If you have not read and studied the proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution you had better do so now for this week will be the last they will be published. There are ten amendments and The News is publishing five and the Colorado Record five.

Cotton where recent rains have not fallen is beginning to show the need of moisture, in fact there are some spots that are burning badly. On the average, however, the crop will turn out better than it did a year ago according to reports gathered throughout the territory. The yield for the Lorraine territory has been estimated by some at from eight to thirteen thousand bales.

Some people are getting impatient about the street marking and house numbering deal sponsored by the Lions Club. The deal is going to be put over. A lot of preliminary work was necessary before the numbers could be sold. The committee in charge of that phase of the work has no completed its job and after Thursday of this week committees appointed to sell the numbers will begin their work. They are to have their job finished within two weeks and after that the markers and the numbers will be put up as rapidly as possible.

The housing situation has not changed any here recently. People who want to live here are still looking for a place to live. In most cases they are workers who have jobs of various kinds in the oil fields within driving distance. We are sorry we have no places for them. Working people are the ones who spend their money and keep business moving.

Howells Entertain Guest From Holland

Helen Simons of Wauback, Holland is here this week visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howell. Miss Simons came to Lorraine Sunday with the Howells' daughter, Mrs. C. M. Reese of Albany, whose home she has visited in since June.

Since arriving in the States, October 5, 1948, Miss Simons has been visiting the parents of soldiers buried near her home and families of soldiers who stayed in her home during the war.

The Dutch people have taken it as a personal responsibility to care for graves of American soldiers. Memorial day 1947, there were 70,000 people present at dedication ceremonies at the cemetery near Helen's home.

It was in 1946 that Helen "adopted" the grave of Lt. H. C. Reese who is buried in a cemetery 20 miles from her home. Lt. Reese, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Reese of Albany, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howell, Lorraine was killed in a plane crash in 1945.

Helen has ridden her bicycle the 20 miles to care for Lt. Reese grave at least once a month during the past two years and during the summers more often.

She has also visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Richards in Abilene, and brought messages to the Richards from neighbors who care for the grave of their son, Pvt. H. V. Richards who was killed by a sniper bullet during the drive toward Germany, and buried in the same cemetery as that of Lt. Reese.

When she left Holland for the U. S. the neighbors gave her the Richards' address and urged her to see them if possible. After arriving at the Reese home in Albany she found that Abilene was only a short distance from there and also to her surprise she learned that Mrs. Reese and Mrs. Richards were girlhood friends, graduating in the same class from Lorraine High School and were close friends.

After arriving in the states she visited a girl friend in New York who married an American soldier, and with one of her fathers friends in Penn. She also visited families of soldiers in Baltimore, Maryland, Nebraska and Scranton who visited in their home during the war.

Everything in the U. S. is wonderful says Helen, though some of the customs are amazing to her—such as the speed of an automobile. The maximum speed in towns in Holland are about 15 miles an hour and 25 and 30 miles on the open road. Their main mode of traveling is by bicycle.

In letters received from her mother, the neighbor children want to know if she has seen an honest-to-goodness cowboy and she really has, since she attended the Albany Fandangos. She saw her first rodeo Wednesday when she attended the opening night performance at the Colorado City Roundup.

Gift Party Honors Mrs. Rae Furlow

Mrs. Rae Furlow, the former Lila Linder, was complimented at a kitchen shower when Shirley Taylor and Jeannine Martin entertained at 8 o'clock p. m., August 19, in the Taylor home.

Centering the colonade was a large bouquet of bachelor buttons in a yellow pottery bowl with yellow pottery candleholders holding green candles on either side. Bouquets of dahlias were featured in the flower arrangement for the piano which was arranged with zinnias.

Miniature plastic spoons of multi colors were tied on coke battles as favors. Pink napkins were designed on the table where refreshments of tuna sandwiches, jumbo nuts, mints, cheese canapés and cokes were served.

Present were the honoree, Mrs. Rae Furlow, Mrs. Roy Linder, Mrs. Cline Taylor, Betty Horton, Eloise Grissom, Patsy Beaty, Patsy Green, Peggy Beaty, Mary Templeton, Faye Narrell, Loretta Stewart, Lora Nell Jean and Jeannine Martin and Shirley Taylor.

Request Made For Return of Band Uniforms, Music

It is requested by both Mr. Parish and Mr. Verner, band director, that any person who has old band uniforms or any school band equipment to turn same in to either Mr. Parish or Mr. Verner immediately. This equipment is needed very badly and it will be greatly appreciated if anyone having such equipment in their possession would turn it back to the school.

Several years ago the band was completely outfitted in new uniforms, but through the years the school has been missing them. If you either have any uniforms or know anything about them you are requested to get in contact with either of the school officials mentioned above.

Also any person possessing music that belongs to the school is requested to bring it in as soon as possible. Veterans Will Apply For Dividends On Life Insurance

Monday, August 29, 1949 will be the first day of distribution of application forms for the National Service Life Insurance special dividend to be paid to veterans who carried their GI insurance for three months or more prior to January 1, 1948.

