much want to be normal."

With radioactive fallout from recent Soviet tests again in the news, Oishi was doubly sensitive. He telephoned this writer shortly after the interview to make an admission.

After fumbling a while for words, he said: "There is something I didn't tell you. But having talked to you the way I did, I think you should know. Nobuko is not our first child. Our first was born a year after we married. It was born deformed and dead."

Plans Complete For C-C Banquet Tuesday

Ticket sales were continuing Saturday for the annual banquet of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, which is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Snyder High School Cafeteria.

Prospects were that several hundred people would be on hand for the banquet, which will feature Dr. Walter Kerr, founder of the Walter Kerr International Youth Crusade with headquarters in Tyler. Dr. Kerr is one of the best known speakers in the Southwest.

The annual banquet also will be the occasion for 1961 officers to officially relinquish the reins of the organization to the 1962 slate. Six new members of the board of directors will assume their posts, while six others will retire from the board.

Harold Lack will take over as 1962 president of the organization. He succeeds Joe F. Cargile.

Others on the complete new slate of officers are James Rosser, first vice president; E. H. (Ab) Williamson, second vice president, and Charles Hartman, treasurer.

Lack served as second vice president during 1961, while Herbert Feather is retiring first vice president and Bud England is retiring treasurer. However, all 1961 officers, except Cargile, still have one year to go on two-year terms on the board of directors and Cargile will continue as an ex-officio member of the board as immediate past president.

Other holdover directors are J. Mark McLaughlin and D. D. Shelburne.

New directors are C. O. Holder Jr., Claude McCormick Sr., R. C. Patton, Badger Robertson, Rosser and Williamson.

Out-going directors are Hugh Boren Jr., Gene L. Dulaney, Mel Zane Gilbert, Dave Harlin, Charles Musslewhite and William H. Wilson Jr.

Other ex-officio directors serving during the past year were

Latins Seeking Sure Thing

An AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN
PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP) — Some Latin-American delegates meeting in the converted gambling casino of this isolated resort seem to want to see the roulette ball stop rolling before they place their bets.

That is one likely reason for the confusing delaying tactics adopted here by the big timid nations fearful of repercussions in their countries if they move too quickly against Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Because all this could have been foreseen, the question now being asked by some disappointed persons is whether this conference ever should have been held at all. Some even are wondering whether the United States has plunged ahead too far, too impatiently and found itself suddenly beyond the point of no return.

One disillusioned Latin-American diplomat, who had been hopeful of quick and strong action against Cuba's Communist government, sighed and remarked: "We Latin Americans sometimes seem to like to wait until the lottery is over before picking a number."

In its frustrating attempts to keep the Cuban Communist regime in its place, the United States often looks to detached observers like an elephant harassed by a mouse.

The United States, smarting from the failure of the April invasion of Cuba, in effect now has its hands tied behind its back. President Kennedy's administration is on record with a pledge not to try again to blast Castro out of existence by armed force.

There must be other ways to bottle up Castro. What can be done?

Nations that have broken relations with Castro and were most immediately threatened by Cuban subversion cried out for help. The United States then went for the idea that collective inter-American family measures were the most likely reaction to the Havana menace. Thirteen nations had broken with Castro. Only 14 were needed for a two-thirds majority vote to quarantine his regime.

In addition, the United States saw an opportunity to exploit Castro's Marxist-Leninist confession among frightened governments to the south.

But in their eagerness for action and faith in the promise offered by the Alliance for Progress did the Kennedy administration plan under the timidity of the big but disturbed nations?

Groping for ways to place Castro's communism beyond the pale, the United States probed among leading statesmen of Latin America. From them it was learned there was a willingness to go along with the idea of ejecting the Havana regime from the Organization of American States. The United States liked the idea. It seemed even stronger and more practical than a unanimous diplomatic break with Cuba.

The United States bought the idea and apparently came to this conference with that in mind, hoping for a quick surgical operation. But the big Latin-American nations wanted to prescribe tranquilizers to combat the cancer of Castroism.

The big nations, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico, seemed to be fishing for some formula by which

Leaders Are Selected For Heart Fund Drive In County

The Scurry County Heart Council has announced the appointment of chairman, vice chairman, and committee heads for the 1962 Heart Fund Campaign here.

Bill Newsom, administrator, Cogdell Memorial Hospital, has been named chairman, and Badger Robertson, vice chairman, according to Dr. Thomas F. Harley, president of the council. Dr. Harley also announced that the following would serve "as committee chairmen in the month-long campaign which begins here and throughout the nation on Feb. 1: Mrs. D. M. Cogdell, Jr. and Mrs. C. V. Thompson, Jr. co-chairmen advance gifts; and Mrs. Hugh Boren, Jr. and Mrs. Ken Davis, "Heart Sunday" (Feb. 25) co-chairmen. Dr. Harley noted that Newsom had been appointed to serve in place of Clyde Godwin who was forced to resign as chairman due to ill health.

The Heart Fund drive will reach its high point on Heart Sunday, Feb. 25, when a large number of volunteers in all of the community's residential areas will visit their neighbors to deliver educational information on "heart attack" and to accept contributions.

Local Heart Fund contributions make possible the support of cardiovascular research in Texas and in clinics and laboratories throughout the nation, the new campaign chairman said in evaluating the importance of the drive.

BILL NEWSOM
... heads campaign

"Research is the heart of the Heart Association's program," he explained. "More than $5 million Heart Fund dollars have been invested in this phase of the program since 1948 and have been responsible for great progress in saving hearts through new methods of diagnosis, treatment, and prevention," he said.

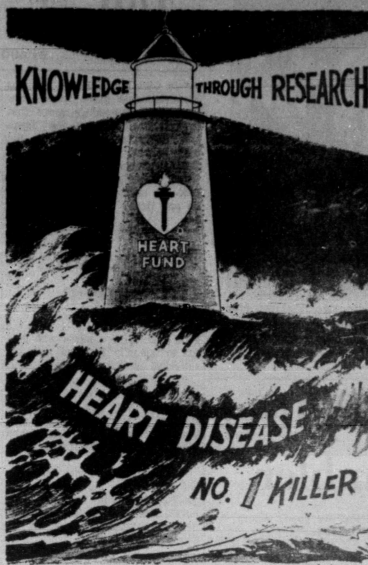

Additional Heart Fund dollars support broad programs of public and professional education and community service which "bring the benefits of research back to all of us," Newsom continued.

Since last July, the Scurry County Heart Council has provided public education programs for seven men's civic groups, five women's clubs, two high school assemblies, the school faculties of Snyder and Scurry County, and on Jan. 16 presented Dr. Hugh E. Wilson, heart surgeon from Dallas, at a public luncheon attended by 109 people. In the area of professional education, the Scurry County Heart Council presented a nurses heart seminar last July which was attended by some 55 RN's and LVN's from the Snyder area. Dr. Wilson also spoke at a dinner meeting of the Colorado Basin Medical Society on Jan. 16.

"Although the heart diseases are still the nation's No. 1 health enemy, many research leaders believe we are on the verge of significant breakthroughs which will ultimately lead to the control of the heart diseases," Newsom continued. "The residents of Scurry County can help to speed the day of victory over these diseases. Their Heart Fund dollars will make it possible to expand the research needed to save thousands of lives."

"The Heart Fund is a great crusade in which we all can participate through giving and serving as volunteers. I am happy and proud to serve as chairman of this 1962 drive," he added.

