French press reacts to massive mishap

MERCEUIL, France (AP) — Forty-four children bound for camp burned to death Saturday after their bus plowed into another, reportedly after racing 75-80 mph down a rain-slick highway to make up for lost time. Nine adults also died in France's worst road accident.

The disaster occurred in predawn darkness at a notoriously crowded highway interchange at the start of the annual summer vacation exodus. The respected newspaper Le Monde said the accident was a tragic example of "innocence killed by the irresponsibility of those who call themselves adults."

The newspaper France-Soir quoted witnesses saying the bus drivers were "racing each other at 75-80 miles an hour, flashing their lights, in the rain." A relative of seven of the dead children said before the buses left a little town north of Paris "the drivers were disputing among themselves, angry they were 45 minutes late and arguing over their loads."

Mothers in the northern town, Crepy-en-Valois, wept as they read lists of names taped to the door of the town hall. "I looked first at the list of survivors for my two granddaughters," Liliane Rollet said. "When I didn't find them, I still had a small hope — who knows? Then I saw the death list."

The children, two camp counselors and two drivers were all trapped in one flaming bus, its front doors jammed by the impact of the crash. There were no casualties aboard the other children's bus, but five adults burned to death in two of seven cars involved in the collision.

The figures were given by Civil Defense Administrator G. Vachet at the regional government headquarters in Dijon, not far from the crash site some 200 miles south of Paris.

Forty-five children initially had been listed as dead in the 2 a.m. crash. But hours after the accident, David Dapon was found hiding in a thicket.

Vachet said originally that Dapon was found near the scene of the crash. But later, Alethe Dorel, press officer at the regional headquarters, said that version was erroneous.

She said Dapon was taken with 13 other children who escaped the burning bus to a local summer camp. Then the boy ran away, and was found on the camp grounds when a recount was made several hours later.

The local highway police commander, Sgt. M. Buffet said the buses' speedometers had been destroyed so their exact speed would never be known.

He said it was difficult to tell whether they had been driving at speeds of 75-80 mph as witnesses told reporters. But he said evidence indicated they were traveling between 60 and 75 mph. The speed limit for buses is 55 mph, compared to 80 mph for private cars. Buffet said the heavy traffic and rain-slicked road were major factors in the accident.

The children were in two buses traveling in convoy from Crepy-en-Valois to a three-week summer camp in the French Alps. All those in the first bus escaped injury.

Bush says U.S. effort may not stop pipeline

DALLAS (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Saturday the Reagan administration may fail to stop the Siberian pipeline from being built, but that U.S.-licensed companies sactioned for working on the project have sent a human rights message to the Soviets.

"We know the actions the president has taken may fail to stop the pipeline completely. And we know our actions have caused trouble with our allies in Europe," Bush said. "But this is a matter of principle."

The Soviets were warned after intervening in Poland that economic sanctions would be imposed if martial law was not lifted, and that promise was fulfilled, the vice president said.

Bush spoke to about 400 people at a fundraiser for 24th District congressional candidate Lucy Patterson. That and another reception Bush attended raised about $80,000 for Ms. Patterson's campaign.

Bush campaigned in San Antonio later Saturday for George Strake, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, and was to appear Sunday in Victoria for former U.S. Rep. Joe Wyatt.

"The liberal national Democrats are predicting we're going to be wiped out and I just think they're wrong," Bush said in San Antonio. "You can't beat somebody without having any new ideas."

In Dallas, Bush said that the Republicans have made progress on the economic front by cutting taxes and slowing inflation. But he said high unemployment continues to plague the Reagan administration.

"Most important, we are cleaning up the economic mess at home — the mess left us by our predecessors," he said. "Some of our achievements have been startling. Since President Reagan took office, the prime rate has dropped from 21.5 percent to 15 percent."

And inflation during the same period has dropped from 12.4 percent to an annualized rate of 6 percent, which he said was an improvement over the Democratic administration of Jimmy Carter. But unabated increases in unemployment, he said, are not the result of the Reagan administration ignoring the poor.

"The president and I are both sharply aware of the pain of unemployment — a pain that statistics cannot measure," he said.

He cited as an example two tax cuts that would provide $340 million for the American people.

"Ronald Reagan will not turn his back on the poor," he said. "He doesn't change direction. It may be a trimming of sails. But he will not turn back to port."

Earlier, he said improvements in the economy will enable Texas Republicans this fall will pick up congressional seats and make a strong showing in races for the Legislature.

"The common adage is that the party in power loses seats in an off-presidential election year," Bush said.

Sewage again an issue

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

A news release from the Department of Water Resources about a proposed sewage treatment plant to be built by a private developer northwest of Midland Regional Airport sent shudders down the spine of Midland city officials early last week.

On Friday, project engineer for Westlake Properties of Odessa said the release was incorrect and Westlake Properties would not be discharging treated sewage down the center of Midland by way of the Northwest Drainage Channel to Scharbauer Draw and finally into Midland Draw.

The problem may center on the application filed by the engineers — and for which the City Council has asked a public hearing — and not the desires or plans by the developer.

The application filed with the Department of Water Resources and obtained by John Lowe, utilities director for the city, was prepared by Espey, Huston & Associates, Inc., an Austin engineering firm hired by Westlake Properties. Glyn L. Day Jr. of Odessa is listed as managing partner in the firm.

Basically, Westlake Properties is a 921-acre shopping, office and residential development in the planning stage at the intersection of FM 1788 and Highway 191, or the North Route to Odessa, and about two miles northwest of Air Terminal.

THAT SITE was selected, according to Gary Chatham, project manager, because it is located "at what will become a very important intersection. It will house businesses that will serve a larger region than just Midland-Odessa."

The development also includes plans for a regional shopping area and housing for 6,000 to 8,000 residents.

In looking over the application, Lowe interprets it to mean that the developer plans to put secondarily treated sewage water through a series of lakes in the development and then shunt the wastewater north into a playa lake. From there it would flow toward Midland and into the Northwest Drainage Channel, which runs past Midland College, into Scharbauer Draw, Midland Draw, Johnson Draw, Mustang Draw, Beals Creek and then Colorado River.

The application reads: "The proposed wastewater treatment facility will be of the contact stabilization modification of the activated sludge process. The facility will typically consist of a lift station, bar screen, aeration basin,

Man freed after second trial

A Midland jury considering the guilt or innocence of Booker T. "Billy" Green Jr. deliberated about 5½ hours Saturday before setting Green free and exonerating him of the slaying of Midland businessman Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr. last Nov. 14 on the eastside of town.

Green claimed he shot Morris in self-defense after the two men had quarrelled and scuffled over a dice game in the Amusement Parlor of Marshall King's Sandwich Shop at Illinois Avenue and Lee Street.

Green, 42, said he was upset over Morris' calling him "boy," which he viewed as an insult, and over Morris, who was winning at craps, trying to entice him back into a dice game.

The five-man, seven-woman jury began its deliberations about 11:30 a.m. Saturday following closing arguments by District Attorney Vern Martin, his prosecutor, Marian Bentley, and by defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch.

"THE JURY HAS spoken," Hirsch said after the trial, "and I'm pleased."

The trial was the state's second go-around in trying to convict Green of slaying Morris, 50, in Morris' M&M Liquor Store minutes after the scuffle in the gambling parlor.

The state claimed Green's motive for the slaying was his rage over losing at dice and thinking Morris had cheated him, over Morris' "boy" reference and by jealousy of Morris' influence and affluence, including his property holdings, restaurant, diamond and gold jewelry, his Cadillacs and expensive home with swimming pool.

Green, charged the prosecution, got his .22-caliber rifle out of his Oldsmobile, walked up to the front of the liquor store, and fired five rounds while Morris was talking with his grandchild and visting with his son, daughter and daughter-in-law.

Green, however, maintained that he got the rifle from his car's trunk "for protection," spotted Morris wielding a pistol and lunging toward him and opened fire without aiming. One slug struck Morris in the heart.

AFTER PRESIDING Judge Vann Culp of the 238th State District Court had read the jury's verdict, the Green faction in the courtroom was joyful and tearful. The Morris element, including his wife, Dr. Ruby Morris, son Bubba and daughter Carol, was somber and glum.

"Thank you, Lord! Thank you, Jesus!" sobbed Green's mother, Margie Green, who, carrying a Bible, had been in the courtroom since the trial's beginning on Monday.

Green's wife, Opal, was smiling. His

Electioneering may stall budget bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional battle plan against the federal deficit is proceeding smoothly in the Senate, but election-year rhubarbs in the House are threatening to stall mandated legislation to raise taxes and cut spending.

Under the Republican-drafted budget blueprint approved in June, Congress has directed itself to reduce spending by $27.2 billion over three years and raise taxes by $98.3 billion over the same period.

In the Senate, Republican leaders used their majority strength to gain approval, 50-47, of a $98.5 billion three-year tax increase that also includes $17.5 billion in cuts in Medicare, Medicaid and aid to the needy. But it took four days of debate and consideration of 67 amendments to get the measure passed.

In the House, Democratic leaders hope to convince voters that the fingerprints on this year's tax and spending measures belong to Republicans.

Thus, the Democratic-controlled House last week agreed, 208-197, to bypass the normal procedure of writing its own tax bill and accept the outlines of the Senate version for use by congressional negotiators in developing a compromise measure.

The slim margin of the vote indicates that final House acceptance of a tax increase is far from certain. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has said that if President Reagan wants the House to approve a tax increase this year "he better get out there and start working.... Certainly I'm not going to have the onus on Democrats."

In addition, some Democrats hope to use the measure to reverse some of the tax breaks given the oil industry last year, while others intend to resist Republican efforts to cut Medicare and Medicaid.

The bill's future also is uncertain because of the objections of conservative Republicans and a general reluctance to raise taxes in an election year.

Failure to enact a revenue measure this year could send budget deficits soaring well above the $103.9 billion projected in the congressional blueprint for 1983, $83.9 billion for 1984 and $59.9 billion for 1985.

In revised forecasts last week, the Congressional Budget Office predicted the 1983 deficit would be $141 billion to $151 billion and the Reagan administration said it would total $115 billion.

In addition to tax increases, the budget blueprint approved by Congress also calls for $27.2 billion in spending cuts over the next three years.

GOP leaders hope to win Senate approval for the package by the end of the week.

House Republicans realize that an up-or-down vote on such a package of cuts — as was done on $35 billion in budget savings last year — would shield them from having to vote cuts in popular programs.

Texas producers want to establish certified brucellosis-free cattle herds

AUSTIN — Texas livestock producers are continuing to show an increasing interest in establishing certified brucellosis-free herds, according to Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

More than 450 certified brucellosis-free herds are estimated in Texas now, and more than 800 are expected by end of the year.

"A cattleman's best assurance for as much free movement of his cattle as possible within Texas or out-of-state is a certified brucellosis-free herd," Holcombe said.

Currently, there are 26 breeds in Texas with certified brucellosis-free herds. These include Brangus, Angus, Maine Anjou, Holstein, Beefmaster, Brahman, Charolais, Santa Gertrudis, Red Angus, Polled Hereford, Hereford, Pinzgauer, Simmental, Jersey, Limousin, Red Brangus, Red Brahman, Longhorn, Beefalo, Polled Brahman, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Aberdeen Angus, Tarentaise, Braford and Chianina.

A certified brucellosis-free herd is available for beef cattle producers — both registered and commercial — and dairymen.

Sale extension seen as forward step

WACO — Texas Farm Bureau President Carrol Chaloupka has expressed satisfaction with President Ronald Reagan's intentions to extend the Russian grain agreement on a one-year basis due to its favorable economic impact on American agriculture.

Chaloupka viewed Reagan's announcement as a major step in resolving the "serious economic problems in agriculture" by permitting the United States to export "more grain than we have in the past."

Grain prices generally have been depressed due to an oversupply.

Ranchers to gather soon at Del Rio

DEL RIO — Ranching industry's experts and policymakers will converge here for the second annual International Ranchers Roundup (IRR) Aug. 10-12.

Theme of the roundup is "Effective Ranch Management."

Keynote speakers will include Raymond D. Lett, executive assistant to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block; Charles G. Scruggs, vice president and editor of Progressive Farmer magazine; Susan McBee, Texas state representative; Stan Parsons, Savory Grazing System consultant; Bob Bliss, Friona Industries representatives, and Terry Mitchell, Australian Department of Agriculture representative.

Farm Bureau urges spending curb

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — The American Farm Bureau Federation has launched a national drive to convince the administration and the U.S. Congress that the only acceptable way to national economic recovery lies in drastically curbed federal spending to assure a balanced federal budget.

Robert B. Delano, AFBF president, kicked off the bureau's anti-spending, anti-tax increase with a letter to the U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

"Prosperity will not return until all productive sectors of the economy are convinced that Congress and the administration are in fact committed to fundamental changes in federal spending, including entitlement programs," Delano said.

Farm incentive plan legislation favored

WACO — Texas Farmers Union President Mike Moeller joined with the National Farmers Union in support of legislation introduced by Congressman Tom Foley as the only feasible plan currently before Congress to aid the depressed farm economy and to provide relief for hard-pressed grain farmers.

"The only way we will be able to reduce grain inventories and increase prices is to provide our farmers with a realistic incentive rather than the empty shell offered by the Reagan Administration," he said.

The TFU was critical of the proposed 1983 wheat program announced by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block and which calls for voluntary set-asides in wheat.

"For the fourth year in a row, producers are being told they will lose money and the Administration provided no feasible proposal to change that situation," he said.

Under the Foley plan, the bill will combine an acreage set-aside with a paid diversion. Also, price support loan rates will be increased slightly for both wheat and feed grains in 1983.

Regal-bred yearlings chosen for sale

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — One hundred regal-bred quarter horse yearlings have been approved for the second annual Ruidoso Super Select Sale here Aug. 29 in the Ruidoso Downs Chaparral Convention Center here.

Sisters and brothers to six champions, including two-time world champion Dash For Cash, are among those catalogued for the sale. Also on the bid list are yearlings from $100,000 producing mares.

Ground covers help solve lawn's 'shady' problems

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

AGRICULTURE

Although grass is generally regarded as the most desirable ground cover for the home landscape, there are situations where it may not be the most practical landscape covering. In heavily shaded areas of the landscape where grass will not grow well, other methods of covering the soil could be considered. One of the most satisfactory methods is the use of ground cover plants.

Ground covers are low-growing plants that spread by underground or aboveground stems that have an inherent trailing growth habit. As these plants grow and develop, they produce a continuous mat on the soil surface.

Ground cover plants range from woody vines to dwarf shrubs depending on individual preference.

Some of the more prominent uses of ground covers in typical situations are to cover bare areas of ground, prevent erosion of the soil, give variety in the yard or garden, regulate foot traffic in the yard or garden when used as edging for pathways, and to unify unrelated shrubs and flowerbeds in the landscape.

In addition, ground covers are frequently used under or around trees where grass grows poorly or where exposed tree roots make mowing a problem. Ground cover plants eliminate the need for mowing as well as concealing the exposed tree roots.

There are a number of plants suitable for living ground covers. For shade or partial shade there are vinca, Algerian ivy, English ivy, monkey grass, liriope, ajuga and hypericum. For sunny locations you can consider Asiatic jasmine, monkey grass, creeping junipers, purple leaf honeysuckles, liriope, daylilies, santolina, sedum and dwarf yaupon.

Proper soil preparation is needed before ground cover plants are planted. Dig the soil at least six inches deep. Rake thoroughly to remove grass roots. Spread two to three inches of organic material such as peat, well-rotted manure or leaf mold over the ground and spade it into the soil.

It is essential to remove all grass and to be assured of a weed-free planting area. Once the ground cover is planted, it is difficult to eradicate undesirable weeds and grasses.

Ground cover plantings will profit from a mulch such as straw or pine bark to hold the soil in place and conserve surface moisture until the planting is established.

Ground covers can be planted any time during the growing season. Fall and spring plantings give best results if potted or canned plants are used. Keep the new plantings well watered until it becomes established.

GARDENERS WITH LIMITED space can plant vegetables in the flower beds around the home for fall production. Several highly productive vegetables will do extremely well when planted in flower beds and can be an attractive as well as functional addition to the landscape.

Leaf lettuce makes an ideal border plant and will grow in areas that receive only partial sunlight. Most varieties will be ready for harvesting 45 to 60 days from planting. The red leaf variety Ruby not only adds color to flower beds but also provides food for the table.

Onions or their close relatives — chives, leeks and garlic — will all do well in flower beds that receive limited amounts of sunlight. Parsley is another fall crop that makes an ideal border planting and can be harvested throughout the winter in some mild seasons.

Many common fall vegetables such as broccoli, cabbage, spinach, beets, carrots and the various types of greens will do exceptionally well in flower beds that receive five to six hours of sunlight a day.

If crops such as tomatoes, eggplants and peppers are to be grown in flower beds as a fall crop, they should be located in areas that receive at least eight hours of sunlight a day. Locating cold-susceptible crops on the south side of the house will give them some protection from the first cold winds of winter.

Some Iowa farmers aren't impressed with Reagan's grain sale extension

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — While many Iowa farmers feel exports are the salvation of the sunken farm economy, most apparently are unimpressed with President Reagan's extension of the grain trade agreement with the Soviet Union.

And some farmers say Reagan's visit here Monday will underscore the president's failure to meet their needs.

"The administration is doing nothing to help depressed farm prices and to cut high interest rates that are the heart of the current farm crisis," said George Holl, a spokesman for the American Agriculture Movement.

Other farm leaders were less critical, but said Reagan's grain trade move was too tentative and failed to reverse what they see as the United States' image of unpredictability in world trade.

Reagan said Friday he would offer the Soviet Union a year extension of the grain trade agreement that expires Sept. 30. The agreement calls for the Soviets to buy at least 6 million metric tons of grain. Officials also could sell Soviet Union grain in excess of the current 8-million metric ton ceiling.

Dean Kleckner, head of the Iowa Farm Bureau, said that is far short of the need.

The Farm Bureau is by far the largest farm group in Iowa, and its leaders will meet in private with Reagan here on Monday night. Also during his visit to Iowa, Reagan will speak to a corn growers convention here and visit a farm near State Center. Reagan will spend Monday night in Iowa, and Tuesday in Connecticut before returning to Washington.

"This still does not make us a reliable supplier," Kleckner said of the grain pact. "A grain agreement for one year, two years or five years is not the answer. We need to guarantee to our overseas grain buyers that we will fill our contracts and assure them that they will not be cut off."

Moderate and liberal farm groups were more critical of the president.

Dave Kozishek of the Iowa National Farmers Organization said exports are not as important as they are said to be.

"What we have seen over the past 40 years is a direct correlation between increased exports and decreased farm income," he said.

Former Southwest Airlines flight attendant Deborah McGee poses in her uniform in a recent file photo. Ms. McGee filed suit in U.S. District Court this week claiming she was unfairly fired by the airline in September 1981 for being four pounds over the weight limit.

Former flight attendant files suit over weight limit

DALLAS (AP) — A former Southwest Airlines flight attendant who says she was fired for being four pounds overweight is suing the airline, asking for reinstatement and back pay.

Deborah McGee claims she was fired unfairly by the regional carrier last September for being four pounds over the weight limit of 108 pounds for her height — 5 feet, 2½ inches.

Ms. McGee, 25, also points out in her suit that the weight-limit chart was changed recently as part of a settlement in another suit filed against Southwest by a man who was denied a job as a flight attendant.

"When they hired me, I knew I had to get my weight down, but they hired me knowing I was over the weight limit," said Ms. McGee, who now has a job selling cosmetics. "I weighed 114 when they hired me, and the limit for my height...was 108."

Ms. McGee said she got down to 108 "by starving myself for two weeks" but her weight quickly rose to 112, which a doctor said should be her normal weight because of her bone structure.

"I still wear a size six," she said. "It's not like I was a big moose coming down the aisle."

Despite the doctor's opinion and letters of approbation from other flight attendants and passengers, Ms. McGee said she was fired at the end of her six-month probationary period.

Under the new weight chart, Ms. McGee comes in one-half pound under the limit.

"I feel I ought to have my job back since I qualify now," she said. "I never should have been fired in the first place."

Her federal court suit filed last week asks that the airline be ordered to put her back to work as a flight attendant and give her back pay of $1,600 a month for the time between her firing and her reinstatement.

Southwest officials could not be reached for comment.

Former Denton city employee indicted for official misconduct

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A former Denton city employee, accused of using city workers for a construction project at his residence, could go to prison for 10 years if convicted on an official misconduct charge.

The indictment, returned Friday by a Denton County grand jury against Glen Gray, was the only one arising from a grand jury investigation of allegations of widespread misconduct among city employees, authorities said.

The official misconduct charge, a third-degree felony, carries a possible 2-to-10-year prison sentence and a fine of up to $5,000.

Gray was fired in May from his job as supervisor of Denton's electrical distribution crews.

The grand jury's investigation began in February and focused on accusations that city employees used city equipment and workers for personal projects.

The panel also looked into City Manager Chris Hartung's handling of computer contracts, according to Assistant District Attorney Alan Levy.

Some residents complained that Hartung circumvented the city council by approving many short-term contracts for computer programmers without seeking council approval.

Hartung was on vacation and unavailable for comment on the grand jury's probe.

District Attorney Jerry Cobb said Friday that the investigation of all city-related allegations is complete and no further indictments are expected.

'Grapes of Wrath' comes to Houston

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOUSTON — Clyde Fox and his family arrived here the other day looking as if they had stepped out of a faded photo depicting the ordeal of Americans who fled the Dust Bowl of the Great Plains during the 1930s.

Ending a three-week journey that had taken them through six states in search of work, Fox and his wife, Judy, stood silently on the sidewalk and watched stoically as heat waves enveloped their battered 1973 Ford van — which was filled with five children, one dog and a great clutter of crumpled clothing, cooking utensils and other household items.

The children, ranging in age from 4 months to 5 years, were hot, hungry and thirsty. Those problems, however, were small in comparison with their parents'. Down and out in an unfamiliar and uncaring city, the two adults bore the haunted, harried look that marked migrant Americans during the Depression.

FOX, A TALL, lean man who is 35 and looks 45, squinted in the harsh sunlight that sears south Texas at high noon in summer. Shielding his eyes, he stared long and hard at the glass-and-steel skyscrapers surrounding him, then shook his head in a slow, sad way.

"Temperature's hot, but this city sure seems cold," he said, scratching a three-day growth of beard. "Been hearing for a long time about how they're hiring in Houston, but I'm not so sure. Now that I'm here, people tell me different."

Those people were officials of the Travelers' Aid Society. After assessing his minimal work qualifications and meager financial resources, they gave Fox a map, a list of possible job sites and scant encouragement. They said his family's size would make it difficult to find shelter and suggested that he return to his hometown of Monroe, La., where at least the surroundings would be familiar.

"I just may do that," said Fox, a house painter who had not held a steady job since 1979, who no longer had a home in his hometown, and who had $9 in his wallet and $4 worth of gas in his van. "Don't think this town is for me."

IN FACT, it is not for a lot of people, and increasing numbers of those who come here with high hopes are reaching that conclusion. Nevertheless, as many as 1,000 newcomers — black, white, young, old — arrive in Houston each week, seeking to start a new life and to gain a greater share of the American dream.

Many of the migrants are modern-day "Okies," akin to characters in "The Grapes of Wrath," John Steinbeck's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about the Depression-era flight of American farm families from the parched plains of Oklahoma to the golden promise of California.

The modern-day "Okies" are, for the most part, jobless factory workers, not farmers. They come to Texas from throughout the country, but a large proportion — at least 25 percent and probably more — are fleeing from Michigan and elsewhere in the Midwest, where the industrial base is rotting, unemployment is rampant and hopes have hit bottom.

"SUBSTANTIAL numbers of Americans have been migrating to this state for two decades," observed economist Bernard Weinstein of the University of Texas. "But there are significant differences among them. In the '60s and '70s, they were more affluent and better educated, and they came by choice for professional advancement. Today's migrants are really economic refugees, acting out of desperation."

The migrants' plight is tinged with irony. Several decades ago, the bustling factories and burgeoning auto plants of the Midwest drew many thousands of job-seekers from the South. Now the children of those immigrants are heading back to the South for the same reasons — and with the same hopes — that motivated their forebears.

Like Fox, many of the migrants are lured by Houston's reputation as a boomtown, a place where good jobs are as plentiful as greenbacks in a Texas oilman's billfold. And, like Fox, many of them come with families and all their worldly goods, only to find that hard times have hit Houston, too.

THE SMELL of money and the prospect of jobs still pervade this city, whose dramatic skyline, towering construction projects and renowned oil enterprises lend it the lusty aura of a town on the make. But behind that prosperous facade lies a bitter reality: There are few jobs for the auto workers, factory hands and semi-skilled laborers who flock here.

The 7 percent unemployment rate in Texas, and the 5.6 percent figure for Houston, compare favorably with the national rate of 9.5 percent, the highest in four decades. They compare even more favorably with the rate in Michigan, where approximately 620,000 persons out of work account for a 14.3 percent unemployment rate, the nation's highest.

Nevertheless, the Texas figures are easily misinterpreted. They are viewed by many as a sign that work is available when, in fact, there is minimal demand for auto or factory workers in what is largely a white-collar economy based on technological and service skills.

Keeping In Touch

This is the first of what I intend to be a number of weekly columns from me, discussing various topics of importance to Texans. During the coming weeks, we will discuss such things as President Reagan's "New Federalism" proposal, the need for better laws dealing with drunk drivers, illegal aliens, the education of our children, and a host of other issues that will be on our political agenda.

I believe these columns will provide a unique opportunity to stimulate public discussion on these important issues. Indeed, this may be the only way I have challenged my opponent, Mr. Hobby, to a series of free-wheeling debates on political issues, so both our views could be put before the people of Texas. We met in debate one time in Houston. In the view of all observers, Mr. Hobby lost and he has announced that he will not debate again. So I have chosen this route to try to let you know my position on the issues. I feel you are entitled to know that before you make your decision in the November election. Additionally, I hope you will let me know your views. They are important to me.

The office of Lieutenant Governor is exceedingly powerful in Texas. It affects all our lives. In addition to presiding over the State Senate, the Lt. Governor appoints all Senate committees, their chairmen, and assigns all legislation to the committee of his choice. He presides over the Legislative Budget Board, which significantly shapes state spending. It is an office all Texans ought to be concerned about.

I hope you will watch for this column. Tell your friends and neighbors about it. Discuss the issues. Together, we can make a contribution to the political processes, and hopefully improve all our lives. Let me know your views on the issues I discuss in the weeks ahead. Just write me at 1213 W. 34th, Austin, Texas 78705.

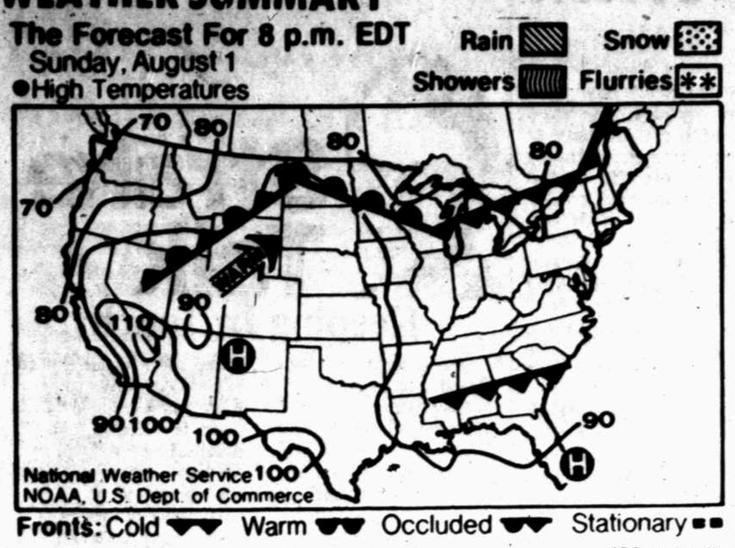
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service predicts clear weather for the entire nation.

Weather expected to be partly cloudy

Although Midlanders received about .03 of an inch of rain during Saturday's brief showers, there were no reports of late afternoon precipitation in other area towns.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the brief interlude of rain — mixed with a few rumbles of thunder — dropped the temperature about 10 degrees around 3 p.m. Saturday. Precipitation for the year to date now stands at 9.52 inches. And July ended with 3.25 inches of rain.

It should remain partly cloudy today with the high reaching into the middle 90s. Skies should be fair tonight, with temperatures dropping near 70. Monday is expected to be sunny and hot with the highs reaching into the upper 90s.

Winds will be south to southeasterly at 5-15 mph today.

Saturday's high of 94 was 11 degrees below the record high of 105, set for that date in 1944. The overnight low of 71 was 15 degrees above the record low of 56, set in 1936.

Local police investigate several thefts

Midland law enforcement departments were kept busy this weekend responding to several reports of burglaries and thefts Saturday.

The theft of a tape player was reported by Willie Pickit, of Motel 6, 1008 S. Midkiff P41, at 10:48 a.m. Saturday. Value was placed at $300.

Dave Shaffer, of 707 Big Spring, reported a burglary at the same residence. Taken were assorted items, including a television set, assorted tools and an air compressor. Total value was placed at about $820.

John Sturdefant, of 1704 S. McKenzie, reported a burglary at the residence. Taken was an assortment of jewelry valued at $355.

A brown clutch billfold containing $250 was reported stolen by Nancy Tranum, of 3318 Fannin, at 2:34 p.m. The billfold also contained credit cards and personal identification cards, according to police reports.

The theft of four $100 bills from the liquor room was reported at Sidewinders, 4300 W. Wall.

Mortan Lislerud, of 2438 Whitmire, No. 8-C, reported the theft of $350 from his apartment. The theft was reported at 3:08 p.m.

At 4:08 p.m., Jerry Williams reported a burglary at Permian Motor Co., 1308 Rankin. Taken were a television set, battery chargers, an air compressor, a mobile air tank and a set of plier. Total value was set at $600.

Murder suspect exonerated after second 'day in court'

brother, Earl, was weeping. "Billy" Green had tears in his eyes.

Green shook the hand of his attorney and hugged him. "If you were a woman and not a man," he told Hirsch, "I'd kiss you."

Green, who has been suspended from his $27,000-a-year job as U.S. Postal Service supervisor since he was indicted for murdering Morris last November, said he would pursue reinstatement.

"Now that this is over, I'll try to deal with them," he said of postal administrators.

The district attorney was not pleased by the outcome of the second Green trial. In the first trial for murder last March, Green was a victim of a hung jury: The jury found him guilty of voluntary manslaughter but could not reach a verdict on the trial's punishment phase. The judge, Culp, then declared a mistrial, and Green subsequently was indicted for manslaughter, which carries a two-year to 20-year prison term; range of punishment for murder is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

"Of course, we don't agree with the jury's verdict," said Martin, "but we have to respect the jury's decision." Martin reasoned that jurors "got confused" on the self-defense issue.

"All I know," said Ms. Bentley, "is that a man is dead."

DR. MORRIS expressed outrage over the jury's verdict.

"This was just a typical Anglo response to a black-on-black case, because basically this a form of racial genocide that they are seemingly perpetrating," the widow said, apparently referring to the white jurors.

"The real loser in the situation is the black male, and especially he who gambles with Billy Green, because if he loses, he takes a chance of losing his life," Dr. Morris said.

"I find consolation with the fact that he (Green) will have to live with himself, knowing that this was a cold-blooded and deliberate assassination of a man because of jealous in a cowardly fashion, because of jealous and envy.

"May God have mercy on him and all those other 'Christians' who felt he should be rewarded for violating one of God's Commandments, the commandment not to kill another person.

"If this is justice, I don't want any part of it. This is white man's justice for black people, and the black race, as usual, is the loser."

Dr. Morris, an administrator in the Midland public school system, said that prosecutor "Marian Bentley did a dynamic job, and it's too bad that the jury was irrational. Too bad she was stuck with a dumb, uncaring, inhumane jury."

Another city sewage issue develops

final clarifier, aerobic digester, chlorine contact chamber and flow measuring device."

That, said Lowe, is similar to the sewage treatment plant which serves Midland.

The city of Midland has been involved in a year-and-a-half battle with Midland County commissioners and county residents over its sewage treatment plant and the holding ponds which were overflowing into Midland Draw. Pending before the Texas Water Commission is the city's application for a sewage disposal plan to irrigate land 15 miles southeast of Midland — out of the vicinity of Midland Draw.

BUT THE DRAW isn't Lowe's primary concern. The city has a water well field that runs through Midland Regional Airport.

"The city is concerned about the proximity of that treatment plant. It's the water supply for Air Terminal, and it's some of the best water in West Texas. It's good enough to go into interstate commerce. The mineral content is quite low. We sure don't ever want anything to happen to that water, and we're concerned that it (sewage water) may seep into the underground water," he related.

Joe Reed, a hydrologist and partner in Ed Reed & Associates, noted that his firm had been working with Westlake on the ground water supply in that area and its availability. The Reeds also have been involved in the city's Midland Draw and sewage disposal problems.

Reed said he was unaware of Westlake's sewage disposal application until he read the news release. "I was shocked" in light of the problems concerning Midland Draw, he said.

He contacted Westlake Properties' Odessa office and told the engineers of the physical constraints in the area and that "the aquifer at the airport has to be protected."

Reed said the hydrology firm has agreed to expand its job with Westlake and to work with them on the sewage disposal plant in an advisory capacity.

"WE'RE LOOKING at their application and telling them about the problems in it. The developer is a good company and they're doing a lot of back-pedaling. They want a first-class run at the thing," said Reed. "They want to do whatever is satisfactory to please the public."

Reed said the application "reads wrong. It should be for a no-discharge permit. We're intending to do whatever is right and what will protect the environment, even if it means complete redesign.

"We've fought too hard and too long to allow a discharge permit that would let sewage go down Midland Draw and into the ground water," he added.

Chatham explained the development is being designed as a "municipal utility district — it's almost a quasi-political unit. We can sell bonds, like a city, and the value of the development would repay the bonds."

Instead of secondary treatment, Chatham said the firm is planning on tertiary-plus treatment of the sewage.

"Tertiary is a step beyond what Midland uses. It restores water to virtually its original condition, except it doesn't remove the viruses. We plan on post-tertiary treatment that will also remove the viruses and nitrates.

"We don't plan to discharge any of it off the site; it won't go down any draw," he stated.

ALTHOUGH THE PERMIT application states that the plant will treat a maximum of 2 million gallons a day of sewage, Chatham said the most he expects to see through the plant is 600,000 to 800,000 gallons.

"We put 2 million on the application because we have a substantial amount of commercial property in the development and we don't know how much effluent that will generate. We've probably put down twice as much as we'll ever need," he said.

The concept for the development will entail recycling the water for non-potable uses, such as irrigation of landscaping features, for the lakes and for residents to water lawns.

Claiming that Westlake Properties development "will have the best sewage treatment plant in this area," Chatham pointed out that much money is being spent for the design and construction of a plant to get the water quality high enough to be used for these purposes.

Once through the treatment plant, an initial plan requires the water to be recycled through a series of five-acre lakes and to be held in a 30-acre lake. Chatham said the development sits on the highest point in the area and the water first will go into highest lake. It will flow into other lakes through a system of streams.

"Along the streams we'll have exercise stations. Where they intersect with streets, there will be pedestrian underpasses and the streets will go over it," he said.

ONCE THE WATER is in the lakes, there will be three phenomena to dispose of the effluent, he said. One is by evaporation. The second is by transpiration and to accomplish that the developer will put an abundance of plants around the lakes. And the final method is irrigation with preliminary plans utilitizing the water in underground sprinkler systems.

Working on the concept of "mass balance," Chatham said the engineers are trying to "figure how much effluent will be generated and how much we can use in these methods so none will be left over."

The city's utilities director voiced a concern about the development's proximity to the airport in relation to flight paths and noise. But Chatham said the Odessa firm had been talking with Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation.

According to flight path plans given the developer, Chatham said it is situated in a clear area between the two flight paths. Nor is noise a factor, he added.

Chatham said he also is concerned about the ground water quality and will work with the Reed firm to ensure the water isn't contaminated.

Ground water in the Westlake Properties contains 300 milligrams per liter of total dissolved solids while drinking water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District contains 1,500 milligram/liter TDS, according to Chatham.

"Midland has so much trouble cleaning up its sewage because it's so tough to begin with," he said.

THE PROPERTY will be developed over a seven- to 10-year period, according to Chatham. It will consist of 585 acres of residential housing, 186 acres of office and commercial, 51 acres of parks, lakes and open spaces with the remaining land to go for a school site, roadway and the treatment plant.

Another point in the application that troubled city officials read: "The facility will serve the needs of Westlake until the city of Midland extends service to this area. The proposed plant will be abandoned when service becomes available."

According to Chatham, the developer is planning to have the project annexed in the future, but not until after the area is built up and contains existing streets, water and sewer services. But the treatment plant won't be abandoned, according to his plans.

He pointed out the development already lies within the city's Extra-Territorial Jurisdiction. "We're operating on the theory that it would eventually be annexed. By then, we would have in our own utility system and the city would be gaining a large tax base and wouldn't have to supply services."

The development is being planned to meet Midland's building and zoning codes "so it will conform when it's annexed," Chatham said.

According to the Corpus Christi-based project manager, he hopes the treatment plant will serve as an example for others. "Maybe we can set some standards for future development. We would like to take the heat off cities with their water supply" and this project should cut per capita consumption in half with its idea of recycling the water.

"THIS WILL BE a model project," he said of the proposed plans for treating sewage water.

After hearing from the Reeds, Chatham said, "We're trying to decide if we should go ahead with the discharge permit or change it and go with a non-discharge permit."

Reed will be meeting with Chatham and representatives from the Austin engineering firm which designed the project and submitted the permit application within the next two weeks, said the project manager.

Lowe, however, won't be content until the current application is withdrawn and one is submitted to meet the criteria that has been outlined to him.

"Until then, the city will still oppose it," said Lowe.

'Naturists' disrobe on Jersey beach

By BOB SANSEVERE

MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A small band of "naturists" disrobed on a sandy stretch in a national park Saturday to the catcalls of hundreds of gawkers and the consternation of a few protesters.

National Park Service rangers issued six citations, invoking a state lewdness statute since there is no federal ban on nudity at the Sandy Hook beach, part of the Gateway National Recreation Area, according too Chief Ranger Ron Reichard.

The naturists put their clothes back on when the citations were issued. But after the gawkers left, about 50 people appeared on the beach without clothes.

"All we want to do is sit, relax and rest the rest of the afternoon," said Michelle Handler of Narragansett, R.I.

The sun poked through gray clouds for only a few minutes as the first group of about 20 people, most of them members of the Tri-State Metro Naturists from New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, walked along the sand, trailed by a crowd which rangers estimated grew to more than 300.

Boaters, many with binoculars, watched from offshore in the waters of the Atlantic Ocean south of New York City.

About 18 protesters, many representing church groups, and three carrying 8-foot wooden crosses, gathered at the ranger station about a mile from the once-quiet beach where the sunbathers had chosen to disrobe.

Ms. Handler was the first to take off her clothes and posed for photographers. She was partly shielded by a sign reading: "Attention. Beyond this point you may encounter nude sunbathers."

"It's sad that you come from such depressed backgrounds that you have to come to get joy from watching us," she told one wisecracking onlooker.

The naturists' quest for a legal place to sunbathe nude in New Jersey attracted so much publicity that the park service brought out all of Sandy Hook's 15 rangers and called in 10 reserves from four other parks as far away as Cape Cod, Mass., Reichard said.

"It's publicity over a big nothing," said one of the disrobing sunbathers, who identified himself only as Jack. "With all the...wars and bombs, it is amazing that people come out for a little thing like this. People are getting killed in Beruit and people here are more concerned because someone wants to take his clothes off."

No citations were issued until Joseph Hawley of neigboring Atlantic Highlands filed a complaint.

"The reason I'm here is to file a complaint because this is not a nude public beach," said Hawley, a Republican running for U.S. House of Representatives as an independent. He was dressed in a blue shirt, a blue tie and long pants.

"If you condone it here it will spill over to other beaches," he said. "It's morally wrong. I'm quoting the highest legal authority — the Bible."

PLO guerrillas upgrade defenses against Israelis

By The Associated Press

Palestinian guerrillas fearing an Israeli onslaught into west Beirut reinforced their defenses Saturday, but the invaders made no move to storm the PLO stronghold and resumed the flow of water after a six-day blockade.

Guerrillas were seen sandbagging their fortifications after PLO leader Yasser Arafat ordered them to "upgrade and consolidate" defenses following Israel's "surprise saturation barbaric" air, sea and land bombardment Friday.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said "the unprovoked enemy action is a very dangerous move with grave indications," which aims to "quench the rising hopes for a political solution."

Israel, frustrated by what it calls PLO foot-dragging in leaving west Beirut, attacked on grounds the PLO had broken the cease-fire that went into effect Wednesday — the seventh since Israel invaded June 6 to rout the guerrillas.

An eighth cease-fire went into effect Friday night, and the Tel Aviv command said the 35,000 Israeli troops ringing west Beirut were observing it despite PLO shelling that wounded two Israeli soldiers near the airport.

Later Saturday, the command said some Israeli soldiers were fired upon near Mansouriye on the Beirut-Damascus highway. It said the soldiers did not return the fire and no casualties were reported.

The Israelis turned on water supplies to west Beirut's dried-out reservoir that serves 600,000 residents, but maintained a blockade on electricity and fuel supplies.

U.N. officials said that with 10 generators running to pump the water, there was enough to meet the "minimum" drinking and hygiene needs of the mostly Moslem population of west Beirut.

Lebanon's Moslem prime minister, Shafik Wazzan, said in a nationally televised statement that he has conveyed a proposal to U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib that fuel, water and food supplies be brought in from donor countries by ships escorted by the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Wazzan, who accused Israel of seeking to "kill the whole people of Beirut...to achieve its political ends," did not say how Habib responded.

Asked about the progress of efforts to arrange a peaceful evacuation of the guerrillas from west Beirut to stop the Israelis from storming the city, Wazzan said:

"We have begun a useful executive action to bring about all that we have agreed upon, whether here or in Jidda. We look forward to the coming phase and hope we would be able to provide the successful scenario for the operation."

Wazzan did not elaborate. But he clearly was alluding to the PLO declaration of its intention to leave Lebanon made in a written document to the Lebanese government on July 7 and reaffirmed in an Arab League declaration in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, last Wednesday.

Bean's 'Jersey Lilly' still center of life in Langtry

By MACK SISK

LANGTRY, Texas (AP) — Monday marks the 100th anniversary of Judge Roy Bean being named "The Law West of the Pecos" and in many ways this old railroad town has changed little since Bean founded it in the West Texas desert.

Bean's "Jersey Lily Saloon" where he sold whiskey and conducted court — often simultaneously — as Pecos County's only justice of the peace from 1882 to 1903, and the "Opera House" he built in honor of British actress Lily Langtry, both remain intact in the benign dry climate.

There also is a "hanging tree," from which no one was ever hung.

Except for electricity and the paving of U.S. 90 east to Del Rio 60 miles and nearly 400 miles west to El Paso, life for the 44 residents of Langtry — at last count — closely resembles that enjoyed by Bean and his contemporaries on the edge of civilization.

Langtryites like it that way, because most of them stay here to escape the hubbub of modern times, said Jack Skiles, who runs the Judge Roy Bean Visitors Center here.

For example, a summer wind storm knocked down nearly every television antenna in town and weeks later nobody was in a hurry to put them back up in the July heat.

"We don't have time for TV," said Skiles, a former school superintendent in Balmorrhea, Texas, itself a sleepy West Texas village. "When you're in the country, something is going on all the time. We spend our time visiting neighbors. That's why I quit the school business. I got tired of the rat race.

"Last evening we had two families over and they brought a watermelon."

Even when the TV antennas are up, they are 217 miles from the nearest television station in San Antonio and the snowy reception at best is "poco poco," Skiles said.

During daylight hours, even radio reception is rare here, Skiles said.

"Two thirds of the people here are retired," he said. "The others are living off of tourism. The almost 100,000 visitors a year here drop a few dollars. And there is one railroad man here for Southern Pacific."

The railroad was why Bean started Langtry in the first place.

He had followed the progress of railroad construction and sold whiskey from a tent-topped store in nearby Vinegaroon named for large scorpions which infested the area.

But after a silver spike was driven near here on Jan. 12, 1883 to complete the transcontinental tracks from New Orleans to San Francisco, Bean decided to stay.

AMTRAK's "Sunset Limited" passenger train to California still passes near here, but it doesn't stop.

One story says that a Northerner once stepped off the train for a beer and hamburger at Bean's place in the early days and raised a ruckus when Bean failed to give him change from a $20 gold piece. The man's tab was 35 cents, so Bean fined him $19.65 for disturbing the peace.

Bean took advantage of the isolation to stage the Robert Fitzsimons-Peter Maher championship title fight on a sandbar of the Rio Grande on Feb. 21, 1896, in defiance of the Texas Rangers and governments of Mexico and the United States.

Pansy Dyer, who operates the town's only cafe along with her husband, Bud, said they came here six years ago from Kermit, Texas, to be near the good fishing on the nearby Rio Grande, Devils and Pecos rivers. They have a television and antenna, but they've never hooked them up.

"We've always wanted to live at a place where we could fish," she said. "We don't miss television. I think it's helped. People learn to be people again like they used to be."

State refuses gift of Langtry's vacant 'Opera House'

By MACK SISK

LANGTRY, Texas (AP) — The widow who owns the "Opera House," built by legendary Judge Roy Bean in honor of English actress Lily Langry 82 years ago says preservation groups ought to be angry that the state highway department refuses to take it as a gift.

"I wish somebody would get angry about it. I think there is reason for anger there because this should belong to the state and it should be preserved," said Maxine Frank of Crockett, Texas.

She is the widow of jewelry salesman-western artifacts collector Samuel Frank who died at Corpus Christi in 1978 and willed the aged adobe house to the State Highway Commission. Frank, born in 1900 — the year Bean built the opera house, had planned to retire in Langtry before he became seriously ill.

However, former Highway Commission executive B.L. DeDerry wrote Mrs. Frank's attorney, George Prowse of Corpus Christi on April 6, 1979, "we are not in a position to undertake the considerable investment that would be involved" to restore the old building and make it part of the existing Judge Roy Bean Visitors Center here.

THE OPERA HOUSE is on a dirt street just behind the more famous "Jersey Lily Saloon" where Bean dispensed hard liquor and swift justice as "The Law West of the Pecos" in the Texas badlands from 1882 until his death in 1903.

The Highway Commission has built a modern visitors center and enclosed the old saloon, which doubled as Bean's courtroom, inside a fenced complex and cactus garden in this remote Southwest Texas town.

Replicas of The Jersey Lily have been built in several other sites such as Knotts Berry Farm in California, the Whitehead Museum where Bean is buried in Del Rio, and the Pearl Brewery in San Antonio, as symbols of the Old West.

Hollywood storytellers ranging from Gary Cooper to Walter Brennan to Paul Newman and a television narrator named Ronald Reagan have helped keep alive the legend of Bean and his unrequited romance with Lily Lantry, in whose honor he said he named this old railroad town.

Last year nearly 83,000 people, 24,654 of them from other states and 6,217 from foreign countries, came to wander across the creaky floors of the old saloon, inspect the artifacts and listen to sound dioramas depicting the life and times of the colorful Bean and his long-distance admiration for Miss Langtry.

But the opera house, which historians consider to be an integral part of Langtry's history, is closed to the public most of the time because it is not practical or profitable to operate, according to Jack Skiles, who runs the Highway Department's visitors center.

"I WAS REALLY EAGER" to incorporate the opera house into the museum complex, said Skiles, a rancher's son reared in Langtry, "but the highway commission wasn't that eager."

Today the dilapidated building sits closed, bearing a large sign which says: "Roy Bean's Opera House. Built 1900 for Lily Langry to Perform in."

But Miss Langtry never performed in the tiny structure because by the time she came to Langtry, in response to letters from the judge, he had died and willed her his favorite pistol.

A sign on the front of the building now advertises such tourist attractions inside as a two-headed calf, six-legged lamb, "a mummified Indian baby of prehistoric time," a photo of Bean and "relics of interest."

Tom Taylor, director of travel and information for the highway department, said it turned down Frank's bequest because of the expense involved in restoring it, enclosing it in the existing fenced museum complex, and having to reroute a street around it.

Bank failures rise, but Texas Department of Banking cuts staff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Agencies that regulate state-chartered banks in Texas are trying to do their job with a reduced number of bank examiners at a time when bank failures are increasing in Texas and across the country.

The Texas Department of Banking has cut its staff of bank examiners by about 30 percent within the past year, citing budget reductions and a new program to increase efficiency.

"We're cutting back. This is the age of deregulation and getting government out of private industry and business," said Gary Pool, deputy commissioner of the Texas Department of Banking.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board has reduced its examiner staff from 34 to 29 and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in the past year has cut from 177 to 158 the number of examiners it has for a four-state region including Texas.

The Texas Department of Banking has cut its staff of examiners from 145 to 101 in the past year and will reduce it to 90 before the end of this year, Pool said.

Texas law requires that each state bank be examined each year, and until this year both state and federal agencies examined the records of each bank.

David Crockett, departmental examiner for the Texas Department of Banking, said that this year the state and federal agencies decided to split the duties, with only one agency examining a bank's records each year.

The new system helps the Texas Banking Department operate more effectively even though the number of examiners has been cut, he said. He said the program has reduced the department's manpower needs and enabled the department to focus on banks with financial problems.

Rebecca Lightsey, director of the Texas Consumer Association, is critical of the reduction in examiners.

"That appears to be an extremely foolish move for both the state and federal government when so many banks and financial institutions are in such serious financial states," she said. "What we actually need now is closer scrutiny of the banks and financial institutions."

Texas, which has about 830 state-chartered banks and 850 federally chartered banks, has had four of the 24 banks failures reported in the nation this year. Federal officials say 10 banks failed in all of 1981 in the United States.

Banks in Redwater and Hooks closed for two days last week before reopening with new names and new owners. Banks in Tyler and Woodson failed earlier in the year.

Administration's economic view changes

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost overnight, the unshakable confidence the Reagan administration had in its economic program has given way to growing uncertainty.

From their first days in office, President Reagan and his chief advisers believed they soon would put the nation at the threshold of a long-term economic boom, with low interest rates, low inflation and low unemployment.

But a much more sober view has dramatically replaced that optimism during these dog days of summer. From the president on down, lower expectations about economic growth, interest rates, budget deficits and unemployment are in vogue at the White House.

The administration's new attitude stems from the perplexing fact that interest rates have remained high throughout a recession they helped create and are now prolonging.

THIS ALTERED outlook was reflected Friday in the new forecast the administration issued on the budget and the economy.

It predicted a record budget deficit of $115 billion for fiscal 1983, an economic recovery for 1982 that would be only modest by post-World War II standards, an unemployment rate of more than 8 percent through 1983 and the persistence of double-digit interest rates for at least another 18 months.

In earlier times, that would be seen as a pretty gloomy forecast. But even at that, administration officials conceded the report was still too optimistic — a view shared by just about every other forecaster in and out of government.

The only bright note in the report was a prediction that inflation will remain in single digits for years to come.

Nonetheless, the administration is not throwing in the towel on Reaganomics. It insists that the president's program eventually will revive the economy; it just will take longer than anyone thought. The idea of major policy changes still are rejected by senior officials unless the roof wast to cave in.

Reagan, perhaps the leading optimist, says he still expects the economy to improve later this year. But "it is going to be slow," he said at his news conference last week, backing off from pervious predictions that a rapid and strong upturn would occur this summer.

"I WISH recovery could be easier and faster," Reagan said. "Unfortunately, it isn't. It's tough, slow work and it's going to require enormous effort and patience from every one of us to correct the problems we inherited. But slowly and surely, we're working our way back to prosperity."

The president said he still rejects the economic "quick-fixes" of the past that produced temporary booms only to be followed by worsening busts. He said he hopes to lay the groundwork for a lasting recovery that will make the current suffering worthwhile.

Other officials say they have no plans to change policy because, admitting that they can't think of anything else to do but wait for times to improve and hope the public will be patient.

"If anyone came in with alternative ideas, I'd listen to them," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said last week.

Administration officials admit that they can't figure out the high interest rates that are keeping the economy weak, driving up budget deficits and casting the nation into an uncertain future.

And while acknowledging that interest rates hold the key to the future, the officials say they have no way of knowing whether the costs of borrowing will go up or down.

"IF INTEREST rates were to go higher..., we would have to lean toward the more pessimistic estimates" about the future, Baldrige said. "If we saw interest rates go down substantially, we'd have to lean toward the most optimistic estimates."

The administration is not throwing in the towel on Reaganomics. It insists that the president's program eventually will revive the economy; it just will take longer than anyone thought. The idea of major policy changes still are rejected by senior officials unless the roof were to cave in.

A senior administration official who advises the president on economic matters said the economy "is in the twilight zone — either it's going to be morning or night."

The official, who did not want to be identified by name, expressed to reporters Friday more concern about the economy's course than he has in the past.

While there are some positive signs — the decline in inflation and an accompanying rise in Americans' purchasing power — other indicators of future economic health are still on the decline. When the positive will begin to outweigh the negative "is very difficult to predict," he said.

The economy's problems no doubt have played a role in the steady exit of economic advisers from the administration. The latest, and highest-ranking departee, was chief White House economist Murray L. Weidenbaum, who two weeks ago decided to return to his university teaching job.

Weidenbaum, who had been as optimistic about the economy's future as anyone in the administration, suggested recently that he was taking off his rose-colored glasses.

HE QUOTED John Maynard Keynes, the famous British economist whose theories about deficit spending were embraced by President Franklin D. Roosevelt but spurned 50 years later by Reagan.

Policy makers have to take an upbeat view of the economy, Weidenbaum quoted Keynes as writing, but when the optimism proves to be unfounded, "then we've got to try something else."

Illegal aliens back at work in California

By LARRY STAMMER and VICTOR M. VALLE
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Eighty percent of the suspected illegal aliens apprehended in Southern California's Los Angeles and Orange counties three months ago during nationwide immigration raids on factories are back on the job, a survey by the Los Angeles Times has found.

The results contrast sharply with an earlier survey made by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and call into question the INS' success in meeting its stated objective opening "higher paying" jobs for unemployed Americans and legal residents.

Dubbed "Operation Jobs," the highly publicized sweep of 5,635 suspected illegal aliens from factories in nine cities during the week of April 26-30 resulted in thousands of the unemployed flocking to the factories to apply for the jobs vacated by those arrested.

Two weeks after the raids, the INS conducted an "informal survey" of 40 factories in Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas and Houston to determine how many U.S. citizens and legal permanent residents were hired to replace the arrested workers. Other cities included in the sweep were Detroit, Denver, Newark, New York and San Francisco.

That survey, depending on how the answers are treated statistically, indicated that between 65 percent and 70 percent of the jobs vacated by arrested workers had been filled by Americans or legal residents, based on answers solicited from employers.

BUT, IN WASHINGTON, D.C., INS spokesman Bob Walsh said the INS survey had no "scientific credibility" and that the government had no way of knowing whether employers were answering truthfully. Thirty-one of the 39 firms contacted agreed to answer the INS' questions.

Despite widespread criticism at the time from immigrants' rights attorneys and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who called the raids "terroristic," Omer G. Sewell, deputy district director for the INS in Los Angeles, pronounced the sweep a success.

"I think we certainly did meet our target," he told a press conference the day the raids ended. "Our target was to open up a substantial number of jobs to American citizens and lawful residents.... Judging from reports about large numbers of job applicants seeking these jobs, we believe it's been successful and we're very, very proud," Sewell said.

Responses to a Times survey three months later of union leaders, management and employees in Los Angeles and Orange counties, show, however, that the INS approach failed.

The Times found that of the 801 workers arrested in the two counties during the week-long sweep, about 646 or 80 percent are back on the job.

One personnel manager reported, "Some of them were here the very next day. They were deported that evening and they were back the next morning."

IT IS unknown precisely how many of the 646 returning workers were deported and then crossed back into the United States illegally, or were permitted to remain in the country pending a review of their immigration status after asking for a hearing.

However, based on answers from several companies, it appeared that a sizable majority — almost seven out of 10 returning workers — had been deported.

That approximates an INS breakdown. The INS reported that 68.7 percent or 550 of the 801 workers arrested agreed to voluntary deportation, and 31.3 percent or 251 asked for immigration hearings.

Employers also indicated that many of the Americans and legal residents who were hired to fill vacancies did not stay on the job, either because they believed the pay was too low or because the working conditions were not to their liking. Wages averaged $4.80 an hour in the Los Angeles-Orange area and ranged from the minimum of $3.35 an hour to $7.50 an hour, the INS has reported.

One company, where wages ranged from $3.35 to $4 an hour, reported hiring 90 new workers immediately after the raids. But, Rudy Pompa, employment manager of the B.P. John Furniture Co. in Santa Ana, said 75 of them quit within a short time.

"They told me they found another job, that the work was too hard, that there wasn't enough pay. One tried to provoke the foreman to fire him in order to collect unemployment. His benefits had run out and he was looking for an extension," Pompa said.

Baby sitter calm while awaiting legal proceedings

BLOUNTSTOWN, Fla. (AP) — For baby sitter Christine Falling, home these days is a second-floor cell where she passes time drawing, playing canasta with the matron and reading newspaper accounts of her life.

