50,000 rally in support of Kyprianou

By OTTO DOELLING

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Chanting "Death to the kidnappers," 50,000 Greek Cypriots jammed Freedom Square in downtown Nicosia today to demonstrate support for President Spyros Kyprianou following the release of his son by right-wing extremists.

The president repeated he has "forgiven" the kidnappers of his 19-year-old son Achilleas.

"For those who have repented, there is still a place among us. For those who have not there will be punishment," he said.

Schools, shops and offices were closed for three hours during the rally. It was the largest demostration seen in Nicosia since the late Archbishop Makarios, Kyprianou's predecessor, returned to Cyprus after five months in exile following the 1974 coup.

Achilleas Kyprianou, who was freed at dawn Sunday, stood with his father, mother and 17-year-old brother Marcos on the speakers' platform. The brothers wore uniforms of the National Guard, the Greek Cypriot army in which Achilleas is a second lieutenant.

Released after the president promised not to punish the kidnappers, young Kyprianou reported that he was kept blindfolded in a chilly underground hole that was 6 feet long and 6 feet wide but only 19 inches high.

The youth was kidnapped last Wednesday from outside a commando training camp in the Troodos mountains southwest of Nicosia. The kidnappers, who were believed to be members of the EOKA-B underground, demanded amnesty for all political offenders.

"At the beginning, I was almost sure they would execute me," young Kyprianou told a news conference, "and I asked them, as a reserve officer of commando forces, to be executed ... with open eyes and my hands untied."

He said they did not reply.

Kyprianou said he was treated better than he expected, but "conditions of my captivity were rather bad."

"The first two days we faced a big food problem. We had bread and water ...once or twice a day. But I shared the food and living conditions of my kidnappers, and their behavior toward me was very good."

Forced to lie prone because of the low roof of his cell, the young man said he could not attempt to escape because he was blindfolded, bound and guarded contantly by "two men who definitely were not beginners."

"I have forgiven the kidnappers," President Kyprianou told reporters. "They are free to leave or stay in Cyprus. It is up to them to decide."

Begin, Sadat to meet on Christmas Day

By The Associated Press

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin said today that he would meet with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on Christmas Day to discuss conditions for Middle East peace.

Begin was interviewed in New York by Barbara Walters of ABC News.

Meanwhile, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported from Ismailia, where Sadat has a residence, that the two leaders would have lunch there and then sit down for talks on Sunday. It is Sadat's 59th birthday as well as Christmas Day.

Begin will take a special flight to a military airport near the Suez Canal city and helicopter to Sadat's residence, the news agency said.

In his New York interview, to be shown on the ABC Evening News tonight, Begin said he had wanted to meet Sadat on Dec. 26, but that Sadat had asked through intermediaries that the meeting be Sunday.

The Egyptian-Israeli peace conference resumed in Cairo today, meanwhile, and spokesman for the two countries reported "marked progress." But the negotiators appeared to be awaiting major decisions by heads of state, particularly at the Sadat-Begin meeting.

Earlier today, Syria and Saudi Arabia denounced Begin's peace proposals, saying they would perpetuate Israeli occupation of Arab land.

The official radio of Saudi Arabia, an important financial backer of Egypt and the other Arab "confrontation" states bordering Israel, said there is no justification for optimism "as long as Israeli occupation of Arab territory and Jerusalem continues."

"This occupation is a dagger stuck in the heart of the Arab nation ... the dagger must be removed through Arab unity and cooperation," it said.

Syria's official radio said the Begin plan "actually is designed to retain Israeli occupation of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip." It also blasted the proposals for not allowing for the creation of a Palestinian state.

In Beirut, Lebanon, opponents of Sadat's peace overtures to Israel apparently tried to blow up the Egyptian Embassy. Police said an embassy guard spotted a 13-pound dynamite bomb near the entrance to the building, and police experts defused it 45 minutes before it was set to explode.

Begin's proposals, which also have been denounced by the Palestine Liberation Organization, would provide civil autonomy for the Palestinian Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza but would continue Israeli military occupation there and Israeli control of Jerusalem. Other details have not been disclosed.

Begin presented the plan to President Carter in weekend talks in Washington, and U.S. officials said afterward the proposals put the Mideast "on the road to peace."

Egyptian officials say the are awaiting a report on the plan from Carter. A statement by a "high authority" said Egypt believes the first step must be total Israeli

Explosions mystify scientists

PALISADES, N.Y. (AP) — High-altitude explosions, some equal in force to a 100-ton dynamite blast, have been shattering windows and scaring residents from Connecticut to South Carolina. The explosions have scientists baffled.

William Donn, who conducts acoustical research at Columbia University's Lamont Laboratory here, said his air pressure equipment has detected seven separate explosions. Two blasts on Dec. 2 and five more last Thursday made readings on air pressure instruments, he said.

He said the explosions were much too violent to have been caused by supersonic aircraft.

A Pentagon spokesman said defense officials had no knowledge of the booms and knew of no military tests that could have caused them.

"It's amazing that something like this could happen without anybody knowing about it," Donn said.

The explosions occurred about 50 miles offshore and were too high to disturb ocean wave patterns, he said. Seismic equipment at the laboratory registered no earth movements at the time of the booms.

"What I heard was one loud boom, and the house sort of shook," said Joseph Manger, a police officer in Barnegat Township, N.J., of the Dec. 2 incident.

Donn said people on the South Carolina shore, where one of Thursday's explosions was felt, told him the boom shook their homes and in some cases broke windows.

Donn said employees at the Oyster Creek nuclear power plant in southern New Jersey heard the Dec. 2 explosion. "They thought it was an earthquake," he said.

Pitch for med school teaching facility ready

A Midland Chamber of Commerce task force, headed by K. M. Jastrow, has completed work on a presentation of Midland's bid to be the site of the Permian Basin teaching branch of the Texas Tech University Medical School, Chamber President Harrell Feldt announced today.

The presentation, Feldt said, will be delivered to Texas Tech officials by Tuesday, the deadline for community bids.

Feldt said the presentation responds favorably to all of the criteria set forth by the medical school and makes a strong pitch for location of the planned teaching facility in Midland.

Medical school officials Nov. 18 sent letters to elected officials and civic leaders in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

Feldt would not give any specifics about the contents of the proposal. He said each of the questions raised by the letter from Texas Tech has been answered "in the manner the committee (task force) feels most appropriate."

"The questions dealt largely with the attitudes of the local physicians and their desire to support and assist in the operations of the medical school," Feldt said. "I am proud to report that the response among our Midland physicians was excellent. They have made it clear that they want the medical school located in Midland and are more than willing to cooperate to assure its success."

Other questions dealt with physical facilities. These could be answered in a particularly positive manner because Midlanders in September voted $10 million in bonds for the complete renovation, remodeling and expansion of Midland Memorial Hospital, Feldt said.

He also said the question of indigent care could be answered positively because complete payment for indigent care through tax monies was provided for in the creation of a hospital district.

"All in all, we are confident that our proposal to Texas Tech and its medical school supervisors will be a first class effort on behalf of the people of Midland and Midland County as well as the people of the surrounding Permian Basin area," Feldt said.

He praised the task force committee for its work, particularly Jastrow, a past president of the Chamber and chairman of the committee.

Settlement may cost GM $40 million

By JOSEPH R. TYBOR

CHICAGO (AP) — State prosecutors announced today the settlement of the General Motors engine-switch fracas and said the $40 million the company may have to pay makes it the largest consumer victory in the nation's history.

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott said each car owner who got a Chevrolet engine in a different make of GM car will receive $200 cash and a two-year warranty under the settlement.

Scott and the attorneys general from Michigan and Ohio said this could cost General Motors as much as $40 million.

The automaker had been sued by public officials in about half of the nation's states after consumers who had purchased new Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Pontiacs discovered some contained Chevrolet engines. Many other suits were filed by private individuals.

Scott said the warranties can be transferred if the car is sold and are valued at $200 each.

"We are here to announce a $40 million Christmas present for over 100,000 people," Scott said at a news conference. "It is the largest consumer protection settlement in history."

Also at the news conference were Attorneys General William J. Brown of Ohio and Frank J. Kelley of Michigan, both of whom were instrumental in the six-month negotiations with GM.

Scott said the agreement was "extremely fair" and binds GM in the future to "telling people exactly what engine they are getting."

The settlement is subject to approval by Judge Frank McGarr of U.S. District Court. A hearing with the judge was scheduled for later in the day.

The settlement was accepted by attorneys generals in 45 states, Scott said. States not accepting terms of the agreement were California, Louisiana, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee, said a consumers attorney fighting the settlement.

Convicted nurses get new trial

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge today ordered a new trial for two nurses convicted in the poisoning deaths of hospital patients.

"The interests of justice and judicial conscience demand a new trial in this case. Defendants' motion for a new trial is therefore granted," U.S. District Court Judge Philip Pratt said in his ruling.

The judge said he ordered the new trial because of "numerous improprieties" by the prosecution in a 13-week trial.

The government "prevented the defense from preparing for the trial effectively and presented improper suggestions of fact and law to the jury," the judge said.

The nurses, Leonora Perez, 33, of Ann Arbor, and Filipina Narciso, 31, of Ypsilanti, were convicted July 13 on charges of poisoning three patients in connection with a string of mysterious breathing failures at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration hospital in the summer of 1975.

They had been accused of injecting Pavulon, a powerful muscle-relaxing drug, into the intravenous feeding apparatus of patients.

Each also was convicted on a conspiracy count. Miss Narciso was acquitted on a murder count.

More than 50 breathing failures were reported at the hospital and some patients died. It was never clear how many died from Pavulon, although investigators at one point said they thought it might be as many as 13.

Spirit of Christmas escapes wreath thief

From all appearances, the Christmas spirit sometimes evades the thieves among us.

Diana McCleskey found that out, and now she wants her holly wreath back.

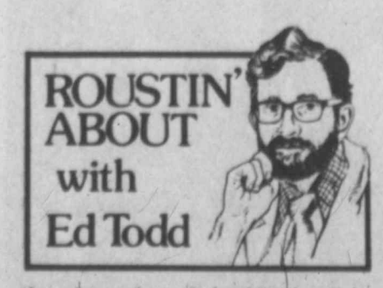

Miss McCleskey, a 17-year-old Midland High School senior who earns her spending money as a bus girl, put out a brand-new wreath to symbolically share her good tidings with passers-by.

She didn't intend to make a "gift" of it.

"Christmas will not be the same for the 'little girl' in me," she wrote in a letter to the newspaper.

"One day last week, my mom and I went shopping," she wrote. "While out, we decided to buy some holly sprigs and a ribbon to make a new wreath for our door. (The old one was beginning to look a bit shabby.)

"We got home, put it together and hung it on our front door. Later that night when I got home from work, I thought perhaps I should bring it in. Then I thought, how silly! No one would steal a Christmas wreath.

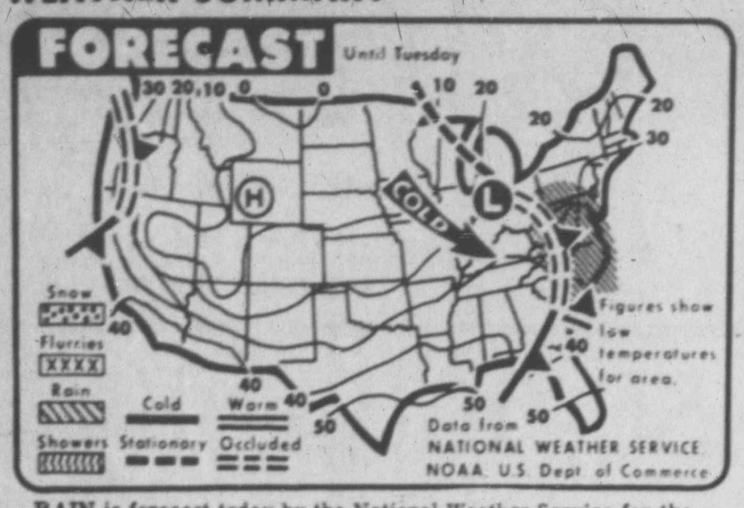

"How wrong I was! The next morning — poof! It was no more. I could understand it if the wreath had been an expensive one, but a $3.50 wreath, including tax!

"Mr. Thief, you must have been pretty hard up for a good time to steal my Christmas wreath. Where is your Christmas Spirit? Haven't you ever

More wind, blowing sand to follow cold fronts

Two cold fronts, one from Canada and one from the Pacific Coast, passed through Midland about 7:30 a.m. today. Cooler temperatures and more blowing dust are expected to follow in the aftermath, says the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

It won't be as bad as Friday's 69 mph wind, said one weather forecaster. "That was an unusual set of circumstances."

Winds are expected to be northerly between 15 and 20 mph and gusty tonight. The low tonight is expected to be near 30 degrees with the high on Tuesday in the lower 50s.

Sunday's high temperature of 77 degrees was just one degree shy of the record set in 1939.

The overnight low was 44 degrees. A low pressure system in Oklahoma is expected to bring the winds. It was an extreme low pressure system in Kansas that led in part to Friday's heavy wind, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

It was clear, still and cool this morning in Andrews, Rankin, Stanton, Odessa, Crane, and Big Lake.

At 5 a.m. today, temperatures ranged from 43 at Amarillo and El Paso to 57 at Beaumont-Port Arthur, 65 at Corpus Christi, 47 at Del Rio, 46 at Midland-Odessa, 49 at Wichita Falls, 48 at Dallas-Fort Worth and Wink and up to a balmy 70 at Brownsville at the extreme southern tip of Texas.

Skies over the state were clear with the exception of some low clouds over Corpus Christi and fog along the Gulf Coast.

It will be cooler and windy over much of the west and north sections of the state by tonight, according to the forecast. Blowing dust will blanket Texas by tonight.

Rankin girl honored by FHA

RANKIN — Susan Cole, a Rankin High School junior, recently was named "Girl of the Month" by the school's Future Homemakers of America chapter.

Miss Cole, who has been active in the FHA chapter for three years, was one of five top sellers in a recent FHA cookbook sale.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Cole of Rankin.

withdrawal from war-won Arab lands, a step Israel appears unlikely to take.

Dan Pattir, the Israeli spokesman at the Cairo talks, refused to say whether the Begin plan would be introduced at that conference.

But he and Egyptian spokesman Morsei Saad el-Din, at their first joint news conference, said progress had been made at today's meeting.

Winding up a visit to Washington, Begin said Carter "considers the proposals I brought to him a fair basis to achieve peace." But he conceded that "the American endorsement couldn't be complete, of course. There will be many problems."

