FERC grants pipeline hearing

■ The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission says that the scope of the hearing should be limited solely to the market for the proposed project and rates for the proposed service.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), bowed to oil industry pressure Wednesday, voting three to one in a special meeting to allow an expedited hearing before an administrative law judge to determine the merits of the proposed Iroquois Gas Pipeline.

In voting for the hearing, the commissioners specified that the scope of the hearing should be limited solely to the market for the proposed project and rates for proposed service.

The lone dissenting vote came from Commissioner Betsy Moller.

On the issue of rates, the scope of the hearing is to be limited to issues of competitiveness in the following areas: load factors, appropriateness of the Modified Fixed-Variable rate design and rate of return and capital structure.

"It looks like we won on this one," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. Members of the oil industry had pushed hard for a full hearing, saying the proposed 364-mile pipeline project, which is subsidized by the Canadian government, would create an "unlevel playing field" by giving natural gas from Canada a 40 cent advantage over natural gas producers in the U.S.

Last week, more than 30 gas producers from the Permian Basin signed a letter protesting the pipeline proposal and sent it to FERC requesting the hearing.

"We have never opposed Canadian gas coming into the U.S. market," said Spannaus. "We only oppose the unfair rate structure."

He was surprised that FERC had reversed its position. "I thought our position was dead in the water," he said.

FERC ruled in May to approve certification for the construction of the Canadian Iroquois Pipeline that would run across upstate New York, through western Connecticut to Long Island.

Spannaus noted that in May FERC told concerned oil groups that only a small amount of gas from Canada would be shipped in the pipeline and would pose no competitive problem. He added, however, that the

Safer sex

BASTROP (AP) — Why does the endangered Houston toad cross the road?

For making whoopee.

The 2- to 3-inch toads have been making the risky trip across Texas 21 for years, and many have been flattened en route.

The state highway department said Wednesday it has a plan to get the toads to cross under the four-lane highway, not over it.

For humans, the proposal is part of a roadway safety project. For toads, it's safer sex.

On a 5½-mile stretch of Route 21 just east of Austin, state highway officials want to either build a series of tunnels or modify four drainage lines for the amphibians, which cross back and forth across the road looking for rain-swollen ponds where they breed.

The toad was designated a federally endangered species in 1965. Several thousand of them live in Bastrop County, officials have estimated.

The toad proposals will be reviewed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, which is responsible for protecting endangered species.

Souter's views

Souter

Souter, whose nomination was formally submitted by President Bush on Wednesday, said nothing publicly to hint at his opinions on such issues as abortion and affirmative action as he visited senators.

True chief

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Police Chief Elizabeth M. Watson has been asked to be a guest on "To Tell the Truth," the classic game show of the 1950s that is being revived this fall on NBC.

Mrs. Watson's staff confirmed the city's first female police chief is talking with the show's producers about appearing, but they said nothing is settled yet. Mrs. Watson is said to be delighted at the offer.

Like its predecessor, the new show will feature a panel of four celebrities and three guests claiming to be the same person. The panelists must determine who is telling the truth.

Mrs. Watson is pregnant.

"Can't you just see the panelists' faces, when the pregnant woman stands up," said a representative of Mark Goodson Productions.

More than 2,500 gallons of gasoline burned out of control after a Wednesday explosion here at the Rasure Oil Co. in south Midland. The blaze destroyed a tractor-trailer truck among other equipment.

Oil company employees 'lucky to be alive' after explosion

Gary Fitzpatrick said he gave little thought to the high-pitched whine coming from the diesel engine of a tractor-trailer rig unloading gasoline into a storage tank outside his south Midland office.

But Fitzpatrick said he knew trouble was brewing after he casually glanced out the window and saw flames shooting from the truck's exhaust pipes.

Lon Dominguez, assistant fire marshal with the Midland Fire Department, said Fitzpatrick and four other Rasure Oil Co. employees are lucky to be alive after Wednesday's explosion. No one was injured in the 3:40 p.m. accident at the 903 Advance Ave. business just south of Industrial Avenue, Dominguez said.

The blaze erupted after the truck's air intake valve began sucking gasoline fumes emitted from a release

OPEC wants to raise price of crude oil

■ Oil ministers favor raising price to at least $20 a barrel.

Associated Press

GENEVA — OPEC ministers began preliminary talks Wednesday aimed at raising the price of crude oil worldwide and soothing Iraqi anger over oil cheaters.

The ministers, who start formal meetings today, appeared willing to bring the price per barrel to at least $20. The current price is $18.

Cash-hungry Iraq wants an increase to $25, and it has accused Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates of pushing down oil prices by exceeding their OPEC production quotas.

Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein, threatened last week to use military force against cheaters, and diplomats and news reports said he had massed thousands of soldiers along the Kuwaiti border. Iraq has denied the reports.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is under pressure to try to defuse the tensions at its mid-year conference.

The U.A.E.'s oil minister, Mana Saeed Otaiba, said his country was willing to restrain its output in a new production and pricing accord aimed at increasing the 3-year-old target price of $18 a barrel.

"We will raise the reference price," Saudi Arabia's influential oil minister, Hisham Nazer, said after the cartel held preliminary discussions Wednesday evening. He gave no figure.

But Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh said the ministers were in favor of lifting the cartel's target to at least $20 a barrel.

It was not known if this would satisfy Iraq, which claims to have lost $14 billion in oil revenues oves the past year because of depressed prices caused by an oil glut.

The ministers would have to formally approve any price increase at the formal conference.

But such a decision would not immediately raise world oil prices unless the cartel also cut production enough to dry up the glut on the market.

If oil prices were to rise, "it would be reflected at the consumer level over time," said Paul Mlotok, head of energy research at the Morgan Stanley investment firm in New York. "It's not necessarily instant."

Witnesess testify Midland officer held defendant down

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Witnesses testifying Wednesday in the aggravated assault trial of H.L. Mitchell said a uniformed police officer held the 51-year-old defendant down with shocking brutality, but they were unaware of events leading to the confrontation.

Mitchell, owner of Red Snapper Reamers, a drilling tool manufacturing concern at 2700 W. Francis, suffered two gunshot wounds in an Aug. 6, 1988, altercation with a Midland police officer.

Det. Brian Bogart said that before firing he saw Mitchell display a 38-caliber revolver.

One of Bogart's shots grazed Mitchell in the right shoulder; the other passed through the man's upper right arm, pierced his chest cavity and lodged behind his left nipple.

Mitchell later was charged with aggravated assault on a police officer and two lesser felonies stemming from the events, which occurred just after midnight outside Bojangles, a lounge located at 3709 W. Wall Ave.

State District Judge Pat Baskin moved the trial to Austin on a motion from defense attorney Tom Morgan. District Attorney Al Schorre said he did not contest the change of venue.

Following the shooting, the wounded Mitchell, driving a pickup, led law officers on a chase that ended in the parking lot of Peerless Tyre Co., 2804 W. Wall Ave.

Witnesses Wednesday said they had followed the "cop cars" and parked across from the tire store, watching events without the lawmen's knowledge.

They said an unidentified uniformed officer first held Mitchell's unhurt arm tightly behind him, using a knee to hold his torso down and a free hand to push his face toward the pavement. Another officer, this one in plain clothes, trained a gun on the defendent.

"For some reason, they got up from him, and he raised his hand up as if for help," Joe Williams, 25, formerly of Midland and now living in the Waco area, told the six-man, six-woman jury.

The officer then forced Mitchell's wounded arm behind his back, held him to the ground with his knee and swore at him, telling him that if he moved a muscle, he would "blow his ... brains out."

Recalled Williams' friend, Gary Thompson, 31, and another on-looker, "His right arm came up, and that's when I saw blood all over."

Violent summer weather including heavy thunderstorms and tornadoes hit problems in Florida, Arizona, Texas, Nebraska and Minnesota.

Three tornadoes were reported at New Port Richey, Fla., but there were no reports of injuries or serious damage from the storms.

Thunderstorms continued Wednesday in the Southwest, with locally heavy rain causing some floods.

Flooding was forecast for the Santa Cruz River north of Tucson, Ariz., and, a flood warning was posted until Thursday along the Rio Grande River from Presidio, Texas, through the Big Bend National Park.

The Rio Grande River at Castolon, Texas, was 2½ feet above flood stage at 11 a.m. Wednesday, and rising.

Rainfall from morning thunderstorms caused flooding at Pipestone, Minn., where storms also brought strong, gusty winds and small hail.

Hail an inch in diameter also fell at Scribner, Neb. during the early morning.

Rain and thunderstorms continued into Wednesday afternoon from eastern Georgia and Florida though South Carolina, and across eastern New England. Charleston, S.C., received 1¼ inch of rain in a half an hour.

SSC costs could reach $8.6 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some physicists estimate the cost of the superconducting super collider could jump to $8.6 billion, but a Department of Energy official Wednesday said he has confidence in a contractor's lower appraisal.

Four groups, including the physicists and the contractor, are finishing studies that will yield a final, "hard" estimate of the collider's cost next month, Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore said.

Since the collider's redesign last fall, the DOE and Congress have used $8 billion as its estimated cost until a hard figure could be determined.

Preliminary versions of three of the studies are complete, Moore said. The contractor's draft places the cost at $7.8 billion, a group within the DOE says $8.3 billion and the physicists say $8.6 billion.

Moore said the three estimates will be reconciled by Aug. 17 with a fourth study, being made by experts under DOE contract but acting independently.

A congressional skeptic warned that a final figure above $8 billion could mean political trouble for the giant atom smasher, to be built near Waxahachie, Texas, 30 miles south of Dallas.

"As I said long ago, it's like a giant poker game and we've only seen the ante money," said Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y.

Boehlert said the differences in the estimates are not trivial and that he's becoming "more skeptical with each passing day."

Two Texas congressmen said the prospect of a slightly higher cost wasn't surprising.

"If they'd come out and said $20 billion, that would have really been a setback," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes the collider.

"Nothing is certain except the benefits when (the collider) is finished," said Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall.

Hall and Boehlert are members of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee.

The House in May capped federal funding for the collider at $5 billion for the next five years. Texas has pledged $1 billion. The rest is expected to come from foreign investors and other sources.

Moore said the DOE will likely accept the contractor's estimate, now the lowest.

TRIAL: Witnesses say they saw altercation

(From 1A)

Mitchell has filed suit in Midland federal court asking for $10 million in damages in connection with the abduction.

Williams, Thompson and several family members said they were heading to a restaurant after an evening of bowling when police and sheriff's vehicles overtook their car in a rush to aid Bogart.

With the two men were Thompson's wife, Rhonda, and niece, Ladonna, both of whom testified to the same series of events while jurors stole glances at Mitchell, who reacted without emotion.

Mrs. Thompson said she could not explain to her daughter, who also was in the party, why the officers were hurting Mitchell.

She said the officer kicked Mitchell, but none of the other witnesses saw the action. "That just stood out to me," Mrs. Thompson said. "Why did they do that? To me it made no sense."

They said that after about 15 minutes Williams left to ask officers what was wrong. Mrs. Thompson said that at that point, about 20 police and sheriff's deputies were at the scene, which Ladonna Thompson said was well-lit.

Williams said the group left after a policeman who was directing traffic told him to "get in your ... car and get the hell out of here, and do it now."

Schorre asked why they had not notified police or the district attorney's office of what they saw and heard. Gary Thompson said that law officers "were there and they knew what happened."

"So why should I report it to police when they were already on the scene?" he asked.

None of the witnesses reported seeing a pistol near Mitchell, although the first sheriff's deputy to arrive, Scott McKnight, testified earlier he took such a weapon away from Mitchell.

Other contradictory testimony came Wednesday from James Burton, who said he is an employee of J&B Services and testified he watched events in Bojangles' parking lot from his pickup and followed Bogart and Mitchell in the chase.

He acknowledged under cross-examination from Schorre that he passed Bogart in one lane as he raced to catch up with Mitchell.

The district attorney earlier had referred to a "mad witness" who left his car and turned off Mitchell's ignition after the defendent stopped at one point in the chase.

Burton said he was that man. He said he didn't want Mitchell to "get hurt any more than he already was." He said he told Mitchell, " 'You shouldn't run from the police.' "

In testimony earlier this week, Bogart said he had trained his gun on Mitchell from several feet away as the defendant slowly edged his pickup out of Bojangles parking lot.

But Burton Wednesday said Bogart was leaning inside Mitchell's open window and followed the car out of the lot on foot.

"Man reaches in with his pistol, and I hear two shots: pow, pow," Burton told the jury.

Other testimony Wednesday came from a Mitchell business associate, Jim Morgan, who said he met the defendent coming out of the My Place lounge in the Rodeway Inn at Midkiff and Wall streets.

He said the two went to his place of business, where they had no more than two drinks to celebrate a new customer. They went to Bojangles later that night and ordered one round of drinks, he said, but they left before finishing because the bar was too crowded.

Morgan said he left immediately and did not see Mitchell until after the altercation with Bogart.

OPEC: Ministers may raise price to $20

(From 1A)

Every dollar decline — or rise — in the price of a barrel of oil amounts to about a five-cent change in gasoline prices at the pump.

Crude prices tumbled sharply in the spring, a decline blamed mostly on overproduction by Kuwait and the U.A.E.

The average price as monitored by the cartel reached $20.46 a barrel in early January but plunged to $13.64 less than six months later. It bounced back to $16.25 last week.

To try to lift prices more, the ministers were expected to agree to a proposal worked out by Saudi Arabia and other gulf producers to limit total production to about 22.5 million barrels a day in the coming months.

This would require the cartel to slice output. A confidential OPEC report, according to sources, estimated the group's supply at 23.5 million barrels a day in the April-June quarter of the year.

OPEC Secretary-General Subroto said demand for the cartel's oil was expected to be 21.8 million barrels a day in the third quarter, rising to 24.4 million barrels in the last three months of the year.

Under the proposal, Kuwait and the U.A.E. would hold output to 1.5 million barrels a day each.

Kuwait's quota now is at that level, but the U.A.E.'s cap is 1.1 million barrels a day. Each has been pumping as many as 2 million barrels a day.

Under the proposed arrangement, only the U.A.E. would see its output cap go up; all others would remain at current levels.

Iraq and Kuwait are expected to meet in Saudi Arabia this weekend in an effort to resolve their dispute, which involves oil as well as land.

Saddam accused Kuwait last week of stealing $2.4 billion worth of oil from a field that includes land both sides claim. Shortly afterward, diplomats said travelers reported an Iraqi military buildup along the Kuwait-Iraq border.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt met with Saddam on Tuesday, however, and told reporters in Cairo that the Iraqi leader denied sending any new troops to the border.

Diplomatic sources said Saddam had promised not to use force against Kuwait if it agreed to pay compensation for the alleged oil theft, and wrote off loans it made to Iraq during the Iran-Iraq war.

The other OPEC members besides Iraq, Kuwait and the U.A.E. are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, and Venezuela.

FERC: Gas pipeline hearing will be held

industry is fearful the Iroquois project would set a precedent for future projects.

The plan by the Iroquois Gas Transmission System, a consortium of 13 utilities in Canada and the United States, would supply the natural gas equivalent to 30 million barrels of oil per year to Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey — enough gas to meet the annual energy needs of 1.5 million homes.

"In the long run, U.S. gas demand may be so great as not to pose any competition problem, but for the immediate term a 40-cent advantage by Canadian gas could depress U.S. gas prices," said Spannaus. He said that current gas prices are around $1.80 and by the time that price was lowered 40 cents and impacted by compression and transporation charges it would leave little profit for the producer.

In a draft order issued by FERC, the commissioners said they did not believe a trial hearing was required, but they were acting in the interest of "prudent public policy to insure a full hearing."

The commissioners went on to explain that the Iroquois application had been "one of the most visible and controversial applications in the history of FERC, and that it had not received so much public input since the proceedings certificating the Alaska Natural Gas Transportation System.

The commission has asked that the chief administrative law judge appoint an administrative law judge to conduct the expedited hearing and submit his findings of fact to the FERC Commissioners within 45 days of the issuance of the order. Parties will then have 15 days following issuance of the findings of fact to file initial briefs. The merits of the Iroquois pipeline will be considered by FERC no later than Nov. 28.

FIRE: Tractor-trailer, gasoline consumed in blaze

valve on a nearby gasoline storage tank, he said. The resulting chain reaction destroyed the truck and ignited more than 2,500 gallons of gasoline, he said.

As firefighters struggled to contain the inferno, flames shot more than 60 feet into the air through billowing clouds of thick black smoke which could be seen for miles. Eight firefighting units responded to the blaze, Dominguez said.

The fire came close to setting off three 2,000-gallon storage tanks full of gasoline and a nearby truck with an 8,000-gallon cargo, he said. The blaze also ignited a small grass fire which consumed about four acres before firefighters contained it, he said.

"The potential was great," Dominguez said. "Our guys put a good stop to it."

Frank Rasure, co-owner of Rasure Oil Co., said the fire caused more than $150,000 damage and destroyed the tractor-trailer rig, a storage tank and a nearby pickup truck.

Rasure said he and his employees ran for their lives after the truck's engine started racing out of control as it began sucking gasoline fumes.

"I haven't quit shaking yet," Rasure said. "I was in the office when I heard it pop. Everybody said run and I hauled. That engine sounded like a car down at the race track."

Flames shooting from the truck's exhaust ignited outside fumes, causing an explosion and fire which eventually melted through the truck's storage tank and set off about half of the 5,200-gallon cargo, he said.

Despite not having insurance on the damaged equipment, Rasure said he doesn't see the fire as a major setback to his business.

"If you spend 40 years in this business, you just don't throw up your hands and quit," he said. "It's something that happens every once in awhile. We've got spare equipment."

In Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram, it was incorrectly stated that the luncheon honoring City Manager Fred Poe was hosted by the Downtown Rotary Club.

It should have stated that the event was co-sponsored by the Downtown Rotary Club and the Midland West Rotary Club.

Yale has fun with 'Lassie at 50' exhibit

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Yale University's rare book library is taking advantage of the dog days of summer to honor one of literature's most famous canine characters, the cunning collie, Lassie.

The Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, a grand marble-and-granite building, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the publication of "Lassie Come-Home" with an exhibit drawn from the papers of author Eric Knight.

The "Lassie at 50" display includes the first printing of a shorter version of the story in The Saturday Evening Post; the original manuscript of the 1940 novel; Lassie fan mail; and photographs from the 1943 movie version of the book.

"In the summer we look for something a little lighter," said Christa Sammons, a library curator. "It surprises people. You come in here and expect to see old books and esoteric things and here's something everyone can identify with."

"What they like about it most is they recognize the dog," said Nancy LeRoy, the research assistant who prepared the exhibit.

Lassie came home to Yale in 1948, when Knight's widow, Jere Knight Lindter, donated a 10-foot-thick collection of her husband's papers to the university.

An Englishman who spent most of his life in the United States, Knight became a U.S. citizen in 1942, and was commissioned a captain in the Special Services Division. He was killed in 1943 when his transport plane crashed in Dutch Guiana (now Suriname).

Knight wrote six novels, a novella, a collection of short stories, newspaper and magazine articles, drama and movie reviews, and had an unsuccessful stint in the mid-1930s as a Hollywood scriptwriter. He also did cartoons and sketches, including a self-portrait featured in the Yale exhibit.

He first wrote about Lassie in a story that appeared Dec. 17, 1938, in The Saturday Evening Post. A marked-up copy of the magazine article that Knight transformed into a novel is prominently featured in the exhibit.

Impoverished Yorkshire, where Knight was raised by an uncle and aunt after his father died, was the setting for "Lassie Come-Home."

