Deputies get their man

BIG SPRING — An early morning foot chase by two sheriff's deputies for a local man later arrested on a charge of aggravated robbery ended when the deputies got their man.

Miles Ray Anguino, 24, 1308 Wright St., was arrested after being pursued for several blocks by Howard County deputies Woodie Howell and Jimmy Wallace, a sheriff's department news release reported.

The officers were called to the 7-Eleven on Wasson Road by a city police radio dispatch advising that an aggravated robbery was in progress at the convenience store. According to the report, when the deputies pulled into the parking lot they saw a Hispanic man standing inside the door of the store. The man spotted the sheriff's vehicle, left the store and fled the scene on foot, the report said.

The deputies gave chase on foot, yelling for the man to stop, but he continued to run until he was caught on Randolph Street, blocks away from the store, the news release reported.

Deputies reported they were required to subdue Anguino because he resisted arrest, the report said. Anguino was later transferred to the custody of city police officers.

Dropout bill eyed

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Teens nationwide would have to hit the books if they want to hit the roads under a proposed bill that would require states to revoke the driver's licenses of dropouts or risk losing federal highway funds.

Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Ill., introduced a bill Thursday that would revoke driving privileges from teen-agers who drop out of school. The bill, co-sponsored by Rep. Harley Staggers Jr., D-W. Va., is modeled after a West Virginia law passed last year.

West Virginia officials have touted the law's success, claiming it encouraged 2,200 teen-agers to return to school.

But a 17-year-old junior high dropout who lost his license in May is challenging the law. A Kanawha County Circuit judge was to decide today whether the teen-ager must give up his license.

Storm damages homes

HOUSTON (AP) — A preliminary survey by the American Red Cross shows that more than 1,600 homes were damaged by Hurricane Chantal this week.

About 500 homes in Harris County, 500 in Galveston County, more than 500 in Brazoria County and about 100 homes in Chambers County were affected by the storm, according to the Greater Houston Area Red Cross.

Ann Bartholomew, a disaster services associate in the Red Cross Washington office, called the damage "relatively light." "The damage could have been much worse than it was," she said.

Local S&L changes name

By BRADLEY WORRELL

BIG SPRING — A savings and loan business with two local branches recently changed its name, and officials with the business today stressed the change is in name only.

The two local offices of Consolidated Federal Savings recently changed their name to Bluebonnet Savings Bank FSB, but a spokesperson questioned about possible changes at the offices replied, "There should be absolutely none."

"We're not talking about management change, a financial change. It's a name change only," said Wanda Haggard, head of marketing with the institution's

S&Ls await bailout decision

By DAVID SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's $159 billion bailout of the savings and loan industry awaits final passage, with administration and congressional negotiators in a fragile agreement on how to finance the landmark bill.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Budget Director Richard Darman joined negotiators at the bargaining table late Thursday night, giving the pact their tentative approval and all but lifting a veto threat from Bush.

"Obviously we've only had an opportunity to make a quick review, but based on that review...and in the spirit of compromise in which the president sent us here...we accept," Brady said.

The Senate was scheduled to take up the agreement today, with leaders of both parties predicting it would win the 60 votes needed to clear a procedural hurdle before adoption.

House action was to follow, but Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the powerful chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and others on his panel declared their opposition to the pact.

Democrats said Republicans would need to compensate with a strong showing to ensure passage in time to allow Congress to com-

Big Spring's garbage goes high tech

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Garbage disposal technology in Big Spring ranks among the best in Texas, thanks in part to a landfill baler acquired nearly five years ago.

The Signal Mountain Baler, the first of its kind in Texas, was purchased by the city after studies indicated the conventional landfill would prove unable to hold the flow of garbage more than a few years.

"In 1983 I became concerned about the life expectancy of the landfill," Decell said. "We were concerned enough to do a study, and found it had only about two more years of life left if we managed it carefully."

A search for a new landfill site began, but costs soon became prohibitive.

Recycling trash pays

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Paper, cans, bottles and other trash are being discarded in record amounts across the United States. As communities are forced to comply with increasingly stringent environmental protection laws, more and more are turning to recycling as a means of reducing the total amount of solid waste.

"Many communities, especially on the East Coast, have mandatory recycling at the curbside," said Tom Decell, Big Spring's director of public works. "Consumers sort their trash into bags of glass, cans and so forth."

Big Spring has not been under pressure to recycle waste in the past, primarily because the baler increased the life of the city's present landfill, Decell said. However, he said the city is looking into long-term plans for recycling because of new laws

• RECYCLE page 3-A

"It would cost us $750,000 in closing costs to the old landfill, without even figuring the cost of a new site," Decell said. "When we began looking for a new site, we found the only place we could move that was geologically sound was north and east of the city. We would have had to purchase 200-250 acres, at the closest probably 10 or 15 miles from the city."

"If we had five trucks making five trips four days a week, at an operating cost of about $1.09 per mile, that adds up to a lot of money over a 10-year period," he said. "The long-term costs of moving the site were astronomical."

Decell then began looking for other means of disposing of the wastes, but construction times and high expenses ruled out most of them. Then Decell found the baler.

"Essentially it takes commercial and residential garbage in loose form and compacts it into a bale about 3½ by 5 feet that weighs about 2,200 pounds," Decell said. "It's extremely cost effective."

Decell, the city manager and several councilmen journeyed to Wives more likely to file for divorce

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

A study released by the National Center for Health reveals that women are more likely to file for divorce before their husbands.

Of the 1.8 million divorce cases filed nationwide in 1987, the report found some 62 percent of them were initiated by women.

Local statistics obtained from the district clerk's office showed much the same trend, with wives filing about 66 percent of the 162 cases filed from January 1 through June 30.

"It's hard to generalize, because each case is different," attorney Wayne Burns said. "I don't think it's necessarily true today, but several years ago it was more polite to let the lady file first. It was thought less of a stigma on her if she was the one to file."

"Divorce today doesn't represent any real stigma, but perhaps the man is still inclined to let the lady go first," he said. District Judge Jim Gregg agreed.

"It probably goes back to when we had 'fault' divorces," he said. "To obtain a divorce, you had to prove a wrongdoing had been committed, and it was simply more likely the woman would file against her husband. Now we have a 'no-fault' system where anyone who wants to can get a divorce, but it used to be a little more stigma on the person filed against. It's probably more of a custom than anything else."

But city attorney Jean Shotts said the divorce is often initiated by the wife because of financial needs.

"A lot of times the wife is forced to file because the husband has the means of generating the income, so if she wants financial support for herself and her children, she's really almost forced to file first," he

Report: Rural Texas banks used to launder drug money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural East Texas banks, restaurants and body shops are frequently used to launder drug money, while narcotics traffickers are using shrimpers' boats to move illegal drugs, according to federal prosecutors.

A report released by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh Thursday also said the opportunity for public corruption at the local level in East Texas is "clearly present."

A heavily wooded area, the East Texas terrain is also "excellent for secluded marijuana growth and especially well-suited for clandestine labs to produce methamphetamines," said the report, based on information provided by the region's U.S. attorney, Robert J. Wortham.

Federal prosecutors elsewhere in Texas also describe in the report their problems with drug traffickers. The study includes reports from all 93 U.S. attorneys nationwide.

"The existence of clandestine laboratories in the Northern District of Texas continues to be a major problem for all law enforcement agencies," said the section by U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins.

The North Texas district also has organized groups of cocaine traffickers, including those run by "American nationals, Mexican nationals, Colombians, Cubans and Jamaicans, with the Dallas-Fort Worth area serving as a transshipment point," the report said.

Crack cocaine abuse, the report said, is growing so rapidly as a street crime problem it is difficult to know how much worse it will become in the next two years, the report said.

The report said Jamaican posses in North Texas are also involved in firearms trafficking, and some possess have reportedly told their guards to shoot any law enforcement officer who raids a "stash" or "dope" house.

"It has been reported that in many cases a gun is held to a customer's head until the drug transaction is completed," the report said, predicting the legalization of parimutuel gambling will intensify Jamaican gang problems.

Although cocaine and crack are widely regarded as major drug problems in the Northern District, Collins said too few people realize the impact amphetamines and methamphetamines have in the area.

Over the past four years, law enforcement agencies have found it increasingly hard to locate and shut down speed laboratories, Collins said. He said clandestine laboratories have become large scale operations, rather than the one-person operations they used to be.

"This is a drug that does not depend on some foreign imported substances," Collins said. "So there is no way you can control the production of speed by intercepting freight substances at the border."

In the Southern District, the report by U.S. Attorney Henry K. Oncken said the immediate Houston area has a high potential for money laundering activity, and that "air routes are readily available from Houston to the Grand Cayman Islands and other notorious bank secrecy countries."

A Federal Reserve analysis indicates a $1.6 billion cash surplus in the banks serviced by the San Antonio district of the Fed, with 88 percent of the surplus in banks within 15 miles of the Mexican border in the Rio Grande Valley.

"This is particularly interesting in view of the rural nature of this area and the depressed state of its economy," the report said.

In East Texas, the report said marine smuggling is a substantial problem in the Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange urban areas.

"This includes the use of cargo ships and freighters to transport controlled substances as well as the extensive use of shrimp boats to import controlled substances," the study said.

Boren says oil incentives necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. David Boren says it's "long past time to take action" to increase domestic oil and gas production, and tax incentives that promote drilling are one key for tapping previously unrecoverable reserves.

"With the level of imported crude oil and refined petroleum products rapidly approaching 50 percent of our consumption, it is vitally important to increase our domestic production," Boren, chairman of the Senate Finance subcommittee on energy and agricultural taxation, said Thursday.

Boren, D-Okla., said the domestic rig count has fallen more than 82 percent since 1982, and production in Oklahoma alone has declined more than 30 million barrels between 1985 and 1987.

With the rig count falling below

Business

900 active rigs, Boren told the committee: "It is vitally important that we encourage additional exploration to replace our dwindling reserves."

"When we talk about the health of the domestic oil industry, we're also talking about the health of the nation and national security concerns," Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp testified at the committee's hearing on the proposed Enhanced Oil and Gas Recovery Tax Act of 1989.

The tax incentives are aimed at increasing domestic production by tapping existing reserves that previously were unrecoverable, given today's oil prices and technology.

"Almost one-half of all the oil ever discovered in the continental United States is still in the ground. We know where the reserves are. We simply have to find a way to get them out of the ground," Boren said.

Sharp said enhanced recovery projects accounted for 54.6 percent of oil production in Texas in 1987.

Texas account for 23.6 percent of the nation's crude oil production, Sharp said.

"In fact, if Texas were a member of OPEC, we'd be producing more than 10 of the 13 OPEC member countries," Sharp said.

Yet with the decline in domestic drilling, he said, new enhanced recovery projects have also declined.

"The capital costs are just too high and the prospect of low price oil too strong to take the risk," Sharp said.

Operator wants to bronze tree

AUSTIN (AP) — If the struggling Treaty Oak dies, an Austin foundry operator wants to cast it in bronze and replant the metal replica — which could weigh 15 tons — on the site where the tree has stood for centuries.

"The city owns the tree. All I can do is plant the seed of its rebirth in bronze and hope the city or some public-spirited people from the private sector get behind the idea and help us make it a reality," said John Kasson II.

Kasson guesses the project would cost more than $1 million. The live oak, estimated to be 500 years old and having a branch spread of 110 feet, was poisoned with the herbicide Velpar last spring.

Police have accused Paul S. Cullen, 45, of Elroy, with poisoning the tree, allegedly as part of a ritual. He remains jailed on a charge of felony criminal mischief.

Kasson said he hopes the tree, which is being treated by foresters from around the country, recovers.

"This is not the time to bury Treaty Oak. We need to keep praying and pulling for the tree to heal. No statue can take the place of nature," he said.

But if the tree dies, Kasson suggests, "We ought to consider how to memorialize it. I can't think of a better way than to raise it again in its own image, let its bronzed icon reign for a thousand years."

The tree, as legend has it, served as the site for a treaty signing between Stephen F. Austin and Indians. The city bought the tree in 1937. Since its poisoning, donors such as Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot have funded efforts to save the tree.

Foresters have replaced the soil around the tree and tried other methods to save it. The oak is putting out its fourth set of leaves in an attempt to flush itself of the chemical.

Kasson said he plans to make his proposal a formal presentation to the City Council if the Treaty Oak dies.

Bush promises to explore fully Iran offer to help

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today he would explore "to the fullest" an offer by Iran's new leader to help find a solution to the hostage crisis in Lebanon, but emphasized he did not want to raise the hopes of the hostages' families.

"This is a brutal process," Bush said of the hostages' plight.

One day after terrorists suspended a threatened death sentence against hostage Joseph Cicippio, Bush told reporters, "I was certainly pleased that the brutal murder that had been threatened was set aside."

"I don't know the total role of any individual country in that area in all of this but when you see a statement that offers hope for the return of our hostages, I want to explore it to the fullest," the president said.

Iran's new president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said during a weekly prayer sermon today at Tehran University, "These bullyings, arrogant approaches and tyranny will not solve the problems. Come let us approach the problem reasonably. We too will help solve the problems there, so the people of the region can live in peace and harmony."

"I tell the White House, the problem of Lebanon has solutions, the freeing of the hostages has solutions, reasonable, prudent solutions," Rafsanjani said in a broadcast monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus. Iran is thought to have strong influence over Shiite Moslem militants holding Americans captive.

Bush refused to confirm numerous reports that he had been prepared to order retaliatory military action if Cicippio had been killed.

"If I had made such a decision, I

"...The response I have had on my personal calls and that the secretary had on his has been heart warming. And it's come from all sectors and I have been very, very encouraged by that, and where we go from here, we'll just keep on trying."

expect this would be the last place I'd be talking about it," he said.

