Mideast Plan Pushed

Israel Expected To Reject U.S. Move

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Despite a rebuff by Israel, American envoy Robert Strauss pushed ahead with a new Mideast diplomatic offensive Saturday, consulting Egyptian officials on a U.S. plan for drawing moderate Arabs and Palestinians into the peace process.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said after their 45-minute meeting in Ismailia that he and Strauss "agreed on most of what we discussed."

A U.S. official in Cairo said Saturday that the Carter administration expects the Israeli Cabinet, after its regular meeting today, to issue a "vehement" rejection of the new American proposals, which might include a U.S.-sponsored resolution in the U.N. Security Council that would restate the principles for an Arab-Israeli peace.

It is believed the U.S. resolution might include some vague reference to Palestinian "rights."

The Israelis, who view this as a dangerous opening to the creation of an independent Palestinian state, want existing Mideast resolutions to stand.

The American source, who asked not to be identified, said he would not rule out the possibility that Israel will threaten to withdraw from the current Egyptian-Israeli-U.S. talks on Palestinian autonomy if Washington goes ahead with its plan.

Strauss, President Carter's special Mideast troubleshooter, met Saturday with Egyptian Vice President Hosny Mubarak and Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil to discuss the possible effects of the U.S. plan on the autonomy talks.

He met later with the Egyptian president, and called the talks on the back porch of Sadat's Suez Canal villa "very good, very wholesome, very pleasant."

Neither man went into detail, but Sadat said: "I can say that our views on most of what we have discussed are identical as usual."

Sadat also reaffirmed his commitment to Palestinian autonomy, saying, "We have dedicated ourselves to complete this mission."

The Egyptian leader was quoted Saturday in the Egyptian newspaper Al Missa as saying U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Andrew Young was right in establishing a dialogue with the Palestinians.

"I felt sad when I heard that Young resigned," Sadat added. "We will always rember him as a dedicated man who tried his best to build the image of the United States which we all would like to see."

Sadat added that he feels PLO participation in the current Mideast talks is unnecessary.

"Prepares Ground"

"The current stage does not include determining the Palestinians' (political) fate, but only prepares the ground for putting them on the right path for self-determination through full autonomy," he said.

In other developments:

—Lebanese radio reports said Israeli artillery shelled southern Lebanese border villages and the port city of Tyre, killing one person and wounding six.

—The Israeli military command reported that a naval patrol intercepted a Palestinian guerrilla boat whose occupants were about to "launch a raid in Israel." The Israelis captured three guerrillas, a fourth was wounded and evidently lost at sea, and there were no Israeli casualties, it said. The Palestine Liberation Organization said in Beirut another group of guerrillas made it to shore, fought with Israeli troops, and fired at and hit Israeli patrol boats.

Israelis "Negative"

Strauss said before leaving Israel Friday that he had met with "negative results" from Israeli leaders when he raised the possibility of a U.S. resolution at the United Nations.

The U.S. source said Strauss did not offer "any specific language" to either the Israelis or Egyptians.

The official said the Carter administration wants to avoid being pushed into the position of having to veto a resolution presented at the Security Council debate on the Palestinians scheduled for later this week.

The United States "did not choose to have the U.N. debate but now we have reached the point of having to do something," he said.

By offering its own language — likely to parallel that incorporated in the Camp David agreements — the United States would be in a "leading position" at the U.N. debate, he said.

If the United States rejects any new resolution, as the Israelis demand, it would risk credibility in the Arab world and cast doubts on its oft-stated commitment to finding a solution for the Palestinian problem, the official said.

Kuwait, on behalf of a number of Arab states and the PLO, has presented a draft Council resolution that would guarantee the Palestinians statehood, something the Israelis strongly oppose.

The United States probably would present compromise proposals with a less specific guarantee of a Palestinian right to self-determination, but with sufficient concessions to draw some Palestinians into the talks on autonomy for the Palestinian-populated West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.

The PLO demands a fully independent state, rather than limited autonomy, and West Bank and Gaza Palestinians have stayed away from the talks thus far.

Carter Jogs, Rosalynn Celebrates Birthday

WABASHA, Minn. (AP) — A beaming President Carter jogged 22 laps around a deck of the Delta Queen Saturday, then went ashore to join this river town in a sunny celebration of his wife's 52nd birthday.

The sternwheeler's calliope played "Happy Days Are Here Again" and the temperature climbed into the 80s.

While the steamship discarded trash and took on water from a hose that ran a block through town to the dock, the mayor read a proclamation and the president delivered a short campaign-style speech on the strength and majesty of America and the nation's energy needs.

But mostly he enjoyed himself, far from the headaches of Washington.

He walked along Main Street, shaking hands with the townsfolk of Wabasha, an old logging town not a lot bigger than the president's hometown of Plains, Ga.

When Mrs. Carter started to speak, the crowd interrupted her and sang "Happy Birthday."

Before reboarding, Carter, wearing no necktie, told the villagers: "You made me very happy and I know Rosalynn would say this is the best birthday party she's ever had."

The trip carried the first family and their fellow passengers — mostly middle-class people, mostly over age 55 — past limestone banks and wooded banks hiding acre upon acre of ripening grain crops.

A flotilla of sailboats, houseboats, cabin cruisers and fishing boats accompanied the president as he steamed down the Mississippi on the first day of a week's vacation.

At one point, four or five sailboats proceeding under auxiliary power crossed the bow of the Delta Queen. They passed so close that the conning officer had to sound five short blasts of the deep steam whistle, the international signal for danger of collision.

But the boats cleared a path in time.

Close to 1,000 people gathered at two locks a few miles downstream from Wabasha. While the Delta Queen was going through the locks, Carter hopped ashore at both places and shook hands over the chain-link fence with well-

Matagorda Bay Termed Defenseless To Spill

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Officials said Saturday it may be impossible to prevent slicks from the world's largest oil spill from entering Matagorda Bay and threatening the environmentally sensitive marshlands and inlets.

Large patches of oil were stalled off the Texas coast by winds and currents, but scientists said it's just a matter of time before the Mexican crude heads for the two-mile-wide mouth of the bay.

"Pass Cavallo will be one of the most difficult passes to protect because of its wind and currents," said Capt. Roger Madson, commander of the oil spill task force.

Seawater rushes through Pass Cavallo into Matagorda Bay at higher speeds than anywhere else on the coast. The faster tides and currents, combined with its sheer size, make the pass, some 100 miles north of Corpus Christi, almost impossible to barricade from the oil.

"There's no reasonable prospect of booming it," John Robinson, scientific coordinator of the task force said of the world's largest oil spill.

"We'll have to rely on second, third and fourth lines of defense."

That means oil will be allowed into the bay when it hits, probably this week, and then the task force will try to prevent its entrance into the numerous smaller bays and estuaries that ring Matagorda Bay.

The Mexican Ixtoc I well in the Bay of Campeche nearly 600 miles to the south has been spewing oil at a rate of nearly 850,000 gallons a day, officials estimate. At that rate it passed 64.5 million gallons Saturday, 14.5 million gallons higher than the previous record spill by the wrecked supertanker Amoco Cadiz on the French coast in 1978.

Booms already protect several mouths to the Laguna Madre — 133 miles of environmentally vital water and marshes including the winter home of the whooping crane between Padre Island and the curving Texas coast.

The Coast Guard completely closed off ship traffic at the Port Mansfield Cut, about 80 miles south of Corpus Christi. A boom was placed across the cut Aug. 6, but ship traffic was allowed in and out on outgoing tides.

Coast Guard Lt. Harry Vaughn said there is now too much oil in the cut to open the boom at any time.

More protective booms have been added in the 1,550-foot Aransas Pass, the northernmost entrance to the lagoon. The

Tax 'Non-Increase' Due Hearing Monday

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TAXPAYERS WILL have the opportunity Monday to air their views on the school district's proposed tax rate increase even though school officials explain that the tax rate actually isn't increasing.

Trustees will meet for the public hearing at 7 p.m. in the school district Administration Building, 1629 19th St.

A public hearing on a tax increase is required by truth in taxation laws when a taxing body proposes a rate greater than the maximum figure calculated by the tax office.

On Aug. 9 the school board called for an increase greater than the $1.30 rate calculated for the district but not more than the present $1.38 rate.

In order to comply with the truth in taxation laws, city-school tax assessor-collector John Brooks had to arrive at a tax rate for the district that will increase the tax levy by no more than 3 percent over that of the previous year. A taxing entity cannot exceed that calculated figure without holding a public hearing.

Through use of a formula based on the 1978 adjusted tax levy and the 1979 tax roll, Brooks figured a $1.26 rate that was then increased to $1.30 to provide the allowable 3 percent growth rate.

The truth law was intended to alert taxpayers that while a taxing authority may not raise the rate from the previous year, more money will in fact be generated at that rate due to reappraisals and new construction that enlarge the tax base.

Although school officials acknowledge the valid intent of the law, it has become a source of frustration for them this year because massive exemptions granted by the legislature have eroded the tax base.

The problem with the law, say ad-

Food Ruling Delayed By Confusion

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IT'S BEEN six months since Lubbock restaurateurs and city health officials were warring over a proposed new food sanitation ordinance, but the controversial rules are still gathering dust on a City Hall shelf.

City officials say the finger of blame for inaction on the ordinance should be directed at the state health department.

The state agency's legal staff was asked to seek either an attorney general's opinion or a court order to determine whether departmental rules must be enforced as though they were laws passed by the state legislature.

Hal Nelson, assistant chief of the legal division of the health department, admitted neither has been done.

The dispute over the effect of the state health rules began when Nelson told the city health department any food sanitation ordinance passed by the city council would have to mirror rules approved by the state health board in 1977.

While the ordinance could be more restrictive than the agency rules, it could not be less stringent, Nelson said.

However, City Attorney John Ross questioned the validity of Nelson's opinion and said it would be pointless for the city to adopt any ordinance if the state rules must prevail.

Ross said home rule cities like Lubbock are permitted to enact any ordinance not inconsistent with the state constitution or laws enacted by the legis-

Utah Plane Crash Kills Six Aboard

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — Six Salt Lake City-area residents who flew here to have dinner were killed when their light plane crashed on takeoff from the Wendover Airport, authorities said.

Tooele County Sheriff Walter Shubert said Saturday the Piper Seneca plowed into an earthen bunker about one mile south of the airport landing strip late Friday night.

He said the plane cartwheeled and disintegrated, scattering wreckage over a 400-foot area. The plane's two engines were torn off and the bodies of the six were dismembered and scattered.

Shubert identified the victims as Bramwell Wangsgard, 50, Granger; Darwin Finn, 42, Centerville; his wife, Rose June Finn, 38, Centerville; Joan Evans, 37, Granger; Janice Fraz, 39, Granger, and Robert Shipp Jensen, 45, Salt Lake City.

Meeting This Week May Settle Furr's Sale To West Germans

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE FATE OF Furr's Inc. and its 5,000 creditors may be settled this week if officials of the financially beleaguered grocery store chain can finalize a sale agreement with a West German corporation by Tuesday.

Creditors of the firm and Furr's officials will meet again Tuesday in Judge John Flowers's federal bankruptcy court in Fort Worth. At the group's last meeting in July, Furr's president and chief executive officer Patrick J. Murphy told creditors that if the company is to survive, it should be sold.

And Furr's Dallas-based attorney Henry Simon Jr. added that a sale agreement between Furr's and one of four interested firms probably could be reached by Tuesday's meeting.

The storied West Texas corporation has been operating as a debtor-in-possession since company officials filed for reorganization under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act in late May.

Simon told creditors at the May meeting that the major contender for purchase of Furr's is the West German firm of Rewe Handelsgesellschaft Leibbrand OHG.

Friday, during an informal meeting of about 20 Lubbock area creditors, it appeared three other possible buyers of Furr's, all American companies, had lost the race to the fast working Rewe-Leibbrand officials.

Creditors who attended the Friday morning meeting at Plains National Bank said the only topic of discussion was the arrangement being formulated between Furr's and the West Germans.

Several members of the 11-member official creditors committee, appointed to act as liaison between Furr's officials and the remaining creditors, outlined for the local creditors the specifics of Rewe-Leibbrand's proposal.

Shortly after Furr's filed its Chapter XI petition, Rewe-Leibbrand analysts began examining the Lubbock-based grocery chain. At the first creditors meeting last month, W. Leibbrand, chief executive officer and a principal partner of Rewe-Leibbrand, talked with several creditors and a preliminary seven-page purchase proposal was presented.

Since that meeting, officials with the West German company have remained in almost constant contact with Furr's management, frequently visiting several of the grocery stores. The preliminary purchase proposal presented at the July meeting also called for an immediate audit of Furr's finances by the company's independent accounting firm, an agreement in principal with the creditors and shareholders by July 18 and the execution of a definitive stock purchase agreement by the shareholders by Aug. 1.

J.K. Skillern, Furr's cocounsel during the Chapter XI proceeding, also reportedly visited Rewe-Leibbrand officials at their West German headquarters.

The "immediate audit" called for by the West Germans, however, apparently resulted in a revised purchase proposal — discussed by Lubbock creditors Friday — and both companies still have not reached a final draft of the sale conditions.

Federal Reserve Nominee Linked To Mart Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The recent surge in stock prices is referred to as the "Volcker rally," by many Wall Streeters these days.

The name refers to Paul A. Volcker, a conservative whose nomination as the new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board has given a lift to the market in recent weeks.

Although there is disagreement over how long it may last, analysts say the market's march to new highs for the year last week reflects Wall Street's assessment of the new Fed chairman.

Since Volcker's nomination July 25, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks has climbed 53 points amid signs of heavy investing by big institutions.

This past week proved to be a significant one for Volcker watchers, whose hopes have been pinned on a tough inflation fight by the new Fed chief.

Volcker, in the driver's seat for the first time at the Fed's monthly policy-setting meeting on Tuesday, emerged with a renewed clamp-down on credit markets and signaled a apparent willingness to risk a worse economic downturn in order to slow double-digit inflation.

The stock market showed its approval with a rally marked the heaviest trading of the year and a 1979 peak close for the Dow industrial index. The 30-stock index rose 9.13 points Wednesday and closed at 885.84, its highest level since last Oct. 13 when it finished at 897.09.

While the strong advance faded somewhat later in the week, the Dow Jones industrial average still posted a strong 16.30 net gain to 883.36.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, meanwhile, rose 1.06 to 61.70 during the week.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 8.59 to close at 211.00 Friday, extending its recent series of record highs.

Big Board volume also reached a high for the year, reflecting continued heavy buying by big institutions. It averaged 42.53 million shares a day, up from last week's 33.09 million average.

The Federal Reserve's clamp down on credit markets was first signaled Wednesday when the Fed moved to raise the target rate on federal funds to about 11 percent from earlier levels of around 10¾. Later in the week the Fed followed through with an announced increase in the discount rate — the rate at which banks borrow from the Fed — to a record 10½ percent, up ½-point from its earlier rate.

While high interest rates have tended to lure investors out of the stock market and into interest-bearing investments at other times, the immediate reaction was just the reverse.

"We can now see that investors are more concerned about inflation than they are about interest rates or a recession," commented Alan C. Poole, of Laidlaw, Adams & Peck when the stock market reached its midweek peak.

The rally may "run up against the consequences of what (Volcker) has to do. And that may give the market pause for thought," says Gordon.

Among the consequences he and others cite is the increased risk of a more severe recession if high interest rates choke off busines investment, or the possibility that an election conscious Congress and administration may increased spending later in the year thus countering the inflation medicine of an interest rate squeeze.

In a commentary of the Volcker appointment earlier this month, economist Arnold X. Moskowitz of Dean, Witter Reynolds, argues that Volcker "is likely to enjoy a brief honeymoon, during which he will be allowed to establish his conservative credentials...."

But he argues that over the longer-term, "performance of the dollar and United States stock and bond markets will depend on the ability of the present conservative consensus in Congress and the administration to hold together through the recession-election period, and not on the views of the Fed chairman alone."

New Boost Seen For Mart Rally

By J. L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman Inc.

The stock market's really showed signs of running out of steam this week, but many analysts believe that it may get a new boost from the Federal Reserve's decision to raise the discount rate from 10 percent to 10½ percent.

J.L. HUTCHESON

News of the hike in the discount rate came after the close of trading on Thursday evening. The discount rate is the rate the Fed charges on loans to member banks who, in turn, loan the money to their customers. The boost in interest rates will most assuredly lead to a 12½ percent prime very shortly and a possible peak somewhere above 13 percent.

Most experts feel that the speed with which the Federal Reserve acted indicates that it is very serious about defending the dollar and fighting inflation. Analysts feel that it will be bullish for the stock market in the long run.

Analysts feel that the weakness of the last two trading sessions in the stock market are to be expected following the recent sharp run-up in prices. Most indicate that while the market may be slightly overbought near-term, it probably won't encounter any real downside reaction until the industrial average reaches about 910. When the correction comes, they continued, there probably will be some consolidating and churning followed by a decline to the 820-850 area.

Earlier this week, a rise in the dollar and drop in the price of gold helped fuel a broad advance in the stock market in heavy trading. Volume swelled to its highest level in more than eight months. Most stocks advanced with the chemicals, housing, defense, retail, oils, television, steel, electronic and savings-and-loan issues all scoring good gains.

While talk of a recession becomes widespread (see article below) many stock market analysts who track the economy, business fundamentals and the technical condition of the market feel that pressures are building for a large advance in stock prices that could boost the Dow Jones industrial average to the 1,000 area in the next year or so.

A large part of the investment strategy for analysts who don't see a full-blown recession is their appraisal of the economy. They feel that the economy is in a period of "slow growth" which will persist for several years and the cash-laden institutions will perceive that stocks are even more undervalued once it becomes clear that profits aren't going to plummet.

Most analysts feel that the peak in interest lies somewhere down the road. Once investors see an end to interest rate raises, then the stockmarket could very well begin to move to substantially higher levels.

Experts Say Price Outlook Gloomier

Economists are growing steadily more pessimistic over the near-term outlook for the overall U.S. economy. Yet they believe that some sections of the country, much of industry, and most individual Americans will be affected very little.

Most economists agree that a recession began in the second quarter and will continue through the end of the year followed by a moderate recovery starting in early 1980.

The price outlook has become gloomier. The consumer price index is expected to rise at a 12.5 percent rate in the second half of this year, compared with an earlier 11.3 percent forecast earlier this year.

There isn't any consensus on how severe the slump will be. On the average, analysts expect the recession to be mild and foresee a downturn similar to the 1960-61 or 1969-70 period. A growing minority, however, predict that the depth and length of recession may rival the 1973-75 slump.

Nearly all experts agree that the East Coast will bear the brunt of the recession. Manufacturing plants there are older and usually pay higher wages which makes them more costly to operate and subject to early shutdowns. Consumers are more dependent on fuel oil for heating and that will limit their discretionary income.

A recent study by the Regional Economic Forum of the Conference Board suggests that the South and West would feel little or no effect from the recession. The board is a business-research organization based in New York. They see a repeat of the pattern of the 1973-75 recession when the sunbelt experienced no great difficulties.

Among the companies that most economists think will come through the recession in good shape are the service industries. Restaurants, barber shops, service stations and other service oriented operations suffered hardly at all in the last recession.

STEAMING AWAY — Monday, a century after a great-great-great-uncle patented his steam tractor in Indiana, Jerry Kitten of Slaton will fire up his restored model for visitors during an informal tractor reception. The tractor and thresher will be placed on permanent display in an addition to Kitten Moseley Fertilizer and Supply. It takes almost three hours to build up pressure for the 25-horsepower tractor used to operate a grain thresher in season and a sawmill other times. The first of the 17,025-pound tractors were built on the second floor of the Joe F. Kitten home, along with a thresher patented by the Kitten Machine Works. The historic Slaton machine should be ready for viewing, complete with a plume of black smoke from the boiler by mid-morning Monday. (Staff Photo by Gerry Burton)

Demo Conservatives Flirting With GOP

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Some years back, a national magazine ran a cartoon showing an armored Crusader seated on a horse, with his lance at the throat of a supine Saracen.

"Tell me more," the Saracen is urging, "about this Christianity of yours. I'm terribly interested."

That same sort of interest may be underlying some of the current talk about various conservative Democrats considering converting to the Republican Party.

In fact, some estimates have claimed that as many as 30 incumbents at the legislative, congressional and even statewide level may follow the example set by John Connally.

That figure seems high, but state GOP chairman Chet Upham says he is "optimistic" that "a number" of incumbents will be announcing changes of affiliation.

"I've had several one-sided conversations...with individuals I obviously can't name...urging them to consider this," Upham reports.

Upham sees the planned Republican presidential primary as the major reason for the sudden political soul-searching.

"Many former supporters of conservative Democrats will be voting in the GOP primary," he says, adding that those conservative Democrats are very aware of that prospect and "they are really moving towards the party of their supporters."

"Certainly," he comments, "the National Democratic Party has been moving away from the philosophy of the conservative Democrats."

Upham feels that candidates also are eyeing the polls showing Gov. Bill Clements faring well in the esteem of voters — which proves, he says, "the electorate will support and agree with a Republican."

"These people," he says of the potential converts, "have voted a philosophy that is more nearly the Republican philosophy than the Democratic philosophy, but they previously ran as Democrats on the theory that the Democratic nomination is tantamount to election."

"This is no longer the case."

Republican officials also are moving ahead with other plans which don't depend on any lance-point conversions to swell their ranks.

State Republican Executive Committee members meet in Dallas Sept. 15, to adopt some type of petition form for candidates in the presidential primary, and perhaps to discuss — or begin discussing — dreas where races will be "targeted" for the coming campaign year.

Work already is underway at GOP state headquarters in Austin to assess those areas where Republicans are most likely, on the basis of past performance, to gain seats, in order to help the committee which will be passing out funds to candidates in those target areas.

As to just which incumbents may switch parties, that must be assessed

Analysis

As Upham indicates, there hasn't been any sudden shift in philosophy to account for Democrats becoming "terribly interested" in joining the GOP.

Rather, it is the prospect of 900,000 to 1,000,000 voters taking part in the GOP primary that has them concerned.

The big question at this point seems to be what may be happening in the Democratic presidential race, once primary time arrives.

Should a strong contest between Jimmy Carter and Edward Kennedy develop, and the state Democratic executive committee decide to hold a straw vote, then many of the minority group voters could turn out, and help liberal or moderate candidates in local races.

Fear of that happening could help move some conservatives over to the GOP, where they can anticipate more favorable voters (since conservatives aren't likely to flock to any Democratic contest just to help Carter fend off Kennedy) and perhaps even an unopposed nomination.

One interesting theory is that strong challengers may not develop in 1980, because of the prospects of redistricting in 1981.

Should a candidate win in 1980, he or she might find an entirely different constituency in that legislative or congressional district in 1982, because of the redrawing which will be required.

But, on the other hand, an incumbent might have a better chance of having a congenial political environment created on his or her behalf.

That sort of mental balancing and calculation will be continuing for some time — and should increase as filing deadlines approach.

Meanwhile, the GOP says it's not turning away any converts—regardless of what may have accounted for their sudden interest.

LBJ Birthday Rites Planned At Ranch

STONEWALL (AP) — The birthday of Lyndon B. Johnson, 35th president of the United States, will be observed Aug. 25 at LBJ State Park, across the Pedernales River from LBJ Ranch, 65 miles west of Austin.

Theme for the observance is "His Roots Are Here," taken from a Johnson quotation that "My roots are here in these limestone caliche hills and among these people."

The 2 p.m. program in the park amphitheater will be co-sponsored by the state park and the LBJ National Historic site, which includes the ranch, Johnson's birthplace at Stonewall and his boyhood home in nearby Johnson City.

The Johnson City choir and children's choir will present a musical program and narrative on historical events from the 1850s to the 1970s.

Good News vs Bad News

For the last several weeks, Chrysler Corporation, the nation's third-largest automobile manufacturer and 10th-largest industrial corporation, has been "in the news" with reports of deficits, high inventories and efforts being taken to maintain its operations. Yet, there is a growing support across the country for Chrysler.

To quote from a recent editorial in The Wall Street Journal:

"Even the most efficient management cannot redesign an auto product overnight, let alone raise the funds to pay the capital costs of feckless changes. The regulatory burden is especially serious for Chrysler. The engineering and tooling costs are pretty much the same for large and small manufacturers, and the large producers can recover them at lower unit prices than smaller producers can."

The editorial continues:

"To maintain a healthy economy government must simply let companies adapt to their changing fortunes, cutting losses before they become unmanageable. But, having said that, we must quickly add a note of sympathy for Chrysler. No doubt its managers have made their share of mistakes, in a marketplace that punishes mistakes severely. But sociologically, it is one of our favorite corporations. By virtue of its position — a huge concern up against even more powerful competitors — it has attracted a scrappy brand of managers, willing even to take on politicians where more secure firms hunker down."

The philosophy Walter P. Chrysler had toward manufacturing cars when he established his company 55 years ago was that engineering should produce the very finest car possible, then establish the price. Competitors during the decades that have passed since then have been guided by a different philosophy. That is, first establish a specific price, then build a kind of car to fit that price.

With the acceptance of Chrysler-built cars by the public since 1924, it seems obvious that dollar for dollar investment and mile for mile cost of operation, the Chrysler or Plymouth owner has benefitted from an excellence in engineering—with these "firsts" in the industry: 4-wheel hydraulic brakes and high speed, high compression engine (1924), roller bearing universal joints and steel-backed bearing inserts (1932), fluid drive (1938), safety-rim wheels and self-energizing front wheel brakes (1940), full-time power steering (1951), torsion-bar suspension (1957), all welded single unit body construction - Unibody (1960), 5-year/50,000-mile warranty protection (1964), electronic ignition (1972), and lean-burn engine (1976).

This unique Chrysler experience — excellence in engineering — continues to the present in the 1979 models of Chrysler and Plymouth, giving you a greater value.

Our association with Chrysler Corporation began on April 1, 1940 and 39 years later we are proud to have represented only Chrysler and Plymouth with sales, service and parts since that date and are grateful for our many, many customers who have bought thousands of these cars for their benefit and enjoyment.

We are optimistic about the future of Chrysler Corporation under its new leadership and are confident plans will be implemented and pursued vigorously to keep Chrysler and Plymouth cars in the marketplace — to give you a choice.

For today, you have this choice ...

- If you want high mileage . . . come to the mileage maker. Chrysler Corporation is No. 1 in gas mileage of the Big 3. Based on projected 1979 Corporate Average Fuel Economy Ratings.
- If you want variety . . . then visit us. We have ready for delivery an extensive stock of Chrysler New Yorkers, Newports, Cordobas, and LeBarons, and Plymouth Volares, Arrows, Horizons, Champs, Voyagers and Trail Dusters.

- If you want financing on an easy-to-pay plan . . . we have it. Financing has never been more flexible. Even up to 48 months.
- If you want service after the sale . . . then come here. You'll have the attention of 60 persons who are interested in your automotive needs.

We still believe Chrysler builds the finest cars you can buy for the money. Will you visit us soon? We've got the cars. They're all priced to go. Let's make a deal!

Thank you,

Colleagues Mourn Death Of 'Lucy' Show Co-Star

BELVEDERE, Calif. (AP) — "The world has lost one of the great performers of the state, films and television," said Miss Lucille Ball on the death of her friend, Vivian Vance.

Miss Vance, the actress known to millions as Ethel Mertz on the "I Love Lucy" television program, died of cancer Friday at age 66.

"I have lost one of the best friends I have ever had," said Miss Ball, who had visited Miss Vance shortly before her death. "I shall miss her terrily."

Miss Vance, who died at her home, had been ill "for quite a while" said Howard McClay of Lucille Ball Productions in Los Angeles.

Desi Arnaz, Miss Ball's former husband and co-star of "I Love Lucy," said, "It's bad enough to lose one of the great artists we had the honor and pleasure to work with, but it's even harder to reconcile the loss of one of your best friends."

No formal funeral services are planned, McClay said, but a private memorial probably will be held.

Born Vivian Bagley in Cherryvale, Kan., on July 26, 1913, Miss Vance appeared with Miss Ball, Arnaz, and William Frawley on the CBS-TV show from 1950 to 1961. Frawley died in 1966.

Miss Vance also appeared intermittently as Miss Ball's sidekick in "The Lucy Show," which later became "Here's Lucy" on CBS. That show ran from 1962-1974.

Her last appearance with Miss Ball was in a 1977 TV special for the same network.

VIVIAN VANCE

Among her film credits were "Secret Fury" and "Blue Veil."

In the 1960s, the actress appeared on television programs such as "Candid Camera" and "The Jack Paar Show" to overcome what she termed "the Ethel image."

Despite her Hollywood roots, Miss Vance said she never felt at home there and in 1962 lived in a 125-year-old white colonial style house in Connecticut.

"Even after all the years in Hollywood, I feel now that home is in Connecticut and I'm a visitor out there," she once said in an interview. "So even if it is my house, when I'm out there working, I live like a visitor."

She moved to the San Francisco Bay area near her sister, Mrs. Ross Graham, about three years ago, McClay said.

The actress is survived by her husband, publisher John Dodds. She had one brother and three sisters.

Woman Raped Early Saturday In Home

An 18-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was raped Saturday morning by a man who broke into her apartment in the 2400-block of 35th Street.

Police said the woman's description of the rapist matched the suspect in an attempted rape that occurred in the same area earlier in the week.

The rapist was described at a white male about 20 years old, six feet tall and of a stocky build. She said he had short brown hair, wore western-style clothes and boots and had a gold chain around his neck.

The victim she was awakened in bed about 6 a.m. Saturday when the suspect jumped on her, began choking her and threatened to kill her. When the victim told the suspect her father was going to visit her at 7 a.m., the man said, "I'll blow his head off."

The rapist said he had a gun, but the victim said she never saw a weapon.

She said the man told her, "I need $10,000 to leave town. Get it by 10 a.m., or I will kill you."

Then the suspect raped her, according to police reports. After the rape, the victim jumped off the bed, grabbed an electric iron and hit the rapist.

The suspect then threw the victim on the bed and told her, "Get dressed, you're coming with me."

The victim dressed and as she was looking for her shoes, the suspect ran out the door got into his car, described as a late model Buick or Pontiac, and drove away.

An elderly woman who was walking by told police she saw the man leave the victim's house.

The victim called police and then was taken to Health Sciences Center Hosptial for treatment and counseling by representatives of the Rape Crisis Center.

The victim told police the rapist looked familiar to her, but that she couldn't remember where she had seen him.

A 24-year-old Lubbock woman was arrested for possession of marijuana and of dangerous drugs Saturday after a policeman saw a potted plant that looked like marijuana fall out the back of her car as she turned a corner.

An officer said he was behind a 1979 Mazda traveling south in the 4000-block of Boston at 9:55 a.m. Saturday when he noticed a suspicious-looking plant in the back of the car. The officer said the rear widow of the car was opened, and several potted plants were sitting on a coffee table hanging out the rear of the car. The officer said the car was traveling very slow, with emergency flashers on.

After one of the potted plants fell out of the car, the officer stopped the woman and arrested her for misdemeanor possession of marijuana. A search of the woman's purse also revealed in invalid prescription for a muscle relaxer, and she also was arrested for possession of dangerous drugs.

A 50-year-old Lubbock man told police he was robbed at gunpoint of $3,000 in traveler's checks Saturday.

Pete Kern, of 2108 Ave. Q, Apt 64, said he was robbed about 2:35 a.m. by Mexican-American males, both between 18 and 25 years of age. The victim said the two suspects came to his apartment with a friend. While in his apartment, one of the suspects started to rummage through a drawer where Kern kept the traveler's checks.

When Kern asked the man what he was doing, the suspect displayed a pistol and told the victim that if he came any closer "I kill your ...."

The two suspects took the checks and then ran out the door and down an alley.

U.S. May Get Less Mexican Natural Gas, Officials Say

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Initial sales of Mexican natural gas to the United States likely will be much less than originally discussed, if current negotiations result in a contract, the Foreign Ministry here says.

When sales were first discussed in 1977, plans called for the export of two billion cubic feet a day by pipeline to Texas. But now, according to the Foreign Ministry in a statement issued Friday, the shipments would be in the order of 300 million cubic feet a day. The reason given is that Mexico will need the natural gas for its own development.

Negotiators for both countries have met six times since February trying to agree on price, amounts, price-increase clauses and the length of the contract. Mexico's assessments of its own needs have increased in two years because of a campaign to develop energy-intensive, export-oriented industries in this country, where 40 percent of the work force is unemployed or under-employed.

No agreements have been announced so far, but negotiators are trying to work something out in time for an agreement to be signed when President Jose Lopez Portillo meets President Carter in Washington late next month.

Another factor that could limit the amount of gas the United States would get is that the gas is largely a by-product of oil production, and Lopez Portillo has repeatedly said Mexico will develop its oil potential slowly so as not to "deform" the economy.

About 1,400 cubic feet of gas are produced with each barrel of oil. Mexico has proven reserves of 26.1 billion barrels of oil and 89.9 trillion cubic feet of gas, for a total thermal equivalent of 40.2 billion barrels of oil. Potential reserves are listed here at 130 billion barrels of oil and 411.6 trillion cubic feet of gas for a thermal equivalent of 200 billion barrels of oil.

Pemex now produces about 1.7 million barrels of oil a day, which means about 2.4 billion feet of gas. Much of the gas is burned because there are no buyers for it. Near the end of 1980, Pemex says, the figures should be 2.25 million barrels of oil and about 3.5 billion feet of gas.

The United States uses about 20 trillion cubic feet of gas a year and imports about 1 trillion feet of it, mostly from Canada. Small amounts of liquefied natural gas are bought from Algeria.

The United States pays Canada $2.80 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In 1977, tentative agreement was reached by the government here with six U.S. companies to buy Mexican gas at $2.60 per 1,000 cubic feet, with increases tied to the price of No. 2 fuel oil delivered in New York harbor.

The subsequent price increase for the fuel oil would have put today's price for Mexican gas at about $4 per 1,000 cubic feet if the six-year agreement had been signed two years ago with the American companies.

An American source here said U.S. regulatory officials refused to approve the deal on those terms. The source, who asked to remain anonymous, said Mexico had "an erroneous perception of our regulatory regime" and announced that a deal had been made before it had been considered by regulatory officials. Some months of ill feeling followed.

A 48-inch natural gas pipeline already has been built from the rich Reforma oil fields in Mexico's southern Gulf region north to San Fernando, about 80 miles south of Brownsville, Texas. The pipeline could handle 2.7 billion feet of gas a day. The source said it could be extended to the United States and connected with existing lines there fairly quickly if an agreement is reached and approved.

If not, the Mexicans appear ready to use the line as a base for a Mexican network to supply gas to its own expanding industrial development program.

Burglars Loot Firm; Missing Poison Sought

FORT WORTH (AP) — Authorities warned residents Saturday to be on the lookout for a small canister of a rare and extremely deadly rat poison taken by burglars who looted an exterminating company.

Health officials said there is no known antidote for the poison, called Compound 1080, which ranks among the 10 most toxic substances in the world. A dose the size of a matchhead can kill a medium-size man.

Civil defense authorities feared the poison could get into the city's water supply by accident.

The canister, which has a yellow label marked with a skull and crossbones, is about the size of a half pint paint can. It contains a half ounce of the bluish gray powder.

The poison was in the safe of the Fort Worth Exterminating Co. when it was carted away Thursday night by burglars, police said. By Friday night, police had recovered the safe and seven canisters that contained the deadly compound, but one was still missing.

Police said they believed the safe contained only the canisters and some company papers, and no money.

Police Capt. Garland Geesland said Saturday officers staked out a house near where the poison was recovered. Two of the canisters were found in the safe and five were found in a trash bag on a curb near the home.

Inside the house, police said, were at least three van-loads of rifles, television and stereo sets — all believed stolen — and narcotics.

FBI Taking Peeks At Russian Trash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has taken to sifting through Soviet trash at a private dump in Northern Virginia.

Te Washington Post reported Saturday FBI agents, alerted by a contact at the dump, are on the scene within minutes after the Russians, in a white truck, dump a load of trash every few months.

An FBI spokesman asked about the Post article chuckled but refused comment.

The 50-acre landfill, owned by Mack Crippen Jr., is a major dumping ground for trash from Northern Virginia and the District of Columbia, but its clients make it unique.

Besides the Russians, the CIA, the Department of Defense, the Nigerian Embassy and other diplomatic missions, the General Services Administration and other U.S. agencies take their trash there.

Dump manager Bob Johnson told the Post the Russians — Who usually pay the dumping fee in cash but once offered a bottle of vodka — seem unconcerned about the trash, which ranges from dinner receipts to unpaid parking tickets.

"The FBI learns all kinds of stuff from it, like when the Russians have been to Rive Gauche (an exclusive French restaurant in Washington) and who they've had dinner with," said Johnson. "The parking tickets tell them where the Russians have been."

Johnson said once, East almost met West when the FBI Arrived to find the Russians still unloading their trash.

Big Banks Up Prime Rate; Implications Widespread

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's biggest banks pushed their prime lending rates to a record-tying 12 percent this past week. But unless you are involved in finances for a business, that may not sound like hot news to you.

The prime rate is the rate that banks use on loans to their best corporate customers. The latest increase from 11¾ percent brings it to the peak reached in 1974, during the midst of the last recession.

While the prime rate doesn't directly affect consumer loans, it serves as a benchmark for general interest-rate trends.

And steeply rising interest rates do carry implications for consumers and for the economy in general.

Often the effect on consumer loans is indirect because many states have laws with ceilings on charges for auto loans, mortgages and other types of consumer credit.

And since in many cases those are already at the highest rate allowed, analysts don't forsee much liklihood of increased interest charges for consumer loans in the immediate future.

But there may be — and in many cases already has been — a squeeze on loan terms. Increased down payment requirements for buying a home, for instance, or a less enthusiastic reponse by banks to requests for personal loans are frequent result of a tight money market.

The increase in the prime rate reflects both the cost banks must pay in short-term money markets for their funds and demand for loans from borrowers. And this week's increase came as the Federal Reserve Board increased the cost of funds to lenders and thereby tightened credit for borrowers.

After a policy-making meeting on Tuesday, the monetary authority forced up the federal funds rate a notch, and later in the week increased its discount rate to a record 10½ percent from 10 percent.

Federal funds represent a key type of interbank loan, frequently borrowed for a short perid of time so banks can meet government reserve requirements. The discount rate is less frequently used but is the rate of interest the Fed charges on its own loans to banks.

The net result of both moves is to increase the cost of money to lenders and broadly force up interest rates.

The Federal Reserve, in announcing the increase in the discount rate, said, "the action was taken against the background of the continuing strong inflationary forces," signaled in part by continued rapid growth in the money supply. Rapid growth in money supply can lead to a situation where prices are bid up because more money and credit is available than the goods and services for purchase.

But analysts cite the need to keep the dollar from sinking in currency markets as another important factor in the strategy of rising interest rates. The Fed may be able to ease worries that high inflation is cutting the value of the dollar and, at the same time, make dollar-based investments more attractive because of the higher interest rates.

But as F. John Mathias of Continental Bank of Chicago recently observed, "The Carter administration and monetary authorities are faced with a dilemma in which aggressive efforts to control inflation will not bring quick results, but could further slow business activity and increase unemployment."

After rising sharply last November when the government staged a major "dollar defense" plan that also included an increase in the discount rate, the dollar has fallen again against most major currency, although it still remains above its lows last fall. Continental Bank calculates that from June 1 to Aug. 9 the dollar fell 5.2 percent against the West German mark, 4.7 percent against the Swiss franc, more than 7 percent against the British pound and almost 2 percent against the Japanese yen.

Since a weaker dollar also contributes to U.S. inflation, the move toward higher interest rates represents a tradeoff in the view of many economists. While there is hope that inflation may slow substantially by early next year, it may come at the cost of slower business activity and several hundred thousand jobs.

Some projections call for unemployment to rise to 8 percent by mid-1980, from the current 5 percent to 6 percent levels in light of the government's effort to slow inflation.

In other business developments this past week:

•Government figures showed that corporate profits fell 2.4 percent in the second quarter but that the drop in the overall economy was not as severe as it first estimated.

Its revised figures showed Gross National Product fell at an annual 2.4 percent rate in the quarter, less severe than its earlier estimate of a 3.3 percent decline. GNP represents the total output of goods and services.

•The Commerce Department said Americans' personal income rose sharply during July, up $27.2 billion, or 1.4 percent, which was more than double the June increase of $13.4 billion. But government economists said most of the gain was the result of a 9.9 percent cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits.

The report showed the wage and salary sector was up $8.9 billion, or 0.7 percent, the same as in June. This meant that workers continued to lose ground to inflation which has recently been averaging more than 1 percent a month.

•Construction of new homes fell sharply in July, and analysts saw that as one more bit of evidence the recession is underway. The government reported that housing construction starts last month were at an annual rate of 1,799,000 units, 7 percent below June's level of 1,935,000 units and 14 percent below the yearly rate established in July 1978, the report said.

Despite the slowdown, the price for new homes continues to rise. The Commerce Department said the average price of a new one-family house sold during the second quarter for $72,200. This is $3,900, or 5.7 percent more, than the average price during the first quarter.

Rosalynn's Chief Of Staff Not Sure What Caused Need

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how many times the question was asked, Kit Dobelle couldn't explain why first lady Rosalynn Carter needs a $56,000-a-year chief of staff.

"We didn't discuss the details of why it was necessary," said Mrs. Dobelle, the current chief of protocol at the State Department who was hired last week to the newly created position.

Mrs. Dobelle, 34, a native of Hamden, Conn., said she was offered the job by Mrs. Carter. But she repeatedly insisted she did not know why the first lady needs someone of the same rank and pay as President Carter's chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, to manage the first lady's 19-member staff.

"It wasn't a question I thought to ask," Mrs. Dobelle said in an interview at the end of the week. "I was offered the job, and I took it."

White House figures show Carter has 350 staff members, 50 of whom make $40,000 or more. Carter's nine senior staff personnel, including Jordan, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and press secretary Jody Powell, each make $56,000.

Mrs. Carter's press secretary, Mary Hoyt, who has also served as the first lady's staff coordinator, makes $45,000. In addition to Mrs. Hoyt and four press assistants, Mrs. Carter's staff include a social secretary and two assistants, five schedulers, three project coordinators and three personal assistants.

Mrs. Dobelle is married to Evan Dobelle, former Republican mayor of Pittsfield, Mass., who switched parties and supported Carter in his 1976 presidential bid.

Iranian Troops Sweeping Up Kurdish Resistance

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Government troops swept into the western Iranian town of Paveh on Saturday to drive out Kurdish rebels fighting for home rule separate from the Islamic revolutionary regime, officials said.

In Tehran, meanwhile, mysterious attackers fired several rifle-propelled grenades at the consulate building of the U.S. Embassy complex. American officials said there were no injuries in the explosions.

Government spokesman Sadegh Tabatabai said in a state radio broadcast that government forces had broken into Paveh, in restive Kurdistan province 300 miles west of Tehran, the capital.

"The rebels are now on the run and we are pursuing them," he said.

The announcement of swift government action followed a warning from Islamic leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that if the troops did not speedily recapture Paveh, he would "deal with them (the troops) in a revolutionary way."

There was no confirmation from Kurdish sources that government forces had entered the town or succeeded in dislodging the Kurdish insurgents.

Members of the 4-million-member Kurdish minority recently intensified their long struggle to win autonomy from the central government in Iran with a series of violent confrontations.

Tabatabai said at least 18 government soldiers were killed and 40 wounded in the operation. That raised the official death toll among government forces to 58 since fighting broke out in Paveh last Tuesday night.

He said a tank column from Kermanshah was ready to move into the Paveh area, 25 miles from the Iraqi border. "From Kermanshah barracks we are also sending armed forces units to Paveh and in addition two columns of tanks are advancing towards Paveh from Orumiyeh in the north."

In a national radio broadcast, Khomeini, who masterminded the February revolution that overthrew the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, said:

"I, as supreme commander of the armed forces, direct the chief of staff to order state police units and the army to the Paveh area with full battle gear ... until further notice I will hold the armed forces responsible for the atrocious deaths and if they disobey my command, I will deal with them in a revolutionary way."

Khomeini's word is law and his threat to deal with the military in a "revolutionary way" appeared to be a warning he might use revolutionary firing squads against any who disobeyed him. Those firing squads have executed more than 400 persons convicted by his Islamic courts since the February revolution.

The Kurds attacked Paveh on Tuesday, easily overpowering 200 troops sent there as an occupying force. The army tried on Thursday and Friday to send reinforcements there but said Kurds controlled approach routes and mountain passes in the area. The air force said Saturday it had dispatched fresh troops in full battle gear from Tehran to Kermanshah aboard three C-130 transport planes.

Tabatabai said Deputy Prime Minister Mostapha Chamram — earlier reported trapped with a handful of defenders in a besieged government compound — was directing military operations in Paveh. Chamran was dispatched from Tehran in an attempt to negotiate a settlement with Kurdish leaders.

Demonstrations were held in Tehran to support the government action in Paveh. Hundreds of young people gathered in front of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's office, some chanting: "Death to the counter-revolutionaries!" and "Send us to Paveh!"

Parents Fear Octuplets May All Die

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — The two remaining boys of the octuplets born to a Naples woman died Saturday and the parents said they feared the survivors — three girls — may die soon, leaving them still childless. But doctors held out some hope for one of the girls.

Doctors said Francesco, a boy, died late in the morning. The other boy, Luca, at 14 ounces the tiniest of the five girls and three boys born two months prematurely last Thursday, died Saturday night. The three surviving girls were in incubators and receiving intravenous feeding. The largest weighs two pounds, one ounce.

Doctors said two of the girls, Silvana and Anna, had two cardiac arrests each Saturday morning but their hearts resumed beating after massage.

They expressed some optimism for the third girl, Valentina, whom they described as being "quite lively."

Wiping tears while talking to reporters after Francesco died, the father, Stefano Chianese, an insurance company employee, said: "We are prepared to accept the inevitable. We just wish the ordeal would be over. I'm afraid we'll be returning home without our children."

"They all will die soon, and we will be once again profoundly disappointed," said the 29-year-old mother, Pasqualina, who lost sextuplets three years ago. Speaking from her bed at the Hospital of the Incurable, she confirmed that she has taken hormones for years to increase her fertility. The couple have no other children.

But officials at the St. Paul Hospital said Valentina was responding well.

"She is quite lively," a doctor said. "She cries, moves her hands and tries to pull off the intravenous needle. She, too, is premature but she is our hope for survival."

Valentina weighs one pound, 14 ounces.

Anna and Silvana have serious breathing problems and "make hardly any movement and never cry," the doctor said. Anna weighs two pounds, one ounce, and Silvana, one pound, 14 ounces.

A hospital spokesman said it was impossible to make firm prognoses. "Nobody can tell. We should also anticipate other problems that may arise from premature birth. For one thing, it's not easy (for the babies) to gain weight."

A girl, Angela, who weighed 17.6 ounces, died 10 hours after delivery last Thursday. On Friday, another daughter, Monica, died, followed by a son, Crescenzo, who at 2 pounds, 3 ounces was the largest of the octuplets.

Police Seek Clues In Stabbing Death Of Gum Heiress

ROLLING HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Investigators questioned relatives and neighbors Saturday in this rich seaside suburb of Los Angeles in search of clues in the stabbing death of chewing gum heiress Carlisle Higholt.

The neighbors described her as a shy and fearful woman who in recent years dressed in pajamas at all hours, taking no care for her appearance.

In trying to determine if the slaying was murder or suicide, police also have questioned the woman's husband, her 4-year-old adopted son, and a housemaid who discovered the pajama-clad body slumped on a bathroom floor.

Sheriff's investigators said there were no signs of robbery or a forced entry into the home, located in a posh suburb that has the highest per capita income of any community in California.

"There is not much to report," said Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy Jim Plantis. "We're still investigating."

An autopsy was expected to be completed Sunday, said county coroner's spokesman Juan Jiminez.

The maid, who did not want to be identified, told reporters a kitchen knife was still in Mrs. Higholt's chest when she found the body. But Plantis would say only that a knife was found in the bathroom.