In the novel, Sam Carraclough, a poor Yorkshire miner, is forced to sell Lassie to the Duke of Rudley. But, forever faithful to Sam's son, Joe, Lassie flees Rudley's Scotland estate and travels by himself hundreds of miles back to Yorkshire.

Rudley pursues the dog, but when he finds the collie reunited with the Carracloughs, he lets them keep their dog.

In the television series that ran from 1954 to 1971, the setting and the storyline were changed.

Knight had insisted the book, which was translated into 13 languages, was written for both adults and children.

But schoolchildren were the novel's greatest fans, and hundreds wrote to him in appreciation. In the Yale exhibit, a sampling of the fan mail is displayed on a lower shelf so children can see them.

"I am not a crying type over books but in some parts of your book as I was reading along I found myself really tightening up and almost crying over some of Lassie's adventures," a girl from Kalamazoo, Mich., wrote to Knight in 1941.

Photographs include a still of Roddy McDowall, who played Joe in the original movie, lying on the crest of a hill with his arm draped over Pal — the male collie who played Lassie. There is also a shot of Knight with his collie, whose name was Toots.

Senate denounces Durenberger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate formally denounced Sen. Dave Durenberger on Wednesday for "knowingly and willfully" violating its rules and ordered him to make restitution of up to $123,000 for money he received improperly.

Durenberger, R-Minn., made no attempt to fight the vote to denounce him. Speaking in a quiet voice, he pledged to strive to become "first a better man and then a better senator."

The somber judgment marked the 24th time in 201 years that the Senate disciplined one of its own. The vote was 96-0, and after rendering their verdict many senators lined up to shake Durenberger's hand, some embracing him.

Durenberger and fellow Minnesota Republican Rudy Boschwitz voted present.

Durenberger was disciplined for violating Senate speaking fee and gift limits, misleading the Senate on real estate transactions involving his Minneapolis condominium and converting a campaign contribution to personal use.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, set the stage for the dramatic vote when he solemnly accused Durenberger, who watched from a front-row desk, of violating his public trust.

"The evidence of knowing and willful misconduct is clear and convincing and far more troubling than Sen. Durenberger's admitted negligence, lack of wisdom or asserted misplaced reliance on others," Heflin said.

The committee findings will be referred to the Federal Election Commission and Justice Department for further investigation, but there have been no allegations of criminal wrongdoing.

A tense calm hung over the crowded Senate gallery as tourists and other passers-by listened as senator after senator stood to praise Durenberger for his legislative accomplishments even as they were condemning him for his ethical lapses.

"No one in this chamber is approaching this vote lightly," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah. "The stones of denouncement are easier to cast than they are to retrieve."

Heflin, a former Alabama Supreme Court justice, said there was "convincing evidence that Sen. Durenberger knowingly and willfully engaged in a pattern of unethical misconduct which violated statutes, rules and standards of conduct."

The ethics committee said Durenberger should reimburse the Senate $29,050, plus interest, for improper reimbursements he received while staying in his Minneapolis condominium during official trips from 1983-89.

It also said he should pay $93,730, less state and federal taxes previously paid, for speaking fees he improperly kept during 1985 and 1986.

The fees were for 113 speeches Durenberger said were promotions for his books on health care and defense issues. The committee concluded they were normal honoraria speeches subject to Senate limits.

Durenberger, whose political fortunes have suffered at home, told the Senate just before Heflin spoke that he would not contest the committee's recommendation and earlier agreed to make restitution.

Durenberger sat at a desk at the front of the Senate chamber, listening to the proceedings with his hand on his chin.

"I ask your forgiveness," Durenberger told his colleagues after the vote. "For future challenges, I need your friendship."

He called the experience a "costly education."

"As for the future, I would ask only that I be judged ... not necessarily by what I say, but what I do," he said. "Financial restitution is only a beginning."

At a news conference after the Senate vote, Durenberger reiterated his pledge to become a better senator.

Durenberger, a 12-year Senate veteran, was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey. He does not face re-election until 1994.

The end of the Durenberger case will allow the ethics committee to concentrate on pending investigations of six senators, including five who received donations from savings and loan figure Charles Keating — and interceded with regulators on his behalf.

In a case involving another lawmaker, the House ethics committee has proposed that Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., be reprimanded for improperly using his office to help a male prostitute. Action on that recommendation is expected this week.

Several Republican colleagues said they believed Durenberger's judgment had been impaired by tragedies, problems he discussed during a June ethics committee hearing.

Shuttle in need of more repairs

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's last-ditch effort to fix Atlantis' hydrogen leak on the launch pad failed Wednesday, forcing the trouble-plagued agency to postpone the space shuttle's flight until later this year.

NASA engineers said the shuttle must be returned to the hangar for more work.

Shuttle Columbia, still under repairs because of a different sort of hydrogen leak which scrubbed a May launch, will be the next shuttle to fly in early September.

The developments came as a space agency team began probing the cause of NASA's highest-profile problem: the flawed mirror on the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope.

The seven-member team took testimony in secret Wednesday at Hughes-Danbury Optical Systems Inc., the maker of the mirror.

The flaw has halved the effectiveness of the telescope, which was put in orbit on an April shuttle mission.

NASA, facing mounting criticism in Congress because of the string of setbacks, got one piece of good news Wednesday: A thrice-delayed Atlas rocket launch finally went off without a flaw.

Veto of family leave bill sustained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday sustained President Bush's veto of a bill guaranteeing unpaid family and medical leave for American workers, keeping intact the president's perfect veto record but giving Democrats an issue for fall elections.

The House voted 232-195 to override Bush's veto, falling 53 votes short of the required two-thirds majority. Supporters lost five votes from the bill's original passage in May.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., pointing to polls that show a large majority of Americans support the idea of a family leave, said it will be a campaign issue this fall.

"We are not going to quit," she said.

But Republicans and some conservative Democrats defended Bush's veto, saying the bill would be costy to businesses and hurt workers by preventing employers from offering other types of benefits.

Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, praised Bush for his "courageous veto" and charged the bill would have imposed a "one-size-fits-all benefit" without regard to need.

Bush vetoed the measure last month after it passed the House with bipartisan support and was adopted in the Senate on a voice vote. It was Bush's 13th veto since taking office in January 1989. Congress has failed to override any.

The bill would have required employers — except those with fewer than 50 workers — to provide unpaid, job-protected leave of up to 12 weeks to workers who have new babies or family illness or other emergencies.

Employers would have been required to continue health insurance benefits for those on leave and restore returning employees to their previous jobs or equivalent positions.

Bush said he supported the concept but opposed the bill as imposing an onerous burden on employers.

Business groups had strongly opposed the measure and said they were confident of victory. More than 50 lobbyists from a coalition of business groups were on Capitol Hill Wednesday sporting buttons that said "Sustain the Veto."

Supporters argued the bill provided nothing more than a minimal right — not a benefit — that already is available in most other industrialized nations.

Thornburgh urges Senate not to pin down Souter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee David Souter paid courtesy calls on Senate leaders Wednesday while the Bush administration warned Democrats against trying to pin down his views on controversial cases when serious confirmation questioning begins.

Souter, whose nomination was formally submitted by President Bush on Wednesday, said nothing publicly to hint at his opinions on such issues as abortion and affirmative action as he visited senators.

His vote on the divided court could be decisive on those and other issues, and some Democrats — as well as abortion-rights and other interest groups — have said he should be closely questioned on them during the confirmation hearings expected to begin in September.

But Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, in an appearance at the National Press Club, cautioned senators about probing too deeply.

"To try to pin down any prospective appointee on a specific issue or a specific case would seem to me to verge on the improper and certainly be unwise," the attorney general said.

He expressed confidence that the nominee, who has been receiving extensive advice from the White House, would turn away such inquiries.

"I think I trust to Judge Souter's wisdom and experience to enable him to walk the line between giving the members of the Senate an appropriate road map to his judicial philosophy, politely declining to respond to questions that are case or issues-related," Thornburgh said.

While most senators agree it would be improper to ask Souter's opinions on specific cases, several have said they intended to pursue controversial issues more generally.

Tight-lipped on all matters of substance in public comments on Wednesday, Souter said merely, "I look forward to participating with the Senate of the United States in a constitutional process. That is a great privilege."

In his seven years of rulings as a New Hampshire judge and, for the past few months as a member of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, Souter has not confronted the major constitutional issues that have proved so divisive.

Potential critics scoured the record of the New Hampshire jurist but continued to find little to attack.

Souter himself shed little new light but did show a deadpan sense of humor as he spoke with senators and, occasionally, the press.

In response to a reporter's question, he said, "I must say, I never thought of myself as that obscure." He declined to answer any questions bordering on the substantive, even including why he wanted to be on the nation's highest court.

Visiting with key Senate Republicans in the office of Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., Souter good-naturedly played straight man for some political play acting.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, presented Souter with a gavel four times as each new wave of photographers entered the room. With each presentation, Thurmond added to his praise of the nominee.

"Judge Souter, you're a good man. You ought to be confirmed. I predict you will be and I'm now going to present you a gavel," Thurmond said at the last.

"I appreciate the repetition of your comments," Souter responded, smiling.

AP Laserphoto

In a bit of political play acting Wednesday, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., left, presented a gavel to Supreme Court nominee David Souter on Capitol Hill, where Souter met with various members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Amid the hubbub, one reporter asked Souter why he wanted to give up his peaceful life in New England for the Washington scene.

"I don't know that anyone wants to leave New Hampshire," he responded.

There was a pause.

"I did," quipped Dole, whose 1988 presidential campaign was derailed by Bush in that state's primary.

Souter said he was getting "a great deal" of advice from the White House.

Good advice?

"That I'll leave for the U.S. Senate."

From Dole's office, Souter went to the suite of Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, himself a former federal judge. The two men talked of their mutual admiration for retired Chief Judge Frank Coffin of the 1st Circuit, from whom Souter said he once received a letter of support.

"I would frame it, but that would be ostentatious," said the 50-year-old bachelor who, except for years away at college, has lived in the same farmhouse near Concord, N.H., since he was 11 years old.

"I really don't have any substantive feeling to express," he said. "I think the best news I have is the blood is circulating to the brain well enough now so that I'm beginning to have some feelings."

President Bush is pressing the Senate to act on his nominee before October, when the court begins its fall term. However, Senate Democratic leaders have been cautious about making any promises.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., turned a corner in the Capitol Wednesday and spied the mob of reporters waiting for Souter. Biden smiled and turned around rather than face more questions.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush lobbied privately for his nominee on Wednesday in a meeting on defense policy with Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga. Bush repeated his message from earlier this week that the Senate should not use a "litmus test" on any single issue in judging Souter, Fitzwater said.

They say there's safety in numbers.

Woman says she felt pressure from FBI to change Barry story

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Virgin Islands couple testified Wednesday that they had felt pressure from the FBI to change their stories and tell investigators they had seen Mayor Marion Barry use illegal drugs on a 1986 boat trip.

Albert Benjamin and his wife, Carmen, testified that they saw no drugs on the trip, although Benjamin said he did see Barry smoke a cigarette. He also testified he was unfamiliar with the smell of marijuana smoke.

Benjamin said he became suspicious when passengers on the boat made repeated trips below decks, but said he could not see what they were doing and "was not interested in trying to find out."

"I had suspicions that there was something out of the ordinary going on on that boat," Benjamin said. "I saw all of them going below decks quite repeatedly."

Other witnesses have testified that drugs were used below decks and that Barry took part in that activity.

Barry's defense attorneys called the couple to dispute the testimony of a prosecution witness who said the former Army sergeant and his wife could have seen Barry use drugs during the trip to the islands.

Benjamin said that in several interviews law enforcement officers "kind of kept driving home the point that I had to know, I had to see" drug use by Barry and others on the trip.

"I got a little tired and angry," Mrs. Benjamin said in describing her interrogation at FBI headquarters in Washington last fall. "I felt a little pressure."

On another subject concerning the boat trip, Benjamin told jurors at Barry's cocaine and perjury trial that he became angry when he saw Barry make sexual advances to Rasheeda Moore, the woman who later figured in Barry's January arrest and has been the prosecution's star witness.

"I was angry because I think adults should conduct themselves in an appropriate manner in public ... my wife was sitting there," Benjamin said. "I really didn't appreciate what I saw ... I felt that was very out of place."

When asked by Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts whether Barry had been "fondling" Moore, Benjamin answered, 'Yes, and she accepted it."

Mrs. Benjamin said she did not see Barry and Moore together atop the boat, but said she and her husband discussed it afterward.

"He was still quite angry," Mrs. Benjamin said.

Moore, who took part in the videotaped FBI sting operation that led to Barry's arrest, testified earlier in the trial that she and the mayor used drugs "over 100 times."

Charles Lewis has testified that he and Barry smoked marijuana on the boat trip that Benjamin testified about.

Benjamin said he agreed to go on the boat ride because of his long association with Lewis' family. "It was a spur of the moment thing," said Benjamin.

Earlier Wednesday, Barry attorney R. Kenneth Mundy raised questions about FBI involvement with cocaine-laden business cards alleged to have been found with Barry's belongings when the mayor was arrested at a Washington hotel.

Mundy showed the court that mixed in with the cards were two business cards of an FBI agent.

Frank Steele, a different FBI agent who seized the mayor's belongings when he was arrested, said he couldn't explain how the cards got there, but speculated they merely indicated who later conducted tests on Barry's cards.

Mundy also said that Steele's own notes from the arrest indicated he took possession of Barry's belongings at 8:41 p.m., while the videotape showed Steele gathering the business cards at 8:56.

Steele explained that he took Barry's suit jacket at 8:41 and the business cards at an unspecified later time.

All of the major witnesses against Barry testified that they had used cocaine.

NATION IN BRIEF

Skipper loses master license

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Coast Guard dismissed charges of drunkenness and misconduct against Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood on Wednesday, but suspended his license as a ship's master.

At an administrative hearing, Hazelwood pleaded no contest to two allegations stemming from the wreck of the tanker, which unleashed the nation's worst oil spill in Alaska's Prince William Sound.

The plea that resulted in a nine-month license suspension covered two allegations: that he violated Coast Guard policy by drinking liquor less than four hours before taking command of the Exxon Valdez, and that he improperly leaft the vessel's bridge while it was headed for jagged Bligh Reef.

The Coast Guard dismissed a charge that Hazelwood was intoxicated, with a blood alcohol level over 0.04 percent, the Coast Guard standard for operating a vessel. Also dismissed was a charge that he left an improperly licensed third mate in control of the ship.

The Coast Guard proceeding was administrative rather than criminal; the only penalty that could be imposed involved Hazelwood's license.

The 987-foot tanker's hull was ripped open when it plowed into the reef the night of March 24, 1989, spilling nearly 11 millions of Alaska crude into Prince William Sound in the nation's worst oil spill.

Indictments

Andrew Malone, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District, announces Wednesday a 60-count indictment against Eastern Airlines. The charges include falsifying aircraft maintenance records, log books and other aircraft-safety documents.

Panel OK's rights bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee on Wednesday approved a major civil rights bill to curb job discrimination and brushed aside Bush administration warnings that the legislation will mean hiring quotas.

"We did not bring forth a bill that will lead to quotas or any danger of quotas," Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., the bill's, sponsor said before the panel approved the measure, 24-12.

By wide margins committee Democrats beat back Republican-sponsored amendments designed to limit damages courts could award discrimination victims and tighten the rules governing fair-hiring lawsuits.

The bill, which tops the civil rights movement's legislative agenda, would effectively reverse five Supreme Court decisions last year.

The most controversial provision was designed to overcome a Supreme Court ruling that favors companies in certain discrimination lawsuits.

Negotiations continue

WASHINGTON (NYT) — White House and congressional negotiators worked separately to prepare deficit-cutting proposals Wednesday amid growing pessimism among many Democrats that an agreement on next year's federal budget could be reached any time soon.

The negotiators are aiming for a combination of spending cuts and tax increases that would reduce the deficit in that budget by $50 billion, to about $120 billion, not counting the cost of the savings and loan bailout.

They also hope to agree on steps that would produce a balanced budget by 1995, two years later than the target now set by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

But the proposals, which could be exchanged as early as Thursday, are expected to underscore sharp differences between Democrats and Republicans over how the spending cuts should be apportioned between military and domestic programs, and over the size and the nature of tax increases.

"I don't expect that any of these packages that will come out in the next few days will be the ending point," Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, the House majority leader, told reporters as he left a White House meeting with President Bush and other top congressional leaders.

DDT warning issued

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A chemical company warned former and current employees Wednesday that a study shows for the first time a possible direct link between pancreatic cancer and the insecticide DDT.

The study by the University of Michigan focused on 28 cases of pancreatic cancer among Rohm & Haas employees who worked at its Philadelphia plant from 1948 to 1971, when DDT and related chemicals were produced there.

Other researchers expressed caution at the preliminary results, saying too little was known to definitively draw a link between the chemical and pancreatic cancer, the fifth-leading cancer killer.

DDT is known to cause liver cancer at high doses in mice, but is not known to cause cancer in humans, said Albert Heier, a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency spokesman. The pesticide was banned in 1972 over concerns about its adverse effect on the environment and wildlife and its persistence in the food chain.

Rainy weather welcome change

Summer weather in West Texas often takes on a depressing uniformity — hot and dry days, occasionally punctuated by billowing clouds of dust blown from cultivated fields, and hot, dry nights when no breezes rustle the parched leaves on limp trees.

It's merely summer in West Texas and more often than not, every day brings blue skies with few — if any — clouds and searing temperatures. That isn't particularly bad, of course, unless the rainfall ceases altogether. When that happens, the sun and wind combine to bake the land.

It can prompt farmers and ranchers to start talking about the bad ol' days of the 1950's when the area was in the grip of one of the state's worst modern-day droughts. Worse, it can destroy hopes for crops and put the region's economy in a tailspin.

No doubt that's why the overcast skies in Midland and much of the rest of West Texas recently have been greeted with smiles and kind comments. For a week now drizzle or light rain has fallen on most days in Midland, although rainfall totals were still less than an inch as recorded by the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Other parts of West Texas have recorded as much as three inches of rainfall during this period — a refreshing change of pace from the hot and dry conditions experienced in June.

While rain is always appreciated in West Texas, it wasn't only the rain that has altered the attitudes of West Texans. Cooler than average temperatures also prevailed during the week — giving the area a needed break from the scorching hot thermometer readings recorded a couple of weeks ago.

Compromise answer to smoking problem

I believe banning smoking in all public places is a violation of constitutional rights. First, smokers have been picked on by being taxed more than other consumers. Now smokers are being attacked again. We are tired of being discriminated against and treated like second-class citizens. I know inconsiderate smokers are to blame for some of the mistreatment, but not all of us are inconsiderate.

There is an answer to this dilemma that would make everyone happy. I respect nonsmokers' rights not to have to breathe my smoke, but my rights should be respected also! Smokers and non-smokers have equal rights!

Most establishments have already set up smoking and non-smoking sections. I think it is fair to ban smoking in grocery, department and convenience stores because the area there is too small with poor ventilation and the time spent there too short — smokers can hold off lighting up for that short of a time.

All businesses should be able to decide individually whether they want to ban smoking altogether. At least there would be a choice — smokers could choose to ban an establishment that bans smoking. I am sure that several bars and restaurants will lose a large portion of their business if smoking is banned. Can't we come up with other solutions than persecuting the smoking section of society? Can't we stop fighting and start compromising?

No one can force smokers to quit — they have to want to quit. We don't need others' values forced on us, we don't need "Big Brother." This is a democratic society where we have the right to pursue our own happiness, the right to make our own decisions.

