Borden County land sale stalled

From staff and bureau reports

AUSTIN — State officials learned Friday they may have more trouble than expected in acquiring some Borden County land for a low-level radioactive waste dump.

A landowner negotiating with the state told them he is having problems acquiring all the mineral rights, said Lee Mathews, Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority attorney.

"He will make a stab at getting those things resolved," Mathews said of the surface rights owner. The agency must own the surface and mineral rights for the final site.

The agency is looking at several spots around the state for the waste dump. Even if the state acquires an option to buy the Borden County land, it may not be the final site, officials have said.

Hudspeth County in far West Texas is a prime contender. Dimmit County property in South Texas also has been considered. But agency board members are set to decide Monday whether to renew an option for the Dimmit County property, Mathews said.

Borden County residents met two weeks ago with agency officials to register their opposition to locating the proposed dump here.

Another Borden County resident earlier withdrew his offer to sell land for the site after he received complaints from neighbors, the agency said.

Agency officials are still looking at other possible sites in its 16-county search are of well-suited land.

Those counties include Borden, Howard and Mirchell counties.

Phone center closing

Big Spring's AT&T Service Center will close by April 1, a local worker said.

A Dallas AT&T spokeswoman confirmed the closing, but said she did not know when the center would shut down operations.

"We are assuming March 31 will be our last day," said Ann Pierce, a local employee said.

"As an official act, we have not been told when our last day is," said Miss Pierce, one of the three part-time workers at the center located in the Wheat Furniture store at 115 E. Second.

The center is being closed as a result of the recent Bell System divestiture, the Dallas office said. In an anti-trust ruling that was handed down last year, the mammoth company, one of the world's 10 largest, was ordered to divest its local phone service subsidiaries, including Southwestern Bell.

AT&T was allowed to keep control of long-distance lines, its equipment manufacturing subsidiary and its research laboratories.

Local residents must now pay their bills through Southwestern Bell and rent or buy their equipment through AT&T. The two companies are separate.

With the closing of the local center, residents will have to obtain service and equipment directly through AT&T.

"Customers now have more responsibility," said AT&T Dallas public relations manager Lanel Green.

Mattox files to stop claims by farmworkers

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Matox on Friday asked the 3rd Court of Appeals to void a district court order that the state workers' compensation law excluding farm and ranch workers is unconstitutional.

Mattox said he wanted the matter settled by the Legislature. He said he has asked Gov. Mark White to include the issue in a special legislative session scheduled this summer.

Mattox was joined at a news conference by Tony Korioth, chairman of the Joint Committee on Farmworkers Insurance, who said most of the 25 members of the committee had agreed on a compromise proposal to present to legislators.

Another so-called compromise failed to get the approval of Korioth's committee in December because of opposition from the Texas Farm Bureau.

"I expect the Texas Farm Bureau will not be one of those who approves this bill," Korioth said Friday, "but we have the four state senators on the committee, three of the four representatives and more than 20 members of the committee."

"If we can present the governor with a bill with sufficient signatures of legislators as co-sponsors, I think he will put it on the agenda," Korioth said.

Austin State District Judge Harley Clark signed a permanent injunction last week that would make the Industrial Accident Board consider any injury claim from a farm or ranch worker if the employer had workers compensation insurance on any other workers.

The present state law says farm and ranch workers are excluded from the law.

"There is a question of just which workers are covered and which are not," Mattox said.

He said Clark's ruling "has complicated legal ramifications because there are questions about whether this court ruling in Travis County has statewide application."

"I firmly believe this is a matter to be resolved in the Legislature, not the courts," Mattox saiad.

Mattox said if appeals courts do not act promptly or if the matter is not included in the special session, then "I will at such time reconsider the state's position concerning the appeal."

Shakespeare the Irishman

And other tales of green

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK — Was Shakespeare Irish?

Sure now and "by St. Patrick," as Hamlet swore in Scene 5, Act 1, why not?

Weren't most of the great dramatists who wrote in the Queen's English — God forgive the expression — really Irish? Sheridan. Cosgrove. Farquhar. Goldsmith. Synge. Wilde. Yeats. Shaw. O'Casey. Beckett. Behan. To say nothing of our own Eugene O'Neill.

In Willie Shakespeare's day it didn't pay to let on who you were or where your people came from if you had any Irish in you at all. Good Queen Bess kept Essex and her other generals busy beating up on the rebellious Celts and there was always a gallows handy at either the Tower or Tyburn for traitors to the new religion brought about by her father's divorce.

This may be why, as the Irish scholar T.F. Healy pointed out long ago, we know so little about Shakespeare's life.

"The unique thing about Shakespeare," Healy wrote, "is that he was the quietest man of his time in England, a man oddly silent about his personal identity."

Of his early life, the records only show his baptism on Wednesday, April 26, 1564, in Holy Trinity parish, Stratford-upon-Avon, and a license issued Nov. 27, 1582, for his marriage to Anne Hathaway.

His father, John Shakespeare, doesn't appear in the Stratford records until April 1552, when he was fined 12 pence for not removing a junk pile in front of the house. Much later, in 1592, the father is accused of being a "recusant," for failing to attend the established church, and gives the excuse he was trying to avoid creditors.

I have long suspected that John Shakespeare, who made his living as the town's ale taster, came from Ireland because my Irish sister-in-law, Kathleen Murphy no less, is fond of a bit of doggerel attributed to him. "Them that buys land gets

Reagan toasts the Irish

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, wearing a green tie and a shamrock in his lapel, toasted Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's campaign Friday to halt the flow of arms and aid from Irish-Americans to terrorists in Ireland.

"We support your personal mission in America to end the tragically misguided support of some here for terrorist elements in Northern Ireland," Reagan said over a White House state luncheon honoring FitzGerald, who was similarly attired in green.

The president said he had been told that his ancestors went back to an 11th century warrior-king, Brian Boru.

"If it's true," he told FitzGerald, "I'm exceedingly proud, but sometimes, like you, I wonder what our brave ancestors — those who fought so gallantly over so many centuries against such hopeless odds — what they would say about the valor of people who commit acts of violence and prey on the inno-

Burn victim, 10, takes spelling bee title

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — After surviving the fall of her native Vietnam and a fire attack by her father that burned 85 percent of her body, 10-year-old Thao Tran has found triumph in the peaceful arena of words: first prize in a school district spelling bee.

After winning the Pasadena school district's fourth-grade spelling competition on Wednesday — in which she correctly spelled "accomplishment," "activity," and "additional" to take the bee-bedecked trophy — she talked about her life.

"I don't have a lot of courage," said Thao, whose scarred skin stretches tautly across her face and who breathes through plastic tubes. "I just do it. I'm scared a lot of the time, especially before surgery."

She was among South Vietnam's "boat people," fleeing with her parents and four brothers and sisters when their homeland surrendered to communists. The family settled in Pasadena.

In October 1980 her father, Lai Heu Tran, soaked three of his children with gas while driving them to a school activity. Then he lit a match.

The car became a fireball that careened across a freeway and smashed into the center divider before slamming to a stop on the shoulder. Arcadia police investigator Ron Johnson says the attack remains inexplicable.

Tran died with his 8-year-old son, Phong. Thao was burned over 85 percent of her body; her brother Luu, 16, still is recovering from burns and respiratory problems at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital in Downey.

Thao spent more than four months at Brotman Burn Center in Culver City. She has undergone 20 operations and faces many more, according to Barbara Kammerer of the Alisa Ann Ruch Burn Foundation.

Ms. Kammerer, 40, herself a burn victim, founded the Canoga Park charitable group's school reentry program to help youngsters cope with the trauma of facing their peers again, disfigured by burn scars.

Drawing on personal experience, Ms. Kammerer helped Thao through the days of pain, frightening surgery and physical therapy.

She arranged tutoring while Thao was hospitalized and in October, when the girl was strong enough to return to school, she paid special visits to Loma Alta Elementary School, teaching teachers and pupils about burn victims.

"I told the children that Thao is just like them, but only her skin is different for the time being," Ms. Kammerer said.

Under her blue-and-white dress, the girl wore a pink plastic body suit that helps her skin heal evenly.