Since her arrest July 22, Miss Falling's distress at being charged with two counts of murder has changed to calm, her jailers say.

"At this point she's pretty content," Calhoun County Sheriff Buddy Smith said late last week.

Miss Falling, 19, feels secure away from the eyes and questions that await her outside, Smith said.

Five children have died while in the care of Miss Falling since 1980 in the panhandle towns of Blountstown and Perry and in Lakeland, in central Florida.

On July 22, after submitting voluntarily to a psychiatric examination, she was charged with strangling or suffocating two of the five children. Both were from Blountstown.

Two-month-old Travis Coleman, the latest of the five childen to die, was found in her Blountstown trailer July 3, the death attributed at first simply to a lack of oxygen. Cassidy Marie "Muffin" Johnson, 2, died Feb. 22, 1980. The death was attributed at the time to encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain.

The legal proceedings in those cases have been on hold because Public Defender Virgil Mayo and the only circuit judge in this county seat village of 2,400 have been out of town.

The state must obtain a grand jury indictment by Aug. 11 to back up the first-degree murder charges filed by State Attorney Jim Appleman or the charges must be dropped.

Investigations into the other three deaths have been re-opened now that charges have been filed here, but prosecutors there have refused to say whether charges will be brought.

In Perry, an 8-month-old's death in July 1981 was attributed to crib death, and in Lakeland, two cousins died a few days apart in February 1981, both of deaths attributed to myocarditis, a heart inflammation.

In addition, at least three other children became ill while in Miss Falling's care in Florida, but they recovered.

Last week, newspapers in Huntington, W. Va., and Tampa, Fla., reported that, while staying with a family in January in Proctorville, Ohio, a 6-month-old in her care suddenly had trouble breathing and was rushed to a hospital. A doctor said the attack was caused by a viral infection.

Since the arrest, the authorities have refused to discuss the evidence that led to the charges.

Before her arrest, Miss Falling said she was as confused and scared as everyone else about the deaths.

"I'm no killer," she said. "I don't care what people think about me."

"She said she didn't want to see anybody now except if her sister comes," Smith said Thursday, the day members of a small Tallahassee group called Friends of Christine Falling sought unsuccessfully to visit her.

Since the arrest, newspapers have published reports of purported "confessions" made by Miss Falling during her voluntary psychiatric evaluation. But the reports, attributed to unidentified sources, haven't given any specifics about what Miss Falling supposedly said.

PATCO shut-down: Year later

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

In the first days of August a year ago, the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization vowed to shut the nation's airway system in a strike for better pay and working conditions.

Instead, the government shut down PATCO.

While the controllers never came close to closing the airways, the strike's fallout is still alive.

One year later:

— There are fewer controllers, working long hours with few days off. Even so, officials say the skies are safe and point out that no commercial air accidents have been attributed to the controllers situation.

— Flying is less convenient. There are fewer flights at rush hour — at many major airports, one out of every four prime-time flights has been eliminated or shifted to another time slot.

— On some routes, flying may be more costly than it could have been as new discount carriers have been unable to enter markets freely, as intended by the 1978 deregulation. Muse Air, for example, couldn't expand its Texas-to-Chicago operation because of tight controls on flights into Chicago.

— PASSENGERS ARE sitting through continued delays before takeoff. At many airports it's still not unusual for a flight to be delayed a half hour or more waiting for an approved flight path.

— The airline industry, practically deregulated during the Carter administration, now is operating under strict controls established by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"In a lot of respects, we gave up CAB (Civil Aeronautics Board) economic regulation and had to substitute FAA regulation" on airport usage, complains John Ralph, senior vice president for operations and airports at the Air Transport Association, an airline trade group.

— The FAA says the agency will save about $150 million this fiscal year because of the controllers' strike, and $83 million more next fiscal year. The agency attributed the savings largely to reduced payroll that offset overtime and training costs.

— Airport landing rights are suddenly a valuable piece of property. Strict controls over the number of airport flights set off a heated competition among airlines. The going price for a package of some so-called airport slots sold for as high as $1.5 million.

The impact on passengers has been tempered by a slump in overall travel which has allowed planes to take off with empty seats even during flight cuts in peak periods. But some industry leaders worry that as traffic picks up passengers increasingly may not get a plane when they want it.

With almost no exception, the airline industry has supported the government's hard line against the striking controllers, but some industry leaders make no secret of their dislike for the controls that have followed.

"We have been penalized by months of reduced service, with fixed overhead in the form of grounded aircraft incurring huge costs without offsetting revenues," Richard Ferris, chairman of United Airlines, complained to a member of Congress. Yet a United spokesman says Ferris supports the government's response to the controllers strike.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS say 86 percent of the air traffic is flying compared to a year ago, but they acknowledge that during peak morning and early evening periods the traffic flow remains drastically down at many major airports.

At Chicago's O'Hare Airport, for example, as many as 91 planes landed or took off between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. on a weekday before the strike. Now the number is down to 48.

The PATCO strike began at 7 a.m. on Aug. 3 when more than 12,000 controllers walked out. But 48 hours later 11,443 of them were fired by President Reagan, who chastized them for violating their no-strike oath and breaking the law.

To date, the FAA has taken back fewer than 35 controllers — those the government claims were fired by mistake — and another three have had their dismissals reversed through civil service procedure. About 10,900 firings remain under appeal, but the proceedings have slowed to a crawl because of money and manpower shortages at the agency that is handling them.

PATCO is going through bankruptcy. Its assets are being liquidated and soon its Capitol Hill offices will be vacated. As for the fired controllers, union official say a majority of them have found work, some have returned to school and several hundred have gone overseas to direct air traffic.

But union sources say many remain out of work and few are earning anywhere near the average $33,000 a year salary they gave up when they left the airport terminals and control centers. At least two former controllers have committed suicide since the strike.

Robert E. Poli, the union's president at the time of the strike, now lives in New York where he is writing a book and taking in the lecture circuit. He still refuses to fly and and drives a car to speaking engagements, friends say.

The airway system has continued to operate with a force of about 10,000 controllers, supervisors, military men and retired controllers who came back to work.

SO FAR, 2,016 new controllers have graduated from the FAA's school in Oklahoma City and the first of them — between 500 and 600 — will begin work in late August as "operational controllers" at non-radar jobs.

"Without a question the (airway) system is working well," insists Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, the Reagan administration's point man in its faceoff with the controllers last summer. "We really don't have a problem in terms of movjng people by air."

While there have been inconveniences and restrictions on air travel, there is no question that the airways system has continued to operate far better than many within the government and the industry had expected.

A task force of the National Transportation Safety Board concluded last winter that safety had not been jeopardized by the strike, and investigators have given no indication that this year's three major airline crashes in Washington, Boston and New Orleans were related to a controller's error or the reduced controller workforce.

There have been some close calls, however. An error by a veteran controller caused two commercial jetliners to come close to colliding over Lake Michigan last March in the most serious incident to come to light since the strike.

Reports of unconfirmed near-misses are down from an average of 8.3 a week to 4.7 a week since the walkout as controllers strive to keep the fewer number of planes farther apart.

The Transportation Department also says the number of confirmed near in-flight collisions have been cut in half since the strike and the number of collisions — all involving general aviation aircraft — have remained constant.

The FAA has clamped tight controls on the number of flights allowed and began controlling the scheduling of flights. The high peaks in traffic have been eliminated and whenever delays are needed the planes are kept on the ground until a clear air path is open.

FAA ADMINISTRATOR J. Lynn Helms says this "flow control" is expected to continue well into 1984, but the airlines are concerned that flow control may be around even longer. FAA bureaucrats, says one industry executive, "think flow control is the greatest thing since sliced bread."

Yet with the airways seemingly operating safely there have been no loud cries of protest from airline pilots or from the industry about the way the PATCO strike was handled.

One reason is that Reagan got some help from the economy. The recession caused air travel to fall dramatically just as the FAA was limiting the number of flights. With the airlines facing empty seats they became less inclined to complain about the reduction in flights.

"The airlines used this to a degree as a way to cut some of their excess routes...some of their excess personnel that they didn't need, and (to) trim their sails a bit," Lewis acknowledged in a recent interview.

Helms, who has declined interviews on the PACTO strike, expressed a similar tone during a speech to commuter airline executives: "This industry has survived within these (FAA flight) constraints. As an industry it has not only survived, but it has maintained its financial and operational viability."

From the day the controllers went on strike, the FAA has charted a course aimed at rebuilding the air traffic control workforce.

"We're right on-target with what we're planning on," says Raymond VanVuren, the agency's director of air traffic service. The timetable calls for the number of flights nationwide to return to pre-strike levels by next May.

Restrictions on airport access is to end by the end of 1983 and control over aircraft flow would stop in July 1984 when "we'll be fully recovered," says Van Vuren.

THE ROAD to recovery has not been smooth.

So far 2,016 new controllers have been sent through the FAA's academy at Oklahoma City and will gradually be phased in over the next eight months. The school is producing about 340 controllers every six weeks, but the graduates must go through further training at airports and control centers before they can direct air traffic.

Meanwhile, controllers and supervisors who have directed traffic since the strike continue to work long hours. While many FAA facilities are back to a 40-hour work week, most controllers at the facilities that were hardest hit, such as O'Hare and the New York City airports, continue to work six-day weeks, the FAA says.

Time off has been scarce. Earlier this year Helms ordered that every controller be given at least one week of vacation during the summer. At the same time, Congress has yet to approve a pay package that would give working controllers the raise the government offered them a year ago.

Although FAA officials insist morale continues to be high, there are indications of discontent.

Fifteen controllers in Atlanta recently signed a petition complaining they are overworked. The new leaders of PATCO insist that working controllers they have talked to are far from a happy lot.

Last spring a team of management experts hired by the government concluded that the FAA continues to demonstrate severe management problems and that many of the same concerns that led to the strike are resurfacing.

Lawrence Jones, a business executive and chairman of the panel, said FAA supervisors still demonstrate "a propensity to be high-handed" and the agency must turn itself around if it is to avoid future labor unrest.

LEWIS AND Helms acknowledge the management problems exist and say the agency has given top priority to improving communications and relations between FAA managers and controllers.

"These problems took 10 to 20 years to get to where they are... We're not going to solve them overnight," said Lewis, promising at the same time to "change the attitude of management at the FAA."

At the same time neither Lewis nor Helms have budged an inch from their determination that none of the fired controllers be rehired unless they prove they tried to return to work but were coerced against doing so.

To bring back some fired controllers, insists Lewis, could open the administration to a class-action suit by those that are not chosen. He adds that to allow all those who left to return would bring a rebellion by many who stayed on the job.

"We're not going to jam down the throats of the people that stuck with us people who they don't want to work with," says Lewis, whose tought stand against the union has gained him praise from the business community.

This position has angered PATCO officials who characterize it as vindictive and unfair.

"If they wanted to prove a point, if they waflted to deliver a message to organized labor, they've done it, that's clear. You'd have to be an idiot not to see it," says Gary Eads, a member of PATCO's executive board at the time of the strike and now the union's president.

"But why continue this as far against the individual people? You have a group of talented individuals who are on the street who could get this system back to normal within weeks."

BUT THE concern about the system is not shared by either the FAA or the airline industry. Both agree there are inconveniences, but none so troublesome to divert from the Reagan administration from its path.

A survey of controllers by the Roper Organization showed more than half were opposed to any of the controllers being rehired, but that almost a third would like some controllers back as long as "militants and troublemakers" were excluded.

"I feel a lot of sympathy for the people who are out, but I can't foresee anything but animosity and dissension if they were returned," one unidentified controller was quoted as saying.

Gay rodeo starts today

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The opening night barbecue was canceled at the seventh annual National Reno Gay Rodeo but the 6,000 people attending went ahead with a square dance and planned to start competition today.

Washoe County health authorities forced cancellation of the barbecue Friday when they quarantined 1,600 to 2,000 pounds of steak that had been sitting in the sun for three hours. Temperatures Friday afternoon were in the mid-90s.

Michael Ford, director of the health department, said his office "found that there was no holding facilities for keeping the food cold and no holding facilities for the cooked food."

"It was the judgment of the public health environmentalists that the food was unwholesome and that the operation was inadequate," he added.

Mobil Oil wins suit against Washington Post

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $2 million award against The Washington Post is the latest in a trend of big-money libel judgments that has raised concerns among some media representatives about the possibility of self-censorship.

"We could move to a new level of low-risk journalism," news media lawyer Floyd Abrams of New York City said after learning of the Friday verdict.

The president of Mobil Oil Corp., William P. Tavoulareas, won a $2.05 million award against the Post on Friday after a six-member federal jury concluded that the newspaper libeled him in a Nov. 30, 1979, article.

The article detailed the business relationship between Tavoulareas and his son, Peter. It said Tavoulareas set up his son as a partner in a shipping management company, which since has done millions of dollars in business operating Mobil-owned ships under exclusive, no-bid contracts.

The jury found that the Post had not libeled Peter Tavoulareas, but awarded the Mobil president $250,000 in compensatory damages and $1.8 million in punitive damages.

The elder Tavoulareas had testified that he and his son spent about $2 million in pressing their lawsuit.

Libel experts — those who file lawsuits and those who defend against them — believe a clear trend toward bigger jury verdicts has developed in recent years.

"The risk is that if (such awards) ever become the norm, it will be hard to avoid the inhibiting effects on a free press," Abrams said more than a year ago when discussing a $4.5 million libel award against The San Francisco Examiner and a $9.2 million libel defeat suffered by the Alton, Ill., Telegraph.

Two other multimillion dollar jury awards in libel cases received much publicity last year. Actress Carol Burnett won a $1.6 million judgment against the National Enquirer, and Penthouse magazine was ordered to pay a former Miss Wyoming $26.5 million. In both cases, judges later ordered the awards cut in half.

But a pair of libel decisions last May appeared to alter the trend.

ABC succeeded in defending itself against an Akron, Ohio, woman who charged that a segment of a "20-20" program had libeled her. The suit had sought $40 million.

And Penthouse was victorious in a $522 million suit filed by a Southern California resort linked to organized crime by a 1975 article in the magazine.

Jack Landau, director of the Washington-based Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, said verdicts like the one in the Post case generally portray jury antagonism toward the news media.

He said such verdicts may intimidate some who otherwise would report controversial and complex stories.

But Rex Carr, the East St. Louis, Ill., lawyer who successfully sued the Alton Telegraph, said the purpose of libel law is to enforce reportorial responsibility.

"If it has a chilling effect on investigative reporting, that's what it's supposed to do," he said. "Investigate, yes. But don't publish unless it's true."

Tavoulareas, as president of Mobil, is considered a "public figure" under libel law. To win his suit, he had to prove that the Post's report about him was false and published with "actual malice."

In reaching its verdict in favor Tavoulareas, the jury had to conclude that the Post report was false — and that it was published with knowledge or reckless disregard of its falsity.

Post lawyer Irving Younger said he would ask U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, who presided over the trial, to throw out the jury verdict. If the judge refuses, Younger said, the Post will take the case to a federal appeals court.

Prisoners continue food strike

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Inmates at the Danbury federal prison have ended a six-hour work stoppage, but a curtailed food strike continued Saturday, prison officials said.

The inmates staged the food strike, which began Thursday night, and the work boycott to protest what they called unsanitary conditions at the prison cafeteria, one newspaper reported. Prison officials have refused to discuss inmate demands.

Officer thinks Harrier jets ideal for Marines

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The performance of British Harrier jump jets in the Falkland Islands confirmed that the aircraft is ideal for U.S. Marine Corps needs, a Marine colonel says.

Col. James W. Orr told a Navy symposium on the future of naval aviation last week that the Harrier passed its first actual combat test with flying colors.

The Navy has been researching the plane's concept since 1957 and has ordered 336 for delivery from McDonnell Douglas by the early 1990s. A $420 million order was placed last week for purchase of 12 of the advanced Harriers, the AV-8Bs, for the Marines.

Man died because of religious fast

ONTONAGON, Mich. (AP) — A man found dead in a state park apparently had gone there for a 40-day fast, Ontonagon County authorities say.

Autopsy results indicate William Thomas Whitsett, 47, of Detroit, was diabetic and died of natural causes brought on by the disease, Ontonagon County Sheriff's Deputy Shirley Serrahn said Friday. His body was discovered Tuesday in Porcupine Mountains State Park in the Upper Peninsula.

Whitsett told a man who gave him a ride to the park that he intended to fast because of his religious beliefs, the deputy said.

Teacher pleads innocent to statutory rape

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — A former Salinas High School music teacher has pleaded innocent to seven counts of statutory rape and three counts of contributing to the delinquency of his students.

Gary George Vix, 38, entered his plea Friday after police found him living in a mobile home parked in a nearby shopping center. Investigators said they had been looking for Vix since he failed to appear for a July 22 court appearance.

Police said Vix, a teacher in the Salinas School District since 1966, had sex with two students, aged 15 and 16. He resigned from his job May 14 after authorities filed charges.

Professor who killed wife to teach inmates

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A former university department chairman who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his wife has been sentenced to 60 days in jail and ordered to teach jail inmates for 22 months.

Ron J. Karraker, 43, who headed the educational psychology department at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, killed his wife, June Carol Karraker, in 1980 by striking her in the head with a hammer during an argument at their home. He then dumped the body at Lake Jacomo, east of Kansas City.

In pronouncing the sentence Friday, Jackson County Circuit Judge Gene R. Martin said, "I believe under the sentence I imposed that there is a greater amount of restitution than if I had sent him to prison for a 10-year sentence for manslaughter."

Martin said such a sentence in the state penitentiary probably would have resulted in Karraker being released within two years.

After serving a 60-day term in the Jackson County Jail beginning Aug. 9, Karraker will be placed on probation for five years. He must spend 30 days at the Hope Valley Alcoholism Referral Center and then spend 22 months donating eight hours a day, five days a week, helping inamtes at the jail obtain high school equivalency diplomas.

Several theories exist about Hoffa's disappearance

By MARY THORNTON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — Seven years ago Friday, Jimmy Hoffa disappeared, leaving virtually no trail. The body of the tough Teamster leader has never been found, and investigators expect no immediate break in the case.

Under Michigan law, James R. Hoffa can now be declared legally dead, and his son, James P. Hoffa, is in the process of filing the necessary papers, hopeful that the remaining Hoffa family can close that chapter of their lives and begin the three-year process of settling Hoffa's estate.

James R. Hoffa

There are many theories about what happened to Hoffa: that he was buried — in a Michigan cornfield, in a New Jersey dump, or under countless construction projects — or that he was ground up and put in a Florida swamp.

The most popular theory, however, is that he was compacted, shredded and incinerated at a garbage disposal company in Hamtramck, just outside Detroit. No one seems to believe Hoffa is still alive.

But his legend dominates the Teamsters, even today. William E. Bufalino, a 35-year Teamster who was Hoffa's lawyer for 25 years, said sadly, "There'll never be another one like that in the Teamsters. If he was a woman, he'd be pregnant every nine months. He didn't know how to say no. He did so many favors for so many people."

Local 299 — where Hoffa started with the Teamsters — looks much as he left it, a complex of low, brick buildings in a run-down, rubble-strewn neighborhood behind Tiger Stadium. Outside, black Lincolns, Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles and Mercurys line the curbs.

THE STRANGE story of Hoffa's disappearance began at a modest, two-story home in the town of Lake Orion about an hour north of Detroit. Today, the house with white aluminum siding is quiet and empty.

On July 30, 1975, Hoffa left the house alone around 1:15 p.m., telling his wife Josephine that he was meeting some men for lunch and would be home by 4 p.m.

As the story was later pieced together, Hoffa stopped by a friend's office and named the men he planned to meet. Later, under hypnosis, workers there told investigators that Hoffa named Anthony (Tony Jack) Giacalone, a reputed figure in the Detroit Mafia, and Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, reputed as a captain in the Vito Genovese organized crime family in New York and New Jersey.

Provenzano and Hoffa had feuded while both were in Lewisburg prison. Hoffa was there from 1967 to 1971 on a jury-tampering conviction, but continued to run the Teamsters until 1971, when the late Frank Fitzsimmons became president.

Hoffa was paroled by President Nixon later in 1971 on the condition that he not hold union office until 1980. Hoffa filed suit to have the stipulation overturned, and made it clear that he planned to resume the leadership of the Teamsters. He reportedly believed Fitzsimmons double-crossed him by persuading Nixon to grant the conditional parole.

Fitzsimmons, meanwhile, liked the limousines, the union-provided homes and the unlimited expense account. It was clear that he would not give up without a struggle.

Bufalino said, "Jimmy wore white cotton socks. When he became president, he bought a Pontiac convertible, and he drove himself around, none of these chauffeured limousines you see today."

AFTER HOFFA disappeared, investigators were told that Hoffa was considering blowing the whistle on some shady Fitzsimmons deals to enhance his own reelection effort, but some time later an underworld informer testified at a Senate hearing that Hoffa had planned to have Fitzsimmons and Provenzano murdered, that they heard about the plot and that they simply got him first. Officials don't know the actual motive for Hoffa's disappearance or who is responsible. And no indictments have ever been handed down.

Hoffa apparently asked his old friend Giacalone to set up the lunch with Provenzano for peace talks aimed at bringing Provenzano into line behind Hoffa.

The lunch was to have occurred at the Machus Red Fox Restaurant in a suburb north of Detroit. A busy restaurant with prices appealing to an expense-account clientele, the Red Fox is located on a four-lane highway beside a shopping center.

Two witnesses later told police that they had seen Hoffa standing in the parking lot, clearly waiting for someone. Around 2:30 p.m., Hoffa called his wife to ask if Giacalone had called. Then he called a friend to tell him Giacalone and Provenzano had failed to keep the date.

That was the last anyone ever heard from Jimmy Hoffa. The next morning, his 1974 Pontiac was found in the Red Fox parking lot, with no signs of a struggle.

INVESTIGATORS FIRST talked about three possible scenarios: Hoffa was kidnapped for a ransom, he voluntarily disappeared or he was executed. As time passed, most agreed that Hoffa was probably dead.

Giacalone and Provenzano established alibis and said they knew nothing about a lunch meeting.

Investigators found two witnesses who claimed to have seen a man resembling Hoffa in the back seat of a maroon car about that time.

They reportedly told investigators that the driver looked like Charles L. (Chuckie) O'Brien, a union employee regarded as a foster son to Hoffa. O'Brien never lived with Hoffa, but the families were close. In an autobiography in progress when he disappeared, Hoffa said he helped with O'Brien's education and treated him as a son after O'Brien's father died.

O'Brien was driving a maroon Mercury that day which he had borrowed from Giacalone's son Joey. When the FBI impounded the car, blood stains were found on the seat.

O'Brien reportedly first told investigators that he had spent that afternoon at an athletic club with the elder Giacalone. After the club did not back his alibi, O'Brien said he was delivering a 20-pound salmon to a local union official, according to newspaper accounts. He reportedly said the fish was responsible for the blood on the front seat.

THE FBI conducted an exhaustive search of the car. In fact, it is believed the FBI still has the car in a garage somewhere in Detroit. It was reported at the time that specially trained search dogs found Hoffa's scent in the back seat and the trunk.

When Bob Reutter, assistant special agent in charge of the Detroit FBI office, was asked about the car this week, he smiled and said, "Everything about that car is off limits."

Even now, Reutter will not give a personal theory on Hoffa's disappearance, but he believes he knows who was involved and generally what happened to the body.

Reutter said he believes the case provides an "interesting parallel" to that of Anthony Castellito, a New York Teamsters official who was kidnapped and murdered in 1961. His body was never recovered. In 1976, the FBI solved the case. Provenzano is serving a life sentence for ordering Castellito's murder.

Provenzano had an alibi the day of the Castellito murder. Reutter said, "Provenzano was marrying his second wife when Castellito disappeared."

Much of the grand jury questioning in the Hoffa investigation was said to be focused on O'Brien, Provenzano and Giacalone, along with a group of four New Jersey men with reputed connections to the Teamsters and organized crime. They included Thomas and Stephen Andretta and Gabriel and Salvatore (Sally Bugs) Briguglio.

Sal Briguglio, a Mafia hit man and business agent for Provenzano's local Teamsters union, was also indicted in the Castellito murder but died in a gangland-style execution in 1978 before he could be tried. During recent Senate hearings concerning Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, Briguglio was mentioned as an alleged Donovan associate. Donovan denied knowing Briguglio.

THE ANDRETTAS and Briguglios said they were in New Jersey playing cards when Hoffa disappeared.

The four brothers and Provenzano were all represented in the grand jury investigation by Bufalino, 64, and in semi-retirement after a stroke, two heart attacks and leukemia. He said recently that they were not involved in Hoffa's disappearance.

Impact of Hoffa's disappearance

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The disappearance of James R. Hoffa seven years ago has had a major impact not only on his family, but on organized crime and the entire American labor movement.

His body has not been found. Some of the people close to the case have died. Although no one has been charged with killing Hoffa, many of the suspects are behind bars on other charges. And labor union ties to organized crime are now a major subject of federal investigations nationwide.

A breakdown of what has happened to some of the major characters in the Hoffa case:

— James P. Hoffa, 41, is practicing labor law in Detroit. He represents a number of Teamster locals, including Local 299, where his father started.

— Josephine Hoffa died in 1980 at 62. Her son blames her death on a "broken heart. Her will to live seemed to have gone."

— Charles L. (Chuckie) O'Brien moved to Florida to work for the Teamsters. He has been convicted of several relatively minor crimes and served 10 months in prison in 1979 on a labor law violation.

— Anthony Giacalone is serving 10 years in prison for income tax evasion.

In West Germany, Munich police carry a twisted steel door rough the El Al Israeli Airlines terminal at Munich's Riem rport Saturday. A bomb hidden in a suitcase exploded at the airline terminal Saturday afternoon, injuring seven persons.

Bomb explodes in Munich's El Al terminal

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A bomb apparently hidden in a itcase went off at the El Al terminal at Riem Airport Saturday, jjuring at least six people, authorities said.

The explosion occurred shortly after 3 p.m. local time (8 a.m. DT), destroying the 30-yard hallway that led to the departure sec- on of the Israeli state airline, according to police.

The blast blew out the walls, floor and ceiling of the hallway, aving intact only the structure's steel skeleton.

A West German policeman and an El Al security guard were eriously hurt, authorities said. The others, including another Ger- an policeman, suffered lesser injuries. Three of the injured were eported to be suffering from shock.

At a news conference, Munich prosecutor Hubert Vollmann said hat other than the two German policemen, the injured appeared to e either Israeli citizens or German Jews. Further identification as not immediately disclosed.

He said authorities were unsure whether six or seven people had een hurt. First reports were that seven were injured. All were aken to medical facilities for treatment.

Although no one has claimed responsibility for the blast, officials ere are proceeding on the assumption that El Al was the target. Because the bomb went off in the hallway next to the El Al termi- al, "We must therefore assume the attack was committed against he Israeli airline," a spokesman for the Bavarian crime office said.

However, in Tel Aviv, an El Al spokesman denied that the bomb was aimed at the Israeli airline. Spokesman Kalman Bar-On said the suitcase containing the bomb had arrived from Dusseldorf and was checked through to Tel Aviv under the name of Klaus Weiger on a flight by Lufthansa, the West German airline.

West German police, who said they had the remains of the suitcase, said they could not confirm the Israeli report. A Lufthansa spokesman could not be reached.

The Israelis also disputed the number of injured, saying only a policeman and a security official had been hurt.

Debris was scattered for some 100 yards at the scene of the bombing, witnesses said.

It looked like an area "after a strike by an aerial bomb," one witness said.

Vollmann said it was just luck that more people were not injured.

"Only the fact that there were no passengers and security officials directly beside the suitcase, in the uncontrolled area, kept more people from getting hurt," Vollmann said.

At the time of the blast, some 380 people were in the departure section, waiting for two flights to Israel. One of them was an El Al flight that was scheduled to leave at 2:35 p.m. local time and had been delayed. The other was a Lufthansa flight that was to leave at 3:45.

Israel's U.S. ambassador rejects PLO demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization is demanding that Israel withdraw troops from Lebanon before PLO guerrillas evacuate Beirut, according to Israel's ambassador here.

"That demand is not going to be met," Ambassador Moshe Arens said in an interview televised Saturday by Cable News Network.

The PLO's detailed plan for withdrawal was sent Friday to Philip C. Habib, the special U.S. envoy, by Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik al-Wazzan. Palestinian officials in Beirut say the plan calls for the guerrillas to leave Lebanon by land for settlement in Syria, Jordan and Egypt.

Arens, accusing the PLO Leader Yasser Arafat of "simply stalling for time," said the Reagan administration should help make it "crystal-clear" that the guerillas' only choice is to leave west Beirut or face Israeli military action.

"I think if Arafat was given the clear-cut unequivocal impression that the other alternative was staring him in the face, I think we could then get him to go out peacefully," Arens said.

He said members of Congress who met with the PLO leader July 25 in the Lebanese capital had given Arafat "artificial respiration."

The ambassador said he was skeptical of a condition in the plan under which an international force including U.S. troops would be stationed between the 6,000 guerrillas trapped in west Beirut and the Israeli army.

"That would raise a danger, and a very real danger, and Phil Habib is very conscious of it, that once the U.S. forces are in place as a screen between the PLO and the Israeli army, the PLO won't move," Arens said.

Only the presence of the Israeli army and "the very real threat" it will fight to oust the guerrillas can bring about a PLO withdrawal, he said. "Once you realize that, you also realize that if the Israeli army was to move back before the PLO pullout, we're not going to get a PLO pullout."

Arens said he had no optimism that an agreement to end the nine weeks of fighting is at hand.

"If additional time accumulates and it is clear that there is no movement, that Arafat and the PLO terrorists have no intention of getting out, then there certainly will be movement of another kind," he threatened.

Meanwhile, six Arab-American groups charged in a statement that Israel's artillery bombardment Friday in Beirut demsonstrated that "the Reagan administration has capitulated entirely to Israeli designs in the region."

The groups said the administration had not protested nor offered hope that it "is willing to initiate a process that can end, in an honorable and just manner, the violence in Lebanon."

Arens, meanwhile, cautioned the Reagan administration against holding out U.S. recognition as an inducement for a PLO withdrawal. He said Israel would never negotiate with the Palestinian group.

"Why would you want to recognize them?," he asked. "Why would you want to rehabilitate them? The Russians might want to do that, but why would anyone else?"

TIRED OF BATTLING BUGS?

BEFORE YOU HIRE AN EXTERMINATOR, CONSIDER THESE POINTS:

1. First, don't get in a rush. Get bids from several well-established businesses, especially if you suspect termites. Don't be afraid to ask for references and a written statement of the type of chemicals that will be used.

2. Use only businesses who are licensed by the Texas Structural Pest Control Board. Ask to see the certified applicator's license of the person who will be applying the chemicals and look for the state license number on the truck.

3. If you feel the job was not done correctly and the business will not resolve the problem, contact the Structural Pest Control Board at 512/454-3617. An inspector will be sent to determine the nature of the problem and whether the job was done correctly.

Residents of Crepy-en-Valois mourn dead children

By MORT ROSENBLUM

CREPY-EN-VALOIS, France (AP) — Mothers stood by the typewritten lists taped to the town hall door and wept. Every few moments, someone new scanned the names and sobbed: "My God, it's not true."

The column marked "les victimes" listed seven children named Guillot. Six others were from the Martin family.

By mid-afternoon Saturday, 45 children of Crepy were reported dead, all trapped in a blazing bus on their way to camp. Nine adults also were killed in the accident, the worst road disaster in French history. But one child was later found alive.

"Last night, when we sent them off, it was so gay, everyone was excited," said Daniel Verner, a 33-year-old garbage collector, whose five children were on the other list: the survivors. "Now look."

Weeping women, still dressed in what they grabbed when the word went around at 6 a.m., crowded the white-frame doorway, running their fingers down the lists.

Liliane Rollet shuffled away slowly toward home.

"I looked first at the list of survivors for my two granddaughters," she said. "When I didn't find them, I still had a small hope — who knows? Then I saw the death list."

The parents of David Dapon saw his name heading the death list, and they left to grieve. Hours later, he was found alive. He had been thrown clear when the bus from Crepy rammed into cars and a bus ahead on the superhighway some 200 miles southeast of Paris.

At the sedate little red-brick town hall in Crepy, a balding man stood apart, erect and silent, against a windowbox of petunias and geraniums.

"My name? Guillot," he said. "It's on the list."

Seven of his nephews were killed, the children of two brothers who work together at a lumbermill in this town of 11,000 inhabitants, 40 miles north of Paris.

"My own three children were going to go, too, but one had a broken arm and they stayed home," he said.

"We are eight brothers and sisters in Crepy, altogether with 30 kids." Guillot said. Then he stopped to correct himself. "Now it is 23."

Like the Guillots, the six Martin children were from two families, three brothers and sisters each and all cousins. Another family lost four children. Two others lost three.

With more grief than bitterness, families described how the bus drivers had seemed tired and upset that they were leaving 45 minutes behind schedule.

"It is obvious they tried to make up time on the road," Guillot said. Jabbing a finger at the list, he added: "And you see what happened."

Witnesses of the crash, quoted by the French press, said the drivers were racing each other at 75-80 mph on the rain-slick highway.

Italian police report scores of accidents as millions of Europeans go on holiday

ROME (AP) — Police reported scores of traffic accidents Saturday, including one with seven fatalities, as millions of Italians and tourists traveled to their annual vacations.

Police said seven people were killed and 10 injured in a six-vehicle pileup on highway A-14 near the central city of Pescara. The victims were all Italian.

The accident blocked northbound traffic for nearly six hours and caused a 10-mile-long traffic jam, they said.

Another accident on a highway bridge between Venice and Trieste on the Yugoslav border killed a Turkish couple and injured their two children. The children were listed in serious condition at a local hospital following the single-vehicle crash.

Elsewhere traffic was reported extremely heavy, particularly in the north, where Italy borders France, Switzerland, Austria and Yugoslavia.

In central Bologna, where two major highways meet, the Italian Automobile Society counted more than 2,500 cars an hour passing through the city on each road by midafternoon.

Government officials predicted that more than 20 million Italians and tourists will flood the highways this weekend for the traditional month-long vacation. Italy's population is 57 million.

Panamanian president 'resigns'

By CHRISTOPHER DICKEY
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MEXICO CITY — President Aristides Royo resigned Friday in a surprise move described by a senior official as a "constitutional coup d'etat a la panamena" by the National Guard, intended to swing the government to the right.

The immediate victors in the push appear to be the National Guard commander, Gen. Ruben Dario Paredes, the intelligence chief, Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, and Vice President Ricardo de la Espriella, who was sworn in as president Friday afternoon.

Paredes, whose National Guard is the country's sole military force, held a press conference after the swearing-in to order all newspapers shut down for seven days. He also demanded the resignations of all major figures in the Royo government.

The senior official, describing himself as "authorized" to speak for the new administration, said that as many as 70 percent of the resignations would be accepted and that "all the most notable leftist figures of the government will be left out."

SUCH FIGURES might include Minister of the Presidency Ricardo Rodriguez and Interior and Justice Minister Jorge Ritter, according to well-informed Panamanians.

The source, who is familiar with the thinking of senior guard commanders, said the force had in effect initiated a "purge" to clean up the government and that the shutting of the newspapers, including the forcible closing of the opposition La Prensa by guardsmen reportedly armed and carrying rubber hoses, was part of an effort to "moralize social communication" and "to avoid insults."

The official said, however, that after the week is over and "everything is established in order," then "a total democracy" will function, leading to presidential elections in 1984.

The ostensible reason for Royo's resignation is a throat malady, for which he is expected to travel to Houston early next week, the spokesman said.

The coup comes in the wake of growing social unrest, scandal and discontent that National Guard leaders found increasingly disconcerting.

IT ALSO COMES one day short of a year after Panama's strongman, General Omar Torrijos, was killed in a plane crash. Torrijos, who ran this country with a blend of social conscience, questionable practices and Machiavellian pragmatism for 13 years, handpicked Royo for a six-year term as president that began in 1978.

The then newly elected legislature had designated Royo and de la Espriella president and vice president for six-year terms in 1978 following Torrijos' decision to retire as head of state. However, he kept his job as commander of the National Guard. Command of the guard is still widely considered to be the most powerful post in this country of 2 million people.

Royo came to be considered the leader of leftist elements in the government. He was a constant critic of U.S. implementation of the canal treaties, often accusing Washington of hundreds of technical violations. Internationally, he was regarded as a key link with Cuba in efforts to talk out the worsening regional confrontations.

(THE ASSOCIATED Press quoted a diplomat in Panama City as saying recent statements by Royo involving the United States and Cuba might have been a factor in the resignation. Royo returned Wednesday from Venezuela calling for a conference, to include Cuba but not the United States, to discuss "collective self-defense for the region" in the aftermath of the Falklands war.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said "We anticipate no change in our relations with Panama.")

Royo, 42, a Panama City lawyer and former education minister, was also seen by many of his countrymen as a frequently ineffectual administrator who had no strong constituency of his own. De la Espriella, 48, on the other hand, has extensive backing among both business interests and the National Guard.

Frictions between Royo and the current commanders of the guard have been reported and rumored since Torrijos was killed. Royo was reported to have tendered his resignation the day after Torrijos' death but the commanders of the guard declined to accept it at the time.

PAREDES has been edging toward a bid for the presidency in recent months, and two weeks ago he openly undercut Royo's administration by saying that the people should have a chance to vote before 1984.

The somewhat mysterious and widely feared Noriega, meanwhile, is generally expected to succeed Paredes as head of the National Guard if Paredes makes his bid for the top office.

The new president, who was known by friends to regard Royo as self-serving and egotistical, reportedly spent much of Friday huddled with National Guard leaders. The new president studied at Stanford University and at one point was an employee of the U.S. Agency for International Development mission in Panama.

Although there was some speculation that Royo's resignation may presage exactly the move toward earlier elections called for by National Guard Chief Paredes, one senior guard official, reached by telephone, said de la Espriella will probably finish out the two years remaining in the presidential term.

IN THE LAST few weeks, Panama has been hit by social discontent of a kind not seen here for several years, with striking teachers twice mounting massive demonstrations in the streets of the capital, a major scandal in the Social Security administration, and increasingly bitter and militant opposition from political parties. Torrijos had tried to keep the parties out of national life, or on its margins, from the time he seized power in 1968.

In an interview earlier this month, Paredes talked about some of the changes he thought were necessary immediately in the national government, including "the need to review" the ministries to see which ones were working and which not and "to make them more efficient."

Chocolate candy heir Jocelyn Cadbury found shot on family estate grounds

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — The body of Jocelyn Cadbury, 36-year-old member of Parliament and part of the chocolate candy family, was found on the grounds of the family home here Saturday, police said.

Birmingham Police Superintendent Tony Carter said Cadbury, a bachelor, died from a single shot to the head from a 12-gauge shotgun found beside the body. He said there were no suspicious circumstances but declined to say if the wound was self-inflicted.

A spokesman for the family declined to speculate on the cause of death.

Cadbury was the brother of Sir Adrian Cadbury, chairman of Cadbury-Schweppes Ltd., the big candy and soft drink firm.

Mexican government incensed by coverage

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government is accusing ABC, Time and Newsweek of conducting "a campaign that tries to distort the image" of Mexico in the United States.

Presidential spokesman Francisco Galindo Ochoa singled out a recent ABC-TV program about Mexico — "Time of Crisis" — as an example of reports containing "calumnies, falsehoods and mistaken concepts — all edited in the most absolute bad faith."

Galindo Ochoa did not specify the articles Mexico found objectionable in Time or Newsweek. Both magazines wrote about Mexico's social problems in their coverage of the country's July 4 national election.

Spokesmen for both magazines rejected Galindo Ochoa's charges, saying that they believed their coverage had been fair and accurate.

The ABC program was a documentary about the economic and social problems facing Mexico. It was broadcast in the United States on July 25.

Richard Richter, a senior producer for ABC news documentaries in New York, responding to the Mexican criticism, said that, "We are very, very careful with the facts because we realize we are saying serious things."

Richter said the producers "tried to say there were plenty of problems, but there are also sufficient strengths to the Mexican situation."

According to a Spanish language transcript provided by the Mexican government, the report said Mexico "faces a crisis in virtually all fields, which creates profound discontent with the present and more anxiety for the future."

Study tells 'Who's Cracking Up in Rio'

By BRUCE HANDLER

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The people of Rio de Janeiro — the Cariocas often portrayed in movies and travel brochures as happy-go-lucky folks dancing the samba or frolicking on the beach — are in fact suffering from severe psychiatric problems because of political repression and economic hardships, according to a controversial new study.

The study, entitled "Who's Cracking Up in Rio de Janeiro," gained nationwide attention following its presentation at the recent annual meeting of the Brazilian Society for the Progress of Science by four researchers led by Dr. Paulo Sergio Silva Lima, a professor of clinical psychology at Catholic University here.

Years of repressive government, especially the current military regime which has been in power since 1964, caused a "psychoanalysis explosion" in Rio, fueled by "a populace massacred, oppressed and castrated by arbitrary, dictatorial acts," the study claims.

The situation worsened, the paper adds, with the present regime's "savage capitalist" approach to economic development, which widened the gap between rich and poor and reduced the average worker's buying power.

"The economic and political factors that made the middle class mentally ill also engendered a demand for psychiatric help among the poor, who were going progressively crazier," according to the paper. It described poor people here as "sad performers in a balancing act in the Brazilian social drama — without a net."

"Rio definitely is not the way it looks on post cards," Lima's wife, Maria Anita, 38, said during an Associated Press interview with the study's four authors. She, too, is a professor of clinical psychology at Catholic University and worked on the study.

Her husband explained that after the 1964 coup, the regime, in a crackdown on supposed leftism in universities, forced large numbers of students out of "politically dangerous" curriculums, such as sociology, and into psychology and psychoanalysis, considered "safer" majors.

The anti-subversion campaign also included the secret arrest and torture of suspected dissidents, summary firing of mistrusted public officials, censorship and repression of politics.

"There was a big shift into psychoanalysis — on the part of practitioners and patients — because the people of Rio had their traditional channels of expression cut off," said fellow researcher Ricardo Przemyslaw, 35, who is finishing work for certification as a psychoanalyst from the Brazilian Psycholoanalysis Society.

The fourth researcher, Dr. Maria Elisa Delecave Monteiro, 38, a practicing clinical pyschologist, said, "Suddenly everything was different. People felt psychologically isolated."

And while all this was going on, the psychologists added, the newly built inland city of Brasilia was replacing Rio as the nation's capital, disrupting traditional Rio lifestyles even more.

"So what we got was a unique Rio way of cracking up," Mrs. Lima said.

"Rio turned into a big beach resort," she added. "The only way people could satisfactorily express themselves without getting into political trouble or bringing on even more anxiety was to concentrate on the cult of their own bodies — diets, suntans and bikinis."

"Psychoanalysis became a Rio fashion," said her husband. "The rich sought private analysts and then spread the phenomenon by sending their mentally distraught employees — and even their maids — to group-therapy sessions at public psychiatric clinics."

U.S. wants military force exerted on leftist guerrillas

By ROBERT PARRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's policy in El Salvador is entering a new and difficult phase, with the administration calling for increased military pressure on leftist insurgents while keeping alive beleaguered land and social reform programs.

Administration officials say their goal is still a political, not military, solution to the conflict, but they concede that the Salvadoran army's success on the battlefield in the months ahead is crucial to achieving a settlement.

The strategy described in interviews with State Department and Pentagon officials calls for continued political and economic reforms in El Salvador to ease social inequities and undercut popular support for the guerrillas.

But the officials also stress the need for increased military pressure on the rebels to give the reforms more time and ultimately convince the insurgents to lay down their arms and run in government-sponsored elections.

"You try to defeat them militarily, but it's important that you leave an opening for them to come back into the system," summed up one senior State Department official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used.

Critics such as Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., say the administration's policy is little more than wishful thinking. And they warn that it could lead to an ever deepening U.S. military role in El Salvador and Central America.

"This has the real makings of getting out of control," Dodd said. "This is a plan without an automatic pilot or any kind of pilot."

Already, a leftist insurgency is under way against the military government in Guatemala, and Honduras and Costa Rica are experiencing increasing political unrest.

Leftist Nicaragua, now fighting insurgents operating from Honduras, has accused the United States of backing its enemies in an effort to topple its three-year-old Sandinista government.

The Reagan administration, in turn, has blamed Nicaragua and Cuba for fomenting violence in El Salvador — and depicted the tiny country as the key domino in Central America.

"El Salvador is strategically important to the United States," Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said last week. "Should it fall to a Cuban- and Nicaraguan-backed armed minority, what country in Central America would be secure?

"Surely not Costa Rica, which has no army; probably not Honduras, which would then be caught between two Marxist-Leninist countries; nor Guatemala, already challenged by a virulent insurgency. It might not be long before Panama, Colombia, or southern Mexico were at risk."

Fugitive Solidarity leaders call for peaceful protests

By THOMAS W. NETTER

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Fugitive Solidarity leaders are calling for non-violent protests to martial law this month, which marks the second anniversary of the founding of the independent trade union.

The dissidents, in statements circulated here Saturday, also called for creation of a "general resistance movement" and an "underground society" with the goal of transforming Poland into a "self-governed republic."

The documents, dated July 28 and signed by five leaders who escaped arrest and went underground when martial law was imposed on Dec. 13, signal the end of a moratorium on protest which kept Poland quiet through July and presage a new round of confrontations with the government.

The underground unionists announced the moratorium June 26 in hopes that the government would respond with a liberalization program. But the underground leaders said the moves announced by Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski on July 21 were not enough to justify prolonging their self-imposed restraint.

"WE APPEAL to strengthen poster and leaflet actions," the union leaders said. "We call on union cells to organize peaceful manifestations on Aug. 31 under the slogan of restoring the Solidarity union, freeing all internees and those arrested and sentenced and reaching a national accord. We call on all to join these manifestations."

On Aug. 31, 1980, the Polish government signed an accord with Lech Walesa and other leaders of Gdansk shipyard strikers that recognized the right of workers to have a trade union independent of government and Communist Party control. The accords paved the way for government registration of Solidarity, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc.

The underground dissidents said the formation of Solidarity in 1980 "gave us hope...for a solution to Poland's problems.

"Nevertheless, this hope was broken in December and the authorities threw out the chance for social accord" when Jaruzelski announced his limited liberalization in a speech to Poland's Sejm, or Parliament.

THE UNION leaders' appeal was the first formal response of any kind from the underground hierarchy to Jaruzelski's announcements. Over 1,000 internees were released and some curbs on travel and communications were lifted. Jaruzelski said martial law might be lifted by the end of the year if calm continued.

But Jaruzelski did not allow the release of about 650 internees, including Solidarity leader Walesa, and he did not offer clemency to the thousands of dissidents convicted and sentenced as criminals for martial law violations like demonstrating and distributing leaflets. Although he pledged to revive unions, he said the government would not allow the restoration of a broad-based, independent workers' movement such as Solidarity.

Saying "five times no," the union leaders rejected the key aspects of Jaruzelski's speech.

Jaruzelski also rejected another of the goals sought by the underground's protest moratorium when he refused to permit a visit by Polish-born Pope John Paul II.

THE POPE had hoped to participate in the celebration of the 600th anniversary of the arrival in Poland of the icon known as the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, a symbol of Poland's Catholic faith and patriotic ardor.

But Jaruzelski said the visit could not occur without an end to anti-state activity and a time of social peace.

The call for a "general resistance movement and the creation of an underground society," was reminiscent of the way Poles reacted to the occupation of their country by Nazi Germany in World War II.

The union leaders said the goal of their proposed underground society was to build a "self-governed society" in accordance with the program passed by Solidarity's national congress in Gdansk last September.

Man gives up fast after priest's visit

ROME (AP) — A Brazilian who staged a hunger strike after Pope John Paul II refused to accept his gift donkey flew home Saturday, saying his fast was not in vain.

"My aim was not just to arrange the transfer of a donkey but to present a symbol of world hunger," Damio Galdino da Silva told reporters at Rome's Fumincino airport. "It was a gesture to call attention to people who are starving all around the world."

The 42-year-old Da Silva then boarded a flight for Rio de Janeiro.

He had wanted the pontiff to accept a donkey named Jericar as a symbol of the Roman Catholic Church's commitment to the poor, but the Vatican said the $8,000 it would cost to fly the animal from Rio to Rome could be better spent on the needy.

Da Silva arrived here last Sunday and began a hunger strike at St. Peter's Square. He was hospitalized Tuesday suffering from exhaustion and was fed intravenously until he agreed to resume eating solid food Thursday night. He said he lost 11 pounds.

Da Silva, a driver at the Brazilian Senate in Brasilia, said he gave up his fast after being visited by a priest from the Vatican who "made me understand that it is impossible for the donkey to come to Rome."

He said he now would give the 4-year-old donkey to the archbishop of Rio de Janeiro.

Soldiers surround rebels

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — Soldiers have encircled a gang of armed rebels holding six foreign tourists hostage in the dense bush of western Zimbabwe and are closing in, a senior police officer said Saturday.

"We're pretty sure they're in there and we expect a sighting soon," said the officer who asked not to be identified. "But if we're proven wrong by the end of the weekend, we're going to have to rethink our strategy."

Although a deadline set by the kidnappers for killing their hostages passed on Friday, the government said there was no evidence that any of the six young men — two Americans, two Britons, and two Australians — were dead.

There were more signs across the country of spreading violence and tribal rivalry. In the eastern highlands, a new search was mounted for three British tourists missing since July 14 and police near Bulawayo were looking for the killers of four members of the Shona tribe.

The murderers of the Shona tribesmen, like the kidnappers of the six hostages, are believed to be members of the minority Matabele tribe. Their political leader, Joshua Nkomo, has been ousted from the government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, a Shona, for allegedly plotting a coup.

The kidnappers have threatened to kill their six hostages if the government does not release detained Nkomo loyalists. Hundreds of former guerrillas backing Nkomo have turned to banditry in the bush country of Nkomo's Matabeleland stronghold.

Nkomo has denied Mugabe's accusations that his minority Zimbabwe African People's Union is behind the banditry. On Friday he repeated his call to the kidnappers to release the foreigners unharmed.

The hostages are Americans Brett Baldwin, 23, from Walnut Creek, Calif., and his former college roommate, Kevin Ellis, 24, a hotel worker from Bellevue, Wash.; Australians Tony Bajzelj, 25, from Tasmania, and William Butler, 31, from Newcastle, and Britons James Greenwell, 18, a student from Liverpool, and Martyn Hodgson, 35, a civil engineer from Peterborough.

There was no new information about the three missing Britons in eastern Zimbabwe.

Kidnapped Basque industrialist released

VITORIA, Spain (AP) — Basque industrialist Rafael Abaitua, who was kidnapped by separatists on July 3, unexpectedly returned home at dawn Saturday in good shape, his family said.

Although it was speculated that a ransom had been paid for the 47-year-old father of seven, the family refused to discuss that point.

The kidnapping was believed to have been carried out by the political branch of the separatist organization ETA, which has been engaged in a long, unsuccessful struggle for independence of the Basque country.

Abaitua's family said he was left in the outskirts of Llodio, where he took a cab for his home where the family was sleeping.

Japanese communists elect officials

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Communist Party ended its 16th annual convention Saturday after reshuffling leadership posts.

The five-day party convention approved the appointment of Kenji Miyamoto, 73, chairman of the party's presidium, to succeed retiring central committee chairman Sanzo Nosaka, 90.

Miyamoto had chaired the presidium since 1970 after serving 12 years as secretariat chief.

The appointment of Tetsuzo Fuwa, 52, chief of the party's secretariat, to chairman of the presidium also was approved, officials said. Fuwa will be replaced as secretariat chief by his deputy, Mitsuhiro Kaneko, 57, they said.

The officials said Nosaka will be given the new post of honorary chairman of the party. The convention was held at Atami, about 60 miles south of here.

Despite martial law, Poles visit West

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Nearly 120,000 Poles traveled abroad during the first six months this year, including 61,000 who visited the West despite martial law curbs, it was reported here Saturday.

The Polish news agency PAP also said 495,000 foreigners visited Poland, including 124,000 from the West. At the same time, 12,000 Poles living abroad came to their homeland during the six-month period.

Travel to both East and West has been restricted since martial law was imposed Dec. 13. Passports now are required for travel to East bloc countries and passports to the West are restricted to mostly business, official and elderly travelers.

German ham unintentionally smoked

HAMMELBURG, West Germany (AP) — Fire destroyed 50 tons of ham in a West German meat factory, causing damage estimated at the equivalent to $610,000, police said.

The fire burned a packing room and a large cooling hall where the hams were kept, police said. They said a large quantity of packing material and machines also were lost in the fire.

No injuries were reported in the Friday night fire and police said they were investigating the cause.

South African prime minister to push for moderate reform

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha announced Friday that he will go ahead with his plans for South Africa's ruling whites to share a substantial degree of political power with Asians and people of mixed races.

However, the whites will continue to hold the upper hand in government under Botha's proposals. Also, the prime minister ruled out giving any political rights to the country' blacks, who make up 70 percent of the population.

In a speech to about 3,000 members of his ruling National Party at Bloemfontein, a center of white conservatism, Botha outlined in detail — for the first time — his constitutional reforms aimed at easing racial unrest among Coloreds (those of mixed race) and Asians, most of Indian origin. At present they have no political voice.

Botha said that under the plan, the present all-white South African Parliament would become a three-chamber body — one each for whites, Coloreds and Asians. Each chamber would handle laws dealing with matters of particular interest to its own racial group. Such laws would be applicable only to the people concerned.

Legislation of nationwide application would have to be approved by each of the three chambers. If a consensus could not be reached, the matter would be decided by the President's Council, 35 of whose members would be chosen by Parliament and 25 by the president.

Botha's constitutional proposals call for an executive president having far greater power than the present prime minister does. The present would be elected by an electoral college, consisting of 50 whites, 25 Coloreds and 13 Asians.

Israelis give refugees 'little bread..., nothing more'

By ED BLANCHE

RASHIDIYEH, Israeli-Held Lebanon (AP) — The Palestinian refugees in camps here and elsewhere in southern Lebanon, devastated by the June 6 Israeli invasion, face an uncertain future with growing despair.

"We have nowehere to go," lamented Iman Yassin, a 25-year-old Palestinian woman in Rashidiyeh, four miles south of Tyre. "The Israelis give us nothing. A little bread maybe, but nothing more.

"The Lebanese hate us. The Arab countries don't care about us. It is as it has always been. But now we have lost homes and loved ones and who is there to help us now?"

Imam, who trained as a secretary in Beirut before the fighting, lost her home in the Israeli assault on Rashidiyeh where the Palestine Liberation Organization had a big base. Her three brothers were arrested as suspected guerrillas. Her family is destitute and homeless.

Officials of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, which has been caring for Palestinian refugees since the first Arab-Israeli War in 1948, says at least 47,000 Palestinians lost their homes in the squalid camps when the Israelis stormed in to destroy the PLO in June.

THE ISRAELIS put the number of homeless at 20,000, but whatever the true figure, the Israelis have shown little sign so far of doing anything to aid the refugees in the half-dozen camps they blasted around Tyre and Sidon.

However, Clinton Bailey, an Israeli specialist on Arab affairs called in by the army to assess the problem, said Israel's government is "working very hard" to tackle the "pressing humanitarian problem."

He said in an interview at military headquarters in Sidon: "Everything is in the process of discussion now and I can attest that very serious efforts are being made to solve this humanitarian problem."

The Israelis have helped the Lebanese get their battered cities working again. Lebanese authorities, aided by the Red Cross, are tending to their own civilians who lost homes or suffered in the fighting.

Red Cross officials estimate that more than 100,000 Lebanese and Palestinians need emergency aid.

The Palestinians' aid comes mainly from the U.N. agency. But its senior officer in Sidon, Bernard Nossaz of Switzerland, said the Palestinians who fled their camps are spread out all over the south "and there are many we have not contacted yet."

THE AGENCY'S REGISTER of refugees receiving aid lists only those who came here in 1948 and their descendants. The agency has no accurate count of the thousands who came here when King Hussein of Jordan forced the PLO fighters and their families out of his kingdom in 1970.

The problem has been intensified by the Israelis' systematic demolition of areas where they believe the PLO was based. Israeli soldiers in Rashidiyeh are blowing up 250 bunkers in the camp, where half the buildings were destroyed or damaged in a week of house-to-house fighting.

"This place was a fortress," said Maj. Shlomo Nissan, Israeli military spokesman for Tyre. "There were 1,500 terrorists here and we killed or captured them all.

"As in the other camps, we are destroying everything used by the PLO for military purposes. Unfortunately, other buildings are sometimes knocked down. But we want to leave nothing the terrorists can use again after we withdraw."

THE EIN HILWA CAMP near Sidon, which once housed as many as 35,000 refugees, is now a wasteland. The buildings that survived six days of bombing and shelling have been bulldozed into rubble.

Bailey said the camp "was a PLO base. That's why it is the way it is now."

He said Israeli authorities are considering rebuilding the camps "and to do that you have to clear them to lay down the proper sewage systems and the like."

Bailey added: "I'd like to think that what the people are going to get would be a hell of a lot better than what they had before."

Some Israeli officials have indicated the government will seek to integrate the Palestinians into Lebanese society, rather than keep them separated in their own camps.

"For one thing," said a senior army officer, who asked not to be identified, "it would prevent the PLO using them as breeding grounds for terrorists again."

But many Lebanese, glad to be rid of the PLO, want the refugees out as well.

