Richards wins

■ With 82 percent of the vote counted, Ann Richards garners 52 percent of that.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ann Richards rode a strong showing in the cities and South and East Texas to victory in the hard-fought race for governor Tuesday, dashing the hopes of Clayton Williams' supporters that rural areas would put the Republican over the top.

With 82 percent of the vote reported Tuesday night, Ms. Richards, the Democratic nominee, had 52 percent of the vote, while Williams had 48 percent.

"It looks like, as Barbara Jordan said, the people of Texas are back," Ms. Richards said shortly after TV networks called the race at 10:30 p.m.

Ms. Richards, the state's treasurer the past eight years, brandished a T-shirt that stated, "A woman's place is in the Dome" to the cheers of supporters at the Hyatt Regency in downtown Austin.

Williams, a Midland oilman and rancher, conceded the race shortly after 11:10 p.m. and offered his sup-

Williams receives 75.2 percent of Midland's vote

An overwhelming number of Midlanders, of course, voted Republican on Tuesday, despite an issue-disoriented campaign wracked with enough mudslinging to bury a Houston-sized city.

Almost every Republican garnered more than 60 percent and in some cases up to 80 percent in Midland County, which saw the highest voter turnout for a gubernatorial election in recent memory.

Some 70.3 percent, or 6,664, of the 31,252 who voted cast their ballots for a straight Republican ticket, while 27.9 percent, or 2,647, opted for a Democratic ballot. There were 174, or 1.8 percent, who voted a straight Libertarian ticket.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams, a Midlander, netted 75.2 percent, or 23,184, of the Midland County ballots, while Democratic opponent Ann Richards received 21.6 percent, or 6,637 votes.

Phil Gramm, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, clobbered Democratic opponent Hugh Parmer by a margin of 79.9 percent, or 24,496 votes, to 17.5 percent, or 5,379 votes.

In the lieutenant governor's race, meanwhile, Republican hopeful Rob Mosbacher pulled in 66 percent, or 20,302 votes, compared with Democratic opponent Bob Bullock's 29.9 percent, or 9,179 votes.

"If the rest of the state would vote like Midland County, we would be in good shape," said Rick Davis, chairman of the Republican party in Midland County.

Voters here chose a Democrat only in the comptroller of public accounts election, where John Sharp beat Republican opponent Warren G. Harding Jr. Sharp took 52.4 percent, or 15,479, compared with 41.7 percent, or 12,338 votes, for Harding.

"I think locally we did very well," said Kelley Smoot, co-chairwoman of the local Ann Richards campaign.

Ms. Smoot, along with about 75 delirious Democratic supporters, whooped it up at their 2404 W. Wall Ave. political headquarters as the statewide results trickled in.

"They want Democrats in there," she said of the vote. "They want people of the working party."

Chris McCormack, Midland County Democratic party chairman, said the local results show that Democrats are gaining political ground here.

"I'm pleased with the effort that volunteers made to get out the message of Democratic candidates," McCormack said. "I think we're going forward.

"I don't believe anyone is disappointed. We will continue to work hard to get our message across."

The mood, though, was not so jubilant at other election parties around Midland.

By about 10:30 p.m., the crowd at the Republican "Victory 90" celebration at 44 Plaza Center had dwindled from almost 200 people to 14.

Gramm, Bullock winners in key races

Senate incumbent views victory as show of faith

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm Tuesday night was coasting to an easy re-election victory, but his oft-stated goal of achieving 60 percent of the vote remained in question.

Returns Tuesday night with 61 percent of precincts tallied showed Gramm with 58.9 percent of the vote and his opponent, State Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, with 38.8 percent.

Gramm, 48, said the large plurality is a show of faith for what he called his "common sense approach" to dealing with the country's problems. The senator was an author of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings federal budget act, which forced Congress and the president to work together to reduce the deficit.

Gramm was tied up much of the campaign in Washington, D.C., during most recent budget negotiaions. His victory, he said, proved "that you can provide leadership for the nation in doing things that have to be done ... and get the people to accept it and support it."

New lieutenant governor credits wife, supporters

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Democrat Bob Bullock promised supporters "one hell of a state government" as he proclaimed victory in the lieutenant governor's race Tuesday night with an emotional speech harking back to his years as an alcoholic.

"Several years ago, I really thought my life was over," said Bullock, 61, the state's comptroller since 1975. "I had lost so many things very dear to me — my family ... my friends ... my self-respect."

He credited his wife and political supporters with helping him recover from the illness.

With 57 percent of precincts reporting, Bullock led the race to replace retiring Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby with 52.8 percent of the vote to 43.9 percent for Republican Rob Mosbacher.

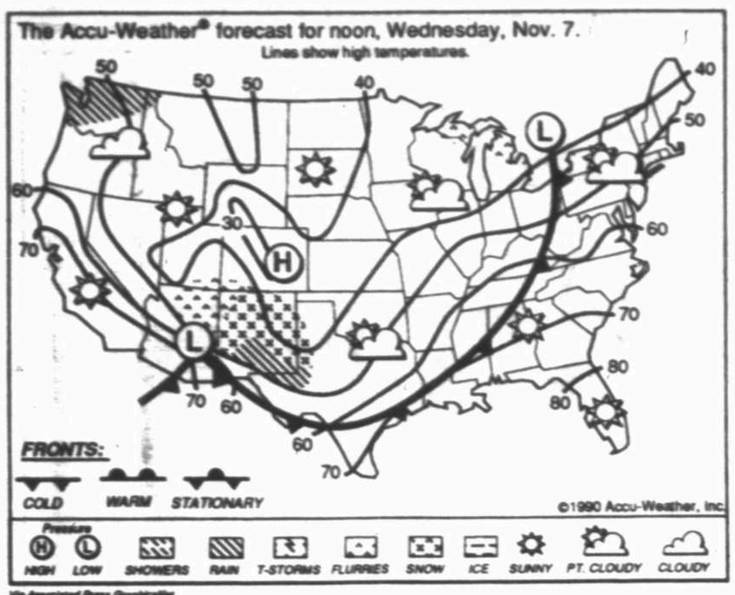

"We ran a great race, but we came up a few votes short," said Mosbacher, a Houston oilman, in concesssion. "I'm 39 years old. I'm not going to rule out anything. I'm

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a high in the upper 30s, northeast winds at 10 to 20 mph and a 30 percent chance of light rain or sleet, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will have a low in the lower 30s with a 60 percent chance of precipitatation consisting of sleet or freezing rain and possible thunderstorms.

Thursday is expected to have a high near 40 and a 70 percent chance of rain with a possibility of sleet or freezing rain.

Tuesday's high was 73 compared with the record high for that date of 84 in 1977. The overnight low for that date was 22 set in 1938.

STATE

Clouds rolled over most of the state Tuesday, as cold air invaded West Texas.

The cold air was expected to move into the Permian Basin and Concho Valley late Tuesday through all of West Texas by Wednesday night. Otherwise, skies were cloudy over the Panhandle.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the 30s in the Panhandle to the 70s in southern West Texas. Winds were north at 10 to 20 mph.

South Texas skies were cloudy along the coast, with the remainder of South Texas under partly cloudy skies.

A cold front was expected to move through South Texas Wednesday. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the mid 60s along the upper coast to the mid 80s in the lower Rio Grande Valley. The cold front will continue to move across North Texas.

Afternoon temperatures warmed into the 60s and 70s.

The North Texas forecast calls for cloudy and cool conditions Wednesday and Thursday with a chance of rain and showers. Highs Wednesday are expected to be 37 northwest to 55 southeast with lows 34 to 40.

In South Texas, it will be cloudy with a chance for rainshowers or thunderstorms Wednesday. Highs will be in the 50s and 60s in the northwest, and in the 70s and 80s for rest of the area.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

MIDLAND: Williams gets local vote

(From 1A)

"I'm not going to get too downcast until tomorrow morning," said a still-grinning Margaret Rhea, Victory 90 chairwoman. "We're a little disappointed it has turned out like it has so far."

Things were even less hopping across the parking lot at the local Williams campaign headquarters, where Carlynn Harris and about 10 others still clung to a sliver of eroding hope.

"I'm not going to quit until Claytie does," said Ms. Harris, a longtime friend of the Williams family. "I'm worried about how he'll feel. I'm concerned for him and his family."

Davis said that although Williams did not draw enough votes statewide, his campaign at least brought out Midland County voters.

"The strength of the Republican candidates also brought out the Republicans in Midland County," Davis said. "People in the end decided that they did want to express an opinion instead of staying at home."

Bettye Calvert, Midland County elections administrator, said it was the biggest turnout for a gubernatorial race since at least 1948.

Some 63.9 percent, or 31,252, of the county's 48,936 registered voters went to the polls.

In the 1982 gubernatorial race, 22,481 of 42,450 registered voters, or 53 percent, cast ballots here. There was a 52.2 percent turnout in 1986, when 25,054 of 48,009 registered voters went to the polls.

Ms. Calvert said the 1988 presidential race, when 39,874 or roughly 76 percent of about 52,000 voted, was the biggest turnout in recent memory for a general election race.

■ Attorney general — J.E. "Buster" Brown, 70 percent or 21,128 votes; Dan Morales, 26.4 percent, or 7,970 votes.

■ Treasurer — Kay Bailey Hutchison, 70.7 percent, or 21,379 votes; Nikki Van Hightower, 26.3 percent, or 7,954 votes.

■ Land commissioner — Wes Gilbreath, 58.8 percent, or 17,410 votes; Garry Mauro, 37.6 percent, or 11,128 votes.

■ Agriculture commissioner — Rick Perry, 63.5 percent, or 19,090 votes; Jim Hightower, 33.6 percent, or 10,089 votes.

■ Railroad commissioner — Beau Boulter, 62.8 percent, 18,914; Robert Krueger, 34 percent, or 10,262 votes.

■ Supreme court chief justice — Tom Phillips, 78.6 percent, or 23,607 votes; Oscar H. Mauzy, 21.4 percent or 6,444.

■ Supreme court justice, Place 1 — John Cornyn, 73.9 percent, or 21,075 votes; Gene Kelly, 26.1 percent, or 7,452 votes.

■ Supreme court justice, Place 2 — Charles Ben Howell, 64.7 percent, or 18,399 votes; Bob Gammage, 35.3 percent, or 10,020 votes.

■ Criminal appeals judge, Place 1 — Joseph Devany, 71.1 percent, or 19,874 votes; Frank Maloney, 28.9 percent, or 8,082 votes.

■ Criminal appeals judge, Place 2 — Oliver S. Kitzman, 73.2 percent, or 20,474 votes; Sam Houston Clinton, 26.8 percent, or 7,480 votes.

■ Criminal appeals judge, Place 3 — Bill White, 82.3 percent, or 17,487 votes; Libertarian candidate Carol Caul, 17.7 percent, or 3,765 votes. There was no Democratic candidate.

■ Criminal appeals judge, Place 4 — David Berchelmann, 72.7 percent, or 20,124 percent; Charles F. Baird, 27.3 percent, or 7,572 votes.

■ Criminal appeals judge, Place 5 — Louis E. Sturns, 73.1 percent, or 20,224 votes; Morris L. Overstreet, 26.9 percent, or 7,455 votes.

■ State representative, District 76 — Tom Craddick, 89.5 percent, or 25,023 votes; Libertarian candidate Len Caryl, 10.5 percent, or 2,935 votes. There was no Democratic candidate.

■ District judge, District 238 — John Hyde, 78.2 percent, or 23,141; Ralph Petty, 21.8 percent or 6,465.

On the proposed constitutional amendment, 63.1 percent, or 15,823 votes, were cast in favor, while 36.9 percent, or 9,265 voters, were opposed.

Local candidates running unopposed were Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer for county judge, Al Walvoord for county court at law judge, and Winfree "Win" Brown and Guy McCrary for county commissioner.

Others unopposed included James Fitzgerald for county court at law judge No. 2, Vivian Wood for district clerk, Rosenelle Cherry for county clerk and Dee Thompson for county treasurer. Justice of the Peace Precinct 1 Robert H. Pine also ran uncontested.

RICHARDS: Williams concedes

port to Ms. Richards, with whom he traded bitter accusations during the campaign.

"I am sorry I let you down," Williams said. "But I did my best, and I will always cherish the faith you had in me," he said, as supporters yelled "We love you, Claytie."

Williams said he hoped to continue to be of service to the Republican Party, but when supporters suggested another run in 1994, he replied, "I may be an Aggie, but I'm not crazy."

Appearing with his family at the Stouffer Hotel in north Austin, Williams said, "The bad news is we've lost, but the good news is it's not the end of the world."

Instead, he said, all Texans should work with Ms. Richards "to attain our dream of making Texas great again."

Although catcalls greeted his conciliatory remarks toward Ms. Richards, Williams said, "There's been enough said in this campaign to last us all a lifetime, so now I will conclude this campaign by saying, 'God bless you. God bless all Texas.' "

Ms. Richards said the returns show that voters agreed with the priorities she placed on improving education, holding the line on insurance costs, cleaning air and water and stopping government interference in the private lives of Texans.

In addition to her family, Ms. Richards singled out retiring Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan as mentors.

Ms. Richards showed surprising strength in Dallas, which has long been a Republican stronghold. A Richards spokesman said gaffes hurt Williams in Dallas most of all.

"Dallas rejected Williams long ago," said Chuck McDonald, a Richards spokesman. "They don't go for cowboy Republicans."

Carol Keeton Rylander, former Austin mayor and state co-chairman of the Williams campaign, was "cautiously optimistic" earlier in the evening as a mariachi band warmed up the Williams crowd. She was counting on rural Texas to make the difference for Williams.

Williams, who finished the campaign Monday travelling with President Bush, stayed in his hotel suite with his family most of Tuesday night, coming out onto a balcony briefly to watch a gospel choir from Houston.

Williams, 59, who invested $8 million of his own money in the race, saw a double-digit lead in polls vanish after a series of gaffes in October.

Bush, a former Midland resident, joined Williams and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm Monday in a final swing through East Texas in an attempt to shore up the Republican campaign.

Ms. Richards, 57, a former Travis County commissioner, hammered on Williams' admission Friday that he did not pay any income tax in 1986. She stumped in Orange, Houston, San Antonio and South Texas Monday before returning to Austin.

Williams, who pledged to veto any state income tax, said he did not owe any federal income tax in 1986 because of the heavy losses his businesses suffered, but Ms. Richards noted that he contributed at least $20,500 to candidates for statewide office that year.

Williams' campaign faltered in October after he confronted Ms. Richards at a Dallas event, called her a "liar" to her face and pointedly refused to shake her hand.

The outburst came after Ms. Richards questioned Williams' ties with a loan broker who is under investigation in connection with laundering of drug money in Houston.

Ms. Richards also questioned his fitness to serve after Williams this past week admitted he did not know what the only constitutional amendment on the general election ballot meant. The proposition dealt with gubernatorial appointments.

Despite the nasty tone of the campaigns, the mudslinging did not appear to harm the turnout on a day that was clear and mild across Texas.

State officials had predicted 3.85 million voters, or approximately one-half of the 7.7 million registered. The last 50-percent turnout in a gubernatorial election was in 1970.

McDonald at the Richards campaign said the turnout suggested the negative campaigns may have increased interest in the races. "It might be nasty, but it's fun," he said.

Ms. Rylander disagreed. "I think the people of Texas are turned off by negative campaigns and I know there are a lot of political gurus who think that's where it is these days, but I hope we can demonstrate otherwise," she said.

Ms. Rylander said Williams started the campaign on the issues and ended on the issues. "We answered when it was thrown at us, but we ran very positive TV and Richards chose to go negative all the way in on her media," she said.

Williams spent more than $20 million, resuming his TV ads in midsummer. Ms. Richards' campaign appeared frugal in comparison, but the $12 million her campaign spent still broke Gov. Bill Clements' previous record set in 1986.

Together with the defeated primary candidates, the 1990 race for governor cost more than $46 million for a job that pays $93,432 annually.

going to continue to be involved in the direction I believe Texas needs to go," he said.

Bullock said his election indicates that Texans "want to see that the people who really need help ... actually get it, buddy, instead of being stopped by a bureaucracy."

The candidate had offered detailed positions on a range of statewide issues, including legislator ethics, school finance and the environment.

Mentioning still-pending lawsuits on schools, prisons, mental health and higher education, Bullock said, "Frankly, I've fallen into a bear trap on this deal." As lieutenant governor, he said he would tackle the problems "one at a time."

With Bullock's election and good showings by Democrats in other races, the party will maintain control of the Legislative Redistricting Board. The panel redraws legislative lines if the Legislature fails to complete the task in the five-month regular session that opens in January.

The redistricting board includes the lieutenant governor, House speaker, attorney general, comptroller and land commissioner.

During the campaign, Bullock had the air of an incumbent while Mosbacher portrayed himself as the outsider, although he served as chairman of the Texas Department of Human Services since 1987.

Bullock criticized Mosbacher's handling of the state's welfare agency, which has a budget shortfall estimated at $350 million because of an expansion of welfare services.

Mosbacher hit upon Bullock's refusal to rule out an income tax, although neither candidate ruled out a tax increase next year to overcome a deficit estimated at $3.5 billion.

While the lieutenant governor serves as the governor's backup, his real power is as Senate president, where Senate rules traditionally allow him to appoint committees in addition to deciding the course of legislation.

He also sits as chairman of the Legislative Budget Board and co-chairman of the Legislative Education Board as well as member of the Legislative Redistricting Board.

During his more than 30 years in state government, Bullock also has served as secretary of state and two terms in the Legislature.

GRAMM: Parmer upbeat despite his defeat

(From 1A)

Parmer, 52, was upbeat in the face of defeat. "We feel like we've done a heck of a job with very little resources," he said.

Parmer felt his campaign had achieved at least one goal against Gramm. "We wanted to cut his coat tails off and protect the rest of the ballot," he said.

The popular and well-financed Gramm, although completing just his first senatorial term, is nationally recognizable because of his leadership on the budget.

And while not shunning the national spotlight, Gramm played important roles in bringing the superconducting super collider, a giant, circular physics lab, to a site near Waxahachie and a U.S. Navy homeport to the Corpus Christi area.

Parmer earned the respect of his colleagues as a champion of consumer and environmental causes, but he never achieved the statewide name identification needed to pose a serious challenge to Gramm.

Low on money, Parmer spent the final days of the campaign walking precincts instead of a competing with Gramm with big media splash.

For the victor, breaking the 60 percent mark would mean showing national Republican Party officials his vote-getting prowess, which could stand him in good stead for a future presidential bid.

Gramm during the campaign said he has not yet made plans for a presidential run. Still, he said he wondered how he would react if confronted with the crises that President Bush has had to face.

City to use different investment advisory firm

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city of Midland will be using a new investment advisory firm comprised of basically the same management of the company it replaces, members of City Council decided Tuesday at a special session.

Council members voted unanimously to terminate the investment advisory agreement with Siebel Capital Management, Inc., whose parent company, Equitech, recently filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

In other action, council unanimously favored pursuing an investment advisory agreement with NWQ Investment Management Co., which has retained the management personnel of Siebel Capital Management, Inc.

"We are going to be dealing with the same people, just a different entity," said Mike McGregor, deputy city manager.

A contract with NWQ will be basically identical with the existing contract with Siebel, which will be terminated.

In the process of changing companies there is the "a slim possibility" of having to pay some additional management fees, David Reagan, city attorney, advised council.

"You could possibly subject yourself to damages by ending contract to Siebel" under the bankruptcy code, Reagan said.

There is no threat of losing any city funds since the investment management companies, which purchase treasury bills in the city's name, do not secure payment until delivery of investments, city officials said.

Representatives visit VFW post

Staff Report

ODESSA — District 25 of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 6717 hosted a visit of representatives of State Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary recently.

Representatives, who visited the post as part of a statewide membership drive, were Betty Royston, state president; Louise Reid, state senior vice president; Edna Burke, state junior vice president and membership chairman; and Joyce Burke, state membership co-chairman.

Ms. Royston will visit each of the 30 districts in Texas. Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary membership includes 45,956 members in 396 auxiliaries. Ms. Royston's theme during her term as president is "United with Pride ... Because We Care."

ELECTION '90: KEY SENATE RACES

Democrats retain control of Senate

■ Incumbents proved hard to beat as both arch-conservative Jesse Helms and Iowa liberal Tom Harkin were re-elected.

AP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on Tuesday won two more years in control of the Senate as incumbents showed their strength. In the most closely watched contest, conservative Sen. Jesse Helms triumphed in his battle against Democrat Harvey Gantt in North Carolina.

Democrats were assured at least 51 seats, another Senate majority, after results showed 15 of their 16 incumbents had won, including several who had been targeted by the GOP.

Republican incumbents also showed strength, however, and the GOP held all three seats where its senators were retiring.

Democrats had hoped to improve on their 55-45 majority anywhere they could, but especially in North Carolina. They were disappointed, and Helms rubbed it in.

"There is no joy in Mudville tonight," the 69-year-old senator said. "The mighty ultra-liberal establishment, the liberal politicians and editors and commentators and columnists have struck out again."

Democrats also pushed for a pick-up in Oregon. But early returns showed Republican Mark Hatfield, who has served four terms, outdistancing businessman and scientist Harry Lonsdale, who tapped into voter discontent and made it a close race.

Another down-to-the-wire contest was in Minnesota, where Republican Rudy Boschwitz was in a battle with liberal Democrat Paul Wellstone. In Hawaii, Democrat Daniel Akaka was defending himself against a strong challenge from Rep. Pat Saiki.

Helms is a national symbol of right-wing politics and the Senate's most diehard opponent to civil rights legislation. Helms ran campaign ads accusing Gantt, who is black, of favoring racial quotas and taking advantage of minority-preference rules for personal gain.

Gantt is an unapologetic liberal and racial trailblazer, the first black admitted to Clemson University. During the campaign, he blamed Helms for the poor state of North Carolina education and the state's environmental problems.

Polls were kept open late in heavily black Durham County after voting machines there broke down. Both sides complained of irregularities.

Another race with strong ideological differences was in Iowa, where liberal Tom Harkin became the first Democrat in that state ever re-elected to the Senate. He beat Rep. Tom Tauke, a conservative, pro-life Republican.

A Democratic challenge fell short in Kentucky, where first-time Sen. Mitch McConnell beat off former Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane.

Democrats got a scare in New Jersey, where GOP challenger Christine Todd Whitman, a virtual unknown in her first statewide bid, embarassed Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley but fell short of winning.

Republicans retained control of the three open Senate seats. Rep. Robert Smith defeated former Sen. John Durkin in New Hampshire while Rep. Hank Brown won in Colorado and Rep. Larry Craig was the victor in Idaho.

Democratic incumbents Claiborne Pell in Rhode Island, Carl Levin in Michigan and Paul Simon in Illinois won surprisingly easy victories over well-financed Republican House members. Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., beat former Republican Rep. Hal Daub.

Other incumbents of both parties won with ease.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, won unopposed. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., and David Pryor, D-Ark., also won without opponents.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., the Senate's deputy minority leader, won easily.

Nunn and Bradley were two of several possible future presidential candidates who won re-election to the Senate Tuesday. Others who won re-election were Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., and Phil Gramm, R-Texas, both with ease.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., handily won a third term and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., who ran for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988, also won.

Indiana Republican incumbent Dan Coats, who was appointed to the Senate seat vacated by Vice President Dan Quayle, won his bid for election on his own over Democrat Baron Hill.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., whose second term appeared threatened at one point because of voter discontent, crushed developer Jim Rappaport. Max Baucus, D-Mont., also won handily.

In Hawaii, Akaka was trying to hold for the Democrats a seat his party has controlled since statehood. He was appointed to the seat spring following the death of Sen. Spark Matsunaga.

Chances that Tuesday's 34 Senate elections would produce a major shift in the chamber's current 55-45 partisan split appeared slim. There was virtually no chance the Republicans would take over, or that the Democrats would gain enough seats to assure an override of every veto issued by Bush.

But even a change of one seat could weaken or strengthen President Bush's position.

Two women win out in governor's races

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ann Richards won her rough-and-tumble fight for governor of Texas and another Democratic treasurer, Joan Finney, captured the governor's mansion in Kansas as a record number of women and blacks sought state and national posts Tuesday.

Feinstein

Gantt

Connecticut voters elected conservative businessman Gary Franks as the first black Republican member of the House since the Depression.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., turned back Harvey Gantt's bid to become the first black senator from the South since Reconstruction.

In New Jersey, Republican challenger Christine Todd Whitman gave a scare to Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley before losing. The little known ex-utility commissioner raised a fraction of Bradley's $12 million warchest, but capitalized on antitax fervor.

In California, Dianne Feinstein, the Democratic former mayor of San Francisco, was losing out to Sen. Pete Wilson for the governorship in California.

But women lost seven of their eight Senate races, with only incumbent Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., in the victory column.

Women challengers lost to incumbent male senators in New Jersey, Hawaii, Illinois, Rhode Island, Delaware and Wyoming, and Democrat Josie Heath was defeated by Rep. Hank Brown for an open Senate seat in Colorado.

Finney, 65, Kansas treasurer for the past 16 years and an abortion opponent, toppled pro-choice Republican Gov. Mike Hayden, whose campaign foundered over taxes.

Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., who staked her campaign on an adamant stand against tax hikes, lost her bid to unseat Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, a Democrat. Another GOP congresswoman, Claudine Schneider, was soundly defeated by Democratic Sen. Claiborne Pell in Rhode Island.