Bush said he had been engaged in "an extraordinarily broad exercise of diplomacy" over the last several days on behalf of the hostages. White House officials said he called upwards of a dozen world leaders to seek their help.

As for the offer from Rafsanjani, Bush said, "I am pleased about that. I don't know what it means fully, but I think the world is familiar with our policy — that there will be nothing done ever that will create a new incentive for taking somebody else hostage."

"I feel the burden of going to every end possible to try to find... the return of these Americans to their loved ones and to find out the truth about Col. (William) Higgins," a hostage reported hanged in Lebanon on Monday by kidnappers.

Asked if recent developments suggest a break in the hostage crisis, Bush said, "I'm encouraged but I don't want to get the hopes of the hostages' loved ones up once again to have those hopes dashed. "This is a brutal process where we see people paraded before cameras and the families get their hopes up. My heart is still with Mrs. Higgins."

Asked what prompted the freeze on Cicippio's death sentence, Bush said, "I like to think a broad spread appeal to nations in every corner of the globe had something to do with it. I don't know for sure. The response I have had on my personal calls and that the secretary had on his has been heart warming. And it's come from all sectors and I have been very, very encouraged by that, and where we go from administration."

U.S. Navy units remained in readiness today as reports circulated that Bush was prepared to use carrier-based aircraft from the 6th Fleet in a strike against Lebanese terrorists if any American hostages were harmed.

Television evangelist Robert Schuller, who prayed Thursday with Bush in the Oval Office for hostages, said the president had "made it clear he would take appropriate action" if another hostage was killed.

The New York Times reported today that Bush had "all but decided" to attack terrorist strongholds here, we'll just keep on trying."

Asked if Cicippio deserved the full backing of the United States, in view of the fact that he ignored U.S. warnings to leave Lebanon, Bush acknowledged that, indeed, Americans had been urged not to stay in that strife-torn country.

Even so, Bush said, "he's an American. He's entitled to the concern of the president, of these senators, of everybody in our in eastern Lebanon, including the Baalbek base of 2,000 Iranian revolutionary guards, if a hostage had been killed.

A White House spokesman reached at home Thursday night, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said, "To my knowledge that is not true," but added, "We just don't discuss those sorts of things."

Cicippio's captors indicated he still could be killed "within days" unless Israel releases unspecified Palestinian and Lebanese guerrillas as well as the Moslem cleric kidnapped by Israeli commandos, Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid.

Asked Thursday if Bush would recall any ships, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said: "I urge everyone to keep in mind, especially in regard to the ships, that we still have a serious problem in the Middle East."

Asked whether the United States was considering asking Israel to extradite Obeid for possible involvement in the kidnapping of Higgins, Fitzwater said only that the Justice Department "is looking into the case."

A law enforcement source said the FBI is reviewing laws that allow the arrest and prosecution of terrorists for the kidnapping and murder of U.S. citizens overseas.

High tech

Alabama and Georgia for a hands-on look at some of the machines, and he and the mayor also visited a Wisconsin baler. The inspections convinced Decell of the baler's efficiency.

"The trips proved to us that baling was the most cost-effective way to go," he said. "It would save us about $750,000 in closing costs, and probably about $2.2 million in the long run."

The city council voted to begin construction of the baler, and in March, 1984, the "city got into the baling business," said Decell.

"We developed the specifications for the baler, and acquired an 11-acre site with a 10,000 square-foot building contiguous to the existing landfill," Decell said.

A year later, the baler began operation. Essentially, garbage is dumped, either by municipal garbage trucks or by citizens, onto a concrete "tipping floor." A motorized loader then maneuvers the waste onto a conveyor belt which transports it into a hopper. Hydraulics power a ram which compresses the refuse into a rectangular-shaped bale. Another machine wraps the newly-formed bale with wire to prevent it from expanding, and ejects it out of the machine.

"As the bales are kicked out the 'back door,' they're taken to the bale face and stacked," Decell said. "A conventional landfill requires six inches of dirt to be deposited on top to act as a cover every day, no matter how much garbage you deposit. With the baler, we can stack four bales high before we have to put the cover on."

The baler is not only economical, but also ecological, Decell said.

"It's virtually eliminated a perennial problem in West Texas, that of blowing garbage," he said. "It still blows a bit, but not nearly with the magnitude as before."

"We have what is called an aerial bale fill," Decell said. "Over the next 35 years, we'll build a 'mountain' of bales 50 feet high."

Decell also said the baler may be indirectly responsible for helping supply Big Spring with additional, more economical energy.

"At some point in solid waste management, refused energy production will become so perfected that it will become a viable means of reducing the mass of solid waste," he said. "When it comes — next year or five years from now — all we'll have to do is scrape off the dirt and start using the bales to make energy."

Although only one other Texas city, Houston, currently has a baler, Decell said he has heard from interested parties throughout the country. "I've had contacts from all over the United States," he said. "I've heard from people in California, and a man from Montreal, Canada, flew in here and spent a day with us viewing the site and discussing its construction. I sometimes get two or three inquiries a week about the baler, and last year I sent a bunch of information to Austin."

The site will contain some 4 million pounds of garbage, Decell said, not counting large commercial refuse like rubber tires and sections of machinery. The baler does not accept dead animals, chemical or other hazardous wastes, Decell said.

The machinery has operated relatively smoothly, primarily due to the dedication of its keepers, Decell said.

"It is a huge, mechanized machine, so it's not without its problems," he said. "But the key to success has been the dedication of the people involved, and an aggressive preventative maintenance program."

"We're a number of years ahead of most cities in this area," Decell said. "We were fortunate that we were in a situation where we had to make a decision, and we looked for a long-term solution. The biggest single benefit is that we were able to keep the site in town and avoid all the expenses of closing the old landfill and finding a new one."

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

• Ida Mae Biddle, 47, PO Box 1335, was released on $500 after being arrested on a charge of issuance of bad checks.

• Deborah Ann Lewis, 23, 1708 S. Main St., was given 10 years probation after pleading guilty to corporate office in Dallas.

"It's a very positive mood, customers are responding well... They like it," Haggard said of the name change.

Haggard said the business made the name change because customers "couldn't relate to Consolidated Federal Savings Bank."

"Consolidation was a process we were going through rather than what we stood for," Haggard said.

The new name "communicates to the public who we are and who we serve. We're Texas, we're traditional. We want to contribute to revitalization of Texas... It's a name we want to be remembered for forever," she said.

Asked for details of the consolidation that occurred six months ago, Haggard replied, "We prefer we not rehash that, it has nothing to do with what has happened."

Haggard said she would ask the bank's chief executive officer to answer any further questions about the consolidation of six months ago or any other possible changes, but no call was received before presstime today.

Local customers first became aware of the change after the corporate office issued a letter notifying them of the change. The letter read in part: "Consolidated Federal Savings Bank has become Bluebonnet Savings Bank as a result of a six month consolidation process."

The letter advised those with questions to contact their branch manager for more information.

Landfill

can't stand up against it," Garrett said. "We were in hopes that some of these things would change."

Realizing the situation probably will not, she approached the Big Spring City Council, asking for use of this city's landfill. "All I did was ask if they would be willing to take our stuff. Of course they have a much better facility than we have," she said.

Tom Decell, Big Spring's director of public works, said he is currently doing some background work on it.

"We've not completed gathering the information that was asked by the council," he said. "Right now we're in the middle of a budget. Around the end of this month we should have had enough time to get all that."

One of the purposes behind the new regulations is water protection, said Garrett. "They phrase it: 'We'll be out of water. They say there's stuff in it that will contaminate the water.'"

Garrett said Coahoma Water Superintendent Robert Helm has been handling the technicalities. "He's been telling us about it but we were just dragging our feet," she said. The Dallas solid waste section manager for HDR Engineering, Risa Fisher, said that of about 1,100 landfills in the state, the ones affected the most will be the older ones constructed before strict state regulations and exempted by "grandfathering," as well as ones used by small municipalities that cannot afford the monitoring equipment.

All landfills will now have to abide by the new regulations.

"The feeling is most of those landfills will have to close," Fisher said. "I think the trend will be for more regionalization where counties and cities will cooperate and work together to provide solid waste disposal."

She said the federal regulations were enacted because of a lack of consistent national standards.

"There have never been any regulations on the federal level for non-hazardous waste," she said. "Across the country there's a tremendous discrepancy. In other words in some states you can get away with murder."

The USEPA has received pressure from the public because of concern for the environment, she said. "Waste disposal is a very high priority."

Divorce

said. "It's more of a financial necessity for the wife to file. The husband sitting there making a living is less likely to gain from a divorce, so he's less likely to file for one."

Shotts said he has handled cases where "wives contacted me asking 'Where can I get financial support?' and the vast majority of them end of filing for divorce to get that support."

The emotional make-up of women may also be at least partly responsible for their tendency to initiate divorce proceedings, said Burns and county attorney Hardy Wilkerson.

But Wilkerson agreed financial

"I would think that in an average relationship, the man would be more inclined not to disrupt the status quo," Burns said. "A woman would be less likely to go on indefinitely in an extremely unhappy situation."

"Women, by the time they're ready for a divorce, have just had enough," Wilkerson said. "Their tolerance is thinner... they just get tired of it. Men tend to like things the way they are; they like things more stable. Women are more accessible to change in a bad marriage, especially when they regard that change as possibly beneficial."

But Wilkerson agreed financial considerations play a part in inducing women to file for divorce before their spouses.

"The husband has financial resources to a much greater degree than the wife in many cases," he said. "It's to the woman's advantage to file to get support for herself and her children. The husband usually doesn't want to pay child support and temporary alimony, so if she wants it, she has to file for it."

"The filing itself is a mechanical process though," Wilkerson said. "A lot of factors come into play in any given situation, and every situation is unique."

that will be going into effect.

We throw away 3½ lbs. of trash per person per day in this country, Decell said, quoting EPA figures. That is 160 million tons of solid waste annually, and the amount is expected to increase 20 percent by the year 2000.

The baler in Big Spring has processed more than 400 million pounds of solid waste, Decell said, in its four years of operation, or 16,000 bales per month.

"We don't have the technology for cost-effective recycling at the baler at the present time," Decell said, but added it could be possible ble "one to five years down the road."

In the meantime, there are several local companies and organizations that are involved in recycling selected materials:

• Downtown Lions Club. Trailer at Texaco, Hwy. 87 and FM 700 for donations. Purchasing center at 1406 E. 2nd St. is open Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Newspapers, corrugated boxes, computer paper and glass jars and bottles. Phone 263-6305.

• Coors Distributing Co., South Service Rd., ¼ west of Hwy. 87. Aluminum cans. Phone 263-2113.

• Big Spring Iron and Metal, FM 350, ¼ mile north of I-20. Aluminum cans, copper, brass, radiators, car bodies, tin, old appliances, scrap iron. Phone 267-5367.

• D & A Pipe and Steel, Inc., FM 350, ½ mile north of I-20. Aluminum cans, copper, brass, radiators, car bodies, lead, stainless steel.

• West Texas Metals, N. Birdwell Lane, ½ north of I-20. Aluminum cans, copper, brass, radiators, car bodies, tin, old appliances, scrap iron.

Bailout

plete work and leave for a month-long vacation.

The administration and Congress long ago agreed on the most important elements of the landmark bill, which will close or merge hundreds of insolvent savings institutions hemorrhaging losses at an estimated $20 billion a day.

It also contains a series of what Bush labeled "never again" provisions designed to prevent the recurrence of what analysts describe as the worst financial crisis since the wave of bank failures in the 1930s.

In the key reform, savings and loan owners will be required to raise billions of dollars of their own capital to discourage risky investments and act as a cushion between future losses and government deposit insurance funds.

Thrift institutions will be channeled back into home mortgage lending and away from speculative commercial real estate ventures and high-yield, high-risk junk bonds.

The bill also gives the Justice Department $75 million a year to root out fraud at financial institutions, permits banks for the first time to buy healthy institutions in the rival thrift industry, and enacts the most sweeping restructuring of the regulatory bureaucracy in five decades.

The agency overseeing S&Ls, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, will be dismantled, with one piece wrapped into the Treasury Department and the other coming under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures commercial bank deposits.

While taxpayers will bear most of the bailout, the savings industry also is contributing through higher deposit insurance premiums.

Nation's jobless rate falls to 5.2 percent in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell one notch to 5.2 percent in July as businesses added 169,000 new jobs despite the slowing economy, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the growth was again found predominantly in the service-producing sector of the economy, which added 140,000 of the new jobs.

The civilian joblessness rate declined from the 5.3 percent reported for June. The government also revised its figures on new jobs created in June to 250,000, up from the 180,000 reported last month.

Today's report contained further evidence of persistent wage inflation.

The department said hourly earnings of production and nonsupervisory workers increased 0.8 percent in July — about twice the rate analysts had predicted — while average weekly earnings climbed by 1.7 percent. The jump in hourly earnings followed two months of modest increases.

Goods-producing industries added 29,000 new positions as construction posted a gain of 35,000 jobs, helping to offset a decline of more than 10,000 jobs in the automobile industry.

The civilian joblessness rate declined from the 5.3 percent reported for June. The government also revised its figures on new jobs created in June to 250,000, up from the 180,000 reported last month.

Manufacturing posted a modest gain of 3,000 jobs last month after three months of declines, according to the Labor Department's survey of business establishments.

In all, 117.4 million Americans were at work in non-farm jobs last month, the government said.

The average work week for production and nonsupervisory employees in private industry increased by 0.3 hours, to 34.9 hours. The factory work week held steady at 41 hours and overtime in July averaged 3.9 hours a week, up from 3.8 hours in June, the Labor Department said.

The jump in hourly earnings brought average hourly pay in the private sector to $9.70 on a seasonally adjusted basis, up from $9.62 in June.

Weekly earnings rose to an average of $338.53 from the June average of $332.85.