"THE PALESTINIANS' WAR with Israel is not our war," said Mayor Ahmed Khalash of Sidon, a city badly battered in the fighting. "We feel we've had to pay the bill for others. We resent this. We're fed up with the Palestinian problem. It has to be settled once and for all — and soon."

Iranians apparently stalled east of Basra

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq claimed Saturday its troops killed 228 Iranians in fighting near the port city of Basra, while Iran said its forces were holding on to their captured Iraqi territory.

Communiques from the warring neighbors gave conflicting reports, but both indicated the Iranian invasion force remained stalled east of the Iraqi oil-refining city of Basra.

The two sides released figures on casualties they claim to have inflicted on the other. Iran said it has killed 90,000 Iraqis, wounded 170,000, and captured 50,000 since the war began on Sept. 22, 1980. Iraq said its forces have killed 27,255 Iranians in the past 18 days of fighting, but did not give figures for the whole war.

Neither side announced the casualties suffered by its own forces. The casualty figures, like the battle claims, could not be independently verified. Both countries bar foreign reporters from the battle area.

The combat communique carried Saturday by Iran's official news agency, IRNA, said Iranian troops, "defending their positions...returned enemy fire and continued their reconnaissance and battle activities in order to destroy the Iraqi forces."

It said the Iraqis shelled residential areas of the Iranian city of Abadan, which is across the Shatt al Arab waterway from Basra. The estuary forms the southernmost border between the two nations.

The Iranian communique said Iraqi jets also raided northern Iranian villages in the Jaldian region, 300 miles north of Abadan. It said one shepherd and his sheep died in "indiscriminate" bombing raids Friday.

Iraq said its helicopter gunships and ground forces continued striking enemy positions east of Basra. Its communique, carried by the official INA news agency, said Iranian artillery positions shelled "living quarters and economic installations " in Basra, causing some damage.

Both old and new: Midland man builds modern adobe homes

John Williams, above, explains adobe construction techniques while standing amidst his latest project, a three-bedroom, two-bathroom adobe house at 3506 Princeton Ave.

Randy Saffer, right, an experienced adobe craftsman, spreads a dollop of adobe mortar before setting another layer of the bricks carried to the site by George Rabasca, below.

Ancient adobe pueblos still dot the Rio Grande Valley of north central New Mexico, testimony to a Pueblo Indian culture long admired for its love of community, art, nature and peace.

Experts say the "sky city" of Acoma, a sprawling stack of adobe abodes perched atop a 357-foot mesa about 50 miles west of Albuquerque, may be the oldest continuously inhabited village in the United States, perhaps dating to the early 13th century. Pueblo Bonito, a five-story, 800-apartment pueblo in Chaco Canyon, is nearly as old and once housed as many as 5,000 people.

Midlanders John and Jan Williams spent several years traversing "the land of enchantment," gathering Indian pottery, jewelry and art for their collector's shop in Midland while gaining an ever-deepening appreciation for the peaceful Pueblos' lifestyle.

Williams, 39, a realtor since 1971, began his own home construction operation in 1977, building duplexes, conventional homes and some custom-designed houses during the first few years.

AFTER NEARLY SEVEN years spent building their Indian art and jewelry collection, the Williams' Chaparral Shop was robbed of $45,000 worth of uninsured jewelry on Christmas Eve 1980.

Mrs. Williams, 36, said the robbery "was a rather emotional experience, besides being financially devastating."

Although the Williamses closed their shop following the robbery, they still deal in Indian pottery and art by appointment. And their affection for Pueblo culture continued unabated, prompting them to begin plans for their own adobe house.

After nine months of planning and construction, they and their two children, Holly, 14, and Michael, 12, moved into a new, four bedroom, 4,000-square-foot adobe home at 1027 Ward St. "It's the real McCoy," Williams said proudly.

Another adobe house, this one intended for resale, is going up at 3506 Princeton Ave., where Williams took time out to explain some of the construction techniques and energy-saving features of adobe homes.

The Indians poured a mixture of clay and sand into wooden molds to fashion their adobe bricks. Straw, grass or animal manure was added as a binding agent, to hold the bricks intact. The bricks were then sun-baked for several weeks before use.

TODAY, THE BRICKS are usually made in one of two ways. Machines which mold the bricks rapidly under pressures of more than 200,000 psi can produce about 2,000 bricks per day at the construction site. About 5,000 bricks for the Princeton Avenue house and garage were made in this fashion. The bricks are then coated with waterproofing silicone before use.

Most adobe brick producers add a stabilizer, such as asphalt oil, to a mixture of sand and clay. The concoction is then poured into brick molds and left to dry in the sun for three to four weeks. The stabilizer acts as a waterproofing and strengthening agent.

Williams said both modern methods have their advantages. While the sun-dried bricks are slightly stronger, they must be shipped to the construction site, making them more expensive than bricks produced on site by machine.

After a concrete slab is poured and set, adobe bricks are stacked to form walls. An adobe mortar slurry links one brick to another.

The 16-inch long, 10-inch wide bricks are laid flat, forming walls that are 10 inches thick even before a stucco finish is applied to the outside. Williams said the walls are virtually soundproof. "You can have a war going in one room and you can't hear it."

Rough, thick fir beams outline window and door frames. Once the walls are built to the desired height, a heavy "bond" beam is placed on top, binding the walls together.

ADOBE HOUSE building requires an abundance of skilled labor, Williams said. The adobe builder "has to be a mason, a carpenter and a stucco man all wrapped into one to build these houses." Williams contracted with Randy Saffer, an adobe builder from Albuquerque, for work on the Princeton Avenue house, which will eventually boast 3 bedrooms, two baths and about 1,950 square feet of living space.

Because of greater labor costs, home buyers could expect to pay about 15 percent more for an adobe house than a comparable, conventionally built home, Williams said. But because the materials are relatively inexpensive and the potential for energy savings is great, he said "it will pay for itself later."

Williams estimated his home energy bills are 40 percent less than what they might be had he built a conventional home. Savings are greatest in the winter, he said, when three, Indian-style "kiva" fireplaces warm the house. Because the fireplaces radiate heat efficiently and draw air from outside rather than in, Williams said small fires easily provide the necessary heat.

Williams said the passive solar energy features designed into both houses will help limit energy expenses year round.

Much like a body of water, adobe is slow to heat and slow to cool. Williams explained that by the proper placement of windows and window shades, these characteristics can be translated into energy savings.

Both houses have an abundance of windows on the south side, few on the north. The design enables the low-angled winter sun to have its maximum warming effect on the inside of the house.

He said the interior adobe walls act as a "heat sink," capturing the warming daylight rays and slowly releasing them after sundown.

BUT A PASSIVE energy design that promotes warmth in winter can bring unbearable heat in summer, unless some alterations are made, Williams said.

"A house can be designed passive solar so you can heat it," Williams explained. "But it's going to be a fish bowl during the summer."

To prevent the "fish bowl" effect, Williams said window blinds are installed on the large, south windows to block direct sunlight. The blinds help keep the house's interior cool, minimizing air conditioning costs.

The Williamses have taken the passive solar concept several steps further.

They planted decidious bushes outside the windows on the south side of their home. During summer, foliage will block the sunlight. In winter, barren branches will let the sunshine in.

The south entrance to the Princeton Avenue home will also serve as a greenhouse, taking full advantage of solar science. Skylights in some closets and the garage help keep light bills to a minimum in their new home. A small, backyard storage building features a pop-up window to admit warming, winter sunlight.

"This type of construction has always fascinated us," said Williams, who, along with his wife, shares a fascination with Pueblo Indian culture apparent in the design and decor of their home.

The semi-circular living area is patterned after the Pueblo's "kiva," a ceremonial meeting place. Rough logs, like wheel spokes, support the ceiling. Indian artifacts and pottery abound.

History reveals that adobe construction is ideally suited to the hot, dry environs of the southwest United States. Williams said that most of the damage done to pueblos in New Mexico came not from the elements, but by marauding plains Indians or invading Spanish soldiers.

Perhaps because tribal philosophers emphasized harmony with nature, the Pueblo Indians were able to build homes, farm vegetables, create pottery and art and build a peaceful, democratic society amidst what could be considered an inhospitable environment.

"I THINK PEOPLE are going to go back to some of the older methods that work best in certain areas," Mrs. Williams said.

Even those who know little of Pueblo history may appreciate adobe construction for its unique appearance and energy-saving potential. Williams said he has received some inquiries from prospective buyers about the Princeton Avenue house, which should be completed by October.

"I think as the public accepts it there will be a limited demand for it," said Williams, who plans to continue building adobe houses as demand dictates. "Most people that kind of hear the story — hear a little bit about it — are interested."

Although the neighborhood box unit (NBU) makes mail delivery quicker and more convenient for carriers, not all carriers are happy about their expansion into newly developed neighborhoods — or the possibility of them going city-wide. One such veteran carrier is Hoot Gibson, pictured, who contends that people are being deprived of a basic service and that is door-to-door mail delivery.

Will door-to-door mail delivery die out?

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Many Midland mail carriers will not be the only ones sloshing through snow or rain or gloom of night if the several neighborhood box units (NBUs) scattered around the city spill out to replace the fast-becoming old-fashioned porch mailbox. Many residents also will be stomping along a few blocks of slushy sidewalks to pick up their mail.

The NBU, where mail is delivered at one location for several residents, has been used at apartment complexes and now is going up in newly-developed residential areas. And the idea is so popular with the postal service, Postmaster D.E. Holster said he would like to see them all over the city.

"This thing is really catching on," Holster said. "They are becoming more and more popular because we've had more and more tampering with the mail throughout the country than we've had in years."

Holster pointed out that if a resident is out of town, no one is needs to pick up his or her mail because it will be safely locked in a secured box.

"IT JUST OFFERS more security," he added. "We've even had requests from people with curbside boxes asking for NBUs."

According to a news release issued by Holster, the locked postal boxes are placed in areas of the city where new houses are being built. Generally located on or near street intersections of housing developments or within large apartment complexes, the units will allow the letter carrier to make only one stop to service several customers who will obtain mail from their individual box.

Holster suggested that persons moving into newly-developed areas where mail has not been delivered before should contact the customer services department at the Main Post Office, 684-5801, before buying a private mailbox. Chances are that the person will receive his mail in an NBU, and the private mailbox will be a waste of money.

TIME AND COSTS are cut with the NBUs, Holster said, claiming that the cost to deliver mail to a curbside box runs about $86 per family unit per year. The neighborhood units cost $43 per family box per year.

And although the neighborhood unit will minimize time spent delivering mail — an advantage seen for carriers — not all carriers are happy with the new concept.

"For 200 years, I've had my mail, just like everyone else has, delivered to the door. It's been like that since they started postmen carrying it up to the door," Hoot Gibson, a Midland mail carrier since 1958, said.

"To save a little money, they've initiated the NBU. I just don't think it is the best available service. Anything less than door-to-door is not good service. Why try to treat a bunch of houses like an apartment complex?"

Gibson, who is president of the local National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC), said another move he didn't approve of was "setting rural type mailboxes on the curbs.

"They're trying to save money on everything and really all they are doing is cutting down on the service," he said.

Although certain responsibilities have not been designated yet, Holster said that the units are considered property of the U.S. Postal Service; therefore, if the boxes sustain any damage, the U.S. Postal Service will be in charge of repairs. However, responsibility for keeping the boxes clean has not been decided.

"If the customer wants to take a rag and wipe it out, fine," Holster said. "We'll probably get our carriers or our maintenance men to do it occassionally, or when we get a call on it. We haven't resolved that yet because they are so new. I do know that in West Texas we'll have a problem keeping them clean."

"NO ONE HAS DECIDED whose responsibility it is when you're forced to walk six or seven houses down (to pick up your mail), especially when it's winter and it's dark when you get home," Gibson said.

"How are the infirm and the lame going to get to their box?" he asked. "If you're sick in the wintertime, you can reach out your door. There is no consideration for the elderly there at all — and for 200 years we've had it."

Although the new delivery concepts might have sparked a protective feeling for the elderly and the handicapped, Gibson said that mail carriers have banded together in an individual watch of their elderly customers in past years.

If an 83-year-old woman hasn't picked up her mail in the last few days, the carrier will notify someone to check on her. According to Gibson, he, as well as many other long-time carriers, has developed a sort of intuition about houses on his rounds. He said that he often can tell, just from walking up to the porch, if the house is empty or if someone is in there but not moving around.

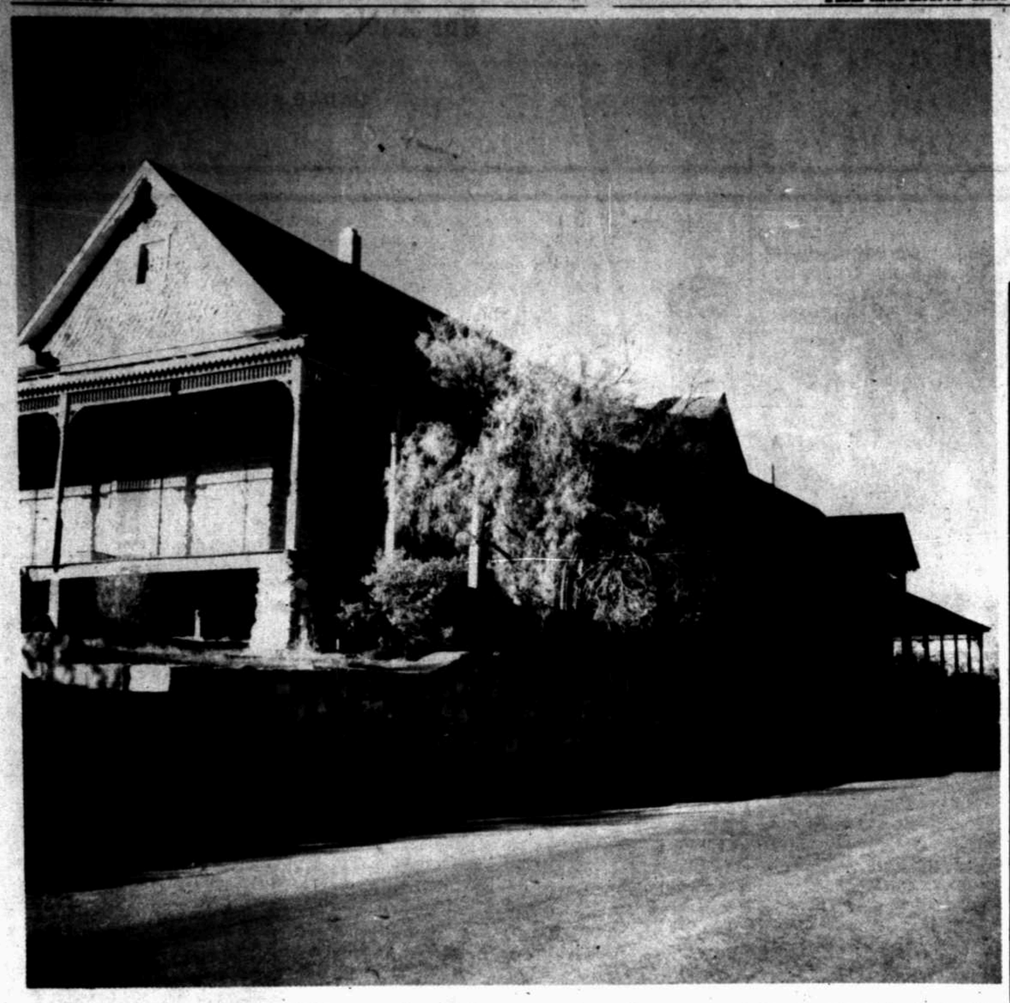
"Of course, in these new developments (where the NBUs are being established) most of the people are young," he said, adding that he was worried about future possibilities.

"I think it's really going to take hold," Holster said. "The customers are saving money in the long run and the more we save with these NBUs, the longer it will be before we have another postage increase."

"What's the next step? Will we all have to go to the post office?" Gibson asked.

"There may be a little dissatisfaction from people who would rather get it at their door," Holster said, "but I think that they will be better served."

"If we go to the NBUs, we (carriers) won't even have to face a dog," Gibson said. "But the fact remains. The tradition is behind us. The Post Office wasn't built on cutting corners — it was built on providing service."



The Annie Riggs Memorial Museum, formerly the Riggs Hotel, stands today as a tribute to the woman who managed the first hotel of significance in the Fort Stockton area.

Historic West Texas hotel now houses memorabilia

By CAROLYN BRAHANEY

FORT STOCKTON — Across the Pecos River in Fort Stockton where purple sage blooms and mesas stretch into the distance, the visitor glimpses the past honoring calvarymen and officers of the U.S. Army Outpost. There, also, stands one of the few museums in Texas named for a woman — The Annie Riggs Memorial Museum, once called the Riggs Hotel, Pride of the West.

Annie Riggs managed this first hotel of significance in the area of Fort Stockton from the early 1900s into the mid-1920s. To be a businesswoman in those days was unusual, but widow Annie Frazier Johnson Riggs, needing to support her children, ran this famous meeting place of cowboys, drummers, travelers and ranchers. Some say she kept a loaded pistol under the hotel register desk at all times.

Today, the adobe brick hotel looks just as it did in 1899, with gingerbread trim and surrounded by a painted blue veranda. An example of territorial architecture, it was built by six men who formed The Fort Stockton Hotel Company and was purchased by Annie Riggs in 1904 for $4,750.

The hotel is built on a small hill which slopes gently down into Comanche Springs, once the watering place used by Indians, now dry. In the days when Annie Riggs was proprietress of the hotel, guests would sit on the veranda in swings and chairs, listening to Annie play the spinet piano.

Inside, the original dark pine floors of the lobby and parlor are worn smooth by the feet of the many guests who walked there. Over the years the spurs worn by cowboys completely eroded the floor moulding as they crossed from the lobby into the dining room.

In the dining room, the boarders ate fried chicken, cornbread and honey family-style for 35 cents a meal. An oval, white ironstone serving platter, used by Annie, is kept in the hotel kitchen with other utensils of that early era.

Horsehair sofas, an antique Bible and Bible stand and an upright piano are found in the parlor. The prints in typical Victorian style of young girls, hanging on either side of the portrait of Annie's father, Judge George Frazier, were purchased by Annie to decorate the parlor.

One hotel room is furnished as a bedroom. A guest room in the old hotel would have contained a bed, nightstand, wardrobe and washstand. Guests would have paid approximately $2 per night. The white iron bedstead and wardrobe in this room are original pieces. The hotel contained 15 rooms with the lobby. The inner courtyard, now planted with shrubs and cactus, was once a flower garden.

In her later years, Annie Riggs told her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ernest Riggs, that each room in the hotel had held a dead body at one time or another. Across the street from the hotel was The Old Grey Mule Saloon. A tiny adobe building that was built in the 1880s, it still remains with the emblem, an iron grey mule, over the door.

Another saloon, The Stag Saloon, was not far away. Oldtimers says guests would be injured in fights and, there being nowhere else to take them, they were brought to the hotel. If necesary, Annie arranged for a cowboy to sit up with them.

Annie had six children by her first husband, James Johnson, and three by her second husband, Barney Riggs. Riggs, who served time in prison in Arizona for killing a man, was pardoned because he rescued the warden from three desparate prisoners. Riggs died of a gunshot wound in 1902. Annie chose his epitaph in the Old Fort Cemetery, which reads in part, "In the last hours, man may receive forgiveness, in Heaven to share."

When the hotel first opened in 1901, the sign on the door read, "Koehler House, Erected by Energetic Pecos County Citizens." The hotel was soon leased by Annie and then purchased by her. Several years after Annie's death in 1931, her heirs donated the building to the Fort Stockton Historical Society.

Fort Stockton's 15 Historical Site Medallions nearby include the Old Mission Church built in 1875, the original Guard House built in 1867 amd the Old Fort Cemetery.

In the days when hardships were great, a legend about this cemetery arose — that no headstone had been erected for a person over 40 years of age.

The Annie Riggs Memorial Museum, with eight chimneys and 160 feet of porch, houses a vast collection of rare early photographs and Victorian costumes, including an oval-shaped photograph of young Annie in an ostrich feather-trimmed hat, black silk Sunday dress and black fur-trimmed coat.

Summer hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 8 p.m. Sunday.

UT students raising funds for Longhorn monument

AUSTIN — An enthusiastic group of University of Texas at Austin students has raised more than $150,000 in pledges toward construction of a monument to the Texas Longhorn.

As part of a two-year celebration of the university's centennial, the students plan to give a bronze statue of the Texas Longhorn to commemorate development of the state of Texas and contribution of the Longhorn.

"The Longhorn symbolizes the strength, pride and persistence so typical of this state and our university," said John Cracken, a mechanical-engineering senior and one of three students promoting the project this summer.

The two-ton bronze, to be sculpted by Santa Fe, N.M., artist and cowboy Duke Sundt, will require $100,000 in donations. If students can collect the pledges by the end of the summer, the steer will be placed on campus in ceremonies in September. Any proceeds beyond the goal will go toward endowed professorships.

Ten contributors willing to donate $10,000 each are being sought by students and service organizations at UT. The contributors will be presented with a numbered and registered bronze maquette of the monument in addition to having their names placed on a permanent marker on or near the statue.

Individuals interested in contributing $2,000 to the project also will be presented a numbered and registered bronze maquette. The maquettes are available as a limited edition of 300 and only are available through UT student organizations. None will be produced after Dec. 31.

For more information, contact Cracken or John D. Harkey Jr., at (512) 684-5007.

Midlander attending summer music program

Wilford S. Majors, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilford S. Majors of 1604 N. Terrell, was accepted for entrance to Boston's Berklee College of Music's special seven-week summer program, which began July 9.

Majors' curriculum includes private instrumental instruction, theory, arranging, harmony, ear training and ensemble performance.

The program is designed to assess the musical talent, capacity and growth potential of the student who is considering music as a vocation. Participants are exposed to Berklee's professional curriculum which includes course offerings in jazz arranging, improvisation, recording studio techniques, popular vocal arranging, songwriting and the writing of background music for films and other media.

The Action Phone is even handier.

A phone is a very handy thing to have. But sometimes, not so handy to use. Like the times you're using both hands to do something else. And you wish you had a third hand to juggle the phone with.

Now there's a phone you don't have to juggle. The Action Phone™. The new phone from Bell that lets you keep your conversation going while it keeps your hands free for other things.

You can talk on your Action Phone just about anywhere in the room, up to 20 feet away. You can even move around the room as you talk. Or move the phone itself from room to room if you've got a modular jack.

With the Action Phone, everyone in the room can get in on the conversation because the microphone and speaker are built right in. A mute button lets you talk to anyone in the room privately, too.

Come into the Bell PhoneCenter and see the Action Phone in action. And get a phone that's handy to have because it's hands-free to use.

Rent It or Own It

by Bob Howle

Are you contemplating a project such as building a fence around your backyard? A rented earth drill can be an invaluable time saver. The earth drill consists of an auger, auger extension and power transmission unit. After snapping the auger on to the transmission handle, be sure to keep the attached pad against the body and leg at all times. Hold the auger in a straight upright position and start digging the hole with applied pressure. Lift the auger slightly every three inches to break up the soil. An earth drill puts heavy digging jobs within your grasp.

When you start your next project, keep your ideas and your mind "down to earth" and rent the tools and equipment that will make the job easier and the result more professional and satisfying.

At BOB'S RENTAL CENTERS INC., 2700 Rankin Hwy., 685-1271, and 2909 N. Big Spring, 684-8294, you can rent the equipment that is fully serviced and maintained and that will help you do a better job more efficently and more effectively. Open 8-6 Mon.-Sat.

Changes in rank, status noted for area service personnel

Navy Seaman George E. Gossett, son of Juanita and Cleveland Gossett Sr. of Big Spring, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

Navy Midshipman Jon A. Franke, son of Edward and Wanda Franke of 3302 Stewart, Midland, was selected for the Superintendent's List at the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

The list recognizes midshipmen who have excelled in both academics and the professional training required at the academy.

Midshipmen undergo four years of extensive study in engineering, mathematics, physical and marine sciences, management and government. In addition to an active physical fitness curriculum, they study military justice, leadership and naval history, plus a variety of elective courses leading to a baccalaureate and commission in the Navy or Marine Corps.

Marine Pfc. Albert Romero, son of Domingo Romero of 1314 E. Cuthbert, Midland, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with Headquarters and Service Battalion, Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Navy Tradevmen Airman Glenn W. Roberson, son of Lola Rodriguez of Crane, was graduated from Tradevman School.

"Tradevmen" are specialists who operate and maintain training devices.

The 5½-week course at the Naval Air Technical Training Center, Millington, Tenn., focused on operation and maintenance of flight trainers. Students received instruction on the principles of, and methods of simulating, flight, and studied radio navigational aids.

Navy Aviation Ordnanceman 3rd Class Jimmy D. Horsley, son of Jimmy and Ruby Honea of Big Spring, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with Attack Squadron 192, Naval Air Station, Lemoore, Calif.

Navy Seaman Recruit Brian P. Kelly, son of Harold F. Kelly of Midland, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Navy Recruit Training Command, San Diego.

Mixed drink tax collections up by 18 percent

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock recently said collection of the state's 10 percent mixed drink tax during the second quarter of 1982 was up 18 percent over the same period last year.

Bullock said the state received $35.9 million in taxes on the sale of mixed drinks during the second three months of this year.

He said his office is sending checks totaling $10.4 million to 215 counties and 407 cities as their share of the gross receipts tax on mixed drinks for the second quarter.

The state's general revenue fund will receive the balance, $25.5 million, of the tax money collected.

Texas cities and counties each receive a 15 percent rebate of the tax collected on mixed drinks sold within their boundaries under the law that legalized the sale of mixed drinks in the state.

Midland County received a remittance of $53,411.97 during the second quarter. The City of Midland received $47,663.02. Ector County's share was $67,406.26. Odessa took in $58,214.54.

The mixed drink tax is collected by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and the city-county rebates are sent out quarterly by the Comptroller's office.

Bullock said the mixed drink tax brought in $70.5 million during the first and second quarters of 1982.

Historic house added to register

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A tour of the Brown-Dorsey House is a trip back through time. You're a child again, visiting your great-grandparents' turn-of-the century country home.

Fireplaces. Wood-burning stoves. Hardwood floors. Hued glass windows. Oak doors. A cistern. Old books. A grape arbor. A wine cellar in the cool basement. Handmade quilts on brass-frame beds. Furniture hewed of wood, not plastic.

Such rich slices of yesteryear deserve to be revered and preserved, shielded from the gray concrete and reflecto-glass utilitarianism that passes for architecture today, say those who remember the past and want to keep at least a part of it intact.

The Brown-Dorsey House has now achieved that protection. On June 17 what is probably Midland's oldest home was added to the National Register of Historic Places, joining the illustrious ranks of such historical landmarks as Bishop's Palace, Fort Sam Houston and the Alamo.

Purchased by the Midland County Historical Society at a cost of $7,500, the former home of Midland pioneer rancher-merchant Z. Taylor Brown and his wife, Sara, sits at 213 N. Weatherford St. Costly, painstaking restoration work has returned it to that January day in 1900 when the Brown family moved into their then-new home.

One of the couple's five children, Sarah Brown, married Hugh B. Dorsey and called the house home until her death in 1968. The historical society bought the property a year later and began restoring it.

A new coat of paint last summer cost the society $2,750; the house, new, cost Brown $2,800.

Speaking of the restoration job, historical society chairman Nancy R. McKinley said, "It was a mammoth job that took 10 years of Midland, Texas, determination" to complete. "Not many people are that gung-ho about saving a piece of our heritage."

Restoration was completed and the house was opened for tours on the 200th anniversary of America's birth: July 4, 1976. The house was dedicated by former Reporter-Telegram Editor Bill Collyns.

"Many people in Midland were interested and helped us," said Mrs. McKinley.

Entry into the National Registry protects and secures the property in its present condition and location, thus ensuring that all the time, work and money that went into preserving Midland's unique contribution to Americana won't someday be bulldozed into an asphalt parking lot.

In addition to national distinction, the honor protects the landmark home — thought to be the oldest in Midland — under the Historic Preservation Act of 1966.

Medical office complex set for downtown Odessa

ODESSA — The downtown construction boom in Odessa continues with the announcement of a $4 million four-story medical office complex to be constructed between 3rd and 4th Streets on Alleghany. Groundbreaking is anticipated within 30 days.

Longtime Odessa physician J.D. Cone, M.D., whose medical practice and offices will occupy part of the fourth floor, made the announcement.

Space in the complex will be available for lease to other physicians and allied health services, according to Raymond Fuqua, business manager.

General contractor for the 37,150 square-foot complex will be Area Builders of Odessa. Exterior of the building will be reflective metal curtained-wall porcelain enamel, and pre-cast concrete panels.

The complex, to be known as the J.D. Cone Medical Building, was designed by the Odessa architectural firm of Peters and Fields.

Located south of the Medical Center Hospital, the building will face north with on-site parking extending to 4th Street. After present tenants in offices now located at 4th and Alleghany are situated in the new building, the site will be cleared to provide parking space for 124 cars.

Dr. Cone said he is confident of a continuation of growth in the Odessa area and forsees the corresponding need for improved and expanded physician services and facilities.

One man killed in plane crash

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — One man was killed and two people were critically injured Saturday when a light airplane crashed while approaching a private landing strip at Mustang Beach Airport, authorities said.

Witnesses said the airplane circled the runway, stalled and crashed, Nueces County Constable DeeWayne Mathews said. The plane's descent may have been too steep, he said.

The single-engine Beechcraft Sundowner went down about 1:20 p.m., Port Aransas police dispatcher David Hollaway said. No fire was reported.

Mathews identified the dead man as Monty O'Bryan, 21, of Corpus Christi.

The two injured were airlifted to Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi where they were in critical condition, according to a nursing supervisor who asked not to be identified.

Susan Finch, 18, of Corpus Christi, suffered a fractured spine and other multiple fractures and probably would be in surgery past midnight, the supervisor said.

Glen Hosey, 22, of Corpus Christi suffered mutiple fractures and facial lacerations, she said.

Mathews said Hosey was piloting the plane and O'Bryan was a front-seat passenger. He said the landing strip was owned by Mustang Beach Ltd.

Coast Guard Lt. Steve Sparks of Corpus Christi said rescue efforts were hampered because the plane landed in the sand.

"The right wing was broken and twisted around and the aircraft was crumpled up, but the cabin and the cockpit area were pretty much in shape," Sparks said.

Many school transfer requests to be denied

Parker Humes, president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, predicts the board will deny almost all of the student transfer appeals scheduled to appear before trustees Tuesday..

"The board's main concern in the transfer matter is to be fair, and to be fair, we must be consistent," Humes said.

Seventeen of the 23 transfer requests appealed before the board at the meeting June 22 were denied.

Until this year, parents were permitted to transfer their children to a school outside their attendance zone for reasons of child care convenience. Certain elementary schools in the district, which have day care centers near them, are especially overcrowded due to this reason.

This year, because of Midland's recent population boom and the overcrowding of schools, administrative officials categorically deny all such transfer requests. Appeals may be made to the board.

"All our schools are overcrowded," Humes pointed out. "Some are to the bursting point."

He said he regrets the inconvenience the transfer denials may cause parents, but added, "The Midland Independent School District's primary goal is to give the best possible education to every child. Toward that goal, the board must make sure no one school becomes any more crowded than necessary. We must keep our pupil-teacher ratio at a workable level."

Man mistakenly released

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — A man being held on theft and burglary charges was mistakenly freed from the county jail after officials were ordered to release his brother, a peace justice said Saturday.

"It's a mess," said Henderson County Peace Justice W.C. Richards.

Sentences

John Lee Cook, found guilty by jury of indecency with a child. Defendant sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Richard J. Gamache, pleaded guilty to theft of property. Defendant sentenced to five years in prison.

Probations

Robert James Fischer, pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine on March 31, 1982. Defendant placed on probation for five years and fined $1,000.

Douglas E. Klotz, pleaded guilty to forgery by making on July 6, 1981. Defendant placed on probation for two years and ordered to pay $225 in restitution.

Eric Portillo, pleaded guilty to two counts of rape of a child on March 1, 1982. Defendant placed on probation for 10 years, fined $500, and sentenced to Midland County Jail for 30 days.

Ronnie Lynn Carnes, pleaded guilty to forgery by passing on Oct. 16, 1981. Defendant placed on probation for eight years and ordered to pay $400 in restitution.

Frank Posey, pleaded guilty to theft. Defendant placed on probation for five years under a deferred judgment and ordered to pay $30,000 in restitution.

Steven A. Gregory, pleaded guilty to forgery by passing. Defendant placed on probation for three years under a deferred judgment and fined $500.

Greg Lynn Phillips, pleaded guilty to burglary of a vehicle. Defendant placed on probation for four years under a deferred judgment and ordered to pay $615 in restitution.

Acquittals

Booker T. "Billy" Green Jr., found "not guilty" of voluntary manslaughter in the Nov. 14, 1981, slaying of Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr. Defendant acquitted of charges. Jury dismissed.

Indictments Dismissed

Derek Simms, indictment for theft by check on Sept. 25, 1980, dismissed. In another case, defendant has been sentenced to 25 years for kidnapping a peace officer. Furthermore, prosecution has a "real identification" problem in the check case.

Bob Jackson, indictment for theft on Feb. 10, 1982, dismissed. Defendant has made full restitution, and victim no longer desires to prosecute.

Trenidad F. Hernandez, indictment for subsequent offense of driving while intoxicated (DWI) dismissed. Case has been re-filed as a misdemeanor offense. A prior DWI conviction was insufficient to support a felony charge.

Jeff A. Huddleston, indictment for theft of property on March 28, 1982, dismissed. Defendant paid full restitution, and victim no longer desires to prosecute.

James Swearengin, indictment for theft of property on March 7, 1981, dismissed. "This case is a civil matter."

William J. Robertson, indictment for theft of property on May 15, 1982, dismissed. Defendant has paid full restitution, and victim does not wish to prosecute.

Stephen Ray Ferguson, indictments for burglary of a habitation and rape on June 8, 1982, dismissed. Defendant re-indicted.

Roland G. Bell Sr., indictment for theft of property on Feb. 6, 1981, dismissed. Defendant re-indicted.

Willie James Williams, indictment for theft of property on Feb. 4, 1982, dismissed. Defendant re-indicted.

Commissioners may reconsider stockade vote

The Midland County Commissioners' Court, which last week apparently settled on a third and final site for Sheriff Dallas Smith's proposed stockade, now is considering rescinding its 4-0 vote.

The court is to convene at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

Last week, after the court in the unanimous vote decided to put the stockade on a 17.7-acre site just south of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. tracks and west of Fairgrounds Road, the court was assaulted by numerous protests from commercial and industrial developers in the area and a nearby resident.

The critics claimed the stockade would inhibit development, retard growth, depress land values and generally make the neighborhood unsafe.

The court planned to lease the acreage for five years for about $2,500 a year from Mo-Pac.

Earlier, the court set aside a vote to build the stockade in a remote site on city of Odessa land in far west Midland County, and had opted against the county-owned 7½-acre site in far southeast Midland south of the Garden City Highway and bordered by Taylor Avenue and Henderson Boulevard.

If a temporary stockade is built to relieve what the sheriff has deemed illegally overcrowded jail conditions until a proposed jail tower is constructed, the compound should be in a remote area, said Commissioner Charlie Welch.

The court voted for the railroad site on Wednesday, and County Judge Bill Ahders on Friday posted a notice of the special meeting to consider rescinding the order.

The judge, who has supported the previous stockade proposals, said of the Tuesday meeting to discuss rescinding the latest order: "I don't know what we're going to do."

MISD Board of Trustees

Members of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees are expected to deny the majority of appeals of transfer requests during their regular meeting at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school administration building at 702 N. N St.

According to Parker Humes, board president, 17 of the 23 appeals heard during the June 22 meeting were denied.

Also on the agenda, trustees will receive a report on the Hoffman Reading Program, entering its fourth year of implementation. Approval is expected to be given to a recommendation to continue the program in grades four, five and six, and extend it to grades two and three based on the individual needs of the students to be served.

Trustees are expected to authorize the Gulf Pipeline Company to lower the pipeline crossing at Whitman Drive, and will take action on a request made by John W. Aldridge, for West Texas Consultants, Inc., for an easement for utilities across a portion of the Travis Elementary School campus.

A recommendation that Leon Hartter, purchasing agent, be named the district's textbook custodian, also is expected to be approved. Hartter will assume the responsibility for all books charged to the district and all texts supplied during the period covered by his bond.

Trustees will meet in an executive session to discuss personnel and real estate matters.

Midland City Council

Midland City Council has called a special meeting for 10 a.m. Monday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The panel will consider appointments for relief judges at municipal court. Council members then will hold an executive session to consider acquisition of land for the effluent disposal site and personnel matters.

The effluent disposal site has been proposed to be located about 15 miles southeast of the city and would involve tracts owned by J. "Timber" Floyd and land adjacent to Floyd's but owned by other persons.

Genie McCartney does her own kind of magic

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midlander in Profile

If you're happy, everyone else around you will be happy.

Genie McCartney oozes with happiness.

Although this bubbly five-foot-two lady has been a 17-year resident of Midland, you might have caught sight of her in the past four years at one of the Midland YMCAs. Going back some years, you may remember her swinging her racquet on the tennis court, or she might have taught you how to swim at a Parks and Recreation pool.

If you're not the athletic-type, you may have bumped into her at any one of several local restaurants — more than likely eating nachos at one of her favorite Mexican restaurants. Or on Sunday you could see her at St. Luke's Methodist Church. She might have taught your kids in Sunday school.

But, if you've had the pleasure of meeting this woman, you'd remember.

MEETING GENIE is like reliving one of life's happier moments. Meeting Genie leaves you smiling hours after the encounter. Meeting Genie is something everyone should experience.

It could be that twinkle in her eyes that first attracts you, her endless smile, or her contagious laugh. And then, it could be Genie.

Sitting where she can keep an eye on the indoor and outdoor pools at the Alamo YMCA, Genie McCartney talks of her involvement with youth over the years. Her laughing personality has a tendency to bubble over and infect everyone she meets.

Genie is usually spotted sitting in a webbed lawn chair at the Alamo Y's new outdoor pool.

With a pen inserted through her brunette hair, sunglasses shading her blue eyes and a phone pressed against her ear, Genie carries on the business of marketing and aquatics director for the Midland Ys.

As she goes about her duties, every now and then she scribbles down an appointment or reaches for the Perrier, sipping water from the small green bottle while she glances around at the indoor and outdoor pools at the Alamo.

"I had to fight to get the phone here," she said pointing to the beige business phone on the wall just inside the door of the indoor pool area.

"THIS IS IT," she chuckled. "I can see all the pools from here at the same time. I spend very, very little time in my office.

"And I'm never without my phone and my Perrier," she said.

"I'm real good at giving orders from here," she said while grinning.

"I can look around and see...a kid...and...get that kid with gum. There! Get the one in the pool with the T-shirt on," she shouted, adding that gum and T-shirts are not allowed in the pool area.

"I can check it all. This is the place where you can delegate authority," she quipped. "All I need now is a cordless phone and I could make my rounds."

Genie's busiest time of year is in the summer months when she schedules all the Y's swimming classes in addition to the marketing responsiblities. But in October the swimming activities drop and there's more time for marketing.

"One of the 9,000 things I like about this work is that it's not come and do the same thing every day.

"The children and adults who come here are in a good mood. They're doing something for themselves, so its fun to work.

"I love to use mothers for employees. They can put the baby in the nursery or pool while they work, but I do have a lot of teen-agers working for me and I love them.

"Sometimes I get a teensy bit frustrated when there are 50 people waiting for their swimming lesson and a teen-age instructor is off taking the cat to the vet," she laughed.

"THERE'S ONE THING I'm very strict about — if you don't show up and don't cover, you don't have a job.

"I'll excuse them for one reason only — a death in the family, preferably theirs," she said jokingly.

"Sometimes there's a rash of deaths — two, three, four grandmothers die in one home a week, but I check on them," she said giggling while cupping her hand over her mouth.

"I tell them (teen-agers) swimming is not your thing, writing novels are what you should do.

"But, you know, even the ones that I've had to let go have come back the following summer and look at me with those big eyes, the lip all pooched out and I hire them back.

"A friend told me once that some people feel about their jobs like I feel about playing tennis," she said. "I could hardly believe that until they talked me into taking this job at the Y. I love it. I have no regular hours...busy paper work can be done at home. There's a lot of appointments that I have to schedule around other people."

Besides the busy work, Genie said she enjoys teaching others how to be swimming instructors.

"We have a training program for them, but it's real important that they be real sweet to the kids and have a water awareness.

"In the pool area, you can't turn your back for a second. During the swimming classes the instructors are told to even walk the little ones to the bathroom.

"You can tell real quick if somebody doesn't have what it takes to work around the pool.

"Safety and being sweet and good to those kids are the two main things I teach them. Responsibility is the thrust...you're dealing with a life."

Genie said the 20 to 25 YMCA swimming instructors and life guards are instructed to teach the children water safety.

"SAFETY! IF BABY brother falls into any pool, the kids are taught not to go in after him. Panic can make the smallest child very strong. Call 911, get a pole, throw a tube, a towel, an oar...get someone! Two-thirds of the earth is covered with water and I think you owe it to your kids to teach them proper water safety."

And after you're safe, Genie thinks your attitude about work should be the same as it is about playing.

"I used to play tennis all day...I'm still playing...not tennis...work, or should I say play. Working to me is playing.

"Whatever your thing is — swimming, tennis, playing all day — as long as you meet your responsibilities, you ought to do it — if you're happy, everyone will be happy," she said.

And everyone around Genie seems to be happy, especially her family.

Married 21 years to Don who teaches choir at Midland High School, Genie and her husband have two sons, David, 20, and Brent, 10.

But her family life isn't quite the two kids, suburban home and stationwagon atmosphere.

"Our house is indestructable," she said. "It's nothing to step over three, four teen-agers. On rare occassions if nobody's home I feel like taking an ad out in the paper for a rent-a-kid," she said.

The McCartneys have lived in the same house on Storey Avenue near the Alamo Y for the past 17 years.

"My friends have all gone and moved to the Green Tree area," she remarked. "Every time I get ready to move to the other side of town to join my friends, I think about that house payment and I decide to stay. We like to play too much."

Originally from Dallas, Genie said it was a big change to move to Midland.

"I didn't know there was a part of Texas like this. I love it. I hope we never have to move."

At first thought, one might think it was little unusual that her boys are 10 years apart, but Genie says that's the only way she could stand it.

"We took the oldest boy every where. When there's one you can pack him up and go. We love to go...on cruises, traveling...just go. A lot of thought went into having another baby after 10 years."

With the children's age difference and Genie and Don's schedules, there are no set times for eating; in fact, the McCartneys don't eat home very often.

"I HAVE THIS ONE pot and the only thing it's used for is to boil water," Genie said. "There's no cooking at all. Oh, I tried it the first 10 years. It was a disaster. My family tried to like it and choke it down...I tried. But it's cheaper to eat out and still get a balanced meal. I ended up throwing more food away when I cooked.

"Let the professionals do the cooking. They don't tell me how to teach swimming and I don't tell them how to cook," she said in a peel of laugher.

"We eat out all the time...whatever flōats your ship...Don is easy going. Nobody's there anyway. If you want to eat at home, you eat alone.

The irony of Genie's "thing of eating out," is that her oldest son is a cook at Green Tree Country Club.

"He cooks out there and loves it. Nobody can hardly believe it," she roared.

"When I get really tired of eating out, I just go into the kitchen, stand and look around...in about two minutes the feeling to stay home goes away," she giggled.

On Sunday, Genie teaches Sunday school, a pastime she's had since she was 17.

"Each year I think I'm going to retire to let the younger mothers teach, but I just love those kids. I've taught the same kids from the time they were in the third grade," she said.

After 17 years of teaching children either in Sunday School or in the area of recreation, it's hard for someone not to know Genie. And it's impossible to not laugh with her.

"I can check it all. This is the place where you can delegate authority. All I need now is a cordless phone and I could make my rounds."

Lance Holmes, 11, of Sheffield, pauses from searching out foot and hand holds on an immense boulder to glance across the facilities of Paisano Baptist encampment. Seated in an immense tabernacle with sides open to the mountainous slopes, above, Dr. Robert Naylor of Fort Worth studies his Bible prior to delivering a sermon at Paisano.

Paisano: 'Mountains shall bring peace'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

In the midst of the Great Chihuahuan Desert which stretches from south of the Rio Grande across a thousand miles of ruggedness into the badlands of New Mexico, hundreds of people yearly discover a new sense of peace spawned by the gnarled bluffs of the Davis Mountains.

"The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness," wrote the psalmist 3,000 years ago.

Paisano Baptist Encampment brings that serenity, and more.

Since 1916 when a circuit-riding minister named Leander R. Millican preached from the back of a wagon to a handful of cowboys on the then just purchased grounds of Paisano, persons have been flocking to the creek banks covered by oaks and madrones to find new spiritual awareness. Last week they came once more for their annual mecca-like pilgrimage.

"It gives a re-invigorating spiritually," said publicity chairman Lloyd Conner, pastor of Lindell Avenue Baptist Church in San Angelo. "It's easy in our urban society to have burn-out. It's important to have a place like this where you can pause and give God a chance to talk to you."

The benefits are far-reaching, believes grounds manager Monroe Elms, who lives at Paisano year-around.

"THE KIDS CAN come out here and seecows and wildlife, and that gives them an aspect they wouldn't see around a city," he said. "I think the founding fathers were wise enough to know that being outdoors has its benefits...You have more time here to contemplate on things that are in the Bible, how people are, how things correlate to each other. In a city you get caught in a fast lane and everything you do socially puts an anchor on you. You need a place to come like this to throw away that anchor."

The back-to-nature aspect of Paisano, with its primitive cabins or camping areas sprawling across its 1,000 acres at 5,400 feet above sea level between Marfa and Alpine is conducive to increased spirituality, Elms added.

"It's like backpacking, essentially: You get aware and your thoughts change," he said. "When people come here their thoughts are more concrete regarding life's desires."

While fellowship and family reunions are important at Paisano, it is the soul-saving that is deemed most important.

"Many decisions are made here, and are followed up in local churches, much like the Billy Graham crusades," said Conner.

And, there seems some almost-indefinable quality about Paisano that brings persons back year after year.

"Why do you keep coming back?" Conner asked rhetorically. "It's an intangible thing you can't grasp, but no doubt the spiritual thing ties it to you."

"I KEEP COMING back primarily to maintain friendships I've had for a long time," said Paisano President Glen Edwards, director of pastoral relations for the Louisiana Baptist Conference. "I like being with these people. There's a sacramental thing for me, a chemistry in the connection for me. Here, I connect up with people 35 years. But I do think there's something about the services, the music, that is compelling."

Additionally, however, the escape from urbanization and proximity to God's creation is an attraction as well, he noted.

"It's a radical change from routine, and I really think that makes a difference," he said. "I think the spartan, rustic, primitive nature is appealing to a lot of people. The Holiday Inn-type of roughing-it is kind of boring."

First Baptist Church of Midland's 93-person-strong youth group found among the pinnacles both a place to have fun and a place to grow closer to God.

"It's so pretty and so spread out it gives you time to think, away from the hustle and bustle of the city," said 20-year-old Brent Burchard. "Out here there's no cars, no TV; it just gives you lots of time to think about God and how you stand with Him."

"Sometimes in town you just don't take the time to be with God," said Renee Ramsey, 20, who was making her sixth trip to Paisano. "It really is a spiritual uplift that carries over. It's a refreshing time. It's draws people together in the same bond of Jesus."

And, too, said Kristen Kiser, 19, who was in her fifth Paisano sojourn, it is a learning experience.

"IT GIVES YOU a chance to learn a lot about the Bible, hear a lot of prestigious preachers," she said.

Thirteen-year-old Sheryl Haney of Midland came to Paisano for the first time this week because "I wanted to learn more about God and meet new friends," she said. "I've already learned some just about the Bible, and I made a lot of new friends just from my youth group."

"One of my brothers has come here and he's grown up with a good attitude," said Anne Storrie, 13, of Midland. "I wanted to learn more about the Lord and be with my friends."

Mark Page, 17, meanwhile, says every time he's come to Paisano it "seems like something special has happened in my life. It's a good time to be alone and see what God has really done. It's a good time to count your blessings also. I know I've grown closer to God, and I've really learned to count my blessings because of the beauty of the place and from being alone."

Herbert Kokernot Jr. of Jeff Davis County knows better than anyone the attributes of Paisano, as he is the only person to have attended every single day of every single meeting at Paisano since its inception in 1916. He assisted in the kitchen work that first year, and thereafter assumed a position as superintendent of kitchens. Now holding that title in an emeritus status, his grandson is carrying on the tradition.

"We used to kill our own calves out here every day," he recalled. "We'd eat the meat and three sacks of potatoes."

AS THE ONLY surviving founding father of Paisano, Kokernot, now 82, said no one realized that hundreds of persons would still flock to Paisano 67 years later.

"We just wanted a place where people could get together and have a preacher and a little religious meeting," he recalled. "In those days people couldn't go to town every Sunday and go to church so they decided to get a place and have a preacher and camp out. That first little ol' thing didn't last long. In 1916, the second year, we brought a chuck wagon and stayed two nights."

Kokernot said his continued support and interest in Paisano stems largely from his parents' early involvement in the encampment.

"My dad and mother were interested in this place, and way back there I told them after they were gone I'd carry on," he said.

And, doubtless, long after the other thousand persons who walked Paisano's mountainous grounds this week are gone, others as well will carry on, finding new spirituality as coyotes' howls echo from ridgeback and spire.

Freight loading ordinance takes effect Monday morning

Starting at 8 a.m. Monday, police will begin enforcing the city's new freight loading zone ordinance.

The new law requires that "a permanent, non-tranferrable loading zone sticker issued by the City" be displayed on the right-hand side of delivery vehicles using posted loading zones.

The old, cardboard-type permits will be null and void.

The $25 stickers "will be issued to a specific commercial vehicle. Each such vehicle shall have the name of the commercial enterprise inscribed or painted on both sides by letters no less than two (2) inches high in contrasting colors to that of the vehicle."

Magnetic signs will be allowed in lieu of inscribed or painted ones.

Violations of the ordinance will be cause for revoking the permits. Violations include not having vehicles properly marked with company names and exceeding the 30-minute time limit, which is in effect from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Permit applications and further information can be obtained by contacting the traffic division of the police department: 683-4281, exts. 381, 382 and 383. Violators are subject to fines and having their vehicles towed at owner expense.

"Total Comfort" is the theme of this years' Parade of Homes House by the John Salisbury Company. "Total Comfort" according to Salisbury, is comfort in space, convenience and the expense of the home. The Salisbury home is located at 2404 Wydewood. The home has 2,000 square feet of living space, features five shaded patios and a naturally lighted interior enhanced by six sets of double French doors and skylights over the kitchen and master bath. Other comfort features of this three bedroom home include ceramic tile that extends from the entryway through the kitchen and down the hallways. Salisbury explains that the ceramic tile affords better wear than carpet or vinyl and is easier to maintain. The tile along with natural ash atmosphere of the feel of a much larger home. The massive walk-in closet coupled with the master bath make the master bedroom a true master suite. A touch of luxury is added with the earth tone onyx tub and bath vanity tops. The second bath also features the matching earth tones in the ash cabinets, the carpet and the onyx vanity top. Each of the three bedrooms features it's own private shaded patio. The home's exterior features a brick wainscoationg that gives way to stucco continuing to the eaves. Additional comfort features include the electronically controlled sprinkler system and a reverse osmosis drinking water system built into the home. Salisbury explains that his goal with this year's Parade of Homes entry was to provide a home that was ready for complete living the day it's new owner moves in. According to Salisbury, 'That's about the most comfortable thing we can do for any homeowner."

By Franchelle Moore P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

I have two questions concerning vegetable gardening.

1. Why do tomatoes crack, usually after they are fully grown?

2. I have two plants growing which are called Tomatillos. Can you tell me the uses and how to prepare them? Any recipes? And what is the origin of the Tomatillo? Thank you. — E.K.

ANSWER: Midland County Extension Agent Charles W. Green provides an answer to your first question.

Cracking of tomatoes usually is caused by soil and moisture fluctuation. Many people, Green says, will water tomato plants too much, and then allow them to become very dry at times. This causes the skin of the fruit to break.

Green suggests regular watering (twice weekly) and providing a four- to five-inch mulch around the plants to help regulate the moisture.

He also notes that some varieties of tomatoes are worse than others when it comes to the skin cracking.

Two Midlanders responded to your question concerning the Tomatillos.

Louise Baxter with the Midland County Extension Office says the Tomatillo is a native of Mexico and is used primarily in the preparation of Mexican foods, especially Chili Macho, a HOT sauce.

Ms. Baxter says the plant also is called the Cape Gooseberry, Ground Cherry and May Apple. The generic name is Physalis edulis. She provides the following recipe for Salsa Verde.

Ingredients needed are one 12- or 13-ounce can whole green Tomatillos, drained, or one-half pound fresh Tomatillos; two or more fresh or canned pickled jalapeno or serrano chilies; one small onion, cut fine; one small garlic clove; one-half cup loosely packed parsley leaves; one tablespoon minced fresh coriander leaves; one tablespoon salad oil and one-half teaspoon salt.

When using fresh Tomatillos, remove skins, and outer husks; rinse well. Remove stems from chilies. In blender at low speed or in food processor with knife blade attached, blend all ingredients until smooth. In one-quart saucepan over medium heat, heat mixture to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 10 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

The Salsa Verde can be used as a dip for tortillas or as a condiment for tacos, meat, poultry and eggs.

Andre Brissaud says he has just returned a book, which includes a complete section on the Tomatillos to the Midland County Public Library. The title is "The Tortilla Book," written by Diana Kennedy. The card index indentification for the book is Q641.82 K38T.

I have a recipe for cooking black beans which calls for a seasoning called Epazote. I have been told that it is a weed-type plant which can be found growing wild in many places. I would like some information on the herb and where it might be obtained? — Andre Brissaud

ANSWER: Oralia Corrales refers you to a Mexican grocery store, La Morenita, located at 609 N. Dallas St. She says the store has a large selection of Mexican herbs and seasonings. Ole!

I am getting ready to do some canning and would like to have my large pressure cooker checked before starting.

Can you tell me of some place in Midland that does this? — Pam Chapman

ANSWER: Answer Line is told that Palmer Pipe & Supply Inc. at 1909 Garden City Highway does this type of testing. The number to call is 682-7337.

I would like to have the address of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights in Washington. — B.D.

ANSWER: That address is 1211 Vermont Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20425.

Midlander gets scholarship

Laurie House, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack House of 14 Chatham Court, is the recipient of a $500 per semester President's Scholarship for academic excellence to Lamar University in Beaumont.

Miss House also has been awarded the first scholarsip given by chapter C.C. of P.E.O. for outstanding academic work.

Aubrey Linne sits in front of one of the walls in his small Midland office where he has displayed several of his program covers, press passes, cartoons and sports paraphernalia. The former TCU and Baltimore Colts player does football and basketball programs for Texas Tech and Texas.

Linne stays in the program

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

"Programs, programs, get your programs."

One hears the cry at every sporting event they attend. Yet we seldom think where those slick magazines we buy at the big college football game come from. Most people assume the school puts them together to raise a little more money for the athletic budget.

But if you attend a Texas Tech or University of Texas football game this season, you'll be reading the work of Midlander, Aubrey Linne.

Linne has been the architect of college programs, both football and basketball, for seven years and attributes his success to his background in sports. "I understand the inside of sports and the image schools want to project," he said.

Indeed Linne has those experiences that only an athelete could. As a high school student in Hobbs, New Mexico, he was an all-state athlete in track, basketball and football.

BUT IT it was his football career that carried Linne far beyond the small town in southwest New Mexico.

He moved on to the big city, Fort Worth, and Texas Christian University where Linne earned letters three years in football and two years in track. By going to TCU and playing football, Linne was follwing in footprints left by his father.

Although he wasn't a starter at the time, the 1958 season was one of the most memorable years for Linne. His football career came full circle at the end of the season when TCU met Air Force in the Cotton Bowl, January 1, 1959.

Although TCU had to settle for a tie, it was an opportunity for Linne to stand in his father's shoes, to experience and carry on a tradition unique to the Linne family. It was a moment of Deja Vu for the Linne family as Aubrey's father had played in the first Cotton Bowl when TCU beat Marquette 16-6, in 1937.

WITH THE most recent of TCU football teams being measured against mediocrity, one might think playing football at TCU was no big deal. But TCU used to be a national powerhouse and Aubrey went on to become a starter. As an example of the greatness that was, Linne, being an end, often found himself lining up beside one of the all-time greats, Bob Lilly. TCU was no slouch in 1937 either, and Linne's father also played against a fair country player — Sammy Baugh.

Linne went on to play professional football with the Baltimore Colts and spent the next two years in the Canadian Football League.

But with the responsibilty of a wife and two children, Linne "dedcided to make an honest living and join the real world."

After spending a couple of years in the Dallas area, Linne joined BPI printing corporation and moved to Midland. He became the head of the sports division for BPI shortly before the company went out of business. He was convinced the business would be a viable enterprise and with his partner, Dwayne Hooper, he went into business for himself. By 1980 Linne was the sole proprietor of BPI Sports Publications.