If the right to smoke in designated public areas is taken away, what other rights will follow? Freedom of speech? Freedom of religion? If we as a society are not careful , we will lose all the rights our forefathers fought for; we are already close to being a socialist country as it is. How much further are we going to let it go?

A compromise is the answer to respecting and preserving all citizens' rights.

Criticism of Gramm doesn't match facts

I have recently seen a letter or two in some regional newspapers criticizing U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm for: 1) Allegedly being soft on crime and drugs, and 2) spending too much time traveling across Texas.

Sen. Gramm has no equal in Washington for his tough line against crime in general, and drug dealers in particular. It is difficult to imagine that anyone could even question his stance on law enforcemant.

As for Sen. Gramm's trips across Texas, I am one Texas citizen who is grateful to see one of my legislators, out in the country, listening to what the people have to say. Although most statewide politicians rarely travel west of I-35, I know of at least four times that Sen. Gramm has visited Lamesa. This speaks highly of his desire to stay in touch with his constituents, and not isolate himself in the halls of Congress.

Today is Thursday, July 26, the 207th day of 1990. There are 158 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 26, 1947, President Truman signed the National Security Act, which created the Department of Defense, the National Security Council, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

On this date:

In 1788, New York became the 11th state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1856, playwright George Bernard Shaw was born in Dublin, Ireland.

In 1908, U.S. Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte issued an order creating an investigative agency within the Department of Justice that was a forerunner of the FBI.

Bill would limit racketeering laws

WASHINGTON — A bill breezing through the House Judiciary Committee would tone down federal racketeering laws, and its critics are wondering why some members of Congress are so quick to support it, especially since it might let savings and loan scoundrels off more easily.

Anderson

Entries in Oliver North's notebooks tracking the Iran-Contra scandal provide one reason that the bill might look even better for some members of Congress already predisposed to pass it.

If the teeth are taken out of the racketeering law, it could hamper one already shakey racketeering suit that has embarrassed some Iran-Contra players on Capitol Hill.

Journalists Tony Avirgan and Martha Honey, through the Christic Institute, a Washington public interest law group, filed the suit in 1986. The defendants include several major and minor players in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Not trusting the American criminal justice system to bring the players to account, Avirgan and Honey sued them personally under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, known as RICO. The suit alleges that the Iran-Contra supply operation amounted to organized crime involving drugs, guns and murder.

The claims revolve around a 1984 attempt to kill maverick Nicaraguan Contra leader Eden Pastora at a press conference in Nicaragua. A man posing as a journalist carried a bomb into the press conference. Pastora survived, but four people were killed and Avirgan and Honey were among the injured.

At the time, Pastora was an outspoken critic of the main Contra group and the Central Intelligence Agency had warned him to join those Contras.

The Avirgan and Honey lawsuit is based on the strong racketeering law that Congress is about to dilute. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., is a co-sponsor of the changes and big supporter of making them retroactive to cover suits already in the courts. He also stands to take some heat from the Avirgan and Honey lawsuit, which was dismissed once but is now in appeal.

North recorded in his notebooks that in 1986 McCollum and three other members of Congress were briefed by Robert McFarlane on the status of the Contras. They talked about a plan that included, "$25-$50 M. (million), third country support and CIA intel (intelligence)." The notes could indicate that McCollum was aware of North's supply operation to the Contras when U.S. aid to those rebels was illegal. McCollum now claims the meeting was about a "lobbying effort" to get Congress to restore aid to the Contras.

McCollum's top aid, Vaughn Forrest, has also been linked to the network that the Avirgan and Honey suit seeks to expose. In a deposition in that suit, one of North's couriers confirmed that Forrest knew John Hull, one of the defendants in the racketeering suit. Hull is an American who lived on a ranch in Costa Rica in the mid-1980s and used the airstrips on his ranch, near the Nicaraguan border, to supply the Contras.

On the night that Pastora was bombed, Forrest was with Hull at one of Hull's safe houses in Costa Rica. Hull has since been charged with murder in Costa Rica for his alleged role in the bombing. He now lives on a farm in Indiana while the United States and Costa Rica debate his extradition.

North's notes show that a U.S. official briefed him on Pastora's whereabouts four days before the bombing. The official was in touch with a group of Cuban exiles training with Hull to fight for the Contras. Costa Rican authorities now claim one of the Cubans was also behind the bombing.

Forrest isn't a defendant in the Avirgan and Honey lawsuit, but further exposure of his ties to the others would tarnish the reputation of his boss, McCollum.

Bush wants Souter to avoid abortion issue

WASHINGTON — The president who has now nominated the unknown Judge David H. Souter to the nation's highest court is the man who cavalierly put Dan Quayle a heartbeat from the nation's highest political office. So it is only prudent to insist that Souter bear the burden of proving that he is not a Quayle (recklessly miscast for Bush's political convenience.)

Will

The convenience is as obvious as Souter's qualifications are obscure.

Before the 1980 primaries, Bush said of the 1973 abortion ruling (Roe v. Wade): "I happen to think it was right." His political situation, and hence his convictions, soon changed: He said the 1973 ruling was so wrong that the Constitution should be amended to change it.

But public opinion has changed, so Republican convictions are changing. And at this awkward moment, Bush has had to nominate a justice.

Bush says he has not asked Souter what he thinks about Roe v. Wade, which means about the precedents that produced today's "privacy right" that produced Roe v. Wade. Bush either is not telling the truth or is telling a terrible truth about himself — that he is willing to buy, and asking the Senate to buy, a pig in a poke.

Many senators will be under excruciating pressure to oppose Souter if he does not say he finds a right to abortion in the Constitution's "privacy right" (a right that is not mentioned in the Constitution). Some senators, and the White House, want to avoid the subject.

The White House waffle is: Abortion is just one subject, not a litmus test. The real test is Souter's commitment not to legislate social preferences under the guise of construing the Constitution. But the most efficient way of ascertaining Souter's conception of, or aptitude for, the job is by asking what he thinks of the reasoning in Roe v. Wade.

It would be improper to ask Souter, "What are your views about abortion?" But it would be irresponsible not to ask, "What do you think of the constitutional reasoning that resulted in creation of a privacy right that includes a right to abortion?" It is as proper to ask a nominee's opinion of the reasoning behind Roe v. Wade as it would be to ask about the reasoning behind Brown vs. Board of Education.

No nominee should be asked about pending cases. However, any nominee should be required to reveal the caliber of his or her mind by discussing the reasoning in important past cases, including those concerning capital punishment. That subject illustrates the anti-constitutional jurisprudence of Justice Brennan.

Because Brennan opposed capital punishment, he declared it unconstitutional. The Constitution in several provisions accepts such punishment, so Brennan said that such punishment has lately become "cruel and unusual" because of America's "evolving standards of decency." But Brennan's supposedly empirical claim foundered on a fact: The public's notion of decency, expressed in polls and reflected in the laws state legislatures pass, favors capital punishment.

So Brennan argued that the Constitution defends human dignity, and justices can say what that requires, regardless of the original intention of constitutional language or today's democratic choices. Souter should be required to say what he thinks about Brennan's reasoning.

Souter should also be forced to be forthcoming on the subject of previous cases involving race-conscious government policies. Brennan wrote one of the crucial opinions affirming the constitutionality of today's racial spoils system. He helped transform the 1964 Civil Rights Act into a law creating special entitlements for government-approved minorities.

The act declares it unlawful for an employer to hire or fire on the basis of race. Brennan said Congress wanted to remove employment barriers to blacks, and race-based hiring is one way to do that, so Congress could not have meant quite what it said. Souter should say what he thinks of Brennan's reasoning.

U.S. politics may be hard for Soviets to grasp

It isn't easy being a Soviet politician anymore. In the old days you worked your way up through the Communist Party, got elected to office, and before you knew it you were in fat city in Lenin Square.

But now that a multiparty system seems to be replacing communism, those who devoted themselves to the hammer and sickle are faced with opposition from the likes of Boris Yeltsin and his left-wing counter-revolutionary friends.

Buchwald

To prepare for the future, the Communist Party has hired an American political consultant to advise them on how to win a democratic election in the Soviet Union.

The party die-hards gathered at the dacha of First Communist Secretary Vladimir Bulkasky for a weekend retreat. The U.S. consultant, Richard Thompson, addressed the group. "I've taken a survey of Soviet voters, and 85 percent say they do not understand the difference between the radicals, the progressives and the conservatives. Your job is to help them stay confused."

"Which ones are we?" Chicken Kiev wanted to know.

"You are the party of the Supreme little guy," replied Thompson. "You have to get your story over to the voter that the opposition are a bunch of nerds without any respect for God and Gorbachev."

"God and Gorbachev?" Rude Shlepper said. "The Communist Party doesn't believe in God."

Thompson explained, "Not until now. You have to steal God as a symbol before one of the other parties in the Soviet Union does. Now, among the most important things a political party does is perform dirty tricks. This is where you can learn from American politics. You must accuse the other side of things they wouldn't dream of doing. Who is your most famous prisoner?"

"Kalangin the Degenerate. He was arrested for opening his own discount shopping mall in Yalta last year and putting the Steel Workers Cooperative Bazaar out of business."

"Good. Now your Communist Party candidate must announce that the opposition candidate gave Kalangin the Degenerate a weekend furlough at which time he raped three women and opened two more malls and a five-star Laundromat."

"Will it be true?" Chicken Kiev asked.

Thompson admitted, "It doesn't matter if it's true or not. In America, political parties deny everything, at least until the election is over."

Boris Borscht said, "With the help of the KGB, our politics used to be so much cleaner."

"The reason for that," Thompson explained, "is that you only had one party. Now that you have several, you can no longer be Mr. Good Comrade."

"It's true," agreed Ivan. "We were the good guys. That's the main advantage of having only one party — you don't have to resort to dirty tricks to win. People voted for you either because they believed in what you stood for or they were afraid of being sent to Siberia. Now we have to get our hands dirty and cheat and lie and steal, which no Communist likes to do."

Thompson went on, "This is the part you're not going to like. In a multiparty system of government, you must raise money. If you don't have a war chest, you're dead Reds."

"How do we raise money?" Boris asked.

"You tell everyone that if they donate to the PAC Communist Party campaign they will receive favors that no other government official will give them, including complete deregulation of the savings and loan industry."

"That's bribery," protested Chicken Kiev.

Thompson replied, "No, it isn't. In a democratic society we have many private special interest groups, and if they couldn't give money to their political parties, all the crooks would take over."

Body buried; Skull kept as murder trial evidence

TYLER (AP) — A human skull will remain in Texas as evidence in a murder trial despite pleas from the victim's family to return it to Massachusetts where it can be buried with the rest of the body.

Kenneth Berryman's body was found in a wooded area of Smith County, Texas, on March 15 with a bullet wound to the head.

His body, minus the head, was shipped to Plymouth County, Mass., where the family buried him. They later found out about his head being kept in Texas as evidence.

A preliminary trial date of Oct. 18 was set for William Eugene Brumbelow, 47, who is accused of killing Berryman, 52.

Smith County District Attorney Jack Skeen Jr. said Berryman's skull will be returned to Massachusetts after Brumbelow's trial.

Regina Esposito, the victim's daughter, and George Berryman, the victim's brother, who live in Plymouth County, Mass., told the Tyler Morning Telegraph they were outraged that the skull was being kept in Texas.

"We're very upset," George Berryman said. "It's ghastly, ghostly, anti-everything that I can think of that they should do such a thing. Period. Even if they had notified us. It is disgusting."

Smith County Sheriff's Lt. Greg Wilson said the skull is being kept in the department's evidence room.

Skeen said tests performed at the forensic lab after an autopsy make it necessary for authorities to keep the skull.

Brother reports new information in Joost deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — New leads have surfaced from a newspaper advertisement seeking information on the deaths of former Texas Racing Commission executive David Joost and his family, says the man who bought the ad.

"We had about 20 calls this morning alone," Daniel Joost, brother of the dead official, said Tuesday.

"We are going to check a lot of those tips out," Joost said, but he would not elaborate on what the tips were.

David Joost, his wife Susan, and their children Eric and Lauren, were found dead in their home near Buda on March 5. Authorities have ruled the case a triple murder-suicide.

But Daniel Joost and other family members believe David Joost was murdered and that the killers made it appear to be a murder-suicide.

The family members believe David Joost and his family were killed because of something Joost had learned at the Racing Commission.

District attorney to seek indictment of Polk sheriff

AUSTIN (AP) — Polk County's criminal district attorney said he'll ask a grand jury to indict Sheriff Leamon Cain on two counts of official misconduct because Cain's children were promoted in the sheriff's office.

Criminal District Attorney Terry Brown discussed his plans after receiving an opinion he requested from Attorney General Jim Mattox.

In the opinion, released Wednesday, Mattox said, "A sheriff may not promote his son and daughter even though they had sufficient prior continuous service to retain their jobs in the sheriff's office after their father became sheriff."

Cain took office in January 1989, Brown said. Cain's son and daughter already worked for the sheriff's office.

In 1989, Cain's son was promoted from deputy sheriff to sergeant and his daughter from jailer to deputy sheriff, Brown said. Both promotions carried salary increases.

Brown said he thinks the promotions violate the nepotism law. He said he probably would present the case to the grand jury next month.

Official misconduct is a misdemeanor, with a possible fine of $100 to $1,000. A conviction also would require Cain's removal from office, Brown said.

Brown said Mattox sent a letter with the opinion saying he had questions about whether the nepotism law is constitutional.

After retirement cowboy's gear only a prop

By Donald L. Diehl

MEDFORD, Okla. (AP) — What happens to rodeo cowboys after they quit riding?

Well, if they are like Luke Hack they find a place they can call home and can still stay in touch with what's going on in the rodeo world.

Hack drifted into town 12 years ago, liked it and stayed on.

Today, he lives in an apartment above the row of businesses downtown that houses Kennedy Drug Store.

It is at the drugstore, on a stool at an old-time soda fountain, he can be found every day ready with a friendly smile and a chat about days gone by days he spent as a rodeo cowboy and traveling the rodeo circuit from Woodward to Cheyenne, Wyo.

"You travel a lot when you're in rodeo," Hack said. "You pass through a lot of towns ... drifting from one rodeo to the next."

He said he has been to all the big cities. "I've live in some of them."

Hack, 83, was born on a cattle ranch in Colorado. His parents came from England and invested in the cattle industry.

But everything didn't go as smooth in the new land as his parents thought it would, Hack said.

Hack struck out on his own for a life in rodeo while still a teen-ager, holding various jobs in the interims and doing a stint in the U.S. Air Force.

When he went back to Colorado after leaving the service he completed night courses at The University of Denver and later worked for a drugstore and Western Auto store in the area.

But most times, he would be found rodeoing, calf roping and bull riding.

Hack doesn't rodeo any more. That ended with a injury from the horn of a bull in South Dakota several years back.

"Rodeoing is rough," he said. "It's like a lot of other sports, you can get hurt."

Although his performing days are behind him, Hack keeps up with rodeo. He is making plans for an annual trip to events in Cheyenne this fall.

But for now, he's at home in Medford.

It's better not to keep switching film

By John Dingman
Associated Press

"New is better."

That's a promise that leads many an amateur photographer astray, whether he is new at the game or has been around long enough to border on the ranks of the pros.

When a new film is introduced, some amateurs can't wait to use it, firmly believing that it will solve all their photography problems. Likewise, when a manufacturer comes out with a new camera, they are at the photo dealer in a flash to trade up for it.

And, while it is true that photography has made great strides in recent years, "new" in photography is a little like the "new" we encounter on cereal boxes — it's not necessarily the best for everyone.

Beginning photographers are far better off concentrating on one camera and one film. Learn what your camera can do, and learn the ins and outs of that one film before branching out.

It's true that one film is not the best for all picture situations: Under bright conditions, slow-speed film will provide the highest-quality pictures, and under low-light conditions, you do need the high-speed ISO 1600 films to get good quality easily.

But, if you keep switching films, you'll never learn just how good one particular film can be. Only after you have mastered one film should you start experimenting with some of the others.

For example, there are fine films in the ISO 400 class that can handle most of your pictures in more than acceptable fashion. This is true in both black-and-white and color. Kodak and Fuji make fine color films in this class. In black-and-white, there is Ilford HP5-Plus, Kodak TMax and Tri-X, and a good Fuji film.

If you learn how to shoot with any of these films in both bright and dim light, you will get a high percentage of good results. And, if you process your own black-and-white films in the same developer each time, you will come to appreciate what they can do under various conditions.

The same is true of your camera equipment. A new model may offer significant advantages over what you currently have. But if you are getting good results with your camera, stick with it until you can shoot without pausing to think or referring to the instruction manual. Then, when your budget permits — and after you have given it a lot of thought — you may want to advance to a new camera. If so, you will get a lot more out of it than you will if you jump from model to model, never giving yourself a chance to learn what each can do.

Make no mistake: Many of the new films are much better, and some of the new cameras can do things your 2-year-old "Whoopee-flex" cannot handle. But they will not turn you into a photographer of the caliber of Eddie Adams, Ansel Adams, Jodi Cobb or any of the other aces. That comes from a discerning eye and a thorough knowledge of the film and camera you are using.

Regional group seeking grant for waste study

■ Regional cities and counties will have to pool their resources to contribute the $63,788 in matching funds necessary to qualify for the state grant.

By David Morris

BIG SPRING — Responding to a state mandate, the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission moved a step closer Wednesday to developing a regional solid waste management plan.

Ernie Crawford, commission executive director, said the plan is needed to address Environmental Protection Agency landfill regulations which have driven up the cost of operating local landfills.

The commission's Board of Directors voted unanimously at their monthly meeting to apply for a $63,788 state grant to fund the plan, which Crawford described as a feasibility study.

To qualify for the state grant, regional cities and counties will have to pool their resources and contribute the $63,788 in matching funds, Crawford said.

Last year, the state ordered regional planning commissions to develop solid waste management plans in response to the EPA regulations.

Because of the regulations, many small communities can no longer afford to open and operate new landfills. He said regulations call for new landfills to be covered, lined and equipped with monitoring wells.

"The big problem that we have is that the small cities have run out of landfill space," Crawford said. "The costs are going to be so prohibitive for cities that alterna-

Blue Bell distributes from Big Spring

BIG SPRING — Blue Bell, the ice cream, not the wildflower, is well into big time even if the popular dessert originates in the small Texas town of Brenham, (population 11,000) where the work ethic is law and fresh ice cream appreciated as if it were hand-cranked.

It's fresh. And it's freshly arrived in Big Spring, where privately held Blue Bell Creameries Inc., has built a freezer-warehouse from which it ships its frozen dessert into West Texas.

Ice cream is a nutritious dairy treat for happy occasions. That, at least, has been the tradition, said Steve James, Blue Bell vice president at Wednesday's grand opening of the storage plant.

Blue Bell personnel seemed pleased with their move to West Texas in further expanding a product that annually is drumming up $160-million in revenues in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Whatever Blue Bell's mystique, it has driven Blue Bell to success.

The company, which was established in Brenham, northwest of Houston in 1907, first produced ice cream in 1911. In 1919, school teacher E.F. Kruse took over management of the company.

Today, his sons Ed and Howard Kruse operate the business, whose sales have increased for 52 consecutive years.

Trucks of Blue Bell ice cream from the company creamery in Brenham are rolling into the company's new Big Spring distribution center even as construction workers Johnny Trevino, Lorenzo Juarez, and Antonio Gonzales finish up on roof work.

"It's a methodical company. It's not just a flash-in-a-pan," said Paul Kruse, Blue Bell corporate counsel-secretary and son of CEO Ed Kruse. Paul's uncle, is company president and the ice-cream maker.