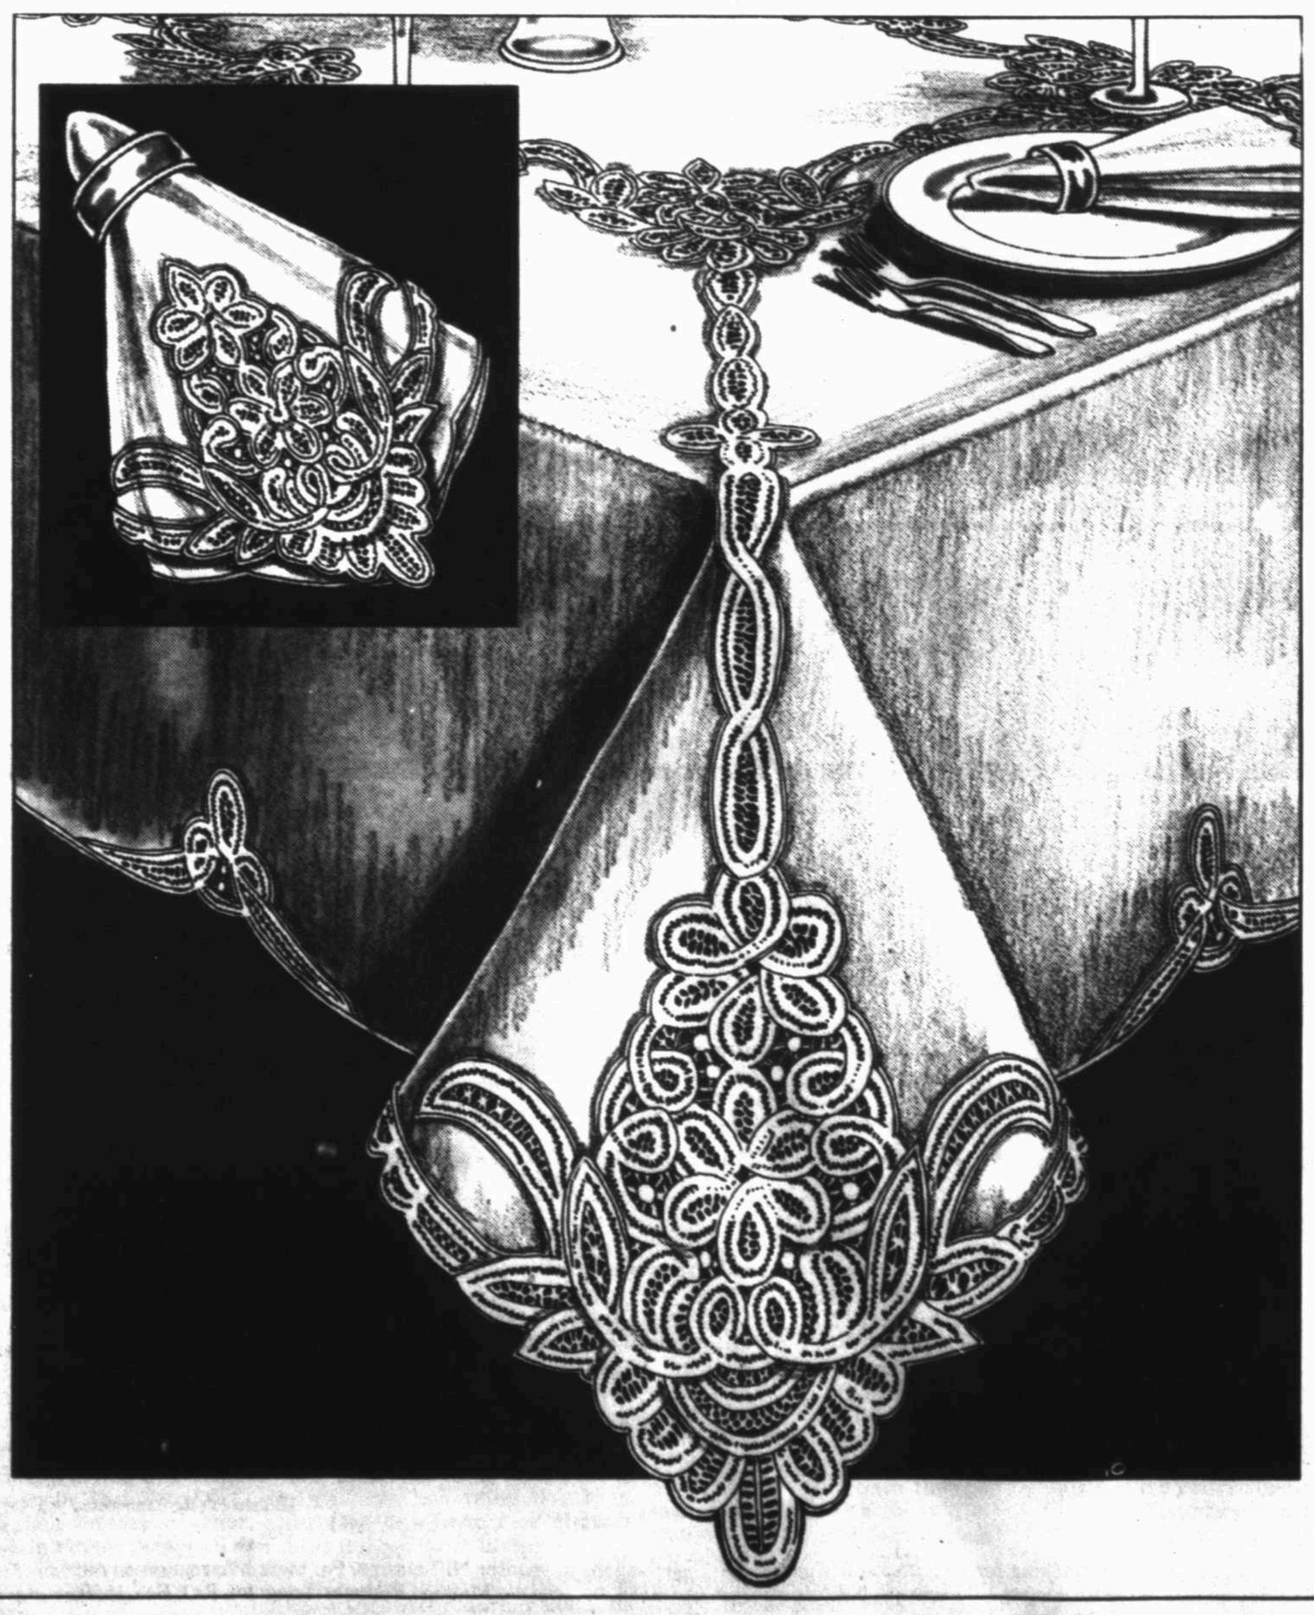

Richards, 67, defeated Clayton Williams, an oilman and political neophyte whose joke about rape cast a cloud over his campaign.

Jane Danowitz, executive director of the Women's Campaign Fund, called it "an exciting night" for women candidates. The fund supports pro-choice candidates in both parties.

"Most of (Richards') last-minute strength from women voters came on the abortion issue — or the combination of abortion and sexism on his part," Danowitz said.

ELECTION '90: THE NATION

Americans turn out to vote, doubting they'll be heard

Associated Press

Behind the flags and bunting and mechanized curtains, in schools and churches and government buildings, Americans voted on Tuesday. Then, time and again, they declared disgust with the government they were electing.

"You have to kind of hold your nose and vote this time," said John Kirley, a semi-retired consultant voting in Dallas. His sentiments were widely shared by voters around the country.

But beneath the surface ran a disturbing streak of cynicism — about the federal budget, about the U.S. involvement in the Persian Gulf and, perhaps most sharply, about the dismal state of political campaigns.

In northern Michigan's rural Benzie County, people filed into the Benzonia Township Hall to cast their ballots, exchange some small talk and sample Township Clerk Pat Mead's orange twists and sticky buns.

Precinct worker Art Fleetwood kept up a running banter about Monday night's snow and this fall's bow hunting season for deer — anything but politics.

But when talk did turn to politics, the people of Benzie County were as disgusted as voters anywhere.

"Kick them all out!" one man said as he walked out the door.

Family physician Bob Camp looked over the sample ballot posted on the wall.

"If there was a place on here for 'No one,' I would have voted a straight ticket," he said. "I am thoroughly disgusted. I am more than that. I am one step beyond disgusted."

Six hundred miles away, in New York City, wind blew leaves into swirls outside the brick school building where 5-year-old Emma Rosenberg had just voted for the first time, with some help from her mother, Debbie.

"She voted for the environment," said Debbie Rosenberg, who had let Emma pull the lever for a vote on New York's Environmental Quality Bond Act.

It was thrilling for a 5-year-old, but her mother's smile vanished when she was asked if she was satisfied with the slate of candidates on the ballot.

A few minutes later, precinct worker Tousette G. Sefman stepped outside for a cigarette. As a black woman, she said, she felt especially obligated to exercise her right to vote. But she, too, was disgusted with her government.

"I think maybe a parliamentary system might be better," Ms. Sefman said.

Re-elected despite weather

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After weeks of berating their elected representatives about soaring taxes and governmental chaos, the voters of America had their say at the ballot box Tuesday. But in the end, their bark was worse than their bite.

The great political rebellion that some forecasters had predicted failed to materialize as voters balked at a wholesale attack on incumbents. But there were upsets, suprises, and a what appeared to be a setback for President Bush and the Republican Party.

Democrats seemed assured of retaining and strenthening their control of Congress, spelling hard times for the Republican president as he tries to push his agenda through a divided government during the final two years of his term into the 1992 presidential election.

Bush also watched one Republican governor, Bob Martinez of Florida, go down in defeat in early returns and anxiously awaited the results from his home state of Texas, where Republican Clayton Williams was trailing Democrat Ann Richards.

The president campaigned for both GOP candidates in leading his party's battle to control the governor's offices in key states and thus dominate the political redistricting process that will help shape the political makeup through the end of the century.

Nevertheless, the 1990 elections were by no means a Democratic sweep. In North Carolina, Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, after trailing in the polls for weeks, apparently carved out a victory over Democratic rival Harvey Gantt, the black ex-mayor of Charlotte.

The biggest suprise of the evening emerged in New Jersey, where Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley found himself in a neck-and-neck race against Christine Todd Whitman but appeared headed for victory.

Collectively, then, the scattered results in races for all 435 House seats, 34 of the 100 Senate seats and 36 of the 50 governor's offices produced a muddled message, which indicated that a number of forces were driving the electorate.

Ada wins second term as governor of Guam

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Gov. Joseph Ada posted an easy victory Tuesday, making the Republican the first governor to win back-to-back terms in the U.S. territory's history.

With all 76 precincts reporting, Ada received 20,677 votes to Democrat Madeleine Bordallo's 15,688 votes, the Guam Election Commission reported.

Final official tallies are expected Wednesday, the commission said.

The abortion issue was not a factor in the vote, as both candidates oppose abortion and support a court challenge to a decision striking down the territory's restrictive abortion law.

Bordallo, the first woman and non-native Guamanian to run for governor, is the widow of former Gov. Ricardo Bordallo. Her husband committed suicide Jan. 30, one day before he was to begin an 18-month federal prison term in California. He was not in office at the time of his death.

In the territory's congressional election, Republican Ben Blaz won a fourth term as a non-voting delegate, defeating Democrat Ben Pagelinan by 21,390 to 16,437.

Quayle spends quiet day after voting

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After casting his vote in his hometown of Huntington, Ind., this morning, Vice President Dan Quayle spent a quiet morning before returning to Washington to catch up on paperwork, his press secretary, David Beckwith, said.

Quayle spent Monday night in Indianapolis, where he campaigned all day. It was a quiet finale to several months of intense campaigning by the vice president for Republican candidates across the nation.

On Tuesday morning, he went to Huntington, where Beckwith said he voted a "strict Republican ticket."

NEWSPAPER CLASS 101

Dear Mrs. Hancock,

My class has been very excited about the "Newspaper in Education" program. The students have told me that for the first time they have realized newspapers can be fun to read. The activities you have given us have challenged and encouraged them to read newspapers.

I have loved the way the activities correlate with their language arts. A unit in reading was taught on summarizing, then the students followed an activity card that told them to summarize an article in the newspaper. The students have cut out nouns, alphabetized headings, made bumper stickers from words, written fact and opinion statements from the weather forecasts, and applied for jobs from the classified ads. These are just some of the many activities that we have done.

I believe it has shown the students a practical application of what they have learned. It demonstrates to them the importance of knowing the various language arts skills. They've had to use alphabetical order, read to comprehend an article, find the main idea, etc. It is a program to use what they have learned.

The students have really enjoyed cutting, pasting, making words, silly sentences, etc. from the newspapers. They think it is a great program.

I would encourage all teachers to use the NIE program. It has been a valuable activity that has strengthened my language arts section.

Sincerely,
Lucinda Shirley

ELECTION '90: TEXAS RACES

Governor's race 'lesser of evils', voters say

By Jay Jorden
Associated Press Writer

Choosing the lesser of two evils for governor was a distasteful job some Texans said they faced Tuesday, but election officials said the bitter race might be one reason for a healthy turnout.

Some 3.85 million Texans, or about half the state's 7.7 million registered voters, were expected to cast ballots, including absentee results, a spokesman for the secretary of state's office said.

"It's looking good across the state," said Mark Toohey, the secretary's executive assistant. "If things go as we predicted, this will be the largest turnout in a gubernatorial year since 1970."

Toohey said he couldn't attribute the healthy turnout solely to the heated 18-month governor's race that prompted an estimated $45 million in spending by Democrat Ann Richards and Republican Clayton Williams.

"But that might be one of the many factors" in the expected 50 percent turnout, said Toohey.

One pollster said four of every five Texans believed the governor's race was more negative than previous campaigns.

At a neighborhood near the University of Texas at El Paso, David E. Etzold said he voted for Williams, who had received campaign help from President Bush.

"I thought he was the best of the two evils. Both candidates were very, very weak," said the 66-year-old Etzold. "I'm embarrassed we've got candidates like that running in Texas."

But he said the thought of Richards in the governor's seat frightened him.

"I think she's dangerous. I think she could hurt us. ... I don't think she's a clear thinker and when it comes to dealing with national politics I think Williams has an advantage, as long as Bush is in office," Etzold said.

Campaign spending this election was "much too much," he said.

"Think what we could do with that with people who really need it," said Etzold, who is a former United Way chapter president.

Other voters who emerged from the polling place at the El Paso Tennis Club expressed relief that their ballots were cast.

"There was too much mudslinging and stuff like that rather than coming out on the points of the issues," said Hector Flores. He and his wife, Celia, said they voted for Richards.

"I hope who we voted for does the job, because sometimes they get in and then they disappoint you," Mrs. Flores said.

Elsewhere across the state, mostly sunny skies and warming fall temperatures brought voters out in healthy numbers.

"You have to kind of hold your nose and vote this time," said John Kirley after he cast his ballot at a Dallas elementary school located in a tree-lined residential neighborhood.

Kirley, a semi-retired consultant, said he voted for Williams, whose gaffes eroded what had been a double-digit lead over Richards.

"He has not acted as wisely as he should," Kirley said. "He talked instead of listened."

Among the 50 or so voters waiting outside Harry S. Truman Middle School in south Grand Prairie when the polls opened were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lauritzen.

"My biggest complaint was that we had no good choice in the governor's race. It was more a case of voting against someone. It's more important to vote on people by what they can do than by what you don't like," Lauritzen said.

Williamson County Tax Assessor Dorothy Jones said drives by political parties and urging of election workers helped in a registration surge.

"In this county we harped, harped, harped that no matter how you vote, go to polls and vote," said Ms. Jones, who is the county's election administrator. "I'm an elected official, so it does me good to see people get out and vote."

Ms. Jones was the most optimistic of county election officials surveyed, predicting 65 percent of the Central Texas county's 305,000 registered voters would cast ballots.

Toohey credited county election officials for much of the increased turnout around the state. He said more than 400,000 people in the state's 10 largest counties, which contain 52 percent of Texas' registered voters, cast absentee ballots.

A record 610 voters cast absentee ballots in Presidio County, said Sue Ann Smith, deputy county clerk. She said election officials expected a heavy turnout because of a contested county judge's race that could fall to the first Republican ever.

In the Panhandle, Election Day fever apparently struck some students at Belmar Elementary School, also Potter County's election Precinct 314. The Amarillo Globe-News said a group of students asked to vote.

When a polling official told them they would have to wait until they were 18 to cast their ballots, one student said, "I work here; can't I vote?"

Uncertain voters sure glad campaign over

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — No one is quite sure how Uncertain, Texas, got its name.

But Uncertain's 196 residents, like many voters across the state, were sure of one thing Tuesday — they were relieved to see the end of a down and dirty election campaign.

"I was sick of it by last night," said Elaine Philyaw, 38, a waitress at Bayou Landing restaurant, a popular gathering spot in the community of retirees and weekend anglers on the southwestern shore of Lake Caddo.

"I was so glad it was over today. It was time for it to be over."

Eighty-nine-year-old Isola Bays was unenthusiastic enough about the choice of candidates to consider some drastic action.

"I was of one mind as to scratch off everyone's name from the ballot," said the retired liquor store clerk. "Of course, I didn't do it. I've seen a lot of bad ones but this was as about as ugly as ever I've seen. Everybody was as mad as an old setting hen."

Uncertain is tucked away in traditionally yellow-dog Democrat country, four miles from the Louisiana border in deep East Texas. But some voters, like Bays, ignored party labels to choose the candidate they least disliked.

A lifelong Democrat, Bays has rarely strayed. And though she voted mainly Democratic this time, Bays marked her ballot for Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams.

So why not Democratic hopeful Ann Richards?

"I just didn't trust the woman," Bays explained. "She looked all right but I was just afraid she couldn't run Texas, didn't have the strength or knowhow. Of course, we've had some big ones up there who didn't do any good."

This is not to say Williams was the ideal candidate, Bays quickly added.

"Clayton Williams doesn't have that much sense either, of course. ... He's such a blowhard. It was really a vote againsty Ann Richards," Bays said, cautioning that she was speaking only for herself, not all of Uncertain.

"I'm just one little pea in a dish," she said.

AP Laserphoto

Residents were obliged to use the polling station in nearby Karnack. Then all of Harrison County's paper ballots were taken to Marshall, the county seat, where they were counted by electronic scanner, said Linda Simpson, an election clerk.

"It's a kind of a radical place," said Dahmer, 77, a former electronics engineer and rural postman who has written a history of the area, "Caddo Was."

"Everybody does his own thing, very independent," he said. "There's no property taxes — no taxes other than sales tax ... Not a lot of restrictions. A free-wheeling, free-thinking kind of place."

The current mayor, Bill Mauthe, 48, said he could be unequivocable about one thing in Uncertain — "Our people are close-mouthed."

Mauthe, whose wife is the Republican precinct chairman, said he was a Democrat, voted independent, but declined to say who got his vote in the governor's race. He said he was surprised when told he was the only Uncertain resident contacted who kept his vote secret.

Speaker Lewis re-election bid key legislative race

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis won re-election Tuesday despite a strong Republican challenge against him and other Democratic lawmakers in what could be the most important legislative elections in a decade.

Republicans, hoping to cut into a 90-60 Democratic margin in the House, had Lewis, the four-term speaker, as their No. 1 target.

But Lewis, with 55 percent of the precincts counted in House District 89, led Republican challenger Charles Gore, a former Colleyville city councilman, by 12,618 votes to 7,596, or 62 percent to 38 percent.

The number of unopposed candidates for both parties guaranteed Democrats a 61-30 edge over Republicans before the remainder of the winners were declared. All 150 House seats were being determined.

In the Senate, where Democrats held a 23-8 majority, six Democrats and two Republicans were unopposed among the 16 places on the ballot, and the election trend showed a 22-9 margin.

Lewis, 54, D-Fort Worth, was the focal point of elections that are considered especially important because state lawmakers in 1991 will get the first shot at redrawing district lines for the Legislature and Congress.

Although the speaker has only one vote, his influence is much greater. Lewis already has said that, if re-elected, he will seek an unprecedented fifth term as speaker when the Legislature convenes in January. His associates say he has the votes to do so.

In contested Senate races:

■ Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, led Republican Jerry Patterson of Houston.

■ Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, led Republican Larry Vick of Floresville.

■ Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, defeated Republican Linda Rowland of Baytown.

■ Democrat Mike Moncrief of Fort Worth defeated Republican John Lively of Fort Worth for the seat vacated by Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, who was defeated Tuesday for the U.S. Senate.

■ Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, defeated Republican Bill Batts of Houston.

■ Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, led Democrat Jack Borden of Dallas.

■ Democrat Peggy Rosson of El Paso, former member of the Public Utility Commission, led Republican Frank Lozito of El Paso to succeed Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, who lost to Ms. Rosson in the primary.

Democrat Jim Turner of Crockett led Rep. Richard Smith, R-College Station, as well as independent Lou "English" Zaeske of Bryan, who first announced for the GOP.

In 1992, after Senate boundaries are changed based on the 1990 census, all 31 Senate seats will be up for election. In 1993, the newly elected senators will draw lots for two- and four-year terms.

First elected in 1970, Lewis struggled in this campaign against the outspoken Gore, who accused Lewis of taking large sums of money from special interests, then returning the favor with legislative decisions on their behalf. Gore also questioned Lewis' ethics, business and tax problems.

During his 20 years in the House, Lewis has failed a number of times to accurately list all of his business ties.

Gore said, "My opinion of state representatives in the past has been that most of them ... could not hold a job pitching hay on a farm."

Lewis personally, Gore said, "is as phony baloney" as anyone he has ever met. Lewis also was criticized for supporting local Republicans near his district, which has turned into GOP territory.

Lewis accused Gore of twisting the truth and misleading voters, and says he would support a new ethics bill for legislators.

He defended his support of Republicans by saying it is important that the House not get bogged down in partisan infighting.

Republicans targeted several Democrats this year in hopes of building a House majority, which until the past decade was unthinkable as conservative Democrats controlled the Legislature.

As late as the 1960s, one Capitol joke was that the GOP held its legislative caucus in a pay phone booth outside the House chamber.

But all that has changed as Texas has emerged as a two-party state.

GOP's Phillips beats Mauzy to keep chief justice post

HOUSTON (AP) — Incumbent Republican Tom Phillips moved to an early lead over Democratic challenger Oscar Mauzy Tuesday and held onto it to remain chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

With 3,976 of 7,030 precincts counted, Phillips garnered 59 percent, or 1,298,988 votes, to Mauzy's 41 percent, or 889,870, to win the seat for a second term.

Phillips told supporters in Austin he was proud Texas would continue to have "a court system that every Texan can support and have pride in."

In the Place 1 position, Republican John Cornyn, a state district judge in San Antonio, had 56 percent, or 1,163,200 votes to beat Democrat Gene Kelly's 44 percent, or 929,610 votes. Kelly is a former Air Force judge from Universal City.

Phillips Mauzy

In Place 2, Democrat Bob Gammage got 57 percent of the vote, or 1,166,503 ballots, to beat Republican Charles Ben Howell, who had 43 percent, or 890,530 votes.

Howell is a state appeals judge from Dallas and a perennial Republican candidate. Gammage, a Houston native, is a former state representative, former state senator, and former congressman serving on the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

Voters also selected five judges on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Democrat Frank Maloney led Republican Joseph A. Devany 54 percent to 46 percent in a race that remained too close to call late Tuesday. Maloney had 1,105,925 votes to Devany's 924,864.

In another close race, Republican Oliver S. Kitzman held a narrow edge in Place 2 with 51 percent, or 1,018,881 votes, to Democrat Sam Houston Clinton's 49 percent, or 997,398 votes.

In the Place 3 appeals court race, Democrat Bill White maintained an 85 percent lead over Libertarian Carol Caul throughout the night to win the seat. White had 1,458,594 votes to Caul's 258,757.

The Place 4 race pitted Republican David Berchelmann in a close race with Democrat Charles F. Baird. Berchelmann was ahead with 53 percent of the vote, or 1,145,497 ballots, to Baird's 47 percent or 1,023,854 votes.

Democrat Morris L. Overstreet beat out Republican Louis E. Sturns for the Place 5 seat on the appellate court after trading the lead several times during the evening. Overstreet had 51 percent, or 1,025,129 votes, to Sturns' 49 percent, or 982,334 votes.

Romanians make long trip to vote

DALLAS (AP) — The 1,300-mile trip that Nelu and Virginica Prodan made with their three children and several friends was a small price to pay for the right to cast ballots in a free election.

The Prodans, who are Romanian citizens, had to drive to the Romanian Embassy in Washington, D.C., to vote in their country's election. But that didn't deter family members who said they never considered any alternative.

"We could have said it was too hard to go there," said Virginica Prodan. "And it was hard. It was windy and rainy the whole time. We had to make such a quick trip, we hardly had time to stop to use the bathroom. And the baby was only 10 months old."

Twenty-four hours after the Prodans left Dallas in a borrowed van, they arrived at their polling place. They had voted May 30 in the first Romanian free election held during their lifetimes.

Mrs. Prodan said the family knew the voting journey would be arduous, but possible, if they could find a way to get there. They borrowed a car from friends because they didn't think their 1983 Cutlass would make the long trip.

The family had to find someone to share the driving because Mrs. Prodan didn't have her American driver's license yet.

"But if we didn't go, after the elections we might have thought that if only we had gone to vote, maybe things would have turned out differently," she said.

"Before we went on the trip, we didn't think about what would happen in the election. We only thought about getting there and doing our part."

Education board seat filled by Democrat

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Will Davis of Austin held a nearly 2-1 margin over Republican Charles Jones of Bryan in early returns Tuesday as the two competed for a seat on the State Board of Education and a chance to influence Texas schools.

With 14 percent of the precincts reporting in District 10, Davis had 67,074 votes, or 65.8 percent, to Jones' 34,864 or 34.2 percent.

Davis, a lawyer, was the only incumbent board member to face a challenger in the general election. The Education Board's District 10 includes 16 central Texas counties.

He said devising a constitutional school finance plan is Texas' most pressing education issue. A state judge has ruled the current system is unfair to poor school districts.

"The first thing we've got to do is get this finance plan acceptable to the courts," said Davis, 61, who heads the Education Board's finance committee.

"My committee and I presented a plan last year about this time that in my judgment would have been declared constitutional by the court," he said.

Jones is a former teacher and former school administrator. He works with school districts as Job Training Partnership Act administrator for the Brazos Valley Private Industry Council.

ELECTION '90: TEXAS RACES

Morales second Hispanic to win statewide office

DALLAS (AP) — Although Ann Richard's victorious governor's race attracted nationwide attention, Texas voters picked several other state officers Tuesday, including state attorney general, where Democrat Dan Morales became the first Hispanic to hold the job.

With 77 percent of the precincts reporting, Morales had 53 percent of the vote to Republican J.E. "Buster" Brown's 45 percent. Morales, 34, also became the second Hispanic to ever win a statewide election. Libertarian candidate Ray Dittmar of Houston took 3 percent.

The only Hispanic previously voted into statewide office in Texas was Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, elected in 1986 and again in 1988 after first being appointed to the post.

Voters also chose an agriculture commissioner, state treasurer, comptroller, railroad commissioner, land commissioner, U.S. senator, three seats on the Texas Supreme Court, including chief justice, and five seats on the Criminal Court of Appeals.

Democratic Land Commissioner Gary Mauro won a third term, defeating Republican challenger Wes Gilbreath, 59 percent to 37 percent.

Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison defeated Democrat Nikki Van Hightower in the race to succeed Democrat Ann Richards as state treasurer.

In the race for state comptroller, Democrat John Sharp beat Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. with 62 percent of the vote to Harding's 32 percent.

Democrat Bob Krueger defeated Beau Boulter 57 percent to 40 percent in the race to replace Republican Kent Hance on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Democrat Bob Bullock beat Republican Rob Mosbacher in the race for lieutenant governor.

Bullock, 61, the state's comptroller for the past 15 years, had 52 percent of the vote while Mosbacher, 39, a Houston businessman and chairman of the state welfare agency, had 45 percent.

In races for the Texas Supreme Court:

■ Incumbent Republican Tom Phillips beat Democratic challenger Oscar Mauzy in the race the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court. Phillips had 59 percent of the vote to Mauzy's 41 percent.

■ In Place 1, Republican John Cornyn, a state district judge in San Antonio, had 55 percent to beat Democrat Gene Kelly, a former Air Force judge from Universal City, had 45 percent.

■ In Place 2, Democrat Bob Gammage won with 57 percent of the vote, while Republican Charles Ben Howell had 43 percent.

And in the five races for seats on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals:

■ Republican Joseph A. Devany lost to Democrat Frank Maloney, 55 percent to 45 percent for the Place 1 seat.

■ Democrat Sam Houston Clinton led Republican Oliver S. Kitzman in the race for the Place 2 spot 51 percent to 49 percent.

■ In Place 3, Democrat Bill White tallied 85 percent, while Libertarian Carol Caul garnered 15 percent.

■ Democrat Charles F. Baird won Place 4 with 52 percent of the vote. Republican David Berchelmann, had 48 percent.

■ In Place 5, Morris L. Overstreet won with 51 percent of the vote to Republican Louis E. Sturns' 49 percent.

Smith takes Midland County by storm

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Incumbent Lamar Smith took Midland County by storm Tuesday, garnering approximately 78 percent of the vote here as he went on to easily win his U.S. Representative race for the 21st congressional district.

Smith

Smith, a San Antonio Republican, received 23,456 votes in Midland County. His Democratic opponent, Kirby Roberts of Kingsland, received 6,637 or about 22 percent of the Midland County votes.

Smith was jubilant upon learning the Midland County election results. "I'm very pleased. It makes me want to work even harder to make government more responsive and effective," he said. "I'm really happy with the results in Midland."

Smith garnered about 80 percent of the votes in Bexar County, which includes of a portion of San Antonio. Smith received 36,354 votes and Roberts received 9,243 or 20 percent of the votes in Bexar County.

Roberts said he wasn't surprised to have received only 22 percent of the votes from the absentee ballots, but he expected to do better in the overall campaign. "I just didn't have the funds to campaign to the extent that my opponent did," he said.

