Iran reports Iraqi attacks after black-out

Associated Press

Iran reported today new Iraqi air and missile attacks on civilian targets and Iraq claimed it "occupied enemy positions" along the war fronts, a day after Tehran was blacked-out during a speech by Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said Iraq fired two missiles into the western city of Dezful and Iraqi jets bombed Hamadan, also in the west, early today. No details of the attacks were given.

In another report by IRNA, monitored in London, Iran said Iraqi aircraft bombed the city of Ilam and that a "number of people were either martyred or wounded" and houses damaged.

There was no immediate comment from Iraq on the reported attacks on the Iranian cities.

But in a war communique issued in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, the armed forces said two Iraqi brigades took part in a "daring attack" in the southern sector of the battlefront and "occupied enemy positions."

The communique did not disclose the exact location of the battlefield. The "enemy forces were crushed and most of the enemy soldiers were killed, including their commanders Sherif Kerimi and Roshank Moqaddem," the communique said.

Iraqi jet fighters downed an Iranian F-4 warplane today near Hamadan shortly after Iraq called on the population of Ahwaz to evacuate in 72 hours beginning at midday, an Iraqi military spokesman said on the state radio.

The Iranian news agency "strongly" denied Iraq's claimed it downed the warplane.

Despite the blackout Wednesday, Khomeini vowed the war with Iraq would continue "unless the international community accepts Iran's right to punish the aggressor."

The Iranian leader also reiterated his demand for the ouster of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

IRNA said reports of Iraqi sorties over Tehran prompted the blackout during Khomeini's speech. An Iraqi spokesman in Baghdad said Wednesday Iraqi warplanes bombed six Iranian cities but not Tehran.

Iraqi jets attacked Iran's Kharg Island oil port in the Persian Gulf and blew up the supply ship Bargir, killing six Iranian crew members, sources in the gulf reported. Neither Iraq nor Iran reported an air raid on Kharg. The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said oil tankers loading at Kharg were not damaged in the attack.

The two Moslem nations, at war since September 1980, have been trading almost daily attacks on civilian targets for more than two weeks, and both have claimed victory in an Iranian ground attack in southern Iraq.

Reporters based in Iraq said it appeared that Iraq repulsed the Iranian ground assault, apparently aimed at cutting the Baghdad-Basra highway, the country's main north-south road.

In Cairo, Egypt's foreign minister, Esmat Abdel-Meguid, was quoted today as saying that Iranian forces were in "complete collapse" after suffering a major defeat in Iraq's southeastern marshland. "Iraq stopped, contained and liquidated the offensive," he told the state-owned newspaper Al-Ahram.

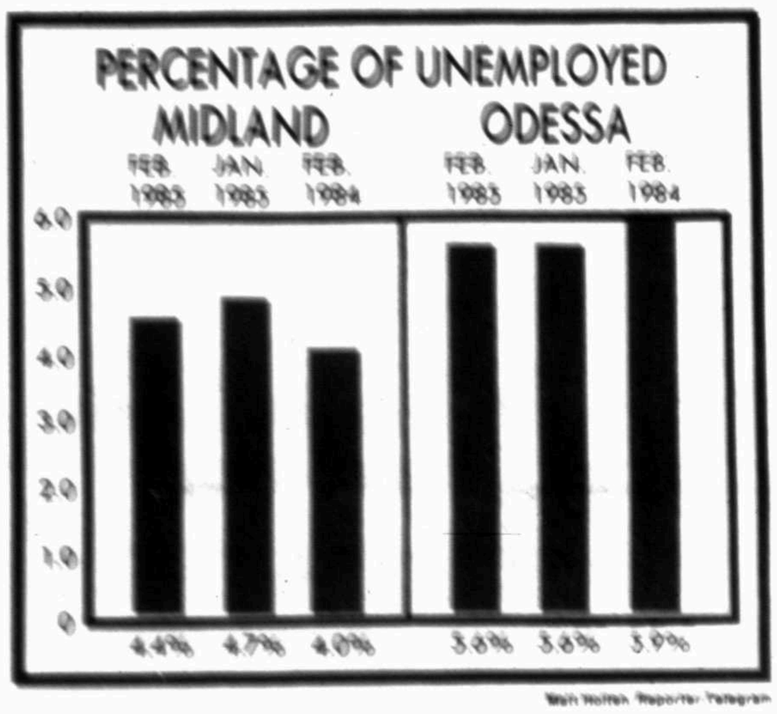

Military sources at embassies in the Persian Gulf island nation of Bahrain said their study of the conflicting battle communiques issued by Iran and Iraq and intelligence reports also indicated Iraq had defeated the Iranian thrust.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, put Iranian losses at about 14,000 killed and twice as many wounded.

Iraqi communiques Wednesday said Iranian casualties totaled 27,200 during the battle.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Edward P. Djerejian said it appeared Iraq successfully blunted the Iranian offensive.

"Casualty figures on both sides will probably never be known, but apparently are large and once again remind us of the terrible cost of this tragic war," he said.

Politicians plow into farm issue

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — The politicians lined up to tell the farmers and ranchers what they wanted to hear. Texas agriculture is not getting a fair deal.

"I know what it's like to milk a cow and have the cow step in the milk bucket," Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw said at the Wednesday rally. "Someone is still stepping in our bucket."

About 600 people were at the Lubbock Civic Center for what many said was an unprecedented gathering of producers of a variety of crops.

The Agriculture Day rally also brought together officials from two long-feuding groups — the Texas Farmers Union and Texas Farm Bureau.

Gov. Mark White likened it to a meeting of officials from the rival cities of Midland and Odessa. White surveyed the head table and joked that he was surprised that the different groups were "in the same room at the same time and nobody's gotten hurt."

Rice growers, cotton producers, wheat farmers and corn producers lined up to offer echoing messages. "Farm life is difficult in 1985. You can't survive by raising crops that sell for less than the price of production."

"This is not a farm problem," White said. "This is an American problem."

"In times of crisis organizations can put aside petty differences and unite for the big fight we cannot afford to lose," said Mike Moeller of the farmers union.

White and Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower blamed the farm woes on the Reagan administration. They said the president's farm policies have done nothing to bring farmers the one thing that can help — a fair price.

"America's countryside is in a death struggle with Washington," said Hightower. "You can still make a small fortune in farming. The problem is you have to start with a large fortune."

"The Reagan plan," he said, will replace family farms with corporate agriculture.

"Purely and simply what we are in is a power struggle to determine who is going to deliver our dinner," he said.

Carl King of Dimmitt, representing corn producers, said all farmers have been hurt by cheap food policies. He said Texas farmers are looking to White for help in pushing a favorable farm bill through Congress.

"I'm aware he's not everybody's cup of tea. But right now we're with you 100 percent," King told White.

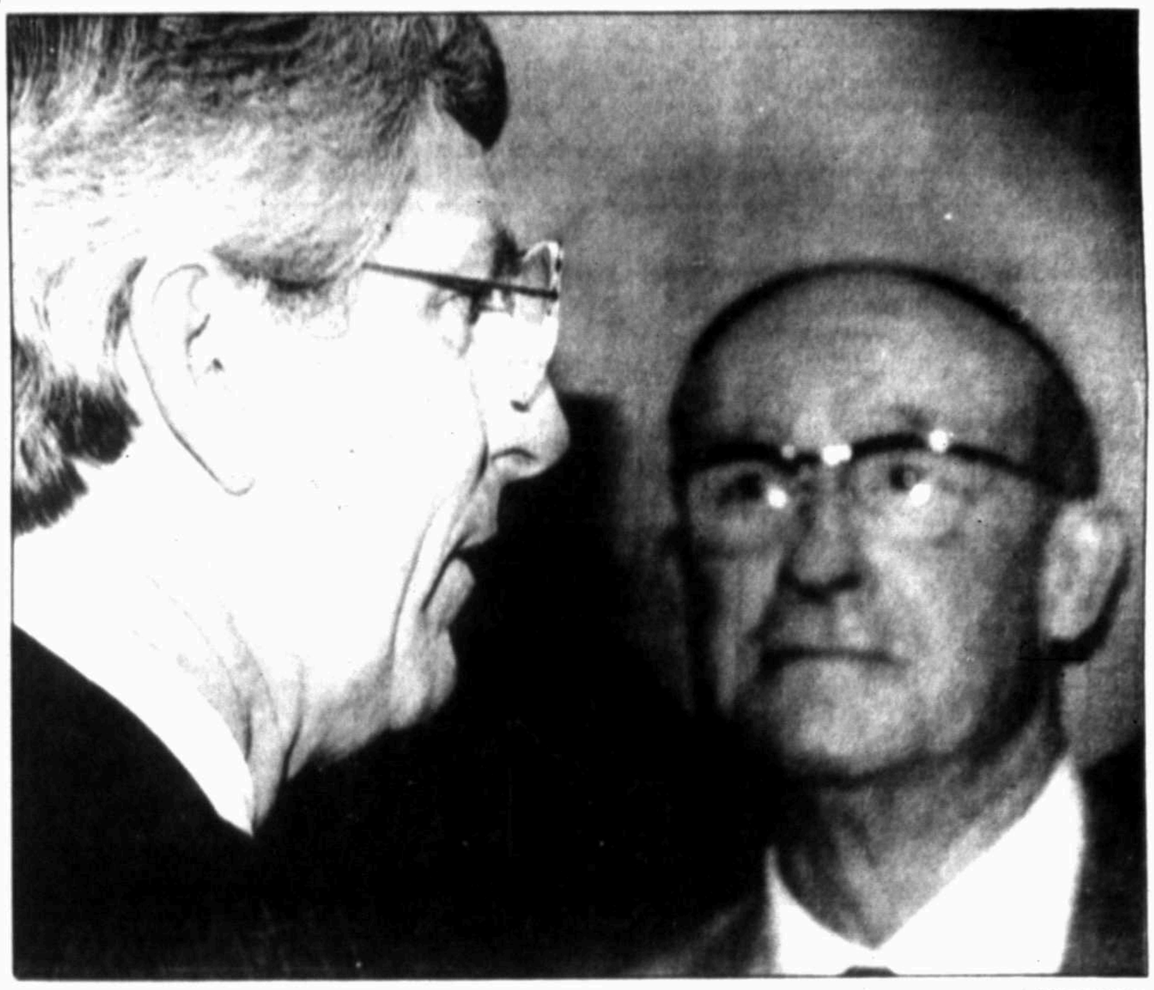

J.B. Cooper of the Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Association told the crowd, "The agriculture industry is not dead. It's badly crippled. It's worth saving."

Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols said efforts in Washington have not been helped by U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"De la Garza is a really nice guy, but we need to get him out of the middle of the road."

After the 90-minute rally, several farmers agreed with Hightower that their battle is akin to a death struggle. After 25 years of farming at Jayton, Royce Stanaland is working 90 minutes a day in the oil field to bring in money to help cover his farm losses.

"I'm not going to blame it all on the president. I support him trying to get the deficit down. But I believe he is trying to take too much of it from agriculture," said Stanaland, who voted for Reagan and still backs the president.

Task force on county jail to announce its findings

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The task force commissioned to probe the controversial Midland County jail issue was to announce its findings at the Midland Chamber of Commerce at 4 p.m. today.

The 15-member group, chaired by banker Wayne Merritt, since mid-February has been considering the issues in building a new jail, renovating the existing jail and alternatives.

The committee is not restricted to the alternatives it can explore, Merritt had said when the task force was organized last month.

Results of the task force's probe are to be presented to the Midland County Commissioners' Court for that governing body's consideration.

The task force was born at the request of the Committee of Concerned Voters, a citizens group which effectively blocked a plan by the county commissioners to issue $6.5 million in certificates of obligation to finance a new jail without voter input. The committee had petitioned for an election to allow the voters — and not the commissioners — to decide if a new jail should be financed.

The commissioners scheduled an election for Feb. 2 but cancelled it at the committee's request to give citizens a chance to be informed on the pros and cons of building a new jail or renovating the existing facility.

Commissioners had opted to build a new jail, with an initial capacity for 225 inmates, after the Texas Commission on Jail Standards had found deficiencies in the current jail, which was built as the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse in 1973.

Next Wednesday in Austin, county officials, including the sheriff, commissioners, county judge and county attorney, are to meet with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards in explaining how the county is resolving its jail problems.

Sheriff Gary Painter has submitted to the commission a plan for housing inmates elsewhere should the jail be closed. He also is to tell the Jail Commission how the jail, which has a legal population of about 85, could be renovated and brought up to standards.

Among other things, the Jail Commission has cited Midland County Jail for overcrowding, lack of adequate sunlight and exercise area for inmates and dimly lighted cells.

Named to the chamber's task force were Merritt, County Commissioners C. Wallace "Wally" Craig and Durward Wright, Jumper Davis, Howard D. "Rocky" Ford, Roger Robles, Bill Williams, Margaret Purvis, Betty Sumner, John Hyde and Charles "Bro" Seltzer.

The sheriff, an ex-officio member of the task force, served in an advisory role, and David Kling, another ex-officio member, was named to provide staff resources and assistance to the group.

The task force, Merritt had noted, was to study the jail situation and develop a report recommendation which would "adequately address current and future jail needs in line with legal requirements and citizens' interests."

Investigating deputy testifies in Ector County indecency trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County sheriff's deputy Jackie Perkins was the first prosecution witness on the stand this morning in the trial of Donald LeClair, 47, being tried on charges of indecency with a child and aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Perkins was the investigating officer who interviewed the 10-year-old female victim and her mother after it was determined the alleged offenses occurred at LeClair's Curtis Mathes home. The incident allegedly occurred July 4, 1984.

Perkins stated he called LeClair July 8, advised him of the investigation and asked him to come to the Ector County Sheriff's Office to discuss the matter. LeClair, his wife and two children showed up and talked to Perkins, who advised LeClair of his rights. A warrant for LeClair's arrest was issued five or six days later, Perkins said.

LeClair has been indicted on eight counts involving indecency with children, and five of the counts specify aggravated sexual assault of a child. He is facing trial only on the counts involving the one child.

LeClair was a medical technician at Medical Center Hospital at the time the incidents allegedly occurred between June and September of 1984. He has remained jailed in lieu of $80,000 bond since his arrest last October.

The mother of the alleged victim spent almost four hours on the witness stand Wednesday as LeClair's court-appointed attorney, Bill Alexander, sought to discredit her testimony.

Alexander repeatedly challenged statements she made to police, sheriff's investigators and the doctor and nurse who examined her daughter two days after the alleged offenses occurred.

MX missile controversy moves to House

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The congressional battle over the MX missile, the winner of two carbon-copy votes in the Senate, moves on to the House where some opponents concede another major victory for President Reagan is in the offing.

"I wish it wasn't so, but there have always been the votes to pass it," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said. "In my assessment, it's always been gone."

"I think there is in the House now about a 10-vote victory" for MX, said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "And the president has just started making calls on the House side."

But other MX foes, encouraged by Wednesday's 28-26 recommendation by the House Appropriations Committee to kill MX spending, predicted the final tally will be extremely close, with an upset possible.

"It's a hard fight," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., an MX opponent. "It's a vote of conscience. We still think we have an excellent chance of winning."

But he acknowleged that personal lobbying by Reagan for the weapons system injects an extra dimension that is difficult to overcome.

"The power and the popularity of the president is awesome — it's as awesome as the weapon itself," O'Neill said.

Reagan is "one of the greatest lobbyists of all time," said House Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington.

However, another opponent, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he thinks the issue will be settled by five or six votes either way and that there is "real hope that we are going to win this vote."

The Senate endorsed the MX missile program for the second consecutive day Wednesday, voting 55-45 to approve spending another $1.5 billion for a second installment of 21 MXs. The margin was identical to that in an initial vote on Tuesday.

Under an agreement arrived at last fall, two votes are required in both houses of Congress, one to authorize the money and the other to actually appropriate it.

The two House votes are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

Reagan ultimately wants to place 100 MXs in underground silos in Nebraska and Wyoming to replace the aging force of Minuteman missiles that comprise the land-based portion of the U.S. strategic arsenal.

A major argument against doing that, according to MX opponents, is that both the silos and missiles will be vulnerable to Soviet attack, thus posing the possibility the United States might be forced to fire its missiles on warning of Soviet attack. That, the opponents say, would place the nuclear balance on a hair-trigger.

In another development, the House Armed Services Committee, as expected, voted 37-8 to support continued MX funds.

The panel led by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., has consistently recommended the MX, and its members represent a strong, pro-defense voice in the Democrat-controlled House.

Aspin, who was elected chairman early in the year in a revolt by younger House members, came under fire in a House Democratic Caucus for allegedly reneging on personal commitments to switch his stance and oppose the MX in this round of votes.

Repeating charges made against Aspin the caucus, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., told reporters he believes Aspin "misled many Democrats" on the issue.

O'Neill said anti-MX forces now have about 190 to 200 votes in the 435-member House.

That means they must win 20 or more converts to kill MX financing.

Dutch debate centers on Soviet strength estimates

By ROLAND DE LIGNY
Associated Press Writer

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Criticism of U.S. estimates of the number of Soviet nuclear rockets is becoming the heart of the debate of whether the Netherlands, the last NATO holdout, should accept its contingent of U.S.-built cruise missiles.

Attention turned to the Netherlands' resistance to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's deployment schedule, after the Belgian Parliament affirmed on Wednesday that government's decision to deploy its missiles,

Dutch Premier Ruud Lubbers' center-right coalition government tentatively agreed in June to accept the new missiles in numbers dependent on the number of Soviet SS-20 medium-range missles that were deployed as of Nov. 1, 1985.

But anti-missile opponents in the Dutch Parliament, which must approve any siting decision, are questioning the wisdom of making such a decision based on American intelligence, whose satellite information is relied upon by NATO.

The Dutch government also made siting the missiles conditional on the outcome of any arms limitation agreement by the superpowers.

Last week, the United States and the Soviet Union resumed arms talks that the Soviets quit in November 1983 after NATO announced it was going ahead with the deployment of 572 American cruise and Pershing missiles to counter the presence of Soviet rockets trained on Western Europe.

The Reagan administration says a united NATO stand on deployment of the missiles is vital in achieving success at the Geneva, Switzerland, talks.

West Germany, Italy and Britain have already begun stationing the missiles. Lubber's government says it will accept the Dutch allotment of 48 cruise missiles if the number of Soviet SS-20s on Nov. 1 exceeds the deployment figure of last June — estimated at 378 by the alliance.

But if the November count is the same or less than 378, the Lubbers government has repeatedly said, no cruise missiles will be deployed in the Netherlands.

A recent NATO survey claimed that at least 400 SS-20 missiles were currently deployed in various parts of the Soviet Union.

Lubbers said in Parliament this week that his government would go by the information supplied by U.S. intelligence services — mainly satellite photos of SS-20 deployment sites — "especially if the Soviets do not challenge them."

Lubbers said in the Tuesday session that there would be "difficulties" in interpreting the pictures, especially those showing deployment sites under construction. The Dutch government would be "cautious" in counting the number of SS-20 missiles shown by the photos, he added.

Ria Beckers, floor leader of the anti-missile Radicals Party, told The Associated Press on Wednesday: "There is simply no way to verify the numbers the Americans are providing, and conflicting reports can lead to confusion."

"It's not that we distrust the Americans, but I think a single source is no sufficient basis for such an important and controversial decision," she said.

Gramm seeks 'grass-roots sales bid' on deficit plan

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A conservative, newly elected Republican senator, Phil Gramm of Texas, will try to persuade his GOP colleagues and President Reagan to put off Senate debate on massive new budget cuts until a deficit-reducing package that doesn't reduce defense spending can be sold first to the grass roots.

Although the business community is escalating its pressure on Congress to endorse the budget cuts approved by the Senate Budget Committee, Gramm is working with White House officials, Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman and some other Senate Republicans to develop a campaign to restore the proposed cuts in money for defense, and cut more deeply into domestic programs. Their plan is to go to the voters with their alternative in hopes of building pressure on the Senate to revise the committee proposals.

The timetable for any Senate debate on the budget already has slipped due to an impasse with the White House over levels of defense spending. It now may not be held before mid-April at the earliest, after the Easter recess.

That's all to the good, says Gramm.

"I believe it is essential for the Republican majority in the Senate and the President to work out a compromise budget that we can first take to the country and then to the Senate," Gramm said in an interview.

Four years ago, Gramm was a Democratic House member and a close ally of Stockman and President Reagan in devising a strategy to win bipartisan approval of Reagan's initial package of budget cuts and, subsequently, tax cuts.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said Wednesday he was trying to arrange a meeting Friday with Reagan on a final budget package. He indicated he did not know of any Gramm alternative and was working on the basis that the bill to be brought to the floor would be the committee's.

The Senate Budget Committee, on a party-line vote, held defense spending to a freeze plus inflation, or $302.5 billion in budget authority for 1986, cutting Reagan's three-year request by $79 billion.

In exchange for the defense holddown, the committee was able to persuade its own GOP members to vote for a freeze on Social Security inflation adjustments.

It is this linkage between defense and Social Security cost-of-living increases (COLAs) that may be the sticking point for any budget compromise.

If Reagan insists on trying to get defense numbers back up by $20 billion or more, he may risk losing the considerable savings that would come from freezing the Social Security COLAs.

Gramm said a package could be shaped that would raise defense by $18 billion while cutting other spending by that same amount – and keeping the freeze on Social Security as well.

Gramm has developed some defense cost-cutting proposals that would incorporate procurement reforms and other changes recommended by the Grace Commission which he expects to be added to a new budget-cutting proposal.

He predicts that Senate Budget Chairman Pete Dominici, R.N.M., or Dole will offer the new compromise to push defense spending higher and cut more from other spending, and that the rebellious conservative Republicans won't have to confront their elders on this issue.

"I'm trying to be just a little bit of a catalyst in putting this package trogether," Gramm said. "I've met with the White House, with Stockman, with Dole and with others."

Most of all, Gramm said, he wants to replicate the grass roots presidential selling job of 1981, to give Reagan a chance to show that voters gave him a mandate for cutting more government costs than demonstrated by what he called the "piecemeal action by the Senate Budget Committee."

Arms negotiators agree to split into working groups next week

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland — U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators agreed today to divide into working groups on strategic, intermediate and space weapons next week for the first time since negotiations began March 12.

The decision was announced by the U.S. delegation after a two-hour meeting between the American team, headed by Max M. Kampelman, and the Soviet delegation headed by Victor P. Karpov.

The subgroups will deal with long-range missiles, medium-range missiles and space and defensive weapons, as envisioned in the U.S.-Soviet agreement in January that paved the way for the talks.

"We have agreed that negotiating groups will begin their work on Tuesday, March 26," said a statement by the U.S. spokesman, who has requested that his name not be used.

Earlier, Karpov told reporters the decision on logistics for the working groups was "not a problem." Asked how the talks were proceeding, he said simply, "we're talking."

Before the fourth round of talks started, Karpov said U.S. congressional votes on the MX missile were an American "internal affair."

The Soviet news agency Tass has been critical of the Reagan administration's support for the MX. Asked for comment on this week's Senate vote approving production of MX missiles, Karpov said:

"That's U.S. internal affairs. I discuss my affairs with the delegation of the United States," and he pointed toward the top floor of the building, where the U.S. team was waiting for the Soviet delegation. He walked away without answering other questions.

Details of the talks are being withheld from the public under an agreement between the two delegations.

The January agreement between Secretary of State George Shultz and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union — described by U.S. officials as a blueprint for the arms talks — says each delegation will be divided into three groups.

However, the Soviet Union has publicly stressed a clause in the communique calling for the areas to be discussed "in their interrelationship," while the United States has said any agreements in one or two of the areas should be implemented even if differences remain in the other.

Kampelman will head the subgroup on space weapons, with Soviet Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, John G. Tower will deal with long-range missiles with Karpov and Maynard W. Glitman will handle medium-range rockets with Alexei A. Obukhov.

A key factor in the space talks is expected to be President Reagan's plan for a space-based defense system, the strategic defense initiative, which has been dubbed "Star Wars."

The $26 billion research program will examine the feasibility of creating a space-based shield against nuclear missiles.

The Soviet Union has criticized the plan, saying it would cause the militarization of space and would violate the 1972 superpower anti-ballistic missile treaty.

U.S. urges Iran to accept negotiated settlement

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States appealed to Iran Thursday to acknowledge that a military victory could not be achieved in the four-and-a-half-year-old war and to accept a negotiated settlement.

The appeal came in the aftermath of what American officials have characterized as an Iranian defeat in a weeklong offensive.

Administration officials conceded that the chances of Iran's yielding to American and other international pleas were minimal, but one senior official said, "We have to keep trying and hoping that the sheer numbers of Iranians killed on the battlefield will persuade Khomeini to try another tack."