"The ice cream is so fresh, it was grass yesterday," Paul Kruse said.

The appeal behind Blue Bell has thrust its ice cream into the nation's second-leading brand even though it is marketed to only 9 percent of the nation's population.

Blue Bell lags behind No. 1 Kraft General Foods' Breyers label and ranks in front of Haagen-Dazs and Ben & Jerry's.

"If you appeal to the real higher-income type segment, you are going to limit yourself to a base of 10 percent or less of the population," said James.

Blue Bell seeks to blanket the market, and that is reflected in Blue Bell's taking in 62 percent of the ice cream market in San Antonio, Austin, Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth area last year, James said.

Teachers' salaries below state average

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland classroom teachers' annual average salary was $752 dollars below the statewide average in 1989, while administrators were paid $1,087 more than the state average, according to a recent report.

The figures were released Wednesday in Bench Marks, an annual publication by The Texas Research League, an educational corporation engaged in governmental research.

Midland teachers received an annual average salary of $25,775, compared to the state average of $26,527. The figures represent base salaries only, however, and exclude career ladder and other supplemental pay. The average salary for Texas classroom teachers has doubled since 1979, the report said.

The term "classroom teacher," according to the report, includes only professional teachers in the classroom and does not include counselors, librarians and other support or administrative employees or aides.

The average state salary paid to administrators was $40,415 while Midland's average was $41,502.

The average state salary for professional support persons was $29,610, while the average Midland salary was $29,705, $95 more than the state average. Support persons were described as librarians, counselors, nurses, supervisors and special service persons.

Auxiliary persons (food service, maintenance, bus drivers, etc.) state average salaries were not available for comparison.

Midland's pupil and teacher ratio of 18.8 pupils per teacher was slightly higher than the state average of 16.1.

Four in five dollars were spent for salaries, the report said. Statewide payroll expense averaged $2,895 per student, as compared to $2,722 in MISD.

To fund higher school budgets with a declining tax base, school trustees in most districts have raised tax rates. The average school district imposed a property tax at the rate of 97.6 percent of market value.

Emergency numbers abused by public

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Most people are aware that dialing 911 is strictly for emergency assistance.

But 911 is not the only emergency number around.

"The first page of your phone book lists emergency numbers. These numbers should only be called in case of emergency," said Judy Britcher, director of communications for Midland Emergency Communications District (911).

Nonetheless, the sheriff, fire and police departments receive non-emergency calls on their seven digit emergency numbers.

According to agency dispatchers, the majority of the people who make non-emergency calls using the seven digit number are not aware that its designated use is the same as 911.

"They act like they don't know it's an emergency number. I don't think they are aware (that it is)," Fritz Niggeler, fire and ambulance dispatcher, said.

Peggy Miller, head dispatcher for the sheriff's office, agrees.

"People call this number thinking that since it's not 911 it's not for emergencies," she said.

Some of the confusion may be due to the emergency numbers listed in the front of the telephone book.

The 1989-90 phone book — before enhanced 911 — lists non-emergency numbers in addition to 911. But in the 1990-91 directory — published after enhanced 911 came on-line in March — seven digit emergency numbers are included.

Because enhanced 911 displays the caller's phone number — including unlisted numbers — on a viewing screen where the calls are answered, the seven digit numbers were provided for privacy considerations.

When an emergency is called in via 911, the number is transferred to the appropriate agency.

Niggeler said the fire department dispatchers can't distinguish a difference between 911 calls and the direct seven digit number calls.

"The only difference is it (the seven digit number) doesn't come through the emergency district," he said.

Although the two numbers come in through different lines at the sheriff's office, Ms. Miller said both receive equal attention.

"We knock ourselves out to answer it on the first ring because it is an emergency," she said, " ... you're ready for a robbery, a murder ... "

Ms. Miller said she doesn't recall an incident where non-emergency calls have hindered an emergency response but said there is a potential for such complications.

"It is not inconceivable for all lines to be busy (and) cause a de-

Chamber reviews entities' compromise on sales tax

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

Reporting the compromise between city and hospital board officials over the last available half cent of sales tax revenues was the main item of discussion at the monthly board meeting of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

City and hospital board representatives had announced at previous board meetings they intended to seek a half-cent sales tax. That prompted the two entities to withdraw their proposals and come back with a compromise plan.

At Wednesday's meeting the groups announced that they had reached a compromise and that each would submit a ¼-cent sales tax increase to the voters, if allowed by the Legislature.

Although the ¼-cent tax is half of what was initially requested City Councilman J.D. Faircloth, noted that the additional $2 million would be used for industrial development.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, Midland County Hospital District Board member said the hospital is in dire need of tax money to cover the escalating cost of indigent care.

"We budgeted $4.8 million for indigent care in 1990 and have already reached $7 million. We are currently looking at ways to cut indigent care (costs)," he says.

He also noted that the hospital beds have been full year-round and expansion is being studied.

City's public works director to retire

Retiring City Department of Public Works Supervisor Fred Baker will be the last person to hold that post. His widely varied duties will be assumed by several city departments.

■ Fred Baker will retire Jan.31, and the city will simultaneously retire the department.

It's the end of an era. After 21 years as Midland's public works director, Fred Baker has announced his plans to retire Jan. 31, 1991. The city will retire the department simultaneously.

Baker said it feels strange to know he's the city's last public works director.

"I assume they're phasing it out as I retire," Baker said. "Historically public works is phased in and out, now there's a trend among cities of going away from the department."

Under Baker, sanitation, the landfill, water distribution and sewage collection, the municipal garage, vehicle services and building maintenance have been grouped under the public works umbrella.

By October, sanitation, the landfill and water and sewer will migrate to the utilities department, while building maintenance will be under Public Relations Director Rick Menchaca, said City Manager Fred Poe, who will oversee the garage and vehicle services.

"We're doing away with public works almost immediately," Poe said. "We'll start the new (fiscal) year off with everything in its new position."

He said the city had started thinking about merging public works into utilities when discussion about Baker and utilities director John Lowe's impending retirements began.

Baker will be involved in special projects and transitional management until his retirement, Poe said.

Mystery, beauty inhabit the 'The Last Frontier'

FORT DAVIS — No matter where you are, the stars are way up there in a mysterious yet amazing and consoling glittering darkness.

Todd

How far or how many or to what extent, no one knows for sure. And that hardly matters except to those obsessed with the universe and with just how infinite infinity is.

But knowing the number and character of the stars would be like conceiving the length and breadth of the universe.

No mortal, surely, would be so vain as to have even an inkling of what's out there. Astronomers hazard considered guesses and suppositions based on supposed knowns. Opinions change with changes.

In the Davis Mountains stars fill the mind. The night-time clarity is refreshing. The silence apart from crowded civilization is as lovely as music bringing forth euphoria.

Then with no civilized chatter or mechanized noises within earshot, the wilderness takes over. But the silence soon is overtaken by voices and rustlings of a different sort of wildlife than that found in cities, towns, suburbs and even in "the country" just outside the throngs of office buildings and traffic lights and the insufferable messages of barkers.

There is a beauty and a mystery in this land called "The Last Frontier" of the Great Southwest.

There are mysteries, such as the source of the Marfa Lights and the undisclosed secrets of the deserts. There are paradoxes, such as how to maintain the quaint charm of this largely undeveloped territory and, at the same time, how to keep its economy healthy.

This is a land steeped in ranching. It is graced by academia and scientific research, such as that represented by Sul Ross State University at Alpine, the Chihuahuan Desert Research Institute, the McDonald Observatory on Mount Locke and the Harvard Radio Astronomy Station.

Tourists, wayfarers and city folks on weekend outings can, within bounds, pretty much do as they please: take it easy, malinger, race up and down hills on foot or bicycle, or play wrangler over at John Robert Prude's dude ranch, wonder at the splendor of Limpia Creek, and ponder the ages of the big old cottonwood trees.

It's a land better off without the intrusion of television and radio and the news of the day. There's plenty of that elsewhere.

There are public places, such as Davis Mountains State Park, on old ranch land over which Indians roamed before soldiers invaded this frontier.

It is a gentle, lovely land that is not without the greedy marks of society: Fortune-seekers called drug traffickers — "mules" or "drug lords" — who, secretly, they hope, pass on through in their journey from across the border to sell their contraband to become rich and extravagant.

The Davis Mountains territory is an inviting land. It offers much of what has been lost in the cities and towns: Clear nights amid the darkness brightened by the stars.

WASTE: Recycling may utilize 25 percent of trash

tive methods of disposal are going to have to be looked at."

Development of recycling centers and regional landfills are alternatives which the commission's waste plan committee will explore, Crawford said.

The study, which Crawford said may take more than a year to complete, will attempt to determine which areas of the Permian Basin would benefit from regional landfills. Transportation and landfill operation costs also will be examined, Crawford said.

"I think (regional landfills) would mean a lot of cost savings to a lot of (cities) if they can operate jointly instead of trying to operate their own landfill," Crawford said. "It may be a group of landfills. It could be that Midland and Odessa could go in together. But if we knew that, we wouldn't have to do the study."

The study also will evaluate alternatives to landfills, including composting, incineration and recycling.

"Probably 25 percent is a really outside figure on what you can recycle out of a landfill," Crawford said. He added that the plan probably will address the possibility of luring recycling companies to the area to set up operations.

Mike McGregor, Midland deputy city manager, predicted that city councilmen will support the planning commission's request for funds. The commission's funding formula calls for Midland and Odessa to pay $4,000 each to fund the plan.

"I would anticipate that we would do it," said McGregor, who added that $4,000 sounded like a "reasonable" figure.

McGregor said the cities of Rankin and Iraan are paying $11 a ton to dump their garbage in Midland's landfill off the Garden City Highway.

Midland County, meanwhile, has been asked to pay $2,500 to fund the plan. Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia said she didn't know whether she will vote to contribute to the plan or not.

"I don't know that anybody's said anything about it to us or anything," she said. "Until I get something in writing...I wouldn't want to be quoted."

The other three Midland County commissioners could not be reached for comment Wednesday afternoon.

Odessa City Manager Bill Brown said his city is likely to make its $4,000 contribution without complaint.

"It is absolutely necessary for us to be involved along with all of the other cities in the area to come up with a plan," Brown said. "I think it makes good sense."

Bryan Henderson, Ector County Precinct 2 commissioner, said commissioners there will likely support the request for funds.

"I think it's mandated by the EPA that a regional plan be created...and I'd just as soon have input on a local level," Henderson said.

Crawford, meanwhile, said the planning process may cost more than its current $127,576 budget. In that case, the planning commission will apply for another state grant, he said, and regional cities and counties will be asked to contribute more matching funds.

CHAMBER: Total home sales up

(From 1C)

Wiesenfeld said the hospital will seek to float $12 million to $20 million in bonds to pay for the expansion which will be repaid from hospital revenues.

On another matter Faircloth said the city is planning to issue a non-smoking ordinance. "We are going to pass some sort of non-smoking ordinance.

"I've gotten a lot of calls and letters about this issue." He said the ordinance will be reviewed by a committee, chaired by Councilman John Castro. The committee will include smokers and non-smokers alike.

Faircloth also reported that Midland's commercial assessed value has decreased. "That's one reason why Midland needs to diversify, to increase the tax base," Faircloth said.

Total home sales were reported up from last year's level.

He also said, as of Sept. 30, there will be vacancies on many City of Midland boards.

Jane Wolf of the United Way noted the pilot United Way campaign drive will kick off Sept. 26.

Shura Glover of Midland Center reported that June was a healthy month with over $7,400 generated from room rentals.

Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful noted that Butts Recycling has recycled 300,000 pounds of paper since their opening. She also noted that an exhibit will be located at the County Library from October through March to educate school children about the importance of recycling.

A Chamber retreat is planned for Sept. 14-15 at the Plaza Club.

SALARIES: Administrators higher

The "true tax rate" was 98.6 cents ($1.01 multiplied by 97.62 percent) statewide. Locally, MISD imposed a rate of $1.038 while property was appraised at 99.9 percent of its market value making the true tax rate $1.037.

The tax on a house that would sell for $80,000 in MISD would have been $806. If the homeowner were eligible for homestead exemptions, the tax would have been $674, and if owned by a person 65 years or older, the tax on an $80,000 house in this district would have averaged $570, or less if subject to a tax freeze. That compares with statewide average tax bills of $806, $712 and $543 respectively for an $80,000 house.

Last year MISD's revenue from the property tax increased by 7.1 percent for 1989-90 as compared to a 9.1 percent increase statewide.

Local property taxes plus state aid was $2986 per student in MISD as compared to $3,386 statewide.

Joe Baressi Jr., MISD superintendent, was unavailable for comment.

Texas Bandwagon plans forum

Staff Report

The Texas Bandwagon, an "issues and strategy forum" featuring representatives from conservative political organizations, will be in Odessa on Saturday.

The forum is scheduled for 9:15 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Cost of the seminar is $5 per person. For information or tickets call 333-9542.

Susan Weddington, Bandwagon spokesperson, said the seminar is designed to provide information for grassroots conservative activists who would benefit from the expertise of statewide political coaltions.

"We're trickling information down from a state level to a local level," she said.

The Bandwagon has already visited several cities, including Sherman, Denison, New Braunfels, Bryan-College Station and Abilene, she said.

Co-sponsors of the event include Accelerated Christian Education Inc.; the Christian Agricultural Council; Citizens for Excellence in Education; Concerned Women for America; Dallas Association for Decency; Focus on the Family; Free Market Foundation; Livestock Marketing Association of Texas; the National Center for Policy Analysis-Center for Texas Studies; Texans Against State Income Tax; Texans for Better Health; Texans for Educational Choice; Texas Home School Coalition; Texans United for Life; and the Mel Gablers-Educational Research Analysts.

Forum speakers will include Susan Weddington of Texans for Better Health; Tim Lambert, executive director of the Texas Home School Coaltion; Bill Price of Texans United for Life; and Richard Ford, president of the Free Market Foundation.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and Ector County Attorney Tracey Bright will be presented with the West Texas Courageous Citizen Award during the forum.

in," he said. "Sometimes we've overloaded him because of his willingness to do the work."

The job has changed dramatically since Baker took it.

Midland now produces 500 tons of trash a day; when he was first hired, it produced only 70 tons a day.

"We're a larger population now and we've got more trash because we're a throw-away population," Baker said. "The national average is 3 to 4 pounds of trash per person per day, but that's 6 to 8 pounds per person per day in Midland."

Baker listed three sanitation-related accomplishments as the highlights of his tenure in the office.

In 1971, Midland was the first city in the nation to convert to 3 cubic yard trash containers for residences, Baker said.

He estimated that the containers have saved the city $10 million over ten years, while decreasing the number of sanitation employees by about 50 percent.

"We've kept refuse costs down for the public, down to about $8.10 a month per residence," Baker said.

The containers also have cleaned up alleys and reduced the problem of roaming dogs foraging for garbage, he added.

Baker is also proud of the 40 cubic yard roll-off units installed in 1976 for multistory properties downtown.

"You don't see packaging materials all over the alley anymore. This was a real significant step in cleaning up downtown and the shopping centers," he said.

In 1982 he encouraged the city to buy 420 acres for a new landfill that should last 50 to 100 years.

"These three things have probably saved more capital outlay for city than anything else it's done," Baker said.

Baker, 64, is retiring a year early to make way for the city's departmental restructuring.

He has worked as a public servant for 38 years, taking a civil engineering job with Los Angeles County, Calif., in 1953 after graduating from Texas Tech. He then moved to Hobbs, N.M., where he became city manager before moving to Midland as its public works director.

"I never dreamed I'd be in this place when I graduated from La Jolla (Calif.) High School," Baker said.

He plans to stay in Midland with his wife Peggy and stay active in the Lions Club and the American Public Works Association, where he was president of the Texas chapter in 1984.

New Mexico may owe Texas water

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Water experts say if the drought continues, New Mexico may end up owing Texas a debt from the Pecos River by 1992.

The state must come up with plans to deal with that type of shortfall and to ensure that there is enough water generally in the Pecos River to meet its obligation to Texas, lawmakers were told Tuesday.

If New Mexico fell short of its obligations to Texas and did not make the required water repayment, it could be held in violation of a U.S. Supreme Court order and fined, representatives of the state engineer's office said.

lay. No one should have to wait," she said. "You can't help but think about people who really need help."

Miller and other agency dispatchers said they are more than willing to answer questions or give non-emergency assistance but ask callers to use non-emergency numbers.

About one third of all calls — about 30 per day — to the sheriff's emergency number are non-emergency calls. Fire department dispatchers get about three or four out of every eight calls that are non-emergency.

Emergency 911 has had about 3,000 non-emergency calls out of about 15,000 total calls since March. Ms. Britcher said non-emergency calls have decreased since the inception of 911, and pose no threat.

Police dispatch has no record of the amount of non-emergency calls that come through its emegency line.

"You need to call 911 to guarantee" the fastest emergency response from police department dispatchers, Ray Kendall, director of communication and information systems at the police department, said. Kendall said all incoming calls are treated as emergencies, but that 911 calls take priority.

Women juggle love of horses with raising families

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Even pregnancy could not keep Jan Offerle away from her childhood love — horses. It was not until she was seven months pregnant that she stopped riding the colt she was training at the time. She slowed down to "grounding and driving" him.

"My doctor officially advised me not to ride, but I actually felt better riding than walking," Mrs. Offerle said. "It relieved my back pain. I was used to sitting on a horse four to five hours a day. I just cut it down some, but kept on riding."

Today she single-handedly takes care of about 20 horses on her property, not to mention four dogs, turkeys, Otis the goose, chickens and several cats.

"It (horsemanship) was my childhood love and I never outgrew it," Mrs. Offerle said. "But I liked the training end more than just riding, so I branched off into training. I picked up most of what I know working on farms or just sitting on the rail and watching."

Mrs. Offerle earned a bachelor of science degree in animal science from the University of Missouri and worked as a horse trainer while attending college.

She shut down her training business six years ago, but still keeps working with about five or six horses in addition to giving riding lessons.

"I still own the first horse I ever trained," Mrs. Offerle said.

Carrie Lake of Winona has been racing barrels since age 12, and currently shows a 3-year-old American quarter horse in the Western Pleasure event.

"I love it," Mrs. Lake said. "We call it a fever — like an addiction. I'd rather do it than anything else. Just ask my husband. He likes it but sometimes gets tired of it. He is more involved with cows and 4-H than horses."

Western Pleasure is a judged event based on conformation, how the horse moves, how the rider sits on the horse and the horse's gait. Mrs. Lake said.

Mrs. Lake said she grew up in a neighborhood with four other girls who all eventually rode horses. She said they started going to play days and worked up to the rodeos.

Mrs. Lake now has a 5-year-old son who is starting to ride. She said he has not entered any contests yet, but probably will. Mrs. Lake and her husband, Leslie, own four horses, including the 25-year-old horse she rode in high school.

With four young children, Genna Krohn still finds time to ride and show Arabians and half-Arabians.

"I don't ride as often as I used to, because of my children, but I still ride and show whenever it is possible," said Mrs. Krohn, who has been riding for almost 30 years.

"It gets in your blood and you just can't help it," she said. "Once you start, you can't get it out of your system."

Actually, Mrs. Krohn was born with it in her blood. Her grandfather started the Half-Arabian Registry, and her father raised Arabians, while her mother raised quarter horses. She even met her husband, Blake Krohn, at a horse show. He is currently a trainer at Arabian Farms in Lindale.

"It was a fun hobby. It taught me how to care for something and to love something," she said.