Roberts, a lawyer in Buchanan Dam, has also served as president of the Burnet County Bar Association. He supported increased funding for alternative energy sources and intended to make the passage of National Health Insurance the top priority of his office.

Smith campaigned to redirect federal research and development monies to enhanced oil recovery, without additional taxpayer funding, which apparently appealed to Midlanders.

"I campaigned quite a bit in Midland and West Texas," Smith said. "In fact, I was in Midland twice in the past two weeks and consider Midland a real anchor to the district."

Smith said he first won Midland's favor in 1986, when he was in the city so often that he could "apply as a resident."

"Seriously," he said, "I can walk down the street in Midland and see friends and people that I know."

Smith attributed his familiarity with the Tall City partly for his resounding victory in Midland County.

He said he considered the win "a stamp of approval" from Midlanders.

"I hope to be part of the solution in government," Smith said.

In the midst of impending federal program cuts or tax increases, Smith recommended that federal managers be required to cut overhead expenses by 10 percent to save $27 billion in the coming fiscal year.

Although the congressman won in several counties — Midland, Bear, Upton, and Reagan County — complete final results for Congressional District 21 were not available at press time.

Burning issue

Demonstrators outside the Houston hotel where President Bush and other Texas Republican candidates are speaking burn draft notices Monday to protest the United States' involvement in the Mideast.

Dan Morales wins attorney general slot

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Dan Morales beat Republican J.E. "Buster" Brown in Tuesday's election for Texas attorney general, becoming the first Hispanic to hold the job and the second ever to win a statewide election.

Morales

With 64 percent of the precincts reporting, Morales had 1,263,231 votes, or 53.3 percent, to Brown's 1,038,343 or 43.8 percent. Libertarian candidate Ray Dittmar of Houston had 68,013 or 2.9 percent.

The only Hispanic previously voted into statewide office in Texas was Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, elected in 1986 and again in 1988 after first being appointed to the post.

Brown and Morales, both legislators, view the attorney general's job differently.

Morales, 34, a Harvard Law School graduate and state representative from San Antonio, said he would be an activist attorney general who addresses public policy issues and works with lawmakers.

He noted Texas has been embroiled in lawsuits in nearly every public policy area — including education, criminal justice and mental health.

"What good lawyers do for private clients is not simply sit around the office and wait to get sued," said Morales.

But Brown said the activist style of Democratic incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox had made the office too political.

The attorney general should defend the state's laws in court and leave policy-making to the Legislature, said Brown, 49, a University of Texas Law School graduate and state senator from Lake Jackson.

"We've got to get somebody in that office that the public will have confidence in as a lawyer," Brown said. "I think the people of Texas want a conservative ..., that will restore the credibility of that office."

The attorney general's responsibilities are far-reaching. The office is involved in antitrust, consumer, environmental and public health lawsuits. The attorney general gives advisory opinions on legal matters, and administers the child support enforcement program.

District and county attorneys have the primary responsibility for criminal cases, but the attorney general can provide assistance at their request.

Brown and Morales are both former prosecutors. In the Legislature, Brown has been vice chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee, while Morales has headed the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

Touting his own legal experience, he challenged Morales to release a list of cases he has tried before juries.

Morales said he has tried such cases. Former Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap Jr. said Morales was one of his best prosecutors.

Brown has been a lawyer longer. He worked as a Brazoria County prosecutor for nearly four years before going into private practice in 1972.

Morales worked as a Bexar County prosecutor in 1983-85, after a year in private practice.

Clements votes 'straight ticket'

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said he has few regrets about leaving office in January and plans to travel "very far away" from Austin.

"I've had eight years of service to the state. I feel real good about it, and I leave office with a great sigh of relief," Clements said at a Dallas voting precinct Tuesday.

The Republican, who has served two separate terms as governor, said he voted a straight Republican ticket.

Clements said he has few regrets about leaving the governor's office.

"I'm not going to miss any part of it," he said. "You do it for eight years, and you do the best you can, you make a few mistakes. As long as your batting average is better than .500, you're in good shape.

"I think that I have helped the state," he said. "I leave with no regrets whatsoever."

Democrat Sharp elected comptroller

Sharp

With a third of the precincts reporting, Sharp had 879,286 votes, or 63 percent, to 438,834, or 31 percent, for Warren G. Harding Jr.

Libertarian candidate William E. Grisham had 40,308, or 5 percent.

"I don't think there's a region in the state we didn't carry very strongly," Sharp said.

Harding was at dinner, a spokeswoman said, and not available for comment.

Harding, who is not related to the former U.S. president, is the son of former state treasurer Warren G. Harding Sr.

Sharp, who has been a railroad commissioner since 1986, spent much of his campaign trying to inform voters about Harding's lack of political experience.

Mrs. Hutchison kept her early lead with 411,684 votes compared to Ms. Van Hightower's 366,945. Libertarian candidate Suzanne Love received 3 percent or 26,915 votes.

The comptroller is responsible for collecting and distributing most state taxes and fees. The treasurer manages the state budget.

In both races the campaigns focused on accusations of misdeeds and personal interests.

Harding called Sharp a professional politician who has lost touch with Texas the private sector.

Sharp began his public service career as a state representative in 1978. In 1982 he became a state senator and served until 1986 when he won a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Harding last ran for office in 1988 when he lost a Dallas County Republican primary race to Dallas County Tax Assessor David Childs.

As far as issues are concerned, both men said they opposed new taxes. Instead, they proposed general reductions in state spending.

Mrs. Hutchison said the state should privatize prisons, convert abandoned military bases into prisons and raise the legal population limit from 95 percent capacity to 105 percent, saving money and space.

Ms. Van Hightower has said she plans to increase the state's non-tax revenue by at least $50 million in four years, in part, by expanding the new tax pool used by municipalities to invest their funds together.

Mrs. Hutchison, former Houston television reporter and two-time state legislator, returns to politics after a bitter loss in 1982 when she failed to win the party nomination for the 3rd Congressional District.

Krueger defeats Boulter in TRC race

Krueger

With 1,328 of the state's 7,030 precincts reporting, Krueger had 576,223 votes, or 57 percent, to Boulter's 402,299 votes, or 40 percent. Libertarian candidate Clarence William Steinbrecher of San Antonio had 34,236 votes, or 3 percent.

Late polls showing Krueger of New Braunfels with a double-digit lead came true in the race to replace Kent Hance on the commission which regulates oil, gas and transportation.

The two former congressmen campaigned with similar calls for developing a national energy policy that would stabilize oil prices and reduce reliance on foreign oil.

Krueger supported an exploration cost recovery incentive in the federal tax code, which would permit the driller to recover 65 cents per dollar of capital invested in a dry hole against the income from wells drilled after a dry hole.

He said the trucking industry should be deregulated gradually because if "we took out all controls, jobs would be wiped out overnight."

As congressmen, both men were considered champions of the oil and gas industry. Boulter sat on the Budget Committee and chaired the House Republican Energy Task Force. Krueger served on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee's energy and power subcommittee.

Both have won the "Hats Off" award from the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners.

The candidates stretched back 15 years to find an issue to divide them.

Back in 1975, Krueger supported an amendment to the windfall profits tax plan that would allow energy companies to avoid the tax if they plowed the profits back into oil and gas development. It also included a title that gradually decontrolled domestic oil prices.

The amendment, defeated 220-202, became an issue in 1990, with Boulter saying the "last thing" Texas needed was a Railroad Commissioner who supported the windfall profits tax.

Krueger argued Boulter's memory was skewed, because the law was not actually enacted until 1980, when both had left Washington.

Boulter was educated in Texas and served in Amarillo politics before opening a private law practice.

Mauro wins; Hightower maintains slim lead

DALLAS (AP) — Democratic Land Commissioner Garry Mauro won a third consecutive term Tuesday with a victory over Republican challenger Wes Gilbreath.

Meanwhile, incumbent Democrat Jim Hightower clung to a narrow lead in a see-saw battle with Republican challenger Rick Perry in the race for Texas agriculture commissioner.

Mauro raced to a 22 percentage-point lead over Gilbreath, a Houston businessman, and never looked back.

"I think I won because the people of this great state recognized a substantive campaign," Mauro said. "The people realized I have run the land office like a business and presented a positive future.

"I am just looking forward to the next four years."

With 5,355 of 7,030 precincts reporting, Hightower, who is seeking his third term as agriculture commissioner, had 48.7 percent of the vote. Perry, a third-term state representative from Haskell, had 48.4 percent. Libertarian Karen Tegtmeyer had 2.9 percent.

The agriculture and land commissioners races, traditionally low-key, down-ballot standoffs, have attracted sizable attention this year due to a series of attacks and responses by the candidates.

Perry voted in Haskell Tuesday as his campaign proclaimed a late blitz of television ads blasting Hightower would be enough to push the third-term state representative to victory.

Hightower's campaign said Perry's $1.5 million war chest would not buy the election.

"We are relatively comfortable," said Brigid Shea, a Hightower campaign spokeswoman. "The feeling here is that the Republicans have made something out of nothing with Rick Perry.

"He is just another pretty face — the Dan Quayle of Texas politics," Shea said. "The GOP has poured a lot of money and television into him. A victory by Hightower will be a vindication of that sort of politicking."

Ken Luce, Perry's campaign chairman, said polls showing Hightower leading by 12 points a few weeks ago had shriveled to a dead heat by Tuesday.

"There are a lot of factors that helped our campaign peak at the right time," Luce said. "Well placed TV ads bringing up the contrast, as well as being out in the state when the voters started to pay attention to the downballot races."

Hightower was favored to win a third consecutive term largely because his name recognition in cities like Houston, Dallas and San Antonio is around 75 percent.

He registers significantly less support with the rural farmers and ranchers his office regulates.

■ Republican incumbents also fall in the statehouses of Rhode Island and Kansas, while independent Lowell Weicker wins in Connecticut.

Chiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrat Lawton Chiles unseated Florida's Gov. Bob Martinez, and Democratic challengers defeated Republican governors in Rhode Island and Kansas on an election night that saw statehouse incumbents struggling for political survival.

Democrat Ann Richards held a small but steady lead over Republican Clayton Williams in Texas' bitter and tumultuous governor's race.

Republican Gov. Ed DiPrete lost the Rhode Island statehouse he had held since 1984 to Democrat Bruce Sundlun, and Democrat Joan Finney defeated first-term Republican Gov. Mike Hayden in Kansas. The Republican incumbent also trailed in Maine.

Republican George Voinovich won in Ohio, a state where the Democratic governor is retiring. An independent, former GOP Sen. Lowell Weicker, won a three-way race in Connecticut, another state where the Democratic incumbent is retiring.

Outspoken conservative Democrat John Silber held a thin lead over Republican William Weld in their race to succeed former Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, who is retiring from the statehouse in the depths of recession-inspired unpopularity.

Martinez, who failed in his bid to become Florida's first two-term Republican governor, called Chiles to concede defeat as Chiles's substantial lead held up in incomplete returns.

"He was very, very gracious and said he wanted to help us with the transition," said Chiles, who called the campaign "the most glorious, glorious time of my life."

Chiles' support for abortion rights was a significant factor in the race, according to network television voter interviews. The ex-senator also had refused to accept contributions over $200.

Martinez's loss was a setback for President Bush, who made three campaign visits to Florida to try to help the state's first Hispanic governor.

Both Chiles and Weicker are former senators. Weicker, who previously was a Republican, becomes the first independent governor elected since Maine's James Longley in 1974.

Michigan Democratic Gov. James Blanchard faced a stiff challenge from Republican John Engler, who held a lead in incomplete returns. The race was targeted by abortion groups, as Blanchard supported abortion rights and Engler opposed them.

Maine's GOP Gov. John McKernan trailed former Democratic Gov. Joseph Brennan, who capitalized on New England's economic downturn, which hurt many of the region's incumbents.

Finney was an abortion opponent and Hayden, who was seeking a second term, was an advocate of abortion rights.

The focus for both parties was on the big-three states — California, Texas and Florida — where governors will influence new congressional district maps to be drawn next year.

With returns still far from complete, Democrats had captured five governorships previously held by Republicans: Florida, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, New Mexico and Kansas. And they led in several more, including Illinois, Maine, Nebraska and Texas.

Republicans won in Ohio.

Barry denied D.C. council seat

AP Laserphoto

The new Democratic mayor of Washington, D.C., Sharon Pratt Dixon, right, is accompanied to her polling place by supporter Amy Smith Johnson, who carries a broom. Dixon will succeed Mayor Marion Barry, who was convicted on drug charges. Barry also was defeated in his bid for a City Council seat.

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia voters denied scandal-scarred Marion Barry a City Council seat Tuesday and replaced him in the mayor's office with Sharon Pratt Dixon, a Democrat who promised to clean house in the troubled capital.

Jesse Jackson also won his first elected office, an unpaid, non-voting "shadow" Senate seat from which he will attempt to persuade Congress to make the District of Columbia a state.

Dixon became the first black woman elected to lead a major American city. She led former police chief Maurice T. Turner, the Republican, 86 percent to 12 percent in partial citywide returns. The preliminary results, culled from ballots cast before noon, have accurately reflected the final outcome of the last five mayoral contests.

Civil rights activist Eleanor Holmes Norton was elected non-voting House delegate, defeating Republican Harry Singleton despite revelations that Norton and her husband, Edward, had paid no local taxes for seven years, beginning in 1983. The preliminary results showed Norton with 59 percent of the vote, compared to 30 percent for Singleton.

Votes were running narrowly against a referendum that would restore a comprehensive overnight shelter law that required the city to provide refuge to any homeless person that demands it. The City Council gutted the law earlier this year amid complaints that housing the homeless had become too expensive.

But the day belonged to Dixon, who rode her reformist platform into the office Barry has held since 1978.

Dixon was swept to victory with her pledge to root out corruption and waste within the city government. Chief among her promises has been to cut 2,000 middle-level managers from the city payroll, a move she has said will save $95 million.

Turner hit Dixon for her lack of experience and said her plan to immediately cut the district's work force was inhumane.

"Big Green" and Other Issues

In California:

☐ PROPOSITION 128 ("Big Green"): Would restrict offshore drilling, pesticide use and other pollutants.

Supporters say it would preserve ancient redwood forests, slow global warming by gradually curbing auto and other emissions, ban oil development in state waters and bar pesticides suspected of causing cancer.

Opponents, including major oil companies based outside the state, insist it would cost Californians billions each year because controls would increase gasoline, electricity and food prices.

☐ PROPOSITION 135: The agricultural and chemical industry's answer to "Big Green" would expand pesticide monitoring programs and eliminate some industry fees.

☐ PROPOSITION 138: The timber industry's answer to "Forests Forever" would authorize bonds for forest and park restoration, wildlife studies and other programs, and would limit timber cutting.

Environmental issues in other states:

☐ WASHINGTON: A state initiative would require local governments to adopt land use plans to conform to state growth and environmental goals.

☐ OREGON: A measure would impose tight new recycling standards, and a second would shut down the state's only nuclear power plant.

☐ NEW YORK: A proposed $1.9 billion environmental bond would be used to acquire land for preservation, help close landfills and promote recycling.

Bush waits out election in White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush awaited midterm election results in the privacy of the White House Tuesday, choosing to remain on the sidelines after campaigning extensively for scores of Republican candidates.

Ending a six-day political trip, Bush and his wife Barbara returned in early afternoon after voting in Houston, their adopted home city.

The first couple voted at a polling place in a nursing home on the west side of Houston — a few blocks from the Houstonian Hotel, where a suite of rooms serves as the Bushes' legal voting residence.

Asked by reporters as he was waiting on line to vote if he cared to make a prediction, Bush said, "Good way to go to jail."

Politicking is prohibited in polling places.

However, Bush's chief of staff John Sununu, whose abrasive tactics in dealing with Congress are blamed by some White House staffers for contributing to Bush's decline in popularity, had no hesitancy in discussing politics.

Sununu said he was sticking with his prediction, made on a television talk show Sunday, that Republicans would lose no more than one Senate seat and between four and 12 House seats.

While some Republicans distanced themselves from Bush for his wavering stand on budget and tax issues, Sununu defended the campaign support provided by the White House.

"The motivation factor, the energizing the campaign — those are all pluses," Sununu said.

"You can't make a winning campaign out of a campaign that couldn't win anyway. And you can't cause a campaign that's on a landslide to lose. But what you can do is help in those marginal races. And that's what, if you're doing it right, you focus on," he added.

Over the past year and a half, Bush attended 115 campaign events in 35 states and raised nearly $90 million for Republicans. For the last two weeks, he has been campaigning virtually nonstop.

However, he saw his popularity — and his appeal as a campaigner to other Republicans — drop sharply in October because of the budget debacle.

Sununu suggested Bush had decided against making any public statements on politics on Election Day.

After voting, Bush again ignored reporters' questions and quickly stepped into his limousine. "I don't want them to get me for loitering, so I'll go on," he said.

Taxes, environment big ballot box issues

Associated Press

Massachusetts and Montana voters rejected radical anti-tax ballot measures Tuesday, while Floridians gave a boost to the cause of handgun control.

Nebraskans, meanwhile, were trouncing a proposed two percent lid on state and local spending by a 70-30 percent margin.

Among other key environmental ballot contests, Missourians roundly defeated a "Natural Streams" measure protecting scenic waterways in the Ozark Mountains by a 77-23 percent margin, with 74 percent of the vote in.

Massachusetts Question 3, which would have reduced taxes by $2.6 billion in fiscal 1992, was defeated, 399,760 votes to 261,295, with 33 percent of precincts reporting.

The measure would have been the nation's largest voter-initiated state tax cut in history.

In Montana, voters defeated a novel proposal that would have replaced all state sales, income and property taxes with a one percent charge on all financial transactions.

In early returns, a second Montana measure that would make their cigarette tax the highest in the nation was trailing by a 54-46 percent margin.

Washington, D.C., voters were rejecting by a 54-46 percent margin a referendum restoring the right of homeless to overnight shelter, a right eroded by the city council earlier this year.

In Maine, early returns showed voters favoring, by a 3-2 margin, a ballot measure abolishing the state's tough blue laws, which force most big retailers to close on Sundays.

Abortion rights and proposed tax breaks for parents of private schoolchildren also faced crucial Election Day tests.

Altogether, voters confronted 236 ballot questions in 43 states and the District of Columbia; 67 were citizen initiatives, the most in 76 years.

Tough anti-taxing, anti-spending limits appeared on other state ballots including Colorado, California, Utah and Oregon.

Colorado and California residents had a chance to vent their anger at incumbents by passing limits on the number of terms politicians can serve. Kansas City, Mo., residents may also limit City Council terms.

Californians faced a heavy load of 28 ballot issues. By far the most crucial was Proposition 128, a sweeping environmental issue dubbed "Big Green" which would phase out many pesticides, ban oil development in state waters, ban chemicals that harm the ozone, and require a dramatic reduction in emissions of gases that contribute to global warming.

Californians also decided a "Forests Forever" initiative aimed at preserving forest land, as well as two less stringent, industry-backed alternatives to "Big Green" and the forestry measure.

Democrats post large gains in redistricting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on Tuesday padded their overwhelming control of political redistricting, plucking the potent Florida and Texas governorships from GOP hands and adding Rhode Island, Oklahoma and New Mexico to their remapping monopolies.

The Florida and Texas defeats were disastrous for Republicans, and Democrats were in the running for the only remaining major GOP redistricting weapon — the California governorship.

Democrats clearly will have a huge edge when lines are drawn for 1992 congressional races, all but cementing the Republicans as the House minority for another decade and perhaps far longer.

The Ohio governorship was the only significant redistricting victory for Republicans as results from gubernatorial and legislative races trickled in. The GOP appeared to be repelling most Democratic efforts to take over legislative chambers held by narrow Republican majorities.

Republicans were trying as well to steal control of several fragile Democratic chambers, including the Florida and Illinois senates and the lower chambers in Oregon and Pennsylvania. Early returns suggested those efforts would fail.

The GOP was playing defense in the costly, high-stakes fight and suffered a big loss when Democrat Lawton Chiles unseated Florida's Republican governor.

The Rhode Island, Oklahoma and New Mexico governor's office went from Republican to Democratic hands and then Texas was seized by the Democrats, too.

Democrats now will have sole power over the remapping in those states. Florida is likely to gain four House seats and Texas three. The House delegations in Rhode Island, Oklahoma and New Mexico won't change but control of redistricting should allow Democrats to draw districts that protect their House incumbents and perhaps endanger any GOP lawmakers.

Another victory for Democrats came in Kansas, where by unseating a Republican governor the party went from being shut out of the process to having veto power in redistricting, which will cost the state one House seat.

The Republicans' last hope was in California which will get seven of the 19 shifting seats, but even with a win in the governor's race there the GOP would only share the power with the Democratic legislature.

In all, eight states will gain and 13 will lose seats when House districts are reapportioned to reflect population shifts of the 1980s, according to preliminary census data.

Democrats strengthen hold on House of Representatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats moved to strengthen their longstanding grip on the House of Representatives in Tuesday's election even as voters tossed out several entrenched incumbents.

The majority party wrested four seats from the Republicans and threatened to take 10 more. GOP candidates captured two previously Democratic seats and led in another four.

Voters elected the first socialist to the House since 1929 and the first black Republican since 1935. Incumbents were turned out in Florida, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, the combative No. 2 House Republican leader, was running neck-and-neck in his rematch against Democrat David Worley in a suburban Atlanta district. Gingrich led the opposition to the bipartisan budget deal reached by President Bush and Congress.

In Vermont, freshman incumbent Republican Peter Smith was ousted in favor of Bernard Sanders, the socialist former mayor of Burlington. Sanders will become the first socialist in the House since Victor Louis Berger of Milwaukee, Wis., six decades ago.

Sanders handily defeated Smith, who had created an awkward situation when he publicly distanced himself from President Bush while standing at Bush's side during a presidential trip to Vermont to stump for the GOP candidate.

Voters in Connecticut elected the first black Republican to serve in the House since Oscar De Priest of Illinois during the Depression. Waterbury Alderman Gary Franks dashed the comeback hopes of former Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett in a seat vacated by a Republican.

Conservative Republican Stan Parris decisively lost his seat in the Virginia suburbs of Washington to former Alexandria Mayor James Moran, who had made Parris' anti-abortion stand a major issue.

In Florida, Democrat-turned Republican Bill Grant was soundly defeated by Democrat Pete Peterson, a retired Air Force colonel who made Grant's 1989 party-switch an issue.

And Maryland voters evicted five-term Democrat Roy Dyson, who had been plagued by character questions, choosing instead Republican Wayne Gilchrest, a high school teacher who has never held public office.

Republicans also lost an open-seat race in Rhode Island, where Democrat John F. Reed defeated Trudy Coxe for the seat vacated by Republican Rep. Claudine Schneider.

Several other incumbents were in extremely close races to hang onto their jobs, including several not previously thought to be in danger.

CNN's election coverage shines

By Scott Williams
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Television encountered the off-year elections Tuesday night like a doctor ordering a full set of tests to take a patient's temperature.

"It was the election of our discontent," CBS correspondent Bruce Morton said in the early going, before the nation's dreaded anti-incumbency mood stopped short of actually ousting any major rascals.

It had fewer commercials.

And, for the first time, Cable News Network and the Big Three broadcast networks pooled resources for election night exit polls and winner projections, in a collaborative effort called Voter Research and Surveys, or VRS.

"There are always problems the first time you do anything," said VRS spokeswoman Susan Morrison, adding that there were no big problems with winner projections or the state exit polls.

There was a delay in national exit polls, which tended to arrive all at once, because VRS chief Warren Mitofsky wanted to ensure the "weighting" of 9,000 to 10,000 interviews accurately reflected the national trends.

"It worked very well for us," said CNN spokeswoman Melinda McIntire. By 9 p.m. EST, she said, VRS let the cable network project 38 governor and Senate races. "It's been extremely helpful in our analyzing voters in geographic and demographic breakdowns."

By midnight, VRS had issued 72 projected winners in senate, governor and referendum questions, Ms. Morrison said.

ABC and NBC kept the first two hours of their prime time entertainment, coverage, dropping in brief spot reports until hourlong specials at 10 p.m. EST. CBS' coverage went the distance from 9 p.m. to 11.

But NBC's one-hour special and CBS' two hours were "sustaining" — read "unsponsored" — programs which don't count in the November ratings "sweeps" that help local stations set their advertising rates.

The overall ratings race is tight this year, and typically low election night ratings could pull down a network's overall numbers. Top-rated NBC quickly followed suit after CBS said it would air no commercials.

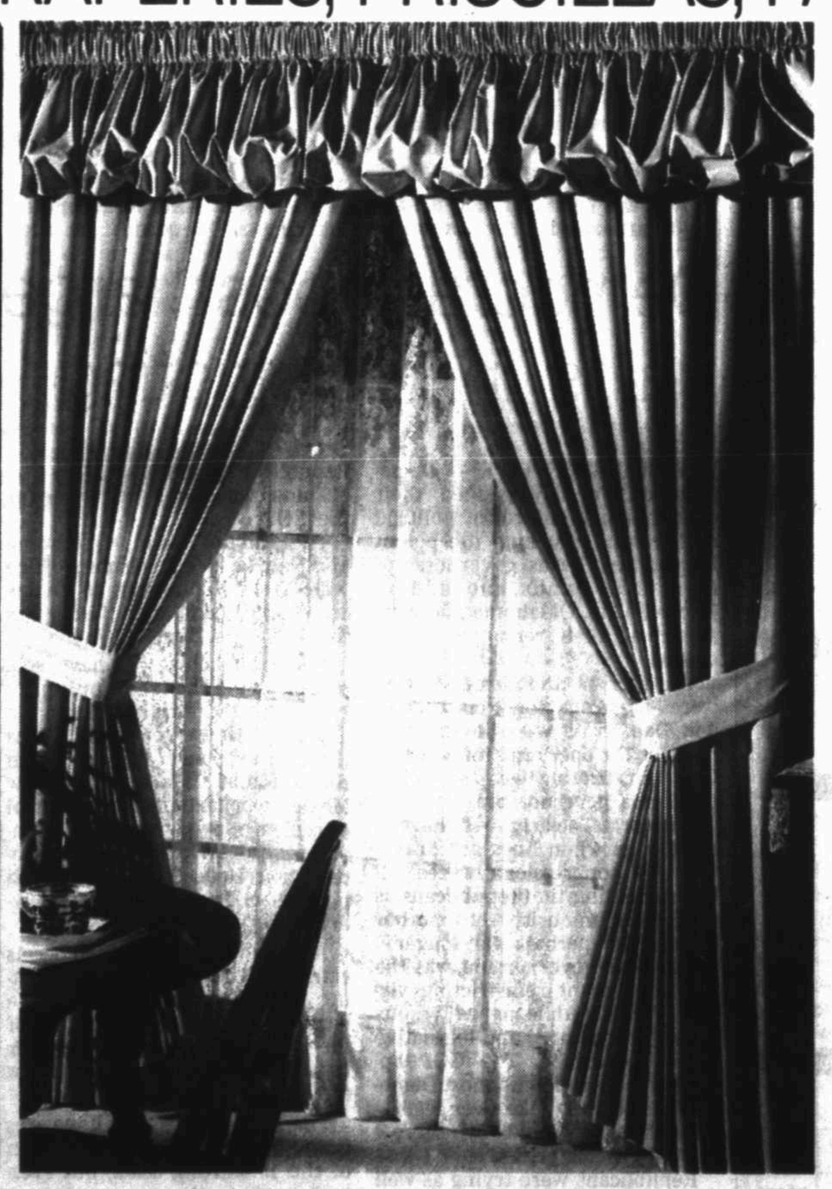

CNN, which has no prime time entertainment programs, began its coverage at 6 p.m. EST as "The World Today" neatly capsulized key races. By 7 p.m., CNN's main coverage was in full swing.

ABC and CBS colored their Democrats blue and the GOP red; contrariwise, NBC made its Democrats red and the Republicans blue.