Contributions to the Heart Fund may be mailed to the Scurry County Heart Council, Route 1, Box 207, Snyder.

Snyderite's Sister Dies In San Antonio

Mr. and Mrs. Hulen Malone and family are out of town this weekend in order to attend the funeral services for Mr. Malone's sister, Mrs. Adell Ward of Temple.

Mrs. Ward died following a lengthy illness in a San Antonio hospital Wednesday night. Funeral services are to be Monday, with Phillip and Lucky Funeral Home of Rockdale in charge of arrangements.

Effort Asked To Curb Pollution

By CHARLES HASLET

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Engineers are trying for a go-ahead on experiments to curb salt water pollution of southwestern streams, Sen. Robert Kerr, D-Okla., said Saturday. If the program is authorized and successful in Texas, it could salvage up to 36 million acre feet of water a year for use in the Red and Arkansas River basins, Kerr said.

Southwestern Division Army Engineers at Dallas informed Kerr they have given the Rivers and Harbors Board an interim survey report by the Tulsa District engineer. The report recommends congressional authorization for experimental construction work in two Red River basin areas.

The estimated cost is $300,000. One project would provide an earth dike around the Estrella spring on the edge of the plain of Prairie Dog Town fork of Red River, one-half mile east of Estrella, Tex.

A second would be a concrete standpipe at a smaller spring near Guthrie, Tex., along the south fork of the Wichita River. Tests would continue for about six months or until results become apparent.

vious cost advantages over other alternate methods and would be applicable to other similar situations," the Engineers said.

Don McBride, an aide to Sen. Kerr chairman of the Senate Public Works subcommittee, said the Army Engineers and U. S. Public Health Service are cooperating in a broad investigation of the salt pollution problem in the Arkansas-Red River basins.

McBride said the amount of salt going into Lake Texoma each year is the equivalent of a block of dry salt the size of the empire state building. Salt loads are heavy also in Arkansas River tributaries above Keystone Reservoir, he said.

The Army Engineers said its salt source areas have been determined by the Public Health Service to be of such magnitude in the Red-Arkansas River areas as to warrant specific study.

Driver Uninjured As Car Overtakes

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated an accident at 2 a.m. Saturday morning just east of the Highway 190 overpass east of Snyder.

The 1964 Ford driven by O. V. Turner of Haskell struck and killed a large dog, Turner lost control of the car and it rolled completely over coming to rest back on the wheels.

No injuries were reported.

Tyler Lawyer Enters Race

TYLER (AP) — Warren G. Moore, Tyler lawyer and civic leader, said Saturday he will run for congressman at large in the Democratic primary.

He is a former U.S. attorney for East Texas. He was a naval intelligence officer during World War II.

Born on a farm in Freestone County, he graduated from Teague High School. He worked his way through Trinity University, waiting on tables and working as a railroad section hand and brakeman.

Moore taught school and coached at Pampa High School two years before becoming a law student in Washington. He was admitted to the bar in 1937.

His wife is the former Lillian Cochran of Lufkin. They have a son, Warren Jr., 16, and a daughter, Karen, 12.

North Carolina's Furniture Industry Outgrows Sneers

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Take a chair you're sitting in. Take a look at it. If it's wood and recent, odds are better than one in four it was made in North Carolina; if upholstered, about one in seven.

The point is the rise, over a few short decades, of a region from stepchild status to the dominant position in the nation's furniture industry.

Not so long ago, furniture buyers spoke sneeringly of North Carolina and the South as the borax line, distinguished by exaggerated curlicues and rickety construction.

The sneers are gone, but not the buyers. They're here, from all over the country, when the major fall and spring markets are held.

"Without question," said James T. Ryan, celebrating his 50th anniversary as executive secretary of the Southern Furniture Manufacturers Association, "within 200 miles of High Point is found the largest concentration of furniture production in the world."

The area takes in part of southwest Virginia, and snips of Tennessee and South Carolina, but the furniture heartland is in North Carolina.

Figures from the Commerce Department's 1958 census of manufacturers show of the nation's furniture production, North Carolina accounted for 26.6 per cent of wood bedroom furniture, 34.9 per cent of wood dining room and kitchen furniture, and 15.9 per cent of the upholstered wood household furniture.

The 1958 figures are the most recent. Knowledgeable people in the industry say the next census of manufacturers in 1963 likely will show further gains.

The State Employment Security Commission reported 400 plants produced over a half billion dollars worth of furniture in 1959.

Leadership born of adversity, youthful executives quick to catch taste trends, proximity to materials and markets — these are some of the explanations offered for the transformation and growth of furniture in North Carolina and the South.

A trenchant observation, tongue only partially in cheek, was made by Prof. Rudolph Willard of North Carolina State College which has even added a furniture manufacture and management course.

Family ownership is a familiar pattern in the furniture industry, he pointed out.

"Our plants have reached only about the second generation, while in the northern states they are to the third and fourth generations, and losing interest in what granddaddy did," he said.

As such, the furniture industry has a relatively short history in North Carolina. The first factories date from the 1880s and 90s. Today furniture ranks behind textiles and tobacco among the state's industries.

Crafted, unstyled furniture for local use was turned out by the first factories. About the time of World War I, with the local economy slack, a gear began for wider markets.

This was still largely inexpensive, and tasteless, furniture. Through the depression years, to stay afloat, North Carolina manufacturers had to learn how to produce and sell cheaply.

In the post-World War II boom manufacturers found they could use the techniques developed for making cheap furniture to turn out the tasteful, styled product in demand by the middle and upper middle income groups.

The rise of the South in furniture has been described this way by Raymond S. Reed, veteran observer of the furniture scene and columnist for a trade publication:

"The South has invested in design, equipment, and youth. These are the basic reasons why it dominates the furniture picture."

"No other furniture area has spent so much to employ top flight design talent. Where furniture manufacturers in other regions nurse along, patch up, try to get a few more years from their outdated antiquated machinery, the Southern makers write it off, throw it out, and replace it with efficient, high speed, productive equipment."

Geography gave North Carolina some natural advantages, the state being in the middle of vast hardwood forests and within 200 miles of half the nation's population.

Salesmanship has a important part, and here in High Point is where the first pitch is made.

The gleaming Southern furniture exposition building is a 14-story showcase, with one million square feet for manufacturers to spread their wares.

It's a beehive in October and April, when new lines are brought out with fanfare similar to showings of the Paris and New York fashion houses.

The market here isn't confined to the High Point export, but spreads out into factories along "furniture highway," stretching more than 100 miles in a sort of figure-8 loop from High Point to Thomasville, Lexington, Lenoir, Drexel, Hickory, and Winston-Salem.

If the buyer doesn't find what he wants, he can have it made to order.

FPC Lineup Completed By Kennedy

HOUSTON (AP) — President Kennedy has completed his new lineup for the Federal Power Commission (FPC).

Harold Woodward, a Chicago lawyer, is the fifth FPC appointee in less than a year on the five man board.

The commission holds regulatory authority over interstate natural gas shipments affecting every state except Maine, Vermont, and Hawaii.

The grand slam in FPC appointments is significant for two reasons.

First, a completely new lineup of commissioners will administer the area formula for determining wellhead prices of natural gas. All the authors of the formula adopted Sept. 28, 1960, have departed.

Second, Woodward's appointment will give the administration complete control of an agency that drew sharp criticism in a special report placed in Kennedy's hands three weeks before he took office.