Application forms will be available at post offices, veterans' service organizations, American Red Cross, Veterans' County Service offices and throughout the West Texas area served by the Lubbock Regional Office of Veterans Administration, Manager Robert W. Sisson announced.

These simplified application blanks are in the form of a three-fold card; the veteran will retain one third of the card, which contains the instructions, and after filling in his full name, service number, C-number if any, and insurance number or numbers if available, and address, he will place a one-cent stamp on the remaining two-fold card and mail to Veterans Administration, Washington, D. C.

It is expected the dividend check distribution will begin in January and will be substantially completed during the first six months of 1950. "Making application on the first day of distribution of the forms does not necessarily assure early receipt of the special dividend check," Mr. Sisson emphasized.

Beneficiaries of deceased veterans who are presently receiving insurance benefits will not be required to make application for the special dividend.

Veterans Administration will mail direct to beneficiaries of deceased veterans whose insurance was not in force at time of death, the necessary application form for any accrued dividend payable.

One application only is necessary although the veteran may have had more than one policy of insurance or more than one plan of insurance. It is further pointed out that where the insurance number is unknown, the veteran's application will be identified through his service number.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Congress Beats Off ERP Fund Cut; Russia Winning Cold War in East; Personal Incomes Rise in Nation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

SALUTE TO ISTANBUL... The U. S. sixth task fleet arrived in Istanbul recently for a five-day visit. One of the ships, the USS Fargo, a cruiser and flagship of the group, is shown firing a salute to Istanbul city. In middle background can be seen the aircraft carrier Coral Sea.

ERP FUND:

5.75 Billions More

The European recovery program appeared set for another year. The senate, by a vote of 63 to 7, voted a 5.75 billion dollar appropriation to take care of European recovery needs and pay U. S. occupation costs abroad. Final action came after two weeks of debate.

THE SENATE voted a full 12-month program, with no authority of the spending agency to expend the money in a shorter period. At the same time, it approved an outlay of $344,000 for a congressional watchdog committee to keep a check on foreign spending.

The upper chamber of congress gave tacit approval to nationalization of industries in England, that is—by knocking down an amendment which would have withheld recovery funds from any nation which in the future nationalized an industry. This was aimed directly at Great Britain.

The bill provided:

One hundred and fifty million dollars for ECA loans to Europe.

A billion, 740 million dollars for ECA's May-June operations.

NINE HUNDRED MILLION for army occupation costs in Germany, Austria, Japan and the Ryukyu Islands.

Forty-five billion for Greece and Turkey.

In its struggle with the bill, the senate beat off efforts to earmark 500 million dollars for a loan to Spain and to require the ECA and the army to earmark two billion dollars for surplus U. S. farm products.

CHINA:

Lost Cause

Accusations, name-calling, recriminations did nothing to distort the picture—if the United States was winning the cold war in the West, she was losing it in the East.

The United States' "white paper" on what had happened in China and why charged vigorously that Communist victory over the Chinese and the disintegration of the Nationalist government were all the fault of Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

SAID DEAN ACHESON, U. S. secretary of state: "Full blame for the ominous result of the Chinese civil war accrues to Chiang Kai-Shek and other Nationalist leaders because they lost no battle as the result of a lack of American aid."

In obvious contrast to the firm policy in dealing with Russia on problems affecting the West, Acheson said of China's future and U. S. aims in that direction: "Future U. S. policy must concentrate on relieving China of the Moscow-inspired foreign yoke of Communism."

That appeared easier said than done, however. There was no pact and no arms program to warn off the Reds, and, anyway, the Communists were on the ground and in control. Even the most optimistic among the diplomats in Washington would realize that throwing the Communists out of China would be a long, hard fight.

A FORMER AMBASSADOR to China, Major Pat Hurley, was quick to charge that the state department's "white paper" was nothing but an alibi for U. S. failure to stem the Communist tide in China.

JOHN BULL: IRKED

British Resent Policy Criticism in U.S.

Word from London was to the effect that the British are no little perturbed at the mounting criticism in the United States of England's recovery efforts. Official British sources said they believed many of the complaints are based on lack of knowledge of Britain's problems and achievements since the end of World War II.

The British were rather perceptive in partial interpretation of the cause of criticism here. Some informants expressed the belief much of it may stem from dislike of President Truman's overall economic policy, and added this may be the reason Britain has become the object of attack by Republicans and others who seek to pile up political capital in America by continuing to criticize the British.

POLITICS:

GOP Seeks Unity

The one thing it did not have in 1948 and the one thing it seeks most in 1952 is the one thing the Republican party seems most unlikely to find—and that is unity.

IT is characteristic of the American voter that when things are going fairly smooth at home, there is little disposition to change administrations. The long tenure of the Republicans and the even longer tenure of the Democrats with Roosevelt and Truman point up that fact.