New judgeships guarantee justice

Recent approval of a bill increasing federal judgeships in Texas by 11 definitely will "cost" taxpayers more, but if the nation is serious about fighting the drug threat the new judgeships are necessary just to stay even with the drug lords.

Since 1984 when the Congress last increased the federal judiciary, drug cases have mushroomed by 130 percent. In fact, those cases now comprise one-third of all criminal cases in federal courts.

Texas has been particularly hard-hit by the flow of illegal narcotics into this country from Mexico and points further south. The courts have been inundated with cases.

But the War on Drugs isn't the only matter coming before the federal courts. With so much time and manpower devoted to keeping drug cases moving in the courts, other cases have been necessarily pushed to the "back burner."

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Texas), one of the main proponents of more federal judgeships, noted, "Our federal court dockets are seriously overloaded. It takes years to try civil cases because of the backlog of drug cases."

Under the bill as approved, the Southern District, based in Houston, will get five new judges; the Western District, headquartered in Midland, will get three; the Northern District, based in Dallas, will get two; and the Eastern District in Tyler will get one new judge.

Of course the new judgeships will mean that the federal district courts will be able to resolve more cases in less time. For the cities in which the courts are located that will mean something of a "mini-boom" because when the courts hear more cases that means more Texans travel to those cities for the cases, stay in hotels, eat in restaurants, and shop in stores.

The bottom line, however, is that justice is dispensed quicker and with more certainty. Cases are moved through the courts and do not stagnate because of the lack of courts or judges.

The approval of the judgeships guarantees that the drug dealers who've been feeding off the innocent in Texas won't escape justice and that means that the quality of life in Texas can be maintained.

That's good news for Texas and the nation as a whole.

Agency's loan practices are risky

WASHINGTON — The loan requirements of the Overseas Private Investment Corp. read like those of any bank in the United States. The only difference is that OPIC is a government agency and if a borrower welches on a loan, American taxpayers are the losers.

Anderson

Under the circumstances, one would expect OPIC to be tight with its money. But one would be disappointed. In recent years OPIC, which loans money for business ventures in developing countries, has come under increasing scrutiny for risky loan practices. Now an investigation into an arms deal threatens to resurrect one loan that OPIC would just as soon keep buried.

Last spring, U.S. authorities found out that a huge shipment of Israeli arms — bound inexplicably for the tiny Caribbean island of Antigua — ended up in the hands of Colombia's Medellin drug cartel. The Antiguan investigators now claim that Maurice Sarfati, an Antiguan melon farmer and former Israeli soldier, brokered the deal along with other middlemen.

Sarfati's melon business was bankrolled by $1.3 million in loans from OPIC in 1985 and 1986. But OPIC later suspected that not all of the money ended up in melons. In 1988, OPIC sued Sarfati for defaulting on the loans.

OPIC has recovered $1.1 million from Sarfati, but OPIC officials told us that it was impossible to trace where the original funds had ended up if not in the melon business.

Our associate Dean Boyd has learned that the Antiguan investigation into the arms deal turned up a $24,000 check written to another Israeli man suspected in helping to arrange the arms deal. The check appears to be drawn on the bank account where Sarfati kept the farm funds. The date on the check is illegible and the reason for the payment is unclear.

Although there is no evidence that Sarfati was involved in arms trafficking at the time the loans were made, court documents from OPIC's 1988 lawsuit when Sarfati defaulted indicate he was a risky loan nevertheless. OPIC did a marginal job in checking out Sarfati before handing him $1.3 million.

For example, in 1983 Sarfati had the Bank of Credit and Commerce in Miami send OPIC a letter of recommendation. The bank called Sarfati "one of our valued customers" and said he had five companies with accounts at the bank. Sarfati later testified in the lawsuit that three of the companies either had no assets or never got off the ground.

In 1988, the General Accounting Office looked into Sarfati and found that if OPIC had looked closely enough, it would have found that the melon business was showing a loss before OPIC gave Sarfati a second loan.

Even when OPIC was warned something may be amiss, it didn't react quickly. In March 1987, someone connected with the melon farm complained to Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., that Sarfati may be misusing OPIC money. Murtha reported that to OPIC, which disregarded recommendations that Sarfati's accounts be frozen. Four months later a shareholder in the farm warned OPIC that Sarfati may have been ruining the farm. OPIC concluded that the farm's problems were "not unusual for new agricultural projects in developing countries." It was almost a year before OPIC foreclosed on the farm.

Sarfati was not OPIC's first bad loan. In 1983, OPIC gave $375,000 to American John Hull for a timber farm in Costa Rica. A Senate subcommittee later concluded that Hull was using the "farm" as a base from which to resupply the Nicaraguan contras. A 1987 Senate investigation into Hull showed that even the most cursory check of his finances would have been enough to raise OPIC's suspicions and reject the loan application.

OPIC now says it has beefed up its credit reviews of applicants for loans.

CATA circulating rollback petition

We have a fine hospital in Midland with an excellent staff and I want to keep it that way. But the concept of spend it all and more so they can ask for even more next year holds true with Midland Memorial Hospital management.

Until August 1990 I worked at Midland Memorial Hospital. My job was indigent care. I know there are ways to reduce the cost of indigent care, but that doesn't seem to be what management wants. I know indigent care won't disappear, but I also know it can be better controlled and the available funds better utilized.

Our taxes were raised without the taxpaying voters have a chance to vote for or against the increase.

Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse (CATA) is a group of taxpayers who are concerned with the waste that is going on in all our taxing entities. If you believe, as we do, that the cost of indigent care can be better controlled at Midland Memorial Hospital, you can help with the petition CATA is circulating to call for a rollback election and vote for or against this tax increase.

There will be an open meeting of CATA on Nov. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St. Please come and let your vote count. Or if you can help in any other way, please call 694-9623 or 697-1590 today.

Bush should utilize nuclear deterrence

When the U.S. was involved in Vietnam, I overheard a top Pentagon official say we did not need to use nuclear weapons to win this war. He went on to say all we needed were more troops. Well, we lost that war and over 50,000 American lives.

If we had fought our war for independence on Britain's terms we now would be drinking tea and eating crumpets. General Washington realized that if we tried to fight a "gentleman's war," we would lose. A new kind of warfare was developed — guerrilla warfare.

When President Harry Truman at the end of World War II asked his top Pentagon officials for statistics on American dead in a war with Japan, he was stunned at the projections and introduced us to a new type of warfare — nuclear warfare.

Unfortunately, Japan was the recipient of this destructive test on large populations. Imagine the look of horror on the faces of Japanese leaders as they gazed upon the silhouette of a Japanese mother holding her baby, cast upon a still standing wall by the heat expelled from one horrific explosion. Immediately the war was over.

I am not saying that we should just outright nuke Iraq. We should be sending some straightforward and strong rhetoric to Saddam Hussein — telling him that if he doesn't unconditionally pull out of Kuwait and dismantle his massive military machine before we lose one American life we will nuke him into nothingness.

The American taxpayer has paid the bill for our government's so-called nuclear deterrence to war. Why doesn't our government use this deterrent?

President Bush should stop insulting our intelligence and use what we are paying billions for to stop this insanity.

Firing helps cause, not prevent, a recession

I read a story on the front page of The New York Times the other day that made me whoop up. Apparently, healthy companies are laying off employees to prevent a recession. This raises the question:

By firing people is it possible to cause the very recession you're trying to prevent?

Buchwald

Take the case of the Extra Creamie Yogurt Company.

The powers that be at Extra Creamie met to discuss how to avoid a predicted drop in sales.

"Gentlemen, we must try and steer clear of this business downturn. As a stop-gap measure I propose that we terminate 1,000 employees. This will give us some leverage if the good times don't roll by."

"An excellent idea. We've been overstaffed for years, and it's about time we took the bull by the horns and chopped off some heads below the knees."

"Objection. If we get rid of 1,000 people we would be contributing to the disaster we want to prevent."

"That's ridiculous. All we're trying to do is protect our bottom line. I say we lay off 1,500 workers every Thursday. In that way we'll scare those who are left behind and they will produce twice as much yogurt as they did before."

"Gentlemen, let us suppose that every company fires a percentage of its staff. The purchasing power of the whole country could be put on hold and people will have a serious cash-flow problem — so serious that no one will ever buy a cup of Extra Creamie Yogurt again."

"You can't have a recession THAT serious. Consumers have killed to buy our yogurt."

"These are tougher times. It appears that the United States has talked itself into a recession and everyone is pushing the panic button. The newspapers scream recession — the TV stations feature stories on it. Economists are starting to ask each other, 'Which came first, the chicken or the egg or the recession?' "

"I have been in stormy seas before. They can get very ugly if you don't reduce the size of the payroll. Our actions today will long be remembered by our stockholders when they talk about the great plop of 1990."

"What is a recession? It's nothing more than a lack of customers in a store. It's empty seats at McDonald's. It's a showroom full of new, unsold cars. It has nothing to do with yogurt."

"Gentlemen, I say we keep all our help and fight the recession from within."

"George Carricola."

"That's me. You can't fire me — I'm management."

"Companies always save money during a preventive recession by dumping managers."

"I demand an appeal."

"George, you can use a pistol or the gas oven — whichever you feel more comfortable with. In the meantime please accept this quart of Extra Creamie Yogurt as your severance pay. Preventive recession is a dirty business but somebody has to do it."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Turkey would gain most as second front

WASHINGTON — What European member of NATO has the largest standing army? What NATO nation borders on Iraq?

The answer to both: Turkey. That nation of 55 million people has armed forces, including gendarmerie, of 750,000; Iraq, by contrast, has a population base of 13 million, not counting its persecuted Kurds, and an army of 550,000 (three-fourths now in Kuwait) with reserves of another half-million.

Safire

Saddam Hussein, contemplating the next phase of his war against the world, is willing to gamble that he could endure sustained bombardment from the air; and he hopes to bog down the combined Western-Arab armies moving up from the south into Kuwait — at least long enough to let cries of compromise rise in the West.

But what if there were a second front? That's what defeated Adolf Hitler. Turkey lies to the north, its fighting men proud of their reputation for being what Douglas MacArthur in Korea called "the bravest of the brave."

The Turks, with 15 percent of their forces now on Iraq's border, have not been friendly to Saddam Hussein. When the world looked away, Turkey took in 100,000 Kurdish refugees from Iraqi poison-gas attacks.

Turkey was the first nation in the region to denounce the invasion of Kuwait, first to support U.N. sanctions and first to make the blockade count by shutting down Iraq's pipeline.

When James Baker travels to the region next week (why do we send a professional deal-cutter on a mission to avoid cutting a deal?) his most important stop will be in Ankara.

President Turgut Ozal has already welcomed U.S. F-111 bombers and F-16 fighters to his Incirlik Air Base; as the front-line state in the world squeeze on Iraq, he expects reimbursement from the Saudi-Kuwaiti war kitty of $7 billion for one year's loss of trade.

Turkey deserves that, as well as consideration of Ozal's request, made in the White House last month, for financing and sale of 120 F-16s to give some punch to Turkey's antiquated air force.

That lack of sophisticated weaponry — many of its tanks are Korean War vintage — has caused some U.S. strategists to downmouth Turkey's capacity to become a second front.

They say Ozal is not too popular at home, and claim that Turkish generals — who do not control him — are wary of displaying technological weakness in combat.

But the old model of Turkey's place in the world is obviously crumbling. Turkish workers are being kicked out of Germany and Bulgaria; the European Community is closing its doors. What's to replace the old paradigm? With the Russians not coming, who needs the Turks?

Their future is in their other front line: not the one bordering the implosive Soviet Union and Asia Minor, but the one bordering explosive Iraq and the Middle East.

Turkey is Muslim but secular, a developing democracy with women emancipated; a free-market economy, and a friend to both Palestinians and Israelis.

Despite its unproductive enmity with Greece, Turkey could be a bridge between West and Middle East. That's where the world will need the Turks.

In this new light, rethink the military possibilities. With allied aircraft using Turkey's airfields to provide tactical support, Turkish infantrymen driving on Baghdad would be more than a match for the divided Iraqi Army, its most modern elements trapped in Kuwait.

When the war begun or Aug. 2 is over, new boundaries will be drawn, as usual, to penalize the aggressor. Oil reserves should be shared among an independent Kurdistan, a helpful Turkey, a free Iraq and those nations that sacrificed most.

Dear Midlanders:

When we kicked off the United Way of Midland campaign, we started running toward the goal of $2,503,000 needed to "go the distance" for the 35,000 Midlanders the United Way serves through its 17 agencies.

We knew the goal was a long way down the road, but we firmly believed we could reach it. We are blessed in Midland with outstanding volunteers, corporate citizens, foundations and individuals who give generously to ensure that all Midlanders who call on our agencies are helped.

The 1990/91 campaign ends tomorrow and the finish line is just outside our grasp. We need help from you to give us the boost to cross that finish line and meet our goal.

The campaign team has done an outstanding job over the past several weeks but we know we have not reached everyone who has been generous in the past years. We need their contribution now.

If you have not mailed your pledge card yet, please call the United Way office at 682-4358, and someone will pick it up.

The 35,000 Midlanders served by local agencies are waiting by the finish line.

Will you be there to help United Way cross it? We need your help now!

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

■ Republican John Hyde handily defeats Democrat Ralph Petty for the 238th District Court judgeship.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

With 78.2 percent of the vote, Republican John Hyde scored an overwhelming victory Tuesday over Democrat Ralph Petty in the race for 238th District Court Judge.

Hyde won with 23,141 of the 29,606 votes cast and defeated his opponent in 32 of 36 precincts.

Petty, who had acknowledged that his chances of victory in predominantly Republican Midland County were slim, received 6,465 votes, or 21.8 percent.

"I would like to believe that the margin reflects, somewhat, voter confidence in my ability as a judge," said Hyde, who has served as an appointed interim judge in 238th District Court since May. Gov. Bill Clements made the appointment in the wake of Judge Vann Culp's retirement.

His landslide victory notwithstanding, Hyde said he never took the election for granted.

"I was worried up until the first absentee votes started coming in," said Hyde, who defeated Nick Taylor in the March Republican primary. "I certainly didn't assume that I was going to win."

Hyde, who has been practicing law in Midland for 20 years, said he will strive to fulfill a campaign promise to move cases through his courtroom quickly and efficiently.

"I've got a jury reporting tomorrow afternoon for a criminal trial and I plan to move that case, and every other case, with as much dispatch as possible under the law," he said.

Hyde, a 1967 University of Texas Law School graduate, said his six month "incumbency" probably gave him an edge in his campaign against Petty, the chief prosecutor in Hyde's courtroom.

"I think it gave me insight to the job I was seeking," he said. "I'm certain that there was name recognition that goes along with the job that certainly inured to my benefit."

Petty, 47, an assistant district attorney in Midland since 1986, said his loss will not affect his professional or personal relationship with Hyde.

"I'm not disappointed," Petty said of the election. "I'm never disappointed when I do the best I can with what I have."

Petty, who has been a prosecutor for 16 years, said he decided to run for district judge because he wanted to "serve justice in a higher

Williams garners majority of West Texas vote

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Statewide, Ann Richards won.

ANDREWS COUNTY

ANDREWS — By a 3-to-1 ratio, Andrews voters favored Williams for Texas governor over Ms. Richards, the Texas treasurer and a former schoolteacher and county commissioner.

Republican Williams garnered 2,272 votes to Democrat Ann Richards' 787.

In the race for lieutenant governor, Republican Rob Mosbacher, who runs a Houston energy company, picked up 1,796 votes, while Democrat Bob Bullock, the Texas comptroller, garnered 1,234 votes.

Jim Hightower, a Democrat who has been Texas Commissioner of Agriculture since 1983, attracted 1,281 votes to Republican Rick Perry's 1,730. Perry is a farmer and rancher, while Hightower, an avowed environmentalist who has investigated agricultural issues, has authored two books on agriculture, "Hard Times, Hard Tomatoes" and "Eat Your Heart Out."

In the Texas Attorney General's race, Republican J.E. "Buster" Brown attracted 1,861 votes to Democrat Dan Morales' 1,101 votes.

Democrat John Sharp polled 1,988 votes to the 912 votes picked up by Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. in the race for Comptroller of Public Accounts. The victor will succeed Bullock, who ran for lieutenant governor.

In the race for Texas treasurer to succeed Ms. Richards, Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison drew 1,981 votes, and Democrat Nikki Van Hightower attracted 1,017 votes.

In a closer race, Republican Wes Gilbreath won 1,405 votes to Democrat Garry Mauro's 1,458 for commissioner of the General Land Office now held by Mauro.

Two former United States congressmen, Republican Beau Boulter and Democrat Robert "Bob" Krueger, were close in their bid for a post on the Railroad Commission of Texas. Boulter, a lawyer, picked up 1,541 votes, and Krueger, a former university dean and ambassador to Mexico, drew 1,428 votes.

In the race for the United States Senate, Republican Senator Phil Gramm won 2,152 votes to and Democrat Hugh Parmer's 530.

In the race for Andrews County commissioner of Precinct 2, Republican Greg Swenney garnered 415 votes to Democrat John Hogue's 664 votes.

BORDEN COUNTY

More than 75 percent of the Borden County's 545-strong electorate cast ballots in the election: 412 voted in the gubernatorial election.

Ms. Hutchison attracted 195 votes in the race for Texas treasurer, and Ms. Van Hightower pulled in 138 votes.

Voters in Ector County favor Watkins, Jordan

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Odessans may have voted Republican in top of the ballot races, but when it came to local officials, they opted for Democrats in three of five contested races.

Democratic Incumbent Gary L. Watkins kept his 75th district state representative seat with 56.6 percent of the vote and 11,165 ballots, while Democrat and Assistant Ector County District Attorney Jim "J.T." Jordan captured the county judgeship with a 52.3 percent, 13,010 ballot victory .

Watkins, who faced a challenge from Republican Realtor and political newcomer A.G. "Lonnie" Sims, read his success at the polls as "a mandate for progress to get four-year status for UTPB.

"I got a little anxious when I saw that Midland and Austin money was up against me," he said of Sims' campaign. "Midland tried to get rid of me and get the school (the University of Texas at the Permian Basin) over there; they bet and they lost their bet."

Watkins said he also would work hard to obtain additional funding for the Ector County School District when he returns to Austin.

Sims, who received 43.4 percent of the vote with 8,548 ballots, said he had hoped to do better in the election.

He said he underestimated the importance of UTPB's status in the campaign.

"Watkins is the champion on the UTPB issue," he said.

Jordan spoke of reconciliation with his opponent Lee Hadden, an Odessa attorney, in the wake of a bitter county judge ampaign marked by savage personal attacks.

He compared the campaign to criminal trial work, "you have to roll with the punches.

"I have no hard feelings and I wish Lee the best," Jordan said.

Hadden received 47.72 percent of the vote with 11,876 ballots.

With 25,970 ballots cast, 54.4 percent of registered Ector County voters went to the polls this election.

Republican Midlander Clayton Williams got the county's nod for governor with 16,458 ballots, 64.6 percent of the vote. Democrat Ann Richards received 8,347 votes, 32.8 percent of the county total, while Libertarian Jeff Daiell picked up 678 votes, 2.7 percent of the total.

UW campaign winding down

■ The 1990-91 campaign concludes Thursday, when pledge totals will be announced.

Staff Report

The United Way of Midland heads for the finish line in its 1990-91 campaign, but it needs help from Midlanders to "go the distance" to the $2,503,000 goal, officials said.

Campaign Chairman Charles Spence said the goal is still "quite a distance away" and the campaign ends Thursday evening. He is asking Midlanders to "lend a hand" to pull the campaign team past the finish line.

"Midlanders are known for their generosity," he said. "No matter what the situation, they always dig deep and help pull others through. We're asking for their help in the final days of the campaign."

The total raised in this campaign will be announced at the finale dinner Thursday night at Green Tree Country Club.

Money raised in the campaign goes to support 17 agencies who help about 35,000 Midlanders each year. Those agencies provide family support, crisis intervention, disaster relief, emergency assistance, youth services, character development, child care, and health, education and rehabilitation.

Agencies affiliated with United Way are American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council, Boys' and Girls' Club of Midland, Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Family Services of Midland, Freewill Foster Home, Midland Need to Read, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Petro-Plains Camp Fire, Salvation Army and the YMCA.

Spence said anyone who would like to turn in their pledge but can not make it to the office may call the United Way at 682-4358 and the pledge will be picked up by a Loaned Executive. Or, if anyone has not received a pledge card and would like to contribute, they may call United Way and a pledge card will be delivered to them.

"I'm asking Midlanders to kick in that last bit of adrenalin to help us go the distance and reach our goal," Spence said.

DEATHS

Randolph D. Rubin

Services for Randolph D. "Randy" Rubin of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Thursday at St. Marks United Methodist Church with Jeff Lust, associate pastor of First United Methodist Church, and Milford R. Thomason, pastor of Church of God, officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Rubin

He died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born Dec. 5, 1919 in Columbus, Texas, and was reared in various Texas communities. At the age of 13 he became interested in photography. He graduated from high school in Wink and then attended the New York Institute of Photography in 1938-39.

He worked in studios in San Antonio, Houston and San Angelo. While in San Antonio he won his first major award in photography, third place in Popular Photography's open contest in 1940.

After moving to Midland in 1941, he and Bill Gary started Midland Studios. Later Rubin and his twin brother, Rudy, started Midland Camera Shop and Studio on N. Colorado St., which is now Rubin's Studio of Photography, Inc.

At the time of his death, Rubin was the only photographer between Fort Worth and Tucson, Ariz., who held the Master of Photography and the Photographic Craftsmen degrees awarded by the Professional Photographers of America.

Some of his accomplishments include:

1984: Invitations from Texas, New Mexico State and Southwestern Professional Photographers associations to speak and judge prints.

1985: Approved by the National Committee to serve as affiliated print judge at national level, invited to judge prints at the Texas convention and hung three prints at the PPA national convention.

1986: Was print judge at the Texas convention, was speaker for the Central Texas Association, had best print by a Master Photographer at Texas Summer Seminar, and won Kodak Gallery Award.

1987: Was print judge at Southwestern Professional Photographers Association Convention, was print judge for the New Mexico PPA and had best print by a Master Photographer.

He was a founding member of St. Marks United Methodist Church and was a life member of Professional Photographers of America.

Order revokes trust's Texas charter

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Attorney General's Office on Tuesday obtained a permanent injunction against an Odessa man and two companies for engaging in banking activities without proper licenses or charters.

State District Judge Mary Pearl Williams of Austin granted the injuction against William Michael Furman of Odessa, Commonwealth Chartered Trust Co., Ltd. and Lincoln Bancorp.

Williams in issuing the injuction found that the defendants had used the terms "trust" and "bancorp" in a manner calculated to deceive the public.

The injuction revokes Lincoln Bancorp's charter for doing business in Texas, prohibits Furman and Commonwealth Chartered Trust from engaging in future banking activity in Texas and imposes $150,000 in civil penalties.

Assistant Attorney General Jeff Coryell, who prosecuted the case, said Furman had represented Commonwealth in letters to state officials as a federal bank. Coryell said the claim was based on a federal charter for doing business granted a precursor of the company in Oklahoma Indian Territory in 1905.

"Basically, he was trying to go into the banking business without being regulated by anybody," said the assistant attorney general.

According to the injunction, Furman also contended Lincoln Bancorp was entitled to engage in trust activities in Texas based on a state statute that Judge Williams ruled Tuesday had been repealed.

A fourth defendant, James G. Williams, also of Odessa, was dropped from the case because prosecutors could not locate him, said Coryell.

In a related development, a federal indictment handed down this past Thursday in New Orleans alleged Commonwealth engaged in conspiracy to defraud a bank in Nov. 1989 in Houston.

Man arrested, charged in connection with fire

Staff Report

ODESSA — An Odessa man was arrested on a charge of arson Monday in connection with an apartment fire early Sunday morning, police and fire officials said.

Ernesto Ramos Garcia Jr., 35, remained in jail Tuesday on a $25,000 bond set by Muncipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, police said.

According to fire officials, Garcia was arrested in connection with a fire at the La Promesa del Norte Apartments, 4590 N. Texas Ave., which occurred about 3:00 a.m. Sunday.

Extremely heavy smoke damaged was caused by the fire, which originated in the bedroom closet of an apartment where Garcia resided, fire officials said.

Hughes Tools named in suit

Staff Report

A manufacturing company has filed a patent-infringement lawsuit in federal court against Baker Hughes Production Tools Inc., court records show.

Delta-X Corp., a Houston-based oilfield-equipment manufacturer with a branch office in Midland, filed the suit Nov. 2 in U.S. District Court in Midland.

"Defendant Baker has infringed the patent...by making, using and selling...the invention," the suit states.

The suit, which alleges that Baker Hughes' patent infringement was "willful and deliberate," seeks undisclosed damages. Delta-X officials also are seeking an injunction preventing Baker Hughes from further patent infringement.

Officials for Baker Hughes, which is also based in Midland, could not be reached for comment Tuesday afternoon.

Hyde sentences man to 46 years

Staff Report

A Midland parolee was sentenced to 46 years in state prison Monday on aggravated robbery charges stemming from the July stabbing of a department store security guard.

Steve Olgin, 46, pleaded guilty before Judge John Hyde in 238th District Court. Olgin received additional 46-year sentences, to run concurrently with the first, on heroin delivery and theft charges.

Olgin reportedly stabbed security guard David Sanchez once in the side during a July 17 shoplifting incident at the Mervyn's Department Store, 3001 W. Loop 250.

Sanchez, 22, was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital on July 17 and was released the next day, hospital records show.

Assistant District Attorney Wayne Frost, who prosecuted the case, said the couple had shoplifted less than $100 worth of clothing from the store and were confronted by Sanchez in the parking lot.

Mrs. Olgin, who pleaded guilty Monday to theft in connection with the Mervyn's incident and in connection with a June shoplifting at J.C. Penney Co., was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Her husband pleaded guilty to theft in connection with the J.C. Penney theft and to heroin delivery charges stemming from a January 1988 undercover investigation, Frost said.

Thousands mourn militant rabbi at Brooklyn service

AP Laserphoto

The alleged gunman who shot and killed militant Jewish leader Rabbi Meir Kahane arrives at New York's Bellevue Hospital in handcuffs Monday night. The gunman has been identified as a city maintenance man, El-Sayyid A. Nosair, 35, of Brooklyn.

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of mourners, some vengeful, some crying "Never again!", thronged a Brooklyn synagogue Tuesday to bid farewell to the assassinated Meir Kahane and to pledge to carry on the radical rabbi's anti-Arab war.

Kahane

His alleged killer, who immigrated from Egypt in 1981 and took U.S. citizenship last year, lay in critical condition in a Manhattan hospital. Police said he had no links with terrorist groups.

"There will be revenge. We believe in revenge," said Sol Margolis, president of Kach International, the U.S. arm of Kahane's extremist party, which advocates the ouster of Arabs from Israeli-held territory.

"There will be revenge. We believe in revenge," said Sol Margolis, president of Kach International, the U.S. arm of Kahane's extremist party, which advocates the ouster of Arabs from Israeli-held territory.

Kahane was gunned down Monday night while addressing a Zionist group at a Manhattan hotel. Police said Kahane was taking questions from the crowd when the gunman stopped 4 feet from him and fired a .357-caliber weapon.

The Israeli government appealed for peace as police and army reinforcements spread out in Israel and the occupied territories to head off revenge attacks. The deaths of two Arabs on Tuesday were linked to Kahane's slaying.

The fear of retribution in New York prompted stepped-up security at the U.N. missions for Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, El Al Israel Airlines offices and several Jewish newspapers, said Police Commissioner Lee Brown.

Thousands of people jammed a synagogue in Brooklyn and spilled onto a four-lane highway for the funeral of the 58-year-old Kahane. His body was to be flown to Israel for burial Wednesday.