The prime minister's comment on the CBS television program Face the Nation appeared to contradict a more optimistic assessment in Jerusalem by Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arieh Noar.

"For the first time since the establishment of the state," Israel and the United States "have an identity of views on the content of a peace agreement," Noar said.

Begin said his proposals call for "self rule" for the one million Palestinian Arabs now living under Israeli occupation on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip. He said they would be entitled to settle in Israel and "Palestinian Jews" would have the right to live freely on the West Bank, an area Israel has dotted with Jewish settlements during the 10-year occupation.

The Palestine Liberation Organization rejected Begin's proposal, saying it "aims at the rejection of the right of the people of Palestine to form their own state, under PLO leadership."

Despite repeated questions, Begin refused to divulge other details of his peace proposals, saying he had a "moral obligation" to discuss the plan first with President Sadat. The plan reportedly calls for the return to Egypt of all the occupied Sinai Peninsula with safeguards for Israeli security and shipping.

24-year-old's condition told

Twenty-four-year-old Tommy Lee Johnson of the 1900 block of East Pecan Avenue was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning and had been moved out of the intensive care unit, a hospital spokesman said.

Johnson was admitted to the hospital Saturday night with a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

He apparently had been shot at about 1:13 a.m. Saturday at a bar in the 300 block of North Lee Street, police said. According to witnesses, Johnson was shot three times following an argument.

heard of 'Goodwill Toward Men'? That does not mean (to) steal my wreath!

"Pilfering Thief, if you by coincidence read my letter, please hear my plea —

"BRING HOME MY WREATH!!!"

Ideally, we should be predisposed to think the best of others year-round . . . especially at Christmas time . . . at least until proven wrong.

So, perhaps the person who took it has posted Miss McCleskey's wreath on his or her front door. Now, that does sound somewhat like a paradox, even perverse. But there may be something good in all thieves, just like there's something tainted in the best of "good" folks.

So be it.

Miss McCleskey is still sharing her Christmas spirit via her goodwill flag — the wreath of good tidings. That old shabby holly wreath, the one she tried to replace, is back on the front door.

Three white teen-agers held for church fires

WASHINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Three white teen-agers are being held in connection with fires that broke out within minutes of each other and gutted four black churches in rural east Georgia.

The wooden frame churches were unoccupied and there were no injuries in the blazes Sunday night.

"The fires were all within 20 miles and all in the same direction," Wilkes County Sheriff Cecil Moore said. "They started from the east out of Lincoln County and went west into Wilkes (County)."

Moore said there has been no trouble between blacks and whites in the area.

Albert Rucker, a deacon of the Mulberry Baptist Church, said that the burning of his and three other churches had nothing to do with race.

"It had none whatsoever to do with that," he said. "It's the same reason other things happen in the world. There was just no point in it." The Georgia Bureau of Investigation and state fire marshal's office reportedly were investigating.

The suspects, unidentified because they are juveniles, were all about 16 years old, Moore said. All are from Lincoln County and were arrested there.

Moore said the youhs had "been drinking — that's all."

The first blaze erupted at about 8:30 p.m. EST at Mt. Zion Baptist Church in Lincoln County, and fires started minutes later in the other three churches, Moore said.

The other churches were identified as the Mulberry Baptist Church and Zora CME Church in Wilkes County and the Antioch CME Church in Lincoln County.

Moore said gas heaters inside the churches apparently had been tampered with and used to ignite the fires.

Woman misses three rings

Three rings valued at approximately $1,115 were taken from the Edelle Daily residence in the 400 block of West Kansas Avenue sometime Friday or Saturday, Mrs. Daily told police late Saturday.

According to Mrs. Daily, the rings were taken between noon Friday and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Missing are a crescent-shaped diamond dinner ring, an opal ring and a lava and turquoise ring.

Rankin Lions dinner slated

RANKIN — The Rankin Lions Club will hold its annual Ladies' Night Christmas dinner at 7 p.m. today at the Rankin Park Building.

The club's annual Christmas party for youngsters was held last Saturday at the park.

Hope fading for 17 victims still missing

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) — Rescuers searched Atlantic waters with dwindling hope today for 17 persons missing in the crash of a chartered Swiss jetliner off this resort island. Nineteen persons were killed and 21 survived when the plane, carrying tourists on a Christmas vacation trip, plunged into the sea on Sunday.

The charter operator said 56 of the 57 persons aboard were Swiss and one was a Portuguese woman just married to a Swiss.

The twin-engine Caravelle jet from Zurich and Geneva, bound for Santa Caterina Airport here, crashed about six miles off the beach at the village of Porto Novo. Witnesses said the plane stayed afloat about five minutes.

Swiss investigators were flying to Madeira to investigate the crash. There was no immediate indication of the cause.

Hospital officials in Funchal, the island capital, reported the survivors in generally satisfactory condition. The plane's pilot and two of the other four crew members were among those rescued.

"It was very cold and the rescue took too long — 2½ hours in the sea," said Yolande Thierrin, who came through the crash alive with her two children and later was reunited with her survivor husband at the hospital.

"We were found by a small fishing boat with three men inside, but there were six of us and a bigger ship finally took us ashore," she said.

The Portuguese survivor, Maria Luciana Oliveira Pult, was on her honeymoon. She said after the pilot announced they were about to land, she heard a strange noise in the wings.

"Suddenly I felt the plane hit something and the roof split open," she continued. "Someone handed me a lifebelt. I asked for another for my husband and it was passed over.

"I don't know how we got into the water but the next thing we knew we were holding on to a fishing buoy and freezing."

Her husband was rescued with her.

Noted poet dies at 92

NEWTOWN, Conn. (AP) — Louis Untermeyer, noted poet, editor, anthologist and critic, died Sunday night at his home at the age of 92. Cause of death was not immediately known.

Untermeyer, a high school dropout, was credited with bringing poetry to more people than any other American writer of his generation.

Besides his own books of poetry, he wrote, edited and anthologized hundreds of others. Among his most popular anthologies were "Modern American Poetry" and "Modern British Poetry," both used as textbooks.

He described poetry as "an effort to express the inexpressible in terms of the unforgettable."

DEATHS

Joseph Payne

Services for Joseph E. Payne, 52, were to be at 1 p.m. today at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Leon Odom, pastor of Austin Street Church of Christ, officiating and Weldon Browning of Hobbs, N.M., assisting. Burial was to be in Lamesa Memorial Park.

Payne died Saturday morning in a Dallas hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Nov. 12, 1925, in Sullivan, Ind., and spent his early life in Indiana. He moved to Lamesa after being discharged from the U.S. Air Force. He moved in 1951 to Midland, where he was manager of the Fair Department Store. In 1963 he entered law enforcement and moved to Ruidoso, N.M., in 1968. He returned to Midland in 1974 as a deputy sheriff with the Midland County Sheriff's Office. At the time of his death, he was Probation Officer for the County of Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Joseph E. Payne of Midland; two sons, Joseph E. Payne Jr. of Midland and Sam Payne of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. John Adams of Midland and Marsha Bonnell of Belen, N.M.; his mother, Myrtle Payne of Sullivan, Ind.; two sisters, Marjorie Noel and Margaret Neal, both of Gary, Ind., and five grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be Tom Montgomery, Lesley Price, Roy Sutton, Hughie Woody, Clyde Fisher and Abe Johnson.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Ed Darnell, O. W. Stice, Elzey Pullen and E. H. Kirksey.

Mrs. Barbara Maxine Hill, 45, died Saturday afternoon in a Midland hospital. She resided in rural Midland.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Owen Cosgrove, minister of Westside Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Hill was born Jan. 23, 1932, in Pilot Point and grew up in Roaring Springs. She lived in Corpus Christi several years before moving to Midland in January 1977. She was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband, Harley Hill; two sons, David Hill and Michael Hill, both of Midland; her mother, Mrs. Stella Graves of Lubbock and two grandchildren.

Sophus Olson

COMFORT — Services for Sophus A. Olson, 78, are pending with Porter Loring funeral home in San Antonio.

Olson was the father of Paul Olson and Mrs. C. F. Chambers and brother of Leif H. Olson, all of Midland.

He died Saturday in a Rochester, Minn., hospital following a short illness.

Olson was in the oil and ranching businesses for several years.

Other survivors include his wife, two daughters and a brother.

ACCORDING TO THE Midland Police Department, the Christmas holidays are a prime time for crime because so many Midlanders leave their homes to visit friends and relatives. The Senior Citizens Against Crime will sponsor a seminar on crime prevention in March. Meanwhile, say Midland police officials, citizens should be careful not to give criminals a temptation or an opportunity to act. Recommendations include making the house look occupied by pulling the drapes, turning on an inside light and keeping delivered mail and packages out of sight.

Oak stand removal not advised

LUBBOCK — Clearing out the 3.5 million West Texas acres covered by sand shin oak may increase, rather than decrease, ranchers' problems, according to Dr. Russell D. Pettit, professor of Range and Wildlife Management at Texas Tech University.

Pettit said the oak stands help minimize wind erosion, provide emergency forage during droughts, provide a valuable food source and cover for wildlife, provide shade for livestock, aid in microbial growth in the soil, help recycle soil nutrients to the topsoil, prevent livestock from grazing some grasses and provide aesthetically pleasing breaks in the flat landscape.

The Texas Tech professor said that because there are advantages to the sand shin oaks, control would be better than eradication.

If the oak were eliminated, a combination of overgrazing and wind erosion would probably result in making West Texas a virtual desert within 10 years, he said.

'Halfway houses' turn big profit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some operators of unregulated boarding homes called "halfway houses" are turning former mental patients into virtual prisoners and making healthy profits from the patients' social security money, the Austin American-Statesman reported in a copyright story Sunday.

The story said the operators become official recipients of the social security funds, giving back only a few dollars a week for cigarettes, candy and other incidentals.

A social worker estimated that profits from such operations can run into the thousands of dollars a month for one small facility.

The story said operators threaten to send the patients back to state mental hospitals if they complain.

An Austin psychiatrist was quoted as saying, "People are being dumped out of hospitals so they can say they're not warehousing. So they're still being warehoused, but in deficient facilities with no medical care."

Another social worker said, "The question we're having to face regularly now is whether to let one of these former patients sleep under the Congress Avenue bridge in downtown Austin or send him to a place we know is overcrowded and dirty."

The newspaper said social worker Betty Huffman, who weighs 90 pounds, visited one of the East Austin homes and nearly fell through the rotted boards of the front porch.

Ernest McKenney of the Department of Human Resources said Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) "is saying that these people have got to go out of the institutions. The Department of Human Resources is saying 'We have no place to put them.'"

The paper said virtually no case law has been written that would establish a state's obligation to release patients who cannot be "cured."

The paper said most professionals interviewed agreed that licensing of halfway houses is imperative.

UTPB schedules spring semester registration

ODESSA — Spring semester registration at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 7 p.m. Jan. 10 and 11 in the student lounge.

Registration is open to students who have completed 60 credit hours of coursework at any accredited community college, senior college or university.

Registrar Robert Warmann said students who have completed at least 54 credits but fewer than 60 also may enroll, but they will be expected to complete credits needed to total 60 at a nearby community college or elsewhere during the first semester that they are enrolled.

Registration materials and a registration appointment will be mailed to all students enrolled in the 1977 fall semester, to previously enrolled students who notify the admissions office they wish to register and to all newly accepted students, Warmann said.

Late registration will continue from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Jan. 27 in the registrar's office.

Fall semester classes end Thursday at the university. All UTPB offices will be closed Friday through Jan. 2. The offices will open Jan. 3. The library will be available to students from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning Jan. 3 until classes begin Jan. 12.

Child care available

Midland College students may take advantage of the services offered by the Midland Student Child Care Center, located at 2801 N. Garfield St., during the spring semester, Nell Furgeson, president of the volunteer board of the center, announced.

The child care center is open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays. A 10 p.m. closing hour would be considered if enough reguests for that were received in January, a spokesman for the center said.

Rates are 50 cents an hour for the first child, and 25 cents an hour for each additional child. The charge for nursery-age children under one year old is 75 cents an hour.

Students should visit the center during the spring semester enrollment period to fill out forms regarding leaving their children at the center, Furgeson said.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 683-7069.

The Merit Report

A two-year update on the cigarette that set a new taste standard for low tar smoking.

A good tasting low tar cigarette? It seemed impossible.

Time and time again smokers had rushed out to try a new low tar cigarette hoping this time the experience would be a good one.

Time and time again, they were disappointed.

By the early 1970's, most smokers had tried a low tar cigarette. Yet eight out of ten had rejected them.

Despite all the promises of "low tar, good taste," most of the cigarettes just didn't deliver.

It looked like no low tar cigarette would ever break the mold. Then one did.

January, 1975: Richmond Research Team Perfects 'Enriched Flavor' Tobacco.

After twelve years of intensive effort, a team of scientists at the Philip Morris Richmond Research Center successfully isolated certain "key" flavor ingredients of tobacco in cigarette smoke.

Natural ingredients that possess the unique ability to deliver taste way out of proportion to tar!

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. '77
100's: 12 mg "tar," 0.9 mg nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Philip Morris Research Center Tower, Richmond, Va.

By adding these ingredients back into tobacco, 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco was developed and perfected. This special tobacco was then packed into a new low tar cigarette called MERIT.

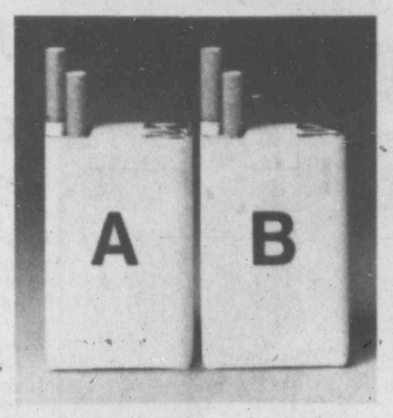

Taste testing began immediately.

August, 1975: Tests Prove New MERIT Delivers Taste Of Cigarettes Having Up To 60% More Tar.

MERIT was tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes.

The goal: to confirm the breakthrough with smokers like yourself.

To achieve this goal, Philip Morris conducted the most extensive testing ever for a new cigarette—tests involving thousands of smokers across the country.

The American Institute of Consumer Opinion tested MERIT against leading low tar cigarettes ranging in tar from 11 mg to 15 mg.

The results were conclusive:

MERIT was reported by a majority of smokers tested to deliver as much—or more—taste than cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Repeat: delivered as much—or more—taste.

January, 1976: Cigarette Market Bombshell!

MERIT was introduced to smokers in January, 1976. In just three months, it passed 45 older cigarette brands.