Therefore, if the GOP failed to attain unity in the 1952 presidential race, how could the party ever hope to win? There was an outside chance that, under a unified campaign, the party might win in '52. That chance lies in the fact that a lot of Republicans have been voting with the Democrats simply because they were at odds with their own party's candidate and fed up with the "me, too" policies of twice-contender Thomas E. Dewey.

BUT the chance for any real harmony within the party was slim. This was indicated by the bitter split in factions when Guy George Gabrielson of New Jersey was selected to replace Hugh D. Scott, Jr., of Pennsylvania, as the party's national chairman.

The changeover served merely to stir up new party turmoil and to pose the more immediate problem of unity in the congressional races now just 15 months away. Whether Gabrielson can bring this about, is, of course, wholly conjectural; but it should be remembered that if the GOP would not run hitched together when the White House was the desired destination, there is little reason to expect them to hold tight in congressional contests.

GHOST STORY:

Boy Is 'Haunted'

Because of the myriad uncertainties which beset his existence, a young boy has been fascinated by the macabre, the supernatural, the weird beliefs and stories concerning ghosts and spiritual manifestations.

THIS is evidenced by the fact that the prominent part played by spirits of the dead in the lives of the living has been recounted and extolled since the days of the most ancient tribal existence.

And through most of the scolding which beset such tales in this enlightened century there runs — if the truth were ascertainable — a tiny thread of credulity. It's rather like the old classic remark of the man who said that while he didn't believe in ghosts, he certainly had no desire to encounter one.

So the story of the Washington, D. C. boy "haunted" by "midnight manifestations" would bring the same scoffing, elicit the same secret thought, however fleeting, the same hidden wonder: "Could it be so?"

A local clergyman said it was so. This pastor told the Society for Parapsychology that he had the boy spend a night at his home. The minister said that during the night the bed on which the boy slept shook so violently he could not sleep. The boy moved to a heavy chair. The pastor said that while he stood over the chair it fell over, throwing the lad on the floor. The minister then put some bedding on the floor, told the boy to lie on it. Soon after the boy fell asleep, the minister saw the bedding and the boy slide slowly across the floor and under the bed.

Shakespeare said there are more things 'twixt heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy.

COMIC BOOKS:

New Approach

The impact of so-called "comic books" on juvenile minds and their influence for good or evil has recently been a subject of widespread controversy in these United States. Some municipalities banned sale of the more objectionable books, others contented themselves with talking; but San Diego, it appears, has come up with a most sensible approach.

That southern California city has started what it calls a "comic book of the month club." Its purpose is to "put the fun back into funny books," from whence it has been conspicuously absent all these years.

The movement was launched after many San Diego families became disturbed about the subject matter of many of the comic books.

THE project depends upon co-operation of the comic-book publishers. If that can be obtained, publishers would submit the books to a board of review in advance of publication. Books that were approved would be mailed to club subscribers, who would be divided into different age groups.

BABIES:

May Sleep More

Parents who pace the floor with their infants during the night hours can now look with hope to a new research project at the University of Chicago. Scientists there are engaged in a study of the sleeping habits of babies.

These gentlemen will seek to learn what part diet plays in the sleeping habits of babies through test feedings of proteins and specially-prepared meats.

DRIVER CAN TRANSFORM HIS FLIVVER...

Newest Models Have Built-in Parking Space

By H. I. PHILLIPS

USEFUL AUTOS

THE latest trend in auto design is toward a pleasure car that can be transformed, presto, into something else. By little more than button pressing one model is converted into a truck or station wagon. Similarly, another model has a trunk compartment that can be made into something of a boudoir.

We look for extensions of the trend, bringing perhaps, the combination sedan, deep-freeze unit and rumpus room.

Elmer Twitchell, the eminent engineer, is at work on a design for flivver that will give the summer auto tourist a car to be known as the cabana special. You can drive it onto the beach anywhere, throw a switch and change it into a beach cabana with cocktail bar.

Mr. Twitchell has other utilitarian models in mind for Detroit including the following:

1. Fisherman's special. Here the back-seat area can be converted into a huge aquarium for live bait, with a fish well for the day's catch. The car itself is aquatic and by a few wrist motions can be converted into a motor or sailboat. As an extra there is a sun lamp under which the fisherman can loiter and lie to one another in comfort.

2. The Loaf-a-Mobile. Here, by a remarkable use of engineering skills, an extension can be whisked from the back end of the car which becomes, as if by sheer magic, a patio with flowered walls and bird-bath. A palm tree can be had in the deluxe model. Through this model the problem of having an auto, a beach home and a small yard is solved.

3. The Kitchen-Eight. Lives there an autoist who has never longed to whip up a meal en route? In this model Mr. Twitchell gives the world a roomy limousine in which the touch of a button transforms the rear of the car into a complete kitchenette with icebox, stove, pantry shelves, cabinets, etc. A compartment for live birds is included in case the owner wants a fresh chicken dinner.