Iraq has repeatedly agreed to accept a United Nations cease-fire and negotiation, but the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran has refused to do so until President Saddam Hussein of Iraq resigns and Iraq agrees to pay reparations. Partly because of Iran's refusal to negotiate unconditionally, the United States has been publicly sympathetic to Iraq and critical of Iran, even while officially professing neutrality in the war.

American officials unofficially said tens of thousands of Iranians were killed, wounded or captured. The Iraqis are believed to have suffered fewer casualties, but still in the thousands. The fighting was the result of an Iraqi counterattack to drive the Iranians back from their deepest advance into Iraq.

Austin has the lowest jobless rate in the state with 3.6 percent. Midland and San Angelo were second with 4.4 percent each. Bryan/College Station and Dallas followed with 4.5 percent. Fort Worth/Arlington was fourth with 4.7 percent. Abilene was next with 4.9 percent. Odessa and Lubbock came in sixth with 5.6 percent each.

Paul Adams, TEC labor market analyst, said February historically has higher umemployment rates because of the weather and it follows the holiday season layoffs.

"February is a static month with poor weather for both the employer and the job seeker. March should show more activity for both," he said.

He said the rates are based on a sampling of local employers.

San Angelo panicked by false Civil Defense warning

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Panicked San Angelo residents who awoke to a half hour-long Civil Defense warning on their television sets jammed emergency phone lines to find out whether they needed to ignore it or take cover under their beds.

The false alert appeared on all cable television stations at 6:28 a.m. Wednesday and continued until 7:04 a.m., officials said.

Not only residents but off-duty firefighters called in to find out if the alarm was real or only a test, said Fire Department Battalion Chief Dwight Clark.

"Quite a few didn't know whether to go to work or get under the bed," Clark said. "One guy that called got real upset. He was missing his cartoons."

The false alert was triggered when water from overnight rains migrated into an underground telephone cable and caused the system to malfunction, officials told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"We just tried to explain as quickly as we could that it was only a malfunction," Clark said of the more than 100 calls fielded during the half hour.

He said fire department personnel could not stop the alert because the department's control system had not activitated it.

The cable line was repaired later in the day, said Melissa Horinek, a General Telephone Co. spokeswoman. GenTel employees had been working on the cable before overnight rains short-circuited the line and caused the false alert, she said.

Rogers Cablesystems general manager Don Dooley said that the television offices were closed when the alert came on the air.

"We're working together to make sure this never happens again," Dooley said. "If we don't come up with a satisfactory solution, there's a possibility we will have to come up with another system."

TRIAL

The mother's description of what her daughter had said about LeClair's behavior conflicted with a videotape recorded interview the youngster made with Victim-Witness Program Coordinator Shirley Jean Carroll July 11, 1984, about nine days after the alleged incident.

The girl's mother became antagonistic toward Alexander as he repeatedly suggested her daughter, now 11 years old, was brain-damaged or mentally retarded. The mother insisted the youngster was neither brain-damaged nor mentally retarded, but is considered emotionally disturbed and attends special education classes because of the condition.

Wednesday morning the girl spent close to an hour on the witness stand graphically relating, in her own way, the things LeClair allegedly did to her. The testimony of the youngster closely paralleled the videotaped interview that had been viewed earlier by the jury of seven women and five men.

Responding to questions from Alexander, the youngster related how she had stayed for several days at LeClair's home and on at least one occasion had been in the same bed with him. With nervous embarrassment, she described — in her own terms — how LeClair allegedly had sexual intercourse with her and encouraged her to perform oral sex on him.

She also testified LeClair had done the same thing to his young stepdaughter and another friend of theirs.

However, Dr. Michael Simmons, who was on duty at Medical Center Hospital the night of July 5, 1984, when the girl's mother took her for examination after learning of the alleged assault, testified the child showed no evidence of having been penetrated.

Throughout the trial Wednesday, Alexander sought to question the competency of the girl, even after 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater called the youngster to the stand, questioned her, and ruled she was competent to testify.

Alexander questioned the use of leading questions by Ms. Carroll during the videotaped interview with the girl. Over Alexander's objections, Ater ruled the use of leading questions with a child in such a case was proper.

In his defense of LeClair, Alexander has sought to question any past behavior problems the girl has had in school, whether she was given to telling lies and the effect on her of medication she had taken to control hyperactivity, in an effort to discredit the youngster's recollection of the events that allegedly transpired.

He repeatedly has sought to have Ater declare a mistrial, contending various procedures have violated the state and federal constitutional rights of LeClair.

However, Ater has consistently rebuffed these efforts.

City looks for funds after securities company collapses

STATE

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Beaumont officials are looking for ways to compensate for $20 million the city lost when a Florida securities firm collapsed as state and county authorities began investigating the loss.

The Texas attorney general's office announced on Wednesday it would consider conducting an investigation requested by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Assistant Attorney General Lou McCreary was assigned to investigate the way the city invested the money in ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., which collapsed earlier this month.

"We don't have any criminal jurisdiction, just civil jurisdiction," said spokeswoman Loretta Hendley.

Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath has said he will present written and verbal complaints his office has received about the city's investments to a grand jury next month.

The $20 million, representing two-thirds of the city's surplus operating funds and nearly 20 percent of its $102 million annual budget, was invested in government securities by a since-resigned city finance director.

The deal was intended to provide 0.4 percent to 1 percent more interest than investments in Beaumont, officials said.

The Securites and Exchange Commission on Wednesday charged that an independent auditor for ESM securities, Jose Gomez, accepted $125,000 in private payments from the company's officers in exchange for issuing false financial statements used to lure investors to the firm.

Meanwhile, Beaumont officials were looking for ways to make up for the $20 million loss.

City officials plan to seek special legislation that would allow the city to extend the current fiscal year through Sept. 30, 1986.

Bridge continues to spark debate

WACO, Texas (AP) — Two more state agencies have joined the fray over who has a say in the construction of a private bridge over the Brazos River.

By Wednesday, at least seven county, state and federal agencies were trying to decide who has authority over the low-water bridge built by J&J Sand and Gravel Co. of Waco.

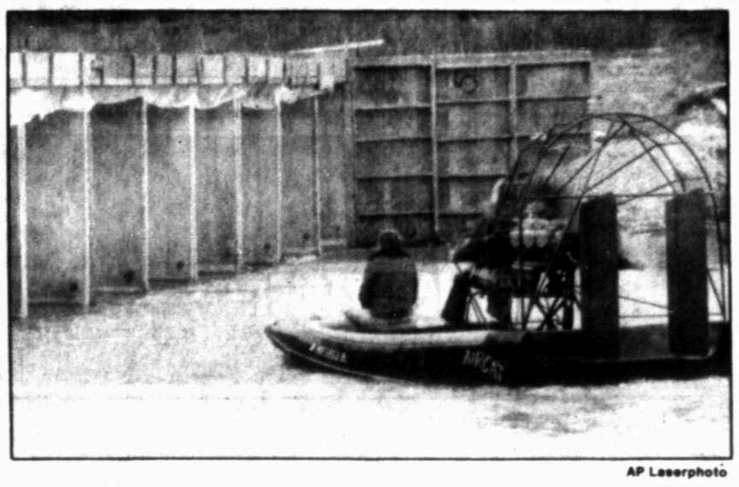

A petition opposing the structure located near the Gholson and Patrick communities in northwest McLennan County was signed by more than 250 people. They say the bridge is unsafe and will act as a dam in heavy rains, flooding property downstream.

Company owner John Trice of Carrollton says he only wants to save 30 miles on each hauling trip to Dallas. With only guardrails and some roadwork left to be done, the $300,000 bridge will be ready to open in April, the company predicts.

"Before it is over, (Trice) may have let $300,000 go down the river," said Waco attorney Ray Palladino, who represents the bridge's opponents.

On Wednesday, officials from the General Land office and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department joined McLennan County officials, the attorney general's office, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Texas Department of Water Resources and the Flood Emergency Management Agency in investigating the legalities and ramifications of the bridge, the Waco Herald-Tribune reported.

Trice admits that his company inadvertently violated county ordinances by building the structure in a flood plain without a county permit, but said the bridge complies with Army Corps of Engineers specifications.

A low-water bridge constructed over the Brazos River outside of Waco has generated protest from local property owners and recreational water users who claim the bridge will create hazards for boaters and ruin the natural environment.

Meanwhile, McLennan County Judge Stanley Rentz told residents the county will review ordinances but said it has little jurisdiction in the matter of rivers, which are controlled primarily by the Corps, he said.

"I don't know that we could require him to tear it down, but we could stop the use of it," Rentz said. "I hate to see it set a precedent because the guy's competition could come in and ask to put a bridge right next to it.

"I hate to see the old river cluttered up with a bunch of bridges," Rentz said.

"My main concern," said Mike Cloer of Waco, "is the precedent of a private business building a structure across a waterway that belongs to all of us and the lethargic attitude of some of our elected officials."

Bill would outlaw drinking, driving

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would make it illegal to drink and drive in Texas has been approved by the Senate, and the sponsor says state police believe four out of five people will voluntarily comply if the bill becomes law.

"What the Department of Public Safety tells us is that just by having a law on the books to make it illegal to drink and drive, 80 percent of the people will comply with it," Sen. Bill Sarpalius said Wednesday.

Sarpalius, D-Canyon, said statitics from several states had shown that outlawing drinking while driving would reduce the number of fatal traffic accidents.

"Many of you have run surveys in your own senatorial districts, and you have found that there has been a tremendous amount of support throughout the state to ban open containers," Sarpalius told his colleagues.

The bill would prohibit drivers from drinking or holding an open alcoholic beverage container while operating a motor vehicle. Violators could be fined up to $200.

Asked what police could do to stop a driver from simply passing an open beer to a passenger, Sarpalius said, "What we find is that in most cases if two people are sitting in the front seat, both are usually drinking ... and if one person is caught holding two cans of beer ... the peace officer has a pretty good case in that situation."

Sarpalius' bill, which cleared committee Monday only after he agreed to limit the drinking ban to drivers — not passengers — was sent to the House on voice vote. If approved by the House, the bill would go into effect Sept. 1.

Senators also approved and sent to the House proposals that would:

— Abolish the Texas Merit System Council at a savings of $276,866 to the state over the next two years. The council, in operation since 1981, has provided a merit-based personnel system for state employees in accordance with federal regulations.

— Allow the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to use projected costs of providing services so the agency can collect maximum reimbursement rates, which should result in a gain of $5.9 million a year for the state.

— Require a legislator representing a person for pay before a state agency to file a statement describing what he has been hired to do.

— Authorize proceeds from the sale of Permanent School Fund land to be used to acquire other land for that fund, which finances Texas' public schools.

— Abolish certain boards for lease and transfer their functions to the School Land Board.

— Allow the Texas Board of Health to charge fees for reviewing hopsital construction plans, which should bring in $219,881 over the next two years. The board's authority also would be extended to staffing requirements.

— Extend to 1997 the life of the Texas Advisory Board for Occupational Therapy, which was established two years ago.

— Streamline the Family Code.

— Give a driver turning left into a private road or driveway the right-of-way over a vehicle traveling behind him.

El Paso in running for plant, mayor says

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso is one of only two Texas cities still in the competition for General Motors' Saturn auto plant, Mayor Jonathan Rogers says.

The second city is the Dallas-Fort Worth-Arlington area, the mayor said.

The mayor said Wednesday he was told by the Texas Economic Development Commission that El Paso is one of only two Texas cities still in competition for the plant that would create 6,000 jobs and cost $3.5 billion.

General Motors has asked for more information about El Paso, a commission spokesman said Wednesday.

The commission asked city leaders to answer more questions about what El Paso has to offer the project, Eduardo Nunez, a business development coordinator for the commission in Austin, said.

Nunez called the request a "positive action" for the city. He said some Texas cities no longer are in active contention as sites and El Paso has "a lot to offer."

Replies will be sent to the commission's offices in Austin Friday, Rogers said.

Rogers said he was told that only one other Texas area — the Dallas-Fort Worth-Arlington area — has been asked to supply more information.

The Saturn project will use robots to build the new, inexpensive, hi-tech cars that GM hopes will compete with Japanese imports.

The University of Texas at Arlington recently won a government contract to study robotics, the mayor said. Still, he said he believes the still-undisclosed El Paso plan is better.

Court rules in favor of worker compensation

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled 7-2 Wednesday that an employee who returns to work merely to pick up a check is still covered by worker's compensation insurance.

Lawana Bryant, a part-time employee at a Corsicana bakery, sued INA of Texas, the bakery's worker's compensation carrier, after she fell and was injured at the bakery.

Mrs. Bryant had been laid off after having worked four days. She returned to the bakery 16 days later to pick up her pay at which time she fell and injured herself.

"To prove an injury compensable," the court said, Mrs. Bryant must show that she was an employee; that the injury occurred in the furtherance of the affairs of the employer and that the injury was of the kind and character that originated in or had to do with the employer's business.

"This injury is of a type which originated in the business of the employer. Clearly, being paid for work done is within the employment relationship and contract," said Justice Raul Gonzalez's majority opinion.

Justice Franklin Spears said in a dissenting opinion that in order for the employee to be covered by worker's compensation, the former employee must have been required to pick up the pay check.

Coast closed to shellfishing

AUSTIN (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein signed an order Wednesday closing additional portions of the Texas coast to shellfishing.

Bernstein's order, based on heavy rains and pollution of shellfish waters, closed Mission Bay, Copano Bay and Port Bay, north of the Interstate 35 Causeway.

Texans vote on MX issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Texans voted in the 55-45 roll call by which the Senate on Wednesday voted to appropriate $1.5 billion to acquire an additional 21 MX missiles.

On this roll call, a vote "for" was a vote to approve the MX money, while a vote "against" was a vote to reject it.FOR: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

TUEC to expand plants

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Utilities Electric Co. intends to build combustion turbine generating units at three of its gas-fueled power plants, officials said Wednesday.

The three units, the Permian Basin power plant near Monahans, the Morgan Creek plant near Colorado City and the DeCordova plant near Granbury, are expected to cost about $489 million.

The units are part of the company's 10-year resource plant for meeting growth in need for electricity in its service area, which covers the Dallas-Fort Worth area and West Texas, officials said.

Panel OKs Blue Law repeal

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee has approved a bill that would repeal the Blue Law banning merchants from selling 42 items on two consecutive weekend days.

The House Business and Commerce Committee on Wednesday unanimously approved a bill sponsored by Reps. David Cain, D-Dallas, and Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Ohio S&Ls could reopen for limited business Friday

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Most of the 69 Ohio savings and loans closed nearly a week ago could reopen for limited business by Friday, with the Federal Reserve offering supplies of currency to protect against runs by fearful depositors, officials said.

Sixty people lined up outside the Mansfield office of Savings One on Wednesday as the savings and loan reopened for limited service. Bank president Bob Masters said the institution had ordered truckloads of cash to avert a liquidity crisis, but there were no problems.

Gov. Richard Celeste closed 69 S&Ls on Friday to prevent a run by depositors in the wake of March 8 closing of Home State Savings Bank of Cincinnati, which said it had lost millions because of loans to a Florida government securities firm.

Deposits at the savings and loans closed by Celeste were backed by a private insurance fund which was strained by the Home State closing. The institutions now must apply for federal deposit insurance or equivalent coverage.

"I think the governor may be right; in the long run we may have stronger banking in Ohio," Masters said of the so-called bank holiday. "But it's a painful way to achieve it."

Century Savings, with offices in Columbus, Newark, Toledo and Cincinnati, obtained vault cash from a Cincinnati commercial bank, to prepare for its reopening today, said Century vice president William D. Connelly.

"It's more than we usually carry, because we don't know what to anticipate tomorrow," Connelly said. Another Cincinnati S&L reopened Monday.

Most of the Ohio S&Ls may be able to open on a limited basis by Friday under terms of an emergency law passed Wednesday that allows each depositor to withdraw up to $750 a month, said Thomas Batties, state superintendent of savings and loans.

Students' reaction to 'crisis' surprises school officials

JAMESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — School officials say they didn't realize how strongly students would react to a bogus report of a U.S.-Soviet confrontation, but some parents say teachers "just didn't think" when they planned the civics class exercise.

"The principal and the superintendent and a few teachers apparently thought this was a good idea to scare the pants off these kids," said Elva Gault, whose son Rodney, 17, was among about 50 Jamestown High School juniors told March 11 that the Soviets had bombed a U.S. ship in the Baltic Sea.

"That was not our intention," said Principal David F. Shaffer, who made the announcement to an American Cultures class. "We anticipated the kids would inquire what the ramifications of this might be and what alternatives did we face as a nation. We did not get that reaction."

Shaffer told the students school would be dismissed early in anticipation of a 5 p.m. address by President Reagan to a joint session of Congress.

He said Wednesday that at first the students "just sat there and stared." Then "they made the jump in their minds from crisis to nuclear war. A number of them saw this as the doom, the end," he said in a telephone interview. "Some had very strong reactions. They were very frightened."

The exercise failed because educators "just didn't think," Mrs. Gault said. "(Rodney) said kids were panic-stricken. Some of the girls apparently have boyfriends in the service, and they got scared."

All that glitters and glows is gold.

New labor secretary warmly welcomed by labor leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — William E. Brock, President Reagan's choice as new labor secretary, is being welcomed by organized labor to a post that has drawn the wrath of most union leaders over the past four years.

Brock was nominated Wednesday to succeed Raymond Donovan, whose relations with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland were non-existent after Donovan angered the labor federation's chief early in the Reagan administration.

Donovan resigned last week after being ordered to stand trial on 137 counts of grand larceny and fraud.

Tipped off to the appointment by Brock himself just before Reagan's announcement, Kirkland issued a statement saying, "We look forward to a new and constructive relationship with the Labor Department."

Teamsters President Jackie Presser said the union, one of the few to endorse Reagan for re-election, was "delighted with the appointment."

Brock said his primary job "is to do whatever I can to create as many jobs as I can."

Betty Southard Murphy, a Republican and former chairwoman of the National Labor Relations Board, said Brock will be able "to build bridges" to organized labor on the issue of foreign trade.

In his current post as the administration's trade representative, Brock has grappled with soaring U.S. trade deficits, which totaled $123.3 billion last year.

That's a problem of vital importance to union leaders representing American workers who have been laid off because of increasing imports. The foreign countries, in many cases, have erected strong barriers to keep out U.S. exports.

"We feel Brock is receptive to different views in the trade area and he tried to open up Japanese markets to U.S. telecommunications firms," noted Glenn Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America.

Confirmation hearings and action on Brock's nomination by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee are expected to take place in the next three to four weeks, said Ed Darrell, press secretary to the panel's Republican majority.

"It's a pretty good appointment," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, ranking Democrat on the Senate labor subcommittee.

Metzenbaum said Brock "is going to have a number of questions to answer" at confirmation hearings concerning "the administration's failure to extend" the federal supplemental unemployment benefits program, which expires March 31.

The 18,000-employee Labor Department, which is charged with enforcing dozens of laws affecting wages, hours, health and safety in the nation's workplaces, is about to be headed by a man who received a 91 percent approval rating from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce while he was in Congress.

The rating is "as good a conservative credential as the business community could hope for," said Mark A. de Bernardo, the chamber's manager of labor law. Brock was a one-term Republican senator from Tennessee after serving four terms in the House.

Kirkland's statement said that "while we have not always agreed" with Brock, "he has earned our respect."

On Tuesday, the day before Brock, who is 54, decided to take the job, Kirkland told reporters that organized labor had worked well with labor secretaries in previous Republican administrations.

Reagan keeps pledge to hold more conferences

An Analysis

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's news conference tonight will be his third in as many months, following a six-month hiatus that left reporters wondering whether he would abandon the traditional question-and-answer sessions in a second term.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said in January that Reagan would return to holding White House news conferences every four to six weeks, but reporters remained understandably skeptical. Speakes had said the same thing last spring, shortly before the long silence began.

This time, the pledge seems to be holding.

Speakes and other senior Reagan aides have criticized the nationally televised prime-time news conferences, calling them a necessary evil in which Reagan has little to gain and, potentially, much to lose should he make an embarrassing mistake.

Reagan's wife Nancy has encouraged his more frequent meetings with reporters, saying he handles the sessions effectively, despite his aides' concerns.

Some reporters, indeed, share the aides' distaste for the format because the East Room news conferences, in which Reagan selects his questioners, provide almost no opportunity to pursue a single topic of interest beyond the most cursory explanation of complex policy issues and decisions.

It is worthy of note, then, that Reagan has taken another important step to make himself more accessible in his second term.

Since the first of the year he has granted 12 personal interviews to individuals or small groups of reporters and editors, an average of one a week.

To the disappointment of those who cover him, Reagan's comments in the sessions rarely have provided much more than the boilerplate answers the reporters are accustomed to hearing from a man whose positions on major issues are already well-known. But it could be argued that that is as much the fault of the interviewers as it is of the person being interrogated.

After all, when the White House wants to make news, it has many options, ranging from the distribution of a simple piece of paper to a major presidential address. These methods give the president better control of his own words than does an unrehearsed question-and-answer session with reporters.

But any access to the president remains a precious commodity for those assigned to cover him. Rules bar reporters and photographers from the corridors and offices of the White House unless they have official escorts. And Secret Service procedures make it nearly impossible for the news media to approach Reagan when he is outside the building.

While increasing the frequency of formal question-and-answer periods, Speakes and the White House staff have tightened control of the once-frequent "photo opportunities" that reporters customarily used to solicit the president's comment on the news of the moment.

It is those sessions — and the hasty, shouted questions that punctuate them — that most rankle Reagan's aides, who blame them for diverting attention from the message or image the White House is trying to project.

Australian tribunal probes nuclear tests

By ROBERT GLASS

LONDON (AP) — On Oct. 3, 1952, a British sailor, Henry Carter, sat in a boat off the western coast of Australia while an atomic bomb exploded two miles away. In the blinding flash he saw the bones of his hands like an X-ray picture.

Carter, now 62 years old and suffering from impaired vision and breathing, has emerged three decades later as part of the political fallout still being generated by the blast.

He is one of about 30 former British servicemen and scientists who have testified in London before an Australian tribunal investigating allegations that Britain used thousands of servicemen as human guinea pigs during its atomic weapons tests in Australia between 1952 and 1963.

SUCCESSIVE BRITISH governments have denied the allegations but refused to conduct an inquiry, prompting charges of coverup. Details of the tests remained hidden from public view in secret documents locked away in British government archives.

Now some of those secrets are emerging piecemeal in public hearings the Australian royal commission has been conducting since Jan. 3 in a conference room about a block from St. James's Palace in central London.

Britain conducted 12 atomic tests in Australia between 1952 and 1957 — three on the Monte Bello Islands, seven at Maralinga and two at Emu. The latter two sites are in South Australian bush country populated by abrogines, who are represented at the inquiry.

In addition, there were about 300 minor trials, apparently of triggering devices, at Maralinga and Emu, between 1953 and 1963. The inquiry does not cover Britain's hydrogen bomb tests in 1957 near the Christmas Islands in the South Pacific.

THE AUSTRALIAN government appointed the royal commission, the country's highest form of investigative tribunal, last year after it was disclosed that a 1956 test at Monte Bello had the equivalent force of 60,000 tons of TNT, nearly four times what was originally stated.

After taking evidence in Australia for three months, the commission moved its inquiry to London in a caustic atmosphere that threatened to develop into a diplomatic row.

The commission chairman, Justice James McClelland, opened the London hearings by accusing the British government of foot-dragging over requests for relevant documents.

McClelland, a 69-year-old former Labor Party member of the Australian Senate, said national security "has always been a convenient alibi for failure of disclosure."

"But today it is hard to believe that Britain is in possession of any atomic secrets unknown to the great nuclear powers."

BRITAIN RESPONDED by declassifying thousands of documents and making them available to members of the commission and lawyers representing veterans and aborigines.

Carter was one of several ex-servicemen who have alleged their health was permanently damaged by exposure to high levels on radiation. He said he suffers from cataracts in both eyes, a rash and asthma.

When Britain exploded its first atomic bomb, codenamed Hurricane, on the Monte Bello Islands, with a force of 25,000 tons of TNT, Carter was on a boat used to ferry British scientists monitoring the test.

With a black tarpaulin drapped over the boat and a jungle-green towel wrapped over his head, Carter was enveloped in darkness. Even so, he pressed the palms of his hands into his eye sockets as the countdown began.

"At zero, there was a blinding electric blue light of an intensity I had not seen before or since," he testified. "I pressed my hands harder to my eyes, then realized I could see the bones of my hands."

VETERANS GROUPS say there has been an abnormally high rate of cancer and other disease among the 20,000 British servicemen and civilians who took part in the atomic weapons tests.

About 130 former servicemen and their widows have filed claims for pension benefits related to the tests, but only three of the claims have been approved. Five claims for unspecified damages are also pending in Australia.