By the end of the year, it had moved up to 13th position among all cigarette brands.

"MERIT may turn out to be the most successful new cigarette introduction ever."—The Maxwell Report, December, 1976.

But smokers weren't interested in MERIT success. They were interested in—and excited about—MERIT taste. So much so, that an unprecedented amount of unsolicited smoker mail came in applauding the breakthrough.

January, 1977: Taste Science Breakthrough Brought To 100's Smokers.

The MERIT technology that produced a whole new taste standard in low tar smoking was applied to a longer length cigarette with striking results.

In tests against a number of major 100's ranging from 17 mg to 19 mg tar, smokers reported that, overall, they liked the taste of new 12 mg tar MERIT 100's as much as the higher tar brands tested!

The taste barrier for low tar smoking had been broken again. For the second time, MERIT delivered what high tar cigarette smokers had always said they wanted: a good-tasting low tar cigarette.

And again, the smoker response was overwhelming. New MERIT 100's immediately became one of the most popular low tar 100's on the market.

December, 1977: 75% Of All MERIT Smokers Coming From High Tar Brands.

High tar smoking over? What seemed impossible to consider once, may not seem so remote today.

According to a recent survey, three-fourths of MERIT smokers have switched directly from a high tar brand!

The toughest taste critics of low tar smoking are switching to—and sticking with—MERIT.

For over twenty years, the cigarette industry had searched for a way to combine good taste and low tar.

MERIT ended that search.

"After smoking one pack, I was really amazed... they are as good as the cigarettes with higher tar."

—Mrs. Brenda Clark
Opelika, Alabama

"Merit cigarettes have converted me from a confirmed high tar cigarette smoker to a low tar smoker."

—Mr. Robin Katz
New York, New York

LOW TAR-'ENRICHED FLAVOR'

"Your 'Enriched Flavor' process is the greatest. Thank you!"

—Mrs. Patricia Amato
Linden, New Jersey

These three responses are typical of the reaction smokers had to MERIT, the 'Enriched Flavor' cigarette.

Many smokers requested that MERIT be made available in a longer length.

That request was met.

With the technology, the test results, and now this kind of response from high tar smokers, there's little doubt.

MERIT is the first major alternative to high tar smoking.

And you can taste it.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Come clean, Korea

"Koreagate" rolled easily off the tongue to describe the South Korean influence-buying scandal in Washington, but the word may turn out to be more apt than anyone realized.

Just as an interrupted burglary at the Watergate hotel was only the smoke leading to a bigger fire, Tong-sun Park's generous gifts to members of the U.S. Congress are emerging as only the first signal of a problem of greater dimensions.

A document purported to be from the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency suggests that the South Korean government was not content with questionable, if not illegal, lobbying practices on Capitol Hill. As recently as last year, it would appear, the Korean CIA was hoping to "manipulate" American policy and opinion by payments to State Department officials, college professors, journalists and others.

It is not clear whether the 23-page plan released by a House subcommittee is any more than a plan — — whether any money changed hands and whether the stream of discussion and deliberation on U.S. policy toward South Korea has been infected in any way. With the Korean document now going to the Justice Department and House and Senate Ethics committees, along with names of intended recipients of pay-offs which were not released by the House subcommittee, we can hope to find out.

If the whirlwind of scandal is again bearing down on Washington, the American people simply will have to ride it out, relying on the judicial process to pursue allegations to a conclusion of guilt or innocence.

What is more important than the exposure of wrongdoing is keeping our sights on the best interests of the United States vis-a-vis a foreign country whose government appears to have abused its relations with a friend and protector.

U.S. support of South Korea goes back 30 years, and springs not only from sympathy with Koreans menaced by Communist armies but from strategic considerations affecting the entire Far East.

The bribery scandals — if bribery indeed was Seoul's intention — could have fateful repercussions if they lead our government to make the wrong decision regarding future troop levels in South Korea and other military support.

President Park Chung Hee's government has not been as cooperative as special investigator Leon Jaworski would prefer in his efforts to question Tong-sun Park.

And he is not the only one in Seoul whose explanations are needed if Americans are to find out exactly what South Korean emissairies to the United States have had in mind in recent years.

The United States' governmental system demands that dirty linen go to the laundry in public, and this has caused our own Central Intelligence Agency no little embarrassment.

President Park can do what he pleases, of course, with dirty wash, but he could best hope to repair a potentially fatal breach in relations between our two governments by responding with candor to the revelations coming to light about the activities of his own CIA.

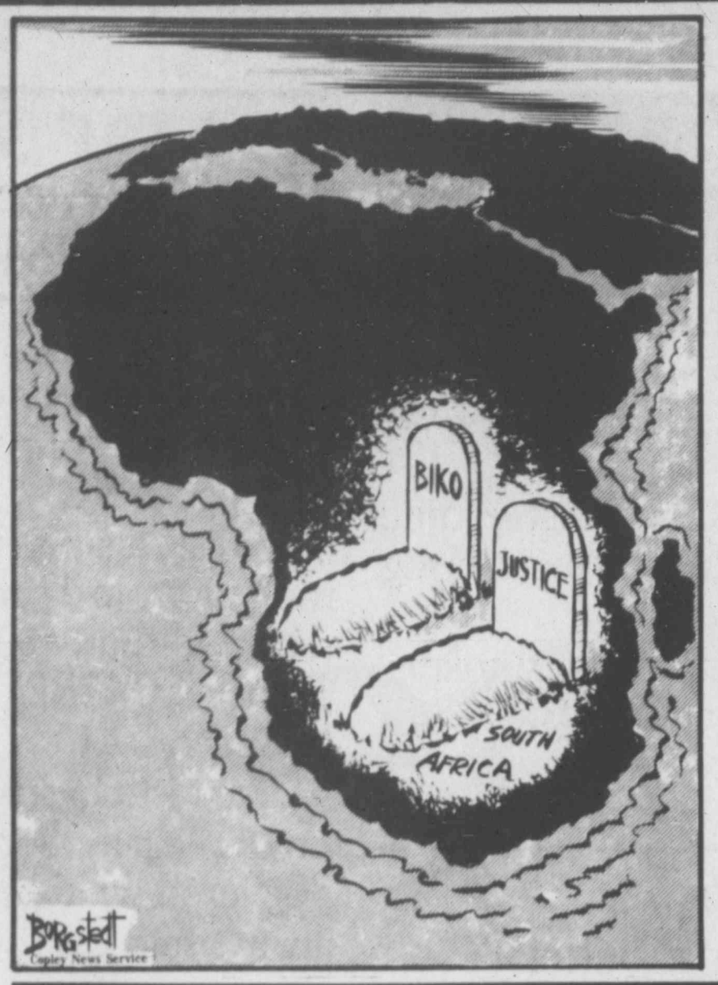

This isn't a pleasant subject to bring up at this particular season of the year, of course, but it is one which must gain the attention and action of both the United States and South Korea. The sooner it can be cleared up, the better for all concerned.

PRIVACY PROTECTION:

Justice Department's dilemma is revealed

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Legislative proposals to restrict government investigators' access to citizens' private records have caused a major split within the Justice Department.

Although President Carter last July asked all government agencies to comment within 30 days on the recommendations of the Privacy Protection Study Commission, the Justice Department's internal dispute will delay its response until January.

Attorney General Griffin Bell has created a large departmental task force, which has begun meeting each Tuesday, to draft a response.

Several officials working with the task force said in interviews that the attorney general brushed aside pleadings from the White House Domestic Council that further delay would antagonize House and Senate committees eager to proceed with legislation to carry out the privacy commission's recommendations.

Bell reportedly supports officials of the department's criminal division who argue that the proposed restrictions on obtaining such potential evidence as bank and telephone records could severely hamper the government's fight against organized crime, narcotics traffic and white-collar crime.

Others in the department, however, contend that the proposed restrictions are more bothersome than damaging to investigations.

"The mood in Congress is to give citizens greater protection," one Justice Department advocate of the privacy curbs said, "and the department is in no position to fight it."

Some White House aides do not want the administration put in the position of bucking Congress on privacy legislation next year while at the same time seeking support on higher priority measures.

The Justice Department task force already has begun to consider possible compromises aimed at retaining basic freedom of access while still meeting some major goals of the privacy protections, primarily letting a citizen know when he is being investigated.

Russell T. Baker Jr., a deputy assistant attorney general in the criminal division and a member of the departmental task force, says the proposed restrictions "would impede and delay our access to the most critical evidence, financial records.

Baker, a former assistant U.S. attorney in Baltimore, who worked on the Vice President Spiro Agnew corruption case, said in an interview the evidence that compelled Agnew to resign never could have been gathered had the proposed privacy restrictions been in force.

"This kind of highly sophisticated investigating isn't widely understood," Baker said in an effort to explain why the privacy commission and Congress insist on curbs.

The commission was created by the Privacy Act of 1974, which directed the federal government to protect the privacy of files on individual citizens.

The commission was given two years to study the larger problem of safeguarding personal records held by state and local governments and private organizations, such as banks.

The commission issued its report to President Carter and Congress last July. Packages of legislation to implement the recommendations were introduced immediately in the House and Senate. The administration's response was expected this fall, but the division within the Justice Department now has delayed the legislative process until next year.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Civil Service Commission doings

By JACK ANDERSON
and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Evidence has turned up of a Watergate-style coverup inside the Civil Service Commission. We have obtained an internal document, which strongly indicates commission officials cleansed the files to prevent a House committee from learning about improper activities.

The commission's investigators had been tipped off, according to another document, that a request had come down "through the chain of command" to review the files requested by the Congressmen and remove embarrassing material. Allegedly, files were stripped of certain notes "to prevent future embarrassment."

The damaging document is now in the hands of an independent task force, which the commission established last month to investigate charges of wrongdoing. The investigation is headed by Mitchell Rogovin, a former assistant attorney general.

The announcement of his appointment was rushed out after the commission learned we were preparing a critical column. At a November 4 staff meeting, Chairman Alan Campbell warned his colleagues: "We know there's going to be a Jack Anderson column."

He said it was vital, therefore, to make a public announcement about the Rogovin appointment at once. The announcement was made later that afternoon; the first column appeared two days later.

The Rogovin task force has now obtained a detailed "briefing book" compiled by the transition team, which studied the commission's operations during the transfer of power from President Gerald Ford to President Jimmy Carter.

Although the commission has kept a tight lid on these documents, we have obtained some of them. One transition document characterizes the merit system as "a facade rather than a reality in federal employment." Declares the secret document: "Abuses have been so widespread that a fundamental re-examination of the federal government's commitment to the merit systen would be in order."

The document also recommends an in-depth investigation, among other things, "whether abuses of the Watergate era persist to this day in the federal civil service and whether any corrective action is required to assure that such abuses do not continue in a Carter Administration."

We have also seen an "interview summary," written by investigators in early 1976 and now in the possession of the Rogovin task force. The investigators established that a retired commission official, named Ziv Remez, had issued "an order to purge files of all extraneous material."

They cross-examined him about the allegation and summarized his responses. According to the summary, they asked him bluntly: "What was the basis for your issuing this order and what was your definition of extraneous?"

Rénez' idea of "extraneous material," the document states, included job applications that had letter attached...from a congressman, or else "had an internal agency memo on it" giving instructions to "hire this guy."

Remez told the investigators that "these type of things were totally immaterial to the rating process." Therefore, he acknowledged: "I talked to the area manager or his assistant and told him to clean out such things."

In a telephone interview, Remez told our associate Cary Cohn that no one ever suggested, asked or directed me to destroy any records of any kind." Nor, he added, did he ever "suggest, ask or direct anyone to destroy any.

It was normal commission policy, he explained, to remove extraneous material before sending files outside the commission. The letters from congressmen and the internal memos, he said, would fall under the category of "extraneous material."

The critical transition papers, incidentally, have been in the hands of the present commissioners for months. This raises an important question. Why did the commission wait until November to appoint an independent investigator to clean up the commission?

In a related development, a hearing examiner determined that the Bureau of Personnel Management and Evaluation "engaged in sex discrimination against women in general."

The hearing examiner also stated that commission officials apparently tried to cover up the record in this case. This was one of the cases we cited in our November 9 column. Footnote: A Justice Department official acknowledged that an investigation of the Civil Service Commission is now in progress but refused to comment on the substance.

DIPLOMATIC DISPATCHES — Timid U.S. diplomats at the United Nations initially tried to scuttle a tough anti-hijacking resolution drawn up at the time of the Lufthansa takeover in October. At a closed door meeting, they opposed other members of the delegation who wanted the U.S. to take the lead on the measure. Their arguments: it might ruffle the feathers of Third World nations who would then squawk about "neo-colonialiam." Only after Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., fiercely argued that the Third World jumps on the U.S. at every opportunity anyway did the tide turn. What cinched it was the entrance to the fray of chief U.S. delegate Andrew Young who took the side of Wolff.

The Department of Agriculture published a report last year about agricultural production in Egypt. The 194 page document included some two dozen charts and one map. There was only one mistake. The map, which depicted the "Major Agronomic Zones" of the Middle East, omitted the nation of Israel. An Agriculture Department spokesman called it "an editorial oversight."

INSIDE REPORT:

Talks between Torrijos and Sorensen are questioned

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Senate foes of the Panama Canal treaties are demanding an answer to this question: were private conversations in Panama July 16 between Panamanian dictator Omar Torrijos and U.S. private citizen Theodore Sorensen related to U.S. treaty concessions made shortly thereafter under Panamanian pressure?

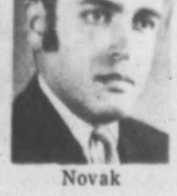

The answer from Sorensen, the White House and the Senate Intelligence Committee staff is a flat no. But Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, a conservative Republican member of the committee, wants both Sorensen and Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security adviser, put under oath in closed-door session.

Behind this is a secret threat last July by Gen. Torrijos to expose alleged "kickbacks" concerning the U.S. government. The threat was dropped after five U.S. concessions resulted in the two treaties turning the canal over to Panama. Adding cloak-and-dagger mystery are intercepted telephone conversations, including one from Sorensen to Brzezinski that was later destroyed as specified by U.S. law.

Such considerations do not affect the merits of the treaties before the Senate. Nevertheless, if opponents show President Carter's emissaries gave ground under threat by the Panamanian strongman, the present Senate tide toward ratificaton could be reversed. Ted Sorensen's trip to Panama in mid-July consequently carries importance.