The death of the 40-year-old heiress came four years after the death of her natural son, according to neighbors. The 2-year-old boy died of apparent heart problems.

Within six months of that tragedy, neighbors said, Mrs. Higholt and her husband, Howard, a diagnostic X-ray specialist, adopted another son, Jonathan, and moved a mile away.

"All she had cared about was her baby. She didn't care about anything else — including her appearance," said Chico Bernstein, who lived near the Higholt's former Rolling Hills home.

Rain, Sunshine Combination Pleases Farmers Skipping Irrigation Chore

There is a chance of more showers today, but in between the intermittent wetness, an abundance of sunshine is expected to break through partly cloudy skies.

That combination of rainfall and sunshine is pleasing many area farmers who won't have to irrigate crops that are normally parched by summer's end without supplemental watering.

In future years, South Plains residents are apt to recall 1979 as a very wet year. So far this year, Lubbock has soaked up 16.57 inches of rainfall, whereas last year's precipitation by this date was less than half that amount, 7.89 inches.

The 20 percent chance of rain today and tonight is expected to come from a weak upper level low pressure system which is moving northeastward across the area.

Amounts from the widely scattered showers will average near .25 inch, but some amounts near .5 inch may fall in the western counties of the South Plains.

Both today and Monday, high temperatures are expected to be in the upper 80s with a low tonight in the mid 60s.

Elsewhere in the state today, the National Weather Service forecasts warm temperatures and partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thunderstorms across southeast Texas and the coast.

Ranching Heritage Center Set As Society's Meeting Place

Restoration of homes at the Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech University will be the subject of the program for the Heritage Society's quarterly meeting Tuesday.

Willard Robinson, restoration architect for historic structures at the Ranching Heritage Center, will lecture and make a slide presentation entitled "Restoration: the Ranching Heritage Center" at the meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Garden and Arts Center.

Robinson, also a professor of architecture at Texas Tech, is the author of numerous books and articles on architecture and preservation.

Society members also will discuss setting up a Lubbock Heritage Tour including oral histories, guides and a traveling exhibit to entertain and educate Lubbock residents and visitors with stories of the city's heritage.

Anyone interested in historic preservation is invited to attend the meeting and memberships in the 143-member tax-exempt group are still available.

A guidebook, for the identification and preservation of architecture in Lubbock is available through the society for $3.

GROUPS SUPPORT YOUNG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Washington-based groups, representing blacks and Jews, have joined in support of outgoing United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young. The Washington branch of the NAACP and the Washington chapter of the American Jewish Committee called Young "one of the most extraordinary Americans" and said his leadership "must not be lost." Young resigned as U.N. ambassador after it became known that he violated U.S. policy by meeting with a representative of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

FBI's Filmed Evidence Rated Central To Davis Murder Case

FORT WORTH (AP) — It was a typical Texas summer morning. Hot, cloudless and quiet.

The day was Aug. 20, 1978, and the breakfast crowd at Coco's Restaurant was unaware of the drama unfolding on a parking lot outside.

A burly, dark-haired man sat in his Ford, smoking, sweating and waiting. Shortly before 9 a.m., a Cadillac wheeled onto an adjacent lot and stopped beside an unmarked van.

Inside the van, an FBI agent withdrew his .38 from its holster and whispered: "This is it!"

At that moment, both FBI agent and FBI informant were prepared to kill Cullen Davis.

Within seconds, however, Davis climbed back in his Cadillac and pulled alongside McCrory.

"Just paranoid," he said.

"Goddamn," signed McCrory, replacing his pistol.

"Come on," demanded Davis, gesturing him to his car.

For the next few minutes, the two men, one a millionare industrialist, the other an informant, discussed the murder of Davis' divorce judge.

"I got Judge Edison dead for you," said McCrory, 41.

"Good," replied Davis, 45.

"I'll get the rest of them dead for you. You want a bunch of people dead. Right?"

"All right."

As Davis left that morning, McCrory spoke into a concealed microphone, "I have got the money. He has got the gun."

In the van, FBI agent Joe Gray lowered his videotape camera and his colleagues replaced the blackout curtains. A second set of officers arrested Davis within minutes.

Five months later, prosecutor Jack Strickland stood before a Houston jury while Joe Gray played a composite sound and film version of the Aug. 20 rendezvous.

"Folks," he said in his closing argument, "You all are witnesses. Not just as jurors, but witnessess ... it is as if you had been transported back from this courtroom ... to August in Fort Worth in the heat of the summer of 1978.

"It's like you are in the back seat of that car, ladies and gentlemen. It's like you werelooking trough a one-way mirror. You are there. You can hear them. You can see them ..."

The jurors listened also to defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes. He told them Davis was "conned" by McCrory, duped by his ex-wife, Priscilla, and framed on a murder-soliciation charge.

Media Course To Explore Technology

Society's love-hate relationship with technology and change is the subject of a credit course offered this fall by the Division of Continuing Education at Texas Tech University, in cooperation with The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

For the first time this fall, the Courses by Newspaper series has been linked to Lubbock's Public Broadcasting Service television station, KTXT-TV, Channel 5, to create a unique, multi-media educational offering.

Weekly newspaper articles, one component of the course entitled "Connections: Technology and Change," will appear each Sunday beginning Sept. 9 in The Avalanche Journal.

Scheduled to begin airing on Sept. 30 at 7 p.m. is the 10-part television series, "Connections," a personal view of the "triggers" of technological innovation by James Burke, an award-winning British Broadcasting Corporation writer and producer. Each of the 10 parts will be broadcast by KTXT-TV four times each week: 7 p.m. on Sunday, 8 a.m. and 12 noon, Monday; and 9 p.m., Wednesday.

Dr. S. M. Kennedy, university professor at Texas Tech, will instruct and coordinate the course. In addition to reading the newspaper articles, the course reader, and the study guide — two classes and an examination meeting are required to obtain credit. Meetings will be scheduled on Saturday as a convenience for participants and they will be notified by mail of the times and places of the meetings. The reader and study guide will be available at the Texas Tech Bookstore for $22.45.

"Connections: Technology and Change" is a three-hour credit course listed in the university general catalog as Humanities 230. Students may register for this course at fall registration as part of their regular load. Those persons interested in this course only, have the option of taking it for regular residence credit or by extension. Persons taking the class by extension must attend the same three meetings as the other students, but should register at the Division of Continuing Education, Building X-15 on the Tech campus.

Coordinated by John G. Burke, professor of history, University of California, Los Angeles, the Courses by Newspaper series is authored by social scientists and historians who explore the sources, consequences and prospects for technological change. Topics include society's ambivalence toward change, the ethical dilemmas it creates, and the impact of these changes on politics, economics, jobs and lifestyles.

Among the authors are Peter F. Drucker, the Clarke Professor of Social Sciences, Claremont Graduate School; Derek J. de Solla Price, the Avalon Professor of the History of Science, Yale University; Joseph Gies, director of publications, Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges; and Clarence Glacken, professor of geography emeritus, University of California, Berkeley.

UNITED PULL — Johnny Gonzales, 10, John McCormick, 14, and Pam Nicklas, 13, are among the city's youths who will participate in the United Way push-pull campaign next week. Youth groups will put the push-pull decals with the United Way emblem on doors of businesses in the city. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

United Way Push-Pull Decals On Way

Push comes to pull August 20-22 when members of United Way youth agencies visit local business establishments to install new United Way "push-pull" decals on their doors.

Not since the early 50's, according to campaign chairman Joe Price, has there been a full-scale citywide effort to apply push-pull stickers to every business door. Price said that various organizations had voluntarily updated specific areas, but not the entire city.

Members of the Boys' Clubs, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire, Girl Scouts, Guadalupe Neighborhood Center and Parkway Neighborhood Center will go door-to-door, street-to-street to renew older stickers and apply uncovered doors with the new version.

Each youth agency member has been specifically instructed to check with store and business managers for permission before applying the decals, according to Price, and each group of youngsters will be accompanied by an adult leader.

"United Way of Lubbock was one of the first in the nation to make use of the "Push for United Way," "Pull for United Way" decals. It's an innovation now advocated nation-wide," said Price.

In addition to asking permission to apply the decals, the youth agency members also will distribute posters promoting the current United Way campaign.

Learning Disability Workshop Set

A three-hour workshop to aid teachers in identifying and working with children with learning disabilities is to be conducted at St. Elizabeth/St. John Neumann Catholic School, on Aug. 23, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Coordinator of the workshop will be Tom Rhea, an educational diagnostician in the special projects division of Texas Tech University. Rhea has had extensive experience working with children, parents, and teachers, as part of a program called Family Link II, providing home — based help and support for parents of handicapped children.

The special projects division serves a seven-county area around Lubbock, and is headed by Dr. Mary Tom Riley, assistant professor in child development at Texas Tech University.

The workshop planned for teachers on Thursday, will include methods of diagnosing children with learning disabilities, tips on evaluation and teaching techniques, testing tools, as well as many other practical helps. Teachers attending this workshop will be given a packet of useful materials free of charge, and have the opportunity to view other materials which are available in the area of learning disabilities. The schedule is as follows: 9 a.m. — registration and film; 10:00-10:30 — coffee and examination of displays; 10:30-noon — lecture and demonstrations.

Pre-school and elementary teachers who would like to attend this workshop are asked to call by Aug. 22 at 799-4788, Mrs. Mary Jo Moore, principal. St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann Catholic School is located at 22nd St. and Frankford Ave.

The all-time champion literary pedestrian is probably William Wordsworth, who had walked 180,000 miles by the time he was 65, according to National Geographic.

Freeway Link Completion Delay Seen By Construction Experts

By PHILIP BRASHER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Completion of one of the initial stretches of the South Plains' slowly developing freeway — Interstate 27 — is still a year away, a state highway department spokesman said Friday.

The 7.1 mile strip of I-27 between North Loop 289 and the Monroe Overpass just south of New Deal was expected to be finished by late 1978 or early 1979, but assistant district engineer C.W. Noll said the portion probably will not open until August 1980.

Construction workers for Ashland-Warren Inc., the primary contractors on the approximately $14 million final phase, have been working in the Dallas-Fort Worth area this summer, Noll said, but are expected to begin pouring 10-inch concrete pavement soon.

Despite the delay, the contractors "have ample time to finish" within the contract terms, Noll said.

The second phase contract is approxiamtely 20.3 percent complete, he added.

The southern stretch of I-27 forms a small portion of the 125-mile freeway linking Lubbock with Interstate 40 in Amarillo. Eventually, the expressway will tie the north leg with an extension across Lubbock to South Loop 289 through a corridor not yet selected.

The federal government initially approved construction of I-27 in the late 1960s, but completion of the entire road is probably another decade away. All contracts on the freeway do not have to be approved until October 1986, Noll said.

The first contract on the North Loop stretch of I-27 totaling $11.56 million was let in October 1975.

Convicted Drug Trafficker Termed Inept

AUSTIN (AP) — Jimmy Chagra — if you believe all those witnesses Chagra said lied — ran a dope smuggling venture so full of mistakes and bad luck it called to mind "The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight."

New York author James Breslin's fictional gang of bumbling criminals had nothing on Chagra and his associates — again if you believe accomplice testimony.

The Chagra operation came off as Murphy's Law in action — if something can go wrong, it will.

Reporters and others who expected revelations of a well-oiled criminal machine, possibly linked to a national organized crime syndicate, were disappointed.

Government witnesses indicated Chagra was almost childlike in his trusting acceptance of total strangers as accomplices; incompetence plagued his ventures; and vital — and illegal — missions were attempted in mechanically defective aircraft and motor vehicles.

Chagra was convicted in federal court Wednesday of "continuing criminal enterprise."

He faces at least 10 years without parole and could get as much as life. His attorneys say they will appeal.

Chagra, 34, lives in Las Vegas and says he makes his living in the dice pits and blackjack tables of Caesar's Palace, the Horseshoe and other casinos. Las Vegas witnesses said he is very, very lucky and has taken the Horseshoe for nearly $2 million this year alone.

But if he is lucky and skilled at gambling he was neither fortunate nor adept in the "Colombian Connection" cocaine and marijuana smuggling episodes related by witnesses.

According to the testimony — virtually every word of it denied by Chagra — this is the story of Chagra's "continuing criminal enterprise."

Chagra directed an attempt in late December 1976 to fly 17,000 pounds of marijuana to Ardmore, Okla. There was an ingenious plan to confuse radar observers by "piggybacking" two planes so close they appeared as a single blip on radar screens. One plane would swoop low and land while the other would fly on and the landing would go undetected. But there was radio trouble, and in the confusion both planes landed. Radar detected the unscheduled landing. Planes, crews, cargo and unloading teams were busted.

In June 1976, another attempt to fly marijuana out of South America failed when a DC-6 crashed and burned on take-off near Santa Marta, Colombia.

Chagra chartered a Lear Jet and flew in with paramedics to treat a man burned in the crash and take him to Brooke Army Medical Center's burn center in San Antonio.

But Colombian authorities, suspecting cocaine aboard the plane, arrested Chagra, the crew and the paramedics and jailed them for several weeks.

The DC-6's alleged pilot, Jerry Wilson, joined them in jail, and a story was concocted that Wilson flew in on the Lear Jet with Chagra.

Financially battered by the "Ardmore bust" and the Colombian plane crash, Chagra decided to raise money for a really big marijuana load by smuggling 13.2 pounds of cocaine from Colombia and reaping a fast profit in the United States.

He recruited ex-convict Henry Wallace in the summer of 1977 and told him to round up "investors" and hire a pilot.

Wallace obtained $60,000 from "two men on a double-your-money promise and acquired $10,000 from Richard Young, a San Francisco jazz musician.

Dudley Connell, an El Paso travel agent, and Paul Taylor, a Denver beer and wine wholesaler, declined to invest because they had no funds.

Using Young's name, Wallace bought a twin-engine Aero Commander in Oklahoma City. Jim French flew it to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where Chagra was living as a fugitive from bad publicity in El Paso because of the Colombian "mercy flight."

DEATH CAR — State troopers view one of two cars that struck a group of young people standing in the middle of a highway near Orlando, Fla. Six of the youths, who had gone to the rural area for a post-midnight drag racing session, were killed when struck by the cars that came unexpectedly on the site from the opposite direction. Six Teen-Agers Killed Watching Drag Races On Florida Road

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Six young people watching friends drag race on an isolated country road were killed early Saturday when two other cars appeared from the darkness and mowed them down from the rear.

"They were roaring down on us before we knew it," said a survivor, 19-year-old Ken Miller, one of 20 to 30 young people watching the race. "It was dead straightaway.

"We were on the road, but we didn't see them until the last second. Four of us jumped out of the way. Eight got hit."

Two were hospitalized, one in serious condition and the other in stable condition.

After relatives had been notified late Saturday, authorities released the names of the dead, all Orlando residents. They were identified as Ned Schuler and James S. Gillmore, both 18; Ronald and Donald Henderson, 17-year-old twin brothers; Dreama Babcock and Julie Ann Narut, both 15.

The cars that hit the victims were not drag racing, according to Florida Highway Patrol trooper Wesley Golon.

Golon said a Chevrolet driven by Rebecca Ann Wagoner, 23, plowed into the group first. A Datsun driven by Robert J. Ray, 26, then smashed into the back of Miss Wagoner's car and also struck the group of youngsters, Golon said. Neither driver was seriously injured.

Police said neither driver was charged althoughthe accident was still being investigated.

Golon said the Wagoner and Ray cars were "using the road normally, heading westbound toward Orlando. The kids were on the road, watching the racers, and didn't see the cars on the road behind them."

Police said there was no indication that either of the cars had its lights out or was speeding. They said some of the spectators were using headlights from their own cars to illuminate the drag racing, and this may have prevented the victims from seeing the lights of the oncoming cars.

The victims all were pronounced dead at the scene. Four were pinned under the two cars.

"It was the worst accident I ever saw," said a Herndon Ambulance Service supervisor with five years' experience.

Miller and other eyewitnesses said 20 to 30 youths were at the site on State Road 420, about 20 miles northeast of downtown Orlando. They said the area is somewhat of a hangout often used for drag racing.

"We had been there a couple of hours watching the guys race," said Miller. "We were in several small groups. The (racing) cars were turning around down the road and we were all standing around, watching and talking."

"We were on the road, not in the middle, a little to the side, and he could have gone around us," Miller said.

"I guess he didn't see us. I don't see how.

"The car must have been going 70 miles an hour. We didn't see the headlights until he was almost on us. Somebody hollered. Four of us jumped out of the way.

"You could feel it go by. And you could hear it hit the others. Then it swerved and seemed to hit something else, maybe one of the drag cars."

Patches Of Oil Stall Off Coast

The booms contain the surface oil, but below that depth.

Besides booming the secondary bays of Matagorda, the task force plans to use open water containent systems outside the pass to scoop up the oil.

The Coast Guard's pump system was hopelessly clogged with the fudge-like goo and won't be operable for some time.

The Navy's Marco Skimmer, which lifts the oil off the waters on a type of conveyor belt, was successful in collecting 1,300 gallons of the oil and water mixture off Port Isabel.

Impact on wildlike continues to be minimal, scientists said.

"I'm not surprised at this point" that more wildlife has not been affected by the crude oil, said Tom Smylie, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency.

Young To Guide U.N. Debate On Palestinians

Ironic Twist Gives Envoy Turn To Preside

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an ironic twist, Ambassador Andrew Young will be guiding this week's debate on the explosive Palestinian issue in the U.N. Security Council — and possibly casting U.S. votes that conflict with his personal views.

Circumstances, and President Carter's decision to retain Young during what the administration says will be a careful, slow search for a successor, have combined to create this awkward situation.

It being Young's turn to preside over the Security Council, he will guide the debate beginning Thursday over resolutions designed to support Palestinian rights or even statehood.

Favors PLO Talks

In the furor over his unauthorized talks with the PLO's U.N. observer, which caused Young's resignation, the ambassador made it clear he supports an accommodation with the Palestinians as well as negotiations with their representatives.

Defiant, Young said it would be "unconscionable" for him not to meet with PLO officials so long as he remained at the United Nations.

That would be the same sort of unauthorized venture that drew a reprimand from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and, when the facts of his July 26 session with Zehdi Labib Terzi emerged, caused Young's resignation.

With Vance on vacation in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., officials at the State Department fretted over what to do about the threat of another possible violation of U.S. policy.

Young Restricted

They finally wrung from the controversial ambassador approval of a statement that restricts Young to recognizing Terzi as a speaker in the Security Council but permits no other contact.

Young was quoted in an interview published in Sunday editions of The New York Times as saying that although he did not seek State Department authorization for his meeting with Terzi, or immediately report its results, "They (State Department officials) knew about it."

"There was a report circulating as of July 30," the newspaper quoted Young as saying. "It was in the pipeline. I read it and it was very accurate."

Young declined to say whether he thought his meeting with Terzi had been bugged by United States agents.

When asked Saturday night about Young's comments, State Department spokesman Thomas Reston would say only he could "neither confirm nor deny" what Young said.

In his 31 months at the United Nations, Young has followed an independent and often unorthodox course. Most of the time, probably because Carter owed him a political debt, Young was able to walk away from scrapes that would have caused the firing of other officials.

Vance cracked down on Young in July, 1978 for claiming "there are hundreds, perhaps thousands of political prisoners in the United States." And Carter is reported to have rebuked his fellow Georgian during last month's Cabinet shake-up for having repeatedly embarrassed the administration.

Among Young's more celebrated gaffes were suggesting former presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford, as well as the Swedish nation, were "racists" and calling Cuba a stabilizing force in Africa.

For the most part, Carter did not try to rein in Young. "I have never complained about what Andy does," he said in April, 1977. And generally, the president did not complain.

It isn't yet clear whether Young is under instructions not to negotiate with the PLO, even though he authorized the State Department announcement restricting his dealings with the organization.

"Nobody is in charge of Mr. Young," Reston acknowledged wryly.

The debate on the Palestinians will focus on the 12-year-old Security Council Resolution 242 with three important provisions.

It implicitly recognizes Israel's right to exist within defensible borders.

It calls on Israel to surrender territory — but doesn't say all the territory — that Egypt, Syria and Jordan lost in the Six-Day War of 1967.

Confusion Delays City Food Ruling

lature, but in his opinion that doesn't include rules adopted by state agencies.

That position is detailed in an extensive brief sent to state health officials in February. In late March city and state officials met in Austin to discuss ways of resolving the dispute.

Nelson said he submitted all the information from the city to the attorney general's office for an "informal review" and received a preliminary opinion supporting the state agency's position.

However, that "opinion" states only that cities may enact no ordinances inconsistent with state law and makes no mention of whether agency regulations should be treated as though they were state law.

The special assistant attorney general who sent Nelson the letter dated June 20 states the ordinance being reviewed was one "adopted by the city of Lubbock."

"The standards required to be met under the ordinance are in some cases less than what would be required by the regulations adopted by the State Board of Health," the attorney says, so "the Lubbock ordinance is invalid to the extent it permits food service practices not permitted by the minimum standards of state law."

However, it is unclear whether the ordinance mentioned is the proposed food sanitation ordinance never voted on by the city council or one now in effect.

Ross said the "opinion" is "begging the question," adding "it chagrins me a bit it's taken all this time for them to come up with nothing.

"If he (Nelson) is relying on this, I can't understand his position. He said he would get an attorney general's opinion or a declaratory judgment and comes out with this," Ross commented angrily.

The city attorney said the "opinion" was "just a letter referring to opinions" on an issue not in dispute.

"If the regulations had been passed by the legislature," the situation would be different, Ross said.

Nelson emphasized the "opinion" is "subject to further review and by no means binding."

"The question is by no means finally settled," he said.

Two weeks ago Nelson said he planned to contact city officials and set up a second meeting to discuss the best course of action in light of the letter from the attorney general's office.

However, city officials say they have not heard from Nelson about such a meeting.

Nelson appears to favor seeking a declaratory judgment from the courts, rather than requesting an attorney general's opinion, to protect other state agencies.

"I'm worried about the consequences of an attorney general's opinion as it might affect other agencies," Nelson said.

A declaratory judgment would "keep the issues as narrow as possible" and limit the decision to the facts of Lubbock's case, he said.

However, City Manager Larry Cunningham says it's important any resolution of the dispute be broadly applied.

"I personally would prefer an attorney general's opinion," he said. "I don't want anything construed just to apply to Lubbock.

"If the health department's position is accurate, it needs to apply to Houston, El Paso and Austin," he said. "It ought to be something that applies statewide."

Although Cunningham said he thinks Lubbock has good food service establishments and good restaurants, he added that if the city has to abide by regulations set by the state agency, other cities also should comply.

Cunningham said the state health department "overlooks other cities which don't even have health codes or health inspections."

There are restaurants in Austin "which obviously do not comply" with the state regulations and restaurants along highways which are never inspected, he said.

"It just does not make sense. If it is the law, why doesn't it apply to Austin?" he asked.

An opinion in the city's favor would give the council "the right to adopt the best health regulations possible which are realistic and not something prepared by someone in Austin or Washington," Cunningham said.

The ordinance could be "adapted to our own situation," he added. "I don't think something that applies to New York necessarily applies to Lubbock."

But if the state agency rules are deemed akin to state law, Cunningham said the legislature should adopt the rules and "require them to be enforced uniformly."

However, if the legislature "is going to get into the field of regulation, it should fund the inspections," he said.

"I don't think they're willing to do that."

The city cannot seek an attorney general's opinion, Cunningham said, but if the health department refuses to secure an opinion the city could "take the position we can adopt whatever kind of ordinance we want because the state health code does not apply."

Because the state does not enforce the rules equally, Cunningham doubts the agency would take any legal action against the city.

Although Cunningham said the issue needs to be resolved, he said city health officials told him the present health ordinance "covers 98 percent of the problems" pending a settlement.

"The present code is not so outdated that it jeopardizes health," he said.

Furr's Future Hinges On Meet

said they were unsure whether a specific plan will be presented to the court Tuesday. However, they added that an agreement between Furr's and Rewe-Leibbrand is expected to be reached within the month.

Once that agreement is reached, it will be presented to the court and creditors for their approval. If 51 percent of Furr's unsecured creditors — which includes all but two creditors — agree to the sale as the plan of reorganization, company officials and creditors will return to court a final time to get legal confirmation of the creditors' approval.

Most of the 130 creditors at the July meeting, as well as company officials, expressed optimism with Rewe-Leibbrand's proposal.

While the sale of Furr's would not erase its more than $56 million in debts, the company's new owner would assume responsibility of devising a method to pay Furr's creditors.

And many of the creditors, especially the smaller ones, appeared pleased with the West German's initial offer, which included 100 percent payment of claims of $10,000 or less against Furr's and claimants who waive the amount of their claims in excess of $10,000 "promptly after the final order of the Court allowing claims."

Attorneys for some clients owed amounts up to $20,000 said in July they thought their clients probably would consider Rewe-Leibbrand's proposal because "it ensures that we will get something and immediately. If this (Chapter XI) falls through, we might not get anything."

However, at Friday's Lubbock meeting one of the modifications of the first offer was a substantial reduction in the amount the West German firm says it will pay in full and as soon as possible. Instead of the $10,000 claim limit, the European company now is offering to pay 100 percent of all claims which amount to $2,000 or less.

Creditors said they expect, if a plan is filed Tuesday, no action will be taken until each creditor "thoroughly studies" all portions of the offer.

Murphy has indicated that voting forms probably will be sent to creditors about a week after the court filing.

If the creditors agree to the sale, Murphy said he expects a final court hearing in early October to get legal confirmation of the creditors' approval, with the final transfer to the West German firm, which has no other merchandising outlets in the United States but also reportedly is looking into the purchase of an Oklahoma grocery store chain, to be completed by the end of October.

While the sale of Furr's Inc. is expected to preserve the firm's viability, the transfer will mean the official end of of a substantial portion of a Lubbock "family dynasty."

However, the actual demise of family control of Furr Inc. already has begun. At the July meeting, Simon told creditors that many of the company's financial problems could be traced back to the death of Roy Furr Sr. in 1975 and the ensuing court battle between his children over management of his estate.

The 79-store grocery chain began in 1904 when C.W. Furr opened the Kirkland Mercantile Store. His sons, Roy and Key, entered the business in 1925 and four years later Roy was directing the supermarket operation (Furr's Inc.), which he headquartered in Lubbock.

Key turned his energies to the family meat packing business in Amarillo.

By the 1940s, the supermarkets were showing a profit, and Roy Furr Sr. had expanded operations to include cafeterias, food packaging, oil and real estate. Furr's two sons, Roy Jr. and Don, were brought into the firm.

Don took over management of Furr's Cafeterias Inc., a separate, publicly owned corporation not included in the Chapter XI proceedings, and Roy Jr. entered Furr's Inc., the retail grocery portion of the business.

While many of the Furr family members were in charge of family holdings separate from Furr's Inc., five who also held managerial positions with Furr's Inc. left their positions in June — including Roy Furr Jr., who resigned at the request of creditors.

Creditors said they sought the resignation of the younger Furr as chief officer because any repeat of "family problems with him at the head right now" could mean disaster for the business — and its creditors.

The "problems" alluded to by the creditors was the suit filed by Shelley Furr Hall alleging that her brothers, Roy Jr. and Don, planned to liquidate estate debts of their father by selling blocks of estate stock back to Furr's subsidiaries. She contended the stock should be sold at a more profitable rate to third-party investors.

In December 1977, the Texas Supreme Court ruled in Mrs. Hall's favor, saying such a "sale to self" was a violation of the Texas Probate Code.

During the July meeting, when asked by a creditor when the financial problems began, Simon said, "It all began back in 1975 after Mr. Furr Sr. died and the family began fighting in court over the estate.

"That, coupled with mismanagement and large losses in several sectors, such as the Phoenix division, is what brought us here today," he added.

'Non-Increase' In School Tax Rate Set For Hearing Monday

The formula attempts to compare two levies that should be equal except for new construction and growth due to reappraisals.

The formula uses 1979 assessed value and the 1978 tax levy. First of all, in order to make the two levies more equitable, new construction is subtracted from the 1979 tax base. Thus the only difference in the levies now should be in growth due to reappraisals.

However, the 1979 tax base is going to be depleted by tax exemptions granted this year. So to continue to make the 1978 and 1979 levies comparable, the tax exemptions are also backed out of the 1978 levy.

To illustrate, the levy for 1978 was approximately $15.8 million. After $2.3 million in exemptions are backed out, the resulting levy is $13.5 million.

According to the law, say administrators, the 1979 levy should be no more than $13.5 million (except for new construction and 3 percent growth).

But then for 1979, add $1.4 million the district will get in funds from the state in order to reimburse it for 45 percent of its exemption losses. The total is now $14.9 million in tax levy for 1979.

The problem at this point, the school officials say, is that when the truth law was passed, it was assumed all districts would be reimbursed for 100 percent of exemption losses, not 45 percent.

Thus they contend that only $1.4 million should have been deducted from the 1978 levy, not $2.3 million. When adding the $13.5 million for each year's levy now to the exemptions expected to be reimbursed the 1978 levy comes out to $15.9 million, while the 1979 levy comes out to only $14.9 million. The levies are now unequal.

So, school officials say that the approximately $900,000 in funds that are not reimbursable to the district should be added to the $14.9 million to get $15.8 million, which is comparable to the 1978 levy.

They say that extra money would represent about seven cents more to be added to the calculated rate, bringing it to $1.33. Add the 3 percent allowed growth and the rate ends up at $1.37 — only one cent less than the present rate. That rate, they say, would net the district enough money that the board would not have to hold a tax rate hearing.

As the calculated rate now stands, a rate of $1.30 applied to the 1979 tax roll would net the district only $17.5 million compared to last year's $18.2 million levy.

Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said the law "is based on the false presumption that you can operate on the same amount this year as last year plus three percent."

School officials say the district budget cannot be frozen in such a way, primarily because of inflation and, this year, because of state-increased teacher salaries.

School officials have feared taxpayer anger because of the proposed "increase" though they say they have received only a few calls since the proposed rate was made public.

wishers.

At the impromptu stop in Alma, Wis., Carter spoke for a few minutes, telling the crowd "what a great country we have" and reiterating the energy themes he has been stressing in recent weeks.

The president arose early Saturday and jogged 22 laps — about two miles — around a deck with Dr. William Lukash, the White House physician.

Then he had breakfast with a few staff aides, putting down his fork from time to time to shake hands with a fellow passenger.

Those aboard seemed deferential. They said they didn't want to disturb the president or disrupt his rest.

Carter waved from the wheelhouse and the wings of the boat's bridge to people lining the banks of the river. From land, youngsters shouted "Happy Birthday Rosalynn."

He posed cheerfully with fellow passengers on the oil-driven paddlewheeler.

The president met John and Elizabeth Baker of St. Paul, Minn. — who both wore customized T-shirts emblazoned, "We went downstream with Carter." He chatted with the Bakers for so long they finally excused themselves so as not to impose on his time.

"When we found out he was this friendly we just went into shock," said Lois Paskt of St. Paul.

A dense fog delayed the Queen for three hours at one of the Mississippi River's locks, but the 2,300 townspeople didn't mind waiting.

When the Delta Queen arrived at Wabasha, the Wabasha-Kellogg Band and Choir greeted the first family. The town's mayor, John Meisch, proclaimed Saturday "a day of positive unity for the future of a strong United States of America."

The crowd sang "The Star Spangled Banner," three verses of "America, the Beautiful," and "God Bless America."

Four clergymen prayed. The crowd joined in a responsive reading of Psalm 33, which begins: "Happy is the nation whose god is the Lord!"

In his speech, Carter described America as a nation capable of meeting any challenge.

Lifelong Learning Week Proclaimed By Governor

According to today's educators, if you are still alive, you are not too old to go to school. To emphasize this fact, Gov. William Clements is proclaiming Aug. 19-25 as Lifelong Learning Week in Texas.

Lifelong Learning Week is sponsored by the Texas Association for Community Service and Continuing Education on behalf of Texas institutions of higher education.

The governor's proclamation calls attention to the needs and changes in American education and recognizes the emergence of a new student population. The new population is partially comprised of the mother who has joined her children in college to finish a degree, the father needing additional business skills to make his salary more negotiable, and the person who does not have time or means to enter higher eudcation as a full-time student.

American life has grown so complex and changeable that Americans are feeling the need to return to school both to update their knowledge in traditional subjects and to pursue less traditional ones. The increased interest in and demand for continuing education reflects the nation's move toward an older and better educated populace which requires expanding vocational, avocational and cultural lifelong learning opportunities.

The purpose of Lifelong Learning Week is to bring public and professional attention to this new student population and its needs. In Texas alone, there are an estimated 1.5 million non-traditional students currently active in continuing education opportunities. All across the state, colleges and universities are making changes in their course offerings and schedules to accommodate day and evening students, full and part-time students.

The Division of Continuing Education at Texas Tech University is responding to the needs of the changing student in a variety of ways. Several examples are: correspondence courses for both high school and college credit; conferences, institutes, short courses, workshops, and seminars; extension credit and resident credit courses have developed and are designed to meet the needs of the public who need academic credit, professional or vocational training, or wish to pursue and area of personal interest.

In addition, senior citizens over 65 are permitted to attend classes at Texas Tech University on a no-charge audit basis if classroom space in the desired course is available and with the instructor's approval.

A student enrolling in a course on an audit basis does not enjoy full participation. No grades are given for auditing courses and no record is maintained in the registar's office.

Continuing Education Units may also be earned by students wishing to audit a course, receive recognition (not applicable toward an academic degree), and participate in a course. Before enrolling, the student must obtain the approval of the instructor and the department chairman or dean. Fees for CEU auditing vary depending upon the course.

Thermostat Raised, Fans Issued

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Amid laughter and fluttering paper fans, First Federal Savings and Loan Association officers Friday raised thermostats at the bank's downtown office and three branch buildings to 78 degrees.

In an 8:30 a.m. mock ceremony, 70 employees from all branches received paper fans imprinted with the First Federal logo and a new slogan "fan the spirit," and watched as a dozen vice presidents and branch managers performed a dance routine demonstrating "fanning techniques" to a recording of Olivia Newton-John's "Totally Hot."

President Robert Edwards warning on a recent visit to Lubbock that "the oil crisis is real." He encouraged employees gathered in the bank lobby to conserve energy car pooling and to turn off lights when they aren't needed.

Executive Vice President Charley Pope told the congenial, chuckling group "your physical comfort is important to us, to the First Federal spirit. That's why we've formed the First Federal Fan Club."

The savings and loan's advertising campaign is centered on a jingle touting their contagious "spirit."

To demonstrate the six degree temperature hike, expected to shave 15 to 20 percent off the bank's energy consumption, officers pointed to an oversized drawing of a thermometer.

New members of the "fan club" also received membership cards detailing their promises to "fan the spirit," and "save by degrees."

"You know everything in life's a game," Pope commented during the silly but effective skit.

"All we heard was a lot of complaints, when people found out we were going to turn up the thermostat, so we thought we'd just make it fun for everybody," said Pope.

Asked if the 15 minute-long "ceremony" would make the warmer temperature easier to take, an employee laughed, "yeah, probably."

Retakes Westchester Lead

Graham Back In Form

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Australian David Graham, the recently-crowned PGA champion, mastered very difficult playing conditions with a two-under-par 69 and regained the lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Westchester Classic.

Graham, who led the first round before dropping two shots back over the next 18 holes, established a one-stroke advantage over rookie Scott Simpson with a 54-hole total of 207, six shots under par.

Simpson, 23, had a hard-won 70 in the cool, windy, occasionally rainy weather that cut deeply into the anticipated gallery and produced some of the highest scores ever on the 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course.

Simpson had a 208 total going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

"I guess the golf course played much more difficult than I thought," Graham said. "Often here, 10 or 12 or 14 under is leading. This time 6 under is leading.

"I thought the scores would be better than they are. The pins were very difficult and putting was very, very difficult. Each and every green has its own speed. No two are alike. It's very difficult."

His erratic effort put him in and out of the lead several times. He mixed seven birdies with three bogeys, a double bogey and only seven pars.

"There's too much anxiety in my game right now for me to be pleased with it," he said. "I'm pleased I'm leading, of course, but I'm not at all pleased with my lack of consistency."

He took the lead alone with a 10-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole. That put him 3 under par for the day.

But he gave it back when he made double bogey-6 on the 304 yard 10th hole, generally considered the easiest on the course. He got his drive behind a tree, put his next in a bunker, came out short and 3-putted.

With everyone else having their difficulties, too, he regained the lead with another 10-foot birdie putt on the 14th, dropped back into a tie with Simpson when he missed the green and bogeyed the 16th, then took control again with another 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

"I'm very fortunate I've been able to make so many birdies and kind of compensate for the mistakes I've been making," he said.

"I missed some short putts that kept me from shooting a really good score, but I made some that kept me from shooting a bad score," he said.

Tomjanovich Decision May Affect NBA Owners

HOUSTON (AP)— Maybe, just maybe, said Houston Rocket star center Moses Malone, professional players will now think twice before fighting on the courts of the National Basktetball Association.

The verdict reached Friday by a federal court jury in Houston, awarding $3.3 million to Rocket forward Rudy Tomjanovich for injuries suffered when hit in the face by former Los Angeles Laker Kermit Washington, brought the comment from Malone, who recently was named the most valuable player in the NBA for the 1978-1979 season.

"It will make a lot of ballplayers, and especially owners, wonder what will happen to them if something like this ever happens again," Malone said. "Owners are going to realize that it shouldn't happen again. This may put a stop to it."

The jury of five men and one woman listened to two weeks of testimony in the celebrated case, deliberated five hours, and returned an award some $600,000 above what attorneys for Tomjanovich had asked.

The Rockets organization still has a $1.4 million suit against the Lakers' organization for loss of Tomjanovich's services. The jury will hear testimony on it later.

Joseph Jamail of Houston, a widely-known injury suit lawyer who has won in recent years millions of dollars in settlements, told The Associated Press, "for a jury to go above the amount requested is not common. When it does happen it means the jury is completely turned off by what occurred. They believe it was an act with malice and with disregard for a person's safety; it was a brutal act, an act outside the human element."

Film clips of the blow that landed flush on the face of Tomjanovich, in black-and-white and in color, in normal and in slow motion, were shown over and over to the jurors. Each time it was the same — Washington swinging a right and Tomjanovich hitting the floor of the Los Angeles Forum, covering his face with both hands, staggering to his feet and then being led to the dressing room.

Ray Patterson, Rocket general manager, said the verdict "is a landmark decision. It will do a great deal to make a club responsible for its players. It has justified our concept that the club was responsible and had to pay. It has placed the liability on them and that's what we have claimed all along."

Rocket guard Mike Newlin, who was a witness during the trial, said the jurors "apparently decided that individual acts of violence are not part of the game of professional basketball. The verdict demonstrates that the responsibility for unnecessary violence isn't taken lightly. As long as justice is done — good."

Washington told the jury he was sorry Tomjanovich had been injured and that fighting "is not a part of professional basketball. It is not even a part of living in our society. But it happens."

Jabbar, another defense witness, said he did not see the blow to the face of Tomjanovich but "it sounded like a melon hitting a cement floor."

Newlin said the blow "sounded like someone slapping a board on the floor. When I got to Tomjanovich, blood was gushing out with every beat of his heart."

Dr. Daniel G. Walker, a Houston oral and facial surgeon, said to rebuild Tomjanovich's face was "like a jigsaw puzzle, like putting a cracked egg shell back together with Scotch tape."

Washington started the next game against Buffalo and went with the team to New Orleans. On the arrival there, the Lakers were informed Washington had been fined $10,000 and suspended for 60 days, the harshest fine ever handed down by NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien.

In a deposition read to the jury, Bill Sharman, general manager of the Los Angeles club, was asked if the NBA had not suspended Washington, would the Lakers have done so. Sharman answered, "he probably would have continued to play."

Attorney Dunn argued that no NBA team fines or suspends players for fighting, leaving that action to league headquarters.

Lawyers for both sides are still under a gag rule imposed by U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton.

Football More Fun For ENMU's Brown

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PORTALES, N.M. — For two seasons, Jerry Brown watched football games from the stands. Now, he's on more familiar and ENMU coach Dunny Goode is happy to see him on the green stuff.

It was a circuitous route which Brown took from Artesia, N.M., to Portales and Eastern New Mexico University.

It took a couple of stops a view from the stands and a couple of unsuccessful double plays to get him here and to the No. 1 quarterback spot for the Greyhounds.

Brown worked his way in to the starting unit in spring training, and Saturday, Goode listed quarterback — the entire backfield — as an area where the Greyhounds could shine this fall.

"Jerry had great success in high school," related Goode. "He's not large, he's not fast. But, he's intelligent, and he can take care of the football.

"In evaluating a quarterback," commented Goode, "I look for one who can take care of the football. We actually have five quarterbacks, and people always say that at a small school, why do you need five quarterbacks? Well, one year in high school (at Clovis), we lost four in two weeks, so you never can have too many.

"But, Jerry is a good quarterback."

Two years ago, Brown came out of Artesia High School and looked eastward. He had only a couple of college football offers, but UT-Arlington extended a baseball scholarship.

The quarterback-turned-second baseman accepted, but, "I never even made the traveling squad."

So, last fall, he transferred to Texas Tech. No football. No competitive athletics at all.

"Then, about Thanksgiving, Coach Goode called me and offered me a chance here. I transferred over the second semester.

"I was a little jerky for a while, but it's slowly coming back now. I'm getting used to quarterback again."

Brown, a 5-10, 175-pounder, started at quarterback two years at Artesia, and in addition to his ability to take care of the ball, Goode likes Brown's winning background.

During his two seasons at AHS, the Class AAA Bulldogs lost but two games, both to Class AAAA teams. State championships came their way both years.

But, not only has the Artesia program presented ENMU with a quarterback, but also a fullback. Like Brown, Jackie Clifton (602, 239) is in the starting backfield, flanked in the wishbone attack by halfbacks Julius Hill (170) and John Marks (185) of Midland.

"We plan to rotate about six or seven backs," commcommented Goode. "Right now, Clifton and Hill and Marks are our starters, but we'll rotate and go with whoever has the hot hand."

The Greyhounds are coming off a 5-6 season and "We're young; we only have five seniors," said Goode. "But, we have 27 juniors, and we expect them to grow up and be men in a hurry. Some of them have been in traffic, too."

The backfield depth — especially at fullback where three players are in the picture — enhances ENMU's hopes of improvement.

Goode plans to lean heavily on a trio of players. Hill who led the team in rushing last year with 864 yards; linebacker Randy Bean, who led the team in tackles in '78, and safety Terry Dillard.

Dillard is playing free safety, with ex-Estacado athlete Rufus Connor starting at free strong safety.

The sophomore started a couple of games a year ago at safety, was moved to cornerback in the spring but is now back at safety, where he feels more comfortable.

"I try to use my speed (4.5 in the 40, 13.7 in the high hurdles in high school) to get back to cover the deep middle or deep outside," said Connor.

The ex-Matador played at 170 pounds in high school but, "I guess I ate a good bit of mother's cooking last summer; I'm up to 190 now."

"We're going to be young," said Connors, "but, we're going to be all right."

Chaparral Coach Pleased, Displeased With Scrimmage

After Lubbock Christian College had completed a two-hour scrimmage to end the first two weeks of work, football coach Jerry Don Sanders told his squad he wasn't disappointed."

But, he added he saw several points where the squad could improve.

He plans to work on that improvement next week as the Chaparrals enter the final days before opening the season here Sept. 1 against McMurry.

It was a lack of concentration which most bothered Sanders.

"You need to be made aware of your mistakes," Sanders told his troops in the post-scrimmage lecture. "Success comes from learning from one's mistakes. We've come a long way over the last two weeks, but it's only two weeks until our first game, and we still have a long way to go.

"We've got to concentrate from the start of every practice, not wait until we're halfway through, like today (Saturday)."

Sanders noted that it took the Chaparrals 15 plays to make a first down. "Four possessions. We just can't afford to have that happen in a game situation."

The defense sparkled through most of the scrimmage, although the offense pulled off three long pass plays, two going for touchdowns.

Robert McBride, the Chaparrals' No. 1 quarterback, hit only five of 18 passes for 76 yards and had three intercepted. Curtis Dean hit seven of 14 for 235 yards with only one interception.

Senior Joe Green caught five passes for 118 yards and a touchdown.

Ex-Lubbock Christian High athlete Dennis Willis had the best rushing total, getting 45 yards on six carries, including one pop for 24 yards.

Defensively, Pat Randolph, another ex-LCHS athlete, intercepted three passes.

"Our defense looked as good as we could expect at this time," commented Sanders. He praised the work of Neil Sayles of Estacado, Guyle Robertson of Amherst, Sterling Mize of Crosbyton, Kyle Mick of Grants, N.M., and Darren Neal of Muenster for their defensive work.

The Chaparrals will work twice a day Monday through Wednesday of next week, then drop back to a single workout.

The first-of-the-week work will be from 9:45-11:45 a.m. and the afternoon session from 7-9 p.m. Starting Thursday, the Chaparrals will start work at 3 p.m.

Next Saturday, the Chaparrals will scrimmage Cisco Junior College at Sweetwater in final preparation for the season opener against McMurry.

Rudy Tomjanovich His Case A Landmark

Grid Drills Open For AAAA Schools

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Toward the end of last season, Kent Potts began looking slicker than a Corpus Christi beach.

Inserted as Monterey's starting quarterback by head coach James Odom after the Plainsmen's fifth contest (a 22-6 loss to Hobbs), Potts somehow manage to breathe a little life into an offensive unit that had been pronounced DOA sometime back and lead the team to a second place finish in District 4-AAAA.

After losing the first three game he started, Potts eventually guided to Plainsmen to back-to-back victories over both rival Coronado and then, on the final Friday night of the season, over Hereford. It was the only time MHS managed to win more than one game in a row all season.

So when two-a-day practice begins Monday morning for Monterey, Coronado, Lubbock High and the other Class AAAA teams on the South Plains, the Plainsmen will own the longest winning streak of any team in District 4-AAAA. (Class AAA, AA and B teams started workouts last week.)

"We were really hurting (at the quarterback position)," said Odom, who watched his team slump to a dismal 3-6-1 won-loss mark in '78, "and we had to do something. So we put Kent in at quarterback (in place of starter Todd Hunt). I think he was a little hesitant at first, but now I think he's glad he made the move."

Now, the move seems worth its weight in gas.

But things didn't start out on a high-note for Potts. Pampa spoiled his debut by posting a 22-16 win, then the next week Plainview romped to a 46-27 victory. However, the 27 points scored against the Dogs turned out to be the second most the eventual loop champ would allow all season, indicating the MHS offense had come back from the dead. But the next week, Lubbock High held the Plainsmen to seven points and won the Battle of the Spurs 10-7.

Prior to the change, Potts had been a starting linebacker for MHS. However, he had played some quarterback, but not since the ninth grade.

"I'd had a knee operation after my freshman year," explained Potts, "and I guess I was a little shy about playing quarterback because of that. But I went in and asked coach Odom to try me (at quarterback). We really didn't have anything to lose."

Before the change, Monterey had posted only one win — a 17-14 victory over Monterey — and a 6-6 tie with Canyon.

It was the slowest start in the history of the school.

"What we didn't have last year," commented Potts, "was leadership from the seniors. This year it's not going to be like that."

Along with his ability to throw the ball and run the option rather well Odom says Potts is also one of those leaders the Plainsmen didn't have last year.

"I hope to be one (a leader) of the team this year," said Potts. "But that's something you don't say you're going to do. The other guys have to decide who's going to lead."

The 6-0, 195-pounder ended '78 as the team's top scorer with 38 points, and also as the top passer after hitting 37 attempts for just over 400 yards. He also carried the ball for 103 yards.

"I like to throw the ball the best," said Potts. "But I'll do whatever it takes for us to win. Last year wasn't any fun."

The Plainsmen will begin working out at 9 a.m. Monday, with evening practice session set for 4 p.m.

Friday, however, will be the first day Class AAAA schools can put on the pads.

Gross Comes Back To Haunt Astros

By the Associated Press

Greg Gross tripled home Del Unser with two out in the eighth inning and Larry Christenson, Tug McGraw and Ron Reed combined on a 10-hit shutout as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros and J.R. Richard 1-0.