James Landis, former Harvard Law School dean, said the FPC had a tendency to be dominated by industry. Landis, a former member of several regulatory agencies, also called for a thorough reorganization.

"Without question, the FPC represents the outstanding example of the breakdown of the administrative process," Landis said.

Landis also said the tremendous backlog of natural gas cases resulted primarily from inaction.

The White House said this week Woodward will succeed Jerome Kuykendall, whose resignation became effective Jan. 1 although his term was not to end until June 22.

Commissioner Frederick Stueck died July 15. His appointment was to have run until 1964.

Kuykendall, Stueck, and Arthur Kline wrote the area pricing formula. Kline's term expired last June 22.

"THE GHOST RIDES AGAIN"

"Is Proverbs 31-67; God's word to me or to anyone? Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more."

It has been implied, that either this passage is not inspired, or that the Bible teaches excessive drinking. The mistake however is taking two verses alone, divorced from the context, a most dangerous and misleading practice. If this whole paragraph from verses 1 to 9 inclusive be read, it will be found to contain not an encouragement to drunkenness, but a scathing indictment against extravagance and lust in any form. The message from his Mother to King Lemuel and from God to us all, seems to be, that the wealthy should give of their abundance to the sick and the poor and to use their influence on behalf of the oppressed and the needy. The whole paragraph teaches that wine is for use, as all the Scriptures teach when they are not divorced from their contexts. Wine, although intoxicating, was not only permitted to be drunk, but was also used for Sacred purpose and is spoken of as a blessing. Gen. 49:12, Gen. 14:24-26, Exod. 29:40, Lev. 23:13, Num. 15:5, Amos 4:9.

The Lord himself turned approximately 125 gallons of water into wine at Cana, he did not blame the people but the religious leaders for the perversion of his Father's Ordinances. Peter, the Day of Pentecost, never denied he drank wine, he simply said "the hour is too early."

According to the figures in the Snyder Daily News of Jan. 26th., 1962 (Snyder being a good clean, dry town) we are well ahead of the other cities in drunken arrests, percentage wise. Any local option election is not a matter of morals or religion, it is strictly a matter of business. We believe if we can legalize this great industry and put it under the proper authorities, it will create more jobs, more industry and keep hundreds of thousands of dollars that we desperately need to further our growth at home where it belongs. Our neighboring cities are choking off tens of thousands of dollars of tourist money from Snyder. In order to compete with these cities for the tourist dollars, and to keep our own money at home, we have to have as much to offer as they have. As far as Snyder being dry, any child can tell you it is not, never was and never will be. In the first place we are not raising a bunch of morons, our children go to college in wet towns and they are certainly not criminals when they come back. If some of our religious leaders would become more interested in Cor. 1:10 than in some petty local elections we would all be better off. Abilene did not realize how much the tourist dollar meant to her, until the freeway bypassed her. She knows now. The large sign west of Snyder is one example of the tens of thousands of dollars she is spending in an effort to recapture the tourist dollar, and we are going to be faced with the same problem. We can help ourselves, we can increase population, rent our buildings and houses, create more jobs, build more schools, more churches, more homes and enjoy prosperity. We should be growing. Our City in one of the richest counties in Texas and it has 20 or more empty buildings within a block or two of the square, empty houses in every part of town, on good highways, two railroads and plenty of water and bootleggers by the dozens and surrounded by wet towns. Don't be misled by fantastic ghost figures of drunkenness and crime. Pay your poll tax and let's get going. The wine business was quite an industry when Christ was on earth, I never read of anyone getting any petitions to get rid of it when He was here.

Show Place Is Damaged

MARSHALL (AP)—The Edmund Key Sr. home, a historic mansion and one of Marshall's show places, was heavily damaged by fire Saturday.

Art treasures in the home also were badly damaged by fire and water. The cause of the fire was not at once determined.

Mrs. Key, a widow, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Nancy Key Dulaney, were alone in the 2-story Victorian mansion when the fire started. Both escaped unhurt.

The mansion was located just outside the business district on U. S. 80.

The home had been a show place for more than 50 years. The Keys, members of a banking family, had filled it with art collected during world tours.

A VETERAN of many years in the oil fields, I. V. Zeck stands beside the test bench at Y-Z. All units manufactured by the firm are given thorough testing before delivery.

A CUTAWAY VIEW shows the Y-Z Dual Load Fuel Valve in operating position. The valve is designed, patented and manufactured by Y-Z Engineers Service.

AN AUTOMATIC crude oil sampler, built by Y-Z Engineers Service, is used on LACT units. Here Ted Zeck indicates the sight glass which shows the level of the accumulated sample.

THIS VIEW of the fabricating section shows an oil sampler in the first stages of manufacture. Ralph Yielding, a fabricator, stands beside the basic shell of the unit.

Y-Z Products Used In Many Oil Fields

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of articles on business firms in Scurry County who manufacture products for distribution outside the county. Our best wishes go to all such firms.

BY DICK ROBERTS
"Rolling with the punches" might best describe the reason for the success of the Y-Z Engineers Service. Two catastrophes—one natural and one man-made—could have brought death to a less energetic management.

The man-caused problem, automation of the oil field, actually opened new fields. Opened in 1951 at the Y-Z Carburetor Service, the change in needs as the oil field changed was met by a change in the company. The new name, Y-Z Engineers Service, now more accurately describes the function of the firm. Carburetor and magnetos service are still a large part of the operation, but of increasing importance are two items used in Lease Automatic Custody Transfer (LACT) units.

As they saw the service business would decline with LACT, Y-Z went into the manufacturing business. An item for which there was a need was an automatic crude oil sampler. The sampler built by Y-Z has become popular all over Texas and as far west as California. Units of the pneumatically operated samplers are seeing service in about a dozen states in the Report Peron To Return For Race

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Ex-dictator Juan D. Peron will return from Spain to run for lieutenant governor of Buenos Aires Province, says Peronista leader Andres Framini.
Framini told a mass rally of Peronista supporters Friday night he got the word in a telephone call to Peron in exile in Madrid. The "crowd" of about 20,000 cheered.
Framini said he will run for governor with Peron as his partner, on the Justicialista ticket March 18. But it will be up to the national election tribunal to decide whether the ticket will be permitted to go on the ballot.

Singer's Son Is Suspect

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The 16-year-old son of singer Billy Daniels is under investigation in connection with attempted assaults on women and a series of car thefts.
—Bruce Francis Daniels, arrested Jan. 20 and booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit rape and grand theft auto, was released to his father pending outcome of the investigation by district's officers, police and probation officials.

Sheriff's Sgt. Jesse Levy said Saturday the boy was arrested after a 32-year-old woman, grabbed and thrown to the ground, talked the youth out of further violence, pretended to make a later date, then got help from a nearby restaurant parking lot attendant.

Texas Man To Face Charge

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP)—Norman Hanson, 36, of Texarkana, Ark., was charged Saturday with assault with intent to rape in connection with an alleged attack on a girl, 11.
The charge was filed in Miller County Circuit Court by deputy prosecutor John Goodson. Hanson, arrested Friday night, was held in the county jail.
The child told officers that she went with a man in his auto Friday evening, believing he was trying to find her mother. She said the man drove out to a country road.
The prosecutor said the child was crying and the man was slapping her when three electrical workers came to the girl's rescue.