Motherhood didn't stop her from entering shows. "I would bring the baby with me, and my husband would hold him while I rode, or I would set him in the middle of the ring while I practiced. Now that I have four children (ages 5, 4, 21 months and 4 months), it is a little harder.

"My oldest is not to the showing point yet, but we have hope," Mrs. Krohn said.

Kathie Cox of Athens began showing quarter horses because of her family.

"My 16-year-old daughter Dorothy was showing, so I began showing in self-defense," Mrs. Cox said. "We were always hauling her horses, so I thought I had better get my own."

While the mother and daughter team show, they sometimes compete against each other. Both ride in English Show competition, but Dorothy can also jump and ride Western saddle. The pair usually takes three horses to regional and district competitions.

Mrs. Cox is former president of the Henderson County Horse Committee, an agricultural extension service committee.

Candy stripers meet in Midland

Staff Report

Mayor Carroll Thomas proclaimed this week Junior Volunteer Auxiliary Week at the group's awards ceremony Wednesday.

"Volunteerism is what makes this a great country," Thomas said.

The 244 young candy stripers and their sponsors gathered in Midland for the JVA state convention. They spent Monday and Tuesday seeing the local sights, including the Petroleum Museum, and participated in an anti-drug program at Clearview Hospital.

Wednesday the groups received awards for scrapbooks and posters and heard a presentation on the McMurphy Nursing Project by John Oeffinger, president of the Texas Hospital Education and Research Foundation.

Oeffinger is launching a national public service announcement and video about the shortage of nurses that features actress Dana Delaney, who plays a nurse on "China Beach."

"She's a good role model for nursing and we want this campaign to help end the nursing and health care shortage," he said.

He encouraged the volunteers to consider careers in the health care fields as they prepare to graduate from high school.

"The role of the volunteer is a significant one in the health care delivery team," Oeffinger said.

Midland Memorial Hospital has 16 candy stripers, who range from 15 to 18 years of age, in its JVA program, said Karen Perry, the JVA convention public relations chairwoman and the chair of MMH's gift shop and membership boards.

She said the teenagers work one day a week from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in programs including the information desk, admissions, the blood bank, the nourishment cart, the health library and the Allison Cancer Center.

"They've given up paying summer jobs to know if this is the career field for them," Perry said. "You just can't put a value on volunteer time."

Hospital board lacks quorum

Staff Report

The Midland County Hospital District's board of directors failed to convene the four directors necessary to make a quorum for its regularly scheduled session Wednesday.

The primary issue on the meeting's agenda was a proposal for a tax increase to cover soaring indigent health care costs. At its June 27 session the board discussed raising property taxes by as much as 33 percent to cover an anticipated $1.2 million shortfall in revenue for indigent care.

In cancelling the meeting, board president Tom Bruner explained that the board must have a simple majority of its seven members present.

He said Dr. Shelton Viney was in surgery, Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld had been "called out" and Margaret Williams was out of the state. He did not know the whereabouts of the Rev. Sylvester Ferguson, the fourth absentee director.

Bruner, David Porter and Richard Dulaney were present for the meeting.

The board session was rescheduled for 4 p.m. August 2.

BLUE: Big Spring has welcomed Blue Bell

(From 1C)

"We don't always understand what it is that drives people to buy our product," said James. "We are extremely grateful for it."

However, James surmised that the appeal is in "making a good product, having people recognize it, and having good service to get the product to the consumer and having extremely good people working for us — (who) follow up on their promises, do what they say, and get there on time when the stores need ice cream.

"You have to make that ice cream the same everyday and make it the best you can," James said.

Paul Kruse credits Blue Bell's goodness to people, such as his Uncle Howard Kruse, the ice-cream maker, and Blue Bell employees who "know how to make good ice cream. They use those fresh, raw ingredients.

"You can mess up ice cream," Paul Kruse said. "You've got to watch it everyday."

In addition, Blue Bell has some "aggressive sales people," he said. "They believe in a product. They like to get out there and hustle."

But Blue Bell's competitors, which in West Texas includes Gandy's and Borden's, make good ice cream.

"All the other ice-cream companies are friends," Kruse said. "We've known them for a long time. And they make good products. I guess competition will always be around."

Though Blue Bell doesn't maintain its own herd of dairy cows, it does rely on 50,000 to 60,000 cows for its milk to make ice cream.

"That's a lot of cows. We get fresh milk, raw milk, from the dairies in everyday," he said.

The Big Spring community welcomed Blue Bell to its fold.

Big Spring Mayor Maxwell Dee Green said that Blue Bell, in setting up a storage facility here, indicates that "Big Spring is, in fact, the center of the Golden Circle, and we are the best distribution point in the West Texas area."

Green, who views himself as "an ice-cream fan," said he "cannot tolerate sugar" and reaches for diet Blue Bell, which is the "best sugar-free ice-cream in the country."

Big Spring businessman Richard Atkins said that for Blue Bell to locate a branch "in our little ol' community" will register a "super" economic impact. "Blue Bell ice cream is fantastic," he said.

And the towns of Big Spring and Brenham are "very compatible as far as attitudes are concerned," Atkins said. The Blue Bell people "are super, and their product is being received so well. We're so happy they're here.

Art Dodds, a Big Spring minister and horseman, said Blue Bell's old-fashioned aura appeals to him.

"I like the homemade vanilla (ice-cream) because it reminds me of the kind that my Granddaddy used to crank up in that old homemade freezer just like the way they (Blue Bell) began making theirs," said Dodds, 52.

The taste tells a lot about sales.

Taylor Johnson, 10, said Blue Bell simply "tastes good."

His 8-year-old sister, Laura Johnson, said: "I like the name (Blue Bell). It tastes good. It tastes better than other ice cream."

STATE in brief

DA denies bond in youth's death

PANHANDLE (AP) — A district attorney says he will seek the death penalty for a man accused of killing a 17-year-old boy in what authorities say may have been a cult sacrifice.

Kenneth Glenn Milner, 19, of Panhandle, was arraigned Tuesday in state District Court on capital murder charges in connection with the July 13 shooting death of Frankie Garcia, 17, of Panhandle. Bond was denied.

Milner also faces attempted murder charges in connection with two July 14 assaults.

"The ultimate crime deserves the ultimate punishment," David McCoy, Carson County district attorney, said after Tuesday's hearing. "I understand that he (Milner) has indicated a desire to die. I intend to try to accommodate him."

A capital murder conviction can carry the death penalty in Texas.

Milner is charged with shooting Garcia late on Friday the 13th in a deserted barn northwest of Panhandle. The barn was behind a dilapidated farmhouse known to local youth as "the haunted house," an alleged stomping ground for cult members.

Bush interviews Jones

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal appeals judge Edith Jones of Houston apparently was the only other jurist interviewed by President Bush at the White House before he nominated a new Supreme Court justice.

Ms. Jones came so close to getting the nomination that a report circulated less than 30 minutes before Bush announced his choice that she was it.

Bush instead chose another federal appeals judge, David Souter of New Hampshire, to fill the vacancy left by the retirement of Justice William Brennan.

Supporters of Ms. Jones were bolstered by news accounts Wednesday that said Bush only interviewed her and Souter before making his decision Monday.

"Those of us who are her supporters count that as good news in the sense that even though she didn't get it this time, she's clearly up at the top of the list for the next vacancy," said Larry Neal, a spokesman for Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Judges' microwave stolen

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — While the judges were in the courtroom trying criminals, criminals were in their lunchroom giving the judges a trying time.

District Judge Sharon MacRae said Tuesday that someone stole a microwave oven from a jury room that serves as a lunchroom for judges and court personnel in the Bexar County Criminal Justice Center.

"I've been ripped off five or six times," she said.

The judge said that thieves have entered judge's offices, rifling purses and stealing other objects.

In a letter to Bexar County Commissioners, Judge MacRae asked that a lock be placed on the door because thieves have stolen food and the microwave and she fears that the refrigerator may be next.

Discrimination found

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge awarded back pay and retirement benefits to a white employee after deciding that three city of Houston black officials discriminated against the man because of his race and age.

Senior U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton Jr. wrote he "never entertained the slightest doubt" that George P. Yedlovsky's superiors improperly denied him a promotion.

Yedlovsky, 73, was ultimately laid off from his job on July 31, 1987, just 17 months short of retirement. He had been a city employee for 8½ years.

In a ruling released Tuesday, the judge awarded Yedlovsky 17 months back pay.

Yedlovsky worked in the city real estate department as a right-of-way agent, an official who handles real estate acquired to accommodate city services. He scored the highest of three agents on a 1985 exam for two vacant senior right-of-way agent positions.

However, the department's two top officials, director John Guess and assistant director Chere Lott, who are both black, accepted the recommendation of a black supervisor, Andrew Williams, to promote two black agents instead.

PGA loses ads

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Toyota and Anheuser-Busch joined IBM on Wednesday in canceling plans to run television ads during next month's PGA Championship at the all-white Shoal Creek country club.

Toyota and IBM officials said they were pulling advertising from the ABC and ESPN telecasts because of racial exclusion in the membership of the Shoal Creek club. Anheuser-Busch did not give a reason for dropping its ads during the golf tournament, Aug. 9-12.

The cancellation of TV ads by major corporations came as Birmingham's black mayor, Richard Arrington, took the role of racial peacemaker in hopes of avoiding protests, opening up Shoal Creek to black members and making clear Birmingham has become racially progressive in the past two decades.

Arrington said a letter he received Tuesday from Shoal Creek officials convinced him the club, located in Shelby County near Birmingham, soon will accept black members.

The action on Wednesday by Toyota and Anheuser-Busch followed by one day the decision by IBM to drop advertising during the championship. The IBM commercials were to appear on ABC, which is televising the final two days of the event. The firs two days are being televised by ESPN.

Bowl saved

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The search for a sponsor has ended and the Independence Bowl shall henceforth be known as the Poulan-Weed Eater Independence Bowl.

Promoters of the post-season college football game made the announcement Tuesday and received a $250,000 check from the new sponsor.

Ryan fails, but Texas wins

■ Nolan Ryan couldn't notch win No. 300 against baseball's worst team, but the New York Yankees couldn't beat the Texas Rangers.

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan failed to win his 300th game Wednesday night, but the Texas Rangers saved him from a loss, rallying to beat the New York Yankees 9-7 in 11 innings.

Ryan left after eight innings, trailing 7-4 to baseball's worst team. But Texas scored once in the eighth, came back for three runs in the ninth on Pete Incaviglia's homer and won on Rafael Palmeiro's home run.

Kenny Rogers (4-5), who relieved Ryan, got the victory. Mark Leiter (0-1) was the loser.

Ryan likely will make his second try for 300 Monday night in Milwaukee.

Ryan was shaky from the start, never the overpowering pitcher his fans yearned to see. He gave up a triple to open the game, lost an early lead and allowed his highest run total of the season.

The milestone slipped away on solo home runs by Kevin Maas and Roberto Kelly that put the Yankees ahead 3-2 in the fourth inning and Bob Geren hit a two-run single in the sixth. Geren had a two-run homer that made it 7-3 in the eighth.

The Yankees, with the poorest record in the majors, started four rookies and played without Don Mattingly, who could miss the rest of the season with back problems.

The 43-year-old Ryan, pitching with a bad back and a sore Achilles tendon, had won five straight decisions. But the all-time strikeout leader was outpitched by one of the game's softest throwers, Dave LaPoint.

Ryan gave up seven runs on 10 hits. He struck out nine, walked three and threw 141 pitches. The hits and home runs against him also were season highs.

LaPoint pitched six innings and allowed three runs on nine hits with six strikeouts.

A crowd of 41,954 that included commissioner Fay Vincent hoped to see Ryan become the 20th pitcher to win 300. Instead, they saw him struggle.

Deion Sanders, who was born a year after Ryan made his major league debut in 1966, led off the game with a triple and scored when Steve Sax followed with a groundout.

Incaviglia's two-run single put Texas ahead in the first and with the crowd cheering on every pitch, Ryan stayed in front until the fourth.

Maas, a rookie, led off with his seventh home run in 53 at-bats this season, and third in three games, and Kelly connected one out later. It was the first time this season Ryan had allowed two home runs in a game.

In the sixth, Ryan walked his first two batters around a single to rookie Jim Leyritz that loaded the bases and Geren hit a two-run single.

Texas tried to rally in the seventh, scoring once to pull within 5-3. But Ruben Sierra flied out to the warning track with two runners on base to end the inning, and Geren hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

Steve Buechele hit an RBI double in the Rangers' eighth that made it 7-4.

In the ninth, Dave Righetti retired the first two batters before Palmeiro singled and advanced on Kelly's error in left field. Sierra hit a run-scoring single and Incaviglia hit his 16th home run on a 1-2 pitch.

■ After trading Herschel Walker last year, the Dallas Cowboys needed running backs and Timmy Smith is on a training camp roll.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — No matter how hard Timmy Smith tries to keep a low profile, his exploits at the 1990 Dallas Cowboys training camp keeps bringing the spotlight his way.

The 5-11, 215-pound running back is obviously uncomfortable with the media horde blanketing the camp. He'd just as soon reporters talk to somebody else.

But he also is probably working harder than he ever has in his life to make a football team that suddenly had found itself deep in his position. With Dallas trading for Terrence Flagler from San Francisco and drafting Florida's Emmitt Smith in the first round of the 1990 draft, the Cowboys won't be looking for too many backs. But Timmy Smith has been hard to ignore.

In a Tuesday morning intrasquad scrimmage, he ran for 43 yards and a touchdown on nine powerful, slashing carries. Smith just hopes his work will pay dividends.

"In the off-season I tried to hit the weight room and get into the best shape I could get into, because you never know what can happen in camp or in the preseason. You never know when somebody can go down. But there aren't too many teams that have the kind of running backs the Cowboys do," he said.

He also has learned both the fullback and halfback positions to try to help keep the "Turk" — that infamous assistant coach who is selected to fetch players being cut to the head coach's office to receive the bad news — from knocking on his door.

"I guess they had it in their mind that I could play both positions. I know Emmitt is a great running back and Terrence is great, but I figured I'd get my shot," Smith said.

Not that the 26-year-old Hobbs, N.M., native has never known glory on the football field. He owns a Super Bowl rushing record and a championship ring.

Playing for the Washington Redskins in his first NFL start in 1988's Super Bowl XXII, Smith rumbled for a record 204 yards and two touchdowns (one from 58 yards away) on 22 carries in the 'Skins' 42-10 rout of the Denver Broncos.

But that was 1987, and in this world of the "what have you done for me lately?" National Football League, Smith has done little more than survive.

"I'm just trying to get my life together. You gotta have a job, because you can't eat a Super Bowl ring," he said after a recent Cowboy practice.

A year after the championship season, he ran for more than 100 yards in two of his first three games and finished the year with eight starts and 470 yards. But the Redskins left Smith unprotected in the league's newly unveiled Plan B free agent system, and the ex-Texas Tech Red Raider was picked up by San Diego.

Smith recorded the longest run from scrimmage, a 24-yarder, in the Chargers' 1989 preseason, but was inexplicably released before the start of the regular season.

He then resurfaced here at the Cowboys camp, where he has shone brightly. Needless to say, Dallas

Jo Dickson and Marna Raburn often play golf together on a social basis. They insist they really don't keep track of who wins and who loses. But they'll know today.

Dickson and Raburn will meet in the Championship Flight finals of the 1990 Midland Women's City Golf Championship. With socializing at a minimum — at least on this day — match play for the championship begins at 9:55 a.m. at Green Tree Country Club.

Dickson, last year's women's city champion seeking to defend her title, defeated Jere Barnes, 6 and 4, in one Wednesday semifinal. Dickson defeated Barns in last year's final, 3 and 2.

Raburn — who's probably never been so appreciative of a tree limb in her life — defeated Carolyn Henry, 4 and 3, in Wednesday's other semi.

Wednesday's round was played at Midland Country Club. An ever-so-light morning sprinkle had no effect on putting, but some players commented that the 15-25 mph winds played tricks with their shots from time to time.

Chipping prowess seemed to be the rule of the day, and there was a pair of chips in particular that iced Raburn's berth in the championship.

On No. 15, a par-5 with a dogleg right near the green, Raburn landed her second shot in the left rough, about 75 yards from the pin. The only thing that stood in the way of her getting to the green was a tree limb, which she promptly hit with her third shot.

BASEBALL: Red Sox halt slide

(From 1D)

American League

Red Sox 2, Brewers 0

Roger Clemens pitched a three-hit shutout for his first win since June 28 and Carlos Quintana homered off the foul pole to give Boston a victory over Milwaukee, ending a four-game losing streak.

Clemens (13-5) struck out nine and gave up three singles, two to Gary Sheffield and one to Edgar Diaz. It was his first shutout of the year and third complete game, and he improved to 10-4 lifetime against the Brewers.

Athletics 13, Angels 3

Jose Canseco hit his 30th and 31st home runs and drove in six runs as Oakland defeated California.

Canseco, who has seven home runs in his last eight games, launched a monsterous 485-foot blast into the last rows of the left field bleachers for a three-run homer off Bert Blyleven (8-6) in the first inning.

In 15 games since the All Star break, Canseco is 22-for-53 (a .415 average) with nine home runs and 21 RBIs. It was the sixth time this season Canseco has hit two home runs. He is just one behind Detroit's Cecil Fielder for the major league lead, despite missing 20 games because of injuries.

The victory was Oakland's fourth straight and gave the A's a four-game lead in the West over the Chicago White Sox, who lost 6-1 Wednesday to Cleveland. It was the A's biggest lead since June 20th.

Royals 6, Blue Jays 1

Sizzling George Brett hit for the cycle for the second time in his career, going 4-for-5 with two runs scored and one RBI, to power Kansas City over Toronto.

Brett, who was named American League player of the week on Monday, collected a single in the first and a triple in the third, both off Blue Jays starter Todd Stottlemyre.

He doubled off reliever Frank Wills in the fifth, then took Wills to deep center for his sixth home run of the season and a 6-0 Royals lead in the top of the seventh.

The last time Brett hit for the cycle was against the Baltimore Orioles on May 28, 1979. It marked the sixth time a Royals player has accomplished the feat.

Brett extended his current hitting streak to 15 — a period in which he has hit .460 (29-for-63).

Indians 6, White Sox 1

Bud Black pitched a three-hitter and Dion James's two-run triple highlighted a four-run third inning.

Black (9-5), winning for the third time in four starts, allowed only an unearned run in the second inning. He struck out eight, walked two and retired 22 of the last 24 batters as the Indians won for just the second time in 10 games.

Tigers 4, Orioles 3

Larry Sheets' two-run homer in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie as Detroit beat Baltimore.

Mike Henneman (6-6) went 1⅔ innings in relief of Steve Searcy for the victory and Jerry Don Gleaton got the last out for his fourth save.

Twins 6, Mariners 0

Rookie Kevin Tapani won his 10th game of the season and Gary Gaetti hit his 11th homer and drove in three runs as Minnesota shutout Seattle.

Tapani (10-5), pitching for the first time since suffering a shin injury on July 13, gave up just five hits in 7⅔ innings. He struck out four and walked none before needing relief help.

National League

Astros 5, Braves 1

Danny Darwin pitched a five-hitter, equaled his career high with 10 strikeouts and singled a run home as Houston posted a rare road victory.

Eric Yelding had a career-high four hits and drove in two runs as the Astros won for only the third time in their last 26 road games.

Darwin (5-1), making his fifth start after 111 consecutive relief appearances, raised his lifetime record against Atlanta to 6-0 with his third victory in a row.