"It is possible for the heart to well up and cry for the horrible loss our nation has suffered," Rabbi Moshe Tendler of Yeshiva University said as thousands cheered outside Young Israel of Ocean Parkway Synagogue.

Rabbi Herbert Bomzer, a longtime friend and leader of the synagogue where the service was held, said Kahane was always welcome there. Many synagogues barred Kahane because he sanctioned violence.

"Rabbi Meir Kahane was a friend, a leader, a fighter, a writer, a thinker. He was a spokesman for the defense of Jews all around the world," Bomzer said.

The militant Jewish Defense League, founded by Kahane in 1968, has been linked by the FBI to various acts of violence, including a 1972 firebombing that killed one person and injured 13 others.

The loudest applause came when Bomzer proclaimed that Kahane "was a strident voice calling 'Never Again,'" the slogan used by Kahane in reference to the Holocaust.

"Tell all Arabs don't sleep so quiet tonight," Margolis said. "We are Jews, we are religious Jews and we don't buy that crap of turning the other cheek. There will be hell to pay for this affront."

Asked if he was threatening Arabs, Margolis said: "I use simple English and I won't elaborate beyond this."

Police had no official crowd estimate. The synagogue holds about 1,000 people. Thousands more clamored to get near the building and loudspeakers were set up so those outside could hear the service. Occasional fights were broken up by an estimated 200 police officers who were there to control the crowd.

Moderate voices called for calm.

"This is not the time to be speaking of revenge; it is the time to be speaking of peace and reconciliation," said Rabbi Marc D. Angel, president of the Rabbinical Council of America.

The New York-born Kahane, who moved to Israel in 1971 and served four years in Israel's parliament until his extremist party was banned, was struck by a single bullet in the neck and died an hour later at Bellevue Hospital.

The alleged gunman, a $30,000-a-year city maintenance man, also was shot in the neck, by a U.S. Postal police officer who spotted him fleeing the hotel.

The suspect, identified by city officials as El-Sayyid A. Nosair, 35, of New Jersey, was in critical condition, hospital officials said. He was charged with murder, attempted murder, assault, criminal possession of a weapon and of a defaced weapon, and unlawful imprisonment, police said.

Court denies some benefits to seamen's families

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that families of American seamen killed on the job may not be awarded monetary damages for lost future earnings or "loss of society."

The 8-0 decision, yielding the first signed opinion of the court's 1990-91 term, said general maritime law allows wrongful-death lawsuits in such cases. But it added that any damages recovered cannot include those for loss of society or for lost future earnings.

Loss of society is defined as a broad range of mutual benefits family members receive from each other, including love, affection, care, attention, companionship, comfort and protection.

The ruling was a defeat for the mother of a young seaman murdered while his ship was docked in Vancouver, Wash., six years ago.

"We sail in occupied waters. Maritime tort law is now dominated by federal statute, and we are not free to expand remedies at will simply because it might work to the benefit of seamen and those dependent upon them," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote.

Justice David H. Souter, who joined the court after the case was argued last month, did not participate in the decision.

The ruling leaves families of seamen free to sue allegedly negligent shipowners and shipping companies under a 1920 federal law, the Jones Act, but that law places specific limits on such suits.

Ludwick Torregano, a 24-year-old galley assistant, was killed aboard the Archon on July 18, 1984. Clifford Melrose, the ship's chief chef, stabbed Torregano at least 62 times, and later was convicted of second-degree murder.

Torregano's mother, Mercedel Miles, later sued the ship's owners and operators in federal court in New Orleans, contending that their negligence in hiring an unfit crewman caused her son's death.

Strong quake hits Aleutians

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A strong earthquake struck west of the Aleutian Islands on Tuesday. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The quake, which hit at 11:14 a.m., measured 6.9 on the Richter scale, said Bob Hammond of the Alaska Tsunami Warning Center in Palmer.

It was centered about 150 miles west of Attu Island, about 1,250 miles southwest of Anchorage.

The earthquake was felt at Shemya Air Force Base, near Attu in the sparsely populated Aleutian chain, but was not large enough to generate a tidal wave, also called a tsunami, officials said.

The 1964 Good Friday earthquake, centered in Prince William Sound, measured 8.5 on the Richter scale. It generated large waves that devasted several coastal communities, and killed 114 people as far south as Oregon and Hawaii.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 6 on Richter scale can cause severe damage.

Dennis in Wichita

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — He may have terrorized Mr. Wilson for four decades, but officials of Wichita are glad to have Dennis Mitchell, a.k.a. the Menace, as a neighbor.

"I had no idea he lived here, but he sure is welcome," Mayor Bob Knight said.

Cartoonist Hank Ketcham reveals in his illustrated autobiography "The Merchant of Dennis the Menace," that the strip's characters — including pal Joey, dog Ruff and nasty ol' Margaret — have been hiding in Wichita since the strip began in the 1950s.

"I've no idea why Wichita," said Deborah Sloan, publicity director for Abbeville Press in New York, which published the 250-page book. "Maybe he's been to Wichita."

Ketcham writes in the book that the Mitchells live in a "two-story, three-bedroom fixer upper on the outskirts of Wichita."

Before the book was released in September, readers of the comic strip, which is published in more than 1,000 newspapers, had been left to assume Dennis terrorized Anytown, USA.

Gene Dickinson, spokesman for the Wichita Area Chamber of Commerce, said Dennis and his gang won't boost the city's Census numbers, but they'll be a boon to the city's image.

"Dennis' celebrity status is pretty rarefied air," Dickinson said Monday. "He's an institution. And I mean, he's here living, breathing and sleeping — so to speak — in Wichita."

Twelve arrested in death

MACOMB, Ill. (AP) — Twelve members of a university lacrosse team were charged with misdemeanors in the death of a teammate who overdosed on alcohol during an alleged initiation, school officials said.

The 12 were arrested Monday and charged by the McDonough County state's attorney's office with hazing and unlawful delivery of alcohol to a minor.

Nicholas Haben, 18, of Oswego, was found dead Oct. 19 in a Western Illinois University dormitory room. Officials said he was forced to drink a large quantity of alcohol. Authorities refused to say how much alcohol was involved.

Haben died after he and other first-year players were led to a wooded area, swatted, and encouraged to consume "rookie juice," a concoction that included beer, schnapps, coffee, tuna, eggs and hot dogs, authorities said.

Brian Donchez, who is among those charged, said the students did nothing wrong.

"We didn't haze and that's all there is to it," said Donchez, 21, of Chicago.

Driver fails before test

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man taking a driving test crashed into a Department of Motor Vehicles office Tuesday. Dozens of people scattered for safety as the car plowed 30 feet inside.

Six minor injuries were reported, and damage to the office was extensive, authorities said.

John A. Anderson, 72, was behind the wheel of a 1980 Chevrolet El Camino and preparing to take a road test when the pickup suddenly lurched forward and crashed into the building, said California State Police Capt. Howard Hughie.

"He told us the accelerator stuck, causing him to lose control and smash through the wall and into the building," Hughie said.

The office was to remain closed several days for repairs.

Welfare experiment tied to attendance in school resumes after suspension

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An experimental program that ties welfare benefits to teen-agers' school attendance has resumed after a judge lifted an order suspending it because poor attendance records caused unfair penalties.

"We think it will be a better program and we're upbeat," said David Blaska, a spokesman with the state Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees the Learnfare program.

Blaska added that the state would pursue an expansion of the program to younger children.

Learnfare, which docks the welfare benefits of families whose teen-agers skip school, was suspended in Milwaukee County during the summer. The court order suspending the program applied only to Milwaukee County, where the bulk of the program is carried out.

U.S. District Judge Terence Evans last week lifted the suspension he had earlier imposed after state and Milwaukee school officials reached an agreement to ensure better attendance records would be kept.

The agreement includes the assignment of 16 workers to verify attendance of truants before penalties are imposed.

"Milwaukee is where the action is, where so much is needed and the program is part of it," Blaska said. "Getting the injunction lifted is a lift to our spirits."

The program's supporters claim Learnfare discourages truancy and will help break the cycle of poverty. Critics say the experiment penalizes the poor.

Among the safeguards state and school officials have added is a verification process that includes notices to all parents. They are told their children's attendance is being monitored and that truancy can result in cuts in Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits.

Families will also be contacted by case managers to make sure the student is actually enrolled and to set up interviews to explain the sanctions before any penalties are imposed.

Other provisions include $750,000 in new state funds to create alternative education programs for Milwaukee school dropouts.

"I think it's a monumental step toward remedying the situation of inaccurate information," said Willie Little, director of community relations for Milwaukee Public Schools.

More than 13,000 Milwaukee County teen-agers are subject to potential sanctions. Families of about 12 percent of the students had their payments docked in June, the month before the program was suspended.

The program resumed immediately after the judge's ruling, but welfare benefits for violators won't be cut until February to allow time for the changes to be implemented, Blaska said.

State officials said they would pursue an expansion that would allow them to apply the sanctions to welfare families with children between ages 6 and 12.

The expansion would cost about $4 million a year and increase the number of students monitored statewide from 27,000 to 70,000, Blaska said. The earliest it could be instituted is late 1991, he said.

The federal government has already granted the state permission to expand the program to elementary students and the Wisconsin Legislature is expected to consider it in January.

"We hope to catch truancy before it becomes a chronic problem," Blaska said. "It's also easier to implement when the child is younger and more amenable."

Under the proposed expansion, sanctions against families with children between ages 6 and 12 would be more lenient.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your finances begin to improve in the weeks just ahead. Innovative business methods or new technology will help augment the bottom line by February 1991. Pay more attention to your personal appearance and your chances for lasting romance will increase. Taking a family vacation in July will enhance your closest relationships. A generation gap can be bridged next September. A family business thrives when each participant has his own area of responsibility.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: writer Albert Camus, evangelist Billy Graham, jazz musician Al Hirt, singer Joni Mitchell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Deal with a restless mood by setting up new challenges for yourself. Finish projects already under way before beginning anything else. Avoid taking your loved ones for granted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Drop a line to someone you may have neglected in the recent past. A letter or telephone call brings good news from relatives. A recycling project helps you turn a tidy profit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good fortune is with you today. Make home improvements that will increase the value of your property. Protect your money; avoid lending. A generous act will be repaid in full.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to catch up on your letter-writing or revise a budget. Changing your work schedule to accommodate a loved one will have many advantages. Update your information for a special project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Those of you who are looking for a mate should polish your manners. It usually pays to pour on the charm! Make plans to get out and mingle this afternoon or evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be philosophical if a loved one wants a showdown. Honesty is still the best policy. No one can guarantee positive results since it is impossible to predict how others will act.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance enjoys highly favorable influences today. You and a loved one can make up for lost time! Be direct in your dealings with the opposite sex. Group activities hold appeal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be prepared to make some constructive changes in your lifestyle. A candid chat with your partner will reveal hidden truths. Go out of your way to give each of your children special attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good news will travel fast today. Be prepared to change your plans to take care of a family matter. A friend could show up on your doorstep unannounced. Offer a warm welcome.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Self-restraint is the key to successful negotiations today. Someone you care for may be sending you down the garden path. Curb your temper or you may scare off potential allies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to finish an important writing project. Ideas flow freely. Romantic and social trends look great. A close friend or relative could influence a decision you make.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your word to loved ones, even if it means making a sacrifice you have not anticipated. A telephone call brings good news but may require a change of plan. Be flexible.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a passion for life! They thrive on intellectual challenges but prefer to work in harmonious surroundings. Basically conservative in their thinking, these Scorpios are sometimes turned off by flamboyant people. They need more praise and moral support than those born under other signs. Painfully honest with others, they shrink from criticism of their own decisions. Count on them to seek solace in the great outdoors when upset or unhappy.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡

Despite Tuesday's column, on balance it pays to have the lead come up to the stronger hand. In a rubber bridge game we watched, South flouted that principle with dire costs.

We hold no brief for South's decision to bid two spades over East's intervention. Correct is to cue-bid three hearts, a Stayman request for partner to bid spades with at least four of them. That would have resulted in North becoming declarer at four spades, a contract that would have been impregnable.

Suppose that East were to lead his singleton diamond against a four-spade contract by North. West can win the ace of diamonds and has a choice of continuations, neither of which is good enough to prevail. If West gives his partner a diamond ruff, the defenders will collect only one heart trick—declarer will get two heart discards on South's diamonds. Alternatively, if West switches to a heart, the defenders will get two heart tricks, but cannot negotiate their diamond ruff.

With South declaring, however, the partnership's weak underbelly was immediately vulnerable. West led a heart, taken by East's ten. East shifted to a diamond, West won the ace and gave partner a ruff. East then cashed the ace of hearts to complete a one-trick set.

All of which goes to show that there are no absolutes in bridge. You follow the odds as best you can, and in the long run you should show a profit.

Liddy says being in prison allowed him time to write

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Watergate burglar and former FBI agent G. Gordon Liddy says his transformation from convict to novelist is not surprising because prison gave him what he needed to write.

Liddy

"The thing you need to write is time — I had lots of it," Liddy, 60, said Monday during a visit to Alaska to plug his newest book, "The Monkey Handlers."

The novel, published by St. Martin's Press, focuses on the efforts of a former Navy Seal to stop medical experiments on animals at a chemical plant on the Hudson River.

It is Liddy's third book and second novel.

Liddy served time in nine prisons after being convicted of participating in the 1972 burglary of the Democratic Party's Watergate headquarters.

• • •

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy aiming his shotgun at a pheasant accidentally shot Sen. Conrad Burns. The Montana Republican's injuries were minor and he stopped for breakfast on his way to the hospital.

Burns, who was elected to his first term in 1988, was treated in the emergency room at a Billings hospital, said Yellowstone County Deputy Sheriff Bill Michaelis.

Michaelis said the teen-ager was in a creek bottom and the senator was on a hillside about 20 yards away. The boy fired when a pheasant flew by.

"I don't know if he got it, but he got Senator Burns," Michaelis said.

The shots knocked the senator down, Michaelis said.

At a news conference Monday, Burns showed few scars from his accident. He said the young hunter was a friend of his son.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — American bass James Morris has been described as a bigger than life cowboy because of his love for wide open spaces and his imposing presence on and off the stage.

He has also been described as demanding and aloof.

But after a Monday night season opener for the Opera Company of Philadelphia, Morris was in good spirits — partly because his wife performed in the same opera.

Quittmeyer said the casting didn't happen by chance.

"These are never coincidences," she said.

Morris agreed, saying scheduling was a problem in their personal lives.

"It's great when we get a chance to be in the same part of the country and even greater to be together in a production," he said. "I especially like it when we can both go to Santa Fe because I love the West, too."

The couple lives in New Jersey.

• • •

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Art has imitated life for Emmy-winning actress Marg Helgenberger, whose "China Beach" character K.C. once worked in a meatpacking plant just like Miss Helgenberger did.

Helgenberger

Miss Helgenberger said the TV show's writers made K.C., who is a prostitute, a former meatpacker after the actress mentioned in passing that she worked for two years at a Nebraska packing plant while trying to break into theater.

In one episode, K.C. explained how she learned to numb herself to the harshness of life after watching the slaughtering of a cow.

"It's hard work. It really is hard work," said Miss Helgenberger, 31, who was in Omaha recently to visit her mother. "Any of those assembly line jobs are tough, you know, and you have to respect people for doing it."

• • •

CHICAGO (AP) — Oprah Winfrey has put back on quite a few of the 67 pounds she shed during a crash diet two years ago, but she has no plans to starve herself thin again.

Winfrey

"I'll never diet again," the talk show host told her audience Monday. "I certainly will never fast again."

Ms. Winfrey announced in 1989 that she had regained 17 of the 67 pounds she had lost the year before on a diet that consisted of weeks of drinking a high-protein powder mixed with water.

Residents of Dallas suburb afraid of coyote invasion

CARROLLTON (AP) — Residents of a far north Carrollton neighborhood fear that howls in the night and the disappearance of cats are signs that coyotes are invading suburbia.

The small wolves have always roamed undeveloped stretches of the Dallas area, animal control workers say. But homeowners and ranchers believe urban growth is pushing the animals from their natural habitat into neighborhoods.

Barry Nicolle, owner of the Nickles and Dimes Ranch, said the predators have claimed five cats and several ducks from his 500-acre spread. During the past two years, he has shot three coyotes.

Experts disagree on the possibility of coyotes laying claim to the neighborhood, but all agree that the only risk posed for humans is the possible contraction of rabies if bitten.

Carrollton animal control workers say they have discovered coyote tracks in the area, but doubt the animals are to blame for the missing cats.

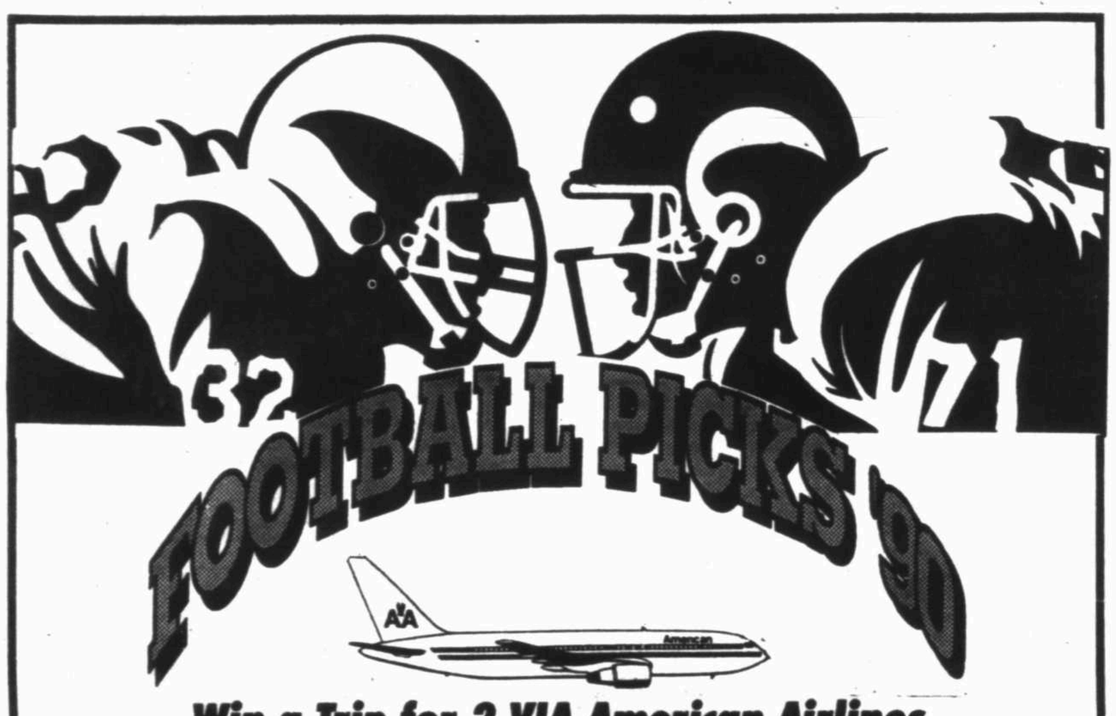

The animal control department plans to step up patrols and set animal traps but they expect to catch only unleashed pets.

Angels named best in TL

■ With a franchise attendance record of 168,742 in 1990, the Midland Angels received the Texas League Organization of the Year award for the first time.

Staff Report

After winning the Texas League Organization of the Year award, the Midland Angels are hopeful about their chances of winning the MacPhail Trophy — presented to the top team in the National Association.

Charlie Dowd, the Midland franchise's Director of Marketing, said winning the Texas League award could carry added weight with the National Association.

"This is a real competitive league with a lot of good franchises," Dowd said. "Just the fact that we won in a league with people like Jim Paul (of the El Paso Diablos) and the Wichita people, means that this is a pretty big deal."

The Angels set a franchise attendance mark of 168,742 this past season in their first year under the direction of new general manager Monty Hoppel. The franchise received the league award for the first time in its 18-year history despite a lackluster field performance of 56-80 — the TL's worst overall record.

Hoppel said the support of local fans was the key to the award.

"It (the award) is a testament to the hard work and dedication that our staff exhibited in 1990," Hoppel said. "We came in and built upon previous successes enjoyed by the club by adding new promotions and special events for the fans.

Brzezinski, a Biscayne (Fla.) College graduate who began his career in Geneva, N.Y., spent two seasons in Midland — the first as an administrative assistant and the second as Director of Operations.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my experiences and tenure in Midland," Brzezinski said. "The great people I've met here, the successes we've had, and the terrific new owners made for a tough decision."

Wingate submits

Wingate was released after posting $2,000 bond.

He traveled to San Antonio and turned himself in voluntarily rather than face extradition from Ellicott City, Md.

A Bexar County grand jury indicted Wingate and two companions on sexual assault charges Oct. 31.

The two-count indictment accuses Wingate, 26, Joel Mendiola, 27, and Edward Saunders, 23, in connection with the sexual assault of a 22-year-old woman last June.

Death mourned

BARBOURVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Classes were canceled and about 500 students, faculty and staff attended a campus prayer vigil Tuesday as Union College mourned the death of one of its basketball players.

Michael Godfrey, of San Antonio, died Monday night after collapsing in the school's weight room, school officials said.

Preliminary autopsy results indicated that the 23-year-old player died of a ruptured aortic aneurysm, according to Dr. Gregory J. Davis, and assistant state medical examiner.

"It's catastrophic," Davis said in a telephone interview Tuesday from Frankfort. "He died very quickly and did not suffer."

NL rookie honor goes to Justice

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dave Justice, who began the season in the minors and blossomed into baseball's best baby boomer, was the near-unanimous choice Tuesday as National League rookie of the year.

Justice hit 28 homers for the Atlanta Braves, most of them after he took over in right field when Dale Murphy was traded in early August. Justice batted .282 with 78 RBIs in 127 games.

Justice recieved 23 of 24 first-place votes for 118 points. Montreal second baseman Delino DeShields got the other first-place vote and had 60 points.

Cincinnati first baseman Hal Morris (13), San Francisco pitcher John Burkett (12), Cubs pitcher Mike Harkey (7), St. Louis catcher Todd Zeile (4) and Montreal outfielders Marquis Grissom (1) and Larry Walker (1) followed in the voting. Two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each NL city voted.

Justice, 24, joined Earl Williams (1971) and Bob Horner (1978) as Atlanta players to win the award. The American League rookie of the year will be announced Wednesday.

At the start of the season, Justice wasn't even in Atlanta's plans. He sustained a broken cheek bone in spring training and began the year Triple-A Richmond. Even when Justice joined the Braves on May 16, he played out-of-position at first base.

Justice, Atlanta's fourth-round choice in the 1985 draft, had never hit more than 12 home runs for one team in a season before this year. He hit only eight and was batting .243 when the Braves sent Murphy to Philadelphia for Jeff Parrett.

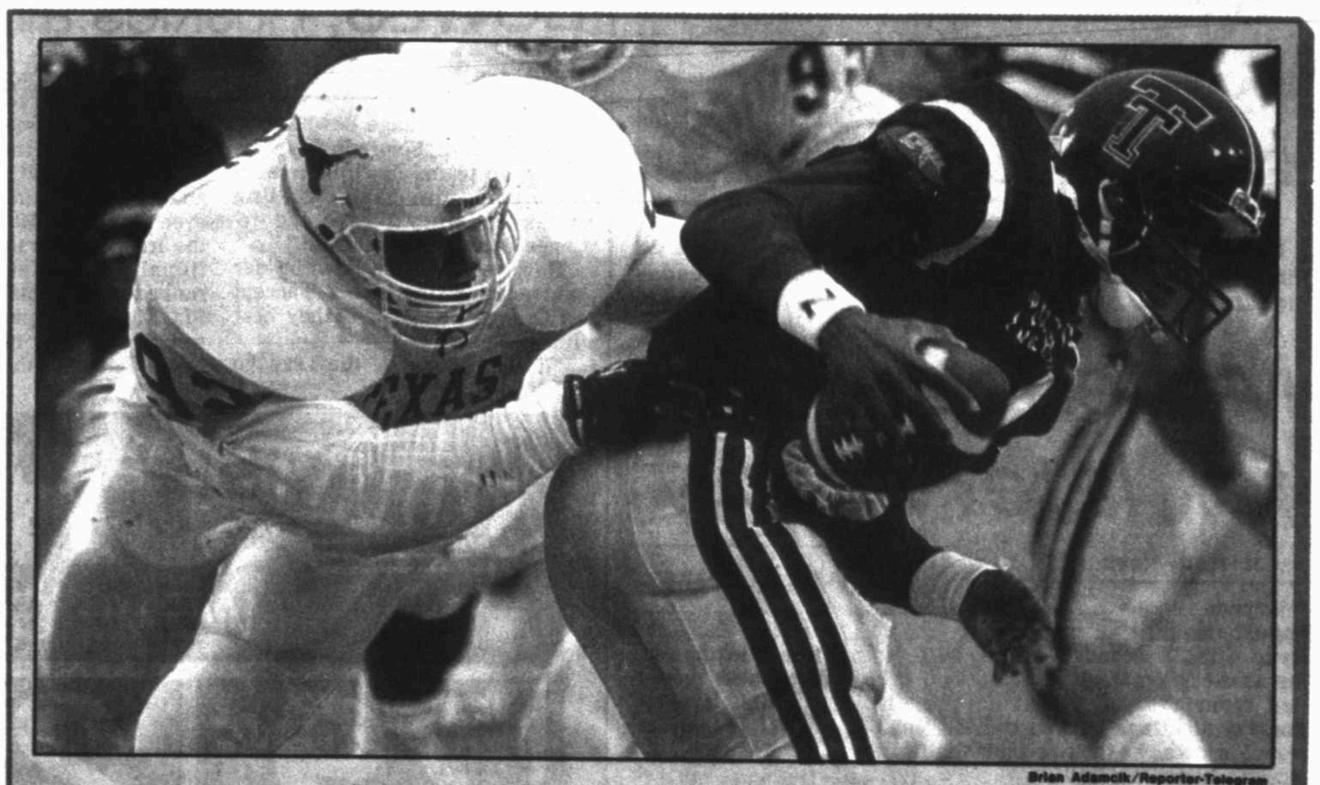

But after the deal, the 6-foot-3, line drive-hitting Justice moved to right and got comfortable in the field and at the plate, particularly in a ballpark made for homers. He went on a tear and hit .335 with 20 home runs and 49 RBIs for the rest of the season.

Justice's surge separated him from the rest of the rookies. DeShields was solid all season, batting .289 with 42 stolen bases, Morris hit .340 with 36 RBIs in 309 at-bats and Burkett went 14-7.

Zeile, considered by many the preseason favorite to win the rookie award, batted only .244 and switched from catcher to third based late in the year. Walker hit 19 home runs and was second to Justice among NL rookies; Kevin Maas of the New York was second among all rookies with 21 homers.

Justice broke into the majors last season and played 16 games, batting .235 with one home run in 51 at-bats. He also matched his career-high last year with 12 home runs for Richmond.

'Horns out to buck Houston

■ The Southwest Conference's top offense and defense clash Saturday in Austin, where the Houston Cougars meet the Texas Longhorns.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Trying to get ready for undefeated Houston is "kind of scary," Texas coach David McWilliams said Monday, adding that the Cougars are playing well enough to be ranked No. 1.

Texas (6-1) leads the race for the Cotton Bowl since Houston (8-0) is barred from a bowl appearance as a result of NCAA penalties. Houston's 12-game winning streak is the longest in major college football.

"They're playing well enough to be No. 1," McWilliams said as his team prepared for Saturday's game against the run-and-shoot Cougars. "They're putting the stats up there, and they're winning the football games."

Houston is averaging nearly 43 points a game. Texas has the top-rated defense in the SWC, yielding just over 15 points a game.

Asked about blitzing Houston quarterback David Klingler, McWilliams said Texas had not settled on a defensive scheme.