Although the British government has rejected calls to conduct its own inquiry, the National Radiological Protection Board has begun a survey of 12,000 personnel involved in the tests. The board is to report its findings next year.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament in January that 15,000 of the 20,000 people involved in the tests were not exposed to any radiation. Of the remaining 5,000, only 30 were exposed to high radiation levels and measures were taken to safeguard their health, she said.

"There is no truth in the allegations that British servicemen were used as guinea pigs," she said.

NEVERTHELESS, David Barnes, 79, a health physicist who was a radiological adviser for the Monte Bello tests, acknowledged that some men involved in the tests were exposed to radiation levels six times higher than what was considered safe at the time.

Tourists flock to Jericho to see fortresses

Associated Press

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank (AP) — When the walls of Jericho came tumbling down more than 3,000 years ago, Joshua sought to obliterate all traces of the city and put a curse upon anyone who tried to rebuild it.

But archaeologists excavated the site and now 500 tourists a day file past ramparts which existed 6,000 years before the Israelites' trumpets sounded the city's destruction.

On a barren hill near the northern shore of the Dead Sea, opposite the Mount of Temptation, where the Bible says Jesus was tempted by Satan, pilgrims walk past open pits which reveal a tower and defense walls 17 feet high and 12 feet thick, surrounded by a moat.

"I'm just overwhelmed with it," said Michael Langham, a Lutheran minister from Chicago who led a tour group to Jericho recently. "I'm just looking at the hills and trying to imagine what it was like during all these different periods."

The Jericho mound fascinates but also disturbs many religious pilgrims. British archaeologist Kathleen Kenyon, who dated the remains in 1957, wrote that the uncovered walls and 27-foot-tall tower with its still intact interior staircase were built between 7300 and 8300 B.C., up to 4,000 years before the traditional date for the biblical creation of the world.

But she also suggested the city was destroyed by fire, as the Old Testament's Book of Joshua says, and was then uninhabited for about 600 years.

Blame protocol

Have you ever stopped to consider what in the world could be so important that it keeps leaders of the world's superpowers from getting together to talk about world peace?

After all, when you understand that the superpowers hold in their arsenals the power to destroy civilized life, is anything really more important than peace?

Not that inroads aren't made into the peace process. At the current time, for example, negotiators for the United States and the Soviet Union are meeting in Geneva to discuss nuclear arms reductions. That's truly significant and people around the world will watch the progression of those talks with unflagging interest.

But why kick to some appointed diplomats a subject as vital to every man, woman and child as world peace? Why can't Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev simply get together to discuss their respective countries' differences and lay out a plan to insure that the interests of the peace-loving people of the world will be safeguarded? What could be so important that it occupies all their time, forestalling any serious heart-to-heart talks about the future of mankind?

Well, there certainly are other matters that deserve their attention and most people would not downplay the significance of giving ample consideration to the nations' economic survival and prosperity and the general welfare of the publics. And all rational individuals fully recognize that affairs of state do not magically happen but are the result of the machinations of giant bureaucracies. In fact, at times those bureaucracies give the impression of being at least a large part of the reason that relationships between the superpowers develop so slowly.

That can be distressing in a world in which computer technology has made the transmittal of all types of information possible in seconds, even micro-seconds. That technology exaggerates the slowness of the diplomatic process.

The real culprit in this particular situation is protocol. There are particular times and places, and particular individuals that the superpowers have assigned as their official representatives in negotiating ways to get along with each other. It may not make much sense to the average man or woman who, once having decided to do something, quickly follows through.

For what it's worth, diplomatic protocol probably is a salvation, albeit an aggravation. It necessitates steady progression towards a fixed goal. But it's also the undeniable frustration for a world that for decades has lived under the fear of atomic weapons and rarely sees any real improvement in relations.

It's obviously not the most pleasant of situations, but it isn't likely to change anytime soon. So if you're unhappy, blame it on protocol.

Another View:

Donovan's departure

President Reagan should carefully take his time finding a replacement for just-resigned Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan. The ex-construction executive from New Jersey appropriately left the administration a few days ago when a New York judge refused to dismiss fraud and larceny charges against him and his former company and nine other men that stemmed from a New York subway project.

Mr. Donovan had been on unpaid leave since his indictment last October. He correctly chose not to resign at that time because it could have been perceived as an admission of guilt, with the indictment coming so close to the end of the election campaign. A resignation then could have encouraged more politically ambitious district attorneys to initiate fishing expeditions for cabinet officers.

But now that the case is going to what is expected to be a long and sensational trial, it would have been too embarrassing for the Reagan administration for Mr. Donovan to stay on. And Mr. Donovan, who continues to profess his innocence, will need to devote all of his time and attention to clearing his name.

Investigations by a Senate Labor Committee and a special prosecutor have in the past supported Mr. Donovan. As a private citizen, he also must be presumed innocent until he is proved guilty. Still, Mr. Donovan's main claim to history will be a dubious one: having been the first cabinet secretary to be indicted while serving on the job.

In retrospect, the president could have avoided many of his political troubles with labor if he had more carefully scrutinized Mr. Donovan's past. While Washington and the nation don't appear to have suffered too much from the Donovan troubles, the Reagan administration shouldn't press its luck a second time.

ART BUCHWALD

Watching Gorbachev in style

The Soviet Watchers of Washington met last week in the "Darkness at Noon Russian Tea Room" to be briefed on Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev's rise to the top of the U.S.S.R.

Art Buchwald

Professor Nicholai Dubokowsky, one of the leading Kremlinologists in this country, gave us the word. "Gorbachev may be around for at least 30 years, so you have to watch him very closely."

"What should we watch for?"

"Since he is only 54 years old you should watch the way he stands when he's on the top of Lenin's Tomb. Remember, he is the first Soviet leader in 10 years who can watch a parade without a Politburo member on each side holding on to his arms so he won't fall down. This has its good and bad implications. The fact that he can stand on his own two feet makes Gorbachev dangerous. At the same time we can expect more credibility from the Kremlin on their leader's health. Now when they announce he has a bad cold, we can all assume he does have a bad cold."

"Why is Gorbachev getting such a good press?"

"Because he speaks English and wears nice suits. One of the reasons Americans never trusted the Soviet leaders in the past was that they dressed so tacky. How could you discuss ways of avoiding World War III with people who wore baggy pants and white socks? Gorbachev is a new breed of Russian. His suit coat fits, and his choice of shirts and ties is impeccable. He's the type of person you're not ashamed to be photographed with at a summit conference."

"Does the fact that he's a snappy dresser mean he's a more formidable adversary?"

"He could go either way. Khrushchev almost brought us to nuclear destruction by hammering his shoe on the podium at the United Nations. Gorbachev would never do this because he's afraid it would ruin his shine. But you still have to watch him very carefully. The fact that he doesn't drool all over the medals on his chest could be to NATO's disadvantage. With the others you knew they weren't going to be around very long, so the West was willing to put up with their peccadillos for a year or two. With Gorbachev it will be at least three decades before he winds up in the Kremlin Wall."

"Do you think he will flaunt the fact he is only 54 years old in Reagan's face?"

"He has already. In a hand-delivered letter to President Reagan Gorbachev started by addressing it 'Dear Uncle Ronnie.' That threw the president for a loop. He doesn't even like his grandchildren to call him Grandpa."

"Vice President George Bush watched Gorbachev all during Chernenko's funeral. What was his impression of the man?"

"As you know, Mr. Bush has become an expert at watching Soviet leaders at Moscow funerals. He came back quite impressed. Mr. Bush thinks Gorbachev has the potential to become the first Soviet Yuppie premier. The leader seems to enjoy the good things in life, and one of his priorities is to provide more of the same for his people. The vice president believes if we can get Gorbachev to import more Perrier and buy more BMWs with stereo tape decks in them, the Soviets will lose their appetite for world conquest."

"What about Mrs. Gorbachev? Should we spend much time watching her?"

"You have no choice. The press is now referring to her as another Jackie Kennedy. Mrs. Gorbachev could be a big help to the Soviet leader when he travels around the world. The thing to watch is his first trip to France. If he pulls a John Kennedy and says, 'I am the man who accompanied Raisa Gorbachev to Paris,' and it gets a big hand, we're in a lot more trouble than most people think."

JACK ANDERSON

U.S. program used for murder

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is secretly investigating the disturbing possibility that dozens of suspected leftists were murdered by Honduran military officers in a U.S.-funded program.

Jack Anderson

Sources in Tegucigalpa told my associate Jon Lee Anderson there is no evidence that U.S. officials were aware of the executions. In fact, Honduran sources emphasized that Americans involved in the program were deliberately kept in the dark. That is one of the questions being pursued by the Defense Department.

The U.S.-funded program was supposed to curb the flow of arms from the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua to leftist rebels in El Salvador. As such, the program was related to the CIA-run covert operation begun in 1981 to support the anti-Sandinista contras. "Arms interdiction" was the justification the Reagan administration gave when it persuaded Congress to put up the original $19 million for the secret war in Nicaragua.

Unlike the CIA's clandestine operations, the U.S. aid to the Honduran government was aboveboard. The need to prevent "export of armed subversion" by Nicaragua has repeatedly been cited by the White House to explain the massive U.S. military presence in Honduras.

A reliable source in Tegucigalpa said there have been several cases of suspected leftists who had "disappeared" after detention by Honduran officers in charge of the arms-interdiction program.

One source said that in the last month the Defense Department's investigation has focused on charges that the Special Operations Command, an elite Honduran counterinsurgency force, was "involved in some of the disappearances."

Another source, a former special-operations member, told my associate that the outfit also operated "safe-houses" of its own, where it conducted interrogations of suspected leftists. Some of those arrested by the unit for interrogation "later ended up under earth," the source said.

In addition, this Honduran source said, the Special Operations Command trained and equipped some private, anti-communist paramilitary squads that operated on their own. "They did some of our dirty work for us," the former COE agent said.

The former COE man emphatically absolved U.S. military advisers of complicity in the disappearances of suspected leftists. Though the Americans sometimes joined in the interrogations, he said, they were intentionally kept ignorant of the illegel executions.

"Our officers don't trust the Americans," he explained. The ex-agent implied that the Hondurans feared that if the American officers learned the truth about the executions, they would feel compelled to report them to the Pentagon — and then it would leak to Congress and the press, and U.S. funds for the Honduran military would be endangered.

Most observers on the scene agree that the arms-interdiction program in Honduras has succeeded. As early as 1982, sources said, the arms shipments to Salvadoran rebels through Honduras had shrunk to a trickle. This would explain why the Reagan administration has changed its strategy and now demands that the Sandinistas cry "uncle!"

DUSTING OFF A TREATY: Is the Genocide Convention finally going to make it onto the Senate floor after 35 years?

It looks as if it might — possibly today. And even die-hard opponents of the Holocaust-inspired U.N. treaty concede that the prospects of Senate ratification are better than they've ever been.

President Reagan, like every chief executive since 1950 — except Dwight Eisenhower — has endorsed the treaty. (Eisenhower held off to avoid inflaming right-wing elements.)

The opposition now, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will insist on reservations or amendments before approving the treaty.

"Our main objection is that the treaty as it stands gives compulsory jurisdiction to the World Court over the sovereignty of the United States," Helms aide Dr. James Lucier told my reporter Mark Woolley.

Critics of the treaty have raised the possibility that the World Court could supplant the Constitution by forcing the United States to go to war with a nation that has been found by the international tribunal to have engaged in genocide. They have also expressed concern that American soldiers — or even police officers — could be hauled before the World Court simply on a complaint that they were racially or ethnically motivated in the exercise of their duties.

But proponents, led by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., point out that other nations have ratified the convention, with reservations. Proxmire says:

"It is a human rights treaty ... designed to ensure that all nations, consistent with their own constitutions, will do everything possible to prevent and punish criminals who attempt to commit the most heinous crime — the elimination of an entire national, ethnic, racial or religious group."

GEORGE F. WILL

U.S.: Home of discount debt

WASHINGTON — A wit once defined a barometer as an ingenious instrument that reveals the kind of weather we are experiencing. If you have no barometer, you can consult the Senate Budget Committee. It, like a barometer, measures climatic pressure.

George F. Will

The committee has rejected the President's budget. That is "rejected" as in: Russia rejected Napoleon. The vote was 17-4 and reflected the fact that among the 535 members of Congress there probably are not 35 who would vote for the President's program of continuingthe defense buildup at the pace he prefers, avoiding all tax increases and significantly cutting middle-class domestic programs.

Less than six months ago the President got a mandate to keep on keeping on — to continue the policies of the first term. That is not surprising. The public rather enjoys getting a dollar of government spending and being charged only 75 cents in taxes. Last week there was a languorous White House discussion about sending the Great Communicator back onto the campaign trail to communicate (as he forgot to do before the election) his zest for all those specific program cuts. But his aides then thought: He would be campaigning against most Senate Republicans, 40 percent of whom face re-election in 19 months. Reagan would not be able to campaign for a "live legislative vehicle." (Sorry. They talk like that.)

What the budget committee approved might bring a blush to the presidential cheeks. It would cut the deficit by more than the President's budget would have done. Furthermore, the committee plan would confound skeptics by freezing Social Security benefits for a year. Of course all this is in the subjunctive tense because the committee action binds no one. The only thing mandatory is that we pay the interest on the national debt.

The debt, without major policy changes (the likelihood of which has gone from "not very" to "are you kidding?") will increase about $1 trillion in the next four years. If so, every year for the rest of the history of the Republic taxpayers will pay about $100 billion in interest just on this four-year addition to the debt.

Ronald Reagan is playing Tom Sawyer, who was the quintessential American, which means he was something of a sharpie. Tom, a cunning rascal, grew up about 185 miles west of Dixon, Illinois. Cunning rascals sprout like corn out there.

Not since Tom tricked the other boys into whitewashing Aunt Polly's fence for him has there been anything as nifty as Reagan's way of getting others to do his disagreeable chores. He says to Congress: Here is the division of labor: I'll look after the Marine band, Air Force One and Camp David. You folks cut the social programs.

Sen. Pat Moynihan has a modest proposal for a one-shot cash infusion to trim the deficit without cutting any programs. His idea for slicing a substantial piece off the government's debt is: Sell it. Part of the debt, that is.

By the end of fiscal 1986, the government will have outstanding loans valued at (which does not mean "worth") $280 billion. That is three times the size of the loan portfolio of Citicorp, one of the nation's largest banks. This federal portfolio is scattered around the government and managed by bureaucrats paid less than a Citicorp branch manager.

Many loans are at far less than today's interest rates. Under Moynihan's plan, they would be sold at a discount reflecting their real market value today. Even assuming that the value of the $280 billion in paper is now just, say, $75 billion, that is the real value, no matter who holds the paper, and the government would get a cash infusion of $75 billion.

The loans were made to students, small businesses, large corporations, farmers and many other groups including foreign governments. The point was to let Congress spare those groups the torture of paying market rates for money. But selling the loans to private institutions would not change the terms. The people owing the money would just send their checks to a different address.

Moynihan's plan has an international dimension because of the doctrine of "comparative advantage." According to that, different nations do different things well and each nation should prosper by swapping goods and services according to its comparative advantage.

Japan, for example, is good at making cars and cameras and television sets and many other things. The United States, too, is gifted at making many things, but it is especially, even incomparably, gifted at making debts.

The Japanese save 20 percent of their wages, about triple the American rate. That is one reason why Japan has between $50 billion and $100 billion sloshing around the world, looking for things to buy. America has debt to sell at a discount. Call that the American advantage, comparatively speaking.

NATION IN BRIEF

Airline agent to donate King speech to group

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — An airline agent said he saw Martin Luther King Jr. throw his "We Shall Overcome" speech onto an airplane seat before getting off in Atlanta after a flight from Montgomery, where the speech was given in 1962.

Johnny Johnston, manager of Eastern Airlines in Huntsville, said Wednesday he would give the 14-page manuscript he had saved for 24 years to the Martin Luther King Foundation on Saturday.

In the 1962 speech, the slain civil rights leader proclaimed what would become the theme song of the civil-rights movement. He was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968.

Thief calls cab — twice

NEW YORK (AP) — Taxis turned out to be lousy getaway cars for a thief who called twice for help in hauling off loot and was arrested the second time, police said.

A suspicious cabbie called police Wednesday when a man tried to load hams, salamis, cheese and liquor from a restaurant into his trunk, said Officer James Talbot. The thief fled but called another cab a few hours later, Talbot said.

Police followed the taxi and nabbed the crook with stereo equipment and a case of liquor, he said. Raymond Burnett, 21, was charged with the restaurant break-in, he said.

Ex-Teamster head 'very ill'

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Teamsters President Roy L. Williams, who faces a 55-year prison term for bribery conspiracy, is "very ill," his attorney said after a judge ordered a report on Williams' health and activities.

U.S. District Judge Prentice H. Marshall told attorney Thomas Wadden on Wednesday that he wanted the information to decide whether to make Williams, 69, begin serving the sentence.

Williams and four others were convicted in 1982 of conspiring to bribe then-U.S. Sen. Howard Cannon of Nevada with a land deal in return for his help in defeating trucking deregulation legislation.

Tract 'sick and malicious'

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A Roman Catholic bishop says an Arkansas-based church that's threatening to flood Chattanooga with anti-Vatican gospel tracts and posters is "sick and malicious."

Tony Alamo, head of the Alamo Christian Church of Alma, Ark., told The Chattanooga Times earlier this week that the tracts and posters were retaliation for the arrest of two men here for putting up similar posters.

"You're No. 1 on the hit parade," said Tony Alamo. "That means that everyone in that town is going to read the truth about the pope...everybody."

John E. Kolbeck, 25, of Alma, Ark., and William Howard Wattles, 31, of Van Buren, Ark., were charged Saturday with disorderly conduct and defacing a building. Police said the men put up dozens of anti-Catholic posters.

Heckler alarmed about cocaine abuse in teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing figures showing an "alarming" level of cocaine use among high school students, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says her department plans new efforts to combat teen drug abuse.

Mrs. Heckler told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that a survey of high school seniors last year found 6 percent were users of cocaine, once an exotic and expensive drug, but now becoming more available because of lower prices.

"While cocaine use has been viewed as mostly an affliction of the young and upwardly mobile, there are some indications that it is breaking out of this group, spreading even to our vulnerable teen-age population," Mrs. Heckler told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"This is happening just as we are able to understand the severe medical and emotional consequences of cocaine usage," she added. "Cocaine is not a harmless recreational drug. It is a poison."

Mrs. Heckler later told a reporter she was "very surprised" by the survey results, particularly because the same study showed a decline in alcohol and marijuana use among students. The secretary said she plans to develop a special program to combat cocaine use in the schools, with an announcement likely in about two weeks.

While she could not quote a street price for cocaine, Mrs. Heckler said she knew it had dropped to the point that students could afford it. Another witness at the hearing said a cocaine derivative can be purchased in Southern California for $10 to $25.

The study Mrs. Heckler cited noted wide regional variations from the nationwide rate of cocaine use among high school seniors. In the Northeast, the study said 11 percent admitted they had used cocaine in the past month. In the West the figure was 9 percent, in the South just over 4 percent and in the North Central states just over 2 percent.

"The figures are alarming, particularly because of the addictive quality of cocaine," she said. Laboratory tests have found rats given access to unlimited quantities of cocaine eat the substance, to the exclusion of everything else, until they die, she said.

Mrs. Heckler said the same survey, conducted by HHS and the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research, found that daily use of alcohol was reported by 5 percent of high school seniors in 1984, down from 7 percent in 1979.

In addition, she said, only 5 percent of the seniors said they used marijuana daily, less than half the 11 percent of the peak year, 1978, and the lowest ever recorded by the survey.

NEW YORK — The Bernhard Goetz case reaches prime time tonight when ABC News' "20-20" reconstructs the subway shooting scene and a Harvard lawyer analyzes Goetz's actions step by step, then rejects his self-defense contention.

"The bottom line is that society hungered for a Bernhard Goetz. Unfortunately, they didn't get one," Geraldo Rivera, a "20-20" correspondent, told The Associated Press before tonight's broadcast, which is devoted entirely to what Rivera calls the facts and myths of the Goetz case.

"If you think about it, this was a relatively minor incident," said Rivera. "No one died, yet three months after the fact, the Goetz saga has become a myth-making phenomenon."

A tape of the broadcast was not available for preview, but these are its major elements, according to Rivera and executive producer Av Westin:

— A reconstruction with actors of the scene last December when Goetz shot four youths on a subway car.

The reconstruction is based on accounts by three of the wounded youths and the two-hour video-taped confession Goetz made to law officers when he surrendered in Concord, N.H., nine days after the shootings. ABC viewed the tape but tonight will only air parts of the audio track, the first time the public will hear any segment of the confession.

By showing spatial relationships on the subway car, Westin said, the reconstruction may shed light on Goetz' feeling that his life was in danger. Westin said the actors representing the subway riders act in "neutral" ways. They all wear blue coveralls. A gun is pointed, but it is never fired in the re-enactment.

— An examination by Arthur Miller, Harvard's noted Constitutional law expert, of Goetz's movements and whether deadly force was a reasonable response every step of the way.

In the reconstruction, Miller examines whether Goetz was provoked, whether he could have retreated and whether deadly force was the only remaining recourse. Through a step-by-step, freeze-frame study of the re-enactment, Miller concludes that Goetz was probably not afraid for his life at every stage, Rivera said. Westin added that Miller "very strongly disputes the self-defense defense of Goetz."

— What Westin calls a "time-and-motion" study that charts shifting public-opinion as new details were released, including what politicians have been saying.

Spring brings its mixture of forecasts

From Staff and Wire Reports

Spring has arrived in the Permian Basin with its usual mixture of cloudy skies and high winds, and Friday's weather should fit the seasonal profile, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

After tonight's mostly cloudy skies and low temperatures in the mid-40s, Friday will be partly cloudy with a high in the low 70s. But winds will increase to 10-20 mph and be gusting by the afternoon.

Wednesday's high of 60 was 29 degrees below the record for the date of 89, set in 1934, while the overnight low of 40 was 13 degrees above the 1965 record of 27.

STATE

A storm system that dumped heavy rainfall over northern portions of the state and triggered damaging winds in Southeast Texas moved eastward into Louisiana early today.

The departure of the surface low pressure system left Texas with clearing skies, slightly warmer temperatures and some shower activity that lingered in Northeast Texas at dawn.

Some flash flooding was reported east of Denton during the night and high winds overturned a mobile home near Port Arthur Wednesday, injuring the occupants. Golf ball size hail was reported southwest of Sherman in North Texas Wednesday evening.

Skies were fair over Southwest Texas, the South Plains and South Central Texas early today and mostly cloudy elsewhere. The clearing trend was expected to continue today.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s with readings in the 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extremes ranged from 42 at Amarillo, Lubbock and Midland to 68 at McAllen.

NATION

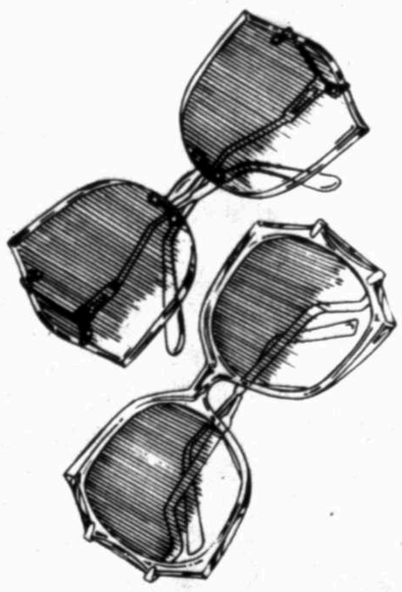

Blustery spring winds downed trees and power lines in the South today and pushed wind chills to 20 below zero in along the New England coast as heavy rain and thunderstorms plagued large sections of the nation.

A storm blew thunderstorms and heavy rain from the central Gulf Coast to the Florida Panhandle and Alabama, where 2½ inches of rain fell by Wednesday evening in Mobile amid wind gusts to 50 mph that downed trees and power lines.

Chaps survive stage-fright special, 70-61

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — If Midland College plays tonight like it did in beating Westark, 70-61, Wednesday, the Chaparrals could wind up losing to a team that some suspect can't even spell its own name.

That's the pessismistic view. Optimistically, college coaches scouting the tournament labeled Westark as one of the best teams in the 16-team field.

As it was, MC almost lost in the opening round of the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament to a team that did not look as strong as the one it beat to get here.

And just before Midland and the Fort Smith, Ark., team played their matinee stage-fright special, Allegany, spelled Alleghany in most places, of Cumberland, Md., turned an all even halftime game into an 85-60 walkover with a fluid offense and a pocket-picking defense and did just about anything it pleased to against unsuspecting Hinds, Miss., who's tallest player was 6-foot-4.