Frozen-Out Valley Farmers Turn Attention To Cotton

MCALLEN (AP)—The Lower Rio Grande Valley in a financial squeeze because of citrus and vegetable losses in the recent freeze, turns to another big money crop next week.

The cotton planting season opens Thursday. Farmers held out hope that a better crop and possible increased acreage allotment would offset losses suffered by the citrus and vegetable industry.

County agents and farmers were optimistic that the freeze, so damaging to crops, might have caused insects to suffer, too. That would cut down on cotton production expenses.

Some merchants and bankers say money is tight. A citrus and vegetable buyer wonders if his job is safe.

A laborer doesn't wonder about his job any more. He knows. He stood in line last week to get free food for his hungry family.

Three weeks ago the Valley's agricultural outlook was rosy. Growers were expected to harvest 10 million boxes of citrus — the largest crop in a decade. Winter vegetable crops were thriving.

Then at noon Jan. 9 a dry norther blew into the area. Six hours later, the temperatures dropped to below freezing and stayed there 70 hours. Once it dropped to 12 degrees, some of the area's coldest weather in 60 years.

Tender vegetable crops perished. Grapefruit and oranges remaining on trees, an estimated seven million boxes, froze solid.

Early estimates set the loss to the citrus industry including damaged fruit and loss of labor at $15 million.

Vegetable losses, never estimated, also ran into the millions.

Citrus trees were something again. Surveys are on to determine this damage. Preliminary reports indicated some young trees suffered but most of the older ones were expected to pull through and put out fresh growth.

The damage to trees could effect the industry next year and years to come.

Growers took their once-frozen fruit to juice concentrate plants attempting to salvage a few dollars. The price at the plants dropped as time wore on. Much of the fruit lies rotting in orchards under trees that are fast defoliating.

Some farmers will need money to plant spring vegetables and the cotton crop. The Farmers Home Administration has extended its emergency loan program to them. Farmers in the Valley will be eligible for these long-time, low interest loans if they are unable to obtain credit locally.

The migratory farm worker was hit hard. His job of gathering fruit and picking vegetables was virtually eliminated, at least temporarily.

The Department of Agriculture said 15,000 to 20,000 of these workers are getting free food supplies. A minor traffic jam occurred at Edinburg when these workers lined up the first day for the free food.

Hidalgo County welfare director Fred Champion said to be eligible for the food a family must be engaged in agricultural labor.

"We must set up our program on a 30-day basis," he said. "Labor in fields may be opened up again by then."

The valley bounced back from the disastrous freeze of 1951, that virtually destroyed the area's citrus groves. The general opinion is that it can this time.

Chamber of Commerce officials said tourist business is up at least 15 per cent over last year. Bank deposits at the last call were at an all time high. Travel to Mexico via the Valley is setting new records.

"This is just a temporary setback," one older timer said. "We have always bounced back and will this time."

One grower summed it up this way: "A farmer bruises easily but he heals quickly."

Drive Set To Boost Grain Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department is readying a campaign to get farmers to participate in the 1962 feed grain program.

This program is designed to cut down production of corn, sorghum grain and barley until costly surpluses are disposed of. Farmers get government payments and price supports for idling part of their corn, sorghum and barley land. The program is voluntary.

Three regional meetings will start the drive. The first will be in Omaha, Neb., Feb. 5, the date the sign-up campaign opens. Others will be at Atlanta, Feb. 6 and Spokane, Wash., Feb. 15. Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman will attend all three.

Personnel of the department, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and the various state extension services will attend.

The sign-up period will end March 31.

The department has reported 1,146,000 of the 2,800,000 farms growing corn and sorghum grain participated in this program last year. Operators received $768 million in payments.

Rates for retiring corn and sorghum grain land will be the same this year as last. Roughly speaking, the rate per retired acre will be determined by multiplying half the normal yield by the farm price support rate for the grain.

Brenda Ann Fenton Becomes Bride Of Duane Conatser

The Chapel of the First Baptist Church in Brownfield was the setting for the marriage uniting Brenda Ann Fenton and Duane Lacy Conatser on Saturday evening, January 27 at 7 o'clock.

The Rev. Ed Crow, pastor, read the double ring ceremony before an archway covered with greenery, flanked by candelabras and baskets of white gladioli. A candle and white bow marked every other row of pews.

A miniature crown of taffeta and lace edged in pearls held her mid-length veil of silk illusion. She carried a crescent bouquet of white roses and Lily of the Valley.

Miss Jane Shaw of Snyder, a college roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Miss Priscilla Avery of Brownfield, cousin of the bride, and Miss Sandra Bayless, also of Brownfield, was junior bridesmaid.

Teresa and Lena Minor, cousins of the bride were flower girls. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Minor of Snyder.

The bride's attendants were dressed in Exotic blue silk, fashioned with pique necklines, fitted bodices, short sleeves and box pleated skirts. Their matching silk headbands, short white gloves and matching Exotic blue shoes completed their ensembles.

They carried white gladioli and white carnations.

Mr. Andy Taylor of Seagraves, cousin of the groom was best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Tim Conatser brother of the groom, and Mr. Norris Lewis, both of Levelland.

Ushers included Mr. Ronnie and John Fenton of Brownfield, brothers of the bride and Mr. Sonny Stokes of Seagraves.

Candlelighters were Lonny and Mike Vickers, cousin of the groom of Brownfield.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Presiding at the silver service were Mrs. Barbara Vickers, Mrs. Neal Dennis and Mona Apolinar, with Martha Chapman registering guests.

The couple will make their home in Lubbock where Mr. Conatser is employed by General Telephone Co. of the Southwest.

Art Appreciation Course Offered At Woman's Club

The Activities Committee of the Martha Ann Woman's Club has announced plans for a 6-week art appreciation course. This course of study, free to all Martha Ann club members, will be conducted by Mrs. Rosalie McGlaun, local artist.

It will be held at the Martha Ann Clubhouse each Tuesday morning, beginning Tuesday, Jan. 30 from 10 to 11 a.m.

Mrs. McGlaun has a wide range of experience in art. At the present time, she has two pictures on display in the Albuquerque, N. M. Art Museum, and these pictures will shortly go on tour. Another picture has received a citation, and is on a two-year tour of the Texas Art Association. Mrs. McGlaun plans to use the Metropolitan Museum of Art Course of Art study.

The Activities Committee invites any Martha Ann Club member who is interested in art appreciation to sign up for this study group. They may contact Mrs. T. F. Hartley, HI 3-6820, or Mrs. Badger Robertson, HI 3-3660.

Mrs. Huckabee Hostess To 20th Century

Mrs. I. J. Huckabee was hostess to the Twentieth Century Club, Tuesday afternoon, when they met at the Martha Ann Woman's Club, with Mrs. Dale Clemmer, vice-president, presiding.

During the business session Mrs. Frank A. Wilson was welcomed as a new member. It was announced that the next meeting will be February 6, Friendship Day will be observed with Mrs. Harry Vanderpool and Mrs. Charles Noble as hostesses. The Twentieth Century Club will also observe their 40th anniversary and will have as their guests their "Mother Club", the Altruism Club.

Thoughts for the day were given by Mrs. T. J. McKinnon, Mrs. C. J. Kilgo, Mrs. D. C. Shaeffer and Mrs. Guy Stoker.

"International Doorways" was the program theme for the day. A most informative program on "The U. N. and You" was given by Mrs. Shaeffer assisted by Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. M. S. Wharry, Mrs. Kilgo, Mrs. Stoker, Mrs. J. Nelson Dunn and Mrs. H. J. Brice.