The government said the summer expansion of the youth labor force in the past four months has totaled about 3.1 million, about the same as recent years despite a significant drop in the youth population.

The unemployment rate fell last month despite a dip in the number of Americans at work from 117.5 million to 117.4 million. The rate fell because the 169,000 new jobs were created in a month in which the civilian labor force — the number of people who have jobs or are looking for them — fell by 146,000.

Evidence of a number of recent economic developments could be found in today's unemployment report, the first comprehensive look at the economy's performance in July.

The data showed employment in the mining industry fell by 11,000 jobs — the result of a coal strike in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky that also has led to wildcat walkouts in other coal-producing states.

Charges 'almost irrational'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich said today the Democratic congressman threatening to expand allegations of possible misconduct against him is "almost irrational."

Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas on Thursday made public a letter to the House ethics committee in which he predicted his original complaint "may have only scratched the surface."

"There could well be over 200 additional instances of potentially unethical, illegal or criminal conduct by Mr. Gingrich," Alexander said, declining to give reporters specific information on the allegations.

"I think in terms of the substance of the charges you have an almost irrational Democrat in Bill Alexander, who is wandering around wildly saying things and I am comfortable after the ethics committee investigates it that they are going to say there is nothing to the charges," Gingrich, R-Ga., said on "Good Morning America."

Gingrich, who filed charges that led to the resignation of Jim Wright, D-Texas, as House speaker, said "a number of very powerful Democrats said they were going to destroy me, that they would get even and, in that sense, of course I'm battling for my (political) life."

'Hypersegregation' affects blacks

CHICAGO (AP) — Blacks in mayor cities face multiple forms of racial discrimination, which has caused a distinct, underachieving society to evolve, a study has found.

The authors of the study released Thursday by the University of Chicago call such multi-layer discrimination "hypersegregation."

Professors Douglas Massey and Nancy Denton say they found that hypersegregation exists in 10 cities, and that those cities account for 29 percent of the country's urban black population. Chicago was found to be the most hypersegregated city.

"There is a small set of cities in the United States where blacks experience more extreme segregation than believed in the past," said Massey, a professor of sociology and director of the school's Population Research Center.

"While the cities are small in number, they house a relatively large percentage of blacks."

In the study — published in today's editions of Demography, the journal of Washington-based Population Association of America — Massey and Denton focused on five measures of segregation.

Treasury unveils borrowing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department says it plans to borrow $39.5 billion from the public next week in a series of debt auctions being held to replenish the government's depleted coffers.

Treasury officials said Wednesday the auctions are contingent on passage by Congress this week of a bill to raise the limit on federal borrowing by $70 billion to a record $2.87 trillion.

The administration has warned lawmakers that failure to boost the debt ceiling before the August recess would force the government into an unprecedented default on its bills on Aug. 15.

Treasury Undersecretary Robert Gauder told reporters Wednesday that the debt auctions scheduled for next week are contingent on final passage of the increase in the debt limit.

ABA supports Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American Bar Association committee that includes former Nixon and Carter administration officials urged Congress on Thursday to abandon efforts to outlaw desecration of the American flag.

The committee said the nation's commitment to freedom of expression will be damaged by any attempt to reverse a

Supreme Court ruling that Americans have a right to burn the flag as a political protest.

"All through human history, tyrannies have tried to enforce obedience by prohibiting disrespect for the symbols of their power," the task force said. "The American flag commands respect and love because of our country's adherence to its values

Disease spreading across the country

NEW YORK (AP) — A childhood ailment transmitted easily in day-care centers and schools began moving across the eastern United States early this year and has produced scattered outbreaks across the nation, health officials say.

The ailment, called hand, foot and mouth disease, is not usually dangerous, but is quite contagious and can make children sick and uncomfortable for several days. Dr. Michael Katz, head of pediatrics at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York, said Thursday. There is no treatment.

"The information we've had definitely shows a picture of large-scale activity this year when compared with previous years," said Mark Pallansch of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Pallansch said that precise estimates of the prevalence of the disease are not possible because doctors are not required to report it.

He said the CDC began receiving calls from the Southeast in February, and that the disease has spread since then. It has moved up the East Coast at least as far as Boston through the summer," he said. Scattered reports have come in from the Midwest, Utah and California.

The illness is caused by a strain of coxsackie virus, one of about 65 so-called enteroviruses that are a common source of infection. Hand, foot and mouth disease is characterized by sores in the mouth and blisters on the hands and feet.

The condition usually disappears within a week, Pallansch said. It can sometimes be more dangerous in newborns or in a fetus exposed to it in the womb, he said.

The risk of harm to fetuses is small, said Katz. "It is better for a pregnant woman not to be infected with anything," said Katz, but coxsackie virus is not known to cause serious problems.

Maryland was one of the states hit by the virus. "This was certainly higher than last year," said Dr. Diane Dwyer of the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene in Baltimore.

Clusters of cases appeared in some child-care centers, she said. "We educated people about its mode of transmission and recommended that people stay out of child care until the skin rash was crusted over," she said.

Dr. Virginia Dale of the New Jersey Department of Health in Trenton said, "Certainly this summer we've received many more calls than the summer before, so it's my impression it's quite common at the moment."

World

Court to hear abortion case

MONTREAL (AP) — The Supreme Court of Canada is returning from summer vacation for an emergency hearing to decide the case of a Quebec secretary who is pregnant and battling her former boyfriend to have an abortion.

Chantal Daigle, 21, has been barred from having an abortion by an injunction obtained by the ex-boyfriend, former nightclub bouncer Jean-Guy Tremblay. She will be in her 22nd week of pregnancy when the Supreme Court hears her case on Tuesday and any decision, unless it is soon, could be moot.

Canada has been without an abortion law since January 1988, when the Supreme Court ruled that procedures required for approval under the law infringed on a woman's rights.

That decision and a related one a year later left abortion as an issue between a woman and her doctor.

This summer, however, a series of cases in provincial courts brought attention to the legal void and turned abortion into a pressing national issue.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has said Parliament will confront the issue on return from summer recess but will not be rushed into a decision.

Report blames police errors

LONDON (AP) — A government report today said inadequate police control led to the deaths of 95 people who were crushed in a surging crowd at a soccer match, and it recommended new safety measures for all soccer stadiums.

After the report was released, South Yorkshire Chief Constable Peter Wright, the top police officer in Sheffield, where the disaster occurred, resigned, saying he accepted full responsibility for the police action.

The 71-page report on Britain's worst sports disaster said authorities at the Hillsborough Stadium in Sheffield failed to recognize how big their job would be or how to cope with problems that developed during the opening minutes of an FA Cup semifinal on April 15.

Drinking by "an unruly minority" of fans and "confused and inadequate" signs and tickets issued by the soccer clubs aggravated the problem, the report said. But it placed the primary blame on top police officials.

"Neither their handling of problems on the day nor their account of it in evidence showed the qualities of leadership expected of their rank. The main reason for the disaster was the failure of police control," the report said.

China won't jail intellectuals

BEIJING (AP) — China said today that its crackdown on dissent will not endanger intellectuals, but it also announced that a prominent dissident holed up in the U.S. Embassy has been fired from an academic board.

Also today, the government declined to comment on a report that senior leader Deng Xiaoping is seriously ill with prostate cancer. The official Xinhua News Agency's Hong Kong office described the report as a mere rumor.

An unsigned commentary in the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily said China will continue to respect its intellectuals' knowledge and talent, even though some participated in the recent pro-democracy movement that the government calls a "counter-revolutionary rebellion."

Laid side by side, U.S. tax forms stretch more than 250 feet

WASHINGTON — What do your tax dollars buy? More forms. House Ways and Means Oversight subcommittee chairman J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, left, and Rep. Richard Schulze, R-Pa., sit in a committee room filled with 392 different tax forms during a meeting with the IRS commission on Capitol Hill Thursday. Pickle, who had the paper positioned, was trying to stress the need for simplification of tax forms.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hearing room of the House Ways and Means Committee was strung Thursday with a copy of every federal tax form — 392 of them — to make a point.

"Stacked one on top of the other, these forms are thicker than the D.C. yellow pages," complained Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the subcommittee that oversees the Internal Revenue Service. Hanging side by side, the forms stretched for more than 250 feet.

"Do you need so many?" Pickle asked a panel of IRS officials. "I'm afraid so," replied Art Altman, who is in charge of the agency's tax-forms coordinating committee.

IRS Commissioner Fred T. Goldberg Jr. said that as a result of the 1986 tax overhaul, the agency had to create 88 forms and revise 162 others.

"So much for simplification," Pickle said sourly.

"Our tax forms and publications are often the first (and sometimes the only) contact taxpayers have with the service," Goldberg said.

"The IRS has no interest in making tax forms complicated."

But it happens anyway, and Congress must share the blame, said Marjorie J. Joder, speaking for enrolled agents, who are tax specialists representing taxpayers before the IRS.

"Tax forms can never be simplified to the desired level of ease as long as our tax code is used to perform myriad tasks of social and economic correction," she said. "The rapid patching of previous decisions is taking a toll on the willingness of the taxpayer to comply with our tax laws."

Goldberg said the IRS is constantly reviewing to determine where forms and publications can be simplified. Already in the works:

- A simplified Form 1040A for older taxpayers, with tests to begin within two weeks. The form will include additional lines for pension income, Individual Retirement Account distributions and the special tax credit for the elderly.

- A large-print worksheet of a tax form to be included in a publication for older taxpayers.

- A study aimed at determining why only about one-quarter of the taxpayers who were eligible to shift from the long Form 1040 to a shorter form did so this year.

- A study that could lead to total overhaul of the W-2 form, on which wages are reported by employers.

- New publications offering tax guidance for the military and for students.

The situation is not hopeless, said Janice Redish, a linguist and expert in rooting out jargon.

She said the Form 1040, the most-used individual tax form, is visually overwhelming and incredibly crowded.

"It has 65 numbered items — and several unnumbered ones — all on one piece of paper... boxes on the left for some items and on the right for others. It means that IRS uses small type for most lines and then condenses that type even further to fit all the words in other lines."

She said difficulty in understanding IRS instructions and forms is to blame for part of the non-compliance that costs the government as much as $100 billion a year.

Police convention divided on gun issue

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Some members of the Fraternal Order of Police endorsed new restrictions on semiautomatic weapons. Others were sticking by their guns as the organization prepared to vote on gun control resolutions.

"It's a very emotional issue for this group and the delegates are really polarized," Steve Cain, president of the Oklahoma Fraternal Order of Police, said Wednesday.

Some delegates — many from Eastern cities — expressed support not only for restrictions but also for waiting periods on gun purchases. Other delegates, however, backed the National Rifle Association's blanket opposition to more gun controls. The NRA, a national gun lobby, has more than 3 million members.

One of the resolutions — which could go to a vote today at the organization's national convention — would direct the FOP's national legislative committee to support "sensible" legislation on the sale of semiautomatic weapons such as the AK-47, the Uzi and the AR-15.

Another calls for lobbying efforts against any attempts to liberalize laws on machine guns and silencers.

A third resolution supports the concept of waiting periods on gun sales.

Don Cahill, chairman of the legislative panel, said he was confident about the chances of the resolutions being passed by the 5,000 attending the convention.

He added that the FOP has been inaccurately portrayed as "anti-gun ownership."

"That is not the case," Cahill said. "We're sportsmen and we're marksmen. But some guns have no legitimate use other than to kill other people, including police officers.

"All we want to do is to slow down the proliferation of weapons obtained by the criminals."

Cahill of the Prince William County, Va., police department said some of the strongest opponents of the resolutions are from sparsely populated Western states "where you could shoot off a cannon and it wouldn't hurt anybody."

"But the majority of our cops are not in those locations. They are in densely populated areas."

Deputy Sheriff C.R. Powell of Tucson, Ariz., said he fears passage of the resolutions ultimately will lead to police officers not having access to weapons with the firepower that criminals have.

He said the Pima County Sheriff's Department is constantly fighting drug runners from nearby Mexico who are armed with semiautomatic weapons.

"I don't want to be facing the bad guys with just a .45," Powell said.

Charles J. Oshinsky of Charleston, S.C., a retired police and security officer, said his position is "no gun control whatsoever." He backs the NRA position that outlawing weapons infringes on the constitutional right to bear arms.

The NRA, though present at the convention, is prohibited from lobbying at its booth in a building across from the State Fair Arena, site of the convention's main business.

Jody Thomas of the NRA said the association was notified in writing to refrain from political activity at the booth. She said the NRA has been advancing its cause at a hospitality suite near the convention.

Tests support Alferd Packer's story

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 19th century gold prospector may have been telling the truth, according to a team studying the man's claims he only killed one of his five prospecting companions.

Alferd Packer was convicted in 1885 of killing the other five members of the party and was sentenced to 40 years in prison. But, although he admitted resorting to cannibalism to stay alive after the group became stranded in the snow, Packer maintained until his death that he had killed only one.

A study of the prospectors' remains support that claim, Walter Birkby, curator of physical anthropology at the University of Arizona, said Wednesday.

The remains were exhumed last month from their resting place in the Rockies near Lake City, Colo., and are being studied at the University of Arizona.

Examinations of and tests on the bones of the five showed signs that flesh was scraped off with a knife, Birkby said. The four skulls removed from a common grave also showed signs of hatchet blows, he said.

The fifth skull was gone when the bones were buried in August 1874. Anthropologists have taken on the challenge to see if they can determine the real story through scientific detection and see if Packer was wrongly convicted.

Packer insisted he shot only one of the men and hit him in the head with a hatchet in self defense. Packer said the man had killed the four others with a hatchet.

Birkby said findings included a bullet hole in the pelvic bone of one of the skeletons.

The study team might be able to attach names to bones with further study of the remains, which include buttons, belt buckles and some partially decomposed clothing, Birkby said.