"They're kind of scary to look at it," McWilliams said.

Klingler has completed 270 of 463 passes for 3,553 yards and 34 touchdowns. The Longhorns will be trying to end a three years of frustration against the Cougars, who have beaten Texas by scores of 60-40, 66-15 and 47-9.

"The big thing with Houston is they have been a very patient team. They've been behind several times this year," McWilliams said. "Their offense is real patient, and they just keep coming after you. It's a 60-minute game with them."

Houston's defense has given up an average of 24 points a game but, according to McWilliams, "has been very instrumental in forcing turnovers."

One thing Texas must avoid, he said, is getting into a "shooting contest from a throwing standpoint. You have to be patient and run your offense and your defense."

Bowl picture remains cloudy

Associated Press

Is Notre Dame going to the Orange Bowl? Will Miami play in the Cotton Bowl? And where are Nebraska, Virginia and Florida State going to spend New Year's Day?

College football fans may learn the answers to these and other baffling bowl questions by the end of the week. Then again, they may not.

One thing is clear, however — the outcome of Saturday's Notre Dame-Tennessee game in Knoxville will have a snowball effect on the rest of the major bowls.

If the top-ranked Irish beat the No. 9 Volunteers, they will probably play No. 4 Colorado in the Orange Bowl no matter what happens in their final two games against Penn State and Southern Cal. But if Notre Dame loses, it will set off a mad scramble for top teams among the Orange, Sugar, Cotton, Fiesta and Citrus bowls.

Even if Notre Dame wins on Saturday, the Irish may decide to pass up an Orange Bowl rematch against Colorado. True, the Orange would offer the biggest payout ($4.2 million per team) and probably the highest ranked opponent. But Notre Dame might not want to give Colorado a chance to avenge its 21-6 loss to the Irish in last season's Orange Bowl, a defeat the cost the Buffaloes the national championship.

Best time ever to be in District 4-5A

Fall, 1990: The very best time ever to be a football member of District 4-5A. Here are the reasons:

Williamson

■ First, let's admit it. The league just isn't as strong as in past seasons. No Top 10 ranked teams. No unbeaten team. No domination. Just compare with 1983 when Midland Lee lost two district games, finished second in the league and barely escaped Odessa High. Still, that Lee team was the Rebels' best ever, advancing to the state finals. The league was a blood bath every week.

■ Odessa Permian owns a league loss and a league tie. That's down by any Mojo standard. And even with that aside, you don't even have to contend with Permian to land a playoff berth since the Panthers are ineligible for the playoffs. If that's not a gift to the league, I can't think of one.

■ For the first time in UIL history, Class 5A is allowed to send three teams from each district to the playoffs. Since Permian can't be one of those teams, the chance to shine was open to one and all. Also, no other sport will have the opportunity to send three teams to the playoffs. Does the UIL football playoff rule mean that enrollments have no bearing on sports such as track, baseball, tennis, etc., but only in football? Reasoning here somehow seems faulty.

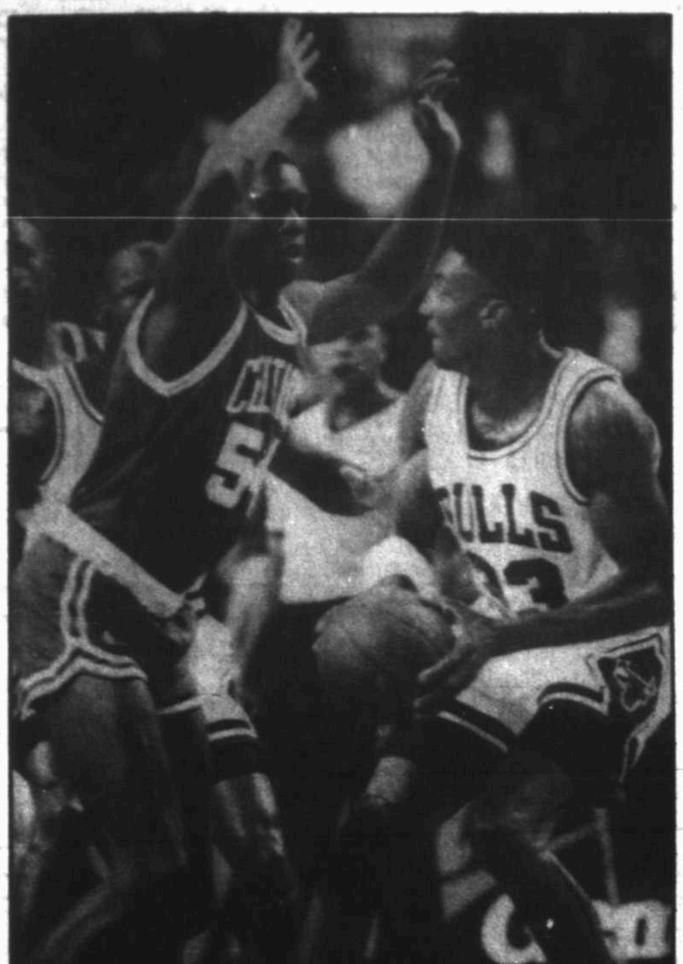

■ Consider the fact that there really were no individual stars to emerge in 4-5A. Some think the overall district was weaker a year ago from top to bottom. That is probably true, but no individual has really caught the eye of the public. Last year, for instance, Permian had Lloyd Hill and Chris Comer while Lee had all-time rushing and scoring leader Farris Strambler. The stars were bright. San Angelo quarterback Shea Morenz is probably the closest to being a star this year, but he has been somewhat inconsistent. Midland High's James Lee is the only 1,000-yard rusher, and only in nine games, but it is hard to compare him to Strambler and Comer of a year ago.

■ Odessa High will undoubtedly win at least a share of the district championship and will be in the playoffs for the first time since 1964. Still, OHS lost to District 3-5A champion Amarillo High, even if the statistics don't show it.

■ Combine all the above and you have the equation for the easiest playoff entry in the history of the loop. For instance, going into last Friday's 4-5A games, it was possible for Lee to gain playoff entry and still lose its last three games. Should any district team in the state deserve to go to the playoffs with three district losses? Some will this year and that is stretching the limit. I promise you that any team with three district losses is not going to win a state championship, and the last time I heard, that was what the playoffs were supposed to decide.

I really hope that 4-5A teams have enjoyed this new and adventurous experiment. But there is one, at least, who already wishes for the good old days.

Saints turn to basics, 'Ironhead'

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Stan Brock has blocked for some All-Pro runners in 11 seasons with the New Orleans Saints, but none made the pads pop the way Craig "Ironhead" Heyward does.

"The guys who sit up there in the stands and in the pressbox don't get to see and hear that stuff," Brock said. "It's amazing. I wouldn't want to be a defensive lineman and have Craig Heyward running full speed at me. It's just amazing."

Midway through the season, the Saints are 3-5, struggling offensively because of erratic play at quarterback. John Fourcade gave way to Steve Walsh after a 1-3 start.

Walsh, acquired in a trade with Dallas in the fourth week of the season, has thrown five touchdowns passes and five interceptions, averaging under 110 yards

Brock said hopes of a fourth consecutive winning season hinge largely on the running game, because that will take pressure off Walsh.

And Heyward now has a double role in that running game. Saints coaches say he's the best blocking back in the NFL, and he showed Sunday that he still has the skills he used in rushing for 1,655 yards in his last season at Pittsburgh.

He ballooned up to about 290 pounds at Pitt. With the Saints, his weight made more headlines than his performance in the first two years.

Trimmed down to 259 pounds, he ran for 122 yards on Sunday. While he was punishing the middle of Cincinnati's defense, Rueben Mayes swept the Bengals' ends for 115 yards. It was the first time since 1976 that the Saints had two running backs over 100 yards in the same game.

Walsh passed for only 101 yards, but didn't throw any interceptions and didn't get sacked.

"No sacks. That's a nice comment on an offensive line," Brock said. "But remember we didn't get in situations where it was an obvious passing down."

Brock blocked for Chuck Muncie, Tony Galbreath and George Rogers at the peak of their Pro Bowl years and for Earl Campbell at the end of his career. He has paved the way for Pro Bowl seasons for Archie Manning, Mayes and Dalton Hilliard.

"I've blocked for some great ones," he said.

But he refused to accept much of the credit for their success.

"I think linemen get too much credit on a lot of that stuff," he said. "Just go watch a film and see how our running backs do on their own. You'd be shocked."

They fake defenders and slip tackles, plow for extra yards and sometimes break long gainers, he said.

"Probably the majority of their yards, we have nothing to do with," he said. "We can get them to the linebacker level, and after that, they're on their own."

The Saints have made 14 more turnovers than their opponents, and that's forced them to pass a lot of the time. Defensively, the NFL's three run-and-shoot offenses kept New Orleans' linebackers off the field and all three games were losses.

Since the disastrous 1-15 season in Brock's rookie year in 1980, first Bum Phillips and now Jim Mora have built teams around solid defense and a punishing running game. Brock said he believes the team is rededicated to making the running game go.

"Offensive linemen like to run the ball," he said. "Receivers and quarterbacks like the big numbers, and they want to throw the ball. They don't enjoy the running game.

"But I think if you ask our receivers, they enjoy winning first. If we win throwing the ball, you don't get the same feeling as an offensive lineman. It's still nice to win, but we know we've done our jobs when we run the ball."

BOWLS: Huskies already committed to Rose Bowl

From 1C

do again," an Orange Bowl source said Tuesday. "Colorado is an experienced team, they'll be coming in with a nine-game winning streak and they'll have the revenge factor on their side."

However, a Cotton Bowl insider said he thinks the Irish will accept an Orange Bowl bid if they beat Tennessee.

"If they're No. 1, they can go anywhere they want to. And I think they want to go to the Orange Bowl," he said.

But what if Tennessee beats Notre Dame? In that case, No. 5 Miami should get the Orange berth even though the Hurricanes lost to the Irish. The Orange Bowl traditionally matches the highest ranked team available against the Big Eight champion, and Miami would probably move ahead of Notre Dame if the Irish lose to Tennessee.

Under that scenario, Notre Dame would end up in the Cotton, Sugar, Citrus or maybe even the Fiesta. Which one would the Irish choose?

For now, predicting pairings for the major bowls comes down to some educating guessing. So here goes:

Orange — Colorado vs. Notre Dame or Miami.

Rose — Washington vs. Iowa.

Sugar — Tennessee, Auburn or Mississippi vs. Notre Dame, Miami, Nebraska, Virginia or Big Ten team.

Fiesta — Virginia vs. Notre Dame, Penn State or Florida State

Mavericks rally for late victory

Associated Press

NBA

Rolando Blackman scored 20 points, including a go-ahead layup with 37 seconds remaining, as the Dallas Mavericks rallied from a 16-point deficit Tuesday night and handed the New York Knicks their second straight home loss 96-91.

The Knicks, who blew a 19-point lead in losing to Boston at Madison Square Garden on Saturday night, never trailed in the second half against the Mavericks until the final two minutes.

Dallas, trailing 49-33 late in the second quarter, scored the final seven points of the half and tied the score eight times before taking the lead 90-89 on Blackman's two free throws with 1:55 left.

Charles Oakley's rebound dunk gave the Knicks a one-point lead with 1:38 remaining but Blackman's layup put Dallas ahead for good. James Donaldson and Herb Williams each hit two free throws for Dallas in the final 14 seconds while the Knicks misfired on their last three possessions.

Roy Tarpley led Dallas with 29 points. Patrick Ewing had 26 points and Oakley 18 rebounds for New York.

Rockets 145, Nuggets 135

Kenny Smith had 35 points, including seven foul shots in the final 1:09 and Houston became the latest team to spoil Denver's high-scoring system.

Denver, in its first season under run-and-gun coach Paul Westhead, is 0-3. The Nuggets are giving up an average of 149 points per game.

Otis Thorpe had 21 points and 22 rebounds and Akeem Olajuwon added 24 points and 13 rebounds as Houston won its first game in three tries. The Rockets led by as many as 16 points in the first half and were ahead 111-101 entering the fourth quarter.

Denver cut Houston's lead to 136-133 with 1:41 to play on two free throws by Walter Davis but Smith kept Houston ahead with three foul shots.

Both teams had six players score in double figures. Todd Lichti scored 27 points and Orlando Woolridge had 26 for Denver.

The Nuggets reduced their deficit to 115-109 with 10:05 to on a basket by Avery Johnson, but a basket by Olajuwon and a basket and two free throws by Thorpe kept the Rockets in the lead at 121-109 with 8:17 to go.

Bucks 106, Heat 94

Frank Brickowski and Jack Sikma combined for 15 points during two third-period runs to break the game open and propel the Milwaukee Bucks to a victory over Miami.

Leading 54-52, the Bucks scored the next 12 points, four

Jay Humphries scored 20 for the Bucks, Sikma had 19 and Brickowski 17. Miami was led by Glen Rice with 19 while rookie Willie Burton added 17 points and 12 rebounds.

The Heat took their only lead, 34-32, with 7:18 left in the second period. The Bucks scored the next 10 points, five by Sikma, and led 54-50 at halftime.

Hornets 113, Nets 105

The NBA record for consecutive road losses is 32, set by Baltimore in 1954. New Jersey, which has not won on the road since winning in Miami last Dec. 19, can match the mark Nov. 17 in Milwaukee.

The Hornets led 93-92 when Bogues began a 10-4 spurt with two free throws. He followed that with two layups, including a three-point play that gave Charlotte a 105-96 advantage with 3:30 to go.

Cavaliers 102, Magic 95

The 2-year-old Orlando Magic suffered an NBA-record 16th consecutive home setback, as Larry Nance led the Cavaliers to their first victory of the season with 23 points and 12 rebounds.

The Cavs also got 17 points and 13 assists from Mark Price, whose 3-point shot put Cleveland ahead by 9 early in the fourth quarter and set the stage for a 13-2 surge that carried Cleveland to an 89-71 lead.

Nick Anderson led Orlando (0-3) with 20 points and Sam Vincent scored 17, most in the last four minutes when the Magic cut its deficit to 6 points against Cleveland reserves.

Celtics 110, Bulls 108

Brian Shaw's layup at the buzzer capped Boston's comeback from an 11-point fourth-quarter deficit and gave the Celtics a victory over winless Chicago.

Trailing 90-79 after three quarters, Shaw, who had 20 points, and Kevin McHale with 19, led the rally that gave Boston a 3-0 record and left the Bulls 0-3 for the first time since the 1982-1983 season.

Boston called a timeout with 6.9 seconds left following a missed shot by Michael Jordan, who scored a game-high 33 points. Scottie Pippen had 23 for Chicago.

Pacers 98, Timberwolves 96

Indiana, which trailed by as many as 15 points in the first period, tied the score 84-84 on a 3-point shot by Reggie Miller, who had 29 points, with 5:45 remaining.

The first half belonged to Minnesota. In the first five minutes, Indiana made only three of nine shots to Minnesota's 5-of-11. The Timberwolves then went on a 17-2 run, resulting in a 23-8 lead.

Seay joins academic elite

Staff Report

Matt Seay, a former standout member of the Midland High and City of Midland Swim teams, has been named to the United States Swimming Academic All-America Team for his 1989 performance.

U.S. Swimming News, the official publication of United States Swimming, listed Seay among its 68-member team, which is chosen based on finishes at the Junior and Senior National Championships in the spring and final grade point averages for that year.

Seay, who finished third at the Texas High School State Championship — just one tenth of a second off the previous state record — was a high school All-America swimmer last year. He went on to become only the second Midlander to win the Junior National meet.

McKinney slides from 4A grid poll

Associated Press

The McKinney Lions two weeks ago were 7-0 and ranked third among Class 4A teams in the Associated Press Schoolboy Poll.

This week they'll be fighting just to qualify for the playoffs.

Paul Oatts ran for 96 yards and a 13-yard touchdown Friday, leading Gainesville to a 14-9 win over McKinney. The Leopards held James Thornton, the top rusher in 4A, to 72 yards and the McKinney offense managed only 153.

The Lions, who lost to Denison the previous week, tumbled from the poll and suddenly are third in District 9-4A.

In order to make the playoffs, McKinney must beat Coppell in its season finale this week and both Gainesville and Denison must lose. That scenario could create a four-way tie for first place.

Five other ranked teams lost last week, while all five No. 1 schools survived Week Nine undefeated.

Plano, previously No. 10 in 5A, dropped a 25-14 thriller to No. 7 Lake Highlands.

Lake Highlands, which trailed 14-0 at halftime, beat the Wildcats in Plano for the first time in its 25-year history.

In 4A, Lubbock Estacado fell from fifth to eighth after a 9-7 loss to Levelland, while No. 5 Austin Reagan slapped Austin Westlake from the 10th spot in the poll with its 14-3 victory.

No. 9 Wilmer-Hutchins (8-1) and No. 10 Athens (7-1-1) debuted in the 4A rankings.

In 2A, Post lost to Crosbyton 18-17 and fell from the poll, while Era was beaten 31-0 by Muenster and fell from fourth to ninth in Class A.

Aldine, No. 1 in 5A, smashed Eisenhower 48-7. The Mustangs received 27 of 29 first-place votes and 288 overall.

Class 4A's top-ranked team, A&M Consolidated, escaped with a 7-2 victory over Tomball, thanks mostly to a pair of interceptions late in the game by Mark Anderson.

Tomball had marched to the Tigers' 9-yard line with 6:11 remaining when Anderson stole his first pass in the end zone. The second came less than a minute later at the Consolidated 14.

Vernon, which thrashed Bridgeport 57-6, received 19 first-place votes and 276 overall to retain the No. 1 ranking in 3A.

Groveton battered Lovelady 56-7 and kept its stronghold on 2A's top ranking, while Munday did the same in Class A with its 68-0 crunching of Crowell.

Hurdles jeopardize Rangers' plans to construct stadium

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers' plan to build a new stadium is coming up against a couple of hurdles — a group of residents who are opposed to a half-cent sales tax to fund the ball park and the need for legislative approval of the tax.

State law restricts what sales-tax increases can be used for in municipalities and counties, limiting them to government operations, public transit systems or economic development.

Foreman to get a shot

NEW YORK (AP) — Evander Holyfield will defend the heavyweight title against former-champion George Foreman at Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, N.J., on April 19.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices meandered in slow trading Tuesday and finished mixed, depressed on the one hand by evidence of ample supply and declining demand, boosted on the other hand by speculation about Persian Gulf war.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for December delivery price of West Texas Intermediate rose 67 cents a barrel to $32.63.

Natural gas for December delivery fell .02 cent per 1,000 cubic feet to $2.383, while later-delivery months all rose slightly.

Some traders said business was slow Tuesday because of the impending release of weekly figures of U.S. energy supplies and production from the American Petroleum Institute.

The statistics, released after trading finished for the day, showed stocks of crude oil and gasoline rose in the week ended Nov. 2 vs. a week earlier, while the supply of home heating oil remained steady. The figures also showed crude imports increased to 5.9 million barrels a day from 5.1 million barrels a day the previous week.

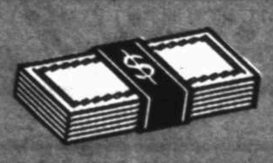

Seminar

The Petroleum Museum will present the H.B. Fuqua Distinguished Lecture Series on Thursday in the Museum auditorium at 7 p.m.

Dr. Wann Langston Jr., Ph.D. will speak on "Dragons of the Air: The Story of Quetzalcoatlus and Other Pterodactyls."

Dividend paid

P&P Equity Co. Ltd., general partner of Parker & Parsley Development Partners L.P., has declared its 13th consecutive quarterly distribution since inception. This distribution is 45 cents per unit, payable Dec. 15 to unitholders of record on Oct. 31.

Dollar recovers

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose Tuesday on concerns about the Middle East crisis and on technical buying by traders adjusting their positions in advance of the results of the day's elections.

In overnight trading in Tokyo, the dollar fell to 127.20 yen from 127.35 yen Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York: 1.4927 German marks; 1.2545 Swiss francs; 5.0065 French francs; 1,121.00 Italian lire; and 1.16295 Canadian dollars.

Productivity hits new peak

■ Analysts say a high productivity level may be indicative of a slow down, that businesses are making do with fewer employees.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American workers' productivity climbed at the fastest pace in two years during the July-September quarter but hours worked fell, the government said Tuesday in a sign that the economic slowdown is forcing businesses to make do with fewer employees.

"The good news is that productivity is up; the bad news is we're in a recession," said economist Michael K. Evans, a Washington-based consultant.

In the third quarter, non-farm productivity — output per hour of work — advanced at a 1.6 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate compared with the previous three-month period. It was the third consecutive improvement and the best pace since the July-September quarter of 1988.

Productivity rose 0.3 percent in the second quarter, fell 1.3 percent in the first quarter and dropped 2.5 percent in the fourth quarter of last year.

However, the number of hours worked edged down 0.1 percent in the third quarter, the first decline in more than four years. Economists say this shows that employers are coping with economic sluggishness with layoffs, hiring freezes and limits on overtime.

"What's happened here is that in 1989 the economy was very weak, but business optimism was still strong and businesses didn't lay off people," Evans said. "Productivity has picked up because they are laying off people who should have been laid off last year."

Despite the improvement, productivity is still well below the level needed to significantly boost Americans' living standard, according to most economists.

"It's better, but subpar," said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co.

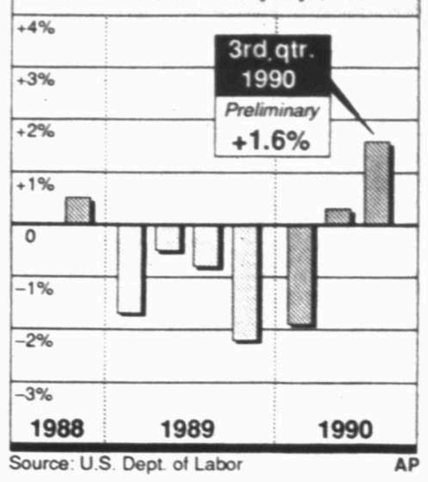

Increased productivity, or getting each worker to produce more during each hour of work, is vital to increasing the nation's standard of living without inflation.

Non-farm productivity is increasing at an average annual pace of 0.2 percent so far this year, compared with a 0.7 per-

Gasoline prices ease some

Price decreases were also seen in the Permian Basin with prices at the pump dropping about 3 cents per gallon at some stations. Locally prices have been up and down for the past two weeks.

The American Automobile Association survey found the retail price for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded had dropped by 0.3 cent, to $1.377.

The last time the average price had fallen was the week of Sept. 18, when it dipped 0.2 cent a gallon, AAA said.

Auto, truck sales jump 8.6 percent

■ Auto sales are up, but analysts say it may not reflect the present economic climate.

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of domestically built cars and light trucks rose 8.6 percent in late October, compared with soft sales in the period last year. But weak consumer confidence and recent moves by the Big Three to cut production suggest problems ahead, analysts said.

Discounts of more than $1,000 on many models helped lift car sales to 229,616 for Oct. 21-31, up 12.1 percent from 204,793 in the period last year.

Sales of light trucks remained slow, as manufacturers sold 123,191 pick-ups, mini-vans and four-wheel-drive vehicles, a gain of 2.6 percent from last year. Analysts speculate that the slowdown in light trucks may be related to concern over fuel economy.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, cars sold at an annual rate of 7 million in late October, in line with the rate for the year so far, and ahead of the 6.4 million rate set in late October 1989.

For the month, car sales increased 2.7 percent, while sales of light trucks were down 3.1 percent, compared with sluggish demand last year.

Analysts were divided in their interpretations.

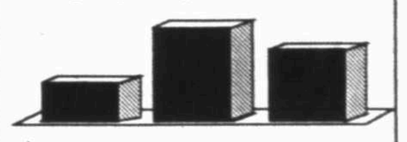

Contrary to predictions, "sales have not headed south," said Ann Knight of Paine Webber. "That's good for the industry, perhaps too good for the economic climate we're facing."

Some analysts suggested that sales to rental car companies and other large fleets may have inflated the sales of the Big Three.

FDIC sues two S&Ls

AUSTIN (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has sued the owners of two defunct Austin savings institutions, claiming the thrifts were involved in fraudulent real estate transactions.

The FDIC also is suing the law firm that represented Franklin Savings and CreditBanc Savings, contending that lawyers helped the thrifts break the law.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court in Austin last week, seeks at least $149 million in damages from Cleveland-based Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue, the nation's second-largest law firm, and the five owners of the two failed thrifts.

The thrift owners named in the lawsuit were: J. Scott Mann, who owned CreditBanc; and William Moore, Peter Gallaher, Clifford Alsup and Charles Christensen, former owners of Franklin Savings from 1983 to 1988.

The lawsuit also names Carey Brennan, the Jones, Day lawyer who first represented Franklin and CreditBanc and later became chief executive officer of CreditBanc.

The FDIC alleges that Franklin, CreditBanc and their owners were involved in an elaborate chain of sham transactions to bolster the financial standing of the institutions and allow them to pay dividends to shareholders.

Reese, Barnes and Barnes' partner, former Texas Gov. John Connally, were involved in a series of interlinking transactions in late 1985 that the lawsuit re-

Midlanders seeking a quick breakfast or lunch or to satisfy their sweet tooth while heading off to work or run errands now have a new place to try: YUMYUMS in the former automated teller building in the K mart parking lot.

Owned by Midlanders Jim and Barbara Landers, the store features homemade cinnamon rolls, blueberry muffins, chocolate brownies, bagels with cinnamon and nuts or cream cheese, biscuits with sausage or gravy, coffee, hot tea, milk and orange juice, for breakfast.

For lunch there's chicken salad or smoked turkey and cheese on a croissant bun. For snacks, there's fresh popcorn, hot roasted peanuts, Bluebell ice cream by the dip, or cake or pie by the slice. Jim Landers says a whole cake or pie is available with one or two day's notice.

Hours are from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The store closes at 6 p.m. Wednesdays so the Landers can attend church.

Plans are to add a walk-up window in addition to the drive-through.

MIDLAND PARK MALL has signed a contract with the U.S. Postal Service to offer postal service at the mall's customer service booth beginning November 15.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was lower this afternoon, as traders pondered the uncertainties raised by the elections, Persian Gulf crisis and an enormous sale of new U.S. Treasury debt.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 9.90 at 2,492.3 as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Decliners barely outnumbered gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 708 up, 714 down and 488 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 100.68 million shares with two hours to go.

In midafternoon trading on the NYSE, Browning Ferris was down 5⅞ to 24⅜ on a disappointing earnings report that came as a surprise to many analysts.

Waste Management was off 1⅜ at 33⅝ after announcing it will pay a court settlement of $19.5 million to avoid fighting civil price-fixing claims. Analysts were not sure whether the settlement was moving the stock.

Circuit City dropped 2½ to 11¾ following the release of sales reports that were not as strong as analysts were hoping. Unisys fell ¼ to 2⅝ amid concern that it may have to sell assets at distressed prices.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks was down .68 at 170.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .26 at 291.84.

Prostitutes provided at Vernon S&L party

DALLAS (AP) — Nine prostitutes were provided at parties for directors of a failed savings and loan, testified an aide for the former owner who is accused of fraud in Vernon Savings Association's demise.

Testimony resumed Tuesday morning in the trial of Don R. Dixon, who faces a 38-count indictment accusing him of allowing Vernon funds to pay for illegal campaign contributions, using thrift funds for personal expenses and for hiring prostitutes.

Ernest Osuna testified Monday that Dixon began courting politicians two years before Vernon's failure to help the ailing thrift.

The former manager of Vernon's California beach house said he contracted with Karen Wilkening and another San Diego madam to provide prostitutes at a 1985 party for Vernon directors.

Osuna, Dixon's aide from August 1984 until the thrift's failure in 1987, said he arranged for nine prostitutes at a cost of $10,500.