Richard, 12-12, had given up only three hits until Gross, a former Astro, connected to drive in Unser, who batted for Christensen and walked.

Christenson, 4-8, worked seven innings, allowed eight hits and struck out three as the Phillies handed Houston its third consecutive loss, trimming the Astros' lead in the National League West to 2½ games over Cincinnati. The lead is Houston's smallest since June 19.

Rangers 7, Brewers 3

Al Oliver hit two run-scoring doubles, the second capping a four-run second inning, leading the Texas Rangers to a 7-3 victory over Milwaukee that ended the Brewers' six-game winning streak and the Rangers' six-game losing streak.

Expos 2, Braves 1

Dave Cash delivered a run-scoring pinch single in the ninth inning, and Steve Rogers fired a five-hitter to lift the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Cardinals 5, Giants 4

Pinch-hitter Dane Iorg singled home two runs with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-4 triumph over the San Francisco Giants.

Vida Blue, 10-10, who had blanked the Cards since the first inning, yielded a leadoff infield hit to George Hendrick in the ninth. Tony Scott hit into a forceout but Ken Reitz singled and Ken Oberkfell walked preceding Iorg's hit, which fell in front of charging left fielder Larry Herndon.

Roy Thomas, 2-2, who pitched two scoreless innings, was the winner in relief of Pete Vuckovich.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

Jerry Martin smacked a ninth-inning triple for his third hit of the game and scored on Mick Kelleher's sacrifice fly as the Chicago Cubs edged the San Diego Padres 3-2.

Martin's leadoff triple to straightaway center off Rollie Fingers, 9-9, was followed by an intentional walk to Barry Foote. Kelleher's fly ball to right fielder Dave Winfield gave the victory to Dick Tidrow, 10-3.

Reds 4, Mets 3

Dave Concepcion's one-out double in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Junior Kennedy from first base with the winning run and gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Although John Stearns' two-run homer in the top of the ninth following a two-out walk to Sergio Ferrer tied the score, Mike LaCoss, 13-5, pitched his fifth complete game of the season, allowing only five hits.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 2

Jim Rice and Bob Watson belted two-run homers and veteran Ted Sizemore had three consecutive key hits in his American League debut, powering the Boston Red Sox to an 8-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox in a game called after 5½ innings because of rain.

Backed by an 11-hit attack, right-hander Steve Renko, 9-7, posted his first victory since tossing a one-hitter against Oakland July 13. Renko allowed four hits, including Mike Squires' first major league homer and Lamar Johnson's 10th of the year.

With their fifth victory in six games and seven in the last nine, the Red Sox moved 30 games over .500 — 75-45 — for the second time this season.

Sizemore, acquired from the Chicago Cubs Friday night, made his debut at second base for the Red Sox. He had a double and two singles, scoring one run and driving in two. Rice also had two singles, and hit his 33rd homer, a tremendous shot high over the screen in left at Fenway Park, in the third.

Watson also cleared the screen with his two-run homer, his 12th of the year, off Chicago reliever Randy Scarbery, in the fifth.

Orioles 9, Royals 2

Gary Roenicke hit his seventh home run of the season against Kansas City as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Royals 9-2 and remained four games ahead of Boston in the American League East.

It was Roenicke's 19th home run of the season and his seventh in eight hits against the Royals this season.

Roenicke, who also had a single, homered off loser Larry Gura, 8-9, in the third inning. The Orioles, who had managed only 19 hits in their previous five games, banged out 14 against Gura and reliever Marty Pattin.

Ken Singleton, coming out of a 2-for-27 slump, led the attack with three hits while Roenicke, Eddie Murray, Doug DeCinces and Lee May each had two and Mark Belanger contributed an RBI triple.

Scott McGregor, 8-4, with relief help from Dave Ford, got the victory.

The crowd of 37,645 boosted Baltimore's home attendance to a club record 1,226,484. The previous one-season high was 1,203,366 in 1966, the first year the Orioles won the American League pennant.

Yankees 5, Twins 3

Bobby Murcer hit a leadoff homer in the first inning and drove in another run in New York's four-run fifth as the Yankees defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-3.

Murcer homered off surprise starter Mike Marshall, 10-12, normally Minnesota's relief ace. Marshall made only the 24th start of his career and first since 1977 when rain, which delayed the game's start by nearly 90 minutes, caused Twins Manager Gene Mauch to withdraw announced starter Dave Goltz. However, Goltz relieved in the third when the rain slackened and allowed New York's four runs in the fourth.

A's 4, Indians 1

Dwayne Murphy singled home the go-ahead run as the Oakland A's rallied for two runs in the fifth inning and went on to a 4-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Rob Picciolo led off the Oakland fifth with a double and Rickey Henderson walked, putting runners on first and second. Murphy then singled to score Picciolo for a 2-1 lead as Henderson advanced to third. Wayne Gross then blooped a double into center field, scoring Henderson with the A's final run of the inning.

The A's added an insurance run in the eighth on Tony Armas' RBI single.

Winner Rick Langford, 8-13, retired eight batters in a row after allowing the Indians a run in the first inning. He later retired 18 in a row from the fourth through the ninth innings.

Rick Wise, 13-7, was the loser.

Langford gave up three hits, but won his eighth game of the season, controlling throughout the game. He struck out five batters and walked one.

CONTEH FLOORED — John Conteh of Great Britain lies on the canvas after being knocked down by Matthew Saad Muhammad in the 14th round of the WBC world light-heavyweight fight in Atlantic City Saturday. Muhammad retained his championship with a unanimous decision. (AP Laserphoto)

Rams Shocked Over Firing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams players, stunned by the sudden firing of Executive Vice President Steve Rosenbloom, have met three times behind closed doors to discuss it, once with owner Georgia Rosenbloom.

Climaxing a "Ram Family" drama in which General Manager Don Klosterman and Director of Player Personnel Dick Steinberg played supporting roles, Georgia fired Steve on Thursday and handed over most of the club operational authority to Klosterman.

The entire team met at its Cal State-Fullerton training camp Friday morning. No coaches were admitted and players declined to comment when they emerged.

The Rams then were bused to the Los Angeles Bonaventure Hotel for a Boys' Club benefit and met briefly wth Mrs. Rosenbloom prior to the affair.

After the luncheon, the team owner met in the hotel with six Rams players, a meeting requested by team captains Jack Youngblood and Ron Jesse. Again, participants refused comment after the session.

Georgia, who inherited the National Football League team's majority ownership (70 percent) after her husband Carroll Rosenbloom drowned last spring, showed that she — like Carroll — wasn't afraid to make controversial decisions.

A year ago, Carroll rattled the Rams' foundations by firing Coach George Allen after just two preseason losses. Georgia's action, like Carroll's last year, is popular in some quarters and unpopular in others.

Steve, 34, had grown up working beside his team owner father in football, and played a very active role in running the Rams as a top executive. Those close to the team believed Carroll's will might leave operational control of the team to his son, but Steve and four other Rosenbloom children each received six percent of the team, while Georgia received 70 percent and the voting rights.

Steve is extremely popular with the Los Angeles players and media, and his ouster met much criticism. Georgia, however, indicated that her stepson was trying to usurp her control of the club.

The tension between the Rosenblooms, apparently growing since Carroll's death, reached a head Thursday morning when Steve left Klosterman a memo further restricting the latter's power in the team's day-to-day operations. The two had differences dating back to the Colt days, and Klosterman had already been stripped of much of his authority, with Steinberg being assigned more responsiblity.

Georgia, a Klosterman ally, accused Steve of failure to communicate and insuborination. After a lengthy discussion with her stepson Thursday afternoon that ended in the firing, she said, "The problem was a lack of communication. Everything I asked him to do, he found excuses.

"He never seemed to understand that he was working for me. He thought I was working for him."

Steve, who said he was contemplating a lawsuit against his stepmother, commented, "Everything she asked me to do, I did. Georgia was difficult to reach and wanted most things by memo. I was hopeful I'd have a relationship with her like I had with my father."

Georgia said firing Steve was "the hardest thing I've had to do in my life. We love each other, but we can't live together. It's like getting a divorce."

The effect on the Rams' players will be difficult to determine, but linebacker Jack Reynolds said, "Everyone's in a state of shock."

Bloodied Muhammad Takes Boxing Title

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Even the champ admitted he almost lost it.

"I thought a man who outboxed me," said Matthew Saad Muhammad after his 15-round decision over former champion John Conteh for the World Boxing Council light-heavyweight crown.

"I slowed down a little bit during the fight, but I paced myself," Muhammad said. "I knew I was behind, but I knew I would come back."

Muhammad, the former Matthew Franklin, took over the fight in the 14th round when, with his left eye bleeding from eight rounds of Conteh punishment, he put the Englishman to the canvas twice.

Until the turnaround in the 14th, Muhammad said he "felt honestly that I was somewhat behind, a little."

The Philadelphia-born street fighter who took a Muslim name and idolizes former heavyweight champ Muhammad Ali took on a bit of the Ali retoric after the victory.

"Can a champion come from behind when he is hurt?" Muhammad said of himself. "Surely. He is the best light heavyweight in the world."

The 24-year-old champion, in his first title defense, was high in his praise of his opponent, who boxed his way from the streets of Liverpool.

"John was a very unique, clever boxer, constantly keeping me at bay with his jab," Muhammad said.

The champ said the key to fighting European boxers was taking it easy until he found his opponent's weakness, even if it takes almost the whole fight.

Then, Muhammad said, "I picked the lock and I lowered the boom."

Foyt Captures USAC Race

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — A.J. Foyt outlasted Joe Ruttman, who held the lead for 151 laps, in a final sprint to win the 200-mile United States Auto Club stock car race Saturday.

Foyt averaged 90.647 miles per hour to win the race, which was slowed by seven yellow caution periods. The race, which was rescheduled from Aug. 5 because of rain, was delayed Saturday by a light, misty rain. After 136 laps, the cars were waved from the track and arranged in a single file in the pits for 38 minutes. At that point, Ruttman had the lead, followed by Rusty Wallace and Foyt.

When the race was restarted, Wallace took an immediate pitstop, leaving Ruttman and Foyt in a head to head battle. Foyt finally edged his way past Ruttman on lap 193, and he kept that slight edge to win.

Western Hand Captures Tough Ruidoso Feature

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special)— Western Hand, the brilliant filly owned by J. Dell Akin of Tucumcari, N.M., won Saturday's feature race at Ruidoso Downs—but she really had to dig in to get the job done.

In the process, Western Hand earned a starting berth in the upcoming $108,575 Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity, and will get a chance at the winner's slice of $53,000.

The classy filly holds a current money line of better than $140,000. She's a perfect five-for-five as far as racing goes. But that fifth win, in Saturday's six-furlong topper, was the toughest of her career.

The filly, ridden by Leroy Coombs, dogged the 35-1 outsider, Li'l Loom, most of the way on a tiring, heavy track. In the stretch, Western Hand lost the lead, then had to summon every ounce of energy in order to win by a head in a three-horse blanket finish.

Racing as a standout favorite, Western Hand returned $2.60, $2.80 and $2.40. Li'l Loom handed out $14.40 and $6.00. Smooth Sun ($3.40) took third with a desperate, late rally.

Both Western Hand and Li'l Loom will now advance into the Sept. 2 finale of the Thoroughbred Futurity. Also qualifying from Saturday's five trial heats were Dantan One, I Fool Around, Copper Case, Dino's Dynamo, Major Mel, Dancing Blade, Catonie and Sunny's Shadow.

Cowboys Waive Rookie Lineman

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys re-signed rookie defensive back Mike Kincaid after placing rookie defensive lineman Curtis Anderson on waivers.

Kincaid is a free agent from Florida State who had been placed on waivers last Tuesday by the Cowboys.

'Pokes Stop Oilers

By the Associated Press

IRVING (AP) — Reserve fullback Alois Blackwell, fighting for a spot on the Dallas roster, scored two second-half touchdowns and the struggling Cowboys overcame the Houston Oilers 16-13 Saturday night in a National Football League exhibition game.

Houston built a 13-0 lead midway through the third quarter before Roger Staubach got Dallas' high-powered offense into gear into this game billed as the "pro championship of Texas."

Dallas, which had only three first downs in the first half, drove 77 yards behind Staubach to Butch Johnson passes before Blackwell scored on a one-yard plunge.

After Rafael Septien kicked a 37-yard field goal to narrow the Dallas deficit to 13-10, Staubach moved the Cowboys 41 yards in seven plays for the go-ahead touchdown.

Blackwell, a second year back from the University of Houston, barreled his way four yards for a touchdown, but the extra point went awry because of a poor center snap.

Toni Fritsch kicked field goals of 47 and 22 yards for a 6-0 Oiler halftime lead. Wide receiver Ken Burrough caught a 15-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen to put Houston on top 13-0 in the third quarter before the Cowboys warmed up.

Redskins 16, Falcons 6

Joe Theisman fired two touchdown passes and set up a field goal with a 19-yard run as the Washington Redskins downed the Atlanta Falcons 16-6.

Theismann hurled a 30-yard scoring pass to Ricky Thompson early in the second quarter for the first Washington touchdown in three pre-season games and connected with Danny Buggs on a 59-yard scoring play in the third quarter as the Redskins lifted their record to 2-1.

Atlanta's only score came late in the first half when Steve Bartkowski completed three consecutive passes for 57 yards, the last a 32-yard touchdown strike to Wallace Francis.

It was the third straight setback for the Falcons.

Dolphins 21, Vikings 10

Quarterback Bob Griese led Miami on two long scoring drives in the first half as the Dolphins stopped Minnesota 21-10.

Griese, in his first extended action of the year, completed 11 of 15 pass attempts for 180 yards and one touchdown in two quarters of play.

He hit tight end Bruce Hardy, who had taken over for the injured Andre Tillman, with a 27-yard scoring pass just four minutes into the game. Tillman suffered a broken right leg on Miami's first series of plays.

Miami, unbeaten in three exhibition games, also scored on a one-yard plunge by Leroy Harris in the second quarter and a 21-yard TD toss from reserve quarterback Guy Benjamin to rookie Ron Lee early in the fourth period.

Bucs 14, Saints 7

Quarterbacks Doug Williams and Mike Rae each directed touchdown drives and led the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to a 14-7 National Football League preseason win over the New Orleans Saints.

The win was the first for the Bucs in the preseason and put their mark at 1-2 while the Saints dropped to 0-3.

Williams drew first blood for Tampa Bay, capping a seven-play, 88-yard drive with a 62-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Larry Mucker in the opening period. Neil O'Donoghue kicked the extra point to make it 7-0.

Packers 7, Bills 6

Dickey, who sat out the entire 1978 season after breaking his leg in a 1977 game with the Los Angeles Rams, found Lofton all alone at the goal line for the score.

Bears 17, Bengals 13

Mike Spivey intercepted a Jack Thompson pass and returned it 43 yards for a touchdown to cap a 17-point, third-quarter rally Saturday night which led the Chicago Bears to a 17-13 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Trailing 13-0, the Bears scored on a 37-yard field goal by Bob Thomas. Then they turned a fake punt into a 77-yard gain which set up a 6-yard touchdown run by Art Best. Spivey's interception then put Chicago ahead to stay.

Outplayed and pinned back on their own 17, the Bears resorted to a fake punt by Bob Parsons. He threw a pass to Brian Baschnagel, who ran another 39 yards to the Cincinnati 6. Best went around left end from there for the touchdown.

Ken Anderson started at quarterback for the Bengals and guided them to a 13-point lead. Cincinnati took the opening kickoff and drove 68 yards in 13 plays with Anderson hitting Archie Griffin with a 2-yard touchdown pass.

Anderson, who completed 13 of 18 attempts for 204 yards in the first half, set up field goals of 24 and 41 yards by Chris Bahr for a 13-0 halftime lead before the Bears put on their third-quarter rally.

Trio Share LPGA Tourney Lead

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Amy Alcott, Sandra Spuzich and Sally Little shot 4-under par 68s Saturday to earn shares of the first-round lead in a rain-delayed $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Veterans Beth Stone, winless in 19 years on the tour, and Sandra Palmer were one stroke back at 69 on the 6,156-yard, par-72 Plymouth Country Club course.

The field of 87 professionals and five amateurs will be cut to the low 60 pros and ties after Sunday's second round. The opening round was replayed Saturday after rain halted action Friday with only 16 players completing 18 holes. Those scores were washed out.

The winner of the LPGA Barth Classic, scheduled to wind up on Monday, will receive $15,000.

Alcott survived missing a one-foot putt to earn her share of the lead.

"The ball hit a nail holding the cup in," said Alcott. "I saw it go in and then come out."

The missed putt gave her a bogey on the par-3 No. 14 hole.

"It was just a freak thing that never happened to me before," she said.

Tillman Suffers Injury

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Miami tight end Andre Tillman, a fifth-year player from Texas Tech, suffered a broken leg in the first quarter of Saturday night's National Football League exhibition game against the Minnesota Vikings.

Tillman, 26, had caught a 16-yard pass from Bob Griese on the Dolphins' first drive of the evening, but was upended by Vikings cornerback John Turner and broke a bone in his right thigh.

Cahill Pulls Surprise Faces Connors Today

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors breezed to a 6-3, 6-0 victory over fourth-ranked Johan Kriek and unseeded Mike Cahill upended second-rated Tim Gullikson, 6-4, 6-3, in the semifinals of the Grand Prix tennis tournament in Stowe on Saturday.

Connors jumped to a 4-0 lead in the opening set and survived his first service break of the tournament to run out the set. He broke Kriek three times in the second set to win going away. Kriek held his service only once in the match.

Cahill, who knocked off third-seeded Eliot Teltscher and fifth-rated Tom Gullikson to reach the semis, relied on a strong serve in his win over Tim Gullikson. Cahill broke Gullikson's serve in the ninth game of the opening set for his winning margin, and then broke again in the first and last games of the second set to win the match.

Connors, the tournament's defending champion, will meet Cahill today afternoon for the championship.

LOA BOXBERGER

Top-Name Bowlers Here For Opening

Loa Boxberger, the winner of the richest bowling tournament in the history of the Professional Women's Bowling Association and Joe Joseph, a member of Bowling's Hall of Fame, will appear at the opening of the new Brunswick South Plains Bowl here Friday and Saturday.

The festivities begin at 7 p.m. Friday, according to manager Jerry Wilson. The new complex is located at 5150 69th St.

Mrs. Boxberger won the 1974 $85,000 Brunswick Red Crown Classic, pocketing $12,500 for first place.

She first came to the attention of he bowling world in 1966 when she finished third in the BPAA all-star tourney at Lansing, Mich. She joined the PWBA in 1967 and won her first tournament, the Kegler Open at Maple Shade, N.J., the same year.

She set a PWBA record in 1973 with a six-game block of 1,478 in a new tournament at Rcokf Rockford, Ill. Her last three games in that block totaled 791, which was a women's national high at that time. Twice named to the Bowler's Journal and 1961 Bowling Magazine all-American honor teams, Joseph paired with fellow Brunswick champion Bill Golembiewski to win the 1963 ABC doubles. The Detroit duo also teamed to win the 1962 BPAA national doubles championship.

Norton, LeDoux Fight Today

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Ken Norton and Scott LeDoux, who gained a share of national prominence in entirely different ways, put their boxing careers on the line today with a 10-round heavyweight fight that could vault the winner into contention for a title bout.

The nationally-televised fight begins at 3 p.m. at the Met Sports Center.

Norton, 34, burst onto the national boxing scene in spectacular fashion when he broke the jaw of Muhammad Ali on March 31, 1973. Norton later lost two close decisions to Ali, but in 1978 was named World Boxing Council heavyweight champ after Ali was beaten by Leon Spinks.

Before a bout between Norton and Spinks could be arranged, Norton lost to current champ Larry Holmes in a 15-round match, and in his last fight was knocked out in the first round by Ernie Shavers.

Norton, who now stands 41-6 with 33 knockouts, knows that another defeat probably means the end to his ring career, but that a victory could give him another shot at Holmes, the WBC champion.

Holmes and Shavers meet in New Jersey Sept. 28. The World Boxing Association title, vacant since Ali retired, is to be decided in October when John Tate meets South African Gerrie Coetzee.

"If LeDoux wins this fight it's the whole chicken for him," Norton told a Minneapolis columnist this week. "He's just starting to mature as a fighter and he is a roughhouse.

"He doesn't quit and anytime you meet somebody who wants to make something of himself you've got trouble," Norton added.

LeDoux, four years younger than Norton, has already predicted that he will win by a knockout. A native of Crosby, a small town in northern Minnesota, LeDoux took a quite different route to national acclaim than Norton.

It was in 1977 that LeDoux knocked the toupee from the head of Howard Cosell on national TV. LeDoux had just been pronounced the loser in a close fight with Johnny Boudreau during Don King's United States Boxing Championships and inadvertantly bumped Cosell during the post-fight scuffle.

LeDoux, 25-7-3 with 17 knockouts, also has a controversial loss to Ron Lyle on his record and a draw with Spinks.

"I'm only 30; I've got time to become the white heavyweight champ of the world," said LeDoux. "It's a fresh start even though I've never dropped out. People think I've dropped out but I've never gotten out of sight. I've never slipped down the ladder."

Watson Faces Tough Fame Competition

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Tom Watson, winner of 19 PGA tour events, including two British Opens and a Masters title, will face some strong competition as the defending champion next week in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic.

Among Watson's challenger's will be this year's U.S. Open winner Hale Irwin, the Hall of Fame winner two years ago.

Also battling for the $45,000 first prize will be Tom Kite, who tied with Irwin for second in last year's classic.

Johnny Miller, the star of the tour a few years ago and winner of the Hall of Fame title in 1974, also is entered, as is 1977 U.S. Open winner Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins, J.C. Snead, Craig Stadler, Curtis Strange and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Challenge Race Scheduled To Aid MD Drive

Next month's auto race program to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association fund drive got an added event this week, one that is sure to set it apart from other races if it produces no other redeeming feature.

Veteran promoter Owen Gray, who came out of retirement to put on the Sept. 2 benefit event, said he would add a special challenge race open only to radio, TV and newpaper drivers "if somebody will answer the challenge to race."

Gray explained that Jack McCarty, of station KLLL, had challenged other media would-be race drivers. "Now all we need is somebody for him to run against," Gray said.

A check into McCarty's racing credentials revealed that some weeks ago he won in a two-car challenge race against a colleague at Lubbock Speedway. "Now he wants to be a race driver," Gray smiled, "and I'm ready to oblige him, but he's gotta have somebody to run against."

All profits from the program, which will start at 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 2, to coincide with the national Muscular Dystrophy drive, will go to the program, Gray said. In action will be mini-stocks, street stocks and late model modified cars.

FRENSHIP FREIGHT — Quarterback Pat Gaston, Running Back Cecil Mandrell And Split End Victor Buggs

By JOHN EUBANKS
Avalanche-Journal

WOLFFORTH — Frenship High School head coach John Parchman figures his team's inexperience at running back will force the Tigers to a more wide-open offense.

That would not be a bad move considering the return of All-District 5-A split end Victor Bugg, a 4.5 sprinter.

Parchman plans to throw the ball more this season but has not yet selected a starting triggerman.

Junior Pat Gaston is a returning starter at quarterback but must fight off challengers Kent Attaway, Dennis Kirk and Pat Molina (6-2 175).

Gaston, a 10.0 sprinter, who was named honorable mention all-district last year, is the better runner, while Molina is rated the best passer in the group.

Parchman is looking at serveral youngsters at running back, including '78 JV performer Johnny Johnson, two-year lettermen Cecil Mandrell and Ronald Gordon (220), who was switched from tight end.

Parchman also considers the tight end spot an area of concern. Battling for the spot will be junior letterman Curtis Preston (145) and sophomore Robert Garcia (180).

The changing of the guard is underway at Frenship as Kevin Satterwhite, Todd Tittle and Johnny Garcia, along with several youngsters, battle for spots.

Senior letterman Rick Crumley, a part-time starter last season, holds down the pivot spot.

Depth problems at linebacker and the corners are the weak points on defense, according to Parchman.

The middle of the Tigers' 5-2 defense should be hard to run against. Mink and Johnny Garcia are working at noseguard, and Perez, Satterwhite, Rusty Carter and Keith Hill round out the tackle slots.

The talented, though young secondary is made up of Gaston, Bugg, Mandrell and Sandy.

The kicking game is headed by placement specialist Steve Bradford and Gordon. No punter, Parchman said, has come forth as of yet.

Overall depth appears to be a strong point for the Tigers along with overall strength. Although Frenship High recorded a 5-5 record last year, it did tie for the district crown with a 5-2 district slate.

Parchman acknowledges the district will be tough again but admits the pre-district schedule could be just as rugged.

All three non-district opponents from last season will be on the slate again this year but playing Littlefield, Spearman and Idalou could help prepare many of the youngsters for district competition.

Gail Coyotes Hope To Improve In '79

GAIL (Special) — Things don't look good for the Borden County Coyotes in 1979 — but one thing is certain, it can't be any worse than the 1978 campaign.

The Coyotes were 0-10 last year and 0-5 in district 3-B competition. But second-year coach Randy Roemisch has 19 lettermen returning and 10 starters from last year's bunch.

And Roemisch lists the Coyotes lack of size as their biggest handicap. Still the Borden County coach does have one big man — and he will be the key to the Coyote season.

That's 6-1, 190-pound Craig Peterson, a running back-linebacker for the Coyotes. Last year Peterson was the leading rusher offensively for Borden County and also led the team in tackles with an average of nearly 25 stops per game.

He also averaged 65 yards a game on the ground. Not surprisingly, he'll be starting again this year at fullback and middle-linebacker. Roemisch is touting him as an all-state prospect.

Joining Peterson in the backfield is senior quarterback Blane Dyers (6-0, 170) and running backs Mark Walker and Jim Taylor.

While the Coyotes may be lacking in size, they've got plenty of speed, experience and quickness. So the outlook should be an improved one over the '78 version.

Unfortunately for Roemisch, Borden County opens the season against tough Klondike — winners of last year's 3-B West division and expected to repeat again this year. And the Cougars are plenty big.

Roemisch has high hopes for freshman Mark Mills in '79. Although, he's just a youngster, Mills is already 5-11 and weighs 160 pounds. The Coyote coaches are hopeful that Mills can step in and start as a defensive end.

Two sophomores, Junior Benavidez and Mike Petersen, played the defensive corners last year.

Roemisch is also high on another newcomer, senior back Jim Taylor. If Taylor can produce in the offensive backfield, that should open things up for Craig Peterson.

And if Peterson gets going, so will the Coyotes.

Plains Mustangs Eye Great Expectations

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINS — "Plains High School has always been very competitive, and people around here expect a winner ... the kids expect to be winners," said Cowboy football coach Bobby King.

The Mustangs will attempt to meet those high expectations with a squad that returns 15 lettermen from a 1978 crew that went 6-3-1, 4-1-1 in District 5-A.

"Attitude wise, we're in as good shape as ever," King said. "We've had lots of our people come up and work out on their own during the summer.

"I really can't predict wins and losses. I don't know if we'll beat anybody until we get out on the field and go after it. I do like to think that we have as good a chance as anybody else."

Quarterback Wayne Davis, 6-3 and 185 pounds, and tailback Matt Barron, 6-3 and 195, lend experience to an offensive backfield that King points to with pride. Both are seniors.

The offensive line must be rebuilt, according to King, but he adds, "We have young people who, by district play, should know what they're doing."

Davis will be joined at linebacker by Kenneth Ruthardt (5-7, 160) and sophomore Steve Crump (5-8, 160). King regards his linebacking corps as the strength of his defense.

"I feel that we'll be real competitive once again," said King, whose mark at Plains is 20-7-3 over three previous seasons.

"I feel that our kids need to have fun and enjoy what they're doing while at the same time, doing it right. The whole community supports the entire program to the point that the kids always play up to, and better than, their capabilities."

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — The name will be familiar but the face may look a bit fuzzy to auto racing fans when Kyle Petty tries for a spot in the $161,000 IROC 400 at Michigan International Speedway. Petty, son of six-time NASCAR king Richard Petty, made his Grand National debut at Talladega, Ala. and finished ninth. He'll be behind the wheel of a Dodge prepared by the Petty team Saturday in time trials for Sunday's race here in the rolling, green hills of southern Lower Michigan.

MEADOW MOVERS — Wingback Wren Howard, Quarterback Lance Bingham, Fullback David Casarez And Tailback Eliseo Curiel

Hulett To Guide Meadow

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

MEADOW — Most coaches in the past couple of years have found Meadow a lot like New York city.

This small Class B community 25 miles south of Lubbock was a nice place to visit, but as far as footbal coaches were concerned, it wasn't such a nice place to live.

The Bronco gridders have not had the same head coach for back-to-back seasons since Richard Nixon was still in office. But head coach Rick Hulett is changing that, and as a result the Meadow team in '79 could be one of the best in recent years.

Hulett will begin his second straight season as the head coach here and in Meadow that is nothing short of earth shattering news.

"We haven't had the same head coach for more than one year since we've been in the seventh grade," explained wingback Wren Howard. "So we're pretty excited about Coach Hulett."

"Yeah, he's a good one," added senior quarterback Lance Bingham.

The feeling between the coach and his QB is mutual though. Hulett has big plans for Bingham, who was an all-South Plains defensive back last year.

"He (Bingham) is our best runner," said Hulett. "Offensively he played wingback for us last year until he got hurt. But we need him more at quarterback this year."

In fact, the Meadow backfield is one of the best in district 3-B West. The Broncos have four seniors in the backfield and all have seen some action there in the past. Joining Bingham and Howard are fullback David Casarez and tailback Eliseo Curiel.

Bingham was the leading ground gainer for the Broncos in 1978 rushing for 516 yards in 88 carries.

"We're going to try for a balanced running attack though," said Hulett. "Of course that doesn't always work out during the course of the season, but we're going to give all of our backs a chance to carry the ball."

In all, Hulett has eight returning starters on his offensive unit that runs out of a T formation. Not all of the starters will be playing the same positions they played in '78 though. Besides the Bingham switch, Curiel was moved from tight end to tailback.

But like most Class B schools, Meadow isn't long in the depth department.

"Nine of our kids will have to play both ways," said Hulett. "So we really can't afford any injuries."

Another problem the Broncos must overcome is size — a lack of it.

"Compared to Klondike," says Hulett, "we're midgets. I don't think they have a lineman under 200 pounds.

"And compared to the rest of the district — we're just under average. We lost some big kids last year...but our attitude is a lot better this year."

Milton Sanchez, the state Class B champion in the mile run, has been moved from quarterback to wide reciever to give the Broncos a chance to utilize his speed.

"We don't have a whole lot of players," admits Hulett. "But if we can just avoid injuries, we're going to be tough."

Numerous Returning Starters Make Amherst Coach Happy

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

AMHERST — Dwayne Gray spends a lot of time these days smiling.

With 10 starters returning off a team which finished last season with a 9-2 mark, it's easy to understand why the Amherst coach is happy — very happy.

"We've got the nucleus to go 10-0 if we get the right breaks," commented Gray. "And that's (the breaks) are important."

Runningbacks Wayne Johnson and Ronald Johnson, a couple of cousins, will be making plenty of their own breaks everytime they get the ball this fall. Both finished last season with well over 1,000 yards apiece. And Gray feels that's only the tip of the iceberg for both.

"We're really looking for great things out of them," said Gray. "I think they could be two of the best runners in Class B out this way."

Opening the holes for the Johnson duo are guards Clinton Sawyer and Brad Enloe and tackles Steve Bearden and Mark Cantrell, along with center Crockett Patterson. All five are returning starters.

"We lost a little size on the line," said Gray. "Last year we were huge."

Bearden is the only Bulldog topping the 200-pound mark. The three-year lettermen checked in at 205 pounds at the start of two-a-days.

Operating out of the AHS backfield, along with the Johnsons', are quarterback Alvin Mills and fullback Jackie Johnson. Jackie is the only member of the starting eleven whose an underclassman.

"We're really looking for a good year," said Gray. "We've got our key people coming back. Everybody has come back in good shape and they've got an excellent attitude.

"I think everybody here (in Amherst) is really excited about the season. And they should be."

Even with 10 starters back, Gray says, the Bulldogs will still have a hard time defending their District 2-B South title. Waiting in the wings, the coach feels, are Lazbuddie, Sundown and Sudan, three other teams long in the experience department.

But Gray does have one advantage up his sleeve — namely the AHS schedule.

"I think we're lucky that we don't have to play Lazbuddie up there," said Gray. "That's our eighth game and it will be nice to play a tough one like that at home."

Safety Classes Planned

By J.D. PEER
I&E Field Officer

Early preparations for that dove, deer, or elk hunt should include attending a Texas hunter safety class in your area. One session of classes is scheduled for Lubbock on Aug. 27, 28 & 30.

The classes will be held each evening from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Lubbock Baptist Association Center located at 2601 Salem. These classes will be taught by Joe Davis, civilian hunter safety instructore certified by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. A $1 registration fee will be required of each student.

Davis will cover firearms handling, cleaning, and storage; conservation; first aid; survival; Texas firearm and game regulations and requirements; black powder and archery safety; and, hunter ethics.

A Texas hunter safety card will be issued by the P&WD to all participants who successfully complete the course and are 12 years of age or older. This hunter safety card will not expire and is honored by all states requiring such a card prior to issuance of a non-resident hunting license.

Those individuals planning to hunt in the neighboring states of New Mexico and Colorado and not having this hunter safety card, should put these classes on their schedule.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake— The past week has seen plenty of bass and catfish action. Earl Bubree landed a 4 3/4-pound channel; Hal Langston and Clarence Preiss hooked a 4 1/4-pound channel; Ed Mewborn ended a day of fishing with a string of five cat totaling 19 pounds at the dam. The cats are going for live minnows and shrimp in deep water. Earl and Malcolm Eldredge pulled in a string of bass with weights hitting 4, 2 1/2 and 2 1/4 pounds. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Mackenzie— Yellow catfish, stocked about four years ago, are biting. Most of the cats are 2 to 5 pounds, but one 7 pounder showed the cats are thriving. Perch baited trotlines are getting plenty of action. Anglers trolling in deep water near the points are hooking bass weighing 1 1/2 pounds. Crappie fishing is fair. TP&WD recently stocked 6,500 fingerling size striped bass. The new boat ramp under construction should be ready for use in .

Oak Creek Lake— The fresh water has helped the crappie fishing, and the channel cats shwo no signs of slowing down. Dick Minnick of San Angelo landed four bass last week with two fish going over 4 pounds. The lake is in good condition and is scheduled for a stocking of 47,000 fingerling size catfish.

White River Lake— Most species are biting in most areas of the lake. Don Stowers worked the crappie house to land a bass weighing 5 pounds 4 ounces and a channel cat at 4 pounds 4 ounces. Blake Wofford hooked a 2-pound channel in the marina cove. Lee Clodfelter of Ralls pulled in two bass with a total weight of 7 1/4 pounds, and Pete Templeton went home with five bass weighing 16 pounds. The bass are going for plastic worms in deep water off the rocky points. Channel cats are going for shrimp. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Whitney— Stripers furnished the most action this past week with channel cat and black bass reports on most areas of the lake. Water level is about two feet below normal and the water temperature is 75 degrees.

Trenton Rained Out Again

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Bobby Unser and a field of 16 other drivers will try again today to run the 150-mile race at Trenton International Speedway, postponed Saturday for the second consecutive week.

The CART-sanctioned event also was rained out Aug. 11. It was rescheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday on the 1½-mile track.

Unser heads the lineup qualifying with a speed of more than 171 mph in his Penske PC-7 "Grounds Effects Car."

Geoff Bodine beat 11 other drivers in the 30-lap modified stock car invitational race before the rain began Saturday.

Penske is working on two races about 1,000 miles apart. He is the owner-promoter at Michigan International Speedway, where the NASCAR Grand Nationals are running a 400-mile event Sunday.

Mini Marathon Set At Lake Mackenzie

Lake Mackenzie, near Silverton, will be the site for several foot races celebrating Labor Day. The races, for all age groups, are scheduled for Sept. 3 with with a special one-mile run at 8 a.m. for of age. A three-mile run and a 10,000-meter race for all ages will follow at 8:15 and 8:45 respectively.

Persons wanting to enter should call 1-633-4318 in Silverton to pre-register. Persons registering by mail must give name and age of participant, and length of race. The information along with a $1 entry fee should be mailed to Mackenzie Water Authority, Rt. 1, Silverton, TX 79257, by Saturday, Sept. 1.

A TIRE RECALL REMINDER FROM FIRESTONE

WE NEED YOUR HELP — In October, 1978, Firestone and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) announced a voluntary recall of certain Firestone Steel Belted Radial "500" and similar passenger tires.

That recall has been going on for the past ten months. We are doing everything possible to complete the recall and to get back all eligible tires.

But we cannot do it alone. The only tires we can replace are the ones you bring in.

This advertisement is being published again to remind motorists who may still have tires eligible for replacement that they should bring them in so that the recall can be completed.

We need your help and cooperation and we strongly urge you to bring in any eligible tires for replacement now. Check your spare tire too—it might also be covered by the recall.

In October, 1978, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company inittated a voluntary recall of certain Steel Belted Radial 500, and Firestone manufactured Steel Belted Radial TPC passenger car tires. Some private brand steel belted radials manufactured by Firestone were also recalled.*

In July, 1978, The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) made an initial determination that a defect which relates to motor vehicle safety exists in Steel Belted Radial 500 tires.

In order to resolve this matter, Firestone agreed to replace certain steel belted radials.

A defect of the type referred to in the NHTSA's initial determination may, according to the NHTSA, be first evidenced by the appearance of a bulge or of a noticeable difference in ride characteristics, such as a thumping sound or a roughness in ride, or both. According to the NHTSA, the tires covered by its initial determination may also fail without warning. The NHTSA believes that failure of the tires can result in a loss of air with a possible loss of control of the vehicle which may result in vehicle crash.

If you are a registered owner of eligible tires bought from a Firestone Store or Dealer, or if the tires came to you as original equipment on a new car, you should have received a mailed notice of the recall.

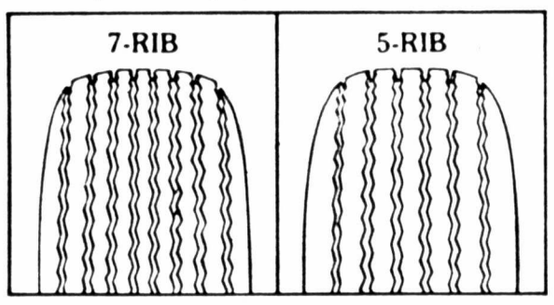
But if you did not, that doesn't mean you're not eligible. That's why we ask you to read carefully all the recall details and procedures spelled out here.

WHAT TIRES ARE BEING RECALLED?

Firestone will replace, free of charge—including mounting and balancing—any of the following tires.

1. Firestone Steel Belted Radial 500 tires, with a five- rib tread pattern, that were sold on or after September 1, 1975 and manufactured in the United States or Canada prior to January 1, 1977.

2. Firestone Steel Belted Radial 500 tires and Firestone TPC Radials, with a seven-rib tread pattern, that were sold on or after September 1, 1975 and manufactured in the United States, Sweden, or Canada prior to May 1, 1976.



The Firestone Steel Belted Radial 500 tires and private brand tires of the same or similar internal construction which were purchased as replacement tires and which have serial numbers, as explained below, showing they were manufactured between March 1, 1975 and September 1, 1975 are eligible for replacement if they were not purchased on a 1975 vehicle. Otherwise, to be eligible for replacement, tires manufactured prior to September 1, 1975, must be accompanied by evidence that the tires were first soid new on or after September 1, 1975, either as replacement tires or as original equipment on a new vehicle.

Tires that have been retreaded, previously adjusted or scrapped are not covered by this offer. Tires that have been worn out (2/32nds of an inch or less of the original tread depth remaining as measured at three points on the tire) are not eligible for free replacement unless you are still using them on your car.

In order to obtain a replacement tire, you must present the tire. Proof that you once purchased or owned an eligible tire is not sufficient.

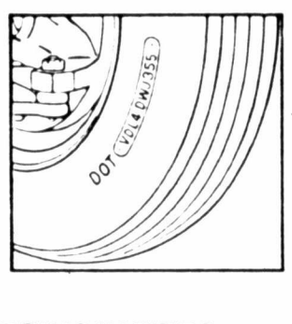
HOW CAN I IDENTIFY A RECALLED TIRE?

Obviously, if you received a mailed notice from Firestone, your tires probably fit into one of the recall groups. But if you did not get a letter, they may be included. Here is how you tell:

First, compare your tire tread pattern with the pictures shown here. Are they five-rib tires or seven- rib tires?

Next, if you have the invoice or other evidence showing the date you bought your tires, compare it with the "sold" date mentioned above. That's your proof of purchase. (In the case of original equipment tires, your car invoice, title, or other evidence of the vehicle purchase date will do just as well.)

Finally, to determine when the tire was made, check the DOT number on the tire sidewall (on the inside wall of a whitewall tire). The picture we have included in this announcement will help you identify the DOT numbers on your tires. The last three digits of the DOT number identify the week and year of manufacture. For example, 355 translates as the thirty-fifth week of 1975.



Still not sure? Ask the man at your nearby Firestone Dealer or Store. He's got the answers, and he really does want to help.

CAN ANYONE BRING IN TIRES FOR REPLACEMENT?

Firestone's voluntary recall covers both "owners" and "purchasers" of Firestone tires.

So if you were the first purchaser of eligible tires and are still using them or have them in your possession, you may present them for replacement.

Even if you acquired your eligible tires on a used car, you may as the current "owner" of those tires bring them in for replacement.

Is anyone excluded from the recall? Yes. Manufacturers or retreaders of tires, tire dealers, and persons who sell used or scrapped tires are not eligible.

WHAT TIRES WILL I RECEIVE AS REPLACEMENTS?

In exchange for an eligible tire, you'll receive a new Firestone Steel Belted Radial 721, TPC or comparable Firestone tire.

You may take your choice of any of these tires that are available in the size of the tire replaced. Or you can wait until the tire you want becomes available. You may also select a lower priced radial tire or even a non-radial tire so long as radials and non-radials are not unsafely matched.

WHERE AND WHEN WILL MY TIRES BE REPLACED?

All replacements of Firestone brand tires will be made at Firestone Dealers and Stores. So even if your tires came to you on a new car, bring them in to Firestone. The private brands tires listed below that are also being recalled should be taken back to the local outlet of the private brand.

If your tires came on a new car or your tires were registered when purchased as replacement tires, you should have received a mailed recall notification. Otherwise, we suggest that you visit your Firestone Store or Dealer to have your Firestone "500" or Firestone TPC tires inspected and to make arrangements to have eligible tires replaced. You may find it convenient to make an appointment.

Your Firestone Retailer will inspect your tires, check to see if they're included in the recall, and arrange with you to replace eligible tires as quickly as possible.

It will take approximately 15 to 20 minutes per tire to make the exchange.

If a tire is not available you will receive a "rain check" and will be notified by your Dealer or Store when your tire is available.

HOW SOON MUST I BRING MY TIRES IN FOR FREE REPLACEMENT?

The provisions of the recall program require that eligible tires be submitted for replacement within 60 days after you have received notification by mail of the recall.

In the case of those who may not receive a notification letter but where tires are eligible request for replacement must be made by April 1, 1980. After you have been notified that your replacement tires are available you will have 60 days in which to come in to actually have your tires exchanged.

If you do not submit eligible tires for recall within the time required, or fail to have your tires exchanged within 60 days after notification that your replacement tires are available, any exchange of your tires will involve a pro rata charge to you based on the amount of remaining tread and a charge will be made for mounting and balancing.

WHAT IF MY TIRES WERE PURCHASED NEW PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1975?

Tires purchased prior to September 1, 1975 are also covered by the initial determination of a safety-related defect by the NHTSA. Although those tires are not required by law to be replaced, to make certain all our Firestone customers are fully satisfied, we are extending a special offer to owners of older tires:

If you own any eligible Steel Belted Radial 500, TPC Radial tires purchased before September 1, 1975 we will, if you wish, replace them with equivalent new Firestone tires of your choice, charging you only a pro rata portion of the regular selling price and applicable Federal Excise Tax for the tires based on the amount of remaining tread depth. A charge will be made for mounting and balancing.

A CLOSING COMMENT

As you might imagine, this recall has been an enormous undertaking. It has required—and it has received— extraordinary action on our part. We have given it priority in producing tires at our factories and in replacing tires at our stores and dealers.

It has also taken the cooperation of many outside of Firestone—the NHTSA, consumer agencies across the country, our loyal dealers and their employees, our private brand accounts and, of course, all our customers.

Now, with your help, we can go on to finish the task. That's our pledge to you, our valued customer.

 The following private brand tires will fall into the free replacement category based on the same production dates and purchase dates as are applicable to the corresponding type Steel Belted Radial 500 tire.* Tires similar to "500" seven rib tires: Atlas Goldenaire II Steel Belted Radial *(Only Atlas Goldenaire II tires having a serial number beginning with VD and ending with 055 thru 176 are involved in this recall. Tires having a serial number beginning with A3, AC, UT and VC are not involved. The new 1979-1980 Texas hunting and fishing licenses are now available at license vendors and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department offices and the licenses will become valid on September 1, 1979.

All these 79-80 licenses will be valid for one year ending August 31, 1979, including the resident hunting license for $5.25; resident fishing license for $4.50; or, the combination hunting/fishing license for $8.75.

These out-of-state hunters after bigger game such as deer, antelope, aoudad, and turkey, will be required to purchase the non-resident/general hunting license for $100.75. This general license ($100.75) will allow these hunter to hunt all legal texas species during the regular open seasons.

If the license holder is successful at bagging one or more of these species, the date and month of the kill on the correct tag must be marked out in ink or cut out and the tags attached securely to the carcass prior to transporting or moving the carcass. The place and county of harvest must be filled in at this time.

There are spaces on the back of the hunting license for affixing a white-winged dove, archery, or federal migratory game bird conversation stamp. The white-winged dove stamp and archery stamp can be purchased at license vendors. The federal migratory game bird stamp is available at U. S. Post offices for $7.50 each.

NCAA Lifts Probation Off UN-Las Vegas

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA is lifting its probation against the University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball program but retaining sanctions imposed on Coach Jerry Tarkanian pending the outcome of Tarkanian's court action.

The NCAA made the announcement in a written news release Saturday. The two-year probation, levied for alleged recruiting violations, barred Nevada-Las Vegas from postseason competition. It will be terminated Aug. 23.

"The NCAA Council took this action following a detailed oral and written presentation by the university and after considering a report and recommendations of the NCAA Committee on Infractions," the NCAA said.

One part of the two-year probation, levied in August 1977, ordered the university to release Tarkanian from his coaching duties for two years. Tarkanian challenged this order in a Nevada state court and won an injunction against the university that has allowed him to continue coaching.

"The Council noted that the university's intercollegiate athletic policies and practices during the probationary period as reported by the university were consonant with NCAA legislation, and that the university had taken corrective action with respect to coach Tarkanian, but that the action had not become effective because of the litigation," the news release said.

Magnet School Idea Enthusiastically Received

BY LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If Lubbock High principal Knox Williams has has his way, the downtown high school will someday become the academic mecca for the entire school district. He pegs that hope on the new, enriched magnet program to be implemented there this fall.

LEAP (Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program) is a project designed to draw high school students from all over the district by offering about 30 specialty courses that include honors classes and expanded elective and pre-professional courses.

The magnet program is not a court-ordered tool for desegregation like other projects in the area, but a device for improving Lubbock High attendance and academics, which grew out of parent concern.

At the beginning of the year, Lubbock High parents asked for redrawn attendance boundary lines to boost a dwindling enrollment. The school board instead suggested and approved an enriched program to boost enrollment and improve the quality of academics.

The program was the center of controversy during its developmental stages. Parents and students criticized the projected cost of the undertaking and attacked what they believed were frill courses with little educational value. Some voiced doubt whether the project would attract many students to the school.

Williams reports that opposition has decreased. "We've had no complaints about the cost since the initial introduction of the program," he says.