Morgan horse breed 200 years old

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — More than 1,100 descendants of a little bay horse foaled 200 years ago trotted, danced or even popped out of a cake in honor of their breed.

Maryland breeder W. Dayton Sumner, manager of the 50th annual New England Morgan Horse Show, said the six-day spectacle was a sort of homecoming for the first uniquely American breed of horse.

"The Morgans appeal is as universal as his versatility," said Laura Frizel of Davison, Md., awarding a citation and bottle of champagne to a group of enthusiasts in straw hats and jeans who hitched a trio of high-stepping Morgans to a hay wagon and joined the fancy carriage parade through downtown Thursday evening. First prize went to Delaware millionaire Henry E.I. Dupont and his wife in an ornate antique hunting carriage, drawn by four coal black Morgans.

Morgans, who are equally at home in hunt clubs, isolated cattle ranches or helping the police maintain order on city streets, reflect the all-around characteristics that endeared them to New England farmers.

They wanted and got a horse strong enough to pull a plow, small enough to require little maintenance, and fast enough to ride.

A bronze plaque on a granite boulder along a street in suburban West Springfield a few miles down the Connecticut River marks the beginning of what the inscription simply calls "that useful breed" in 1789.

The small, dark horse, with black mane, tail and feet, who bestowed his characteristics on more than 100,000 descendants, originally was named Figure by Justin Morgan, the schoolteacher and singing master who raised and raced him in western Massachusetts and Vermont.

His lineage is unclear, but some Morgan historians believe he may have been sired by a Tory colonel's part-Arabian, part-English thoroughbred stallion "liberated" during the Revolutionary War by farmers in retaliation for raids on their livestock.

WASHINGTON — In a transparent attempt to curry favor with the news industry, a management training firm is running a contest to find the messiest desk in Washington. The prize is a $415 course in the time management course of the sponsor, Priority Management. "A cluttered desk is a cluttered mind," said marketing director Cynthia Rozzo. As is often the case, the news release announcing the contest will probably be mislaid on cluttered desks like this one in news bureaus all around the city.

Messy desk sign of inefficiency

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a transparent attempt to curry favor with the news industry, a consulting firm is running a contest to find the messiest desk in Washington.

A news release announcing the contest got mislaid on cluttered desks in news bureaus all over the city.

The prize, anyway, is one no newperson would know how to appreciate: a $415 course in the time management program of the sponsor, Priority Management. A course in cleaning off one's desk, and out one's mind. "A cluttered desk is a cluttered mind," contended Cynthia M. Rozzo, director of marketing.

Priority Management, a national chain, has found a ready market in Washington, where it offers advice chiefly to those who offer advice to the government: contractors, consultants and trade organizations. It has trained people at the Small Business Administration, the Navy and the Agriculture Department's Graduate School, "but the biggest customers are government contractors — they have the healthier budgets," Ms. Rozzo said.

The contest entries — photographic evidence of what's being solicited — will be scrutinized for these symptoms: —Multiple calendars. (They lead to overbooking, says Ms. Rozzo.)

—Those little pink phone messages, scattered around.

—Reminders on scraps of paper, strewn.

—Someday files (as in "someday I'll get around to it").

—Leaning towers in the "in" box.

—Open files atop the desk.

"Open files distract from the task at hand," Ms. Rozzo said, falling into her professional spin.

"Let's say you have four projects going on at the same time. People usually have files from all four on their desks. We show people they shouldn't do that. We say put three of the files on some other piece of office furniture. We love credenzas. People who make credenzas love us."

"A cluttered desk is a cluttered mind," contended Cynthia M. Rozzo.

Ms. Rozzo said her firm teaches people how to organize their day, how to say "No, I can't talk to you," how to delegate and how to keep a boss or colleague from laying on an unscheduled chore by asking, "Is it urgent and important? Can it wait?"

She said instructors first must overcome clients' clean desk phobia.

"Everyone's fear is, 'If my boss sees me with a clean desk he is going to think I don't have anything to do,'" she said. "It is the culture of offices: You've got to look busy, busy, busy. We say there's nothing to be ashamed of about a clean desk."

Smiles may be more than skin deep

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Laughter may not be the best medicine, but putting on a smile can have a mood-mellowing effect that's more than skin deep.

Changes in the muscles of the face can indirectly raise or lower the temperature of the blood to the brain, affecting the release of mood-altering chemicals, said University of Michigan psychologist Robert Zajonc.

The muscle changes alter the temperature of blood in the cavernous sinus, a vein that wraps around a nasal artery carrying blood to the brain, said Zajonc, whose research was published in the July issue of Psychological Review.

"I do not claim that temperature change is the only way of inducing emotional state. But the theory helps explain a number of curious phenomena. For example, it might explain why placebo pills are so frequently effective."

People who take placebos may momentarily change their breathing patterns and facial expressions, indirectly changing the temperature in regions of the brain that release pain-reducing chemicals called endorphins, he said.

In experiments on facial movement unrelated to emotions, Zajonc asked 26 people to pronounce and comment on vowel sounds. The subjects preferred "ah" and "ee" sounds, which prompted a decrease in temperature.

The theory that facial expressions may influence emotions first was raised in 1907 by French physician Israel Waynebaum, who believed that the muscles' pressure on arteries partly controlled how much blood reached the brain.

Natural gas could fuel automobiles

By The Associated Press

Auto pollution, oil spills and growing dependence on foreigners for fuel have helped natural gas emerge as an energy solution that's literally lurking beneath our feet, scientists say.

The naturally occurring gas called methane, once considered useful mainly to heat and cook, is now widely viewed as the most realistic way to power cars and trucks into the 21st century because it is plentiful, safe and clean.

There's such a vast supply underground that U.S. energy companies cap wells when the price gets too low for profitable sale. Petroleum-rich Saudi Arabia squanders methane by burning the gas as it spurts from crude oil wells.

"The Saudis flare each day enough gas to fuel two-thirds of the road transport of Western Europe," says Princeton University professor Enoch Durbin, a leading proponent of the natural gas alternative.

"From a satellite, the brightest subject on earth you'd think would be New York or San Francisco. It's the Saudi fields."

Natural-gas powered vehicles in Canada, part of an experimental fuel-alternative program Durbin helped create, have logged 500,000 miles without an overhaul because gaseous fuel does not cause the wear and tear of liquid fuel. Liquid fuels wash lubricants off walls of a car's engine, increasing friction and wear.

Natural-gas powered vehicles in Canada ... have logged 500,000 miles without an overhaul because gaseous fuel does not cause the wear and tear of liquid fuel.

The Canadian vehicles recently began rusting and falling apart. But the engines are in such good condition they are being sold for use in other vehicles, Durbin says.

Despite its attractiveness, natural gas as a motor fuel has two big drawbacks. First, it takes up 1,000 times the space of equivalent gasoline and must therefore be compressed. Even then, it occupies more space than gasoline, so natural-gas powered vehicles need big tanks and frequent fillups.

A car Durbin converted and supplied with two natural gas tanks could go only 200 miles without a refill, for example.

The second obstacle is the lack of a nationwide refueling structure. "If you're going to use it you have to be confined to a regular route where you can refill," says Michael German, senior vice president of the American Gas Association, which represents U.S. distributors and pipelines.

German says the 30,000 cars in the United States now running on natural gas are mainly fleet vehicles that travel regular routes.

One remedy proposed is to equip vehicles with dual-fuel tanks, so if the natural gas runs out, the driver could switch to gasoline. But the extra tanks would take up passenger and cargo space.

Where to store natural gas also is considered by some to be a problem. Unlike petroleum, natural gas needs a large, leakproof storage vault or it escapes into the atmosphere.

Natural gas now flows to homes and businesses through about 1.2 million miles of underground metal pipe.

So the system exists for getting gas from producers to service stations. What's needed, scientists say, are pumps at the stations to dispense the gas into vehicles.

Ninety-three percent of the natural gas used in the United States is domestically produced and the rest comes from Canada. Nearly half the crude oil consumed here, on the other hand, is foreign.

About 80 percent of natural gas comes from underground gas reservoirs; the rest is found with oil.

Stinky feet research

MIAMI (AP) — Researchers plan to put their noses into training on aromatic Limburger and other strong cheeses before sending their olfactory nerves into battle against a common complaint — stinky feet.

The research is being led by University of Miami Professor Patricia Mertz, who helped the military develop an ointment to battle a foot fungus affecting soldiers in Vietnam 20 years ago.

As a starting point, Ms. Mertz has taken into account the similarity between the odor of smelly feet and the bouquet of strong cheeses.

In fact, she says, both arise from the same bacteria: Brevibacterium.

Ms. Mertz and two assistants plan to train their noses on Limburger and other cheeses, then place their noses about 2 inches from volunteer's odiferous feet to see if they've got the same smell.

That test will weed out sufferers of athlete's foot, caused by a fungus, before testing begins with Cleocin, a prescription medicine originally developed to fight acne.

Ms. Mertz has a personal interest in the subject.

"There's nothing like having to suffer from foot odor at home to stimulate research," she said. "I'm going to find a cure for my son."

Alternative land use

CARMEL, Ind. (AP) — When it comes to fighting City Hall, Dr. John Pittman sure knows how to raise a stink.

When zoning authorities rejected the heart surgeon's request to put up low-rise office buildings on his 68-acre property in this wealthy suburb, Pittman turned the place into a hog farm.

The unexpected whiff of rural Indiana is anything but welcome among tenants of the new tinted-glass office buildings in the neighborhood.

"There's an old adage you don't have a pig in a parlor," said F. Richard Rembusch, executive vice president of Brown Investments and one of many unhappy purveyors of office space. "There is just a foul odor."

Pittman swears he didn't bring in the pigs out of spite. He said it was the only thing he could do with the property after his building plans were blocked.

There are signs the standoff may be easing. Recently, Pittman sold about 200 of his 300 hogs — because of declining prices, he said.

Hamburger debate

HAMBURG, N.Y. (AP) — Hamburg residents turn out to celebrate the 104th anniversary of the "Birth of the Burger" Saturday, but there's a sizzling debate over the true origin of that most American of meals.

Seymour, Wis., boosters spurn the Hamburgers' claim that the meat patty was first served in this Buffalo, N.Y., suburb at the 1885 Erie County Fair by entrepreneurs Francis and Charles Menches.

Dick Tepp, organizer of a 100th anniversary bash for the burger in Seymour on Aug. 5, says he can prove the hamburger was first fried and sold by Charles Naygreen at the Outagamie County Riding Fair in Wisconsin in 1889.

"We've done a lot of research, and we have factual, hard evidence — pictures, newspaper clippings and even a living descendant," Tepp says.

Violet Gauerke, daughter of "Hamburger Charlie," says her father was 15 when he got the idea to flatten out meatballs and stick them between slices of bread to make them easier to eat.

"He was known all over the country for it," she says.

Hamburg Mayor Richard Hansen is unimpressed.

"We believe that we were the first," he says.

Texans' memories of Utah Beach to be televised

WACO — Paul Marable, vice-chairman of First Savings and Loan, Waco, will recount his story of D-Day plus two to a few million Americans. Marable is preparing to leave for Europe to be part of a PBS program on WW II.

By SUE ANN JONES
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO (AP) — Paul Marable is going back to Utah Beach.

A few million Americans will watch his journey, thanks to public television reporter Bill Moyers, whose program about the trip is to be broadcast next spring.

Marable, vice-chairman of First Savings and Loan Association, leaves Aug. 23 for Europe, to stand again on the beach where he landed on D-Day-plus-two, and the French hill where German soldiers captured him 12 days later.

"Bill Moyers wants me to take him to that hill, and go on camera and explain what happened," said Marable, who will be one of about a dozen World War II veterans who will share personal memories at war sites with Moyers.

The veterans and others interested in military history will be part of a University of Texas travel-study group. The two-week tour will visit major European battlefields and historic sites of World War II. Moyers' program about the trip is scheduled to be broadcast around the 45th anniversary of Victory-in-Europe Day on May 8, 1990.

The trip has been organized and led during the last three summers by Thomas Hatfield, dean of the UT Division of Continuing Education.

"Moyers' intention is not to make a documentary about war, but about the effects of war on individuals, on their values, their careers, and their families," Hatfield said. "He will ask them, these 45 years later, about what they saw or did at these places during the war. He wants these men with the rich stories to have a chance to tell them to the American people."

Most members of the travel-study group responded to mailings describing the upcoming tour, Hatfield said. Marable's daughter, Betty Sue Flowers, a UT faculty member, has worked as a consultant and editor for Moyers on other projects. When Ms. Flowers showed Moyers her father's book of memoirs about the war, Moyers invited Marable to join the program.

Group members will fly to London, then travel to the beaches of Normandy and to other battlefields, stopping along the way for talks by military-history experts. Moyers and a film crew will follow the group's bus in a van.

"They will leave us and go to the sites where the veterans saw combat and interview them there," Hatfield said, giving as an example the hilltop where Marable was captured in June 1944. "Mr. Marable tells me as a young man it was burned into his memory, and he will be able to find it again."

Marable, now 67, landed on Utah Beach two days after D-Day, escorting two trucks loaded with ammunition, then directing his men to their assembly point. He was a 22-year-old second lieutenant.

"Was I afraid? I think the term 'exhilaration' describes it best. Maybe fear was part of that. Or maybe it was anxiety," Marable said, recalling his feelings that day as he swung down the side of the transport ship on a rope ladder.

This will not be Marable's first visit back to the beach. In 1971, he and his wife, Betty, went back to Normandy.

"I could not pinpoint the very 50 yards of beach, but a monument to the 90th Infantry Division has been erected on a German gun emplacement there... I had a strange feeling while I was there," Marable said.

His division's mission was to cross the peninsula and stop the Germans from escaping or being reinforced. Along the way, on June 19, 1944, Marable was captured.