"I try not to get nervous, but I am. They tell me that the anesthesia is going to smell sweet, but it always smells awful. Therapy is always painful," she added, then joked that she endures it by "pinching my therapist."

"The part of making friends is hard. People keep staring at me and asking silly questions, and that makes me feel sad. I guess that's just a normal reaction. I guess I would do the same thing ...

"I want to be a teacher or a therapist when I grow up. They help me all the time, and I'm glad. I'd like to help someone too."

cent, sometimes maiming and killing innocent women and children."

FitzGerald told a joint meeting of Congress on Thursday that Americans had an obligation to withhold even moral support from ostensible Irish-American charities that actually supply arms to "people who advocate, or condone, the use of violence in Ireland for political ends."

A senior Reagan administration official said later that Reagan applauded the Irish government's efforts to find a peaceful solution in Northern Ireland, and that both sides generally were satisified that the U.S. government was doing all it could to stop the flow of arms and money to Irish terrorists.

The administration official, who briefed reporters only on the condition that he not be identified, said Reagan and FitGerald, in talks held before lunch, discussed East-West relations, Central America and U.S. trade problems with the European Community.

The theme of St. Patrick's Day, which falls on Saturday — the day after FitzGerald leaves Washington — dominated the decor and guest list in the White House East Room.

Most of the men, including the host and his guest, wore green ties and shamrocks. Mrs. Reagan wore a green suit. Tablecloths and centerpieces were green. The first course was celery and avocados, and the main course was sole on spinach.

Among the guests were such prominent Irish-Americans as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and actress Maureen O'Hara, who sat next to Reagan.

FitzGerald said in his toast that the president's planned visit to Ireland on June 2 already was the talk of the country.

"We know how much you cherish your Irish heritage, and how much you, too, are looking forward to setting foot in that tiny village in County Tipperary from which ... your great-grandfather (Michael Reagan) stepped out bravely one day to face the world," FitzGerald said.

During lunch, O'Neill laughed when Reagan twitted him about his recently expressed interest in leaving Congress after another two-year term and becoming ambassador to Ireland.

"Tip, what about day after tomorrow?" the president suggested.

The president added that naming O'Neill as ambassador probably would be impossible, because "the Irish aren't looking for speakers — they're looking for listeners."

Irish

stones. Them that buys meat gets bones." Or something like that.

The internal evidence of Irishness in the 37 Shakesperian plays, as Healy and others have noted, is intriguing. Even, at times, mind-boggling.

"Macbeth," when read through a slightly green-tinted glass, comes across as one of the high kings of Tara masquerading in kilts. And Hamlet might have been named O'Hamlet, except that his already was an old Irish name. The old Gaelic chronicles relate how Hall of the Nine Hostages, high king of Ireland in the fifth century, was slain by a royal prince named Amhlaidhe, which is pronounced "Hamlet" in English. In his preface to "Hamlet in Iceland," Israel Gollancz suggests that the melancholy Dane may have been a moody Celt "from the kingdom of Ireland."

Shakespeare named his only son Hamnet, another variant of the name. Was this a thin disguise for his Irish heritage?

The old crones who confront Macbeth on the heath certainly seem to be Irish banshees, full of sad songs, sorcery and deviltry. They are very like the Three Daughters of Catalin, in the first century Irish legend of Cuchullam, who mumble prophetic incantations to a future king over a bubbling cauldron of poisoned dog meat. The witches' prophecy that Macbeth would never be defeated till Birnam wood came to Dunsiname is echoed in the Battle of Rosnaree when, as the chronicles relate, "one side cut branches of green oak and they raised them before them, advancing, and it seemed as if the forest moved."

And the vision of eight kings conjured for Macbeth is very similar to what was visited on Conn of the Hundred Battles, a second century high king.

Besides swearing by St. Patrick in his first act discourse with Horatio, Hamlet is haunted by a very Irish ghost, fresh out of Purgatory:

"I am thy father's spirit
doom'd for a certain term to walk the night.
And for the day confined to fast in fires,
till the foul crimes done in my days of nature are burnt and purged away..."

"Indeed," says Healy, "Hamlet's father is the dead spirit of an Irish ghost, being rational, forthright and purposeful."

The unknown author of "My Unknown Chum," now regarded as a minor classic, believes that Shakespeare borrowed the "Hamlet" plot not from the Danish chronicle of Saxe Grammaticus, as most scholars hold, but from the shanachies, the traditional Irish story tellers.

"There is a tradition common in the north of Ireland," the essayist writes, "that Hamlet's father was a native of that country and was captured by the Danes and carried to Jutland."

There is another Irish tradition that Shakespeare's mother came from Youghal in County Cork, which would account for Hamlet's uttering the old Corkman's hospital boast, "We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart."

Queen Mab in "Romeo and Juliet" is none other than Mabh, Queen of the Irish wee folk. "King Lear" seems to be Shakespeare's rendering of the old Gaelic tale, "The Three Children of Lir." Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is an Irish elf, a pooka, whose fair is still held every year in County Kerry. Caliban's island in "The Tempest" is very like Hy-Brasil, the isle of the Blest, in the old Celtic legends. There is even an Irishman in "Henry V," the hard drinking Captain Macmorris.

On St. Patrick's Day, one can imagine Willie Shakespeare entering the White Hart Inn on the south bank of the Thames and announcing in his rich brogue: "Landlord, pull a pint of porter and let us tell sad stories of the death of kings."

White questions education cost

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said Friday he's not sure Texas can afford the $2.5 billion price tag put on public shool education reforms but should be able to achieve quality education at a lower cost.

The Select Committee on Public Education this week in Dallas recommended reforms that state Comptroller Bob Bullock estimated would cost $2.408 billion.

"I don't know that we can afford that ... but I do know there are some changes that will rather dramatically lower that cost if the Legislature is willing to make those changes, and I think they would," White told a news conference.

The governor has said he would call a special legislative session to act on the committee's recommendations.

The most expensive recommendation — $906.5 million — was for an average class size of 15 pupils through the fourth grade, and White said, "We can get the lower pupil ratio at a much lower cost, and I think we certainly will make an effort."

MARK WHITE

Asked if he was for a State Board of Education appointed by the governor, which would replace the 27-member elected board, White said, "Yes, I am."

"Let's just remember that the reason we're having this (education) problem is that we've been doing it the old way, and I think change is what we're looking for," White said.

"I believe we will have dramatic change in the quality of education," he said.

Asked if an extra $2.5 billion was too much to pay for education, White said, "I don't think that it's necessary to achieve the goals of that committee."

Asked if the special legislative session might "go along with half" the $2.5 billion, White said, "Possibly. It's a little hard to say. I think we're right now in the setting of priorities, trying to accomplish as many of those recommendations at the lowest cost possible."

Introducing the Whitmire

HOUSTON — Mayor Kathy Whitmire has been paid the ultimate compliment. An adult toy store is marketing a Whitbear, a Whitmire lookalike dressed in the style of the city's first woman mayor.

KATHY WHITMIRE

For $250, discriminating toy buyers can get copies of a limited edition stuffed huggable that comes complete with Jordache glasses, hazel eyes and the famed business suit and bow tie favored by Her Honor the Mayor. The toy bear even has lingerie bearing the initials "KW."

Roy Cameron, owner of Critters, an adult toy store, said sisters Suzy Stewart and Jo Anna Meredith plan to make only 25 of the Whitbears. Profits will go to the Houston Zoo, Cameron said.

Rocker has a bad heart

LOS ANGELES — Rock drummer Gina Schock of the Go Go's will undergo surgery soon to correct a small hole discovered in her heart during tests at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

Ms. Schock, one of the band's founding members, will be able to return within six weeks to join the Go Go's on the group's national tour scheduled at the end of May, spokeswoman Jody Miller said Thursday.

Doctors said Ms. Schock's heart condition is congenital, Ms. Miller said.

The group, which also includes Belinda Carlisle, Charlotte Caffey, Kathy Valentine and Jane Wiedlin, currently is on the charts with the single "Head Over Heels" from their album "Talk Show."

New human for humanities

NEW YORK — Psychologist and author Jerome Bruner has been named director of the New York Institute for the Humanities at New York University, the university announced.

Bruner, whose studies have focused on the nature of human thought and perception, succeeds author and sociologist Richard Sennett.