The estimated cost of the program, excluding teacher salaries, has been scaled down to about $180,000 compared to the original projection of $258,000. Much of the expense is budgeted for one-time costs for remodeling, equipment and supplies, says Williams. About $50,000 will be an ongoing cost each year for field trips.

The principal rejects the notion that many of the courses are worthless. "It's not something we had to sugar-coat," he said. "We didn't have to misrepresent it — it's something people obviously are interested in."

He adds, "There is no indication in the enrollment that students are taking anything as a light load. They're not looking for an easy bunch of courses. I think they fully intend to study them."

The beefed up enrollment due to LEAP does not approach the additional numbers expected from a boundary change, but school officials' original hopes were surpassed.

The program has drawn about 148 students to Lubbock High for LEAP, though school personnel had hoped for only 75-100. Williams says officials would have expected about 400-450 new students if the boundary lines had been changed.

GETTING READY TO LEAP — Lubbock High School Principal Knox Williams points to where an entire wall of mirrors will be installed in one of the school's gyms that will become the location for ballet classes this fall. The entire floor was refurbished to accommodate the classes and the remaining three walls will be fitted with ballet barres. (Photo by Paul Moseley)

But he adds that the program also has drawn about 250 of Lubbock High's current population into LEAP.

Williams noted at a recent school board meeting that LHS enrollment should "peak out" at about 1,375, compared to the final enrollment last year of about 1,240.

A look at the offerings shows honors courses that include English 231-431, American History 331, American Government 421, Western Cultures 431, Algebra 331, Biology 231 and Chemistry 331.

The electives and pre-professional areas include new art and dance classes as well as Sculpture 411, Ballet 331, Modern Dance 331 and Disco 311.

In science, students may take Biology 331, Chemistry 431, Medical-Industrial Technology 311, Horticulture 311, Geology 411, Astro-Science 411, Marine Biology 411 and Animal Physiology 411.

Choice cards show that the most popular courses are driver education, disco, guitar, modern dance, gymnastics and soccer.

Williams stressed that the enrollement figures are not final yet, and said he encourages students to continue to sign up for the program (they may contact their home school) until the school year begins on Aug. 29.

Highlights of the courses include field trips in Western cultures, science courses, government and history.

Western culture students, who must be seniors, will spend two weeks in Europe "studying western cultures and their effects on this country," notes Williams.

Williams says the science class field trips are "as pure a study trip as you'll find. They even study all the way down on the bus. The whole thrust of it is three to four days of intensive field trip experience in the area they're studying."

He said the astro-science class will probably visit the National Aeronautics Space Administration (NASA) in Houston, marine biology students will visit the Texas coast and geology students might go to Big Bend or Ruidoso. American history pupils are scheduled to go to Valley Forge, Pa.

Williams said drivers education is especially attractive to students because the classroom phase, as well as the in-car phase of the program, will be taught during the year at Lubbock High. Normally students must take the classroom portion during the summer. He said the course is limited to transfer students however and cannot be taken by current Lubbock High pupils.

The guitar class will feature headsets for each student so that they may block out the other pupils and concentrate only on their playing. The teacher will also have at hand a console and headset so that he may plug into any one student to monitor that pupil's playing.

Plans for LEAP call for some remodeling — now in various stages of completion — to accommodate all the extra courses.

Science classes will be aided by a greenhouse that Williams hopes will be completed by October. The facility will also be used by science students all through the district.

One of the school's girl's gyms is undergoing refurbishing to prepare it as a ballet facility. The floor was completely redone, and an entire wall of mirrors with three other walls for ballet barres will soon be included in the plans.

The LHS principal said the most unique individual on the staff may be the world's only football-baseball coach and guitar teacher. He says the new faculty member is a coach who has also studied under one of the most prominent classical guitar teachers in the Southwest. He will take over the guitar class which will feature several different playing styles.

Lubbock Airport Sets Further Boarding Records

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

July marked the 26th consecutive month in which Southwest Airlines has increased its business in Lubbock. The carrier has added passengers every month since its inception here in May 1977.

And Southwest's good fortune is benefiting Lubbock International Airport which, aided also by increased passengers on Braniff, is setting new boarding records.

The new airline continues to do more business here than all the other carriers combined, boarding 25,566 of the 46,128 persons who flew from the airport in July. For the year, Southwest has flown out 145,975 of the 285,487 persons leaving the city on commercial aircraft.

Braniff International, the other Dallas-based carrier serving Lubbock, also is enjoying a good summer and a good year. Despite the shuffling of flight schedules here earlier this summer, Braniff has increased its traffic here more than 12 percent for the year and more than 10 percent in July.

Last month, Braniff flew 10,985 passengers from Lubbock, an increase of 10.6 percent over the 9,936 it flew out in July of 1977. For the year, Braniff has flown 66,236 persons from Lubbock, a figure second only to the 66,554 it flew out in the first seven months of 1977.

The other two major carriers serving Lubbock, Texas International and Continental, are not sharing the business boom enjoyed by Southwest and Braniff. For the year, TI is down 1.9 percent while Continental, operating with a sharply reduced flight schedule, has dropped 39.3 percent from last years figures for the first seven months.

Texas International flew 24,063 persons from Lubbock during the first seven months of the year, only slightly less than its existing record of 24,523 over the same period, set last year. In July, TI's business dropped 4.9 percent, from 3,893 persons in July 1978 to 3,702 listed last month.

And Continental flew 4,922 persons from Lubbock in July, a decrease of 53.8 percent from the 10,644 it flew out in July 1978. For the year, Continental has enplaned 45,812 persons, a drop of 39.3 percent over the 75,472 it flew out over the same period last year.

Lubbock's three smaller airlines all continue to do good business, with only Crown Aviation showing any sort of slowdown. Air Midwest has increased its business every month since it began service here three months ago, flying out 708 passengers in July. Since it began flying to Lubbock, Air Midwest has charted 2,235 customers.

For the year, Permian Airways has flown 370 persons from Lubbock to Midland-Odessa and Amarillo, with 147 of those making the trip in July. And Crown Aviation listed 796 passengers to Clovis, N.M., for the first seven months, with 98 of those flying in July. Only Crown has been serving Lubbock more than a year.

The total boarding figure for January through July 1979 for Lubbock International Airport stands at 285,487, an increase of 4.2 percent over the record of 274,114 established last year. For July, the airport saw 46,128 persons leave, an increase of 4.4 percent over the record of 44,191 persons also set last year.

The airport remains well on its way to breaking all current boarding records, and continues to be the leading airport in West Texas. Midland-Odessa Airport has boarded 255,927 for the year and 42,911 for the month, while Amarillo International Airport has registered 221,878 persons for the year to date, and 37,802 passengers in July.

OILMEN APPROVE ACTION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute says it agrees with President Carter's decision to remove price controls from heavy crude oil. The action taken Friday "will stimulate production of heavy oil," the institute says, adding, "we believe this same logic could be applied immediately to all domestic crude oil."

Consumer Protection Tactics Criticized

By NANCY DORN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Attorney General's Consumer Protection Agency and the Better Business Bureau are joining forces to fight consumer battles in a way they hope will be more effective. But some experts say the Texas consumer will be the loser.

Action July 27 by Attorney General Mark White that turned over informal complaints to Texas BBB's was met with outrage by consumer groups.

"I see it as turning the chickens over to the fox," said Jim Boyle, executive director of the Austin-based Texas Consumer Association.

Boyle said that inflation has drawn many businessmen to Texas, where money is more fluid. Some of these businessmen have victimized Texas consumers and "now we need better and tougher consumer protection," he said branding the attorney general's move "clearly a step back."

Better Business Bureaus have no enforcement capabilities and are "often difficult to call with limited phone facilities and short hours," Boyle said.

"A lot of people think the Attorney General's office is going out of business," David Ferrell, assistant attorney general for the Lubbock area, said.

According to Ferrell, starting Sept.1, the consumer protection division of the attorney general's office will begin turning over complaints to the BBB which were not prosecutable offenses under the Consumer Protection Act. Complaints about pricing, warranties and customer service are not within the attorney general's jurisdiction.

"Any consumer complaint that alleges fraud that is in our jurisdiction will still be investigated and if it is in the best interest of the public, we will prosecute it," consumer protection division head David Bragg said.

Bragg said that instead of getting out of the consumer complaint business as some critics alleged, his office will actually be able to prosecute more cases than ever before.

He said that the state office received more than 17,000 complaints a year, many of which were not prosecutable under consumer laws. Bragg said mediating complaints was a service his office had offered but that the task had grown too large. "In order to run a full-scale complaint agency and handle all cases whether they are in our jurisdiction or not, we would need to spend $200,000 more on a statewide basis," he said, explaining that the consumer protection and antitrust division was operating on a smaller budget this year than last year.

He said that cooperation with the BBB, a business-run complaint agency, will free the 42 lawyers, investigators and personnel of the consumer division to prosecute and investigate cases that can be brought to trial.

"These type of consumer complaints usually settle out quickly," Bragg said. "But it will save a lot of time for us."

To consumer advocate groups that say the attorney general's ruling has "taken the teeth" out of consumer protection laws in Texas, Bragg replied,"We're hoping to increase the strength of our bite."

"Right now we are literally nibbling everything we do," he explained. "We're hoping to increase the responsiveness and effectiveness of our office by incorporating with the BBB."

Bragg said that beginning in September any complaints received in the attorney general's office which are not violations of consumer or anti-trust laws will be turned over to the BBB for mediation if the consumer wishes.

Cases not resolved by the BBB or cases in which criminal misconduct is suspected will be returned to the consumer protection division for investigation, Bragg said.

Boyle termed the attorney general's office plan "a simplification."

Boyle said that many consumers get valuable advice from consumer division lawyers, even if the complaint is not prosecutable. "That process will be lost," he said.

Complaints to the attorney general's office also tipped off investigators to overall problem areas in consumer affairs, another process which will be eliminated by BBB involvement, Boyle predicted.

Dissatisfied consumers suffer "a lack of faith"in the BBB, Boyle said, and probably will not report offenses to any agency if the attorney general's office confines itself to criminal offenses.

State officials insist that consumers will be served better by the new setup. Bragg said a pilot program started in Dallas several months ago in which the BBB handled informal consumer complaints had a 70 percent consumer satisfaction rate, higher than the attorney general's office has ever achieved in that area.

Critic's comments that a BBB letterhead does not have the coercive effect that the attorney general's does is disproved by the success of the Dallas experiment, Bragg said.

He said that most legitimate businesses will respond to a BBB inquiry as quickly as to one from the Consumer Protection Division because they would like to keep up their reputation in the business community.

"They (businesses that do not deal fairly with consumers) are aware that there are certain areas in which we can't prosecute and they know that at the present time we can't prosecute all offenders," he explained. "By increasing the number of cases we can prosecute, communication from us will mean more."

Local BBB officials do not expect a flood of new customers in spite of the attorney general's ruling.

"Most people were coming to us anyway," said office manager Nan Campbell. She said the local office handled about 120 complaints a month, while the local attorney general's consumer office only recorded 355 cases in a 10-month period.

She said she did not anticipate hiring any new employees.

The BBB claims that 87 percent of all complaints are settled to the satisfation of the consumer and plans to expand their record-keeping and customer files after the merger.

Mrs. Campbell said Texas BBBs were glad to take over part of the attorney general's complaint-processing because it will give them more information on consumer-related problems and produce more reliable reports.

Bureaus will be given no legal authority and no financial compensation for their cooperation in the new program. Mrs. Campbell said, however, that the BBB carries quite a clout in the business world. A letter from the BBB inquiring about a consumer complaint "means a lot more to a businessman than some government agency saying its going to file suit in two or three years," she said.

The Lubbock office of the consumer protection agency is manned by a secretary and a para-legal. David Ferrell, the assistant attorney general whose office is in El Paso, is in Lubbock prosecuting cases two or three days a week.

The Lubbock office will remain open, said Bragg, and, if the budget allows, a full-time attorney or investigator will be placed in Lubbock soon.

Hance Slates Town Meetings, Questionnaires

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

When Kent Hance won his seat in the U.S. House of Representatives last fall, he pledged to remain closely in touch with his constituents. Among his methods of attaining that goal are an endless series of town hall meetings and numerous public appearances and, most recently, a special 17-point questionnaire, which is being circulated to nearly every household in the 19th Congressional district.

"The purpose of the questionnaire is to provide as basic and inexpensive method as possible for the people of West Texas to communicate their feelings to me," Hance said. "We will carefully evaluate every returned questionnaire to see what issues are on the people's minds. One of the biggest problems government has today is that the people don't feel like they have any say in what happens. This is their chance."

More than 200,000 of the forms were mailed out throughout the area at intervals beginning two weeks ago. By now, nearly every home in the district should have received one.

The special form contains 16 questions answerable by placing a mark in "yes" or "no" boxes. For example, the second question reads, "Do you believe the U.S. Congress should pass a law allowing the President to invoke gas rationing if it becomes necessary?"

Other questions deal with topics including reinstatement of the draft, the 55 mph speed limit and nuclear waste and power. The final question is a multiple choice, allowing the respondent to choose between agriculture, defense, energy, health, inflation, international relations and taxes as the single most important issue facing the nation today.

The questionnaire is designed so that one or two people can fill it out.

While the flier may bring Hance a little closer to his constituents, the freshman Democrat might wind up losing some votes at the post office — postal workers in Lubbock and Washington are calling Hance's offices daily, asking workers to come pick up the large sacks of returned forms.

"People are really responding to the questionnaire," said Vicki Nixon, one of Hance's assistants here. "We're getting bundles like this almost every day," she said, motioning toward a mail sack sitting on the office floor.

And it's not only the postal workers and Congressional assistants getting swamped by the response. "Even Kent's mother in Dimmitt says she's getting a lot of them," Mrs. Nixon said.

All the forms will be forwarded to Hance's Washington office to be counted and analyzed. That rather monumental procedure won't begin until September 1, the date by which Hance has requested all those wishing to participate return the form.

Staff workers in Lubbock and Washington are still mailing some of the forms to people who may have missed them the first time around. "We've gotten a lot of calls from people who are interested but somehow missed them," Mrs. Nixon said. "Sometimes they get stuck in magazines or people mistake them for junk mail and throw them away before they realize what they are. The whole point is for everyone who's interested to be able to participate."

The questionnaire is an old, effective friend Hance brought with him from Texas. "I used one once before as a state senator and got a real good response," Hance said. "We haven't begun counting them yet but judging by the

Auditors Give Lubbock Stations High Marks

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

During its audit of 18 service stations in Lubbock last week, representatives from the U.S. Department of Energy found only one station in violation of new federal price guildelines, and that outlet was overcharging by only a penny.

"Lubbock was very good, one of the better cities we visited," said DOE spokesman Lowell Ellingson from his Midland office. "We ran through 18 stations up there and found only one guy overcharging. He was charging a penny too much and when we told him, he lowered it right down."

Ellingson refused to name that station, saying that the DOE never reveals the names of violators who comply with an auditor's request.

The DOE performed 143 audits on stations across West Texas and Eastern New Mexico last week as part of its massive national campaign to see whether the new price guidelines were being followed. Ellingson said the survey, conducted on a completely random basis, turned up only a few minor problems across the South Plains. He refused to name the locations the DOE considered "minor problems," but said all were warned of their violations.

The new gas pricing regulations, which took effect earlier this month, are designed to eliminate much of the confusion and most of the discrepancies built into the old rules, which were implemented during the height of the 1973-74 Arab Oil embargo. The new regulations basically set retail gas prices at 15.4 cents above the wholesale price an operator is applying, and allow dealers to charge for ancillary services such as checking under the hood and accepting credit cards.

"This first big push was mainly for education," Ellingson said. "From here on, we'll get a little more serious about laying down some penalties on stations who don't want to go along. We didn't punish anyone this time around but if we spot some troubles in the future, we'll not hesitate to."

Under the new regulations the DOE can force violators to roll their prices back a nickel a gallon every day for a month or fine them up to $2,500 per day.

The "first big push," as Ellingson termed it, is over, but the DOE auditing teams will continue to pay unexpected visits to service stations across the area.

"We'll always check stations we receive complaints about, and we'll be sure to check back with those we found in violation last week," Ellingson said. "And, we'll just pick stations at random to drop in on, just to keep everyone a little more on their toes."

The nearly 150 audits performed in West Texas reflected only a small portion of the nationwide effort to check the new price rules. More than 100 DOE auditing teams performed more than 2,500 checks across the state, with an equal number performed in the five states bordering Texas.

"We had very little trouble all the way around," said Wayne Tucker of the Dallas DOE office, which oversaw the five-state audit. "Of more than 1,000 audits in the Metroplex, we had only 18 violations, and none were very serious. We don't have all our figures in from Houston yet, but we don't anticipate a problem rate any higher than yours."

And now that the major auditing detail is complete, the DOE checkers will return to their audits of the oil refiners and wholesalers. "All the really big violations occur at the wholesale and refinery level," Tucker said. "But the people are much more aware of our actions when we're checking the corner gas station. People really notice it when the price comes down.

"By checking the oil companies at every level, we're hoping we can control the violations as much as possible," Tucker said. "We have to buy gas just like everyone else, and we don't like paying more than we have to, either."

Proposition 13 Measure Hits Budget

IRVING (AP) — The Irving City Council felt the first pangs of a Proposition 13-type referendum passed Saturday when it took a look at the 1979-80 budget.

The budget, $200,000 more than this year's $27.9 million budget, was full of personnel cuts in police, fire and sanitation departments. The council looked over the figures during a work session Wednesday.

Newspaper In Education Confab Set

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Some 250 teachers and educators from Lubbock, the South Plains and Eastern New Mexico will gather Monday at Texas Tech's University Center for the eighth annual Newspaper in Education Conference.

The day-long conference, jointly sponsored by The Avalanche-Journal and Tech's College of Education, will feature two out of town educators with backgrounds in classroom use of the newspaper. Lunch will be provided by The Avalanche-Journal.

Speakers are expected to focus on using the newspaper as an adjunct to textbooks, said Dr. Duane Christian of Tech's College of Education.

"One problem teachers frequently point to is students' lack of reading skills and motivation," Christian commented. "Looking at current topics in a newspaper is one way of sparking greater interest and movitation.

"I hope teachers will see the conference as a way to get students to think more," he said.

Mrs. Nancy Hagen, a former English and reading teacher, who currently is an administrative fellow in San Antonio's Region 20 Education Center, will speak during the morning session.

Mrs. Hagen, who taught for 13 years at the elementary, junior high and college levels, believes the newspaper can be an effective teaching tool in the classroom.

Speaking during the afternoon session will be Dr. Rodney Short, Associate Dean of Education at Texas Woman's University in Denton.

A former U.S. Marine, Short also has served as director of teacher education and certification, and associate professor of educational foundations at TWU.

He is co-author of the book, "The Newspaper: An Alternative Textbook," published by Fearon Publishers Inc. of Belmont, Calif.

Linda Mitchell, Newspaper in Education coordinator for the A-J, commented that many of the teachers at the conference will be attending for the eigth time.

She said the presentations will be general, with no grade level or subject focus.

Mrs. Mitchell also will speak at the conference's close. She encourages all teachers interested in coordinating an NIE program to get in touch with her at the A-J.

The conference will begin at 8:45 a.m. Monday with registration.

Welcoming participants will be Dr. Christian, Dr. Shamus Mehaffie of Tech and J.C. Rickman, business manager of the A-J.

Dear Constituent:

As your Congressman, staying in touch with the people back home has been one of my major goals. In my constant efforts to be in close contact, I have returned to your county to hold a public town hall meeting, have answered the mail and have responded to the telephone calls from the 19th Congressional District. Now, I am asking your opinion on some issues being discussed in the U.S. Congress.

I would appreciate your answering the questions, detaching the questionnaire, and mailing it to my Washington office by September 1. Space is provided for two answers per household. If you need an additional copy, please contact one of my offices.

Serving you in the U.S. Congress is both an honor and privilege. I hope you will call upon me anytime I may be of service.

complaints we're getting from the post office, I'd think people are interested in them."

"I think I have a pretty good idea what the people of West Texas are thinking, but on my state questionnaire, I got a couple of real surprises," he continued. "Sometimes 100 people will write in against an issue and no one that's for it will, so naturally we think everyone is against it when that's not really the case. I'm hoping the questionnaire will be complete enough to allow the people to paint a true picture of the feelings running through the district."

Hance said he's very interested in the response to all the items listed, but there are some that he's especially curious about. "I really want to see what the people feel about the draft and nuclear energy. A lot of people are for nuclear energy, but sometimes it can change their feelings when you ask them if they'd mind having nuclear waste stored in their backyard."

Hance hopes to have all the forms returned to his Washington office by September and to be able to announce the results within a few weeks of that date.

Trial Of Human Rights Activists Delayed

CLOCKING IN

They looked like frosted cakes, musical instruments or modern art. But they all had hands and numerals, and in some way visibly fulfilled their function as clocks. All were made of paper or cardboard, and incorporated a small, battery-powered movement—the electronics manufacturer who produces the movements sponsored this show in Tokyo at which a variety of intriguing paper clocks was on display. Some were one-of-a-kind creations. Others were mass-produced as kits to tempt the do-it-yourself set. For the non-specialist with an hour or even a few minutes to kill, the show was an amusing way to while away the time.

After-School Program Offers Art Adventure

"Adventure in the Arts" is a new program being started in Lubbock this fall to bring experience in the arts to local youngsters. Its theme is Introducing Rainbow Magic.

One group of classes will be offered after school at Christ the King School, 4011 54th St. and St. Elizabeth's/St. John Neumann's School, 22nd and Frankford. Another group will be offered Saturdays at Texas Tech University under the sponsorship of the Division of Continuing Education.

Courses are designed for all ages, from kindergartners through adults. Because the founders believe every child's creative development is enriched by having a background in several areas, the program offers 1½ hour sessions, each session featuring two 45 minute classes in two areas of creative expression.

At Christ the King School, for instance, Creative Movement will be available for kindergarten and first grade at 3:30, followed by art at 4:15 on Tuesdays. Second and third graders may be taking art and dance techniques at the same hours, while acting and karate will be offered for fourth, fifth and sixth graders. Similar schedules will be followed at St. Elizabeth's.

Tech's Saturday classes will begin at 10:30 a.m. with music for kindergartners and progress to gymnastics for 7th, 8th and 9th graders at 3 in the afternoon.

At Christ the King courses will also be offered for adults and young adults, beginning at 5:15 daily; these courses include classical ballet for beginning and intermediate students, printmaking, acting, dance technique, creative stitchery, beginning photography and quiltmaking.

Tuition for the school programs is $6 a week for one 1½ hour session one day a week, $11 a week for one 1½ hour session two days a week and $15 a week for one 1½hour session three days a week. Family rates are also available. Classes begin Sept. 22 and continue through Nov. 15.

The Tech classes will cost $6 a week for a 1½ hour session and $11 a week for two 1½ hour sessions. They will all be held in the Women's Gym on campus.

Registration will be Aug. 24 at St. Elizabeth's and Christ the King Schools and Sept. 4-11 at Texas Tech University's Division of Continuing Education, Building X14. For additional information call 792-1005 for the school programs, or 742-2354 for the Tech programs.

Tech Class Teaches Basics To Adults

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Readin', writin' and 'rithmetic — adults need to know the "3 R's," too.

A class called "Reading, Study and Math Improvement for High School Seniors" is currently in session, as only one of the many courses offered by Texas Tech University's division of continuing education.

But, in a sense, the phrase "for high school seniors" does not completely describe class membership, according to instructor Shirley Rekers. Mrs. Rekers commented: "While all our students presently enrolled are high school graduates — the majority receiving their diplomas in May or June — the class also includes those who have been away from school for a much longer period of time.

"As an example, we have one student who got married before receiving her high school diploma, had a child and only in recent years studied and passed her high school equivalency test (GED). This student is now enrolled, and plans to enter Tech in the fall."

Mrs. Rekers credits continuing education director Dr. Michael Mezack for initiating the two sections now in progress. "Dr. Mezack became aware that English and math improvement courses were popular in eastern universities," she said, "and thought similar work would fill a need at Tech also. In fact, because of the acceptance and enthusiasm of the present group, classes may again be offered next summer."

"The whole idea of teaching 'basics' is to try and strengthen weak areas of a student's academic background and experience, preparatory for college. We felt strongly that we could best accomplish this by limiting class enrollment for each section. In other words, we wanted to be sure of individualized instruction to each student. But a student usually feels more free to ask questions about work he doesn't understand in a smaller group."

Mrs. Rekers believes students gain confidence when they realize other individuals may have difficulty, as an example, doing a particular problem. Time and time again, she says, she sees students learning from each other and benefiting from the experience.

Richard Baker of Lubbock is currently enrolled in one of the sections of the English and math improvement classes. He plans to enter Southern Methodist University in the fall.

"I wanted to take the course primarily to boost my math skills," he said, "in order to better my chances of passing algebra and geometry in college. But I've gotten a lot of good from other things, such as 'better ways to study' and 'how to use time more efficiently' as far as school work is concerned. "The speed-reading tips should also be helpful when I begin classes. And even though I will not be using the Tech library, I have picked up information on using libraries generally, and I think this too will help me later on."

For information regarding all courses offered by the division of continuing education at Tech, interested persons can call 742-2352.

Work With, Not Against History When Restoring Old Buildings

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

Thinking about restoring an old house?

Don't over-do it, cautions Clem Labine, editor of the Old-House Journal.

The growing interest in restoring old buildings is causing some problems almost as serious as destroying them, Labine says.

In their enthusiasm, people rip out and replace old materials, and change the basic structure of the house and the character of the neighborhood.

This is both expensive and damaging to the architectural and historical character of the building. And it lowers the long-term market value.

The Journal warns that in the rush to restore and rehabilitate old buildings, almost as many crimes are being committed by misguided remodelers as were committed in the 1960's by the "clear and destroy" bulldozers of the urban renewal forces.

People have found that it is the older buildings and neighborhoods that give cities and towns their special character. In Lubbock and other cities, individuals and local governments are looking again at the tendency to tear down old buildings and neighborhoods that give the city its unique chracter.

Frequently older buildings are better built, as well as more interesting, than anything being constructed today. The materials are often of higher quality. Although it may cost more to restore an old building than to construct a new one, depending upon how much needs to be done, one is likely to end up with a building with much higher market value.

In some cities, such as Savannah, local efforts have been made to save the old buildings. City planners contemplated tearing out the entire central city, until local citizens, led by some of the older families, organized to protest and save the old neighborhoods. Sometimes local experts are available to advise people who buy old houses with a view to restoring them, on how to best preserve their historical interest. Low-cost loans may be available for restorations. In cities like Denver, even businessmen are restoring historical buildings rather than building new ones for their companies, not only providing historical interest but helping to preserve and restore the central city.

Concern about mistreatment of old buildings prompted the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation to ask the Office of Archeology and Historic Preservation of the National Park Service to prepare a set of guidelines that would help homeowners and local officials who are working on old structures.

The guidelines are currently only available in a preliminary draft form. But the principles involved are so important that the editors of the "Old-House Journal," a monthly newsletter specializing in techniques for the restoration, maintenance and decoration of houses built prior to 1914, wanted to communicate them as quickly as possible.

The magazine has prepared a brochure, "Guidelines for Restoring Old Buildings," which can be obtained free by writing The Old-House Journal, Dept. 8, 69A Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11217. Anyone desiring a complete copy of the guidelines should contact the National Park Service.

The guidelines are applicable not only to buildings built before 1914, but to all buildings of historical interest. The underlying principle is that in bringing an old building up to modern functional standards, its architectural character should not be destroyed in the process.

With the country growing more conscious of the value of preserving its historical landmarks, more and more people are restoring old houses and buildings. Some restorations add to the beauty and charm of the neighborhoods and cities; others turn out to be eyesores. Experts advise restorers to study their history and make any changes in an old building conform with its inheritance, neighborhood, and historical value. The result is an increase in the value of the building as well as of the neighborhood.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

We sat under a tree in her pleasant yard, enjoying the breeze, sipping cool drinks and talking about our children. "Be glad," she said, "that you don't have a rebel. They suffer and make everyone else suffer with them." Still, I thought, there is something weird about being more rebellious than your children.

I watched with detached amusement my friends and their hippie offspring, locked in mortal combat, a decade ago. Long haired and bearded, the kids lounged around the house in blue jeans, practiced yoga, ate bean sprouts and mumbled about the establishment, while their parents wrung their hands. Now the kids wash their hair twice a day, listen to acceptable rock and subsist on pizza and coke while their parents wear blue jeans, subscribe to Mother Earth, and rail against the establishment.

It is the parents, yesterday's hippies, who are dropping out of their nine-to-five jobs, going off to find themselves in other climes and wondering aloud what is the meaning of it all.

My sympathies in the 60's were mostly with the kids, lots of whom were friends, all of whom were more attractive, even with their unwashed hair and feet, than the people who attacked them. Not that I was without sympathy for the friend whose girl-child brought her roommate home and expected to sleep with him in a room still decorated with the dolls and posters of her childhood.

"What am I to do?" the mother wailed. "If I let her, she will think I approve, and if I don't, she won't come home at all!"

There was no use explaining that her daughter knew perfectly well how she felt about the situation and would, in any event, use her mother's reaction as an excuse to do whatever she wanted to do.

I remember one youngster scratching with a knife at the soles of her feet and explaining, as she picked out pieces of glass, "Of course it's worse in the city. But if you leave them alone, the skin grows over them and they don't bother you. Except that they always feel a little crunchy."

Her mother, neatly coiffed and wearing what we used to call an "afternoon dress" (are there still such things?) watched with distaste. "I never let her go barefoot when she was little" she offered mildly.

Maybe it is all that glass in the soles of their feet that makes that generation so feisty now, or maybe it is knowing that they, who chanted, "Never trust anybody over 30," are now over 30.

Lots of us were cool about those years unless something pulled our string. Maybe it was the lack of cleanliness that made a mother, who had endured teething and potty-training with aplomb, turn into a raging monster. Maybe it was a university sit-in that caused a father, who had allowed his hair to grow down over his collar, to sound like his own father. Maybe it was "Jesus Christ, Superstar," or the American flag sewn to the seat of a pair of blue jeans, or a newspaper picture of a youngster making an obscene gesture at a patrolman, that made otherwise adaptable adults exclaim, "Now, they have gone too far!"

Some adults went with them. One of my friends whose husband joined the Age of Aquarius by running off on a motorcycle with a girl half his age, went him one better by joining a commune. She worked in the kitchen — she was the only one in the place who knew how to cook — for a year, then quit, complaining, "They won't help and they have the nerve to complain if I don't serve brown rice, and they won't do anything about the roaches!"

Some of those hippies now have children "so square they squeak." Clean-cut beyond belief, with shiny hair and no dirt under their nails, they go off to school groomed to their straightened teeth. The boys wear blue jeans with the "right" labels; the girls three inches of eye shadow; all of them have their hair washed and blow-dried and sprayed to perfection. Once there they go out for team sports, go to pep rallies, wear the latest styles and accept the rules without question.

Nancy, who marched for civil rights in Washington and against the war in Cambridge, sat on our living room floor talking about her daughter. "She was elected a beauty queen, and now she only goes out with athletes; she won't leave the house unless her makeup is perfect; and she won't study because the boys will think she's a brain. I can't even talk to her!"

Nancy's mother, 20 years ago, would have been delighted to see her daughter a beauty queen, and used to caution her not to study too much, "or you will ruin your eyes, and have to wear glasses, and the boys don't like girls in glasses..."

It wasn't a child, but a mother, who went through the roof when a card came telling her to go downtown to have her picture taken for the high school annual. While the mother ranted about the waste of time and gasoline, the daughter wailed, "I'll be the only girl who won't have her picture in the annual!"

When his son reported that his best friend had just received a high-powered new car on the completion of the classroom phase of driver's education (still six months away from his 16th birthday), a friend screamed, "I would as soon buy you a handgun to play with!" The son mumbled under his breath, "I'll be the only 16-year-old in Lubbock without a car..."

Faced with a pointless rule, a useless imposition, the child will accept reality while his parents, like as not, set off to tilt at windmills. One young friend begged his dad not to visit his school any more: "It is so embarrassing for me, Dad, to see you there every week!"

One father asked his son the band member sarcastically, "Do they have a booster club for parents of math students? Do they raise money to send Latin students to competition?" His son shrugged his shoulders and retreated.

A generation ago, his father's father was yelling at him because he was more interested in building a model airplane than in going out for the football team; he wanted nothing more than for his son to be a "regular" guy. Now the grandson is as regular as a tin soldier, and his father is furious, not so much at the system as at his son's passivity.

It is a curious world. Sitting in my friend's yard, sharing a drink, we muse on the eternal wonders of the generation gap...

Under the theme of Climb the Highest Mountain — Be a Scout, Be a Sport, this year's Round-Up recruiting goal is to increase the membership of the South Plains Council from its current 4,700 youth members to 6,300-plus youth members.

The South Plains Council is divided into five Scouting Districts which cover a 20 county area.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D

While it may seem difficult, it is nevertheless possible to furnish one room so that it can serve as a den, guest bedroom, office, snack room, library, hobby room, game room and a TV room. Yes, you can furnish to accommodate all those things in just one room, and it can solve a lot of problems, if you do it right.

What could be prettier or more practical in your dining room than an elegant breakfront china cabinet with a buffet storage base.

Remember that white is not just one color as many people think; there are many different shades of white that can affect your overall decorating scheme.

Author Provides Budget Advice

EDITOR'S NOTE: (Sometimes families are more reluctant to discuss money matters than sexual problems. If he wants a scarlet sports car, you want a dishwasher and your eldest daughter want to spend a year traveling, don't despair. Common sense can be a pretty good guide).

By SHIRLEY CONRAN

If there's trouble in a home, it isn't necessarily in the bedroom — it's quite often in the budget. I wouldn't be surprised to learn that more families fight over money than over sex and mothers-in-law combined, usually because they've built the battleground into their lives by planning their expenditures badly or by not planning them at all.

YOUR HOUSEKEEPING BUDGET

An annual budget: Basically it consists of two simple lists. List 1 notes money coming in from all sources during the year. List 2 notes money spent on various items over that time — or if you get paid each week, it's sensible to work out a budget based on how you're paid — weekly, biweekly or monthly.

You can estimate the totals for these weekly or monthly lists based on the previous year's income and expenditures. Experts advise that you be precise in your accounting — no rounding out sums to the nearest dollar. State the actual amount coming in or going out down to the last cent.

The purposes of a budget: The point of a home budget is threefold: (1) knowing what you want to do with your money; (2) keeping track of where the money actually goes (theoretically these two figures should be the same, but life isn't always that accommodating; (3) and making sure that you don't overspend and get into debt.

Categorizing Budget Items: In working out the budget all family members should be absolutely clear about where even the smallest expenses fit in and that every expense does fit in somewhere.

Your budget items should be grouped under three headings: "Essentials," "Necessities," and "Luxuries." The whole family should decide in advance which item comes under which heading, in order to ease short-term economizing if it becomes necessary.

Incorporate a Mistakes and Contingencies allowance into your budget. This is the disaster fund (unpredictable "act of God" stuff) for which you should allot a really pessimistic amount. After all, if you don't use the money for emergencies, you can divert it into savings or a buying spree at the end of the year.

Some items in your annual budget can be marked as "P$" (Painless Saving). The idea is to make regular installments into an interest-bearing savings account against the day when these expenses will have to be paid.

Hosehold insurance, for example, is frequently paid annually; you can be collecting interest on your money as you save for that payment. The same is true of tuition costs, Christmas expenses and vacation spending. Consider putting P$ money in a third account to avoid raiding your regular savings and disaster accounts.

The job of budgeting can be made a lot easier if you buy a ledger to itemize your basic expenses and add the categories suggested that apply to your needs.

SAVING MONEY

Save what you can in a savings account in a commercial bank or a savings and loan association; by purchasing stocks and/or bonds; by creaming part of the savings off into mortgage repayments.

How much should you save? It depends on what for and for how long and how much is coming in. If you can manage to save 10 percent of your total income a year, good for you.

If you can't seem to save money, but really want to, you can force yourself to save by taking on savings commitments and having your employer enforce them, such as paycheck deductions to buy U.S. Savings Bonds or to go directly into a savings account in your name.

TWO BREADWINNERS

If there is more than one contributor, either (1) sort out responsibilities or (2) pool the family income (salaries, allowances, dividends, earnings, legacies, or whatever) and add it up. Try redistributing it under the above headings.

Separate Bank Accounts: If you and your husband are madly in love, well that's wonderful, but statistically you have a good chance of falling out of love and divorcing. So without being offensively self-protective, avoid entwining all your money — or goods — with that of your spouse.

Keeping Personal Money Apart From the Housekeeping Money: You can manage this by having two purses, or a purse with two pockets, or two separate bank accounts and checking accounts.

For me, the secret of keeping track of home budgeting is to reduce as many outgoings as possible to a regular basis, and for this I've opened a second housekeeping account.

To do this, first add up all your regular payments for everything, from the milkman to the dog license. Estimate what fuel and telephone bills will be by looking up last year's costs. Take a deep breath and don't panic — the total amount is bound to be truly staggering. Divide it by 12, prune, then arrange to have the resultant sum paid monthly into this number 2 account.

All regular bills are paid from this account, so I don't feel faint at the very thought of looking at the electric bill every month. If I am a little overdrawn one month, it should theoretically balance out in the following months.

Food and unexpected or unbudgeted expenses are paid from my number 1 account. It might cost a little more to have several bank accounts, but I prefer to pay for clarity rather than to constantly have to add and subtract to find out whether I can afford to buy a new umbrella or have my teeth capped.

If you decide to carry more than one account, you may want to look into the checking facilities of savings and loan associations so as to reduce the cost of sheer banking. Some of these institutions will permit free checking if you carry a stated minimum amount in a savings account (which is not a drawback since you should want some kind of savings account anyway.)

GETTING EVERYONE INTO THE ACT

Some families have regular conferences about money, once every three months, say. Get the children in on these as early as possible, even though they may be bored, and treat their contributions with respect.

After discussing the budget, analyze disasters to find out how to prevent them, suggest amendments to the budget (more pocket money may mean a less expensive vacation), and take account of future changes, such as rising costs. After this you should all go out to dinner — even if it's only hamburgers or pizza — to cheer yourselves up.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU'RE A CASHAHOLIC

A cashaholic is someone who's hopeless with money. Psychologists say that such extravagance is inculcated in children by parents who, instead of giving their children a proper allowance and teaching them to spend it responsibly, give only pocket money for treats and presents. The result is that the child, when grown up, thinks of money in terms of treats and personal pleasure as opposed to dreary things like bills, taxes and insurance premiums.

Controlling Your Habits: I've never really found a cure for this condition, but you can survive solvently as a cashaholic by treating yourself as an alcoholic and locking up the "bottle" — don't own a checkbook, a credit card; deal only in cash, and when your wallet is empty stop spending.

Form a Cashaholics Anonymous with a similarly afflicted friend and telephone her when you get the urge to spend; she can reel off a litany of bills and responsibilities and, in theory, deter you.

Make up a shopping list of essential and necessary items; stick to it; don't add one extra item. As a last resort shop by telephone.

Bringing up Financially Savvy Children: You won't raise a generation of cashaholics if you teach your children how to handle money as soon as they can buy their own ice cream.

Involve them in the family's affairs as soon as possible, and give each child an allowance — yearly, monthly or weekly — to cover all that he or she spends; older children can have clothes on their budgets, plus hobbies, sports, travel, school expenses, movies and sweets.

Expect some drama during the first six months, when they learn that overpurchasing of ice cream can mean no money to get into the local pool or skating rink. Stand firm. Kindness will not equip your offspring to stand on their own feet in later life.

You may be shelling out the allowance on a periodic basis, but the children should be encouraged to put some of it in their own savings accounts.

This system can save an enormous amount of money on children's clothes and shoes because they take better care of them.

IF YOU'RE IN DEBT

Short of tearing paper napkins in half and rationing toilet paper, there are sensible economies that should arouse the enthusiasm of any right-minded family. Everyone can help to cut down the bills of the rapacious utility and telephone companies. Any step you can take to reduce energy consumption besides saving you money is almost a patriotic duty, and may be your ticket to survival some day.

You might consider reviving that ancient form of transport, your feet. If you really want to see someone face to face, and he/she lives not too far away, walk or bicycle over. If your job or commuter station is less than 30 blocks away, bike to it. Forming car pools can also save money and energy.

WHAT TO DO ON DOOMSDAY

Doomsday happens in every family sometime — when Father's job is eliminated, Mother's secret extravagances come home to roost, you're hit with devastating medical expenses, the accountant turns out to have been a crook, you lost your case with the IRS, or whatever. The essential feature of the situation is that the money just won't go around, there are too many bills and not enough money to pay them.

When doomsday comes to your family you can cope with it, if you remember two basic facts.

First, all the people you owe money to are chiefly interested in getting their money, not in suing you, which will only cost them more money. Second, as these disasters happen to everyone it's nothing to be ashamed of, but something to be calmly explained to your creditors as soon as possible.

Make a List of All Your Major Creditors: This would probably include installment debts, charge accounts, the mortgage, and such services as the telephone and the gas and electric utilities. Note how much you owe each of them. Then, make a careful analysis of your income, or your income plus savings if you have to, work out how much you can afford to pay each of them on an installment basis. This is called "keeping your credit good," and it could help to keep you off the dreaded credit blacklist or from going into bankruptcy.

Write each creditor a letter. Direct your letter to the attention of the credit office. Explain that your family is in a financial crisis (no need to go into elaborate details), and ask whether they would accept payment in installments — quote the sum you have decided you can afford. Most reasonable concerns will accept this offer. Then it's simply a question of cutting down expenses until all your debts are paid. Two things to remember:

Be sure to send your letter before the creditors start demanding money.

Don't overestimate your income or underestimate the cost of living when working out what you can afford to pay off. Offer less rather than more, so as not to risk defaulting on your promise, in which case you might risk maximum wrath and penalties.

Oranges Offer Change of Pace At Breakfast

VAN NUYS, Calif. (Special) — Is it hard to get and keep your youngsters' eyes open on a school morning? Do they need a change of pace from cold cereals or toast-on-the-run? Cereal a la mode might be the answer ... hot cooked cereal, topped with cartwheel slices of sweet Valencia oranges and a scoop of vanilla ice cream. (No need to add sugar or cream.) What a way to wake up spirits and bodies!)

Add a glass of milk and here's a breakfast with nourishment enough to last until the lunch bell rings. Slices of half a large size orange supply the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of vitamin C for a school age child.

Larger sized Valencia oranges are now in good supply ... ready to be a part of breakfast, lunch or the perfect after school or sport snack. Oranges are naturally sweet, thirst quenching and a real taste treat anytime of day?

ORANGE 'N' CEREAL
A LA MODE

Hot cooked cereal (3 to 4 servings)
2 to 3 oranges, peeled, cut in half-cartwheels
1 pt. vanilla ice cream

Spoon cooked cereal into individual bowls: arrange orange half-cartwheel slices over cereal and top with scoops of ice cream. (Additional cream and sugar are not needed as the melting ice cream provides both.) Makes 3 to 4 servings.

To make half-cartwheels, slice peeled orange in half lengthwise. Place cut-side down; cut into slices.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Our son never had much success with girls, so he fell for the first one who paid any attention to him and they're getting married next month. We tried to get him to wait, but he wouldn't listen.

I called the bride's mother to find out how many guests we were allowed to have, and I offered to pay for any extra people we wanted to invite over and above that number. She said, "We never had any trouble with our other daughter's wedding because the groom's parents realized it was also their son's wedding and they paid for half of it."

Abby, every etiquette book I've ever seen plainly states that the bride's family is supposed to put on the wedding. I realize that weddings cost a lot, but if people can't afford it they shouldn't expect the other family to pay half.

Am I out of line to ignore their brazen suggestion even though we're better off than they?

Groom's Mother

Dear Mother: You are correct about what the etiquette books say. But in MY book, consideration and common sense outrank etiquette. In some cases, the bridegroom's parents have not only shared expenses, they've put on the wedding. But that happens only if they're delighted with the match.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BIG ED": Better start looking around for another job. From too much YES-SIR and NO-SIR a man can get an UL-SIR.

DEAR ABBY: I have been courting a gorgeous woman for eight months. She is 20 years younger than I. (I am 82.)

We love each other dearly. My dilemma is whether she could find a younger man who could do more of the thing she loves to do — dance, swim, garden and travel.

I'm afraid she would be giving up so much, but she says what time we would have together would be well worth the sacrifice on her part.

We live in different states. I've visited her once, and she has come to visit me three times. We have a wonderful time together. Abby, I think about her constantly, but I don't want to deprive her of the chance to find a younger man while she's still able to.

She would have to quit her job and move here, but I am financially able to take care of her.

I'm still mentally alert and in fairly good health for my age, but I'm lacking in strength because, living alone, I don't eat properly. (She's a wonderful cook so I'm sure I'd get stronger if she married me.)

Please help me decide what to do.

Yes Or No?

Dear Yes, Yes! You say you "love each other dearly," so what are you waiting for? All is fair in love and war. If the lady wanted a younger man, you wouldn't be in her life. Don't count your years, count your blessings, and go ahead and marry her.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother. She's too lenient! After she gets angry and punishes me, she often will apologize. Why should she apologize when I know I had the punishment coming?

Often the punishment will be depriving me of my dessert. Later, she will bring the dessert to my room.

I could give hundreds of other examples, Abby, but I think you know what I mean. Please tell me why my mother acts this way? I can't figure her out.

Mixed Up In Cleveland

Dear Mixed: Your mother (like many others) fears you'll love her less because she has punished you. (She's wrong.) No child ever resented punishment he knew he had coming.

Discipline is PROOF of love. When a parent punishes a child, he is saying, "You are loved, and I am trying to teach you to behave in a socially acceptable manner because I am not going to be around forever to protect and forgive you. If you misbehave, society will not forgive you and let you go unpunished."

Children KNOW this. I wish more parents did.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence B. Curtis of Hobbs, N.M. will observe their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2:30-4:30 p.m. today in their home. Mrs. J.L. Schopef of Levelland, Mrs. R.J. Van Liew of Lubbock and Lawrence B. Curtis Jr. of Houston, children of the couple, will host. The former Allie Mae Morris and Curtis were married Aug. 21, 1929 in O'Donnell. They moved from Lynn County to Yoakum County in 1944 and then to State Line, Hobbs, N.M. in 1963. The couple has seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Clip 'n' Cook

BEEF PUFFS

½ lb. ground beef
1 small onion, very finely chopped (about ¼ cup)
¼ cup minced parsley
¼ tsp. pepper
3 large eggs, separated
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. baking powder
¼ cup butter

Mix together beef, onion, parsley and pepper. Beat egg whites with salt and baking powder until stiff straight peaks form. Without washing beater, beat yolks until thickened and lemon color; stir in beef mixture; fold in whites. In a 10-inch skillet over moderate heat, melt butter; drop 6 heaping tablespoonfuls of the mixture, well apart, into the hot butter. When browned on underside, in about 2 minutes, turn with a wide spatula and brown other sides — another couple of minutes. Remove and keep warm while you cook the remaining mixture the same way. Serve at once. Makes 12.

Balanced Meals, Proper Nutrients Vital To Healthy Pregnancy

Fourth in a series on pregnancy

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

Medical supervision plays a great part in pregnancy, assuring safety and health. However, the final responsibility for the health of the woman and baby falls to the pregnant woman herself. Proper nutrition is vital in providing essential nutrients to the baby, while good eating habits give the woman strength and energy.

Nutrition and exercise are the areas of which a woman has the most control during pregnancy. A doctor may prescribe a specific diet or exercise program, but only the woman herself can carry it out.

Diet has always been of concern to doctors. An overweight woman who becomes pregnant faces greater risks than one who is not overweight. She risks a greater chance of toxemia, a more difficult labor, an overweight baby, and more stress on her body due to the additional weight.

All doctors do not agree about weight gain among pregnant women. The old standard weight gain during pregnancy was no more than 14 pounds. In the last few years, some doctors have allowed more, hoping babies will be healthier if their mothers are allowed to gain more weight. Today's estimate is about 24 pounds.