LINNE'S ENTERPRISE has developed into a family business that includes three companies under one roof. Besides the sports publication business, Linne has added Copy Corner, a quick print shop, and Graphicon, a trade printing service.

But BPI is Linne's baby and he handles all aspects of the company from the photographs to the delivery of the product.

Linne keeps his businesses open 10 hours a day Monday through Friday, allowing for a nice three-day weekend, except for football season. During the harried season, Linne will put together a 100-plus page program on Monday and send it to a printer in Fort Worth.

After the first edition is put out each season, most of the program's content doesn't change. "The cover, middle section and about 16 pages are all that change on a weekly basis," Linne said. The changed pages are the opponents section.

WHEN FRIDAY rolls around, Linne will be at the printer's door with his truck, ready to deliver his product.

Linne used a commercial delivery service, once. "They had some problems and didn't get the product delivered. I've been delivering the programs myself ever since," he said.

But a trip to Austin or Lubbock doesn't just mean deliveries, there are pictures to be taken. Most of the photographs, including the cover, in Linne's programs are his own handy work. And, if time allows, Linne usually finds a few moments to enjoy the game he once played so well, and obviously still loves.

"There's nothing to match college football in excitment," Linne said. "The pros are too sophisticated, too many of them are satisfied with sitting on the bench. But in college the kids are excited about playing and that makes the game exciting."

THE FINANCIAL aspects of the program sales are a bonanza for the participating schools. The programs are given to the school at no cost and what they sell the programs for is all profit to the institution. Linne recieves no money from the school or the sale of his publication. Instead his business survives on the ability of his sales personel to sell advertising.

Linne had a printing bill in access of $130,000 last year and delivered more than a quarter million programs. Those numbers indicate a busy life style for Linne's sales representatives.

Linne admits his rates for advertising are high, but not without justification. "I think I put out the best college program in the country," he said.

Aaron goes to the Hall

Robinson, Chandler, Jackson to join Ruth beater

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The year was 1974, the date April 8. Henry Aaron, 40 years old and a member of the Atlanta Braves, was about to become the most prolific home run hitter of all-time.

The historic home run — No. 715 in his career — came off Al Downing of the Los Angeles Dodgers, before 53,775 at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. It broke what may have been sport's most revered record, the 714 career homers of Babe Ruth, and assured Aaron of a spot in the Hall of Fame, which will induct him and three others today.

Also inducted will be A.B. "Happy" Chandler, former baseball commissioner, and Travis Jackson, shortstop for the New York Giants from 1922-36. Chandler and Jackson were chosen by the Old Timers Committee.

BUT HAMMERIN' Hank, a native of Mobile, Ala., counts 1957 as his most memorable year in baseball. While '74 would go down as a year of turmoil and pressure, "things seemed to come together for me in '57," Aaron says.

"It was the year I enjoyed most. We won the pennant (when the franchise was still in Milwaukee), and I was named MVP after the year I had," Aaron recalls.

In 1957, Aaron led the league in runs with 118, homers with 44 (matching his uniform number), and runs batted in with 132. And it came in the formative years of a 23-year major league career that would end with Aaron having set all-time records that included his 755 homers and 2,297 RBI.

"Just to swing the bat. That's the greatest thing in baseball, to make contact with the baseball," says Aaron, now 48 and the Braves director of player development.

Twice in 1974, Aaron ran afoul of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn — once, when Kuhn ordered Braves Manager Eddie Mathews not to hold Aaron out of a game in Cincinnati so he could return home for No. 715, and again when Kuhn failed to extend personal congratulations to Aaron for the homer. Aaron felt snubbed, and said so.

HANK SAYS he will enter the Hall of Fame with that all behind him. "That was a few years ago," Aaron said. "Only a sick man carries a grudge, and I'm not a sick man."

Aaron and Frank Robinson, the only man to be voted MVP in both leagues, will enter the Hall of Fame in ceremonies here today, becoming the 12th and 13th players elected in the first year of their eligibility. Aaron was named on 406 of 415 ballots cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Robinson was named on 370 ballots.

When the Hall of Fame vote was announced last January, Aaron expressed a certain disappointment that he had not become the first player to be chosen unanimously. He said: "I'd be lying if I said I didn't want to be unanimous. But I realize nobody ever has been, and I'm happy with the number of votes I've received."

As time drew near for his induction, Aaron became a little more philosophical about the nine ballots on which he was not named.

"Anybody would be disappointed not to be unanimous," he said recently. "But Willie Mays could say the same thing. I'm sure Mays felt he should have been elected unanimous. No one ever gave me a reason why I wasn't on their ballot."

Mays was the only player ever to receive more votes than Aaron with 409 of a possible 432 ballots cast in 1979.

AT THE time of his election, Robinson said he was honored to be inducted along with Aaron. "It's very strange," said Robinson, now manager of the San Francisco Giants. "It seems like I've been chasing him my entire career. Now, I've finally caught up with him."

In 1961, after driving in 124 runs for the Cincinnati Reds and leading the National League in slugging average with .611, Robinson was named NL MVP. He was traded to the Baltimore Orioles in 1966, at the age of 30, and won the Triple Crown with 49 homers, 122 RBI and a .316 batting average for his second MVP award. He became the first black manager in baseball when he took over the Cleveland Indians in 1975.

Chandler, 83, a former governor and U.S. senator from Kentucky, served as commissioner of baseball for six years, succeeding Judge Kenesaw "Mountain" Landis in 1945. In 1947, his support helped Jackie Robinson break baseball's color barrier, but he was voted out of office in 1950 by owners who felt he was too close to the players.

Jackson, 80, of Waldo, Ark., was known as a slick fielder with a powerful arm. He had a lifetime batting average of .291 and hit over .300 in six seasons. His best season was 1927, when he hit .318 with 98 RBI.

Crash kills Dean Chenoweth

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — Dean Chenoweth, who survived three previous high-speed crashes on the unlimited hydroplane circuit, died Saturday when his boat, the Miss Budweiser, flipped over backwards during a qualifying run on the Columbia River.

Chenoweth, a four-time national unlimited hydroplane champion driver, was preparing for Sunday's Columbia Cup race.

The 44-year-old Tallahassee, Fla., beer distributor suffered massive head, neck and chest injuries.

He was pronounced dead at Kennewick General Hospital in nearby Kennewick. A doctor said Chenoweth was unconscious and had no pulse when he was pulled from the water.

The highly successful red-and-white boat was traveling about 175 mph on the front straightaway of the 2½-mile river course when its nose lifted off the water and the boat went over backwards. Films revealed the boat landed upside down, with Chenoweth still apparently in the cockpit, and then bounced right side up.

The cause of the accident was not immediately determined.

Chenoweth's death came just nine months after unlimited hydroplane racing lost the man considered to be its greatest name, Bill Muncey. Muncey died in a boat crash in the last heat in the last event of 1981 at Acapulco, Mexico, on Oct.18.

Chenoweth was pronounced dead at 10:25 a.m., PDT. The accident occurred about 9:40 a.m.

Sam Cole, the Unlimited Racing Commission's executive director, said Sunday's race would go on as scheduled. Chenoweth's death was the first driving fatality in the Columbia Cup's history.

Chenoweth, who crashed at more than 230 mph in 1979, was survived by a wife, Jenny, and a daughter, Kelli. His wife was with Chenoweth Saturday.

"His injuries were so massive they were not compatible with life," said Dr. F. Sinclair Finch, chief medical officer for the racing commission.

He said when Chenoweth was pulled from the water, he had no pulse and was unconscious.

"It looks like he went over with the boat and it came down on top of him," said Lee Schoenith, the commission's chief referee.

When Chenoweth was brought to Kennewick General, a team of doctors was unable to inflate his lungs. A tracheotomy, an incision of the trachea to aid breathing, was performed.

Dr. Robert Axford, a member of the hospital staff and the attending physician, said Chenoweth's lungs were filled with blood. The veteran driver suffered a possible broken neck, Axford said, and had fractured ribs on both sides.

After the accident, the heavily damaged Miss Budweiser was towed back to the pits. The deck, wing and engine cowling on the $100,000 boat were destroyed and its right side was heavily damaged.

Chenoweth's boat was the first one on the course Saturday morning, the last of three days of qualifying. He qualified at 124.827 mph Friday, well below Friday's best qualifying time of 138.675 mph set by Chip Hanauer.

Chenoweth had just finished a qualifying lap of 126.050 mph and appeared to be headed for a faster lap when the crash happened.

On Friday, Chenoweth said: "We were just breaking in our engines. I'd say we were just playing. I'd say we'll go a lot faster tomorrow."

Chenoweth was bidding this season for his third straight national championship and fifth national title. In addition to his national crowns in 1981 and 1980, he was the national champion in owner Bernie Little's Miss Budweiser in 1969 and 1970. He was a four-time Gold Cup champion and had 25 victories in an unlimited driving career that began in 1968.

Chenoweth had won once this season, on June 6 in Miami, the first race of the season.

Baylorite impresses Steelers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The true tests lay ahead, but No. 1 draft pick Walter Abercrombie already is winning high marks in the training camp of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I'm impressed. He's like a bolt of lightning," quarterback Terry Bradshaw said of the 5-foot-11, 200-pound running back from Baylor University.

"I'm really looking forward to working with him," said fullback Franco Harris. "He's a player who can make things happen, and hopefully he can help get this team on the right track."

How is the minister's son from Waco, Texas, responding to such flattering appraisals?

"I'm pretty confident in my talent," Abercrombie said on the Steeler practice field. "God has given me a lot of ability, and should I get the opportunity I think I can take advantage of it."

He'll certainly get the opportunity with the Steelers, who made him the 12th player picked overall in the first round of the draft.

At Baylor, he rushed for 3,665 career yards, the third all-time highest total in Southwest Conference history behind only Earl Campbell of Texas and Curtis Dickey of Texas A&M.

While he caught only 32 career passes as a collegian, the Steelers also were particularly impressed with Abercrombie's receiving ability. He caught three touchdown passes in the 1982 Hula Bowl.

So it looks like he'll be handling the ball often in the Steeler offense.

"I'm impressed, and all I want right now is to see him in a game to make sure what I'm feeling is good — and I'm sure it is," said Bradshaw, who has been working with the rookie for a week.

Bradshaw was quick to note that one week in training camp doesn't make an All-Pro. Franco Harris, for example, was considered something of a dud his first week in training camp as a rookie.

"I can tell Walter is a natural athlete," Bradshaw said. "He hits the hole real quick, and when he gets in the secondary he can make people. He's a Tony Dorsett type.

"But the thing is whether he can play hurt and whether or not he can last. These are unanswered questions."

Abercrombie realizes that, too.

"I'm a rookie coming in who hasn't played a down of professional football," he said. "I'm getting a lot of ink in the newspapers and a lot of expectations have been put on me.

"If I was a veteran, I'd be wondering myself if this guy could really do it. I'd be wondering, 'Can we count on him to make the extra yard we need to get into the playoffs or something?'"

But he certainly is handling the situation so far.

Abercrombie has done dozens of media interviews with a relaxed smile, and he's accommodated the hordes of autograph seekers who visit the Steeler training camp.

But seeing 4,000 fans show up for the arrival of the veterans Friday did catch him a litle by surprise.

"Baylor is a small Baptist private school, and we didn't get crowds like that for practice. It's a big change," he said.

Dennison wins UGSA title with win over Midland

ODESSA — Dennison won the Division I United Girls Softball Association Regional championship here Friday with a 7-5 victory over Midland.

Midland fought their their way into the championship game through the losers bracket with two victories over the Odessa squads.

Midland got some excellent pitching as they beat Odessa Blue 7-1 then turned on the offense and beat Odessa Red 17-3. Dennison defeated Midland in the opening round of the fastpitch softball tournament 16-10.

Four Midland girls were named to the All-Tournament team including catcher Michelle Sanchez, pitcher Courtney Powell and infielders Marcia de Llano and Roxanne Seay.

In Division II Midland Blue took third place and placed three members on the All-Tournament squad. Pitcher-second basemen Brenda Rodriquez and K.K. Shelton were honored as was teammate Nancy Nunez, at firstbase.

The Midland squad also won the Sportsmanship Award in Division II.

Abilene North, fighting their way through the losers bracket, won the Division II title with a two-game sweep over Odessa 12-5 and 9-4.

Dodgers cool down Braves again, 3-0

By The Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela fired a six-hit shutout Saturday for his 14th victory as the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Atlanta 3-0 and moved within 7½ games of the front-running Braves in the National League West.

Dusty Baker smashed his 18th home run of the season in the fourth inning for the only run Valenzuela needed and Steve Sax had a two-run single in the fifth.

The victory was the third in a row for the Dodgers over the Braves, including a sweep of Friday's twi-night doubleheader. It marked the first time the Braves have dropped three in a row since a four-game losing streak from May 26-31.

Valenzuela was in mild trouble when the Braves got two runners aboard in the fifth and sixth innings with only one out, but the Dodgers' left-hander allowed only one runner to reach third. Bob Horner's leadoff single and Bruce Benedict's two-out double put Atlanta runners at second and third in the ninth, but Valenzuela fanned pinch hitter Terry Harper to end the game.

Valenzuela, 14-8, had lost his only two previous career starts in Atlanta but handcuffed the Braves from the start. He had eight strikeouts, walked one and held Atlanta hitless until Dale Murphy reached on a bad-hop single past third with one out in the fourth. It was his second shutout of the season and 11th complete game as he tied Philadelphia's Steve Carlton as the only 14-game winners in the majors.

Padres 5-6, Reds 4-2

Sixto Lezcano slammed three home runs and drove in seven runs to power the San Diego Padres to a 5-4, 6-2 doubleheader sweep of the Cincinnati Reds.

Lezcano homered twice and drove in all of the Padres' runs in the opening victory that snapped San Diego's five-game losing streak. Lezcano singled to score Garry Templeton with the go-ahead run in the fifth inning of the Padres' triumph in the nightcap. He also slammed a solo homer, his 14th, and safely reached base nine consecutive times in the two games.

In the first game, Lezcano cracked a three-run homer off loser Tom Seaver, 4-11, in the first inning. He added a solo shot in the seventh.

Left-hander Tim Lollar, 11-5, scattered six hits over 6⅓ innings to end a personal three-game losing streak.

In the second game, Templeton doubled with one out in the fifth to set up the go-ahead run. Lezcano singled off Bob Shirley, 3-8, to snap a 2-2 tie. Templeton had three hits, including a pair of doubles.

Lezcano's solo homer in the seventh put the Padres ahead for good at 4-2.

Gary Lucas came on with two outs in the seventh and gained his 13th save.

Giants 5-0, Astros 4-5

Mike LaCoss and Frank LaCorte combined on an eight-hit shutout and rookie catcher Alan Knicely hit a three-run homer as the Houston Astros topped the San Francisco Giants 5-0 to gain a split of their doubleheader Saturday night.

The Giants won the first game 5-4 as Jack Clark belted a solo home run and Jeff Leonard ripped a two-run double.

LaCoss, 4-3, pitched 5⅔ innings in his first start of the year, striking out four and walking four while allowing five hits. LaCorte came n in the sixth and finished up for his fourth save.

Dickie Thon, who made two key defensive plays at short in the early innings, led off the Houston first with a double, stole third and came in on Tony Scott's groundout to make it 1-0.

In the fourth, Scott hit an infield single off loser Atlee Hammaker, 8-6, and took third on shortstop Darrell Evans's throwing error on an attempted force play. Jose Cruz's single scored Scott.

Knicely gave the Astros a five-run cushion in the seventh with his second homer of the year that scored Phil Garner and Terry Puhl, who had both been walked by relief pitcher Jim Barr.

In the first game, Clark's homer and Leonard's double highlighted a five-run second inning.

Clark hit the first pitch of the second inning from loser Vern Ruhle, 5-7, into the left-center-field bleachers for his 19th homer of the season. Then after Reggie Smith and Evans singled, Leonard doubled to make it 3-0. Tom O'Malley singled Leonard to third, and run-scoring singles by Joe Morgan and Milt May upped the score to 5-0.

Phillies 2, Cubs 0

Mike Schmidt's 19th home run and the combined three-hit shutout pitching of Marty Bystrom and Porfi Altamirano carried the Philadelphia Phmllies to a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory was the fourth straight for the National League East-leading Phillies, and the eighth consecutive loss for the last-place Cubs.

Bystrom, 3-3, gave up two hits, struck out five and walked two in 62-3 innings. He left with two on in the seventh and Altamirano went on to blank the Cubs for his first major league save.

Schmidt broke up a scoreless game in the fourth when with one out he hit an 0-1 pitch from Alan Ripley, 3-4, over the center field fence at the 408-foot mark. It was the ninth home run in the last 14 games for the Phillies' third baseman.

Cardinals 10, Expos 1

Keith Hernandez hit a solo home run and George Hendrick delivered a two-run shot in a five-run sixth inning that carried the St. Louis Cardinals to a 10-1 triumph over the Montreal Expos behind Steve Mura's eight-hitter.

The Expos stranded 12 baserunners, included seven in the first three innings, against Mura, 8-7, who lost his bid for a shutout in the eighth when Tim Wallach doubled for his third hit, took third on a wild pitch and scored on Bryan Little's sacrifice fly.

The Cardinals led by 2-0 before breaking open the game with their sixth-inning outburst against Ray Burris, 4-12. Hernandez, hitless in 11 previous at-bats in the series, blasted his fifth homer to start the sixth, and after Darrell Porter singled, Hendrick connected for his 16th.

Mets 9, Pirates 4

Mike Jorgenson and Joel Youngblood each knocked in two runs as the New York Mets rallied for four runs in the seventh inning to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-4.

The victory snapped a five-game New York losing streak.

Milwaukee Brewers sink Indians with big first inning

Texas Rangers give Darrell Johnson his first victory

By The Associated Press

The Milwaukee Brewers scored three first-inning runs with help of three Cleveland throwing errors on one play and defeated the Indians 4-2 Saturday behind the five-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell and Rollie Fingers.

Caldwell, 8-10, allowed both Cleveland runs in the first inning on one-out homers by Toby Harrah and Mike Hargrove and then settled down, scattering five hits in eight innings before Fingers came on to pitch a perfect ninth and record his 23rd save.

Caldwell, who retired 12 batters in a row over one stretch, was told by the umpires to clean or change his glove at the start of the sixth inning. A spokesman for the Brewers said the umpires claimed Caldwell's glove was dirty.

Harrah's 21st homer and and Hargrove's third gave the Indians a 2-0 lead in the top of the first. The Brewers came back with three runs in their half against loser Rick Waits, 1-10.

Paul Molitor led off with a double, took third on an infield hit by Robin Yount and scored on a single by Gorman Thomas.

The Indians, whose three-game winning streak was snapped, only advanced two runners beyond first after the opening inning.

Rangers 3, Yankees 2

Jim Sundberg capped a three-run first inning with a two-run double and the Texas Rangers held on to defeat the New York Yankees 3-2 for their first victory in two games under Manager Darrell Johnson and only their fourth in the last 19 games.

Charlie Hough, 10-8, allowed seven hits, walked one and struck out five through 52-3 innings and remained the only Texas starter with a winning record this season. Danny Darwin earned his fifth save, stranding New York runners in scoring position in the seventh and eighth innings.

The Rangers scored all their runs in the first inning off Doyle Alexander, 0-4. Billy Sample and Mickey Rivers opened with singles and, after John Grubb forced Rivers at second, Dave Hostetler walked to load the bases.

Bill Stein grounded into a force at second, scoring one run, and Sundberg then lashed a double to the wall in right-center, scoring two more.

New York's Graig Nettles made the score 3-1 in the fourth with his 10th home run of the season and the Yankees pulled within one run an inning later. Bucky Dent singled, took third on Willie Randolph's double and scored as Ken Griffey grounded out.

Darwin retired Oscar Gamble on a forceout with runners at first and second to end the seventh inning and got Bucky Dent on a grounder for tle final out in the eighth, leaving runners at second and third.

Johnson replaced Don Zimmer as manager of the Rangers on Wednesday night.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 5

Harold Baines drove in two runs with a homer and a double and Tony Bernazard tripled in a pair, leading Britt Burns and the Chicago White Sox to a 7-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The loss knocked the Red Sox out of first place in the American League East as Milwaukee moved ahead by a half-game with a 4-2 triumph over Cleveland.

Chicago scored a run in the second inning on singles by Carlton Fisk, Mike Squires and Rudy Law, and made it 2-0 in the third on Baines' 14th homer off loser Dennis Eckersley, 11-9.

Dwight Evans hit his 15th homer in the fourth, and the Red Sox tied the game in the fifth on a walk to Gary Allenson, a single by Rick Miller and Evans' sacrifice fly.

Chicago regained the lead with an unearned run in the fifth. Rudy Law reached when his ground shot got past first baseman Tony Perez. Law stole second and scored on a double by Greg Luzinski.

The White Sox wrapped it up with three runs in the sixth. Vance Law and Rudy Law both singled and scored on Bernazard's triple. Baines greeted reliever Luis Aponte to score Bernazard.

Burns, 11-4, scattered nine hits, including Allenson's three-run homer in the eighth inning, before needing relief help.

Salome Barajos finished up, gaining his 15th save.

Royals 2, Orioles 0

Vida Blue shut out Baltimore on seven hits and Amos Otis celebrated his return to the lineup Saturday night with an RBI single, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 2-0 victory and handing the Orioles their third straight setback.

Otis, who missed six games with a pulled abdominal muscle, singled off Mike Flanagan, 7-9, to drive in U.L. Washington with a run in the third. Don Slaught walked leading off the fifth, went to third on a single by Willie Wilson and scored on Washington's groundout for the Royals' second run.

Toronto 1, Detroit 0

Rookie Jim Gott scattered nine hits in pitching his first major league shutout and pinch hitter Jesse Barfield singled home the game's only run in the bottom of the 10th inning as the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Detroit Tigers 1-0.

It was Detroit's fourth consecutive setback, all by one run and the last two in extra innings.

A's 3, Twins 2

Mike Heath's two-run single with two out in the bottom of the eighth inning lifted the Oakland A's to a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The A's, who didn't have a baserunner until the sixth against starter Jack O'Connor, loaded the bases in the eighth against before Heath's hit handed winless Terry Felton his ninth setback.

Dave McKay, who broke up O'Connor's perfect game with a sixth-inning single, started the winning rally with a walk off O'Connor. Felton took over and Jeff Newman hit into a forceout, but pinch hitter Dan Meyer singled pinch runner Mitchell Page to third. Rickey Henderson lined to short, but Davey Lopes walked to load the bases and Heath followed with his single to center.

'Bear' Bryant has no gripe with retirement decision

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Paul "Bear" Bryant says he has no quarrel with a judge who blocked a state law exempting the University of Alabama football coach from the state's mandatory retirement age of 70.

The 68-year-old coach says he never wanted the so-called "Bear Bryant retirement law" in the first place. And all he would like, he says, is to be treated like other people.

In a ruling issued Friday, Circuit Judge Randall Thomas of Montgomery said a state law allowing the University of Alabama board of trustees to waive the retirement age for the coach is unconstitutional.

After the decision, Bryant reiterated that he never wanted the exemption passed by the Alabama Legislature in May 1981.

"I'll say the same thing I've said all along. I want to be treated like any other citizen. I said before I didn't want it, and I didn't want to accept it. That's all I'll have to say about it."

David Bronner, secretary-treasurer of the Alabama Retirement Systems, challenged the law in court, saying it made a special case of Bryant.

Thomas, agreeing with Bronner, said the legislation provided "disparate treatment" among members of the state pension fund because Bryant was given a benefit not extended to other state-employed educators.

"The classification is arbitrary and capricious in every sense of the term," the judge said. He declared the act "unconstitutional, null and void."

He said the university could continue to employ the coach after his 70th birthday so long as he is not paid with state funds.

Johnson sets medal record

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Scott Johnson, a men's gymnast, shattered a National Sports Festival mark with seven medals, including five on the final day of competition in the record-breaking amateur sports spectacle Saturday.

The 11-day Festival concluded with basketball. The South won the women's gold medal for the second year in a row, beating the West 74-64. The South men's team played the East for the gold in the final event Saturday night.

Johnson, a three-time all-American gymnast from the University of Nebraska, did not even realize he had brokeen the Festival medal record.

"I won seven, didn't I?" said the 20-year-old from Colorado Springs, Colo., when asked his reaction to the accomplishment.

Johnson had forgotten the bronze medal he won as a member of the West team two nights earlier in the Indiana Convention Center.

Johnson's feat included two gold medals, in the parallel bars and floor exercise; a silver medal in the all-around competition, and bronze medals, coming in the pommel horse, vault and still rings besides the team medal.

"I'm really happy," said Johnson. "It makes you feel real good."

He added, "I've never won as many medals in a national meet and I don't even think I've ever had that many at any level, even in high school."

The previous medals record for a single Festival was six, first set by swimmer Cynthia Woodhead in 1979 and equaled last year by kayakers David Halpern and Terry Kent, and canoer Bret Young.

The 33-sport, 2,600-athlete Festival, which wrapped up with the men's and women's gold-medal basektball games Saturday night, sold more than $1 million worth of tickets, turned a profit for the fivst time and had total paid crowds of more than 200,000, all records for this four-year-old competition.

So good, in fact, that amateur athletic officials urged Indianapolis to bid for future Pan American Games and World Basketball Championships.

Madeline Doucet, a 5-10 forward from LSU and LeBeau, La., scored 14 points and Teresa Edwards of the University of Georgia and Cairo, Ga., added 12 for the champion South women's basketball team.

The South jumped to a 40-19 halftime lead and easily completed its Festival record 4-0. It had beaten thee West 115-84 in the tournament's opening round.

Kirsten Cummings, from San Diego and Cal-Long Beach, led the West, 2-2, with 13 points. UCLA teammates Dorice McFadden from Oakland, Calif., and Angelique Hardy from Los Angeles added 12 points apiece.

Becky Hargerdon set a Festival free-throw shooting record by hitting 24 of 30 foul shots, leading the East to a 91-88 overtime victory over the Nortl for the bronze medal in women's basketball.

The 6-4 center from Warwick, N.Y., a freshman at Long Beach State University, scored only three goals in 30 minutes, but had a game-high 30 points. She scored 24 points in the second half in leading the East to its first Festival triumph this year.

Rain washes twinbill, but Cubs gain ground

JACKSON, Miss. — A doubleheader between the Midland Cubs and Jackson Mets was rained out here Saturday night. That leaves the two teams with one last chance to get in at least two of the remaining three games of the series.

Midland opened the series against the Mets with a 4-2 victory on Wednesday and Jackson came back the next night to win by the same count and knot the series at 1-1.

Saturday's doubleheader was scheduled to make up the game washed out Friday night but with the second rain out that leaves just today for concluding the series and means one game won't get played. A twinbill is scheduled for today with the opener starting at 2 p.m. and the second at 6 p.m.

Mike King, 6-10, will open on the mound for the Cubs in the first game against John Viollette, 1-3. In the nightcap, Doug Welenc, 10-9, and Doug Sisk, 8-4, are scheduled to start.

Even though the Cubs haven't played in two days, they're still gaining ground on Western Division leading San Antonio and are now only one game back. The Dodgers dropped a 10-8 decision to Arkansas Saturday night.

Chamberlain says Scott 'unpatriotic'

By SANDI IMMORMINO
Sports Writer
Ontario Daily Report

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — While Steve Scott isn't one to drape himself in the American flag, he isn't about to burn it, either.

And Scott, one of the world's premier milers, takes exception to being labeled "unpatriotic."

Former pro basketball star Wilt Chamberlain, now the head of Wilt's Athletic Club, one of the nation's track and field clubs, recently was quoted as saying that Scott, Mary Decker Tabb and other American track stars were unpatriotic for choosing to compete in Europe rather than staying in the United States for meets against West Germany and the Soviet Union.

Chamberlain, who passed up the 1960 Olympic Games to sign a pro contract with the Harlem Globetrotters, accused the track stars of putting financial interests ahead of team spirit, suggesting that "under-the-table" money lured them overseas.

Scott, appearing recently at a press luncheon, welcomed the opportunity to refute Chamberlain's allegations.

"I've been waiting for somebody to ask me about that," said Scott, his blue eyes flashing.

"Let me first say this — anything I've achieved in track is because of my family, my coaches, my wife, my teammates and organizations like Sub 4 and Nike. This is the main group responsible for my success.

"Now, you notice I didn't include the TAC (The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for the sport) or the (U.S.) Olympic Committee. These two groups have done absolutely nothing for me to help my career, except to stage track meets. But there are always plenty of those.

"I'm training in my event to prepare myself for the '84 Olympic Games (at Los Angeles)," Scott continued. "And I'm trying to do the things to best prepare myself to represent my country in the Games. The Oslo (Norway) and European meets enabled me to establish myself in my event against the best possible competition. Those meets did more for me than dual meets against lesser competition.

"I'm not unpatriotic," Scott said. "If the TAC scheduled its dual meets so there was no conflict (with European meets), I'd be happy to run."

Scott pointed out that between July 17-Aug.15, there is a lull in the European track schedule. "That would be the perfect opportunity to have a competition against the Russians and ... Germans," Scott said. "Or have them before the TAC meet when all the top athletes are still in the United States. I'd be more than willing to compete."

Scott bristled at Chamberlain's implications about under-the-table money, pointing out that he had refused more than $5,800 in training funds from the TAC rather than compete in the dual meets. "It's not financial with me," he said. "I knew what I had to do in my best interests and that was to run in Europe."

Prior to his 1,500-meter victory in the TAC Championships and his successes in Europe, Scott's status as one of the world's top milers was ebbing.

After a relatively poor indoor season, he worked hard to prepare himself for the outdoor season, particularly the European meets. The effort paid off.

Scott, who never had won in Oslo's famed Bislett Stadium, did it twice in a two-week span, breaking his American record and nearly cracking the world mark.

He improved his American mile record in the Bislett Games June 26, outrunning a talented field in 3 minutes, 48.53 seconds.

Ten days later, Scott returned to Oslo and ran 3:47.69 — only .36 of a second off Sebastian Coe's world mark.

But Scott got his greatest satisfaction from the first race — the so-called Dream Mile.

"The first Oslo race was more of a race," Scott said. "The competition was excellent, with Mike Boit, Ray Flynn, John Walker, David Moorcroft, Sydney Maree and myself in the field. Everyone was racing to win, not to set a record. The second race was more geared for a record.

"In the first race, we were constantly running in a pack," he added. "That forces you to chop your stride. The second race was more fluid, at least until the pacesetter dropped out. Then Flynn, Walker and myself were ahead of the pack. The first Oslo race was the most competitive mile because there were more guys of that caliber."

Scott intends to spend the next two weeks at home before departing for Europe Aug.10. He'll compete in six European meets before returning to the U.S. for the Fifth Avenue Mile Sept.4.

However, he wants no part of a mile race in Eugene, Ore. on Sept.25, which is scheduled to pit British runners Coe and Steve Ovett against other top milers.

Onuki swims English Channel

DOVER, England (AP) — Japanese student Teruku Onuki, 21, swam the English Channel Saturday in nine hours, 30 minutes, but American lawyer Phillip Kendall, 40, from Colorado Springs, Col., didn't make it, the Channel Swimming Association said.

Kendall was forced to abandon after nine hours of swimming when he still was eight miles from Cape Gris Nez, France, said the association which monitors all attempts to swim the 22-mile-wide stretch from Shakespeare Beach, Dover, to Cape Gris Nez.

It was the third attempt for Miss Onuki, who failed in both of her previous bids.

Two 19-year-old British identical twins, Sarah and Carole Hunt, 19, also were forced to abandon after seven hours when they were still eight miles from the finish.

The Channel was first bested by Matthew Webb, a British merchant navy captain, who swam across using a breast stroke in 21 hours, 45 minutes on Aug. 24-25, 1875.

Slaughter advances to finals

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Long-hitting John Slaughter took advantage of the Broadmoor East's long, but wide, fairways to defeat Alan Waddell in the semifinal round of the 61st Annual Broadmoor Men's Invitational Golf Tournament here Saturday.

Slaughter, an Abilene, Texas, native who plays for the University of Houston and won the NCAA golf championship this year as well as the NCAA long-driving competition, faces Willie Wood of Stillwater, Okla., in the match play 36-hole final today.

Wood, a 21-year-old senior at Oklahoma State, worked his way into the finals by defeating Todd Hensarling, 24, of Lafayette, Ind., 3 and 1.

Slaughter, a former District 5-5A standout for Abilene Cooper, tamed the 7,154-yard par 72 course with a 6-under 30 on the front nine to go 4-up on Waddell at the turn. His first nine holes included two birdies and eagles on both par 5s. Waddell, 34, of Arlington, Texas, was 1 under at the turn, but couldn't match the hot-shooting Slaughter who cinched the match with two more birdies on the back nine to go ahead five holes with only four to play when they reached the 14th.

Midlanders finally fall

DENVER — Midlanders Pete Barizon and Dennis Brittain made the quarterfinals at the National 40's Hardcourt Championships here Friday, only to lose to the number three seeded doubles team of Steve Prosser and Paul Kennedy. Prosser and Kennedy defeated the No. 5 nationally ranked Midland team 6-3, 7-5, and advanced to the semifinals.

Barizon said the diffence in the match came at crucial times. "They (Prosser and Kennedy) won more criticle points than we did. But we were pleased to make it to the quarterfinals," he said.

The Midland duo advanced to the quarterfinals by virtue of their second round victory over Jim Bochte and David Simmons of Jacksonville, Fla. 6-4, 6-4. Barizon and Britain, seeded fifth in the doubles bracket, drew a bye in the first round.

The seventh seeded Prosser proved to be a nemesis to Barizon as he defeated Barizon in the second round of the singles competition, 6-4, 6-4.

DON HARVEY REALTOR

THE ULTIMATE TAX ESCAPE

Death is the ultimate tax escape, although it is rather extreme and irreversible. When the owner of a capital asset, such as real estate, dies his or her heirs receive the property with a basis of its market value on the date of death. This means Uncle Sam forgets about the difference between the decedent's basis for that property and the usually higher market value on date of death.

Here's why this information is important for heirs who come into willed real estate. Suppose you inherit property worth $100,000 for which the decedent had a basis of $30,000. If he had sold it before his death, his $70,000 sale profit would be taxable. But since your basis for the property is the $100,000 value on the date of death (called stepped-up basis), you pay tax only on any sale profit over your $100,000 basis.

It is a wise measure to have any inherited property appraised as of the time of death to establish its actual basis. It could preclude a problem if you eventually sell and then get into a contest with the IRS as to its value as of the date you receive it. Check with your Attorney and Accountant on these matters.

Lietzke's 68 aids quest for first victory

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Bruce Lietzke, grinding away in pursuit of his first title of the year, put together his third consecutive 68 and established a two-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $425,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

But Lietzke, a non-winner this year and in a slump most of the season, was not ready to make any rash predictions.

"I've started thinking about winning, yes," he said. "I think I have a very, very good chance of winning. But I do not expect to win, at this moment. My consistency, or lack of consistency, has been such this season that I cannot yet expect to win."

Lietzke, a former winner of this national championship, had a 54-hole total of 204, nine strokes under par on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Tommy Valentine, a journeyman tourist who has yet to win in six years of PGA Tour activity, reeled off a string of five consecutive birdies on the way to a 3-under-par 68 and second place at 206.

"I'm pleased with my position," said Valentine, who plays a right-to-left shot on a course that demands a right-to-left approach.

"But I have no illusions. I'd feel a lot better if the guy in front of me was somebody besides Lietzke. The course is tailor-made for him and I'm standing up there starting hooks out over the water."

Hal Sutton, the rookie pro who shared the second-round lead with Lietzke, birdied the 18th hole for a round of 72 that left him at 208, three strokes back going into today's final round.

Greg Norman, a long-hitting Australian, was next at 209 after a third-round 71.

Tied at 210 were Andy Bean, Vance Heafner and Mike Nicolette. Heafner had the best round of the day, a 67, Bean shot 69 and Nicolette 71.

Lietzke has won at least once in every season since 1977. That includes three victories and $343,446 in winnings last year.

But he's been shut out of titles this season, and had his best tournament of the year last week with a runner-up finish in the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

He started the third round in a tie for the top here, but soon fell behind when Valentine began his birdie streak beginning on the second. He notched five in a row, twice getting approach shots inside of six feet. Two others went to 8-10 foot birdie putts and he scored from 15 feet on No. 4.

Sally Little blasts out of a sand trap on the 14th hole during Saturday's third round of the Columbia Savings Golf Calssic in Denver, Col. Little shot an even-par 72 Saturday to give her a two-shot lead going into today's final round.

Rocky nine slows Little

DENVER (AP) — Sally Little rebounded from a rocky back nine with a near-eagle on the 18th hole Saturday to retain her lead after three rounds of the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic at Columbine Country Club.

Little, who at one point was three strokes up on the field, suffered bogeys on the 15th and 17th holes and fell back into a tie for the lead with Patty Sheehan at 6 under par for the tournament.

But moments after Sheehan took a bogey on the par-4 18th hole, Little nearly holed out her 5-iron approach from the rough. The ball lipped the cup and stopped 2 inches away, giving her a tap-in birdie for an even-par 72, a 209 total and a 2-stroke lead heading into Sunday's final round.

Sheehan, Pat Bradley and Sandra Haynie were her closest competitors at 211. Sheehan ended the day with a 71, while Bradley and Haynie made bold moves up the leaderboard, Bradley firing a 5-under-par 67 and Haynie a 68.

Beth Daniel, with a 72, was another shot back at 212. Donna H. White and Beverly Klass, both of whom equaled par Saturday, were at 214, while defending champion JoAnne Carner had a 69 and was among several golfers at 215.

Little, who started the day with a 3-stroke lead, suffered a bogey at No.5 after an errant drive, but she recorded birdies at No.8 and No.9 for a 1-under 35 on the front side and moved back into a seemingly comfortable 3-shot lead.

Her troubles began at the par-5 13th hole, where she "chunked" a 60-yard wedge shot and had to chip to within a foot to save par. She found the sand on 14 but got up-and-down for par, but wasn't as successful on 15 after hitting sand again. She needed two putts after getting out and took bogey.

Callison: 'There is life after baseball'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Johnny Callison, the All-Star Game hero 18 summers ago, is now pitching used cars instead of swinging a hefty bat.

And he says there is life after baseball.

"Sure there is. There better be," Callison said from his northeast Philadelphia office at Avis, where he has been a used-car salesman for the past three years.

"I'm closer to my family than I've ever been because I'm not traveling. I wouldn't change my life. I'm happy. I'm doing fine. I'm not dead. I'm sure not going under," he added. "It's been great. I have no complaints."

CALLISON, 43, looks trim at 190 pounds — which is 10 pounds over what he weighed when he was released by the New York Yankees in 1973.

His career highlight came in the 1964 All-Star game, when his three-run homer off Boston's Dick (The Monster) Radatz in the bottom of the ninth inning won the game for the National League.

"I think it was probably the biggest thrill I had in ball," said Callison, who was voted the game's most valuable player.

That was the same year the Callison-led Philadelphia Phillies held a 6½ game lead with 12 to play but lost the pennant to St. Louis, a swoon that stigmatized everybody on the team. Had the Phillies won, Callison was a sure bet to win the MVP award that went to Ken Boyer of the Cardinals.

"It was a great year. The season just lasted 10 days too long," said Callison, who hit .274 with 31 homers and 104 RBI in 1964.

A balky left knee and a pincged nerve in his throwing shoulder told him it was time to leave the game. In his 16 years, he played for four major-league teams, including nine seasons with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Callison hit 226 home runs, drove in 840 runs and batted .264, playing in 1,886 games during his career.

"I couldn't run anymore. I figured I might have been able to sneak one more year in as a pinch hitter. But as far as playing everyday, I knew it was over. I faced it," said Callison, who has three daughters and two granddaughters.

"I'm not going to live in the past. I have never lived in the past," he added. "I enjoyed it. It was a great life. I was fortunate. It's what I wanted to do. But when it's over, it's over.

"It was hard to leave the game, but it's hard for everybody. It wasn't easy, but other people out here aren't having it easy either," said Callison, recounting his adjustment to the business world.

Callison's personal life drew a lot of notoriety when he was profiled in a series of "All-Stars of Yesteryear" by The Sporting News.

IN THE article, which Callison said is erroneous, he is reportedly living a "traumatic, near-crushing life."

And he said he's been wrongly described as a man behind on his bills, forced to see his wife work in a hash house and tempted to pawn the World Series ring he got in 1959 while playing for the Chicago White Sox.

"This is my time for searching, groping for something, anything...I'm so down," Callison is quoted as saying.

"It's just a bad article. It's just not true. It's crazy," said Callison, who has lived in Philadelphia since 1962.

"I'm getting calls from all over the country from people offering me jobs and wanting to buy my ring. The article made it seem like I was dead. Tell everybody I'm not going to commit suicide."

Callison's den in the split level home he bought in 1965 contains a wealth of memorabilia. The rug has his old No.6 that he wore in his most productive years with the Phillies. There's his All-Star MVP trophy, the ball he hit for the historic home run and other treasures.

He follows the Phillies, but doesn't find that much enjoyment attending games.

"I can't sit through a game. I really can't. I don't like the crowds, and I second guess everything. That isn't fun," said Callison, who starts drawing a pension in two years after earning a top salary of about $50,000 in the big leagues.

"The last game I went to, I watched the whole game from the clubhouse on TV."

Gene Richards dies in ARCA race

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Stock car racer Rick Roland drove his Pontiac to victory Saturday in an accident-marred ARCA 200 that claimed the life of driver Gene Richards at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Richards, 28, of Chicago was involved in an accident on the 31st lap. It was the third fatality involving a race car driver in the history of the track.

Eric Nord was killed during a go-cart race at the track in spring of 1980, track officials said. Prior to that, the most recent fatality was Tony Lund, killed in the 1975 Talladega 500.

Roland, who started in the pole position, pulled away from Bill Green, of Fort Mitchell, Ky., in the final lap to finish first by two car-lengths.

Finishing behind Roland and Green was Davey Allison, Hueytown, Ala., the 21-year-old son of veteran race driver Bobby Allison.

Fourth place went to Stuart Huffman, Newton, N.C., with Rodney Combs, Long Creek, W.Va., taking fifth.

"I felt we had the strongest car all day long," Roland said. "I didn't feel it was necessary to lead all the way because I wanted to make sure I was around at the end."

The Westland, Mich. resident celebrated his 31st birthday Saturday. "Yes, it was a very-happy birthday for me," he said.

Jim Hickman hurt in practice session crash

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Jim Hickman, the 1982 Indianapolis 500 rookie of the year, was badly injured Saturday in a grinding crash during a practice session for today's Provimi Veal-Tony Bettenhausen 200 Indy-car race.

Hickman, a 39-year-old veteran of road racing, lost control going into the first turn on Wisconsin State Fair Park's one-mile oval with less than five minutes remaining in the final practice session prior to the race.

His Cosworth-powered March racer slammed into the concrete wall at the entrance to the first turn and spun several hundred feet. The mangled car finally stopped near the outside wall at the exit of turn two.

It took safety crewmen, with the aid of a special prying tool, about 15 minutes to get the Chamblee, Ga., driver out of the car.

Dr. Jack Klieger, the track physician, said Hickman had "cardiac activity" and "spontaneous respiratory activity (breathing)" when he was placed in an ambulance for the trip to nearby County General Hospital. Hickman was being given oxygen as he was placed in the ambulance.

Mears wins pole position

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Rick Mears, regaining the edge he carried through the early season, roared to a track record Saturday, while winning the pole position for the Provimi Veal-Tony Bettenhausen 200 Indy-car race.

Mears, who set track qualifying records at Phoenix and Atlanta early this year, then went on to win those race, toured the one-mile oval at Wisconsin State Fair Park at an average speed of 143.839 mph.

That broke the mark of 142.484, set here in June by Gordon Johncock, the man who nipped Mears in this year's dramatic Indianapolis 500 and has since added victories in the Rex Mays 150 here and the Norton Michigan 500.

Mears, driving a Gould-sponsored Penske PC-10, knocked teammate Kevin Cogan off the pole, but the younger driver will make it an all-Penske front row in today's 200-mile race after qualfying his nearly identical Ford-powered PC-10 at 139.920.

"Kevin was really the key to this," said Mears, who at 30 is four years older than Cogan. "He came here last week and tested for a couple of days. That got us a setup to start with and, with just a few little changes, we got the car the way we wanted it."

His fast lap was timed at 25.028 seconds, just .238-seconds quicker than Johncock's previous record. It was also just a tick quicker than his own time in June, when he was one of six drivers to break the old mark and just .011 behind Johncock.

Johncock, driving a Cosworth-powered Wildcat, was a solid third Saturday at 138.670, followed by Indy-car rookie Bobby Rahal — the winner of the July 4 road race at Cleveland and the only driver besides Mears and Johncock to visit victory circle in 1982 — at 138.090.

Mario Andretti, Johncock's teammate, took the fifth spot on the grid at 137.688 in a Wildcat-Cosworth, with Al Unser at 137.567 in the Midland entry of Bobby Hillin, a Longhorn-Cosworth, Tom Sneva at 137.226 in a March-Cosworth, and Pancho Carter at 137.060 in a March-Cosworth.

Mears, who was last in the qualifying line on a hot, sunny afternoon, expressed surprise at breaking the record.

"With the heat of the afternoon and waiting so long, the track was real slippery," Mears said. "And my last couple of laps in the morning practice, with the track already warming up, were in the low 26s (26 seconds).

"Then, after watching the other times, I didn't really think I'd get anywhere near the record."

Mears actually knocked Cogan off the pole with a first-lap timed at 25.152 seconds (143.130 mph), but the second of his two qualifying laps was better — despite almost losing control in the fourth turn.

"I scared myself about eight times out there," Mears said with a smile. "On that last turn, the car was in a total drift going up toward the fence, but it caught right at the fence and really took off.

"In that situation, you can be certain and come out of (the throttle) or you can take the chance, leave your foot down, hope for the best and go for the time. It's a calculated risk.

Arguello solves Kevin Rooney fast

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — When Alexis Arguello crashed his right fist into Kevin Rooney's face for a second-round knock out Saturday, World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor was watching as earnestly as a scholar.

The victory assured Arguello, the World Boxing Council lightweight champion, of a shot at Pryor's title this fall along with a $1.5 million purse. If Arguello beats Pryor, he becomes the first man ever to win world titles in four weight classes.

"I knew by taking control and hammering from the beginning he was going to win," Pryor said. "I also saw that when Rooney stepped into the ring, he didn't have win on his face. He had fight, but he didn't have win."

Rooney, stopped at 3:07 of the second round, declined hospitalization, but told his trainers he didn't remember round two at all and had just flashing recollections of the first round, said a spokesman for the promoter, Top Rank, Inc.

Pryor said Rooney was a poor test of Arguello's junior welterweight potential.

"Aaron don't stand still. That will be a key factor in the fight," Pryor said. "I don't feel he can hit a moving target like he can a standing still target, which is what most of his opponents have been. They kind of stand in front of you and challenge you."

Rooney, 19-2, was no match for the 30-year-old World Boxing Council lightweight champion, who improved his record to 76-4 with 62 knock outs.

Arguello bloodied Rooney's nose early in the first round, hitting him with an overhand right. Rooney appeared frustrated momentarily, and the alert Arguello wasted no time moving in with a short right when he saw his opponent hesitate.

Arguello opened the second round with two left hooks to the top of Rooney's head, followed up with a hard right to his face, the most powerful punch of the match.

Rooney continued to use his best weapon, a left hook, but the punch lacked power and Arguello seemed unfazed.

Arguello finished off Rooney with a right that sent the 26-year-old Catskill, N.Y., resident to the canvas. Rooney clung to the bottom rope, while he was he was counted out at 3:07.

The scheduled 10-round bout at Bally's Park Place Casino Hotel was nationally televised live by the CBS-TV network and was also shown in Latin America, England and Italy.

Bill Guilliani lands fourth largest bass in Texas

There was an unseasonable flurry of trophy largemouth bass action on several Texas reservoirs during June and July.

Bill Guilliani of San Antonio caught the fourth largest bass ever taken in Texas July 2 at Lake Calaveras. The 13-pound, nine-ounce fish also established a new lake record for the power plant lake.

He fooled the trophy bass with a six-inch black and yellow plastic worm.

Also during June, San Antonio's other power plant lake, Victor Braunig, produced a lake record 10-pound, eight-ounce bass. The fish was taken on a black and chrome crankbait. Even this lake record may fall soon, however, as Texas Parks and Wildlife department surveys earlier in the spring turned up two bass over 11 pounds and severl in the 10-pound range.

The trophy bass haul was not confined to Bexar County. Lake Welsh near Mount Pleasant in East Texas was the scene of a remarkable surge as well. One Sunday in June, a department creel survey turned up two bass over 11 pounds as well as a 10-pounder and one more over eight pounds. All were caught the same day by tournament fishermen.

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

Department officials learned recently that a 12-pound, two-ounce bass was caught earlier this spring by an angler at Lake Nacogdoches. The fish propels the 2,200-acre lake into the elite group of lakes, now numbering eight, which have produced bass of 12 pounds or better.

The other lakes which have reached the plateau are Fayett Power Project, Calaveras, Monticello, Welsh, Livingston, Houston County and Echo. The Echo catches were the fish that made bass fishing history in Texas back in January of 1981 when the new state record for largemouth was set with a bass over 16 pounds.

Biologists are at somewhat of a loss to explain the early-summer resurgence of big-bass fishing, since traditionally most of the true trophy-sized fish are taken in January and February.

"It could be something in the unusual weather patterns we've had this year," speculated Inland Fisheries Management Coordinator Bob Bounds, "or it could simply mean that we have more of the larger bass than ever before in the lakes and more people are fishing for them this summer.

Bass club tournament statistics compiled by the department appear to back up Bounds' theory about more large bass. Through June, bass clubs around the state reported catching 142 bass exceeding six pounds during tournaments. Only 131 over-six fish were taken in all of 1981 amd pm;u 89 were reported by the clubs in 1980.

Whatever the reason for the upswing, anglers are happy and Bounds predicts more lakes will produce 12-pound plus bass before long. His guess is that Lake Braunig will be the next power plant lake to join the club and Falcon will be the non-heated lake. Fisheries Director Bob Kemp agrees on the Braunig pick, but votes for Lake Bob Sandlin in the Monticello-Welsh-Sandlin "big bass triangle" to be the next non-heated lake to break the barrier.

MEXICAN DOVE SEASON — Mexico's whitewing and mourning dove seasons, also the pigeon season, are expected to open concurrently Aug. 13, according to Lee Kirkpatrick who operates a hunting service in Mexico.

Also, bag limits could read like this: whitewings, daily 25, 75 in possession; mourning doves, 15 daily, 45 in possession; pigeons, 5 daily, 15 in possession. On a good day, it is quite possible that a hunter might end up with 45 birds or a total of 135 after three days of hunting.

Lloyd, Bunge reach net finals

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd and West Germany's Bettina Bunge each rallied to win their matches Saturday and advance to the finals of the McDonald's women's indoor tennis competition.

Lloyd overcame a shaky start to beat West Germany's Sylvia Hanika, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, while Bunge topped England's Sue Barker 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 to set up today's finals.

Lloyd broke Hanika's serve in the seventh game of the final set to assure herself of the victory.

Bunge's victory eliminated Martina Navratilova from the round-robin tournament. Bunge needed to win her match plus at least 14 games to move past Navratilova.

Navratilova, bothered by an injury originally thought to be a pulled leg muscle and now considered a pinched nerve in the back, lost Saturday to Andrea Jaeger 1-6, 6-3, 6-2. It was only the second loss this year for Navratilova, who won at Wimbledon. Her other loss was to Hanika.

Navratilova beat Jaeger in the first set in just 25 minutes before the American teen-ager came back to win.

"I was having problems bending to get shots and when I stretched, I felt a pain going up my legs to my back," Navratilova said. "I just don't know what it is. I felt I could run alright but I had no power in my shots."

Hogan Park Golf Pro

The Midland Reporter-Telegram's annual Men's City Golf Championship will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Hogan Park golf course.

The format will be 36 holes medal play, flighted by handicap, or players may declare for the Championship Flight. Entry fee is $40 per player with all money returned in trophies and gift certificate prizes.

Entry deadline will be Thursday at 6 p.m. To be eligible to play, you must be a resident of Midland and not have any high school eligibility remaining. Player handicaps must be attested by a golf professional.

Flights this year will be Championship (0-5 handicap), First (6-9), Second (10-12), Third (13-16), Fourth (17-20) and Fifth (20 and over). There will also be a Senior's Flight for age 60 and over with a low gross and low net payoff.

The seventh annual Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scout Pro-Am event is scheduled at Hogan Park on Monday, Aug. 23. Teams will be made up of one professional and one amateur of his choice, paired with a team of two amateurs named by a tournament sponsor. Tournament sponsorships are available through Bill Russell or Rex Worrell. This year's purse will be $6,000 in prizes.

A message for the person who reported finding a ping 7-iron the other day. We have located the owner...Jeff Minnick. Jeff will be checking at the golf shop, so if you could bring the iron to the golf shop, Jeff would appreciate it very much.

Danny Martinez recorded his first hole-in-one this past week. Danny scored the ace on the 170-yard, No. 13 hole at Hogan. Danny's ace was witnessed by playing partners Jesse Moreno, David Bernal and Toto Carrasco.

Green Tree golf professional, Rollie Wildman, has announced that he has some openings available for the NTPGA Section Pro-Am event, which is scheduled in conjunction with the Northern Texas Sectional Championships. Anyone interested in playing in the Pro-Am on Sept. 13 should contact Wildman.

Tommy John seeks trade

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tommy John, unhappy with his recent demotion to the New York Yankees' bullpen, has asked to be traded, according to his agent.

Bob Cohen told the Daily News on Friday that he has given the Yankees a list of teams the 39-year-old pitcher would agree to play for. Cohen did not reveal those teams.

John, a starting pitcher his entire career, is struggling with a 6-8 record this season. He has given up 20 earned runs in his last 27 innings and has been taken out of the starting rotation by Manager Gene Michael, who said John would start one of the games in a twi-night doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday.

"Tommy is a starting pitcher, he wants to be a starting pitcher, and if he's going to be a starting pitcher, he has to be in a stable situation and not in Mr. Michael's game of musical chairs," Cohen said.

"And off Tommy's record over the last 10 years, I don't think he's received the type of treatment he's earned. To go back into the rotation with the feeling if you have a bad game, you're back in the bullpen just isn't any good," Cohen said. "Tommy just doesn't want to labor under that at this stage of his career, and who would want to?"

Cohen added that John's contract called for a $37,500 bonus for pitching 190 innings or making 28 starts.

Skins nip Baltimore

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Rookie quarterback Chris Garrity's 8-yard touchdown pass to Alvin Garrett boosted the Washington Redskins to a 21-14 victory over the Baltimore Colts Saturday in a National football League controlled scrimmage at the Redskins' training camp at Dickinson College.

Garrity, a free agent from William & Mary, led the Redskins on their final winning 30-yard drive.

The drive started with Garrett picking up 20 yards on Garrity's first pass of the scrimmage. After Clarence Harmon advanced the ball to the 8 on a 2-yard run, Garrity again found Garrett behind the Colts' secondary for the winning score.

Earlier, the Redskins had taken a 14-0 lead on touchdown runs of 2 yards by Harmon and 14 yards Mike Crayton.

The Colts scored for the first time as No. 1 draft choice Art Schlichter passed to Holden Smith for 7 yards.

Bill Springer films the Thouvenel String Quartet's Friday mini-concert at Theatre Midland for the Houston-based Eyes of Texas television program. The Eyes of Texas film crew, Springer and Gary James, were in town Friday and Saturday filming a segment of the show on the Thouvenels for this season.

Thouvenels to be on Eyes of Texas TV show

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Filming was to begin at 8 p.m. Audience members began arriving around 7:30 p.m. Sitting down, they waited for their instructions. A little after 8 p.m., the performing group's spokesman walked to the platform to address the crowd.

The film crew moved in closer. Stopping his opening comments mid-sentence, he gave them a straight, long look and said, "This wasn't to be filmed, Bill."

The crowd relaxed as everyone laughed.

Beginning last summer, the Houston-based Eyes of Texas television show has found filming material ranging from the absurd to the profound in Midland.

Last year Gary James, one-half of the program's filming crew, was in Midland capturing Midland Community Theatre's 33rd annual Summer Mummers in its first season at the Yucca Theatre. The program segment aired this spring.

Friday, James was back with the other half of the crew, Bill Springer. The two are responsible for filming, producing, writing and editing all of the material for the weekly program.

This time the subject was as far removed from a melodrama and olio and its subsequent booing, hissing, cheering, popcorn-throwing crowd as the gamut runs in the entertainment world. It represented the finest in classical music — The Thouvenel String Quartet, with the very nature of the subject demanding a quieter, though certainly not less appreciative, audience.

MOST OF THE filming for the Eyes of Texas is done during the summer months. This trip west from Houston had carried James and Springer from Reagan Wells to Eagle Pass, Marathon, Presidio, El Paso, Midland and back to El Paso following their filming of the Thouvenels' Saturday departure for San Diego. While in town, the two also filmed a short segment on the Museum of the Southwest. Both segments will air this season; however, the actual air dates will not be known until this fall.