4. The 12-cylinder What-Fun. By a few manipulations, taking less than 10 seconds, this model, seemingly an ordinary touring car, is converted into a police car with all the traditional symbols and sirens. The mechanical devices which accomplish this change also slap a police hat onto the driver. There is no model as satisfactory as this to operators in a hurry.

The Accordion-Kar. Here Mr. Twitchell has something which will be the answer to every autoist's prayer. It is a model which folds up when the driver wishes to park it. All hands alight, a button is touched and the car contracts in the manner of an accordion until it takes up little more room than an umbrella. The car can then be left in hotel lobbies, home hallways, or even phone booths.

God Spoke to Me Today

GOD spoke to me today,
Through the gray mist above the hills
Before the day was quite awake;
Through the pink splendor of the east,
The lilac lights across the lake.
He spoke, a voice within the wind:
The little gentle winds that blow,
A bed of tulips in the sun,
Each deepest golden heart aglow,
Were God's own messengers to me—
I love him so! I love him so!

God spoke to me today —
His voice? Nay, I could not mistake.
I hear him speaking clear tonight
As the day dies and in the west
The crimson sun sinks from my sight.
Uncomraded awhile I mark
Now far, now near the darkness grow,
And lo, he speaketh, "Child of mine,
When days and nights all passing go,
Still will I hold thee, still will keep—
I love thee so, I love thee so!"

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

LARRY PARKS, who just finished "Jolson Sings Again" at Columbia, shares a fondness for old songs with his wife, Betty Garrett. They have one of the largest collections of player piano rolls in America, also a foot-operated pinola. So a party at the Parks' means that everybody makes a beeline for the rumpus room; with cider and pretzels for refreshment, and Larry pumping the pedals, they lift their voices in old favorites like "Sheik of Araby," "Whispering," and "Moonlight Bay." Incidentally, "Jolson Sings Again" is reported to be even better than the film that made Parks famous.

Radio's Galen Drake has finally given in to the demands of his listening audience; for the first time in his career, he has given a magazine permission to use his picture, (full color, at that!) with an exclusive story. His multitude of fans will be happy to learn that "This Is Galen Drake" will appear in the September issue of Radio Mirror Magazine.

For the first time in his life Danny Kaye is thinking of taking a nice, long rest. In "The Inspector General," at Warner's, he wrestled with professionals, had several sword fights and performed assorted acrobatics.

Columnists are always reporting that Howard ("Sam Spade") Duff is engaged to somebody. The weirdest "engagement" was to a stage actress, Eloise Jansen—Duff didn't know her, finally found the columnist had invented her.

Betty Hutton was just recovering from one injury — she broke a finger while rehearsing a dance routine with Fred Astaire for "Let's Dance" — when she broke a toe while playing on the beach at Malibu with her daughters.

The Fiction Corner

TRAPPER JOE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE BLIZZARD, first of the season, was roaring fitfully when Trapper Joe climbed over the river bank and approached his cabin. Midway across the intervening clearing he stumbled over something and almost fell. The something, he discovered, was a man, almost buried by snow.

3-Minute Fiction

Trapper Joe rolled the stiff form over and saw a huge pack strapped to the man's back. He grunted, picked up pack and man, and carried both into his cabin.

Trapper Joe examined the pack and found that it contained five pouches, each filled to capacity with gold dust.

There must, he reflected, be thousands of dollars worth.

PRESENTLY the blanket-swathed figure stirred. Trapper Joe stared down at it solemnly. The unconscious man's eyelids fluttered, then opened.

"Take it easy, pardner," said Trapper Joe. "You're coming around."

The man stared at Trapper Joe, then at bolt upright.

"Where am I?" he demanded. "Your cabin, but—"

"What happened? I remember setting out for the Post. It began to snow. I kept falling. Then I saw 'But you didn't have the strength to make it. I found you almost dead. I lugged you back here and nursed life back into your body. You're safe, and so's your gold."

"Sure. Some of it spilled out. You must have made a rich strike."

"I did. A pocket. I stayed too late in order to get it all out. My name's Tim McLeary." He eyed Trapper Joe curiously. "Kinda queer having this happen; waking up and finding myself alive and—"

Trapper Joe nodded. "You're wondering why I didn't leave you there to die and appropriate the dust, eh? Well, I considered it. Then thought of what a chance I'd be taking. I think: When he wakes up he'll see I saved his life."

McLeary brushed a hand across his face. His lips tightened. "I get it. You were scared to snitch the stuff. You figured I'd give you half of it on account of you saved my life."

"You're a cool one all right." McLeary twisted his thin lips into a grin. "Maybe it was good figurin' at that. Mind if I take a sleep? I feel sorta weak."

"Drink some more soup 'rat. Warm you up inside."

OUTSIDE the storm beat and tore at the tin cabin. Presently Trapper Joe slept. Time passed. The storm diminished in volume, died. The figure near the fire stirred, sat up, listened to Trapper Joe's deep breathing and reached for a stick of firewood.