Allegany was not only impressive against 26-6 Hinds, but will bring an equally impressive 32-3 record into today's 7:45 p.m. second round game against the 30-4 Chaps.

After coming from behind in the final 10 minutes to beat Laredo last Friday and thus earn the trip to Hutchinson, it was as though the Chaps took the floor Wednesday, suddenly realized where they were and what they were playing for and became paralyzed.

MC missed its first nine shots from the field and turned the ball over as many more times trying to find the shot against a packed-in zone defense to go 8:29 without a basket and fall behind, 9-1.

While deploring the almost disinterested play of the Chaps, it went almost unnoticed that Westark, 33-4, wasn't exactly torching the Sports Arena, despite the Chaparral mistakes. Westark was experiencing its own brand of first game jitters as well, and at half, MC lagged only 27-23.

"That happens to a team up here," said MC coach Jerry Stone. "I think we'll play our normal game tomorrow. Allegany? I watched them play, but I have no idea of what I saw. My mind was on our game.

"Today we seemed tense and couldn't seem to shake it, even in the second half. Perhaps, when I told them to relax before the game, and in doing so, they became passive."

Again it was a case of Stone looking for the right combination for a spark to ignite the team. "We even had a guard (Ricky Grace) playing the post, but nothing seemed to help."

Stone added, "As hard as it is for this team to win, it never gives up and that's what saved us today."

He also stepped up second half defensive pressure after convincing his players that, "up here the referees don't call every little thing. They let you play, so get after them."

A spurt at the start of the second half gave MC the lead, 31-27, and the Westark defense, which had been packed in a solid zone under the basket in the first half, had to come out and play.

Still, the Chaps weren't out of the woods. The Texans trailed 39-35 with 11:50 to go when "Big Mo" begin to flow in MC's direction. Six-nine Teviin Binns stashed a rebound and Zeak Williams committed larceny in the backcourt and soloed to tie it at 41 with 10 minutes left.

After that Ricky Grace, Chuckie Graves and Eddie Frazier took over. Frazier, riding the bench with four personals, had to come back in when Binns picked up his fourth foul and the 6-6, 230-pound freshman from Dorchester, Mass., played his best ball while walking the narrow edge.

Frazier's dunk off a missed Graves' shot and the accompaning free throw conversion were performed with the kind of authority that for the first time gave one the feeling that the Chaps were in charge. The three-pointer also gave MC a 47-42 lead with 7:34 to play.

With 3:18 to go, MC held sway, 55-51, when Grace hit from the top of the circle, Fraizer added a free throw, Graves drove the lane for a three-pointer and Frazier struck from the lane. That made it 63-51 with two minutes to go and for the first time the Chaps could breathe easily again.

In the final 20 minutes, Graves hit 11 of his 13 points while Frazier scored all 11 of his. Grace supplied nine of his 13. Still, Binns was the Chaps' high scorer with 15 points, 15 points that kept Midland in the game when things were not going well. Binns' 11 rebounds were high for the game, but "Postman Grace" had five rebounds, Tony Wright and Graves four each.

Westark's 6-8 Lewis Cook wheeled off the post for six baskets in eight shots and it was when MC collasped on him in the second half, that Westark had to go outside to Carl Lott, who wound up with 20 points.

In second round games Wednesday night, Moberly, Mo., and Highland Park, Mich., demonstrated the difference of having a tournament game under the belt, by shooting out the lights as Moberly upset No. 1 ranked and undefeated Highland, 83-78. In another second round game, Kankakee, Ill., blasted Ferrum, Va., 87-70. Kankakee will meet Moberly in its next game.

Wacker given warning letter

DALLAS (AP) — Difficulties in pinning down unsportsmanlike conduct in college recruiting are highlighted by a recent tiff between TCU coach Jim Wacker and Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill.

Sherrill complained to the Southwest Conference office about Wacker's behavior in recruiting Brian Nielsen, an offensive lineman from Deer Park, the Dallas Times Herald reported Wednesday.

After checking into the incident, the SWC sent Wacker a letter of warning.

Wacker called the incident "Mickey Mouse."

But as one of the first applications of the new SWC rule against "negative" recruiting, the incident points up one of recruiting's most persistent problems and the SWC's difficulty in trying to deal with it.

The negative recruiting rule applies to anybody who makes "unduly derogatory" remarks about another school or its personnel to a recruit, his parents or coaches. SWC representatives approved the rule last May as part of the conference's sportsmanlike conduct policy.

One offense under the rule brings a public reprimand. A second means suspension from recruiting for one season.

But in the race for players, the difficulty for the SWC comes in deciding what is merely competitiveness and what is negativity, officials say.

Nielsen, meanwhile, is going to Texas.

Cocky Ramblers test Georgetown

Associated Press

NCAA Tourney

If Loyola of Chicago is apprehensive about facing No. 1 Georgetown, the Ramblers aren't saying so.

"I'll post up anybody," claimed Alfredrick "The Great" Hughes, the second-leading scorer in the nation. "It really doesn't matter who it is, because I know what I can do."

But the question is: How will Hughes and his No. 14 Loyola team do tonight against Georgetown in the NCAA East Regional semifinals in Providence, R.I.?

The Ramblers, a cocky collection of Chicago-area players, are a free-wheeling offensive machine that is second in Division I scoring (85.8 points per game) and are led by Hughes, who averages 26.9.

Loyola began the season unranked, got routed by Oklahoma and also lost to Louisiana State and Marquette early on. But the team has won its last 19 games, which is the longest victory streak in the nation and includes NCAA tournament triumphs over Southern Methodist and Iona.

Faced with the prospect of playing the powerful Hoyas and three-time All-American center Patrick Ewing, the 27-5 Ramblers plan to keep doing the things they have done all season.

"Unlike other teams, we don't try to get the ball inside," Coach Gene Sullivan said. "We try to get the ball outside."

That's partly because Loyola's tallest starter is 6-9 center Andre Moore. But that's also because Sullivan has confidence in his gunners, especially the 6-5 Hughes.

"He does force a shot now and then," Sullivan said of his senior swingman. "And he always will because he believes he's going to make every shot.

"But he's a 50 percent shooter. I don't want to contain him. I want to turn him loose," Sullivan said.

Teaming with Hughes are Andre Battle, a senior guard averaging 20.6 points, and Carl Golston, a junior point guard averaging 15.1 and leading the nation with 9.3 assists per game.

"They're free to take any shot they want," Sullivan said.

The coach also said his entire team was free to relax before the game.

The game will be shown live on CBS-TV starting at 8:10 p.m. CST. The matchup will follow the opening East regional semifinal between No. 6 Georgia Tech and No. 12 Illinois, which will be televised by CBS on delayed tape after the Loyola-Georgetown game.

Illinois, 26-8, was the Big Ten runner-up and has beaten Northeastern and Georgia in the tournament. The Illini victories have come without 6-8 center George Montgomery, who was injured late in the season.

In other NCAA games tonight, the Midwest Regional in Dallas will pit No. 8 Louisiana Tech, 29-2, against No. 4 Oklahoma, 30-5, and Boston College, 20-10, versus No. 5 Memphis State, 29-3.

On Friday night, the Southeast Regional in Birmingham, Ala., will feature Maryland, 25-11, against Villanova, 21-10, and No. 7 North Carolina, 26-8, against Auburn, 22-11.

Also on Friday night, in the West Regional in Denver, No. 16 North Carolina State, 22-9, plays Alabama, 23-9, and No. 3 St. John's, 29-3, takes on Kentucky, 18-12.

Baylor replaces Haller with Iba

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Gene Iba era began at Baylor University today and the new Bear basketball coach had a four-year contract to work the same kind of magic he produced at Houston Baptist.

The 44-year-old Iba met "eyeball-to-eyeball" with his players on Wednesday after being named the 13th Baylor coach in the school's history. There were no defections.

"I like what's here and I want to keep what's here," Iba told his players. "What's happened in the past can be handled with no problems."

It's the first time since 1907 that Baylor has gone outside the school to hire a basketball coach.

Iba replaced the popular Jim Haller, who resigned under administration fire after a player taped a conversation in which Haller gave the player permission to use a $172 meals expense check for a car payment. Haller admitted he violated NCAA rules and resigned.

Haller recommended Iba for the job and said, "They couldn't have found a better coach."

Iba said he had been friends with Haller "a number of years and I expect nothing but help from him because of the kind of person he is."

Gene Iba
...new Baylor coach

"I'm very excited for the opportunity to coach in the Southwest Conference," said Iba. "I'll try hard to justify Baylor's faith in me. We have a good nucleus and could be competitive in the league next year."

Asked his idea of being "competitive," Iba answered "I'm not going to lie to you. My idea of being competitive is to eventually win the conference championship, but not next year.

"I'm not going to tell you we expect to grab the conference and not turn it loose. I guess my idea of being competitive next year would be for other team's to have to bring a sack lunch when they played us."

Baylor finished eighth in the nine-team SWC field this season.

A disciplinarian and a coach who drills his squad on fundamentals, Iba took HBU into the NCAA playoffs a year ago and the Huskies posted three consecutive 20-victory seasons.

Iba is the member of a prestigious basketball family. He is the fourth member of his family to become a head coach.

The Ibas have 186 years of coaching experience spanning three generations and seven decades and they've won more than 1,500 games.

Iba's father, Clarence, was the head coach at Tulsa. His uncle is the legendary Hank Iba, who won two national titles at Oklahoma State, and his first cousin, Moe, is the current Nebraska coach.

Iba said he was "not concerned at all" about what had happened to Haller.

"That's something I don't know anything about," Iba said.

Iba coached at HBU the past eight seasons and got the Huskies into the NCAA Playoffs last year for the first time in the school's history.

The Huskies were 21-8 this year, their third straight 20-victory season under Iba. However, HBU lost to Mercer in the second round of the Trans America Athletic Conference and failed to make the NCAA playoffs.

Iba had a 128-96 record over eight seaons.

He is a graduate of Tulsa and became a graduate assistant with his uncle at Oklahoma State. Young Iba then coached at Cleveland and Roosevelt High School in St. Louis before becoming a fulltime assistant under Don Haskins at Texas-El Paso in 1972.

Iba has a reputation for recruiting excellent international players.

Anicet Lavodrama, a native of Bangui of the Central African Republic, was named to the Associated Press honorable mention All-America team.

"Sure, I'll go to Africa if I have to find the right players," he said. "We've got to find some rebounders."

"All I could say was 'Cleeeveland? I'm going to 'Cleeeveland? Well, that may have been bad news for some, but it turned out to be good news for me." — Former Midland Cub outfielder Joe Carter of the Cleveland Indians, recalling his trade last summer from the Chicago Cubs' Iowa farm team to Cleveland, where he hit .275 and smacked 13 homers in 66 games.

NIT Second Round

With Tennessee down by five points with 19 seconds to go, no one would have given a deflated basketball for the Volunteers' chances against Southwestern Louisiana.

Tony White was pumped up, though.

"Tony White was absolutely magnificent," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe enthused after watching his 6-foot-2 sophomore guard lead a thrilling comeback that gave the Volunteers a 73-72 victory Wednesday night in a second-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

"Tony wanted the ball and he was hot," DeVoe said of White, who had a field goal and two free throws in the last 19 seconds as the Volunteers pulled off what DeVoe called "one of the best comebacks I've ever had a team make" and advanced to Saturday's quarterfinals.

LOUISVILLE AND Tennesee-Chattanooga also won second-round tests Wednesday night to complete the quarterfinal field for this weekend. Louisville defeated South Florida 68-61 and Tennessee-Chattanooga tripped Lamar 85-84 in overtime.

On Saturday, it will be Virginia at Tennessee and Fresno State at UCLA. On Sunday, Marquette will play at Indiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga will play at Louisville. The semifinals and finals will be played at New York on March 27 and March 29.

The Volunteers were losing 72-67 with 19 seconds remaining when White scored to pull them within three points. Tennessee called a timeout and came back with White deliberately fouling 6-4 Cajun guard George Almones.

Almones missed his free throw, and Vol guard Fred Jenkins raced down the court to score on a 15-footer, pulling Tennessee to within 72-71 with 10 seconds to go. Tennessee got the ball back immediately when the Cajuns couldn't get it inbounds, and Cajun forward Randal Smith fouled, setting up White's free throws.

"Every loss is very disappointing, but certainly in a tournament situation, it adds to it because you don't get to continue playing," Southwestern Louisiana Coach Bobby Paschal said.

Manuel Forrest scored 21 points, including three baskets as Louisville erupted for the first 14 points of the second half, to lead the Cardinals past South Florida.

Louisville led by just 34-31 when Forrest started the game-breaking run with a jumper from the baseline. Louisville held a commanding 48-31 advantage by the time Mike Abram scored the last basket of the streak with 15:10 remaining.

The victory in Louisville improved the Cardinals' record to 18-16 and guaranteed that they will have a winning season for the 41st consecutive year.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum credited the victory to a change of defensive strategy that kept the ball away from South Florida's Charlie Bradley in the second half after he had scored 11 in the first. "We switched defenses and put a little pressure on Bradley and took him out of the offense," Crum said, noting that Bradley scored only two points after intermission.

South Florida Coach Lee Rose said he generally agreed with Crum, although it was "difficult to analyze exactly the total turnaround at the start of the second half."

JAMES HUNTER scored on a baseline drive with nine seconds left in overtime to lead Tennessee-Chattanooga to a heart-stopping road victory over Lamar.

The Moccasins, who trailed by seven points with 1:19 left in regulation, forced the overtime when guard Gerald Wilkins scored at the buzzer to tie the game at 77.

Wilkins, younger brother of Atlanta Hawks' star Dominique Wilkins, played 44 minutes and led all scorers with 27 points. Center James Gulley paced Lamar with 23 points while guard Jerry Everett added 20, including 18 in the second half and overtime.

"Gerald Wilkins is possibly beyond comment," said Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Murray Arnold. "Awesome is too mild a word for his play."

Lamar Coach Pat Foster took some blame for the loss.

"It was an intense game, a tough game for us to lose," he said. "I can blame myself for it as much as anyone else."

COM qualifies 18 for TAGS

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland swim team is taking 18 swimmers to the Texas Age Group Swimming championships in Dallas this weekend.

That number is seven higher than qualified for last summer's meet and Coach Brad Swendig is looking for his team to vastly improve on its 27th place finish.

"I think we have a good shot at moving up in the standings," said Swendig. "Quite a few of the kids have a shot at scoring. Michela Hasek was the only one who scored this summer.

"We finished 27th this summer. I took the times we've done this year and compared them to the times this summer and assuming everything would stay the same, we would finish in 13th place. That's a big assumption, but we're looking forward to a little better finish than this summer.

The youngest qualifiers for the meet are the 10 and under boys with five swimming relays and individual events. Members of the 200 medley relay are: Matt Welch (backstroke), Matt Horne (breaststroke), Shannon Guignon (butterfly) and John Green (freestyle).

Only one change is made in the lineup for the 200 freestyle with Brian Phillips swimming for Horne.

Guignon and Welch are also swimming individual events.

The 11-12 boys qualified their 400-medley relay with John Waller (back), Matt Seay (breast), Matt Houston (fly) and Eric Jines (free) on the team.

For the girls, 13-14, Hasek (back) is leading off the 400-medley relay followed by Jane Marker (breast), Kristen Henry (fly) and Megan Kennedy (free). Hasek and Marker are both swimming individual events.

The same four senior boys qualified for two relays, the 400-medley and 400-freestyle. For the medley they are Andrew Jordan (back), Paul Harris (breast), Sam Perry (fly) and Jay Green (free).

Jordan, Perry and Harris are also swimming individual events.

"I think all the kids swimming individual events have a definate shot at scoring," said Swendig. "Some have a better shot than others. All of their times, if they are not in the top eight now, are close enough to realisticaly see them drop enough to get into the finals."

Glasson solves Vegas confusion

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Billy Glasson blasted his way through the confusion in the rich Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational golf tournament.

Glasson, who said he plays "in constant pain" from an arthritic condition in his knees, fired an 8-under-par 62 Wednesday in the first round of this five-day, 90 hole event.

The spectacular effort, capped off by a birdie-birdie-birdie finish:

—Matched the low score on the PGA Tour this year.

—Was the best round of Glasson's life.

—Set a record on the Tropicana Country Club course.

—And, kept Glasson from becoming involved in the confusion over who was in second place.

It could be Tom Watson.

Or, depending on how it's figured, it could be a tie among Scott Hoch, Phil Blackmar and Paul Azinger.

Either way, Glasson's round put him three shots in front of Blackmar, Azinger and Hoch, who had 65s. That's on a numerical basis.

In relation to par, he was two shots in front of Watson, a six-time Player of the Year.

The confusion arises from the format for this event that offers a total of $1,042,000 in prize money, the most on the American tour.

The pros are required to play one round on each of three courses — Tropicana, Desert Inn and Las Vegas — each day with a four-man amateur team, before the field is cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday at Las Vegas.

The three courses carry different pars, 70 at Tropicana, 71 at Las Vegas and 72 at Desert Inn, where Watson shot a 66 and played the four par-5 holes five under par.

"I'm just glad to be around the lead, instead of trying to catch somebody from six or seven shots back like I've been doing," Watson said.

Dodgers: 'Who's on first?'

Associated Press

Exhibitions

As far as Los Angeles Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda is concerned, Greg Brock is still his first baseman for opening day. Sid Bream is not too far behind, however.

"Sid's done a heck of a job, a super job," Lasorda said after watching the young infielder help the Dodgers win their sixth straight exhibition baseball game with a 4-2 victory Wednesday over the Cincinnati Reds. "He's proving something, and he's doing one outstanding job."

Bream had a single to raise his spring training average to .316 and also made two outstanding defensive plays at first while the slump-ridden Brock sat for the third straight game.

SO FAR Brock is hitting .182 (4-for-22) with no home runs.

"Brock might get cured quickly" by Bream's good play, Lasorda said.

Meanwhile, Steve Yeager appeared in his first exhibition game behind the plate for the Dodgers. He caught three innings in a test of his left leg, which he broke last September.

"It feels all right but we'll have to wait until tomorrow morning when I wake up and get out of bed to see whether I feel any pain or stiffness," he said.

Yeager's leg is held together with screws in two places. If healthy, Yeager will apparently be a backup to Mike Scioscia.

In other exhibition action, Terry Puhl and Jose Cruz hit run-scoring doubles during a four-run uprising with two outs in the fifth inning off Phil Niekro to give a split Houston squad a 4-1 victory over the New York Yankees. The other Houston squad defeated the Minnesota Twins 6-3 as Chris Jones hit a bases-loaded eighth-inning double off reliever Curt Wardle.

Pinch-hitter Ron Johnson hit a three-run double in a six-run eighth inning to lead Detroit over Pittsburgh 11-5. Steve Lyons had three hits, drove in a run and scored once to lead Boston over St. Louis 4-1.

ST. LOUIS' Lonnie Smith was ejected from the game after getting into an argument with American League umpire Larry Young, apparently over whether he had caught a fly ball two innings earlier.

Smith and Young went nose to nose and Smith appeared to bump the umpire. Other players and umpires joined in, and Smith apparently wrestled home plate umpire Dave Pallone to the ground as he tried to get back at Young.

"One thing I know for sure is that Lonnie didn't punch the guy (Young)," said Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog. "Because if he had swung he'd have missed, the way we've been hitting."

Smith declined to discuss the incident after the game.

Jerry Hairston provided the winning run with a fourth-inning homer and four Chicago pitchers combined on a three-hitter to pace the White Sox over Toronto 2-1. The Toronto loss was only the Blue Jays' second in 12 Grapefruit League games.

Pascual Perez stopped Kansas City on two hits over five innings and Atlanta capitalized on two errors in a 3-1 win over the Royals. Shane Rawley held the New York Mets to two singles and struck out two over five scoreless innings to lead the Phillies to a 6-5 win.

Chico Walker and Steve Lake hit ground-rule doubles during a four-run seventh inning and pinch-hitter Dan Rohn delivered a two-run double during a four-run eighth that rallied the Chicago Cubs over the Milwaukee Brewers 9-8. It was the sixth straight time that the Cubs beat the Brewers this spring.

Bob Brenly belted a two-run homer and rookie Chris Brown hit a two-run triple to power San Francisco past California 11-2. Alan Wiggins and Tony Gwynn had two hits apiece as San Diego defeated Seattle 6-3.

Cleveland rallied for three runs in the ninth inning against reliever Jose Rijo to beat Oakland 4-2. Bill Gullickson pitched five shutout innings as he combined with two teammates on a five-hitte to lead the Montreal Expos to a 3-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Wonderful family experiences lead to new spiritual and emotional growth in the months ahead. Let employers know what you want out of your career and what you have to offer in return. The financial and romantic choices you make now will influence your fortunes for years to come. Travel is important to your business aims. Do what you do best and let others handle what's left. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Senator Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), actor William Shatner, Karl Malden, Marcel Marceau, Werner ("Col. Klink") Klemperer, Chico Marx, composer Stephen Sondheim, French landscape painter Rosa Bonheur, artist Sir Anthony Von Dyck.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The financial outlook is bright! Do a special favor for a young person and you win a friend for life. Your career begins to move in an exciting new direction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make reservations for a special event as early as possible. Today is the perfect time to extend a helping hand to an older person. Your kindness will be appreciated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A Taurus enters the romantic picture, making everything topsy-turvy. Follow your heart. A teenager inspires you to try a new approach. Spruce up an apartment by changing its color scheme.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♠.

There has been considerable dispute over whether it is better to lead the ace or the king from a holding that includes both. Both sides, however, concur that, if you hold ace-king bare, you should reverse your normal order of leading. One of the most cogent arguments in favor of the king is this hand from a recent tournament in England.

West's bid of four no trump was a takeout for the minor suits — a double would have been a three-suit takeout. East bid the value of his hand and South judged well when he elected to take the save at seven hearts.

East-West conventionally were leading ace from ace-king, so when West selected the king of spades as his opening lead it could be from only one of two holdings — the ace-king alone or the bare king. And who was going to lead a bare king against a grand slam?

Declarer quickly took advantage of the situation. He ruffed the opening lead, cashed the ace of hearts to fell the king, then entered dummy with a trump to the seven. He ruffed a spade to drop the king, then crossed back to the table with the nine of trumps to take four discards on the good spades.

Had East-West been leading king from ace-king, West would have led the ace of spades. Now declarer would have been faced with a guess after getting to dummy with a trump — should he play West for the A-K alone, in which case a ruff would set up the suit, or should he play him for an unsupported ace, in which case he could take a ruffing finesse against East? Declarer didn't have the entries to try both lines.

Murdoch to buy half of 20th Century Fox's parent company

Murdoch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ailing 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., whose last several films have been box-office disasters, will get an $88 million cash infusion when publisher Rupert Murdoch buys half of the filmmaker's parent company.

Murdoch's 50 percent acquisition of TCF Holdings Inc., announced Wednesday, gives him a long-sought entry into the movie business, analysts say. Last year he tried to gain control of the parent company of Warner Bros. studios.

Murdoch will pay $162 million for half of TCF, Fox and Murdoch's The News Corp. Ltd. said in an announcement. Another $88 million from The News Corp. will be invested directly in Fox.

Fox has lost $97.4 million in the past five quarters and is seeking financing for this year's movie and television production.

"It's a matter of capital for 20th Century. They need the capital to get back on track with production," said Harold Vogel, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York.

Earlier this month, Fox announced it had arranged for $120 million in new capital from its CBS-Fox Home Video partnership and $50 million in cash from its sole owner, Denver oilman Marvin Davis.

It also said its bankers had agreed to restructure Fox's $400 million line of revolving credit to do away with a provision that would have required repayment of $96 million in 1987.

Analysts said Murdoch, with vast newspaper holdings in the United States and abroad, had long sought to enter the film industry.

"He likes the idea of having a film library and a production arm," said Lee S. Isgur, an analyst at Paine Webber Inc. in New York. "He's also got an ego, and he wants to get into the business."

No management shakeup is planned at Fox, the filmmaker and Murdoch said. Murdoch apparently would assume no management role at Fox, said the film company's chief spokesman, Jerry Greenberg.

Barry Diller took over as Fox's chairman and chief executive in September.

Isgur predicted Murdoch might obtain control of Fox within 12 months.

He cited Murdoch's brief advance to Warner and noted that Murdoch has said he was thinking about buying Fox. Isgur said he doubted the publisher will be content as a passive investor.

Fox hasn't had a box office hit since "Romancing the Stone" more than a year ago. Among its recent disappointments are "Rhinestone," "Blame it on Rio," "Unfaithfully Yours" and the current "Turk 182."

Murdoch on Wednesday said the deal is a "significant investment. 20th Century-Fox is one of the world's few great film and television companies, and...is positioning itself for significant growth."