Miniature replicas of the United Nations Buildings were on display and were used effectively in the presentation of a skill. "The Voiceless Guide" An imaginary tour of the buildings was conducted by the women on the program. Many enlightening facts about the U.N. were revealed as the audience toured the replicas, also several service organizations of the U.N. were explained.

The budget of the United Nations cost each man, woman, and child in the United States one dime. The Trusteeship Council room was furnished by the government of Denmark. A statue in the room was carved out of teak by a Danish sculptor. It stands 9 1/2 feet high and symbolizes Mankind and Hope.

The World Health Organization through daily broadcasts helps to prevent many diseases and epidemics at a cost of only 11 1/2 cents per family member. The World Meteorological Organization predicts the weather and helps save people and crops from disaster.

Today UNESCO has a dozen places in Africa where people are trained to teach sanitation, crop improvement, nutrition, and cooperative marketing.

Mrs. Charles Noble gave a very impressive description of her tour of the United Nations buildings last summer. She showed colored pictures of the buildings and of different rooms to the group explaining the architecture and color blendings of the ceilings of the rooms to the drapes and carpet.

Mrs. Noble said, "The United Nations Building is an unfinished building for the U.N. is not ornate or decorative because it is being economically constructed."

Refreshments of a delicious fruit salad plate and coffee were served by the hostess, Mrs. Huckabee, to one guest, Mrs. Howard Hogue, and 15 club members.

Cosmorama Club Elects Officers

New officers for the 1962-63 club year were elected and plans for a spring style show were discussed at a called meeting of the Cosmorama Study Club on Wednesday at Martha Ann Woman's Club. Officers elected were as follows: Mrs. Lyle Alexander, president; Mrs. Bill Wilson, first vice president; Mrs. Wacil McNair, second vice president; Mrs. Sidney Wallace Johnson, recording secretary; Mrs. Hugh Brown Jr., corresponding secretary, and Mrs. W. W. Greif, treasurer.

Preliminary preparations for the style show were announced by Mrs. Badger Robertson, general chairman for the show.

Holes In Horn Of Plenty

Today, supermarket shelves in the United States are overflowing with the widest variety of nutritious foods in the world. And we are far too many of us have partaken of these foods to the fullest extent. Some so much so that it is estimated that 25 per cent of the population is 10 per cent or more overweight.

These facts might lead us to the conclusion that the U. S. nutrition picture is nearly perfect.

Not so, say two scientists in a report published in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association.

With this abundance of food, there remain disturbing "pockets of undernutrition" throughout the country, according to Olaf Mickelson, Ph.D., and James M. Hundley, M.D., of the National Cancer Institute.

They classify special groups as the "Underfed"—people who, for economic, educational or health reasons, do not consume a proper diet.

Among the "Underfed," according to these scientists, are the American Indian, the Alaskan Eskimo, migrant workers (who number more than 1,250,000), persons living in the poorer districts of large cities, and the aged.

According to Drs. Mickelson and Hundley, surveys of these groups have shown that they regularly consume diets which do not provide "adequate" amounts of such vital nutrients as vitamins A, C and D, and some of the B vitamins.

In fact, one group—the migrant workers—often subsists on a "diet consisting of corn meal and rice and very little else—no vitamins."

Other nutritionists have expanded the "Underfed" classification to include: teen-agers, particularly weight-conscious girls; housewives, often too busy with family chores to eat properly; the business man or woman, eating fragmentary meals on the run; and the food faddist.

"Undernutrition does exist in the U.S.," states Dr. Mickelson and Hundley. "To determine the extent, degree and nature is an insoluble problem, since an individual may be designated 'undernourished' by one clinician while another may rate the same individual 'well-nourished.'"

Although there is no specific information available on the extent be the name for the style show, which will feature fashions from Jonisue's in Cogdell Center. The show will be held on Saturday, March 17.

Mrs. Robertson reported that many committees already were at work to assure another successful show. Tickets are ready for sale and will be the same price as those of last year.

Serving with Mrs. Robertson are the following committees: Tickets; Mrs. Marshall Erwin and Mrs. J. W. Headstream; program, Mrs. W. W. Park, publicity, Mrs. Wacil McNair, Mrs. W. W. Greif and Mrs. Renal Rosson; refreshments, Mrs. Robert Hargrove; decorations, Mrs. D. M. Cogdell Jr.; models, Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. James Kincaid and Mrs. John O'Banion; invitations, Mrs. B. W. Williams.

Mrs. J. W. Headstream presided at the meeting.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on Feb. 4.

Rafael Trujillo: Adored And Hated, Both With Due Cause

EDITOR'S NOTE—Rafael Trujillo had many faces. He was hated—with good cause—and adored—with good cause. He built a clean, handsome, efficient nation, yet one that was a prison. His dream of dynasty ended in death and exile. He may have sown seeds of chaos from which may flower yet another tyranny.

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ
SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—A light blue 1957 Chevrolet sped westward from this capital, then called Ciudad Trujillo, carrying a man on a date with destiny. It was 10:15 p.m. on a warmish night of May 30, 1961.

Five miles west of the capital, at a spot less well-lighted than the rest of the sleek highway, three cars closed in on the Chevrolet. Machine gun and pistol fire broke the tropical stillness.

At a night club some distance away, dancing couples paused as they heard the faint sound of gunfire above the music. They shrugged and kept on dancing. There was nothing unusual about these nocturnal shootings.

They did not know this particular gunfire had snuffed out the life of Generalissimo Rafael Leonidas Trujillo; that it marked the beginning of the end of a 31-year-old dynasty.

Rafael Trujillo died practically within walking distance of his destination that night, the town of San Cristobal where he was born 69 years before.

A half century earlier, as a poor but aspiring telegraph operator he had crossed very nearly the same spot en route to Santo Domingo to assume new responsibilities in the capital's main telegraph office.

He died not long after making the usual nightly call on his aging, ailing mother, Julia Molina Chevalier, who had not shielded from close friends the ache in her heart brought by gossip about her son.

The monstrous nature of this talk had dimmed her early pride in the achievements of the gifted fourth son who raised her and her family of 11 children from the edge of poverty to regal wealth. But she wept brokenheartedly with thousands of other Dominicans the day Rafael Trujillo was laid to rest at San Cristobal.

Hundreds of thousands others rejoiced quietly. Trujillo was many things to his people.

Alfred Rosenzweig, 57, a former Vienna textile salesman, one of several thousand Jewish refugees to whom the generalissimo offered sanctuary at the outset of World War II when no one else would, lives in the northern coast village of Sosua.

"Trujillo did all he could for his country. The poor were his particular concern. He saved our lives. As long as a descendant of the Sosua settlers lives our gratitude to him will not die," Rosenzweig said.

A fellow settler, Jacob Weinberg, 51, added: "We prayed he would live 200 years."

Flora Aquino, 18, manicurist at the Hotel Entabador, said she learned her trade through a scholarship given her by Trujillo. "There'll never be another man like him. He was magnificent to everyone. It was the ingratitude that didn't like him."

The relatives of the thousands of Dominicans who disappeared or were killed or tortured for opposing Trujillo tell a different story. Almost speechless with grief and bitterness, Olga Despradel Cedeno said "he was an indescribable beast, an assassin."