Trapper Joe returned to consciousness to find himself bound in his bunk. He struggled at his bonds. After an interminably long time he freed himself, chafed his wrists, flexed his muscles. Then he built up the fire. There was a note above the mantel. "Sorry, old timer, I've been dreaming of a strike like this for years. I'm young and can enjoy the money. There's not enough for two. I've tied you lightly and left enough supplies to see you through the winter. Thanks for the lift."

Trapper Joe folded the note and put it in his shirt pocket.

"Time to celebrate," he said aloud. "Sides, I'll be wantin' to travel light so's I can reach the Indian village in three days' time."

Before sitting down to his feast he lifted a loose board behind the chimney and hoisted up a gallow. He opened the can and his eyes lighted at sight of the yellow gleaming particles of dust there.

He chuckled and replaced the can. "Well," he soliloquized, "the kid had a chance to play fair, and didn't take it. If he'd been willin' to split I'd have come half way. It'll take him a week to reach the post. By that time I'll be safe and sound."

Elmer G. Johnson, President of Harlingen State Bank, Harlingen, Texas, writes, on Febr. 20, 1948:

"Please send another bottle of Liquid Garlic, also send a bottle to my sister-in-law, Mrs. Hulda C. Dutton, 45 Atwater Terrace, Springfield, Mass.

"I have some good reports to make on the effectiveness of garlic used. Mr. Turner, Texaco dealer here has taken two bottles and is much better, his blood pressure down about 60 points. Mrs. W. F. Nelson, of San Benito, who was in bad shape is also very much better and her blood pressure down considerably. This Garlic works, and you are doing a fine job of producing it for the benefit of those suffering from high blood pressure or heart trouble."

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

40th Anniversary

This year marks the 40th anniversary of outboard motoring in the United States and not only the devotee but the spectator of the sport realizes the vast development of the industry and what the outboard motor has meant to the sportsman.

Forty years ago, Ole Evinrude's first production model of the outboard motor came from his unpretentious shop a few blocks from Milwaukee's Kinnickinnie river.

That was the start. In the years to come detachable boat motors began to appear in increasing numbers, always improved in performance and moving into a price range which made them available

As fall and resultant cooler weather approach over most of the nation, scenes such as this will be familiar ones on every body of water where Americans fish. Fall is the time of year when bass and other game fish feed in the shallows. It is also the time when the outboard motor boat owner who is also an angler will find his most thrilling sport.

to almost every boat lover or boat owner.

Since Ole Evinrude's beginning, outboard motor boats have spread practically to every lake, river and stream in the United States and in many other sections of the world. From the high-powered job of the speed demons who race outboard motor boats, to the larger, safer family type and the utilitarian, fisherman's craft, the outboard motor renders a valuable and varied type of service.

The industry, as a whole, is keenly proud of its progress and is continually attempting to improve its products. The part the outdoorsman has played in this development is recognized and appreciated by both the motor and boat manufacturers.

Tips for Gunners

While anticipating the season a bit, it might be well to recall that in many states the opening of the squirrel and dove seasons is not far off. That means an army of gunners in fields and forests, not quite but almost as large as the ranks of quail and rabbit hunters who will venture afield later.

However, when anyone takes a gun and goes hunting, safety factors should be paramount in his consciousness at all times. For that reason this list of the "Ten Commandments of Safety" for hunters is offered:

Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded, deadly weapon.

Carry only empty guns into automobile, camp or home. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.

Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble.

Be sure of the target before you shoot.

Never point a gun at anything you do not intend to shoot.

Never leave your gun unattended—unless you unload it first.

Never climb a fence or tree with a loaded gun.

Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of the water.

Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

The hunter who remembers these safety precautions is the safe and dependable companion in the hunting field. No squirrel, deer, rabbit, quail or other item of game is worth life or limb. In going afield with a gun be safe by being sure that you follow sensible safety rules.

Save Your Fish

As long as fish are alive they may be kept in the creek, tied to a root or slung over the side of a boat until the angler is done for the day. They should be checked often, however, and dead ones cleaned immediately or at least gutted and placed in dampened burlap, watercress, or, if to be transported any distance, chipped ice. They should not be allowed to lie in the water from melting ice, or they will become tasteless.

Farm Loan Types

THREE TYPES of housing loans are available to farmers under the 1949 housing act recently passed by the 81st congress. The farm housing program is set up under the Farmers Home Administration of the department of agriculture which already is in the business of making loans to farmers who have trouble obtaining credit from private sources.

According to the provisions of the act all borrowers must be approved by the county farmers home committees composed of local farmers who are now tied in with the existing program. These committees certify that the borrower is unable to get loans from private sources and the loans run to a maximum of 35 years with interest at 4 per cent.

Under this act only farm owners are eligible for these loans, although farm owners may obtain loans to improve houses of tenants, or sharecroppers or for hired workers.