TCF Holdings has been wholly owned by Davis since last October, when he bought out the 50 percent stake of fugitive financier Marc Rich for a reported $116 million.

Boy George

LONDON (AP) — Boy George, who became a star as a singer by appearing in outrageous dresses and tresses, says he'll never marry, become a father or settle down because he's too "eccentric."

"All those reports about me wanting to get married and have children are rubbish," the singer told Woman's World magazine. "It just isn't me to get married. I'm not saying marriage is wrong...but I'd find it too restricting."

The 23-year-old British rocker, who heads the group Culture Club, said his days of non-stop partying and heavy drinking are over. "Being successful has made me a more responsible person," he said.

The Los Angeles-based group, which won six Grammys in 1983 for its multimillion-record-selling "Toto IV" album, opened a 50-city tour Tuesday at Arizona State University.

The group had been away from the American stage since October 1982.

The aid includes four Land Rovers, three water tanks, 30,000 pounds of high-protein food and medical and other supplies, Copeland, 72, said Wednesday. The plane will leave Saturday.

The other half of the costs, which were not revealed, was donated by family friend Khalid Khashoggi, son of Saudi Arabian multimillionaire Adnan Khashoggi, Copeland said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An appeals court says "there's no way" the country music group Alabama breached its contract when it left its manager in 1981, and reversed a 2-year-old lower court ruling.

The state Court of Appeals on Wednesday reversed a $1.8 million judgment against the group, voted entertainer of the year the past three years by the Country Music Association.

The trial court ruled in April 1983 that the band, famous for hits like "Mountain Music," "Roll On" and "There's No Way," breached its exclusive contract with International House of Talent when it changed to Dale Morris and Associates Inc. in June 1981.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Former Miami Dolphins running back Eugene "Mercury" Morris will get another chance to shake a 20-year sentence imposed after his 1982 conviction on cocaine charges.

The state Supreme Court on Wednesday agreed to hear arguments Sept. 11 on Morris' claim that a judge should have allowed testimony about the character of a police informant.

Morris, 37, whose Dolphins career from 1969 to 1975 included three Super Bowls, is serving 20 years in prison on his conviction of trafficking, possession and conspiring to sell cocaine.

The movies include Ingmar Bergman's "Cries and Whispers" and Federico Fellini's "Amarcord" as well as numerous Corman classics.

Corman, 58, famous for motorcycle and beach movies, built his last company, New World Pictures Inc., into the largest independent distribution concern in the country, then sold it in 1983.

Celtics win without 40 from Bird

Associated Press

Just in case people were starting to say Larry Bird had to score 40 points for Boston to win, the Celtics superstar scotched the theory before it could take root.

Bird, the NBA's 1983-84 Most Valuable Player, had scored 206 points as the Celtics won their five previous games going into Wednesday's matchup with Milwaukee. He took only nine shots and scored 13 points, his second-lowest total this season, against the Bucks, but he added 11 rebounds and 10 assists as Boston won 107-105.

"Some nights you have the opportunity to shoot the ball, some nights you don't," said Bird, who had scored a club record 60 points only eight days before. "Everybody always talks about triple doubles. I had one tonight. I don't think I have to take a certain number of shots. I just take what I can get."

Dennis Johnson, who hit only five of 15 field-goal attempts in the game, connected on a 16-foot fallaway shot with four seconds left to break a 105-105 tie and give Boston its first victory over the Bucks in three tries this season.

Bird said he could have created more shots for himself, but he asked rhetorically, "Why should I when I got guys open underneath?"

Bird had scored 32, 60, 31, 35 and 48 in his last five games. "What I do right now is not going to be good enough for everybody after the week I had . . . I just go out and try to play my game and whatever happens, happens."

NBA Roundup

Spurs 106, Bulls 98

San Antonio lost most of a huge lead, but still beat Chicago as Mike Mitchell scored 31 points and George Gervin added 19 to become pro basketball's ninth leading scorer with 25,202 points.

The Spurs had a 64-37 advantage at halftime after leading by as many as 31 points in the second period. But Michael Jordan, who scored 38 points, led Chicago spurt that pulled the Bulls to within 74-65.

Nuggets 123, Pacers 119

Denver clinched a playoff berth and extended its Midwest Division lead to 3½ games over Houston behind Calvin Natt's 27 points and 26 by Alex English against Indiana.

The Pacers, who got 26 points from Clark Kellogg and 25 from Vern Fleming, trailed 121-119 with 28 seconds left, but Mike Evans' 25-footer with time running out on the 24-second clock sealed the victory.

Kings 118, 76ers 117

Kansas City's Reggie Theus got credit for a game-winning basket with three seconds left in overtime when Philadelphia's George Johnson was called for goaltending.

Clippers 121, Jazz 110

Marques Johnson scored a season-high 32 points as Los Angeles beat Utah despite a record-setting performance by Jazz center Mark Eaton.

Eaton blocked six shots to give him 396 for the season, three more than the previous single-season record set by Elmore Smith in 1974.

Nets 128, Cavaliers 108

Micheal Ray Richardson scored 33 points as New Jersey kept Cleveland winless in 11 games at the Meadowlands Arena since it opened in 1981.

Bullets 105, Knicks 102

Greg Ballard broke a 102-102 tie with a corner jump shot with 40 seconds remaining.

Ballard and Cliff Robinson scored 24 points each and Jeff Malone added 23 for the Bullets, who finished the season series against the Knicks with a 6-0 sweep.

Sonics 123, Warriors 109

Rookie forwards Tim McCormick and Frank Brickowski, taking up the slack for injured center Jack Sikma, scored 24 and 22 points, respectively, to pace Seattle against Golden State.

Pepitone free after posting bail

NEW YORK (AP) — Former New York Yankees baseball star Joe Pepitone, free on $15,000 bail, was unaware a car he was a passenger in a car that contained $70,000 in drugs and a loaded handgun, his lawyer says after Pepitone, 44, was released from jail Wednesday on $15,000 bail.

"He had just gotten into the car 15 minutes before," said attorney Stephen Flamhaft, adding the other two men arrested with Pepitone had picked him up at "a friend's house" and were driving him home.

Pepitone slipped out a side door of the Brooklyn Men's House of Detention without speaking to reporters.

Flamhaft said Pepitone's attorneys "intend to seriously consider having him testify before the grand jury."

Pepitone was arrested Monday night in Brooklyn with Thomas Carbone, 51, and Robert Oates, 46, both of Brooklyn, on charges of possession of $70,000 worth of cocaine and heroin, methaqualone and a loaded handgun.

All pleaded innocent. If convicted, they face a maximum sentence of 25 years to life in prison.

Their car, with Carbone driving, was stopped by police after it allegedly ran a red light. A search of the car turned up $8,000 cash, a loaded .22-caliber derringer pistol under the front seat, drug paraphernalia and the narcotics, said police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

Flamhaft said Pepitone maintains he did not know the drugs and gun were in the car, and the lawyer also said there may have been an illegal search of the car.

"Police are not permitted to search a car after giving a traffic citation," the lawyer said. "They could search if they saw something in plain sight."

Flamhaft said the drugs were in opaque platic bags.

Pepitone, who starred for the New York Yankees during a 12-year career that ended in 1973, is scheduled to appear in court again Friday.

He was widely known for his off-the-field activities while playing with the Yankees from 1962 to 1969. Pepitone became a regular with the Yanks in 1963, hitting 27 home runs that year and 31 in 1966 and playing in two World Series with them. Later he played for Houston, the Chicago Cubs and Atlanta. He finished with a career .258 batting average and 219 homers.

Renegades change QBs

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Orlando Renegades will start a new quarterback against the Jacksonville Bulls tonight, hoping to pull themselves from the United States Football League cellar.

Reggie Collier, who has played only a few minutes in the Renegades' 0-4 season, was given the starting nod against Jacksonville to replace Jerry Golsteyn, 30, who was suffering from tendinitis.

Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. CST in the Gator Bowl. The sports network ESPN will carry the game to cable viewers.

Collier, 24, went in for Golsteyn in Saturday's 23-17 loss to Portland and hit four-of-five passes in a 52-yard drive that resulted in a touchdown. In three earlier games, he was seven-of-15 for 53 yards.

ORLANDO Coach Lee Corso is desperately trying to find a catalyst for an offense that statistically is the worst in the 14-team league. The Renegades average a meager 176.8 yards per game — 96.3 passing and 80.5 rushing. They've been outscored 120-44 and are the only winless team in the USFL.

They also are last in the league defensively, having surrendered average of 398.3 yards per game.

The 1-3 Bulls occupy sixth place in the Eastern Conference standings, while Orlando is seventh.

Jacksonville, meanwhile, appears to have solved a quarterback problem that has hampered them since the opening drive of the season when Brian Sipe suffered a shoulder separation.

Ed Luther, who will be making his second start in a Bulls' uniform, was impressive last week at Oakland, although not impressive enough as Jacksonville fell to the Invaders 42-36.

Luther, recently acquired from the San Diego Chargers, hit 25 of 45 passes for 282 yards and three touchdowns.

"Ed's performance was certainly encouraging," said Bulls Coach Lindy Infante.

BUT LUTHER, who threw three interceptions in the closing minutes, wasn't satisfied.

"It doesn't really matter how well I played because we lost," he said. "We have a job to do and we came up short. But it was fun."

After Sipe was injured, the Bulls used Robbie Mahfouz. He directed Jacksonville to its only victory — a 22-14 season-opening triumph over the Baltimore Stars.

Soccer riot erupts over 2-1 Roma loss

ROME (AP) — A pack of Roman soccer fans, angry at the loss of the home team, attacked a group of West Germans with clubs and knives Wednesday, stabbing two and injuring at least four others, police said.

They said the Roman fans struck without provocation outside the Olympic Stadium after Bayern of Munich downed Roma 2-1 to advance to the semifinals of the European Cupwinners Cup soccer tournament.

Two West Germans stabbed in the chest and back were hospitalized, police said. They were identified as Michel Schandern, 22, and Walther Marschner, 50. Their exact conditions and hometowns were not given.

Also hospitalized with head and face injuries was Berinald Rinner, 26, they said.

At least two Romans were injured in the melee and hospitalized, police said.

Academy often overlooks comedies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Beverly Hills Cop," the smash Eddie Murphy hit, will likely earn double the combined grosses of the five movies nominated as best picture of 1984. Yet it received only one Academy Award nomination, for original screenplay.

Steve Martin's performance as the lawyer invaded by Lily Tomlin's spirit in "All of Me" drew raves from critics and best actor awards from two New York critics' societies. However, Martin, Miss Tomlin and the movie did not draw a nod from the Academy.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences tends to overlook comedies in favor of the dramatic art.

"I don't think Academy voters know how difficult comedy is," said Hal Kanter, who has written films for Bob Hope, Jerry Lewis and others. "It seems so simple to make people laugh, but it isn't."

"To be successful, a comedy should seem effortless," added Howard W. Koch, who has produced such films as "The Odd Couple" and "Airplane!" "That's why the people who make comedies don't get the respect they deserve."

Said producer David L. Wolper: "Not many quality comedies are being made. Most of the comedies today are the teen-age sex movies that don't deserve Academy recognition. The good comedies sometimes get overlooked."

"It's much easier to get an Oscar with tears," concluded Larry Gelbart. Two years ago he was nominated for his script for "Tootsie." The winner for original screenplay was John Briley for "Gandhi."

Other comedic performances that were overlooked this year include Richard Crenna in "The Flamingo Kid"; Bill Murray in "Ghostbusters," 1984's top-grossing movie; and Woody Allen in "Broadway Danny Rose."

Comedy lovers are fond of pointing out that Charlie Chaplin, the greatest of film comics, never won an Oscar. Nor did Cary Grant, the premiere artist of light comedy. The Oscar also eluded Carole Lombard, Buster Keaton, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, Bob Hope, Harold Lloyd and W.C. Fields.

Only a handful of light-hearted films have ever scored as best picture. "It Happened One Night," the big winner in 1934, was a romantic comedy. Frank Capra scored again in 1938 with a comedy about an eccentric family, "You Can't Take It With You."

There may have been some laughs in "Going My Way" (1944), "All About Eve" (1950) and "The Apartment" (1960). However, the only real comedy came in 1963 with "Tom Jones," and then again in 1977 with "Annie Hall."

Just as movie comedies have a tough road to the Oscar, so do star performers. Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert won for "It Happened One Night," but they could hardly be classified as comedic actors.

The rare exceptions to the rule were Judy Holliday as the hilarious Billie Dawn in "Born Yesterday" (1950), and Lee Marvin's lurching cowboy in "Cat Ballou."

Comedy experts generally have acquired their Oscars by turning to strong drama: Shirley Booth in "Come Back, Little Sheba," 1952; David Niven, "Separate Tables," 1958; and Jack Lemmon, "Save the Tiger," 1973.

Cary Grant is his own Pygmalion

ENTERTAINMENT

By BARBARA SHULGASSER
Hearst News Service

Fifty years after he made it up and tried it on for size, Cary Grant's name is still shorthand for suave sophistication and unearthly masculine allure. His on-screen personality launches women into swoons and film historians into verbal hyperventilation. But as for what anyone thinks of him, Grant really doesn't care.

The press has been getting it wrong for years, anyway, he says, and he has developed what he calls "skin like a rhino" against the effrontery. But journalists press on. Stories praise the man's blue eyes. His, of course, are brown.

"They must be confusing me with Sinatra," he surmises.

He has been called homosexual, and recently sued Chevy Chase for calling him a "homo" on television.

"I sued because I'm not." The suit was settled out of court, Grant notes with vindication in his tone.

What he can't abide is defamation of the dead. He is displeased by the recent maligning of one of his favorite directors, Alfred Hitchcock, with whom he made four pictures.

"It's absolute crud," he says of claims by two authors that Hitchcock was alcoholic, melancholy, sadistic and generally maladjusted. "But what's the use of saying so?"

His indifference to the opinions of others is less an exhibition of discourtesy than of personal serenity. Grant is unfailingly polite. Even when setting history straight, he doesn't want to hurt feelings. His wives all left him, he says.

"I'd be right back with the first one if it had been up to me."

Grant, who just turned 81, doesn't see many movies now.

"I know from the billing that the fellow's going to get the girl," he explains.

He himself has gotten the girl nearly 72 times in as many films. He played the romantic lead for four decades, looking plausibly dashing without makeup, which he detests, and without much evident effort. Mathematically, this is an impressive 2.1 cinematic romances annually for 34 years, excluding off-screen coups. The girls he got included Katharine and Audrey Hepburn, Ingrid Bergman, Grace Kelly and Myrna Loy, not to mention the millions of women who paid to be "gotten" in their theater seats.

Born Archibald Leach, Grant is his own Pygmalion.

"We all make ourselves up, don't we?" he observes.

Grant was born to lower middle class parents in Bristol, England. His mother was institutionalized for a breakdown when he was a child. He left home as a youth to join a troupe of comedians and acrobats, came touring to America and decided to make his home here.

"When I was beginning in the business, realizing my lack of education and family background, I looked for someone to emulate." Among the models was Noel Coward, an idea that now elicits a laugh from him.

"I didn't realize that Noel wasn't from happy or well-adjusted parents either, and he wasn't well-educated. He was faking it through, too. It's like a child learning to walk. A child strains to get up and walk because he sees other people do it. I did that. Then you add your own style. Eventually, if you keep doing it, it becomes you."

Grant made his way as a stage actor, but his first screen test in New York was unsuccessful. They said he was bowlegged and his neck was too thick.

"I'm not bowlegged," he reports. "A thick neck? Thick-headed, perhaps. Maybe one needs a thick neck to support a thick head."

After a more fruitful test, he signed with Paramount in 1932, and at age 28, exchanged his name for a more euphonious label. What he couldn't change was his standard equipment: a shelf for a forehead, that black zigzagging hairline, the indented mouth, facial moles and a nose that tilts to the left. Luckily, together, they were disturbingly attractive. But he only remembers that his flaws were magnified on screen.

"The bags under my eyes would be as big as your whole body. Of course, looks are not a prerequisite to success. Spencer Tracy certainly was not good-looking, but after you watched him he became good-looking."

Unlike performers who pretend their former selves never existed, he speaks freely of his past and used it to invest the on-screen aplomb with an unexpectedly quirky texture. Ever a gentleman, he managed to avoid stuffiness. This distinguished him from a slew of equally elegant Hollywood actors.

Perhaps it was this playfulness that attracted women decades younger than himself, an attraction he responded to happily, judging from the ages of his five wives. The congeniality of this mating, he notes, is a result of the fact that women come to their wisdom much earlier in life than do men.

"My wife and I are about equal in wisdom," he says of the current Mrs Grant, who is more than 40 years his junior. And the wisdom of his 17-year-old daughter, Jennifer, is fast approaching his as well, he contends.

"Today, I find that I can level with her. I know she's not thinking, 'I wonder what I can get this old goat for today?'"

Why did he wait until his 60s to have a child — with Dyan Cannon, wife No. 4?

"I was too concerned with me. I wasn't sure I wanted the responsibility. I didn't think I was wise enough to affect another life."

Grant knows about ambition, a trait he suggests interfered with the tranquility of his marriages. To get ahead, Grant was always a risk-taker. He chanced not working again when he became Hollywood's first free-lance actor in 1936: he was tired of doing bad scripts on orders of the studio. He later became a producer to ensure further control of his projects.

He left acting in 1966 as part of a "natural evolution. I'd had it. The type of films I cared to make they weren't making. I'd done it."

Today, he is on the board of directors of several companies, including Faberge Inc., MGM and the MGM Grand Hotel. The transition was not difficult. He has always been a businessman.

"In how many professions can you make millions of dollars for a few weeks work? Isn't Robert Redford a big businessman?"

Dancer now counselor for frazzled performers

NEW YORK (AP) — Actors frazzled from rejection and musicians shaken with stage fright are among the performing artists seeking help from a ballerina-turned-psychiatrist.

The low-cost counseling is offered by Dr. Judith Kupersmith, a former dancer with the New York City Ballet who directs Bellevue Hospital's counseling service for performing artists.

While helping the city's large community of performing artists, she said, the clinic also has begun researching "the personality traits of a performing artist."

"We're here to find out if they do have special needs and characteristics. Maybe they need a different approach than traditional psychotherapy," said Ms. Kupersmith.

The dancers, musicians and actors are treated individually and in groups by the clinic's four psychiatrists, two psychologists and three social workers, plus about 20 psychiatrists in training from New York University.

Music, dance and art therapy, usually reserved for "psychotics, much sicker people," are not used at the clinic — and might even be deterimental if it were used for performers, she said.

"These people use their art forms to express themselves. We try to encourage them to express their feelings in words," she said.

Many performers have difficulty expressing themselves verbally, she said, especially dancers, who tend to use body language and gestures instead of words.

"They complain they feel inarticulate," said Ms. Kupersmith.

Dancers, under "constant demands to be thinner," also can succumb to such eating disorders as anorexia or bulemia; and they often develop emotional problems when they are physically injured, she said.

"If you or I sprain an ankle, we wouldn't see a psychiatrist. But for these people, it's a monumental" problem, said Ms. Kupersmith.

Dancers also face the stress of beginning their careers in their adolescence, "while other kids are going out on dates," and ending them at an early age, after their physical peak.

"These kids go to New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, at age 15, and lead a very, very stressful existence. In many ways, they are considered adults," said Ms. Kupersmith. "They're so mature in some ways and so immature in others."

Then, they enter their 30s and discover that their careers will soon be over.

"For them, age 35 is the beginning of their demise...When the time comes, they're not prepared," she said.

San Angelo author will hold autograph party

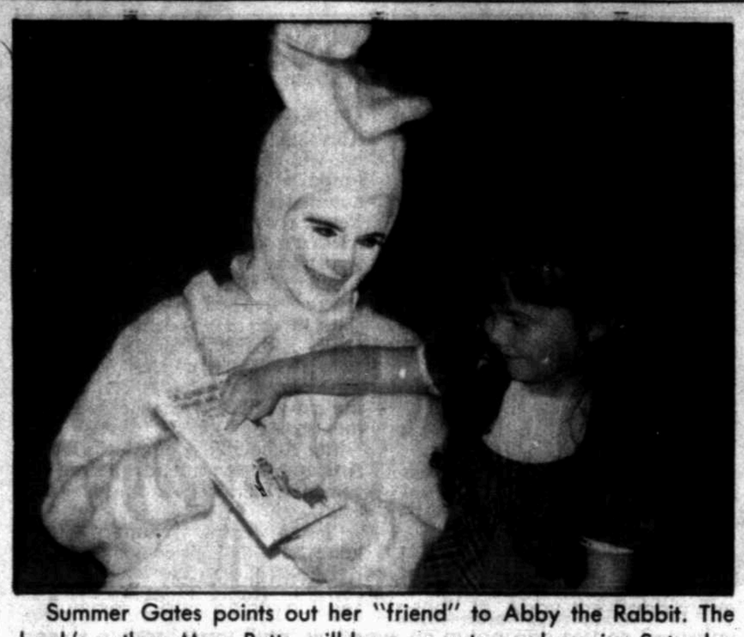

Mary Butts of San Angelo has compiled a book of short stories for children, and will be in Midland Saturday for an autograph session at Pages and Prints, 40 Plaza Center.

"The Adventures of Summer and Abby" was published under the pen name Mary B by Vantage Press, Inc., of New York. The book is a collection of short stories about a little girl and her best friend, Abby. It is a touching story of love and friendship.

Ms. Butts said the stories were written for her 4-year-old granddaughter, Summer Michaeline Gates, daughter of Susan and Art Gates of Arlington. The book's main character is Abby, a stuffed rabbit that becomes a real-live playmate, storyteller and friend to a girl named Summer.

"My younger daughter, Lisa, really did have an imaginary friend shen she was a child, and she would tell me things they did together," said Mrs. Butts. The book was suggested by Summer's mother.

The author will be autographing copies of her book, and Abby the rabbit will be paw-printing" each copy at Pages and Prints. Abby will be sharing stories of her adventures in a special story time from 10:30 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday. Children of all ages are invited to attend.

Summer Gates points out her "friend" to Abby the Rabbit. The book's author, Mary Butts, will have an autograph session Saturday at Pages and Prints and a story hour for children.

The program will include Toccata, Adagio and Fugue in C major, Sonata No. 5, Orgelbuchlein Chorales and selections from "Clavierubung III," including the Prelude and Fugue in E flat Major.

Ms. Dryer is organist/choirmaster at Ascension Episcopal Church, Rochester, N.Y., and keyboardist for the Eastman Baroque Chamber Ensemble.

She is a graduate student at the Eastman School of Music, where she studies organ with David Craighead and harpsichord with Arthur Haas. Her former teachers include Donand McDonald and Allen Sever, organ, and Mark Brombaugh, harpsichord.

Ms. Dryer, a summa cum laude graduate of Westminister Choir College, has been selected for the National Register of Outstanding College Graduates and has presented organ recitals in the major cities of the eastern United States.

Mails works on exhibit

The exhibit "Thomas E. Mails: Artist and Historian of Native American Peoples" is on view through April 28 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. .

Town looking for way to spend funds

LIVONIA, N.Y. (AP) — The mayor and trustees of this Upstate community of 500 people have a problem with village revenues: there's too much of it and they're looking for ways to spend it.

Marian Stewart Bowen, a native and lifelong resident, died in June and left the village more than $1 million in a trust fund — no strings attached.

Town trustee Robert Enright said no one in the village knew about the legacy before Mrs. Bowen's death.

"It came as a total shock. We had no indication she had that kind of interest and affection for the village," Enright said.

Officials are still trying to figure out how to spend the trust's $120,000 annual income, which is enough to wipe out village property taxes.

Catholic priest debuts as network producer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the past 25 years, many of television's biggest stars have worked for producer Ellwood "Bud" Kieser in local and syndicated productions, but it took him that long to make it to the networks.

ABC will broadcast his network debut, "The Fourth Wise Man," as a one-hour Easter special on Saturday. It stars Martin Sheen, Ralph Bellamy, Alan Arkin, Eileen Brennan, Richard Libertini and Lance Kerwin.

It is a first for a Roman Catholic priest and a Catholic production company, for producer Kieser is the Rev. Ellwood Kieser, the head of Paulist Productions. Since 1960 he has been the executive producer of "Insight" and he is the president of the Human Family Institute, which awards the Humanitas Prizes each year.

In the drama, based on a short story called "The Other Wise Man" by Henry Van Dyke, a Protestant minister, Sheen plays a magi who studies the prophecies and hopes to find the Messiah. He pursues him for 33 years, only to miss him at every turn, until he finally finds Christ in the final moments of his life.

Kieser is developing other movies for the networks and is producing a syndicated series called "Buchanan H.S.," set in a high school newspaper office.