PRACTICALLY, HOWEVER, good eating habits are more important during pregnancy than how many calories are consumed. In a recent article written about an obstetrician and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Tom Brewer, both members of a organization called the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Through Nutrition (SPUN), common sense seems to be the answer to a nutritionally safe pregnancy.

According to Mrs. Brewer, "The truth is a diet that perfectly nourishes isn't all that common. Most expectant mothers need to concentrate about how they put their meals together, making sure the nourishment's there."

Dr. Brewer developed a group of guidelines for proper nourishment during pregnancy, based on a project he conducted over a 13-year period in the public prenatal clinics of the Contra Costa County, Calif., medical services. According to Dr. Brewer, there was not one case of convulsive toxemia among 7,000 women in the project during that time.

His procedures included keeping the women off all drugs including diuretics and on a balanced, no-junk-food diet. According to the article, "one mother dies every 18 hours of complications of convulsive toxemias. other severe toxemias are involved in one prenatal death every 15 minutes.")

Dr. Brewer's diet includes one quart (four glasses) of any kind of milk per day (one cup yogurt may be substituted per glass); two eggs; two servings of fish, shellfish, chicken or turkey, lean beef, veal, lamb, pork, liver, or kidney; whole wheat bread or noodles with beans, cheese, peanut butter, milk; two servings fresh, green leafy vegetables; five servings whole-grain breads, rolls, cereals or pancakes; two choices from: a whole potato any style, large green pepper, orange, grapefruit, lemon, lime, papaya, tomato (may substitute juice); three pats margarine (vitamin A enriched) or butter or oil; a yellow or orange-colored vegetable or fruit five times a week; and liver once a week if you like it.

According to Dr. Brewer, "We have found that sound nutrition during pregnancy, preparation for childbirth, and avoidance of drugs and smoking are important factors in reducing complications for mother and baby to the absolute minimum."

MARGARETTE HARDEN, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Texas Tech University, also contends a balanced diet is important during pregnancy. As she pointed out, "pregnancy is a good time to change eating habits." Rather than count calories, she encourages pregnant women to go by the four food groups.

The four food group theory suggests a daily consumption of two or more glasses of milk or servings of cheese, ice cream and other milk-made foods; two or more servings of meat, fish, poultry, eggs or cheese (alternates being dry beans, peas, nuts); four or more servings of dark green or yellow vegetables, citrus fruit or tomatoes; and four or more servings of enriched or whole grain breads and cereals.

Mrs. Harden also pointed out that the groups can be geared to various amounts of calories. For example, a cereal product that is under 100 calories might be a slice of bread or toast, four or less 2-inch crackers or cereals with a large volume for weight. A cereal containing more than 100 calories might be a pre-sweetened cereal or one with sugar or fat added.

Nutrients — the vitamins, minerals, and proteins in food — are the key to healthy eating habits. According to Mrs. Harden, "the five nutrients which increase in the amount needed by the pregnant woman (calcium, iron, vitamin A, the B-complex vitamins and vitamin C) are also likely to be deficient in the diet of the non-pregnant woman."

An easier way to understand the need for certain food consumption habits is to break down the nutrients into what they are, how they work, and where they are found.

DR. L.M. DEL BO, in his book on pregnancy, does exactly that. By seeing what nutrients are necessary for proper fetal growth, eating proper foods may seem more reasonable.

Proteins are used to form and develop baby's organs and muscles. They are found in red meat, chicken, fish, eggs, cheese, milk — all products of animal origin.

Starches, sugars and fats offer fuel to provide energy necessary for vital processes. They are usually lumped into carbohydrates. The normal requirement for carbohydrates for pregnant women is the same for a non-pregnant woman — 14 ounces per day. They are found in cereals, fruits and vegetables.

Fats are rich in vitamins (especially A and D) and are found in bacon, butter, olive oil, peanut oil and margarine. No more than three ounces of fat per day are needed.

Two to three pints of water per day are needed. "Water is the indispensable medium in which occur all the complex chemical reactions of life; it is the essential element in all the circulating liquids," said Dr. Del Bo.

Calcium and phosphorus are used to construct bones, teeth and the nervous system. Iron is an important part of hemoglobin — the substance in the red corpuscles that transports oxygen throughout the organism. Iodine is necessary for the functioning of the thyroid gland.

Sodium and potassium regulate the exchange of liquids in the tissues and control the muscular and nervous functions.

Although only small quantities of the minerals listed are needed, they are essential. Sources for these minerals are: phosphorus — eggs, meat (especially fish); calcium — milk, cheese and many vegetables; iron — major vegetables, fresh fruit in small quantities (iron supplement may be needed); iodine — fish, carrots, asparagus, vegetables; sodium — table salt. Almost all foods contain naturally a certain quantity of sodium and potassium that is sufficient for a woman's needs.

BECAUSE A PREGNANT WOMAN is often given vitamin supplements, it may be helpful to see a breakdown of the vitamins as well.

Vitamin A protects the mucous membranes of the organs, fosters growth and provides better resistence to infection, protects the cells of the eye. It is found in whole flour, rice, milk, egg yolks, liver and cod liver oil.

Vitamin B1 prevents and aids in the cure of nephritis, gastric and intestinal difficulties and infectious diseases. It favors growth and assimilation of sugars. Whole flour, rice, milk, egg yolks, liver and green vegetables are sources of this vitamin. Vitamin B2 is also found in these foods. It protects the skin and favors growth and vitality.

Milk, egg yolks, meat, whole flour and tomatoes are sources of vitamin B6. It promotes circulation and digestion, reduces nausea of pregnancy, and prevents pellagra.

Vitamin B12 favors formation of red corpuscles and acts to prevent and cure anemia. It is found in liver, milk, egg yolks, whole wheat bread and numerous fruits and vegetables.

Old standby vitamin C helps growth and development of the teeth and bones, protects the mucous membranes and circulatory system, favors convalescence, and increases resistance to infection. It is found in fresh foods as fruits and vegetables, milk and eggs.

Indispensable for normal bone formation of the skeleton, vitamin D aids in assimilation of calcium and phosphorus, helps transport them to growth areas and promotes growth and a robust physique. Vitamin D is found in milk, cod liver oil, spinach, fish and butter.

Vitamin K permits normal coagulation of blood and prevents hemorrhage. It is found in eggs, spinach and tomatoes.

According to Dr. Del Bo, "Substances that are most necessary for a pregnant woman are protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamins. The proteins will be used for the construction of new cells for the child, the calcium and phosphorus are for its little skeleton, iron to enrich its blood in red corpuscles, and the vitamins will have a role in all its vital processes."

Dr. Del Bo indicates that caloric demands do change during pregnancy. He said, "Normally a woman who is not doing heavy work needs about 2,000 calories per day. Even for a pregnant woman, this quantity remains sufficient for the first months, but it should be increased to 2,400 calories at the beginning of the fourth month, and to 4,000 during nursing."

Finally he says, "We must underline the importance of a balanced diet, containing all the elements that are necessary for the construction of the body of your child and for its functioning, because it needs, like any other machine, no matter how small, fuel for energy to perform its vital functions.

"If the diet of the expectant mother lacks a specific substance, say calcium or vitamins, it will do no good for her to eat as much as she wants and gain excessive weight — the baby will still be born underweight, with its skeleton and teeth underdeveloped and a diminished resistance to infectious disease."

Pears Satisfy 'Sweet Tooth'

DALLAS (Special) — What did Stone Age man eat to satisfy his sweet tooth? Creamy sweet pears or "butter fruit," history tells. Ancient Greeks improved the fruit and Roman conquerors carried it throughout the Old World. In the 19th century, the elite of France competed in raising the finest pears, and developed a popular winter pear used today, the Anjou.

Fresh pear supplies are at their peak (from August through October), and this year is exceptional! Larger crops were forecast for all three major commercial producting states — California, Washington and Oregon — according to U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Most of the pears you'll find this summer are fresh Bartlett pears, pale yellow to rich yellow blushed with red when ripe, that's the way market reporters with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service describe them.

You may find pears which are hard in the food store. This is because pears are one of a few fruits that do not successfully ripen on the tree, and must be picked when still green. Commercial producers use pressure testers to determine firmness, standard color plates to check color and a machine to sample juice of the fruit to find just the right time to hand-pick their harvest.

After harvest, mother nature converts the pear's starch into sugar. If the pear you buy is hard, simply let it ripen at room temperature. However, you may prefer to select pears that have already begun to soften for your immediate use.

Most of the pears produced in the three major producing states are shipped from field to packing plant where they are sorted, graded, sized and packaged. Roughly 60-90 percent of the best quality fruit is shipped to fresh market channels, and lower grades are sent to canneries and processing plants or culled.

So, usually the fruit you find at retail is "the cream of the crop."

An average uncooked pear contains about 63 calories, all the B vitamins, and other vitamins and minerals.

Spicy Corn Relish Brightens Meals

MUNCIE, Ind. (Special) — There are many benefits to home canning, not the least of which is being able to preserve the natural goodness of fruits and vegetables without additives and artificial colors. Then there's the opportunity to "put up" unique flavorful concoctions that surpass most store bought products.

Colorful Corn Relish is a savory example of just such a combination. The recipe is a zesty mixture of golden corn kernels and a variety of spices, red and green peppers and onions. A year-round family favorite, corn relish makes a delightfully piquant accompaniment to meat and poultry dishes and is delicious, too, with salads.

Now that ears of corn are piled high at roadside stands and in farmer's markets, you can take advantage of this abundance to home can a supply of this tasty corn relish. And since the recipe makes six pints, you might want to earmark a few for holiday gift giving.

When making the relish, utensils of zinc, iron, brass, copper or galvanized metal should not be used. Only use glass-ceramic, stainless steel or unchipped enamelware.

CORN RELISH

2 qts. cut corn, (about 18 ears)
1 cup chopped onions
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped red pepper
1 cup chopped celery
1½ cups sugar
2 tsps. celery seed
1 tbsp. mustard seed
1 tbsp. salt
1 tsp. turmeric
1 minced garlic clove
3 cups vinegar
1 cup water

Cut corn from cob. Place in a large stainless steel, glass-ceramic or unchipped enamel saucepot. Cover with boiling water and boil 5 minutes. Carefully drain and add remaining ingredients. Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Simmer relish for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Bring to boiling. Pack, boiling hot, into hot pint jars, leaving ¼ inch head space. Place lid on clean jar rim and screw band down evenly and firmly. Process pints 15 minutes in a boiling water bath canner. Makes about 6 pints.

Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. WEST

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert West will be honored with a reception marking their 25th wedding anniversary from 2-4 p.m. today in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Robertson of Crosbyton, aunt and uncle of the couple. Nieces and cousins of the couple will host the reception.

The former Doris Robertson and West were married Aug. 22, 1954 in Stamford. They moved to Lubbock from Crosbyton in 1955.

by Jessie Lee Sharpley

BE BEAUTIFUL

As the Fall season prevails upon us, there is a definite feel toward a confident attitude in dressing rather than the random throw together, as seen in the past. The tailored suit, the sophisticated and sleek dress, the very tailored look is dominant. The mood of confidence has emerged not only in the clothing but in hair design.

There is tremendous style in Fall dressing which allows for variety in hair design. Stylists at Jessie Lee's are a genius for adapting the lastest hair fashions to be wearble by clients with a variety of problems and needs. For example, the hair cut short in back with long, moving layers near the face, make it possible for even "cheeky" girls to wear today's sleek cuts. A softly permed and highlighted style is layered just enough to enhance the curl and look great worn either up or down. And the long, carefree "Roman" cut has the double value of feminine appeal and a totally individual appearance for every wearer.

If you get the idea that we run to keep one step ahead of fashion, you are right. We are very conscience of what looks good in the West Texas area, not in New York or L.A., but here where you and I live. While the suit will reign supreme in fall for clothing, short hair and crisp waves are the look in hair design. Though we won't let fashion dictate us so that we overlook the style which suits your lifestyle and personality; we also won't overlook a new great design that could be just the look you need and want.

We desire for you to have the sophisticated, glamorous and liberated look that fall fashion offers — to become beautiful with the assistance of the professionals at Jessie Lee's. Call today.

Unusual Produce Adds Exotic Menu Touch

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Does your grocery shopping list always include the same things? Maybe apples, oranges, bananas, lettuce and a few onions?

In the process of loading these items into your cart, have you ever noticed some of the other items offered in the produce counters of local supermarkets? If you have, have you ever wondered what some of them were and what in the world you might do with them?

While family food budgets (not to mention family tastes) may cause a shopper to shy away from trying some of the more unusual fruits and vegetables, still a little knowledge might give a measure of enjoyment to the challenge of shopping.

Would you recognize a kiwi fruit? a papaya? a mango? jicama? plantains? a banana or spaghetti squash? John Flores, manager of the produce department at Albertson's, and Joy Parnell, home economist for Southwestern Public Service, provided answers to these questions.

A kiwi fruit looks a little like a fig. It is small and brown on the outide but green and soft on the inside. Miss Parnell reports that a gourmet foods magazine, "Cuisine," recently featured on its cover a lobster and seafood salad in which kiwi fruit was an ingredient. The fruit which can be eaten raw has small black seeds which are also edible.

A mango is a juicy tropical fruit whose taste is similar to a cross between an apricot. It has one large cling seed which must be removed. Mangoes are chief ingredients in chutney and as slices are sometimes featured in fruit salads.

Plantains look like bananas but are not eaten raw and never get soft like bananas. They are sometimes fried in butter. Miss Parnell said she had cooked a chicken casserole recipe which used plantains as an ingredient. They are brown on the outside and never get bright yellow like bananas.

A papaya is of the melon family. It is best eaten "as is". Like the cantelope whose flavor it resembles, its seeds are not edible. Papaya is available year round. It can be used as a dessert or in a salad.

Jicama (pronounced hic-a-ma) is a root vegetable which is brown on the outside and grayish white on the inside. The brown heavy skin must be pared away. It can be used like water chestnuts and in some cases serve as substitutes for these very expensive delicacies. Jicama has a flavor which is a cross between a potato and an apple. It is usually eaten raw and mixes in vegetable salads very well. It can be a dipper on a relish tray and sometimes offered as an appetitizer served with lime juice, chili powder and garlic salt.

Three unusual kinds of squash are currently offered at Albertson's produce counter. They are chayote, banana and spaghetti squash. Chayote are small pear-shaped green squash which can be fixed like summer squash and eaten with butter and grated Parmesan.

Spaghetti squash is so called because when baked it comes away from the shell like strings of pasta. Both banana squash and spaghetti squash can be baked in a manner similar to acron squash.

By the way, have you have any fresh pineapple or a fresh coconut lately?

JICAMA AND FRUIT SALAD
1 med.-sized jicama, peeled and cubed
3 oranges, peeled and coarsely chopped
3 slices fresh pineapple, cut into small wedges
Lettuce leaves
Salt
Cayenne pepper

Mix together and chill the cut-up jicama and fruits. Pile servings on lettuce leaves, sprinkle with a little of the juices from the fruits, and add a light sprinkling fo salt and cayenne pepper. Makes about 6 servings.

JICAMA PICO DE GALLO
2 cups peeled and diced raw jicama
1 green bell pepper, seeded and slivered
½ med. mild onion, thin sliced
1 cup sliced or diced cucumber
¼ cup olive oil
2 tbsp. white or red wine vinegar
½ tsp. crumbled oregano
Salt
Pepper

Combine jicama, green pepper, onion, and cucumber. Pour olive oil and vinegar over vegetables and mix lightly with oregano. Add salt and pepper to taste. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

ORANGE PICO DE GALLO
2 qts. crisp, broken pieces of romaine
1 med.-sized orange, peeled and thinly sliced
½ cucumber, thinly sliced
½ sweet onion, slivered
½ bell pepper, diced
½ to 1 cup raw, peeled, and chopped jicama
Small romaine leaves (optional)
½ cup salad oil or olive oil
1/3 cup wine vinegar
½ tsp. salt

Place romaine in a salad bowl. Arrange on the greens the orange, cucumber, onion, green pepper and jicama if available. Garnish rim of the salad with tips of inner romaine leaves, if you desire.

Blend oil with wine vinegar and salt. Pour dressing over salad and mix lightly to serve. Makes eight servings.

Foreigners Purchase Historic Landmarks

WASHINGTON (WNS) — Three purchases may not a real estate takeover make but three of Washington's historic landmarks are now in foreign hands.

The 51-year-old Shoreham Hotel was bought by the Tata hotel group of India which operates, among others, the Taj Mahal Hotel in Bombay. The Hay-Adams Hotel, across Lafayette Park from the White House on the site of Henry Adams' home, was bought by Frenchman Georges Mosse and the large Highland Towers apartment-hotel, directly across Connecticut Avenue from the Washington Hilton, is being run by the Dinar group, headed by Pakistan-born Yasuf Haroon and his wife, Pasha. All three purchasers have promised to restore the aging properties to their former elegance.

Doctor Feels MBD Causes Alcoholism

NEW YORK (Special) — Hyperactivity, frequently associated with minimal brain dysfunction (MBD), may be outgrown, but other more important symptoms can linger into adulthood. It may be the forerunner of such adult psychiatric illnesses as alcoholism and hysteria, according to Paul H. Wender, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry, University of Utah Medical Center.

"Children who have the learning and behavioral disabilities of MBD may have inherited an abnormal metabolism of monoamine, a common chemical substance in the brain," he said at a recent symposium in Tulsa.

CANCER / ANSWER LINE

An elementary school teacher asks: "Are we making any progress in treating childhood leukemia?"

ANSWERline: Yes. Substantial advances have been achieved in the treatment of this cancer of the blood and blood-forming tissues. For example, as recently as 1963, a review of 800 leukemia cases (600 children and 200 adults) at a major cancer center showed that only four patients were alive three years after treatment and only one patient was alive five years after treatment. Today, given proper treatment, 50 percent of children with the most common form of childhood leukemia will be alive and well five years after treatment with the potential for more years of continued health. Better ways of treating leukemia among children includes a variety of support services such as blood component therapy to help patients when they are at risk of infectious disease complications or bleeding problems. In addition, parents of leukemic children, educators, psychologist and social workers are combining their skills to help children with leukemia — and/or their families — deal with the disease. There is national recognition of the fact that it is important for leukemic children to continue schooling and contact with their friends. Thus, there has been progress on the human front as well as on the scientific.

A grocer explains: "I sell many products that contain nitrites. I understand that they may be banned because they may be a cancer link. Is this true?"

ANSWERline: In late summer of 1978 the Federal Government announced its intention of banning the use of nitrites in food. Nitrites are used primarily in curing meat and as a preservative that keeps food safe from dangerous bacteria. Both the U.S. Agriculture Departmennt and the Food and Drug Administration regulate the use of nitrites and they are exploring the best way to phase them out. This move was prompted by animal studies indicating that nitrites can cause cancer of the lymph system in animals. While the Government is interested in removing nitrites from the market place, any possible ban will be undertaken with extreme caution so that consmers will not risk buying improperly prepared food.

A woman explains: "My cousin had some kind of laser beam therapy for cervical cancer. Can you explain what that means?"

ANSWERline: Cervical cancer is a disease that progresses through several different stages. For each stage and each patient there has to be an individualized form of treatment. Before cancer itself develops, there is a precancerous form of cellular abnormality. In come cancer centers, the continuous-beam carbon dioxide laser is being used to treat this precancerous condition so that cancer will not develop. The prodecure can be done in an outpatient clinic without anesthesia and is inexpensive.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

During a recent telephone conversation with James Brolin, currently starring as George Lutz in the popular horror film "The Amityville Horror," the actor explained, "We had to film the movie 90 miles south of New York, since the people in Amityville wouldn't cooperate. They didn't want us there. . .There's a lot of old money in that town, a lot of tradition, and they want to keep people out. As it is, tourists are still coming in and ripping off every sign they can get their hands on with the word 'Amityville' on it.

"I myself had a talk with the mayor there, and what I basically suggested was that he put up a ferris wheel and sell snow cones. That is, my attitude is that he should just go with it. It's life, you can't change it, so make the most of it."

Indeed, Brolin carries this roll-with-the-flow philosophy into his own life. He has not had a bonafide box office hit before "The Amityville Horror" and, in fact, has taken part in the making of some pretty miserable movies. He did win an Emmy for his performance as Dr. Steve Kiley on television's "Marcus Welby, M.D.," but plainly would rather stop acting altogether than return to the small screen. Rather than let his lack of opportunities grate at him, though, he relaxes by participating in dangerous, high speed car races.

Right now, however, his star appears to be on the rise, thanks to the success of "The Amityville Horror." Based on the best selling book detailing the experiences of George and Kathy Lutz, a young couple who stayed in their new home in Amityville only 28 days before gathering their children and fleeing with only the clothes on their backs, the film follows the theory that the Lutz family was driven away by supernatural forces. The obvious question is whether Brolin believes the stories of bleeding walls and disembodied voices are true, and the actor skillfully dodges the query by answering, "Well, let me put it this way. I beleive that George and Kathy Lutz believe that all those things happened.

"They've been questioned by the best lie detector devices in the country, and their versions of what happened have been upheld by the machines. There is absolutely no doubt in their minds that all those things happened. . .In sitting with them, in talking with them, I can see no sign of them lying."

Still, screenwriter Sandor Stern and director Stuart Rosenberg did not treat the Lutzs' accounts as gospel. Much of their story has been deleted, with fabricated scenes added to "heighten dramatic effect." Asked about the additions, Brolin downplayed the quantity with, "Well, the book really doesn't have an ending. I mean, they (the Lutz family) just left the house and that was it. So for dramatic effect, the film has me going back to the house at the end to try to rescue the dog.

"And actually, what happened in the film was an extension of the truth according to the Lutzs anyway. George Lutz told me that that red room in the basement was just oozing with that slimy black stuff, whatever that was. So in the movie it was easy enough for me to fall through the stairs and into the stuff. But I think that's the only point where the picture bends the truth."

Brolin is satisfied with the picture, though, refusing to praise it to the skies but saying, "I think it came out fairly good, especially since there was nothing happening in the house that couldn't be explained away. There wasn't a good foundation for a picture, but the red herrings slipped in every five minutes seem to work. . .The Lutzs also seem very satisfied that the movie was fairly accurate."

Accurate or not, Brolin makes a spooky impression with his psychological character shifts. Thanks to his performance and what he described as "four stages of makeup and wardrobe," his character appears to slowly disintegrate into near-insanity before our eyes. Co-star Rod Steiger did not fare as well, though, and Brolin puts the blame on sloppy editing.

"The big problem you're always going to have with a 110-page script," he noted, "is that you have to axe (cut out) some things. Most of the reviews have panned Steiger for overplaying his part, for being too theatrical as the priest. But what the critics don't know is that all of Steiger's best scenes, his calmer ones at the beginning of the movie, were cut out. I think that was a big mistake."

Such loyalty is to be expected, as Brolin has suffered his own problems in the past with supernatural movies.

"You're getting back to a movie I did called 'The Car,' aren't you?" he interrupted. "And that is certainly not one of my favorite movies. I went into that film hoping there would be more allegory, more corollaries to the Bible. But the director (Elliot Silverstein) never got a handle on it. That picture never read right from the beginning. I never wanted to do it. But my wife, my agent, my lawyer — everyone — told me there would be times when I would not be the best judge; they advised me to do it.

"As a result, I accepted the part and 'The Car' is the only film that I do not feel responsible for. Even 'Gable and Lombard' I can feel good about, but not 'The Car.'"

Not everyone had good feelings about "Gable and Lombard," though. While this critic found "The Car" to be utter garbage and "Gable and Lombard" to be a pleasantly entertaining diversion, most of the other reviewers in the nation failed to find a difference between the two films. Brolin and co-star Jill Clayburgh have yet to stop taking heat for their performances as Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, but Brolin maintains the people who have seen the film have liked it.

He said, "I think the film's reception since it has been shown on HBO (Home Box Office pay television) bears me out. People stayed away from the theaters in droves because of the reviews, yet I still think the problem was that too many critics expected to see 'The Rhett Butler Story.' And that was wrong. Gable was Rhett Butler for only 90 days in his life. I wanted to point out the fallacies in the man."

Nevertheless, despite his celebrated flops and successes, Brolin is still recalled by many for his television work with Robert Young on "Marcus Welby." Not that the show boasted his best acting, but there's no denying the sex appeal of Steve Kiley's bedside manner built up a strong and loyal female following. Brolin holds little regard for those who admire his good looks, saying, "I refuse to cater to it. Those people don't like me for my work. Other actors may revel in that sort of thing, but it's not me."

And ask him if he'd consider doing more series work on TV and his answer comes back like it was shot out of a cannon: "No. No way. Not ever."

He explained, "I know television inside and out. And while I hope people like Abby Mann can open up TV like the Coppolas and Friedkins have opened up the movies, I just don't think it will happen. . .I won an Emmy for the first ("Marcus Welby") show I did, but I don't think the next 179 episodes did a solitary thing for me. Not much good came out of that show. The only thing I can say looking back is that if I hadn't done 'Welby' I would have had to do 'Alias Smith and Jones,' since that was the next Universal project to come along.

"I was under contract to Universal at the time.

"But the situation has even gotten worse. Nowadays TV actors are asked to memorize 14 pages of dialogue per day for shooting, and that's just not reasonable. Budgets are being cut, not increased. And just look at what happened to a great project like 'Shogun.' It was talked up as a feature film with Billy Friedkin directing, so why have they signed a week-to-week director to handle it? Instead of a feature film, it's now a 10-hour TV movie. And most of these extended runs on TV turn out like 'The Bastard': all melodramatic and soapy."

He continued, "TV is in the hands of Wall Street. The lawyers are in charge; the heads of the corporations are controlling the art. It's like, to give you an example, I commission someone to paint a portrait. He finishes and I say, 'No, that's not quite it.' And I pick up a brush and paint over his work. OK, I'm the guy paying for it, but does that give me the right to think I know more about the artistic value?"

Rather than letting the frustrations nag at him, Brolin opts to forget the business by hopping in a 300 horsepower Datsun Z and racing on the International Motor Sports Association circuit. Indeed, during the interview he seemed just as excited about his plans to race in Germany as he was about his chances for stardom via "The Amityville Horror" and his next release, a big-budget thriller called "Night Of The Juggler."

"I'm going to race on a German course called Nurvergring," he said, "which has to be the most dangerous track in the world. There are 170 turns and curves, and no one's been able to memorize them all yet."

And how did all this begin? Laughing softly, he said, "It started with a celebrity race two years ago. I thought it would be a cute thing to do on a Sunday. But it turned out to be something else. These guys (race drivers) are all out for blood, and I must say I like it."

BROLIN ON EDGE — As time wears on, James Brolin looks more and more mentally disturbed in the popular new horror film called "The Amityville Horror," currently playing to sellout crowds at the South Plains Cinema in Lubbock. A-J entertainment editor William Kerns recently spoke with Brolin by telephone, questioning the actor about his career in both feature films and television. Brolin's comments are printed in today's Real To Reel column.

Jethro Going It Alone!

KERRVILLE (Special) — For nearly 40 years the comedy team of Homer and Jethro entertained American radio audiences, record buyers and movie goers, keeping them rolling in the aisles with funny songs, stories and routines. When Homer (Henry D. Haynes) died, Jethro Burns decided to work alone.

Now, in 1979, Jethro Burns has emerged as one of the world's leading mandolin players. His playing always sparked the old comedy team's arrangements of hits like "Five Minutes More," "Baby Its Cold Outside" and "Hound Dog," and now 20 years after those funny hits, Jethro has become one of the most respected musicians in the nation touring with the Masters Festival of Music, which stars Chet Atkins, Boots Randolph and Floyd Cramer.

Burns has not lost his sense of humor and it will certainly be in evidence when he makes a rare Texas personal appearance Labor Day weekend at the Kerrville Bluegrass Festival at Rod Kennedy's Quiet Valley Ranch.

While his jokes and stories are very much a part of his on stage life even to this day, Jethro's main effort at Kerrville will be as a special guest performer and as a judge in the first Buck White International Mandolin Championships, along with such mandolin players as Roland White of the Country Gazette, Joe Nuyens from Antwerp, Belgium, Raymond McLain of the McLain Family Band, Ricky Scaggs of Emmy Lou Harris' Hot Band, Jesse McReynolds of Jim & Jesse and the Virginia Boys. Mandolins will be joined by guitars, banjos, fiddles, string basses and other stringed instruments as the music rolls off the stage of the outdoor theater in more than 40 hours of concerts during the four days and nights, Aug. 30 through Sept. 2, at the sixth annual festival.

Also joining the lineup will be such bluegrass giants as The Lewis Family, Buck White and the Downhome Folks (with dobro star Jerry Douglas), spectactular Japanese fiddle player Shoji Tabuchi, Peter Rowan and legendary Texas bluegrass fiddler Tex Logan on his first visit to his home state in seven years.

Festival tickets include free camping on the ranch and the festival is a family affair. For complete information, fans should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Bluegrass, Box 1466, Kerrville, Texas 78028.

FILMMAKER VISITS LUBBOCK — Filmmaker Efrain Gutierrez, based with Chicano Arts film Enterprises in San Antonio, recently released his third film. Titled "Run, Tecato, Run," the picture investigates the heroin addicts in the Mexican-American community. In a personal interview with A-J staffer Esther Longoria, Gutierrez spoke not only about his own career, but also about his feelings concerning Hollywood's treatment of the Mexican-American. His new film was inspired by seeing friends become addicted to heroin. "Run, Tecato, Run" which Gutierrez also produced and acted in, is now playing at the State Theater in Lubbock. Filmmaker Gutierrez Offers Candid Look At Heroin Addiction

San Antonio filmmaker Efrain Gutierrez says it's important that his movies deal with the realities of the Mexican-American lifestyle, and in his latest production, "Run, Tecato, Run," he shows a candid look at heroin addiction in the Mexican-American community. ("Tecato" is a Mexican-American slang word for "junkie.")

The movie, Gutierrez' third film, is currently playing at the State Theatre in Lubbock and at theaters in Plainview and Odessa.

Gutierrez, 31, president of Chicano Arts Film Enterprises, a small movie company based in San Antonio, produced, directed and stars in the movie.

"I have friends and relatives who are ruining their lives because of heroin, and I felt I couldn't make another movie until touching on this subject," said Gutierrez during a poolside interview at the Red Raider Inn.

The young moviemaker also said that a lot of Mexican-Americans didn't like the movie because they didn't want to be reminded of the problem with heroin in their community.

"I am just trying to deal with the reality. ...that heroin addiction is a major problem in our community, and they just don't want to see it," Gutierrez said.

"With my movie, if I can get the kids to stay away from heroin and get the addicts to see that there are different persons and places to turn to for help ... that would be something, that's important to me," said Gutierrez, who hopes his film portrays the heroin addict as a human being with real feelings.

In researching the movie, the filmmaker talked to heroin addicts as well as the police. "The addicts who have seen my movie tell me that it's the closest thing to their life that they've seen," he said.

"In my movie, I want people to get a look at the daily routine of a heroin addict — his problems, his feelings, whether they be inhuman or human," Gutierrez said, stressing that the film is positive because one character finds an answer to his addiction.

Gutierrez said that he was advised against making "Run, Tecato, Run" by a friend of his with Universal Studios. "He told me that Hollywood didn't like to deal with the subject of drugs. I guess a lot of people think I'm crazy because I picked this subject.

"My film is something different for the industry."

Gutierrez sees that industry (Hollywood) as not being able to capture the Mexican-American lifestyle and says that's why he formed Chicano Arts Film Enterprises in San Antonio four years ago.

"I just wanted to open up the movie market. The market is opening up with films like 'Boulevard Nights' and 'Gang,' but from the point of view of the anglo.

"When I formed the company, I was determined that whether I did something big or small, I was going to depict the Chicano lifestyle accurately," Gutierrez said.

About four years ago, Gutierrez made his first movie, "Please, Don't Bury Me Alive," which grossed $158,000. With that money, he said he was able to finance his second motion picture, "Amor Chicano es Para Siempre."

"Run, Tecato, Run" was made on a $60,000 budget.

The young filmmaker said that by having his own company he is able to do what he wants without having to answer to a major studio. However, he said he hopes to eventually work with a major studio on a project.

"A lot of Chicanos don't accept my movies because they are not 'Hollywood' and, if at some point I have to work for Hollywood to get those Chicanos, I will," Gutierrez said.

"I wouldn't like to work for a major studio fulltime. I always hope to keep my own film company going. But sure, I'd like to get the worldwide exposure that only a major Hollywood company can give you. I wouldn't mind working for Paramount. ...I like to make money, too."

He said his next project will be what he calls a "Chicano-style western" about Gregorio Cortez, who was a famous outlaw in South Texas during the early 1900s.

"I think Chicanos, like everybody else, like to be entertained first at the movies. That's why I want to do this movie. Cortez was a colorful man who was able to capture the heart of the Mexicano as well as the Anglo."

Gutierrez will meet with representatives of Universal Studios concerning the Cortez project in September.

Reflecting on his career, Gutierrez said that it was about 11 years ago that he left San Antonio and went to Hollywood to become "a big star." However, he said he mostly received bit parts in various television programs.

"I found there was no future for Chicano actors, that the few good parts were going to the actors with a name and the only parts for Chicanos were fakey. I remember a casting director once told me, 'We were forced to accept the blacks, but I'll be damned if we'll be forced to accept you all.'"

Gutierrez left Hollywood and performed with a Mexican-American theater group, which traveled throughout California and the Midwest, for three years and then became interested in filmmaking.

With his movies, Gutierrez says he hopes to provide direction for his people.

"Lots of Chicanos have told me that they are confused, that they don't have any direction to their life. I see the media as providing that direction. Any influence I may have is in the movies I make. Just maybe my films will help a Chicano understand himself better."

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — The Vermont Symphony Orchestra, the nation's oldest state symphony, at 45 is still a parttime operation struggling to go fulltime. Incorporated in 1934 and designated the state symphony in 1939, it has long been noted as a fine regional orchestra.

"We don't intend to compete with the Boston symphony," said music Efrain Guigui. But he said, "There is a need and a demand in the state of Vermont for a permanent orchestra that would be busy every day of the year, playing symphony concerts together with a ballet or an opera.

"We are aiming for that, though I have learned in New England things move slow.

"I've learned here that music is being spelled M-O-N-E-Y," he said. "Because we don't provide a living (for musicians), there is constant turnover from year to year."

Each player receives roughly $1,500 annually.

"We are able to bring excellent musicians to this area who are attracted by the beauty of the state and our music making.

"But then they don't stay because they have to make a living. Yet those musicians would stay in Vermont for half the salaries they would get in another state."

The conductor told of an "excellent cello player" who bought an expensive instrument and had to leave the Vermont orchestra to make enough money to pay for it.

"He was chosen by the Cincinatti orchestra with a salary of about $20,000," Guigui said. "He told us he would have stayed here for half of that, but he had to go."

Guigui and Joel Gratwick, the orchestra's executive director, went without pay during their first six months of work for the symphony. They now take home only half as much as others in their line of work.

"It's really been a struggle but we're getting there," Gratwick said. "We are still working well below the level paid to most because we really believe in it."

The orchestra attempts to acquaint Vermonters with "good music," said Guigui, who studied under Furtwangler, von Karajan and Klemperer, and who has conducted the American Ballet Theater Orchestra and the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico.

He said the programming is geared to a mixed audience — Those who have never heard a symphony and those who have heard the best.

Also, Guigui said, "We give a platform for local soloists and, when financially possible, for local composers. You don't have to be famous to be good."

Asbury Jukes Due To Begin Reaping Rewards From New Album

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

Southside Johnny Lyon proclaims at the onset of his new album that he wants everything, which is precisely what he and his group The Asbury Jukes will begin reaping if their new album "The Jukes" (Mercury) is as successful commercially as it is musically.

Southside and the Jukes have recorded four albums now, but none of the first three match "The Jukes" for its subtle qualities, all of which add up to a departure for the band. For starters, the group journeyed to the legendary Muscle Shoals recording studios in Alabama, which is a long way away from the group's home in Asbury Park, N.J.

The change in recording locales brings a fresh perspective to the band's sound, the kind of progressive change a group can make only when it takes in new environments. Add new producer Barry Beckett to this change, and Southside Johnny and the Jukes' forward thrust is made all the more successful.

Beckett's seasoned production results from extensive work both as a musician and a producer. Beckett records the 11-member group more accurately than his predecessor, Miami Steve Van Zant, Bruce Springsteen's rhythm guitarist and Southside Johnny's manager.

The outside influences of Muscle Shoals and producer Beckett are readily evident, but do not provide the quantity of change personally committed to by Southside and the Jukes. While the switch of recording venues and producers may serve as the catalyst for many of the band's internal changes, they do not prove as effective as, say, the ascension of guitarist Billy Rush, bassist Allen Berger and singer Lyon as the band's chief songwriters.

In the past, Southside and the Jukes leaned heavily upon original compositions froms friends like Van Zant and Springsteen, and upon cover versions of several traditional rock influences. "The Jukes" marks the natural progression almost any rock band makes from the days of sparse compositional activity to a time when the group's songwriters are working at a prodigious rate.

Chief among the group's songwriters is guitarist Billy Rush, whose compositions prove an uneven blend of naive lyrics which touch blindly but accurately upon key sentiments and desires. Rush's material is not to be classified as only poor or fair, in truth, the guitarist shows a good deal of potential, especially with such imaginative rock 'n' roll numbers as "Security," on which Rush sings the lead vocals, "Wait in Vain," a hook laden ballad featuring an intricate, delicate lead guitar solo by Rush, and the dynamic album closer "Vertigo."

Ironically, some of the album's strongest material comes from bassist Allen Berger. Ironic because Berger is in on the writing of only two of the album's 10 songs, whereas Rush wrote or co-wrote eight of them. Berger and Lyon collaborated on the hauntingly urban "The Time" and "I Remember Last Night," a song which is perhaps the first real modern ode to the workingman's relief — the nightclub.

After all, the nightclubs are where the music is happening these days, and the nightclubs are where Southside Johnny and The Asbury Jukes built a solid reputation as an explosive club act.

The group is still making that sort of music, though it no longer lets the influences dominate its sound. The influences are mere traces now, though those traces hint heavily of the group's past and tradition. Yet the maturity that has overtaken Lyon's harsh vocal delivery have helped lend musicality to the group's roadhouse rock 'n' roll.

The addition of rhythm guitarist Joel Gramolini allows lead guitarist Rush to take more assertive, more confident lead solos, which he does primarily on side two. His best work comes during the album's last two songs, "Wait in Vain" and "Vertigo," in which Rush must show within a span of eight minutes just how diverse his guitar playing can be. He is articulate but fragile on "Wait in Vain," while his guitar work is firm and pointed on "Vertigo."

Of course the advancement of the five-piece horn section doesn't hurt either. The brass section's tight, snappy arrangements and phrasing complement the slick, urban feel of the group's now original music. The band is no longer the interpretive vehicle it once was, it now depends more on its inner strenghts and talents to supply the impetus behind each song, thus the freedom enjoyed by the musicians shows in the confidence of their work, especially the crisp brass on songs "I'm So Anxious," "The Time" and "Vertigo."

Little doubt remains that Southside Johnny and The Asbury Jukes have weathered well changes in record companies (from Epic to Mercury), recording studios, producers and composers. These are all big steps to take, especially when a band attempts to take them in one quantum jump.

Many may point to the experience behind the band, saying that such is a change Southside and the Jukes should have made earlier. This is true to an extent, though one can't expect every band that lands a recording contract to produce an album as calculatedly correct as Boston's or Dire Straits' debuts. You can't have everything all the time.

But don't tell that to Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, they're going for it all.

Occasionally great painters take the time to review basic principles of design, color and techniques, sharing long practiced lessons in special classes or with former students who have lagged in their careers.

Several times I have worked with artists as they revitalize their own energies through such efforts. At a recent demonstration, a renowned portrait artist reverted to academic study of basic shapes painted in black and white. From a setup sphere and cube under artifical light, the painter spent 45 minutes doing what beginning painters do. Afterwards, when the live model took her pose, he went into a demonstration of expanded facial features, painting only the front plane of the face about four times actual size.

It was as if observing the model through a magnifying glass. All the while he was applying the principles of the black and white illustration to the color study.

This artist was exercising his eyes in the art of "seeing after looking." Reverting to the beginning of all painting, he humbled the best among them including himself. His discussion of color, its mixes and reactions one to the other recalled the boring but essential practice of the "scale of painting."

A dynamic gentleman reveled in the demonstration. At one point, under his breath, he remarked, "so that is where my hang-up is. I never would have figure it out!" The significance of simplicity touched a vital cord.

The color studies on a very large canvas before the group, reminded the painters of elementary work. Color spots took on new meaning when discussed in context of placement on different facial planes. Warm and cool tones were subdued or exaggerated from simple mixes. Truth was the essence of the hour. At times during my own classes, I have students repeat similar instructions.

On another such occasion, an elderly master of painting, woefully stated after a session, "I wish there was somewhere I could go and sit through just what I have given you. Seems I am always on the giving side and I would like to have my own well replenished from the outside." Plaintive to the core, he could not receive from his student what he had so freely given.

The basic goals of painting demonstrated were: (1) to discover the truth; (2) to learn how to see; and (3) to achieve self-mastery. The painting itself is but a by-product. With enthusiasm and hard work and a full-blown curiosity, painting improves.

Nick Nolte Talks Pain, Pills, 'North Dallas 40'

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

DALLAS — It was going on 2 p.m. when Nick Nolte, looking as though he'd either just tumbled out of bed or never made it into one, ambled into a Loew's Anatole Hotel meeting room to greet a half dozen members of the press and discuss his participation in what could be one of the year's best and most controversial films, "North Dallas Forty." Sitting through the perfunctory introductions, he pulled a crumpled pack of Marlboros from the front pocket of his jeans, declined coffee in favor of a Budweiser, concentrated his steel blue eyes on the first questioner and explained why he looked better in person than on screen.

"I've lost around 30 pounds since the movie. I was up there around 205 or 210. I'd put on about 40 pounds for the part because I wanted to create a guy who'd been playing for a long time and had that heavy-weighted muscle. I tried to get the effect of a little blubber, a little scarred-up tissue, a little dissipation. I wanted Elliott to look a little beat-up from living with the pain."

Nolte was referring to his portrayal of wide receiver Phil Elliott, a professional football player who tries for too long to deny that the sport he loves is actually a business. Deeply committed to the message of the picture, Nolte soon reveals that his dedication stems not only from the three years he spent trying to get the picture made, but also from the obvious corollaries to his own profession.

"I first got interested because of Pete Gent's novel," he said. "I had played football in college and, like most men, been involved with athletics since I was a kid. But it wasn't just the football that appealed to me. It was the story of an individual involved in a structure that was big business, with the individual forced to relate to the business from his own talent. An actor really has to deal with the same thing. He has no chance of understanding how the film industry operates until he's achieved a degree of success and, as far as business is concerned, he's working in quasi-ignorance.

"So I felt Pete had captured a universality there."

What Pete Gent had also captured was the wrath of the Dallas Cowboys management and players. Gent's novel was reportedly based on his experiences while playing with the Cowboys, and the team did not take his references to drugs and parties and uncaring bureaucracy lightly. Many viewers are already pointing at what they feel are obvious parallels to Tom Landry, Don Meredith and Clint Murchison, but Nolte thinks the object should be to look at the collective forest and not just one tree. That is, the strain on a football player, any football player, is what's important.

"Obviously, Pete wrote about the Cowboys," he said. "But in the film, the team (called the North Dallas Bulls) doesn't have to be the Cowboys. We're not so specific; we're not trying to create another Tom Landry or Duane Thomas. Our goal was simply to show an individual whose religion was catching the ball; it was what he survived by. He was told to subjugate himself within the collective game and faced a common conflict.

"Look, we're talking about ballplayers who spend 24 years of their lives gearing themselves for pro ball, where the average tenure is only four years. It's an isolated life and then, boom, they're out of it with nothing to go on to. We're showinga guy who may be 24 and has to come out of college and negotiate a contract with a 55 year old businessman, and that's ludicrous.

"It's just been in the last few years that agents have come into the picture, and then there's the question of whether they're fair with their clients. Yet football is pushed upon the public as a sport. Is it? Or is it a business? Or is it both?"

Gathering input from the 19 professional football players who helped with the film, as well as his own interest in the game, Nolte is convinced the pain and injuries are not exaggerated. And the pain is an important part of the film, as evidenced when Elliott is told he's given nothing back to the game. Nolte said, "Hollywood's approach to sports in the past has been to show a cripple overcoming an injury or an aging football player, something like that. But no one's dealt with the political situation.

"Face it, the chances of being hurt are very real. (Dick) Butkus can take his foot and turn it almost completely around, yet he lost his $2 million lawsuit against Chicago. Pete Gent can't straighten out his back to this day. Had a lot of football players gone to war and come back with these injuries, they'd be on 50 or 60 per cent disability. That's just part of the game. It goes with the territory.

"Now, the next question is obviously 'why put up with it?' And that's one of the things Phil Elliott is trying to figure out in the film. He's been trying to personalize the game, but to win on that level takes an absence of personalization."

Regarding the drug use in the film, the amphetamines and the deadening of injured muscles before the game, Nolte describes it as a mixture of fact and conjecture. "The main thing," he explained, "is that none of it is as out in the open as we depicted it. But the players will tell you it's there. If I was a real ballplayer, I wouldn't have had my knee shot up (with pain killers) in an open locker room. But we had to do it that way to show the manipulation.

"As for amphetamines, their use is kept pretty private now. Back in the '40s, you know, their use was pretty open; soldiers even got amphetamine packets before they went into battle. But the pills got a bad reputation in the '60s when the kids started melting them down and shooting them up."

Nolte talked with a great many players while making "North Dallas Forty," but trained almost exclusively with Oakland Raider wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff. He said, "The main thing I tried to get from Freddie was the intrigue of his mind, his artistry. He really is an artist. You see, my conception of Phil Elliott was a combination of Fred Biletnikoff and Dave Casper. Biletnikoff because he's studied the grace of running a pattern, and Casper because of his ability to make phenomenal catches that look like total abandonment."

The scene before the final game in which Nolte sits alone in the locker room, tossing a football into the air and catching it, also stemmed from his friendship with Biletnikoff. "That's what Freddie will do, basically. He takes a ball before the game, puts it in his hands and tries to form a relationship with the ball."

But whereas Nolte's involvement in the film comes as no surprise, the same can't be said for the casting of Lubbock-born nightclub singer Mac Davis as the team's quarterback. Asked whether Don Meredith, the actual quarterback involved and one who has developed a new career as an actor, had been considered for the role, Nolte responded, "Of course Meredith was approached. But Don didn't want to touch it. After all, it was not his view — it was Gent's view.

"Mac was considered because the role required a person keyed to personal success. Mac brought that quality. He tested for the role twice. I have to admit I was kind of reluctant to cast him because I thought people might associate us with the 'Semi-Tough' casting of an actor and a singer (Burt Reynolds and Kris Kristrfferson). But (director) Ted Kotcheff made the decision and, in this case, I think his instincts were quite right."

"North Dallas Forty" is already attracting heavy business, which has to please Nolte. First gaining fame through his participation in television's "Rich Man, Poor Man," he did have a successful film in Peter Yates' "The Deep." But even now, he labels the picture "sheer exploitation" and realizes more viewers were watching Jackie Bisset's wet T-shirts than him.

Then he made a truly brilliant film with actress Tuesday Weld called "Who Will Stop The Rain" — and nobody saw it.

"Yes, I felt it (Robert Stone's "Dog Soldiers," the book on which the film was based) was the best of the Vietnam war novels," he recalled, "and I felt we made a good movie. But it was a United Artists film and came out right when all the UA executives like Mike Medavoy were leaving the company. The new regime came in and didn't push the old product."