Although the quartet's season does not officially open until September, fans were treated to a special performance Friday at Theatre Midland. The performance also represented an opportunity for the audience to hear and meet the quartet's newest member, Edmund Stein. Stein replaced Teresa Fream, who has left the West Texas area since last season's close. Other members of the quartet include Eugene Purdue, Sally Chisholm and Jeff Levenson.

Friday's performance came at the end of an afternoon of filming individual interviews and a rehearsal.

The rehearsal was held at the Museum of the Southwest. The interviews were done in the office of J.M. Fullinwider, Midland-Odessa Symphony Association board member and chairman of the Thouvenel String Quartet committee and past president of the association. The quartet is sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Symphony Association.

AFTER THE CROWD'S laughter subsided Friday night, Fullinwider explained why he had given Springer and James such a searching look.

He met James and Springer when they came to his office to film an interview with him. When they first arrived, the three casually discussed the Thouvenels and their out-of-town performances, including a premiere performance of a new work by composer Ernest Krenek at Carnegie Hall and a series of concerts at Munich, Germany in May. Fullinwider thought it was a prior to the filming chat. He was wrong.

When Fullinwider finished talking with James and Springer he said, "Now let's get started." Springer replied, "We've got all we need."

It had all been so relaxed, he didn't know the camera was capturing his every word. Needless to say, Friday night he was a little camera shy.

FULLINWIDER went on to instruct the audience in proper audience behavior during filming by saying, "We are filming a mini concert. You will be the audience and will be filmed as well. The Eyes of Texas will be poking its cameras in all kinds of places. Don't wince. Don't stare into the camera. Look at the Thouvenel Quartet."

Just before he began filming, Springer added, "Try to pretend we're not here."

Easier said than done.

Fullinwider was introducing the quartet while at the same time keeping an eye on the camera when Springer said, "Practice what you preach Jerry." The audience laughed.

Fullinwider responded with, "I'm a good preacher, but not a very good practicer."

By this time the audience was completely relaxed.

The Thouvenels performed Mozart's Quartet in G Major, Kershel No. 387 and Smetana's Quartet in E Minor, "From My Life." Both pieces were executed with the Thouvenels' usual precision timing and polished control.

The audience paid rapt attention, practicing what had been preached.

Woody Allen film covers old ground

"A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy," written and directed by Woody Allen, is the same old song, second verse. That is to say this lightweight comedy continues to explore familiar Allen themes of love, death, sex and the ideal versus the real. But no new ground gets broken, and the laughs are few and far between.

As the film opens, Andrew (Woody Allen), a Wall Street adviser and part-time inventor, is married to Adrian (Mary Steenburgen) and their marriage is on the rocks, but neither of them understands why. They discuss it in typical Allen one-line repartee, and it is here that we learn they are planning to host a weekend at their house in the country for a relative, Leopold (Jose Ferrer), and his prospective bride Ariel (Mia Farrow). Andrew's best friend Maxwell (Tony Roberts) and his date, Dulcy (Julie Hagerty), are to join them.

It is not long after they all arrive that the talk turns to passion versus love and is it possible to feel one without the other. As if to prove the case, everyone gets into the act — an often confusing and silly one at that. For example, Maxwell, a doctor, gets shot in the chest with an arrow and moments later, after predicting his own death, is cheerfully up and about. Then there is Leopold, a philosopher, who refuses to believe in an after-life, dies of heart failure during a romantic interlude with nurse Dulcy and then communicates from the beyond through a kind of extra-sensory globe Andrew invented.

Finally, Andrew and Ariel try to live out a fantasy of their youth by making love in the forest, only to find that bug-noise ruins the moment.

"A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy" has an excellent cast, but this time the material and direction do not live up to them. Mia Farrow is lovely in the film and trys to match Allen's delivery but comes off like Diane Keaton (pick almost any Allen movie), inflections, hesitations and all.

As nurse Dulcy, Julie Hagerty is supposed to be "healthy" and physically adept, but she is too frail to be convincing and she is forced to fight for the individuality of her character with Mary Steenburgen. Both women have characters with similar personalities and style and though they play the empty-headed, naive female very well, two of the same kind is mentally numbing.

Perhaps there is a change afoot in the creative world of Woody Allen. It is noticeable that he often avoids the fast funny line in favor of the comic situation in "A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy," and as a result his character is more endearing and "normal." Nevertheless, Allen and Roberts are still playing the same guys we have seen before; Roberts the fellow who always gets the girl and Allen who never does.

In contrast, Jose Ferrer is marvelous as the officious pundit who disdains the baser passions — until he gets a taste of them — and when he sings German lieder in German, of course, and spouts Old English to no one's particular interest or delight, he is at his best.

"A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy" does have the benefit of some beautiful photography by Gordon Willis and first-class editing by Susan Morse. Together they provide a lyric nature sequence, set to the music of Felix Mendelssohn, and throughout help to elicit the feel of the Victorian era, Gordon with natural soft light and Morse with the appropriate intercutting of music and image.

A Review

To its credit, this uneven comedy does try to answer its own questions. Yes, there is life after death — at least Woody Allen-style. And yes, passion and love are separate and sometimes distinct. But after its hopeful beginning, "A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy," rated PG, is unable to maintain the momentum, crumbling in the final moments into inanity.

Enthusiastic audience packs Loverboy concert

Friday night found more than 7,200 rock fans sardined together at Chaparral Center for a heated evening of rock'n'roll.

Top billing for the night went to Loverboy, with Point Blank winding the audience up for the ear-blasting sounds of the Canadian rock group.

Enthusiasm ran high as Loverboy performed an hour show with a 15 minute encore. The standing-room crowd packed the coliseum's floor, aisles, seats and walkways. On the floor level, for almost a third of the way back from the stage, most of the fans were mounted piggy back.

The most impressive feature of the Loverboy performance was the light show. Via a laser beam, light was shot out from the stage and played across the coliseum's ceiling, floor, crowd and walls. Even without the beam, the light combinations used were most effective, making the performance visually dynamic.

The audience loved it.

Musically, the band was not as hot as Ted Nugent Thursday at Ector County Coliseum.

Nugent's drummer performed a solo that left the 5,500 fans clapping and cheering, while Nugent himself is hard to surpass on the guitar. And even Nugent did not put on as strong a performance as he did two years ago at Chaparral Center for a much small gathering. Still, he was more of a showman onstage, dancing and prancing back and forth (one fan referred to him as "twinkletoes"), than any of the members of the Loverboy band with the possible exception of the singer.

Nugent also did more joking with the audience than did the members of Loverboy. Much of it was R-rated from both Nugent and Loverboy.

Loverboy's selections showed more of a variety in rhythmic tempo, with the sounds varying within a single number from hard and fast to slow and softer (not soft, but softer), than Nugent's. Nugent's music generally starts fast and gets faster and faster and faster, winding the audience higher and higher and higher.

There was more electricity in the air Friday than Thursday, but that is not surprising. More excitement is always generated in a full house.

It was obvious Friday that this crowd really dug the sounds they were hearing (They had to to stay. The heat inside the coliseum was almost as intense as the sounds coming from the stage.)

What more can a group ask for than playing for a packed house and leaving happy fans behind?

Loverboy fans who were there may have availed themselves of the only opportunity they have to hear Loverboy perform live in West Texas. The group's road manager indicated after the show that they would not be back.

The reason?

There's no arena big enough in the area.

— GEORGIA TEMPLE

A Review

The Canadian rock group Loverboy performed Friday for a sellout crowd of rockers at Chaparral Center. The group's singer was the most physically active onstage. The 7,200 fans enjoyed the sounds and the dynamic light show.

Stars give theater benefit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Sinatra and dozens of stars — including Cary Grant, Johnny Carson and Barry Manilow — brought in a crowd of 6,200 for the gala opening of the renovated Universal Ampitheatre.

"It is one of the finest (theaters) in which I've ever appeared," the silver-haired singer told the audience Friday night as house lights went up for a few moments between songs. "I suggest that you support it — it is a very good idea."

The $20-million renovation follows the closing two years ago of what was then an open-air auditorium. Residents of the Los Angeles neighborhood complained that it was noisy.

The benefit raised more than $1 million for UCLA's Jules Stein Eye Institute, Loyola Marymount University and the Motion Picture and Television Fund.

Sinatra and his 24-piece band helped show off the new sound system with varied favorites such as "I've Got You Under My Skin," "It Had To Be You," a medley from George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," and, in closing, "New York, New York."

After the concert, 1,000 patrons who paid $1,250 per ticket danced to Big Band music under a huge tent and dined on Chasen's famous chili, roast ham and ice cream sundaes.

The new Univeral Ampitheatre has a high-ceiling roof, a seven-row mezzanine, 1,000 new seats and a closed-in, skylighted concourse. The stage has been enlarged threefold.

An artificial lagoon with fountains surrounds the concourse and is criss-crossed by pedestrian bridges. There are now indoor as well as outdoor concession stands and the old plastic seats have been replaced by upholstered ones and carpeting has been put in the aisles.

In MCT's production of "Poltroonery on the Pacific-The Isle You See Ain't No Bikini Atoll," Billy Bob Slimswab (Jim Hill), cues the audience. The melodrama is at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado St., Thursday, Friday and Saturday through Sept. 4.

As a breakfast food, hors d'oeuvre or summertime meal, good smoked salmon has no peer. Of course, good smoked salmon is not available everywhere. If you are lucky enough to find some, look for smoked salmon that is neither too oily nor too salty. With quality salmon there is very little preparation involved. Simply arrange the pale pink slices on white china, sprinkle on a few capers and add a few wedges of lemon to the plate, then, add thinly sliced fingers of pumpernickel bread, that has been lightly spread with sweet butter. Enjoy!

GOURMET TIP:
Serve lemon wedges tightly wrapped in a layer of cheesecloth to avoid a squirt in the eye.

Marilyn Monroe provides the shapely proportions while an updraft provides the rest during a scene from "The Seven Year Itch," filmed in Manhattan in 1954. This photo was taken by Associated Press photographer Matty Zimmerman, who watched the filming of the movie along with a thousand other movie fans.

Though Marilyn Monroe died 20 years ago, evidence of her immortality can be seen everywhere. A photographer of Monroe, Tom Kelly, describes her: "People felt they knew her. She directed herself to the audience, and she exposed herself, not only physcially, but emotionally as well." Dressed in bathing suits, the model poses in file photos from 1947, 1951 and 1962.

Marilyn memorabilia

By SCOTT KRAFT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Sinatra books are relegated to the floor. The Fabian records are lost in the stacks. And Marilyn Monroe has moved in, taking over the window, the walls and the shelves.

Her voice, scratchy and loud, spills onto the street from Barry Wolinsky's record player. Her image covers posters, albums and scrapbooks. Her story fills books, magazines and newspapers.

Reminders of the blonde Hollywood legend — buttons, coffee mugs, books, jewelry, paper dolls, scarves, ashtrays and pillow cases — fill Wolinsky's nostalgia store. He fell for her in 1952 and now it's his vocation.

Through Thursday, the 20th anniversary of her death, it's "Monroebilia" time at his Twentieth Century Antiques and Gallery store, in Manhattan's historic Chelsea district.

"She's bigger in death than she was in life, and her legend keeps growing," says Wolinsky, 43, surrounded by her pictures, listening to her voice and talking about her legacy.

A thin man with a crew cut and wire-rim glasses, he turned his shop over to his Monroe memorabilia for the first time last summer. It ran from June 1, the anniversary of her birth, to Aug. 5, the anniversary of her death, and accounted for a third of his business for the year.

Her image is everywhere. On a mirror, in a cut-out doll that says "I love you" when you pull the string; on record album covers, promotional photographs for her films and Life magazine covers; a newspaper advertisement shows Marilyn pitching aluminum photochrome mounts; posters for "The Seven-Year Itch," "Some Like It Hot," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and the rest hang from the walls.

"It is the photo image of her that turns me on, that fascinates me," Wolinksy says. "Especially the still photographs. She has an incredible image."

Wolinksy fell for her 30 years ago. "I was just 13, living in the Bronx, and I saw her in 'Niagara,'" he says. "She had a scene where she walks down the street, swaying her hips... I can still remember it.

"I kept loving her because she has that special combination of blatant sexuality and a little child's vulnerability. I never really wanted to meet her, though. It was the photographic image I was in love with."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There were many photographs of Marilyn Monroe, but two stand out. One launched her career. The other may have cost the star her marriage to Joe DiMaggio.

She posed for the first when she was a broke, aspiring actress. It was a nude for a calendar.

Jet Fore, a publicist at 20th Century-Fox in 1946 when Marilyn Monroe was placed under contract at $125 a week, recalls the reaction when his boss learned of her naked past.

"This will ruin the studio!" the man cried. "We've got three of her pictures in the can."

Fore says it was a shock, "because in those days no famous actress had exposed her breasts."

Tom Kelly, the photographer, says he spent 10 years trying to live down the picture "because I didn't want to be known as a nudie photographer."

Revelation of the calendar in 1952 helped make Marilyn the hottest star in movies. Despite the publicity chief's initial shock and dire prediction, the public responded sympathetically when she explained why she had posed.

American males responded with enthusiasm, and the Playboy centerfold of the calendar made Marilyn the pinup of the Korean War.

"Marilyn came along at just the right time; the brink of the sexual revolution," said Fore.

The other famous photo is among the most often requested among 12 million news photographs in the library of Wide World Photos, a subsidiary of The Associated Press.

It shows Marilyn's dress billowing upward in a scene from "The Seven-Year Itch."

"We were shooting on Lexington Avenue in New York, and bleachers had been put up across the street for people to watch," recalls film co-star Tom Ewell. "Marilyn and I were walking down the sidewalk, and neither of us knew that a wind machine had been placed in a subway grating.

"During the first walkthrough, the machine blew Marilyn's skirt up — and she didn't like to wear anything underneath. People across the street cheered, and I tried to pull down her skirt. The director, Billy Wilder, said to me, 'You damned fool, you're ruining a million dollars' worth of publicity!'

"Marilyn went into the lounge of the Trans-Lux Theater where we were filming and put on some panties. I remember that Joe DiMaggio was there, and he said to her, 'If you go out there again, I'm leaving.' Marilyn said, 'I'm going,' and we did the scene on film.

"Shortly afterward, Marilyn and Joe separated."

Marilyn's magic

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Twenty years have passed since too many sleeping pills silenced that naughty, breathless whisper. But goddesses don't die.

So it is with Marilyn Monroe.

The platinum blond hair. The grace-note mole. The wide-eyed innocence. The sense of vulnerability. And, to be sure, the erotic allure — her sensuous saunter, the glowing complexion, the luscious ripeness of her form.

They live on a generation after her death.

On stage and on the screen, in television movies and in newspapers, books and magazines, Marilyn Monroe still inspires fantasy, still captures hearts, and, with few parallels, still sells.

"I love her more every day, and I miss her more every day," says Billy Wilder, who directed her two most successful movies, "The Seven-Year Itch" and "Some Like It Hot."

Roses arrive three times a week at her grave. They come from Joe DiMaggio, the ex-husband and New York Yankees baseball star generally considered the great love of her life.

But those who knew her are not alone in the remembrance. As many as 25 fans visit her crypt at the Westwood Memorial Park each day. "They take the roses sent by Joe DiMaggio, but usually replace them with other flowers," says Mike Steen, director of the three-acre park.

ONE PENNSYLVANIA fan sends 37 white-stemmed roses four times a year — on the anniversaries of her death and June 1, and Easter and Christmas. Steen says the fan has told him he goes to church to recite a Rosary for Marilyn each day.

It was 20 years ago Thursday that Marilyn Monroe was found dead from an overdose of sleeping pills. She was 36 years old.

Was it suicide or an accident? No one will ever know. But speculation about her death continues after two decades.

Her third marriage, to playwright Arthur Miller, had broken up. She had been fired by her studio for tardiness. She was alone and distraught.

One theory advanced in books and scandal tabloids suggested Marilyn was in love with Robert Kennedy and took her life because he would not leave his wife for her. There also were rumors that she had a brief fling with John Kennedy.

But although Marilyn Monroe knew and admired the Kennedys, there is no real evidence that she was romantically involved with them.

Biographers have a rich vein of American folklore in the Monroe saga. Her supposedly illegitimate birth as Norma Jean Baker in Los Angeles (although it has been cast into doubt in the past year with new findings). Her wretched childhood in foster homes. Her decision to pose for a nude calendar when she was broke. Her starlet days. Her reign as superstar. Three marriages and many romances. Her loss of emotional control and her tragic end.

JAYNE MANSFIELD, Sheree North and others tried to imitate her formula but all failed. Like all great stars, Marilyn Monroe was indeed unique.

Ironically, Marilyn was never nominated for an Academy Award. In fact, the critics didn't take her seriously as an actress until she made the "Seven-Year Itch" and "Bus Stop" in the mid-'50s, midway through her career.

After those successes, some critics began to concede that the actress was more than just a sex bomb and actually an excellent light comedian.

Still, despite her eventual acclaim, Marilyn Monroe's films do not appear on Hollywood's list of the top 250 box office hits of all time. Most were moderately successful, however.

Her best year at the box office came in 1953, before the critical peak of her career, when "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "How to Marry a Millionaire" were among the top 10 moneymakers of the year.

Her last two films, "Let's Make Love" and "The Misfits" were box office disappointments.

Why does the Monroe magic continue?

Tom Ewell, her co-star in "The Seven-Year Itch," has toured 127 cities during the past year, giving readings of American humor and, invariably, talking to people about Marilyn Monroe. He has an answer.

"I THINK it's because she had everything in the world that the average woman wants — fame, sex, glory — yet she still was unhappy. People realize that what appeared to be the American dream turned out to be empty."

Whatever the reason, the magic continues to intrigue.

Her picture is on the cover of Life magazine this month — the 19th time it has adorned the magazine, more than any other star.

During the past two years there have been two television movies: "Marilyn: The Untold Story," starring Catherine Hicks on ABC; and "This Year's Blonde," with Constance Forslund on NBC. Local TV channels regularly offer festivals of Marilyn Monroe films.

An opera titled "Marilyn" was among the most successful attractions in Italy during the 1981 season. In 1980, a musical, "Hey, Marilyn," was produced in Edmonton, Canada, with the aim of going on to Broadway.

Three Australians have announced plans to produce a rock opera, "Marilyn, A Fable of the 20th Century." Also planned is a play based on Norman Mailer's book, "Of Women and Their Elegance."

"She seems more alive today than she was in her lifetime," says Tom Kelly, the photographer whose nude calendar shot of a broke Marilyn Monroe added to the star's mystique.

"WHY? PERHAPS because she reached out to people, and still does in movies and photographs," he says.

"People felt they knew her. She directed herself to the audience, and she exposed herself, not only physically, but emotionally as well."

The Motion Picture Academy library lists 35 books devoted all or in part to her. Among the titles: "The Life and Curious Death of Marilyn Monroe"; "Marilyn: The Last Months"; "Diary of a Lover of Marilyn Monroe."

Her first husband, James Dougherty, wrote "The Secret Happiness of Marilyn Monroe," a sentimental account of their brief marriage that began when she was 17. Arthur Miller wrote a successful play, "After the Fall," which depicted the turbulent marriage of a writer and a sex goddess, although he denied that it was a depiction of his marriage to Marilyn.

DiMaggio, however, has remained silent about their relationship.

Her co-workers remember Marilyn with startling clarity.

Ewell, for example, recalls eating lunch with her every day during the filming of "The Seven-Year Itch."

"She would always read the Bible. But she would put a Life magazine in front of it so no one would know. She told me, 'Every time I turn around people think I'm doing some publicity stunt. I don't want to think that about reading the Bible.'"

WILDER ONCE made cutting remarks about her behavior during filming of "Some Like It Hot," during which she was intolerably late and sometimes rude.

"Once Marilyn was on the screen, she was delicious; to get her on the screen was something else," he says. "I may have said some harsh things about her, but in retrospect I feel her death was an absolutely irreparable loss."

Many fans feel the same way.

In London, Sotheby Parke Bernet required only 40 seconds to auction a pink mesh bra, silver evening bag and white evening gloves worn by Marilyn. A Texan paid $1,040 for them. Her cream chiffon strapless gown sold for $1,900.

Ernie Garcia is the devoted president of the Marilyn Monroe International Fan Club, which includes 2,000 members throughout the world. Every afternoon after his work in a Veterans Administration print shop, Garcia spends six or eight hours at his Long Beach, Calif., home, working on correspondence and other matters for the fan club.

"Ever since I saw 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' as a kid, I started collecting everything I could find about Marilyn," says Garcia. "After her death the obsession grew. I felt the world had lost something great, a real symbol of America, and I wanted to do anything I could to help preserve her memory. I've never lost my enthusiasm."

"People ask my mother about why I am 35 and not married and with children. Well, I enjoy dating, but mostly the girls are Marilyn lookalikes."

ENGINEERS

SOHIO PETROLEUM COMPANY

San Francisco

Recruiting in Houston
August 25 - 28, 1982

The Production Planning and Reservoir Engineering Division of Sohio Petroleum Company (Western Region), based in San Francisco, is expanding rapidly, reflecting our commitment to fully develop the potential of Sohio's domestic hydrocarbon reserves. Senior Engineers from the division will be visiting Houston from August 25 - 28, 1982 to interview candidates for the following challenging assignments.

Reservoir Engineers

We seek Reservoir Engineers with three or more years of experience to work on important projects on several of the nation's largest oil and gas fields using the latest techniques in the industry. We have new positions at all levels, up to and including supervisory positions, for professionals with experience and interests in: Reservoir Simulation, Reservoir Development, Waterflooding, Reservoir and Well Performance Evaluation.

Production Engineers

Current opportunities exist for Production Engineers to deal with many phases of Prudhoe Bay development and production, a multi-billion dollar investment program. This will include corporate project review, planning and budgeting; technical and economic review of joint venture proposals; coordination with joint venture partners and petroleum engineering input and liaison with construction and operations. Qualified candidates will be degfeed Engineers with three to fifteen years of broad petroleum production related experience with a major oil company. This should include downhole and/or facilities project engineering, economic decision-making and understanding of interrelationships of long-term reservoir performance and facilities needs.

For your relocation to the San Francisco Bay Area, Sohio offers an excellent assistance program including Housing Allowance, mortgage interest subsidy, purchase of your present home, and complete resettlement services. We also provide you with highly competitive salaries and full benefits.

To be considered for an interview for the above positions, send a resume and salary history to: Mable Jenkins, Sohio Petroleum Company #013029, 100 Pine Street, San Francisco, CA 94111, or call our representative, Ogilvy & Mather Recruitment Advertising, toll free at (800) 527-3413. If you live in Texas call (214) 783-6076 COLLECT. All phone calls will be taken Monday through Thursday from 9am to 3pm. It would be desirable for candidates with less than five years' experience to include their college transcript and/or GPA. Suitable candidates will be scheduled for interview between August 25 - 28, 1982.

If you are unable to meet with us in Houston, please send your resume to Mable Jenkins at the above address.

We look forward to meeting Engineers with the ability and enthusiasm to take on and successfully complete complex and rewarding tasks within our rapidly growing division in San Francisco.

An equal opportunity employer M/F/H/V.

OS Programmer

What can you contribute to our Computer Center in Midland?

ARCO Oil and Gas Company can benefit from your technical resourcefulness in installing and maintaining a large-scale IBM system at our Permian District's Computer Center. You'll be highly visible...and essential -- and we'll offer career growth prospects to match--as your significant contributions help provide vital DP support to our domestic oil and gas exploration/production.

Specifically, you'll maintain an IBM 4341, as well as coordinate the installation of all computer hardware in the district. You will also provide support and consultation to a large user community, and will be responsible for performance measurement and planning, and operator training.

Your excellent oral and written communication skills will serve you well when working closely with several of our Plano, Texas DP groups. On occasion, you'll perform special studies and write up applications.

You must have a degree in Computer Science or the equivalent. Experience with VM and MVS operating systems, CMS, TSO, JCL, keymaster, CICS, and VTAM software, as well as 4300 configurations, highly desired. Two years experience as an operating system programmer preferred.

We offer very competitive salary and outstanding benefits. To arrange an interview, please send your resume and salary history in confidence to : Mr. Bill Fenton, ARCO Oil and Gas Company, Room 134, 300 North Pecos, Midland , Texas 79702.

MAINTENANCE PROFESSIONALS

Enjoy a more challenging career and earn up to 40 percent more. Join Aramco in Saudi Arabia.

Aramco is the largest oil-producing company in the world. Because of the scope of our projects, we need more professionals who are highly qualified in the following areas:

Rotating Equipment Engineers Requires a BS in Engineering and 5 to 10 years' petrochemical industry experience in the maintenance of rotating equipment, and a familiarity with large centrifugal compressors and large rotating equipment trains. You will provide shop and field support.

Power Plant Maintenance Engineers Requires a BSME and 5 to 10 years' hands-on maintenance engineering experience in utility type gas (steam) turbines, 30 MW and above.

Area Maintenance Engineers Requires a BS in Engineering and 5 to 10 years' petrochemical plant maintenance experience. You must be capable of working in either terminal, gas fractionation or crude oil processing plants.

Tankage Maintenance Engineer Requires a BSCE or BSME and 5 to 10 years' experience in planning and directing routine and turnaround maintenance on large crude oil and cryogenic tanks.

Senior Instrumentation Technician Requires a high school degree plus apprenticeship in instrumentation maintenance or equivalent vocational technical degree. At least 5 years' experience as troubleshooter and repairman for industrial process control instrumentation, primarily in electronics.

Preference is given to those with training and experience on gas chromatographs, microprocessor controllers, digital control systems for combustion gas turbines and distributive control systems.

Shops Heat Exchanger Engineer Requires a BSME and 5 to 10 years' experience in the troubleshooting and repair of heat exchangers in a shop environment.

Shop Vibration Specialist Requires a BS in Engineering and 5 to 10 years' experience in rotating equipment, in particular electric motors and generators, pumps and compressors. You'll provide specialized technical assistance on complex vibration problems.

Shops Engineering Specialist Requires a BSME or BSEE and at least 5 years' experience on EDP systems utilizing knowledge of one or more programming languages. You need recent experience in the design, specification, purchase, installation, and start-up of a minor computer system. You will write, test, and document new EDP programs and major modifications to existing programs. In addition, you will function as a corporate expert on mechanical, electrical electronic repair techniques and procedures, including failure analysis and quality assurance.

Fleet Management Engineers Requires a BS in Engineering and 5 to 10 years' experience in construction equipment fleet management. You must be capable of sourcing from large construction firms and leasing companies.

Offshore Maintenance Engineer Requires a BS in Engineering and 5 to 10 years' experience in the maintenance of offshore platforms.

Excellent compensation and benefits

Besides career challenge, Aramco can provide a competitive base salary, cost-of-living differential and a very attractive expatriate premium. When you've arrived... Meadowpark

A planned unit development of exquisite patio garden homes. Each home is custom designed for the individual lot and is never duplicated.

Meadowpark residents will enjoy a great deal of room and privacy because of the very low density of the development. The cluster arrangement of Meadowpark restricts traffic flow on residential streets. On-Street parking is prohibited, so that streets become areas for family activities.

Recreation facilities include park area, playgrounds, tennis courts and swimming pool with cabana, bath house and deck area.

WELCOME HOME

The difference between Las Colinas in Trinity Estates and any other condominium community is the difference between mediocrity and excellence.

From the moment you set eyes on our surroundings, you'll know why we're something special. Dotted with professionally tended gardens, a sparkling pool, hot tubs and jogging trail. And secured by a private entry gate It's maintenance-free living at its finest.

Here is the home for which you've searched so long and hard. Choose now from our five distinctive one-bedroom, two-bedroom and two-bedroom with den, single-level and studio floor plans; each filled with intricate tiling; a dramatic fireplace; washer and dryer connections; and the charm of a private patio.

Many of our spacious condominiums include vaulted ceilings, balconies, and skylights. And of course, overhead, our exclusive concrete-tiled roofs in addition reflects uncompromising commitment to quality.

Hurry today for prices from the $70's to the $90's, with 13½% financing available for 5% down to qualified buyers. Las Colinas in Trinity Estates. As different as you are.

...that great American pastime

The sun is shining, the sky is blue, the air has a hint of heat in it — it's the perfect time to clean out the closets and get rid of some accumulated junk!

Spring-cleaning fever hits many of us just about the time the weather gets warm, and the natural outcome of a fit of spring cleaning seems to be a summer garage sale. After all, some of the stuff we want to get rid of is still in good shape. Might as well make a profit from it, right? As they say, one person's junk might be someone else's treasure.

Call it a garage sale, a backyard sale, a lawn sale or a carport sale, the idea is still the same. Someone wants to get rid of some things he or she can't use anymore, and someone else is out to find a bargain. In these days of high inflation and tight money, bargain-hunting is more than just a money-saving plan or a way to spend a pleasant summer afternoon. For many it is a way of life.

It goes like this — Closets, toyboxes and storage units are cleaned of all the stuff that isn't being used anymore. Everything is gathered together, labeled as to price and sometimes who is selling it. A date is picked for the sale. Tables and racks are found to display everything on. Signs are put up around town. Classified ads are put in the newspaper. When everything is ready, the garage/backyard/lawn/carport sale is open for business.

And bargains by the dozen can be found at these sales. Good used clothing, especially children's clothes that have been outgrown before they have been worn very much, dishes and other kitchen utensils, toys, records and books, furniture, lawn care items, bicycles, even motorcycles and automobiles can often be found for sale at a garage or backyard sale.

A certain amount of risk is involved both in having a sale and in shopping at one. For the seller, an item might get stolen or broken, a check might bounce. For the buyer, an item might not work the way it is supposed to. There is a rip-off factor on both sides of a sales transaction. But the risk is part of the fun, and if you know what you are looking for and are careful in anything you buy or sell, the backyard or garage sale can not only be an excellent method of stretching today's shrinking dollar, but can be a terrific amount of fun, too.

Backyard or garage sales have become a part of the American lifestyle. Veteran garage-sale sellers say that if a garage sale is set to begin at 8 a.m., people eager to check out the bargains might begin knocking on the door as early at 6:30 a.m. or 7 a.m.

Bargains are always nice to find, and for many saving money is the main reason to go to backyard sales. But to the connoisseur of the garage/backyard/lawn/carport sale, finding something unusual or valuable might be more important. Old books, records like the one you used to have but lost, even antiques are often among the items found for sale in someone's yard or garage.

And it can be a great way to spend a day in the sun and fresh air, and still be able to bring home something you can keep besides a sunburn.

Many different kinds of toys can be found for sale in somebody's garage or yard.

Furniture can often be found for sale at a backyard or garage sale. Marcia Leonhard and an assistant move a couch they have bought at a sale held recently at 4319 Tanner.

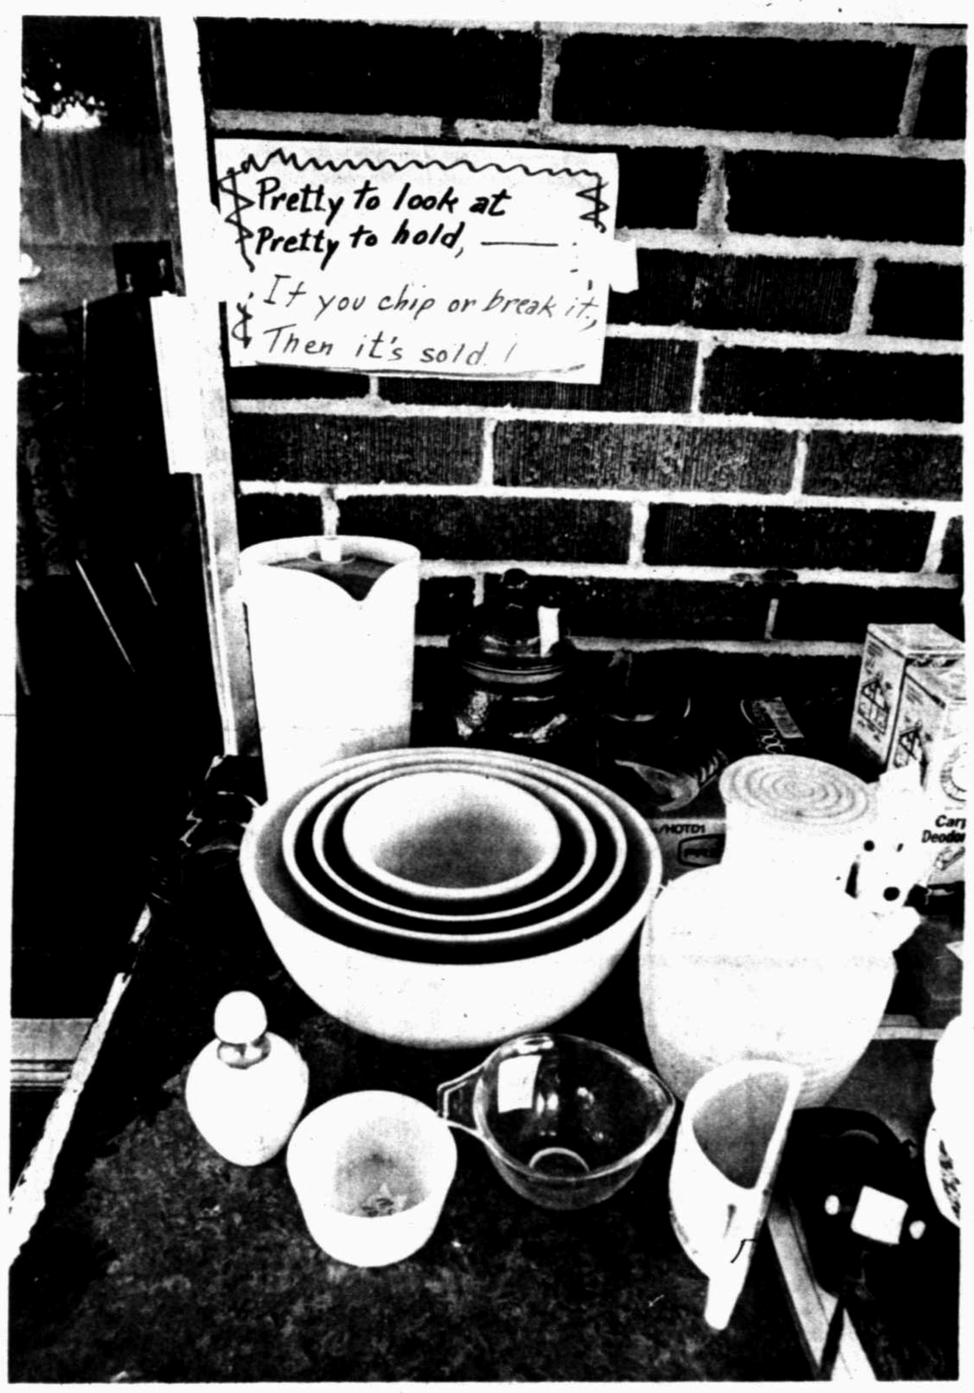
Billie Fulcher pays for a record album she purchased from Dorothy Kurtz at a sale at 4319 Tanner.



The risks involved for both the buyer and the seller at a backyard sale are often part of the fun. The breaking of items before the sale is final is one of the concerns of the seller, and this sign warns buyers of the result of something being broken.

A wide variety of items are offered for sale at a garage sale, sometimes including the car that was in the garage. This car, and all the things on the table, were recently featured at a sale on Commanche Street.

CHAPPELL HILL — Tracy Ann Bevers of Lubbock became the bride of Jeffrey Martin Kamprath, also of Lubbock, at 7 p.m. on July 24 at Chappell Hill United Methodist Church. The Rev. Mark McBrayer of Lubbock, director of Youth for Christ, officiated the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth H. Bevers of Chappell Hill, and Gerald Kamprath of Plano and Mrs. C. A. Schutze of Austin.

Rachel Frizzell of Lubbock was maid of honor and Susan Palm of Lubbock was bridesmaid.

Paul Kamprath of Austin, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Groomsman was Bryan South of Pampa.

Following a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple will live in Lubbock.

Spanish Falklands

In 1770 the British and the Spanish nearly went to war over their rival claims to the Falkland Islands. Britain won the negotiated right to make a settlement, but its colony left in 1774 and the Spanish moved in and ruled the islands for 40 years.

Profitable bank

In its 36 years of operations the World Bank has never suffered a default, and it doesn't reschedule loans. Its outstanding loans can't exceed its capital and reserves. In 1981 the bank's profit exceeded $600 million.

Mamie Weber-Gaver of Pittsburgh, Pa., acted as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lynn Alice Weber of Baltimore, sister of the bride, and Julie Bennett of Midland.

Brad Cox of Austin was best man. Groomsmen included Adam Ribera of Midland, brother of the bridegroom, and Edward Weber of Baltimore, brother of the bride. Hugh Rabotham of Midland was usher.

Pennsylvania breaks out in measles

ATLANTA (AP) — Inaccurate immunity records and ineffective administration of vaccinations contributed to a lengthy measles outbreak in Pennsylvania last year, the national Centers for Disease Control report.

The CDC said Thursday the Warren County, Pa., outbreak lasted more than eight weeks after clinics were set up to control the spread of the disease and vulnerable students were excluded from classes.

Measles transmission usually declines within two weeks after control measures are implemented.

Between September and December 1981, a total of 111 cases of measles were reported among school children and another 45 cases were reported in the community, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Forty-six of the student cases occurred more than two weeks after the control program began, even though school records indicated those students had been vaccinated more than two weeks before becoming ill, the CDC said. Thirteen of the 46 had been vaccinated at control-program clinics.

The CDC said school records should be verified by health-care providers when students first enter school.

"Proper handling of vaccine should not be taken for granted, and persons using vaccine should follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully," the CDC said.

1 in 4 imported

Passenger car sales in the United States in 1981 totaled 8.5 million, of which imports accounted for 2.3 million. Of the 2 million light trucks sold last year, nearly 450,000 were imports.

Caring: Group established for parents in grief

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Losing a child is perhaps the most tragic thing a parent can face. For many parents, the death of a child is their greatest nightmare. The grief is more devastating, and the sense of loss never disappears.

Parents who have lost a child through miscarriage, stillbirth or neonatal death suffer a very real grief, too, because not only have they lost a child, but they have lost a child they never really had time to know. They are grieving not only for the child, but also for the life that might have been and never was.

"Caring" is a support group, sponsored by the Junior League of Midland, specifically established for support and understanding for parents who have lost babies through miscarriage, stillbirth or neonatal death — parents of babies who die at less than two years of age.

MARSHA DAMERON is an instructor for Childbirth with Preparation of Texas, Inc., which gives parents classes in natural childbirth. She lost a son through neonatal death six years ago.

"I had problems with the pregnancy all along," she said. "I think if you get the idea there is a problem, it's easier to accept. I was in the hospital and was expecting something to happen, but it was still a surprise."

"Ours was a live birth — he lived for a day," Mrs. Dameron said. "But six years ago two-pounders weren't taken to Lubbock (to the neo-natal care unit) and doctors didn't have all the equipment (for saving tiny babies) that they do now. So I wasn't surprised — it's not like I was shocked like a lot of people are who haven't been having problems."

EVEN WITH THE KNOWLEDGE that something has been wrong during the entire pregnancy and that the baby would probably not survive because he was born too early, Mrs. Dameron still carries a sense of loss. "I delivered him on the Monday ater Mother's Day," she said. "And every year at Mother's Day I remember it."

The Damerons have a son, Beau, who is 7 and a daughter, Robin, who is 5. Mrs. Dameron said that when her baby died, Beau was one year old and still a baby himself. "I held Beau more. I was so grateful to have him," she said. "It was nice to have another baby there."

Robin was born about a year after the baby died. Mrs. Dameron said, "My doctor told me to wait three months and then try again. A lot of people I've talked to seem to think that works best — do it soon. Once you get past the point where you lost the baby you can breathe easier."

"I was excited about the pregnancy because we had planned it," she said. "And I think I was probably a little apprehensive and nervous. I think if you have had one problem pregnancy, you tend not to do anything because you are afraid it may cause problems. I was always looking for something to happen."

THE CARE, CONCERN and support of the doctor involved is important to parents in this kind of situation. Mrs. Dameron said her doctor's concern helped her through her pregnancy. "He watched me much more closely when I became pregnant again. That helped because it made me realize he was really interested. When there is a problem involved, you really turn to your doctor and really need his support."

In addition to her personal loss of a child, Mrs. Dameron, through her position as a natural childbirgh instructor, has spoken to many other women who have lost their babies very early and can understand the need these women have to talk about their losses.

"Back when I lost mine, there really wasn't anybody to talk to," she said. "At the time, not that many people talked about miscarriages and losing babies. I think it's hard for poeple who have not been through the experience to talk about it. They assume the mother doesn't want to talk about it."

MRS. DAMERON said that while the Caring group will not help everyone who has suffered this type of loss, it should be of very great value to many.

"I think mothers go through so many feelings — nobody else can experience what you feel except other women who have had the same thing you have," she said. "Your family is mainly concerned with you and a lot of the time they just don't understand. One thing the group will show is there are so many feelings, and it's okay, everyone else is feeling the same thing. That makes it easier to deal with. It takes talking to someone who has been through it."

"It's helpful for a woman who has just lost a baby to talk to someone who lost a baby and had another healthy baby," she added. "If talking about it can help another woman, I will. The grief never goes away."

JUDITH CAIN had a miscarriage 14 years ago when she was three months pregnant. "I was teaching archery and tennis at a little day camp. I knew what was happening and it was just a panic, trying to get to the hospital as soon as possible," she said.

Ms. Cain said that after her miscarriage she went through a period of intense grief without really realizing that what she was feeling was grief. "I was real emotional, I couldn't really put any thoughts together — no rational, continuing thoughts — I was jumpy and giddy, just real emotional."

"I spent that night in the hospital and went home the next day," she said. "That's when it pretty well hit. Right after I was released from the hopital, I wasn't feeling physically well but I couldn't be still — couldn't stay in the house or lie down, couldn't be peaceful. I'd get in the car and drive and drive and drive. When I'd feel so physically bad, I'd go home."

"After I went through that for about three or four days, I went into a depression where I just sat around," Ms. Cain went on. "I went back to teaching day camp, but I was real depressed. Nothing was fun anymore."

LIKE MANY OTHER MOTHERS, Ms. Cain said she had to work her way through her grief alone. "I really didn't have anybody to talk to about it. It took a while to come out of it — it didn't just go away. I would have loved to have somebody to help me through it, but I didn't know anybody. I read a lot about it, trying to find something positive to build on. Everytime I'd feel down, I'd try to put that postive thing in there."

"I didn't know I was grieving — I didn't know what was going on until I had done it," she said. "I didn't know why, I just had to do it. Sometime about a year after it happened, I was finally able to label it a grief process."

Ms. Cain did become pregnant after her miscarriage, and carried her baby successfully to term. She said when she was pregnant, she felt apprehension at first but, "after the three-month period, I was sure everything would be alright."

THE GRIEF A PARENT FEELS after losing a child through miscarriage usually becomes less in time. "The emotional turmoil subsides, the grief subsides," said Ms. Cain, "Everytime I think about it, it's still just a permanent loss that nothing can ever fill in. But I don't grieve anymore. It's no traumatic big thing and hasn't been for years, but there's still that gap there."

Grief felt after a miscarriage is natural, Ms. Cain said, "and you should go with the way you feel — go with your grief, go with your anger, put yourself first and get it out. Find someone to talk to, so you do most of the talking, and get it out."

"It was helpful to me to read," she said. "I wasn't into any sort of self-awareness at all, I just did what I did. I think it would have been a whole lot easier if I had had someone to talk to."

"I don't think you have a choice about grieving — the sooner you can get it out the better off you'll be," Ms. Cain said. "That's why this type of group will be of so much benefit — because a lot of poeple don't really know what they're going through or why."

KATIE TEVINGTON has also suffered loss through miscarriage. She and her husband have two children, a daughter of 7 and a son who is nearly 3, and she is five months pregnant with their third child.

"At the time of the actual miscarriage I was in a lot of pain and I knew it wasn't normal, but I wasn't expecting it (the miscarriage)," she said.

"I didn't have anyone to talk to afterwards, and I didn't realize the feelings of anger, of guilt, of grief were normal because I didn't realize I was going through the grief process," she said. "And for several months I thought I was losing my mind."

Being unable to communicate with someone who understands can be frustrating for a woman after she has had a miscarriage. "I had a miscarriage and nobody would talk about it," Mrs. Tevington said. "People would stay away from me and ignore me in droves."

"I didn't like to be around pregnant women afterwards — I got mad at them. I got totally, unrealistically angry with pregnant women," she added.

SHE SAID THAT WHILE the feeling of guilt over a miscarriage is something many women experience, "it's totally unrealistic to relive over and over 'What could I have done to save my child?'."

"Still, deep down inside I sometimes feel 'I wonder what I could have done?'," she added. "Since then I have read that guilt is a normal part of the grieving process. The realization that guilt is a normal thing helps me realize everyone of us women feel guilty and we can't all be guilty."

Mrs. Tevington added, "I do not understand why these things happen, but if I can't accept the fact that these things are in the hands of God, I should stop calling myself a Christian."

THE TEVINGTONS are expecting their third child in a few months, and Mrs. Tevington said the fact that she has previously miscarried causes her concern. "But it's a matter of we love children and think that we're good parents, and it's a matter of trusting God for the outcome," she said. "One thing I've learned — I've come to the realization that I don't own these children and they are people that God has blessed me with for a certain period of time. That realization has made me a much better parent."

FAITH IN GOD supported Mrs. Tevington through this pain, and made it a "maturing experience as opposed to a distructive one," she said.

While the grief will lessen with tine, the sense of loss will never go away. "The child is important to you, the loss hurts you — I don't think you ever get over the loss, but it stops being a constant pain," said Mrs. Tevington. "You accept the fact that it happened. The feelings of anger and guilt stop hurting you. You're left with an empty place, but it's not like a big void. There will always be that child that is not going to be there. I think you go through a period of time and deal with these feelings and accept the feelings and eventually you can come to the point that it's no longer painful."

Mrs. Tevington became pregnant with her son a month ater her miscarriage. "I don't think one child ever replaces another, but it was a comfort to me to have my son born — he was conceived a month ater my miscarriage. I found that in being pregnant I looked forward more than back."

GRIEF AND LOSS after a miscarriage are not always experienced only by the mother. Mrs. Tevington said, "My husband definitely grieved about the child and the loss was definitely real to him. He grieved about the child and he grieved about me. It always hurts more when you see someone you love in pain and you think, 'Why can't I do that for her?'."

Mrs. Tevington is able to look back on her loss now without the immediate sense of grief, but she went through months of pain to reach that point. "I think what I needed was to know that I wasn't alone, and it took me months to come to that realization — and that could have taken weeks if I'd had support like the group gives. I needed to know that I hadn't killed my baby, that nothing was wrong with me as a woman, and that the feelings I was experiencing were normal and acceptable. I needed to know there was a light at the end of the tunnel — that I would recover emotionally. If there had been a Caring kind of group, they would have helped me realize I was sane and normal."

THESE THREE WOMEN are all different and their stories are all different. But each experienced the need to talk of her grief at the loss of her child. All stated that a support group would have helped them get through the grief and pain.

Caring is this kind of support group. Parents who have lost children through neonatal death, stillbirth or miscarriage can receive understanding and help through the group, which is sponsored by Junior League of Midland.

ALAN SCHROEDER, director of social work at Midland Memorial Hospital, and group leader for Caring, said, "The group will provide open discussion about a personal and unique experience, and provide information that will clarify the grieving experience. It will provide education through sharing, will provide expression and direction useful for people to know that what they are feeling is not clinical depression, it is normal depression."

Fathers as well as mothers may find the group helpful in recovering from their grief. Schroeder said, "Men deal with their grief in a different way. Women are more sensitive and more in tune to their feelings, and may be able to go through their grief in a more open way." He said that even though fathers may feel a tremendous sense of loss, they may tend to hold their grief in and try not to let it show.

"A lot of people may not even know they are in the state of grief. The husband involved may try to deal with it on an intelligent level and not really talk about it much. He may go through periods of moods that are part of the bereavement process and may not even know that's what he's doing," Schroeder added.

TRINKE TAYLOR, Junior League liason for Caring, said that often a woman will blame herself for the loss of the baby — she will feel that something she has done or has not done has caused her baby's death. "But women can't cause miscarriage," she said. "If they could there wouldn't be so many seeking abortions — they could do it themselves!"

"People were more private about this sort of thing until a few years ago," Mrs. Taylor said. "I think people need to talk about it. It's nice to have a group where you're supposed to talk about it."

"There may be people the group will not be for," she said. "People have to go through their grief in their own way and they must determine who they will talk to. No amount of support groups will help them decide how they want to grieve and who they want to grieve with."

CARING MEETS the first Tuesday of each month from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Parish Hall of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois. The services offered by the group are free. Refreshments are served and children are welcome.

The next meeting of Caring is Tuesday, Aug. 3.

Doctors test artifical blood

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A milky yellow substance used to replace blood effectively carries oxygen through the human circulatory system and could offer the chance of survival for those who refuse blood transfusions for religious reasons, doctors say.

A study directed Dr. Kevin K. Tremper at UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles and published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, said the first major U.S. experiment with the artificial blood was a success.

The report described the effects of the man-made blood substitute on Jehovah's Witnesses who refused to receive ordinary transfusions.

The blood substitute, called Fluosol, was developed in Japan and is being used in the United States under Food and Drug Administration guidelines..

Fluosol is one of a group of substances known as perfluorochemicals that can carry oxygen, a major function of blood.

"It appears there is a future for perfluorochemical emulsions as a temporary treatment for inadequate oxygen transport," the researchers concluded.

Thirteen people have received Fluosol in the United States since 1979. The treatment is available only for those who refuse blood transfusions during emergency medical and surgical treatment. Jehovah's Witnesses say the Bible prohibits the use of another's blood.

The doctors found the Fluosol transported about 18 percent of the consumed oxygen carried in the arteries of three men and two women who were severely anemic and in need of surgery.

Although this volume of oxygen is relatively small, the doctors said it "may mean the difference between survival and death."

"All the patients were in objectively improved condition and consequently had an increased margin of safety for their surgical procedures," the doctors wrote.

The researchers found that tissues are able to use oxygen more readily when it is delivered by Fluosol than by hemoglobin. Because of the substance's unique properties, they said it may be useful in treating carbon monoxide poisoning, heart attacks and sickle cell crisis.

But Fluosol is far from the real thing. It only takes the place of hemoglobin, the part of red cells that carries oxygen. Important ingredients, including infection-fighting white cells and clot-forming platelets are missing.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

CRAIG MINOR

Inner Peace lecturer to speak at Midland Center

By CAROLYN NEWBOLD
Lifestyle Editor

Former rancher turned lecturer and practitioner in the arts of ESP, clairvoyance, and psychic development is Craig Minor, who will speak Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Room 1, Midland Center.

After growing up in the Altus, Okla. area, Minor decided a rancher's life was not for him and turned to the Inner Peace Movement for a career as international lecturer, professor at Americanna Leadership College and ordained minister with Peace Community Church in Washington, D.C.

According to Minor the IPM is not a religious movement, nor does it conflict with any organized religion. "We simply help people to develop themselves, and learn to focus their energy in the right way," he said.

Minor explained that anyone can afford the program — his Tuesday lecture will cost $3, and for those who are interested he will return later for a longer session which will cost $10. Materials such as tapes, printed matter, etc. are extra and may or may not be purchased at the discretion of the participant.

Minor has traveled Europe, the South Pacific, Canada, and the Caribbean in his tours for IPM. "All kinds of people are involved in the program — you find PhD's, young, old, women and men," he explained.

"My first lecture will be basic — it will help a person to know where he is going. The second will teach the student about mental telepathy, auras, and healing," said Minor.

The most successful people are those who use ESP to their own advantage, according to the lecturer.

When he talks about ESP and psychic powers, Minor said he did not mean the type of thing people associate with Jeanne Dixon. Psychic power is the sixth sense that many people may know they possess in addition to the physical senses of sight, hearing, smell, taste and touch, he said.

For those who would like to learn to find their own answers to problems, and develop their own powers, Minor's Tuesday lecture may provide just the right solution.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Makeup tips

DEAR LADIES:

I have been traveling a lot lately, doing television shows, etc., and have met some wonderful makeup artists who taught me nifty tricks that I can't wait to pass along to you.

Seems like lip pencils, eye pencils or eye crayons are all THE thing, but you have to know how to treat them properly.

One good tip that I got from a man in Los Angeles is to keep them in the refrigerator when you're not using them. If you live in a particularly warm area where they can get real mushy and are hard to sharpen, put them in the refrigerator, even the freezer, before you sharpen them, then you won't have any problem.

The second tip is that when you're using an eye pencil for color, put the color on your eyelid, then to smudge it, put the cap back on the pencil and gently use the cap part to slightly smudge the crayon color so it will look even and not like a straight line. This way you don't have to waste a cotton swab or get your fingers all messy.

Also, best tip of all: For women who "eat" their lipstick off their lips and complain that it never stays on (a lot of us are now using lip glosses and they aren't lipsticks like they used to be a long time ago), use a lip pencil, not just to outline your lips, but to go over the entire lip area. Then put your lipstick on over this and it will last a lot longer.

I'll be passing along a few more hints that I've picked up from experts in the makeup field which I think you will be able to use. So, keep an eye out for them in the next two or three weeks. — Heloise

QUIET OVERALLS

Dear Heloise: When I'm doing laundry, I put the metal ends of the straps on my son's overalls in one of the back pockets and pin it with a large safety pin.

Keeps them from banging around in the washer and dryer. — E.C. Thomas

MOVING ALONG

Dear Heloise: When we moved, I bought several boxes of large plastic garbage bags on sale.

I cleaned everything as I packed, and then put them in the plastic bags, securing them closed.

Everything was clean and ready to be put in place in the new house. The garbage bags were folded and ready for their intended use. — Virginia Graddy

WADING POOL

Dear Heloise: Instead of dumping the kids' wading pool every day because of leaves, grass, etc., take a colander, large sifter or strainer and use it to scoop out the debris.

This is great for the child that won't stay in the pool but loves to get in and out. — D.J.

HOLD THE PITS!

Dear Heloise: My family loves avocados fixed any way, but they can be expensive at times, so I hate to see any go to waste.

I recently learned that if you will leave the avocado seed in the dish of avocado dip, or whatever dish you use it in, the seed will keep the avocado from turning brown.

Hard to believe? It works! — A. Ryder

+ + +

Well, every Mexican-food cook I talked to said 'yep'! — Heloise

DUSTING EXTENSION

Dear Heloise: Because I am short, I always had a hard time sweeping dust from the corners of the ceiling.

Then my husband took a feather duster and, with heavy tape, fastened it to a lightweight broom handle.

It's really easy to do now. — Vera Gillen

+ + +

If you have an easy housekeeping hint or a problem write Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer individual letters, much as she'd like to, but she'll publish the best tips and try to solve your problems through her column whenever possible.

New medication delivery system

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Medicines to be worn like a bandage, or like a contact lens to replace eyedrops, slow-release medicines that last for days or years, and medicines that target just the part of the body that needs them, are part of a fast-growing revolution in pharmacy.

"These new systems make use of the skin or other ports of entry into the body," Dr. Yie W. Chien, a research professor at the Rutgers University College of Pharmacy said of the new drug delivery system. "But their essence is that they deliver medication far more efficiently than conventional drugs administered orally or by injection."

DEAR ABBY

Buttoned-down husband needs to loosen up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for five months to a man I went with for only three months.

While dating, he said he didn't believe in premarital sex. I thought I was lucky to find a guy who didn't insist on sex before marriage. Now I know why! He doesn't like to kiss, touch, fondle, caress or express any kind of emotion during lovemaking.

At first I thought it was just shyness, so I tried being patient for the first month or so. It didn't work. I've been married before and I'm quite experienced, so I tried different approaches to warm him up. Still nothing. He doesn't care for any kissing or foreplay. He goes right into the main event, and it's all over as soon as he's satisfied. Not a thought about me. Meanwhile he insists that he really loves me.

I am so starved for some real affection I'm ready to grab the first guy I see and ask him to kiss me and make me feel like a real woman.

I've talked to my priest, and he told me to talk to my husband. I have, and he just says, "Sorry. I don't like to hug and kiss."

What now? — TOTALLY FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Face it, your husband is sexually immature, hung up and naive. That's forgivable, but his unwillingness to try to overcome it in order to please you shows a selfishness that could be fatal to your marriage.

Obviously a healthy sex life is important to you. If your husband really loves you, he will agree to get the kind of therapy he needs to make you happy. If he refuses, you will either have to settle for a hung-up husband, or hang up the marriage.

DEAR ABBY: As with many of your correspondents, I am writing to you as a last resort. You see, my best friends tell me and my doctor confirms that I have developed sexagenarianism, and no one seems to care. My doctor advises that this condition is debilitating but does not expect it to be fatal. On the other hand, he says that there is no known cure but that it usually runs its course and goes away in 10 years' time.

With your extensive resources, can you find a healer anywhere who can cure this condition? And I hope that you care. — BILL IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR BILL: Sexagenarianism is never fatal. However, it does develop into "septuagenarianism" within 10 years — but neither is that fatal, so hang in there, Bill.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your standard (but outdated) advice on tipping barbers and beauticians — providing they do NOT own the shop:

It used to be customary not to tip the owners, but times have changed. We owners have the same bills and pressures as our employees. In most cases, we need the money to stay in business so that our employees can keep their jobs. I hope this old-fashioned custom of not tipping the owner is dropped soon. — BEAUTICIAN AND OWNER

DEAR BEAUTICIAN: My advice has been, "Offer a tip." If it is refused because the operator owns the shop, rejoice — you're that much more ahead!