"We are moving into the mainstream, and we're hoping 'The Fourth Wise Man' will be the first of many," he said.

"I think several things brought about the change. I think the public has shown a regard for religious values they didn't have before. I think the regard for our production company has grown. I think the commercially sponsored 'Family Specials' we did for Capital Cities Communications helped bring us into the mainstream."

He said he found his move into network competition "an interesting experience."

"I've been pleasantly surprised by the people at the networks," he said. "They've been sensitive to my agenda. I have to be sensitive to their agenda, which is huge audiences. I have to come up with stories for a huge audience."

He said he was encouraged to enter the mainstream by Jim McGinn, director of development for Bristol-Myers and writer of a dozen "Insight" scripts." Bristol-Myers is sponsor of "The Fourth Wise Man."

"Insight" was for many years Kieser's vehicle for spreading spiritual values. It was the most widely televised religious TV series, and at its height was seen on 274 stations. It tackled such subjects as the plight of the working man, prison reform, genetic manipulation, child abuse and the theology of liberation.

But the deregulation of television has made it more difficult to get good timeslots. "Insight" is still being distributed, but no new shows have been made since 1983.

"For years it seemed that our best investment was 'Insight,'" he said, "and now it seems to be movies. As one door was being closed, another was being opened."

Kieser, who is 6-foot-6, was born in Philadelphia in 1929. He became a Paulist priest in 1956. Although he continues as an active priest at St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church in West Los Angeles, he devotes most of his time to production. He has also led prominent Catholic laymen on visits to famine-stricken areas of Africa and has testified before the House subcommittee on Africa.

"'The Fourth Wise Man' is an ambitious production," he said. "I would have been frightened at tackling a movie of the week two years ago. Now, I wouldn't. We're releasing 'The Fourth Wise Man' internationally as a 90-minute movie. It's a costume drama with 25 actors."

Mothers, daughters tour obstetrics area

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A group of mothers from the Golf Course Road Church of Christ want to be the ones to tell their daughters about the facts of life.

"We want them to have the right information," said Brenda Sorrells, one of the founding parents of Caterpillars and Butterflies, a church-related group for mothers and daughters.

Some of that information was provided during a tour Wednesday of the obstetrics area at Midland Memorial Hospital. A group of second-graders observed first-hand the wiggle of a baby in an expectant mother and listened to its heartbeat.

"We wanted to dispel any fear or mystery and make it as natural as possible," said Ms. Sorrells. "We also talked about the birth process — how the uterus works and how the baby is pushed out."

The program, geared for girls, ages five (kindergarten) through sixth grade, was formed five years ago by Ms. Sorrells and three other mothers who "wanted to help each other in being good mothers to their daughters."

"There may be something that I can't teach my daughter that my good friend may be able to," said Ms. Sorrells. "We felt that there was a great advantage in uniting."

The program has caught on.

"It has been shared in Church of Christ workshops all over the nation," she said. "We currently have about 40 mother-daughters in the program."

The group, which meets Sundays and Wednesdays, introduces the youngest girls to their emotions.

"You must identify emotions with a 5-year-old," said Ms. Sorrells. "You let them know that they have them and that they fluctuate. Some mothers use pantomime games to show emotions with their face."

"Each mother prepares her own lesson," she said.

For older girls, communication is stressed.

"We try to help them by showing them that everything we do communicates something," she said. "The way we dress, the tone of the voice, body language all communicates who we are."

TSTA supports suspension bill

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A Texas classroom teachers organization gave its support to a bill tentatively passed Wednesday by the House of Representatives to give school administrators authority to suspend students who present a danger in the school.

The suspension bill by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, would give local school districts authority to suspend a student for up to six days a semester if the student presents a danger in the school.

Becky Brooks, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, said Wednesday during a visit to Midland, "We're hoping it (the bill) goes to the Senate. It doesn't take into account your average misbehaving child. It does, however, address the disciplinary problem in the classroom by getting rid of those disruptive elements who present a clear and present danger in the school."

The education reform package passed last year called for alternative education programs for students, rather than suspension or expulsion, whenever possible.

The bill, favored by Gov. Mark White, would provide school districts with an option rather than requiring them to seek other educational programs for the troubled students.

White has said the bill recognizes the need to remove disruptive individuals who interfere with that environment, while maintaining the appropriate emphasis on providing alternatives in instances of lesser misbehavior.

House tentatively OKs student suspension bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would give school administrators authority to suspend students who present a danger in the school gained tentative approval from the House.

The House on Wednesday also approved and sent to the Senate a bill by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, that would double college tuition for Texans at state-financed colleges this fall. Other tuition also would increase.

Odessa man killed in motor vehicle accident

From Staff Reports

An Odessa man was killed Tuesday afternoon after he apparently pulled in front of a Midland Independent School District bus at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Loop 250.

Dudley Dwane King was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

King was driving west on Wadley shortly after 3 p.m. when he disobeyed a red signal light at the Loop intersection and was struck by the northbound school bus, according to reports given to police by witnesses.

The driver of the bus, 35-year-old Margarito Reyes Arteaga of 314 E. Cottonwood, refused treatment at the scene, according to reports.

United Way to alter groups' funding

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The United Way of Midland has decided to change the way it provides funds for the Tape Lending Library and the West Texas Epilepsy Association, dropping them from its list of full-service agencies and instead contracting with them for specific, Midland-related services, according to United Way Executive Director Bob Smith.

United Way will continue funding the two agencies through 1985, but thereafter they must apply for purchase-of-service contracts with the charitable organization to continue receiving funds.

According to Smith, the change was made because the two agencies serve areas beyond Midland; by switching to purchase-of-service contracts for specific services, the United Way can ensure that money contributed by Midlanders will be used to provide services in Midland.

Smith also said costs for the two agencies have been rising "for at least three years at a much higher rate than the amount of services," which "may reflect a lack of a market for their services."

Smith said the action "does not reflect on the type of services provided by these two fine agencies," but there are many deserving agencies in the area. "And it's unfortunate that you have to make a decision" instead of being able to fund them all.

West Texas Epilepsy Association officials were unavailable for comment, but Betty Flora, executive director of the Tape Lending Library, said her board of directors would probably elect to raise their own funds instead of entering the purchase-of-service contracts.

"At this time we are not interested in any purchase-of-service contract — it would not do us any good," she said. "We're depending on the community to support blind services."

Ms. Flora disputed Smith's contention that her agency is using Midland funds to serve other areas.

"Any service that we provide to the state library is reflected back in the community, so we find that hard to accept."

The Tape Lending Libary records books, articles and anything from a Sunday school program to a bus schedule for blind people, she said.

For 1985, the Library will receive $28,860 from United Way of Midland, and the Epilepsy Association will receive $17,409. Smith was unsure exactly how the change to purchase-of-service contracts would affect those numbers, but "I'm sure there would be a reduction," he said.

Economics vs. ideals: Money makes world go 'round

The longer I live, the more I'm impressed that the world is more concerned with economics than it is with ideals. It had rather be well-fed and well-heeled than well-tuned.

Of course, that's no revelation.

The idealistic greenhorn on campus knows that by simple reasoning: He wouldn't be in college to study philosophy, the sciences, arts, the humanities, business or whatever without money — without someone paying the bill. The school wouldn't be there without big money.

As a rule, it is only after the body is satiated that the mind is willing to consider any serious discussion on life. How many scientists and intellectuals would probe the resources of their minds and their colleagues and explore the fair earth and universe without benefit of foundation grants and money, money, money? How many do-gooders would be doing good if they were not financially well off?

Business, not politics, runs the country. Politics often is the front.

Without money, would the churches, the schools and the hospitals be open? Oh, no. Were it not for the lure of money in the medical and legal professions, would medical and law schools be abounding with students?

Without the foundation of money — liquid money — the world would be paralyzed. It would be without fuel and incentive to thrive. The stock market would crash, which is not totally foreign to this nation.

Money is. It is the reason why.

It is the erratic god of this world even as it gives seeming stability and security to the masses and to the powers.

We live for money, get educated for money, sometimes marry for money, work for money, retire for money and even die for money. We do all of those things for the comforts, security, prestige, pleasures and satisfaction which the use of money affords us.

Money is heavenly.

Now, if money is all so great and makes the wielder of forture almost omnipotent, what need then do we have for philosophy and enlightenment other than to develop the wherewithal to gain riches?

Fortunately, mankind and womankind are inquisitive.

Indeed, what need do we have for the religions and any search for spirituality?

Need the material world and the unseen but sensed spiritual dimension have any connection?

That's your business.

But it seems to me that even a wealth of material goods is without meaning unless there is a higher order, a purpose, to give direction in life. Therein lies the realm of philosophy but only after the hunger pangs have subsided. Fortunately, mankind and womankind naturally are inquisitive and have the capacity to seek answers and reasons for this earthly strive.

A kaleidscope of butterfly-fluttery skirts and crinoline petticoats swirl as the square dancers follow caller Red Warrick's directions. He skillfully "moves the girls" in a changing pattern.

The staid Pottsboro High School gym and cafeteria pulse to the rhythmic beat of country music as almost 600 foot-stamping, hand-clapping dancers take their places in four-couple squares.

"Channel through, now link arms and circle!"

Arriving by the busload, as well as RV and camper, dancers and callers poured into Pottsboro recently to take part in the NORTEX (North Texas Square and Round Dance Association) square dance area's "first ever" two-day jamboree, sponsored by the Lakeside Dudes and Dolls square dance club.

Said Ginger Burns, wife (or "taw" in square dance lingo) of the Pottsboro club caller, Jim Burns, "They're here from Oklahoma City to Houston, from Lufkin to Mineral Wells and every little town in between."

Thirty-three callers, ranging in age from 14-year- old Clint Owens to Jim Horn who started in 1947, took their turns calling "tips" (a set of two dances).

Each caller, voicing his own particular style and choosing from the 135 basic calls, led the dancers in intricate patterns — building manuever on manuever, changing directions, finally returning each dancer to his or her original spot in the square as the record ended.

"Dancers don't go by the music. They go by the calls," said Horn, adding that being a good caller is "90 percent making dancers respond to your personality so they have fun while they dance."

Warrick, 62, who has written and recorded more than 50 square dance records, said he "has slowed down" from his 1945 pace of calling as many as eight dances a week — in addition to working a full time job. Now, he declares, he only teaches two classes, is the regular caller for Red's Rompers in Henderson and calls for 32 area clubs "on invitation."

The dancers progress smoothly from pattern to pattern, weaving in and out — following the directions of 14-year-old Clint Owens, Hallsville eighth grader who says, "It's not your age that counts — it's can you call the dance."

"Seesaw, pretty little taw — ladies in, men circle!"

The dancers progress smoothly from pattern to pattern, weaving in and out — following the directions of 14-year-old Clint Owens, Hallsville eighth grader who says, "It's not your age that counts — it's can you call the dance."

Recently named the National Folk Dance of the United States, square dancing brings together people from all walks of life and in all age groups.

Brandi Harbin, 8, dons the full denim skirt and ruffled red blouse and petticoats of her club, the Happy Hoofers, because she "likes visiting lots of places;" Ray and Frances Wood of the McKinney Twisters are celebrating Ray's 65th birthday at the jamboree; Bill and Vida Black, both past 80 and members of the Dudes and Dolls, never miss their club's dances and frequently travel with the group to dance in other towns.

Brushing her hair back and catching her breath, one dancer said she and her husband started dancing when they moved to a new town and, out of all the clubs, churches and organizations they checked, they found square dancers were "the friendliest and happiest people."

"Sashay in, sashay out — now, swing that corner!"

Postal worker, arrested on drug charges, released

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Midland man remained in Midland County Jail this morning, but a 35-year-old postal worker was released after posting bond on charges of delivery of marijuana in connection with the sale Tuesday night of half a pound of marijuana to an undercover agent with the Drug Enforcement Agency.

Bail was set Wednesday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine at $50,000 for Edward Earl Woodberry, 28, and at $25,000 for James Edward Campbell, an employee at the Main Post Office on Wall Avenue.

The two are charged with selling half a pound of marijuana for $450 to Larry Nichols of the DEA at Campbell's residence, 1108 E. Oak. After the alleged transaction about 5:30 p.m., Detective Sgts. Johnny Anastasio and Mike Reed of the Midland Police Department narcotics division assisted with the arrests.

According to police reports, the two men then admitted they had more marijuana and gave written consents to search their homes.

About 2.5 ounces of marijuana believed to be packaged for sale were found in Campbell's home, and another 2.5 ounces were found in Woodberry's home, 710 S. Webster, reports said.

A 25-year-old Midland construction worker remained in Midland County Jail this morning on charges of possession of marijuana.

Robert Stanley Sutton, of the KOA Kampground of U.S. Highway 80, was arrested at 3:30 a.m. Tuesday by a Midland County Sheriff's Office deputy after he was found asleep in a stalled car on Farm-to-Market 1788. Bail was set at $7,500 by Pine.

According to sheriff's office reports, Sutton was arrested for unlawful carrying of a weapon after a revolver was found on the floorboard of his car, which was blocking the north lane of FM 1788. During inventory of the car, three bags of what appeared to be marijuana were found.

Montford says water plans' bonds could be lowered

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, says financing provisions of a proposed statewide water plan which authorizes up to $1.2 billion in state bonds for such projects as reservoir construction and sewage treatment plants could be reduced by at least $200 million.

"I anticipate it would be reduced," said Montford late Wednesday after an organizational meeting of the House-Senate conference committee on water which has begun working on a compromise water plan for the state.

The Senate version of the water plan, sponsored by Montford, authorizes up to $1.2 billion in bonds, while the House version, sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, authorizes $800 million in bonds.

The 10-member conference committee, headed by Craddick and Montford, has set another meeting Tuesday to discuss specifics of the different water plans.

Topics to be considered at Tuesday's meeting will include financing provisions, groundwater and bays and estuaries, Craddick said.

The House and Senate water plans also differ on provisions regarding groundwater and bay and estuary protection.

If the Legislature approves a water plan for Texas, voters will have to pass a constitutional amendment allowing the state bonds to be issued.

"There's genuine concern that a ballot with over $1 billion in bonds will have voter rejection," said Montford, who added he is also concerned about passage based on the history of previous water packages. Several water plans have been rejected in the past.

But Montford said the bonding authorization will not be reduced much below $1 billion. "I don't think the Senate's fixed on $1.2 billion," he said.

The bill provides for students to be removed from a classroom if they assault a teacher or other individual, sell, give or possess marijuana or alcoholic beverages or possess a firearm.

Another vote is needed before the bill goes to the Senate.

Haley has said Texas schools are incurring a $9 million price tag for alternative education programs under the current system.

Several attempts by Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, to amend the bill failed.

Granoff claims the suspensions would put the troubled students on the streets, leading to additional problems.

Also, the bill would open doors to allow school administrators to expel a student for two minor infractions, Grannoff has said.

Ms. Brooks, a seventh grade Texas history teacher at Jefferson, spoke on recent education system changes before a group of local educators at its annual banquet.

Although she praised the discipline bill, she painted a gloomy picture of some legislation, charging lawmakers with "fixing everything that's wrong with the classroom by fixing the classroom teacher."

She called for changes in the state's career ladder structure and competency testing law.

The career ladder, enacted as an incentive to keep teachers in the classroom, is "nothing but merit pay" under the current structure, she said. "The way to take care of the career ladder is to fund it."

Ms. Brooks added that an underfunded career ladder "causes stress for teachers" by placing them in "competitive" situations to be rewarded for progress in the classroom.

She also condemned the state's competency law saying, "Some of the reforms we have been demanding for years, but the competency test is not one of them. If there's a teacher in Texas who can't pass a ninth grade literacy test, there's a college out there who should be reprimanded for giving them a degree.

"If there's an illiterate teacher in Texas, then somebody out there is not doing their job — namely the principal," she noted.

Police investigate theft of tools from residence

From Staff Reports

The theft of about $1,360 worth of tools from a southside residence is being investigated by Midland police today.

Elias Hernandez, 1505 S. Fort Worth St., told police the burglary took place at 1609 S. Belmont sometime Sunday. There were no signs of forced entry, according to reports.

In other complaints filed Wednesday with city police, John Martin of 2600 W. Loop 250, No. 521, said about $790 worth of tools were stolen from a 1981 Chevrolet Silverado pickup owned by Carroll Plumbing Co. According to reports, Martin had parked the pickup in front of his apartment at 11 p.m. Tuesday. When he returned to it at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday, both lids to the tool box were open.

Mark Thernes, 2600 N. Loop 250, Apt. 413, told police his 1981 Pontiac Grand Prix was burglarized between 8 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday. An in-dash cassette and radio stereo, speakers and a brief case containing contact lenses were taken from the unlocked car, according to reports. Total loss was placed at $574.

A camera and three rings valued at a total of $530 were reported stolen from the Mickie McClain residence at 4721 Cherokee Saturday. According to reports, entry was gained through a front door between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. There were no signs of forced entry.

Sylvia Meza, 200-B E. Circle Drive, reported her 1975 Mercury was burglarized while she was at work at La Bodega restaurant, 2700 N. Big Spring. Reports indicate the burglary took place between 5:35 p.m. and 10:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Taken from the locked car were $300 worth of items.

Man dies after being hit by car

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 19-year-old man injured Monday night when he was hit by a car, has died in Medical Center Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Gerardo Paredes of Odessa was attempting to cross the north service road of Interstate 20 at 8:30 p.m. Monday about 5.2 miles west of Odessa when he was hit by a car.

Paredes was in critical condition with head and internal injuries for 24 hours before he died, reports said. He was pronounced dead at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday.

A 49-year-old Shreveport, La. man injured early Sunday morning in a one-vehicle rollover was updated from critical to stable condition in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital.

"Alternative programs can be and should be put into place. Suspension will be used as a drastic measure when needed," said Haley, chairman of the House Public Education Committee.

Haley said Texas schools are incurring a $9 million price tag for alternative education programs under the current system.

Several attempts by Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, to amend the bill failed.

"This is going to affect thousands of felonies in the state of Texas," Granoff said. He said the suspensions would put the troubled students on the streets, leading to additional problems.

An amendment by Rep. Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, would allow the student to receive partial credit for homework the student makes up as a result of his or her suspension.

Granoff said, "The bill open doors to allow school administrators to expel a student for two minor infractions."

Group may be planning killings

HOUSTON (AP) — Posse Comitatus, a right-wing group, may be planning assassination attempts against Houston area law enforcement officers, Houston Police Department sources say.

A police officer told the Houston Chronicle that officers are being officially notified of the threats during shift changes.

A confidential memorandum circulated recently by a federal law enforcement agency said Posse Comitatus may have its members form a posse in each Houston-area county to determine if local political officeholders are corrupt and if so to eliminate them.

"The purpose is to prepare the girl for maturity," she said.

Preparing for maturity includes learning about not only their own bodies, but "about how babies are made."

"We talked about body parts to the first-graders," said Ms. Sorrells. "We also discussed how babies are made. We start off talking about plants and how they have seeds. Then we go on to chickens and how their eggs are fertilized by a rooster.

"They've all seen dogs mating," she said. "We simply explain what is going on and take it one step further, by explaining how it occurs between a mother and father and how a family is made.

"It's pretty mechanical," she said. "We don't go into all the details of the relationship."

Keeping a healthy attitude about the human body and sex is primary, suggested Ms. Sorrells.

"We want them to know that there is nothing to be ashamed of," she said. "They need to know that their body is beautiful.

"It's important that we be the ones to tell them," she said. "If we don't, then we have lost the ball game."

A similar group, Tadpoles and Bullfrogs, is in the planning stages, according to Ms. Sorrells, but "it's difficult to find enough daddies who have the time to dedicate to it."

State party chairmen don't both support proposed primary bill

AUSTIN (AP) — State chairmen of the Texas Democratic and Republican parties agree that a proposed presidential primary bill is non-partisan, but they split on supporting the measure.

"There's nothing that draws people to the polls like a presidential election," said Democratic chairman Bob Slagle, who wants an early presidential primary in March to give Texas a louder voice in selecting the next president.

"The system we have now has been working well. If it ain't broke, don't fix it," State Republican Chairman George Strake told the House Elections Committee.

The measure, which calls for a vote on announced presidential candidates in March that would bind voters to a party for the rest of the year, was left as pending business. A similar measure is pending in the Senate.

Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston and committee chairman, said a vote on the House measure probably would be taken next week.

Texas Republicans have been holding a presidential primary for several years at the same time as the May party elections for state and local officials.

Democrats have a say in selecting the presidential nominees through delegates selected in caucuses for the party's national convention.

"We want it flexible so the Republicans can do what they want to do and we can do what we want to do," Slagle said after explaining the proposal arose from a Democratic study committee after widespread criticism of the party's caucus system last summer.

Slagle said the governing body of Texas Democrats had agreed to hold some sort of binding presidential primary in 1988 whether the pending bill is passed or not.

"We think it important that Texas, the third largest state, have an early say on presidential candidates. We are 36th now in the line of caucuses and primaries," Slagle said.

"The reasons for our opposition to the early primary deal with both money and manpower, the taxpayers' money and volunteer manpower," said Strake.

He said the latest estimate by the secretary of state's office was that a separate presidential primary would cost $10 million.

"With a March presidential primary, the effective date for the start of the political season in Texas would be the summer of 1987," Strake said. "When you add the March primary, the May primary, the June runoff, June district and state conventions and the November general election, you get a political season lasting more than a year."

Strake also said he believed lengthening the election process would decrease voter turnout.

"Don't you have any concern for the hundreds of thousands of independent voters?" Rep. Jim Horn, R-Lewisville, asked Slagle. "Are you just going to wipe out their independence?"

"I don't think that would be true," Slagle said. "I think Texas is trending toward a two-party state and there are a lot of people who wait until they see what candidates the two parties select before they make a choice."

Gene Evans, Democratic county chairman from Waco, said he favored an early presidential primary but found problems with provisions of the bill that 75 percent of the delegates to the national convention would be selected on the basis of the popular vote in March and 25 percent by party conventions.

"I can see where there would be two candidates."

Graham blames devil for battle raging over 'Bible inerrancy'

DALLAS (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham blames the devil for the raging battle threating to split the Southern Baptist Convention over how literally the Bible should be taken.

"I believe one of the tricks of the devil's is to get them divided so they will neglect their marvelous evangelism program, Bold Mission Thrust," Graham said.

Graham will be in Dallas Sunday and Monday to speak at First Baptist Church and to accept an honorary doctorate from Dallas Baptist University.

But he said he will not attend the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in Dallas in June because he does not want to get involved in the church's battle over biblical inerrancy.

Bible inerrancy is the doctrine that all of the Bible is the inspired word of God and is thus infallible. The issue has split members of the convention, which is the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

"I am an evangelist, and I must appeal to as wide a range of people as possible," he said. "I believe in the holy, inspired word of God, but I have friends on both sides."

Graham became a Baptist when he began his crusades ministry in the 1940s. "When I joined the church, the Baptists said they were not a denomination. They called themselves an association of autonomous churches," he said.

"There are some things on both sides of the battle that are almost irreconcilable. It will be difficult to bridge the gap," he said. "But there is one thing that can reunite the Baptists, and that is the preaching of the Gospel. They can all agree on that."

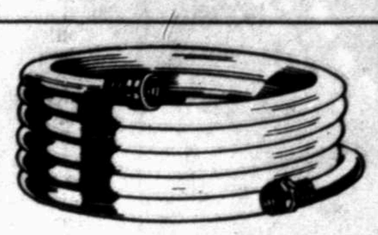

Graham said he and his staff are preparing for crusades in Hartford, Conn., England, Rumania and Hungary. He also hopes to return to Siberia in the Soviet Union — a place reminiscent of the "American frontier" where there is a strong Baptist church on the outskirts of the capital, he said.

Dollar rallies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar staged a modest rally early today after the Federal Reserve stepped in to aid the state of Ohio's ailing savings and loan institutions. Gold prices, undercut by the dollar's rally, fell.

The dollar, after setting records on all but four trading days last month, took its biggest one-day plunge in 14 years Tuesday as the implications of the run on the Ohio institutions and their subsequent closure sank in.

But the U.S. currency rebounded in highly volatile trading Wednesday, and dealers said the rally continued into today after Chairman Paul Volcker announced the Fed was prepared to lend money to the institutions.

Some key dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

–3.7063 Dutch guilders, up from 3.6860.

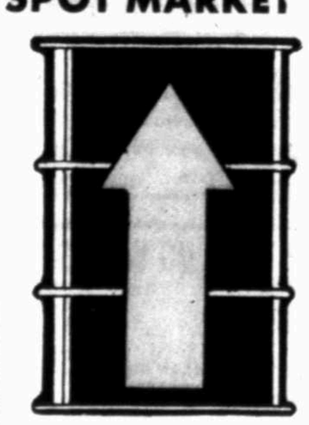

–2,081.00 Italian lire, up from 2,067.75.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $320.25 an ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $321. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $312.50.