The institute, established in 1976, sponsors seminars and public conferences. Last fall the institute organized a weeklong tribute to the poet W.H. Auden.

Kid is SAT superstar

LYONS — Matthew Van Vlack, who at 11 became the youngest person to make a perfect score on the math section of an aptitude test for college-bound students, says it really wasn't hard. "I just figured it out logically," the New York seventh-grader said.

MATTHEW VAN VLACK

Matthew Van Vlack, 12, aced the Scholastic Aptitude Test's math section three months ago at age 11, even though many of the questions covered material he had never studied.

Dr. Julian Stanley, a psychology professor at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore who has spent 12 years searching for children with extraordinary promise in mathematics, commented: "What makes it more remarkable is that it happened the first time he took the test."

Thieves didn't like buttons

CHICAGO — Democratic Senate candidate Philip Rock went to a downtown radio station for a debate with his primary opponents and wound up having his car stolen and stripped.

Police said the theft occurred Thursday night outside the downtown studios of WBBM-AM, which broadcast the debate. Rock's driver parked the car on the street, and both went into the studio for the hour-long debate.

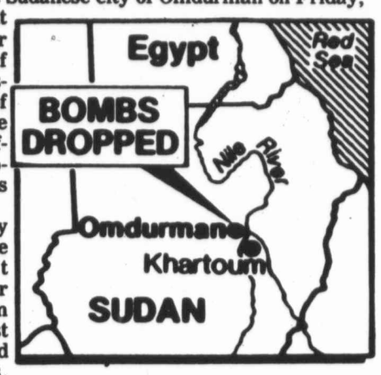

When they emerged, the car was gone. Later it was found in a South Side alley, stripped of its wheels and bumpers. Police said Friday the thieves ignored or overlooked a box containing about 1,000 "Rock For Senate" buttons.

Bomber attacks Sudan city

CAIRO — An unidentified jet bomber struck four targets in the Sudanese city of Omdurman on Friday, and President Gaafar Nimeiri of Sudan accused Libya of ordering the raid, the official Egyptian news agency said.

The agency said the Soviet-built Tu-22 bomber flew in from the southwest and dropped five bombs, hitting the chief government radio station, two houses and an administrative building in the city of 300,000 people near Khartoum, the capital. It said the fifth bomb struck a house but did not explode.

The Middle East News Agency said two people were killed and three were injured.

Egypt, which has a mutual defense treaty with Sudan, immediately sent its defense minister to Khartoum and pledged to stand by Nimieri's pro-Western government against any further aggression.

In a statement distributed by the Egyptian agency, Nimeiri accused Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy of ordering the raid. Nimeiri has repeatedly claimed Libya and Ethiopia were supporting southern Sudanese rebels.

There was no word on the plane's place of origin. But the authoritative "Jane's All The World's Aircraft" says only Libya, Iraq and the Soviet Union have the TU-22, a long-range bomber known as the "blinder."

Sudan put its armed forces on full alert but there was no word on any military activity against the government.

In its dispatch from Khartoum, the Egyptian news agency quoted the Sudanese military command as saying "all air and land forces in Sudan have been put on alert to repel any attack."

Iraqi counterattacks blunted

Iran claimed Friday that its troops repulsed a series of Iraqi counterattacks northeasto f Basra, a day after Iraq reported heavy battles in the area.

The Iraqis, "helpless to attack the Majnoon Islands and unable to retake these islands, have now begun their counterattack from the Talayeh region," Tehran radio said.

Iraq has been trying to recapture the oil-rich sandbar islands, which Iran captured during an offensive into Iraq that started on Feb. 21.

"A desperate counterattack" Thursday was routed with heavy losses, the radio said. "Following today's (Friday's) battle, the enemy had either to flee or be taken prisoner."

Iraqi sources had no immediate comment on the Iranian reports.

Thursday's daily Iraqi military communique said 489 Iranian soldiers were killed and scores more wounded in two fierce pre-dawn battles east of Basra, Iraq's second largest city, near the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.

Iraq's Friday war communique, broadcast by Baghdad radio, said Iraqi war planes and helicopter gunships bombed Iranian positions east of Basra, "inflicting heavy damage and casualties on the enemy."

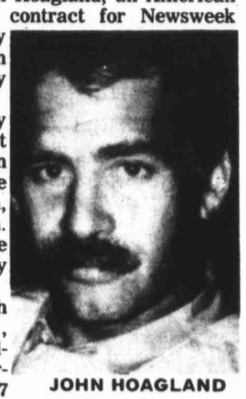

The ground forces continued to clash with the Iranians along the southern sector of the battlefront, it added.

In Paris, the secretary-general of the Arab League, Chadli Klibi, urged the European Common Market on Friday to appeal to Iran, a Moslem but non-Arab nation, to end the 43-month-old war with Arab Iraq.

Klibi made the statement after an hour-long meeting with President Francois Mitterrand of France, the current Common Market president.

U.S. journalist killed

SAN SALVADOR — John Hoagland, an American photographer working on contract for Newsweek magazine, was killed Friday during a gun battle between leftist guerrillas and army troops north of the capital.

JOHN HOAGLAND

A U.S. Embassy spokesman and an official at the Polyclinic Hospital in San Salvador, where Hoagland's body was taken, both confirmed the death. The officials asked not to be identified for security reasons.

Hoagland was with another photographer, Robert Nickelsberg, traveling on a road to cover a guerrilla attack on Suchitoto, 27 miles northeast of the capital, when they were caught in a crossfire.

Nickelsberg, under contract with Time magazine, said they they had walked about a mile with some army soldiers when they were ambushed from behind by guerrillas about 14 miles north of San Salvador. They immediately took cover.

"We were 20 meters off the road behind a tree," Nickelsberg said. "We got sprayed with bullets and one of them got him. We were pinned down for 45 minutes more, the soldiers retreated and they left us behind."

Guerrilla attack closes road

SAN SALVADOR — Leftist guerrillas attacked a town northeast of the capital early Friday and cut off a road leading to San Salvador, military and civilian sources said.

Three policemen were killed and three more were wounded in the attack on Suchitoto, said a government official in the town, 27 miles northeast of the capital.

The official, who spoke by telephone and asked not to be identified for security reasons, said the attack began about 1:30 a.m. and that fighting had diminished by 10:30 a.m.

Guerrillas attacked on the western and southern sides of the town and battled soldiers and police house to house, the official said.

They also attacked government troops patrolling the 17-mile stretch of highway that leads south from Suchitoto to the Pan American Highway, halting traffic and isolating the town most of the morning, he said.

NBC president resigns post

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Mulholland, the president and chief operating officer of NBC, has quit the network in a surprise resignation, a spokesman said Friday.

Mulholland, 50, announced his resignation through NBC's public affairs office shortly before 5 p.m. He gave no reason for the move.

"There are no details. There's nothing beyond that save speculation," said Alan Baker, an NBC spokesman. "I think it was a surprise."

Mulholland had not been embroiled in any policy disputes and said the resignation came "out of the blue," Baker said.

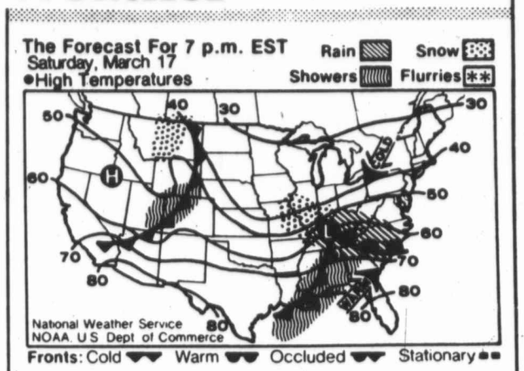

Leaking package clears office

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Twenty-five people were evacuated from one floor of the Richmond post office after officials found a leaking package, which turned out to be a urine sample.

"You never know with these things," said E.D. Taylor, a deputy Battalion fire chief with Richmond Fire Bureau. "You have to treat them as potential hazards.

Weather

Winter storms linger

Thunderstorms with wind gusting to 50 mph churned through the nation's midsection Friday in the wake of a series of tornados that left four dead in Arkansas and destruction across five states.