Her husband, Pedro Livio Cedeno, was one of nearly a dozen men who plotted the assassination of Trujillo. Last Nov. 18, ostensibly for the purpose of re-enacting the crime, he and five other accused plotters were taken from prison never to be seen again.

No one seems to have a precise idea of what happened to bodies of Trujillo victims, including two of the most publicized cases: Oregon pilot Gerald Murphy and anti-Trujillo author Jesus de Galindez. There is general agreement among Dominicans both Galindez and Murphy were liquidated.

The victims of Trujillo repression are conservatively estimated at upwards of 2,000 dead. This does not include some 15,000 Haitians massacred in the border incident of 1937.

Censure of the tyranny came early. Trujillo had his champions, well subsidized and well connected. A world war and prosperity served to shield it.

As adverse world opinion mounted, however, the terror and fear that had kept the dictatorship going turned to brutality and murder in the closing stages. The beginning of the end came with the emergence of another nearby tyrant, Fidel Castro's. Arch-enemy of Castro, Trujillo feared an invasion and spent an estimated $50 million abroad re-equipping his armed forces. A genuine if small invasion in 1959 signaled the start of all-out domestic repression.

Trujillo's enemies multiplied—at home and abroad. As a last resort, he even wooed Soviet Union support. All seemed hopeless. In his last days the fear he had used against his foes had driven him, according to those close to him, to the point of seeing enemies everywhere.

It was not always thus in the life of Rafael Trujillo. There is evidence that at times he was generous, amiable, merciful to his adversaries—as human, possibly, as Juan Lopez next door.

Underneath it all was a lasting sense of inferiority inherited from his humble beginnings and an ancestry going back to dark Haitian French blood.

He was forever in need of reassurance from his associates. An unnatural fear of death converted him into a hypochondriac.

Probably never in his wildest dreams did Julia Molina Chevalier and her husband, Jose Trujillo Valdez, envisage one of their eleven children would absolutely rule their country.

Jose Trujillo Valdez was a peaceful retailer dealing mostly in poultry in and out of the home town of San Cristobal. He was descended from a tough Spanish military policeman and a mulatto woman who ran a low-down hotel.

Julia Molina had a more respectable background. Her father was a prosperous merchant, her mother, a descendant of a Haitian military officer who was a school teacher.

The American occupation of 1914-24 gave Trujillo the military background that swept him to power.

He had quit his telegraphers job to become a guard at a privately owned sugar mill near the capital. Just what put him to it is not clear from the records, but on Dec. 9, 1918 Trujillo requested a commission in the constabulary.

A week later, Trujillo passed his physical examination. The Haitian Military Academy was created in 1921, and Trujillo was graduated a second lieutenant at the end of that year.

Available records show Trujillo was an outstanding officer under the Americans. Promotions swiftly followed.

With the departure of the occupying forces in 1934 President Horacio Vazquez converted the police establishment into a military force in 1937 with Trujillo at its head. Trujillo repaid him three years later by betraying Vazquez in his first step toward the presidency.

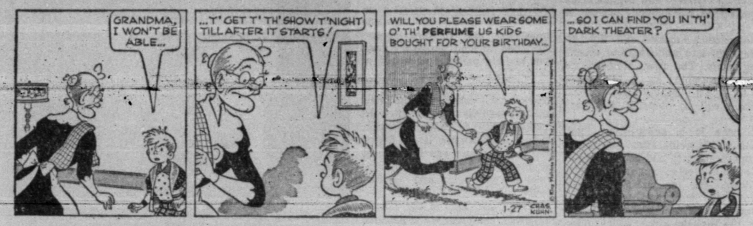

As his personal fortunes improved, Trujillo decided he needed a mate better suited to his new surroundings. He divorced Aminta Ledesma, a plain woman of humble origin who had given him his first child, Flor de Oro, and in 1927 married Bienvenida Ricardo of a wealthy local family. But it was obvious he acted too hastily. He met and fell in love with Maria Martinez, not only attractive but having sharp business acumen. His ardor for Bienvenida cooled as it grew for Maria. Ramfis, Trujillo's eldest son, was born to Maria in 1929 while he still was married to Bienvenida. The latter had failed to produce an heir and Trujillo divorced her in 1935. He married Maria Martinez late that year.

Maria proved instrumental in helping build up the family's vast fortune, estimated in the neighborhood of $500 million. Bank documents seized from the family's luxury yacht recently yielded almost $30 million in her name.

Junior Editors Quiz on DIZZINESS

QUESTION: Why don't skaters and ballerinas get dizzy when they spin around?

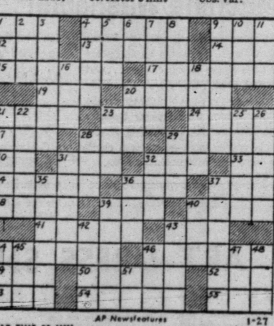

ANSWER: They know the trick behind this kind of dizziness. The reason people get dizzy in making spins is that their eyes are open and while turning they have the illusion that they are standing still and the world is moving. Then when they stop, the world seems to keep spinning and sometimes they can't regain balance or readjust rapidly enough. Then they may fall. But skaters and dancers and ballet performers who can make many speedy spins train themselves to not see the things about them, or to see them as being fixed instead of moving. This can be done by closing the eyelids so that only a minimum of light shows through. Dancers also begin to slow down at the end of their spins so they can be in full control of their movements. In this brief moment they can also adjust to their surroundings.

FOR YOU TO DO: Try making spins with your eyes almost closed. Also, try it by fixing your eyes on things farthest away from you, and then close to you.

(Lyette Bullard of San Mateo, Calif., wins $10 for this question. Mail your question on a postcard to Junior Editors, in care of this newspaper. If duplicate questions are received, AP Newfeatures will select the winners.)

MRS. WILLARD ROYCE GLADSON

Smith, Gladson Rites Held In Northside Baptist Church

Dorothy Lee Smith of Ballinger became the bride of Willard Royce Gladson in services held January 21 at 4 p.m. in the Northside Baptist Church of Snyder.

Brother Jack Dean, performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Smith of Ballinger and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gladson of 2705 Thirty-fifth Street Snyder.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floorlength gown of white silk tulle and imported French lace. She carried a white orchid surrounded by white feathered mums. Carrying out the wedding tradition she wore old pearls, a blue garter, a new watch, gift from the groom and her Bible was borrowed.

Jean Etheredge of Hermleigh was maid of honor and wore a costume of deep purple velvet. Evelyn Holley of Hico, cousin of the groom was flower girl.

Bridesmaids were Judith Janis and Gayna Gladson of Snyder, sisters of the groom.

Randy Smith of Ballinger, brother of the bride was ring bearer. Candlelighters were Garland Daniels, a student at San Marcos and Charles Gladson of Snyder, a cousin of the groom. Ushers were Ed Carl and Tommy Foy of Snyder.

Groomsmen included Billie L. Holley of Hico, uncle of the groom. Jerry and Doyce Smith, brothers of the bride, from Ballinger and Ronald Gladson of Snyder, brother of the groom.

Mrs. Nathan Mearse of Snyder was organist and accompanied Miss Judith Gladson, soloist.

A reception was held in fellow ship hall with Jereia Summers serving cake. Sally Lightcap of San Antonio lading punch. Dean-ous Lindemann registered guests. The couple will make their home at San Marcos.

The bride graduated as salutatorian of Ballinger High School, attended San Angelo Junior College and is now a senior at South West Texas State College at San Marcos majoring in economics and a member of the German Club.