First—For the larger farms which are sufficiently productive to enable the borrower to repay the loan. The money may be used for improvement of the farm house or for outbuildings. Although at this is written no top limit on size of loans has been set, they may average approximately $2,500 per farm.

Second—Loans for farms which are considered potentially adequate, and indicate that the farm will be helped with aid of the loan. On this type of loan, payments for the first few years are made easier and in certain cases the government may overlook or "forgive" a certain per cent of the first payments.

The third type of loan includes grants and loans for very poor farms which hold little hope of becoming self-supporting. These will enable the poor farmer to improve his house, eliminate unsanitary and unsafe conditions. Grants under this type may be as high as $500 with loans running up to $1,000.

The law provides that for the first year 25 million dollars will be available for lending with another two million for outright grants. According to the government experts probably 13,000 farmers may avail themselves of these loans.

The only fly in the ointment of the measure is that the act merely authorizes the appropriations and it is up to congress to make the appropriations each year if the program is to be carried out as provided in the original act. First year's appropriations likely will be enacted.

Public Power Issue

Western senators are split wide open on the question of private versus public power, or more specifically the turning over of the big public power dams of the west to the private power interests, as a result of the battle on this question both in the senate appropriations committee and on the floor of the senate.

Senators Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, and Pat McCarran of Nevada agreed with Senator Kenneth McKellar, Tennessee, to turn the electric production of government-built dams over to monopolistic control of private utilities. Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, and Carl Hayden of Arizona, led the fight to continue government transmission of electricity produced at the dams to private consumers.

How the other members of the 21-member committee voted is not certain since there was "no record vote," but Senator McKellar succeeded in getting a majority of the 13 Democrat and eight Republican members to vote his way to turn the electrical product of these dams which belong to the people over to the private utilities at virtually their own price, since they would be the only customers, and the utilities would in turn sell it to the consumers at their own price.

This question of public transmission of electricity from the public dams was an issue in the last campaign and one of the pledges of President Truman was that the government would build and operate the transmission lines.

Whether this pledge shall be redeemed at the moment seems questionable and may not be known until the closing hours of this congress.

Congressman Walt Horan, of Washington state, declares "humid midsummer in Washington, D.C., is neither the place nor time for calm deliberation and careful decision on matters of legislative importance to the United States, its citizens or the world." . . . John Foster Dulles, new senator from New York, delegate to the United Nations, Governor Dewey's choice for secretary of state, boldly told his Republican colleagues he wanted a place on the foreign relations committee.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Have your Meat Tender, Delicious, Juicy
(See Recipes Below)

Meat Magic

THERE DOES SEEM to be a magical quality about meats which are cooked to juicy, tender perfection. However, it's not a mystic magic which all aspire to, and few achieve. If there is a secret, it's available to all.

It is no secret that you should have a good cut of meat with which to start, if you want to have a delicious cut to set on the table. But once you have a good cut, do cook it properly instead of ruining it.
This latter statement may sound
a bit far-fetched, but every day there are thousands of women who go to a great deal of trouble finding a perfect roast, then cook it like a pot roast which is practically stewing it. Then, too, there are other thousands who lose pounds of meat by using old-fashioned methods such as high temperature for "browning" the meat. This is not necessary because meat cooked at constant low temperature will brown enough to be attractive to the most discerning eye, and will not shrink and lose juice
as well as waste meat.

If you have a covered roaster, resolve right now to discard the cover and invest in a rack for a roast. A true roast is not, at any point during roasting, cooked with a cover. It should sit on a rack, fat side up, at low to moderate temperature in the oven, to roast perfectly.

How long should a roast be cooked? The most accurate way of determining this is to insert a meat thermometer into the meat as you place it in the oven, and when the temperature has reached its proper point the roast is done. Insert the thermometer through the center, as deep into the meat as possible.
You may figure out the time to roast by pounds, but this is not nearly so accurate, especially if you are cooking roast beef to medium rare.

WHEN PROPERLY PREPARED

corned beef can be a real delicacy. The meat is muscular, and needs to be cooked long and slowly for real tenderness, without which it is not a delicacy by any manner of means. Here's a novel way to prepare it:

Glazed Corned Beef
6-7 pounds corned beef
½ cup canned fruit juice
½ cup brown sugar
10 whole cloves
Spiced peaches
Wash corned beef under running water to remove all traces of brine.
Cover with cold water and bring to a boil. Drain and replace water.
Simmer, slowly, in a covered kettle for 4½ to 5 hours or until meat can be pierced easily with a fork.
Add more water if necessary.

Drain meat and place on a rack in a roaster. Pour fruit juice over meat and sprinkle with brown sugar. Stick with cloves. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) for ½ hour.
Serve, garnished with spiced peaches.

HARD AS IT MAY BE for you to try roasting meat at low and constant temperature, if you've followed other ways in the past, possible for their money?