Evans

Novak

Manhattan lawyer Sorensen, Mr. Carter's first choice to head the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) before withdrawing under Senate opposition, stopped at the White House on his way to Panama. While there, he was briefed by national security aide Robert Pastor. According to the White House, Sorensen travelled to Panama on private business and requested the briefing merely to know what was happening there.

What was happening just then was cold fury by Torrijos. Ambassador Sol Linowitz, negotiating the treaty, breakfasted with newsmen in Washington July 14. The resulting story in the Los Angeles Times of July 15, declaring the U.S. "would be granted in perpetuity a right to intervene" in Panama, inflamed the dictator.

On July 15, Torrijos telephoned his ambassador in Washington from Farallon, his home in Panama, where telephone conversations were intercepted by the U.S. National Security Agency (NSA). Torrijos declared he was sending a team to Washington with recordings of U.S. intercepts made of his telephone communications — apparently material he had purchased for $10,000 from a U.S. Army sergeant.

The intercept of that July 15 conversation does not specify what these recordings would show. Torrijos told his ambassador he had proof of wrong-doing in Washington, and, in the midst of the Spanish conversations, used the English word "kickbacks." This was another Watergate, the general added, and would show the Carter administration no better than Nixon's or Johnson's.

On July 16, Sorensen was taken to Farallon by Torrijos's car. After talking to the strongman, Sorensen placed a call to Brzezinski at the White House. That conversation, too, was intercepted by the NSA but was destroyed. Adm. Bobby R. Inman, NSA director, acted correctly under the law prohibiting taps of a U.S. citizen's conversation.

According to both White House officials and Sorensen, he telephoned Brzezinski to report that Torrijos viewed the Los Angeles Times account as "inflammatory." Sorensen told us he advised "there was no other way out" than "retraction" of the story — which was soon done at the White House.

Was he involved in treaty negotiations with Torrijos? "The answer is definitely no," Sorensen told us. Brzezinski told us Sorensen "was not asked or authorized" to negotiate. Both denied talking about negotiations during their phone conversation.

But top-secret documents show the Sorensen-Torrijos talks were followed by five U.S. concessions, guaranteeing a treaty. The most important changed "preferential" passage through the canal for U.S. warships in wartime to "expeditious" passage. Another key concession agreed not to build a new Central American canal without Panama's permission.

Committee investigators, after interviewing Sorensen and an aide to Brzezinski (who said he had no time to be interviewed himself), concluded there was no connection between the concessions and Sorensen's trip. But Sen. Wallop will not take their word for it.

He wants sworn testimony from Brzezinski and Sorensen to confirm or deny his suspicions. Even if, as expected, they repeat under oath their unsworn denials that Sorensen was doing no negotiating, the murky question of the July concessions following Torrijos' bluster will be raised. That clearly does not fit the White House scenario for ratifying the treaties.

Crash causes cited

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Human error was to blame for the crash of a military jet on the top-secret Manzano Base three months ago that killed all 20 men aboard, an Air Force accident report revealed.

The report released Saturday said a plane that was too heavy and a runway that was too short combined with miscalculations by the crew caused the Sept. 14 crash in the Four Hills area east of Albuquerque.

An accident investigation board based at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia compiled evidence from witness interviews in putting together the report.

Witnesses who saw the plane take off from Kirtland Air Force Base said they were surprised that the aircraft used so much runway before it finally lifted off.

"In the summer, TWA has a 707 that flies to Chicago and I'm so used to seeing that take off; this guy in the Air Force plane exceeded that just unbelievably," said Derek Etzcorn, who was working at Southwest Air Rangers the night of the crash.

A sergeant stationed at Kirtland, James L. Trotter, said he didn't think the plane was going to make it off the end of the runway.

He said he had seen many airplanes of that type take off from Kirtland, and that it used considerably more runway than usual.

The report said part of the plane's weight problem may have stemmed from some 670 gallons of water loaded onto the aircraft at Kirtland for use in the water-injected engines.

DEAR ABBY

Parents' decision needs no justifying

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter (I'll call her Beth) has been going steady with Rick since school resumed last fall. Beth is 15 and Rick is 17.

Rick's people are way out of our class financially. Today I received a telephone call from Rick's mother asking if Beth could go to Hawaii with their family over Christmas. Beth had never mentioned that she was invited, so I was shocked. I said I'd talk to my husband and we would let her know.

Beth is begging us to let her go. Her father says he doesn't like the idea because Rick has his parents wrapped around his little finger and seems to have no supervision whatsoever.

I don't want to insult Rick's parents, but I agree with my husband.

We trust Beth but think she is a bit too young to be in Hawaii with doubtful supervision.

How should this be handled?—DELICATE PROBLEM

DEAR DELICATE: Don't feel that you must justify your decision. Tell Rick's mother that you and your husband agree that Beth is too young for that type of vacation.

DEAR ABBY: I received a call from a family member today who suggested that we should all stop giving Christmas gifts—except to the children.

That's fine, but my husband and I have no children and this relative has four. In other words, she's telling me that we should buy her kids Christmas gifts, but we shouldn't expect any.

I think she should have said, "Please don't buy our kids anything this year because you don't have any kids." Or else, "If you buy our kids Christmas gifts, we will buy you and your husband something in return."

What do you think?—WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think all gifts should be voluntary. If one expects to be repaid in kind for a gift, it ceases to be a gift—it becomes a trade-off.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I was a small child, I've loved dogs. I'm 23, and I still love dogs.

My parents never cared for dogs, so I was never allowed to have one. I always dreamed of the day when I was grown and on my own so I could have a dog.

I've been happily married for a year, and my husband and I are renting an apartment upstairs from my parents. Would you believe it, they still refuse to let me have a dog? They won't even discuss it. No dogs on their property, period!

I feel bitter and angry, but there's nothing I can do except move, which would be foolish because we never could find a place as nice as this for what we're paying.

It's been a year now and I've built up a terrible resentment against my parents. Am I wrong to feel this way? Or are they wrong to continue to treat me like a child?—BITTER IN N.J.

DEAR BITTER: It's your parents' property, and if they don't want dogs it's their privilege. Don't take it personally. If you can't accept their decision with grace and maturity, move.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SWINGING IN CLEVELAND": Your suggested Eleventh Commandment, "Thou shall not get caught," is very catchy, but if you obey the first Ten, you won't need an Eleventh.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope to ABBY in care of this newspaper.

Midland Savings' Individual Retirement Account and other tax saving plans

The Individual Retirement Account is a tax deduction for today and a retirement program for tomorrow. The Individual Retirement Account is designed for the person who is not already covered by a retirement program. It invites that person to contribute to his own account up to 15% or $1500.00 (whichever is less) of his earned income. It allows him an immediate 100% income tax deduction for his contribution.

Save $242.00 per year in income tax. A family of four with an income of $12000 will pay $1228.00 in income tax. However, if that same family contributes $1500 to an I.R.A., the $1500 deduction will save them $242.00 in income tax annually. Effective tax year 1977, a working spouse can set up an I.R.A. for a non-working spouse, provided he or she is participating in an I.R.A. plan. The maximum combined contribution can not exceed $1750.00.

The Keogh Plan. The Keogh Plan is similar to the I.R.A. but it is designed specifically for the self-employed individual. The Keogh Plan automatically includes the self-employed individual along with all his eligible employees. The plan allows an annual deposit of 15% or $7500 (whichever is less) of an individual's earned income.

I.R.A. Rollover. Ask about Midland Savings' I.R.A. Rollover. This plan is designed for the individual who has completed a qualifying retirement program, and who wishes to roll his lump-sum distribution over into an I.R.A., to receive the tax advantage.

Holiday baking can be made simple task

In last Thursday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram, recipes for Simple Stollen and Apple Crescent Coffee Cake were published that contained errors.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors and will re-run the recipes in their entirety below.

SIMPLE STOLLEN

2 (8-oz.) cans refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
8-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
¼ cup sugar
1½ to 2 tsps. rum flavoring
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds
½ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup chopped maraschino cherries

Glaze

1 cup powdered sugar
2 tbsps. milk

Heat oven to 375 degrees. In small bowl, beat cream cheese and sugar until fluffy. Stir in rum flavoring. Fold in almonds, raisins and cherries. Unroll the two cans of crescent dough into four long rectangles on ungreased cookie sheet. Overlap long sides; firmly press perforations and edges to seal. Pat to form a 13x13-inch square. Spread cream cheese filling in a five-inch wide strip down center of dough to within one inch of ends. Fold each remaining inch of dough up over filling. Bring long sides of dough over filling, overlapping edges, pinch edge to seal. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until light golden brown. Cool. Combine powdered sugar and milk; drizzle over top of cooled bread. Garnish with sliced almonds and additional cherries. (Refrigerate leftovers.) About 12 to 14 slices.

APPLE CRESCENT COFFEE CAKE

2 (8-oz.) cans refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
9.9-oz. pkg. coconut pecan or coconut almond frosting mix
2 cups (2 medium) peeled, chopped cooking apples
¼ cup margarine or butter, melted
¼ cup orange juice

Glaze

½ cup powdered sugar
1 tbsp. orange juice

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Separate one can crescent dough into two long rectangles. Press rectangles over bottom of ungreased 13x9-inch pan. Sprinkle one cup dry frosting mix evenly over dough; cover with chopped apples. Drizzle with two tablespoons of the melted margarine. Separate second can crescent dough into two long rectangles; overlap long sides. Seal edges and perforations. Roll or pat out to form 13x9-inch rectangle. Place over apple layer. Combine remaining two tablespoons melted margarine, frosting mix and orange juice; spread over dough. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Combine glaze ingredients; drizzle over warm coffee cake. 12 to 18 servings.

George Hedrick, TESCO senior electrical engineer, inspects a lignite coal-fired plant at Martin Lake. In 1983 four such units will be in operation there.

"Texas Electric must spend $243 million for new construction this year alone.
We really have no choice if we're going to continue supplying the electricity you'll need."

"By far the biggest percentage of electricity you use today is made in plants that use natural gas for fuel.

Most of this is gas we contracted for many years ago when it was very cheap. But these contracts will expire soon.

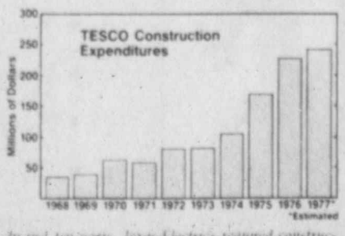

Against just such a day, Texas Electric and the other companies in the Texas Utilities system have purchased large supplies of lignite coal over a period of many years. These same companies have also contracted for supplies of nuclear fuel.

And we're building plants to use these fuels. We have five lignite coal-fired units already generating electricity, with five more under construction. The nuclear fueled plant near Glen Rose is progressing well.

While these new plants are very expensive, we must build them if we are to continue supplying the electricity you'll need."

Two lignite coal-fired units are already generating electricity at the Monticello plant near Mt. Pleasant. A third unit is also under construction there.

In just ten years, Texas Electric's required construction spending has gone from less than $50 million to nearly a quarter of a billion dollars per year.

Electricity. You count on it today.
We're working to keep it that way.

Disability cost growing steadily; no end in sight

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of helping disabled Americans has become a massive but mostly invisible hemorrhage of dollars from the pockets of the nation's taxpayers, workers and businesses.

From Social Security disability insurance to federal Civil Service pensions, the burden of providing for those who cannot work is growing, with no end in sight.

The problem has largely been hidden by concern over the stability of the whole Social Security system and of private pension plans — much like an infection in a patient who hurts so much from another disease that he doesn't notice the second debilitating illness.

Experts say there are no simple explanations for the soaring costs of disability nor any easy means to halt the rise.

The most visible cost is the disability insurance program run by the Social Security Administration. Its checks to 2.8 million Americans will total an estimated $11.6 billion this year.

The cost is expected to be $26 billion by 1983, when an estimated 3.5 milion people will be drawing benefits.

The exploding costs of this program have depleted the trust fund set aside for it. This pending bankruptcy is one of the principal reasons Congress raised Social Security taxes and allotted more of the revenues to disability programs. Without congressional action, the trust fund would have gone broke late next year.

The disability insurance program suffers from many problems: inequities, arbitrary rulings and molasses-slow administrative processes.

But factors outside the program, such as the nation's economy and a greater willingness to apply for all the benefits that one can get, are apparently also at work on this and other disability programs.

More and more companies are offering some type of disability protection to their workers. A Conference Board study found 74 percent of the companies surveyed had long-term disability insurance for at least managerial employees. In a 1975 Bankers Trust study, 80 percent of the pension plans surveyed included disability retirement provisions.

Industry experts say more disability claims are being filed and people are drawing benefits longer.

This shift has cost private insurance companies that write disability insurance policies millions of dollars in recent years. By one industry estimate, companies lost $100 million on disability policies for individuals in 1974 and 1975.

Other than Social Security, the disabled cost the federal government billions in other ways. There are veterans' pensions based on disability, some veterans' medical costs and disability benefits for federal workers, including Civil Service disability pensions.

By one estimate, the overall cost of taking care of the disabled in 1975 was $114 billion. That was more than double the money spent on disability by government and private firms five years before.

This estimate, by Monroe Berkowitz and Jeffery Rubin of Rutgers University, includes medical costs of about $65 billion.

The researchers said the costs of disability could be $219 billion in 1980 if the rate of increase between 1970 and 1975 does not slow.

Park funds included in Act

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Funds for the first of several public-use and operational facilities at Guadalupe Mountains National Park are included in the 1978 Interior Department and Related Appropriations Act recently passed by Congress, National Park Service officials announced Saturday.

The amount approved for projects was $5,560,000 with $2,939,000 going for buildings and utilities and the remainder for roads and trails.

Projects to be funded include final base and paving of the McKittrick Canyon entrance road and parking area, construction of a visitor contact station at the mouth of McKittrick Canyon, reconstruction of 10 miles of horse and foot trails, planning work in preparation for reconstruction of 30 miles of trails and construction of a ranger station, public-use corral and camping area in upper Dog Canyon.

The proposed Pine Springs Visitor Center, which was to have been located near the Butterfield Stage Station and which had been in the 1978 budget request, was deferred by Congress.

Carter cancels Cabinet meeting for conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, placing a heavy emphasis on the economy, canceled today's regular Cabinet meeting to confer with economic advisers and congressional leaders on the package of tax, employment and anti-inflation measures he will unveil in January.

Administration officials, working under Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Stuart E. Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy, are in the midst of an effort to complete a master domestic policy agenda for 1978.

Eizenstat said Sunday that top priority would undoubtedly be given to the economy, although "we don't have the priorities all set."

Beginning a day-long series of economic policy meetings, Carter planned to sit down first with the Cabinet officials most directly involved in economic policy, along with senior White House officials, and then with House and Senate leaders and several committee chairmen.