Winter conditions returned to plague the northern Plains with the temperature dropping to zero at Grand Forks, N.D., at 2 a.m. EST.

A Pacific storm system produced thunderstorms, high winds and hailstones over Utah on Thursday, with the winds driving snow into Colorado, where as much as 6 inches of snow was expected in the mountains Friday.

Meanwhile, rain was scattered throughout the intermountain region and travelers advisories were issued for the area. Cold northern air combined with rain produced snow at Salt Lake City, where an inch of new snow fell Thursday night.

A strong line of thunderstorms moved from the mid-Mississippi valley to the Ohio valley Thursday evening, spawning tornadoes, damaging winds, hail and locally heavy rain from southeastern Kansas and eastern Oklahoma into the Ohio valley and lower Michigan.

Considerable tornado damage was sustained with numerous injuries in addition to the four deaths in Arkansas late Thursday afternoon.

The worst tornado hit Fisher in northeast Arkansas, where three people were killed and many injured. A twister ripped Edgemont, Ark., killing one person and causing property damage.

Damage to homes, barns, schools snapped power lines and ripped trees, and personal injuries were reported from areas in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Illinois and Kentucky.

Winds in the tornado zoned gusted between 50 and 70 mph Thursday with numerous reports of golf-ball size hail from Arkansas, Missouri, Indiana and Kentucky and even larger stones — baseball and tennis ball — at Tahlequah, Okla., and Eldon, Mo.

Nearly 2 inches of rain fell at Evansville, Ind., early Friday and a flash flood watch was issued for much of southern Lower Michigan.

Friday's forecast called for scattered thunderstorms from eastern Texas through the Mississippi delta into the Tennessee valley with rain spreading over the Northeast.

Rain also moved across the Pacific Northwest, turning to snow over the Northern Rockies.

Children act fast — so do poisons

Poison prevention requires year-round vigilance but periodically we need to take inventory to make sure no dangerous substances have been left unguarded.

National Poison Prevention Week March 18-24 is an excellent time to make a thorough inspection of the home and storage areas. The Consumer Product Safety Commission has provided a checklist for poison-proofing the home.

Is your home poison-proof? If it's not, someone may get hurt — and soon. But it's easy to poison proof your home. Of the following question, the items you answer no to should be be fixed quickly.

POISON LOOKOUT CHECKLIST

KITCHEN

- Do all harmful products in the cabinets have child-resistant caps? Products like furniture polishes, drain cleaners and some oven cleaners should have safety packaging to keep little children from accidentally opening the packages.
- Are all potentially harmful products in their original containers? There are two dangers if products aren't stored in their orginal containers. Labels on the original containers often give first aid information if someone should swallow the product. And if products are stored in containers like drinking glasses or pop bottles, someone may think it is food and swallow it.
- Are harmful products stored away from food? If harmful products are placed next to food, someone may accidentally get a food or a poison mixed up and swallow the poison.
- Have all potentially harmful products been put up high and out of the reach of children? The best way to prevent poisoning is making sure that it's impossible to find and get at the poisons. Locking all cabinets that hold dangerous products is the best poison prevention.

BATHROOM

- Did you ever stop to think that medicines could poison if used improperly? Many children are poisoned each year by overdoses of aspirin. If aspirin can poison, just think of how many other poisons might be in your medicine cabinet.
- Do your aspirins and other potentially harmful products have child-restraint closures? Aspirins and most prescription drugs come with child-resistant caps. Check to see yours have them.
- Have you thrown out all out-of-date prescriptions? As medicines get older, the chemicals inside them can change. So what was once a good medicine may now be a dangerous poison. Flush all old drugs down the toilet. Rinse the container well, then discard it.
- Do you always give medicine only to the person the doctor prescribed it for? The medicine that worked wonders on one person may harm the next. Give drugs only to the person the doctor told you to give them to.
- Are all medicines in their original containers with the original labels? Prescription medicines may or may not list ingredients. The prescription number on the label will, however, allow rapid identification by the pharmacist of the ingredients should they not be listed. Without the original label and container, you can't be sure of what you're taking. After all, aspirin looks a lot like poisonous roach tablets.

GARAGE STORAGE AREA

- Did you know that almost everything in your garage or storage area that can be swallowed is a terrible poison? Violent, horrible reactions occur to people who swallow such everyday substances as charcoal lighter, paint thinner and remover, antifreeze and turpentine.
- Do all these poisons have child-resistant caps?
- Are they stored in the original containers?
- Are the original labels on the containers?
- Have you made sure that no poisons are stored in drinking glasses or pop bottles?
- Are all these harmful products locked up and out of sight and reach?

When you can answer all the questions with a "yes" your house is poison-proofed. Then, to make sure your house stays poison-proof, when you buy potentially harmful products make sure they have child-resistant closures and keep these products out of sight and reach.

Dear Abby

Ring not just a piece of jewelry

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my mother died of a lingering illness. Now my father will soon remarry. The big problem: He is planning to take the diamond out of Mother's wedding ring and have it reset for his new wife.

My sister and I both voiced our objections for sentimental reasons. By the way, my mother promised the ring to my sister, but toward the end, she told Dad (in our presence) that if he needed to sell it for financial reasons it was OK with her.

I am shocked that Dad would actually give that diamond to another woman. He said it was just a piece of jewelry. When we told him that we disagreed with him on this point, he held to his position.

Abby, this woman my dad is marrying has been married before (she's a widow) and is not in need of any more jewelry. Is Dad wrong? Or are we? Whose ring is it?

MAD AT DAD

DEAR MAD: You say that your mother promised the ring to your sister unless your dad needed to sell it for financial reasons, so since your dad did not sell it, the ring "belongs" to your sister, which is what I would tell your dad were he to ask me.

However, he didn't ask me; you did. So my advice to you is to forget it unless you want to take your father to court for breaking a verbal contract, which I think is unthinkable.

Dr. Donohue

Glaucoma can be treated

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: An eyeball pressure test recently showed my pressure high inside my eye — glaucoma. My doctor is currently testing me to find out what treatment is best for me. How many treatments are there for glaucoma? The doctor believes mine is "open-angle" type. — Mrs. K.E.

There are basically two types of glaucoma — open-angle and closed-angle. Either kind can be effectively controlled in the vast majority of cases. Closed-angle glaucoma gets its name from a blockage of the eye drainage duct by an abnormally narrow angle made by the iris (colored portion of the eye). Fluid builds because of the resulting lack of proper drainage. In open-angle glaucoma, fluid buildup is from a microscopic block which cannot be detected. The result is the same.

Open-angle is the more common of the two. It is treated with drugs to slow production of the fluid or to open the microscopically-blocked duct. For closed-angle glaucoma, the answer most often lies in surgically opening the duct. For more information read the booklet "Cataracts and Glaucoma." Other readers may order a copy by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I don't know, really, how to put this. But here goes. Recently, someone tried to convince me that Alzheimer's disease and the Lou Gehrig disease are the same thing. Would you please clarify this for me? Is there a difference? I'm confused. I want it in writing. — T.Y.

They are two very different diseases. If they share anything in common it is the fact that we cannot as yet explain why either happens. Alzheimer's disease is an affliction of nerve cells and tissue of the brain, leading initially to memory and personality changes. Lou Gehrig disease, named for the famous New York Yankee first baseman, who died from it, is known medically as amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. It is a disease with scarring of parts of the brain and spinal cord that control muscles. Those nerves die, causing weakness and paralysis, usually beginning with the hands and arms. Alzheimer-type symptoms are not part of it. They're two very different illnesses.

Garden plants can decorate home

Gardens are a major source of pleasure to a lot of people from spring through fall as the beautiful flowers and fruits make all the work worth while. There are many ways we can use these plants to decorate our homes throughout the year by drying, waxing or pressing.

Air Drying — This is the simplest way of preserving flowers. First, strip off the lower leaves of the plants you want to dry. Gather a half dozen of the flowers in a bunch, varying the stem length so the flower heads do not touch each other. Tie these onto a coat hanger with an elastic string so it will still hold the stems as they shrink. Hang them in a dry, airy place. It will take about two days or two weeks for them to dry, depending on the amount of humidity and density of the flowers.