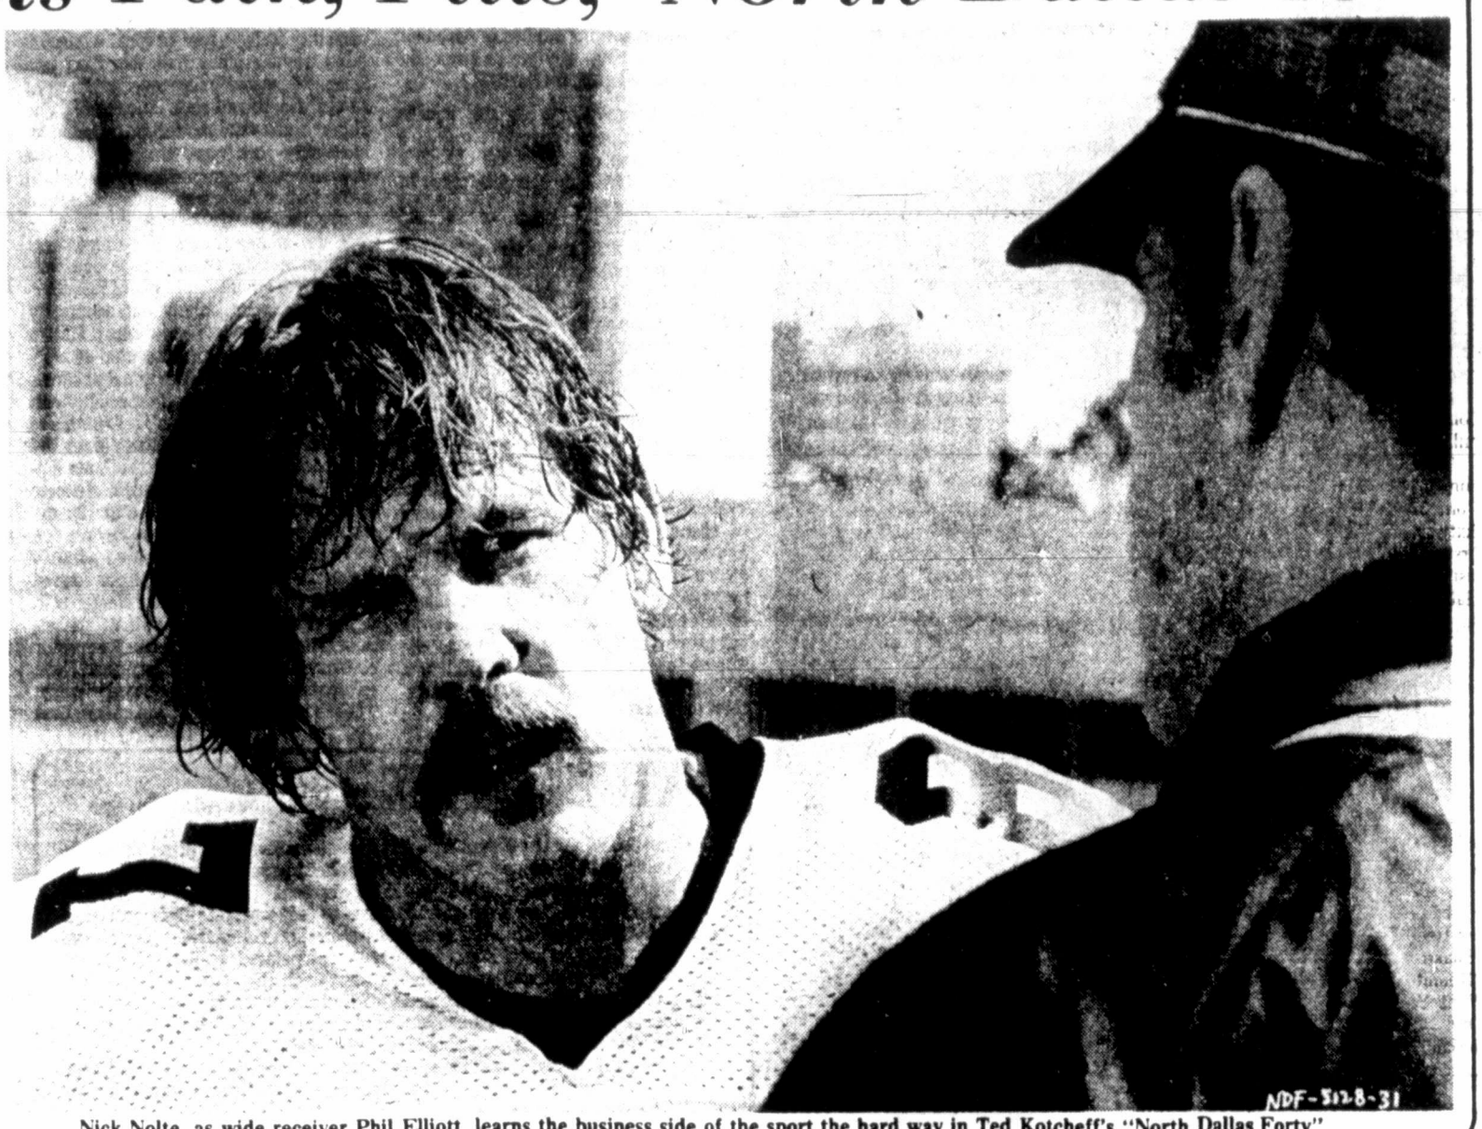
Nolte concluded, "A lot of films for big corporative structures are tax writeoffs anyway. The odds on making money with films is a gamble, and 'Who Will Stop The Rain' was made for only $5 million, so nobody was gonna lose any money. Anyway, 'Rain' was just pushed out and dumped. It played just a few places and then got yanked. It wasn't promoted."

Finishing his beer, the actor ran a hand through his uncombed hair and said he had no other big projects presently in mind. He lamented that certain aspects of "North Dallas Forty" had to be eliminated in the interests of time, citing the issue of racial predjudice in the NFL as one example. He talked a bit more about his vision of football players, not bothering to hide his respect and admiration. And when it came time to discuss his own popularity, his own lack of privacy, he laughed it off.

Like the pain that goes with football, Nolte feels pestering fans are part of an actors' territory — if he allows it. "Shoot no, it doesn't bother me," said the man whose lifestyle has been profiled in every gossip rag imaginable. "Why in the heck should a person get into acting, a public relations business, if he's going to balk at fan interest. I know that different journalists are going to treat me differently. Cosmopolitan may talk about me sexually; other magazines a different way.

"But as far as no privacy, do you mean like not being able to go out to a restaurant without getting hassled? 'Cause I don't believe in all that. That just doesn't happen unless you're going to a hooty-tooty fancy restaurant, and most people that go there are looking for recognition anyway.

"I don't have that problem. There's always a McDonald's around the corner, you know."



Nick Nolte, as wide receiver Phil Elliott, learns the business side of the sport the hard way in Ted Kotcheff's "North Dallas Forty"

Eight Records Certified 'Platinum' In First Six Months Of '79

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeature Writer

Single records, with one song on each side, played a stronger tune with record buyers than did the more expensive long-playing records or the LP's equivalent in prerecorded tape, during the first six months of 1979.

Eight single records were certified platinum by the Recording Industry Association of America in the first six months of 1979, up from five platinum singles in the first six months of last year. Thirty-eight singles were certified gold, compared with 29 in the first six months of last year.

A platinum single has sold two million copies. A gold single has sold one million.

Twenty-six LPs were certified platinum in the first half of this year, down from 37 in the same period last year. Sixty-six LPs were certified gold in the first half of this year, compared with 86 last year during the same six months. A platinum LP has sold one million copies, a gold LP has sold 500,000 copies.

The Bee Gees made two of the eight platinum singles, "Too Much Heaven" and "Tragedy." Others were "Hot Child in the City," Nick Gilder; "YMCA," Village People; "Do Ya Think I'm Sexy?," Rod Stewart; "I Will Survive," Gloria Gaynor; "Reunited," Peaches and Herb, and "Shake Your Body," the Jacksons.

Donna Summer had three of the 38 gold singles, "Hot Stuff," "Bad Girls" and "Heavens Knows," the latter one with Brooklyn Dreams. Peaches and Herb, Chic, Earth, Wind and Fire and the Bee Gees had two each. HY GARDENER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

NOW THAT ROCK STAR Rod Stewart's April bride, Alana Hamilton, has revealed she was pregnant at the wedding — and their baby is due in a couple of months — Rod can join our Famous Last Words Club: "When I can afford to stop touring," proclaimed the happy bridegroom after the wedding, "Alana and I are going to get around to making babies."

Q: Would Joe Namath have any interest now in becoming a football coach? — Micky N., Baltimore.

A: Unlikely. Upon retiring from the game, Joe made this passing remark on the subject: "It takes up too many hours to do it right!"

Q: It seems to us watching Menahem Begin on TV, he looks and sounds so much better than he used to. Has he secretly done something to improve his image? — Muriel and Sid Loring, Pittsburgh.

A: Yes. But it's not so secret. The Israeli leader's been taking lessons from former singer-actress Dorothy Sarnoff. (At her firm called Speech Dynamics, Inc., she coaches executives in their public appearance, delivery, etc.) For Begin, she prescribed new glasses and a new suit — blue instead of gray. She also showed him how to look into a camera, then filmed him in a mock press conference. Incidentally, the Nobel Prize-winning leader has decided that, come what may, he will leave politics at the age of 70. He's now 66.

Q: I once heard that Laurence Olivier was so superstitious that if he sees a black cat the night of a performance, it throws him off. Anything to this? — Mrs. Jerry Martin, Las Vegas.

A: Not at all. Sir Laurence prides himself on having no superstitions whatsoever. "I always deliberately walk under a ladder," he brags. "I spout lines from 'Macbeth' (supposedly a British actor's most terrible jinx) — I don't give a damn," he shrugs.

Q: I hear that there's a method today of imprinting our name and address on our teeth. My question is how and why? — Jesse R., St. Louis.

A: For permanent identification purposes. Teeth and other dental remains are just about as individual as fingerprints. Even identical twins often differ dentally. Currently, there seems to be interest in labeling all dental restorations — bridges, dentures, individual teeth — with a tombstone-like filling smaller than a pinhead. It would bear a name and address and could be located by X-rays.

Q: Wasn't it Charlie Chaplin who hurled the first pie in someone's face in a movie to get a laugh? — Mel Leeds, Long Beach, Calif.

A: No. It was silent film comedienne Mabel Normand. The story has it that she was sitting on a bench beside a custard pie that two stage carpenters had brought in with their lunch. She was watching cross-eyed comic Ben Turpin unsuccessfully trying to get a laugh in a scene. So, to be helpful, Mabel picked up the pie and threw it smack into Turpin's face. As his eyes emerged from the mushy mess, the people on the set roared with laughter. And pie-in-the-eye comedy was born.

New Books In Review

SANJO. By Evelyn Wilde Mayerson. Lippincott. 274 Pages. $8.95.

Evelyn Wilde Mayerson has created a character to love. A 34 year old mentally retarded woman named Sanjo.

Sanjo lives at home with her elderly parents, Ma and Poppy. When Ma suffers a stroke and dies, Poppy is unable to cope with his grief over her death and his responsibilities for caring for Sanjo. He decides to send Sanjo to an institution.

Sanjo does not understand that her mother has died. In her mind, "Ma sleeping. She tired" in the hospital. But she does understand that Ma is not home. And that upsets her deeply. Things she had learned to do for herself — like dressing — she forgets to do. Most of the time, she hangs her head on her chest and cries.

The activity of the institution brings Sanjo back to life. When she goes on a trip to a zoo, and is given a rabbit to hold, she finds that "the good feeling woke up." Gradually, she begins to make progress. She remembers to dress herself, and comb her hair and brush her teeth. And she also begins to learn new things. After four hours and 82 trials, she learns to make gift wrap ribbons in shop class.

The difficulties of living with and caring for a mentally retarded person are not ignored in this novel. Nor is the struggle by the mentally retarded to cope with life. When Sanjo sees two neighborhood children stealing her collection of Bugs Bunny comic books, she screams, "Bugs. Come back here." But the adults in the room believe she is yelling about insects and do not help her prevent the theft.

I was disappointed with the ending of the novel. While loving and being loved help everyonen enormously, it is not the ultimate solution for difficult, if not impossible, situations. However, for me, this book is a treasure. It is a book about feelings. Good feelings, bad feelings, and feelings that, in Sanjo's words, "Hurts me."

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS. By Elizabeth Hardwick. Random House. 151 Pages. $8.95.

"Sleepless Nights" is a beautifully — almost poetically — written novel. But it must be read with the closest attention.

Novelist Elizabeth Hardwick constantly shifts her focus throughout so that the reader again and again finds himself being moved through both time and space.

The effect is much like listening to a close friend tell the story of her life, but not in chronological order. Instead, a vignette about something that happened in the distant past recalls a similar event or person who appearedmuch later in the narrator's life.

This constant movement, this jumping about from years long gone to years newly passed, from New York City to Boston to Maine to the South, is mildly disconcerting at first, but once the reader catches onto Miss Hardwick's rhythm little effort is involved in following her as she weaves her way through a life.

The narrator of the novel is a woman, a woman with wonderful recall, gently spinning out the story of her many days. She tells of childhood, family, people she has known, people she has loved and very much about herself.

Miss Hardwick writes with a clean precision that enables her to sum up a life in relatively little space. She also writes with a wonderful gift for description, enabling her, for example, to describe faces seen in the past and faces seen in the present in this telling manner: "At that time, these loosely connected persons had about them an air that was sometimes thick and dumb and yet passive; the faces on the streets had not yet frozen into an expression of danger and assault, of malice and fearlessness, the glaze of death in daylight."

ONLY CHILDREN. By Alison Lurie. Random House. 259 Pages. $9.95.

Artifice is the first word that comes to mind after reading Alison Lurie's latest book.

There are eight characters in the story which is set at the time of the Depression. Bill and Honey; their daughter, Mary Ann; Dan and Celia, their daughter, Lolly, and Dan's son, Lennie, all spend a Fourth of July weekend at Anna's farm in the Catskill Mountains of New York State.

Ms. Lurie switches back and forth from a child's eye view replete with childish dialogue and fantasy, to the adult's replete with childish dialogue and fantasy. This artifice, while seeming to put the reader inside the character's headn also seems to maintain a sense of estrangement resulting in a lack of empathy for any one individual.

Estrangement appears to be the second "key" word to describe this book. The adults communicate with each other on a very superficial level without any understanding of who or what the other person is. Anna is more like a will-o'-the wisp than a solid entity.

And the children: there is a definite generation gap which affects Lolly's mental health adversely. Mary Ann manages to come across as the most practical and soundest of the lot.

If you want a book to sink your teeth into, this isn't it.

PRIZE STORIES 1979: The O. Henry Awards. Edited by William Abrahams. Doubleday. 334 pages. $10.

Even though its outlets continue to dwindle, the short story still is far from being an endangered species.

Thanks to the many so-called little magazines and a few major magazines, writers of the form still have a place to showcase their work and that work, judging from the 21 stories in this volume, is getting better all the time.

The names of some of the writers whose work is included here are well known, but the majority are not. Well known or not, they all write well and what they have to say is well worth the reading.

The first-prize story, Gordon Weaver's "Getting Serious," is a finely etched study of how the grand dreams of youth flicker, fade and die as the years rush by and all of a sudden a person finds himself old and none of the things he dreamed about came to pass.

The theme is similar in Joyce Carol Oates' "In the Autumn of the Year." Here an old and respected woman poet suddenly must face the fact that the idealized love of her youth was not that way at all but, at best, a rather sordid thing.

In "Oh, Joseph, I'm So Tired," Richard Yates beautifully writes of love gone sour and dreams shattered. Set in the Depression, this bittersweet tale of the death of hope is narrated by a small boy whose only solace is "our mother was ours; we were hers..."

Admirers of the short-story form will find much to engage them in this fine collection.

— PHIL THOMAS, AP

FOR BETTER AND FOR WORSE. By Myrna Blyth. Putnam. 304 Pages. $9.95.

Myrna Blyth's new novel is a worthy and witty successor to "Cousin Suzanne," remembered for the fast and funny reading it provided a season or two ago.

The tale is told with earthy humor and rapier-sharp word pictures of New York and New Yorkers. Her career is in the perfumed jungle of women's magazines, where jealousies and ambition make job survival a desperate game. His is in the executive suite of a major corporation.

Myrna Blyth continues to grow as a novelist. "For Better and For Worse" probes deeper and more sensitively than her previous work.

THE MINI AT PLAY

Chess fans nowadays often ask: "How good is a mini chess computer? Will it really help improve my game?" I believe the mini's might help a beginner — or a sailor looking for an opponent in the middle of the night, somewhere on a slow boat to China.

opponent, which shows the style these mini chess computers play today.

(a) Black underestimates the danger on the Kingside. He should anticipate the advance of White's KBP by 14...K-R1; 15. P-KB4, P-B3.

(b) Not 18...B-B1; 19. Q-N4, K-R1 because of 20. N-Q6, but 19...B-N3 hangs on.

(c) 19...K-R1 loses to 20.NxNP, NxN, 21. P-K6.

(d) Suddenly, it's all over. If 28...K-R1; or 28...K-R2; then 29.BxP soon mates.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. PxP, Q-Q2, 2. N-N4 mate, or 1. PxP, NxN; 2. P-K8 equals Q mate, or 1. PxP, N-N4; 2. N-Q5 mate, etc.

the ¢oin BOX

By NORMAN M. DAVIS

FOR SOME YEARS the quarter-dollar issued from 1892 through 1916 was called the "Barber, or Morga, quarter." The Liberty head slightly resembles the one George Morgan drew for the 1978 silver dollar.

He did the work in 1891. The obverse shows a beautiful head of Liberty facing right. She wears a liberty cap, a wreath, and a small coronet inscribed "Liberty." At the top rim is "In God We Trust." The date is below, and 13 six-pointed stars are arranged six at the left rim and seven at the right.

Barber based this design on some French medal designs, according to the "Coin World Almanac."

His reverse design makes this quarter look simultaneously old and new. It's based on the nation's Great Seal, which was used as the starting point for some early U.S. coins' designs. The President's seal, basis for the current Kennedy half-dollar's reverse, is somewhat similar.

The quarter's reverse shows an eagle with wings raised slightly and stretched toward the coin's rim. The beak holds the center of a banner inscribed "E Pluribus Unum." A U.S. shield is on the chest. The talons (claws) hold an olive branch and a bundle of arrows.

These coins are the same size as today's quarter, but about 10 percent heavier. They are 90 percent silver and 10 percent copper.

Little Country Store Grows With Times In Michigan Farm Town

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

CLIMAX, Mich. (UPI) — The cracker barrel is gone. So are the spittoons. And an American myth is broken.

The Sinclair Market, once the main street general store hub of this farm town between Battle Creek and Kalamazoo, is one of those century-old family general stores that are said in myth to be fading away, victim of the supermarket, the coming of the shopping mall and the going of small town life.

"I didn't think it would work," said Newell Sinclair, 66. "I was wrong. Progress works."

His son Mark, 31, this year yanked the general store from its 110-year-old stand in a white building in the main street and moved it onto a three-acre site at the edge of town. The Sinclair Market now stands 23 cinder bricks high, stocks some 7,000 items and is helping Climax toward a renaissance.

Back in town, the paint of yesteryear has not yet faded from the red brick hall where a Climax man once set national Packard and Studebaker sales records. As Amerina shifted more urban than rural, he switched to Mercedes-Benz. Don't giggle.

This land of southern Michigan makes men rich. The flats are broken by shiny metal silos holding the alfalfa, corn, soybeans and other crops of treasure. This is a bountiful plain where generations of farm families proudly inscribe their names big on the shingles of the factory-sized barns.

See "Rumsey" on a roof. See "Vosburg" written big. Detroit is only half a day away but the land is rich and the Mercedes of Stuttgart were sold in Climax. Until the day the Mercedes folk decided the Climax showroom lacked class.

Away went the auto dealership. Climax grimaced. Mark Sinclair, raised above the store his great-grandfather founded and that his father, Newell, operated, went off to Michigan State in Lansing and studied business.

But even in high school he had realized the town general store was too small. Home from college, he talked bigness to his father. "Dad said I could either re-do or rebuild what we had. But I had no money. So I worked for him and saved every cent."

In Climax a man married in his teens. Mark's dream was so big his wallet sp thion, that he waited until he was 24 before marrying his Ann and together they banked.

Mark was 30 when he made his move last July. "I went into the First National Bank of Michigan and asked for a loan and gave them a stack of papers this thick," he said. Mark showed two inches between his right thumb and forefinger.

"Every week for six weeks they would phone and asked for another paper. Summer died and Ann and I had a little fret. But in September the bank called and said yes."

With the loan, Mark and Ann bought acreage across the tracks south of town from Larry Knowles, a farmer "who really didn't need the money the corps were bringing," Mark said. The couple bought the store and inventory from Newell; "He's 66 and we didn't want him liable for anything just in case."

Mark sat totaling sales sheets and bills in the glass closet of his office, just beside the three cash register counters of the new store. Newell was busy at a counter, bagging groceries.

Newell carried Mrs. Ward Nay's groceries to her auto, marveled aloud over the family reunion photograph she pulled from her purse —"Why, Mrs. Nay, it looks more like a town than a family, there are so many" — and she smiled, and walked back through the automatic electric doors into the store and to his son.

"Mark," said his father, "You were right."

Mark shook his father's hand. The son said the spittoons and the cracker barrel are gone — "The crackers really were pretty stale" —but the elderly of Climax, once suspicious, have begun driving to the new market as they once walked to the old store. And the new market has the community bulletin board and there is Mark's father, the cheerleader.

Mark said, "I was pretty worried about the town people. Oh, a few did hold back but they drove past a few times and now they're back. As a matter of fact, going from general store to suburban market has brought us new business from Scotts, Fulton, Galesburg and East LeRoy."

A check of customers in the aisles, pushing carts, showed housewives pleased they no longer had to drive to Kalamazoo for supermarket prices. A Climax realtor came in to thank Mark; another newly married couple had moved into town, attracted by the unrushed life and the promise shown by the building of Climax' first apartment house and the opening of the new store.

In town, the empty old store sits, for sale. The clock above the front porch is the only thing alive in the building. "I'm not about to shut off that clock," said Mark. "You don't punch a town's nostalgia."

His father laughed. "That's my son, Mark the store president," he said. "Me, my title is father."

Across the street from the empty old shop is the still thriving local hardware store, complete with bearded owner Alfred Hoover and a cat named Pete. "Oh, Sinclair and I were like Macy's and Gimbel's for years. But, God bless 'em, their move means this town ain't had its climax yet," Hoover said.

Salt Free Food Put On Market

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A Major manufacturer not usually associated with diet foods is introducing two granulated bouillons with no salt added. They are products whose time has come, says Mary E. Murphy, the company's manager of product information. She says the products should be helpful to hersons who are dieting, watching their salt intake or those wht simply don't like salt. Each 25 8-ounce jar of chicken or beef bouillon contains enough granules for 21 8-ounce servings. The chicken variety contains 5 milligrams of sodium per serving and the beef, 10 mg. If the rars are resealed tightly after each use, shelf life is about 2 1/2 years, depending on storage conditions, Ms. Murphy says.

'PASSING THROUGH'

Hang The Man!

By MARILYN HOLMES
A-J Correspondent

A true story that drifted this way from California recently is just too funny to remain unpublished.

As the rest of the country knows by now, Los Angeles residents have been dealing with outrageously long gasoline lines while paying inflated prices for the precious fuel. Patience is a word that these hurry-up urbanites long go dropped from their vocabulary.

So, nerves are already taut when a driver, prepared with thermos and magazines, pulls into the back of a lengthy line that will not edge up to a gasoline pump for maybe four more hours.

One housewife was obeying a city ordinance by leaving space in front of a residential driveway, when along came a jerk who butted into line in front of her.

Furious, she stormed out of her car, marched up to his, and pounded on the window. Suddenly deaf, he stared straight ahead. The man in front of the new arrival then bailed out of his car to join the outraged protest. He, too, banged on the window, shouting for the cheat to get out of line. The villain ignored them all.

BY THAT TIME, A disgruntled small crowd representing other cars in the line had clustered at the scene of the crime. An old-fashioned Western lynching was brewing.

Then the law arrived.

The police officer dispatched everyone back to their cars as he issued a citation to the culprit. But, lo and behold, the lawman drove away without making the cad get out of the gasoline line where he and his vehicle smugly remained.

From behind the wheel of her car, our housewife stared at the back of the villain's head. She stewed. She contemplated. She considered that the old family car was about to be replaced by a brand new one.

Then, she did it.

She revved the engine, backed up for momentum, and charged, smacking the rear of the offender's car. His head snapped backwards. Still, he refused to budge. She backed up and charged again.

HORNS UP AND DOWN THE gasoline line began blasting with encouragement and in celebration of justice. People walked up from all directions to check out the commotion.

The culprit still refused to move.

The man in line ahead of the buttinski then threw his car into reverse, jarring the front end of the villain's automobile as the housewife attacked from the rear. The scene resembled a demolition derby.

Finally, the victim held up his hands in surrender. He pulled his crumpled car out of the line and, amid a jeering crowd, limped away on an empty tank.

Crime doesn't pay.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Anti-Sting Drug Now Available

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The one million to two million Americans who run the risk of severe allergic reactions from insect stings now have a first-of-its kind immunization treatment.

Demand for the new drug has been so heavy that many doctors who ordered it have had to wait since the product was approved last spring by the Food and Drug Administration.

The manufacturer, Pharmacia Inc., Piscataway, N.J. hopes to have all orders filled by the end of August or the beginning of September, and be in a position to keep a 4-to-6 months supply on hand thereafter.

The treatment is the first ever to use just the venom of bees, hornets and other insects to protect against severe reactions to stings. The FDA estimates 30 to 50 Americans die each year from such reactions.

Highly sensitive persons, once stung, can suffer a sudden drop in blood pressure, collapse and die within minutes.

Previous treatments consisted of injections made from ground-up whole insects. Dr. Michael Woehler, in charge of clinical research for the product, told UPI the earlier treatment was not satisfactory because little if any venom was actually left in it.

The new drug, Pharmalgen, uses freeze-dried venoms that are reconstituted with a special dilutent before injection. After an initial series of injections patients continae to receive one shot per month to keep up their protection.

Five varieties of venom are available: honey bee, yellow jacket, yellow hornet and whitefaced hornet as well as a mixture of yellow jacket, whitefaced hornet and yellow hornet venoms. The mansfacturer says it markets the combination product because most persons who have insect sting allergies are sensitive to more than one type of sting.

The drugs must be administered by a doctor. They are recommended only for persons who have already experienced potentially life-threatening reactions to a sting, and whose reaction has been confirmed by a skin test.

The costs are high.

Doctors pay from $108 to $531 for the drug in the initial year of treatment, depending on what products or combinations are bought. In subsequent years of treatment, when the doses need not be as strong, the cost still can run from $72 to $354.

The costs to patients would be higher because they include the doctors' fees.

Fred Kalfon, product manager for the new drug, said the company has no firm idea of how many Americans have been treated so far. Kaldon said there is no way of knowing if a doctor is buying it for persons with multiple sensitivities or for single treatments.

About 30 percent of the nation's allergists have bought diagnostic kits, Kalfon added. The kits allow them to make skin tests on their patients to determine degree of sensitivity.

The warning notice supplied to doctors with the preparations also advises patients to carry an emergency supply of epinephrine with them during the insect sting season and know how to use it if the immunization should fail.

Hill To Direct Three Films For Warners

NEW YORK (Special) — Warner Bros. has concluded an exclusive deal with producer-director George Roy Hill and his Pan Arts Productions company, headed by Patrick Kelley, for the production of three films to be directed by Hill for Warner Bros.

Built into the deal is Hill's right to proceed concurrently with projects in conjunction with Orion Pictures Co., two of which are presently in development.

Hill and Pan Arts are now in the process of establishing headquarters at The Burbank Studios.

Prior to "A Little Romance," Hill directed "Slapshot," "The Great Waldo Pepper" and "The Sting," the latter winning seven Academy Awards, including Oscars for Best Director and Best Picture. Among his other films are "Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kids," "Slaughterhouse Five," "Thoroughly Modern Millie," "Hawaii," "Toys In The Attic" and "The World Of Henry Orient."

Teaching's Different In A Whackless Society

THE YOUNG TEACHER sat there, pretty as all get-out, counseling me on my son's misbehavior. It was several years ago, but the problem is not one of generational bounds.

My lad, you see, had fallen out of concert with the requirements of deport and academics as applied to Second Grade. I studied the Rap Sheet with an appropriate blend of embarrassment and ire and made inward promises pertinent to an interview with the towhead later in the day.

Just as I already suspected when I'd glance up and catch the teacher's expression and jerky movements, the report did not tell the whole story. It sure doesn't, she obligingly responded.

"IN FACT, THAT'S not the half of it," she began, choosing her words carefully, inhibited most likely by the limits of taste and language befitting a schoolmarm.

"Why, just Monday, he wasted a whole day just tearing into a million pieces a ball point pen he wasn't supposed to have to begin with. . ."

Even that wasn't all. There was much more, including an incident in the hall where, on the command of my son, all second-graders, in perfect cadence, slammed their locker doors three times. It was explosively disruptive, she explained.

Pondering all I had read and heard, I had an immediate question: Why was she wringing HER hands instead of HIS neck?

It was then that I thought about Miss Baughman.

MISS BAUGHMAN was a lady for whom I had deepest respect but few pleasant memories. I hadn't thought of her in years, and I couldn't recall ever having wished for her presence. But that day I did.

And I would even more in the days to come.

My own son, the principal explained, was an "under-achiever." That, he continued, is a teacher's most difficult area of problems.

Miss Baughman would have been a great help, because that was her greatest area of experience. You see, Miss Baughman considered all students "under-achievers" and handled them accordingly.

STILL OPERATING somewhat under the influence of Miss Baughman's techniques, I had asked the young teacher what I considered a fairly logical question about the ball-point pen my son had wasted an entire day tearing up. If he wasn't supposed to have it to begin with, couldn't she have, at some point, jerked it from his being and salvaged thereby whatever was left of the day?

"I asked him repeatedly to put it away," she replied, quite coolly, "and he declined. And, no, I could not take it away from him because it was, after all, his own property!"

I cannot recall Miss Baughman ever ASKING us to do anything, let alone repeatedly. And regarding property, anything not applicable to the learning skills became HERS the very instant it was discovered. That included, among other things, my barlow knife, my agate taw, my pea-shooter and a de-coding ring I gave Kenneth Clinton six U. S. Savings Stamps for.

ANOTHER THING Miss Baughman did not recognize was the limits of jurisdiction. One day, just about dark, Bill Howard and I were perched on these telephone poles which were stacked on a vacant lot. We rolled and lit us each a Bull Durham cigaret, leaned back and relaxed.

Suddenly at the nearby curb, a car screeched to a halt and from it emerged a very hostile Miss Baughman. She in a single swoop destroyed both cigarets, confiscated the nearly new sack of tobacco and drove off into the sunset. Furthermore, first thing the next day at school, she administered justice for our transgression.

I BELIEVE IN a number of ways Miss Baughman was more dedicated than the teacher of today. But, by the same token, she was in a number of ways more shielded as well.

She never had to wonder when she thumped an occasional ear, gouged a ribcage with a pointer, warmed up a fanny or whatever else she found useful in her efforts to penetrate the outskirts of a lazy mind, what litigation might land in her lap. Little Johnny's daddy probably didn't even know a lawyer and, besides that, he probably was still scared of Miss Baughman from the days HE was in her room.

I know I never wondered what right she had to be patroling that vacant lot, blocks removed from the school ground. I did, however, busy myself at hoping she wouldn't mention the Bull Durham to my ol' man. . .

THEY BURIED MISS Baughman last week, and three generations of former students mourned greatly her passing. The special love each had for her was as sincere as it was late-budding.

Her teaching had to be absorbed, it seemed, in time-release doses that really didn't take effect until sometime beyond maturity. It took that long for it to seep through the channels of awareness and realization and even longer—past the stage of parenthood—to reach its final form: Appreciation.

Today it is as easy as it is tempting to say our teachers have neither Miss Baugman's dedication nor her style. Probably even she could not have had one without the other.

MISS BAUGHMAN worked longer hours for less pay and, unlike many modern teachers, her role was a permanent one, not a means to an end that would come when hubby no longer needed a little help with the light bill. Rich or poor, she would have daily answered the call to teach.

But Miss Baughman had one thing going for her that today's Pretty Young Teacher goes without. Total Parental Support. Flog me nowadays, Teach, and my mom will yank out your hair by its blond roots.

I guess what happened was that a couple of decades back, Dr. Spock told all of Miss Baughman's former students that her approach to our education had been all wrong. And, quite sadly, we listened. So we now have classrooms filled with a bunch of Johnnys who can't read and Sallys who spell relief r-e-l-e-e-f.

And the teachers aren't at fault. Who can teach anything, fer cats sake, with ball point pens poppin' into pieces and locker doors slammin' all over the hall.

It may last a while too—if, say, the next teacher-parent conference isn't due for a couple or three weeks. . .

Quite certainly, the next sound they hear won't be ker-whack.

Tech Grad To Head Thorsen Tool Co.

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) — Scott G. Arbuckle has been named president of the hand tool divisions of Wallace Murray Corporation, it was announced today by Charles V. Myers, president and chief executive officer.

In his new capacity Arbuckle will oversee the operations of the Thorsen Tool and New England Carbide divisions. He had been president of Thorsen Tool, manufacturers of non-powered mechanics hand tools, socket sets, flat wrenches, solid joint pliers and tool boxes, with headquarters in Dallas, Texas. New England Carbide, which is headquartered in Peabody, Massachusetts, manufactures carbide-tipped masonry bits, abrasive wheels, electric hammers, and special carbide tools.

Arbuckle will report to Richard L. Durgin, executive vice president of the corporation who recently assumed responsibility for all company operations. Wallace Murray's 17 operating divisions have been reorganized under six divisional presidents, reporting to Durgin.

A graduate of Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Arbuckle served in the U.S. Army before joining Freeport Sulphur Company as an industrial engineer in 1957. Two years later he moved to Texas Instruments as a production planner, and in 1963 became staff industrial engineer at Collins Radio. He joined the U.S. Brass Corporation, a subsidiary of Hydrometals Inc., in 1963 as an industrial engineer working up to the position of vice president-manufacturing. In 1971, he transferred to Thorsen Tool, another subsidiary of Hydrometals, as president. Hydrometals Inc. was acquired by Wallace Murray in 1977 and Arbuckle continued as president of the Thorsen subsidiary until his present appointment.

Arbuckle has been recognized by Texas Tech as a distinguished engineer, and has received the Automotive Replacement Education Award from Northwood Institute. He is a member of the Advisory Board to the Industrial Engineering School of Texas Technological University, and was president of the Dallas-Fort Worth Chapter of A.I.I.E.

Arbuckle is married to the former Tommye Brown, also a graduate of Texas Tech. They have two sons and a daughter.

Demand For Executives Drops

Demand for business executives in the Southwest region of the nation fell 20 percent in the first six months of 1979 over the first six months of 1978 — making it the largest decrease in the U.S. Compared to the second quarter of 1978, demand for executives in the region dropped 49 percent, also the largest national decline.

These highlights are among the findings of the latest Executive Demand Index released by Arthur Young & Company. The report compares this year's second quarter to the second quarter of 1978, and the first six months of 1979 to the same period of 1978.

Among executive functions in the Southwest during the first six months of 1979, major declines of 45 percent were prominent among operations executives and engineering and science executives. However, demand for personnel executives was up 50 percent, marketing and sales executives increased 14 percent, and financial executives edged up 3 percent during the period. Compared with the same quarter in 1978, this year's second quarter plummeted. Demand for engineering and science executives fell sharply by 75 percent, operations executives followed suit with a decline of 69 percent, financial executives dropped 24 percent, and personnel executives slipped by 22 percent. Only marketing and sales executives saw a 28 percent climb in demand.

Among industry groupings in the region, financial services companies sought 36 percent more executives, while manufacturing companies and non-manufacturing companies decreased their demand by 33 percent and 25 percent, respectively, in the first six months of 1979 compared to the first six months of 1978. Compared to the same period in 1978, this year's second quarter demand for executives registered large declines in all three industry groupings: manufacturing companies — down 57 percent, financial services companies — down 43 percent, and non-manufacturing companies — down 42 percent.

The Southwest Region covers a five-

Pioneer Earnings Up Sharply For Quarter

AMARILLO (Special) — Earnings for the second quarter of 1979 have been announced by Pioneer Corporation (NYSE), a diversified energy resources-oriented corporation with facilities and/or operations in 14 states as well as worldwide sales of oil field and heavy construction equipment.

Pioneer Corporation president K. B. Watson reported second quarter earnings per share of $1.80 based on consolidated net income of $16,472,681 for the three months ended June 30, 1979. Comparable figures for the 1978 second quarter are $10,256,778 in consolidated net income with earnings per share of $1.11.

1979 consolidated net income for the first six months is $28,481,956 compared with $20,779,759 for the same period in 1978. Earnings per share for the first six months, 1979, are $3.11; the 1978 earnings per share for the first six months were $2.24.

For the 12 months ended June 30, 1979, consolidated net income is $41,701,746 compared to $37,473,590 for the 12 months ending June 30, 1978.

Per share earnings for the 12 months ended June 30, 1979, are $4.54, a 12.9 percent increase over the $4.02 for the comparable period ending June 30, 1978.

Watson reported the 1979 increased earnings for the second quarter can be attributed to increased production and higher prices for natural gas produced by two subsidiaries, Amarillo Oil Company and Pioneer Production Corporation, and to higher prices for liquid petroleum gases produced at extraction plants owned by Pioneer Gas Products Company, a wholly owned subsidiary.

Special sales of gas to intrastate and interstate companies aided in sustaining the utility income of Pioneer Natural Gas Company for the first six months of 1979. The utility division of the corporation experienced reduced sales to industrial customers and unusually low gas sales for irrigation purposes during the past six months due to increased rainfall.

Homeowners Get Second Chance

An estimated 87,000 low and moderate income families who are now or were FHA-insured homeowners could benefit from two separate actions announced by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

HUD Assistant Secretary for Housing Lawrence B. Simons said the Department will: (1) re-evaluate the rejected claims of certain homeowners for repair or reimbursement of repairs made on structural defects they claim existed when they bought their FHA-insured homes; and (2) will reconsider the requests of certain former homeowners who lost their FHA-insured homes through foreclosure. A potential 65,000 families fall into the first category, and an estimated 22,000 in the second.

"These moves," said Simons, "will provide appropriate recourse to eligible individuals who feel they were improperly denied relief under the Department's Single Family Assignment Program or under the Section 518 (b) and (d) repair claims programs."

In the Section 518 category, a third party review of rejected repair claims will be made by the American Institute of Architects Research Corporation (AIA/RC) under a $1.2 million contract.

Sections 518 (b) and (d), which expired in August 1977, permitted HUD to repair or pay for repairs of structural and other major defects that appeared in existing homes purchased between August 1, 1968 and August 3, 1976, insured by FHA and located in older declining urban areas. Although over $22.5 million in claims were paid for such things as seriously defective plumbing, heating and electrical systems and worn-out roofs, thousands of other claims were rejected.

The third party review by AIA/RC will focus on claims submitted before the statute expired. No new claims will be considered, Simons said.

The second action announced deals with HUD's Single Family Assignment Program, which is designed to protect FHA-insured homeowners threatened by foreclosure due to circumstances beyond their control, such as job loss or death or illness in the family. Under the program, HUD pays off the lenders and takes over the mortgage and either waives or reduces the mortgage payments for a period of time until the homeowners can get back on their feet.

Subject to court approval, HUD has agreed to reconsider assignment requests made by homeowners whose mortgages were returned to lenders for foreclosure between May 17, 1976 and January 31, 1979. This applies whether the mortgage has already been foreclosed or is now in foreclosure, Simons said.

Once the court approves this agreement, HUD will ask mortgage lenders to delay the beginning or completion of foreclosurers and evictions while the Department processes requests for reconsideration. "At the same time," Simons stressed, "we are taking action to avoid further financial loss to lenders as the result of the additional delay."

If, on re-examination, a mortgage is accepted by HUD, but the homeowner has already lost his or her home, an effort will be made to provide a house. This could mean returning the original home, if HUD now owns it, under terms and conditions similar to those at the time of foreclosure; or it could mean providing a comparable HUD-owned property.

Simons pointed out that eligible individuals in both categories will not have to inititate any action on their own. The Department will be sending out letters to all the individuals involved informing them of the new opportunities to have their assignment requests or repair claims reviewed. However, in both cases, the individuals will have 30 days after receipt of the notice to notify HUD of their desire for a review.

Braniff Lowering Concorde Travel Costs Within U.S.

The cost of Concorde travel between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington, D.C., is being lowered to match that of first class travel on conventional jets, Braniff International has announced.

Effective last Monday (Aug. 13), Braniff said, the 10 per cent surcharge on the Concorde domestic service is being removed and the fare to fly the famous supersonic transport will be the same as any of Braniff's 10 other daily roundtrip flights between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington with 727 jets.

"The Concorde has matured into our schedule pattern and become a regular part of our domestic service," said a spokesman for Braniff, the only U.S. airline and the third in the world to operate the supersonic transport.

There will continue to be a surcharge on the Concorde international flights which provide the only daylight or same day service from Dallas-Fort Worth to London and Paris.

Braniff operates five Concorde roundtrip flights each week between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington, including three in interchange with British Airways which provide one-stop service to and from Paris.

The Concorde operates at 95 per cent of the speed of sound between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington, or about 100 miles per hour faster than conventional jets, and at twice the speed of sound over the North Atlantic.

The fare for Concord flights between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington is $194, the normal first class fare in the market. The Concorde fare with surcharge had been $213.

Outstanding Features Add Charm, Appeal To Home

By HIAWATHA ESTES

This charming and appealing exterior has been achieved by combining several outstanding design features. The warmth of the stone columns and the ornamental iron complements the vertical wood siding and the cedar shake roof. Note how the roof extends over the planter and the front porch.

The hip roof over the front bedroom visually deceases the roof height and adds to the long, low look which is so much in vogue today.

The spacious entry is separated from the living room by a partial wall which provides more furniture space. A guest closet opens to the entry while other closets and a telephone table are in the bedroom hall. If preferred, another closet could be gained by moving the furnace from its present closet to the garage.

Each of the bedrooms has an unusual amount of wardrobe space. The master bedroom suite can boast of two wardrobes in the dressing area.

The family bath and the private bath in the master bedroom suite have pullman lavatories. Each bath has a semi-private water closet compartment. A third bath off the service will eliminate much foot traffic.

The fireplace partially separates the living and dining rooms. Such an arrangement visually increases the size of each room. Sliding doors open from the living room to the patio which adds to the enjoyment of outdoor living.

Distinctive features of this well-planned kitchen are the huge nook for family meals and the wide floor-to-ceiling pantry.

Complete working drawings for plan 41140 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until December 19, 1979. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $4. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $13 value — for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, California 91328.

M.A. SNELL

THE U.S. AND YOU
William Steif

THE BIGGEST SINGLE ITEM most Americans own is a home.

But what do you do when your home is wrecked in a tornado, a flood, an earthquake, a hurricane or a severe winter storm?

You may have some insurance, but chances are it isn't enough. Nor is it likely to cover some items.

The place to turn, as hundreds of thousands have in the past 26 years, is the Small Business Administration.

That's what the folks in Wichita Falls, Texas, did a few months ago when a tornado destroyed 7,000 homes, businesses and apartment units. That's what the people around Fort Dodge, Iowa, did in June when high winds cut a swath through the area. The people around Palm Beach, Fla., turned to SBA after late-April flooding; so did folks in six New Mexico counties that suffered severe springtime storms.

Once SBA arrives on the scene, hard-hit homeowners can find out quickly if they're eligible for long-term, low-interest federal loans to put them on their feet again.

Last year, for example, SBA made 74,546 home loans totaling more than $360 million. The pace was even brisker in the first four months of this year — 34,244 loans totaling almost $129 million.

Yet many people don't know about this program. It works this way, says Michael Massie, a disaster-operations specialist at SBA:

— First you have to be in a declared disaster area. The president declares major disasters. But many areas have minor disasters— minor to all except the people involved; they can be declared disaster areas at a governor's request. An SBA-declared disaster area normally encompasses at least 25 homes where at least a quarter of the damage is uninsured.

— Once this is done, SBA speedily sets up a field office. If an SBA regional office is close, the agency sends representatives from that office to advise about home loans. (That includes loans for mobile homes.)

— For disaster loan, you need: a schedule of losses, including personal property losses such as autos, color TVs and stereos (but not luxury items like antiques); your best estimate of real-estate damages; a copy of your most recent federal income-tax return (to ascertain your creditworthiness); a copy of your deed or mortgage; a copy of your insurance policy and copies of insurance-settlement sheets; the title or registration of your auto if it was destroyed.

— Then you have to fill out an application and give credit references.

— Once you've pulled the papers giving your "pre-disaster condition" together, the package is turned over to an SBA loss appraiser, who makes his own appraisal and goes over loss estimates with you. He may give you helpful hints.

— The appraiser submits his reports to his SBA office. If everything is in order, SBA makes its loan decisions within a couple of weeks. Once a positive decision is made, you'll get your SBA check in about 12 days. If the loan is large, it may be disbursed in several chunks.

"TYPICALLY," SAYS MASSIE, "the start for repayment is deferred about five months to let the borrower get on his feet." The loan may be for one year, 30 years or any period in between. The interest rate will be 7.375 percent. (Congress is considering lowering the rate, but don't count on it.)

SBA home loans under $5,000 normally require no collateral. If the loan is above $5,000, it'll normally be secured by a second mortgage.

The idea is to restore your home to its pre-disaster condition. But if you face problems bringing your home up to county or city code standards, SBA will allow you enough money to make needed improvements, too.

If your home has been hit by a natural disaster, don't hesitate to seek SBA assistance. You can get it through the "one-stop centers" SBA sets up after disaster-area declarations. Or you can get the information you need from your local chamber of commerce or your state or local civil defense organization. Don't be shy about it. SBA is out there to help you.

An employee of LNB's since 1972, Elliott is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a B.B.A. degree.

Elliott's civic associations include the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association, and a sustaining member of the enrollment drive of the Boy Scouts of America.

Life Underwriters Chapter Cited For Public Service

The Lubbock chapter of the Association of Life Underwriters has been cited by two national organizations for its outstanding public service efforts during the past year.

The local life underwriters were awarded a certificate of merit by the National Association of Life Underwriters and the American Council of Life Insurance. The citation is part of the Louis I. Dublin Public Service Program, which encourages underwriter associations to contribute to community well-being.

The local award was the result of sponsoring the Heart Open Tennis Tournament (which raised $4,000) and implimentation of United Way, Toys for Tots, Blood Pressure Screening, a Diabetes Bike-a-Thon and public television.

Actual presentation of the Dublin award will take place Sept. 11 in Detroit, Mich., at the 90th annual NALU convention. The 240-member Lubbock association is one of 64 local NALU affiliates singled out for special public service honors in 1979.

Permanent Cultural Art Event Planned

LILLE, France (UPI) — This northern city's 1978 arts festival was such a success that this year the city council has decided on "permanent cultural action" instead of just the yearly festival.

The city council decided to stage nine musical and dance events as well as the 1979 autumn festival. The nine events include Bach concerts by French and German singers, folklore dance groups from Japan and Morocco, and the Murray Louis Dance company from New York.

KAYE HONORED

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Federation of Musicians has awarded Danny Kaye a Gold Card Honorary Life Membership for his "significant contribution to the world of music." Others who have received such honorary membership include President Harry S. Truman, Jack Benny, Duke Ellington, Pablo Casals and Benny Goodman.

TI's Miracle Chip 'Turning On' Toy World

Ever since primitive man discovered that a smooth rock was fun to toss around, toys have been an important part of our everyday life. But, one wonders, how would a character like Alley Oop react to a plaything that buzzes, beeps, lights up, scoots across the floor and even talks back.

The microelectronic revolution has hit the toy industry harder than anything since batteries replaced wind-up mechanisms a generation ago. For years, toymakers looked on enviously at the mushrooming popularity of the new electronic playthings for adults — professional calculators, arcade games, digital watches and clocks — but they couldn't afford the electronic logic involved until Texas Instruments introduced the single-chip microcomputer that has since become internationally known as the "miracle chip."