Pork Roast with Spicy Sauce

(Serves 6)
Fresh picnic shoulder
Salt and pepper
2 small onions, minced
1 tablespoon worcest-
shire sauce
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon paprika
½ cup vinegar
½ cup water
2 tablespoons catsup

Have picnic shoulder boned and rolled at the market. Season with salt and pepper. Place fat side up on rack in an open roaster.
Roast in a moderate oven (350°) until thermometer
registers 185°
or allow 40-45 minutes per pound. Combine all remaining ingredients in a saucepan and cook for 5 minutes.

*Roast Leg of Lamb

(Serves 8-10)
1 leg of lamb (5 pounds)
1 teaspoon ginger
1 clove garlic, if desired
Salt and pepper
½ cup grape jelly
½ cup water

Wipe meat with damp cloth. Do not remove fell, the thin, papery covering over the meat. Make four gashes in the roast and insert a piece of garlic clove in each of them, if desired. Rub ginger, salt and pepper into the meat. Place in roaster on rack, fat side up, and roast in a slow (300°) oven until thermometer registers 180° for well done lamb.
During the last 20 minutes of cooking time, baste the meat with grape juice which has been melted in the hot water. Remove garlic before serving.

Veal shoulder or breast may be stuffed with the following to give a very tasty roast. In roasting, use a slow oven (300° to 325°) and cook
until the thermometer registers 175°, which is about 40 minutes to the pound.

Raisin Stuffing

(For about 5 pound roast)
4 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup melted fat
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup seedless raisins
½ teaspoon pepper
Combine all ingredients and stuff lightly into meat, allowing room for expansion. Or, place stuffing to the side of the meat or in a casserole and baste with juices from meat. If you cook stuffing separately, bake for 30 to 40 minutes.

Brains, after pre-cooking, make a delicious dish when dipped in seasoned flour, then browned in fat and serve with creamy scrambled eggs.

Hearts need a lot of long slow cooking to make them tender. Veal hearts are especially good when filled with prune stuffing, then braised.

To shorten the cooking time for heart, cut in in cubes and brown in hot fat. Then fold into tomato sauce used for spaghetti and bake the whole casserole for 30 minutes.

God's Map for Me

Lesson for August 28, 1949

HOW did the writers of the Bible think about the Bible? We can get part of the answer by looking at our Psalms for this week. These poets already possessed a part of our Bible: the Law, some historical books, perhaps some of the Prophets. It was an incomplete Bible they had—but they loved it.

They did not think of it or use it in some of the mistaken ways you may find some people thinking of the Bible today. They did not think it was enough to read a line or two before going to bed every night. They did not think that having a copy of it around would bring good luck, or scare off demons. They said nothing about the Bible's being great literature. They were not at all bothered by miracle stories in Scripture; they believed them, and took them as evidences of the mighty power of God (see Psalm 105). They did not look on the Bible as chiefly a dictionary of Don'ts.
They did not think of it as a Sabbath book, but rather as an everyday one. It did not strike them as a book of mystery.

The Psalmists' Bible

In reading Psalm 19:7-14, it is interesting to see how many different things the Psalmist says about the Word of God. He calls it by various names, but that is only because, being a poet, he likes to use several words for the same thing.
As for Psalm 105, where else but in his Bible would the poet have learned that story of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and the deliverance from Egypt?

The reader of this Psalm will observe that the subject of most of the sentences is GOD. As the poet reviews his people's history, he shows that it is not simply the doings of the Israelites, but it is God who brings things to pass.

"Man proposes but God disposes" is a proverb which the writer of Psalm 105 would approve. Psalm 119 is known as an "alphabetic" or "acrostic" poem. It is divided into 22 sections, each one exactly eight verses long. There are 22 letters in the Hebrew alphabet, and in the Hebrew original of this and in the verse of the first section begins with the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, Aleph; in the next section, Beth, and so on down to the last letter, Tau.

The Book of God

WHAT the writers of these Psalms said about the partly-done Bible of their times, is of course
even more true of the completed Bible which is our heritage as Christians. One thing they make clear is that this is first of all God's book. They knew as well as we do that different human minds had a part of it, but for all that it is always God whose message comes through what they wrote. The Bible, properly understood, reveals the mind of God and the will of God.
The Bible reveals also the doings of God. His story is the weaving of God's eternal decrees on the looms of time. Again, these poets see that the Bible is for man and about man.

None of them thought of it as a guide to heaven, but rather as a road map or to guide us through the mazes of this world.
Psalm 119 stresses this world, and no other, as the world on which God's light shines.

The commandments of God are so many lengths of barbed wire to fence us in, rather road-signs to guide us on life's open highway.
The Bible presents the "How" of living. It is God's map for me.

The Bible in the Heart

THE SENTENCE: "Thy word
I have I hid in my heart" (Psalm 119:11) is the clue to the right use of the Bible. When a Hebrew writer says "heart" he means something more than mere emotion. The word means character, what a man really is. A young Korean was learning the Sermon on the Mount, but making slow work of it.