Is prostitution 'victimless crime'?

By NATHAN M. ADAMS
(Special from Reader's Digest)

They call themselves "players." But their business — the sale of human bodies — is no game. Indeed, for the thousands of young girls trapped each year in the world of the pimp, life becomes a nightmare of empty promises, indescribable misery and brute terror. And sometimes death.

Yet many authorities still consider prostituion a "victimless" crime and thus a minor offense. Because of this, official records don't begin to reflect the true price these men exact in human suffering. What are they really like, these "players"? Here is the true profile of one:.

Laura Weedin (not her real name) was 19 and an unhappy girl.

She had dropped out of college in 1976 and returned home to Montana to seek work. But by the following summer, she still had not found a decent job. Within a short period, her boyfriend had left her, and both her grandmother and her pet dog had died. Even the mountains seemed to be closing in.

Laura was introduced to Albert ("Kit") Breach by a friend. The next day, she met him again at a local discotheque. After several dances together, the two sat down. Smoothly, Kit probed for weaknesses.

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG to discover that Laura was discouraged with her life. Kit also found out that she was a cellist. Had she ever attended a concert at Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, in Washington, D.C.? he asked her. Had she ever thought about studying music in Europe? He understood her he said, because he was a musician himself.

Laura laughed and shook her head. She was not that naive. "Come on," she said, "you're a pimp."

Kit nodded. Yes, he admitted. Did it bother her? Did it bother her that he was black and she was white? "Not really," Laura hastened to assure him.

THEY SAW EACH OTHER several times over the next few days. At last, Kit proposed that she accompany him back to Washington. She would be his "bottom lady," managing the earnings and activities of his girls. She might even do a little modeling.

His proposal was so implausible, so outrageous,and he was so charming, that she found it compelling: a walk on the wild side. Incredibly, she also found herself falling in love with Kit Breach.

ONE WEEK AFTER MEETING HIM, in Aug. 1977, Laura got into her car and followed Breach's Lincoln Continental onto the interstate heading east.

Had she been able to scan the "pimp files" maintained by detectives of the District of Columbia's Vice Squad, Laura would have reconsidered her decision to leave Montana. In the case of Breach, the file would disclose a chilling record of brutality, greed and near-total disregard for human dignity.

BREACH WASTED NO TIME in introducing Laura and two other girls recruited in Montana to their new life. En route to Chicago, one of the young women escaped and returned home. But Laura and the remaining girl, Barbara, were forced to solicit truck drivers at motels and roadhouses.

This was nothing compared to what awaited them in Chicago. Setting up operations in a downtown hotel, Breach ordered the two girls to walk the city streets each night until they had earned $250 apiece. During the first week, Laura was beaten repeatedly. By the end of September, the two girls had turned over to Breach an estimated $30,000.

BACK IN WASHINGTON, Breach rented an apartment for Laura and Barbara and immediately ordered them out onto the street. They were also required to pose for pornographic photographs. Both were soon arrested by District vice officers. But when asked to supply the name of their pimp, the terrified girls refused.

Shortly before Christmas, Laura's disillusionment finally gelled. She began to hoard some of her earnings and called her cousin to say she would be home by her birthday, Jan. 26. She never made it. At five o'clock on the morning of Jan. 17, 1979, Laura Weedin was pronounced dead of multiple stab wounds.

IT WAS BREACH HIMSELF who had brought Laura to the hospital emergency, and homicide investigators soon considered him the prime suspect.

According to police, Laura had returned to her apartment early that morning after work. Breach walked in and surprised her.

Why had she taken the chance of returning? Laura had gone back to collect the one possession Breach had permitted her: a basset-hound puppy. And it had cost her her life.

ON AUG. 22, 1979, Breach was indicted on 19 counts including pandering, assault with a dangerous weapon and second-degree murder.

But there would be no trial. On Sept. 24, 1980, the murder charge was dropped. Soon afterward, a plea bargain was negotiated: In return for a guilty plea to two of the lesser charges — pandering and simple assault — all other charges would be dropped.

The judge gave Breach the maximum sentence allowable under the law: five years. With time off for the months already served while awaiting disposition of his case, Breach would be eligible for parole in a year.

WAS THE LAW'S "MESSAGE" heard by other pimps on the streets of the nation? Chances are, it was heard loud and clear.

Enclosed courtyard featured in Parade of Homes entry

The Glenn Pine Construction 1982 Parade of Homes entry will feature raised ceilings, an enclosed private courtyard and a special glass front door.

Located at 2102 Wydewood, the Pine home will be among 30 on display Aug. 21-29. The parade, sponsored by the Midland Homebuilders Association, will benefit Christmas In April. Tickets are $2 to tour all 30 homes, and tickets will be available at the gate. The parade will be open 12 noon to 10 p.m.

Pine's spacious living area features a 10-foot ceiling, recessed lighting to accent the height, a firepalce with a tiled hearth and a wet bar with smoked glass mirror and shelves.

A raised ceiling and a mirrored wall complete the atmosphere in the formal dining room.

The master bedroom has a sloped ceiling and a white and brass ceiling fan. A veiw of the enclosed courtyard is provided by spacious windows. Earth tones complete the color scheme throughout the 1809 square foot home.

Warm greens and cheery yellows accent the modern kitchen which also features custom cabinets and recessed lighting.

The home has three bedrooms, two luxurious bathrooms, and a two-car garage.

David Hail is the Parade of Homes chairperson for 1982. The parade is located in the Wydewood addition of Midland, which is west of Midland Drive just off Neely Avenue.

Implantable insulin pump researched

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A small pump, implanted in the bodies of diabetics to provide needed doses of insulin, improves the control of blood sugar in patients who previously needed daily shots to remain healthy, a study shows.

"A frequent comment was that this pump was 'forgettable' and allowed them a more normal lifestyle," doctors who tested the pump wrote in a report published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Doctors at the University of Minnesota and Massachusetts General Hospital have tested the device, shaped like a hockey puck, on five diabetics. All the patients said they had no desire to resume taking regular injections of insulin.

The patients were all victims of adult-onset diabetes, a disorder in which the pancreas fails to make enough insulin to convert sugar to energy.

Diabetes affects as many as 10 million Americans, and contributes to the deaths of an estimated 300,000 people annually. Diabetics are also prone to blindness, kidney disorders and heart disease.

The patients used the pump for an average of seven months without malfunctions or adverse side effects. The doctors found that their blood sugar levels were improved. Patients must refill the pumps every seven to 10 days by injecting fresh insulin with a needle through the skin.

"It was better than previous treatment, and I would say it's obviously better than the average adult-onset diabetic on insulin gets," said Dr. Perry J. Blackshear of Massachusetts General, one of the researchers.

He said it may be possible to achieve even better sugar control than the pump provides if people take several injections daily.

The device, called an Infusaid pump, has previously been used to administer morphine, drugs for the treatment of cancer and heparin, a medicine that prevents blood clots. Doctors said it is still experimental for diabetics, and it will not be widely available for several years.

AT WIT'S END

'Visitors Fever' victims

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are only two incentives I know for cleaning a house: You're going to sell it or you're expecting house guests.

Of the two, the latter is the more compelling. I have seen women postpone death to move refrigerators, paint the insides of closets and buff the driveway.

There is something about letting people see the way we really live that starts the adrenalin.

With me, I don't want people to think I use the kitchen for cooking, so I clear EVERYTHING off the counter top. The can opener, the salt and pepper, the canisters, the paper towels. Everything goes until I get the effect I'm looking for: a sterile recovery room.

I'm also big on bathrooms being color coordinated and comfortable — like you're going to be spending a day or two hanging around the sink.

Anticipating needs is another one of my strong suits. In the guest room, I put cold tablets, Ace bandages, flashlight, mouthwash, dental floss, shampoo, a deck of cards and a list of emergency phone numbers. (There's no phone in the guest room.) I have no idea why I do this.

Maybe because everyone does it. When we visited our in-laws in Florida a few years ago a sign flapped on the front door that read "THIS HOUSE IS CLEAN! We've worked like dogs in this place for three days. Please notice the return air vents that have been vacuumed." Signed, The Management.

Probably the most extreme case of Visitors Fever I have ever witnessed was a few summers ago when I visited relatives in the Midwest. An uncle met me in the center of town to direct me to the house. "You've got to do something about those women," he said, "They're killing themselves."

The house was quiet when we got there. Blooming flowers lined the walk, the roots still square from the plastic pots. The pile of trash in the garage was stacked high with new carpet remnants, discarded boxes that held kitchen tile and light fixtures. Inside the odor of wallpaper paste and paint permeated the air. A WET PAINT sign lined the stairway. One aunt was screwing a chrome towel bar in the bathroom wall, while the other one hung shower curtains from a box.

They looked up startled, "We're just picking up a bit."

"Then I'll just hang up my old rags," I said. I put down the piece of luggage with the price tag still on it and the keys still on the handle and unpacked a brand new wardrobe, including underwear.

We're all alike.

Cleaning stone fireplace

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. My family closed the flue on the fireplace and my natural stone facing is covered with dark smoke stain. Would you please give me the solution and method for cleaning the stone. — Sandra C.

A. Scrub the surface with a stiff brush and a solution of trisodium phosphate, using two pounds to a gallon of warm water. Then rinse with clear water to remove all trace of the cleaner.

Or use fine steel wool and a strong detergent or mechanic's hand soap containing sand, followed by ample rinsing with clear water to remove all trace of the cleaner.

Cleaning and etching preparations for masonry surfaces are also available at large hardware stores and masonry supply dealers. Get the kind not containing muriatic acid and follow label directions carefully.

Q. Because the paint peels off my wooden porch steps, I must repaint every year. The wood in the steps is still in fair condition, except for a few slight cracks.

Is there a sealer or undercoat I could use to correct this? — Barry J.K.

A. The paint is probably peeling because of moisture from the ground rising up through the wood. If possible, vents should be provided at the sides for ventilation and air circulation.

To prevent ground moisture from rising, cover the area below the steps with overlapping strips of moisture and vaporproof building paper or polyethylene plastic. If the ground is level, heavy rocks are enough to seal the seams; otherwise use roofing cement.

Allow several dry days for thorough drying of the wood on the underside before repainting the steps. Aluminum paint is excellent for the underside of the steps to keep out moisture.

Cracks should be filled with white lead thinned with linseed oil, a crack filler or plastic wood. Cracks too narrow to be filled should have linseed oil run into them. Painting should be done after the filler has dried.

Q. Frame pictures have hung on our papered walls for some years and on taking them down to change to smaller sizes, and also to relocate several, I find that an area roughly the size of the hanging picture shows up prominently.

What causes this, and is there any way to correct it, other than repapering the rooms.? — I.M.B.

A. The cause, mainly is lack of air circulation back of the pictures, plus a deposit of fine dust and the fact that the paper fades more slowly in the shaded, protected areas. Much the same thing happens when a picture hangs on a wooden wall, except that the wood tends to remain lighter in the shaded area, rather than appearing darker.

Much can be done to reduce the prominence of spots by going over the affected areas with a wallpaper cleaner. After this has been done, it will be up to you to decide whether the remaining discoloration warrants repapering.

When rehanging the pictures, drive two brads at the lower corners of each frame, permitting the heads to project about one-fourth inch. This will permit air circulation and minimize the collection of fine dust on the wall back of the pictures.

Home financing difficult

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A recent study by the U.S. League of Savings Associations points up the difficulties people have these days in swinging the purchase of a house.

In 1979, when a similar study was made, a buyer needed, at the least, an annual income of $28,000 to consider getting a house. In 1981, the necessary income had jumped to $39,000. Today, when prices and mortgage-interest rates are still up and, in some cases, even higher, the problems have increased.

Lenders have adapted to changing economic circumstances by offering various kinds of adjustable mortgage loans, sometimes even charging a premium for fixed-rate loans. One of these adjustable plans calls for a lower payment rate in the early years of the loan, based on the theory that young couples usually cannot afford as large monthly payments at the start as they can later on when, presumably, their jobs provide them with more income.

Considering that type of mortgage loan, it was interesting to read an article the other day in the Long Island Builder, a trade publication, about an opposite kind of mortgage loan being used in several provinces of Canada. It is designed for people who can afford to pay about 8 percent more a year in mortgage payments. In this plan, weekly rather than monthly payments are made. What do they get for it? They can cut their 25-year loan term to 13 years and, in the process, save more than $100,000.

The idea is that, by paying more money on the loan during the early years, the reduction of the principal has the most impact. A Canadian publication, which the Long Island Builder quotes, gives this example: With a $70,000 25-year mortgage, payments at 18 percent interest would be $1,026 monthly or $12,213 annually. Under the 52-week payment plan, payments are $256 or $13,338 over 12 months. The extra four weeks of payments reduce the principal so the mortgage loan is paid in 13 years rather than 25. That saves 12 years of payments, which saves the homeowner an amazing $147,804.

As of now, the plan is being used only by a minority of lenders. For one thing, the volatility of interest rates has made some banks, credit unions and trust companies a bit leery of such an arrangement. For another, only a limited number of house purchasers can afford to get involved in an idea in which they have to make larger mortgage-loan payments.

But Malcolm Ingram, mortgage manager for the Toronto Dominion Bank, has come up with an interesting suggestion. He says the Astra Savings and Credit Union in Winnipeg has its customers put their weekly payments into a savings account before it is transferred to the mortgage loan. Why he asks, can't homeowners set up their own version of the plan?

Ingram says that with the cooperation of the lender, they could make 52 weekly deposits into a savings account, paying the loan at the agreed time each month. The weekly amount would be equal to one-fourth of a monthly payment. At the end of the year, they would have paid the equivalent of 13 months. The effect would be to reduce the principal faster than the regular way and cut the time of the mortgage loan almost in half.

In all such innovative plans, a "bug" or two develops after a period of time. So may this one. Meanwhile, it is now offered in the provinces of Quebec, Ontarioa and Manitoba, and seems to be gaining adherents.

Cornish hens: The low-sodium way

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Nowadays many cooks who plan low-sodium meals are using freshly grated lemon rind and freshly squeezed lemon juice plus such spices as dry mustard and curry powder to give flavor to poultry. We did just that recently when we baked Rock Cornish hens — and they were good tasting indeed.

LEMON-SPICE CORNISH HENS

4 fresh cornish hens (each 1¼ to 1½ pounds)
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 tablespoon honey
Grated rind and juice of 1 medium-size lemon
1 large clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon curry powder

Wash and dry hens; with string, tie together the drumsticks of each; turn wings back akimbo fashion.

In a small bowl stir together the salad oil, honey, grated lemon rind, lemon juice, garlic, mustard and curry powder; brush some of mixture over hens.

In a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking dish arrange the hens. Pour the remaining oil-honey mixture over them. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, basting occasionally, until tender — about 1 hour. Remove string from drumsticks. Place hens on individual hot plates. Skim fat from drippings in pan and pour remainder over hens. Serve at once.

Makes 4 servings.

The living room has been abandoned by many families in favor of a family room. However, it is usually the living room that tends to receive the most concerted decorating effort of any room in the home. Its furniture is, typically, the most expensive as well. These facts should not exclude its use and enjoyment. To the contrary, the room should be lived in. Forbidding, hushed living rooms should be warmed with favorite objects. Textured fabrics and comfortable looking furniture should invite family and guests into the room for days and evenings of conversation and relaxation.

We invite you to visit BEVERLY HILLS INTERIORS INC., No 3 Oakridge Square, 686-9607 for all your decorating needs. Add a tranquil essence to the rhythm of your life with a flowing waterfall or stream, built to your specifications, in the living room or foyer. Wall landscaping including the utilization of natural stone and wood for interiors is one of our specialties. Let us assist you with all your needs at BEVERLY HILLS INTERIORS INC.

DECORATING TIP:

The focal point of a living room can often center on the warmth of the fireplace.

William Chesser concentrates on making the perfect design with a fork and some clay.

Sometimes learning means getting your hands dirty.

The hands of a child

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Kids like to do things with their hands, and given almost any object, can usually turn it into something else — empty boxes become forts, cardboard tubes from paper towel rolls become telescopes, shoeboxes become cars and wrinkled-up paper becomes a road map.

Kids like to play with moldable things, too. Making cookies with Mom is more fun than just licking out the bowl. Playing in the mud is one of the pleasures of childhood that has been enjoyed by countless generations of kids. And high up on the list of Fun Things To Do for most kids is making things out of clay.

Clay and kids just naturally seem to go together. Clay can be squished in your hands. Clay can be made into boats, dolls, hats, trucks — just about anything in the world can be molded out of clay in the hands of a child. What if this natural ability to model with clay is used to make something that the child can keep and treasure for years?

The children on this page are participating in the Ceramics class offered by the Museum of the Southwest's Children's Summer Workshop. These kids are designing their own creations out of ceramic modeling clay. Bowls, cups, coiled bowls, animals, even a tarantula — anything a child's imagination can dream up — are some of the items they made.

Jane Posey, museum educational coordinator, said the children were guided in what kind of objects to make, but the shapes and designs are all original, like the children who made them, and no two are exactly alike.

"Some of things are useful, some are decorative things," she said. "One project was making different types of imaginary animals, and one was making dime banks."

Suzy Ervin, teacher of the Ceramics class, has a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in Ceramics from Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls. She said, "The clay used in Ceramics class is a different type of clay than what the kids are used to using — it is more delicate."

The kids' creations are being taken this week to the kiln at Mikeworth Ceramics in Midland, where they will be fired. Ms. Ervin said that once the items are fired, they are as hard as stone.

Modeling clay made for children can be mixed with other toys, can get lost in the bottom of the toy box, can be left in the sun to melt. But the objects made by the kids in the Ceramics class out of the special ceramics clay will be fired into a hard, permanent form for the kids and their families to enjoy for years to come.

And these kids might have learned a skill from this class that they can enjoy for the rest of their lives.

Similarity may 'breed' infertility

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Couples who have too much in common may find themselves unable to have children, according to researchers at the University of Michigan Women's Hospital.

An ongoing study indicates "too great a similarity in the genetic makeup and tissues of unrelated husbands and wives can cause healthy fetuses to abort naturally and spontaneously," says Dr. Alan E. Beer, chairman of the hospital's obstetrics and gynecology department.

Beer said, however, the genetic problem that has prevented these normal births can be solved through relatively simple medical treatment, which involves vaccinating the wife with a blood component from her husband.

Teachers take lesson in instructing handicapped

By CHARLES C. HARDY
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The girl in the wheelchair, a victim of cerebral palsy, was today's lesson for 23 veteran teachers enrolled in a summer training program at the University of California at Berkeley.

Handicapped youngsters are sometimes placed in regular classrooms — a process called mainstreaming — and the girl had suggestions to make that an easier experience for all concerned.

She cautioned teachers to consider a student's disability in making seating assignments. She suggested that disabled youngsters be given help in understanding school rules. And she recommended that handicapped students be given the opportunity to answer questions about their disability from fellow students.

The need for retraining is great, educators say, because teacher turn-over is near an all-time low and teacher age is increasing as fewer people enter the profession. In addition, in times when schools are losing ground financially and cutting specialized teachers, counselors and other support staff, the role of generalist teachers is expanding. And, correspondingly, so must their abilities.

"Teachers are getting older," said Leonard Orloff, the director of staff development for schools in Maryland's Montgomery County. "The average teacher today went through school without ever having a computer mentioned, without knowing a great many things we know now. Teachers are almost required to continue to educate themselves if they're going to do a good job of teaching."

Orloff said the 7,500-teacher district had 3,000 credit course slots filled last year. Staff development, says Orloff, "occupies an important role because there are fewer turnovers among teachers. There was a time when a 16 percent turnover in the teaching staff was typical. Now, the turnover in teaching is perhaps 7 percent, and that is primarily through retirement."

A few school districts are beginning to require teachers to attend training sessions and provide relief teachers during their regular hours. But for the most part, training remains a voluntary act.

"They're coming here to improve themselves," said William Riggle, director of the 16-year-old UC-Berkeley Summer Program for Teachers, "and paying for the brunt of it." In the past, said Riggle, school districts often paid for a group of teachers to learn new reading methods and to refresh themselves in other areas.

Bacteria found in pudding

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Bacteria that can cause food poisoning has been found in some Cambridge Plan chocolate and vanilla diet puddings, and the manufacturer says it will recall the contaminated products.

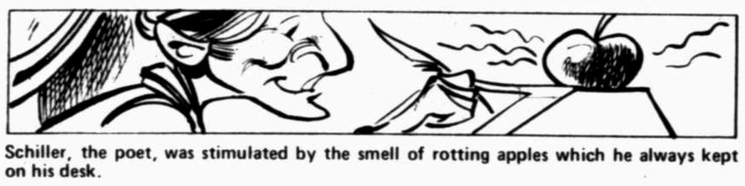
Cambridge Plan International, which makes the puddings and other diet products, posted a recall notice July 19, Melody Quarnstrom, director of public relations for the company, said Tuesday.

Ms. Quarnstrom confirmed that "low-grade" amounts of salmonella were disovered in raw materials used to make the puddings. She couldn't provide specific figures on the recall, but said it would involve "less than a day's production" at the Cambridge plant.

Salmonella can cause various diseases, including typhoid fever and food poisoning. Symptoms of salmonella poisoning, she said, "are the equivalent of the 24-hour flu."

"We have already received some of the product back," Ms. Quarnstrom said. She said she did not know if any of the pudding had been consumed.

"We have notified anyone who would have purchased the product," Ms. Quarnstrom said. "We have been in contact with the FDA (Food and Drug Adminstration), and we're following their guidelines for the recall."



Schiller, the poet, was stimulated by the smell of rotting apples which he always kept on his desk.

London is historical, traditional city

By BILL FREDDE
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

London...the name brings images of Big Ben tolling away; bright red double-decker buses cruising crowded streets; silver-helmeted Royal Horse Guards; bustling Piccadilly Circus; the legendary Tower of London; crowded pubs; Westminster Abbey and the River Thames.

Once a Roman stronghold and later a Norman fortress, London is wrinkled with 2,000 years of age, and is a living history book in which age-old traditions are maintained in the face of a world of change and upheaval.

Visitors who plan to "do" London from the upper tier of a double-decker bus or from the comfort of a tour company's limo, are doing themselves an injustice.

The best way to savor the intriguing sights, scents and sounds of the British capital is to explore it on foot. Strolling throughout the city's diverse districts, you'll acquire a more intimate, more lively image and return home with a Londoner's feeling and knowledge of the city.

For the traveler with initative, exploring this legendary city by foot is simple. All that's needed is an inexpensive, pocket-size street book, "London A-Z", which is available at most newsstands, and a general idea of where to start and which way to go.

I recommend the first-time visitor start his walk at Westminster Abbey, one of the city's most famous sites. Located near the Westminster Underground (subway) Station, it is a magnificent 1,000-year-old piece of architecture where the kings and queens of England are crowned, and burial site of kings and poets. It is a church of dazzling proportions and great stateliness. As you stroll through Westminster, the names you'll see memorialized there are like a history of the English nation.

Across the street from the Abbey, overlooking the Thames, is the palace of Westminster. It's the home of Parliament, of both the House of Lords and the House of Commons. Towering over Parliament Square, London's most renowned landmark, Big Ben, sounds out the hour. Many Americans are surprised to discover a statue of Abraham Lincoln among the statues which decorate Parliament Square. It was presented to Great Britian by the American people 60 years ago.

The wide boulevard leading from Parliament Square to Trafalgar Square is Whitehall, the center of British government. Squat, imposing government buildings line Whitehall. Downing Street is a small dead-end street leading off Whitehall. Number Ten Downing Street is the residence of the prime minister. It looks like a tasteful but ordinary house, except for the two policemen on duty outside. The apartment is right on the street with no lawns and no gates.

Further up Whitehall is Horse Guards, where mounted troopers of the Queen's Household Cavalry are on duty in their striking uniforms.

Here at 11 a.m. each day (10 a.m. on Sundays) there's a changing of the guard ceremony. While it doesn't rival the one at Buckingham Palace, it is most impressive nevertheless.

At the end of Whitehall is Trafalgar Square, named after a famous British naval victory over the French. In the center of the square stands towering Nelson's Column, topped by a statue of Lord Nelson, the victorious admiral who commanded the British forces. The National Gallery, one of the world's finest painting museums, is located on the far side of the square. Its collections include works of such masters as Turner, Cranach, Giotto and Cezanne. Leave the museum by its rear exit and go northward for one block. This will bring you to Leicester Square. If you wish to attend the theater during your visit, there is a booth here from which you can buy unsold tickets at half price for that day's performances. On weekends in Leicester Square and sometimes at night, street entertainers often display their talents.

One of the world's most famous traffic circles, Piccadilly Circus, is located only a few minutes walk from Leicester Square. Always aglow with colorful lights, here is an excellent place to get some of your shopping out of the way. Excellent stores line two of the avenues radiating from Piccadilly Circus. Piccadilly features Simpson's for men's and women's fashions and the world-famous Fortum & Masons, an elegant department store on Regent Street. You'll find Aquascutum for men's fashions, Jaeger for women's fashions and Liberties, another snazzy department store.

Some of London's most memorable sights are located in the central square mile of the British capital called "The City."

London's banks, brokerages, insurance companies, business headquarters and major law offices are congregated in "The City." It is also the place where the city began, and on a street named Roman Wall, the remains of an orginal Rome wall can be seen. The best place to start a walking tour of "The City" is at the Monument, a 202-foot tower commemorating the 17th Century Great Fire of London. A climb up the 311 steps to the top of the Monument offers a spectacular view of the surrounding area.

From the Monument, stroll up King William Street to the Bank of England and the London Stock Exchange. Unfortunately, sightseers are not normally allowed into the bank, but at the Stock Exchange you can stand on a platform and watch the hurly-burly on the floor below.

Afterward, make your way back down Threadneedle Street past the bank and continue along Poultry (a name identifying the business that transpired on this street in the Middle Ages), turning right on King Street. This will take you to Guildhall, the center of London's government for a thousand years. Another 10-minute stroll will take you to the Museum of London, where the story of the historic city is skillfully displayed.

After visiting the Museum of London, head down Aldersgate to St. Paul's Cathedral. This magnificent edifice was built on the site of an ancient church destroyed in the Great Fire of London. Nearby is London's central criminal court, the Old Bailey, on the street of the same name. It has a visitor's gallery where you can watch the wigged and robed British justice in action. A short ways down Ludgate Hill, the street becomes Fleet Street, the hub of Britain's newspaper world. At 145 Fleet Street is one of London's oldest and most famous pubs, the Cheshire Cheese.

One of the joys of London is that it's a city with so many different faces — and they're all best seen from your feet.

Bright fountains and low pools reflect the outdoor restaurants at the new home of the Royal Shakespeare Company in London.

Canada's Victoria can lay claim to one of the most attractive waterfronts in the world. The Parliament Buildings provide a sedate and traditional background for the colorful sailing boats.

When is an island not an island?

By ROBIN AND PATRICIA HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

THOUSAND ISLANDS, N.Y./Canada — When French explorer Jacques Cartier portaged into this remote wilderness in 1534 he estimated the seemingly endless number of islands in the St. Lawrence River at 1,000.

The unusual archipelago has been shamelessly shortchanged by the map makers ever since. Detailed surveys by New York State and the Province of Ontario, which share its ownership, put the accurate count at 1,834.

There are still disputes around here, however, and some local boosters claim the total is more than 2,000. The confusion is understandable, for to qualify as an official island the bit of land must be above water at all times and be big enough to support two trees.

TRAVEL

This rule only compounds the uncertainty. The broad river may rise as much as three feet during spring thaws and nobody is likely to keep track of which islands are submerged. The tree requirement is even more baffling because people can never agree exactly when a mere bush becomes a legitimate tree.

A senior St. Lawrence sage, Andrew McNally, 3rd, head of Rand McNally, who has spent much of his life here, declined to give us a definitive answer to the tree vs. bush question. "Just use your common sense," replied this authoritative geographer.

Whatever the true figure, the area that will always be renowned as "The Thousand Islands" is a thoroughly delightful and somewhat overlooked vacation destination. Easily accessible over perfect roads in less than a day from most of the northeast, its attractions include wonderful boating and fishing, nine top golf courses, dramatic scenery and surprisingly moderate price levels.

The island chain begins at Kingston, Ontario, and extends eastward only about 50 miles before disappearing, but the short stretch is fascinating. At the turn of century there was hardly a place on earth that drew as many tycoons. Impressive evidence of those glamorous days remains.

Castles which might belong on the Rhine rise along both shores and many of the larger islands were once self-contained kingdoms for their wealthy owners. The yacht club on Steamboat Island has 100 millionaire members, each with a luxurious steam yacht at least 100 feet long.

The premier showplace of the entire river is Boldt Castle, a magnificent 300- room palace on Heart Island near Alexandria Bay. George Boldt, proprieter of the original Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, spent millions to build what was to be a birthday gift to his wife. She died suddenly in 1902 just before it was finished and Boldt halted all construction immediately. It is unchanged today, eerily mysterious and unoccupied, but open to tourists.

Those early plutocrats have departed and now the islands are friendly and unpretentious, ideal for family gatherings. The style most preferred is a houseboat cruise, leisurely and relaxing, at well below the expense of hotel accomodations, for a roomy and fully-stocked vessel.

Although the central channel teems with busy traffic ranging from the mammoth freighters of the St. Lawrence Seaway to pleasure craft and swarms of outboards, there are secondary protected routes where little nautical skill is needed.

The one most important lure for travelers here is the superb fishing. Alexandria Bay is the acknowledged fresh water bass capital of North America. Huge trout abound and chinook salmon of 40 pounds are common. Muskelunge, largest and toughest of all American game fish, reach 75 pounds.

Cable cars heart of tourism

Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Once upon a time, a century ago when the cable cars appeared, San Francisco led all the West in commerce, the arts, population, clout.

But the hated Los Angeles grew bigger than San Francisco. Then San Diego surpassed this proud city in size. And whatever civic gods there may be dictated that San Francisco, once the colossus of the West, would — like Williamsburg, Va., and Tijuana — live on the kindness of strangers: i.e., tourism.

The cable cars wobbled on through it all, once merely the way for residents to climb Nob, Russian and the other hills of home, but recently the backbone of the tourist industry.

Now looms perhaps as great a blow as the human and corporate migration south.

Now comes Sept. 21, the day the cable cars will stop.

"On that day, our world comes to an end — at least for 18 months or so," said Robert Pottinger, chief dispatcher and acting manager of the Municipal Railway's Cable Car Division.

On that day the 26 cable cars now stuttering up and down San Francisco's hills will go on vacation while their 10½ miles of lines get new cable conduits, new slot-rails and running rails for the wheels.

San Franciscans dutifully are concerned about nuclear disarmament, a cure for cancer and other problems not confined to the Bay area. In their hearts and pocketbooks, however, they tremble for the cable cars.

"The tourists," said Pottinger, "may come to see the Golden Gate Bridge. But they come to ride the cable cars — to the hotels, the restaurants, the shops and to the pleasures of just riding the little darlings."

He sits in an 18-foot-high office that with its wooden-strip walls, its Early Nothing decor, its lack of a computer, its desk pen-holder in the shape of a bowling trophy but missing a pen, is as nostalgic almost as the cable cars themselves.

Good heavens, even the taxi drivers — rivals of cable carmen for space on the hill trails of San Francisco — sigh for the cable cars.

"Disappearance of the cable cars would lead to the economic decline of the whole Bay area," said cab driver Eric Spillman, 35. "It's not The City the people come to visit. They come to visit the city with the cable cars.

"You know that song about leaving your heart in San Francisco? Well, I never found a heart in the back seat of my cab. All the hearts are left on the cable cars.

"All of us know that business would go to L.A. — or worse, if that's possible — unless the cable cars come back."

Pottinger, 53, has no doubt the cable cars will be back on Powell, Hyde, Mason, California and the other streets. The renovation of the cable car system is the most complete since the semi-rapid (9 mph) transit began 108 years ago, Aug. 2, 1873.

"We shall return," he said. Pottinger said the re-doing is to cost $58 million — all but $10 million coming from the federal and state governments. San Francisco, one of the few cities of California ending the current fiscal year with a budget surplus, is contributing nothing.

"The final $10 million is from the public and they've already given all but a million or so," he said.

Normandy beach: War memories in tranquil setting

Copley News Service

OMAHA BEACH, France — The sea rolled gently onto the sandy beach on a cool, cloudless day and there was sense of well-being in this tranquil panorama. It was hard to believe that nearly four decades ago this was where the greatest troop landing in history broke the early-morning silence with the thunder of cannons.

The sea was the English Channel; the beach, Omaha. The vantage point was the Normandy American Cemetery in northern France, overlooking Omaha Beach, the code name assigned to this attack point by the Allies in World War II.

For anyone with an interest in the war, the beaches where the invasion of Europe began make an exceptionally worthwhile side trip for the visitor to Paris, about 100 miles to the southeast. Scars of the war remain in several places.

A recommended starting point is Arromanches-les-Bains. This charming village is where the Allies, working under enemy fire, built an artificial harbor by sinking concrete caissons that had been towed across the channel from England by ships, and then sinking many of the old ships themselves. Steel piers were floated out to where supply ships soon would unload.

Remnants of the port, called "Mulberry," remain offshore from Arromanches. The Museum of the Invasion, detailing the history of that part of the war and including a model of the harbor, is well worth seeing.

The best route is N-13 from Paris to Bayeux, where the visitor turns off the main road for the six-mile drive to Arromanches.

Several small, tidy hotels in Arromanches make this village of 450 residents ideal for an overnight stay before setting off on a daylong tour of the beaches.

At the Hotel d' Arromanches a room for two with breakfast, plus dinner with wine, came to $36. The exchange rate at the time was a little more than five francs to the dollar. Prices at the Hotel Normandie and the Hotel de La Marine were comparable.

The rooms, simple but spotless, have bathrooms with toilets and showers. English is spoken.

The visitor might be awakened in the middle of the night by the absolute lack of sound. The village is completely dark and silent after midnight; not a dog barks, not a light flickers.

Arromanches bustles with activity in the morning though, and before the visitor leaves it's a good idea to stop at the boucherie-charcuterie (butcher shop that also sells cold cuts and cheeses), located on the main street. There, and at a small grocery down the street, can be found the sausage and cheese, bread and wine that will make a delightful side-of-the-road lunch during the tour of the beaches.

The Normandy American Cemetery lies a little more than 10 miles west of Arromanches, overlooking the French beaches of Colleville, St. Laurent and Vierville — the three peaceful stretches of sand that comprise Omaha Beach.

It was there early on June 6, 1944, that U.S., British and Canadian armies, supported by an armada of naval heavy artillery, landed in the greatest amphibious assault recorded in history. From the cemetery, a hundred feet or so above the beaches, one can almost imagine the thousands of GIs racing at the enemy, their landing craft bobbing in the sea behind them. Perhaps the vision is only of the movie, "The Longest Day."

The cemetery is a splendidly manicured 172 acres. Its white Carrarra marble crosses and Stars of David stand in precise military alignment, marking the graves of 9,386 U.S. servicemen who died in the invasion and in the weeks that followed. The mood of the visitor is at once humble and proud.

Past the reception center stands a massive granite memorial. In front of it is a reflecting pool and beyond that the graves, row upon row, identifying their soldiers and sailors by names and states and dates of death, from generals to privates. Of those buried there, the identities of 307 are unknown. The remains of about 14,000 others originally buried in this region were returned home at the request of their families.

The land of the cemetery was deeded to the United States by France. It was completed in 1956.

Eight miles west of the cemetery is Pointe du Hoc, where the U.S. Second Ranger Battalion scaled 100-foot cliffs on D-Day morning to seize this fortified enemy position that controlled the landing approaches to Omaha Beach and Utah Beach farther west.

FOCUS: Charles Fraser
He looks up from the top

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Charles Fraser, president, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of the First National Bank of Midland, is looking up these days, and for many different reasons.

First, he is looking up at Midland's skyline, contemplating how the bank's planned Eagle Plaza tower, (which as of the latest word will be 46 stories), will spice up the Tall City's image.

Second, he is looking up proudly because a banking magazine recently ranked FNB the sixth largest bank in Texas, and 52nd largest in the United States. It has been the largest independent bank in Texas for some time, and will definitely remain so, if Fraser has anything to say about it.

Third, things are looking up for the bank because, unless we all go back to riding bicycles, Americans will continue to need the petroleum industry, and thus Midland, and FNB, are assured of a busy future, although Fraser admitted growth will have to slack off some — a euphoric growth rate is not sustainable.

Fourth, things are looking up for the bank, and Fraser, as a nagging lawsuit between the bank and a local oil company has been, he hopes, laid to rest. The parties are completing voluminous paperwork involved in a compromise agreement approved by the courts in July. A settlement is scheduled to close in August, so that "everyone can go on about their business."

TO HANDLE THE LARGEST BANK in the Midland-Odessa market, a bank with assets approaching $1.8 billion, Fraser doesn't rely on emotions or snap decisions.

He does a lot of reading on the economy and petroleum industry. He particularly likes to "talk shop" with the bank's oil and gas division people. Fraser misses the engineering work he did before the banking end of the job took over.

"As things grew, I got more and more involved in the banking end of it rather than the engineering part of it, but I still try to exercise my slide rule every chance I get. The batteries never run down."

He says he does a lot of soul searching. "I don't want to be abrupt," he says as he slowly turns an ever-present cigar between his fingers. "I rely on a tangible assessment of the factors that will influence my decision."

He tries to relax at least once a week — hunting, fishing and flying are his main forms of getting away from it all, but time is always too short: "I have some hunting dogs, but they're getting fat in the backyard," he says wrly.

"I'VE HEARD A LOT OF PEOPLE say bankers, lawyers and doctors shouldn't fly because they can't keep their mind on it, but when I fly, I'm able to concentrate on the aircraft and enjoy it.

"After an hour or two, I find I haven't thought about the bank at all.

"These are the things I do to clear my head — although some may dispute I ever clear my head," he says with a grin.

No doubt he's looking forward to the day when he can fly over Eagle Plaza.

The original plans, announced last May, included two 40-story towers. Plans have changed; the whole process that precedes ground breaking has taken longer than anticipated, for several reasons.

"First of all, we knew when we started that it was complicated, because of the need to close streets and alleys, and work with the city's traffic flow. We have to reroute the utilities and storm sewers. We also knew that the ownership beneath the land involved was very diverse.

"It's just not as simple as it would seem at first blush."

NEGOTIATIONS ARE STILL going on for the final piece of land involved in the project, Fraser says, but most of the plans are fast reaching a conclusion. He hopes to let a construction contract within the next few months.

For now, one 46-story tower is planned, and it's being designed to carry the bank through 1990. Meanwhile, FNB employees are scattered around Midland in the Paragon, Tesco and Marathon Oil buildings and in Wall Towers West. Future needs will dictate whether a second tower is built.

"It's nice to be big, I guess," Fraser allows, "but big is not our goal necessarily." FNB's goals are to be a secure depository for its customers' money, give a reasonable return to its shareholders, serve the community with public service projects, and maintain its share of Midland's financial market.

The opening of several new banks and savings and loans in the city this year doesn't worry Fraser: "We're not opposing the competition; we just intend to challenge it."

What about the health of the bank's loan portfolio, considering the sickness of Chicago's Continental Illinois, and the "death" of the Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma?

"First of all, we had no business dealings with Penn Square. We don't know those people. All I know about it is what I've read in the paper...There's no parallel with our bank."

FRASER SAYS FNB'S LOAN portfolio mix of energy and non-energy loans is about the same as when he joined the bank in 1966.

"I suspect we have about the same ratio. I don't think that's unhealthy, when you look at the economy around here — if you don't make energy loans then you're not supporting the community. That's what drives this whole area.

"I'd rather have good energy loans than almost any other loans I could think of. They're very self-liquidating," and often backed up by valuable collateral. Fraser says the bank's biggest loans are to oil companies with plenty of reserves to support their credit lines.

He denies the bank has become "the biggest drilling contractor in the Permian Basin," as street talk sometimes suggests, and calls the rumors "something the bank's competition would like to believe."

"We have not foreclosed on, or repossessed, a single drilling rig that I know of this year. And I don't recall any last year. We may be the biggest lender against oil and gas production out here, but the people who borrow from us own the wells.

"WE HAVE SOME VERY SUBSTANTIAL customers in the drilling business we've lent money to, for badly needed rig fleet expansion. The bulk of our drilling rig loans are supported by production."

The amount of money in rig loans supported just by the rigs themselves, or the customer, is a modest percentage of the loans outstanding, Fraser says. FNB has tried to be careful to maintain enough reserve coverage so that it isn't looking entirely at drilling equipment to protect its losses.

The bank does make loans on some undeveloped leases, but usually the loans are made to long-time, well established customers, Fraser says.

"I don't feel we have any inordinate amount of repossessions relative to the size of the bank and the size of the community. I don't think it's disproportionate to the size of our loan portfolio."

The bank has had to waive some loan payments for maybe 90 days or six months for some service companies, Fraser says, but basically, the bank is a short-term lender which annually reviews loans and is always in the process of re-writing them.

"Here again, it's probably more than we've seen in the last five or ten years, but it's not a high dollar proportion of our loan business."

QUALITIES FRASER ADMIRES most in a person are absolute honesty and forthrightness. "One thing I particularly love about Midland and West Texas is that a handshake or a signature is all you need. I also admire people who give their time to serve in local government. It's often a thankless job and they can catch a lot of heat. But, they're carving time out of their lives to give to Midland."

Charles Fraser

Of Midland's economy, Fraser downplays the tendency to think things are going sour. "My job is to be objective. It goes back to being a safe depository for our customers. We're not out to shoot the moon. We have to play the middle of the road.

"I'm really expecting Midland growth to be at 14 to 16 percent compounded annually," but it's unrealistic to expect Midland to continue to grow at boom rates.

"I can remember back when I predicted crude oil would go to $4.50 a barrel. I hope I'm not blinded by all that brilliance back there, 'cause I was sure wrong on the low side and I hope I'm not wrong on the high side now."

Of the suit against the bank by GMW Corporation, Fraser will only say he's pleased the parties involved have reached a compromise settlement. He says he has every reason to believe the "unfortunate matter will be resolved and that everyone can go about their business."

'Windfall Profits Tax' falling far short of expectations

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The windfall profits tax, a cornerstone of President Carter's energy "independence" program and then of President Reagan's "new federalism" swap, is falling far short of its revenue expectations.

Enacted in 1980, the tax was designed to capture for the country a part of the nearly $1 trillion in windfall profits which were projected for domestic crude oil producers following oil price decontrols.

Forecast on the basis of rising energy costs, the tax was expected to net $19.5 billion in 1982, $20.5 billion in 1983, $21.1 billion in 1984, $22.2 billion in 1985, $$22.8 billion in 1986 and $23.6 billion in 1987 — adding up to $227 billion by 1990 when it was to be phased out.

But declining oil prices, partly the result of the oil glut created by a disarray within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), have played havoc with the early highly optimistic forecasts.

Latest Treasury, White House and Congressional Budget Office estimates show the tax netting about $10.6 billion in 1982, $11.8 billion in 1983, $$11 billion in 1984, $10.5 billion in 1985, $9.4 billion in 1986 and $8.2 billion in 1987.

An oversupply of petroleum, OPEC's problems, the economic slump and decreased gasoline consumption, which have forced prices down and reduced revenue expectations, are expected to cut even further into Treasury collections.

The newest Treasury estimates will show this decline when the administration later this week releases its mid-year revenue and spending projections.

The downward trend in oil profits has been seen in the oil companies financial reports for the second quarter.

Mobil Corp. Wednesday reported its worst decline in 24 years with a staggering 55.7 percent slump while Sun Co. announced a 63 percent plunge in earnings.

Cities Service Co. reported that its second-quarter profits dropped 13 percent primarily because of increased exploration costs, higher interest rates, and reduced profit margins for petroleum products and natural gas liquids.

Among other companies reporting, Gulf Oil Corp. announced that its earnings fell 32.4 percent, Shell Oil Co. reported a 7.3 percent decrease, and Phillips Petroleum Co. had a 39 percent drop.

The windfall profits tax revenue situation may become even muddier if prices continue on a downward spiral. Some forecasters see prices dropping five to 10 cents a gallon by late autumn, especially if OPEC member nations cannot get together on a production ceiling and price rules.

If the OPEC ranks continue to break, estimates are that the price for crude oil may drop to $28 a barrel by fall, $6 below OPEC's current floor.

In mid-1979, before decontrol began, per barrel petroleum prices in the U.S. were held at $13 and below. With uncontrolled prices in 1980 topping $35 a barrel, and expected to continue to soar, Carter and many in Congress believed that the new tax would create a super fund that could reduce other taxes and bankroll bold new energy programs.

President Carter initially thought that the tax would produce $280 billion and proposed the money be spent on urban mass transit, aid to the poor and for the development of synthetic fuels — the latter going a long way toward making this country energy independent.

But Congress gave the cold shoulder to much of Carter's "moral equivalent of war" energy independence plan and eventually settled on a $227 billion tax plan.

It also agreed that none of the funds could be spent until Congress passed legislation setting expressly designated purposes.

A complex formula was created imposing tax rates ranging from 30 percent for newly discovered oil to 70 percent on oil from existing wells.

Revenues from the windfall tax were earmarked: 60 percent for income tax deductions, 25 percent to help the poor with increased energy costs and 15 percent for synhetic fuels development and mass transportation programs.

Ever since the tax was enacted there have been repeated moves in Congress to attach windfall revenues to bills financing pet programs.

Bills by Reps. Charles Wilson, D.-Tex., and Andrew Jacobs, D.-Ind., would set aside funds to reduce the public debt.

Reps. Mario Biaggi, D.-N.Y., and James A. Leach, R.-Iowa, have bills to aid the financially ailing Social Security trust fund.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D.- Mo., has proposed legislation to establish a $50 billion trust fund which would be used to prevent the Social Security System from going bankrupt.

Finally, President Reagan proposed earlier this year that $16.5 billion in windfall profit revenues be set aside for the trust fund to help finance his "new federalism" proposal under which the states would have taken over support of the welfare program.

But the windfall profits part of "new federalism" proposal was missing when the president redrafted his federalism package.

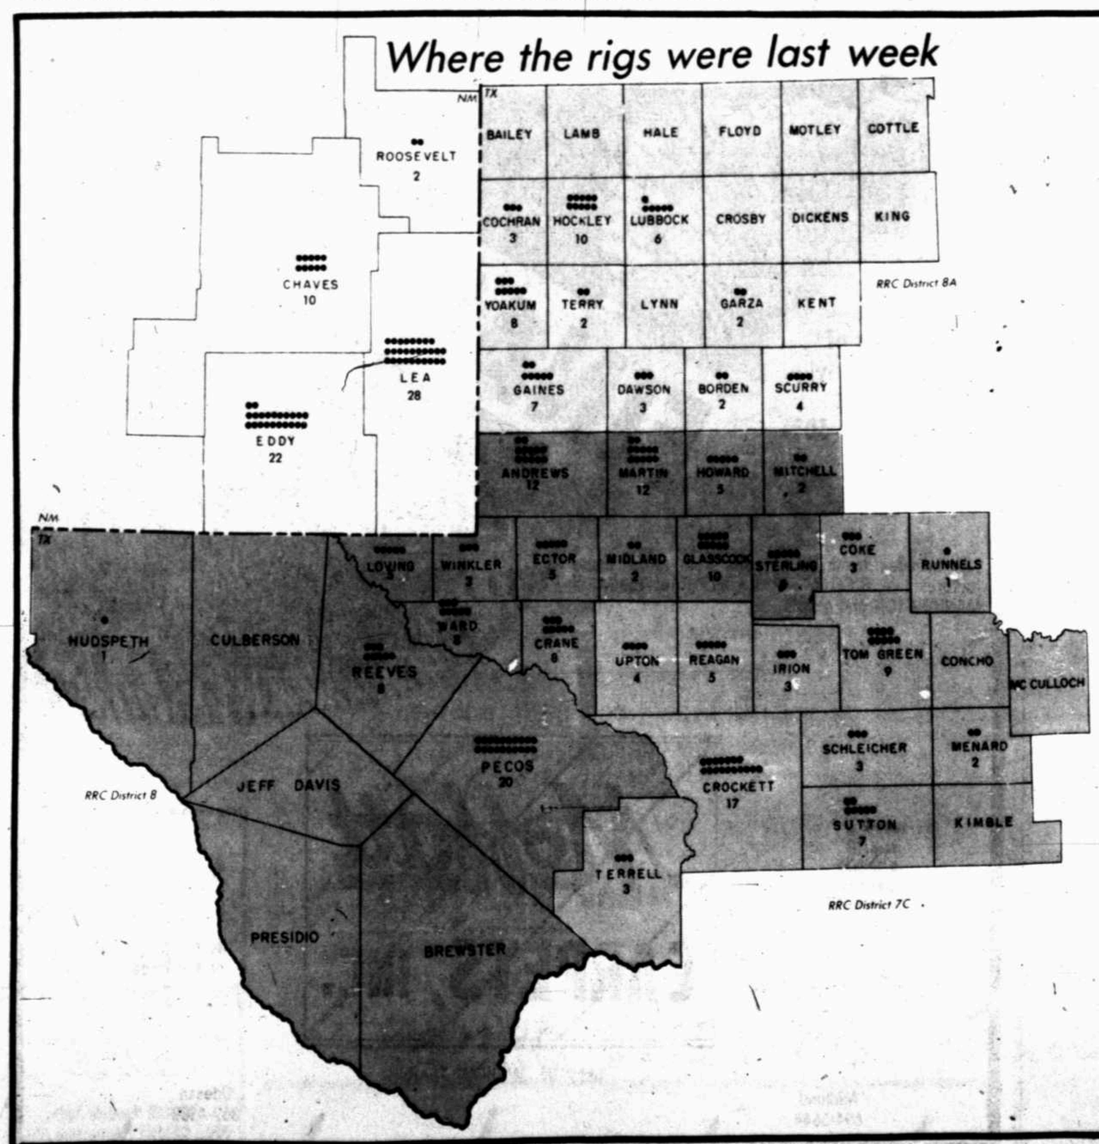
Instead of suggesting that the profits tax revenues be used to finance the welfare swap, Reagan proposed the swap be paid for from general revenues.

"Congressmen from the oil producing states told the White House they would fight any attempts to link new federalism with windfall profits tax," confided a congressional aid Wednesday.

"We were told by oil state congressmen they don't want the income from this tax to go to pay for welfare in the Northeast and Midwest states," said a White House official.

"Several Southern congressmen told us the windfall profits proposal to fund new federalism would be passed over their dead bodies," another White House aid added. "We thought it would be easier to give in on this."

Where the rigs were last week



Permian Basin rotary count withering

The Permian Basin regional rig count started shrinking again last week. According to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co., the tally was 272, down 10 from the previous week.

For awhile, it looked as if the count may have been stablizing. The score July 9 and July 16 was 283.

The count one year ago was 464.

Nationally the picture is better. Figures released by the International Associationof Drilling Contractors show 2,730 rigs working coast-to-coast July 26. That's an increase from the previous week, when 2,694 rigs were spotted. The upturn is the first in many weeks, and the largest in months.

The IADC found 835 rigs working the dry side of Texas during the latest counting period. Another 79 were spotted working offshore. In New Mexico there were 81 rigs active.

Midland developers going the extra mile(s) for a miracle

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

2c. In many cities, you can drive along what is generally known as the "miracle mile," a strip of commercial and retail development that generates millions of dollars in revenue, and also, unfortunately, snarled traffic.

In Midland, developers are going "that extra mile," or to be exact, eight miles, as they continue working on Loop 250, one of the Tall City's fastest growing areas.

The Loop winds its way west from State Highway 349 (North Big Spring Street) along the northern rim of the Tall City until it meets Holiday Hill Road at the city's western limit of development; from there it heads quickly south to meet U.S. Highway 80.

The eight-mile trail has become a multi-million dollar bonanza for both local and out-of-town developers.

One Midland developer estimated land values along the Loop have increased ten-fold in the last five years — a real estate appraiser noted that was a fairly conservative estimate.

Midland's Magnatex, for example, purchased 30 acres along the Loop in 1979. By the time it sold about a third of the acreage two years later, to the Woodmont Corporation, a Fort Worth developer, the price had doubled.

Five years ago land along Loop 250 sold for about 75 cents to $1 a foot, said one developer. Now, it's anywhere from seven to 10 dollars a foot.

As of this week, Loop 250 could boast of 25 major projects either completed or underway, and there's still some land for sale, sandwiched between large signs announcing new housing or retail developments.

The Loop is the address, or will be soon, for Midland American Bank, the huge Midland Park Mall, a retirement community planned by Trinity Towers, 11 apartment complexes, and seven single family housing developments.

Three retail shopping centers are planned:

— Northpark, consisting of 40 acres at the northeast corner of Midkiff and Loop 250;

— The Courtyard at Midland Park, 35 acres on the southeast corner of Midkiff and the Loop;

— and Agora III, a 36,000 square-foot, one story center; the first building of which is now under construction at the southwest corner of Garfield and the Loop.

In addition, the 113-acre Polo Park, a combination residential, office and retail planned development at the northeast corner of Garfield and the Loop, will get underway later this year.

Estimated total value of these last four commercial/residential projects is $100 to $120 million.

Utilities have been installed, ground work finished, and road building is either completed or just underway at the projects. Ground-breaking for many of the buildings is supposed to take off later, in October and November, said local developers in charge.

The key to progress along the Loop rests with its housing starts, they added.

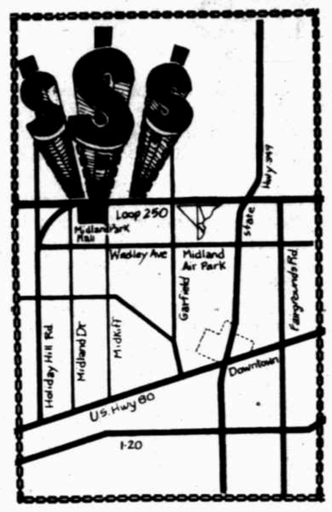
"I think we, and most of the developers, are waiting for more residential construction out there," said John Billingsley, "in order to build up a demand for retail and office centers along the Loop."

Delays have also resulted from high interest rates, uncertainty of major lenders' money policies, negotiations with major office or retail tenants, and planning and zoning red tape.

"It takes a lot of lead time and behind-the-scenes work," said one developer. "There are financial arrangements, planning by the architects, feasibility studies — all that is before you ever see a dirt truck at the site."

But, the men in charge of the Courtyard, Northpark and Polo Park all report progress.

At the Courtyard, a project of Magnatex, Gibsons Distributing Inc., the Woodmont Corp., and local devloper Marvin Smith Jr., the utilities and roads are in, said Richard McAlpin, Magnatex' assistant vice president.



"It's ready to go."

Landscaping begins next week and within 45 days, the Woodmont Corp. will break ground on a four-story building for offices and the Security National Bank (now in temporary quarters at the site).

Two major restaurants have committed to the project so far, McAlpin said. They are Texas Tumbleweed, a steak house, and a Japanese hibachi-style restaurant. Other restaurants are still in negotiation, as is a movie theatre.

The complex will also feature a 100,000 square-foot retail center called Main Street, a project of the Gibson's chain. Plans are still in progress and no ground breaking date has been set, said a Gibson's spokesman.

At Northpark, ground breaking for one major tenant, Target discount store, will take place in October or November. The 40-acre site is a joint project of Billingsley Enterprises and Hawkeye Inc., a Houston general partner.

Utilities are in and the roads are under construction now.

Billingsley is in the final stages of negotiation with a large grocery store chain for the second major tenant. He's also looking at a steak house restaurant for Northpark, he said.

Several smaller tenants have expressed strong interest, but no leases have been inked yet, he added.

In Northpark's first phase, about 10 acres will be developed for retail businesses; office space may come later as the market warrants.

Polo Park, a project of Steenson Properties Inc. of Midland, is the largest commercial/residential development on the drawing boards for the Loop, with 113 acres.

Plans call for a 184-unit apartment complex, a 12-acre shopping center, one or more restaurants, 16 acres of office development, 20 acres of multi-family construction, and 160 single family lots.

Leasing for the retail center will probably start around the first of the year, said Scott Steenson. "We won't do anything on the offices until we further assess the market here. We think it's a little soft here for a while."

Once drainage work now underway is completed, road construction will begin, he said. The subdivision's grand opening is scheduled for May, 1983. It will feature homes in the $100,000 to $200,000 range, and include a common clubhouse with pool and tennis courts.

Officials disavow White House review

By HERBERT H. DENTON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Senior administration officials moved immediately Friday to disavow the rose-colored optimism in the mid-year economic review released by the White House, underscoring their growing concern about the future of the economy.

Asked for his own candid assessment of where the economy was headed, the senior official briefing reporters on the new White House forecast said, "I think it's kind of in a twilight zone." Asked what he meant by that, he quipped, "It's either going to be morning or night."

Later, he added, "We have no firm notion of where the economy is going."

Despite the report's optimistic predictions of lower interest rates, a drop in unemployment and a "significant economic recovery" by the end of the year, there is detectable anxiety and uncertainty in the White House about the fate of the economy and its impact on Republican political fortunes in the elections Nov. 2.