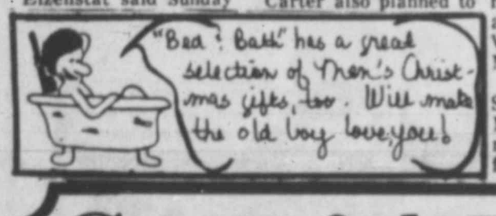

Then he was to meet with the 15-member executive committee of the National Governors Association to discuss the fiscal 1979 budget.

Carter also planned to spend two hours listening to officials from the Energy Department, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the international affairs section of the State Department appeal for increases in their allotments under the budget, which goes into effect next Oct. 1.

Today's schedule represented an unusually concentrated study of economic issues for Carter, who begins a six-day Christmas vacation on Wednesday in Plains, Ga. Besides calling off the Cabinet meeting, he canceled his attendance at the weekly meeting of his senior staff members and his weekly lunch with Vice President Walter Mondale.

However, he had dinner Sunday evening at Mondale's official residence about one mile from the White House.

CHICAGO BEARS' Bob Thomas (16) toes winning field goal in overtime victory against New York Giants to put the Bears in the NFC playoffs. (AP Laserphoto)

Bears advance by skin of toe

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Bob Thomas, Chicago's placekicker, had his escape all planned.

"I saw an exit sign to the left of the goalposts," he said, recalling the moments before his 28-yard field goal on the final play of sudden-death overtime carried the Bears to a 12-9 victory over the New York Giants Sunday and into the wild-card playoff berth in the National Football Conference.

"I figured the Giants would be so happy if I missed that I could run right through them, and our guys would never be able to reach me on that icy field."

BUT THOMAS, who had missed an extra point and had three earlier field goal tries misfire, connected this time to eliminate Washington from post-season play and put the Bears in the playoffs for the first time since 1963, when they beat the Giants for the National Football League title.

"Don't say I gave Chicago the playoff berth," Thomas said. "I don't feel that way. And I wouldn't have felt that I cost us the berth if I hadn't made it. A team has 45 players. We all had jobs to do."

Thomas' job was made more difficult by a driving, freezing rain that left the field encrusted with ice.

"These are the worst conditions for field goals and extra points," said Bears Coach Jack Pardee.

They weren't exactly ideal for running back Walter Payton, who went into the game needing 199 yards to shatter O.J. Simpson's single-season rushing record of 2,003. When he saw the rain and ice, he knew he wasn't going to get them this day.

"THE BIGGEST disappointment was the condition of the field," said Payton. "We weren't prepared for that."

The Bears started the game wearing rubberized turf shoes but dispatched an assistant trainer to buy a supply of steeltipped cleats.

That brought to mind the 1934 title game, when the Giants changed to basketball sneakers at halftime and came from behind to defeat Chicago 30-13.

This time, the switch helped the Bears.

It's all orange, no crush

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

IRVING—If the National Football League's finale between the Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos was the highly touted preview of Super Bowl XII here Sunday afternoon at Texas Stadium, then let's pray that the same two teams don't meet again Jan. 15 in New Orleans.

The two playoff bound squads played like two playoff bound squads. It was not the matchup everyone expected. They went through the motions. They didn't give up any secrets or take any chances. In short, it was terribly B-O-R-I-N-G.

OVER 63,700 fans showed up for what was supposed to be the classic NFC-AFC duel between teams that owned the best records in all the NFL, but the 1,302 no shows had the last laugh. They had to pay their money for the tickets, but they didn't have to sit through the lackluster contest.

For history's sake, Dallas won the contest, 14-6, by scoring on the first drive in the first half and the first drive in the second half. Denver kicked third and fourth quarter field goals. Everything in between was a lot of hogwash.

Denver's miracle making quarterback Craig Morton pulled the biggest miracle of the year by heading to the bench after three plays, and in this game against his former teammates where he could have established his super stardom.

DALLAS' EFREN Herrera missed three chip shot field goals after impressive Cowboy drives, and the offense quit.

Denver never made an attempt to win the game. They gave it to Dallas before they departed the Mile High city. Coach Red Miller used his second and third string quarterbacks in the contest. They said that they're looking for the "new season", which begins next week in Denver against the Pittsburgh Steelers. They wanted to be ready for the "dash for cash" as Red Miller put it, but they didn't give the 63,000 fans their money's worth in this one.

Craig's hasty exit takes zip from Dallas-Denver preview

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Craig Morton's early exit Sunday put the Denver Broncos in the unenviable position of trying to beat the Dallas Cowboys with two second-year quarterbacks.

You don't and they didn't.

Dallas mastered Denver 14-6 on Roger Staubach's two touchdown passes and rookie Tony Dorsett got his 1,000 yards as the Cowboys joined Denver as the National Football League's winningest teams with 12-2 records.

The American Conference Western Division champion Broncos will meet Pittsburgh Saturday while the National Conference Eastern Division champion Cowboys hostthe wild card Chicago Bears Monday.

"It's sudden death now," said veteran Cowboy Coach Tom Landry as Dallas enters its 11th playoff in the last 12 years. "I look at Chicago and I see Walter Payton."

DORSETT GAINED 50 yards to earn his 1,000-yard badge by seven steps. He was only the eighth rookie ever to accomplish the feat — something that escaped such great runners as Payton, O.J. Simpson, Jim Brown and Gale Sayers.

The much-heralded possible Super Bowl preview went flat after Morton, a former Cowboy who has taken Denver to the NFL playoffs for the first time, was sacked early on a safety blitz.

Miller said, "We didn't want to subject him to any more injury because he has had a tough season and he had been hurting all week. His hip was very sore. Now begins the dash for cash."

Morton said of his hip, "It's okay. I wasn't going to play much today. I didn't want to take any risks on hurting it worse. I aggravated it just a little bit right off the bat.

"I'm just sorry I didn't really get a chance to play, but I didn't practice much and I only planned to play a couple of series."

Oilers beat Bengals 'again'

HOUSTON (AP) — No band played the popular Star Wars theme Sunday and no alien craft invaded the Astrodome space but The Force definitely was with the Houston Oilers in their 21-16 victory over Cincinnati that eliminated the Bengals from the playoffs.

In this instance, it stood 5-9 tall, weighed 170 pounds and was named Billy "White Shoes" Johnson.

Johnson slashed, dipped and dived past the Bengals as if driven by some mystical power. He caught six passes for 138 yards including a 17-yard touchdown reception and set up another score with a 35 yards catch. He rushed once for 31 yards, returned four kickoffs 81 yards and ran two punts back 13 yards.

IT ADDED up to 263 total yards for Johnson and climaxed a holy war Houston had conducted against Cincinnati since the Oilers lost a controversial 13-10 decision to the Bengals earlier this year that ultimately cost the Oilers a playoff chance.

"We've been claiming that we should have won that first game and we had to prove that we were better," said Oiler Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips, who received an apology from NFL Commissioner

Jones' 3 TD strikes lead Colts to title

BALTIMORE (AP) — Roosevelt Leaks burst through a huge hole in the New England line at midfield, and by the time he was tackled 39 yards away a good portion of the 42,2540 fans in Memorial Stadium had their handkerchiefs waving madly.

Flapping in the chill, damp evening air, they were saying both goodby to the the title hopes of the Miami Dolphins and hello to a third consecutive playoff berth for the Baltimore Colts.

With Bert Jones throwing touchdown passes of 14, 78 and 12 yards, the Colts rallied from an 18—point deficit to beat the Patriots 30—24 Sunday, clinching the AFC title and the accompanying National Football League playoff spot against the Oakland Raiders here Christmas Eve.

IT ALSO robbed the Dolphins of a playoff shot. Miami, which beat Buffalo 31-14 in its season finale Saturday, needed a Baltimore loss to win the division crown.

Baltimore and Miami finished with 10-4 records, but the Colts won the title because of a better record against AFC opponents. New England, which finished 9-5, had been eliminated by Miami's victory over Buffalo, on the basis of intra-division play.

The incredible comeback, sealed by Leaks' third-down run in the final minute, wiped away a three-game Baltimore losing streak that had buffeted the team with second-guessing and criticism that it's attack was too conservative.

"WE NEVER say die. That's what I like about this football team," said Lydell Mitchell, the Colts' 1,000-yard running back. "We just showed a lot of character."

New England appeared ready to hand the division title to Miami. The Patriots scored on a five-yard pass from Steve Grogan to Russ Francis early in the second quarter, then capped a 69-yard drive with Grogan's one-yard plunge.

When Raymond Clayborn returned the second-half kickoff 101 yards fo. another touchdown and a 21-3 lead,

4th-ranked Arkansas rejoins the crusade

By The Associated Press

Fourth-ranked Arkansas, the last of the Southwest Conference unbeatens, rejoins the crusade against non-conference basketball opponents tonight after a week of idleness then faces a big test against tough Kansas Thursday night.

The Monday night opponent is Hardin-Simmons which should be a mere warmup for the Razorbacks and serve as their seventh consecutive victory of the young season.

Texas Tech and Texas A&M were ambushed out of the unbeaten ranks over the weekend in tournaments down South.

Tech tumbled 68-62 to Utah before downing Dartmouth 63-51 in the consolation of the Volunteer Classic.

Texas A&M fell 100-77 to redhot Florida State before blistering Samford 106-91.

Texas blasted Centenary 10573 to join Tech and Texas A&M with 6-1 records.

The SWC is 52-20 against outside competition, its best record in decades.

Houton is 7-2 after a three-victory week which included triumphs over Xavier and North Texas State en route to the Bluebonnet Classic Championship.

Baylor did itself proud on the Pacific Coast in the San Francisco Classic. The Bears nicked Pacific 88-87 in overtime then battled San Francisco to the wire before falling 98-93 in the championship game.

Action is sparse this week. Texas Christian returns to action in the Reno Classic over the weekend.

On Tuesday, SMU hosts Ohio University while Texas entertains Coach Abe Lemons' old team, Oklahoma City.

Super preview is flop

had the luster taken off of it.

TONY DORSETT became the first Cowboys' rookie in history to rush for more than 1,000 yards. But he needed 43 yards coming into the contest to attain the mark, and it was the fourth quarter before he climbed over the mark. He netted 50 on the day in 17 carries for a measly 2.9 yard average, almost three yards per carry under his average.

"I wasn't really worried about the 1,000 yards," Dorsett said after the game. "I had only 19 yards in the first half, and it was mostly my fault. I hesitated too much and didn't run for daylight. Even if I hadn't made it, I couldn't be down considering the amount of playing time I've had this year. I think I can gain 1,000 yards every year with the talent on this club. If I can stay healthy, I should expect to gain over 1,000 yards every year."

DALLAS QUARTERBACK Roger Staubach said, "We didn't go into the game trying to get 1,000 yards for Tony, but at the last when they had that yards countdown on the scoreboard, we were trying to get it for him. I think it's great that he got his 1,000 yards. He has added a new dimension to this team."

Staubach didn't have a bad day either, completing 15 of 20 passes and two touchdown tosses. But his total passing net was only 160 yards as he ignored fleet wide receiver Drew Pearson most of the day.

Pearson, who needed a big day to win the NFC receiving race, caught only two passes for 38 yards. After running three straight long patterns in which he never looked back, he came to the sidelines and told a group of photographers, "You guys could do my job today. I'm just out for the exercise."

THE ONLY good thing about Drew's day was his first catch that ran his consecutive game reception streak to 45 games.

The Dallas defense did not give up a touchdown, which could be considered a bright spot since they gave up five to San Francisco last Monday night, but with the Denver offense under wraps by an unwilling Morton on the sidelines, Denver was making no serious threat to score.

"When Morton went out of the game early, it was a big let down to the defense, I think," Dallas defensive end Harvey Martin said. "It kind of takes away the thrill of the victory. I think we were ready to play a good game today, but I guess they thought saving Morton for the playoffs was the best thing."

DALLAS LINEBACKER Thomas Henderson was unimpressed with the whole outing. "I can't see how they went 12-1. Craig (Morton) must have been the difference. But I wish he had played. I don't think they are that good. Well, maybe we were guilty of going through the motions too. There was something missing out there today."

Morton contradicted himself after the game. First he said, "I'm sorry I didn't really get a chance to play more against Dallas, but I aggravated a hip injury on that blitz by (Randy) Hughes." Later he said, "I was planning to play only a couple of series anyway since I didn't practice much this past week. I don't think we had the greatest concentration out there today. Our minds were on next week."

That seemed strange to most followers of Morton, since he lost a starting job to Staubach earlier in the year.

EVEN STAUBACH thought Morton changed the tempo of the game. "It takes the edge off victory without Craig playing. I know the fans wanted us to go at each other today and put on a show, but when he went out, I think both teams settled into a different approach for the game."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry felt much the same way. "This was a game we were ready to play at first. Then Craig went out and it took some of the luster off. We accomplished our objective, but I don't think anyone is going to say that we looked like a Super Bowl team."

At any rate, Dallas is in the playoffs for the 11th time in the last 12 years and matched the 12-2 record of the 1968 team. Now they face Walter Payton and the Chicago Bears next Monday here at 1 p.m. in a playoff game that is already a sellout. That's about the only good news.

Steelers back into playoffs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "The Lord operates in strange ways," said Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll, looking back on the Steelers' 10-9 National Football League victory over the San Diego Chargers Sunday.

Noll was talking about the breaks that gave the Steelers a 9-5 season after a game they could have lost and didn't need to win.

It was up to the Houston Oilers to beat Cincinnati to give Pittsburgh its sixth American Conference Central Division title in the last seven years and the Oilers came through with a 21-16 victory earlier in the day.

"We should give Bum Phillips the game ball," said Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw, referring to the coach of the Oilers.

Bradshaw, puffing on a 10-inch victory cigar, sat in the locker room with a huge brace and hot towel immobilizing a pinched nerve in his neck. He was knocked out of the game in the third quarter but is expected to play next Saturday when Pittsburgh opens the playoffs at Denver against the Broncos.

"I got hit in the jaw with a helmet," said Bradshaw. "It felt like a George Foreman right hand."

San Diego Coach Tommy Prothro took the defeat gracefully. The Chargers finished the season with a 7-7 record, their best since 1969.

Raiders' Madden frets over players' health

OAKLAND (AP) — "The thing I was thinking about most was getting out of this game healthy," said Oakland Raiders Coach John Madden.

The reigning Super Bowl champions also came out with a victory, 21-20 on Errol Mann's 28-yard field goal in the fourth quarter, over the Kansas City Chiefs on the final day of the National Football League's regular season.