Out-of-town guests were from Ballinger, San Marcos, San Antonio, Hico and Sterling City.

Albums From Non-Musical Musicals Hit Broadway

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

From the standpoint of quantity, this has been the most musical season on Broadway in many a year. From the standpoint of quality, as hi-fi fans are beginning to discover, the season might also rank as the most unmusical in years.

Perhaps we are entering a new era on Broadway. Rex Harrison in "My Fair Lady" inaugurated the era of the non-singing singer in a singing role. The trend caught on so effectively that now we are faced with a new phenomenon: the non-musical musical. Not only do the singers NOT have to be able to sing, but the music doesn't even have to be musical.

"How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "Subways Are For Sleeping" are prime examples of this new trend in non-musical musicals.

The former at the moment is Broadway's top ticket, the latter is trying to dig in for a long run by engaging in guerrilla warfare against the drama critics who found it less than entrancing.

The "How to Succeed" original cast album (RCA Victor) is selling very well, despite the fact that it has little to offer the home listener beyond Bobby Morse's plaintive hymn to his ego, "I Believe in You," and Rudy Vallee's tongue-in-cheek take off on the Maine Stein Song, "Grand Old Day." Elsewhere, Frank Loesser's score falls far below the satirical standard he set in "Guys and Dolls."

So far this season, nine musicals have opened on Broadway and three already have departed.

Among the survivors, "Milk and Honey," with a lovely score by Jerry Herman, and some fine voices in Robert Weede, Mimi Benzell and Molly Picon, has the best selling original cast album (RCA Victor) of the season. It ranks in 18th place on most sales charts, just one step ahead of "How to Succeed" but quite a distance behind "The Sound of Music" and "Camelot," both of which have been around for two years and are still in the top 10.

For hi-fi fans, the cast albums of "Kean" (Columbia) and "Sail Away" (Capitol) have a lot to offer — indeed at times more than is offered the viewer in the theater.

The big dramatic fault of "Kean" is that after moments of unsurpassed grandeur, it drags along sonorously in trying to deliver a complicated and ponderous social message. The fault, happily, is completely missing from the album, which offers Alfred Drake's rich baritone, Robert Wright and George Forrest's lavishly almost operatic score, and the lovely voices of Joan Weldon and Lee Venora. Best of all, "Kean" has "The Frog and the Grog," the season's only authentic show stopper and one of the most delightful numbers ever to come out of a Broadway show.

"Sail Away" is memorable both for being Noel Coward's first crack at turning out an American-style musical and for Elaine Stiller's wickedly witty "Why Do the Wrong People Travel?" Coward's lyrics seem a good deal wittier on the album than they do in the show, particularly his "The Little Ones' ABC," a deliciously droll take-off on the children's "Do Re Mi" number in "The Sound of Music."

"The Gay Life" (Capitol) marks the return to Broadway of the composing team of Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz after too long an absence. Swirling with gay waltzes and spiced with some very deft lyrics, it succeeds marvelously whenever Barbara Cook is allowed to dish out its Viennese goodies, but disappoints the home listener whenever Walter Chiari attempts — and this is too strong a word — to sing. Among the non-singing singers, Chiari must go down as the non-singingest.

Surprisingly, two shows that failed to make the grade this season had better than average scores and have been turned into very listenable cast albums. "Let It Ride" (RCA Victor) offers George Gobel, a comedian who really can sing, a very funny score by Jay Livingston and Ray Evans, and blonde bombshell Barbara Naisles in a riotous striptease's lament, "I Wouldn't Have Had To."

"Kwamina" (Capitol), which closed very early despite the talents of Sally Ann Howes and Richard Adler, may be the only show this season that provides something extra for the stereo fan. Its throbbing jungle drums numbers are bound to satisfy the real hi-fi bug.

U. S. - Canada Union Is Heady Fiction

IN HIGH PLACES. By Arthur Hailey.

A prime minister of Canada, in the not-distant future, is the main protagonist in this novel. He is faced with the possibility of a Soviet attack on the United States, that will make Canada a battleground and a barren scene of fallout.

The answer—an Act of Union with the United States, accompanied by a transfer of the line of impact to the Far North, and the cession of Alaska to the Canadians as a refuge. Needless to say, this is a political move that will take a lot of doing, especially with the Opposition on the prime minister's neck.

And the prime minister, James Howden, has made some political mistakes in the past. The worst one—he was stupid enough to put it in writing—was to make a deal with a rival within his own party. Howden got the premiership and his rival got the cabinet post in charge of immigration. There was always the danger that the minister, Harvey Warrender, could blackmail his chief.

Whereupon a crisis arises in the immigration department. One Henry Duval, a "man without a country," arrives on the west coast and tries to enter Canada. Through the efforts of an idealistic young lawyer named Alan Mailand and some behind-the-scenes pressure from the Opposition, the case becomes a cause celebre just when Howden is engrossed in the secret plan for union with the States.

This is pretty heady stuff, politics "in high places" of Ottawa and Washington. Hailey has crowded his scene with a ruthless party official, an array of ministers, two romances, a caricature of a bureaucrat and a sympathetic portrait of a judge.

Things move fast in this novel, and there are dramatic developments in practically every chapter. The reader may not stop to consider that plausibility may be stretched here and there. But he can have a good time ramping through a lusty narrative peopled by vivid characters.

Capucci Presents 'Flat Look'

By GABRIELLE SMITH

PARIS (AP)—Roman designer Roberto Capucci opened his Paris house today with high-keyed color and a flat look that will leave his clients wondering just where their bosoms went.

Waists were often empire, just below where the bust used to be, and hems just below the knee, following the majority of Paris designers in their spring and summer shows.

A dazzling deep-orange wool coat covered a violet dress which had a two-piece effect. The empire line came with a seam above the waist in front and slightly lower in back.

Another combination to make the eyes blink was a bright red coat over a Kelly green dress. More clear, sharp color came in a small jacketed orange suit with a violet silk blouse printed in turquoise and rust geometric patterns.

The same suit done in eggshell wool with a pale blue printed blouse brought applause.

Early day dresses were often sheaths with straight skirts, an inset stitched at mid thigh, and tops flat as envelopes.

For late afternoon, Capucci brought in hot weather cottons in waffle piques. Some were orange and violet but a note of fingerie crept in with three white suits. One had a jacket lined with light pink and blue organza flowers. The matching blouse looked like a tiny flower bouquet.

"The Lord brings the counsel of the nations to nought; he frustrates the plans of the peoples. The counsel of the Lord stands for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people whom he has chosen as his heritage!"

Psalms 33: 10-12

Every newspaper we read, every news report from the radio or T. V., tells of war or rumor of war, of political upheavals and social change, of frustrated councils and their plans that have come to nought. When will we learn, and our leaders understand, that it is the thoughts and will of God that stand forever! The high sounding plans that we make will never come to fruition until they are made in the likeness of God's own plans. These purposes of God are that all men must be treated as equals; they must not be exploited or used for personal gain or glory; they must be helped to a fuller and more useful and fruitful life; and most of all they must be shown the love of God that is living and undying.

2nd Big Freeze Plagues Farmers

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas farmers had little chance to survey damages from the State-wide freeze of two weeks ago due to another fast moving front which hit the state the past week.

Activities have been generally limited to heavy livestock feeding and repairing of broken pipes and pumps.