In New York Wednesday, gold fell $15.20 to close at $323.80.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.20 an ounce, down from Wednesday's $6.375.

Personal income reports advance

Associated Press

A healthy rise in consumer spending last month bodes well for further economic expansion, some economists say, but the good news was tempered by a report that personal income had made the smallest gain in months.

The value of world trade, meanwhile, rose 6.5 percent last year, largely because of increasing imports into the United States, the secretariat of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) said Wednesday.

The 0.7 percent increase in consumer spending nearly matched strong gains of 0.8 percent in January and December, the Commerce Department said.

Analysts said the eagerness of consumers to continue their spree should provide strong growth this spring.

"Consumers are alive and well," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the investment firm Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. "They are spending and borrowing freely, based on plentiful jobs, low inflation and a generally upbeat mood."

Consumer spending rose $18.2 billion last month with the big jump coming in purchases of non-durable goods, such as clothing.

Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers, said consumer spending continues to be the healthiest sector of the economy. However, "the modest gains that we have seen in consumer income over the last couple of months won't support the current level of consumer spending indefinitely," he added.

The 0.3 percent gain in personal income, only half of January's increase, was attributed by some analysts in part to bad weather that forced plant shutdowns during February.

Although the value of world trade rose to $1.96 trillion in 1984, the Geneva, Switzerland-based GATT's study said, increasing protectionist pressures were likely to hinder further increases in 1985.

The 6.5 percent increase, which followed a 2 percent decline in 1983, was the first significant growth in world trade since 1979 and put the value of trade near the 1980 record of $1.99 trillion.

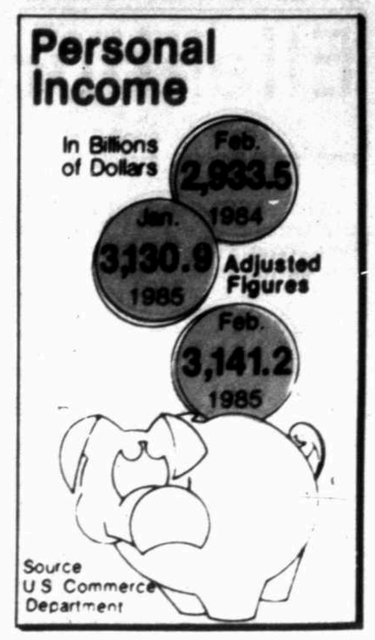

U.S. imports accounted for more than half of the increase, the study said.

In Congress Wednesday, members of the Senate Appropriations Committee urged Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige to stop relying on the free market to restore the U.S. trade balance and to retaliate against Japanese imports.

"Despite the niceties of the Japanese prime minister and his assurances that something will be done, we've got to make a shot across their bow to get their attention," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. "We don't want to start a trade 'war, but we must convince them to play fair."

But Baldrige, who testified before the panel's subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary, defended the Reagan administration's approach of trying to negotiate an end to Japanese trade laws that block many U.S. exports.

Last year, the U.S. trade deficit with Japan swelled to $36.8 billion from $20.6 billion the previous year, with imports of autos, steel, and electronics accounting for most of the imbalance.

Interior wants fewer lease sales

Would open Pacific Northwest waters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department today proposed slowing down most leasing of offshore oil and gas drilling tracts, while offering acreage in waters off the Pacific Northwest for the first time in 27 years.

The first draft of the department's next five-year plan, which cannot go into effect for about two years, lays out a tentative schedule calling for one sale every three years instead of one every other year in areas outside the Gulf of Mexico. Sales in the central and western gulf would continue to be held every year.

The great bulk of offshore production already is in the gulf, and industry believes the most likely prospects lie there.

The current schedule, which took effect in 1982, calls for 41 sales through June 1987. The draft proposed today lists 43, but five are to be re-offerings of rejected tracts. Eleven of the offerings scheduled in 1982 subsequently were delayed and are listed in the new program.

The plan does not change the "area-wide" system established by former Interior Department Secretary James Watt that threw open nearly the entire U.S. coastline for potential drilling. That system was vigorously attacked by environmentalists, but was upheld in court.

Recently installed Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel said today he was focusing the program on "promising acreage."

"This preliminary draft program also proposes to adjust the pace of offshore leasing in the light of the downward trend of oil prices over the last few years and the possibility of slower price increases in the future," Hodel said.

But he also added a proposal to give him authority to speed up sales in the event new economic or geologic data is brought to light after the schedule is set.

The scheduling of a sale in waters off Oregon and Washington state for April 1991 was a surprise because the area had been considered unpromising. A $35 million lease of 101 tracts in that area in 1964 resulted in the drilling of only a dozen wells, all dry holes.

Those waters have been included in planning proposals five times in the past, and have been dropped each time.

Both Watt and his successor, William P. Clark, dropped large acreage from consideration as sales drew nearer and it became clear no drillers were interested.

In recent years, Congress, responding to environmentalist or fishing interests, has added bans on drilling in specific areas as amendments to year-by-year appropriations bills. Currently, such bans covering Central and Northern California and Georges Bank off Massachusetts are scheduled to expire Sept. 30. Those areas are now proposed to be offered in 1987 and 1989.

Commerce: Economy cooling, inflation rising

By The Associated Press

Economic growth is cooling off and inflation is rising in the current quarter, the Commerce Department estimated today.

The economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.1 percent in the yet-to-be-completed first quarter, according to the government's "flash" estimate, which is subject to several revisions in the months ahead.

That is the slowest growth since the 1.6 percent annual rate of the third quarter of last year and also is down sharply from the revised 4.3 percent of the final three months of 1984. Growth in the final quarter of last year was revised down from the 4.9 percent reported earlier.

Meanwhile, the government said a broad measure of inflation, linked to economic growh, is rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent, the sharpest increase since the 5.6 percent of the second quarter of 1982 and substantially higher than the 2.8 percent inflation rate of the final quarter of last year.

The sluggish rise in the real gross national product — the market value of the goods and services produced by the economy, adjusted for inflation — was blamed on rising inflation and a widening foreign trade gap.

Today's figures followed a series of mixed signals on the economy's strength.

On Wednesday, the Commerce Department said American's personal income edged up 0.3 percent in February, the smallest gain in nine months, while consumer spending rose a healthy 0.7 percent.

The value of world trade, meanwhile, rose 6.5 percent last year, largely because of increasing imports into the United States, the secretariat of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) said Wednesday.

The 0.7 percent increase in consumer spending nearly matched strong gains of 0.8 percent in January and December, the Commerce Department said.

He presently serves as First Vice President of the West Texas Geological Society, is a past President of the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Exploration and Paleontologists and Mineralogists, and is a Certified Petroleum Geologist.

A graduate of Texas A & M and The University of Texas, Green and his wife, Marianne, are long-time Midland residents and have two daughters.

GNP growing at sluggish pace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy is growing at a surprisingly sluggish rate of 2.1 percent so far this year, down sharply from the pace set in 1984, the government estimated today.

The Commerce Department put growth in the gross national product — the broadest measure of economic health — at its slowest rate since a weak 1.6 percent pace turned in from July through September last year.

In other bad news, the report said inflation is heating up.

A measure of prices tied to the GNP — the implicit price deflator — is rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent in the still-unfinished first quarter, the fastest clip since a 5.6 percent pace in the second quarter of 1982.

The new report caught analysts by surprise.

Most had been predicting the economy was growing at an annualized rate of around 4 percent this year, about the rate they expect for the entire year.

While that pace would be below the 6.8 percent growth turned in during 1984, it would still be a healthy rate for the third year of an economic recovery.

Most economists believe the economy must expand at a pace of at least 3 percent to create enough new jobs to keep unemployment falling.

The third quarter slump in activity last year had brought on worries of an impending recession. Those fears were eased when growth rebounded in the final three months of last year.

Today's report, however, revised the extent of that rebound from an earlier reported 4.9 percent rate to a slightly smaller 4.3 percent pace.

The Commerce Department's "flash" estimate of growth is made before a quarter is over. Today's report contains complete data only for January with estimates for February and March. The quarterly estimate is subject to several rounds of revisions later in the year.

MONSANTO OIL CO., Midland, tested the No. 1-A Tyrrell Estate for an absolute open flow of 794 Mcfd with a flowing tubing pressure of 980 psi. The well is flowing from the Delaware interval 5,305 to 5,331 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons and 20,000 gallons gel, 23000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 15,000 lbs. 12/20 sand.

Drilled to a total depth of 5,500 ft., the well is plugged back to 5,456 ft. Casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 5,500 ft.

On an elevation of 2,745 ft., the well topped the Yates at 2,912 ft., the Queen at 3,220 dft., the Capitan Reef at 3,472 ft., and the Cherry Canyon at 4,813 ft. Top of the pay is 5,305 ft.

The strike is located 1,320 ft. from southeast and 1,320 ft. from northeast lines of Section 509, Garcia, Montez and Duran survey, nine miles north of Fort Stockton.

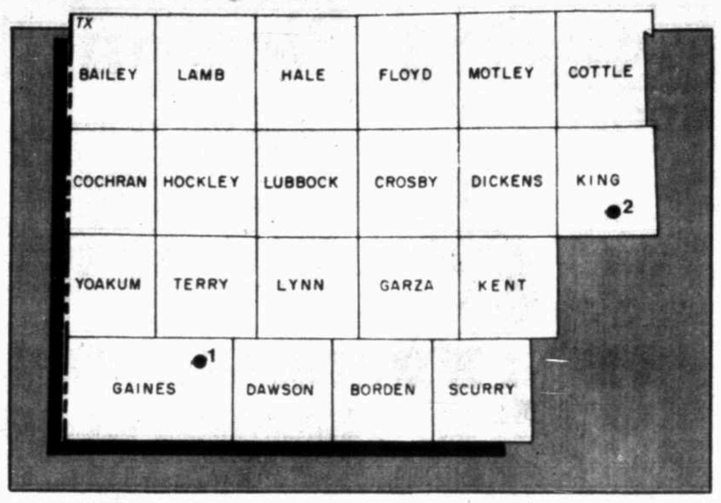

The 1-A is a twin to the No. 1 Tyrrell Estate, according to Monsanto geologist Mike McCleery. The No. 1, a 22,500 ft. Ellenburger opener, has produced about 46 billion cubic feet since it was drilled in 1971.

Monsanto engineer Hal Crabb said the company was hoping for an oil strike. Monsanto is currently testing some more Delaware zones, he said, and will probably drill another well in the area in the next month.

Explorer abandoned

CHI ENERGY, INC. has drilled and abandoned the No. 1 Ashley, a Pecos County explorer, 660 ft. from northwest and 1980 ft. from northeast lines of Section 27, Block 23, H&TC survey, six miles southwest of Imperial. Total depth was 5,600 ft.

Fashion '85 benefits PDAP

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

The first severe weather alert of the spring season couldn't prevent 275-300 style-conscious Midlanders from viewing the designs of the spring season, shown at Palmer Drug Abuse Program Fashion '85 style show Tuesday night at Clay-Desta atrium.

And the show had a few surprises. New styles in cruisewear, featuring bright colors, full skirts and strapless dresses, opened the show. Soft, flowing lingerie in purest white, pale pink, navy blue and black, and worn by bare-foot models, gave the show a different look.

The swimwear segment was opened by a male model wearing a mock-monk robe, which covered his teeny black bikini.

But the highlight of the evening was the showing of the "Dynasty" collection of glittering gowns and elegant suits designed for and worn on the popular series.

All the fashions in the PDAP show were from local merchants, said Chuck Wilcox, director of the event. "Since PDAP is local — national headquarters are in Midland — we felt we should use local merchants."

The projected $10,000 in proceeds will be used to support Midland's PDAP program, Wilcox said.

Bob Savage, director of PDAP in Midland, said the group's national headquarters were moved to Midland from Dallas about three months ago. Midland was chosen for the offices because "Midland has one of the more successful programs in the nation now. And a lot of people who are members of the national board are from this area."

Office space for PDAP's national headquarters was donated by Sun Exploration, giving PDAP "25 months free rent to start, which was a big incentive in the budget area. All things seemed to point in this direction."

According to program literature, PDAP is "a fellowship of young people and parents who have joined forces to solve common problems associated with drug and alcohol abuse."

Savage said the program, founded in 1971, came to Midland in 1979. "We started out with two kids," he said. "It went to 40 in about two months." In 1985 about 70 young people aged 18-24, and about twice that number in the under-17 age group attend PDAP meetings, as well as about 70 parents, he said.

"The number one drug is still alcohol. Use is abuse when you're talking about a 10-year-old."

PDAP was "founded on the concept of Alcoholic Anonymous," Savage said. "For that reason it's successful." AA is "the most successful program in the world."

Fashions for the show were from Intimate Fashions, Islands Swimwear, Golding's — Joe Mohler, coordinator, Janee's Evening Wear, Fashion Formal Wear and San Jacinto Fine Jewelers. Also participating were Christine Valmy, Masters Club and Foot Locker.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Adult snack food rated 'icks'

By LINDA ANDERSON

Potato chips and chocolate cookies are terrific, but sometimes adults yearn for more grown-up snacks. After all, how many Oreos or Cheez-Its do you see at cocktail parties? Adults do not live by O'Grady's au Gratin potato chips alone!

In the search for sophisticated snack foods, some consumers have discovered a European-looking wafer called Old Brussels waferettes, which is available in several flavors including sour cream and onion, cheddar cheese and bleu cheese. Produced by L. Parein International, these snacks consist of a sour cream or cheese filling between two wafer-crackers.

Sounded like sophistication had finally hit Midland!

These snacks were taste-tested by several mature, adult career persons for taste, price and advertising accuracy. We chose the sour cream and onion waferettes as the flavor most suitable for our discriminating taste buds.

A 6.17-ounce box of the waferettes cost $1.59, which is not too much more than an 8-ounce bag of potato chips. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

None of us had ever seen the product advertised, but the box carried the claim: "... waferettes ... sold to you with pride of manufacturing excellence and highest quality farm-fresh ingredients ... Old Brussels uses only natural ingredients to bake the finest wafers than only many years of family tradition can produce."

A quick look at the box's ingredient listing showed some of those "farm-fresh ... natural ingredients" to be monosodium glutamate, sodium bicarbonate, silicon dioxide, sodium caseimate, artificial and natural flavors and FD&C No. 5 yellow color.

So much for truth in advertising.

The taste-test made all the adult testers grateful for barbeque-flavored Fritos. The waferettes tasted terrible. The filling tasted too strong, as if Parmesan cheese had spoiled, and the snack left an after-taste strongly resembling the taste of soap. And none of the testers could stand more than one bite.

In all fairness it must be admitted that we may have recieved a bad box — or the other flavors may be absolutely delicious.

But I'm not about to find out. One taste was enough to make me appreciate the sophistication of M&Ms.

Want ad offers job with a twist

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Connor was looking for someone who could spend the wee small hours of the morning twisting away until the sun came up. Not just anyone, either. Connor wanted someone who could twist with authority, experience. Someone who could do maybe 50 twists a minute.

So he placed an ad in a South Philadelphia weekly newspaper.

Connor had hardly let out a yawn before his phone started ringing incessantly. He had to look no further than his first candidate, a middle-aged woman who could do 40 twists a minute.

She more than cut the mustard to twist pretzel dough till dawn on the floor of Connor's soft pretzel shop here, which for more than a century, Connor says, has been the home of the Bakerite Soft Pretzel Co.

Of the dozen or so soft pretzel firms in the city, Connor, 62, believes his is the oldest and "probably the smallest." A former laundry salesman, Connor got into the operation about 15 years ago to help out his ailing father-in-law, whose father founded the business 125 years ago.

Connor says he advertises for an "experienced" extra hand or two every winter in case one of his two pretzel twisters gets bent out of shape with a cold.

Finding an experienced twister, says Connor, is no problem. "There's plenty of them around," he said. "I must have gotten about 25 calls."

BETTER BUSINESS

At-home sales questioned

By LINDA TRUITT

Have you ever thought about becoming a distributor for a multi-level marketing company in order to make a little extra money or build a business?

Multi-level marketing is a system of retailing in which consumer products are sold by independent businessmen and women (distributors) usually in the customer's home. You can set your own hours and earn money based on your effort and ability to sell the products or services supplied to you, the distributor, by the parent company.

The parent company will also encourage you to build and manage your own sales force by recruiting, motivating, supplying and training others to sell the products or services. A percentage based on the sales of the entire sales force would be your compensation, in addition to personal sales.

Although it is possible to build a successful multi-level business with comparatively little start-up money, keep in mind that it is not a means of getting rich quickly or easily. Successful distributors who have recruited and trained a large number of sellers also have to assume ongoing wholesaleing and managing responsibilities as well as make sales to their own retail customers. Managing such a large network can be lucrative, but it is hard work and it can become a full-time job.

While some multi-level sales plans comply with state law, others do not. Some multi-level operations become "pyramids" which concentrate mainly on the quick profits to be earned by recruiting others to invest, and who, in turn, will recruit others and so on. At opportunity meetings, which are held to lure potential recruits, the merchandise or service to be sold is largely ignored, and little or no mention is made regarding a market for the product.

An ambitious plan to sell long-distance telephone service by using multi-level marketing techniques is being sold locally. The company, StarCom Inc., located in Fort Worth, was asking recruited salespeople to make a $150 prepayment for the long-distance service. As these salespeople recruited others to sell, they made a percentage of the "prepayments" when their recruits paid for the service. For example, the person making the sale made 10 percent of the $150; the person who recruited the seller made 5 percent; and the person who brought in the recruiter made 4 percent.

On Feb. 26, 1985 the attorney general obtained a permanent injunction and $7,500 in civil penalties against StarCom. The lawsuit alleges the defendant made misrepresentations to consumers who paid a deposit of $150 each for their long distance service and were told the deposit was refundable at any time. It is estimated the company collected more than $300,000 in deposits. The company cannot solicit or accept deposits from consumers unless the deposits are fully refundable.

Company reports possible flaw in battery packs

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the Datascope Corp. says the firm has notified more than 7,000 customers and distributors of a possible flaw in some heart defibrillator battery packs and advised the customers they may wish to replace the power packs.

Arthur Friedman, a company official, said Monday that while a recall of heart defibrillators produced by the company involves fewer than 2,000 machines, the Paramus, N.J., company elected to notify all of its direct customers and distributors in the United States, even if they used machines not at issue in the recall.

The notification suggests that customers replace the battery packs to avoid any possibility of malfunction, he said, and notes that the battery test built into the machine does not detect the problem.

Friedman said the Datascope models involved are known as the M-D-3 and the M-D-3A.

DEAR ABBY

Girl fears loss of virginity may cause loss of husband

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 (nearly 18) and am going with a very special guy whom I like very much. I know he feels the same way about me. We seem to be getting closer and closer and may be heading for a serious relationship.

The problem goes back to when I was 15. I lost my virginity to my first boyfriend. At the time, I thought I was going to marry him, but it didn't work out that way, and we drifted apart.

The guy I'm going with now knows nothing about my not being a virgin. I am a Catholic, and all Catholic girls are supposed to keep their virginity until the day they marry. Since I am no longer a virgin, how can I explain it to him? How can I explain it to any guy who asks me to marry him?

I feel so ashamed. Many times I burst into tears because I don't know how I will ever to be able to tell the man I marry. Please help me. — NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: When you marry, are you going to ask your husband if he's a virgin? And if he is not, do you think you have the right to question him concerning his past sexual experiences? Of course not. It's none of your business.

The same is true concerning you. Your past is none of his business. What's done is done. Don't dwell on it.

DEAR ABBY: My parents have been divorced since I was 14. I'm 20 now and have a good relationship with both my parents, but my mother resents my father for several things he has done to her as well as to me and my sister. I've learned to put things in the past and leave them there. I love my father as much as I love my mother, but Mother doesn't understand that. She doesn't expect me to hate my father, but she doesn't like it when I talk about the trips he takes with his new wife or anything he does, so I don't mention it.

I am engaged to be married and I want both parents to give me away. My mother wants to give me away and says if I insist that my father share in that honor, she will not attend my wedding. We had a long talk about it and I cried for two days. I then decided to let my mother give me away, but she knows I'm not happy about it.

Have you any suggestions? — WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: In such situations I urge parents to give their marrying child the gift of happiness on his or her wedding day, and put their own feelings aside. Your mother is wrong to punish you in her determination to punish your father. Since you love them equally, make it both or none — and ask a favorite relative or dear friend to "give you away."

Sodium listed

By MARIAN FARR

If you like to munch on chips or other salty snacks, you may want to know exactly how much sodium you're getting.

Some manufacturers list sodium amounts in milligrams per serving on food labels, but they are not required to do so. However, a recent study of 15 popular national brand snack foods, reported in the "Journal Food Science," provides some information on their sodium content.

Researchers determined the average amount of salt in 100 grams — or about 3½ ounces — of the snack. A typical single serving size bag of chips contains one or two ounces. Of the products tested, pretzel twists had the most sodium with 2370 milligrams per serving. But saltines with 1794 milligrams, puff balls with 1190 milligrams and some corn-based snacks with 1014 milligrams are also high in sodium.

By comparison 1100 to 3300 milligrams of sodium is the recommended amount for daily intake. Even one serving of these snacks, assuming you can eat just one, provides a substantial amount of the day's allotment for sodium. Obviously the salt content of different brands can vary, and the quantity of salt you eat depends on how much and how often you eat these snacks.

Researchers have found a wide range of sodium levels within some of the individual products they tested, and snacks made by regional and local companies were not tested at all.

Salt, or more correctly sodium (salt is 40 percent sodium), is important to the body. However, excessive salt in the diet has been linked with hypertension, or high blood pressure. High blood pressure, in turn, may lead to heart or kidney disease or stroke.

The sodium content for the national brand snack foods tested is as follows:

Taco tortilla chips, 868 mg/100g
Toasted corn, 1307 mg/100g
Salted peanuts, 595 mg/100g
Corn-flavored snacks, 1014 mg/100g
Pretzel twists, 2370 mg/100g
Nacho chips, 546 mg/100g
Puff balls, 1190 mg/100g
Tortilla chips, 468 mg/100g
Sunflower seeds, 721 mg/100g
Saltines, 1794 mg/100g
Nacho cheese chips, 292 mg/100g
Salty rye crackers, 819 mg/100g
Wheat crackers, 566 mg/100g
Granola snack bar, 273 mg/100g

Director of institute sees answers on moon

Copley News Service

Dr. James Arnold, his eyes enlarged beneath a pair of thick bifocals, turned toward the corner of his office and peered into the future.

He had trouble focusing.

Arnold, the 61-year-old director of the California Space Institute in La Jolla, Calif., wasn't cut out to be a visionary.

Nor was he meant to be an astronomer. His physical vision, poor even as a child, steered him away from that pursuit.

But bad eyes haven't prevented him from searching for meteorites from distant worlds, analyzing moon rock, or tracing the solar system's fossil history hidden within cosmic rays.

Nor has it limited his excitement about man's returning to the moon one day to answer questions raised by earlier explorations of Earth's only natural satellite.

"I see the moon as a stepping stone," he said. "Once you are there, you can be any place in the solar system that you want to be."

Arnold is among a growing list of scientists who hope to convince NASA to put the moon back on its agenda for future manned space missions.

Last summer, a group of scientists and space consultants met at CalSpace to draw up a list of projects NASA should consider in the future. Among the most prominent items was a return visit to the moon. Last week, an annual meeting took place in Houston to consider plans for the moon and beyond.

Arnold, as he has been in the past, was there.

"We've had a decade or 15 years to study the data from Apollo," he said, "and it's possible to write a pretty rich scientific agenda now that we know the right questions to ask."

Arnold has been searching for the right questions for much of his professional career, questions about the moon's precise composition, its origin and history, as well as its potential role in man's future exploration of space.

His career is marked by a rich blend of scientific achievement and academic accomplishment. As a consultant to NASA, he has been awarded the space agency's top medal for "exceptional scientific achievement."

Arnold also holds the honor of having an asteroid named for him — Asteroid 2134 Jimarnold, bestowed on him for creating a computer model describing how meteorites cross the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter.

In addition, he's managed to teach the basics of chemistry to generations of freshmen, as well as advanced courses, at the University of California at San Diego and the University of Chicago.

Mild-mannered by nature, Arnold has tended to avoid controversy.

Several years ago however, he stirred up his fellow lunar scientists with a radical idea by suggesting that the moon may have billions of tons of solid ice trapped at its poles. Such a notion could have dramatic implications on where to locate a potential lunar colony.

Arnold's hypothesis came from his studies of moon rock, which he still keeps in a safe near his office.

The rocks themselves are dry, drier than anything on this planet, but analysis has shown they contain blobs of pure iron.