The nine prostitutes were for parties held on June 20 at Dixon's posh Del Mar beach house and on June 22 aboard a yacht cruising San Diego harbor, Osuna said.

"I made arrangements with Karen Wilkening and Jana (Warner) to bring girls aboard the yacht for a catered dinner and cocktails," Osuna testified.

The three-day Vernon affair included 22-year-old Donna Gentile, whose naked body was found at dawn June 23, off Sunrise Highway, east of Pine Valley, sources have told The San Diego Union.

The San Diego Metropolitan Homicide Task Force is investigating Gentile's murder and the death of 41 other young women slain since 1985.

The task force, under the supervision of the state attorney general's office, is also looking into possible police corruption and whether officers may have been involved in any of the prostitute slayings.

But sources close to the Dixon investigation said details about Gentile probably won't surface during testimony here because her death has no bearing on the fraud proceedings.

Osuna testified that Dixon met with carefully chosen members of Congress and hosted campaign fund raisers for them throughout the spring and fall of 1985.

"I was to arrange meetings with certain legislators who could be helpful to the savings and loan in Washington," said Osuna.

Dixon hosted several fund raisers during the mid-1980s for politicians, Osuna said, including Rep. Bill Lowery, R-San Diego, and former Rep. Tony Coelho, a Democrat from Merced, Calif.

Markets stay in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's big commodities markets decided Tuesday to stay in the nation's financial center rather than flee to New Jersey, giving a major boost to the city's sagging economy.

The decision by the four exchanges, which trade products ranging from orange juice to crude oil to gold, comes during a devastating financial industry recession that has cost New York thousands of jobs since the 1987 stock market crash.

The city and state gave the Commodity Exchange, the Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange, the New York Mercantile Exchange and the New York Cotton Exchange $145 million worth of tax breaks, land and other incentives to stay.

"This vote of confidence in the future of our city is so very important," Mayor David Dinkins told reporters.

The city, which also is home of the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange and the nation's leading brokerage houses, would have lost nearly 12,000 jobs and $1.3 billion a year in goods, services and salaries generated by the commodities industry had the exchanges moved.

New York lost 30,000 jobs this summer and is mired in a budget crisis reminiscent of its near fiscal collapse in the mid-1970, and analysts said it couldn't afford to lose one of its few growing industries.

In addition, the exchanges' decision is a favorable signal to other major Wall Street institutions that are considering leaving.

"Had they lost this case it would have made holding on to some others much more difficult," said Hyman Grossman, a managing director of Standard & Poor's Corp., which is reviewing the city's credit rating. "These things seem to go in waves and they feed on each other."

Since 1982, productivity growth has averaged 1.6 percent a year — better than the 1.2 percent average in the 1970s but far worse than the 2.5 percent annual gain posted from 1947 to 1967.

Sinai said manufacturing, where productivity leapt at a 5.6 percent annual rate in the third quarter compared with 2.6 percent for all of last year, is making impressive gains. However, productivity growth in the service sector, which accounts for a much larger share of the economy, remains dismal, he said.

A fundamental improvement in education, increased investment in new technology and better roads and other public infrastructure are needed in the long term to improve services productivity, Sinai said.

refers to as "the Christmas transactions" because they were concluded shortly before the holiday.

None of the three was named as a defendant in the lawsuit.

The lawsuit claims that Brennan acted with the owners of the thrifts to set up the fraudulent transactions in 1984, 1985 and 1986. In addition, it claims that Jones, Day committed professional negligence by allowing the transactions and by cooperating with Brennan and the thrift owners to breach their fiduciary duties to the institutions.

Richard Pogue, managing partner of the massive Jones, Day firm, which has 1,200 lawyers working in 20 U.S. and international offices, said his firm disputes the allegations of the lawsuit "and we intend to contest them vigorously."

SALES: Up for automobiles

(From 5C)

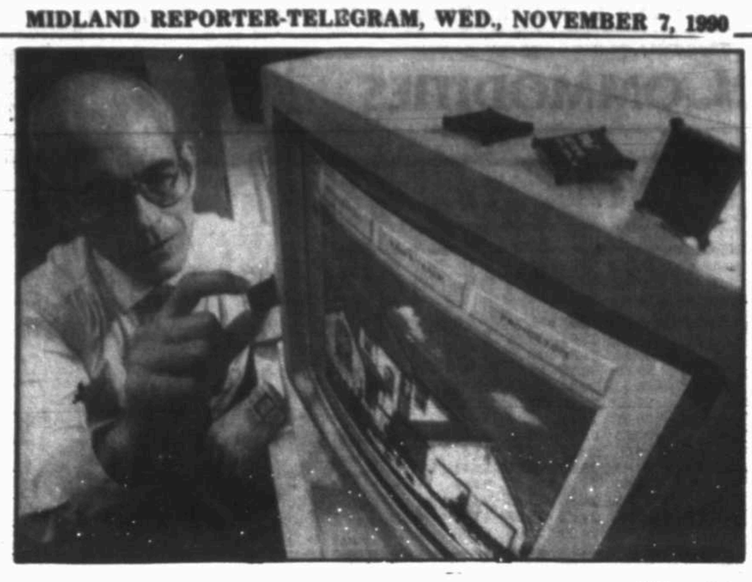

Joel Pitcoff, a market analyst with Ford Motor Co., said sales of Ford cars to fleets rose several percentage points in October, compared with a year earlier. Ms. Knight said she believed fleet sales at General Motors were unusually high.

"Retail business is softer than fleet business," said Pitcoff.

Ronald A. Giantz of Dean Witter Securities Inc. in San Francisco, suggested the sales figures looked better than they actually were because of statistical anomalies in the Commerce Department formula used to derive the seasonally adjusted annual rate of car sales.

Deep production cuts announced last week by GM, Ford and Chrysler provided ample evidence that the domestic automakers are bracing for a drop in sales.

Larry Ryan, originator of the DVI technology inspects a new chip unveiled by Intel which could reduce the cost of integrating text and video for computers.

New chip could cut video cost

■ A new computer chip marketed by Intel could reduce the cost of adding video technology to computers.

NEW YORK (AP) — The market for so-called multimedia computing got a boost Monday as Intel Corp. announced new chips that should cut the cost of adding video technology to personal computers.

Intel says its chips should allow computer makers to offer machines that edit and store moving images — much like they do text — for about $1,000 more than a regular computer.

While similar technology exists, it costs at least $2,000 above the price of a personal computer, Intel said.

Intel said its technology should spur the growth of multimedia, or the marriage of television and computing. Multimedia, which has yet to take off, allows the data, text and interactive capabilities of computers to be mixed with video, stereo sound, still photographs and animation.

Multimedia already is used for video-based training systems, information kiosks, in-store marketing pitches and design work. Future uses could include video mail, a video counterpart to the text-based electronic mail now commonplace to computer users.

Intel says its chips should expand the multimedia market by making it more affordable. That, in turn, should prompt software developers to create new video-based computer programs, said Tom Trainor, general manager of the Intel division that developed the chips.

Based in Santa Clara, Calif., Intel is a leading provider of chips, the building blocks of computers. Intel's microprocessor chips are crucial components of International Business Machines Corp. personal computers and compatible models.

Al Lill, an analyst with the high-tech research firm Gartner Group Inc., said he was impressed with the price and performance of Intel's new chips. But, he said, other companies including rival Motorola Inc., are working on similar technology.

"Everybody sees this as the next big one. It's going to be a big horse race," he said.

One problem with incorporating video into computers is the vast amount of computer memory consumed. One frame of a video image almost fills a floppy disk. At 30 frames a second for full-motion video, storage needs are enormous.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Property transfers can bring gift tax problems

By Bill Doyle

Q. It is my understanding it is a good idea for elderly people to transfer their assets, especially real estate, to their children while they (the senior citizens) are still living. That way, they can be sure the heirs get the assets without any problems.

What is your opinion on this?

Doyle

A. Your understanding is out of whack. By doing what you have in mind, you would make gifts. True, you would be certain that your children become owners of the assets. That might seem simple enough, but it could open you up to gift tax problems.

If you give more than $10,000 in money or other assets to someone other than your spouse in any year, you are required to file a federal gift tax return. For a married couple making joint, so-called "split" gifts, that doubles to $20,000.

The $10,000 and $20,000 numbers are known as the "annual exclusion." When the gifts you have made above and beyond the annual exclusions top $600,000, you're hit with federal gift tax. And that excess amount reduces what you can leave free of federal estate tax.

One spouse can give or leave to the other spouse — but not to children and others — unlimited amounts free of federal gift and/or estate tax.

Also, state inheritance and/or estate tax, which are levied by all states except Nevada, come into play. There's not nearly enough room to describe all those in this column.

Here's another, perhaps even bigger, problem with your idea. When real estate, stocks and other "capital assets" received as a gift are sold at a profit, the recipient's "basis" — cost for tax purposes — is the donor's basis. That greatly increases the capital gains tax that must then be paid.

The basis of inherited assets, on the other hand, "steps up" to the value placed on the assets when the estate is settled. That's the value on the date of death, unless an alternate valuation date is used. Because of a higher basis, the capital gains tax bite will be less severe when inherited assets are sold.

Summed up, in most family situations, it is better to leave assets as inheritances.

Q. I am in my late 70s and own 700 shares of stock in the company at which I was employed. I want to leave the stock to my three children after I pass on.

Suppose I sign and fill out the assignment form on the back of each stock certificate, on an equal number of shares to each child and leave the certificates in my safe deposit box. My children would have the transfer made upon proof of my signature and presentation of my death certificate.

Good idea?

A. Terrible. It would fracture rules right and left and create problems.

First off, your signature must be guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company and the assignment form must be dated. No broker or banker who knows his or her business would go along with your notion.

As you outline your plan, the transfer would seem to be from one living person to three living persons. But that would be invalid, because you would have left this vale of tears.

My firm suggestion is to have a simple will drawn up, leaving the shares in equal numbers to your three offspring.

Protestors hurl rocks and spray mace at police and newspeople during a high school students' demonstration which turned violent in Paris Monday. The students were marching for safer schools and more teachers in front of the National Assembly when the clashes began.

PARIS (AP) — Tens of thousands of high school students around France poured into the streets Tuesday, a day after 130,000 youths joined nationwide marches to demand better education and improved security on campus.

The largest protests Tuesday involved 8,000 students in Besancon, 6,000 in Toulouse, and 4,000 each in Reims and Vannes, police reported. There were smaller marches in Marseille, Nancy, Metz, Belfort, Dijon, Nevers and Mulhouse.

No violence or arrests were reported, although a police officer directing traffic away from the march in Marseille suffered minor injuries when accidentally struck by a car.

Two police unions representing 35 percent of the uniformed officers denounced orders issued to riot police Monday in Paris to avoid confrontations with protesters.

Scores of youths went on a rampage along the march route, wrecking businesses and hurling projectiles that injured 13 people, including five policemen. Police made several arrests, but generally avoided using force.

One union statement said policemen were "scandalized by the passive attitude of public officials," and warned that troublemakers would be encouraged to take advantage of police restraint.

"It's unacceptable that those in charge of the security of citizens, including the demonstrators, should transform the police into mere bystanders," said another union statement.

Protests have spread nationwide since starting three weeks ago in the low-income suburbs north of Paris, where a student was raped in a school lavatory and several teachers and students were assaulted.

Students around the country marched Monday as the National Assembly debated the Socialist government's proposal to increase education spending by 9 percent, to the equivalent of $49 billion. Student leaders have criticized this as inadequate, although it outpaces the overall budget increase of 4.8 percent.

Singh's government faces a no-confidence vote in Parliament on Wednesday, following Hindu-Moslems riots which killed at least 360 people in two weeks.

The issue — Moslem possession of a site Hindus claim as the birthplace of an important Hindu god — prompted the desertion of the right-wing Hindu party from Singh's coalition and was the immediate spark of the political crisis.

Even before the riots, Singh was beset by other problems. At least 148 people died in protests after he announced in August he would reserve nearly half of all government for low caste Hindus.

He said the policy would raise the lower classes from economic and social impoverishment. But critics said Singh manufactured the caste problem to gain votes from the poor masses, while he failed to follow through with economic liberalization and ignored the increasingly deadly sepoaratist insurrections by Moslems in Kashmir and by Sikhs in Punjab.

Singh's parliamentary maneuvering on the eve of Wednesday's vote created confusion and seemed to move the nation closer to elections just 11 months after the last national vote.

In a last-ditch effort to save his government, the prime minister said he was ready to join a sweeping coalition, presumably encompassing the opposition Congress Party. But that option seemed unlikely to win much support.

"The need of the hour is a national government or a national coalition to look into the serious crisis the country is facing," he said.

Chandra Shekhar said Monday he had the support of 58 of the Janata Dal's 140 members in the Lok Sabha, the all-important lower house of Parliament.

Those whom Singh expelled stay in Parliament as independents, but the 33 other rebels technically remain trapped in the Janata Dal and are obliged to vote according to party lines.

Chandra Shekhar, in a letter to the house which barely concealed his anger, said it was "public knowledge" that he commanded the support of more than the required one-third. He accused Singh of acting "with an evil design."

"Apart from technicalties, there is a poltical context," he told reporters. "By some manipulation, some group is formed which has no validity or sanction of the people as they have voted."

Proposed treaty allows secession

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — A Kremlin official on Tuesday outlined a new union treaty that would guarantee civil liberties and republics' right to secede, but he conceded the plan would fail without the agreement of the Russian republic.

"If Russia does not sign it, we'll have to be realistic: We would not be able to talk about any union," said Grigory Revenko, a member of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Presidential Council, a high-level advisory body.

The proposal represented the government's latest attempt to appease secession movements by the republics and smaller regions while creating a uniform, market-oriented economic system in one country. The treaty would replace a 1922 document that formed the basis for the current union.

But many details of the broad plan were unclear, and it faced an uphill battle for acceptance by the national legislature and the republics.

The treaty would have a section defining human rights and voluntary republic membership in the redefined Soviet Union. Another would set out the Kremlin's military and economic authority. A third would establish legislative, judicial and executive branches of the central government, Revenko said.

It would define the country as a "union of sovereign republics," and would amount to a "second chapter" to the current constitution, he said.

"We do not need a union with somebody chained to it, because that would lead to a constant attempt to break those chains," Revenko said.

"Republics ... will not have to expect any actions that would stop sovereignty or independence. There will be no such actions."

The plan grew out of a proposal by Gorbachev last summer that was widely criticized by the republics for failing to grant real independence. Revenko said Gorbachev's "ideas" and a number of variations later were reviewed by the Council of Federation, another high-level advisory body representing presidents of the 15 republics and one autonomous region.

The council agreed last week to have a preliminary proposal published in the Soviet press in the next nine days. That would bring "the entire population into the discussion of the future of the union," he said.

Only after its publication, sometime before Nov. 15, could it be considered by the national parliament, Revenko said.

He gave no date for legislative debate, saying only that he hoped the treaty could be approved in the next few months in conjunction with Gorbachev's economic reform plan.

"The union treaty and the program of transition to the market economy cannot go without each other," Revenko said. "Political issues would inevitably slow down the transition to the market. The market would not tolerate any political or national isolation."

Gorbachev last month won approval of the compromise plan that dropped provisions to allow private ownership and give more authority to republics.

Indians brace for showdown with Mounties

PEMBERTON, British Columbia (AP) — Indians piled bushes, furniture and even an old shed across a roadway used by loggers as they prepared Tuesday for a showdown with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Officers planned to go to the site later in the day to force removal of the Indian's 4-month-old blockade. Those not leaving were to be arrested, police said Tuesday morning.

The British Columbia Supreme Court on Monday gave police power to make arrests if necessary to remove the blockade about 85 miles north of Vancouver.

Chief Justice William Esson issued the order in Vancouver after the Indians defied an order he issued last week, giving the provincial government the right to remove the blockade.

The Mount Currie Band erected the blockade July 12 to show support for the Mohawk Indians in their standoff with police at Oka, Quebec. After the Oka standoff was resolved, the Mount Currie group decided to maintain its blockade to draw attention to its land claims.

Loggers who often use Duffey Lake Road have been hurt by the blockade. Logging contractors and their crews have only had a few days of work since the blockade went up, said contractor Peter Staehli.

Major earthquake hits southern Iran

RESTON, Va. (AP) — A major earthquake struck a mountainous area in southern Iran on Tuesday night, the U.S. Geological Survey said. One preliminary report indicated there were about 100 casualties in 20 seriously damaged villages.

The survey's earthquake-monitoring facility in Golden, Colo., said the quake tentatively registered 7.0 on the open-ended Richter scale.

Spokeswoman Rebecca Phipps said that the epicenter was about 550 miles south of Tehran and that the quake struck about 1:46 p.m. EST.

Early reports from the region told of 100 casualties — dead and wounded — counted an hour after the quake struck, said Alirez Jafarzadeh, the Washington, D.C.-based spokesman for The People's Mujahedeen of Iran.

Jafarzadeh said he had no breakdown between dead and wounded in the estimate of 100 casualties.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Iraq to free some hostages, but not Americans

Associated Press

Iraq on Tuesday promised to free 108 hostages, none of them American, and insisted anew its foreign "guests" are well-treated. Secretary of State James A. Baker III pressed U.S. allies about their willingness to go to war.

The Baghdad government was keeping an eye on Tuesday's midterm elections in the United States. It claimed any slippage in Republican support would reflect a lack of public support for President Bush's Persian Gulf policies.

"The American people will ... ask him why he is sending their sons to be killed in the Arab desert and he will reap the fruits of his mistake," said Iraqi Information Minister Latif Jassim.

In the latest hostage releases, Iraq's official news agency said 77 Japanese nationals would be freed in response to an appeal from former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. It also said 20 Italians, five Swedes, two Germans, two Portuguese and two Australians would be allowed to leave.

It did not say when the captives would be freed, but some had already begun to assemble at a Baghdad hotel.

They were among thousands of foreigners trapped when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2. Some had been held at strategic sites as "human shields" against attack.

Iraq has since freed hundreds of captives, but Western governments have expressed growing fears that Iraq's Saddam Hussein is successfully using the hostages to divide the alliance facing him.

Baker, meanwhile, was seeking to strengthen the anti-Iraq coalition. He is in the Mideast to assess support for stronger steps against Iraq, including a possible military strike.

He met Tuesday in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, but there was no immediate word on the outcome. Egypt has sent thousands of troops to join the multinational force assembled in the gulf.

U.S. troops make up the bulk of the force, which numbers about 300,000. The Pentagon said Tuesday the U.S. troop deployment in the region had reached 230,000 and was still growing.

In a sign of the escalating U.S. military commitment, the Marine Corps said it was calling up more than 600 reservists from eight states for combat roles. Up until now, the more than 34,000 reservists called to active duty have served in support roles.

While in Egypt, Baker also met with China's foreign minister, Qian Qichen. China is a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council, and its support would be needed for a U.N.-sanctioned military strike against Saddam.

Qian did not explicitly approve sending troops into action — "we'll still have to wait and see," he said. But U.S. officials said on condition of anonymity that his comments were an indication at the very least the Beijing government would not veto a U.N. resolution to authorize the use of force to liberate Kuwait.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, who has tried to act as a mediator in the gulf crisis, said prospects for peace are improving as the world considers the consequences of an all-out conflict.

"War will be disastrous and catastrophic. This is the world's oil center. Just imagine what a disaster and a catastrophe it will be," Arafat told reporters in Baghdad.

Saudi Arabia's foreign minister, however, reminded Iraq on Tuesday that the United Nations has not restricted the use of military force to liberate Kuwait.

"We would like a peaceful settlement, but that option is in the hands of the Iraqis," said the foreign minister, Prince Saud.

Kuwait accused Jordan of breaking U.N. economic sanctions by trucking food across the border into Iraq. Mohammad Abu Al-Hassan, Kuwait's ambassador to the United Nations, said at a news conference in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, that Jordan it could face the same sanctions as Iraq if it failed to halt shipments of forbidden goods.

At the United Nations, four nonaligned members of the Security Council drafted a plan calling for the simultaneous withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and foreign military forces from the region. The measure, sponsored by Colombia, Cuba, Malaysia and Yemen, was given little chance of passage.

Iraq's freeing of its Japanese hostages comes as Japanese lawmakers are considering a plan to send troops to the gulf in non-combat roles. However, the measure has prompted strong protests in Japan and its prospects for approval look dim. Japan said it had not altered its gulf policy in order to win the hostages' freedom.

Former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt met Tuesday in Baghdad with German hostages, and was to meet Saddam on Wednesday. Former Danish Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen arrived in Jordan and planned to travel on to Iraq when he obtained a visa, and former New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange was reported en route to the gulf.

Last weekend, Belgium's foreign minister, Mark Eyskens, criticized "Western pilgrims" for courting Saddam in an effort to free their citizens.

Iraq has been expressing fears that the United States will use the hostages as a reason for a military strike. On Tuesday, it offered its latest assurances that the "guests," as it calls the captives, are being well treated.

A day earlier, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher had said reports indicated many detainees were losing weight and eating poorly.

Also, the Red Cross said Iraqi officials have agreed to allow Americans held at strategic sites to send messages home to their families.

Many wives hear from hostage husbands

DALLAS (AP) — Some wives of Texans being held in Iraq have talked to their husbands for the first time since they were taken hostage. But other family members are still waiting.

For Sarrah Amos, the call came once Saturday and again Monday. For Patty Hale, the call came Saturday. But by Tuesday, after three months of waiting, Marjorie Walterscheid's telephone call from Iraq still hasn't come.

The phone calls over the last three days followed an Iraqi government announcement last weekend that American "guests" would be allowed to call their families in the United States.

The latest Iraqi move was denounced by U.S. officials as yet another game being played with innocent lives by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. But the wives said they were grateful to hear from their husbands, even if it was a public relations ploy.

"It was good to be able to hear him. At the time you get the calls, you're about ready to cry," Mrs. Amos of Gilmer told The Dallas Morning News. Her husband, Charles, is a hostage.

"After it's over, it's a big letdown because they're not here in person," she said.

Mrs. Walterscheid, however, was still waiting to hear from her husband, Rainard, a Jacksboro resident taken captive when Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

"The State Department called Saturday to say that the men might be calling," she told The Associated Press Tuesday. "I haven't left the house since then."

She said she was frightened because the call has not been forthcoming, and that she was losing sleep worrying about it.

There are no accurate figures on how many of the estimated 1000 Americans being held in Iraq have been allowed to call their families. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said more than 21 families reported receiving telephone calls by midday Monday.

Information conveyed in many of the calls appears to confirm reports that U.S. detainees are being mistreated, Boucher said.

"Consistent with other reports we have received, many detainees said they were losing weight, that the food was poor and that with the approach of winter, they were frequently cold," said Boucher.

He said hostages also indicated that they have not received any of the mail that the State Department has forwarded to them through the Iraqi Foreign Ministry.

Mrs. Hale of Spring said her husband, Edward, told her during their 17-minute conversation that he was being treated well and fed adequately.

"He spends his days playing baseball with other hostages and jogging and thinking. ... I think he was being very careful with what he said, but I do think he's OK," she said.

Troops gripe about food, say M&Ms best part of meals

By Robert Dvorchak

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — The Army manual for desert warfare says food and water are tactical weapons. In the mess halls of Operation Desert Shield, troops gripe about whether the food weapon is aimed at them or the enemy.

These food critics are anything but diplomatic.

"Disgusting," said Marine Lance Cpl. Dale Sturdifan, 20, of Petersburg, Va., carrying a breakfast plate of watery scrambled eggs, rice, a meat patty, bread, apple juice and a cookie back to his desert quarters.

Although it's a sure bet no American army has ever eaten better, the soldiers in Saudi Arabia have raised complaints about the cuisine to new heights.

Air Force Sgt. Mike Phillips, 29, of Newbury, Ohio, says he's lost 20 pounds since he arrived.

One type is the Army version of the TV dinner. It's prepackaged and heated in hot water.

When hot food isn't available, troops turn to a staple called Meals, Ready-to-Eat, or MREs in soldierspeak.

Some soliders say MREs stand for Meals Rejected by Everyone Else. An improvement on canned rations such as Spam and cheese, each MRE comes in a chocolate-brown wrapper as a 2,500-calorie, prepackaged portion that can be eaten anywhere.

The dishes include pork patties, meatballs with barbecue sauce, chicken a la king, ham omelette and frankfurters with bean component. Other goodies in the packets include crackers, peanut butter, a candy bar, instant coffee and flavoring for water.

"To look at them just makes me ill. I'll eat the crackers and peanut butter but that's about as far as I'll go," said Air Force Maj. Carol Darby, 34, of Roseville, Calif.

MREs are one of the most nutritionally complete food packages in the world, claims Gerald Darsch, chief of the food technology division at the Army's research labs in Natick, Mass.

The military has ordered 30 million more MREs to support Desert Shield.

One of the biggest hits in the packs is M&Ms candies. An Air Force officer wrote M&Ms headquarters in Hackettstown, N.J., to say the sure sign that candy is included is a "whoop in the mess tent."

The Army's Research Institute of Environmental Medicine takes food seriously.

"Soldiers must be taught that food and water are tactical weapons. Soldiers must be taught to eat and drink, whether they like it or not, whether they are hungry or thirsty or not," the regulations say.

Researchers found that the amount of calories needed increases in the desert, but the desire to eat goes down.

The biggest complaint is that the food, even meals cooked in field kitchens, is bland. That's understandable if you're making eggs for a couple of battalions at a time.

Marines who hunker down in the dark to eat supper in the sand often carry glass bottles of tabasco sauce to spice up their rations. They have a saying: "In case of emergency, break glass."

Season your meat loaf with low-fat yogurt

By Pierre Franey
N.Y. Times News Service

In the Middle East it is the kefta, in eastern Canada the tortiere, in France the pain de viande. Meat pies come in all combinations, some blending pork and beef, some beef and veal, still others combining all three. It all depends on your tastes and budget.

But any combination can be excellent if it is seasoned correctly. An inexpensive addition that works very well is ground chicken.

As an experiment I used low-fat yogurt to bind this meat loaf, and the result was better than I expected. But first the yogurt must be drained in cheesecloth for an hour or so to remove excess water.

The meat is blended in a bowl with sauteed onions and garlic, bread crumbs, nutmeg, Tabasco, cumin, salt and pepper. It should take about 45 minutes to bake in a 425-degree oven.

Any combination of ingredients can make meat loaf excellant if seasoned correctly.

HERBED MEAT LOAF WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 tablespoon butter
4 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon minced garlic
2 pounds ground veal
1½ cups fine fresh bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 tablespoons chopped fresh herbs, like parsley, dill, coriander or a combination of several ½ cup yogurt, drained in cheesecloth or strainer
Mushroom sauce (see recipe)

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Heat the butter in a small skillet and add the onion and garlic. Cook until wilted, and cool briefly.

Place the meat in a mixing bowl and add the bread crumbs, nutmeg, Tabasco, cumin, salt and pepper. Add the onion mixture, herbs of your choice and yogurt, then blend well. Pack the mixture into a loaf pan about 9 by 5 by 3 inches. Smooth the top with a spatula.

Set the pan in a baking dish and pour 1½ inches of boiling water around the pan. Bake for 45 minutes.

Let rest in a warm place for about 15 minutes before serving. Serve with the mushroom sauce.

NOTE: Ground chicken can be substituted for the veal, or use a half-and-half mixture of both. This meat loaf is very good served cold with a salad.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons chopped shallots
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper to tast
¼ cup dry white wine
1 cup fresh or canned chicken broth

Melt 1 tablespoon of the butter in a saucepan and add the shallots, mushrooms, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, for about 5 minutes. Add the wine and broth and reduce by half over high heat.

Transfer the mixture to a blender and blend at high speed until smooth. Return the mixture to the saucepan and add the remaining butter. Heat, stirring, until smooth, about 1 minute.