Silica Gel — Delicate flowers, especially ones with a lot of florets, dry well in silica gel. Most manufacturers of the desicant (drying agents) furnish precise information on the types of flowers to be dried and instructions on how to dry them.

Glycerin Treatment — To preserve foliage (such as bayberry, beech, cockscomb, euonumus, holly, ivy, magnolia, or oak) use 1 part glycerine and 2 parts warm water (120 degrees) solution. Do not use boiling water. Most plant material can be left to dry, but when a glycerin solution is used, the foliage — while it is still green and immature enough to absorb the solution — can carry it to the leaves and pods where the water is evaporated by the air. For this reason, it is best to put the container in a warm, drafty place to hasten the transpiration and absorption processes.

Potpourris — Since early Egyptian times, potpourris have been made of fragrant flower petals, dried and cured and combined with herbs and spices. The general method of making potpourris is to first dry the flower petals in an open, dry place. After they are dry and until you have enough to make the potpourri, store them in a covered container in a cool, dry place. Gently toss the ingredients in a large bowl. A recipe for a rose potpourri follows: 2 cups dried rose petals; 1¼ cup each dried lemon verbena, lavender, sweet woodruff and rose geranium; 2 teaspoons crushed cardamon seeds; 1 crushed nutmeg; 2 teaspoons crushed tonka beans; 5 teaspoons dried orange peel chips; 1 crushed orris root; 4 drops rose geranium oil; and 2-inch vanilla bean, broken in pieces. Items difficult to grow can be found in herb and spice shops.

Sachets — Use the same ingredients as above to make a sachet. The difference between a dry potpourri and a sachet is that in a sachet the ingredients are very finely ground. Using a rolling pin and a plastic bag, pulverize the petals and such. Put this mixture into a cloth pouch or envelope.

Winter Decorations — There are many things one can make for winter decorations. A particularly nice gift for the onset of winter is a bundle of aromatic stems and herbs that give off perfumed smoke when burned, called a fireplace faggot. After pulling off all the leaves used for sachets and potpourris, bundle the twigs and woody stems together and burn. Some of the good ones are basil, lemon verbena, rosemary, marjoram, and thyme. A traditional gift used for indoors and outdoors is the wreath. They can consist of a numerous list of greens, pinecones, or flowers with Christmas balls and ribbon for Christmas. The easiest method is to use a styrofoam ring or a coat hanger pulled out of shape to form a circle. The hook on the hanger can be used to hang the wreath later. The three to six inch pieces of greens can be wired onto the frame with light-weight florist's wire. Nuts and fruit can be attached with hot wax, available at hobby stores. An anti-desiccant should be sprayed on the wreath to prevent drying.

Twig Forcing — One can force branches of flowering shrubs for early indoor flower arrangements. Forcing twigs of forsythia, Japanese quince, flowering crab, pussy willow and others, just takes some forethought. About two weeks before needed, collect the stems you want to force (flower early) and totally immerse in cool water for several hours. Next, put them in a decorative container and add warm water (180 degrees) about two to three inches deep. If more water is needed or desired, it can be added after ½ hour. Keep at room temperatures of 55-65 degrees in a shaded, draft-free area until buds begin to show color. Flowering will begin in one to two weeks, others longer depending on species and cutting date.

More Ideas! The list is endless of things that can be made from plant material from your garden and yard or collected from nearby parks and fields including: cornhusk dolls and flowers; bulbs to bloom indoors; flowers made from all types of materials, for example onion skins, orange, grapefruit and lemon rinds, potatoes, lunaria pods.

Other interesting ideas for centerpieces and arrangements are fruits, vegetables, and foliage from your garden including lettuce, berries, dried okra, dried gourds, Indian corn, seed pods, pinecones and pine knots, driftwood, and fallen birch bark.

Remember, prepare more material than you'll need to compensate for losses due to mold, breakage, and imperfections. Store dried material in shoe boxes with a mothball or two. This is just a start. Let your imagination go and decorate your whole house!

For ABC Relays

Lubbock schoolboys are star-laden bunch

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

San Angelo Central, the defending ABC Relays boy's champion is back to defend its crown, but will get a strong challenge from Lubbock Estacado and Lubbock Coronado when the Big Spring High School track tradition is held Saturday, Mar. 17 at Blankenship Field beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Coach Randy Britton's Big Spring Steers are not expected to be a factor in the final team standings, but Big Spring will be looking to improve its times.

Other teams entered in the boys division are Lubbock High, Lubbock Dunbar, Lubbock Monterey and Midland High. Dunbar, with a fine group of sprinters could be a darkhorse in the championship race.

Lubbock Monopoly?

Dunbar and Estacado seem to have the edge in the sprints, with Dunbar and Coronado having a slight edge in the relays.

The 100 and 200 meters will be two of the featured races of the day. In the 100, seven performers have already broken the 11 second barrier. Derrick White of Estacado, Kenneth Coleman and Mike Ellington of Central and Bruce Perkins of Coronado all have posted times of 10.8.

The 200 meters will be just as competitive with Richard Willard of Dunbar having the best time of 21.6. Teammate Billy Johnson has clocked a 22.2, while White of Estacado has a 21.9.

Dunbar leads the field in the 400 relay with a best of 42.4. Estacado and Coronado are right behind with times of 42.8. Monterey and Central are also expected to be in the top six. The Big Spring foursome of Eric Sherman, Roddy Fair, Billy Wegner and Dale Crenshaw will try to improve their time of 45.6

Dunbar and Coronado lead the field in the 1600 relay with times of 3:21.4 and 3:24.5. Estacado, Central and Monterey are expected to battle it out for third place. The Steers have shown gradual improvement in this event. Last week the team of Wegner, Derick Logback, Fair and Sherman lowered their season best to 3:33.

Another intresting race will be the 800 meters which will feature five runners who have dipped under the two-minute mark. Eddie Thomas of Central leads the pack with a 1:58.0, Ricky Collins of Estacado (1:59.5) and Manuel Gomez (1:59.1) of Lubbock High are close behind.

The hurdles will be another pair of hotly contested races. In the 110 highs Mike Fanning of Central leads the field with a 14.25. Coronado's Buck Roby and Estacado's Ray Taylor have times of 14.5 and 14.8 respectively.

Roby is the favorite in the 300 intermediate hurdles by virtue of his 38.5. Fanning has a 39.5 best.

Louisville gets Mideast victory

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Guard Lancaster Gordon scored 17 points, including six during a 15-4 run at the start of the second half, to lead Louisville to a 72-59 victory over Morehead State in the first round of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament Friday night.

Louisville is 23-10.

Louisville broke the game open late in the first half with eight straight points to go up 29-18. Morehead State's Arthur Sullivan hit a jumper just before the half ended to cut the margin to 29-20.

After Morehead State's Earl Harrison scored on an inside move to pull the Eagles to within 33-24 at 16:54 of the second half, Louisville reeled off 11 straight points to open up a 44-24 advantage with 15:10 left in the game.

Morehead State, 25-6, managed to close the gap to 50-37 on Sullivan's baseline jumper at 8:39. Louisville's Charles Jones countered with three straight baskets to give the Carinals 56-37 lead with 7:11 to go.

Morehead State, which had lost to the Cardinals 85-50 during the regular season, could get no closer than 14 points the rest of the way.

Center Jeff Tipton led Morehead State with 16 points, Harrison added 14 and Eddie Childress had 10.

ILL. St. 49, Alabama 48

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Lou Stefanovic hit an 18-foot jumper with eight seconds left to lift Illinois State to a 49-48 first-round victory over Alabama in the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament Friday night.

The basket capped a comeback second half for the 23-7 Redbirds and sidelined Alabama with an 18-12 record.

Rickie Johnson's three-point play with 7:25 to play gave the Redbirds their first lead of the second half, 43-42, and Hank Cornley and Brad Duncan scored to boost Illinois State's lead to 47-42.

Baskets by Alabama's Terry Williams and Bobby Lee Hurt cut the margin to one, 47-46, with 1:55 to play. Williams hit a jumper from the free throw line with 41 seconds left to put Alabama back up 48-47.

Stefanovic then hit his 18-footer to lift the Missouri Valley Conference co-champions to the victory.