He ended up in a POW camp in Poland after spending two months marching, riding charcoal-burning trucks, and crowding into boxcars so tightly "in sleeping, we had to all turn the same direction on our sides."

Several years ago, Marable wrote his war memoirs, mostly about his capture and imprisonment. As a gift while he worked for the Waco Chamber of Commerce, friends and colleagues had the memoirs reprinted in hardback books. Few battle stories are included — but not because Marable has forgotten them.

"When you see people falling around you and you can't help because you have to go on and do your job — when you can't stop — some of those memories are very painful."

Unwanted documents cost $1.4 million to mail

WASHINGTON — The postmaster in St. Charles, Ill., didn't expect in the middle of his holiday mail rush to receive thousands of 26-pound boxes from the U.S. Department of Energy for delivery.

The postmaster called his congressman, Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., who in turn asked the DOE what was going on. The bulk mail turned out to be thousands of environmental impact reports, and ultimately the General Accounting Office was asked to do a study.

In the case of Hastert's district in Illinois, the environmental impact statement for the proposed Superconducting Super Collider (SSC) was summarily sent to everyone who had written to comment on the atom smashing project. Those who wrote to the DOE were later sent the 8,000 page document, worth $100 each, whether they wanted it or not.

This process was repeated nationally at a total cost of over $1.4 million in a number of areas, including Texas, where the SSC project is to be built. Many people wrote to the DOE regarding the project, some with technical information, but the vast majority wrote to just express either their support or opposition to the project, according to Hastert.

"Too seldom, government bureaucrats don't consider who is paying the bill when they decide to issue these reports. In this case it cost taxpayers $1.4 million to send an 8,000 page document to 16,000 residents (nationally). I suspect most of the 26-pound documents ended up in the trash," Hastert said.

One particular instance of waste cited by the congressman was the case of a family of five, including the children, who had written DOE. Each family member received an unwanted copy of the SSC impact statement, to the tune of $500 worth of duplicates that were of no use other than propping up the family Christmas tree.

The General Accounting Office concluded that many one volume summary copies of the impact report might have been sent out instead of the total document. The accounting office also questioned the DOE's use of first class priority mail to send the impact statements.

Hastert will shortly introduce legislation to the House which will tighten up the mass mailing practice by the large federal agencies. He also plans to testify on the matter during consideration of the Paperwork Reduction Act.

"No one wants to limits access... to those who want it," he said. "However, if we are not responsible in the distribution of this information today, the resources may not be available for its distribution tomorrow."

Public Notice

On July 17, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to add a new service offering for business customers, called Customer Billing Reports (Toll Summaries). The proposed effective date for this offering is September 11, 1989.

Four reports will be offered to provide toll detail based upon information from the customer's long distance usage billed by SWBT. These reports, which are entitled Usage Summaries, Billing Number Summary, Number Called Summary and International Call Detail, will include both intra-LATA usage provided by SWBT and inter-LATA usage provided by Interexchange Carrier (IC) and billed by SWBT. These reports will be provided to customers for a charge and customers may order these reports on a monthly, quarterly, semiannually or annually basis.

CUSTOMER BILLING REPORTS (TOLL SUMMARIES) PROPOSED RATES
One Report	$25.00
Two Reports	$50.00
Three or Four Reports	$75.00

NOTE: All rates shown are per billing account number; per occurrence of report production.

Customer Billing Reports (Toll Summaries) have been forecasted to generate an increase in first year annual revenues of approximately $282,983.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by September 1, 1989. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Parents say children should pay their own way

DEAR ABBY: While going through some files, my husband ran across this copy of a letter we sent to our children seven years ago. Since that time they have all married and purchased their own homes, without any help from us. He thought you might be interested in seeing this and knowing that it has worked well for our family. — ROSE E. STERVINO, ROCKWALL, TEXAS

TO: Jeannine Greg Michelle
Renee FROM: Mom and Dad
DATE: Feb. 22, 1982
SUBJECT: MONEY

Since the subject of loaning money has come up from at least half of you this week, we decided we would let you know our feelings about this.

We will not loan any of you money except in the case of a bona fide emergency (severe illness, accident, etc.). Each of you has been blessed with intelligence, good health, and the ability to earn a living. What you choose to do with your time and money is up to you.

This decision stems from what we think is "common sense," and observing how others have handled this situation and the problems that can occur when, for one reason or another, the money is not repaid. It causes hard feelings between parent and son/daughter and between siblings.

This probably puts us somewhere between minus 10 and 0 on your popularity scale, but we feel this is the best thing for our family. We love each of you dearly and want to do for you what we think will benefit you most in your lifetime.

DEAR ROSE: Thanks for sharing a sensible, no-nonsense idea.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that you may feel is too trivial to print, but I'm hoping your love of animals will prevail.

Our family is moving nearly 3,000 miles cross-country, and our problem is our cat. He gets deathly sick while riding in a car — even a 15-mile trip to the vet is a terrible experience for him. I'm not sure if it's the motion, or just plain claustrophobia. The tranquilizers prescribed by the vet make him sick.

I've tried covering his carrier to keep him from seeing out. I've tried putting butter on his paws so he would be preoccupied with lapping it off. I've tried taking him for short rides (a couple of miles each day) to get him accustomed to riding. No luck.

He cannot travel in the carrier. He broke his teeth biting on the door of the metal carrier. (That's when I began to think he might be claustrophobic.)

Abby, this cat is 6 years old and is truly our baby. He's strictly an indoor cat; he never goes outside and is afraid of anything new, so I wouldn't even consider flying him in a plane. I know there are cat psychologists, but none within 200 or 300 miles of our tiny town.

Has anyone had experience with a cat traveling a long distance in a motor home? Perhaps the larger area would make a difference? If there are any cat lovers out there with any ideas, please help. I am

desperate for suggestions. — CAT LOVER IN MAINE

DEAR CAT LOVER: Your vet should be able to provide you with a tranquilizer your cat can tolerate. And if there are any cat lovers out there who have successfully handled this problem, I hope they'll write to me.

DEAR ABBY: Re those TV viewers who "mute" the commercials: Will you please tell me why the commercials have to be so much louder than the regular program? — ANNOYED IN SWEETWATER, TEXAS

DEAR ANNOYED: Because the sponsors want to be sure the viewers can hear the commercials while they're running to the fridge.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Food and drink booklets

Cooling summer drinks

NEW YORK (AP) — Newman's Own Old-Fashioned Roadside Virgin Lemonade is offering a booklet featuring recipes for alcoholic beverages.

"Newman's Own Virgin Libations" includes 10 recipes made with lemonade and a variety of fruit juices, ginger ale, seltzer and syrups. All recipes are quick and easy to prepare. Try The Great Rejuvenator (made with grape juice) or The Pineapple Pimpernel.

To order the booklet, send $1.25 in check or money order to: Newman's Own Virgin Libations Booklet, Newman's Own, Avery Business Services, 39 Fort Point St., East Norwalk, CT 06855.

Babies and fruit juices

NEW YORK (AP) — The Beech-Nut Nutrition Corp. offers these suggestions for babies and fruit juices:

- Start babies on single juices: Apple, pear and grape are single fruit juices that are mild, naturally low in acid and easily digestible.

- Some clear juices can cause diarrhea: Sorbital, a natural sugar found in juices, helps fight constipation. Pear juice contains more sorbital than apple and grape juice.

- Diluting juices increase babies' tolerance levels: Mixing one part apple or pear juice with one part water is a good ratio. For the stronger grape juice, use one part juice to two parts water.

- Juices contain natural sugar and potassium: Natural sugars in juices provide food energy for babies; about 60 to 80 calories in a 4-ounce serving. Potassium increases muscle strength.

- No juices for teething babies at night: Dental decay in babies can be prevented by not giving them sweet solutions, such as juices and sweet formula, at night.

Pernod panache

NEW YORK (AP) — Pernod, one of France's most popular spirits, is sponsoring the Pernod Panache recipe contest. Anyone over the age of 21 may enter an original food or drink recipe using Pernod.

Food recipes will be judged by W. Peter Prescott, senior editor of Food & Wine magazine. John Poister, author of the "New American Bartender's Guide," will judge the drink recipes. One winner will be chosen from each category.

Contest deadline is Sept. 15, 1989. To enter, attach your clear, written recipe to a 3" x 5" index card. Include the recipe's title, your name, address, daytime telephone number and signature attesting that you are over 21 years of age. Send to: Pernod Panache, 122 E. 42nd St., Suite 2200, New York, NY 10168. Only one recipe per entry form will be accepted.

Midwest wine expo

CHICAGO (AP) — The Midwest International Wine Exposition will be held Sept. 21-24 at Chicago's McCormick Place Exposition Center. A wine tasting will be held each afternoon, featuring more than 600 wines from throughout the world.

The first two days of the exposition will include workshops, seminars and panel presentations for restaurant personnel and wine shop staffs. The final two days will focus on topics of interest to consumers, including wine tasting techniques, cooking with wine, and developing a home wine cellar.

Other exposition events will include tasting luncheons, a wine book fair, a wine video festival, a champagne brunch and gourmet dinners.

Proceeds will help finance scholarships for students in the four-year degree program in hospitality management at Roosevelt University in Chicago. For information, contact: Midwest International Wine Exposition, 10 East Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611.

All-American barbecue

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Campbell's has a new 96-page paperback cookbook, the "All-American Barbecue Cookbook," with regional recipes and menus including Texas Beef Brisket, Apple Three-Bean Bake and Bourbon Street Chocolate Bread Pudding. A variety of Campbell's products are among the recipes' ingredients.

For a copy, send your name, address, zip code and $2.25 check or money order to: Campbell's Publications Center, Box 38P, Ronks, PA 17573.

Our Seas Need Help

Our Troubled Oceans

For thousands of years, the oceans have served as our trash can.

For those thousands of years, the oceans did a pretty good job of making our trash disappear.

The bacteria in the water broke most of it down so that fish and plants were able to use it.

There is more trash today than ever before. But much of today's trash is different from the trash of the past. It is not biodegradable (BI-oh-dee-GRAY-dah-bul).

This means that bacteria cannot break it down. It can take hundreds of years to make some plastics finally disappear.

Ocean words

Algae (AL-gee): sea plants, most of which are single-celled.
Estuaries (ES-choo-air-ees): areas formed where some fresh-water rivers meet the salt-water oceans. They hold a mix of salt and fresh water. They are the nursery grounds and homes for many fish and shellfish.

The Mini Page thanks Dr. Joe Ramus, director of the Duke University Marine Laboratory, Beaufort, N.C., and the Youth Programs Office of the Environmental Protection Agency for help with this story.

The big problem:

Throughout the world, more people than ever before live near the oceans.

For example, in the United States, about 70 percent of the population lives within 50 miles of a coast.

So many cities line the coasts. So many people toss their trash into the nearest body of water.

So many problems arise.

The cities we build cover open fields with concrete streets and parking lots. Fresh water that used to soak into the ground and flow slowly into estuaries now rushes into them at a fast rate through manmade pipes and ditches.

The plants and animals that live in these waters cannot survive when too much fresh water rushes in too fast. This problem is called storm-water runoff.

The topsoil from farms and lawns flows through ditches into rivers and then into near-shore waters.

The fertilizers and animal waste mixed in this soil cause algae to grow at a very fast rate.

The algae growth causes the water to lose much of its oxygen. Fish begin to die.

The water begins to smell.

This problem is called eutrophication (yu-tro-fuh-KAY-shun). Some laws have been passed to stop the dumping and runoff.

But much more must be done. Most experts say that we must learn how to recycle our waste.

Our troubled oceans just can't handle it.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Blond Brownies

- You'll need:
- 1 1/2 cups light brown sugar
 - 3 eggs, beaten
 - 1 cup all-purpose flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1 cup chopped nuts

- What to do:
1. Combine all ingredients in a large bowl. Mix well.
 2. Spread mixture evenly in a greased 12-by-8-inch baking pan.
 3. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 25 minutes or until golden brown. Makes about 36 bars.

Where Ocean Problems and Debris Come From

Debris and sea animals

Above you see many sources of ocean debris (de-bree), or trash from around the world.

We humans who live on land suffer because of our filthy seas. Animals who make their homes in the sea suffer even more. For example, turtles often mistake plastic debris for food. They also become entangled in plastics.

The Mini Page gang, like many kids across the country, helps take part in beach clean-up drives.

What kids can do

The type of trash that you find on one shore might be different from what you find on another. But beach litter is found on all of our shores.

- When you visit the beach, pick up your trash.
- When you go boating, don't throw trash into the water.
- Volunteer to help clean up your beach.
- If possible, recycle your garbage.

Earth's ocean coating

Oceans cover about 70 percent of the Earth's surface.

Oceans hold up to 97 percent of the world's water. But oceans are not as big and as deep as we might think.

Our Earth measures about 8,000 miles in diameter (across). The average depth of the ocean is only about 2 1/2 miles.

So you can see that the oceans are a thin coating for our planet Earth.

The four biggest oceans:

- (square miles given)
- Pacific 64,186,300
 - Atlantic 33,420,000
 - Indian 28,350,500
 - Arctic 5,105,700

The oceans of the world flow into one another and form one giant ocean.

Oceans are important because they:

- yield 90 percent of the world's fish catch.
- are a place to live for many animals.
- hold a lot of valuable minerals and other resources.
- are highways for trade.
- are places for fun and recreation.
- provide most of the world's weather patterns.

RENE BENAVIDES

JEFF SCHULZ

Hawks sign two more

The Howard College Hawks have added two more signees for next year's baseball team, they are Rene Benavides and Jeff Schulz.

Benavides is following in the footsteps of brother Al, who played at Howard two years ago. Benavides hails from Corpus Christi Carroll High School, he's a 6-1, 190-pound pitcher.

This past season he posted a 1-1 record with a 1.0 earned run average. He also batted .429 and drove in 38 RBI's. Benavides was named to the all-district, all-metro and all-area teams.