Invented in 1971 by Michael Cochran and Gary Boone of Texas Instruments, (U.S. Patent 4074351) th "miracle chip" can program a wide range of solitaire or interactive play activities, sing its own praises through programmd music, add a diverse array of sound affects and sci-fi noises to toys. In short, it adds a whole new dimension to toy and game design at a cost of less then $1.75 in high volume production applications.

The microcomputer is an outgrowth of calculator technology that evolved in the mid-sixties. After Jim Van Tassel, Jack Kilby — inventor of the integrated circuit — and Jerry Merryman introduced the first hand-held calculator in 1967, the semiconductor industry began to actively seek a "calculator-on-a-chip," the technology breakthrough required to meet the demand for a pocket calculator affordable by the consumer.

Intel Corporation was among the companies that chose a different route, designing instead, a more versatile, programmable 4-bit microprocessor, one element of a multi-chip microcomputer system. Less than a year later, in the fall of 1972, other companies including National Semicondutor Corporation and Fairchild Semiconductor Operation, joined Intel in the marketplace with microprocessors capable of processing blocks of information in 8-bits each, and containing from 5,000 to 10,000 transistors.

To clarify definitions, the microprocessor is the central processing unit of a computer, one chip in a multi-chip microcomputer that is usually assembled on a small printed circuit board. The central processing unit is where all of the arithemtic and logic calculations are performed. However, a variety of other circuits must be added to make a useful microcomputer.

Memory circuits are required to store the sequence of instructions that the microcomputer will carry out. The ROM (read-only memory) can be characterized as the instruction book for the system, a sequence of operations permanently imbedded in circuitry. RAM, or random access memory, is also required for the temporary storage of the incoming information to be processed — like an electronic chalkboard on which the numbers to be added, the moves of a game, the notes of a song are held temporarily.

In addition to memory, some form of timing circuitry is required so that all of the instructions will be carried out in proper sequence and that the information to be processed will be fed to the central processing unit in the correct order.

Finally, some form of input an output circuitry is required to allow the microcomputer to communicate with the outside world. Signals from a keyboard, for example, must be decoded into electrical signals the microprocessor can understand and that can be stored in memory. Once processed, the results must be encoded, or translated back into signals that will turn-on a display or activate a printer.

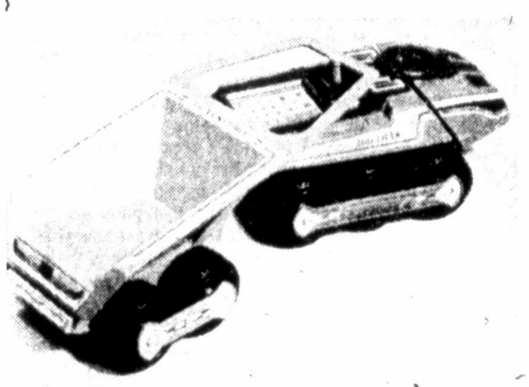
In September on 1971, Texas Intruments announced the first integrated circuit to incorporate all of the elements of a computer on a single chip of silicon — instruction and data memory (ROM and RAM), timing and control circuitry, plus input and output circuits. Measuring less than one-fifth of an inch thick, this single-chip microcomputer housed the equivalent of more than 20,000 transistors and other components.

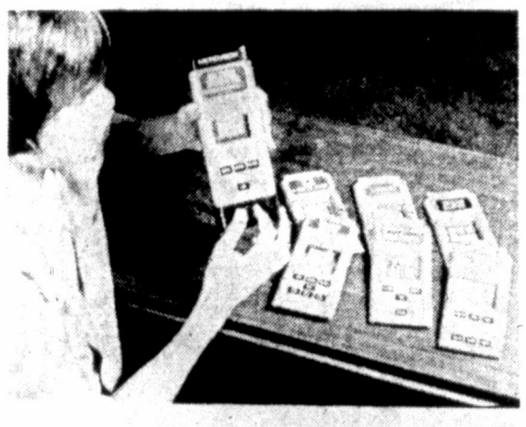
Had this computer been assembled using individual transistors, resistors, capacitors and other components, it would have required well over 100 square feet of printed circuit board space and cost in excess of $10,000. With the introduction of the microprocessor, this same system was assembled at a cost of over $100. Today, the single-chip microcomputer system can be assembled for less than $5.00 including keyboard, interconnecting circuitry and output display.

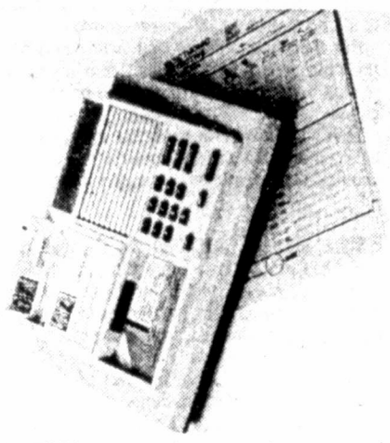
At first toymakers were timid about going from the relatively safe territory of board games and dolls into the high-risk, high-cost jungle of electronic playthings. Toys are a big, serious business, and overnight failures and fortunes are common. In any given year, nearly half the toys will be brand new, and 80 percent of the new entries will fail, despite million-dollar investments.

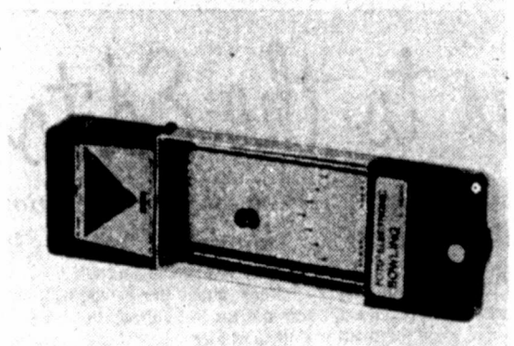
However, in 1977, following the success of TI's Little Professor introduced the year before, companies cautiously came out with their first electronic games — and sold $21 million worth. That figure will increase more than ten-fold this year making electronic games the fastest growing segment of the $5 billion toy industry.

Adults as well as children are captivated by the new wave of electronic wonders, and are a ready market for such diversified products as a calculator that tells times, buzzes a wake-up call and triples as an AM-FM radio; or a computeriezed chess game that offers ten levels of play and ponders strategy. There's even a computerized golf game being manufactured for arcades, gold clubs, pro shops and the like. Weekend duffers can play their choice of championship golf courses without leaving town. Real golfers, using real clubs, take real swings at a real ball that hits a high impact projection screen on which is shown the view the golfer would see were he actually on the golf course selected.









UNIQUE TOYS—Among the more unique toys and games of 1979 that use the TMS1000 "computer-on-a-chip" are Big Trak, the truck that can be programmmed to follow most any route, dump its load on demand and return; and Microvision, the handheld mini-video game that uses plug-in game cartridges but doesn't need a TV set. Ideal Toy Corporation enters the electronic toy market with Electronic Detective while Cadaco, Inc., of Chicago, Ill., announced Foto Electronic Bowling, the fun of a real bowling alley in a self-contained, portable game.

Elliott Named To Trust Post At Bank

W. R. Collier, President of American State BAnk, has announced the election of Ed H. Elliott as Vice Presdident and Trust Officer of the Bank.

Elliott has had many years of experience in the trust and estate management area and is highly qualified. He was formerly associated with another local bank for 26 years, where he held the position of Senior Vice President and Trust Officer.

He has served as President of the Lubbock Mortgage Bankers Association; as President of the South Plains Trust and Estate Council; and on the Investment Committee, Trust Section of the Texas Bankers Association.

He has also served on the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Hospital in Lubbock; Treasurer of the Methodist City Board of Missions; as Charter President of the Redbud Lions Club; as President of the Lubbock Day Care Center; and as Chairman of the Lubbock Airport Board.

ED H. ELLIOTT

Elliott and his wife Patsy have two children, Craig and Lori. They are members of the Agape United Methodist Church, where he has served as Chairman of the Board; Chairman of the Stewardship and Finance Committee; and as Lay Leader.

Collier stated, "Mr. Elliott is a highly qualified trust officer, and we are pleased to have a person of his expertise in the important area of trust and estate management on our staff. I know that he will be a valuable asset to the Bank."

In the last 12,000 years, the Niagara Falls have retreated seven miles, leaving a gorge 200 feet deep downstream, says the National Geographic Society. They continue to move 3 or 4 feet a year, and within 50,000 years will probably disappear.

Ethnic Minorities Take Stand

WASHINGTON (United Methodist Communications) — Designated giving and designated representation were the subjects of two positions taken here Aug. 1 by a new coalition formed to keep United Methodism's ethnic minorities informed about General Conference issues.

Representing the church's four ethnic minority caucuses and the Commission on Religion and Race, the group agreed to support World Service and Advance funds and other current channels of giving and to oppose proposals for selected or designated giving to general church funds.

The coalition voted to support a proposal to General Conference that would continue the present recommendations that at-large members of general boards include at least two persons from each of the ethnic minorities. Several members expressed frustration that ethnics are the only group constitutionally not permitted to have quotas for designated representation, while quotas are mandated for others such as ministers and women.

The color TV in our picture cost $350 when new. Most homeowners policies would give only $150 for it today — enough for a black-and-white set. Ætna's new Homeowners Contents Replacement Cost Coverage would give the owner a brand new color TV — about $450. Because our new coverage replaces old contents for new up to 400% of their current cash value! The additional amount this new coverage pays can provide thousands of dollars in added protection. But it costs only a little more. Do you want the best homeowners coverage you can buy? Give us a call and ask about Contents Replacement Cost Coverage. We'll be glad to call on you. TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Democracy--Bits And Pieces

IN THE WAKE of UN Ambassador Andrew Young's resignation, a number of things have been said which deserve study and comment.

As was expected, Young's departure from his lofty and sensitive United Nations post as a major spokesman for U.S. foreign policy stirred a furor among blacks, some liberals and numerous politicians.

Black leaders charged that the UN envoy had been made a "fall guy" for the Carter Administration, that Israel had "blackmailed" the White House into its action and that the President would suffer at the polls as a result.

OTHER, MORE objective observers correctly assessed that the controversial diplomat had finally stepped "over the line" of personal diplomacy once too often.

President Carter, despite his friendship with the Georgian who had been with him almost from the start of his career, had no other choice.

The amazing thing to many persons, including veteran diplomats abroad, was that the free-wheeling Young had been allowed to pursue a "do-it-yourself" policy in so many controversial areas for so long.

THE WHOLE Young affair, his appointment as the President's good friend, his numerous comments which often had a racial slant or seemed to put him on the side of Marxist-oriented movements, has been bizarre.

Almost from the moment he took office, Young operated as though it was he who was making U.S. foreign policy, not the White House, State Department, Congress or the majority of the American people.

Again and again—with statements defending Cuban Communist troops in Angola as being a "stabilizing influence" to reportedly saying the Ayatollah Khomeini might be a candidate for sainthood—Young flew in the face of what was stated U.S. policy.

Young remained defiant to the last, saying he would do the same thing over again.

But, in addition to the fact that Young obviously feels he has done no wrong, we see an even more disturbing note in the reaction to his resignation.

No sooner had news of his quitting became known than black leaders denounced it in force. In almost every instance, the criticism was based on the fact that a "black" and "his" views had been put down. The fact Young had violated a long-standing U.S. State Department policy and then failed to tell the whole story was all but ignored.

Some black leaders said the incident had doomed Mr. Carter's hopes for re-election in 1980 because he would lose much of the black vote. Others urged Mr. Carter to appoint another black to replace Young.

STILL OTHERS blamed the Jewish community and charged that Israel had used spies to learn that Young had met with a member of the terrorist PLO organization on the eve of the upcoming UN session.

The PLO charged Washington had given in to Zionist zealots. Others feared an Arab blacklash on the oil front.

It all added up to a sort of soap opera effect in a most unlikely setting.

All of this says something about how we view our society and governing process today...

For too many years now, many ethnic groups, minorities, special interest factions and individuals with axes to grind—black, white, brown and polka-dotted—have operated as though the nation and its affairs were being run for them and them alone.

AT SOME point in time, the citizens of this nation—and that includes all of us—must start thinking as Americans and speaking as Americans, or see the greatest nation and way of life ever devised go down the drain of selfish factionalism.

France and Italy, with their myriad parties and constantly clashing multiple interests are classic examples of what happens under such circumstances.

We can understand the concern of blacks, browns and certain other ethnic groups and even those who have what they feel are justified special projects, to push for them and to seek a voice and a share in the scheme of things. We also can understand the silent majority's feeling that it is ignored and lost in the new political Tower of Babel.

It's time to call a halt. This nation was built as a "melting pot," and its brains and brawn and spirit were forged and polished because peoples of different origin and background and beliefs learned to work together for the good of all.

To survive—against an enemy which has vowed to bury that way of life—we must return to that basic American theme. It's just that simple and no amount of narrow, selfish rhetoric can change it.

Plainview Man Says Media Doing Today's Job For Teddy

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Teddy Kennedy will not have to run for president—the American Press and television are doing that for him! Never a day passes without the Kennedy name being put before the public in manner—either a national magazine, the press or television. When television shows a Senatorial committee on which Teddy serves, the camera lingers a few seconds longer on Teddy than it does on any other member of the committee. The wire services carry everything Teddy says or does—significant or not, to the extent that one begins to wonder if this is an organized campaign.

Ol' Sam Ervin (a good ol' party hack) sure did his job well when he dragged out the Watergate hearing so long that it made Chappaquiddick fade into insignificant, notwithstanding a very feebly explained death, and the fact that the man in question panicked in a crisis.

Every so often a straw is put into the wind to sell the whole plan a little more firmly—the most preposterous was that of the eastern professor who said that Teddy would probably be a better president because of his efforts to atone for the death of Mary Jo.

Then there is the constantly recurring phrase: "A return to Camelot!" This occurs so frequently that I tried to recall just what Camelot was in the beginning. If I remember my school reading, Camelot was a mythical kingdom where King Arthur and his Queen held sway over the court and the Knights of the Round Table. The King was Royal, the Queen was Regal, all the Knights were valiant and knightly and the common people were only peasants and slaves belonging to the crown.

"Camelot?" A more modern interpretation would seem to indicate two words instead of one: "Camel Lot!"—a place where one keeps camels, and do you get an abundance of camel dung.

Traffic Problem Not All That Bad, Motorist Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Have been noticing the discussion lately about the traffic problems we supposedly have in Lubbock, and especially the remarks by Mayor West yesterday and the editorial in today's (August 11) paper.

I work downtown and live in west Lubbock, so I believe that I know a little about the traffic situation in the city.

In my opinion, Lubbock doesn't have much of a traffic problem at all. Especially compared with Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth.

And it certainly doesn't warrant spending millions of dollars just to save five minutes of driving out of fifteen or twenty that it takes to get the six miles from my office to my home.

As a matter of fact, when the traffic lights cooperate, I can get downtown from the LCC area in eleven or twelve minutes in the morning. In the evening (5 p.m. or so) it takes fifteen or sixteen minutes to get home from downtown.

I just don't see the sense in spending all that money to save a few minutes (if it really would) and tearing up the country to build a freeway. Perhaps I'm missing something that hasn't been pointed out to me. If so, I'd like to hear about it from you or the readers of this paper.

Reader Offers Solution For Abandoned Animals In City

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I knew about the pet population problem before moving to Lubbock, but I have never lived in a town before where I could stumble over it on any city street. In the past three years I have taken in numerous stray cats and dogs and screened potential owners to find good homes.

My husband jogs several miles a day and brings back the abandoned animals he finds. Among our own trio of pets (all strays) are a purebred cat and dog.

Since only one animal in ten is adopted at the Animal Shelter, taxpayers are paying for a concentration camp, not an Animal Shelter. Lubbock is fast becoming a large city that can no longer apply small town solutions to metropolitan problems.

If the city is responsible for animal population control, then it would do well to stop the problem at its source (1) by means of publicity emphasizing the fact that pets are not breeding animals, and (2) by making birth control convenient, economic, and preferably obligatory for pet owners.

This could be done by creating an ongoing program to subsidize the cost of spaying and neutering by local vets and to pay for neutering all animals adopted from the Pound. People who choose to let their animals breed would be charged a yearly fee, payable to this fund. The fund could be open for contributions, large and small—more than one doting pet owner has been known to will his fortune to pet-related causes. By severely limiting the source of unwanted litters, the cost of Pound operations could be significantly reduced.

The city could do a favor for pets, pet owners, the animal shelters, and its own coffers. Now that we have accepted birth control for people, it shouldn't be too hard to make the step toward birth control for pets.

Slaton Reader Tells Perils Of Tahoka Traffic Circle

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

With traffic safety uppermost in their minds, Mayor West and each City Councilman, with heart pills handy, should try the Tahoka traffic circle during rush hour. They will be changed men when they exit.

As an example, let us suppose our driver is approaching the circle on Avenue Q with cars beside him and cars behind him, all racing their motors urging him to go. He looks to the left and sees 12 cars on Ave. H raring to enter, and an equal number on Ave. A dying to try their luck.

Coming around the circle toward our driver are lost travelers from Arkansas looking in vain for road signs, butane trucks, vans, gravel trucks, and hidden behind them, motorcycles. Our poor driver doesn't know until the last possible instant how many vehicles will rush on from Avenue H and A, or how many, if any vehicles will exit on Ave. Q, giving him three seconds to review his life, cram his accelerator to the floor and scream onto the circle.

He's now in his lane traveling fast and has two seconds to observe 10 cars roaring north on the Tahoka highway all bent on entering the deadly circle. With his right hand held up in a pleading stop signal, his left hand firmly holding his right turn blinker, he steers with one knee, mutters a childhood prayer, frantically, guns his motor and darts across the path of a monstrous cattle truck and onto the Slaton highway.

Multiply this suicidal scenario by 20 (the number of traffic lanes entering and exiting that tiny circle) and it does, indeed, suggest that Americans have a collective death wish. Either that, or West Texans are brave beyond belief.

Jean G. Edwards, Slaton

ART BUCHWALD:

In Case Of Atomic War, Don't Forget Zip Code

(Art Buchwald is being re-evaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.)

WASHINGTON—Anyone who doubts that the federal government is prepared for World War III just doesn't know how organized Washington really is.

A short time ago someone who works for the Treasury Department received his instructions in writing on what he has to do in case of enemy attack.

They read as follows, and I haven't made a word of it up:

"....all National Office Employes with or without emergency assignments should follow this procedure. If you are prevented from going to your regular place of work because of an enemy attack, keep this instruction in mind:

"GO TO the nearest Post Office, ask the Postmaster for a Federal Employe Registration card (sample shown on reverse side). Fill it out and return it to him.

"He will see that it is forwarded to the office of the Civil Service Commission which will maintain the registration file for your area. When the Civil Service Commission receives your card, we will be notified.

"We can then decide where and when you should report for work....You should obtain and complete your registration card as soon after enemy attack as possible, but not until you are reasonably sure where you will be staying for a few days...

NOBODY BELIEVES it will ever happen, but let us suppose that Robert Smiley (a fictitious person working for the Treasury Department) has just crawled out of the rubble after an enemy attack, and remembers the instructions concerning Civil Defense for federal employes.

After walking for four days and 350 miles, Smiley finally finds a Post Office that is still standing. He staggers up to a window, but just as he gets there, the man behind it says, "Sorry, this window is closed," and slams it down.

Smiley stumbles to the next window and is told to get in line behind 20 other people. Two hours later he gets to the head of the line and croaks, "I want to register——"

"I'm sorry," says the post office clerk, "but this window is just for stamps. Registered mail is at the next window."

"NO, NO," says Smiley, "I want a federal employe registration card."

"We don't sell those. Now do you want any stamps or don't you?"

"You see," says Smiley, holding on to the window, "I was instructed to find the nearest Post Office after the enemy attacked and fill out a card."

"You'd better try the parcel post window," the clerk suggests.

Smiley goes over to the parcel post window and gets in line with 30 people. Four hours later he is informed that the post office has run out of federal employe registration cards.

They suggest he try another Post Office.

Smiley staggers out into the road and starts walking again. Four hundred miles up the highway be finds another Post Office. After catching his breath, he takes the card shakingly to the counter and starts to fill it out.

BUT THE pen won't work. He informs the Postmaster of this, and the Postmaster replies, "We know it, but there's nothing we can do about it. There's a war on."

"But I've got to register," says Smiley, "or the Civil Service Commission won't know where I am in case the United States Treasury wants to start up again. Couldn't I borrow your pen?"

"What? And ruin the point? Listen, why don't you go over to the Smithtown Post Office. I hear their pens are still in working order."

Clutching the card, Smiley walks 60 miles to Smithtown, where he fills it out. He mails it that very day.

Years later, Smiley is still waiting for a reply. For in his haste and fatigue, Smiley had forgotten to write down his return ZIP code.

CARTER'S IN deep trouble...the Cabinet's in chaos...double-digit inflation is back...the recession is upon us—and there's a "gone fishin'" sign on Washington.

For the next few weeks, looks like, we can relax, uncross our fingers and stop worrying about what kind of dumbfoolery our fearless leaders are going to spring on us next.

Having them on vacation is a kind of extra vacation for the rest of the country, and a welcome relief it is. With any luck, they can't get into too much trouble during what they like to call their "summer recess."

This is not to say that the folks in the White House and Congress tidied up their desks before they took off.

WE ARE still in a state of crisis on just about everything: the energy crunch, the SALT II treaty, job layoffs, the sinking dollar, soaring interest rates, sky-high prices. Name anything—it's in trouble.

But, since nobody has any ideas on how to solve any of the problems, the easiest thing to do is get out of town. After all, there's a crisis every minute in Washington; why let that little fact interfere with a man's vacation?

Congress has scattered to wherever congressmen scatter in August. Some have headed for their summer homes; some are on taxpayer-financed junkets to places most taxpayers can't afford for themselves; and some are out running for re-election. A few might even be home trying to find out what's on peoples' minds.

There was some foolish suggestion that, considering how much work they had piled up and how little they've accomplished so far this year, maybe, just this once, Congress might skip the traditional August recess and get on with the job.

That idea went nowhere.

THERE WON'T be any pronouncements from the Oval Office (or Camp David, either) for a while. The President is heading for Georgia to do a little fishing and a lot of thinking.

Mostly, he'll be worrying how to convince the country that he's really not such a bad fellow after all, no matter what Congress thinks.

But there's no chance that, while he's hooking the "big ones," he'll unhook from his campaign to slap huge windfall-profits taxes on the oil companies.

That's the kicker in his latest energy plan, and he's sending 60 official messengers around the country this month on a massive blitz to talk it up.

MEANWHILE, BACK at the Cabinet, productivity has ground to a screeching halt. After last month's upsy-daisy, department heads are scrambling to patch up gaps created by the mass resignations that followed Carter's unexpected shakeup.

HEW has a new secretary, but no chief assistant. There's no commissioner of education, either, and no chief in the Food and Drug Administration.

Everything's on hold while the paralyzed staff tries to figure out what Patricia Harris is going to do first.

Including Patricia Harris, who got whisked from Housing to HEW in the recent musical-chairs gambit.

Charles Duncan Jr., the new energy secretary, inherited plenty of trouble just by replacing the controversial James Schlesinger. Now he not only has to solve the energy crunch, he has to hire a lot of new people. Three top staff posts are vacant, and more workers are quitting every day.

AT TRANSPORTATION, Neil Goldschmidt still hasn't been cleared by the FBI and the Senate, and, with everybody out of town, won't be for another few weeks. Meanwhile, the deputy and assistant secretaries have resigned, and so has the chief of urban mass transportation.

In short, Cabinet staffers are "deserting a sinking ship," and most of the possible replacements have gone fishing along with the rest of the town. Nobody's too excited about joining an administration that might not be in business by this time next year.

There's also a general feeling that any White House leadership between now and then will be limited to the kind that leads Jimmy Carter back into office. Loyalty, not professionalism, is what the Georgia gang is looking for in these troubled days.

Meanwhile, Washington officials managed to get one crisis solved before they shut down the government. It's official now: Gas stations can't charge us extra for flashing a credit card at the pumps.

Wipe windshields? That's negotiable.

Q. WHY IS that opener that cuts a triangular hole in a beer can known as a "church key"?

A. Oldtime brewery men say it started decades ago when those in the beer business carried not can openers but heavy ornate bottle openers that actually did resemble church door keys.

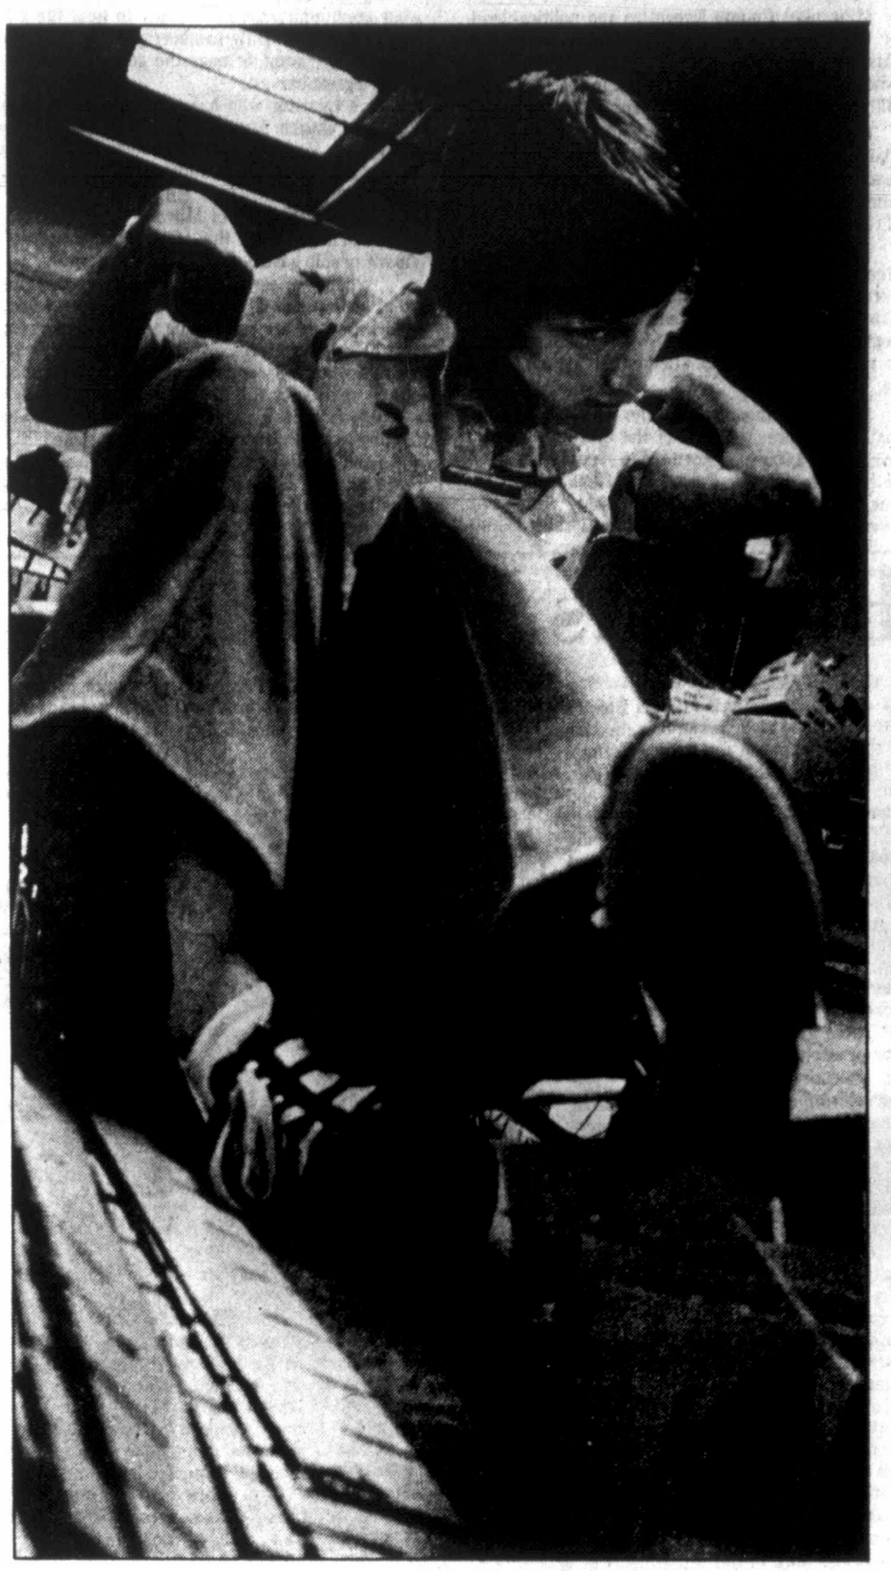
Kathleen Muller Inspiration To Co-Workers

SPECTRUM

Copy & Photos By LINN SCHERWITZ A-J Staff Photographer



IN THIS BUSINESS YOU learn to value beauty of spirit, and Kathleen has it," says Dennis Brice of Goodwill Industries.

Kathleen Muller, who has cerebral palsy, works in the contract labor division at Goodwill, assembling cardboard box dividers. She struggles daily for the personal independence most people can take for granted. As rehabilitation director for Goodwill in Lubbock, Brice watches the 24-year-old fight to do her best. He sees her "intelligent mind, beautiful spirit, tragically trapped in a broken body."

"But," he continues, "she's overcome it. I admire her."

Her co-workers also admire her. They see the contribution she can make "just using her feet" and are encouraged. Watching her, they learn the will to be happy, to achieve, to succeed. She spreads her joy throughout the plant, and her coworkers, forgetting their own limitations for awhile, try harder to do more.

KATHLEEN MULLER
She's A Good Listener

BRICE SAYS SHE IS "one of the most beautiful people I've ever met. Kathleen's made the very best of her situation. Just seeing her cheers me up." Despite the cerebral palsy that leaves her with little control over her body's actions, Kathleen was graduated from a Houston high school. Like others in her class, she planned to continue on to college. She would study to be a counselor. But one night on television, she saw a woman like herself struggle for a college degree, then answer a job ad in a newspaper. The employer refused to grant an interview because of the woman's handicap.

"I lost interest then in college," Kathleen remembers.

She nearly lost interest in herself.

Without college to draw her on, Kathleen floundered. She despaired of ever being more than a burden to the people around her. She sat at home, a prisoner in her own body, doing nothing.

Moving to Lubbock to live with her grandmother helped. In church, she found God and the strength to live with herself. "There I learned that God put me on earth for a purpose, like other people, to glorify Him more," she says. "I used to think I don't want to be this way, but now I just go ahead."

CONTINUED REHABILITATION exercises gave Kathleen more control over herself. She learned to walk on her knees to help her grandmother keep the house clean. But even with these improvements, she still wasted most of her time. As other people went to their jobs each day, producing and growing, Kathleen sat at home, watching television, vegetating. "I mean I was really gone," she says.

That changed when she went to Goodwill. Her job has made her days full. She can share a laugh with friends or discuss mutual problems and solutions. At work she finds the joy of actually producing something somebody wants enough to pay her to make. Each day brings her closer to her cherished goal, independence.

When asked what she would do if she lost her job, she replies, "This job means a lot to me. I don't know what I'd do if I lost it. I wouldn't stay home again. Maybe I'd go visit nursing homes. I'd find people like myself to teach because I know what they're going through. I'd find a young person and sing to him so he could see what's possible."

She wouldn't stay home again. The need to do more has become too great and her confidence in herself sufficient. "When I graduated from high school, I had a feeling I wasn't going to make it, but now I feel I will," she says.

Billy Graham Called 'Catalyst' For City's Awakening

MILWAUKEE, WIS. (Special) — Milwaukee experienced an evangelistic awakening unprecedented in its history when the Greater Milwaukee Billy Graham Crusade was held Aug. 8 -12 in the Milwaukee County Stadium, according to the Graham Crusade Information Service.

Milwaukee County Executive and political leader William O'Donnell said, "We have waited for this Crusade a long time. There are citizens here who worked and prayed way back in the 1950's that Billy Graham would have this Crusade."

The Rev. Walter Ballard, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene said "Milwaukee was ready but there needed to be a catalyst. Billy Graham has been that catalyst. There has been a sense of renewal in hearts and churches."

The Archbishop of Milwaukee, the Most Rev. Rembert G. Weakland, told his priests, "It is important that we complement the approach of the Crusade by encouraging persons to renew their commitment to Jesus Christ. We encourage Catholic people who wish to attend the Crusade to do so."

During the five-day Crusade, an average of 30,000 people attended each of the meetings with an average of 2,000 going forward to record their public commitments for Christ. The Rev. Stuart Briscoe, pastor of Elmbrook Church, said, "I'm seeing every indication of a tremendous searching in this city. The city is spiritually eager, more than it has ever been." And the Rev. Ellsworth Freyer, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, added, "Our people are involved and because of it, this has been the best year for evangelism for our church. As a Lutheran, I had written letters to Billy to come. I knew that our community has been ready to hear the gospel and that's what Billy has been preaching for years. Our people want to hear the gospel and we have seen a great harvest."

One minister who has served a downtown Milwaukee church for over 20 years is Dr. Kenneth Bowen, a leader of the black community and pastor of the Mt. Moriah Baptist Church and first vice-chairman of the Crusade. He said, "I see a new experience for the city of Milwaukee. It has brought real excitement by the fact that the prayers of many people have been given visible answers.

"When you see people going forward, you see that Milwaukee is fertile ground. My own people, black people, are responding well. The clergy who sat by and were critical will have to come to grips with a whole new community that has awakened to the gospel. They will have to revise where they are coming from. One lady told me, 'I'm going to have to find a church where the gospel is preached.'"

Then Dr. Bowen added, "Billy Graham is God's man for this. No one could bring this together unless he had the respect of a diverse religious community."

This was Billy Graham's first Crusade in Milwaukee. Newspapers carried front page stories of the meetings and his messages; every night television news programs and talk shows featured the evangelist; he spoke to 900 business and community leaders at a combined civic club luncheon; judges and attorneys had a special reception; and Milwaukee's mayor, Henry W. Majer, noted that the sign on the tower of City Hall spelled out in lights the city's welcome to Billy Graham and the Crusade. Extension ministries by Crusade associates were conducted daily at the University of Wisconsin, the Wisconsin State Fair, in hospitals and prisons. A five-day Billy Graham School of Evangelism drew 700 clergy and faculty to study evangelism on the campus of Marquette University.

Commenting on the large number of recorded decisions for Christ and what would happen after the Crusade, the Rev. Ted Shickley, pastor of Lake Drive Baptist Church, said, "I see a lot of good religious people who are realizing that in addition to their church membership they need Christ as their personal Savior.

"The ministers who are involved have had their horizons raised. Now, the impact rests entirely upon the local churches. If we do the follow-up, this Crusade will have a long-lasting effect on our city. The responsibility rests entirely upon us."

Baptists Map Plans For Changes

GLORIETA, N.M. (Special) — The Southern Baptist Home Mission Board's directors voted at their summer meeting to make changes in the agency's efforts to plan and strengthen new churches and expand work among cultural and ethnic groups.

The changes included elevating the departments of language missions and church extension to division status in the Missions Section.

Also, directors approved a reorganization of the associational missions division, to provide stronger emphasis on planning and training functions, a board spokesman said.

"These are not changes just for the sake of change," said William G. Tanner, executive director-treasurer. "The restructuring is the culmination of three years of careful study, seeking to determine how we can be more effective in our plans to reach our nation for Christ, and to fulfill the twin aims of Broad Mission Thrust -evangelization and congregationalization," Tanner said.

He said elevation of language missions and church extension, the two areas most responsible for the efforts to congregationalize the nation, gives them enhanced visibility and puts them in closer relationship to administrative leadership.

To elevate the two new divisions, directors approved a proposal to divide the missions ministries division into three divisions.

Under the reorganization, M. Wendell Belew continues as director of the missions ministries division, which supervises the work of the departments of interfaith witness, Christian social ministries, cooperative ministries with National Baptists and special missions ministries.

P. J. (Jack) Redford, who has been director of the department of church extension, becomes director of the division of church extension, and Oscar Romo, who has headed the language missions department, becomes director of the division of language missions.

Under board structure, departments are part of divisions, which in turn relate to sections. The four sections — missions, evangelism, planning and services — form the administrative council which works with Tanner.

Belew, a board staffer for 24 years, will become responsible for the ministry aspects of the missions effort.

"I am very pleased with the election of Jack Redford and Oscar Romo as division directors," Belew said. 'I don't know of two men who can do a better job than they."

Of his own responsibilities under the reorganization, Belew says he sees it as "an enlarged ministry. I believe we must show the world how much we love it, and that we love it because we love Jesus Christ. I see all kinds of doors open for us to minister to the world. I don't believe we have begun to see the kinds of ministries which are available for us to perform."

Belew added he will be "trying to blaze new trails. Many denominations have died because they went in the wrong direction in ministries. I think we can live and can extend our outreach with the correct direction in ministries."

Under the reorganization, Belew will supervise a division with four program areas, 520 missions personnel and a budget of $6.1 million. Romo will supervise a program of 1,350 missions personnel and a budget of $5.3 million, and Redford will oversee 920 personnel and a budget of $4 million.

The new structure will put six divisions in the mission section: associational missions, church loans, language missions, church extension, chaplaincy and missions ministries.

In their other action, the directors reorganized the associational missions division, creating the new post of associate director, and filling that job by electing James V. Hamblen, who has been associate director of the department of metropolitan missions.

Hamblen's new responsibilities include a heavy emphasis on planning and training for the division, according to James Nelson, director.

Hamblen, 45, has been on the board's staff since earlier this year, moving to his post in the metropolitan missions department from a position as national field consultant in metro missions. He was elected a missionary associate of the board in 1973, serving as consultant in new-town planning.

He is a graduate of the University of Texas and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. Prior to being associated with the board, he was director of Columbia Baptist Fellowship in Columbia, Md., and pastor of churches in Houston, Combes, Dallas and Taylor, Texas, and in Loco, Okla.

To fill his position as associate director of metropolitan missions, directors elected Jere Allen, 45, director of special mission ministries for the Alabama Baptist State Convention.

Allen, a native of Greenville, Miss., has been with the Alabama convention staff since 1977. Previously, he was consultant for churches in changing communities, also working with the Alabama convention. He has been pastor of churches in Richmond and Roanoke, Va., and in Ashland, Ky.

Allen is a graduate of Auburn University, Southern Seminary and Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va.

Dr. Catherine Hess, who relates the results of the research, tells of her own skepticism of Teen Challenge until the study showed what she called 'startling results.

"The Jesus Factor" was filmed at the Teen Challenge Training Center in Rehrersburg, and shows young men going through the program, in their classrooms, work areas, the chapel and during a graduation exercise. In addition, some of the studnts share on film how Teen Challenge's Christ-centered focus has made a difference in their lives.

Head Of Baptist Mission Board Self-Proclaimed 'Missionary'

GLORIETA, N.M. (Special) — If R. Keith Parks must choose one word to describe himself, it's "missionary."

Involvement in missions has been "the dominant note in my life since God first called me," says the man elected to succeed Baker J. Cauthen as executive director of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

Parks, 51, is also a former cowboy, jogger, do-it-yourselfer, and a man deeply dedicated to his family.

Parks, who becomes executive director-elect Sept. 3, has been a missionary to Indonesia, has counseled prospective missionaries, has administered missions in Southeast Asia, and has served as one of the top administrators of the Foreign Mission Board offices in Richmond, Va.

Now what he would most like to do is to inform Southern Baptists about missions needs, so that they can live up to their potential.

"We must underscore some basic concepts," Parks declares. He believes, for example, that communicating the gospel to the entire world is a mandate laid on the churches and on individual Christians, not on the Foreign Mission Board. The board stands "ready to channel all their resources as efficiently and with as great a strategic impact" as possible, he says.

"The Lord is working in some thrilling ways around the world," Parks continues. "There are more 'winnable' people than at any other time in history." In that context, he insists, Southern Baptists "have the potential to be used of God to really make an impact."

"We have not yet been willing to pay the cost in dollars that it will take," he points out, adding that giving must move to "a new level."

Board members at the session in which Parks was elected seemed moved by the statements offered by both Parks and his wife, Helen Jean, about their personal, spiritual and missions development. Their statements and Parks' response to questions from board members reflected both the serious throughts and the casual humor that is typical of the couple.

After the affirmative vote, the entire Parks family appeared before the board. The testimonies of the three sons, daughter and daughter-in-law completed a portrait of a close-knit loving Christian family.

All four children have acknowledged a call to the gospel ministry or to missions. Their decisions, their father reports, have been their own, for he and Mrs. Parks have taken care to avoid unduly influencing their vocational choices. "We just told each of them, 'we want you to follow the Lord's will for your life,' related Parks.

Most of his personal activities are family related. Outings as a family and travel together have contributed to their closeness.

Parks jogs up to two miles a day fairly regularly, usually at night. For him, the exercise also provides a quiet period for reflection. He plays tennis and enjoys home repair chores.

A Texan, Parks has been at home on horseback since childhood. His father raised cattle and young Parks soon learned to handle the herds. He wielded a branding iron and otherwise earned his spurs as a working cowboy.

He still recalls the break he took from a busy travel schedule as a missionary personnel secretary, while his father was still living. Parks stopped at home in Arkansas, where the family had moved, and spent most of the day in the saddle, working the herds and helping to dehorn cattle. He calls it one of his most relaxing times.

Approaching his new position, Parks speaks frankly about changes in mission strategy, past and present. The Foreign Mission Board "has been sensitive to change and has changed more than any other organization of any size in Southern Baptist life," he says.

But he also sees the need for "new wineskins, as is true in every generation and in every shift."

He is pledged to the basic approach of career missionaries, for example, but he also struggles with the need to minister to the areas where missionaries are not permitted residence. He points to the need for a "worldwide strategy in terms of those large masses of people where we cannot send career missionaries." With changes in the world coming so rapidly, Parks adds, "We're going to have to develop some alternate strategies."

Parks is devoted to prayer and the Bible. "I have always been committed to the scripture as the word of God, a very personal guide to me," he declares. "I accept the whole Bible as being God's revelation to man."

Parks requests continued prayer support, and says the convention's missions outreach will be what God intends "if we mobilize the prayer support of Southern Baptists."

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

A LITTLE BOY OF MINE was brought to our Institutes of Religion and Health in New York by his mother. His family physician had given him all the tests he could, but the child continued to complain of persistent stomach-ache. He was a tense little boy; he told us that clocks seemed to tick too fast and TV entertainers shouted too loud.

Our clinic studied the child and sent a social psychiatrist into the home to study the living situation of the boy. The father, he found, was a restless businessman who came home every night with worry on his face and a briefcase under his arm. At dinner he talked only of business problems. After dinner he disappeared into his study and worked all evening.

The mother was a joiner, a member of every possible committee. The phone started ringing for her at eight o'clock every morning and never seemed to stop. "The telephone drives me nuts," her son told our psychiarists.

We went to work on the father and convinced him that his attitudes and actions were a cause of his son's trouble. Our doctors found that the father was punishing himself for sins he had committed earlier in life and was literally, although unconsciously, trying to work himself to death. We helped him find peace of mind so that he was eventually able to better organize his work so as to get it done during office hours.

THEN WE PERSUADED THE mother to reduce her organizatinal activities and to confine her telephoning to the period from nine to three o'clock when her boy was in school. And we helped the child himself to find friends and playmates (not as easy a task in New York as it is in smaller towns and cities). He needed more normal contact with children his own age living as he did exclusively in an adult world.

One of our clinic ministers then asked the man and woman if they ever had prayed in their home. They said they had not. He then suggested that they should offer prayer regularly and the husband said to the wife, "Okay, you pray at the dinner table."

"Oh, no" she said, "You're the head of the house."

It was the first time his wife had ever made that admission and it pleased him so much that he undertook the obligation. He learned to pray and to create a prayerful atomosphere in that home. A new sensation of peace, a slower tempo and a greater feeling of love flowered among the members of that little family.

It was not long before the boy's stomach-ache and his tension vanished. He had been tense because he was living in the midst of a tense situation. And where there is tension in the home the children suffer even more than the adults. In this case, the solution required not only doctors to find and scientifically heal the basic causes of the trouble, but a pastor to teach the family the therapeutic value of prayer.

In the Apocrypha you will find written, "Of the Most High cometh healing." And there is no greater need in America today than for the healing of God in the emotions, the minds and the souls of men. It is fortunate that the willing collaboration of our religious leaders with our doctors, psychiatrists and social workers can result in principles and techniques which lead to normal, healthy lives of emotional control and mental peace.

Brownfield Church Observes 75th Anniversary On Aug. 26

The First United Methodist Church of Brownfield, Terry County, will celebrate its 75th anniversary with an all-day homecoming August 26.

The day's activities will begin with a 9 a.m. coffee hosted by the Barraca Sunday School Class in the parlor. The adult and youth Sunday school divisions plan class reunions during the 9:45-10:45 hour, while the children's division will have special visitors.

Guest preacher for the worship service will be the Rev. James E. Tidwell of San Antonio, with the Rev. Merriel H. Abbott and Dr. Dallas D. Denison assisting. Special anthems by the sanctuary choir will be under the direction of Larry Sanders.

The noon "dinner on the grounds" for all will be served in Webber Hall with the Come Double/Pendenna classes as hosts. The memory service begins at 2 p.m. in the sanctuary where memories will be shared by old and new members of the church. The day's festivities will close with a communion service.

An estimated 1 million people, perhaps the largest crowd to witness a single event in history, watched the blastoff of the Apollo 11 spacecraft that helped put men on the moon 10 years ago.

New Church Being Built At Matador

MATADOR (Special) — Construction of a new church edifice by the United Methodist Church is nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy by the end of the month, according to the Rev. Kenneth Kirk, pastor.

Tentatively scheduled are first services August 26, open house the following Sunday and dedication of the new building at a future date.

The new church replaces the brick structure built in 1926, which was damaged beyond repair in 1978 when the sanctuary roof caved in and the west wall collapsed. Since then, the church membership has been meeting in the adjacent educational building, built in 1962. Work on the new building was begun in April.

The new building is located just west of the former structure. A ten-foot entry hall divides it into a sanctuary at the north end with the kitchen and fellowship hall on the south side. There are no windows; illumination will be by electricity, but on the north wall is a narrow, decorative panel which contains an antique stained-glass window.

The pews were all salvaged from the damaged building and have been restored by one of the Sunday School classes. The church piano was also saved, but a new organ will replace the old instrument.

Organized in 1892, the First United Methodist Church of Matador celebrated its 75th anniversary in 1967. The first place of worship was constructed in 1900; the brick building in 1926, the educational building in 1962 and the parsonage in 1965. Forty pastors have served the church since its organization.

Courses To Be Offered Here

The Department of Bible at Abilene Christian University will begin offering graduate courses in Lubbock in September leading to the Master's degree in "Biblical and Related Studies," according to an announcement from the ACU Bible Department.

The new program is designed to encourage the professional growth and development of persons presently engaged in full-time church work. Other persons active in church life, however, are also welcome in the course and would benefit from the instruction, said Dr. B. J. Humble, head of the department.

Dr. Ian Fair will teach two New Testament courses while Dr. Furman Kearley will offer Christian Evidences. The three courses (nine semester hours) will meet once every two weeks, Friday evening and all day Saturday, beginning August 31, at the Christian Development Center at Lubbock Christian College.

PRIMARY TARGETS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Children aged 17 and under the age of 3 are the two primary targets in child abuse cases. David Root, executive director of a family stress hotline and service in Santa Barbara, Calif., says cases involving the older children don't get as much publicity, but can often be more harmful. In an article in Co-Ed Magazine, Root said such abuse may be emotional neglect, excess teasing, belittling, withholding love and generally not caring. He said emotional neglect is especially painful for teen-agers because the teen years are a period of low self-esteem.

Good Management Cuts Bulling

Research Points To Implants, Pen Size

AMARILLO (Special) — Feedlot managers can do a lot to control the buller syndrome, according to Dr. Mike Irwin, research veterinarian with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The syndrome is characterized by simulated feminism in the buller steer. Bullers are ridden by penmates until affected steers become exhausted and collapse. The condition exists until affected steers are taken out of pens and isolated.