It was his first complete game since a 5-1 victory at Pittsburgh on Aug. 19, 1988.

Padres 2, Reds 1

Joe Carter doubled home the second of two first-inning runs and San Diego won a second straight game for the first time in more than a month, defeating Cincinnati in the first game of a doubleheader.

Coupled with their 10-0 victory Tuesday night, the Padres had won consecutive games for the first time since winning three in a row from June 19-23.

Expos 8, Pirates 7

Rookie Marquis Grissom, who singled and scored the tying run in the bottom of the ninth, hit his first home run of the season in the 10th, a three-run shot that gave Montreal a victory over Pittsburgh.

It was Grissom's second home run of his career and capped a see-saw battle that saw the Pirates score all their runs in the last four innings.

Jose Lind and Andy Van Slyke had RBI singles in the top of the 10th as Pittsburgh scored three times for a 7-4 lead. But Bob Patterson hit Tim Raines with a pitch in the bottom of the 10th and was relieved by Stan Belinda.

Belinda (2-3) walked Tim Wallach and retired Mike Aldrete on a fly ball. But Andres Galarraga singled Raines home and Grissom lined a 3-2 pitch over the left-center-field fence, moving the third-place Expos within five games of the division-leading Pirates in the National League East.

Mets 10, Phillies 9

Dave Magadan and Darryl Strawberry hit two-run homers and Kevin McReynolds and Gregg Jefferies had two-run triples as the New York Mets rapped out nine extra-base hits and then withstood a ninth-inning barrage of singles to beat Philadelphia.

McReynolds' triple in the fifth inning and an RBI single by Magadan in the sixth followed two-out intentional walks. After Magadan's single made it 5-0, Jefferies tripled and Strawberry hit his 25th home run, a drive measured at 469 feet.

Cardinals 9, Cubs 0

John Tudor pitched a five-hitter for his first shutout in more than two years and hit a three-run double in an eight-run first inning as St. Louis trounced Chicago.

El Paso, Pecos teams derail favored Abilene in youth tournaments

Staff Report

El Paso's Junior League baseball team and the Senior League representative from Pecos each won championships in sub-sectional play at Angels Stadium Wednesday, and both did it over Abilene squads in double-header sweeps.

El Paso's Junior Leaguers took wins of 5-3 and 10-4 over their Abilene counterparts in the double-elimination tournament, while the Pecos Seniors managed wins of 14-5 and 4-3 over Abilene Southwest to emerge from the losers' bracket and secure the title.

Each of the winners earned berths in sectional play which is scheduled to begin Friday Angels Stadium. The El Paso Juniors will meet Arlington West at 10 a.m. Friday, while the El Paso Seniors meet the yet-to-be-determined District 8 champions, at 5 p.m. Friday.

Junior League — El Paso's Will Stienman pitched a five-hitter and won 5-3 in Wednesday's initial championship game, and that forced a deciding game between the two teams. In the nightcap, pitcher J.P. Enriquez enjoyed a swift 5-0 lead and coasted to the 10-4 triumph by allowing just two Abilene hits.

Randy Dobbins took the loss for Abilene, a team that averaged 12 runs a game en route to the championship round.

El Paso, which was out-hit 5-4 in the opener, accumulated 14 hits in the finale to survive the loser's bracket.

Senior League — Tony Levario hit a pair of doubles and Jimmy Frush fanned five Southwest batters as Pecos scored in five different innings and dismantled Abilene 14-5 in the initial title tilt Wednesday. That set up the sudden-death duel that pitted Charlie Zamarripal against Abilene's Brian Boyer, and both hurlers responded with four-hitters.

But Zamarripal fanned the last Abilene batter on a full count pitch with the bases loaded, and Pecos got the 4-3 win and the sectional berth.

C.C. Witt, who had a double and a triple for Abilene in Wednesday's opener, got his team's only extra-base hit in the nightcap, a double. Herbie Hinojos doubled for the winners, who overcame a 2-1 first-inning deficit with a two-run second and a single run in the third to make it 4-2. Abilene closed the gap with a run in the bottom of the fifth, but their seventh-inning threat ended with the bags packed.

COWBOYS: Smith making comeback

head coach Jimmy Johnson has gotten more than he bargained for in Smith.

"I'm very happy with what he's doing on this football team. He had the opportunity with Washington, and I don't know what the problem was up there, but he was unprotected. Then he didn't really get that much of an opportunity with the Chargers. I certainly didn't expect him to come in and be this impressive in training camp," Johnson said.

"We worked him out during the season (in 1989) and had a thought of bringing him in at that time. The only thing is that it was so late in the season that we didn't feel like he could learn the offense.

"So we signed him after the season, feeling like he was a talent and feeling like we needed some help at the running back spot.

"We did not expect as much as we're getting. He's a big back, he weights 215 pounds, he's got great leg strength and outstanding running ability."

Despite flashes of brilliance, Smith has seen hard times throughout his football career. He caught the eye of Tech scouts in high school after running for 312 yards and scoring five TDs against Lubbock Monterey.

He then worked his way into the Raider starting lineup in the middle of his sophomore season, producing 711 yards in 164 carries. But then trouble set in like a dark cloud. As a junior, he suffered a knee injury and then was hampered by a bum ankle his senior senior.

But Smith, who in his spare time is working toward a physical education degree at Tech, said the injuries may work to his advantage in time.

"I'm just a young buck," Smith said, inferring he might have more 200-yard games left in him because his legs are fresh.

And if he somehow does turn that trick, Smith could leave Dallas fans muttering "Herschel who?"

Mattingly may be out for rest of season

ARLINGTON (AP) — Don Mattingly may miss the rest of the season with back problems that forced him out of the starting lineup for Wednesday night's game against Nolan Ryan and the Texas Rangers, New York Yankees manager Stump Merrill said.

Mattingly, who signed a $19.3 million, three-year contract extension the day before the season started, has been bothered by back spasms for several months and has struggled at the plate. He missed seven straight games before the All-Star break.

"It's an ongoing problem," Merrill said. "I didn't want to risk it at this point in the season."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Pay special attention to details in the months ahead. You score financial gains in October. Travel introduces you to a potential romantic partner and new sources of cash. Family will be supportive in December. Get in touch with a dynamic person from your past next January. A partnership with someone whose talents compliment your own will bring lasting benefits. Spring is the ideal time to launch a creative project. Invest extra funds next May.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: rock star Mick Jagger, ice skater Dorothy Hamill, actor Jason Robards, director Stanley Kubrick.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic matters require your attention this morning. Devote more time to family. Be modest around conservative people. Bragging is a turn-off. Dine in beautiful surroundings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A mystery remains, despite your efforts to unravel it. Humor helps avert a quarrel when a discussion becomes too heated. Review your financial situation. Romance has you guessing!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dramatic events could take place at work. The way you react to new developments will impress those in authority. Be open to their suggestions, but reject anything that is too impractical.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could dominate the spotlight today without even realizing it. Do not be so conservative that you miss out on the opportunity of a lifetime. Update your appearance. Romance beckons!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take stock of your financial situation before getting involved in a friend's new venture. Artistic and creative endeavors prove highly rewarding. Strike a better balance between work and play.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hide your frustration if you are given tedious tasks at work. Pay no attention to someone who calls a pet project "impractical." Avoid making heavy emotional demands on your partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Early-morning meetings should be harmonious. Those who need the security marital ties bring cannot afford to break their vows. Exercise greater self-discipline; loved one will not listen to excuses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money need not be plentiful to keep your family pulling together. Only too often, wealth tends to be divisive. Granting someone's wish will make for a joyful evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ingenuity, backed by elbow grease, gets things done. Before closing any kind of financial deal, consult the family. Many of you crave a quiet evening at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get things done while you are in the mood. Encourage your allies; their cooperation could be of great value. Long-term gains require temporary sacrifices.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial worries can cause sleepless nights. Avoid accumulating debts that could be difficult to repay. Save up for a large purchase instead of putting it on a credit card. Build a nest egg.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If family relationships have been seriously shaken up, do everything you can to restore harmony. A budget will help. Evening is the best time for a reconciliation attempt. Love can be blind!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are the most generous and noble children of the Zodiac. They look forward to school because they are eager to be with other youngsters. These Leos are born leaders. Shy with strangers, they are regular chatterboxes with people they know well. Forward-looking and ambitious, these children rarely glance backward.

Before playing to the first trick, plan your campaign; but be flexible. If something happens to make your plan unworkable, see if a backup is available.

North-South conducted an orderly auction to an odds-on six-spade slam. North's jump shift was textbook—an excellent hand with good support for partner's suit—and a cue-bidding sequence led to a slam that depended on little more than a 3-2 trump break.

West led the king of hearts, and after a few moment's thought declarer came up with a practical line—win the heart, draw only two rounds of trumps and, regardless of whether the queen trumps drops or not, run diamonds for two club discards, cash the ace of clubs, then crossruff. The defenders can score their last trump whenever they like.

However, when declarer led a trump from dummy at trick two, East produced the queen. Had declarer stuck to his guns and drawn a second trump to confirm the 4-1 split, West would have ruffed a diamond at his first opportunity and led his remaining trump, and declarer would have ended up a trick short.

Declarer found an elegant counter—he allowed East's queen of spades to win the second trick! Declarer was able to get to his hand often enough to ruff two hearts in dummy and draw the rest of the trumps. In all, declarer took three trump tricks, two ruffs, one heart, one club and five diamonds, for a total of 12 tricks.

Denver helps establish institute that will try to save environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer John Denver said Wednesday he has helped establish an institute that will work to save the global environment.

Denver

The Aspen Institute on Global Change, co-sponsored by the Amway Corp. of Ada, Mich., the United Nations Environment Program and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will bring leading scientists together each summer in Aspen, Colo., to trade ideas.

"This is not just another think-tank," Denver said at a news conference, adding that saving the global environment is "the most important task that faces the human race at this time."

Denver said an education and outreach program would try to bridge the gap between researchers and people who want to be involved in local environmental action.

William Nicholson, Amway's chief operating officer, said the direct marketing company has committed $500,000 to the institute over the next five years.

Rick Chappell, associate director of science at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, said NASA contributed $40,000.

Chappell said that a possible project would enlist large numbers of students and others in simple environmental tests at points on Earth also being monitored from space as a way to check the accuracy of satellite measurements of Earth conditions.

"It would be the ultimate field trip for the kids," Chappell said.

DETROIT (AP) — Actor Paul Winfield did his homework for his role in "Presumed Innocent," according to the judge who was his role model.

"He picked up that feeling of the courtroom, with lawyers going back and forth, trying to get in evidence they know they shouldn't get in, the exasperation you feel," District Judge Willie G. Lipscomb said at a screening of the new film.

"Presumed Innocent," about a deputy prosecutor accused of murdering a colleague, made its national debut Tuesday night at the Detroit Institute of Arts. The movie, starring Harrison Ford, was filmed partially in Detroit, although the book by Scott Turow was set in a mythical Illinois city.

Winfield observed Lipscomb's court before playing the judge in the film.

"Presumed Innocent," which opens nationwide Friday, also stars Raul Julia and Greta Scacchi.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Actor Kevin Costner and FBI Director William Sessions are being honored by a national collegiate fraternity.

Costner, the star of "Field of Dreams" and "The Untouchables," is expected to be one of an estimated 500 delegates attending the special centennial conference of the nationwide collegiate fraternity in Syracuse Aug. 8 to 12.

He and Sessions, who does not plan to attend, will be given "Delta Chi of the Year" awards.

Costner "was a marketing major at the University of California at Fullerton, but he hated it and went into acting," said Jeff Albright, Delta Chi national programming director.

The film star has retained his allegiance to his fraternity and was the speaker at the 1988 convention, Albright said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Holly Dunn says her style of music has gotten a big boost from the White House.

President Bush is a fan who has said he listens to country music on the radio and has country tapes in the Oval Office. Earlier this month, he invited Grand Ole Opry stars to perform at the economic summit in Houston.

"He's done us a real favor," Dunn said Tuesday in an interview. "He's really into it. Jimmy Carter liked country, too."

Dunn's hit records include "Daddy's Hands," "Are You Ever Gonna Love Me" and "Only When I Love." In 1987 she won the Country Music Association's Horizon Award as the most promising performer.

EVERGREEN, Colo. (AP) — Country western singer Willie Nelson has decided to hang a "for sale" sign on his $3 million, 116-acre ranch in this mountain community west of Denver.

"It's a very nice estate, but very typically Willie. It's not ostentatious; it's more on the homey side," broker Brad Moss of Metro Brokers at Evergreen Inc. said Tuesday.

Nelson is best known for his songs "On the Road Again," "My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys and "You Were Always On My Mind."

The property, which includes a two-story, 4,700-square-foot main residence, has been a favorite hideaway for the singer, but neither he nor his estranged wife, Connie, has visited it for the past several months, he said.

The Nelsons acquired the property in late 1980 for less than $1.5 million.

The main house has nine rooms, Moss said.

"It has lots of character. It's not opulent, but it's big — a big country boy's home," Moss said.

Iraq, Kuwait will hold talks over oil, land dispute

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi troops will begin pulling back from the border with Kuwait at dawn Thursday prior to direct talks to try to solve the two nations' dispute over land and oil production, diplomatic sources said.

The sources, based in the Persian Gulf, said Wednesday that the development was viewed as a victory for the small sultanate of Kuwait in their propaganda campaign.

Kuwait insisted that Iraq withdraw what it said were massed forces at their common 100-mile border before Kuwait would sit down for negotiations this weekend with Baghdad, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The sultanate wanted Iraq, with more than eight times the population of Kuwait, to move away from its muscle-flexing, they said.

The sources credited intensive mediation by President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia on Tuesday night for lightening the crisis atmosphere. Mubarak kept in contact with the Iraqis and Kuwaitis into early Wednesday, they reported.

The announcement of direct Iraqi-Kuwaiti talks was made by Mubarak on Wednesday in Cairo amid an escalating anti-American campaign in the Iraqi media. The state-run newspaper said Iraq would not bow to U.S. pressure in the dispute.

In Baghdad, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein summoned U.S. Ambassador April Glaspie for talks. Government radio gave no details of the meeting.

In Kuwait, diplomatic sources said Saddam assured Mubarak that he would not use military force as long as Kuwait agreed to the following conditions: paying compensation for $2.4 billion in oil Iraq claims Kuwait stole, and holding direct talks on a border dispute.

The oil allegedly stolen was from the Rumaila oil field, which includes land claimed by both Iraq and Kuwait.

In addition, Iraq wants Kuwait to write off billions of dollars in loans it granted Iraq during the Iran-Iraq war, and it wants the reopening of a border air corridor.

The dispute flared last week when Iraq accused Kuwait of stealing the oil and alleged that Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates were causing a slump in oil prices by exceeding their OPEC production quotas.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price-monitoring committee began meeting in Geneva on Wednesday to set prices for the rest of the year. Iraq wants a cut in production to force a $7 increase per barrel.

Mubarak met with leaders from Kuwait and Iraq on Tuesday. He told reporters in Cairo on Wednesday that direct talks would probably begin Saturday or Sunday in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia.

"Two delegations from both sides will sit and discuss the problem. Of course it will take several meetings," he said. "Only the two delegations with each other," he said when asked who would sponsor the meeting.

Mubarak also said Saddam had denied sending troops to the Kuwaiti border, despite reports to the contrary.

"What is present there was present before. I can tell you there is no intention from President Saddam to move any troops toward Kuwait," Mubarak said when asked when Iraqi troops would be withdrawn from the border.

Diplomats in Iraq and Persian Gulf states said that soon after the dispute erupted last week, travelers saw battlefield missiles, armored personnel carriers and tanks prominently displayed along the road from Iraq to Kuwait.

Diplomatic sources in Bahrain said Tuesday that a Washington Post report of 30,000 Iraqi troops at the border appeared to be correct.

Liberian rebels attack airfield

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebels attacked an airfield that was Monrovia's last link to the outside world Wednesday and closed in on the city from two directions in some of the heaviest fighting for control of the capital.

Fighters of rebel leader Charles Taylor resumed their offensive in the eastern part of the city. Followers of a rival rebel commander, Prince Johnson, fought off government soldiers who tried to retake Bushrod Island in the north.

With gunfire echoing all around, acting Information Minister Paul Allen Wie told reporters that President Samuel Doe had no plans to step down, despite the advancing armies.

"The president thinks it is worth dying for his country," Wie said at a news conference at the Ducor Palace Hotel. He distributed a news release quoting Doe as saying a sudden resignation "would lead to greater anarchy and ethnic tragedy in Liberia."

"I cannot heed the advice ... to quit the leadership of Liberia because it would introduce a dangerous precedent of outrageous rebellion and instability into the West African region," Doe said.

Early Wednesday, pro-Doe troops attacked two bridges that link the city center with rebel-held Bushrod Island, but they were repulsed by heavy fire.

One squad of government soldiers was seen crawling across one of the bridges but was pinned down under the heaviest gunfire yet heard in the battle for the city.

Some of the soldiers lay motionless as though dead or injured. Others ran back to the safety of the government positions.

Shells were also seen exploding on the other bridge, hitting a government jeep which was trying to lead an attack from that side. The wreckage of the jeep sat in the middle of the bridge.

Government troops, firing from the city center, shelled rebel positions on the far side of the bridges, some rounds falling close to the city's main oil storage depot, which was in rebel hands.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said it appeared Johnson's men controlled the island, which includes the port.

Johnson is believed to have split with Taylor sometime in the past three months, and some diplomats say his army is now stronger than Taylor's National Patriotic Front.

A few miles away to the east, rebels waded across a swamp and attacked Spriggs-Payne Airfield, the last way out of the city that was not in rebel hands. It was unclear whether fighters of Johnson or Taylor launched the airfield attack.

Further east in Paynesville, Taylor's men resumed their offensive. Diplomats reported heavy fighting in that area, where the rebels had been blocked several weeks by government soldiers.

Diplomats said Taylor's forces surrounded and effectively neutralized government troops who were barricaded inside the radio and television stations east of the city. The rebels did not attack them in order to spare the facilities, the diplomats said.

The government, which the rebels accuse of corruption and human rights abuses, repeated its allegation the United States was actively aiding the insurgents.

The United States has denied the accusation, and Boucher said its offer to provide safe passage out of the country for Doe stood. Doe met Tuesday with U.S. Ambassador Peter De Vos but did not ask for help in leaving the country, Boucher said at a Washington briefing.

"The Liberian people are disappointed by the United States," Wie told the reporters.

Doe expelled the chief of the U.S. Military Mission to Liberia, Col. David Staley, on Friday after accusing him of actively supporting the rebels.

On Tuesday, the government accused the United States of launching an attack on Doe's presidential mansion from a submarine, a charge immediately denied by Washington.

People who said they witnessed the attack said it came from a rebel gunboat offshore. The fortified mansion returned the fire and later announced that five civilians were killed nearby.

Monrovians continued their desperate search for food and water in a city where all shops were closed and where utilities have been shut down for more than a month.

As many as 5,000 people were jammed into a U.S.-owned fuel storage depot near the embassy, in the exclusive Mamba Point district, seeking haven from attacks by soldiers who were going on looting sprees and attacking civilians.

South African church leader to enter politics

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid leader Allan Boesak, tainted by a scandal over his extramarital affair, said Wednesday he was resigning all his church posts to seek a political career.

The mixed-race Protestant minister also said he would continue his relationship with Elna Botha, a married, white producer for government-run television.

Boesak, the father of four children, said his wife, Dorothy, had initiated divorce proceedings.

He and Ms. Botha issued simultaneous statements through their attorneys, saying their marriages had begun to fail before they met each other and that they intended to maintain their contact.