The 6-0, 165-pound Schulz hails from Bismark, N.D. He attended Century High School. This past season he batted .453 and played in the North Dakota all-star game.

Schulz was also a basketball star, being a first team all-state selection at guard. He was selected to play in the North Dakota all-star basketball game also. Schulz owns school records for season average (19.5), most points in season (488) and most points in single game (33).

Barry surfaces at Pokes camp

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer visited the Dallas Cowboys' practice field on Thursday but said he's not eager to get back into collegiate or professional coaching.

"I'm just on vacation in California with my kids," Switzer said. "I just got out of coaching and I don't want to get back in it. I'm relieved to be out of coaching."

Switzer resigned from the head coaching job at Oklahoma amid controversy over NCAA penalties against the team for rules violations and the arrests of four players on criminal weapons and drug charges.

Asked if Switzer had applied with the Cowboys, Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said "I don't think he wants any coaching jobs right now."

Switzer met with Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson and joked, "I just wanted to see if Jimmy was messing up Troy Aikman." Aikman, the Cowboys first-round pick, played for Switzer for two years at Oklahoma.

Switzer was accompanied by his two sons, Gregg and Doug and daughter, Kathy.

"I'll be in town to see you guys play a few games this year," Switzer told Johnson.

Johnson said Switzer's visit was a surprise.

"It was good to see him. It was good to see him in good spirits. I don't guess he's had very many vacations this time of year," Johnson said.

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Even his close friends are saying it: when the going gets tough, Andre Agassi gets going. And that's why he's out of the Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

After breezing through the first set in Thursday's third round, Agassi lost a tough second set tiebreaker and seemed to also lose the enthusiasm that envelops his game when he is at his best. He folded his tent in the third set and lost 1-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 to 122nd-ranked David Wheaton.

That assured Agassi, No. 7 in the world and falling, of another week without a tournament victory this year after he won six last year and rocketed to No. 3.

The elimination of the top seed and defending champion put Michael Chang, the French Open winner and No. 2 seed, in the favorite's role for the $114,000 first prize. Chang ousted fellow Californian Derrick Rostagno, 6-3, 6-2.

No. 3 Brad Gilbert also survived with a 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) victory over Wally Masur of Australia.

No. 9 Jim Courier, No. 12 Robert Seguso and No. 14 and Jim Pugh were the other seeded players who made the quarters, along with unseeded Jim Grabb and Glenn Layendecker.

For Wheaton, 20, a pro for one year, his victory put him in the quarterfinals of a Grand Prix tournament for only the second time.

"It feels awesome that I beat a top-10 player," he said, "but I'm sorry it had to be Andre because we're close friends."

After the first set, victory was the farthest thing from Wheaton's mind.

"He blew me off the court," Wheaton said. "I thought I was going to get routed."

But he said Agassi gave away several points in the tiebreaker, and in the third set "he didn't play

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. — Michael Chang concentrates on a forehand in his match Thursday at the Volvo International Tennis Tournament. Chang, the number two seed, easily defeated Derrick Rostagno of California 6-3, 6-2.

very well and gave me a lot of free points."

Agassi's collapse brought to mind West German Carl-Uwe Steeb's comment after Agassi's two recent Davis Cup losses. Steeb said there is a growing feeling that Agassi is a great frontrunner who can't come back when he's down.

"I definitely felt that," Wheaton said. "When he gets ahead he's just so good mentally. He's interested.

But when he gets behind ... he kind of gets a little bored. ... I don't know if he wants to work as hard to come back."

"Last year when he was working his way up, he came back and won those matches. Now that he's the biggest thing in tennis, it's a little different."

"But I'm sure he'll change that as soon as he loses a few times. He'll start working harder at that."

"It's just a time in his life where he's done so well and it's tough for him. And a lot of people put pressure on him. I feel bad for him."

Agassi, playing Wheaton for the first time in a tournament although the two have practiced together often, shrugged off any thought that he couldn't come from behind.

He said the player who wins a tight second set often rolls through the third with confidence.

"I knew exactly what to expect from him and he just did it to a T," Agassi said. "It wasn't clicking for me."

Gilbert, who replaces Agassi as the highest seed in his half of the draw, acknowledged that he has been virtually overlooked in this tournament, with the focus on Agassi and Chang, "and that's the way I like it."

Folsom trying to make most of chance

THOUSAND OAK, Calif. (AP) — If you ran a name identification game for Dallas Cowboys players, Steve Folsom likely would top the chart for the least familiar.

Yet, he could be the starting tight end for the Cowboys when they open Jimmy Johnson's new era on Sept. 10 in New Orleans.

"Nobody's heard of me but that's alright," he said. "The other guys can have the glory. I just want a job."

Folsom was originally drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles, spent a brief time with the New York Giants, and played for the Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League.

After the USFL folded, Folsom was out of football for two years.

In a chance call to the Cowboys, Folsom got a job last year.

"Jim Erkenbeck was my coach in Philly and I called him to congratulate him about getting a job with the Cowboys," Folsom said. "I told him to call me if he heard of work. He said the Cowboys could use me."

Folsom played for the Cowboys last year behind Thornton Chandler but caught only nine passes for 84 yards. However, two of the catches were for touchdowns.

He also developed a reputation as a solid blocker.

Erkenbeck was swept out in the new coaching change but Folsom's stature has been strengthened under Tony Wise and the new Cowboys' coaches.

"Things are kind of at the opposite end of the spectrum the way it was last year," Folsom said. "Practice is more intense. I haven't seen anything like this since college (Utah). This is a new situation and a great opportunity for me."

Folsom has drawn praise from Johnson who says "he's a hard worker, catches the ball well and isn't afraid to block. His only drawback is lack of speed."

Folsom earned the starting tight end job before training camp began.

"I walked into the practice field and one of the trainers told me well, you're the starting tight end," Folsom said. "I couldn't believe it. Then they told me Chandler hurt his wrist (fracture) playing basketball."

Although Chandler may be ready by the regular season, Folsom has gained a big edge in training camp.

"I've got a big chance and I want to take advantage of it," Folsom said. "Every play and every scrimmage is my chance to show them I should be their starting tight end."

Oilers WR may walkout

SAN MARCOS (AP) — The deadline for Ernest Givins' threatened walkout of the Houston Oilers training camp is drawing closer but there are signs of hope that could keep Givins working out.

Givins has said he'll leave camp Sunday if Oilers general manager Mike Holovak doesn't renegotiate his contract.

However, Givins' attorney, Jim Ellis of Louisville, Ky., expressed optimism that a deal could be reached to avoid a walkout.

If he walks out, Givins would join fellow starting wide receiver Drew Hill, who has been a contract holdout since veterans reported to camp July 28.

"I have nothing to say but good things about Mike Holovak," Ellis said. "He told us what he would do all along and he's been true to his word."

"He's kept his word. The only thing we haven't got is a salary figure."

Givins said if the two parties were close to an agreement, he would remain in camp.

"If Sunday comes and things are close, I'll be here," Givins said following Thursday's workout. "I'm just trying to push it and get it out of my system and get back on the field."

Ellis said he felt Holovak was trying to correct inadequacies in Givins' contract.

Ellis said the Oilers were still not close to what Givins is seeking for one year of his contract. Givins reportedly is seeking $600,000 to $700,000 for this season.

Givins' complaints go back to his rookie season in 1986, when he reached a verbal agreement with former general manager Ladd Herzog but signed a contract that contained different figures.

Givins said the verbal agreement would have paid him $400,000 this season but under his present contract, he'll get only $200,000 for 1989.

"Mike is a trustworthy person. I think things are going to work out so I'm not even going to worry about it," Givins said.

Givins said he would have asked to be traded if Herzog were still in charge.

"If Ladd were here, I'd be gone, it's as simple as that," Givins said. "I'd have asked to be traded."

"I was a rookie and my first priority was to make the ball club and build some stats behind me, so then I could open my mouth and say what I wanted to say," Givins said.

NFL Notes

By The Associated Press

If heavyweight champion Mike Tyson doesn't want to accept the challenge of Tony Mandarich, Buffalo Bills defensive end Bruce Smith is more than willing to take his place.

The Bills and Smith are scheduled to meet the Green Bay Packers — with or without the currently unsigned Mandarich — in an exhibition game Aug. 26.

"I'm just looking forward to the day that I can shut his mouth up," Smith, one of the game's best pass-rushers, told the Buffalo News. "I hope they trade him to a team that we play twice a year. That would be nice. I'm looking forward to getting ahold of him on the field because he runs his mouth too much."

The 6-foot-5, 305-pound Mandarich and the Packers, who made the former Michigan State offensive tackle the second overall pick in this year's NFL draft, are far apart in contract negotiations. Smith doesn't like Mandarich's attitude.

"He's saying he's it as far as offensive lineman go and he hasn't played a down of professional football yet," Smith said. "And that just kind of ticks me off, along with a number of other people on this team, and on other teams as well. I think it's about time he stepped out on the field. Let's see what he's all about."

Smith called Mandarich "an offensive lineman coming out of college just like any other offensive lineman coming out. You can't put him on a pedestal so far and above these other offensive linemen that you're degrading them because that's not fair at all. I don't think he's that great."

Smith said he didn't "have a real vengeance" toward Mandarich, but added: "I'd like to just put him in his place. It's going to take him a couple of years in the league to get up in the top rankings, just like anybody else."

"He can't do it all just by coming off of the field in college and saying, 'Well, I'm this and I'm that and I want to be paid $2 million a year.' Get real."

What if Mandarich actually gets to fight Tyson before Smith gets a crack at him?

"I don't think there'd be enough left of him if he fights Mike and then comes and tries to play in the NFL," Smith said.

Elsewhere, the NFL tackled some weighty problems in addition to the search for a new commissioner.

— Rookie guard Freddie Childress, the Cincinnati Bengals' heaviest player ever, is making progress on a diet that has helped whittle his weight to 359 pounds.

— Offensive lineman Bruce

Davis of the Houston Oilers, who admits to starting last season at 315 pounds and gaining weight during the year, is again fighting the bulge.

Childress, who checked into camp weighing 374 pounds, wears a specially tailored size 56 jersey and custom-made football pants. His thighs measure 30 inches apiece and it takes four feet of fabric to reach around his waist.

"I've got a pair of 5-X shoulder pads on him and they still don't cover him," equipment manager Tom Gray said.

Coach Sam Wyche said Childress, who has been nicknamed "The Big Chill," had broken the 360-pound barrier.

"We have a target weight that we'd like to see him get to of 330," Wyche said.

"Realistically, we know if he gets to 340 he may be at his final playing weight. As a practical matter, if he gets down around 350 and he's playing well, we're happy. We're calling the dogs off."

"His pass-blocking is good. His run-blocking is awesome. He's just massive. The man will literally outweigh his opponent by 100 pounds most Sundays. And he's no Baby Huey. He's a mean, physical football player."

As for his diet, Childress said: "I ain't really had no trouble giving up anything. I've got a job to do and I've got to lose the weight. I've got to take care of business on the field. If I can get the weight off I'll be taking care of business."

Last year, Davis heard enough "fat" jokes to last a lifetime. But he started all 16 games and had what coaches called a Pro Bowl-type year.

"I just take one year at a time," Davis said. "If I start looking ahead, things don't work out that well for me."

Davis, starting his 11th year in the NFL, is the heaviest and most experienced Oiler.

Meanwhile, the committee of owners heading the search for a successor to retiring Commissioner Pete Rozelle adjourned after two days of interviewing candidates.

Denver Broncos Tony Dorsett's football future was put into doubt when his knee gave way during a non-contact passing drill. The second-leading rusher in NFL history was scheduled for further tests today and team officials fear his career might be over.

Preliminary tests indicated the 35-year-old running back could have ligament or cartilage damage.

"It's a little bit vague," Coach Dan Reeves said. "Until we do more tests, we won't know exactly COLORADO CITY — The Lone Wolf Creek Golf Course in Colorado City is the site of a Labor Day Invitational golf tournament Sept. 2-4.

This will be a two-man or ladies partnership, 54 holes at $160 per team. Each division will be flighted with cash prizes in each flight.

A putting contest will be Saturday and Sunday with cash prizes Monday. Entry deadline is Aug. 30.

For more information call 728-3403 or 728-5514.

The Big Spring Country Club will be sponsoring a Couples Golf Tournament Aug. 12-13 at the Country Club Golf Course.

The format for the tournament will be a two-person scramble. Each team will consist of one man and one woman, each being 21 years or older. Teams will be flighted after Saturday's round.

Entry fee is $150 per team, limited to the first 50 teams paid. A practice round will be Friday, Aug. 11. Call the golf club for tee times.

The first place winners will receive $250 per team, second place, $200 and third place $150.

In conjunction with the tournament, there will be a putting contest Saturday, cocktail party and dinner and dance. Saturday there will be breakfast burritos served in the morning, and a hamburger buffet after the tournament.

BOOSTER CLUB

The Big Spring Sports Booster Club will meet Monday at 7 p.m. at the high school library. All members and prospective members are encouraged to attend.

Officers for the upcoming year will be elected.

TENNIS

MILLBURN, N.J. (AP) — Two-time U.S. Open singles champion Tracy Austin escaped serious injury after the car she was driving hit another vehicle, authorities said.

Austin, 26, was brought to the emergency room of Overlook Hospital in Summit at 11 a.m. Thursday. She was admitted for observation and listed in satisfactory condition, said hospital president Michael Sniffen. He said Austin would probably spend the night in the hospital and be released Friday.

GOLF

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Doug Tewell fired a course record 8-under-par 63 to grab the first round lead in the $1 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

Tewell, who had eight birdies and no bogeys, played the front nine in 6-under-par 30. Jim Gallagher is just one shot off the lead, while Brian Watts, the 1987 NCAA champion from Oklahoma State, and Ed Fiori are two shots back.