President Reagan himself reflected some of that concern at his press conference Wednesday night. In a dramatic turnaround, Reagan appealed to the nation for patience and forebearance, clearly indicating that the road to recovery would be much longer and harder than he had previously promised.

But Reagan also signaled his intention, spelled out in the economic and budget forecast released Friday, to raise military spending in future years to levels higher than he had agreed upon with Congress and to cut more deeply into social spending. This created a firestorm on Capitol Hill and reopened the debate between Congress and the White House over national priorities.

This guns-butter debate has also raged in the administration among Reagan's top aides and Cabinet officers. Another senior administration official said Friday that, despite the new report's reflection of victory for now by defense spending advocates led by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, this debate among the president's men would more than likely continue.

"The situation is still fluid," the official said. Although Weinberger got the green light from Reagan to prepare a fiscal 1984 military budget with the higher spending levels, the official said he was certain those numbers would be reconsidered later in response to the economic situation and the reaction on Capitol Hill before they are formally presented to Congress next year.

The senior official disputed Capitol Hill charges that Reagan had reneged on his deal with Congress. He said Reagan "very reluctantly" had agreed to $20 billion in tax increases in next year's budget but that the package approved by the Senate Finance Committee was $4 billion higher.

There was still considerable exasperation with Reagan over defense spending on the Hill Friday, which was fueled by the White House mid-year economic review. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., called the new report "political nonsense" and added, "the deficits keep getting bigger and (Reagan) keeps putting out false reports."

Speaking of the economic outlook, Hollings said, "The so-called light at the end of the tunnel is a train coming down the other track."

On the flap over defense spending, Hollings said, "I think (Reagan) has definitely reneged on the understanding" and caused deep divisions in Republican ranks.

However, Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John G. Tower, R-Tex., said he thought Republicans would suffer no trouble "over the long pull" and parted company with Republican colleagues, including Sen. Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who have criticized Reagan's stand on defense spending.

Friday, Baker, speaking about the mid-year review, said Reagan's budget projections seem "to have a half-life of 30 days."

The senior official briefing reporters on the review said it was an "admittedly arbitrary" exercise. He conceded that the economic assumptions, out-of-date forecasts by the Congressional Budget Office, were unrealistic.

He said they were the same ones used when the first congressional budget resolution was framed and that the Reagan administration had decided not to change them at a time when Congress is still in the midst of deliberations on the budget and taxes because such changes "drive those people crazy on the Hill." Use of the old data also spares the Reagan White House from being tagged with new, more pessimistic forecasts on the eve of the fall campaigns.

In a breakfast meeting with reporters Friday, Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin conceded that an increase in unemployment or a new round of inflation, as many fear, would hurt Reagan and GOP candidates this fall.

Wirthlin was generally hopeful about prospects, saying that Reagan benefits from a "pool of patience" because people blamed Jimmy Carter and the Democrats for current economic troubles by wide margins.

But worsening of the economy would be harmful, he said. "Republicans and this president are viewed as not as helpful to the less fortunate" as are Democrats.

The senior official briefing reporters predicted more government red ink in fiscal 1983 than the $115 billion deficit that is being forecast, which, he said, was low. "I think it's probably going to be considerably higher."

Interests dropping, economists hopeful

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

Several key interest rates have posted new declines, sparked by a drop in the amount of cash in circulation, and private economists are hopeful the trend will continue.

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration stood firm Friday behind its forecast of a significant economic recovery by year's end, despite new statistics showing no change in a broad gauge of future economic activity.

The Federal Reserve Board cut another half-percentage point from the rate it charges on loans to its member banks, bringing the discount rate to 11 percent. Lower borrowing costs have led major banks recently to cut a key interest rate on business loans.

Elliott Platt, a vice president of the investment firm of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc., said he expects the discount rate to fall again, and that "10.5 percent is a good bet in the next few weeks."

The Fed also reported that the amount of cash in circulation dropped $800 million in the week ended July 21, further easing fears — at least for the time being — of a new upsurge in rates caused by Fed attempts to control growth of money. The money supply, as measured by M1, fell to a seasonally adjusted $450.8 billion.

Two banks, Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh, the nation's 15th largest, and a small bank, Southwest Bank of St. Louis, immediately cut their prime lending rate a half percentage point below the rest of the industry — to 15 percent.

Economists predicted the major banks, which this week moved to a 15.5 percent prime from 16 percent, would further reduce their rates.

David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said he expected "another round of prime rate reductions (to 15 percent) within the week and a general downward move in interest rates."

The prime rate is the base used by banks to calculate interest on loans to their best corporate customers. It does not directly affect such consumer loans as mortgages and auto loans, but consumer rates often follow the direction of the prime.

Glendale Federal Savings and Loan Association, the nation's fourth-largest S&L with more than 165 offices in California and Florida, slashed its mortgage rate a full percentage point Friday to 15.25 percent. It said, however, the decision was not tied to other movements in rates but to a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision that said federally chartered S&L's need not permit homebuyers to assume existing loans at old, low interest rates.

In Washington, the Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators stayed flat in June after rising in April and May.

Nevertheless, the Reagan administration predicted a significant economic recovery in the final six months of the year. The White House forecast, predicting a growth rate of 4.5 percent through 1983 and a 1983 deficit of $115 billion, already has been labeled unrealistic by several top government officials and the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office.

PBGC offers well control classes

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces two courses to be held at the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Well Control School," Monday through Friday, August 9-13, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Harris LaFleur, Associate of Prentice and Records Enterprises Inc. will instruct. This course is for anyone who needs a thorough understanding of well control techniques. The program is certified to teach all levels of job classifications and is U.S.G.S. certified. The registration fee is $500.

"Well Control Refresher" will be held Saturday and Sunday, August 14 and 15, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Harris LaFleur, Associate of Prentice & Records Enterprises Inc. will instruct. This course is a review for students who have completed an approved Well Control School. It is for all job classification including driller, toolpusher, and operator's representatives. Fee is $225.

PBPA donates medallions

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association recently donated to the Santa Rita Club, the Permain Basin Petroleum Museum's auxillary, 500 bronze medallions commemorating the 50th anniversary of the 1923 oil discovery at the Santa Rita No. 1. The 10-year-old medals were discovered while "cleaning house."

"We thought we had given them all we had," said Ed Thompson, PBPA executive director. But, he explained, while "going through the office" a box of 500 of the medallions was discovered. "That's the end of it, once those are gone."

The medallions are part of 2,500 unnumbered ones of bronze and 500 of silver, consecutively numbered, originally struck to commemorate the Santa Rita discovery, the well which opened the Permian Basin as a petroleum producing region.

Thompson said income from the sale of the medallions was orignially split between the PBPA and the Santa Rita Club. The museum was just getting started at the time, and PBPA thought sharing the income would be a good way to boost the museum.

The silver medallions sold for $12.50 when new, but are worth much more today. The bronze medals were priced at $2, and are still being sold for that.

What was thought to be the last batch of 500 medallions was presented the Santa Rita Club two or three years ago, Thompson said. The latest donation was made "with no strings attached," the club may use the medallions as it sees fit.

Some thought is being given to issuing 60th anniversary medallions in 1983, Thompson said.

Communists stress cohesion

Los Angeles Times- Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and Czechoslovak President Gustav Husak, meeting in the Crimea, issued a communique Friday stressing the importance of greater economic cohesion within the Soviet Bloc to offset the effect of American economic sanctions.

The communique added, however, that the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia would not cut themselves off from "mutually beneficial" trade ties with the West.

The joint statement, as distributed by the official Soviet news agency Tass, said Brezhnev and Husak attached "great significance" to a planned summit meeting of bloc countries to discuss economic problems. There is speculation in Moscow that such a meeting, which has been talked about for at least a year, could be held in the next few months.

Brezhnev made a public appearance, his first in nearly a month, at the meeting in the Crimea resort. The announcement scotched rumors circulating here that Brezhnev, 75, was too ill to receive visitors. There had been suggestions that he would drop his practice of holding consultations with the heads of ruling Communist parties during their summer holidays.

Husak is the first Soviet Bloc leader reported to have conferred with Brezhnev this summer. The president of Afghanistan, Babrak Karmal, and the Mongolian Communist Party leader, Yumjagim Tsedenbal, both visited the Soviet Union this month but there was no official report of them being received by Brezhnev.

Western diplomats here have speculated that Brezhnev, who was reported to be seriously ill earlier this year, had wanted to conserve his energy for a summit with President Reagan that is planned for October.

Soviet television news bulletins Friday carried two still pictures of Brezhnev and Husak but no news film of their meeting.

Mitchell leases in Land of Ahs

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. recently announced that it has entered into a $4 million lease purchase and exploration agreement through which it acquired half interest in approximately 150,000 acres of leases in southwestern Kansas.

The agreement, with Samuel Gary Oil Producer of Englewood, Colo., calls for payment of $2 million for acreage located in Clark, Finney, Ford, Gray, Hodgeman, Kiowa, Meade and Pawnee counties, where sizable oil discoveries and some gas finds have been made. Mitchell Energy is committed to spending an additional $2 million for seismic work and drilling in the region by the end of 1983.

In turn, Gary will make available the seismic and drilling data it has developed from its operations in the 150,000 acres.

Opinion survey indicates significant portion of public favors flat-rate tax

WASHINGTON (SWN) — A significant portion of the American public — nearly half — is receptive to the flat-rate income tax, although serious concern exists about how equitable such a system would be.

Those were the findings of a new nationwide survey conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation. The survey, commissioned by The LTV Corporation of Dallas and released here at a special tax seminar, was conducted from July 9 to July 16.

The seminar, sponsored by LTV, included presentations by Senators Bill Bradley, Dan Quayle and Nancy Kassebaum and Representative Leon Panetta, all of whom have introduced legislation calling for adoption of broad-based tax systems.

The survey showed that six out of every 10 Americans "as a matter of general principle" thought the tax system should have different rates reflecting different circumstances. But, after being read descriptions of the two tax systems, 45 percent of those surveyed said they preferred the flat-rate tax with deductions and credits eliminated versus 41 percent who favored the present progressive tax system which permits itemized deductions.

Among the different income groups, only those with household incomes under $15,000 a year indicated a preference for the progressive tax, according to the survey. The majority of those in all other income groups favored the flat-rate tax.

Significantly, the survey showed that most of those who prefer the flat rate would continue to do so even if key deductions now allowed were eliminated. For example, 75 percent said they would feel the same if the deduction for charitable contributions was done away with and 73 percent held firm in their support despite the prospect of losing business deductions.

Two out of three of those favoring the flat rate over the progressive tax system said that they would continue to do so even with the elimination of the deduction for interest paid on a home mortgage. This percentage held up among those actually owning a home. A similar number said they would feel the same despite elimination of medical expenses as a deduction.

Seven out of 10 Americans, said the survey, think the flat-rate tax would be easier for the average taxpayer to understand and less costly for the government to administer. However, the public is divided over which tax system would provide more revenue.

The survey also revealed that, on balance, the bulk of the population — 47 percent — believes the flat-rate tax would be fairer to most taxpayers and to people like themselves. But, when the findings are broken down by income, it is clear that those in the lowest income classification had doubts. Among those with annual household incomes of less than $15,000, the progressive tax was judged fairer by 42 percent and the flat-rate tax by 41 percent.

The survey also found that on balance the public, as a whole, thinks that higher income people — those earning above $50,000 annually — would pay more under a progressive tax system, while a majority believes that low income people would pay more under the flat-rate tax.

The survey was conducted by ORC by telephone among a national probability sample of 1,005 people, aged 18 and over. Also participating in the LTV seminar were former IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz; Gerard Brannon, a tax expert with the American Council of Life Insurance; Ernest Christian, Jr., a leading Washington tax lawyer; Rudolph Penner, of the American Enterprise Institute, who also does a monthly column on taxation and spending for the New York Times; Emil Sunley, director of tax analysis at Deloitte Haskins and Sells; Representative Barber Conable of New York; Charles Clotfelter, a professor at Duke University; Robert Sheehan, director of economic research at the National Association of Homebuilders; David Aaron, of the investment firm of Oppenheimer & Co.; and Gregory Ballentine, deputy assistant secretary (tax analysis) at the Treasury Department and chief economic advisor to the Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy.

Steel workers reject demands

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers union on Friday rejected steel industry demands for a renegotiated contract that would have saved beleaguered producers billions of dollars through concessions.

"The union and the industry have spent a great deal of time trying to find answers to our mutual problems and we simply have failed," USW President Lloyd McBride said.

"The failure could be attributed to our inability to accept rather severe conditions for modifying our current contract and to establish the terms of a contract to succeed this one," he said.

The denial means the union will receive pay and cost-of-living increases Sunday when the final year of the current three-year pact takes effect.

It also raises the possibility of a strike next year because the Experimental Negotiating Agreement, which has banned industrywide strikes since 1973, expired in August 1980. Although attempts have been made to reinstate that agreement, McBride said, "The ENA is dead."

"We were prepared to try to recommend to our leadership some sacrifices, but (the company proposal) we felt went too far," McBride said. "Our membership would have been substantially worse off."

The steelworkers and the companies won't meet again until next year, when they begin negotiations for a contract to replace the current pact that expires in August 1983.

"We'll start sometime next spring or late winter," McBride said.

Negotiations with the eight companies that bargain as a group with the union broke down Thursday night as the USW's 633-member Basic Steel Industry Conference was gathering here for Friday's meeting.

The conference, composed of local union presidents from steel mills around the country, unanimously followed the USW executive board's recommendation that concessions be denied.

Lovelady sells Nevada acres

MIDLAND — Ike Lovelady Inc. announced last week the sale of 21,000 of the total 85,000 acres in its Federal Lease Block in Humbolt County, Nevada.

The sale was on favorable terms to a major oil company with a substantial overriding royalty being retained. The company expects the purchaser to drill a well on this property in the near future.

Mr. Lovelady reported that successful drilling in the area would have a significant effect on the value of the remaining acreage.

Deep well drilled

CLARK COUNTY, IDAHO — Loffland Brothers Company of Tulsa, Oklahoma has drilled the deepest well in the history of Idaho. Drilling for Exxon USA on the Meyers Federal No. 1 Well, Loffland Brothers Rig 89 has touched down at 18,540 feet, breaking the previous Idaho depth record of 16,750 feet set in 1978.

Loffland Brothers Company, the 76-year-old Kendavis Industries company, already holds the free world's record for the deepest wells. These wells were drilled in Oklahoma.

Rig 89 has a 1,000,000-pound hookload capacity and a 142-foot L.C. Moore mast with a 30-foot substructure. This SCR diesel-electric rig has three Caterpillar diesel engines and a U-1220-EB MidContinent drawworks. Rig superintendents are Ralph Tuft and Gene Lay, Loffland Brothers Company.

U.S., Europeans 'a pipeline apart' over Soviet project

By SEYMOUR FREIDIN
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Europeans and Americans are a pipeline apart in a growing inter-continental split over a Soviet project our allies want to support and the Reagan administration seeks to prohibit.

The rift which strikes right at the heart of NATO is fearfully complicated. It pits France, Italy and West Germany directly against U.S. policy. We don't want to underwrite a Soviet natural gas pipeline from Siberia. Our friends do.

They see the problem essential in terms of jobs to stem growing unemployment. The pipeline, our allies figure, will help provide jobs for at least two years.

By then, as pro-NATO supporters like West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt see the futuristic score, the jobless burden will be eased considerably. In any case, even Britain's tough-minded Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher contends, the deals have been done.

What deals? The nations involved in the Russian-built pipeline claim that they signed on the dotted line with the USSR as long ago as 1979 and that they mean to honor their commercial transactions.

These signatories — most are members of the Common Market as well as NATO — contend that delays in the pipeline, stretching over 3,700 miles, won't hurt the Soviet timetable by more than a year at most.

Meanwhile, unemployment can send their governments into opposition and new administrations will reactivate the lapsed deals.

So, they insist that President Reagan is wrong. They will negotiate with us, but actually expedite work with the Soviets to enable people to get the benefit of new jobs.

The Soviets, whose economy is warped and requires up-to-date Western technology for the pipeline, are pleased and baffled by the Western infighting. A major tenet of Russian policy always has been to drive a wedge between the U.S. and our allies.

At the same time, hard-headed negotiations have recently begun between U.S. and Soviet representatives on the limitation of nuclear weapons held by each super-power. President Reagan called the discussions "START" (for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks) and the Soviets wouldn't like to see them go quickly into a tailspin.

Presently, West Europeans are grumbling about our indifference to their economic plight. That's something of a feathery case since the U.S. maintains a vast military budget which our European allies combined don't come close to matching. We also keep 350,000 men stationed in Western Europe.

What is surfacing today and which may come closer to the truth is a European worry about the possibility of growing American isolationism or a trend in that direction. They have only their own governments to blame.

The frustration felt by the Reagan administration and previous U.S. governments over the last 20 years adds up to this: Allies promise to increase defense spending — and don't do it.

In the pipeline controversy, where Western Europe would obtain Soviet natural gas, our allies would pony up around $10 billion annually in hard currency to pay the Russians.

If Norway, given more investment capabilities, could galvanize her natural gas fields, a steady flow to meet Western European requirements could be on target about 18 months after the USSR project was operative. Moreover, Norway is a member of NATO.

President Reagan has banned companies abroad from exporting for a big price their American-made technology for the pipeline, called "Yamal" for the frozen wastes of Siberia where it originates.

Whether the U.S. can make the ban stick is strictly conjectural. First, the European firms involved must technically be held accountable and none are in this country. Next, just about every one of those concerns will bring the cases to trial.

And then, there's the last straw as far as our allies are concerned: President Reagan will renew grain trade on an annual basis with the Soviet Union which is suffering its fourth consecutive shortfall. The Russians can't feed themselves.

The allies and we are indulging in a growing game of chicken, each levelling an accusatory charge of hypocrisy. At this pace, the porous alliance can easily collapse and the only beneficairy is the USSR. It gets the pipeline and NATO commits suicide.

The upshot is not a crisis — it's a calamity.

Muse Air swings deal, will still fly to Midland

DALLAS (AP) — Muse Air Corp. has made the trade of landing slots it needed to survive, the company president says, swapping two slots at New York's LaGuardia for Midland/Odessa, Texas and Tulsa, Okla.

Michael Muse had said the routes to Oklahoma and the West Texas cities were vital to the survival of the airline. Without the routes, Muse would have $80 million worth of new aircraft idle on the ground.

The airline began serving Tulsa and Midland/Odessa from Dallas Love Field in May, obtaining the landing slots in a drawing held after Braniff Airways suspended operations and sought the protection of federal bankruptcy court.

But Muse lost the slots in an FAA lottery of ex-Braniff slots two weeks ago. The fledging airline got two New York spaces instead.

Muse would not name four other airlines involved in the landing slot shuffle.

"The written agreement was sent to the Federal Aviation Adminstration on Thursday," Muse said. "I expect favorable action within a few days."

Muse Air was founded last year by Muse and his father, former Southwest Airlines President Lamar Muse.

Muse has expanded its fleet of McDonnell Douglas DC-9 Super 80 aircraft, and expects delivery next month of four new Super 80s. Without the routes, Muse would have had more than $80 million in airplanes with no place to fly.

Muse has yet to show a profit, although traffic on the airline has risen during the airline's first year.

Earlier this year, the Muses battled the FAA over the agency's decision to restrict allotment of new landing slots while new air traffic controllers were trained to replaced controllers who were fired when they went on strike.

The Muses said restrictions on landing slots threatened to drive new airlines like theirs out of business.

General leads center

OKLAHOMA CITY — Maj. Gen. Jay T. Edwards, a West Point graduate who for the past two years has been commander of Tinker Air Force Base, the Air Force's largest logistics depot, has been named executive director of the University of Oklahoma Energy Center.

Edwards, who is retiring this summer after 28 years in the Air Force, was recommended for the position by OU President William S. Banowsky after a national search. The appointment was aproved Thursday, July 22, by the OU Board of Regents.

In his application, Edwards said he would like to apply his skills and experience "toward the new challenge of the Energy Center because of the clear need for direction and leadership in this area so vital to the future of the university, the state and our country."

Born June 27, 1931, in Clarksville, Tenn., Edwards is a mechanical engineering graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. He also earned two master of science degrees, one in aeronautical engineering in 1962 at Texas A&M University and one in management in 1971 at George Washington University.

Assigned to Tinker Air Force Base, Midwest City, in December 1979, Edwards manages an industrial facility with just under 22,000 employees, more than 600 buildings on 4,276 acres, and a yearly budget of some $3 billion. The Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center at Tinker is the Air Force's largest and is charged with providing worldwide support to Air Force Units in time of peace and war. Its engine overhaul and repair operation also is the world's largest.

API analyzes latest drilling, completions statistics

By THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE

Over the long term, trends in rotary rig activity and reported well completions correspond reasonably well. However, at turning points, such as the one occuring within the past seven months, these two series do not necessarily track each other perfectly, and may, at times, seem to diverge. For example, both rotary rig activity and reported well completions (unadjusted for seasonal variation) peaked in December 1981. Yet for the first five months of 1982, reported well completions were up 31 percent while rig activity was up only 5 percent over the prior year's first five months. While the trend of rotary rigs has been downward this year, that of reported well completions has been upward through May. This seeming divergence can be explained by differences in seasonal variation, definitions and timing.

The relation between these two series is clarified when the typical seasonal variation in each series is removed, since, especially in the case of reported well completions, this variation can be substantial. The seasonally adjusted data plotted in the graph show that adjusted rotary rig activity peaked in December 1981 just as it did without seasonal adjustment. However, the peak in reported well completions in December 1981 disappears with seasonal adjustment, since Decembers are typically high months for this series. Based on preliminary data for June, which show a seasonally adjusted decline from May, the peak in a seasonally adjusted well completion data occurred in May 1982 rather than last December, an indication of a lag between the two series.

This lag can be explained by difference in definitions and timing. A rig is counted as active while it is drilling, but a completion does not occur until a well is plugged (in the case of a dry hole) or completed for production (in the case of a producing oil or gas well). While the length of time it takes to drill a well differs significantly, depending on depth, type of terrain, geologic conditions, and weather, the average time is less than one month. In some cases, completion may not immediately follow the end of drilling, since, for example, an operator may find it more efficient to move a heavy-duty rig to another drill site and wait for a lighter-duty rig to complete the well. Delays also occur when, for instance, to preserve confidentiality, operators do not release information on a well for a period of time. It also takes additional time for state agencies and reporting companies to collect and process the data and transfer it to API. Thus, the wells reportedly by API during a particular month may have been drilled in any of several prior months.

Because the lag between drilling and the reporting of well completions varies, the rig rate and reported well completions are not perfectly correlated at any particular lag. However, a significant change in reported well completions has tended to lag a major change in rig activity by at least three to four months in recent years. Because of this lag, the increase in reported well completions for the first five months of 1982 reflects, in part, the high drilling levels at the end of 1981.

Well completion data provide valuable information on drilling activity not obtainable from the rotary rig count or other sources. This includes trends not only in well completions, but in exploration versus development activity, oil versus gas drilling, success rates, depths, and footage, all by geographic area.

Thus, data on rotary rig activity and reported well completions differ in definitions, seasonal variation, and timing. Both provide valuable information, and each has its own particular uses. The value of both is enhanced when these differences are taken into account.

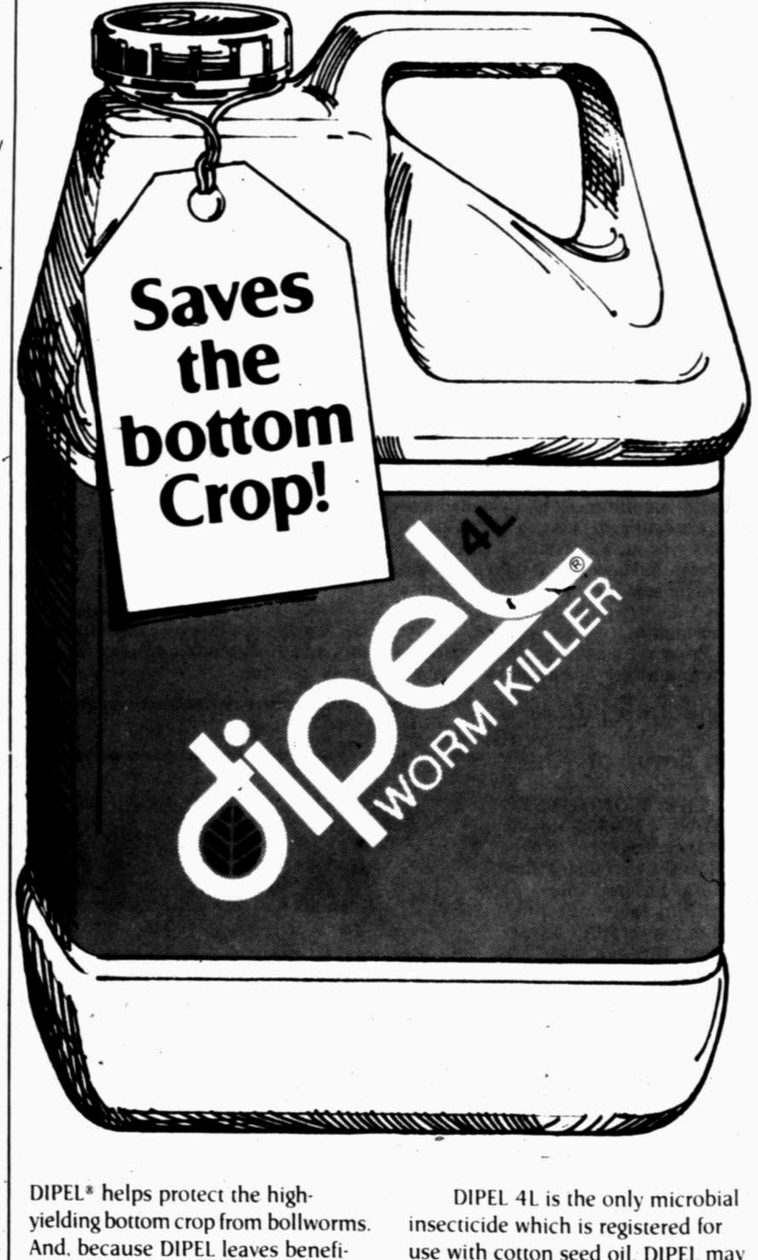
Cotton growers: save bucks and beneficials.



DIPEL® helps protect the high-yielding bottom crop from bollworms. And, because DIPEL leaves beneficials in the field, you reduce the chances of getting locked into a regular-interval spray program. Net result: your overall insecticide costs are likely to be reduced.

Since DIPEL costs less per acre than most conventional insecticides...and beneficials continue working your fields...bottom-line profits should be greater!

DIPEL is a natural, biological worm killer. One bite of treated foliage and worms stop feeding almost immediately...then die within a few days. DIPEL has not shown worm resistance build-up, won't affect boll maturity, and has not shown harmful affects on man or his environment.

DIPEL 4L is the only microbial insecticide which is registered for use with cotton seed oil. DIPEL may also be tank mixed with ovicides such as chlordimeform or methomyl if significant eggs are present at time of treatment.

Apply DIPEL when the majority of worms are less than ⅜" long, and scouting reports show light to moderate (up to 15,000 worms per acre) populations.

This is the year you need to save bucks and beneficials while controlling bollworms. DIPEL does it all!

Mobil head wins libel suit against Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mobil Oil Corp. President William P. Tavoulareas says the $2.05-million libel judgment he won against the Washington Post after three days of jury deliberations was a "victory for responsible journalism."

But as the beaming oilman spoke of his vindication Friday, Post attorney Irving Younger vowed to appeal, saying, "the jury made a mistake."

For nearly 19 hours, the jury of three men and three women debated whether the Post committed libel when it published two stories about the business relationship between Tavoulareas and his son, Peter.

The jury held the Post, reporter Patrick Tyler and freelance journalist Sandy Golden responsible for an article published Nov. 30, 1979.

The story said William Tavoulareas in 1974 set up his son as a partner in a shipping management company, which since has done millions of dollars in business operating Mobil-owned ships under exclusive no-bid contracts. Tyler wrote the article and Golden, not a Post employee, helped arrange an interview.

But an article printed the next day, also cited in the Tavoulareas' $50 million libel suit, was not defamatory, the jury found.

The Dec. 1 story quoted Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House energy subcommittee, as saying the Mobil president may have given false and misleading statements under oath to federal investigators who questioned him about his involvement with his son's firm.

The jurors awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages to the Mobil president to make up for the damage to his reputation. Another $1.8 million was awarded in punitive damages. The total amount was nearly the same as the $2 million the elder Tavoulareas said he and his son spent in legal fees.

Peter Tavoulareas was awarded nothing as a result of the Post articles. But he received $1,000 and his father was awarded $5,000 from Dr. Philip Piro, the oil executive's former son-in-law. Piro was sued for slander because he gave the Post information for the articles.

The separate $20 million slander suit was considered simultaneously with the libel suit.

The Post's executive editor, Benjamin Bradlee, and Bob Woodward, head of an investigative unit at the newspaper, were defendants, but no damages were awarded against them.

Younger, the Post attorney, said he would first ask U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch to set aside the verdict. If that is unsuccessful, he said he would seek to overturn the judgment in the U.S. Court of Appeals.

"The jury made a mistake," said Younger, a former judge. "It is something of a shocker to me because I previously have spoken up in favor of the jury system."

But William Tavoulareas said, "It's a victory for responsible journalism. I guess they thought I was harmed more than my son. I can't explain what a jury does. We're pleased with what they did."

Tavoulareas' lawyer, John J. Walsh, said the verdict was inconsistent and added he would consider an appeal for Peter Tavoulareas.

The younger Tavoulareas said, "I feel totally vindicated."

Walsh told jurors after the compensatory award was announced that the newspaper had circulation and advertising revenues of $335 million in 1981 and that the Washington Post Co.'s parent company had operating revenues for 1981 of $753.4 million.

Astronomer says deep drilling will find gas

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — A Cornell University astronomer said Friday there may be "hundreds of times more" natural gas at great depths than previously thought, and said "deep drilling is the answer to our energy problems for many years to come."

Dr. Thomas Gold testified before what was intended to be an energy development and applications subcommittee hearing of the House Science and Technology Committee.

House rules, however, require representatives of both parties to be present at a subcommittee hearing and Rep. Richard White, D-Texas, was unable to attend.

Reps. Joe Skeen, R-N.M., Jim Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., and three committee staff members heard testimony on the potential of "unconventional" natural gas deposits and the need for new technology to find and develop them.

Testimony also was scheduled by state and local officials and residents on the socio-economic impact of energy development on communities.

Gold has been working for five years with a group at Cornell on the origin of natural gas and its chemical and biological relationship with other hydrocarbon deposits.

He said the research indicates that huge quantities of natural gas, methane, were a byproduct of the formation of the earth and not simply created by the decomposition of plant debris.

There is evidence that natural gas exists at depths of 60 miles, he said.

The gas leaves chemical traces "telltale ground markings" where it has seeped to the surface, Gold said, adding that in Oklahoma there is "clear evidence of a location where something of the order of 20,000 trillion cubic feet must have escaped."

He predicted the search for escape routes will become a major method of prospecting, but said new techniques are needed.

Robert Benner, director of technology of Sun Exploration and Production Co. of Dallas, said the potential for unconventional gas resource is mind-boggling, but its development "depends on the same issues as conventional gas development — technology, economics, both current and perceived, and access to the resource base."

Research to help find and tap deep natural gas is appropriate for government funding, he said.

'Presidential cycle' makes stock analysts bullish

By ANDREW JAFFE
Hearst Feature Service

Something called the "presidential cycle" is causing a number of analysts and stock buffs to get bullish about the stock market again.

"The market is headed higher," says Ian McAvity, publisher of Deliberations, the financial newsletter, and a student of presidential cycles. And Lewis H. Katcher, director of research for Sutro & Co., the San Francisco brokers, says "I subscribe to the theory – it's hard not to."

According to these theorists, the man in the White House determines the troughs and peaks of the market, and throughout history American presidents have traditionally made their tough economic decisions early in their administrations.

As the quadrennial election draws near – usually in the third year of each administration – the incumbent and his party start to worry about re-election and take short-term measures to inflate the economy and drive up stock prices.

Therefore, these theorists believe, the Standard & Poor's Composite Index, which in June dropped to a minus 17 percent, should signal a market climb – if not now, then later this year.

McAvity, a former broker and banker, is one of the world's leading authorities on such presidential cycles, having published scores of charts and articles on the phenomenon.

To test his theory, McAvity studied the period from 1941 to 1980. He created four would-be portfolios of $100,000 each and then tracked what would happen if each portfolio was handled only once every four years. The so-called midterm for second year portfolio would now be worth $566,000.

To him, the test proves the upward force of third-year investments over the bearish quality to be anticipated from second-year investments. McAvity added that research shows the four-year cycle also applies to markets in Canada, Australia, Britain and South Africa.

"Perhaps the four-year cycle doesn't exactly turn on U.S. presidential elections, but it is by far the most convenient excuse around for the market's four-year cyclical nature," says McAvity. He and other technical analysts stress such guides cannot be used to determine with any precision exactly when the market is going to dip or soar.

"Whether we are at the beginning of a new bull market or whether it is going to start a little later in the year is still being debated," McAvity said. "But I don't think the market is about to fall off a cliff."

"You can't look at any one tool," says Katcher. "You combine all the information at hand. After I've looked at the fundamentals and they lead me to believe a market bottom will occur, the historical precedent seen in the election cycle only makes me believe more strongly in my convictions."

Besides the stock market's undervaluation, McAvity believes the U.S. economy generally is set for a recovery. "It's now more of a question of applying the brakes to a decline than getting any sustained growth," he said. "Whatever the indicators, there is little bad news for the market. That's because the market is always looking beyond the present, much the same way the market bottomed in the Great Depression in June 1932, while the economy did not begin to improve until 18 months later.

"That shows the market is a lot smarter than any one analyst."

Oil planner dismayed by complacency about supplies

GARLAND (SWN) — A major oil company planner said Friday he is dismayed at U.S. complacency about oil supply security and that the potential for price explosions remains "very real".

Archie W. Dunham, Conoco Vice President for logistics and downstream planning, told the Garland Chamber of Commerce that Mideast instability is the key to future gasoline prices.

"The energy world today is unstable, and the Middle East is without doubt one of the most politically unstable areas of the world," Dunham said. "Assassination seems to be an accepted means of political expression."

Dunham cited statistics that said between 1948 and 1973, the Arab world suffered 30 successful revolutions and at least 50 unsuccessful ones.

"As politically distasteful as some of these regimes may be, the world needs their oil," Dunham said. "And if the U.S. does not trade with these countries, the Soviets will gladly step in."

The Conoco executive said the U.S. still imports 32 percent of its oil, down from 40 percent in 1980. "U.S. oil production is projected to decline in the future, and so the U.S. dependence on imported oil will remain at an uncomfortably high level," he said. "Clearly a major source of this oil will be the Middle East."

Dunham said that of the major Mideast oil producing countries, only a few could currently be considered as friends of the United States.

He said that in 1980, 60 percent of all the oil in international commerce passed through the Strait of Hormuz in the Persian Gulf.

"If, for any reason, the Strait of Hormuz were to be closed, the economies of the world's oil importing countries would, quite literally, be in a stranglehold," Dunham said.

"Frankly, I am dismayed at how quickly the U.S. has become complacent about the long-term security of its oil supplies, and how quickly we have abandoned the development of alternate energy sources," Dunham said. "In my opinion, the potential for further oil supply disruptions and future price explosions is still very real."

Dunham told the group that barring major foreign disruptions, he expected pump prices of gasoline to go up about five cents a gallon during the remainder of 1982.

State closes Boston bank for failure to pay loans

BOSTON (AP) — The Unity Bank and Trust Co. of Boston has been closed for failure to pay loans, but a new bank will take over all its liabilities, state banking officials say.

Banking Commissioner Gerald T. Mulligan got permission to close the bank, which had 7,200 depositors, late Friday at a hearing before Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Justice Ruth Abrams.

State officials and members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation then arranged the purchase of the bank by the newly formed Boston Bank of Commerce.

Mulligan said he acted after Unity, which has had cash problems since 1971, failed to pay outstanding loans to the FDIC.

"Unity has been plagued by a capital problem and has had its life extended by capital infusions from the FDIC and the four major Boston commercial banks since 1971," said Mulligan.

"The end of the conservatorship is appropriate in view of the bank's inability to achieve viability over the past 11 years."

Mulligan said the two offices of black-owned Unity, in Boston's Roxbury and Mattapan sections, would open Monday under the ownership of The Boston Bank of Commerce.

The minority-owned bank will be headed by Juan Cofield, vice president of Malmart Mortgage Co., who will serve as president and chief executive officer. The list of bank directors includes former state Attorney General Edward J. McCormack Jr.

Alan Whitney, an information officer with the FDIC in Washington, said the FDIC would advance the new bank $6.1 million in cash, while retaining $6.2 million in outstanding loans issued by the failed bank.

He said the FDIC will also assume responsibility for a $500,000 loan made to Unity by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

The Massachusetts Community Development Finance Corp. purchased $800,000 of stock in the new bank, which Mulligan says has pledged to finance small businesses, low-income housing and projects that will create jobs in the community.

"Not only are the deposits of Unity Trust customers safe, but we now have a stronger institution better able to serve the minority community in Roxbury and the greater Boston area," he said.

Mulligan said the bank's problems go back to July 1971 when then-Commissioner of Banks Freyda P. Koplow placed Unity under state conservatorship.

The FDIC loaned $1.5 million to the bank and several Boston banks joined together to loan an additional $450,000 to the bank. The notes, to be paid on Dec. 30, 1976, were extended to June 30 of this year.

White House order dismays DOE

By MILTON R. BENJAMIN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The White House, in a move that has caused dismay at the Department of Energy, has ordered a new look at whether a $7 billion uranium enrichment plant under construction in Portsmouth, Ohio, should be terminated or delayed in view of "current congressional funding problems," it was learned Friday.

Energy Department officials Friday said they virtually had completed the new analysis, which was ordered by the White House only three weeks ago, and it "would continue to show a strong economic incentive to proceed" with the plant.

The review, ordered in a July 7 memorandum from presidential counselor Edwin Meese III to Energy Secretary James B. Edwards, follows a General Accounting Office report to Congress which concludes that building the new facility "is not justified" in view of the declining U.S. and world demand for uranium enrichment services.

Only a month ago, Assistant Energy Secretary Shelby T. Brewer told a Senate hearing the Portsmouth Gas Centrifuge Enrichment Plant still had the full backing of the Reagan administration.

The Energy Department has argued that the new facility, which uses the centrifuge enrichment process instead of the far more expensive gaseous diffusion process employed by the three existing government enrichment plants, is needed to enable the United States to remain a leading world supplier of nuclear fuel for atomic power stations.

Nevertheless, the fact that officials in the White House are questioning the new Portsmouth facility seems likely to fuel opposition in Congress, particularly in view of the GAO report and a Congressional Research Service study issued at about the same time questioning the need for the new plant.

The GAO suggested that the Department of Energy — which is developing an advanced isotope separation enrichment technology that could provide a much less costly way of enriching uranium — should continue using its existing plants until the new technique is ready.

Brewer contended, however, that the isotope separation technology "must reach a much higher stage of development before it can be counted on," and that in the meantime, the new Portsmouth facility offers the United States the opportunity to reduce the cost of enriching uranium and compete for new contracts.

Until this year, the Portsmouth project has been relatively uncontroversial. Congress has appropriated $1.2 billion for construction work to date with nothing like the debates that have surrounded less costly nuclear projects such as the Clinch River fast breeder reactor. The Reagan administration is asking an additional $613 million for the plant in the coming fiscal year.

"But I think the White House is clearly rethinking the new enrichment plant," a member of the staff of Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said Friday. Metzenbaum, a strong backer of the new facility which would create an additional 2,000 jobs in his state, made available a copy of the Meese memorandum.

Energy Department officials Friday suggested, however, that the memorandum did not reflect any weakening in White House support for the Portsmouth project. Several expressed contempt for the staff work that went into the memo, noting it also called for continued study of the possible transfer of the government's three existing uranium enrichment plants to the private sector — an idea generally viewed as a practical impossibility.

"Thank God the memo is only one page," one Energy Department official said.

No private companies in recent years have expressed any interest in purchasing the three existing enrichment plants — located at Portsmouth, Paducah, Ky., and Oak Ridge, Tenn. — which use massive amounts of electricity and are now regarded as uneconomical to operate commercially.

Beyond that, any proposal to sell these plants to private interests would certainly run into stiff opposition in Congress. In addition to producing low enriched uranium fuel for atomic power stations, the facilities also turn out more highly enriched uranium fuel for the U.S. Navy's nuclear submarines.

The Meese memorandum also instructed the Energy Department to analyze the possibility of government "incentives for getting the private sector to complete construction" of the new Portsmouth facility.

Sources expressed doubt that any private company would currently be interested in putting up the $6 billion needed to complete the plant by 1994, particularly since the construction work — if the plant were being built for a private enterprise rather than by the government — would presumably become subject to Nuclear Regulatory Commission hearings and regulation.

June crude oil imports up from year ago

WASHINGTON — Total imports of oil (crude oil and products) in June increased as compared with the same month a year ago, the American Petroleum Institute reported recently. It was the first year-to-year increase in imports since October 1979.

The API's Monthley Statistical Report showed imports up 2.1 percent in June to an average of 5,130,000 barrels per day (bpd) from 5,023,000 bpd in June 1981.

The Report noted, however, that for the first six months of the year, total imports were 20.8 percent lower than during the January-June period of 1981. The daily average in 1982 over the first six months was 4,663,000 bpd in the first half of 1981.

Total domestic production was up 0.1 percent in June of this year compared to June 1981. As to production in the lower 48 along, "had the decline trend of most of the Seventies continued," the Report noted, "lower 48 production would at this point be about 800,000 bpd below current levels."

The level of total domestic products supplied in June of this year was 8.4 percent lower than June a year ago. API estimates that the 14,655,000 bpd of total domestic products supplied, was below levels for April and May of this year, contrary to usual seasonal patterns. This seems to indicate that inventories of distributors and consumers had to a large extent been replenished.

Gasoline supplied to the market declined from 7,001,000 bpd in June 1981 to 6,887,000 bpd or 1.6 percent.

The Report noted that "even after experiencing some upward correction in May and June, real gasoline prices twoard the end of the second quarter were still about 17¢ (13 percent) below the March 1981 high."

The level of distillates supplied in June 1982 was 6.9 percent below that of a year ago. When adjusted for the severe winter of 1981-82, distillate deliveries during the first half of 1982 were about four percent below the level for the first six months of 1981.

The energy outlook

Gov. Bill Clements should be commended for his decisiveness in structuring a national energy policy and we have to agree with him when he says the United States "can no longer afford the luxury of not having a national energy policy."

Clements, the first Republican governor of the Lone Star State in more than a century, hit the nail smack on the head at the 48th annual meeting of the Southern Governors Association on Hilton Head Island, S.C.

But the governor wasn't complaining about the inroads in oil production made so far during President Reagan's term. It's just a matter of fact that other than efforts to free the oil industry from some of the burdensome and costly rules and regulations — and price controls — the administration hasn't exactly been a ball of fire at putting the United States on firm energy footing.

It's getting late, unfortunately. In fact, Daniel Yergin's insightful article in the July 11 edition of New York Time Magazine noted that "according to calculations developed for 'Global Insecurity,' the last two oil shocks have cost the United States and other major industrial countries $1.1 trillion in lost economic growth — which Americans are now experiencing in the form of the worst economic slump and the highest unemployment since the Great Depression.

There is high probability of another oil shock, which could trigger far graver economic and political consequences."

But the instability of the world oil picture is well-known to most Midlanders. The outlook changes incessantly and for all the strides made in reducing America's dependence on foreign sources, we remain tied to foreign governments.

And oil isn't the only energy picture either. Any Midland oilman will tell you that the United States needs to rely on every available energy source at its disposal to meet current and future needs.

Clements' energy policy addresses numerous forms of energy, including a call for safe and increased use of nuclear energy, intensive federal research and development of other potential energy sources, and federal development of synthetic fuels.

The energy future of the United States is not a subject to be taken lightly or handled in a haphazard fashion. Yet this nation has known for two decades that it faces a worsening situation in regard to energy and no action has been taken. On the federal level little action is being taken currently.

Just maybe the governor's action will give Mr. Reagan and others in his administration the inclination to get started on the energy situation before it's too late.

Righting Navy justice

The U.S. Navy, like most institutions, is reluctant to acknowledge its mistakes publicly. But the decision to release Petty Officer Darryl Summons after he had served only eight days of a three-months confinement sentence amounts to a tacit admission that something went wrong in the Navy's handling of the Ranger cases.

Whether or not higher naval authorities ever review the entire Ranger affair — and we continue to think they should — Rear Adm. Paul T. Gillcrist deserves credit for commuting Summons' excessive punishment. In so doing, Gillcrist restored a measure of the confidence lost in naval justice when Summons ended up taking the rap for all of those who shared some measure of responsibility for the tragic death of Airman Recruit Paul Trerice.

San Diego's senior naval official also did the Navy a favor by agreeing to support formation of a local military-civilian council to improve relations between the service and the minority community. This too should help dispel some of the negative impressions left in the wake of the Ranger affair. Confronting problems head on, and before they get out of hand, is always preferable to simply wishing they would go away.

The Navy can hardly afford to permit doubts about its system of justice, least of all when the impression is left in the ranks of a double standard for officers and enlisted ratings. Similarly, a Navy served by members of all races cannot tolerate even the appearance of racism.

Gillcrist has wiped a portion of the slate clean on both counts. It now remains for his superiors in Washington to finish the job by examining all aspects of the Ranger cases including the question of whether correctional custody units aboard ship are worth preserving.

Another View:

Finding a good hotel

At the height of the 1968 Tet offensive in Saigon, the manager of the Caravelle Hotel resorted to emergency supplies in his freezer to feed reporters escargots and wild-boar patties.

At the Alcron Hotel in Prague, after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968, the blonde thrush in the satin dress in the dining room sang "Those were the days, my friend," while reporters fought for the Telex machine, drank Pilsener beer and "tipped" the receptionists to honor room reservations.

At the Europa Hotel in Belfast, the manager organized a party with a large chocolate sheet cake to mark the hotel's 25th bombing by the Irish Republican Army. The reporters there for the troubles in Northern Ireland raised a glass, maybe two, to honor the courageous and good-humored hotel staff.

The list of hotels remembered by foreign correspondents for extraordinary service in times of crises is a long one, and includes the Inter-Continental in Iran and the Grande Bretagne in Athens. Now, add one more, the Commodore in West Beirut, a hotel owned by Youssef Nazzal.

Nazzal keeps the telephones working, the lights on and the right people bribed. Nazzal paid off enough people during the civil war in 1975 and 1976 to keep shells from landing on the hotel. He cannot provide those assurances these days, but he can offer eggs and croissants when no one else has them; he can also repair the shelters, and even supply some cash for reporters caught short. His own wells provided water when the city's supply was cut off. His own gunmen keep watch.

Like all the other hotels in other capitals in other times in other crises, the Commodore manages to function against the odds. Readers of newspapers, viewers of television and journalists everywhere owe a debt of gratitude to men like Nazzal, the managers of the Caravelle and the Inter-Continental and all the others suddenly crushed by demands of the working press.

It is no easy task for these hotel managers and their employees, who sometimes weaken under pressure. One morning after a bombing at the Europa in Belfast, a reporter asked a waitress for a cup of coffee without cream. "Sorry," she said, "we don't have cream." "In that case," the weary reporter replied, "I'll have coffee without milk."

Confusion. Courage. Humor. Service. The stuff that good hotels are made of.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Feds risk children's health for profits

WASHINGTON — Incredibly, the Reagan administration appears willing to risk the health of hundreds of thousands of anonymous pre-schoolers just so the oil companies can make a few bucks. Here's the disturbing story:

Jack Anderson

The administration wants to relax the regulation that limits the amount of lead allowed in gasoline. One of the plans would permit double the amount of lead — 1 gram per gallon instead of the current one-half gram.

Adding lead is a relatively cheap way to boost gasoline octane. The trouble is that when leaded gasoline burns, the exhaust fumes are loaded with poisonous lead particles. Overexposure to lead fumes can cause mental retardation in small children; 2- and 3-year olds are particularly vulnerable.

But the oil companies have been pushing for relaxation of the lead standard. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates the saving to the refiners anywhere from $22 million to $100 million a year.

Vice President George Bush's Task Force on Regulatory Relief has bought the oil industry's line and proposed a relaxation of the existing limit on lead content.

In fact, EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch has acted as if the lead regulation has already been repealed. Last year, she personally allowed a New Mexico oil refinery to violate the existing limit on lead without penalty.

The peculiar reasoning behind her decision to wink at the violation was explained in a report by the EPA inspector general. Referring to a meeting of Gorsuch and her subordinates, the I.G. report stated: "Six witnesses who attended the meeting advised in substance that the Administrator stated that since EPA planned on re-examining the lead phasedown regulations, she would not take enforcement actions against subject if it violated (the rules)."

In other words, she lived up to the "Doonesbury" comic strip that depicted Gorsuch winking at a polluting industry executive. But it's not funny. The EPA's own scientific study of the effect on public health of greater lead content in gasoline is truly appalling. My associate John Dillon obtained a copy of the scientists' report, which was intended for official eyes only.

"Relaxing EPA's lead standards could push an additional 2 to 4 percent of black and white pre-school children over the lead poisoning threshold in 1983," the scientists concluded. "This could mean an additional several hundred thousand children above the danger level."

Nationwide, they estimated, from 1 to 1.5 percent of all pre-school children — or about 200,000 — would be above the danger level if the lead limit is raised. "Allowing room for error," the report states, "50,000 seems the minimum reasonable estimate nationwide ... 500,000 is probably the maximum."

The scientists reckoned that more than 10,000 black toddlers in New York and Chicago alone would be breathing in dangerous amounts of lead fumes. Inner city kids, engulfed as they are in exhaust fumes, would suffer the most damage.

Some examples of the increase in the number of urban pre-schoolers who would ingest dangerous amounts of lead if the rule regulation is relaxed: In New York City, the increase would be 19 percent; in Chicago, 14 percent, and in Louisville, a mind-boggling 47 percent.

The scientists warned that the dire effects might not be confined to the romper room set. Even children above five, whose better-developed brains are less susceptible to lead poisoning, would be in some danger from an increase in lead fumes, the report indicates.

In the coldblooded way government bureaucrats must calculate the "cost-effectiveness" of existing or proposed regulations, the EPA scientists figured out what the half-gram lead limit costs the oil companies each year. "It is likely that the EPA's regulations cost between $500 and $2,000 per child" to protect them from overexposure to lead fumes, the report states.

But the agency's calculators didn't stop there, fortunately. They proceeded to compute the long-range cost to society for medical treatment and special education of children whose brains had been damaged by the additional amounts of lead in the air.

If the oil companies are allowed to double the amount of lead per gallon of gasoline, the medical costs would be staggering. The EPA study predicted about 11,000 additional black toddlers in just New York and Chicago who would be above the danger level.

"If they were all detected, tested and treated, this would cost $32 million," the study states, adding: "Nationwide, we would incur a cost of $140 million to $1.4 billion."

This, the report adds with acute understatement, "is significantly more than the cost of the regulation."

Even a more modest increase in lead content, from the current .5 to .65 grams per gallon, would incur additional medical costs of $12 million in New York and Chicago, and $60-600 million nationwide, the experts estimated.

The extra educational costs alone for children with temporary or permanent learning disabilities is estimated at anywhere from $20 million to $200 million if the lead content is doubled; if it is allowed to go only to .65 grams per gallon, the extra education costs would be $8-80 million.

So even ignoring the intangible cost in human suffering, relaxation of the lead limit regulation is a poor dollars-and-cents proposition. To save the oil companies $22 million to $100 million, the proposed change would cost the rest of us anywhere from $68 million to $1.6 billion. That can't make sense even to a voodoo economist.

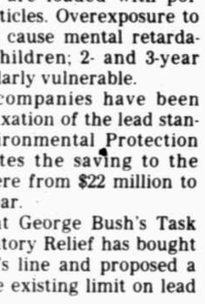
GEORGE F. WILL

Wilde may have remembered Mt. Elbert

LEADVILLE, Colo. — Like all Westerners whose fates have been tied to extraction industries, folks here are familiar with booms and busts. This town of 5,000 once was a roughneck boom town. But in 1982, with the molybdenum mine closed by recession, residents of this nicely placed place, facing the front range of the Rockies at 10,200 feet, can enjoy the view and remember better days. One of the best was a century ago, when Leadville was larger than Denver, and the famous aesthete came to lecture the locals about pretty things.



George F. Will

Before the spring of 1860, few — if any — white men had been in this part of the Arkansas River valley. But by July, gold finds had drawn 10,000 adventurers. By 1864 about 300 remained. In the 1890s lead and silver produced a Leadville of between 30,000 and 60,000 — no one knows for sure because in those days people followed wandering stars and did not loiter. However, everyone knows that a red-letter day in Leadville was April 14, 1882, the day a train decanted Oscar Wilde.

He later said that Leadville's miners, in their red shirts, high boots and corduroy trousers, were "the only well-dressed men I have seen in America." What those hearty fellows made of his getup can be imagined. Told that Leadville rowdies would shoot either him or his manager, he replied that he could not be intimidated by anything done to his manager.

"I read them passages from the autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini and they seemed much delighted. I was reproved by my hearers for not having brought him with me. I explained that he had been dead for some little time, which elicted the inquiry, 'Who shot him?'"

In another letter: "I spoke to them of early Florentines, and they slept....I described to them the pictures of Botticelli, and the name, which seemed to them like a new drink, roused them from their dreams....." Letter writers are not under oath.

What is touching is the ache for refinement and self-improvement that caused communities like Leadville to import the likes of Wilde to proclaim that "life without industry is sin, and industry without art is barbarism." After the lecture, a torchlight parade took Wilde and his host, Horace Tabor, to Tabor's Matchless Mine, into which they descended in a bucket for what Wilde called a banquet: "When I quaffed a cocktail without flinching, they unanimously pronounced me in their grand simple way 'a bully boy with no glass eye.'"

Tabor was a classic Western figure, a boom-town store owner who made a fortune in silver and land, and became a senator. In the eventful year of 1882, he married a dashing divorcee. A decade later he was bankrupt. The dashing divorcee was found frozen to death in a shack beside the Matchless Mine in 1935.

Before staying a night with Jefferson Davis at his plantation, Wilde passed through St. Joseph, Mo., where people were paying "the income of an English Bishop" for relics from the house of a recently deceased celebrity, Jesse James. Before that, Wilde had visited a Nebraska prison:

"Poor odd types of humanity in hideous striped dresses making bricks in the sun, and all mean-looking, which consoled me, for I should hate to see a criminal with a noble face. Little whitewashed cells, so tragically tidy, but with books in them. In one I found a translation of Dante....Strange and beautiful it seemed to me that the sorrow of a single Florentine in exile should, hundreds of years afterwards, lighten the sorrow of some common prisoner in a modern goal...."

Wilde was to read Dante in Reading jail.

When he arrived in America in 1882, Wilde was asked by customs officials if he had anything to declare. He replied: "Only my genius!" Fifteen years later in Reading jail, he wrote (in "De Profundis") that he had been "the spendthrift of my genius....I forgot that every little action of the common day makes or unmakes character."

He died in his 47th year, as a new century was born, in 1900, in the Hotel d'Alsace in Paris. There, a wit to the end, he said he was dying beyond his means. A monument by Sir Jacob Epstein marks his Paris grave. If, at the end, after a life of boom and bust, he thought of beauty and better days, he may have remembered the rays of the rising sun striking the second highest peak in the continental United States — Mt. Elbert, at Leadville.

BIBLE VERSE

But let each man prove his own work, and then shall he have his glorying in regard of himself alone, and not of his neighbor. Gal. 6:4

ART BUCHWALD

Don't burden anyone with a nice day!

The trouble with most people is that they never seem to leave well enough alone. The other day I said to H. Boyer Royal.

Art Buchwald

"Have a nice day."

"Are you asking me a question?" he wanted to know.

"No, I'm telling you."

"What business of yours is it what kind of day I have?"

"It really isn't of any of my business. As a matter of fact, I really don't care what your day is like. I was trying to say goodbye to you in a friendly fashion."

"Then why didn't you just say, 'Time is like a fashionable host, that slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand, and with his arms outstretched as he would fly, grasps in the comer; welcome ever smiles, and farewell goes out sighing.'"

"I don't know why I didn't say that," I told him. "It never occurred to me."

"People always tell you to have a nice day, but they never tell you how to have one."

"I imagine they assume that each person should know how to do it. A nice day to somebody may not necessarily be a nice day to another. The farmer may want it to rain; a lady who just bought a new bathing suit may want the sun to shine. Having your kid away from home could be a nice day for some people, while others will settle for a parking place in town. When you tell someone to have a nice day, you're not responsible for how it turns out."

"Has it ever occurred to you," Royal said, "that when you tell someone to have a nice day you might be putting a curse on him?"

"I don't believe it has. Would you care to explain yourself?"