Illinois State now advances into Sunday's second round against fourth-ranked DePaul.

NCAA Tournament

Va. Comm. 70, N' Eastern 69

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rolando Lamb sank a 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer to lift Virginia Commonwealth to a 70-69 victory over Northeastern in the first round of the East Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament Friday night.

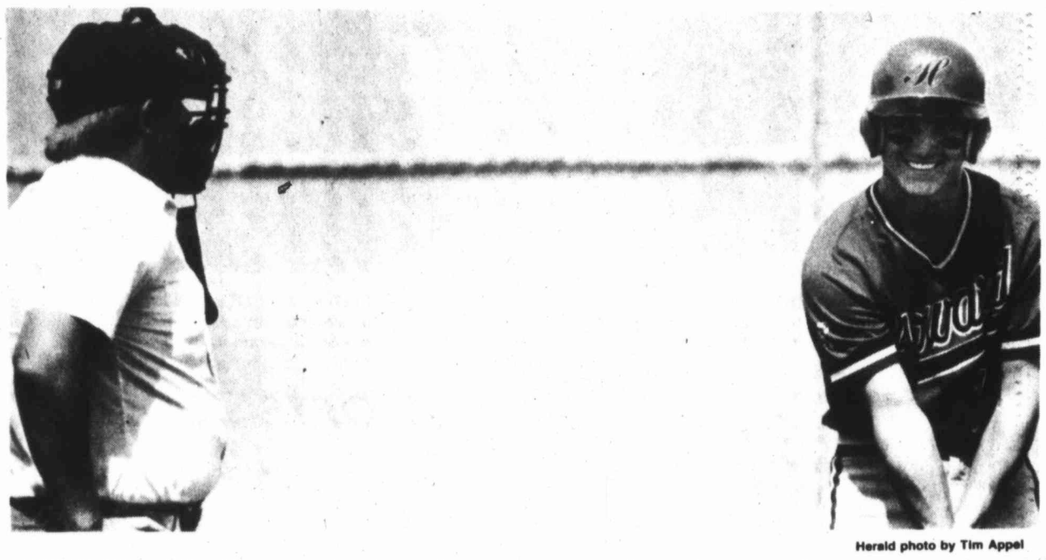

Virgina, 17-11, faced Iona, 23-7, in the other first round East Regional game at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

With two seconds remaining, Lamb took an inbounds pass from Michael Brown sunk a shot from just outside the foul line.

Northeastern had a 69-68 lead when Glenn Miller sank the first foul shot in a one-and-one situation with 15 seconds to play. He missed the second shot.

Virginia Commonwealth's Don Franco then misfired on a 18-foot baseline jumper with three seconds remaining. Northeastern freshman Reggie Lewis scored a game-high 31 points. Lewis made an NCAA early-round record 15 of 17 shots from the field.

Northeastern shot a NCAA first-or second-round record of 75 percent from the field. It converted 33 of 44 shots from the field.

YOU GOTTA BE KIDDING — is what Howard College left fielder Doug Hatch seems to be saying to the umpire during Thursday's sweep of Longview, Missouri. Hatch is one of the top hitters for the Hawks with a .352 average. He and his teammates are in Waco today and Sunday for a Region V three game set against defending national juco champ MCC.

HC set for critical Region V tilt

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

WACO — Howard College head baseball coach Bill Griffin says the Hawks will begin the most critical part of their Region V schedule here today when they face McClennan Community College.

The Highlanders are the defending national junior college champions and are already 3-0 in Region V action this year. Howard is 2-1 while Northwood is 1-2 and Hill JC 0-3. A series between Ranger and MCC was rained out last weekend.

Howard will take a 14-8 overall mark against MCC's 10-9 slate and while the Highlanders are leading Region V, Griffin said, "They (MCC) don't have the ball club they had last year. They were simply awesome then. They whipped us pretty good."

He added, however "They shouldn't be expected to be as good. They lost a couple of pitchers who won 42 games between them. The rest of the pitching staff won only 11."

Because MC appears less formidable than last year — Howard was one of two Region V foes to beat the Highlanders — Griffin feels his team will be a little less apprehensive.

"We haven't been playing very well, still too many mistakes, but I think we may be coming around," said Griffin.

Game time in today's contest is 2 p.m. while Sunday's doubleheader starts at 1 p.m.

WAY FOR RUSSIANS CLEARED — Peter Ueberroth, (left) president of the LOs Angeles Olympic Organizing Commitee, smiles during a news conference Friday at which it was announced that the U.S. Government will allow the Soviet Union to make special charter flights and a Soviet passenger ship to dock off Los Angeles during the 1984 Summer games. NFL plans supposedly call for making undergrad draft picks

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League is trying to work out a plan to include undergraduates in its draft of college players, The Associated Press has learned.

The move is the result of the emergence of the United States Football League, which signed prized undergraduates Herschel Walker and Marcus Dupree as well as several potential first-round NFL draft choices, and the successful suit against the USFL by University of Arizona dropout Bob Boris.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said there is little likelihood of undergraduates being included in this year's college draft, set for May 1. But the fact that the league's owners are considering including them is a dramatic departure from NFL policy.

"The discussions have just been in general terms right now, but the league feels, in view of the Boris case and the loss of Walker and Dupree, that it has to do something to retain a share of good players," said a source close to the NFL, who requested anonymity. "We're trying to work out the details. We don't know yet what we can live with."

The league conducted committee meetings this week in Maui, Hawaii, in preparation for the full owners' meetings next week in Honolulu. Some of this week's Competition Committee meetings were attended by officials of the NFL Players Association, including its executive director, Gene Upshaw.

One question to be resolved is whether underclassmen who are drafted but decline to turn pro could become free agents before their college eligiblity expires.

Under the existing collective bargaining agreement, the rights to a drafted player who declines to sign are retained by the drafting club for one year, and the player then becomes draft-eligible again. If he again fails to sign within a year, he becomes a free agent, able to negotiate with any team. There is concern that a star undergraduate who is drafted before his junior and senior seasons could be a free agent upon the expiration of his eligiblity.

Under NCAA rules, a player loses his college eligibility only after negotiating with a professional team, engaging an agent or declaring himself eligible for the draft. Just being drafted, the NCAA said, would not cost a player his eligibility.

Rozelle, referring to the meeting in Hawaii, insisted, "I can't say whether it (drafting undergraduates) has been talked about out there, but it is my feeling it will not be seriously considered until we're forced into it by agents and the legal situation. ... In my opinion, I don't think the owners will support it until we're obligated to, until we have no alternative, and I hope it doesn't come to that."

Boris was a punter for the University of Arizona who filed suit after he was barred by the USFL from playing while he had college eligibility remaining. The USFL, meanwhile, had welcomed Walker, a Heisman Trophy-winning running back and an undergraduate.

USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons called Walker a "special case" and said he would not permit the signing of other undergraduates, including Dupree.

But when a federal judge ruled last month that the USFL's eligiblity rules constituted a "group boycott" in violation of antitrust law, it opened the door to pro football's signing of undergrads. The NFL was not a party to the Boris suit, nor is it a party to the USFL's appeal of the decision.

Rozelle pointed out the NFL already has provisions for a supplemental draft, although it does not permit taking undergraduates unless their college eligibility has expired or been revoked. Dave Wilson, the backup quarterback for the New Orleans Saints, was picked in such a draft.

Rozelle said Boris "probably would have been acceptable to our supplemental draft." And he said it would "take more than just the Boris case" to swing the NFL toward drafting underclassmen.

Steve Morgan, director of legislative services for the NCAA, said there is "nothing in the NCAA rules that prohibits someone from going off and pursuing a pro career. It is the public posture of the NCAA that nobody wants to stand in their way.

"The biggest concern of our member schools, as the USFL-NFL situation has heated up and with the possibility that the NFL's long-standing draft rule (against selecting underclassmen) might change, is how much effort might be put into influencing those individuals for whom leaving school might not be in the best interest."