SWIMMING

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Barrowman set a world record in qualifying for the men's 200-meter breaststroke, and then came back to win the finals at the U.S. National Swimming Championships.

Barrowman, 20, was clocked in 2 minutes, 12.90 seconds in his heat at Southern Cal's Olympic Pool, breaking Canadian Victor Davis' gold-medal winning 2:13.34 in the 1984 Olympics. Barrowman won the final in 2:14.74.

Janet Evans came away with her third victory in three days, winning the 200-meter individual medley in 2:15.15.

Olympian Tracey McFarlane won the women's 100-meter breaststroke in 1:09.88 and Pam Minthorn won the 100 butterfly in 1:01.12.

Dan Jorgensen won the 400 freestyle in 3:50.88, and Melvin Stewart took the 200 butterfly in 1:57.94, both the fastest times in the world this year.

Reds take batting practice on Astros

By The Associated Press
Batting practice for the Cincinnati Reds lasted a little longer than the Houston Astros expected.

The Reds set a major-league record with 16 hits during a 14-run first inning and routed the Astros 18-2 on Thursday at Riverfront Stadium.

The first inning took 38 minutes to play, and then it took the statisticians almost as long to figure out the records.

"It was amazing," Cincinnati infielder Todd Benzinger said. "I looked up at the scoreboard clock runs in one inning, set by Brooklyn in the first inning against Cincinnati in 1952.

The previous one-inning hit record was set by the Boston Red Sox, who had 14 against Detroit in 1953. The NL record of 12 hits in one inning was held by the St. Louis Cardinals, who did it against Cincinnati in 1925. The Reds' 12 singles in the first inning set another record.

Clancy, 5-9, faced seven batters and retired none in the Reds' first. He allowed seven runs on six hits, including Ken Griffey's three-run homer, and a walk. Forsch faced the next 13 batters, allowing 10 hits — including nine in a row — and seven runs.

Dodgers 6, Giants 3

Orel Hershiser beat San Francisco for the 15th time in 19 career decisions, leading Los Angeles past the injury-plagued Giants at Dodger Stadium.

Eddie Murray sparked a four-run fourth inning with a two-run triple and Mike Marshall capped the rally with a two-run homer off Russ Swan as the Dodgers beat their longtime rival for the second straight game. It was Swan's major-league debut.

Cardinals 6, Mets 5

Tom Pagnozzi's run-scoring single broke a sixth-inning tie and Milt Thompson matched his career high with four RBIs as St. Louis beat New York at Busch Stadium.

Pagnozzi, a reserve catcher hitting just .167 in 66 at-bats this season, lined a two-out run-scoring single in the sixth inning off reliever Jeff Musselman, who lost his NL debut.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

Greg Maddux, Mitch Williams and Les Lancaster combined on a six-hitter for Chicago's eighth shutout, leading the Cubs past Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium.

Williams relieved Maddux, 12-8, with one out and runners on first and third in the seventh inning. He struck out Len Dykstra and got Tom Herr to fly out.

Padres 6, Braves 5

Tony Gwynn helped visiting San Diego complete a three-game sweep with two run-scoring singles as the Padres beat slumping All-Star John Smoltz and Atlanta.

Gwynn's single broke a 4-4 tie in the fourth, scoring Bip Roberts, who had doubled and advanced to third on an infield grounder.

Gwynn's first-inning single also scored Roberts, who had walked and advanced to third on Roberto Alomar's single. Gwynn was 3-for-5 and raised his average to .337, second in the NL.

Smoltz, 11-9, lost his third decision in a row since the All-Star Game. He allowed six runs and 11 hits in seven innings, walking four. Smoltz has pitched at least seven innings in 16 of his last 18 games.

Pirates 1, Expos 0

Pinch-hitter Benny Distefano's run-scoring single with two outs in the 12th inning broke a scoreless tie and lifted Pittsburgh past Montreal at Three Rivers Stadium, cutting the Expos' lead over Chicago.

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds congratulate themselves on the field at Riverfront Stadium after they defeated the Houston Astros 18-2. The Reds set a major league record with 16 hits in the first inning as they scored 14 runs.

after the inning and thought, 'This is going to be a pretty long day.'"

It seemed even longer for the Astros.

"Most of them were seeing-eye hits and loopers," Houston manager Art Howe said. "They just fell in. It was one of the strangest innings I've ever seen."

Seven Reds had two hits off Houston starter Jim Clancy and reliever Bob Forsch in the first, breaking a century-old record. The previous record for most batters with two hits in an inning was set by Chicago against Detroit in 1883.

Angels vault back into West lead

By The Associated Press
American League teams are drawing a blank when they try to beat the California Angels.

The Angels pulled back into first place in the West after a two-day absence when Kirk McCaskill beat Seattle 6-0 with a seven-hitter ahead of Oakland in the West. The Athletics lost 6-4 to the Chicago White Sox.

McCaskill, 11-6, yielded seven hits and struck out three en route to his third complete game and California's 24th of the season.

Johnny Ray and Devon White each hit two-run homers to support McCaskill.

After an RBI single by White made it 1-0 in the third inning, Seattle starter Randy Johnson, 5-3, issued a leadoff walk to Dick Schofield in the sixth. Ray hit Johnson's next pitch over the left field wall for his third home run and first since June 24.

Later in the sixth, Tony Armas tripled and scored on a single by Chili Davis to give California a 4-0 lead. White's two-run homer, his 10th, came in the ninth.

Indians 4, Red Sox 2

Cleveland moved into second place in the East, 2½ games behind

Baltimore, as right-hander Rod Nichols beat Boston for the second time in a week despite allowing 10 hits in seven-plus innings.

Cory Snyder drove in two runs with a single in the third inning after Joe Carter was walked intentionally to load the bases.

The Indians, who haven't been as close as two games behind in the second half of a non-strike season since 1974, made it 3-0 in the fourth on three singles off Tom Bolton, 0-1, and a sacrifice fly by Jerry Browne.

Royals 5, Blue Jays 0

Tom Gordon continued his strong bid for Rookie of the Year honors with a three-hitter for his first career shutout and complete game for Kansas City, allowing only one Toronto runner to third base.

Gordon, 12-5, who struck out eight and walked two, allowed a single in the second and a double in the eighth to Fred McGriff and a seventh-inning single by Kelly Gruber. McGriff advanced to third on a groundout in the eighth before Gordon struck out pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli.

Yankees 8, Twins 1

New York hammered Rick Aguilera in his debut with Minnesota and Chuck Cary pitched a five-hitter for his second straight complete game.

Aguilera, acquired by the Twins from the New York Mets in the Frank Viola trade on Monday, gave up 10 hits and six runs in four-plus innings. It was his first start since July 9 last season.

Tigers 9, Rangers 6

Detroit and Texas each issued eight walks before Alan Trammell broke a 6-6 tie in the eighth inning with his second RBI single in the game.

Mike Heath started the eighth with a single and Gary Pettis walked. After Kenny Rogers relieved Ceciliano Guante, 5-5, with a 2-0 count on Trammell, Rogers got the count to 3-2 before Trammell singled, scoring Heath with the go-ahead run.

Pinch-hitter Tracy Jones' two-run single completed the scoring for the Tigers, who overcame a 3-1 deficit with five runs in the sixth inning before the Rangers tied it 6-6 on Julio Franco's three-run homer in the seventh.

Mike Henneman, 8-4, worked the last 2 2-3 innings for the win.

White Sox 6, Athletics 4
Chicago ended Oakland's four-game winning streak on Ron Karkovics' first career triple, breaking a sixth-inning tie.

Dan Pasqua led off the inning with a walk off Bob Welch, 11-6, and scored on Karkovics' two-out triple off the wall in right-center. It was Karkovics' first three-base hit in 418 major league at-bats.

MSU gets probation

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis State's new football coach says he's ready to get down to work, now that he knows for sure he has a program to work on.

Until Thursday, Memphis State football faced the possibility of a two-year death penalty from the NCAA. But the NCAA decided on three years probation instead.

"We can now pick it up and go on from here," Coach Chuck Stobart said after the penalty was announced.

The NCAA said a Tiger player was overpaid for a summer job supplied by a booster and then lied about it to investigators.

Investigators also said the player was advised by former coach Charlie Bailey to give misleading information.

Bailey resigned from Memphis State in May, and the NCAA said he must meet with the association's Committee on Infractions if he takes an athletic job with another NCAA school in the next five years. The NCAA could have shut down Memphis State's football program for up to two years because the Tiger football and basketball programs have been on probation within the last five years.

Stobart said he was concerned about that when he replaced Bailey in June but was optimistic that a lesser penalty would be handed down.

White, a Dallas native, was the No. 8 pick overall in the NBA draft.

World record

SEATTLE — The Miss Budweiser, driven by Tom O'Beth, comes into the pits Thursday after setting a new world record on this two-mile qualification lap of 154.54 miles per hour on Lake Washington.

Mavs top draft may follow Ferry

DALLAS (AP) — The agent who represents Dallas Mavericks' No. 1 draft pick Randy White says his client might follow Danny Ferry to Europe.

"We hope we get a deal done with the Mavericks, it would be a great situation," Bill Blakeley said. "But if the dollars are not right, then we have to consider other options, and Europe is enticing."

"We haven't really tested that market, but we probably will," Blakeley added, "if not this year, then next."

White, a Dallas native, was the No. 8 pick overall in the NBA draft.

Ferry, a 6-10 All-America forward from Duke, was disappointed when the Los Angeles Clippers drafted him with the No. 2 pick overall. He stunned the NBA this week when he signed a one-year contract with Messaggero Rome for a reported $1 million.

Italian teams begin practice next Monday for their season which begins Sept. 24.

Dallas general manager Norm Sonju, who has been negotiating with Blakeley, could not be reached for comment because he is vacationing in New York through Aug. 7, when talks on White are scheduled to resume.

White, a 6-8, 225-pound power forward from Louisiana Tech, will have to be signed by Oct. 5 to attend the Mavericks training camp. He has been playing in the NBA Pro-Am League in Dallas this summer.

Mavericks spokesman Kevin Sullivan said Ferry's decision to forgo the NBA shouldn't have much of an impact on talks concerning White.

"I really don't think it will have any bearing," Sullivan said. "There's a big difference money-wise between the No. 2 and 8 spots, anyway."

But Ferry's European tour will definitely have an effect on the No. 3 pick, Arizona guard Sean Elliott, who was drafted by the San Antonio Spurs. Elliott's lawyer Bob Wolf said.

"We were kind of waiting around to see what the No. 2 would get. I don't want Sean to get shortchanged," Wolf said in a telephone interview from his office in Boston.

Wolf also represents Michigan forward Glen Rice, the No. 4 pick overall, who was drafted by the Miami Heat. He said both Elliott and Rice "want very badly to play in the NBA."

ed sparingly this week, staying out of contact drills.

Kansas City Chiefs

First-round draft choice Derrick Thomas is working out every day and hoping contract negotiations can be worked out, too.

If he does not sign, Thomas said he will enroll at Alabama and try to pick up the 16 hours he needs for a degree in criminal justice.

Indianapolis Colts

With a new contract and promises of more playing time, running back Albert Bentley reported to training camp. Bentley, who had threatened to retire, signed a three-year contract extension. Linked with the final year of his previous pact, it is believed to be worth nearly $2 million over four years.

Stanley Morgan, Cedric Jones, Sammy Martin and Mike Jones and rookies Michael Timpon, a fourth-round draft choice from Penn State, and Glenn Antrun, a free agent from Connecticut, are battling for five or six jobs.

Los Angeles Raiders

Sam Graddy, a member of the 1984 Olympic gold medal-winning 400-meter relay team, is trying to make the Raiders as a wide receiver after signing as a Type B free agent.

Seattle Seahawks

With a week before the exhibition season starts, the Seahawks still are missing their starting backfield and seven key veterans. Running backs Curt Warner and John L. Williams both missed practice with minor injuries.

Atlanta Falcons
The Falcons are piling up injuries even before exhibition play starts. Cornerback Bobby Butler's sore neck kept him out of a joint workout with the Miami Dolphins. He joined quarterback Chris Miller (pulled stomach muscle) wide receiver Shawn Collins (pulled groin) and nose tackle Tony Casillas (knee) on the sidelines.

New York Jets

Offensive guard Mike Haight's injured right knee is more serious than originally thought and will keep him out of Saturday's scrimmage against the New York Giants.

Haight sprained his knee during a blocking drill in last Saturday's scrimmage against the Washington Redskins and practic-

GIVE THANKS TO GOD FOR THE LIBERTY IN OUR LAND

Through history, man's liberty
Was sought in every land.
They set their sights on human rights
That all of us demand.
We have today the right to say
The words that we profess,
Like those you'll read and then concede
As freedom of the press.
To meet with friends, it all depends
On vigil we maintain;
For while we're free, we'll never be Required to explain.
And any way we choose to pray,
We have that guarantee,
So thank the Lord for this reward,
And keep our nation free.

'God can bring light to the darkest day'

By BILLY GRAHAM
DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm worried about my elderly mother. We took her to a doctor (a psychiatrist) because she was experiencing depression. He prescribed so many medications that she spends the whole day just doped up and unable to do anything. Do you think this is what he should have done? She used to be such a lively and joyful person, and I hate to see her in her present condition. - A.D.

Billy Graham

DEAR A.D.: I would not be qualified, of course, to say whether or not your doctor is treating your mother properly. However, you should certainly express your concerns to him. People differ in their tolerance for medicine, for example, and the doctor needs to know that your mother's medications are affecting her in this way. If you're not satisfied, feel free to seek a second opinion from another doctor, just as you might if you were facing a serious physical problem or surgery.