Madden, whose defensive unit will be without injured veterans Phil Villapiano and George Atkinson in the playoffs, got a scare when linebacker Monte Johnson went down in the second period.

"But I talked to Monte before he left the stadium and he said he'll be all right. We think it's just a pinched nerve in his shoulder," Madden said.

Quarterback Ken Stabler sat out Sunday's game resting for first-round playoff opponent Baltimore and said: "The most important thing in any game is to win and the second most important is to stay away from injuries. I think we did both."

Two longtime Kansas City stars, linebackers Willie Lanier and Jim Lynch, saw their final NFL action Sunday.

The Rock upset with Werblinswitch

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The head of the Prudential Insurance Co., the largest single investor in the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, is upset that David "Sonny" Werblin has left the authority to take the top spot at Madison Square Garden Corp. in New York.

As a result, the question of the insurance company's further investment in the authority — which operates Giants Stadium and Meadowlands racetrack — is up in the air. The insurance company currently is committed to $50 million in Sports Authority bonds used to help build the complex.

"Sonny Werblin's business genius and knowledge of the entertainment world were important ingredients in the success of the complex," said Donald S. MacNaughton, Prudential's chief executive officer, in an interview published Monday in the Star-Ledger of Newark.

MacNaughton said he had the "highest praise" for retiring Atty. Gen. William F. Hyland, who was named Werblin's replacement only hours after Werblin resigned from his New Jersey post Friday.

"The question, of course, is not Bill Hyland," MacNaughton said. "I have great respect for him as a man and lawyer.

"The real question is what are the qualities needed in a chairman of the Sports Authority to assure its continued success."

He added, "I hope people don't think that it's the physical plants of the stadium and the race track, or their location, that account for the success of the complex.

"You need more than a physical facility. Nobody knows that better than Charley Bluhdorn," he noted, referring the the chairman of Gulf and Western Industries Inc., which owns Madison Square Garden.

Jones' passes rescue lost cause

boos resounded in the rain-soaked arena and the Colts looked like they were headed home for the holidays.

Then Jones took over. But because Tim Fox had blocked a Toni Linhart conversion, the Pats still had a one-point lead when Mike Patrick's punt was downed at the Baltimore one.

"I thought we had them with that 21-3 lead," said Fox. "But then, I thought we had them when they were one point down."

JONES CONNECTED with Glenn Doughty on a 57-yard pass. Two pass-interference calls helped move the ball closer to the New England goal, and the Colts then received a big break on a loose ball.

On first and goal from the six, Jones was hit by linebacker Steve Zabel and appeared to fumble, with the Patriots' Sam Hunt falling on the ball. The officials, however, said Jones was down before the ball popped free.

"The quarterback was in the grasp of the tackler and I blew the whistle," said referee Fred Silva.

NM State hires Northern coach

MARQUETTE, Mich. (AP) — Northern Michigan football coach Gil Krueger, apparently disappointed after being passed over for a Wisconsin coaching job, is leaving for a warmer climate.

NMU officials say Krueger has accepted the top coaching post at New Mexico State.

Krueger resigned Saturday and signed a multi-year contract to succeed Jim Bradley, who was fired after five seasons at the Las Cruces, N.M. school.

Krueger had openly sought the head coaching job at his alma mater, Wisconsin, but was passed over by the Big Ten school for Ball State coach David McClain.

The 48-year-old Krueger led the Wildcats to an NCAA Division II title in 1975 and into the post-season playoffs the last two seasons. He spent four years at Northern Michigan.

KRUEGER WAS not available for comment over the weekend. NMU Athletic Director Gil Canale said Krueger was "disheartened" when Wisconsin named its new coach Friday and apparently felt a move to the Division I New Mexico school would be a step up.

Canale said Krueger told him he would be paid about $28,000 in the first year of the contract and that New Mexico has promised to beef up its struggling football program.

New Mexico moves into a new 40,000 seat stadium in September.

Canale said he expects two of Krueger's assistants to apply for the vacant post: offensive line coach Carl Nystrom and offensive backfield coach Bill Rademacher.

Bucs still get best of litter

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — "It was sort of a Hollywood script. We win the final two games of the season and still get the No. 1 draft pick," Coach John McKay said Sunday after his 226 Tampa Bay Buccaneers gave screaming fans a Christmas present — a 17-7 upset of St. Louis for their first-ever home victory.

The second-year National Football League team finally put it all together for loyal fans — 56,922 this time — who had waited through five straight shutouts. They gave the Bucs 21 standing ovations during the game, then swarmed the field and pulled down both goal posts.

The Bucs stretched their winning streak to two games after 26 straight losses despite the presence of five Cardinals just named to the NFL Pro Bowl, set for Tampa on Jan. 23.

Princeton appoints Navarro

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Frank Navarro, who built little Wabash College in Indiana into an NCAA Division III football power after six years at Columbia, has been named head coach at Princeton University The Associated Press learned Sunday.

The 46-year-old Navarro succeeds Bob Casciola, whose contract was not renewed after a five-year record of 14-30-1. Princeton, once an Ivy League power, has not had a winning season since 1970.

Navarro flew in to meet with Princeton officials Sunday and the official announcement was scheduled to be made Monday at an 11:30 a.m. news conference.

LSC shows 39-33

By The Associated Press

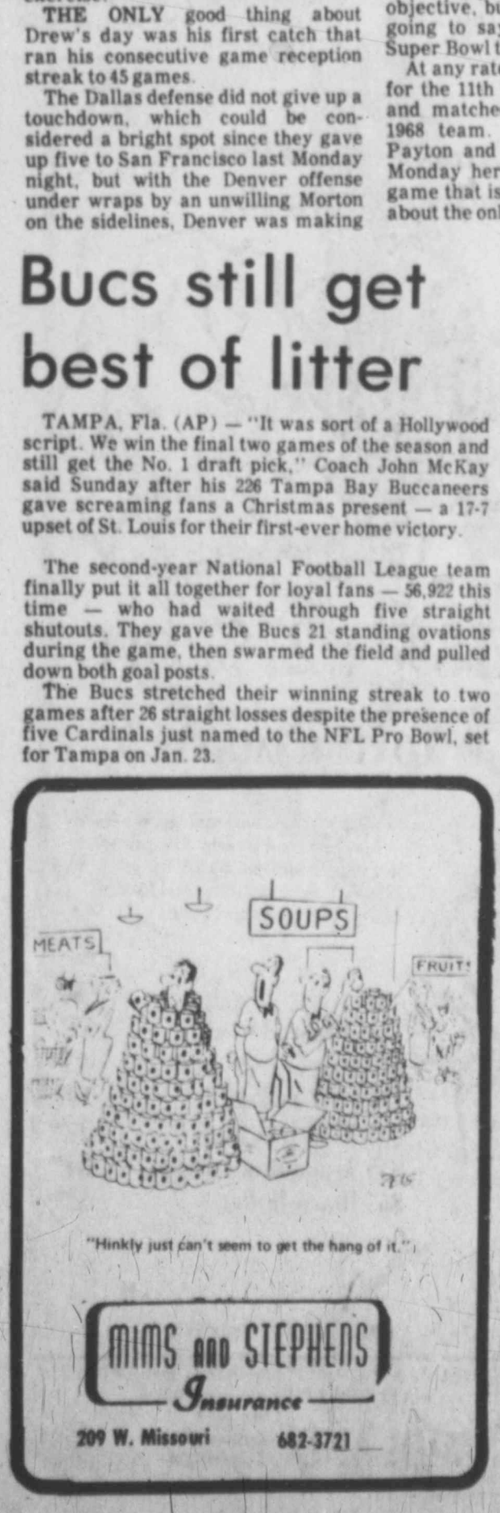

The Lone Star Conference is 39-33 against outside competition and that's where it will stand—for at least a week.

All LSC basketball teams take time off until Jan. 3 when the conference schools will go back to play.

LSC faculty representatives voted two years ago to ban workouts and games between semesters as an economy measure. The restrictions have been lifted for the basketball season next year and holiday play can resume.

Abilene Christian and Howard Payne have the best records at 8-2. ACU won two games last week while Howard Payne ripped Hardin-Simmons 111-69—a team which had beaten the Yellow Jackets earlier in the year.

Southwest Texas is 6-2 and East Texas and Texas A&I are each 5-4.

Sunday's Sunland race results

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) — The Drake used a strong stretch run Sunday to win the feature horse race at Sunland Park by one and one-half lengths.

The Drake, which went off at 10-1 odds, won the six-furlong sprint in a time of 1:10 4-5 seconds and returned $23.80 to win, $9.40 to place and $6 to show. The colt is owned by J.C. Childers of Borger, Tex.

Butter 'Um Up and Jet's Boy finished in a deadheat for second place. Butter 'Um Up refunded $3.60 and $4.40 and Jet's Boy paid $7.20 and $7.80.

Heels' 4-corners riles Bearcats

By The Associated Press

Gale Catlett doesn't call it basketball. Mike O'Koren does.

Actually, the view of the four-corner offense depends on where you stand — the losing or the winning side.

"Non-conference teams are just not used to it," said O'Koren after North Carolina's controversial offensive weapon torpedoed Catlett's Cincinnati team 67-59 Saturday night.

"No doubt about it," added O'Koren. "The four-corners won again."

Catlett, on the other hand, was more of the opinion that "Carolina didn't win it — we lost it.

"THE BEST team didn't win," Catlett simmered. "If Carolina had played ball in the last seven minutes, instead of the fourcorners, we would have won."

Like it or not, it was a typical victory for the nation's fifth-ranked team. The Tar Heels took a small lead midway through the second half and built on it with the help of the four-corners, which not only slows down tempo but opens up offensive opportunities.

The high-tension game, which North Carolina Coach Dean Smith called "a typical early-season matchup between Top Ten teams," resulted in the first loss this season for the sixth-ranked Bearcats.

In other games involving the ranked teams, No. 1 Kentucky blasted St. John's 102-72 in the finals of the Kentucky Invitational tournament at Lexington; No. 3 Marquette defeated Bowling Green 86-54; No. 7 Indiana State whipped Eastern Michigan 81-72; No. 8 UCLA beat UC-Santa Barbara 71-55 and No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas buried Loyola of California 101-84.

Also, No. 11 San Francisco won the Golden Gate Invitational in San Francisco with a 98-93 victory over Baylor; 15th-ranked Michigan took a 92- 79 decision over Central Michigan; No. 16 Detroit stopped Ball State 103-70; 18th-ranked Maryland beat Long Island University 94-64; No. 19 Kansas State dropped a 67-63 decision to Texas-El Paso in a consolation game of the Sun Bowl Classic in El Paso, Tex. and No. 20 Kansas outscored St. Louis University 85-65.

UTAH WON the Volunteer Classic in Knoxville with an 85-80 victory over host Tennessee; Dayton defeated Georgia Tech 65-63 to win the Dayton Invitational; Houston won its own Bluebonnet Classic with a 137- 94 rout of North Texas; Memphis State edged Army 77-76 in overtime to win the Sun Bowl Classic; Santa Clara took the Cable Car Classic in Santa Clara, Cal., with an 82-79 decision over Portland; Florida State defeated Navy 82-55 in the finals of the Vulcan Classic in Birmingham, Ala., and Southwestern Louisiana took the Bayou Classic in Lafayette, La., with a 98-81 triumph over Ohio University.

O'Koren and Hal Wood each scored 12 points and Phil Ford directed North Carolina's fourcorner offense with his usual aplomb as the Tar Heels won at Greensboro, N.C. With the help of their famous offensive manuever, the Tar Heels outscored the Bearcats 12-2 in the final five minutes.

The inside scoring of massive Mike Phillips and the outside shooting of guards Kyle Macy and Truman Claytor fired Kentucky past St. John's. The victory was Kentucky's sixth in a row this year and gave the Wildcats their 18th title in the 25th renewal of their tournament.

Kentucky settled the game late in the first half, using a 20- 6 surge over the final 5:52 to build a 46-28 halftime lead. Phillips led Kentucky's balanced attack with 20 points, while Macy and Claytor scored 16 each.

MARQUETTE overpowered Bowling Green behind Ulice Payne's 16-point performance. The defending national champions, undefeated in five games, took command with a 10-point spree early in the first half and intimidated the Falcons the rest of the way with quickness on defense and superior size under the boards.

"We played about as bad a game as I can remember," said Bowling Green Coach John Weinert. "We embarrassed ourselves. Even though you lose, you can lose with pride and determination. We lost our pride."

As for Marquette, Weinert said he was impressed with the depth of the Warrior lineup.

"This is the deepest I can remember a Marquette team," he said. "They shoot better than many of the Marquette teams."

Oilers expel Bengals

Pete Rozelle for a blown call that cost Houston that game.

"We outplayed them in Cincinnati and we outplayed them today."

The victory sent Pittsburgh to the playoffs with a 9-5 record while the Oilers and Cincinnati tied for second with 8-6 records.

Johnson caught a 17-yard pass from quarterback Dan Pastorini and snagged another pass for 35 yards to the Bengal one in the second quarter to set up Ronnie Coleman's touchdown.

CINCINNATI GOT field goals of 28 and 27 yards from Chris Bahr and trailed 13-6 at halftime.

After Houston defensive end James Young tackled quarterback Ken Anderson in the end zone for a safety in the third quarter, Anderson hit Pat McInally with an 11-yard TD pass to pull the Bengals to a 15-13 deficit.

Houston retaliated with field goals of 27 and 26 yards by Tom Dempsey to put the game away. Bahr added a 24 yard field goal with 44 seconds left

Tanner rips Brian Teacher

By The Associated Press

TENNIS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa earned the right to meet the United States in the finals of the North American zone Davis Cup tennis competition after beating Colombia 4-1 in the zone semifinals.

South African Byron Bertram drubbed Ivan Molina 3-6, 6-3, 64, 6-4 and countryman Ray Moore defeated Alvaro Betancur 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 in singles play to clinch South Africa's victory.

SYDNEY, Australia — Roscoe Tanner served 29 aces but needed nearly 2½ hours to beat Brian Teacher 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 6-3 in the men's singles final of the New South Wales Open Championship.

In the women's final, Evonne Goolagong defeated Sue Barker 6-2, 6-3, capturing her fourth New South Wales title.

SKIING

BETTMERALF, Switzerland — Ursula Konzett of Lichtenstein won the women's European Cup giant slalom with a combined run of 2 minutes, 31.73 seconds.

Austrian Lea Solkner finished seconds in 2:31.96 and Vicki Fleckenstein of Syracuse, N.Y. was third in 2:33.86.