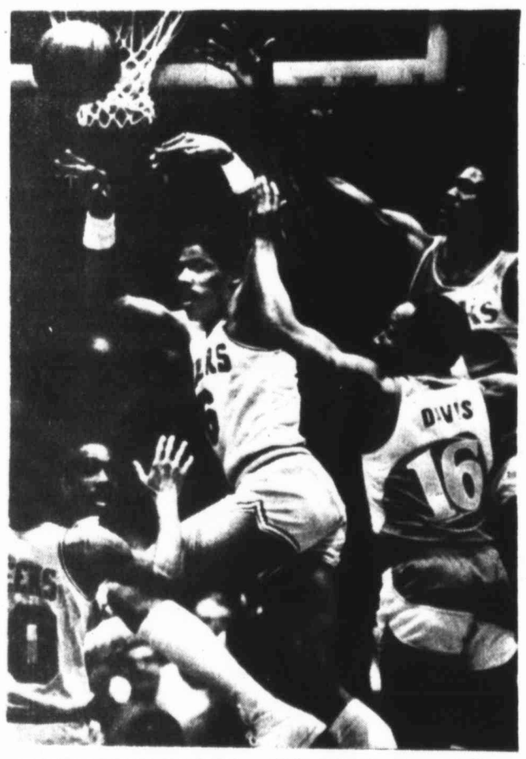

Morgan said he believes the concern over pro football taking undergraduates is mostly "the fear of the unknown," pointing out that college basketball has thrived despite the National Basketball Association opening its draft to underclassmen.

In a related development, Simmons suggested in letters sent earlier this week to college administrators that a review board be established to pass on the qualifications of undergraduates hoping to turn pro before the expiration of their college eligibility.

"I believe there must be a mutually beneficial relationship between professional leagues and the college coaches," Simmons wrote. He recommended the review board consist of a coach, an athletic administrator, an academician, a doctor and a lawyer, with the board's findings to be binding on the player.

According to Friday's Washington Post, the NFL also is gearing up to sign USFL players whose contracts expire in July, at the end of the current season. The first such signing, by the New York Giants, was of cornerback Kenny Daniel of the Oakland Invaders.

"We are aware that the NFL will come after our players," said Carl Peterson, president of the USFL's Phildelphia Stars. "In some ways, I find it ironic because that means they admit our players are better than they have been saying. But it also means we need to sign our players to longer contracts to protect ourselves."

THE DOCTOR GLIDES — Philadelphia 76ers' Julius Erving (6) passed Johnny Davis (16) and Dominique Wilkins, (far right), of the Atlanta Hawks to clear a pass during first half action in Philadelphia Friday night. For NBA results and standings see scoreboard on page 2B.

Deal reportedly made for Dallas

DALLAS (AP)— A consortium headed by Dallas businessman H.R. "Bum" Bright has made a deal to purchase the Dallas Cowboys for an estimated $75 million, a Dallas television station reported Friday.

The report by WFAA-TV quoted sources as saying that the Cowboys should be under new ownership by next week. But Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd discounted the report.

"That's just the semiweekly rumor," Todd, contacted by phone at his home, said. "The report is news to us."

At a press conference Friday, Cowboys coach Tom Landry denied the televised report, and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle reiterated that Cowboys President Tex Schramm had given him several names of potential owners, who were still undergoing an investigation by NFL security personnel.

Rozelle said the Cowboys situation is not on the agenda for an NFL owners' meeting next week.

"The only thing I know, it's kind of a sad time for us because of Clint Murchison and the relations we have had for many years," Landry said. "It's difficult to think of the Cowboys without him. But time moves on, and I guess it's inevitable we have to do it, but you don't have to like it."

Schramm said Friday night that he had no comment on the WFAA-TV report "other than that he (Bright) is one of the people we have been talking to."

The television station said a source close to Bright's group confirmed the deal had been made. One of Bright's company officials said he would neither confirm nor deny the report, WFAA said.

Speculation had previously surrounded two groups, one led by Dallas businessman Vance Miller and auto dealer W.O. Bankston and another by Florida real estate developer George Barber.

Miller and Bankston, however, told the television station they are still in the running to buy the Cowboys.

Norman on top at Bay Hill golf event

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Australian Greg Norman matched the course record with a 9-under-par 62 and took a 3-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $400,000 Bay Hill Classic.

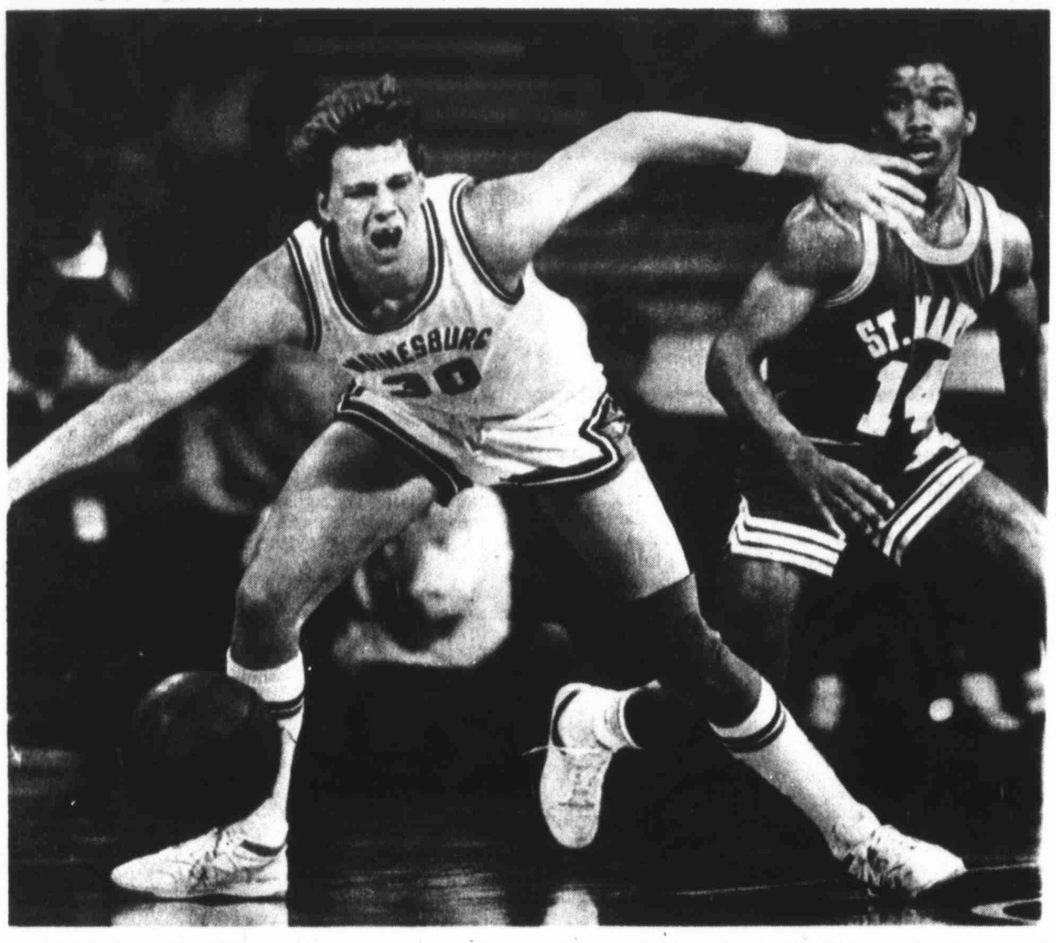

"That's the best score I've had in competition," said Norman, who has collected 31 titles around the world but has yet to win on the American PGA Tour.

And that's the next goal for the hawk-faced man with the hair bleached white by the sun.

"You can win around the world," he said, "but people don't take much notice 'til you win on the American Tour. That's what I have to do to climb the next rung on the ladder."

In order to accomplish that goal, he's established a permanent residence in this country, has a home on the Bay Hill course, and said he plans to play the majority of his golf on the U.S. tour this season. He was a playoff loser in this event last year.

LUNGING FOR CONTROL — Waynesburg forward Paul Stanley (30) lunges to regain control of a ball that was tipped out of his hands by St. Mary's guard Ervin Monier (14) in the first half of Friday's NAIA National Tournament second round game in Kansas City. Waynesburg won th game, 61-59.

U.S. Customs Service will beef staff for LA Summer Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service will add 15 special agents to its force at the 1984 Summer Olympics to keep potential smugglers of high-tech equipment from raiding Southern California defense plants, a customs official told a Congressional hearing Friday.