Church officials had pleaded with Boesak to reconsider when he announced July 8 he would resign from his religious posts.

He said Wednesday he would not change his mind and had stepped down as a minister of the Dutch Reformed Mission Church and president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, an international council of Protestant churches.

"I have ... decided to offer my services to the people of this country to bring about a united, nonracial and democratic South Africa. I am prepared to play any role which I may be called upon to play in this regard," he said in a statement released by his lawyer.

Boesak has played a major role in the opposition to apartheid, leading demonstrations and touring the world to denounce South Africa's system of racial segregation.

Long thought to be interested in a political career, Boesak models himself after the late Martin Luther King Jr.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who often marched with Boesak at the head of protests against apartheid, said Wednesday "the sky is the limit" for Boesak's future political career.

Futures drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy prices pulled back Wednesday amid some modest profit-taking as traders awaited developments at an OPEC meeting.

Crude prices opened firmly on the New York Mercantile Exchange in anticipation of what might be accomplished at the meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. energy broker Brian Tagler said the lack of fresh news from the oil cartel's gathering gave traders an opportunity to sell and collect profits amassed during the oil market's recent advance.

The contract for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate fell 18 cents to $20.38 a 42-gallon barrel after rising 6 cents on Tuesday.

In natural gas trading, the September contract settled at $1.440 per 1,000 cubic feet compared with $1.450 Wednesday. Contracts for later delivery were mixed.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed Wednesday in foreign exchange, rising against the Japanese yen and British pound but losing ground against other key currencies.

Gold prices strengthened.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $372 a troy ounce, up $4.10 from late Tuesday.

In Tokyo, where global trading begins, the dollar fell to a closing 149.13 Japanese yen from 148.70 yen at Tuesday's close.

The dollar was stronger against the British pound compared to Tuesday. Sterling bought $1.8125 in London, down from $1.8250, and $1.8125 in New York, down from $1.8140.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's quotes, included: 1.6170 German marks, down from 1.62075; 1.3715 Swiss francs, down fromm 1.3785; 5.4170 French francs, down from 5.4365; 1,183.625 Italian lire, down from 1,186.00; and 1.15175 Canadian dollars, down from 1.15655.

Gold rose in London to a late bid of $373.25 an ounce from $368.25 Tuesday.

Help sought

DALLAS (AP) — The union representing striking Greyhound bus drivers has asked the government to undertake efforts to make the company reinstate the drivers immediately, saying pending disputes will take too long to resolve and could end with no jobs or money for its members.

In a letter dated Monday, the Amalgamated Transit Union asked the National Labor Relations Board to seek a federal court injunction ordering the drivers back to work.

Economic reports raise recession fears

■ Government reports of a slump in factory orders for "big ticket" durable goods raised new concerns about a recession, while a small increase in sales of existing homes did little to cheer economists.

By Martin Crutsinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory orders for "big ticket" durable goods plummeted 3.2 percent in June, the government said Wednesday in a report that raised new concerns that the United States could be flirting with a recession.

The Commerce Department said that demand for durable goods, items ranging from bicycles to battleships, fell $4.14 billion to a seasonally adjusted $124.69 billion last month.

The June decline came as a surprise to analysts who had counted on a further pickup in orders to signal that the fortunes of the nation's manufacturing sector were on a permanent upswing.

Durable goods orders are considered a key barometer for the future since a drop in orders normally triggers cutbacks in production plans and job layoffs.

Hopes for a rebound in manufacturing had been fueled by a 4.2 percent rise in orders in May and an even bigger 6.7 percent advance in March.

But the June decline continues the saw-tooth pattern evident since January. Orders fell by 4.1 percent in April and dropped by a record of 10.5 percent in January.

"The durable goods report is a distinct yellow flag on how the economy might perform in the second half of the year," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "In two of the last three months, we have seen substantial declines in the orders numbers."

Mark Zandi, senior economist at Regional Financial Associates in Chester, Pa., said the orders report was especially disappointing because many economists had looked for a rebound in manufacturing to help bolster growth in coming months.

"If manufacturing doesn't show signs of strength, there really is no sector of the economy to provide the impetus for growth," he said. "The consumer sector is extremely weak, investment spending has been hurt by the slide in profits and housing is in a recession."

A separate report Wednesday showed that sales of existing single-family homes posted a small 1.2 percent advance in June, the first monthly gain since last September.

The National Association of Realtors attributed the upturn to falling mortgage rates and said it offered the promise of further gains in the months ahead. But other economists said that a one-month upturn did not signal an end to the extended slump besetting the housing industry.

In a sign of how sluggish the manufacturing sector has been, orders for durable goods totaled $744.7 billion during the first six months of this year, 1.5 percent below the same period in 1989.

The June weakness was widespread across all industry groups. About half of the decline was attributed to a 20.7 percent drop in orders for military hardware, the biggest setback in the defense category since a 33.6 percent drop in January.

The military sector tends to be extremely volatile, depending on the timing of government contracts. But analysts believe this year's weakness reflects the beginnings of an extended period of defense cutbacks.

Even without the big defense decrease, durable goods orders would have been down 1.7 percent in June.

Tandy Corp. unveils new home computer

By Mariann Caprino

NEW YORK (AP) — Tandy Corp. delved further into the elusive home computer market Wednesday with an easy to use machine the company hopes will become as integral to family life as all those notes tacked on the refrigerator door.

The unveiling of the Tandy 1000 RL, which is now available at more than 7,000 Radio Shack stores nationwide, came a month after IBM introduced a relatively low-priced machine intended for home use by people without the time or inclination to learn complicated computer technology.

Like the IBM Personal System-1, the Tandy 1000 RL was developed with extensive research and testing by families in the home. Using its findings, the company chose dozens of applications based on the tasks families said they performed most frequently.

Among its functions, the machine can organize a grocery list, adjust recipes to vary the number of servings, chart expenses, serve as a message center for family members and convert measurements, like pints to liters.

S&Ls lose $271 million in first quarter of 1990

■ The nation's privately-run savings and loans posted a first quarter loss of $271 million, worse than the first quarter a year ago, but better than the fourth quarter of 1989.

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's privately run savings institutions lost $271 million in the first three months of this year, a worse showing than in the same period a year ago but a sharp improvement over the previous quarter.

The Treasury Department's Office of Thrift Supervision said the red ink compared with a $3.1 billion loss in the fourth quarter of 1989 and a $10 million profit in the first quarter of 1989.

The figures do not include 350 thrifts which were still open at the end of March but were controlled by the Resolution Trust Corp., a new agency charged with closing and selling failed S&Ls. The corporation is expected to release those figures next week.

Analysts complained that reporting profit results separately for private and government-controlled thrifts amounts to sugar-coating bad news and interferes with their ability to analyze the entire industry. The thrift office collects information from both sets of S&Ls and in the past had always released both groups of figures.

"It's hogwash," said Bert Ely, a financial institutions analyst in Alexandria, Va. The thrift office "wants to be the good-news boys."

However, thrift office director Timothy Ryan declared, "I'm not ... Mr Rosy Scenario.

"Putting the two together presents an inaccurate picture of the industry," he said.

General Motors wants to expand NGV program

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – General Motors Corp., which plans to produce a fleet of natural gas-powered vehicles for customers in Texas and California, will begin working this week with gas industry officials in an effort to expand the program nationwide.

The Detroit-based auto giant, which has become the first of the Big Three car makers to commit to full-scale natural gas vehicle production, has scheduled a Thursday planning meeting with the American Gas Association in Washington, D.C.

According to officials involved in the meeting, GM will ask the trade group for its help in marketing the company's new line of natural gas-powered trucks to gas utilities throughout the country.

"We will hold preliminary discussions on expanding the current GM effort," said Rodney W. Lighthipe, who directs the new product development effort for San Diego Gas & Electric in California. "The (gas association) right now is attempting to put together a nationwide truck-buying program."

Experts say any expanded effort likely will be patterned after GM's natural-gas-vehicle program announced Tuesday during joint press conferences in Houston and Los Angeles.

That project is backed by 10 gas companies in Texas, California and Colorado

How to decide whether to lease or buy car

By Scott Burns

Q. My husband and I recently began shopping for a new family car. After test driving one car, the dealer's financial manager gave us a spiel extolling the virtues of leasing rather than buying. An hour-and-half and a barrage of facts and figures later, we were so shell-shocked and confused that we stumbled home in a stupor.

Burns

Since leasing is now so heavily promoted, which is the most advantageous: leasing or buying? And if leasing, for which term?

Our present car has a clear title and trade-in value of $5,000. We have budgeted $18,000 for the new car, and we will finance the $13,000 balance at our credit union for 36 months at 9 percent. Typically, we drive a car five years between trade-ins. I have my own part-time business, and our combined gross income is $75,000. Also, is there a rule-of-thumb to calculate what you should spend for a car like there is for a house, i.e., two times your annual income? — D.W., Carrollton, Texas.

A. Let's start with the last question first. One rule of thumb comes from lenders limits. Generally speaking, lenders get worried when your housing payments exceed 25 percent of your income and your total payment obligations exceed 33 percent of your income.

That leaves 8 percent of income for consumer financed items such as cars. If 8 percent of your income is devoted to financing cars, perhaps you can afford to finance an amount between $11,250 for two years or $22,500 for five years. Your financing is relatively conservative. But apply the same measures to the median family income — about $33,000 — and you can see why most people buy used cars, not new cars.

The 1986 tax reform, which eliminated the deduction of consumer interest payments, increased the appeal of leasing for consumers because it eliminated the interest deductibility advantage of ownership. On the loan you are taking out, for instance, you will be paying $1,882 in interest. If that was deductible and you were in the 28 percent tax bracket, you would enjoy tax savings of $527 or nearly $15 a month. Under current tax law, you won't.

As a result, leasing and owning now look the same: leasing has no great advantage over ownership. Whether you own or lease depends on what you do with a car. Let me give you some examples:

IF YOU DRIVE VERY LITTLE. The least expensive way to own a car is to buy a reliable car and drive it for as long as possible. This reduces the burden of depreciation which is the largest single cost, by far, in car ownership. Those who drive, say, 5,000 to 10,000 miles a year can buy a car, pay for it, and drive it for years. They would not benefit from a leased car.

IF YOU DRIVE A GREAT DEAL. Car leases impose a charge for each mile over some amount such as 12,000 or 15,000 miles. If you drive MORE than that, the monthly cost advantage of leasing could disappear in a single painful payment when you turn the car in.

IDEAL CAR LEASING. If you drive a highly predictable 12,000 to 15,000 miles a year, like to change cars with regularity, have a need for maximum reliability, and enjoy driving a relatively new car, leasing may be a good way to drive. It eliminates the problem of selling or trading a car. It allows you to put equity in the car to work elsewhere. And it may lower your monthly payments so that you can either save the money elsewhere or drive a more expensive car.

Leasing also has an interesting new wrinkle: a special factory lease plan is yet another way to lower sticker prices. Saab, for instance, recently announced a $299 a month 48 month lease for a Saab 900S. This car has an MSRP of $21,378.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged upward today in a continuing cautious aftermath to the selloff that hit the market at the start of the week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.72 to 2,926.24 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 791 up, 591 down and 536 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were encouraged by the market's steady showing since it ran into a barrage of sell orders in early trading on Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down more than 100 points at its low point Monday, later trimmed its loss for that session to 56.44 points. On Tuesday it rose 17.82 points.

Beyond that, brokers said hopes for lower interest rates were buttressed by a new statistical sign of weakness in business activity. The Commerce Department reported that new factory orders for durable goods fell 3.2 percent in June.

At the same time, however, the data did nothing to dispell recent worries over a sluggish, erratic pattern in corporate profits.

DuPont climbed 1 to 39⅞ in active trading. The company posted second-quarter profits of $1.02 a share, up from $1 a share in the corresponding period last year.

Energy stocks, which took a leading role in Tuesday's advance, turned mostly lower.

TANDY: High hopes for family-oriented computer

(From 7D)

"It can become a central point in any home," said Howard Elias, Tandy's vice president of computer marketing, while demonstrating the machine at a press conference in a Manhattan penthouse.

The Tandy systems are priced as low as $749.90, although accessories like a mouse and modem are extra. A system with a color monitor with mouse, modem, clock and expanded memory runs about $1,199.70. The comparable IBM PS-1 system costs about $2,105.

Tandy, traditionally viewed as the leader in the home computer market, says people can master the PC-compatible 1000 RL in about 15 minutes. For those who can't, "We will work with you until we give up on you," Roach said.

But the question remains whether consumers will consider the 1000 RL as essential as any other home appliance or merely dismiss it as a flashy entertainment center.

GM: Wants to expand NGV

and Colorado and is the result of a yearlong gas industry push to highlight the environmental and economic draws of natural gas-powered vehicles.

The vehicles use about as much gas a year as a midsized house and represent a potentially massive new market for an industry that depends on Texas for more than a quarter of its production.

Under terms of the GM agreement, the companies will provide $935,000 to help fund engineering work and final field tests on 1,000 three-quarter-ton GM pickup trucks.

The vehicles will be built at a GM plant in Pontiac, Mich., and outfitted with the natural gas fuel system by PAS Inc., a Detroit-area GM supplier.

GM officials declined to disclose the cost of the new vehicles, which will be marketed toward large businesses and utility companies. The trucks will be available through about 40 Texas and California GM dealers by the first quarter of 1991.

Richard Pennell, product line manager for the GMC truck division, said the company plans to build at least 1,000 of the trucks, but may boost that amount if demand dictates.

But the nation's natural gas boosters, including Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, say they see GM's commitment as the first step toward a much broader U.S. natural gas fleet that could include buses, vans, and even passenger vehicles.

BURNS: Rent or buy car?

(From 7D)

At the end of the four years you have the option to purchase the car for $7,909.86. If you use the time value of money and discount the $299 payments at 10 percent (the rate on a cheap car loan) and determine the present value of the purchase option (i.e., how much you would need to set aside, today, at 6 percent to have $7,909.86 in 48 months), you find that it totals $18,054.

In effect, you are buying the car for a 16 percent discount off the sticker price. You may do better in the showroom, you may not. The point is that Saab isn't alone in offering special lease plans to move some goods: Acura has such a plan and other manufacturers are offering special short term leases. The car manufacturers have put a new coat of paint on the walnut shells... but they are still playing the same game.

Q. We cry that we need lower interest rates because this will create more jobs and building. When this happens, the unions strike for more money. If they get the raises, this causes inflation and higher costs. When this happens, the government, through politics, raises the minimum wage. This action causes higher operating costs. Again, inflation, so we start all over with the crying. Where is the middle ground? — B.B., Dallas, Texas.

A. It's time you did a reset, friend. The loop you just described is a great excuse for living in resignation and hopelessness. In fact, recent events indicate that the loop no longer works:

Unions strike more for job security and benefits retention these days than for wage increases.

Increases in the minimum wage have come very slowly and after significant battles.

Millions of working Americans can testify to wage reductions or flat wages. Talk with anyone in retailing; many in manufacturing.

Lower interest rates would mean a shift in the balance of power between labor and capital: more of the total pie would go to those who work and less to those with capital. I have nothing against capital, even have some myself. But the real value in this economy is comes from people who create and deliver new possibilities. One major element in encouraging new possibilities is interest rates.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Treasury direct,' no certificates to hold

By Bill Doyle

Q. I know I can buy a U.S. Treasury bill, note or bond through the "Treasury Direct" system by obtaining a "tender" form from a Federal Reserve Bank or branch, filling it out and sending it and a check for the purchase price back to the Fed bank or branch.

But I do not know what happens after that. Who handles the safekeeping of my Treasury securities — the government, a bank or me?

Doyle

A. If you are thinking of Treasury securities as engraved paper certificates, the answer is "none of the above."

Certificates are no longer printed for new issues of Treasury securities. Instead, everything is "book-entry" — recorded on a computer system maintained by the Federal Reserve.

You receive a statement of account when you make a purchase through Treasury Direct. That statement is your proof of ownership. You also receive a statement of account every time an interest payment is made on a Treasury note or bond, when a discount is received on a Treasury bill, when any of your Treasury securities mature and when you roll over a matured bill note or bond to buy a newly issued Treasury security.

Payments of interest, discounts and proceeds for the face amount of matured Treasury securities automatically go into the bank account you designate when you open your Treasury Direct account. That money is sent by wire the very day it is due, making it available to you immediately. That's one of the beauties of the Treasury Direct system.

Q. Are there charges for having U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds in the Treasury Direct system?

A. None, whatsoever. And therein lies a big reason for the system's growing popularity.

Local banks and brokerage firms usually levy service fees, ranging from $25 to $70, for handling the purchase, redemption or rollover of Treasury securities. You can duck those charges by going the Treasury Direct route.

After you open your our own Treasury Direct account, your statements come from the Federal Reserve. Your local bank simply receives your interest, discount and/or redemption payments from the Federal Reserve and makes your deposits.

Q. My wife, 68, and I, 78, are retired and in good health. Our monthly income of over $2,800 from pension and Social Security is more than adequate for us. We live in a paid-up condominium and have a very good health insurance plan. We have no debts, pay our bills as they come in from our checking account in which we keep enough to take care of our needs.

We have about $200,000 in Treasury bills and other government securities. We roll over each security as it matures and use the interest to purchase more. I feel this is the best way to go, but some of my friends and financial advisers say we should not have all our eggs in one basket.

Our primary goal is 100 percent capital preservation, with no risk. Are we on the right track, or should we diversify into other types of investments?

A. Your investment track is straight and conservative. Although narrow, I have to call it the right track for you.

Diversifying by spreading investments around is generally recommended for most people. But there is no need for you to stray from your present track.

With U.S. Treasury securities, you have what are counted as the world's safest investments. They meet your primary investment goal, while providing reasonable interest income.

You might do better by diversifying; you might not. Why take a chance? Enjoy what you have. Unless inflation takes off at a wild gallop, you are well fixed for life.

Eyes are making a fashion spectacle

By Trish Barr
Copley News Service

Consider Michael Douglas as he uses his heavy black glasses to stress a point in "Wall Street." Would his character seem as powerful, as forceful, as utterly ruthless without the visual impact created by those impressive frames?

Or think of Daryl Hannah's portrayal of the mousy, mixed-up Annelle in "Steel Magnolias." Would her shrinking-violet approach be as effective with contemporary, large, red-rimmed glasses instead of the '50s harlequin frames she wore for the movie?

The answer for either scenario is hardly, says image consultant Leah Feldon.

"Eye wear affects your image in a subtle way, more than people think. If you change your glasses, your entire look is different; people's perception of you is different," says Feldon, a media consultant and fashion author who is a spokeswoman for Pearle's "Specs for Success" program.

So what's the effect in a working environment?

Well, surveyed corporate recruiters say that glasses make people look smarter. Eye wear enhances a professional image, they say. And working professionals have zeroed in on the concept, Feldon says. More and more of the 80 million 25- to 54-year-olds are using eye wear to improve their image.

In New York, Feldon reports, planos (non-prescription glasses) are hot sellers among Wall Street types who view glasses as smart power accessories in corporate America.

"Wearing classic horn-rimmed glasses makes the wearer look like an intellectual — even if he's not," she says.

And glasses aren't just for looks. Many executives use them when negotiating by taking them off to make a point at a strategic moment.

Then consider the graying of the baby-boomer population. From age 45 to 64 a majority of people (88 percent) have presbyopia, a hardening of the lens that makes focusing more difficult. Menus — not to mention corporate reports — are harder to read, necessitating glasses.