Solkner came back to capture the special slalom, with victories in both runs.

VAL GARDENA, Italy — Herbert Plank of Italy edged Austrian superstar Franz Klammer by two seconds and won the men's World Cup downhill.

The 23-year-old Italian mastered the 3,750-meter course in 2:01.47 minutes, just .25 seconds off Klammer's track record.

Huskers, Tar Heels clash in Liberty Bowl

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Nebraska and North Carolina are two I-formation football teams with a new breed of tailback.

At Nebraska, it's I.M. Hipp. At North Carolina, it's Amos Lawrence.

The two will square off tonight in the 19th annual Liberty Bowl game with Nebraska favored by a touchdown in the nationally televised contest (ABC-TV, 8 p.m.

North Carolina, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, finished 8-2-1 and led the nation in defense against scoring. Nebraska finished 8-3 and tied for second in the Big Eight.

"ISAIAH (HIPP) is probably the first true breakaway back we've had at I-back in a long time," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "He gives us a little bit different dimension than we've had in the past. We've had Jeff Kinney-type players who are 4.7 and strong and can do a lot of things well."

Hipp, a 200-pound sophomore, gained 1,336 yards on 197 carries although he didn't become a starter until Rick Berns was injured in the third game of the season.

North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley says Lawrence, a freshman, is "an entirely different type tailback than we've had over the years.

"We had Don McCauley, who is with the (Baltimore) Colts now. We had Sammy Johnson, who is with the (Minnesota) Vikings. We had Mike Voight, who is with Houston. All those people were big, strong, tough inside runners who had the ability to turn through arms. Amos is not that type tailback at all."

The 5-foot-10, 178-pound Lawrence gained 1,248 yards on 193 carries.

"HE'S ONE of those people you don't get a square shot at," Osborne said. "A lot of the bigger backs you have — once they're committed to a hole — they stay with it, but Lawrence is really able to go inside and still get outside very effectively."

"He does have an exceptional ability to find a soft spot or a crease in the defense," Dooley said. "I hope our offensive linemen can give him some creases."

Hipp, a dedicated weight-lifter, can bench press more than 350 pounds and holds the Nebraska football record on the leg sled with 915 pounds.

"He'll run through tackles sometimes and it looks like somebody has done a poor job of tackling, but he's so strong he can break tackles," Osborne said. "He's strong, but he does have elusiveness — an unusual combination."

OSBORNE SAYS Berns, the No. 2 tailback, is also a good runner. He gained 992 yards last year and netted 664 yards this season.

Hillin stakes wildcat; Martin draws project

Hillin Production Co. of Midland announced location for a 5,000-foot wildcat in Reeves County, 2½ miles east of the Marsh, South (Delaware sand) field.

It is No. 1 Keasler, 467 feet from south and west lines of section 18, block 57, T-3, T&P survey and eight miles southwest of Orla.

MARTIN TEST

RK Petroleum Corp. of Midland No. 2 Texas Land & Mortgage is to be drilled as an 11,800-foot project in the RK (Devonian) area of Martin County, ½ miles south of production.

Drillsite is 2¼ miles north of Tarzan and 1,880 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 7, block 37, T-2-N, T&P survey.

MITCHELL TRY

Duncan Drilling Co. No. 3 Burchard is a 4,500-foot operation 1 miles south of the Hodnett (Strawn reef) area of Mitchell County.

The project is 12 miles north of Westbrook and 467 feet from north and east lines of section 71, block 97, H&TC survey.

STERLING OUTPOSTS

Dorchester Exploration, Inc., of Midland announced locations for a pair of outposts to the Parochial Bade (Cisco) field in Sterling County.

The projects, 1½ miles northeast of production, are No. 1-5 Foster and No. 2-5 Foster.

Each will drill to 8,400 feet.

No. 1-5 Foster is 1,650 feet from south and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 5, block 22, H&TC survey.

No. 2-5 Foster is 1,470 feet from south and 710 feet from east lines of section 5, block 22, H&TC survey.

The tests are 12 miles northwest of Sterling City.

CRANE OILER

Gulf Oil Corporation No. 11-D Jax M. Cowden and others has been reclassified as an oil producer, the second for the Bar-Mar (3,800 Clear Fork) field of Crane County.

It is 1½ miles east of the other producer.

On 24-hour potential test it pumped 6.2 barrels of 35.8-gravity oil, plus 11.4 barrels of water, through perforations from 3,783 to 3,829 feet. The pay was treated with 5,900 gallons of acid and fractured with 9,300 gallons.

Location is 4,067 feet from northeast and 467 feet from southeast lines of section 11, block 1, H&TC survey and 14 miles southwest of Crane.

PECOS WELL

Four C. Oil & Gas Corp. of Dallas has completed No. 1 Mobil-Vollmaras a ½-mile west extension to the Four C (San Andres) field in Crane County, 11 miles southeast of Imperial.

On 24-hour potential test, the oiler pumped 11 barrels of oil, plus 45 barrels of water, from open hole from 2,328 to 2,350 feet after 250 gallons of acid.

Gravity of the oil is 37 degrees and gas-oil ratio on potential test was too small to measure.

Location is 330 feet from south and east lines of section 33, block 9, H&TC survey.

Hole is bottomed at 2,350 feet and 5½-inch casing is set at 2,328 feet.

Discovery potentials

Continental Oil Co. No. 3 Brown-Altman Unit has been completed as a small flowing discovery in the Emperor field of Winkler County.

Operator finaled the well for a daily flow of eight barrels of oil and eight barrels of water, through a 10/64-inch choke and perforations from 7,144 to 7,320 feet. Gas-oil ratio was 213-1. The pay was fractured with 11,200 gallons.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 25, block B-5, psl survey and five miles south of Kermit. The field has Wolfcamp gas producers.

Gulf potentials well

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 Keohane-Federal, ¾-mile northwest of the discovery well of the Shugart, North (Atoka) field in Eddy County, N. M., has been completed for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 6.584 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Production is through perforations from 11,800 to 11,811 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 19-18s-31e and 13 miles southwest of Maljamar.

TERRY WILDCAT

NRM Petroleum Corp. No. 1 Hoffmann is to be drilled as a 5,500-foot wildcat in Terry County, two miles southeast of Wellman.

Location is 2⅞ miles northeast of the Wellman, Southwest (San Andres) field and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 41, block DD, John H. Gibson survey. Ground elevation is 3,301 feet.

GAS FLOWS

Monsanto Co. No. 1 Catclaw-Federal, one-mile east and slightly north of the Revelation (Morrow gas) field of Eddy County, N. M., flowed gas and recovered water on a drillstem test in the Morrow.

The section tested was from 10,620 to 10,652 feet. Gas surfaced in 13 minutes and on a ¼-inch choke flowed at the rate of 220,000 cubic feet per day. On a ½-inch choke the flow was 280,000 cubic feet per day, and again on a ½-inch choke it flowed at the rate of 129,000 cubic feet per day.

Recovery was 270 feet of drilling fluid and 1,175 feet of formation water.

More hole is being made below 10,683 feet in lime.

Location is 1,880 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 10-22s-25e. It is nine miles west of Carlsbad.

SCHLEICHER WELL

Cola Petroleum, Inc., No. 1-A Whitten has been completed in the Canyon "B" gas pay of the Eldorado, North field of Schleicher County, four miles northwest of Eldorado.

A west offset, the well finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 6.5 million cubic feet of gas per day. Production is through perforations from 6,012 to 6,078 feet after 30,000 gallons of fracture solution.

Location is 2,320 feet from south and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 26, block LL, TCRR survey.

OIL RECOVERED

Atlantic Richfield Co. No. 1 Langley Deep, 15,500-foot Ellenburger wildcat in Lea County, eight miles southwest of Eunice is conditioning hole after recovering oil and water on a drillstem test from 9,462 to 9,491 feet.

Tool was open four hours. Gas surfaced in 12 minutes at an unestimated rate. Recovery was 96 barrels of oil and nine barrels of water.

Location is 990 feet from north and 2,310 feet from west lines of section 28-22s-36e.

Raymond E. Batchelor Jr.

Director announced

Raymond E. Batchelor Jr. has been elected to the board of directors of the Bovaird Supply Co. headquartered in Tulsa, Okla.

He is vice president and general manager of the oil field supply firm.

Batchelor began his career with Bovaird in 1957 as a clerk in Farmington, N. M. His father, a retired Bovaird executive, also serves as a director of the 106-year-old supply company.

Sales head announced

DALLAS — American Petrofina, Inc., has announced the promotion of William H. Frank to general manager, Distributor Sales, from manager, Distributor Sales, in the company's Transportation and Marketing Department.

Other changes announced by R. C. Low, group vice president, include T. F. Dolan from assistant Distributor Sales manager to senior assistant Distributor Sales manager and the appointment of G. S. McFarlane as manager, Planning and Coordination.

In line with the reorganization of Marketing, Low said Frank will assume the added responsibilities for three wholly-owned jobbership subsidiaries and three other marketing affiliates. Also, dealer training was transferred to Distributor Sales as part of an expanded Merchandising program.

Frank joined Fina in November 1957 as a sales representative in Big Spring. He transferred to Wichita Falls in August 1958 as manager of the then newly-formed sales district.

In October 1960 he was named assistant Distributor Sales manager, moving to Dallas. He advanced to Distributor Sales manager in January 1965.

Frank umpired in the Longhorn and West Texas-New Mexico baseball leagues three years.

TCC elects new officers

AUSTIN — Fred P. Bergeron of Rockdale, area manager for Aluminum Co. of America, has been elected 1978-79 president of the Texas Chemical Council.

Bergeron replaces A. D. Cyphers Jr., plant manager of DuPont in Victoria.

In addition, the council elected R. G. Dillard, general manager of Shell Oil & Chemical at Deer Park vice president, and re-elected T. Brockett Hudson, president of Southwest Chemical Service, Inc., in Houston secretary-treasurer.

Demand for OPEC oil could show decrease

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Industrialized countries' demand for imported oil from the international oil cartel will remain the same next year or decline slightly according to an unpublished assessment by the International Energy Agency.

This slackening in demand, which U.S. government and oil industry officials also foresee, is a function of new production from the North Sea and Alaska and lagging economic recovery in some industrialized countries, oil analysts say.

Industry and government analysts are anxiously weighing projections of world oil demand in anticipation of the meeting this week of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The meeting is scheduled to open Tuesday in Caracas.

There is wide speculation that there will be a continued price freeze. This speculation is fueled, in part, by the soft condition of the world oil market. The shah of Iran and Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Zaki Yamani, have said they favor a price freeze.

"There will be a flat demand for imported oil next year," said James W. Reddington, a senior economist with the Paris-based IEA, in a telephone interview.

The 19-nation IEA is made up of the industrialized countries, with the exception of France. Nearly all of the members are oil importers.

Reddington describes the IEA's analysis as "a current assessment" of demand for oil imports. Free-world demand for OPEC oil rose slightly in 1977 to 28.8 million barrels a day, up slightly from 28.3 million barrels a day in 1976, and "imports will remain essentially unchanged for 1978," he said.

In Washington, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Stephen W. Bosworth said the State and Energy departments agree with the IEA forecast. "Demand for OPEC oil is going to remain relatively flat because of North Slope and North Sea oil. Another major factor is the final shape of U.S. energy policy."

The lack of significant growth in industrialized countries' oil imports and the so-called oil glut are having an effect on OPEC production. Saudi Arabia, the cartel's leading producer and Abu Dhabi, a member of the United Arab Emirates, have announced cuts in oil production over the last two months that will reduce OPEC production by 1 million barrels of oil a day.

OPEC is now producing about 31.5 million barrels of oil a day, and could produce 7 million barrels more.

Slackening demand for imports could make it more difficult for the cartel to make a price increase stick, unless production is reduced.

Reddington said the IEA projections, which do not include 1977 year-end consumption data from member countries, take into consideration the growth of imports to the United States and Japan to fill strategic oil reserves. Together, both countries will be importing 500,000 barrels of oil a day or more next year for storage. Japan recently announced an ambitious program to have 90 days' oil supply in storage by 1980. President Carter has set of goal of 1 billion barrels of oil in storage by the early 1980s.

John Lichtblau, an international oil consultant, said his analysis shows a slight, but not significant, increase in demand for OPEC crude oil. "Under our assumptions we see a very small growth, but one could also come up with no increase in demand for OPEC oil because of new supplies," says Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York.

The IEA projections also forecast a reduction in U.S. imports for 1978.

Recently, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger Jr. said U.S. imports would decline in 1978, "though not as a result of a reduction in demand." Due to increased production from Alaska, U.S. imports, including oil for the strategic reserves, will drop from about 8.7 million barrels of oil a day to 8.3 million barrels or fewer he said.

Reddington emphasized the need to press for aggressive conservation programs and efforts to increase alternatives to OPEC oil in the industrialized countries. "We just happen to have a happy confluence of increases in supply, while we have a pause in energy requirements," he said.

Kerr-McGee fills post

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Jack R. Williams has been named manager of exploration and Paul D. Baranyae has been named regional exploration supervisor for the Gulf Coast Region of Kerr-McGee Corp.'s Petroleum Exploration Division.

Williams and Baranyae are based in Houston.

Williams, who previously served as regional exploration supervisor for the upper Gulf Coast Region, succedds Robert Ardell who has left the company.

Baranyae, who will be responsible for offshore exploration, holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in Geology from Michigan State University.

Williams holds a bachelor's degree in Geology from Mississippi Sate University and a master's degree from Texas Tech University.

Dr. Hagler appointed Tech interim director

LUBBOCK — Dr. Marion O. Hagler, professor of electrical engineering, has been named interim director of the Texas Tech University Center for Energy Research, reports Dean John B. Bradford of the College of Engineering.

Bradford said Hagler's interim appointment would continue through the remainder of the academic year. At that time, he said, it is anticipated that a permanent appointment will be made.

Hagler succeeds Dr. Stanley R. Liberty, who resigned to become head of the Department of Electrical Engineering at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va.

Hagler, whose primary research interests are in fushion energy and optics, earlier had served as director of the Institute for Energy Research out of which the center grew. He is co-director of the Electrical Engineering Department's plasma laboratory.

Hagler holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees from Rice University and the master's and doctor's degrees from The University of Texas at Austin.

The work of the Center for Energy Research is supported, in part, by a state legislature appropriation of $250,000 per year for each year of the biennium.

Although its origins were within the College of Engineering, it seeds projects outside that college. The School of Law and the departments of political science, economics, chemistry and agricultural economics, in addition to engineering disciplines, are participating in research this year.