"Well, until you said it to me I wasn't giving any thought to what kind of day I was going to have. I was going to take it as it came. But now that you've planted the idea in my head, I'm going to keep thinking about it. When I return to my office I'll worry that Rosalie Caplan hasn't returned my call. I'll stew that Ann Bodner in personnel is working on a new 'reduction in force' for the company. I'll wonder how much traffic I'll have to fight to get home. And when I get to the front door I'll be nervous about what mood my wife is in. I know the odds of having a nice day are stacked against me, but until you wished me one, I was able to ignore it. People should not say to anyone 'Have a nice day,' when they don't know what that person is up against. It's like putting the evil eye on them."

"I believe you're reading too much into my goodbye," I told him. "When someone says, 'Have a nice day,' he is only wishing you good luck."

"Then why doesn't he say, 'May the road rise up to meet you and may the wind be always at your back, and may you get to heaven before the devil knows you're there?'"

"Because most people are in a hurry, and that takes too long to say, unless you're leaving an Irish bar. Why are you making such an issue of a simple thing like this?"

"I guess it's a question of sincerity. Everyone tells you to have a nice day. But how many people do you know really care if you do or not?"

"Royal, you're a cynic."

"I am not. I know a department store, and they train their employees to say 'Have a nice day' to everybody."

"Well, wouldn't you rather have them say that than to tell you what's really on their minds?"

"No, I think people should level with you. They should tell you what's on their minds. How can you know whom to trust when even the people who work in the post office tell you to have a nice day?"

"Well, Royal, I'm sure you realize that when I wished you a nice day, I meant it from the bottom of my heart."

"How can I be sure you weren't just trying to get rid of me?"

"Because I never say it to somebody unless I truly like and admire them. If you don't want to have a nice day that's all right with me, too."

"There you go," Royal cried. "You're putting the evil eye on me again."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, August 1, the 213th day of 1982. There are 152 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 1, 1914, Germany declared war on Russia at the outbreak of World War I.

On this date:

In 1790, the first U.S. census was taken.

In 1876, Colorado was admitted to the union as the 38th state.

In 1904, Japan declared war on China in a dispute over Korea.

Ten years ago: U.S. war planes bombed a shipyard in the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong for the first time during the Vietnam War.

Once again, deregulation issue trucking toward Legislature

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Proponents and opponents of trucking deregulation are gearing up for a major battle in the 1983 Legislature, with both sides arguing that their position is the one which will most benefit customers.

It's not a new argument — efforts were made in 1981, for example, to deregulate the trucking industry in Texas — but it appears the debate will be more vigorous than ever during the coming session.

Trucking is big business in Texas.

The Railroad Commission estimates motor carrier operations in Texas in 1981, including operation by interstate firms based outside Texas but operating within the state, produced some $13 billion in revenues.

The Railroad Commission currently licenses some 2,400 motor carriers, of which some 1,600 to 1,700 are described as "active."

Austin attorney Jack Gullahorn represents Texas Association to Improve Distribution, or Tex-AID, which he says is composed of "concerned business folks who want to achieve some changes...in the entry and rate parts of motor transportation regulation."

What Tex-AID wants, Gullahorn says, is simply nothing more or nothing less than allowing the free enterprise system to operate.

Most of Tex-AID's members, he reports, are shippers, along with some carriers and some members of the Texas Motor Transportation Association, which is expected to provide the major opposition to Tex-AID's plans.

"They believe," Gullahorn says, "there must be some changes in the system for them to operate in a competitive manner, and I think they're right."

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

It was the shippers, he says, who initiated the proposal.

"They think that their shipping costs are disproportionately high because of the over-amount of regulation that we have in Texas intrastate shipping.

"Tex-AID will support legislation to deregulate transportation...We'll be interested in other legislation dealing with deregulation," Gullahorn says.

"I think a deregulatory bill is something that a lot of legislators may find interesting."

The subject of deregulation, indeed, may be more timely than usual, since the Railroad Commission is in the process of being reviewed by the Sunset Advisory Commission, which is to recommend any changes in the agency's operations to the 1983 session.

A number of shippers have been making their views known to the SAC staff, Gullahorn says.

Robert Floyd, vice president of the Texas Motor Transportation Association, has a different view of Tex-AID's proposal.

"We're opposed to it," he says.

"We're supportive of the regulated transportation system in Texas, and the Railroad Commission's regulation over the motor carrier industry."

The Railroad Commission, Floyd says, hasn't recommended changing the system, and TMTA agrees with that position.

Floyd agrees there has been a move away from industry regulation in recent years, but he's not sure that's always a good idea.

"Deregulation has been a real buzz word, particularly in Washington," Floyd comments.

"That doesn't necessarily mean that it's been a good trend."

The federal government, he argues, supported deregulation of the airline industry, and that deregulation is blamed, at least in part, for the failure of Braniff International Airlines.

And there have been failures of major trucking firms in Texas within the past year, Floyd says, even under a regulated system.

"There's a question of whether an excessive kind of competition is in the public interest," he says.

Deregultion doesn't create more freight to be hauled, he argues, and would result in more carriers competing for the same amount of business.

"The quality of service to shippers and receivers will go down, particularly for smaller communities," he contends.

That, Floyd says, will hurt the effort to locate smaller- to medium-sized manufacturing plants outside Texas' main urban areas.

Those plants, he argues, won't locate "unless they have a stable source of tranportation...one that won't discriminate on the basis of rates or preferred treatment."

Gullahorn says it's "hard to believe" that people don't want to talk about deregulation.

"It's not going to hurt anybody, or kill anybody, who's prepared to operate in a competitive marketplace."

SPEAKING OUT

You can help create 'home, safe home'

By SGT. LALO CAMARILLO

Sgt. Lalo Camarillo, coordinator of Midland Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit, came to Midland in 1955 from Santa Rosa. A 20-year veteran of the police force, he has been coordinator of the Crime Prevention Unit the past five years.

For millions of Americans the term "safe at home" has a familiar and reassuring ring. Traditionally, most of us here regard our home as a castle, a refuge, a place safe from the intrusions of "crime in the streets," but during the past decade many citizens have found that their homes are no longer islands of safety. They are slowly awakening to the fact that the hazards to body and property from burglary, fire or accidents are a real and present danger.

No one can absolutely prevent burglaries, but you can create an environment in which burglaries are less likely to occur. There are two principal components within such a "safe environment." The first consists of maintaining an adequate system of door locks. The windows should be secured where they cannot be opened more than 3 inches. Along those lines, we the crime prevention officers emphasize strongly that the homeowner should make provisions to secure certain windows in such a way that a person can egress in case of an emergency.

For those homeowners that wish to have their homes secured with an alarm system, we make certain recommendations and assist both the homeowner and the burglar alarm company's personnel as to what kind of alarm unit is most suitable for each area and the location where the unit is to be installed.

The second part of this environment is to create the appearance that your house is occupied, even when it is not. A majority of burglars prefer to work in unoccupied homes or apartments. And, unfortunately, far too many homeowners advertise the fact that their home or apartment is unoccupied. If you are going to be away from your home for some time, we recommend the following:

— Be certain to cancel or stop all kinds of deliveries, such as mail, newspapers, milk, water and the like, which would pile up in your mailbox or on your front step and thus announce the fact that your home was unoccupied.

— In a number of recent cases, burglars have used the telephone to confirm whether or not a home was unoccupied. Under the pretext of selling a nonexisting product or service, they call homeowners to discover whether the residence is occupied. If you are leaving for some time, consider having your phone turned off.

— Use a timing device to turn on a bedroom or bathroom lamp and a radio also, if possible, to create the illusion your home is occupied. A timer can automatically turn the lamp on and off at any selected time period. The illumination provided by the lamp might also silhouette an intruder through windows of your home, alerting neighbors or police to the intruder's presence.

— Notify police exactly when you will be away, whether or not any lights will be on, which, if any, vehciles may be parked in your driveway or near your home, and the license numbers and descriptions for those vehicles. If you have a second car that you are not taking on your trip, arrange to park it in the driveway, rather than in your garage. This accomplishes two things. First, it makes it appear that somone is home and, second, it prevents burglars from backing a van up close to your front door or garage and loading bulky items stolen from the house into the van without being detected.

— Arrange for someone to cut the lawn regularly and to remove advertising circulars and litter which might blow on to your property.

— Leave an extra key with one of your nearby neighbors so that your home may be inspected by police if necessary.

— Do not publicize your trip or plans by sending notices to local social column editors, etc. or by discussing these plans at local stores, beauty parlors, etc.

— Do not leave notices pinned to the doors or your home for servicemen, deliverymen, etc.

— Our last and best recommendation is to inform your nearby neighbors of your absence and to report any and all suspicious persons and occurrences around your home. Advise your neighbors not to investigate the matter themselves but simply to report it to the police and let them do what needs to be done.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

POSITIVE THINKING

Every problem has a solution

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Once on an air flight I noticed a series of blades extending down the wings of the plane. Being curious I inquired about them and was told the blades were called "vortex generators."

It seems when the air is too smooth the big jet will not steer as accurately as required. These vortex generators cause air to swirl toward the rear section of the plane and this provides sufficient "turbulence" or directional accuracy. In other words, some roughness has to be added to improve flight conditions.

Perhaps suffering and hardship serve the same purpose for a human being as vortex generators do for a plane. Maybe we need difficulties and problems to help us develop a sense of direction so that we may ultimately reach the destination intended for us in life. This philosophy of human existence shows up in much of the mail I receive through this column. The following letter is a case in point:

"I have buried two sons," writes Mrs. Mildred F., of Downey, Calif. "One died of disease, the other through the accidental discharge of a gun. I have had nine operations, rheumatic fever and heart disease. Now you are probably going to think, 'My, my that poor woman!' But don't you dare. Save your pity or some poor soul who isn't tough-minded and optimistic."

So begins a letter from a lady who has what it takes to make her way through life's roughness — from problems to solutions.

"They tell me I have heart disease," she continues, "and they gave me only one year to live back in 1959. I don't believe they always know, especially about us Irish Christians, who are made of pretty tough stuff! I am 45 years young. I'm going to live to be 90 years young, if the Lord wills it.

"I've never been in need," she goes on to say, "since I found the Lord. He always supplies my need one way or another. So don't waste any pity on me. I'm pround that God has enough faith in me so that He has chosen me to bear these crosses, and I'm grateful that He gave me such strong back to bear them.

"I could go on and on, but I think you get the picture by now — hearing from a happy Christian. I am happy. You must get lots of letters from people who sing sad songs. So I thought maybe a letter from someone like me might brighten up your day."

And so it has. Reading this letter reminds me of a slogan which a famous football coach used to give his players. in fact he had it on a sign in the locker room. It read: "When the going gets tough, let the tough get going." Such people find solutions to tough problems.

"May I just add a little something more," the letter goes on, "that an old minister friend told me years ago which has helped me over many rough spots. He said, 'Mildred, if you just keep your eyes looking up and your knees close to the floor, everything will come out all right.' "

Well, that is quite a letter and indeed refreshing in tone. It is a fact that no matter how difficult or overwhelming a problem is — as when a loved one dies or on being told that you have an incurable disease — people who really trust God do in fact arrive at solutions. Carlyle once said that life asks of each of us one question: Will you be a hero or a coward?

Nowadays some people seem to think that the goal of human progress is elimination of all difficulty. Of course, this is not possible. But actually a basic part of living creatively is to accept pain and difficulty as a challenge. It helps a lot to believe that the God who made this universe gives us difficulties in our own best interest. God wants to make something of us and people do not grow in soft and fortuitous circumstances. Struggle toughens personality.

Charles de Gaulle has said that the man of character finds a special attractiveness in difficulty since it is only by coming to grips with difficulty that he can realize his potentialities.

Politicians fighting 'Carter's syndrome'

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Washington Bureau
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — In his quest for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, a formidable obstacle faced by South Carolina's shrewd and often cuttingly candid Sen. Ernest Hollings is a politically debilitating disease known as "Carter's syndrome."

Were he not suffering its affects, the 60-year-old ideological moderate would still be a long shot against the likes of Ted Kennedy, Walter Mondale, and John Glenn. With "Carter's syndrome," however, he is but a long, long shot.

It is one of the unfortunate facts of current political life that any presidential aspirant from the old Confederacy must be likened to Jimmy Carter, the ever-smiling Georgian whose White House years were ineffectual and whose defense of the presidency against Ronald Reagan was a disaster.

It is not surprising, therefore, that Hollings is seeking to dispel any suggestions that he — a former South Carolina governor and 16-year veteran of the Senate — is another Carter.

And, indeed, he is not.

Hollings is an effective Dixie power broker, who wields tremendous influence in Senate circles and who possesses a keen understanding of the workings of both the federal government and the national economy.

Carter came to Washington with no coherent policy or vision of the direction in which the nation should move, says Hollings, as he describes his own precise program to reduce the federal deficit and rehabilitate the economy.

The Hollings plan would include a "freeze" on all cost-of-living adjustments, except for food stamps and Social Security benefits; a lid on defense spending at three percent of real growth and the abolition of indexing, which forces benefits for a host of programs to rise with the inflation rate.

The articulate white-haired senator also would revive the old Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which was born under Herbert Hoover, flourished under Franklin D. Roosevelt and died under Dwight Eisenhower, as a means of providing federal loans to aid the development of American business and industry.

With his program, says Hollings, the budget would "stop hemorrhaging," the deficit would be reduced to $30 billion in 1985 and the money markets would start investing. Without his program or something close to it, he predicts, the dificit will hit $150 billion in 1985 and recovery will be long in coming.

The Hollings plan may not fit the liberal orthodoxy of the Democratic party. But the South Carolinian, who is ranking minority member on the Senate Budget Committee, described his role as one of trying "to bring mid-America back into the Democratic party."

"The Achilles heel of the Democratic party is the handling of the economy," says the senator, who believes the public fears another Democratic federal spending spree more than it fears Reaganomics.

To reporters who suggest that his economic policies are tantamount to "me-too-Reaganism," Hollings points out that Harry Truman had several balanced budgets and that the last president to balance the budget was Lyndon Johnson.

"I'm me-tooing Truman; I'm me-tooing Lyndon," says Hollings.

He also disputes Ronald Reagan's oft-repeated contention the current econmic mess was inherited from Carter. Carter, says Hollings, whittled the defict down from $66 to $28 billion during his years in the White House and Reagan has "worked it back up to $150 billion" for 1985.

Hollings sees himself as possibly the one Democrat who can run a strong race against Reagan or any other Republican in the vote-rich Sun Belt. "You can start in Delaware and go all the way around to Texas and Oklahoma," he says, "and Kennedy and Mondale could not carry any of those states."

While he cites "liberalism" as the issue that could bar Kennedy and Mondale from electoral success in the Sun Belt, Hollings is not shy about listing his own credentials as a battler for civil rights or as a friend of organized labor.

Hollings eloquently advocated extension of the Voting Rights Act earlier this year against such Southern fundamentalists as Jesse Helms and John East, both North Carolina Republicans. His speech, says Hollings proudly, was described a collegue as "the best civil rights speech in the Senate."

Explaining his political philosophy, he explains: 'They call me a liberal at home and a conservative up here — but its really a centrist position."

A Beirut bias

To The Editor:

I cannot even believe how biased the media has been (all facets) in the Israel vs. Lebanon (PLO) situation.

There have been detailed studies that show that the majority of people leading the media market are liberals, whereas the majority of our country is non-conservative. Yet we continue to sit passively and be force-fed biased views from people who, according to the same survery, have few ties with Christian views or ethics. Talk about one-sided!

It's apparent "they" want us to pity poor Lebanon and turn against bullying Israel. (Although Lebanese civilians have been warned to flee and although Israel has defended itself from brutal, sadistic, world-wide PLO terrorism for eight years or more.) So when they finally get tired of the hits and runs of the PLO and go to the source — Lebanon — they get branded by U.S. media as bullies! Don't swallow it!

Price of fame

To The Editor:

I see where Kenny Rogers canceled his concert because of no sell out. That's a shame for those of us who like Kenny.

Last May I went to a concert in Odessa. The tickets were only $7.50 but the performers were the $15.50 caliber. They were the LeGarde Twins of Australia. That was one of the best concerts I've ever attended. I'll put them up against Merle or Marty when it comes to down-home country music. At the same time they can sing the most beautiful love songs. Then they can sing the traditional Australian music which is different yet thoroughly entertaining.

I left the concert so impressed with these two gentlemen that I did some research on them. To begin with, they are one of Australia's top acts — very famous in Australia.

They have won several gold records for sales over a million. They performed at the Sands in Las Vegas for 27 weeks straight. Olivia Newton-John is one of their most avid fans. She grew up listening to the LeGarde Twins.

I think it would do us all well if we went to see the less famous performers. The price of the Rogers concert, while not too high for a few, was apparently too high for many. Kenny is a great singer but he is no better than the LeGarde Twins.

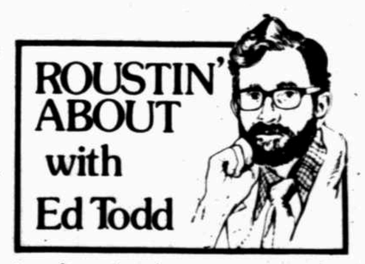
Life, liberty and the pursuit of silence



Disturbing the peace doesn't necessarily mean shooting up main street, being bar-room rowdy on a Saturday night, or loudly spouse-resenting every other night.

It could mean someone turning up his car radio or stereophonic sound system (whoopee!) high enough to ping the needle on a decibel meter, irritate your eardrums and shatter your peace of mind, and, flabbergastingly enough, to give some sort of pleasure to the intended listener — the noise-maker. But, for what's it worth, remember: What's vulgar or coarse to one music appreciator may be selective refinement, however imagined and ill-conceived, to another.

This "it's a free-country" bit and "live and let live" platitudes simply don't always allow you to pursue your peace of mind when outside noise, which happens to be somebody else's music, pervades your air space and transforms to noise.

The gripe, which is not isolated, is about those fellow citizens who drive or wander up and down the streets and loudly play their radio or stereo and neglect to roll up their windows and sound-proof their car to at least keep a good deal of their music in their mobile cubicle and the noise out of your province.

Maybe it's unintentional, but somebody's rock-a-bye, disco, country or whatever music loudly playing in the streets, parks, next door or down the street is not pleasureable to those who don't wish to hear. It becomes an ordeal.

One peace-keeping means is to call the police or the sheriff and complain about "the loud music," which is an occurrence not confined to apartment complexes and "next door." But the rambling-noise phenomenon continues.

A disdainful glance toward the noise-maker is no cure, but imparting kind words, if you can muster them and speak loudly and plainly enough, to tell the player that his music is thunder to your ears might help to lower the decibel level.

The alternative is to do what you probably do anyway: let the noise pass to your amusement and buy yourself a set of ear-plugs until you're out of the noise-trafficking zone.

Save with energy efficient windows

Paid Advertisement

With the summer months quickly fading into the past and the winter months approaching fast, now would be an excellent time to ask yourself if your house is costing you too much money to maintain a comfortable temperature inside. With the cost of heating at an all-time high, you cannot afford to have precious and costly heat slipping out your windows undetected. Midland Building Specialties, 904 W. Front, can help you save money on both your heating and your cooling bill. With the cost of electricity or gas today, the necessity of having highly efficient, energy-saving doors and windows cannot be overemphasized.

Properly installed, energy-efficient windows create a pocket of air between themselves and the regular window. This air pocket remains at a fairly constant temperature year round. Therefore, during the coming winter months, heated air remains inside your house while old man winter is left "out in the cold." Likewise, during the hot, dry summer months, cool air remains inside while the heat is left outside where it belongs. By keeping the heated air inside this winter, your heater has less work to do, saving you money not only on electric or gas bills, but also on costly repair bills.

The professionals at Midland Building Specialties would be happy to show you how then can help you save money on utility and repair bills. They offer free estimates. Professional work guarantees you a reliable, well-done job and tremendous savings om utility bills.

Frames for energy-efficient windows are available in white, bronze, or natural aluminum colors. Glass comes in clear, grey tint, broze tint, or sunglass.

One of the most important things to remember about energy-efficient windows is that they must be properly installed in order to work well. Here, again, is where the professionalism at Midland Building Specialties stands out from the rest. Call Kevin Herring today at 563-3013 for your free estimate. Midland Building Specialties is located at 904 W. Front in Midland, just behind Mid-West Glass.

Well designed signs are a convenience for your customers. Let A-Quick Signs advise you on all your sign needs.

Good signs bring customers

Paid Advertisement

Is your business getting the kind of exposure it deserves? Are you wasting money needlessly on advertising that never seems to do any good for your business? When your competitors have more business than they can handle, are your employees playing checkers to pass the time? Does it sometimes seem as if no one even knows your business is there? Perhaps what you need is to have an eye-catching, attention-grabbing sign to let everyone know that you are there and to draw the customers in.

The professionals at A—Quick Signs firmly believe that each business is as individual as the people in it. Yet most businesses try to make do with a common, ordinary sign stating the name of the business and where it is located. What you need is a custom sign to express the personality of your business and draw public attention towards your business. This would not only include a sign in front of your building, but also a logo or trademark on all company cars and trucks.

Owner J.A.(Monty) Coldwell is proud of the fine staff of professional sign writers he has gathered to work for him. Monty feels that service and quality are the key aspects of a successful business, and he is willing to go to extreme lengths to keep his customers satisfied. Monty assembled perhaps the finest sign writers in the state under one roof for the quality aspect, with extra care taken to maintain the high standard of service he so firmly believes in. A—Quick Signs is willing to work 24 hours/day, 7 days/week if that is necessary to keep your company trucks on the road. That's service.

Larry Sellers is one of the premier sign writers in the sign business today. Larry does everything from motorcycles to race cars, vans, or whatever. He also does murals. Larry has done commisioned art work for professionals such as Ray Price(Larry painted his touring bus) and has seen recognition in several national publications. Larry has been painting logos, designs, etc. since his high school days, and he now has over 15 years experience in the sign business.

Kenneth Dickey has studied his art under some of the best sign writers, and has now logged more than 10 years experience in the business. Kenny is an artist painter experienced in all phases of painting and lettering. He specializes in gold leaf, a very difficult art to master. Kenny likes to letter winners, such as some of Jim Hall's Pennzoil cars and a couple of other cars that have run in the Indy 500.

Jennifer L. Flowers, Jenny, has a degree in art. Jenny does layout, plastics, fabrication, and sandblasting. But her favorite, and specialty, is woodcarving. Jenny served her apprentice at Young's, the company that does about 75% of the signs in Las Vegas. Although she is only 22, she is probably the most qualified lady sign writer in West Texas.

Randy Dye is an all around sign writer. He can handle anything in the sign field. He specializes in the art that keeps your company on the road. Randy specializes in custom lettering of Peterbilt, Kenworth, and other heavy equipment.

For all of your signing needs, whether it be a new logo or design, trademark, or just a new sign in front of your business to catch public attention, call on the professionals at A—Quick Signs. They offer one day service on most jobs. With four of the best sign writers in Texas, A—Quick Signs can handle any job, no matter how large or small. Call on A—Quick Signs at 2917 W. Industrial or call 683-8541. You'll be pleased with the high standards of service and quality Monty Coldwell has set to make you, the customer, happy.

Packers strike halts production

By LARRY GREEN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DAKOTA CITY, Neb. — At the slaughterhouse they boast that they "take beef apart like Henry put cars together."

In normal times, more than 3,700 cattle a day into the huge Iowa Beef Processors Inc. plant, w spreads over an area the size of several city blo Three to four days later, after passing through array of flashing knives, buzzing saws and other t they emerge, disassembled into hundreds of prod from sirlion steaks to glands used in pharmaceutica

But these are not normal times here. A viole marred strike — the fourth in a decade — pits world's largest beef processing facility and a powe union against each other in a mean confrontation iniscent of the labor battles of the 1930s.

Workers left their jobs June 7 after negotiat reached a dedlock. Violence erupted last week w the company began bringing in strikebreaker replace the 2,400 who are picketing. This week governor of Nebraska deployed the National Guar the plant. By next week, an Iowa Beef official said, plant will be operating at full force with non-u labor.

Workers believe it is not just cattle, but also t union, that Iowa Beef is trying to disassamble.

"They're trying to break our union," said stri Larry Hallstrom, 24, whose job is to saw chunk meat apart. Hallstrom now pickets the plant f hours each week to earn his $65-a-week strike bene His view is widely shared along the picket line an the union's local headquarters.

This is not a routine strike. The issues do not inv pay increases. The union offered to freeze curr wages for two years but the company demande four-year freeze and other provisions that could resulted in pay reductions.

"Business, as we pursue it here at IBP, is very m like waging war," Iowa Beef's founder, Currier J. man, once said. The company is now a subsidar Occidental Petroleum, which acquired it in 1981.

"We're big, we're unorthodox, we're maveric said Charles Harness, the company's manager of m relations. "The union contends we're monsters tr to change the industry — which we have, in a wa "

"Their whole approach is one of fighting, of confrontation, of pushing people around," said Le Anderson, international vice president of United Food and Commercial Workers, a 1.3-million-member union — second in size to the Teamsters. The United Food and Commercial Workers represent retail clerks, meat cutters and butchers and packing house workers.

"They have a labor relations approach that dates back to the 1930s. They treat people rough. They're big, operating with sheer muscle," he contended adding that that was how old-line packing houses treated unions and union members half a century ago.

Scenes at the plant this week have been a throwback to more turbulent times in industrial relations when troops, police and private armies were used to counter workers' attempts to organize and strike.

After strikers and Nebraska state police clashed Tuesday — the third outbreak of violence in eight days — Gov. Charles Thone ordered the National Guard to bolster the police presence at the plant. It is the first time the Nebraska Guard has been used in a labor dispute in half a century.

"It's like something out of the dark ages," said William Adelman, a professor of labor and industrial relations at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle campus. He said he finds it ironic that the techniques used to break Chicago packing house unions in 1919 are being used today in Dakota City.

Thursday, both sides agreed to return to the bargaining table next Friday at the request of Thone, who ordered a reduction of the National Guard force at the plant. That will be the first bargaining session in two months.

Guardsmen were not out in force Thursday, but on Wednesday the scene on this nearly treeless plain in northeastern Nebraska resembled a war front as the shifts changed.

Armored personnel carriers rolled up to the factory gates, chipping pieces of sun-softened asphalt as they clanged along Highway 35. A military helicopter circled overhead.

National Guard troops, sweating under the weight of fatigues, helmets and flak jackets, jumped from trucks that arrived in a caravan of jeeps and police cars. Scores of Nebraska state police officers were also present in full riot gear.

The force of close to 300, bolstered by company security guards, was protecting the first of the strikebreakers, about 1,000 strong.

Strikers, under a court injunction to limit their picketing, stood in pairs every 50 feet along the highway, some in bathing suits, some women in shorts, some men shirtless under the burning sun. Their hostility to the company was clear.

"I will not go back in there without the union," said Jackie Hagerty, 23, who has trimmed meat from bones in the plant for three years. "It's bad enough with the union. The company attitude is that they hate you, that they're out to get you all the time."

"People are hurt every day" said Bione Patton, 22, a single parent who said she would not re-enter the plant without a contract. "When someone has a finger cut off they just shut down the line and wipe off the blood and then tell all of us to get going. They have no respect for workers at all."

The Dakota City plant, one of 10 slaughtering facility owned by Iowa Beef, had an illness and injury rate that was 44 percent higher than the rest of the industry, according to a union study done in 1976. The industry average is 34.7 of every 100 workers sick or injured each year. Meat packing, according to government statistics, is the most hazardous industrial occupation.

In just 20 years, Iowa Beef Processors Inc. has grown from a small non-union slaughterhouse in Denison, Iowa, to the nation's largest slaughter and packing house operation. It accounts for up to 20 percent of the national market and for more then 80 percent of the boxed beef that is sold in the country.

"We are the largest single producer of boxed beef in the world," company media relations manager Harness boasts. "We kill over 5 million head of cattle a year."

Boxed beef is partly butchered meat, which is sold to supermarkets for the final butchering. The company, which did not show a profit until 1970, had sales of $5.15 billion in 1981 and earned $58 million.

Long a controversial company, Iowa Beef did for slaughtering and packaging what Henry Ford did for manufacturing, turning it into a highly efficient, mechanized production-line process.

Sante Fe workmen examine the railroad's latest innovation, thier new "Fuel Foiler" freight containers. The 145-foot-long, aerodynamically designed container cars can accommodate up to 55 tons of bulk commodities, palletized packaged goods or be modified for liquids. They can be stacked two high aboard a train, or six high aboard ship or in stagingareas, according to Sante Fe.

Money supply drops, interest rates follow

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest rates plunged on the nation's credit markets Friday minutes after the Federal Reserve Board reported another drop in the nation's money supply and said it will lower its discount rate for the second time in two weeks.

Shortly after the Fed said it would reduce the discount rate by a half percentage point to 11 percent effective Monday, Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh, the nation's 15th largest bank, said it was cutting its prime lending rate to 15 percent, the lowest level for the key borrowing charge since November 1980. The industry had moved to a 15.5 percent prime earlier this week.

The discount rate, the interest on loans to banks and savings and loans by the Federal Reserve System, was cut to 11.5 percent on July 19 after staying at 12 percent since Dec. 3, 1981. The prime rate, the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans to their most creditworthy customers, stood at 16.5 percent as recently as July 19.

Financial economists predicted more interest rate reductions, saying the Fed must ease its restrictive monetary policy further or risk aborting a recovery from severe economic recession.

Elliott Platt, a vice president of the investment firm of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc., said he expected the discount rate to fall again, and that "10.5 percent is a good bet in the next few weeks."

David Jones, an economist at the investment firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said it is likely the Fed's move "will result in another round of prime rate reductions (to 15 percent) within the week and a general downward move in interest rates."

In a statement distributed by aides, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said: "Reducing interest rates is always welcome news and is in line with our expectations. This should be even more welcome news to merchants and consumers."

Within an hour of the Fed's reports Friday the interest rate on three-month Treasury bills in secondary markets plummeted to 9.60 percent from 10.15 percent. Long-term government bond prices, which rise when interest rates fall, added about $9 for each $1,000 in face value, adding to gains from earlier in the day.

The Fed said a measure of funds readily available for spending, known as M1, declined $800 million in the week ended July 21 to a seasonally adjusted $450.8 billion. M1 includes cash in circulation and checking-type deposits in banking institutions.

For the latest four weeks, M1 averaged $450 billion, a 1.9 percent seasonally adjusted rate of decline from 13 weeks ago.

The Fed has been attempting to curb inflation by seeking to slow growth of the money supply. But while it is feared that too fast money growth can rekindle inflation, too slow growth can choke off economic activity.

Signs of an economic slowdown came in other indicators reported by the Fed for the week ended Wednesday July 21, including sharp declines in business loans.

The Fed said commercial and industrial loans on the books of the nation's large banks fell $1.26 billion, compared with a decline of $789 million the previous week.

Congress considers role in helping 'dislocated' workers

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Congress is seriously considering whether the federal government should take an active role in specifically helping "dislocated" workers — those who have lost jobs, faced difficulty adjusting to changed employment demands and been out of work for a long time.

The "dislocated" group contains those individuals who worked in manufacturing industries such as steel production, automotive manufacturing and the textile industry — industries which have been hit hard by shifts in consumer demand and foreign competition and which are expected to grow slowly or decline.

Others are victims of labor-saving technology, which has eliminated their jobs.

Workers who become unemployed as a result of these changes usually face serious problems in getting jobs.

Congressional aides say that adjustment is likely to be particularly difficult for older blue-collar workers with long service records in their former jobs.

Complicating adjustment for such workers, according to the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), are the differences in skill requirements between lost jobs and those that may be available, as well as differences in available job locations.

In a study, "Dislocated Workers: Issues and Federal Options," the CBO projects that the number of dislocated workers in 1983, when an economic recovery may be under way, could range from 100,000 to 2.1 million — that is, from about 1 percent of all unemployed workers to 20 percent.

The wide disparity stems from disagreement as to what constitutes a dislocated worker. Some economists consider dislocated workers to be those who are displaced from declining industries and remain jobless for longer than 26 months — most of whom are blue-collar workers in the Northeast and Midwest. This figure ranges from 100,000 to 150,000.

On the other hand, if all unemployed workers in declining geographic areas are included, the number could range from 1.7 to 2.1 million, with about 50 percent blue-collar workers and nearly 25 percent managerial, sales and clerical workers.

The CBO says that Congress must decide whether these workers warrant special assistance and, if so, what kind? Some congressmen view dislocation as a private problem for which direct federal involvement is unnecessary or inappropriate.

On the other hand, proponents of special aid contend that dislocated workers face a uniquely difficult employment situation, which warrants special assistance.The government currently operates an array of programs for the unemployed. Although current programs offer a variety of services that dislocated workers may need — placement help, job training, relocation aid, and cash assistance — present efforts are available to only a portion of all dislocated workers because of funding restrictions and gaps in coverage.

Among currently available programs, which more liberal members consider as insufficient to meet the needs, are the Employment Service (ES), Comprehensvie Employment and Training Act (CETA), Unemployment Insurance (UE), and special assistance programs such as Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA), probably the largest but restricted to those workers whose employment results from import competition.

One proposal being considered is to provide assistance to all workers from declining industries. Another plan would limit special benefits to workers older than 45 from declining industries. Another approach would limit assistance to workers who lose their jobs as a result of plant closings or mass layoffs.

All suggested programs would be costly. According to one analysis, an expanded vocational and technical training program for 290,000 people would cost $920 million in 1983. Subsidized on-the-job training for the same number would run up to $650 million and sending 58,000 to college-level courses would be about $25 million.

HOTLINE

Anyone concerned with international trade — exporters, producers, standards organizations — may now telephone the Commerce Department's National Bureau of Standards (NBS) for a recorded "hotline message" about recently proposed foreign mandatory standards and certification systems which could create technical barriers to international trade. The so-called GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) "hotline" can be reached by dialing (301) 921-3200. The recording is updated weekly.

ENTERPRISE ZONES

The states are moving faster than the federal government in enacting urban enterprise zones — a concept aimed at stimulating creation of new businesses and providing jobs for residents of cities.

President Reagan has proposed a federal plan as his single piece of legislation aimed at revitalizing rundown and delapidated urban centers. Reagan's enterprise zone plan offers tax incentives and suggests easing of federal mandates as a lure to business to locate in highly depressed areas.

Congress, however, has balked thus far at holding hearings on the Reagan plan. Congressional leaders claim there is insufficent time to hold extensive hearings on such a major piece of legislation, which could cost the federal treasury $370 million the very first year in lost tax revenues.

But nine states have already adopted zone legislation: Florida in 1980;Connecticut, Ohio, Louisiana, and Maryland in 1981;Kentucky, Virginia, Missouri and Minnesota this year. The states differ greatly in their approaches: Kentucky, Virginia and Connecticut restrict the number of zones to six or seven while Louisiana and Florida have no limit.

FORCED RETIREMENT

President Reagan's avowed support for elimination of mandatory retirement of public and private employees has breathed new life into a federal proposal which has been languishing before a House committee for nearly a year. Eight states have alrady abolished forced retirement at age 70 for public and private workers and another 11 protect workers over 70 by mandating that job termination for older workers must be for reasons other than age. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York have also considered legislation to either abolish mandatory retirement or extend job protection to older workers.

A recent Harris poll showed that 90 percent of Americans support elimination of mandatory retirement.

STATE TAXES

It's now about as official as it can get. The increase in state and local taxes for calendar 1982 will be about $4 billion. This figure does not reflect user fees, which are also increasing. Cities and states are raising rates for such things as garbage collections, park entrance fees, sewage disposal, and hunting and fishing licenses. The cuts are counteracting the anticipated boost in national consumption over the next year from the $32 billion federal tax cut.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The House Subcommittee on Select Education plans to hold hearings in August on a bill to establish a high-level commission to study whether to institute a system of national service by the nation's youth and other citizens. The bill is sponsored by Rep. Leon Panetta, D.-Calif....The coal industry claims Congress must act swiftly on several long-deferred inland waterway improvements or congestion will delay waterway commerce, raise consumer prices and damage the nation's economy...The Labor Department says productivity, as measured by output per employee hour, increased in 1981 in more than half of the industries measured. The gains contrasted with 1980, when productivity declined in a majority of industries surveyed. Among manufacturing industries, steel had a gain of 9 percent while motor vehicles had 4.7 percent. Declines were registered in construction-related industries: machionery, brick and structural clay tile and hydraulic cement...Following a 10-year legal battle, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has agreed to develop a field sanitation standard to protect farmworkers, requiring employers to provide drinking water, toilet and handwashing facilities for workers...The interstate natural gas pipeline industry has come out against the Reagan Administration plan to dismantle the Energy Department...August 10 is comment deadline on a Food and Drug Administration proposal to change warning label rules on protein diet products...Interior Secretary Watt is now under fire from unexpected sources. The American Petroleum Institute and the American Mining Congress have sided with Wyoming, Colorado and Utah in criticizing Interior's draft plan for managing oil shale development. The alliance has rejected Watt's "lease now, worry later" method because it puts production and leasing ahead of planning and development impact studies.

Union membership in Texas growing, AFL-CIO reports

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Union membership in Texas has been growing, Texas AFL-CIO officials report, but that increase may have been halted by recent layoffs.

John Rogers, Austin, notes that the metals industries have experienced a number of layoffs.

"The reports that we've got have not caught up with those layoffs yet," he says, but the overall number of union members continues to increase, although "layoffs have reduced the number of members in those areas which have been particularly hard hit."

Texas AFL-CIO has 325,000 members currently, with over 700,000 union members in Texas, Rogers reports.

A campaign, begun in January, to add union members in the Houston area has resulted in 3,000 to 4,000 new members, Rogers says, primarily in the public sector, construction-related industries and industries on the Houston Ship Channel.

No other such efforts are planned in other cities, however, he reports.

Rogers says the Texas AFL-CIO will be working, starting in mid-September, on its legislative program for 1983, but says there will be no surprises, with "the union issues about the same" as in past years.

Labor will be keeping an eye on the November general election in determining what will be proposed in 1983, but Rogers expects that "it will be pretty much the same as in the past, a defensive battle most of the way."

Labor plans to oppose any attempts to increase interest rates or to alter homestead protections and will be looking at "changes in the way the Public Utility Commission is constituted to give it more of a consumer outlook," he says.

Proposed regulations on permit fees for new industrial facilities which emit air contaminants are expected to be considered by the Air Control Board at its August 20 meeting.

ACB staff members report final work on the proposals, including review of comments at public hearings, is being completed, and that the August 20 date is "pretty firmly set."

The ACB doesn't plan a meeting for September, and plans to hold its October meeting in El Paso.

The State Board of Insurance is holding public hearings Thursday and Friday (Aug. 5-6) on a number of proposed changes which it may ask legislators to make in 1983.

Among the changes is a change in provisions for temporary licensing of insurance agents, an issue which involved the industry in a legislative battle in 1981.

The staff has suggested that companies which use such temporarily licensed agents be required, in order to maintain that privilege, provide more classroom training, and that 70 percent of such agents must take examinations for permanent licenses within 90 days — with half of the company's agents passing the examination.

Other changes involve provisions for approving filings by insurers for approval by SBI — which has had difficulty in dealing with an increased number of such requests.

Several changes are suggested for operation of health maintenance organizations, and for group credit life and credit accident and health insurance, to provide for some increased limits and coverage for longer-term loans.

Also proposed is an increase in the statutory capital and surplus requirements for organization of insurance companies.

Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas at Austin, reports that during the last seven years, foreign direct investment has been increasing rapidly in the Southwest area generally and particularly in Texas — but foreign-owned firms still make up "a relatively small part" of the region's economy.

The study, prepared by Donald L. Bumpass, economics professor at Texas Tech University, indicates most of the foreign investments originate from firms based in Western Europe, and are concentrated in the areas of firms manufacturing chemicals, non-electrical machinery, fabricated metals, and electrical equipment, and the petroleum industry.

Gross book value of such investments in the Southwest was $12.7 billion at the end of 1979, with $10 billion of that in Texas.

Investment in Texas also included 819,000 acres of land in Texas in 1981, 0.59 percent of the total 139 million acres of agricultural land, the study reports.

The study also notes that ownership of land by foreign-based companies "is an emotionally charged issue," with an August, 1981, poll indicating 61 percent of Texans "definitely" favored laws limiting foreign ownership, while another 11 percent felt such laws "probably" are needed.

Pending tax bill both bane, blessing in Wall Street's view

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From Wall Street's point of view, there is both bane and blessing in the tax bill now pending in Congress.

The measure, scheduled to be taken up starting Tuesday by a House-Senate conference committee, proposes the largest tax increase on record — close to $100 billion over the next three years.

The mere fact that it is a tax-increase proposal in an election year qualifies the bill as something of a rarity. But as with most tax measures, any summary description of it only begins to tell the story.

One of its key provisions, calling for a 10 percent withholding tax on most interest and dividend payments, was considered just about a political impossibility as recently as a year ago. Every time the idea was raised it immediately touched off a storm of protest.

Banks, brokers, savings and loans, mutual funds and other financial institutions contended it would create an expensive tangle of new paperwork, the cost of which would ultimately have to be borne by their customers.

Savers and investors, including the formidable forces of retired people, also made their objections clear.

Now, however, it has been approved by the Senate, and is being given a good chance of enactment.

"Lesson No. 1: In Washington, never confuse the unthinkable with the impossible," a newsletter of the Independent Bankers Association ruefully observed.

Notable by its absence from the ranks of those opposing the bill has been the Securities Industry Association, a major Wall Street trade group.

The SIA agreed not to fight so-called "withholding at the source" in return for the inclusion of another provision in the bill that would change the rules covering capital-gains taxes. It would shorten from one year to six months the holding period required before an investment is considered long-term for tax purposes.

Short-term capital gains count as ordinary income on tax returns, and therefore may be taxed at rates of up to 50 percent. The maximum rate on long-term capital gains is 20 percent.

A shorter capital gains holding period would presumably encourage more frequent trading by investors, and a concomitant increase in commissions for their brokers. A boost of that sort would be especially welcome on Wall Street about now, after the bear market of the last year and a half.

In the past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 21.97 to 808.60.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 2.29 to 61.51, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 7.83 at 248.99.

Big Board volume averaged 46.45 million shares a day, against 56.40 million the week before.

As most observers see it, the SIA's position on the tax bill represents a gamble. In their final bargaining, congressional conferees could conceivably throw out the holding-period plum and leave in the withholding-at-the-source pill.

A proposal to cut the holding period to six months suffered just such a last-minute demise in the conference on last summer's Economic Recovery Tax Act.

Should it survive, however, it would merely mark a return to the rules that prevailed from 1942 until 1976, when the holding period was lengthened in two stages from six months to a year.

The NYSE's office of economic research published a lengthy study this past month arguing that "the holding period requirement to differentiate between long-term and short-term capital gains is grounded on a misconception — that it is necessary and desirable to deny capital gains tax incentivel to 'speculators.'"

As it stands, the distinction in the law has the effect of retarding the movement of capital, the Big Board argued. As a result, the exchange said, it is "more difficult for small and new companies to obtain funds needed for growth and expansion."

Entrepreneurs are more cultural hero than they should be

By CLAIRE KELLER
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Many people dream of owning their own company and not having to answer to a boss. This is the stuff would-be entrepreneurs dream of.

"The entrepreneur has become, in the last 15 years, more of a cultural hero than he or she had been," said John R. Thorne, adjunct professor of industrial administration at Carnegie-Mellon University.

"Entrepreneurs are motivated primarily by the feeling for independence and doing things the way they want to do them," he said during a phone interview from his office in Pittsburgh. The desire to make a fortune is secondary, he said.

Future entrepreneurs who work at other companies before they begin their own are sometimes difficult employees. Thorne observed that "they want to charge off in their own directions and they don't necessarily want to observe rules and regulations."

Even though entrepreneurs can be tough employees, they have what it takes to become executives. Thorne remarked that "often you'll find people who are involved in starting their own companies have been extraordinarily successful in the company where they worked before, at young ages."

Thorne thinks "the ideal time to start your own business is the late twenties or early thirties." This gives the entrepreneur time to have gained experience and contacts. Most small companies are started by a team, so that every area of expertise can be covered.

Entrepreneurs, according to Thorne, must "be leaders. They have to convince customers to buy their products. They're often very hard-driving individuals that don't spend an awful lot of time socializing, being a nice guy," he said.

He or she must work exceptionally hard. Thorne says that often this drive can cause the entrepreneur to push employees too hard. "Sometimes they reward them adequately, and sometimes they don't."

To start your own business, Thorne says, "takes total commitment. If you're easily discouraged, you don't do it. Every time a hurdle comes up you have to figure out a way to get around it."

Venture capital — used to fund entrepreneurial projects which are not "Mom and Pop" businesses — is apparently not that hard to come by these days. Thorne explained: "It's probably easier to raise venture capital now than it's been for the last 15 years. In part, this is because the federal government reduced the capital gains tax a few years ago from 50 percent to 28 percent. A lot of people who wouldn't take the risk before poured their money into venture capital.

"Bank money is tight, interest rates are high, so it's hard to go out and get a loan for a small business. But if you've got a world-breaker idea and a good team of people, raising money is actually fairly easy. But only for the cream of the crop."

Thorne has started many businesses himself and is a management consultant as well as a member of the Policy Study Committee of the Heller Institute for the Advancement of Small Business. He thinks that small businesses run by entrepreneurs will help the economy recover.

"If you consider what companies do for the economy," he said, "building better products, employing people and paying taxes, we should design our tax incentives and our governmental policies to encourage people to try and do business. If we're going to beat the Europeans and the Japanese, or at least hold our own, we should be more innovative and encourage people to be entrepreneurial. Traditionally, our economy has encouraged experimentation, but we've been in the doldrums. Now I see definite signs that we're picking up."

Thorne said that the independence which entrepreneurs experience will not allow them to go back and work for other companies. "We've done studies in the Pittsburgh area, asking entrepreneurs what they would do if they lost their businesses. Most reply that they would start another one."

His advice could scare the cape off superman

By ARELO SEDERBERG
Hearst Feature Service

Bert Dohmen-Ramirez is stalking Honolulu beaches, charging $1,200 an hour for financial advice that would frighten the cape off Superman. You must be in fat city to afford him, but the catch is you may never get to fat city if you can't afford him.

Dohmen-Ramirez writes the monthly Wellington Letter from his offices in Hawaii. Like many others, he hasn't always been right on timing, but certainly he's been right on trend. He has been preaching disinflation for over a year. Now that it's here, he thinks it will stay around, perhaps a long time.

"The breaking of the back of inflation will continue to be painful," he says. "And once inflation is broken, it will take a long period to reliquefy. I'm guessing two-and-a-half to four years."

What does it mean to you and your money? It means more carnage in home prices, a weak stock market, deeper distress in commodities, a sharp decline in interest rates, higher unemployment and accelerated bankruptcies.

Under such a scenario, there really is only one investment -- government bonds: short term (T-bills), medium-term (T-notes) and long-term (T-bonds). That way, you ride out the storm with a high yield, safety and a chance for capital appreciation, since most of the bonds sell at a discount.

Here is what this Hawaiian forecaster sees:

- A prime rate of about 9 percent next year, compared with 16 percent today.
- Inflation of about 5 percent this year and less than that next year.
- A stock market that has to pare some 200 points off the Dow average before this final leg of the bear market is over. Rallies will only be intermediate.
- Unemployment of 11 to 12 percent.

"Sometimes next year, analysts will be saying it's a depression," declares Dohmen-Ramirez. "Housing will continue bad, foreclosures and bankruptcies will rise, autos will stay weak. We'll be seeing something like the '30s."

A decline in interest rates and a decline in stock prices? Hasn't the stock market and the economy been waiting for an interest rate decline so they can begin to perform again?

Dohmen-Ramirez doesn't see it that way. A sharp drop in interest rates, he says, will spur the bond market, and money will pour out of stocks into bonds. "Bonds will become the best possible investment," he notes. "If you think stocks rise when interest rates decline, look at 1978-80. Rates went down in tune with a crashing market."

Don't misunderstand Dohmen-Ramirez. He believes disinflation, despite its pain, is a happy alternative to runaway inflation, which could have led to an even greater crash. Down the road some years, he thinks inflation will return. "As long as we have politicians, we will have inflation."

Even if the Federal Reserve System began pumping money into the economy, it wouldn't help, he believes. The Fed could re-charge the banks, but corporate statements will be looking so bad that banks will play the money markets instead of lending. They will buy the government bonds Dohman-Ramirez advises for everyone, thus helping to prevent monetization -- or inflationary money-creating -- of the federal deficit.

Dohmen-Ramirez reasons that it will take years before banks provide the loans for re-liquefying a deflated economy. For industry, idle plant capacity -- now some 30 percent -- will have to rise 20 percent before companies again begin significant capital expenditures.

So, expect up to four years of a zapped, disinflated economy, high unemployment, lower interest rates and an ill stock market. And run from yesterday's winners -- gold, silver, housing -- into old-fashioned government bonds. That's Dohmen-Ramirez's scenerio.

Gulf Oil postpones indefinitly its purchase of Cities Service

By MARK POTTS
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Gulf Oil Corp. Friday postponed indefinitely its purchase of Cities Service Co. shares, giving the company time to contest Federal Trade Commission objections to the $5.13 billion merger and to work out a possible settlement with the FTC.

The postponement is in line with a temporary restraining order issued Thursday by U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey at the request of the FTC to block Gulf's purchase of the shares.

Richey Friday set Aug. 16 as a date for a hearing on the FTC's request for a preliminary injunction blocking Gulf's acquisition of Citgo.

The judge asked the two sides to expedite the preparation of the case so that it can be heard before an extension of the restraining order expires Aug. 19. A day later, Cities Service shareholders who have tendered, or promised, their stock to Gulf can withdraw it if it has not yet been paid for under the $63-a-share offer.

Gulf said Friday it was extending the period during which stock can be tendered to it until Aug. 9. The offer had been set to expire Friday night. But the company also reserved the right to terminate the offer.

Gulf's announcement followed a six-hour meeting of the company's board in Pittsburgh, which caused the session with Richey to be postponed for two hours. A Gulf spokesman would not say why it took the board so long to come to a decision that Wall Street analysts said should have been fairly simple. But analysts speculated that the Gulf board may have been having second thoughts on the merger.

Gulf's statements in court Friday indicated the deal was still alive. Donald Kempf, an attorney for Gulf, told Richey Friday that Gulf would "litigate and litigate vigorously" against the FTC's objections.

The FTC said earlier this week it would seek to block the merger because a combination of Gulf and Citgo would restrict competition in gasoline and jet fuel marketing and petroleum pipeline transportation on the East Coast and in the Southeast.

Kempf said Friday that those objections "are minuscule in terms of the balance of the transaction," and as a result, Gulf would fight the FTC's ban. Gulf has said it is interested in acquiring Cities Service to get its oil and natural gas reserves, and analysts believe the disputed areas are of less interest to Gulf.

Kempf, however, said Gulf and the FTC would continue to search for a solution to their differences that would allow the merger to proceed, even as the court battle continues. "We will simultaneously be trying to negotiate a settlement with the FTC," he told the court.

Analysts have speculated that Gulf could satisfy the FTC by divesting the disputed operations, although the two sides are apparently far apart on how that would be accomplished.

White House scraps affirmative action proposals

By KATHY SAWYER
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Top White House officials have decided to scrap controversial proposals to shrink the scope of federal affirmative action enforcement, at least until after the November elections, according to Reagan administration sources.

The decision reportedly was reached in a White House meeting on July 19, despite a pitch by Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, whose department has been working on the regulatory changes for more than a year.

The proposals had drawn fire from virtually the entire spectrum of political interests, uniting some women's, business and minority groups in opposition. Since the changes pleased almost no one, White House advisers, led by top aides James A. Baker III and Michael K. Deaver, reached a consensus that it was politically senseless to let them go forward, according to one White House source.

Donovan declined to comment. Other Labor Department officials who have worked on the proposals reportedly were shocked by the White House decision.

A new set of rules eventually will be issued, according to a terse statement from Ellen M. Shong, head of the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, which is responsible for enforcing affirmative action rules for federal contractors. But if this happens, the next approach is expected to be significantly different from the first attempt.

"My understanding is the proposals they published are gone forever and will never be published in final form," said Martin Gerry, counsel to the moderate Republican House Wednesday Group. "They sent up the trial balloon and somebody pierced it. I would hope they'd have the good judgment to fade off into the sunset on this."

In late May the Wednesday Group had sent a letter, signed by 19 Republican members of Congress, to Donovan, asking that the proposals be withdrawn.

What administration officials view as simplification of the regulations often turns out to be more burdensome because they don't fully understand the problem they are dealing with, Gerry said. "I think a theme of this administration is 'save us from our saviors.' "

The proposal was designed to relax the regulations federal contractors must follow to encourage affirmative action. The regulations had been among those targeted for priority review by the President's Task Force on Regulatory Relief.

The proposed changes would have reduced the number of contractors covered by certain paperwork requirements, eliminated most smaller ones and given employers greater leeway in the percentages of women and minorities they were required to employ.

Business groups objected to the proposals because they failed to deal with major concerns, such as back pay awards to victims of discrimination, and in some ways further complicated existing obligations.

Administration officials at the Justice Department, Office of Management and Budget and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission also were divided on what shape the proposals should take.

Minority and some women's groups, hostile to a whole range of administration initiatives in the civil rights area, had called this set of proposals potentially "devastating" to equal employment opportunity efforts.

FNB announces stock offering

The First National Bank of Midland has announced the offering for sale of 500,000 shares of common stock at $60 per share. Shareholders of record on June 1, 1982 will have preemptive purchase rights. The $30 million in proceeds from the sale will be used to expand the Bank's capital base.

First National of Midland, established in 1890, is Texas' largest independent bank and the ninth largest banking institution in the state of Texas. As of June 30, 1982, the Bank had assets of $1.732 billion, capital accounts of $104.89 million and deposits of $1.479 billion. There are currently 2,713,584 shares of common stock outstanding.

Hands-on seismic training provided OU students

NORMAN — Seismic equipment to give students "hands-on experience" as well as to advance research projects by faculty has been given to the University of Oklahoma by the Tulsa-based Seismograph Service Corp., a subsidiary of Raytheon Co.

The gift includes a 24-trace DFS III Recording system valued at approximately $35,000, that is installed in an instrument cab and mounted on a truck. Approximately two miles of CDP seismic cables and 1,584 geophones also were provided.

In presenting the equipment to OU, F.I. Garrette, the company's vice president for domestic exploration, said he hoped it would "allow geophysics students at OU to get practical hands-on experience with seismic equipment."

"The acquisition of this equipment is a major step forward for our geophysics program in that it allows us to pursue research directly related to the modern procedures of industry in exploration for oil and gas," said Raymond M. Rene, associate professor in OU's School of Geology and Geophysics. He is principal investigator for the Industrial Associates' Research program in Exploration Seismology, which the equipment was given to support.

"Roughly 90 percent of the geophysical exploration for these hydrocarbons uses the reflection seismic method," Rene noted. "We will use explosives and other impulsive sources to shake the ground, recording the reflections from layers within the earth. Our first experiments will be particularly focused on shear waves, exchange waves and air-coupled Rayleigh waves that are of particular interest to the industry."

The reflection seismographic method of oil exploration was developed by J. Clarence Karcher, a 1916 graduate of OU.

The keys to the truck were presented by Garrette, accompanied by his wife, Lena, to David A. Burr, OU vice president for university affairs. Garrette also explained some of the equipment to OU geology students Jon kauffman Walters of Emporia, Kan., and Jeffrey L. Fitter of Norman, who are working on master's degrees and will be using the equipment as part of their research.

The equipment will complement other energy-related research at OU, since it was given to the School of Geology and Geophysics which is a part of the university's new College of Geosciences and will be housed in OU's $45 million Energy Center.

Save energy with high-efficiency a/c and get a bonus
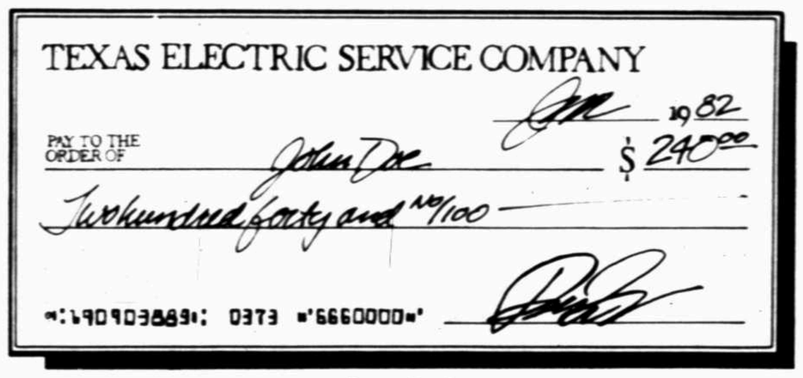
from Texas Electric



TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY
1982
PAY TO THE ORDER OF John Doe $ 240.00
Two hundred forty and NO/100
The amount shown is for a 3-ton central electric air conditioner with an SEER of 8.5.

If you replace your central electric air conditioner with one that's more efficient, Texas Electric will pay you a bonus of $80 per ton.

Not only that, you'll save on your electric bill as well. For example, a high-efficiency 3-ton unit will save you up to $160 a year.

This equipment costs more initially, but the bonus from Texas Electric plus the savings on your electric bill will make up the difference in just a few years.

If enough people buy high-efficiency equipment, summer peak load growth will be slowed—and so will the need to build new generating plants. In the long run, this will help hold down everyone's electric bill.

Before you replace your old air conditioner, ask your dealer about central air conditioners, heat pumps, and window units that qualify for this program.