Researchers have estimated the loss for each buller in a feedlot at about $24 per head. Feedlot records show that about 3 percent of steers in feedlots acquire the syndrome.

Considering there are 4.8 million steers fed in the Southern Great Plains each year, about 144,000 steers have the malady annually. A little multiplication shows the loss from the buller syndrome is more than $3.4 million annually.

Irwin was helped in this research by Dr. M. S. Moss, Dr. D. P. Hutcheson, and R. D. Melendy.

The experiment was conducted from October 1976 to October 1977 in a 17,000-head capacity feedlot near Bushland. A total of 20,400 mixed breed steers were observed during the study.

The cattle were fed a conventional high energy concentrate and roughage diet, and received normal vaccines and vitamin injections. In addition, about one-third of the steers received either diethylstilbestrol (DES) or zearalonal (Ralgro), and a combination of progestrone and estradiol (Synovex).

The researchers took detailed weather measurements to decide if it affected bulling. They took blood samples from 26 bullers that were implanted with Synovex for examination of gonadal hormones.

The researchers observed 409 bullers. The time interval between entry to the feedlot and the onset of bulling varied greatly. The average was 61 days, but the range was from one to 222 days.

The researchers checked the amount of space steers had per pen in big and small pens. Crowding had no effect on bulling, but there was more bulling in large pens filled with many animals.

A total of 356 bullers was from pens containing more than one group of cattle which entered the feedlot at different times. There were only 53 bullers in pens where cattle entered the feedlot at the same time. Entry weight had no effect on the incidence of bulling. Weather a week before bulling started had no effect.

Irwin said occurrence of bulling depended on the implant used. The highest percent of bulling was 2.46 percent when steers were implanted with Synovex. There was 1.37 percent with DES and steers treated with Ralgro had only 0.46 percent bulling. Implanting at seven days after arrival caused more bulling than implanting four days after arrival.

Previously, researchers had suspected that gonadal hormones in bullers were higher than in normal steers. However, the opposite proved to be the case, according to Irwin. Serum concentrations of estradiol and testosterone in buller steers were lower during bulling than after isolation and recovery from syndrome.

After all the work, the researchers concluded that the amount of bulling is reduced by using small pens of cattle that arrive the same day. Growth promoting implants should be made within four days of arrival.

"Our research has shown that incidence of bulling in feedlots can be decreased if certain management practices are followed," Irwin said. "If the problem could be reduced by one-third, it would save feeders more than $1 million annually."

U.S. Grain Exports Expected To Set New Record Volumes

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — With the exception of a good share of the winter wheat, most 1979 crops are not yet in the bin. In fact, they are still growing in the fields. Yet this country expects to sell hundreds of millions of bushels of grain, and soybeans, for shipment next fall and winter.

Can we deliver?

Actually, some sort of disaster could happen. The world might even come to an end.

But this isn't probable. If the world did come to an end, who would worry about crops, exports or anything else?

The probabilities are the United States can deliver all grain currently sold and more. In fact, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is predicting that exports in the year ahead will set a new record in volume, exceeding those of the 1978-79 marketing seasons.

This prediction is based on the assumption that yields this summer and fall will be somewhere near current predictions, although the exact amounts won't be known until the harvests are over. Or, to be more specific, when the crops are in the bin.

Because of the relative strong demand for U. S. grains this year (as indicated by prices), markets are expected to be "nervous" until harvests are complete or until the trade is pretty well convinced through the usual crop reports on what the totals will be.

Meanwhile, the USDA periodically projects what it expects the total supply will be on each individual grain and this total, of course, will include the carryover plus this year's production. Then the USDA projects how much of the grain will be used domestically including that for seed, for exports, and finally, what the carryover will be for next year.

In midsummer, all these figures relative to the future are temporary. But they are a source of extremely important information to farmers and the trade.

On wheat, the USDA has estimated the total crop this year at 2,101 million bushels with imports of 2 million bushels. These minor imports come from Canada in the Buffalo area. That part of Canada, around the Great Lakes, is nearer to U. S. mills than to those in Canada. The United States also imports a little corn from the same location. The wheat carryover on June 1 of this year was 922 million bushels, so production, plus the imports and the carryover make a total supply of 3,025 million bushels, compared with last year's total of 2,978 million bushels. It should be remembered that not all of this year's wheat crop is in the bin. The spring wheat crop, in particular, has not been harvested.

For this year, (June 1, 1979 to May 31, 1980), the USDA projects domestic consmption of 865 million bushels of wheat, just a little over the 861 million bushels used in the last year. But on exports, the USDA projects 1,300 million bushels, compared with 1,194 million last year. The exports at this early date are given in a range; the 1,300 million bushels is midpoint of that range.

At any rate, total utilization is projected at 2,165 million bushels which, when subtracted from the total supply of 3,025 million, leaves a carryover next year of 860 million bushels, down 62 million bushels from this year.

For corn, the latest crop report estimated a yield this year of 6,663 million bushels. Imports are put at 1 million bushels and the carryover expected on Oct. 1 is estimated at 1,312 million bushels. This makes a total supply of 7,976 million bushels.

Total domestic utilization is projected at 4,840 million bushels which would compare with the 4,775 million estimated for the current corn year. Exports for next year are projected at 2,400 million bushels, compared with the estimate of 2,100 million for this year. So, exports and domestic use next year are projected at 7,240 million bushels. This would exceed the record being set this year of 6,875 million bushels. The total utilization figure subtracted from the total supply would leave a carryover on Oct. 1, 1980 of 736 million bushels, far under the current estimate on this year's carryover of 1,312 million bushels.

For all feed grains, that is the corn, oats, grain sorghum and barley lumped together, the total supply this year is put at 249.1 million metric tons, total utilization 222.4 million metric tons with a carryover next year of 26.7 million metric tons, which would compare with the estimated carryover this year of 46.8 million metric tons.

Record soybean production is predicted for this year at 2,032 million bushels and the carryover expected on Sept. 1 is estimated at 150 million bushels, making a total supply of 2,182 million bushels. There are no soybean imports. Domestic use next year is projected at 1,145 million bushels and exports at 800 million or a total utilization of 1,945 bushels, compared with the estimate for this year of 1,869 million bushels. The utilization figure subtracted from the supply would give a carryover on Sept. 1, 1980 of 237 million bushels.

Significant in all these figures is the fact that in all instances, utilization of the grains and soybeans projected for the year would be greater than for the current year. And, with the exception of soybeans, the carryovers next year should be less than those estimated for this year.

As mentioned, these crops are not yet in the bin. Obviously, any marked deviation from the yields predicted by the USDA would affect prices.

Additional Income Seen In Irrigated Pastures

LAS CRUCES — (Special) — Irrigated pastures have interested more and more people in recent years. However, currently most irrigated pastures are utilized more as a convenience than as a cash crop.

Small tracts are often used by nonfarmers to hold saddle horses or other animals for a hobby. Other uses have been in conjunction with ranching operations as holding sites, calving pastures or supplement to rangeland grazing.

"However, irrigated pastures can compete with other cash crops if properly managed and watered," says Charles Glover, Extension agronomist at New Mexico State University.

Although pastures do not require a large labor force, they do require intensive management to be highly productive, the NMSU agronomist says. It takes much more than planting, watering and turning animals in to graze.

Pastures require good water management because they require more water than most other crops grown in New Mexico except alfalfa. Leveling and benching are necessary when flood irrigation is used on broadcasted pastures. The land preparation is not as critical if a sprinkler system is used.

A pasture should be irrigated frequently with relatively light applications, Glover says. The frequency and amount varies with soil type, climate, time of the year and the species in the pasture.

In general, sandy soils need one to three acre inches every seven to 10 days, medium textured soils need two to four inches every 10-14 days and fine textured soils require three to five inches every two weeks.

It is often necessary to irrigate once or twice during the winter months. Sprinkler systems provide a more accurate water application than does flood irrigation, the agronomist says.

Fertilization is quite important for good pasture production, Glover says. The fertilization program depends on the composition of the pasture. For example, an all grass pasture will require about 00 pounds of nitrogen and 60 pounds of phosphate. A mixed pasture composed of grass and legume needs 150-175 pounds of nitrogen and 75-100 pounds of phosphate.

For the best pasture performance, the phosphate should be applied in the spring and the nitrogen split into two or three applications with the first in the early spring.

Composition of a grass-legume pasture can be altered by fertilization — with the percentage of grass being increased by additional nitrogen and legumes increased by additional phosphate.

Grazing should not begin until the grass is a foot high, and the animals should be removed when the pasture has been grazed to five to six inches.

Overgrazing can reduce the food reserves of the plant and retard recovery. Many times the plants are damaged and the stand is reduced. When the animals have been taken off, it is desirable to mow the pasture to a uniform height. This allows uniform regrowth of succulent plants.

Droppings should also be scattered at this time. Scattering the droppings aids in better water distribution as well as providing more uniform grazing as animals seem to avoid areas where droppings are concentrated.

Production is improved when the pasture is divided into sections to facilitate rotational grazing. It is necessary to have at least two sections and more are desirable.

Rotating the grazing allows the sections to be mowed, irrigated, fertilized and to make regrowth before it is to be grazed again. The section should be irrigated as soon as possible after the animals have been removed. This helps initiate rapid regrowth.

The pasture should never be grazed when irrigating. Grazing during irrigations or when the pasture is wet may result in damage to the plants which will reduce the stand.

Reduction in stand leads to weed infestation. Weeds not only reduce the forage yield and quality, they may also have adverse effects on the animals.

A good thick stand of pasture is the best means of weed control. Mowing provides some partial control, but chemical applications may be required in many cases. Chemicals can control many weeds, but be careful to use the right chemical and rate at the proper time.

Careful handling of herbicides is essential because there are growing restrictions. The safe use and effectiveness of a herbicide depend on following the label directions. All limitations, restrictions and warnings are included in the label.

The carrying capacity of a pasture will depend on the composition of the pasture, amount of water available, the kind and amount of fertilizer used and other management practices, Glover says. A well managed pasture is capable of carrying 2½ to 3½ animal units per acre. An animal unit is normally considered to be one horse, one cow and calf, two yearling calves or five sheep.

Good productive pastures can be maintained for longer periods of time when well managed, Baker says. Good pasture management is the key to a longer living, better producing irrigated pasture, he adds.

Lorenz's Hog Ranks Second

Selected second in class II among 142 gilts shown at the 1979 Yorkshire Summer Type Conference was LOF8 Power Slim Miss 20-3 consigned by Lorenz Farms of Lubbock.

Lorenz's entry sold in the national sale of breeding stock to Ronald Holling of Alton, Kan. for $850. This gilt, placed by judge Roger Hale of Carthage, Ind. at the top of her class, was a Dec. 16 daughter of LOF7 Slim Bulldozer 2-6.

The Yorkshire Summer Type Conference was held in Austin, Minn.

Ag Emphasis Continues As Force Behind Fairs

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Who goes to the fair these days?

One in every five of Indiana's 5.3 million residents and just about all her 100'000 farmers, that's who goes to the Indiana State Fair.

Some fairs may be struggling financially or dropping the emphasis on agriculture, but in Indiana, ranking third in the nation in corn and hog production and fourth or fifth in soybeans, the state's farm-oriented fair continues to pack them in.

Among fairs, Indiana is fourth or fifth in North America each year, based on attendance. Toronto's 20-day fair always leads the way, with Texas a strong second. Other giants include Ohio, Minnesota, Los Angeles County and Tulsa, Okla.

Balloon races, mule pulls, harness racing, band competitions, corn roasts, big name entertainment and the backbone of the fair, livestock judging, helped Indiana set attendance records the last nine years. It packed in more than 1.3 million visitors in 1978 and this year aims to break the 1.5 million mark by the time it closes Aug. 26.

Some fairs are changing their emphasis for financial reasons.

"Alabama flat went broke," says publicity supervisor Lew Breiner. "When it started up again, they ended up with darn near a carnival.

"Our fair board is dedicated to agriculture and it will always be, because that's what makes the fair."

When the board spends money, it spends it ... things like a 4½-acre cattle barn, or air conditioning the farm buildings. The 235-acre grounds boast 57 permanent structures, many of them handsome red brick. Some are rented out for use on a year-round basis.

The Indiana State Fair boasts it has the largest swine show, largest 4-H section and largest cheerleading contests in the country.

One of the biggest draws is Band Day, when dozens of high school bands have four minutes each to strut their stuff and be judged on music, maneuvering and special effects.

Marion County, which basically is Indianapolis, has 16,000 4-H members, the largest county group in the nation. City 4-H members and their brothers and sisters from the farm are one of the strongest elements of the fair. They take part in everything from cattle judging to dressmaking to public speaking.

"This is really a big youth fair. The future of America rests with youth, and again it goes back to agriculture," Breiner said.

"A kid 14, 15, 18 years old, he's going to be running that farm in a few years, and he might as well start in farming."

The first Indiana State Fair in 1852 drew 30,000 people, many of whom drove for days in wagons to attend. That fair took in $8,853, of which $2,855 was profit.

Now, the fair receives about $400,000 from property taxes, and $5 million from ticket sales.

"Fairs are what stimulate agriculture," Breiner said. He said farmers still get together at the fair to discuss ways to improve crop growing and livestock feeding. This year they may swap tips on corn stills to produce alcohol for their tractors.

U. S. COTTON PRODUCERS ARE BEARING a heavy share of the oil price burden, but there may be a silver lining in that dark cloud.

A recently completed analysis by Cotton Inc. indicates the impact of rising oil prices will be felt more severely by synthetic fiber producers, giving cotton a price advantage over its competition.

As a result, say the economists, "the 1980s will provide the best opportunity in years for cotton producers to recapture some of the share of the fiber market lost to synthetics in the 1960s and early 1970s."

Daniel Troxler, associate director for demand economics, notes that the cost of producing such synthetic fibers as polyester rises extremely rapidly as crude oil prices increase because these fibers are made directly from petroleum derivatives.

"HIGHER COSTS OF RAW MATERIALS, however, are only part of the reason that polyester staple producers have increased fiber prices twice since the beginning of the year and have unofficially informed mill customers that another increase is planned for September," he adds.

In 1974, when the cost of a barrel of oil in the United States was only $9.07, the total cost plus return for producing polyester staple was 52 cents per pound, Troxler says.

By 1978, oil in this country averaged $12.46 a barrel and the cost plus return of producing polyester rose 14 cents per pound to 66 cents, he adds.

"The selling price of the fiber was only 46 cents in 1974 and 54 cents in 1978," Troxler says. "At these selling price levels, polyester producers were able to cover the costs of raw materials, energy and other costs, but they were not getting a satisfactory return on their investment."

Looking ahead, Troxler says the average cost of a barrel of oil in the United States is projected to be $16 in 1980 and may be $23.50 in 1985.

"AT THESE CRUDE OIL LEVELS, Arthur D. Little, Inc., one of the nation's most respected technical consulting firms, estimates that the cost of raw materials alone will jump to 52 cents per pound of polyester in 1980, almost double the cost in 1978," Troxler says. "By 1985, raw materials are expected to rise another 25 cents to a level of 77 cents."

Over the seven-year period, Troxler says, energy and all other costs for polyester producers are expected to increase 55 percent.

"Measured another way," he adds, "the cost plus return for polyester staple is expected to increase at a rate of 11 percent per year from 1978 to 1985, or 5 percent greater than the rate of inflation forecast by Arthur D. Little for the economy over the same period."

The Cotton Inc. economist also observes that production of synthetic fibers currently is running close to capacity. "If polyester staple producers are to maintain their relative share of the fiber market," he says, "new (plant) capacity will be required by the early 1980s, and market prices will have to rise dramatically."

He points out that rayon plants are old — the newest was built about 25 years ago. In addition, strict and costly pollution control standards have been placed on rayon plants, he adds.

"COMBINED, THESE FACTORS HAVE PUSHED the out-of-pocket costs of producing rayon from 28 cents per pound in 1974 to an estimated 58 cents in 1980," he says. "Adding in the return on investment necessary to encourage new capacity, the total cost of producing rayon in 1980 soars to an estimated $1.13 per pound.

"Since capacity use is nearing the practical limit, and since no expansion is planned, displacement by rayon of other synthetics or cotton at mills appears remote."

Troxler says higher oil costs and an inflationary economy also will have an impact on cotton production costs.

He points out that farmers consume large amounts of diesel fuel in operating ever-larger pieces of farm machinery.

"Equipment prices have gone up 75 percent since 1974, and the cost of labor to operate them has gone up more than 50 percent," he says. "Cotton is a major user of agricultural chemicals, many of which are derived from the same petro-chemical building blocks as synthetic fibers."

COTTON PRODUCERS, HOWEVER, HAVE changed production practices to reduce their use of pesticides and fertilizer, Troxler says, and cotton production is shifting westward to areas where costs per pound appear to be less than in the Southeast and Mid-South.

"Due both to changing practices and to regional shifts in acreage," the economist says, "the costs of producing cotton in the United States have not increased as fast as the cost of living.

"Prices of cotton...have increased 33 percent in the last five years, while the Consumer Price Index has gone up 45 percent," he says.

"In the future, it is reasonable to expect that cotton production costs will not rise as rapidly as either energy costs or the overall cost of inflation."

DURING MOST OF THE 1970s, POLYESTER has been cheaper than cotton, Troxler says. Today, he adds, polyester still is cheaper than cotton, but the difference has decreased. As the cost of oil-based raw materials surges upward, he says, the price advantage may turn to cotton.

"Price advantage, however, isn't the only factor determining fiber choice," Troxler points out. "Polyester was much more expensive than cotton during the years before 1972 when it was eroding cotton's share of the market. During that time the synthetic fiber producers were meeting no marketing competition from cotton. With the formation of Cotton Inc., that changed fast.

"Now with the price advantage likely to be on the cotton producer's side, and a continued strong Cotton Inc. program, the 1980s will provide the best opportunity in years for cotton producers to recapture more of the share of the fiber market lost to synthetics in the 1960s and early 1970s."

Aminoil USA Workers Set 25-Year Safety Mark That Defies All Odds

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (Special) — In a line of work where employees are considered lucky if they can get through a year without a lost-time accident, a group of Aminoil USA workers has set a safety mark that defies all the odds.

Aminoil's Petroleum Engineering Test Section (P.E.T.S.), a unit involved in well testing, recently completed 25 years without a lost-time accident, despite the hazards inherent in their work.

"You can be lucky for a year, or even a few years," says Aminoil's Western Division Manager Bill Donnelly, "but nobody working under these conditions is lucky for 25 years. It's just not possible to achieve this kind of a first class safety record without a lot of thinkng ahead and looking out for No. 1 — the individual."

John Martin, who has headed P.E.T.S. since 1963, attributes the success of his unit to the professionalism of its employees. "These people are real pros who have pride in what they are doing because they know how important their work is. The test data that we provide is critical to the engineers who determine how wells can best be produced."

The 25 year safety record of the P.E.T.S. employees can best be appreciated when viewed in the context of their work environment. They constantly use all types of heavy, unwieldly tools in areas of high pressures and high temperatures, such as when testing geothermal wells at The Geysers geothermal steam field in northern California. Opportunities for a momentary lapse of concentration and a subsequent accident occur almost daily.

Perhaps P.E.T.S. employee Tom Leiker touched on one of the main reasons the safety record has remained intact for so long. He describes the unit as more of a family than a department. "When we're out in the field," he noted, "we're working for each other as much as we've working for the company."

Martin pointed out that 21 present and former P.E.T.S. employees have contributed to the record it began.

How long does Martin believe the group's safety record can continue?

"I don't know," he says, "but I've already started to make plans for a 30 year celebration."

Aminoil USA, Inc., along with American Independent Oil Company, is a unit of R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., a diversified, worldwide corporate which is the parent company of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; Del Monte Corp. (processed foods and fresh fruit); R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International, Inc.; Sea-Land Service, Inc. (containerized shipping); RJR Foods, Inc. (prepared foods and beverages); and RJR Archer, Inc. (packaging).

SAFETY CONSCIOUS — Aminoil USA Field Technicians Tom Leiker, left, and Dave Burdine are two employees of the company's well testing section who have contributed to 25 consecutive years without a lost-time accident. Aminoil's Petroleum Engineering Test Section employees worked safely for a quarter of a century despite handling heavy, unwieldy tools in areas of high pressures and high temperatures nearly every day.

Drilling Activity Due To Increase By Year's End

Cliche not withstanding, good news and bad news resulted from WORLD OIL's mid-year analysis of drilling activity in the U.S. On the bright side, supported by indicated plans of both major companies and independent operators, drilling in the second half of 1979 is expected to increase to 25,932 wells and 131.4 million feet of hole — up by a resounding 14 and 15 percent, respectively, over activity recorded during the first six months. This resurgence of drilling should result in a new record for annual footage drilled — 245.5 million feet, almost 1 percent above the 1978 total.

However, because of lower than expected first half performance, the overall drilling forecast in terms of well count has had to be revised downward from that made last January. The current projection now calls for the drilling of 48,624 wells in 1979, 2.6 percent below last year, but still the second best drilling year in the past 20. More important, because it is contrary to the indicated decline, the major drilling states of Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Wyoming are forecast to post gains for the year.

The reduction in operations for the first half was both surprising and sobering, particularly in view of the strong performance of last year. Many reasons for the decline have been postulated, but main causes appear to be (1) monumental confusion bred by an incredibly complicated Natural Gas Act; (2) so much success in finding gas in Texas and Oklahoma (spurred by free market intrastate prices at the time) that the pipelines filled, prices fell and markets evaporated; (3) lack of any early word from President Carter on whether he would decontrol crude oil prices; (4) when decontrol was announced, concern about the windfall tax rider; (5) increased difficulty in raising outside money for drilling deals; (6) EPA's emission control rules that have virtually shut down enhanced recovery operations — and hence, drilling — in a major California area; (7) the usual winter/spring weather factor.

Aside from the weather and surplus gas supply, little ingenuity is required to conclude that the rest of the cited difficulties relate to what the federal government did do, did not do, and might do.

Fortunately, some of the problems are resolving themselves, which has led to the expectation of substantially increased activity for the balance of this year. For example, the gas surplus has eased in the past few weeks, particularly in Texas, where drilling has been especially adversely affected. Too, the Texas Railroad Commission has rescinded its order preventing use of gas as a boiler fuel, thus opening an additional market. And as the administrative nightmare of certifying "new" gas under the Gas Act is sorted out, more operators will be able to qualify for the higher prices it provides. Hopefully, this will return some of the larger rigs to work in deeper drilling areas, which have been hard hit.

According to WORLD OIL, the President's crude price decontrol move was a positive step that had all the potential of putting the rig force back to work — but his windfall profits tax proposal that cancels much of the decontrol incentive is negative. Hopefully, the Senate will be able to modify the punative tax as approved by the House so that at least some substantial additional capital from decontrol can be injected into new drilling and development.

Regrettably and incredibly, says the magazine, Mr. Carter's long-awaited energy speeches of July 15-16 held little for conventional oil and gas, and merit no polite comment. The Carter philosophy of conserving America's way to glory in a no growth economy that must result from energy curtailment because of an import lid is as mind boggling as his plan to place the energy fate of the nation in the hands of untried technologies and the union labor that controls coal. Only a massive effort to develop conventional oil and gas reserves and to expand nuclear energy facilities can span the gap until Buck Rogers and Dr. Huer come up with a magic way to produce synthetic fuels that we can all afford, or NASA gets the rest of the national income to put its big mirror in the sky. The Carter program essentially ignores practicality, a not too surprising move considering past performances, says WORLD OIL.

An important and encouraging sign for 1979 is that operators responding to WORLD OIL's survey were generally bullish — most indicate plans to markedly expand drilling for the balance of the year, many have announced increases in budgets and most agree there are sufficient drillable prospects to support much additional work. Barring any more surprising anti-incentive storm clouds from Washington, there is no reason 1979 should not be another excellent year. With a bit, of political luck, it could even be exceptional.

State-by-State Drilling. As mentioned above, the principal producing states of Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Wyoming are expected to show drilling gains for 1979. At mid-year and despite activity curtailment the first several mouths of 1979 due to the gas surplus and confusion over both the NGA and outlook for oil prices, WORLD OIL's analysis shows Texas drilling was only 71 wells and 358,000 feet of hole behind first half 1978 performance. This is remarkable in view of the drastic drop in Texas rig count during the period. Average rigs running in the state the first half totaled 717, compared to 856 in the same time frame last year.

The two hardest hit areas in Texas, according to the publication, were the gas-prone south central and middle Gulf regions of the state, where holes finaled were running some 261 wells and 22 percent behind last year.

In West Texas (Railroad Commission Districts 8 and 8A), first half drilling totaled 1,577 wells and nearly 9 million feet of hole, compared with 1,665 wells and 9.8 million feet of hole the same period last year, a comparative nominal decline in results considering that average rigs operating during the period dropped from 170 to 126. These drilling totals reflect a trend toward shallower operations in the area.

Texas areas posting notable first six month increases were East Central (District 5), North Central (District 7B) and Panhandle (District 10). Overall, the revised 1979 projection calls for the drilling of 16,931 wells and 90 million feet of hole, up 2.2% and 2 percent, respectively over last year.

Louisiana is perhaps the brightest spot in the U.S. drilling, according to WORLD OIL. Average rig count for the first half was up 10 rigs. However, both North and South Louisiana showed rig declines, while offshore rigs grew markedly by 40 units — from 118 to 158 — over 1978. Oddly, this significant rig increase has not yet been reflected in wells and footage drilled, since first half offshore Louisiana wells finaled totaled only 385, compared to 505 for the first six months of last year. This reflects a greater average well depth, increased operations by mobile rigs in proportion to platform units and delayed reporting. A very large offshore increase to 522 wells is expected the latter half of this year.

Despite the drop in rig count in North and South Louisiana, both areas recorded strong drilling gains in terms of wells and footage for the first half. The reason, says the publication, was easier, faster drilling as indicated by a significant drop in average well depth in both areas. For the year, Louisiana drilling is forecast to be up some 9 percent.

New Mexico, the third major oil state expected to increase drilling this year over last, posted a gain of six average rigs working the first half. The main area of increase the first half was in the oil-prone south east, where wells were up 8 percent over the first half of last year. An overall increase of 4 percent is projected for the state this year.

Wyoming, like New Mexico, has substantially increased activity so far this year as opposed to last. The first six months, average rig count was 13 units over 1978 and wells drilled increased to 666 from 587. The state should have a 6 percent gain in total wells drilled this year, but footage, surprisingly, is expected to drop 3.5 percent, again due to concentration on shallower prospects. During the first half of 1979, average well depth in Wyoming was 6,387 feet, compared to 7,125 feet last year.

WORLD OIL's tabulation shows other oil states of consequence expected to record drilling gains for 1979 are Alabama, Alaska, Florida, Mississippi, North Dakota (which is fast becoming a major oil state), Utah and West Virginia, where shallow gas activity should push drilling over 1,400 wells for this year.

Conspicuous by their absence on the plus side of the ledger are Oklahoma, Kansas, California and Colorado. Oklahoma operations are expected to be down by about 8.8 percent this year, although a strong second half — such as occured last year — could easily shift the state from a decline to an increase. During the first half, average active rigs operating lagged the similar 1978 period by 23 units.

In Kansas, the projection is for 4,593 wells, a drop of 6.5 percent. Active rigs the first half were about 10 less than last year. Much drilling in Kansas is shallow and wells are generally characterized by low production rates. The reduction in activity may be due to a "wait and see" attitude on the part of the independent operators (who drill most of the wells in the state) as related to both oil and gas pricing.

Cause of the drastic decline expected in California this year — and supported by first half activity of 50 percent below 1978 — is easy to pinpoint, says the publication. The culprit is a combination of oil pricing, the EPA and California air control authorities — government, in other words.

An unrealistic and uneconomic oil price of $5.33 per barrel in Kern River field, for example, where steam stimulation is required to efficiently produce most oil, simply does not support the increasing expense of production. In addition, forced shutdown of 110 of 200 steam generators operated by one company due to exceeding SO2 emmission standards on one day has reduced production and will continue to do so. Conversion of the steam generators to meet stringent standards is uneconomic. As a result of all this, enthusiasm for drilling in the area has evaporated and one major — the largest operator — has drastically curtailed its operations. Presumably, other operators faced with similar potential shutdowns are following suit.

Colorado drilling is expected to decline to 1,062 wells, down from 1,253 finaled last year. Part of this drop may be attributed to completion of some major development efforts and part to the general confusion mentioned earlier about pricing regulations.

Productive Wells. Successful well completions this year should total 29,143, nearly a 1 percent jump from the 28,924 recorded in 1978, according to the WORLD OIL study. The influence of natural gas as a primary drilling target is emphasized by the 12,781 total gas wells projected for 1979, a substantial 1,612 well increase over 1978. This should be the seventh year in succession to set a record in gas wells drilled. In fact, fewer oil wells should be drilled this year than last, and the entire modest increase in productive wells of near 1 percent is wholly attributable to gas.

Kingdom Field Given Capacity Rate

A-J Oil News

AUSTIN (Special) — The Railroad Commission has approved a capacity waterflood allowable for oil production on an Amoco Production Co. lease in Hockley and Terry Counties, preventing possible waste of oil which Amoco would be unable to produce under the currently assigned rate of output.

Presently, the 16 wells on the W.G. Frazier lease in the Kingdom (Abo) Field have a total project allowable of 2,128 barrels per day, or 133 barrels per well. Within a year, the Commission has been advised by Amoco, the lease could be producing 3,000 barrels daily of oil as the result of the waterflood project now operating there.

Chairman John H. Poerner and Commissioners James E. (Jim) Nugent and Mack Wallace approved the application for capacity allowable for the Frazier lease during this week's conference on Oil and Gas Division matter. They also directed that authority for other waterflood projects in the field may be granted through administrative channels.

Approval of the Amoco application was recommended by Senior Staff Geologist Bill E. Watson who conducted a public hearing on the request on June 21.

Watson advised the Commission that the maximum lease allowable of 2,128 barrels daily of oil is expected to be exceeded in July or August 1979. Without an adjustment in the allowable, he said, Amoco will be forced to curtail production of the wells, or shut in selective wells.

Kindgom (Abo) Field was discovered in 1969. A waterflood project was initiated there in December 1978. Amoco expects the project to result in the recovery of an additional seven million barrels of oil total over primary production.

Lack Of Incentives Criticized

Railroad Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent today said crude oil imports exceeded President Carter's stated ceiling in each of the last two weeks for which figures are available.

"Increased imports, together with decreased gasoline consumption, is producing an improvement in stocks of gasoline and home heating fuel," Nugent noted in a speech before Lubbock Rotarians.

According to Nugent's figures, U.S. companies imported an average of 8.3 and 8.5 million barrels of crude oil and petroleum products per day in the second and third weeks of July. President Carter's stated import ceiling for the current year is 8.2 million barrels per day on an annual basis.

"The point of these numbers," the Commissioner stated, "is not to dispute the President's goal, but to emphasize our dependence on imports."

"You can't have it both ways," Nugent continued. "As long as domestic production is strangled by red tape and inadequate incentives, the only way to meet consumer expectations is through imports — the very imports that are wrecking our economy and keeping us vulnerable to sabotage and blackmail," he explained.

Nugent cited statistics of the American Petroleum Institute which show gasoline stocks returning to normal levels. Stocks of home heating fuels are growing at rates which should bring them to adequate levels by the beginning of the winter season, he observed.

The Commissioner also cited "supressed demand" for gasoline as a factor in the improved supply situation. In recent weeks, American motorists have been using about ten percent less gasoline than they did a year ago. That amounts to a decrease of almost 30 million gallons a day.

Backed by a bevy of charts and illustrations, Nugent emphasized the need to boost Texas oil and gas production to meet short-term needs. "Exotic fuels and technologies must be developed with deliberate speed," he stated, "but in the short run, domestic production and conservation must be the cornerstones of our energy policy."

Poerner Wants Joint U.S., Mexico Venture

AUSTIN (Special) — Railroad Commission Chairman John H. Poerner has called on the presidents of Mexico and the United States to take the lead in the formation of a joint commission to oversee the development of petroleum resources in the western Gulf of Mexico so that massive, drifting oil spills could be prevented or minimized.

Poerner raised his appeal as tar balls, apparently from the two-months-old uncontrolled oil well blowout in Mexico's Bay of Campeche, were hitting South Texas beaches and fishing grounds.

The RRC chairman divulged that he has written Mexico President Jose Lopez Portillo and President Carter, urging them to consider a joint Mexico-Texas commission for offshore Gulf regions.

"The purpose of the commission would be to exchange ideas related to technology, safety and potential hazards in offshore drilling," explained Poerner.

"As I see it," he added, "we need Mexico and they need us. We are neighbors and neighbors need to help one another.

"Whatever happens in one part of the Gulf of Mexico can affect every other segment of the acquatic treasure. We need to help one another and that is the spirit in which I make this proposal."

Poerner said he has offered his services to the two presidents to mobilize expertise in Texas to serve on the suggested commission.

In announcing his proposal, Poerner noted that Texans have pioneered oilfield technology since Lyne T. Barret, a Confederate veteran, drilled and completed the first oil well in the state in 1866 near Nacogdoches.

Texans' expertise in drilling, completing and controlling oil and gas wells cannot be equalled anywhere in the world, Poerner said in pointing, in particular, to the Houston area's bountiful reservoir of skills, equipment and research which underpin much of the world's petroleum technology.

"This reservoir is further supported by outstanding institutions such as the University of Texas, Texas A&M, and others elsewhere in the state that possess outstanding know-how in petroleum and environmental matters," he cited.

Poerner said the numerous oil discoveries in Mexico in recent years provide evidence that the country has many petroleum engineering experts, who can make substantial contributions to the creation and operation of a Mexico-Texas joint commission to deal with offshore petroleum development.

"We salute their progress and are happy for them," said the Texas energy official.

Lubbock Oil Wells Add $10 Million To Economy

The sale of crude oil and natural gas from Lubbock County wells in 1978 boosted the county economy and accounted for $10 million of the $17.1 billion value placed on Texas production last year, according to Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

In a report on the economic impact of oil and gas industry operations in the top producing counties of Texas, the Dallas-based Association said the county ranked 148th among the 202 counties having marketed production valued at $100,000 or more, not including the sale of natural gas liquids.

The county's wells produced 1.1-million barrels of crude oil, valued at $9.9 million, and 147,000 Mcfs of natual gas, valued at $148,000. Owners of royalty in the county received $1.3 million as their share of the output, the Association said.

"Considering the shortfall in total U.S. petroleum production relative to our nation's energy needs, production from every Texas county is more vitally important today than ever before," said the Association's president, H.B. (Hank) Harkins of Alice, an independent producer and drilling contractor.

In addition to paying local, county, and state property taxes, producers in the county also supported state government through production tax payments estimated at $465,000, according to the Association. Crude oil taxes amounted to $454,000, while natural gas levies totalled $11,000.

Based on Texas Employment Commission figures, some 787 oil and gas industry employees in the county received wages of about $7.3 million in 1978.

In the search for new petroleum reserves in the county, oil and gas operators spend a reported $7.2 million in the drilling of 38 wells, including 12 wildcat, or exploratory wells. This effort resulted in the completion of 26 oil wells, although some $2.4 million was lost in the drilling of 12 dry holes.

Demand For Executives Declines In Southwest

state area including: Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Published quarterly, the Arthur Young Executive Demand Index measures demand in profit-oriented businesses and the demand for all top and middle management positions analyzed by function, industrial grouping, and geographic region. The Index is based upon a systematic sample of advertisements for business executives in major U.S. business publications.

Nationwide demand for business executives declined 9 percent during the second quarter of 1979 compared to the same quarter of 1978. The overall drop is comprised of varied changes among executive functions. While demand for general management and administration executives increased by 41 percent and 42 percent, respectively, the gains were offset by declining demand in other functions, notably engineering and sciences which fell 38 percent.

Commenting on the results of the study, Edwin S. Mruk, a director of the international accounting firm, said "The severity of the decline in the second quarter appears to be in line with the widespread belief that American business is now in a recession."

Mruk pointed out that during the first six months of the year, executive demand rose by 5 percent. "Due to the particularly high level of executive demand noted during the first quarter of the year, the first six months of 1979 show a net gain, despite the current quarter's decline. We will be watching the third quarter index very closely, to determine to what extent corporate hiring plans reflect a serious concern about the economy," he said.

The largest increase in demand during the first half of the year was experienced by general management executives, up 61 percent. "Demand for general managers is again quite strong. This is in marked contrast to 1978, when the market for general management executives was saturated following two years of high demand," Mruk said.

The demand for engineering and science executives declined sharply from last year's high levels, down 38 percent in the quarter and 33 percent for the first six months. Mruk commented that "Management is moving ahead cautiously in acquiring new research and development executives. We anticipate that this category will advance significantly in the future, depending on the boldness of initiatives resulting from the President's energy policy."

Dr. Barry A. Liebling, a manager in the New York Office of Arthur Young, who supervised the analysis said "The West is the only region that has shown consistent increases in executive demand over the past several years." When comparing the current quarter to the second quarter of 1978, demand in the Northeast and Midwest declined moderately. Executives in the Southwest experienced a decline of 14 percent. Dr. Liebling noted that "The Sunbelt, which had formerly seen stable and even increasing levels of demand, is just now yielding to the demand slowdown already affecting other geographic regions."

Executive demand declined 10 percent in the financial services industry during the first half of the year, while manufacturing and non-manufacturing companies increased demand slightly. In the current quarter all industry groupings showed decreased demand.

Based on a mean quarterly demand of 100, the Arthur Young Executive Demand Index dropped to 94 in the second quarter of 1979, compared to a level of 102 on the same period of 1978. A high of 126 occurred in the first quarter of this year.

Arthur Young & Company, founded in 1894, is a general partnership with 65 offices in the U.S. Its international organization includes some 200 offices in more than 50 other countries.

Scathing Report Aimed At FCC

By MIKE WENDLAND

Don't expect any major ruling by the FCC for the next several weeks. The commissioners, under congressional fire for inefficiency, are taking their annual August vacation to review the past and plan for the future.

But next month, when the commission again gathers, it will do so outside of Washington for a series of staff meetings. At the top of the agenda will be a scathing report of FCC operations and management.

The study, prepared by the General Accounting Office at the request of the Senate communications subcommittee, particularly criticizes the agency for a lack of planning.

Although the report itself has yet to be officially released, various sources in Washington agree that it paints a dismal picture of the FCC bureaucracy. Among its many recommendations is a proposal which would cut the number of FCC commissioners from seven to five.

At the same time, however, the GAO believes that the individual commissioners should have larger staffs to keep them better informed of communication trends and developments.

Just what response the commissioners will have to the study is unknown, though agency insiders say they plan to ask for a larger budget.

Besides reviewing the GAO's findings, the early September meetings also will include briefings from the FCC's various bureaus on past and future operations.

At any rate, expect some surprising shake-ups at the agency. We're told that the GAO report is so strongly critical that action is a sure thing. Most of our sources are predicting staff casualties as the commissioners try to short-circuit the criticism with dismissals.

We'll keep you informed.

Q. Whatever happened to the FCC plan to create a code-free ham license? —H. T., Aspen, Colo.

A. Called the communicator class, the license proposal is almost five years old now, and is still kicking around in Washington. While ham operators filed hundreds of opposing comments when the FCC first proposed dropping the Morse code requirements for beginning ham tickets, lots of new, favorable mail is coming in. In particular, a proposal by the American Radio Council to create a codeless VHF amateur license is expected to be officially considered late this year.

It's also extremely significant to note that the United States, in a plan suggested to the World Administration Radio Conference in Geneva, proposed eliminating the Morse code requirement for ham band operation.

Thus, while it still may be some time off, it's an almost sure bet that code-free ham operation will eventually come. And when it does, expect a major boom in the sales of electronic gear, reversing the big losses of the previous months.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, Aug. 19, the 231st day of 1979 with 134 to follow.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

American elder statesmen Bernard Baruch was born Aug. 19, 1870.

On this day in history:

In 1915, two Americans were killed when a German U-boat torpedoed the British liner "Arabic" in the Atlantic Ocean.

In 1955, floods hit the northeastern states and killed 200 people and destroyed or damaged 20,000 homes.

In 1960, U-2 spy plane pilot Francis Gary Powers was convicted in a Moscow court and sentenced to 10 years in prison. He was released 18 months later and exchanged for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel. Powers died in a helicopter crash Aug. 1, 1977.

In 1977, what may have been the most powerful earthquake in recorded history hit the eastern Indian Ocean between Australia and Indonesia. Buildings rattled as far away as Perth, Australia, 1,000 miles to the south.

A thought for the day: American statesman Bernard Baruch said, "America has never forgotten—and will never forget—the nobler things that brought her into being and that lights her path."

Etruscan Art Museum Opens

VATICAN CITY (UPI) —The first museum of Etruscan art and artifacts in Europe, closed for three years of extensive repairs, has been reopened to the public.

Hidden in the Vatican's ornate Belvedere Courtyard, the famous Gregoriano museum was built in 1837 on orders from Pope Gregory XVI. Pope Gregory, fascinated by Etruscan vases, enlisted teams of Vatican workers and sent them into the fields around Rome on a massive hunt for buried artifcts.

The Vatican said the museum had been redecorated and its most precious bronze and terracotta vases placed behind glass plates.

Some classic Greek and Phoenician relics have also been added to the Vatican collection.

STEVE IS DREAMING

IT IS AUGUST, 1794

B-BELLIES ?

EXACTLY! THE INDIANS HAVE NO SUPPLY SYSTEM!

WE'LL THREATEN, THEN HOLD POSITION UNTIL THEY GET HUNGRY! -WHEN HALF OF 'EM FALL BACK TO EAT...

WE HIT THE TIMBER

STEVE AND BILLY, I KNOW HOW YOU FEEL ABOUT HOLLY TOLEDO BEING CAPTURED

YOU'LL SOON HAVE A CHANCE FOR RE-VENGE!

MEANWHILE...INSIDE FORT MIAMIS...

SAH! THE SENTRIES ON THE WALLS REPORT

...THE YANKS ARE FORMING TO ATTACK THE INDIANS!

BLOODY NUISANCE —JUST WHEN I AM ABOUT TO DALLY...

BUT I SHALL BE THERE IN A JIFF!

AND PLEASE SEND THE INDIAN WENCH OUTSIDE TO HER PEOPLE!

I'M TIRED OF HER HANGING ABOUT!

MINNIE HOO-HOO, IT WORKED!

ARE WE READY FOR HALLOWEEN ?

AND HOW!

WHITE LADY, I MAKE BLACK HAIRTOP! HORSE NOT MISS TAIL!

MINNIE, IF IT DON'T 'DO'—WE'RE DONE!

YOU THINK WILL DO?

The BETTER HALF

BY BARNES

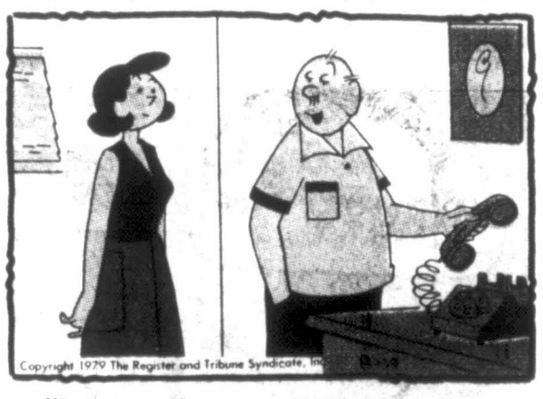
Featuring HARRIET & STANLEY PARKER

"... and before we ask for contributions, remember how happy it made you feel last spring when you took all those church deductibles on your tax report ..."

"Want to wallow in and join the roast pig we're having for dinner?"

"You were in top form as usual tonight with your comments and opinions on the shape of the future, but oh, so profound!"

"Tell me again what a good time I had last night."



"It was a discount offer for disco dancing lessons, but I told her I was already an expert."

JUDGE PARKER

by Harold Ledoux

YOU KNOW WHAT THE HORSE'S NAME WAS, BUCK? BANYAN... AND I THINK HE LIKES ME!

I'M SURE HE DOES! HORSES ARE REAL SMART!

ABBEY SAYS THAT I CAN RIDE HIM WHENEVER YOU CAN BRING ME BACK HERE TO SPENCER FARMS!

WELL, WE DON'T WANT TO IMPOSE ON THESE NICE PEOPLE!

SAM, GET STEVIE SOME ICE CREAM... AND MR. BUCKMAN AND I'LL BE BACK IN A FEW MINUTES!

HAROLD LEDOUX 8-19

DO YOU LOVE YOUR SON?

MORE THAN ANYTHING IN THE WORLD, MISS SPENCER!

THEN WHY DON'T YOU GET SOME SORT OF A JOB THAT DOESN'T REQUIRE YOUR TRAVELING AND BEING AWAY FROM HIM?

©Field Enterprises, Inc., 1979

WHAT ABOUT HIS MOTHER? WHAT HAPPENED TO HER?

I DON'T KNOW! I CAME HOME ONE DAY... AND THERE WAS A NOTE! SHE JUST WALKED OUT! I NEVER HEARD FROM HER AGAIN!

YOU'LL SOON HAVE A CHANCE FOR RE-VENGE!

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: "SO, WENCH, YOU'D DRAW A KNIFE ON ME? YOU WILL PAY FOR YOUR THREAT WITH YOUR HAND!" AND THE FALSE KNIGHT DRAWS HIS SWORD.

THE SQUEAKY VOICE OF GALAN IS HEARD: "HOLD YOUR SWORD, WOMAN BULLY! YOU WILL NEED IT, FOR HERE COME LORD VANOC AND SIR GAWAIN!"

THE SECOND NOBLE THUG STRIKES GALAN TO THE GROUND, DRAWS HIS SWORD AND FACES TOWARD THE SOUND OF GALLOPING HORSES. HE CANNOT SEE TOO WELL BECAUSE OF THE BANDAGES COVERING THE WOUNDS LADY ENID HAD INFLICTED.

LORD VANOC PAYS NO THOUGHT TO THE TWO ARMED THUGS BUT RACES TO HIS WIFE'S SIDE. SHE HAD FAINTED GRACEFULLY AND SIR GAWAIN HAS TO CLEAN UP THE MESS.

THEY FIND THE INNKEEPER AND HIS WIFE WANDERING IN THE RAIN. THEY ARE BROUGHT TO THE INN AND, AMID THE WRECKAGE, WERE ABLE TO SERVE A DINNER.

BEFORE THE TWO FALSE KNIGHTS WERE BURIED, THEY WERE SEARCHED AND ENOUGH MONEY WAS FOUND TO PAY FOR THE DAMAGE TO THE INN. THEN THE HOMEWARD JOURNEY IS RESUMED.

GALAN IS PLEASED AT HIS NEW HOME. THERE ARE FIELDS AND MARSH FOR HAWKING, A TROUT STREAM, AND, IN THE DISTANCE, A DEEP FOREST. WHAT MORE COULD HE HOPE FOR?

NEXT WEEK—— Never Give Up!

REX MORGAN, M. D.

by Dal Curtis

DURING THE FEW MINUTES THAT THE LIEUTENANT LEAVES HIS OFFICE, ROY CALLS KAY AT HOME AND IS NOT AWARE OF THE HOMICIDE DETECTIVE'S RETURN!

STOP TALKING AND LISTEN TO ME, KAY! WHAT DID YOU TELL HIM WHEN HE ASKED IF I WAS HOME WITH YOU THAT NIGHT?

I DIDN'T TELL HIM ANYTHING! ROY, I'VE GOT TO KNOW---DID YOU KILL HER?

ARE YOU CRAZY?

WHAT KIND OF A QUESTION IS THAT?

I HOPE YOU DIDN'T MIND MY USING YOUR PHONE, LIEUTENANT! I KNEW KAY WOULD BE WORRIED ABOUT ME!

THAT'S O.K., ROY!

PERHAPS YOU'D LIKE TO CALL HER AGAIN, BECAUSE I THINK IT'S GOING TO BE SOME TIME BEFORE YOU LEAVE HERE!

MAYBE YOU SHOULD ALSO CALL A LAWYER!