MICROWAVE MAPLE BAKED APPLES

5 red baking apples, such as Rome or York
5 tablespoons maple syrup
1 cup apple cider
Ground cinnamon

Core apples. With paring knife or potato peeler, remove small spiral of apple peel on top quarter of each apple, leaving some peel on apple to form spiral design. Place apples around edges of microwave-safe casserole dish and pour cider on and around apples. Drizzle 1 tablespoon syrup on each apple; dust lightly with cinnamon. Cover with casserole lid and cook on high (100 percent power) for 10 minutes, or until fork tender. Serve with a dollop of non-fat vanilla yogurt, if desired.

Warm up to fall with pork stew

Associated Press

After a day spent outside in brisk fall air, this just-right blend of pork, sweet potatoes and seasonings will warm you all the way through. Although rich with meat, it contains only 9 grams of fat per serving. Use well-trimmed boneless pork loin, thick boneless chops, or tenderloin for the pork.

PORK STEW

¾ pound lean boneless pork
Non-stick spray coating
2½ cups water
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon instant beef bouillon granules
½ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
1¼ pounds sweet potatoes (4 small), peeled and cubed
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon cold water
1 10-ounce package frozen peas

Trim fat from pork. Cut into ½-inch cubes. Spray cold Dutch oven with non-stick coating. Preheat Dutch oven. Add pork; cook and stir until pork is brown. Drain. Wipe Dutch oven with paper towels. Add 2½ cups water, onion, bay leaf, bouillon granules, thyme, paprika, pepper and garlic powder to Dutch oven. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes.

Stir in sweet potatoes. Return to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, about 10 minutes or until potatoes are nearly tender. Stir together cornstarch and 1 tablespoon water. Stir into pork mixture. Add peas. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Discard bay leaf. Makes 4 servings.

Homemade bread doubles delight

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Homemade bread is a double delight. First comes the enticing aroma of baking bread, then a delicious bite of chewy crust and warm, tender center. And when homemade bread is as easy as these twists, you and your family can savor that delight often.

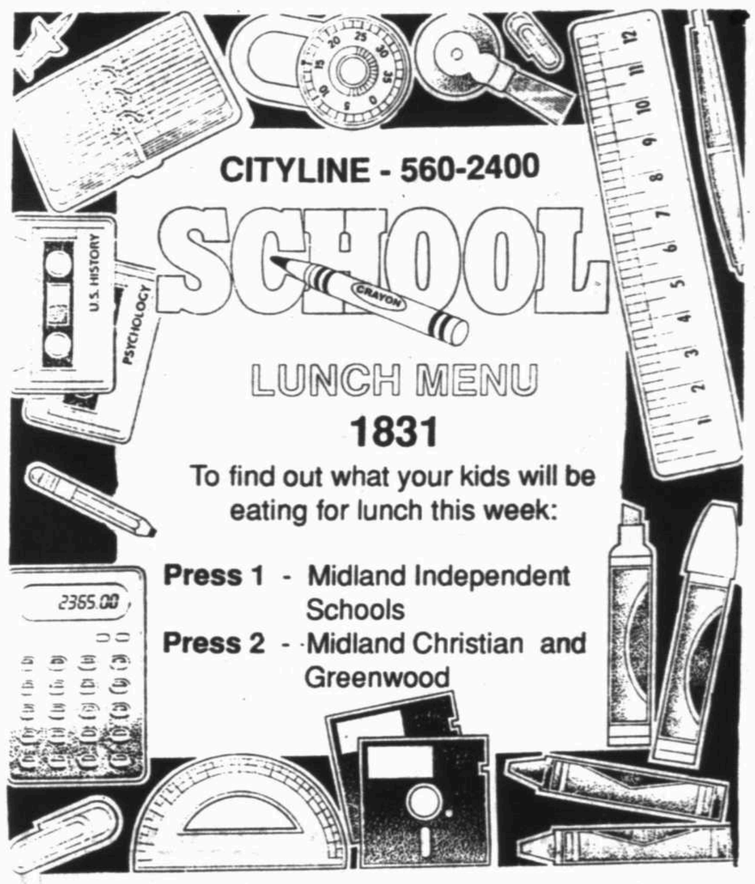

GARLIC BREAD TWISTS

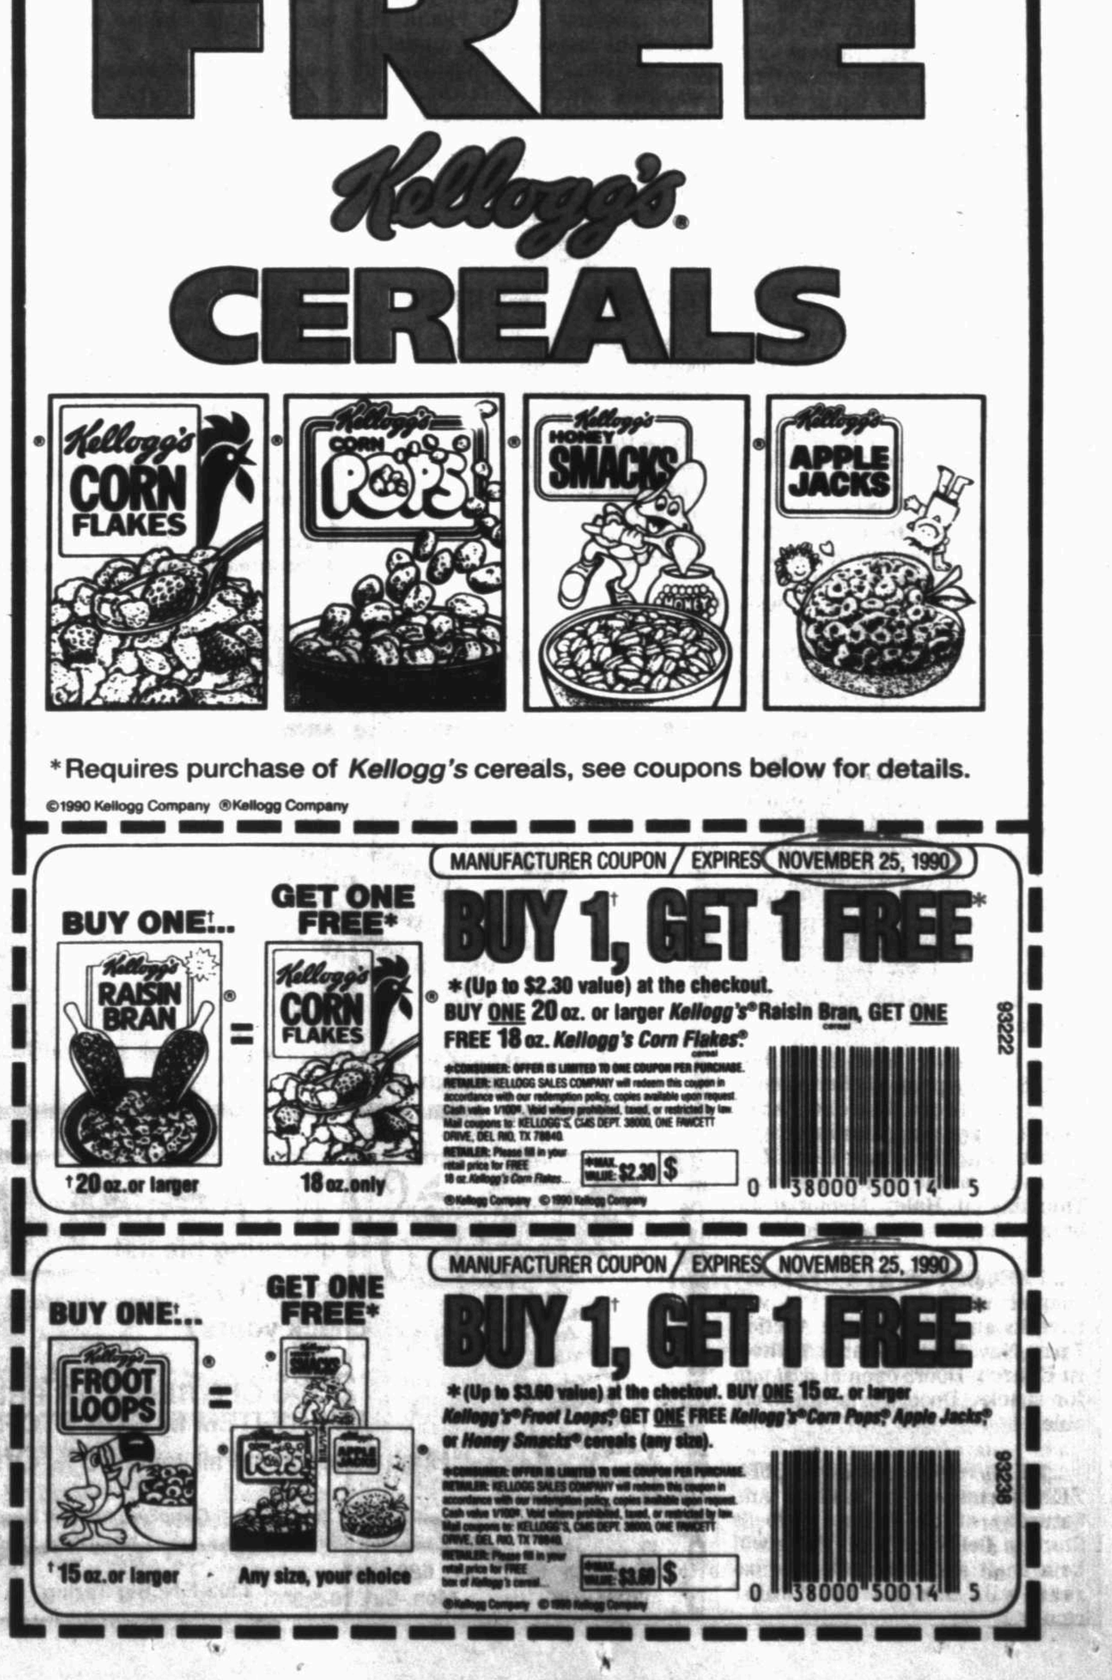

Non-stick spray coating
1 10-ounce package refrigerated pizza dough
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Spray a baking sheet with spray coating; set aside. Remove dough from package; do not unroll dough. Cut pizza dough roll crosswise into 12 slices. Unroll each slice into a rope. Cut each rope in half crosswise. Twist each rope, then place on an ungreased baking sheet.

In a small bowl stir together egg white, water and garlic powder. Brush egg-white mixture onto dough. Sprinkle with Parmesan, sesame seed, or poppy seed. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm. Makes 24.

To freeze: Place breadsticks in a freezer container; seal tightly, label and freeze for up to 8 months. To reheat, arrange breadsticks on a baking sheet; bake in a 350-degree F oven for 5 to 10 minutes or until heated through.

'Desert safe' recipes ideal for troops overseas

NEW YORK (AP) — Brownies and other homemade baked goods can give American soldiers stationed in the Middle East a welcome taste of home.

But if you're planning to send a food shipment to Saudi Arabia, do not use vanilla or other alcohol-based flavorings, allspice or nutmeg, says David Klug of Nestle Foods' Chocolate Research and Development.

Saudi Arabia strongly forbids the use of alcohol for religious reasons, Klug says, and there are cultural prohibitions against the use of allspice or nutmeg. In addition, he says, all ingredients should be made with non-pork by-products (kosher).

To facilitate passage into Saudi Arabia, each food shipment should contain a card that says the baked goods are kosher, and do not contain any any alcohol, allspice or nutmeg, he says.

Klug also has the following suggestions to ensure that the baked goods will withstand the high desert heat:

■ Do not use butter, margarine or peanut butter. These fats will go rancid too fast in the high heat. Use butter-flavored vegetable shortening instead. Nuts should not be included, because of their tendency to go rancid.

■ Do not use brown sugar, corn syrup, honey, or molasses. These products will cause the baked goods to become too soft and possibly become moldy. Brown sugar is a natural humectant, meaning it wants to hang on to moisture. White table sugar is a better choice.

Klug says chocolate can be used in baked goods going to the desert. Once chocolate has been baked into the product and has the chance to take up moisture from the batter, he says, the chocolate will stay rather firm.

"With the elimination of certain fats like butter or margarine and softening ingredients like brown sugar, you end up with a much drier baked good," he says. "The addition of chocolate will actually make the product seem moister and therefore more palatable."

Bar cookies and brownies are the best bet for safe packing. They are also the quickest and easiest to bake in large quantities. Bar cookies can be wrapped without cutting. Baked goods should be wrapped tightly in aluminum foil, which the Nestle Co. says provides the best barrier against humidity.

The following "desert safe" recipes are provided by Nestle Foods. Consumers can call Nestle's toll-free consumer hotline (1-800-NESTLES) with any questions about these recipes.

CREATIVE PAN COOKIES

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1¼ cups granulated sugar
1 cup butter-flavored vegetable shortening
2 eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 12-ounce package (2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate chips
2¼ cups quick oats, uncooked
1 cup chopped dried apple slices or raisins

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. In small bowl, combine flour, baking soda, salt and cinnamon; set aside.

In large mixer bowl, beat sugar and shortening until creamy. Beat in eggs. Gradually add flour mixture and water. Stir in chocolate chips, oats and apples. Spread in an ungreased 15½x10½x1-inch baking pan. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 18 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool completely. Cut into 2-inch squares.

IRRESISTIBLE BROWNIES

1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup cocoa
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups sugar
⅔ cup butter-flavored vegetable shortening, softened
4 eggs
1 10-ounce package (1½ cups) white chocolate baking pieces

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In small bowl, combine flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt; set aside.

In large mixer bowl, beat sugar, shortening and eggs until creamy. Gradually blend in flour mixture. Stir in white chocolate baking pieces. Pour into a greased 13x9-inch baking pan. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until toothpick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool completely. Cut into 2-inch squares. Makes about 30 brownies.

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE BROWNIES

¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup vegetable shortening
¾ cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons water
1 12-ounce package (2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate chips
2 eggs

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. In small bowl combine flour, baking soda and salt; set aside. In saucepan over medium heat, combine shortening, sugar and water; bring just to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add 1 cup of the chocolate chips; stir until chips are melted and mixture is smooth. Transfer to large mixer bowl.

Add eggs, one at a time beating well after each addition. Gradually add flour mixture. Stir in remaining 1 cup chocolate chips. Spread in a greased 9-inch square baking pan. Bake in a 325-degree F oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool completely; cut into 2¼-inch squares. Makes 16 brownies.

Dietary habits to be researched

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Nutritionists say many Americans don't buy enough of the food that's good for them, so Iowa State hopes to change what consumers want.

"We demand fuel efficient cars that protect us in a crash; there's no reason you shouldn't demand the same for food," said university researcher Murry Kaplan.

When Americans get hungry, they reach for fat and sugar, Kaplan said. "We know what's good for people, but they won't listen. Dietary advice has been a failure."

Iowa State soon will take bids for a $6.5 million Center for Designing Foods to Improve Nutrition, where researchers will investigate what drives people to buy the food they do and how to make nutritional products more tasty.

"The center will be the only one of its kind in the country to tie together the two ends of the food chain — food production and human consumption," said Beverly Crabtree, dean of the university's College of Family and Consumer Science.

"Researchers will start with what consumers want or need, whether it be low-fat meats or better-tasting soy products, and alter food production techniques to develop the new foods," she said.

Kaplan, acting coordinator of the center, said the country seems to be ignoring all the health advice of the last decade. Inundated by advertising with misleading or confusing advice, Americans seek foods that make them flabby, he said.

"We're fatter than we were 20 years ago," he said. "Forty percent of our calorie intake is fat, whereas it was 37 percent a few years ago. People have apparently gotten the idea that if they eat all the polyunsaturated fats they want, it's OK."

Kaplan said there is enormous misinformation about nutrition. For example, consumers are switching from beef to cheese, even though most cheese has far more fat than most beef cuts, he said.

"We've found that 50 percent of the people who suffered (heart attacks) don't follow dietary advice. Now that's a major insult to your system, and still they're not eating what they should," he said.

One reason is that eating patterns are functions of culture, not only nutrition, Kaplan said. And Americans don't like the taste or texture of nutritious foods, he said.

"Some low-fat meats don't grill very well on the barbecue. People perceive them as too dry," he said. "And some of them are awful. I wouldn't serve them to my guests, either.

"We recognize that people are not going to give up traditions and culture. Instead, we propose to change the nature of the food supply and to do it in the context of consumer traditions and culture."

Research will try to determine why people choose particular foods, and researchers will redesign familiar foods to make them more nutritious or nutritious foods to make them more appetizing.

Among other research projects will be studies to get rid of the "off taste" of soybeans and the use of enzymes to decrease the cholesterol content of foods.

More than 40 Iowa State scientists will perform the research. Most of the projects are set for completion in three years.

DEAR ABBY

Fiancee's way into family may be through kitchen

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son is engaged to a girl I'll call Lucy. Lucy has eaten dinner at our house every Sunday for the last seven months. I fix good meals and she eats heartily and acts like she enjoys the meal, but she has never once offered to help me with the dishes, or even take her plate into the kitchen.

Van Buren

My son says Lucy is a guest and she's not supposed to. I say he's wrong. What do you say? — A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

DEAR DIFFERENCE: Who's right and who's wrong is not nearly as important as developing a good relationship with your future daughter-in-law.

Try treating Lucy more like a member of the family than a guest. For openers, after dinner, say, "Let's clear the table — many hands make light work." Or, "How about giving me a hand with these dishes, Lucy? It's been a long day; besides I'd appreciate the company."

It will make Lucy feel useful and will do wonders for your relationship with your future daughter-in-law.

DEAR ABBY: Three months ago, I returned home to find our 29-year-old son lying on his bed, dead! Autopsy report: acute hemorrhagic pancreatitis due to acute alcohol intoxication. Where was the darling 6-year-old child we adopted — the son of alcoholic parents? We took him, raised him and loved him. In his teen-age years, he took his first beer, and from that day on, every dime he got went for alcohol.

Sober, he was charming, sensitive and caring. Drunk, he was mean, abusive and unreasonable. We had brought him home from a large city, hoping to help him after he had become a street person. We got him into a treatment center. He had counseling and went to AA. He used to ask me why I didn't go to Al-Anon, and I would say, "Because I am not the one with the problem, YOU are!" How I wish I had gone!

Now I have recriminations. Why did I lock him out of his home the night before he died? Was he ill and dying and looking for help? Had I not interfered in his life and left him in the city, would he be alive today? How I wish I had another chance!

Please, tell other parents of alcoholic children that alcoholics are ILL. Why isn't more done for alcoholism and finding a cure? I would bet it kills more young people than all the other diseases combined. Sign me ... GRIEF-STRICKEN

DEAR GRIEF-STRICKEN: Please don't beat yourself up with recriminations. You did what you thought was best.

I am printing your letter to let others know that Al-Anon is there for friends and relatives of alcoholics. Unless they've given Al-Anon a chance, they haven't done all they can for their alcoholic loved ones.

Packing tips can help make brown-bag lunches safer

NEW YORK (AP) — When packing the lunch bag or school box, remember to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold.

Hot foods must be stored at a temperature above 140 degrees F. Cold foods must be stored at a temperature less than 40 degrees F. Swift-Eckrich foods, makers of Butterball Slice 'N Serve meats and cold cuts, provide the following food safety suggestions:

For cold foods:

■ Pre-chill a vacuum thermos with cold water, cover and let stand five minutes. Empty the bottle, shake out the excess moisture and immediately fill with the cold food, such as milk or yogurt.

■ Include an ice pack or a gel freezer pack in your lunch bag. You can make your own ice pack by cleaning out a plastic butter or margarine tub, filling it with water and freezing it.

■ Carry chilled foods in an insulated lunch box or bag. Foods will keep much longer in the containers than in a paper bag.

■ Refrigerate your sandwich until it's time for lunch. Some ingredients such as meat, poultry, fish or eggs can spoil if left at room temperature for more than two hours.

■ Follow vacuum container instructions for appropriate temperatures of foods going into the container.

■ To preheat a vacuum container, fill with clean hot water and let stand a minute or two. Empty and immediately fill with hot food.

(For fresh sandwich ideas, send a postcard with your name, address and zip code to: Swift-Eckrich-Club Butterball, 4100 South Laflin, Chicago, Ill. 60609.)

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Here's a honey of a hot beverage for a fall get-together. Kids love the spicy, not-too-sweet taste. For a group of adults, add rum, if you wish.

If you like the flavor of honey-sweetened foods, look for the honey bear symbol on any honey-sweetened food, indicating that real honey was used in making the product.

HONEY-APPLE GROG

4 cups apple cider or apple juice
⅓ cup orange juice
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
1 2-inch stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon finely shredded orange peel
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ to ¾ cup light rum (optional)

In a large saucepan bring all ingredients except rum to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, for 5 minutes. If desired, stir in rum just before serving. Makes 9 to 10 servings.

Nutrition information per ½-cup serving: 109 cal., 0 g pro., 22 g carb., 3 g fat, 0 mg chol., 33 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 10 percent vit. C.

Plains' farmer hopes for castor bean comeback

By Kay Ledbetter

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Seedsman Jeane Browning wants to bring back an old crop he says can have a wide market today — castor beans.

After two years of negotiations, Browning says, he has multi-year contracts with castor oil users and processors he says will assure long-term price stability for producers.

"Our negotiations with the castor oil companies and the mill have been with producers in mind," Browning said. "Our objective has been to develop a stable and profitable crop for Texas farmers.

"We will limit our production contracts in 1991 to 35,000 to 40,000 (acres), but we expect that it will expand after 1991," he said. "We are excited about the potential."

Based on current prices for other crops, castor can show a net income advantage of $5 to $104 per acre on Texas farms, said Elbert Harp, whose consulting firm did economic studies on bringing castor bean production back to the area.

Production costs, except for seed and harvesting, are normally comparable with grain sorghum, Harp said. Irrigation and fertilizer costs are more than for cotton, he says, but less than for corn.

Castor oil derivatives are essential ingredients in hundreds of everyday products, Harp said, including lubricants, corrosion inhibitors and some plastics. And castor meal, produced as a byproduct of oil extraction, will be a high-quality protein feed for livestock, he said.

Browning said in 1991 Castor Oil Inc. will contract to pay 15 cents per pound based on clean seed, 50 percent oil content, 6 percent moisture and delivery to the processing plant in Plainview.

The plant, built in 1962 for castor oil, has been purchased by the Southern Cotton Oil Division of Archer Daniels Midland Co. and is being reactivated to process the oil and meal.

Browning said the mill will be operational by the time the 1991 crop is harvested next fall and is expected to employ 25 to 30 people.

Harp said research has eliminated some of earlier drawbacks to castor production.

For instance, he said, Texas A&M University researchers have developed a system to remove 99 percent of the allergens that were a serious problem in handling castor meal in the past.

Browning's Castor Oil Inc. will produce a de-allergenized, detoxified castor meal that will be 35 to 60 percent protein, depending on whether the hulls are removed, Harp said.

Browning Seed Inc. of Plainview also has launched a major research and development program to make improved hybrid varieties available to farmers.

Revival of U.S.-Mexico trade may mean Customs' changes

EL PASO (AP) — Expanded and modernized customs facilities and more inspectors on the Southwestern border will be key to handling increased trade between the United States and Mexico, the head of the U.S. Customs Service said Tuesday.

U.S. Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett outlined for members of the El Paso Foreign Trade Association the initiatives planned by the Customs Service to respond to the push for a U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement.

She announced that Customs will add 400 new inspectors to the Southwestern border. Texas would get about 200 of those inspectors, with at least 50 and possibly as many as 116 going to El Paso.

"We, the U.S. Customs Service were treated very, very well in this budget," she said. "In fact our budget this year is going to be $1.1 billion. It's $700 million more than what I originally presented."

Ms. Hallett's visit was her first to El Paso and included a tour of the border stations and a helicopter tour of the area.

Judy Turner, Customs spokeswoman, said Ms. Hallett has met with many trade groups in an attempt to reassure them that Customs has not abandoned its role in trade for one in drug interdiction.

"We have something else important going on here as well and that is my efforts to balance ... both enforcement and commercial operations because I believe that ... we must do as much as we can to facilitate trade while at the same time continue to emphasize our high priority on enforcement," Ms. Hallett said.

The Customs Service is testing a program in Canada to establish a fast lane at ports of entry. Regular cross border commuters would be allowed to registers with customs, which would allow them to cross the border without stopping for inspection or checks.

"If it works in Canada, it should work in Mexico as well," she said.

Part of the modernization of the Customs Service will include updating laws governing the agency that is part of the U.S. Treasury, she said.

"Our laws that govern the Customs Service today are 197 years old," Ms. Hallett said. "No one should have to operate under laws that are that old and that archaic. In fact, one of the provisions says that every captain of every ship must still report and document how many cannons he has on board his ship."

STATE IN BRIEF

Angry workers protest arrests

EL PASO (AP) — Wearing bandanas over their faces, garment workers marched in front of the county courthouse Tuesday to protest the pretrial hearing of six women who were arrested when they chained themselves to sewing machines.

The workers said they decided to mask their faces after a garment worker who has been active in protests was beaten up last week at a factory where she worked.

"They bit her in the face and took some scissors to her lip," said Cecilia Rodriguez, director of La Mujer Obrera, an advocacy group for garment workers.

Ms. Rodriguez said a supervisor watched while the fight took place.

"It hadn't occurred to her (the victim) that the beating was because of her association with us until the supervisor said, 'You can complain to your (expletive) La Mujer Obrera,'" Ms. Rodriguez said.

Members of La Mujer Obrera, or The Working Woman, have staged numerous protests this year to draw attention to working conditions for El Paso garment workers.

The group said it has complaints from 91 workers who claim they were not paid for work they have done for garment factory owners, contractors and subcontractors.

DALLAS (AP) — A lawyer was removed Tuesday as executor of Jack Ruby's estate, which consists mainly of the gun the Dallas nightclub owner used to kill Lee Harvey Oswald in 1963.

A six-person jury ruled Ruby's former attorney, Jules Mayer, grossly mismanaged Ruby's estate in the years since Ruby's death in 1967.

Earl Ruby brought he civil lawsuit and has asked that he be named executor of his brother's estate. The case before Dallas County Probate Judge Robert E. Price was expected to end the 23 years of legal wrangling between Ruby's heirs and Mayer.

State law requires that Price appoint a new executor if he upholds Tuesday's jury ruling. No timetable for that action has been set.

The .38-caliber Colt Cobra that Jack Ruby used to kill the accused assassin of President Kennedy is by far the most valuable asset of the estate and is said to be worth more than $125,000 on the collectors' market.

Whatever its value, Mayer has said that money from sale of the gun should go to pay off Ruby's debts. He says they include the $65,000 it has cost him to handle the estate, including the expense of fighting Earl Ruby's lawsuits.

Two judges disciplined

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Commission on Judicial Conduct publicly reprimanded a Cameron County judge and a Lubbock County judge arrested in separate incidents of alleged drunken driving.

Cameron County Court-at-Law Judge A.G. Betancourt was arrested on Dec. 16, 1988, the report said. The commission criticized Betancourt for refusing to take a breathilizer test until his lawyer was present, despite being informed by a Texas Department of Public Safety officer that state law did not give him that right.

The commission also criticized Betancourt for destroying the commission's first letter of inquiry.

In the Lubbock case, Judge William Ross, justice of the peace, precinct 1, place 2, was arrested Jan. 4, the report said. Ross refused to take an intoxilizer test and later was charged with driving while intoxicated. The charge still is pending, the report said.

EDINBURG (AP) — Twelve students suffered minor injures in a school bus accident Tuesday near this South Texas city, the Department of Public Safety said.

The bus was carrying students home from the private Valley Christian School in Mission when it reportedly struck another vehicle, said a McAllen DPS dispatcher, who asked not to be identified.

A total of 16 kids were on board, the dispatcher said.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