When a missionary asked him about it, the boy said, "I have to be slow. First I learn a verse, then I go out and live it.
I can learn the words in a few minutes; but it takes longer than that to live it."

That is the right idea. One verse, translated into living, is worth more than a chapter that never gets deeper in than the edge of the brain.

cil of Religious Education on behalf of

LOOPHOLES in the Law

By WILL WILSON

Past President, Texas District
and County Attorneys Association

(Editors Note: This is one of a series of short case histories, all taken from court records, showing how legal loopholes of ten enable criminals to escape punishment in Texas. Will Wilson is chairman of a special steering committee of the State Bar, which is working for revision of the antiquated Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure in order to eliminate these loopholes.)

John and Mary had been drinking heavily and were, in fact, drunk. In this condition they got into an automobile, with John driving, and rode out into the country. Out of town a few miles, John turned off of the public highway and drove onto a farmer's private property.

As the car was weaving and skidding along the farmer's road

John saw a pick-up truck coming along the road toward him. The pick-up was driven by the farmer, and he had his three small children in the back.

John was too drunk to avoid the pick-up. He smashed into it. The farmer's three children were badly injured and the truck itself was demolished. In an argument with the farmer following the accident, John admitted that he was drunk. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and brought to trial.

He was acquitted and went scott-free because he was driving on a private road—the farmer's own road—not on a public highway.

The State Bar of Texas is working to get rid of the legal loopholes that made such an outcome possible.

Mrs. L. E. Crutcher went to Lubbock Saturday to spend this week with Mr. and Mrs. William Crutcher.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Mathis and sons Don and Gary were in Lubbock Monday. Don reserved a room and made other plans to enter Texas Tech in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Walker and son Randy of Odessa were guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hallmark over the week end. Mrs. Walker and Randy remained and are spending the week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. King took their son, Melvin, to Spur Sunday, where he will spend a few days before the opening of the school term. His wife will join him there September 1. He will direct the high school band the coming school term. They were accompanied by J. W. King, Jr. and Grant Sharnan of Big Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Boone Cramer and sons of Coahoma and Mr. and Mrs. C. O. McCreight and son of Sweetwater were guests of their mother, Mrs. W. C. Farrar, Sunday.

Weekly Swing of SOUTHWEST FARM MARKETS

Many southwest farm products moved to lower price levels during the past week, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration reports.

Cotton fell $1.50 to $2.50 a bale under pressure of new crop offerings. Middling 15-16 ranged from 30.25 cents a pound at Dallas to 30.75 at New Orleans.

All grains declined except oats which gained only a fraction for the week.

Heavier receipts of cattle and calves last week than the week before brought generally lower prices. Most classes lost around 50 cents at Houston, and $1 to $2 or more at Fort Worth.

Hog prices rebounded after early sharp losses as receipts Monday's trade still left butcher hogs and feeder pigs mostly $1 to $2 lower than a week before.

Sows lost 50 cents to $1 at Texas markets but gained $1 elsewhere.

Spring lambs evidenced less weakness at Texas and Oklahoma markets than in the midwest, as receipts showed less increase.

Ewes made up a large part of receipts and prices eased slightly. Texas wools sold strong at 50 to 52 cents a pound in heavy contracting last week. Mohair rose to mostly 40 to 41 cents a pound for adult and 61 to 65 for kid.

Dressed beef and spring lamb sold steady to higher at eastern wholesale markets Monday compared to a week earlier. Mutton lost $2, and pork mostly $1 to $3.

Hens sold slightly higher in north Texas as demand improved for very light receipts. Fryers strengthened at Fort Worth but weakened in northwest Arkansas, as other southwest markets changed little if any. Eggs held steady, with top grades scarce and firm.

Guests of Mrs. G. H. Richardson and Mrs. W. H. Nix over the week end were Mr. and Mrs. Harley Mearse and Mr. and Mrs. Otis Hardin and daughters of Andrews, Mrs. Alice Herrod of Arlington, California, Mr. and Mrs. Troy Welch and daughter of Sweetwater, and Mr. and Mrs. James Moore of Abilene. Guests Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mote and children Bobbie and Byron, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brame, Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Brame and son, Mr. and Mrs. Lanthus Brame and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Moody Richardson and Lowell and Mrs. Birdie Moore.

George and Gerald Martin spent last week with their aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Bullard, in Weatherford.

Mrs. F. N. Kelley and children of Odessa are here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Brians.

Mrs. Dennis Cranfill and Jimmy of Odessa spent from Tuesday until Thursday with her mother, Mrs. J. H. Neill, and Mr. Neill.

Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Johnson left Sunday for Detroit, Michigan, where they will get a new Pontiac at the factory, after which they will go to Washington, D. C., and tour the Northeastern states before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hamilton moved to Denver City the first of this week.

Mrs. J. H. Boone spent Wednesday with her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jackson, in Midland.