Let me encourage you also, however, to let this be a time when your mother senses in a special way your love and concern for her. Sometimes older people become depressed because they feel useless or lonely. I don't know if this is part of your mother's problem, of course - but do all you can to let her know you consider her a very special person. Visit her often; take her little gifts or flowers; give her a special hug; take her on outings whenever she is able. One of the Ten Commandments says, "Honor your father and your mother, so that you may live long" (Exodus 20:12). This is true for us when we are young children, but it's also true as we grow older.

In addition, pray for your mother - and let her know you're praying for her. God loves her, and if she's never given much thought to his fact, pray that God will touch her in a special way and cause her to turn to him. He can bring light to the darkest day.

Thousands see religious statue

DALLAS (AP) - The final display of the replica of a Mexican religious statue at a tiny Catholic church drew thousands of people despite oppressive heat that overcame children and the elderly as they waited hours to see the display of the replica of a Mexican religious statue at a tiny Catholic church.

An emotional crowd, with many crying as they waited, began forming at 4:30 a.m. Sunday, the sixth and final scheduled day of the 360-year-old replica's visit. At one time, the line of people and cars stretched for 10 blocks along a busy Dallas street.

"What we've seen is a revival of faith," said Bishop Thomas Tschoepe as he visited the crowd opened in the rectory to treat people waiting to see Our Lady of San Juan de Los Lagos at the San Juan-

Black priest fired by bishop after joining dissident group

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Richmond, Va. priest fired from his job by his Roman Catholic bishop for trying to set up a separate African-American Catholic congregation now seeks to "challenge other black priests."

The Rev. Bruce Greening announced Wednesday he would join the Rev. George A. Stallings in setting up a separate African-American Catholic congregation.

"What is happening at Imani Temple is in my opinion the right method to take," Greening said, referring to the congregation set up by Stallings, himself suspended by Washington Archbishop James Hickey.

Greening said he wanted "to challenge other black priests and other black sisters" to follow Stallings' example.

Greening, 38, was fired by the Catholic Diocese of Richmond, for which he had worked since 1988 as the principal of an elementary school in Norfolk. The priest, a member of the Society of the Divine Savior, in Milwaukee, Wis., had requested a leave of absence from his Virginia job to set up a separate congregation for blacks.

He remains a priest. "By the very fact of his free decision, Father Greening automatically dissociates himself from the Diocese of Richmond," said Richmond Bishop Walter F. Sullivan. "I am relieving him of his duties as principal of St. Mary's Academy in Norfolk, effective immediately."

Stallings, who has strongly

"By the very fact of his free decision, Father Greening automatically dissociates himself from the Diocese of Richmond. I am relieving him of his duties as principal of St. Mary's Academy."
— Bishop Walter F. Sullivan

criticized the Catholic Church, accusing its leaders of not meeting the needs of its black members, said Greening would assist him as a minister and in forming a school at the month-old Imani Temple.

The Rev. Keith Brennan, spokesman for the Society of the Divine Savior, Salvatorian Order in Wisconsin, said no action had been taken there by Greening's provincial, the Rev. Paul Portland. "This is the first time that we have had anything like this happen," said Brennan. "We are trying to find as much information about what occurred, and what our obligations are within the law of the church."

Brennan said the Wisconsin office would first hold an internal meeting and would then call Greening back to his home office for an explanation.

He said that Greening was the only black priest among 123 at the Wisconsin religious order.

In Atlanta, meanwhile, black Catholics are poised to begin today their annual layman's conference, the first major gathering of black Catholics since Stallings founded his splinter group.

The Rev. James Goode, a San Francisco priest who will attend the Atlanta conference, praised Stallings' movement as "a beautiful time of coming together of African-American Catholics across the country."

At the press conference in Washington, Greening said he had been warned by the Richmond bishop against becoming involved with Stallings.

Stallings, who appeared with Greening, said the congregation of the Imani Temple would be meeting Aug. 19 to discuss the issues they feel should be at the forefront of the church's agenda.

"We're going to look at teen-age pregnancy and the drug epidemic in our community," he said. "We see these issues as being systematic of greater issues in our society." Other priorities for the black community are unemployment and education, Stallings said.

He also said the Imani Temple has received several requests from other cities to help them establish other African-American congregations.

Stallings said although he has his eye set on certain cities he felt would respond enthusiastically, he first wanted to set the groundwork for the "Mother Church."

Public invited to view film Sunday

First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster, will show the film "They Cry in the Night" Sunday at 6 p.m.

The film's topic is the story of pioneer Nazarene missionary Harmon Schanzelzenbach and his trek into Swaziland, Africa.

The missionary's successful struggle to plant the Church of the Nazarene on the African continent is also portrayed.

Schanzelzenbach's grandson will speak at the church Aug. 14 at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Religion roundup

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — A Soviet Baptist says atheism is in a state of confusion in his homeland and it no longer will be a required course in universities.

Instead, an elective introduction to religion class will include lessons both on atheism and Christianity, says the Rev. Yakov K. Dukhochenko of the All-Union Council of Evangelical Christians-Baptists of the Ukraine.

"This is God's timing for our country," he told the Slavic Gospel Association's international conference.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing figures that only a tiny fraction of young women counseled at pro-life centers give their babies up for adoption, syndicated "Ethics and Religion" columnist Michael J. McManus calls it "a scandal."

He says 300,000 babies are born annually to unmarried teenagers with scant prospects as mothers, but only 1 percent of those counseled by Birthright centers and 4 percent of those counseled by the Christian Action Council centers offer the newborns for adoption and a more secure future.

"It is as if the pro-life forces are only 'pro-life' up until the birth of the baby — with little pro-life concern after birth," he writes.

Protestants modify abortion positions

NEW YORK (AP) — Most major Protestant denominations which once widely condoned abortion now either oppose it or specify limitations to it. They've modified their positions.

The changes have come over the last decade as abortions went on at the rate of about 1.5 million a year and advances in embryology increased understanding of the developing fetus.

Aware of such factors, denominational conventions, one after another, have qualified their stands on abortions, voicing misgivings about it and condemning use of it for various purposes.

"They've back-pedaled," said the Rev. J. Robert Nelson, director of the Institute of Religion of the Texas Medical Center in Houston.

He said the "staggering statistics" and the new therapeutic embryology on distinctive characteristics of the fetus as not part of the woman's body, "have made for second and third thoughts" about abortion.

"The whole movement toward more conservative religious positions also doubtlessly accounts to some extent for the shift," he added in a telephone interview.

The revisions began long before the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision expanding state jurisdiction on the issue, but became general among mainline denominations in the 1980's.

Although recognizing abortion's legality and individual decision-making about it, four major Protestant denominations last year added extensive circumstances in which it was rejected.

The Episcopal Church, stiffening its past stance, sanctioned abortion "only in extreme situations. We emphatically oppose abortion as a means of birth control, family planning, sex selection, or any reason of mere convenience."

The United Methodist Church, while recognizing "tragic conflicts of life with life that may justify abortion," added opposition to it as a means of birth control or gender selection.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) added language saying abortion "should not be used for convenience or to ease embarrassment or as a means of birth control." The church, now engaged in a major reappraisal of the abortion issue, has scheduled a pro-and-con dialogue on it Nov. 17-19 in Kansas City.

American Baptist Churches, in a revised, middle-ground stance, denounced "irresponsible sexual behavior" contributing to the "large number of abortions each year," and says:

"As American Baptists we oppose abortion, as a means of avoiding responsibility for conception, as a primary means of birth control without regard for the far-reaching consequences of the act."

However, the United Church of Christ maintains a clearly pro-choice position, reaffirming it in July at a general synod in Fort Worth, Texas, at the same time the high court upheld some state prerogatives on the issue.

The denomination deplored the court decision, charging it would make "freedom of choice" difficult for the poor. It also, however, set a special "theology colloquy" on the subject Aug. 13-18 in Craigville, Mass.

Annual 'Summer Festival'

More than 20 members of the Guadalupe Society of Sacred Heart Catholic Church have been busy preparing Mexican cuisine for the church's 30th annual "Summer Festival," which will be conducted today through Saturday, from 7 p.m. until midnight.

Activities include a raffle, a prize walk, a cake walk, and a country store with arts and crafts.

The menu includes tamales, which can be purchased for $4.50 per dozen; flautas, gorditas, refried beans, tripas, beef burritos, hamburgers, and coke and beer.

The tamales, which take three days to prepare, are made with meat from a hogs head and placed in a corn shuck with a cornmeal mixture.

The annual tamale sale usually nets $1,500, according to Katie Hernandez, church member.

Most of the ladies have gathered at the church to make the homemade Mexican dishes since the inception of the festival. "I've been making the tamales for the festival since 1956," Hernandez said.

All proceeds go to the church.

Church briefs

Local churches to host VBS

The following churches will conduct Vacation Bible School Aug. 7-11.

• Central Baptist Church, Elbow Community, will conduct classes, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., for nursery-age children through adult.

Family night will be Aug. 12 at 7 p.m.

This year's theme is "God's Love — A Rainbow of Colors." Activities include Bible study, music, and arts and crafts.

Specially planned activities will be conducted each night. For transportation, please call 398-5469, or 263-7808.

• First Presbyterian Church,

Eighth and Runnels streets, will conduct classes Aug. 7-11, from 9 to 11:30 a.m., for kindergarten through sixth grade children.

Commencement will be conducted Aug. 13, followed by a sandwich supper.

This year's theme is "Celebrate God's Love," according to Sherry Hodnett, director.

Activities include the Feaster Puppets, movies, balloon launch, Bible study, and arts and crafts.

In lieu of offerings, children are asked to bring canned goods to be donated to the Northside Community Center, and/or used sheets for the Presbyterian women's White Cross Program.

Seminary classes set to begin

Tall City Baptist Church, Midland, will begin its third year of seminary classes Aug. 22.

Anyone who has been called by God to preach, or if you are a music minister, choir member, Christian worker, or just interested in Bible study, you are invited to attend classes.

For more information, please call David Dawson, registrar and missionary pastor of Liberty Baptist Church, Big Spring, at 267-6098, or 263-3656.

Men's fellowship breakfast

The Big Spring Baptist Association's Men's Fellowship Breakfast will be hosted Sunday at 7:30 a.m. at Hillcrest Baptist Church.

Speaker will be Councilman Tim Blackshear. Discussion will include the "1990 Here's Hope Simultaneous Revivals," scheduled for March and April.

All Southern Baptist men are invited to attend.

Cost is $2 per person. For more information, please call Sam Robertson at 263-7850.

Luchsingers to sing in Coahoma

Paul and Susie Luchsinger will minister in song and message Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Vincent Baptist Church, Coahoma.

According to a news release, Paul was a professional rodeo cowboy when came to know Jesus Christ as his personal Lord and savior.

The sister of country/western star Reba McEntire, Susie accepted Jesus into her heart during a revival meeting at the age of 13.

After their marriage in November 1981, Paul continued to rodeo, and Susie toured with Reba.

Seeing each other only when their schedules allowed, they soon grew tired of their hectic lifestyle. It was during that time that they began searching for fulfillment. "The rest is testimony you won't want to miss."

For more information, please call 915-965-3341.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Murphy thinks he got a raw deal from Paramount and a bum rap from Spike Lee.

"Given my personal circumstances and the success of my films, I've got the worst deal in Hollywood," Murphy said in the Aug. 8 issue of Rolling Stone magazine.

He was upset by Jack Nicholson's potential $60 million payday for "Batman," a payoff based on a percentage of the receipts and merchandising rather than the per-film deal that Murphy signed with Paramount Pictures.

"When I renegotiated my deal with Paramount a few years ago, it

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Torch singer Phyllis Hyman has taped a public service announcement about breast exams because of a friend's death from breast cancer and her sister's struggle with the disease.

Ms. Hyman, a Philadelphia native who still lives in the city, filmed the announcement Tuesday for Thomas Jefferson University Hospital and the Linda Creed Foundation.

More than 142,000 women in the United States develop breast cancer and about 43,000 women die of the disease each year.

seemed great," said Murphy. "But nobody planned that my pictures would be as successful as they are. So now I've got a (lousy) deal, compared with what I could be making."

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loni Anderson, first man on the moon Neil Armstrong, actor Robert Taylor, legendary film director-writer-actor John Huston, former quarterback Roman Gabriel, former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, British actor Reginald Owen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Speak up if you feel your territorial rights are being violated. Listen to your conscience when making a strictly personal decision. Travel is favored. Visit places you have never been before.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Recent apprehensions fade. Family ties sustain you even when things do not go as smoothly as planned. Stick to your diet and follow a self-improvement regimen faithfully. True friends applaud your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your charisma attracts people from all walks of life. Choose your confidants with care. A perfect day for taking a walk around town. A shopping trip yields pleasant surprises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know what is best for you. Why keep sitting on the fence? It is time to get a personal relationship into high gear. Travel will not produce any new answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People may request more help than you can deliver today. Be kind but firm. You will find yourself at your romantic best this weekend. Be imaginative when choosing a gift for a mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Express your feelings in a positive manner and everyone will benefit. Your subconscious may be working overtime. Find a way to get more sleep. Burning the candle at both ends is a serious mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If boredom with your usual routine is a problem, look for constructive diversions. Take steps to draw your loved ones together. Do not fiddle around; only prompt action will mend a rift.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romantic activities may go in a different direction than you expected. A trip to the mountains or seaside gives you time to think things over. Re-main true to your dreams and ideals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be on the lookout for an opportunity to travel. You could find that your senses are more acute than ever this evening. Avoid noisy social gatherings. Romance takes root in a quiet setting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial goals are easier to achieve when you have a partner to help you keep things on an even keel. Stop worrying about whether or not people like you. You are more popular than you think.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let the milk of human kindness flow and a new relationship will become something very special. Although it is difficult to forget a past love, you must get on with your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Even if money is scarce, you can have a great weekend. You need to be honest with partner if you are to build the kind of relationship you desire. Avoid ducking the issue.