Quintin Villanueva Jr., commissioner of customs, Pacific region, also said that extra teams may be deployed to monitor drug smuggling if the agency senses an increased threat from foreigners whose countries are "high risk" for narcotics.

Villanueva conceded that his agents would be spread thinner during the Games from July 28-Aug. 12 because federal budget cuts cost the agency 400 employees last year. He said routine activities may suffer but predicted no difficulties in dealing with any customs-related problems.

Villanueva was the first of top officials from 10 agencies slated to testify about their Olympic security arrangements before the House subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and Independent Government Agencies.

U.S. Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Los Angeles, said Friday he called the two-day hearing to get a better picture of the coordination between law enforcement agencies.

Speakers dodged some questions on specifics of their security planning, but Roybal insisted the hearings would provide a useful overview.

"What we want to know is how they're coordinating their activities to protect people at the Games," Roybal said before the hearing. "There's nothing secret about that."

Subcomittee staff chairman Tex Gunnels said, "We want to make sure they're coordinating things with each other so they don't run into each other like outfielders chasing after a popped fly. The purpose is to get these people together and let them hear what the other says."

Other agencies scheduled to testify included the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Secret Service, the FBI, the Federal Aviation Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration and the Los Angeles Police Department.

Saturday, testimony was expected from the Air Transport Association, the General Services Administration, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, the General Services Administration and the Department of Airports.

Villanueva and others indicated authorities already are well aware of each other's activities.

He detailed 16 subcommittees supervised by an overall Security Planning Committee and said these smaller groups have been working since 1979 on everything from disposing of explosives to protecting dignitaries to collecting intelligence data on organized crime and gang activities.

Under questioning by U.S. Rep. Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., Villanueva conceded "there would be an increased threat of high-technology smuggling" by foreigners seeking access to Southern California's military defense industries.

"To deal with that, we're bringing in 15 additional special agents. We will have more at the command post" where all the agencies are coordinating their efforts, he said.

As for drug smuggling, he said, "If we see greatly increased numbers of people coming from high-risk countries where there is a narcotics problem, we may put on extra teams" at Los Angeles International Airport.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING — John Currie, president of State National Bank, meets with stockholders recently. The bank is noting an anniversary this month.

State National notes anniversary

The State National Bank, 901 Main, opened for business March 1, 1909, and is celebrating its anniversary this month, according to Faye Reed of the bank.

The bank, which opened as the First State Bank of Big Spring, was chartered Jan. 18, 1909. It opened at 204 Main Street. It became the State National Bank of Big Spring on May 26, 1924.

When the bank opened in March, 1909, C.D. Read was president. Other officers were A. Biney Jones, vice president; and T.S. Currie, cashier and bank manager.

Directors included C.D. Read, T.S. Currie, A. Biney Jones, E.D. Bell, William Fisher, A.C. Walker and William B. Currie.

When the bank became a national bank in 1924, the president was L.T. Deats. Other officers were A.C. Walker, vice president; and T.S. Currie, vice president and C.E.O.

Directors included L.T. Deats, A.C. Walker, T.S. Currie, William B. Currie and Bernard Fisher.

W.B. Currie later served as president, as did T.S. Currie. Robert W. Currie, the son of T.S. Currie, succeeded his father as president in 1951 and was president until he retired in 1974.

His son, John Currie, the current president, assumed the presidency in 1974. Senior officers now include John Currie, B.Y. Butler, John Arrick, and Delbert Donelson. The directors are John Currie, Jim Bill Little, Florence Marie Hall, Connie Edwards and Merle J. Stewart.

The late Edith Hatchett worked for the bank from 1923 to 1974. She was one of the first women in banking to serve in an executive capacity in Texas. T.S. Currie Jr. worked for the bank from 1948 until his death in 1962.

T.S. Currie Sr., known as Mr. Temp or Uncle Tom, was a native of Columbia County, Wisconsin. He migrated to Texas for a try at ranching in Tom Green County about ten years before the local bank opened.

Mrs. Reed said the bank has grown with Big Spring. It moved from 204 Main to 124 Main in 1934. It remained there until relocating in 1979.

Individual deposits during the bank's first year of operation totaled about $74,000. Today, it's total assets exceed $101,000,000.

BIRDVIEW HOTLINE
by Tom Arcand

The first brave souls to buy a satellite system have had them now for a few years and have seen vast improvements made in satellite receivers since they first came out. The prices paid for those first few systems were very high compared to what one can get for a much lower price and improved features today.

For a lot of people it may be time to upgrade their system, but they don't know what to do with the old system.

One option would be to trade the old system in on a new Birdview Home Satellite System. That way you could move the old system out of your way and also save money on the cost of a new Birdview System. We admit that the Birdview System is expensive; but you get what you pay for, and many people are finding out too late that the system they bought is not everything it is cracked up to be.

If you think trading in your old system might be just what you need to do, then come by or give us a call and we'll see what we can do to bring you into the space age technology.

Incidentally, congratulations to Lori, Lisa, Jane and Tonya from Mariah for surviving "The Ride."

DeLorean jury picking stirs arguments

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A prosecutor in JohnZ. De Lorean's cocaine trafficking case has accused defense lawyers of "mousetrapping" prospective jurors with tough questions to disqualify them from serving in the celebrity automaker's trial.

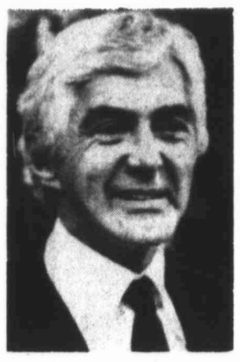

But one of De Lorean's attorneys said some panel candidates are fudging on their answers because they want to serve on the jury.

"I'm afraid some of these people want to sit on this jury real bad and we're getting less than candid answers," attorney Howard Weitzman said Thursday, after several jury prospects professed ignorance of most details of the widely publicized case.

Others said they had read about the case but could set aside what they knew for a fresh look at the evidence. Some of them were tentatively allowed to remain for the next phase of questioning.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh, expressing frustration at the number of prospects dismissed by the U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, said he expects jury candidates to have opinions about De Lorean, who is charged with conspiring to distribute 220 pounds of cocaine in an effort to save his faltering sports car company.

Walsh described De Lorean's lawyers as "clever questioners" who were leading jurors to trip themselves up by saying De Lorean was "probably guilty" or stating they couldn't give him the presumption of innocence.

JOHN DELOREAN

"People want to be fair and honest," Walsh said. "... They're not legal scholars. They're ordinary Joes, working stiffs, housewives. And they're being mousetrapped," the prosecutor said.

"In a case that's been as heavily publicized as this, of course people have formed opinions," Walsh told a reporter outside court.

"The kind of juror you want is someone with something between their ears. And those jurors have opinions. The question is, can they set those opinions aside," he said.

Walsh said he was certain a jury could be seated.

"It only took seven days to create the world ...," he said. "It shouldn't take several months to pick a jury."

The silver-haired De Lorean, 59, was arrested Oct. 19, 1982, after FBI agents posing as drug dealers said he had agreed to a $24 million drug deal in order to save his gull-winged car. Videotapes of the arrest have been broadcast on television.

Takasugi continued to stress the importance of the presumption that De Lorean is innocent unless proven guilty. Several prospective jurors refused to accept that premise and were dismissed.

De Lorean, seated at the counsel table with his wife, model Cristina Ferrare, behind him, appeared deeply involved in the selection process, conferring with his attorneys on each candidate's qualifications.

At the end of Thursday's session, 16 prospects had been tentatively accepted but faced another round of tough questioning later.

The current questioning deals only with publicity and its effect on panelists. Future questions will deal with other issues such as their attitudes towards drugs, crime and the judicial system.

The latest group to be questioned included a broadcaster who was dismissed after he said he read news reports of the case on the air.

Also questioned was a woman whose husband once worked as a security guard for sex magazine publisher Larry Flynt, who at one point purchased the FBI's videotapes of their De Lorean investigation.

She said she knew about Flynt, commenting, "I think he's strange." But she was tentatively permitted to remain on the panel when she said she knew nothing of his connection to the De Lorean case.