"So what made the metal?" he asked. "The rocks don't have them. So the metal was made when the rocks were smashed into bits.

"To a chemist that says you have to have reducing agents. You have to have something that will take the iron in oxidized form and reduce it to a metal. On Earth you do that in a steel plant. This has happened naturally, so the obvious thing is there has to be hydrogen in the soil of the moon."

The hydrogen, Arnold speculated, came from solar wind whipping across the lunar landscape. Studies of moon rock confirmed there were indeed small quantities of hydrogen in the lunar soil.

If you combine iron oxide with hydrogen, you get pure iron.

"I've taught generations of freshmen to balance equations," Arnold continued. "And what you have to do is make water to balance this equation."

What this means is that water must have been present on the moon at one time, Arnold believes, and that pockets of ice must remain on the moon today.

Arnold concedes that many of his colleagues remain skeptical about his theory.

Yet, he believes the odds of finding large quantities of trapped ice on the moon to be at least even.

The only way to prove it is with a return trip.

At stake is a case of wine, whose dollar value Arnold would rather not disclose.

"The best way I can appraise the level of belief is that I have a couple of fairly large bets with a couple of my colleagues who consider 50-50 a bargain," he said.

Clues to first peace treaty found in Egypt

By WOLFGANG PATZKE

HILDESHEIM, West Germany (DPA) — Clues to what is probably the world's first peace treaty have been discovered in Qantir, the one-time capital of Pharoah Ramses II, 75 miles northeast of Cairo.

Some 50 years after the first major discoveries at the site, an excavation team from the Pelisaeus Museum in this West German city unearthed written testimony to the treaty between Egyptians and Hittites in the year 1269 B.C.

This first documented peace treaty ended at that time the diplomatic and military struggles of the two deeply divided superpowers in the Middle East, and brought to the people of the region a 50-year period of peace and economic prosperity.

The peace treaty was underpinned by a "diplomatic marriage" between Ramses II and a Hittite princess.

Hildesheim Egyptologists Arne Eggebrecht and Edgar Pusch have deduced that the tips of lances and arrows that they dug out, as well as the flaps of armored clothing, belonged to Hittite soldiers in the princess' retinue.

Pusch said some of the retinue could have remained at the court of Ramses II as personal guards to the princess.

Other finds, such as models for manufacturing the reinforcement of shields, also indicate the presence of Hittite specialists and skilled workers who trained the Egyptians in techniques that were unknown to them at that time.

Among the latest finds of the Hildesheim excavation crew are parts of weapons from Cyprus, Syria and Iraq, as well as part of a Mycanean boar-toothed helmet worn only by the highest representatives of the aristocratic classes.

These finds lead Pusch to assume that permanent diplomatic missions existed in the centers of power more than 3,200 years ago.

During this year's excavation campaign the archaeologists hope to be able to prove the existence of embassies of other states, and they intend to hunt for remnants of possible cuneiform archives.

During their excavations, begun 1980, the Hildesheim group found among other things a mighty, 600-feet-long and more than 7-feet-wide wall, and a large pillar-flanked courtyard with remains of chariots.

They also found pillars with writings from the period of Sethos I, father and predecessor of Ramses II, ceramics from the 100-year earlier Amarna and Reamessiden periods, and an axle nail decorated with stucco and gold leaf that must have belonged to the chariot of a high-ranking dignitary.

The archaeologists' opinion the capital city area covered 9 square miles, although so far they have been able to examine only a fraction of this area.

The archaeologists fear that many undiscovered treasures might have been destroyed through the years by intensive farming or by settlement. Their work has thus become a race against bulldozers and tractors.

Director of Pelizaeus Museum, Arne Eggebrecht, is particularly grateful to the German Research Society, which for years has been financing the excavations.

"The DFG recently assured us that it would continue to support our work," said the Egyptologist. "Dr. Pusch is already on his way to Qantir to start work."

For three months the items discovered during the past year will be scientifically prepared, and then in autumn the next excavation campaign will get under way.

Historians and archaeologists have for decades been trying to discover the secret of the Ramses city, which for about 250 years, during the rule of the 19th Dynasty, was the center of the Egyptian realm.

Argentine president describes debt crisis

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH
New York Times News Service

Raul Alfonsin

WASHINGTON — President Raul Alfonsin of Argentina told a joint meeting of Congress Wednesday that the debt crisis of Latin America threatened peace and stability in the Western Hemisphere.

At the same time he urged Americans to recognize "the convergence between our countries and our common interests."

His remarks were addressed to Congress on the last day of his three-day state visit to Washington, the first by an Argentine head of state in 26 years.

Alfonsin, whose election in 1983 ended eight years of military rule, was warmly received by the legislators. They applauded several times during the address and for more than two minutes at the end.

The 58-year-old leader later left for New York to meet commercial bankers. On Tuesday, he was received by President Reagan in the White House.

The visit has coincided with reports, confirmed by American, Argentine and international banking officials, that Argentina is not complying with a 15-month, $1.7 billion loan agreement reached last September with the International Monetary Fund. This could lead to a new financial crisis for the country, which owes $45 billion to foreign creditors and is the third-largest debtor in Latin American, after Brazil and Mexico.

Alfonsin was apparently speaking of this trouble when he said at a National Press Club luncheon Wednesday: "We hope to reach definitive agreements not only with the International Monetary Fund but also with the private banks. We have decided to make the efforts that we have to make."

Countries that do not comply with World Bank agreements must renegotiate terms and satisfy the 148-nation lending agency that the terms are being met before receiving more money. This could take several weeks. The IMF is sending a negotiating team to Buenos Aires next Monday.

In his remarks to Congress and the Press Club, the Argentine president said that austerity measures required by the IMF fell heavily on the working man. He said wages in December were lower than in December 1983 after accounting for inflation.

"The effort has to be translated into an ethical dimension that will permit the effort to be equitable," he told the Press Club.

The purpose of his trip was said to be to seek Washington's understanding and possibly more aid.

The IMF has cut off new credits to both Argentina and Brazil this year for essentially the same reason — inflation in both countries that was higher than projected in their loan agreements.

In the Argentine accord, inflation was supposed to decline to 150 percent a year by the fourth quarter of this year, or a monthly average of 14 percent. It was at 700 percent when the accord was signed. In the November-January period, monthly consumer price increases averaged 20 percent, down from the monthly average of 23 percent in the third quarter of 1984. In January the increase was 25 percent.

The IMF has already lent $500 million to Argentina and was to make the balance of the $1.7 billion available in quarterly installments beginning early next month.

Alfonsin has been reported to be seeking a $500 million "bridge" loan from the United States to help the country meet payment obligations until it returns to compliance with the IMF agreement. This might not be until June, one official said.

Argentina is about $800 million in arrears to commercial banks, whose interest has been paid up to last Nov. 4, banking sources said.

In addition, Argentina has been counting on a loan from a group of private banks. A New York banking source said that 350 banks had committed $4.12 billion of new money to Argentina. Documentation must still go to the banks before the agreement is ready for signing, however.

Military aided death squads, Salvadoran says

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A former top Salvadoran intelligence officer, speaking publicly for the first time, says El Salvador's senior military officials cooperated in creation of rightist death squads five years ago to purge the government of leftists.

Ex-Col. Roberto Santivanez, former director of ANSESAL, the forerunner to El Salvador's current intelligence agency, said senior military officials, sitting on the Committee for National Security, ordered soldiers and officers to work with death squads led by rightist leader Roberto D'Aubuisson.

Santivanez said the committee, which included current Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova, approved the cooperation in early 1980 to undermine a reformist government led by Col. Adolfo Majano and "to eliminate people they considered the enemies of the armed forces."

A wave of political violence swept El Salvador in early 1980, including the assassinations of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero and attorney general Mario Zamora. Majano and other perceived leftists were ousted by mid-1980, with some of them joining the guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government.

The interview with The Associated Press on Wednesday was Santivanez' first on-the-record account of the government's role in the political violence that has claimed an estimated 50,000 civilian lives in El Salvador over the past five years.

Last year, the Salvadoran government fired Santivanez as Salvadoran consul in New Orleans after accusing him of making similar accusations to Congress and American reporters on condition he not be identified.

Santivanez' public comments preceded a planned broadcast of an hour-long interview with him on British television Sunday, the fifth anniversary of Romero's death. Santivanez said he will receive profits from the film, which is also scheduled for release in the United States.

Santivanez is the highest-ranking Salvadoran intelligence officer to talk about the involvement of the nation's security forces in the political violence, although he said much of his information was obtained second-hand from military officers who confided in him.

Santivanez said two former Nicaraguan national guardsmen and two Salvadoran national guardsman carried out the still-unsolved Romero assassination, gunning the archbishop down one day after he urged soldiers "not to obey orders that are opposed to the law of God."

The 51-year-old former intelligence chief said that when the killers returned to National Guard headquarters, they were cheered by fellow guardsmen for what they had done. "Everybody knew," Santivanez said, adding that government security units were placed on the perimeter of the murder scene to prevent any interference.

He said the Romero killing was directly ordered by D'Aubuisson.

WORLD IN BRIEF

16 die in African protest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire on a crowd of more than 3,000 blacks trying to march from their black township to a white suburb near Port Elizabeth today, killing 16 blacks and wounding at least 22, police said.

The shooting occurred as blacks throughout South Africa gathered in memory of the 69 people shot and killed in the black community of Sharpeville 25 years ago — the bloodiest clash in years of protests against white minority rule.

Maj. Steve van Rooyena, police spokesman, said the situation in Uitenhage was "tense but under control" by midday. Uitenhage is an automobile manufacturing center near Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean.

Bolivian strikers to talk

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Leaders of a two-week-old general strike that has crippled transport and commerce say they will resume talks with the government if the president orders troops and tanks off the streets.

The army moved into the streets of the capital on Wednesday after strikers went on a rampage, setting off dynamite charges, blocking traffic and forcing all shops to close. Troopers fired shots into the air and hurled tear gas cannisters into crowds of protesters.

Soldiers and national guardsmen took up positions on roads leading to La Paz and near the presidential palace of Hernan Siles Zuazo, Bolivia's first elected president in 18 years.

Airline offices bombed

ROME (AP) — Assailants lobbed explosives in the offices of the Royal Jordanian Airlines in Rome, Athens and the Cypriot capital of Nicosia within a 90-minute period this morning, setting off blasts that injured a total of five airline employees.

There was no claim of responsibility for any of the blasts. Witnesses and police said all the explosions were caused by young dark-skinned men and all the bombers escaped.

Radical Palestinian groups and Arab states have been bitterly critical of the joint peace initiative recently announced by King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Brazilian prisoners riot

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Hundreds of heavily-armed riot police stormed the run-down Central Prison early today and quelled a rebellion by about 3,500 inmates that left seven people dead and 10 injured, authorities said.

The 9-hour uprising was sparked by "the frustration of a paraplegic prisoner annoyed that his scheduled release was delayed by bureaucratic problems," said Silvio Monteiro, state justice department spokesman.

He said inmates armed with makeshift knifes took five guards hostage, occupied four of nine wings of the prison, and set blankets on fire Wednesday evening at the jail in a poor neighborhood of this city of 9 million.

Polling turnout sparse

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Election officials reported a sparse turnout at heavily guarded polling places today for a referendum on the rule of Gen. Hussain Mohammad Ershad. A bomb exploded in the capital, killing one person and injuring two.

Opposition leaders, seeking an end to martial law and a transition to democratic rule under a caretaker government, urged a boycott of the referendum and a general strike. They termed the referendum a farce.

A victory for Ershad, who came to power in a bloodless coup three years ago, was considered a foregone conclusion. He has been quoted as saying he would consider a 'yes' vote of more than 50 percent a vote of confidence.

Vitamins seem to modify risk of smoking

Dear Dr. Solomon: Every time I see my doctor, he tells me that smoking and drinking can cause cancer. What I would like to know is whether there is anything that a person can do about it. Some people have the willpower necessary to stop smoking and drinking, but others don't. Aren't there certain foods that such a person can eat that would give him at least a little protection? — Mr. T.K., Augusta, Me.

Dear Mr. K.: I can sympathize with people who are addicted to smoking or who consume alcohol to excess. I should point out, however, that there are treatments for both of these conditions and I would urge anyone who has such a problem to explore whatever treatment might be available in his or her community.

Having said that, I should add that Dr. David Schottenfeld, of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, has reported that vitamin A and C appear to modify the risk of smoking and drinking in regard to the development of cancer of the oral cavity and of the larynx.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember that when I was a kid, I used to get stomach cramps sometimes when I had to go to school. Now my son seems to have the same problem. When I got older, the pain disappeared. Is it likely that the same thing will happen with my son? — Mr. W.W., Columbia, S.C.

Dear Mr. W.: Dr. Steven R. Poole, of the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Denver, says that one-third of adults who had recurrent abdominal pain as children are symptom-free; an addtional one-third continue to have similar symptoms; and the remaining one-third no longer have the abdominal pain but develop other psycho-physiologic problems.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is insect allergy uncommon? — Mr. A.I., Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Mr. I.: Severe allergic reactions to bee and wasp stings are not uncommon. The local toxic reaction and discomfort that usually occur following an insect sting is not generally considered to be allergic. IgE medicated (allergic) reactions induce symptoms such as nettlerash, running nose and eyes, swelling of the throat, attacks of asthma, and in severe cases fainting.

Should you be highly sensitive to bee or wasp stings, you may become unconscious within a short space of time. Immediate action should be taken to get you expert medical treatment preferably at the nearest hospital.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that you can only tell if a person has Alzheimer's disease after he is dead? If it is true, how do you explain that doctors are diagnosing people before they are dead? — Luke, Dover, Del.

Dear Luke: An absolute diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease can be made only by autopsy. During life, the diagnosis is made by excluding all other causes of the loss of mental functioning, such as the presence of a tumor, a thyroid gland disorder, various deficiencies, and syphilis that affects the nervous system.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've always been told that fat people have a greater chance of having gallstones than thin people. Is this also true in relation to the risk of getting cancer of the gallbladder? — Emma, Peoria, Ill.

Dear Emma: Both carcinoma of the gallbladder and the development of gallstones are more likely to occur in patients who are overweight.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to know what foods should be included in the diet so that a person would get enough magnesium. — Jody, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Jody: The principal dietary sources of magnesium include dairy products, cereals and nuts, and green, leafy vegetables. Magnesium absorption may also be affected by the person's calcium intake and vitamin D.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a person is unable to tolerate milk, what kind of symptoms will he have? And how soon after he has milk or some kind of a milk product, will he become aware of these symptoms? — Mr. V.L., Gary, Indiana.

Dear Gary: People who cannot tolerate products that contain lactose may experience symptoms of bloating, gas, abdominal pain, and diarrhea. In general, the symptoms occur from about 15 minutes to three hours after the person has consumed milk or some other lactose-containing product.

I should point out that lactose intolerance is not an all-or-nothing affair. I have had patients who could consume large amounts of milk or milk products before experiencing any ill effects, while other patients would have severe symptoms and have to cut out all such products from their diets.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What mechanisms cause allergies? — Mr. M.A., Daytona Beach, Fla.

Dear Mr. A.: Allergy is an unusual reaction or sensitivity to substances that do not bother most people.

IgE mediated allergy — Following exposure to common environmental allergens, the allergic individual produces a special type of antibody, called Immunoglobulin E, or IgE.

The healthy individual has a very low level of IgE in his blood while patients with certain allergic conditions, such as hay fever, allergic asthma, and some forms of eczema, have high IgE levels.

In the human body, certain cells called mast cells and basophils are involved in allergic reactions. IgE, produced as a result of repeated allergenic stimulation, attaches to the surface of theses cells and subsequent binding of the allergen triggers a biochemical reaction, leading to the release of different substances. These substances cause a build-up of fluid in the tissue and contraction of the smooth muscles. Depending on the route of entry of the allergen and where the reaction takes place, different symptoms will occur.

From the patients I treated, my clinical observation was that if the reaction took place in the nose and eyes, hay fever might result, while asthma may result if the chest is affected. Eczema may appear when the skin is affected.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am recovering from a myocardial infarction, and my doctor has suggested that I give some consideration to going into group therapy. Is there any evidence that this kind of treatment is of any value for someone like myself? — Lennie, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Lennie: Therapy groups can be helpful in the kind of situation you describe. A therapy group can provide specific information to patients as well as peer support. They may also be effective in decreasing depression and increasing the opportunities for socialization. Dr. Joel J. Wallack, of Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, maintains that such a group can be effective in easing the psychosocial effects of the myocardial infarction.

The rationale for a therapy group is the realization that psychological factors often have a more lasting effect on a patient who has had a heart attack than does the physical disability. For example, the decision as to whether a person will return to work following a heart attack depends more upon how the patient looks upon his illness than it does on the actual seriousness of his disease. The same holds true in regard to the resumption of sexual activities, a decision that may be influenced by the spouse's concerns as well as those of the patient.

Some patients who become part of a therapy group may also require individual counseling on occasion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son was born with undescended testes and he is now eight months of age. The pediatrician is recommending surgery after he has had his first birthday. I don't like the idea of an operation, and I would just like to know what would be so terrible if we left the condition alone for a while. — Mrs. N.U., Yonkers, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. U.: Dr. Robert Kay, of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, recommends that undescended testes be surgically repaired when the child is one to two years of age. Undescended testes that are not repaired may lead to infertility and malignancy; why cancer develops is not known.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My gynelcologist recommends a Pap smear for all of his patients. Is this something that everyone recommends routinely, or is it really as good as my gyneclolgist says it is? — Mrs. S.K., Dallas, Texas

Dear Mrs. K.: I don't know how good your gyneclolgist says a Pap smear is, but the fact that he recommends it indicates that he does believe it is important. If you agree that preventing death from cervical cancer is important, then I would say that the Pap smear is very important.

For Joshua, Newark, Del.: People who do not smoke or drink rarely get cancer of the head or neck. Moreover, a person who is cured of a head or neck cancer but who continues to smoke and drink is likely to get another cancer. This is one of many examples of how a change in lifestyles can have a significant impact on a person's health.

For Mrs. E.G., Davenport, Iowa: There is no single laboratory test that will definitely diagnose the presence of rheumatoid arthritis.

For Tony, Portsmouth, New Hampshire: Eating fruits with the skin will provide more fiber than drinking fruit juice. Vegetables should also be eaten with the edible skin in order to increase the intake of fiber.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Star-Telegram wins award for public service reporting

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Fort Worth Star-Telegram took top honors in the public service category of the National Headliner Awards and a Detroit Free Press reporter won the investigative reporting category.

The Star-Telegram's articles, reported by Mark Thompson, led to a U.S. Army probe into a design flaw in military helicopters that caused the death of 250 servicemen over 17 years, contest officials said Wednesday.

Thompson detailed a phenomenon known as "mast bumping," in which the rotor blades of the helicopter can chop through the passenger compartment.

Dolly Katz of the Detroit Free Press won for a series of articles on the cases of 205 physicians who went before a state regulatory panel between 1977 and 1982 for alleged violations of Michigan laws.

The series led to a change in Michigan law regarding medical care, said Herb Brown, chairman of the 51-year-old National Headliner Awards committee.

The contest's judging panel, comprised of newspaper editors and publishers from across the country, also gave a special citation to the Los Angeles Times for outstanding endeavor in communications for its coverage of the 1984 Olympic games.

Brown said other winners chosen from among 1,200 total entries in the print division were:

— Outstanding news reporting by a newspaper with circulation below 50,000: Michele Lesie of The Journal, Lorain, Ohio, for "Why Jenny Died," which told the story of a talented 17-year-old who committed suicide;

— Outstanding news reporting by a newspaper with circulation between 50,000 and 150,000: Greta Tilley, Greensboro News and Record, Greensboro, N.C., for a look inside the world of the mentally ill;

— Outstanding news reporting by a newspaper with a circulation over 150,000: William Marimow, The Philadelphia Inquirer, for a series which detailed stories of innocent civilians who were mauled by the city police department's K-9 patrol;

— Consistently outstanding local interest column: Joel McNally, The Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee, Wis., for his column, "The Innocent Bystander;"

— Consistently outstanding special column: Dennis McDougal, Los Angeles Times, for his column, "On The Radio;"

Dentist develops plastic-coating for filling cavities in back teeth

NEW YORK (AP) — A new method for filling some cavities without pain or anesthesia by essentially plastic-coating the teeth is showing early promise in a trial with patients, a researcher says.

By using a composite material to fill in the hole, then covering the tooth with a clear plastic sealant, decay can be stopped without drilling into the sensitive portion of the tooth, according to results of a two-year study of 62 patients at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta.

"I'm trying to minimize trauma for the nerve of the tooth and also for the patient, especially the young patient who might develop a lot of fear," said Dr. Eva J. Mertz-Fairhurst, associate professor in the department of restorative dentistry at the college.

The minimal drilling required for the technique is only on the surface of the tooth and usually requires no anesthesia, she said Wednesday. But if the tooth is so decayed that it is sensitive to cold water or a rush of air, anesthesia will be needed to carry out the procedure, she said.

Her study, to be presented today in Las Vegas at a meeting of the International Association for Dental Research, deals with cavities in the pits and fissures of the back teeth. Fluoridation has reduced cavities elsewhere in the mouth and most cavities now occur on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth, she said in a telephone interview.

In the usual filling procedure, silver-colored amalgam is implanted after drilling has removed the decaying portions of the tooth and shaped a hole to hold the filling, she said. Her approach uses a composite material, a mix of ingredients like plastic and ceramic particles, quartz and other fillers, plus a chemical that will grab onto the outer portion of the tooth to hold the filling in place.

The drilling on the tooth surface helps the bonding process, she said.

Although decay-causing bacteria are left in the tooth, they starve because the composite material and the sealant cut off the supply of nutrients they get from food in the mouth, she said.

Amalgam fillings sometimes develop tiny leaks that allow decay to start again within the tooth, but Ms. Mertz-Fairhurst said her procedure should prevent leakage.

So far in her study, the new fillings have held up as well as standard fillings placed in the same patients and the cavities have not enlarged beneath them. She hopes to study the patients for six years.

Dr. Joyce Reese, health scientist administrator in the caries and restorative materials program at the National Institute of Dental Research, said this week the new method is innovative.

"I think her preliminary data is certainly very promising," Ms. Reese said. "We certainly would want a longer period of time to observe this."

If the new method proves successful, it will conserve tooth structure that now is removed for the filling, Ms. Reese said. Besides, it is "certainly more comfortable for the patient," she said.

Libby Riddles, the first woman ever to win the 1,000-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Race, holds two of the huskies which helped her win. The 28-year-old Alaskan crossed the finish line on Nome's Front Street Wednesday after 18 days of traveling across some of the state's wildest country.

First woman wins Iditarod sled race

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Libby Riddles had to endure 1,100 miles of blizzards, sub-zero temperatures and screaming winds to become the first woman ever to win the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

The 28-year-old musher from western Alaska already has plans for part of her $50,000 in prize money — buy a ticket to Hawaii.

But first, she said, "I've got to hire a dog-sitter."

Ms. Riddles and her 13-dog team cruised into the finish chute on Nome's Front Street on Wednesday at 9:20 a.m. after 18 days, 20 minutes and 17 seconds on the trail, the fourth-slowest Iditarod run on record.

Grabbing second-place and $30,000 in prize money was Duane "Dewey" Halverson of Trapper Creek. Halverson, Ms. Riddles' former boyfriend from their hometown in St. Cloud, Minn., arrived under the log arch finish line with an elapsed time of 18 days, two hours, 45 minutes and 36 minutes.

Standing on a platform, Ms. Riddles clutched a bouquet of yellow roses, which quickly withered in the 15-degree temperatures.

It was Ms. Riddles' third Iditarod. She placed 18th in 1980 and 20th in 1981. "Now I could die and it would be all right," she said.

The dangers of the Iditarod give a musher cause to contemplate dying. Ms. Riddles started her surge ahead of the pack three days before the finish, at Shaktoolik, when she pushed her team into a howling gale that nobody else dared challenge.

And she spent a "cold and miserable" night alone on the ice of Norton Sound, knowing it was was her only chance to beat the fast team driven by Rick Swenson.

Ms. Riddles used the same dog team her boyfriend and training partner Joe Garnie used last year to place third in the Iditarod.

BUICK

IT'LL DO WONDERS FOR YOU.

Tired of driving a dull car, but unwilling to hand over a king's ransom for something more exciting? Then consider the '85 Buick Regal for a moment.

There's a lot to think about. Like its clean, uncluttered lines, handsome interior, and many standard features. Hard to believe that it doesn't cost a lot more? Wait until you drive it. The smooth, quiet ride alone is worth the price of admission.

The '85 Buick Regal. It could positively improve your image. So what are you waiting for?