Director John Hutchison of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said reports of damage are still coming in and crop losses cannot be fully estimated until the weather favors plant growth.

He added that small grain, flax, vegetables and legumes had been hard hit and prospects for grazing greatly reduced. Livestock losses were limited mainly to new calves, lambs, kids and pigs and shrinkage in adult animals.

Joe Robbs from Weslaco in far South Texas said the cold had hampered all activities and all counties need moisture. Ranges especially are very dry. Citrus was still moving to juice plants and most vegetables had been either damaged or killed by the freeze.

The past week's cold further delayed recovery of winter vegetation already severely damaged, reported Joe Glover from Gonzales. There is no green grazing available in South Central Texas and feeding is heavy. Oat and flax losses are heavy due to the continuing freezing weather.

Silver Whistett at Richmond said even the wild-geese and ducks appear disturbed by the mixed-up cold weather. Most winter grasses and weeds were killed and oats and clover were set back with some oats apparently killed.

Very little grazing is available. Moisture is surplus in East Texas where most winter crops, including oats, were killed by the freeze. Green grazing is very limited and livestock are losing weight fast. Losses of poultry were heavy.

The cold has stopped all plant growth in Northeast Texas; left oat leaves dead and wiped out winter vegetables. Livestock are showing effects of the cold.

In North Central Texas damage to oats was heavy. Some livestock was lost and heavy feeding is continuing. Full extent of damage to oats in Central Texas will show up later. Little or no grazing is in prospect until spring.

Extra feeding and some livestock losses resulted from ice and below normal temperatures in Central West Texas. Livestock shrinkage is heavy and grains suffered heavy damage.

The cold increased need for feeding and has stopped all plant growth and field work in far West Texas. Moisture is needed over the entire area.

Moisture is needed in parts of the Rolling Plains (Vernon). Reports from several counties indicate damage to grains, especially oats and barley. The cold, rust, insects and in some counties a lack of moisture have all contributed to slow growth by grains.

Moisture is needed over most of the South Plains (Lubbock). Grains are making little growth. Range cattle are holding up well despite the cold and feeding is continuing.

Moisture conditions have improved in the Panhandle but wheat growth is at a standstill. Cattle are receiving heavy feed, but are in fair condition.

DANGEROUS QUARTERS—A gasoline transport truck burns amid storage tanks containing crude oil, gasoline and other combustible fuels at the Jayhawk Pipeline Co. terminal six miles south of Plains in southwest Kansas. Some 80,000 barrels of fuel were stored in 10 tanks but none ignited or exploded. (AP Wirephoto)

University Of Chicago In New Type Of Talent Search

By G. K. HODENFIELD

CHICAGO (AP)—The University of Chicago, which certainly doesn't need to, is out beating the bushes for new students.

In a new kind of talent search, prestige-heavy and highly selective Chicago is mining a hitherto neglected vein of academic gold—the small town high school.

It seeks out promising youngsters, some of whom don't even plan to go to college. It invites them to apply for admission, eases the normally strict entrance requirements, and helps them financially if they make the grade.

It is doing this at a time when every prestige university, including Chicago, is forced to turn away hundreds upon hundreds of qualified high school graduates clamoring for admission.

Chicago embarked on the small school talent search two years ago in the belief that youngsters from rural communities get the short end of the stick when it comes to getting into college.

"Some things that are being done in college admissions work discriminate against the small town student," said James Vice, assistant director of admissions at Chicago.

"College entrance examinations, for instance. They're good, and we use them. But they may be too culture-laden, favoring the sophisticated student from the sophisticated high school.

The program started, modestly enough, two years ago. The university sent letters to 25 rural high schools in six Midwestern states. The schools were picked at random from those having fewer than 80 students.

Fifteen of the schools proposed candidates, of whom nine eventually were enrolled as freshmen for the 1960-61 academic year. That group was so successful the plan was expanded to 50 high schools in 11 states the next year, with 19 freshmen enrolled last September.

"The program is paying double dividends," Vice said in an interview.

"We are getting excellent students and a truly representative student body. The students we have recruited in the small towns are getting an educational experience they never thought possible."

Of that first group of nine small school students enrolled in 1960, two made the dean's list for outstanding scholarship. Four had averages of "C" or better. Three were put on academic probation, but their scholarships were renewed. None failed.

Virtually all of the students enrolled under the small-school program are getting financial assistance from the university.

"We have found that the youngsters from small towns nearly always need help," Vice said. "So we tell the high schools: 'If you find us the type of student we are looking for, we will offer him financial assistance.' Other prospective students have to take their chances."

Test Blasts Sink Earth

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Mammoth depressions have formed in the earth over the area where four of the current series of underground nuclear test explosions were conducted, officials said on Thursday.

The Atomic Energy Commission revealed the ground on the Nevada test site sank up to 50 feet in area up to several hundred feet wide.

The depressions developed 15 to 25 minutes after the blasts. All the detonations involved devices fired at the bottom of vertical shafts drilled into the earth and refilled prior to firing.

The AEC theorized the surface collapsed after underground cavities were formed by the force of expanding nuclear fireballs.

There was no marked increase in radiation around the depressions, the AEC said.

The bird-poisoned tree frog whistles like a pileated woodpecker.

Work Week Issue Widening Battle

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—President Kennedy's championing of the 40-hour work week as a standard opens wide today the spreading battle of labor and management over job security and automation.

The fight centers either on spreading the work by shorter hours or guaranteeing that company policies, such as mergers, shouldn't cut the number now employed.

Steelworkers—the most acrimonious battlefield in sight—could be in the basic steel industry.

The President mentioned only with disapproval, the 25-hour work week was recently by New York electricians. But the administration has made plain its concern over the outcome of the steel contract negotiations in the offing.

Formal demands are yet to be made, but there has been talk that the union might like a 25-hour work week to offset what it terms the inroads of mechanization of steel mills on the number of jobs open to its members.

Job security is more and more on the mind of workers, sometimes taking precedence over higher wages.

The security issue has been growing steadily in recent years as the marvels of mechanization bring more factories, and even offices, closer to automatic control by machines.

The reaction has been to cushion the effects of automation when possible, and often that means seeking security through a shorter work-week right back into dollars. It says it seeks mechanization to cut costs and be more competitive—with foreign goods, for example—and to maintain price levels. If hours are cut, it must hire more men to fill out a regular week.

To the union this means sharing the available work. To management it means that the cost-cutting advantages of mechanization may have been lost. When mechanization means an increase in the amount of goods turned out by the same number of man hours of labor that is called a rise in productivity.

Unusual Rainfall Prevents Injury

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It's been raining heavily in normally arid Phoenix for several days and John Burris is mighty thankful for it.

Burris, 19, accidentally fell 60 feet from the fifth floor roof of an apartment building Thursday. Because the ground was so soft, he escaped injury.

He did need help, however. The momentum of his fall drove him into mud up to his knees and friends had to pull him out.

Jim Jordan Tells Of Plans To Wed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jim (Fibber McGee) Jordan, 64, and Gretchen Stewart, 32, said Thursday they plan to be married in Honolulu Feb. 1.

She is the widow of comedian Yogi Yorgesson.

The couple met while vacationing in Hawaii last summer. Jordan's wife, Marian, who was Molly on the air, died last April 7 of cancer. Yorgesson was killed in an auto accident May 20, 1956.

Jordan and his bride plan to tour the Orient on their honeymoon.