As fashion-conscious baby boomers confront the wearing of glasses, they want eye wear that will accessorize their wardrobes, Feldon said. Hence the variety of colors and styles now available.

Here are Pearle's recommendations for selecting eye wear to match work style:

Classic styles work best for a more conservative, intellectual look. The traditional tortoise in brown, amber or blond is a good color choice.

These professions demand imagination in dress, including eye wear. Make a fashion statement by choosing a vivid color such as red, forest green, cobalt blue, lilac, yellow or orange.

CNS Photo

Casual (teaching, retail sales, general service).

These occupations generally call for a more informal, even sporty, look. Women may choose frames in softer shapes and lighter colors. Men may choose an easier-looking pair of tortoise-shell frames or classic wire frames in gold or silver.

Feldon also recommends looking at your face shape when choosing glasses. Generally, opposites attract — angular frames for a round face and round frames for a square face (lucky oval faces can wear any shape).

"Glasses don't have to be taken so seriously these days. Remember to have fun."

DEAR ABBY

Police banners handy for stranded motorists

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, Greg, now 21 years old, developed fluid on the brain at the age of 14. Since that time, he's had several operations. Last April, while Greg was at the hospital recovering from the last operation, he took a turn for the worse during the night. I was called and told that his condition was critical.

Van Buren

My friend Barbara offered to drive me to the hospital. En route, her car broke down on the highway. Fortunately, she had a "Call Police" banner in the glove compartment of her car. No more than five minutes passed from the time we displayed the banner until a state trooper arrived!

What a happy coincidence: Last October, I read about those "Call Police" banners in your column and sent for 50 of them to give to friends and relatives as Christmas gifts. Barbara's "Call Police" banner had been a gift from me! Little did I know that I'd be the one to benefit from it. The trooper told us that numerous cars have telephones these days, which explains why the response to the banner was so immediate.

Greg's operation was successful, thank God, and he graduated from Boston College on May 21, 1990. Thanks again, Abby. — DEBORAH J. TOCCO, READING, MASS.

DEAR DEBORAH: Thank you for sharing your experience with me so that I can remind others to order "Call Police" banners.

To order, write to: W.C.I.L. Banners, P.O. Box 66955, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost, which includes postage and handling, is $4 for one banner or $7 for two (for windshield and rear window). Make your check or money order (U.S. funds only, please) payable to: WCIL BANNERS. The Westside Center for Independent Living exists to help physically disabled people live independently.

DEAR ABBY: I am the father of a beautiful 2-year-old daughter. I enjoy taking her out for breakfast once a week for some special "one-on-one" time with her daddy. The problem arises (inevitably) when one of us has to go to the restroom.

I wouldn't think of leaving her alone at the table when I go, not in this day and age when there are nuts who would grab a child in a minute. But, with her at age 2, I'm not sure it's cool to take her into the men's room with me, either.

When she has to go "potty," I am unsure of which restroom she belongs in. (Believe me, Abby, I have had some strange looks from women entering the restroom as I am leaving it with my little girl in tow.)

So, on behalf of all of us fathers, I am asking you: What is the safest and most proper way to deal with this problem? — SEATTLE FATHER

DEAR SEATTLE FATHER: Little boys are routinely taken into ladies' rooms by their mothers, so why shouldn't little girls be taken into men's rooms by their fathers? (Better a small girl in a men's room than a grown man in a ladies' room!)

Obviously, if there is a stall with a door in the men's restroom, that is the one you should choose.

AT WIT'S END

Television's honesty too close to reality

By Erma Bombeck

During the last few years I've noted a trend developing where TV entertainment has been taken out of the hands of professionals and is being provided by the people who used to watch it.

Bombeck

Television has always been an asylum of sorts, where the viewers mill around and watch art take a shot at imitating life. Now it seems the inmates are running it.

Remember when talk shows featured a parade of stars from the glitzy world of show business? Now they feature panels of your normal, everyday neighbors who were all married to men who dumped them to marry former nuns.

Perry Mason, who never lost a case, has been replaced by Judge Wapner, who has a real-life loser on every show. Forget the Beaver. Bring us Roseanne, who has never baked a cookie or worn a string of pearls. Who needs "The Untouchables" when we have the reality of the "America's Most Wanted" flashed on the screen?

Sitcoms have been brought to their knees by "America's Funniest Home Videos." What's the big deal about Mr. Ed's talking horse when we can see a real woman fall off of one? Even "Dragnet" pales when compared to the drama of "Rescue 911."

Most of the made-for-television movies are based on real-life stories of incest, rape, violence and murder. Game shows that at one time featured familiar faces are now in the hands of contestants who think SAG is a condition. Even the commercials have given up illusion. With hidden cameras they spy on real people who cannot believe they're drinking instant coffee.

There is no end in sight. Cable television has announced it is looking for amateurs who can tell "adult jokes" to be used on a new series being developed — jokes, the cable people say, that "only cable can show."

All of this "honesty" in television could account for the popularity of the Simpsons, with their compost hair, their rotten kid and their baby with a pacifier implant. It could account for Dick Tracy, who really lives on the edge pursuing his line of work wearing a yellow raincoat. Who knows?

I was raised in an era when the sounds of violins came out of trees whenever a couple kissed on the screen. The Indians on Westerns had vaccinations. Lucy set fire to her nose, and Jack Benny never got bleeped in his life.

It wasn't reality. But frankly, after the news, I can't handle any more than that.

Keeping the hidden balance

In its more common form, diabetes appears gradually. Patients often are unaware of it until it is discovered through routine tests or when serious complications arise. Here's a look at what diabetes is and what it does to the body.

What is diabetes?

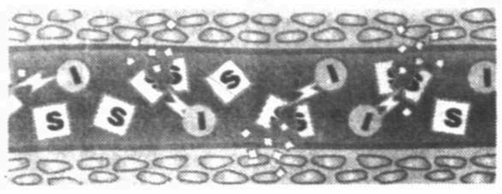
Diabetes results from a lack of the hormone insulin, which is secreted by the pancreas and metabolizes, or breaks down, glucose (blood sugar) into energy the body can burn or store.

I Insulin S Sugar



When there is a lack of insulin in the blood, the body is unable to metabolize sugar. As a result, cells are starved for energy, causing constant hunger, and the blood is overloaded with sugar, leading to frequent urination and constant thirst.

Types of diabetes

Type I, or juvenile diabetes, is a rare and severe form of the disorder that appears in people younger than 35, usually from ages 10 to 16. The pancreas produces no insulin. Without regular injections, the patient becomes comatose and dies.

Type II, or adult-onset diabetes, is more common. Onset is gradual and occurs mostly after age 40. Some insulin is produced, but not enough to meet the body's needs. Insulin injections are usually unnecessary, as it can be controlled through diet, exercise and oral medication.

Risk groups

- People with a family history of diabetes
- People older than 40
- Overweight people

Control methods

- Weight reduction
- Reducing sugar intake
- High-fiber diet
- Exercise
- Medication

Diabetics need to stay active

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — For diabetics, exercise is a double-edged sword. It can greatly help them — or it can injure and possibly kill them.

The trick, experts say, is knowing how much to do, and how to do it. They say diabetics should work with their doctors to develop a program that includes diet, exercise and possibly medication.

The advantages and disadvantages are discussed in a technical review by the American Diabetes' Association's Council on Exercise. The review, which spells out an association position paper, is to be published in the July issue of a clinical journal, Diabetes Care.

"If you're doing well, you're on a roll," said Dr. David E. Goldstein, a diabetes specialist at the University of Missouri Health Sciences Center in Columbia. "If you're doing rotten, you're also on a roll, but it's in the wrong direction."

At issue is the most common form of the disease, non-insulin-dependent diabetes, affecting approximately 12 million people — an estimated 90 percent of all diabetics. Victims typically are over 40, overweight, and with a family history of diabetes.

On the positive side, the report says, exercise can help to reduce blood sugar levels, and keep them down for hours or days. However, to retain the benefit, the researchers recommend exercising three times a week, at minimum — every other day, if possible. The paper says says it's a use-it-or-lose-it situation.

One study found that diabetics who worked out for a year returned to their non-exercise glucose state within a week of stopping exercise, said Dr. Stephen H. Schneider of Robert Wood Johnson Medical School, New Brunswick, N.J., the primary writer of the technical review.

The cardiovascular effects of exercise may remain longer than the blood-sugar benefits, said Schneider, who is an associate professor in the Division of Diabetes and Metabolism. The paper says regular exercise can reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease including heart attacks, which are prime killers of diabetics. A common problem is that diabetes, which damages nerves, can reduce its victims' ability to sense the pain that would warn them that they're having a heart attack.

'If you're doing well, you're on a roll. If you're doing rotten, you're also on a roll, but it's in the wrong direction.'

— Dr. David E. Goldstein, Diabetes specialist University of Missouri Health Sciences Center

The paper concedes that research hasn't established the cardiovascular benefits specifically for diabetics. But Schneider considers the evidence in favor of aerobic workouts clear enough, based on studies of healthy people.

Exercise also burns calories — and the paper says the combination of exercise and diet may be easier than diet alone in helping diabetics do the vital job of keeping off fat, which stores potential blood sugars.

The hope is that people who commit to exercise will be more likely to stick with their diet as well, Schneider said.

The paper also hit on a controversial subject in diabetes research — whether exercise can keep people who are only predisposed to the disease from developing symptoms. The medical jury is still out on that, the doctor said, although he said research increasingly favors this view.

And the report reviewed the danger signs — the risks that diabetic exercisers face. Among them, it said, are excessive increases in blood pressure during exercise, damage to tiny blood vessels — especially in the eyes, where blindness could result — and foot damage. The combination of nerve damage and reduced circulation can result in ulcers of the foot, Schneider said.

Unless there's a medical reason otherwise, the paper says, diabetics can pretty much do whatever exercise they like. Nonetheless, it likes the standard aerobic ones, such as swimming. The researchers recommend five to 10 minutes of low-intensity warmups, followed by 20 to 40 minutes of vigorous work, and a five-to-10 minute cooldown.

Even if a diabetic isn't up to this, he might still be able to do light exercise, which burns calories.

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Study suggests garlic may help thin blood

By Jean Carper

Cooked or raw, garlic and onions may help ward off heart disease.

Carper

There is evidence that these two allium vegetables tend to "thin the blood," discouraging blood clots that trigger heart attacks and strokes. For one thing, garlic and onions can help make blood platelets less sticky and, as a result, less likely to clump together to form clots, says Dr. John Martyn Bailey, George Washington University School of Medicine.

But it is commonly believed that the "blood-thinning" agents in garlic and onions are greatly diminished or destroyed by cooking. If so, only raw onions and garlic would work.

Now, a new study by Dr. Bailey and co-workers, has identified three blood-thinning agents in garlic and onions — and the main one, says Dr. Bailey is adenosine, which survives cooking. Therefore, cooked garlic and onions should also act as anticoagulants, he says.

Further, Dr. Bailey notes, adenosine is a blood-vessel relaxant, which suggests onions and garlic might help reduce blood pressure. He also says Chinese black mushrooms, called "tree ears" are rich in adenosine and are anticoagulants.

A niacin warning

It can lower your blood cholesterol and perhaps help ward off heart disease. You don't need a prescription to get it, and many pharmacists recommend it. On the other hand, there's new evidence niacin can be exceedingly dangerous, says Dr. Jere P. Segrest, University of Alabama School of Medicine.

He is talking about "sustained-release" or "slow- or timed-release" forms of the B vitamin niacin. "Nobody should take sustained-release niacin unless a physician is following them carefully and doing liver-function tests," warns Dr. Segrest. He and colleagues recently reported four cases of liver damage in people taking sustained-release-type niacin. Regular so-called crystalline-type niacin was not harmful, but is more likely to cause flushing.

Dr. Segrest fears that many people taking sustained-release niacin may unknowingly inflict liver damage. However, he says, "it is reversible if we catch it early enough."

Some signs that niacin may be causing liver problems, Dr. Segrest says, are: extreme fatigue, dark urine, yellowing eyes or skin and a sense of "malaise or just feeling bad." If you are taking sustained-release niacin and have such symptoms, by all means check with your physician, says Dr. Segrest, and switch to regular niacin.

The right fish oil dose?

If a little fish oil is good for the heart, is more a lot better? Probably not, say Dutch investigators.

In a new study, they set out to find the best heart-protective dose of so-called omega-3 fatty acids found in fish oil. They fed various doses of fish oil to 45 healthy men for three months. They analyzed how much omega-3 actually got into cell membranes and the benefits to the blood. The fish oil was on top of the men's regular diet of one fish dish a week.

Their conclusion: a low dose (1.5 grams of omega-3) was good; a medium dose (3 grams) was much better — but a high dose (6 grams) was no more protective than the 3-gram dose. The men's tissues simply did not absorb significantly greater amounts of fish oil, nor were blood benefits boosted much. That means if you already eat a little fish, an extra 3 grams of omega-3 a day may be the most you need to protect your heart.

That's the amount in 4 1/2 ounces of raw Atlantic mackerel; 7 ounces of raw Atlantic salmon; 71/2 ounces of pickled herring; 15 ounces of canned white (albacore) tuna; 61/2 ounces of canned sardines and 8 ounces of whitefish.

Vitamin A may help with measles

BOSTON (AP) — Vitamin A supplements can significantly reduce the risk of death and serious complications in children with severe measles, which remains one of the world's major killers, according to a study.

The research, conducted in South Africa, found that the vitamin reduced the death rate by more than half and the duration of pneumonia, diarrhea and hospitalization by about one-third.

The results "indicate a remarkable protective effect of vitamin A in severe measles," the doctors wrote.

Around the world, measles kills about 2 million children each year and leaves many more blind or afflicted with lung disease.

Earlier research has turned up circumstantial evidence that the vitamin helps. As a result, the World Health Organization recommended three years ago that vitamin supplements be given to young measles victims anywhere that vitamin A deficiency is common or that more than 1 percent of measles cases are fatal.

The latest study was conducted by Drs. Gregory D. Hussey and Max Klein of the University of Cape Town and was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

It was performed on 189 children who were hospitalized because of measles complicated by pneumonia, diarrhea or croup. They were randomly assigned to receive 120 milligrams of vitamin A or identical-looking placeboes.

Thatcher names archbishop

LONDON (AP) — George Carey, the Bishop of Bath and Wells and a supporter of the ordination of women, was named the 103rd Archbishop of Canterbury on Wednesday.

Carey was a surprise choice to succeed Robert Runcie as spiritual leader of the state Church of England and 70 million Anglicans worldwide, including 2.5 million Episcopalians in the United States.

"To be nominated as the 103rd Archbishop of Canterbury is a sacred trust and I feel dazed and unworthy," said Carey, the 54-year-old son of a hospital porter who has remained close to his Cockney roots.

"Because I have a strong sense of history I am keenly aware of entering into a rich heritage of faith, learning and spirituality."

His appointment was announced by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who chose him from two names submitted by the 16-member Crown Appointments Commission, a church-elected body. The other name remains a secret.

Runcie, who must retire by his 70th birthday on Oct. 2, 1991, has said he will retire at the end of January.

As archbishop, Carey will be appointed to the Privy Council, which advises the queen, and become a member of the House of Lords, the unelected upper chamber of Parliament.

Carey was not on any list of those considered main contenders to lead the church. But the speed of the announcement, which had not been expected until fall, indicated the nominating commission was unanimous.

The 16-member commission forwarded the two names to Mrs. Thatcher two weeks ago. She met Carey on Monday and decided to recommend him, government sources said.

An evangelical Christian, Carey is known for his orthodox views. However, he also favors the ordination of women and close relations with Roman Catholics and other Protestant churches, and is an avowed environmentalist.

"I want to be a pastoral archbishop," he told a news conference.

Carey holds a doctorate from King's College London. He was principal of Trinity Theological College in Bristol between 1982 and 1987 and honorary canon of Bristol Cathedral before being named Bishop of Bath and Wells in 1987.

The two frontrunners for the archbishop's post, Archbishop of York John Habgood and Bishop of Liverpool David Sheppard, are liberals and were opposed by the conservative wing of the church.

Sheppard called Carey "a gifted and able man who will serve the church and the nation faithfully with strength."

Habgood, 63, said: "There is a little human bit in anybody that likes the top job" but he said that in his "heart of hearts" he thought he was too old for it.

Runcie welcomed the "imaginative appointment," a sentiment echoed by the Rt. Rev. Robert Williamson, Bishop of Bradford, who called it "exciting."

Carey served in the Royal Air Force as a radio operator before being ordained in 1962. He is married, has two sons and two daughters and, in a Who's Who entry, lists his recreation as jogging.

He said he would encourage signs of "new life and vigor" in the church and hoped to bring in people like those he grew up with in London's East End. For them, he said, "all too often the church seems light-years away."

The Rt. Rev. Michael Baughen, the Bishop of Chester, said Carey "has the Church of England very much in his heart, is a man of mission, is extremely well-grounded theologically, and has a warm and delightful personality with a real understanding of life."

But Tony Benn, a left-wing lawmaker from the opposition Labor Party, criticized Mrs. Thatcher's role in the appointment and repeated his call for the separation of church and state in Britain.

Christianity was introduced into England within 300 years of the death of Christ, probably by Roman soldiers then occupying the country.

In 597, Pope Gregory the Great sent 40 missionaries to England headed by a monk, Augustine, to preach the Gospel to the nation. They landed in Kent, where Augustine was made the first archbishop of Canterbury that year.

Another mass grave found in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government announced Wednesday it has found another mass grave in the Atacama desert where victims of Chile's former military regime are believed buried.

Officials said the latest grave is thought to contain the remains of 26 suspected leftists.

Belisario Velasco, undersecretary of the Interior Ministry, said the bodies were apparently destroyed with dynamite. It was not clear why dynamite was used, but the victims may have been blown up after they were shot to death to make identification more difficult.

The exact number of bodies in the grave has not been determined, but several skulls and other bones as well as pieces of decomposed clothing were found, Velasco said.

Officials on Wednesday sent a team of doctors and anthropologists to investigate the grave in the desert near Calama, a mining city 960 miles north of Santiago.

It was found by relatives of dissidents executed in the region shortly after the 1973 military coup that ousted the elected Marxist government of Salvador Allende and propelled Gen. Augusto Pinochet to power.

His 16-year authoritarian rule was stained by charges of widespread rights abuses. While in power, Pinochet decreed an amnesty for all rights abuse that occurred before March 1978.

Pinochet was succeeded on March 11 by Patricio Aylwin, an elected civilian. The general remains commander-in-chief of the army.

Military authorities had reported shortly after Pinochet's coup that 26 leftists were sentenced by a special military tribunal and executed on Oct. 23, 1973, in Calama. Relatives were notified, but the bodies were never delivered.

A THOUGHT FOR EVERYONE WHO RESENTS SITTING AT A DESK EIGHT HOURS A DAY.

When neuromuscular disease strikes, many muscle functions are lost. So writers can't write. Musicians can't play. Teenagers can't dance. Babies can't cry. Many patients lose the ability to walk. And once they're in wheelchairs, they'll never get out.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association is striving to cure 40 neuromuscular disorders, including, ALS ("Lou Gehrig's disease") and myasthenia gravis. MDA maintains some 230 clinics around the country to help people with muscle diseases. And MDA provides orthopedic equipment and other aids for daily living, all free of charge to patients and their families.

You can help MDA fight neuromuscular disease by sending a tax-deductible contribution today. The Association receives no government grants or patient fees, so it's work is funded entirely by private donations.

Next time you think you've been sitting too long, sit one more minute and write a check. You'll be helping thousands of patients stand up to their disease.