Armed conflict specter in committee report

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The chilling specter of armed conflict between America's two most important oil-producing allies — Iran and Saudi Arabia — has found its way out of popular fiction and into serious study in a Senate committee report.

The report, released Sunday night, suggests that the United States should condone an Iranian invasion of Saudi Arabia in certain circumstances.

"If Iran is called upon to intervene in the internal affairs of any (Persian) Gulf state, it must be recognized in advance by the United States that this is the role for which Iran is being primed," the Senate study says. "Blame cannot be assigned for Iran's carrying out an implied assignment."

The report, prepared for the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources chaired by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., argues that the United States has "a direct interest" in ensuring that Iran has sufficient military capabilities to prevent the Soviet Union or radical forces from taking power in any of the oil-rich Gulf states, especially Saudi Arabia.

The outlines of the report, written at Jackson's request by consultants Fern Racine Gold and Melvin A Conant, resemble the fictional thriller, "The Crash of '79", which portrays an Iranian invasion of Gulf oilfields triggering worldwide economic collapse.

But the report's implicatioins are far more political than literary. Jackson is an avowed champion of both Israel and Iran, two countries whose supporters are showing increased concern over the Carter administration's growing reliance on Saudi Arabia's oil supplies and financial reserves.

Jackson is expected to lead a Senate fight next year to deny Saudi Arabia the right to buy 60 F-15 fighter-bombers promised by the administration.

While arguing that the U.S. has an interest in Iran's military strength, the report offers no such endorsement for Saudi Arabia. Moreover, it calls political stability in Saudi Arabia "a complementary interest" for the United States, after the primary goal of "maintaining access to the vital oil reserves of Saudi Arabia."

The United States imports from Saudi Arabia 25 percent of the 8.5 million barrels of oil it consumes daily. Iran provides 6 percent of American imports.

Production in Iran, which has embarked on an ambitious but still faltering economic development program, and whcih has built up one of the world's most sophisticated military machines, is falling. Saudi Arabia, which has a small, poorly trained army, sits atop the world's richest pool of oil reserves.

In summing up the "implications" of U.S.-Iranian ties, the authors of the report appear to try to soften the impact of their strategic analysis by pointing out that "the United States is not committed to resupply Iran with military equipment or parts in the event of an Iranian military action which does not serve U.S. interests."

But the pro-Iranian thrust of the report is reflected by the fact that, although in the original draft, obtained by The Washington Post, the authors had added, "Iran does not have a free hand and must not have one," those words were struck from the version issued by Jackson.

Saudi Arabia and Iran accounted for 44.6 percent of the United States' $8.7 billion in foreign military sales last year. Iran and Israel are the first and second largest purchasers of U.S. arms, followed by Saudi Arabia. Much of the Saudi's purchases is devoted to building infrastructure projects such as airports.

Calling the American dependence on oil imports from the two largest oil-exporting states "unprecendented", the analysis says the United States should be watchful for differences between the Saudis and their non-Arab neighbors across the Persian Gulf in Iran.

While both Iran and Saudi Arabia are essentially pro-American and share Islamic values, the two countries have had an uneasy relationship in recent years.

The Shah, for example, has cultivated close relations with Israel and is Israel's largest oil supplier.

Stock market declines

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a slight loss today in a session marked by weakness in General Motors shares.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off .96 at 814.36.

Declines outnumbered advances by aa 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

GM shares led the active list, down ¾ at a new 1977 low of 61¾.

Last week the company reported a decline of more than 13 per cent in early-December auto sales.

Today state prosecutors announced a $40 million settlement of cases involving thousands of 1977 model-year car buyers who received Chevrolet engines in other GM makes.

Analysts said continued weakness in the dollar was keeping the market on the defensive.

Wall Street is unhappy about the dollar's recent slump against the Japanese yen and several key European currencies because of its tendency to deter foreign buying of U.S. stocks.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was down .11 at 51.50. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gave up .21 to 125.38.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 9.17 million shares by noontime against 8.80 million at the same point Friday.

'Brown Bagger' ends many airport delays

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The Duke and Duchess of Argyle did it. Gov. Jerry Brown of California did it. Now I've done it, flown the "Brown Bagger," the no frills, pack-your-own lunch flight across the Atlantic.

But they didn't fly back on the Concorde, as I did, which is another story.

Freddie Laker, a British chap who used to sweep out aircraft hangars before he rose up in the world to own his own airline, had to fight his own government for years to bring about his dream of a low-priced air shuttle service between New York and London.

His Skytrain, already dubbed the Brown Bagger by New York cabdrivers, began service late in September offering no frills flights to London at $135 (or to New York at $105 because of currency differences) and caused Pan American, TWA and other competitors to provide similar rock bottom flights. Now prices are falling and frills are being snipped from the Miami and Fort Lauderdale runs.

Tickets for the Skytrain can only be bought on the day of the flight, but the ticket office located out on Queens Boulevard in the wilds of Jimmy Breslin country gives telephone advice beginning at dawn on how many seats are still left.

I called at eight in the morning from my Connecticut hideaway and was advised by a pleasant English accent, reminiscent of Greer Garson in "Mrs. Miniver," that 310 seats remained out of 345.

When I reached the ticket window at 10:30 a.m., I handed over my passport for perusal, my credit card for payment, my suitcase for checking and, on the big board, chose seat No. 4A, which was a window in the non-smoking section. The little charmer behind the desk told me I was passenger No. 70.

The place was empty. The whole transaction took three minutes, pretty close to an airline counter record in my two decades of flitting about the globe. She told me to be back at the same office by 9:45 p.m. to catch the last free Laker bus to the United Airlines terminal at Kennedy or else proceed there on my own.

Investing 50 cents in a subway ride into Manhattan, I wandered along Madison Avenue peeking into some of the specialty food shops that now pack picnic baskets for the transoceanic shuttle.

For $46, one featured "a Concorde-style supersonic snack for the no frills passenger." It included a thimbleful of caviar, roast squab in little booties and a half bottle of Moet — Chandon bubbly.

I walked over to Zeb's sandwich shop behind Grand Central Terminal and had the takeaway man build me a double pastrami on rye with a side order of cole slaw, letting it be known that his handiwork would be consumed somewhere off Newfoundland.

"Big deal," he said, scowling, but he threw in a couple of dill pickle slices for the road.

The last bus to the airport evoked the last train from Berlin, piled high with duffle bags, backpacks, blanket rolls and guitars, as if the occupants, some carrying babies in pajamas, were thrown in with all their earthly impediments.

After passing through security,

there were no further check-in procedures and the Big DC-10, arrayed throughout with nine seats across the aisle, pulled away from the gate at precisely 11 p.m. Already there were veteran Brown Baggers who knew enough to assert the terriorial imperative. With a tough refugee mentality, they scarfed up every pillow and blanket in sight and stretched out on the empty seats for an all night nap.

Our ranks included 258 passengers and 2 infants that night. I was one of three wearing a tie. As soon as the seat belt sign went off, the 10 stewardesses in tall Trilby hats rolled the drink carts down the aisles, offering liqour at 50 cents and beer for a quarter. There was no wine or champagne to set off Chef Zeb's delectation.

A cold dinner was sold in advance for $3. I asked the bearded chap across the aisle what his tray contained. "Chicken," he said, "No, wait, maybe it's shrimp." He never could decide.

For $2, I rented earphones for the in-flight movie, despite the jests of some students who predicted it would be an old Army V.D. film. It turned out to be Jackie Gleason in "Mr. Billions," which immediately put the whole plane to sleep, except for a crying baby and two Australians who went to work on their duty free liquor purchases.

The $2 hot breakfast, which I essayed, was a disaster of burnt sausage, a tired omelet and the unusual British put-down of coffee. But the old Brown Bagger was 10 minutes early getting into London's Gatwick Airport, and the cringing porter immediately mistook me for Gov. Brown.

"Where to, Governor," he nattered through yellowing teeth, "the taxi stand or the train to Victoria?" I took the train, of course, in the spirit of Freddie Laker's economy breakthrough.

Mayor Bass will listen to farmers

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The mayor of Lubbock was to meet with representatives of the American Agriculture movement today to find out what striking farmers want from him.

A source within the movement said his group would put "as many tractors as we can lay our hands on" into the city on Texas' High Plains before dawn Tuesday as the kickoff to what he called phase two of farmer demonstrations in support of a national strike.

Texas farmers have used tractors as symbols of their quest for parity, a term meaning a return to prices at least equal to the costs of producing their products. Most demonstrations have taken the form of tractor caravans, parades, or "park-ins."

Some 250 farmers parked their vehicles at Lubbock's biggest shopping center Saturday in a peaceful protest that lasted nine hours. American Agriculture representatives said that demonstration was "spontaneous."

Mayor Roy Bass said he had been contacted by the farmers group and agreed to the meeting today.

What they want, the source said, is for Bass to declare Tuesday American Agriculture day.

Told of that, Bass said: "I don't feel like a proclamation that would encourage people to shut down their businesses...was part of my function as a mayor. My opinion is that the people around here are about 105 percent in support of the farmers already. My hope would be that they wouldn't do anything to alienate that support they already have."

STSU graduates city students

SAN MARCOS — Three Midlanders were among 903 students who were graduated Saturday during winter commencement ceremonies at Southwest Texas State University.

They were Jeannette T. Rollo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien O. Thompson of 1501 W. Pecan Ave.; Joe Hart, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hart of 4415 Storey Ave., and Bradford J. Pretti, son of Mrs. Nan Sommer of 1406 Thomason Drive.

Mrs. Rollo received a bachelor of science degree with a major in criminal justice. Hart was given a bachelor of business administration degree with a major in management, and Pretti received a bachelor of arts degree with a major in history and psychology.

Probers seek crash explanation

A team of 15 to 20 rescue workers located the wreckage of the jet Sunday but was unable to find any survivors or remains in snow up to four feet deep. The search was recessed at sundown and was to resume today.

The plane crashed at about the 7,300-foot level of a peak on the north side of B er Canyon, officials said. The wreck was some 2½ miles from the nearest road, and rescuers had to hike in on snowshoes.

Davis County Sheriff Dub Lawrence said the plane hit just below the mountain top, scattering wreckage a quarter mile up the peak and down the other side. "I don't see how anyone could survive," he said.

United identified the crew as Capt. John Fender, 49, First Officer Phillip Modesitt, 46, and Second Officer Steve Simpson, 34, all of the Chicago area.

The plane was attempting to land in Salt Lake City early Sunday to pick up Christmas mail. The pilot had reported landing gear trouble and was ordered into a holding pattern.

William Lovett, chief controller at the air route traffic control center, said that just before the crash the plane left the holding pattern without explanation, headed east and could not be raised on radio by the tower.

It was the second commercial aircraft crash in the United States within a week. Last Tuesday, a chartered DC-3 crashed just after takeoff at Evansville, Ind., killing all 29 aboard, including the University of Evansville basketball team and head coach.

United spokesman Jack Gamble said the jet was loaded with about one-third its 90,000 pound cargo capacity. Another United spokesman said the cargo was "non-hazardous," and included 1,200 pounds of mail.

Senior Gleaners go scrounging for food

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Homer Fahrner regularly goes begging for food in a big way. He's looking for tons of it.

The 75-year-old Fahrner, a former stockbroker, can often be found driving the backroads of the Sacramento Valley — looking for tons of walnuts, tomatoes, cherries, apricots, sweet potatoes, apples.

He's part of a huge, informal network of nonprofit groups that scrounge for food in California, where a fifth of the nation's food and fiber is produced.

They seek food for the old, sick and have-nots that would otherwise be wasted — thrown out by distributors, processors and grocery stores, or left to be plowed under after harvest.

It's food that has fallen through the cracks in the marketing system — excess or oddsized produce, dairy products too old to sell but still good enough to eat, food in damaged containers.

In many cases the food is there for the taking, like several rows in a peach orchard that a farmer decided he can't sell. The groups check everything they gather to make sure it's edible.

Some of these scrounging groups have been around for years, often linked with churches. But in the last two or three years more groups have joined the search in a systematic way.

Their names vary — Golden Harvest in Merced, Grandview in Pasadena, Neighborhood House in San Diego, and Fahrner's Senior Gleaners.

Fahrner's effort began about two years ago when he ran an ad in a local newspaper promising to call a meeting if 20 people would contact him about the hunger problem.

"I'd seen hungry kids. One kid comes in with a sandwich and 20 kids look at the kid. Then I drove in the country and saw all the food," said Fahrner, his eyes sparkling from behind his glasses.

So after the meeting, he began Senior Gleaners. Last year, he said, the group got about 200 tons of food from the fields and dispensed it to its 1,600 members and 30 other charities.

"I am always soliciting. I just go out and knock door to door. If I get turned down 10 times, I figure I've done a day's work, and I go home pooped," Fahrner said.

Senior Gleaners shares what it gets — in one Sunday the group picked 26 tons of onions near Stockton — with other groups across the state, and the other groups share with Fahrner.

"Different surplus houses get surplus from their immediate area. We trade with Sacramento for cherries. We get grapefruit from down south in the Imperial Valley, sweet potatoes from Merced," said Michael Alexander of the Community Food Council in Santa Cruz.

California's Legislature recently passed and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. signed a bill aimed at preventing food waste. The bill, which takes effect Jan. 1, has two provisions that could lead to more food donations.

One allows donors to deduct the cost of the food donated for income tax purposes. The other limits the liability of food donors, who in the past feared they might be sued by someone who ate a donated item and became ill.

"The result of this is that food banks all over the state should benefit," said George Schrock, director of the Contra Costa Food Coalition. "It will make it a lot easier to feed hungry people. That's the whole point. This bill encourages retailers, canners and growers to give food to organizations like ourselves," Schrock said.

Schrock estimated his group distributed food worth $60,000 to 14,000 people last year.

Despite the efforts of groups like Schrock's, there still are tons of wasted — or surplus — food in California, state agriculture officials said. One reason is the huge amount of food the state produces. Another is the agriculture industry's reluctance to push cooperation with such programs in a major way.

"I don't think you will find people jumping for joy" about the new law, said Les Hubbard of the Western Growers Association, a group of about 1,200 produce growers in California.

"Certainly, the liability is one thing that concerns people," he said. And he said growers fear their donated goods will end up in a local outlet competing with their sold-for-profit goods.

SERVING as a cheerleader for Angelo State University this semester is Jodie Gotcher of Midland. She is a journalism major at the university.

Santa Claus appears at the bridge table

South thought he heard sleigh bells ringing when West led a spade, so he tried a finesse with dummy's queen.

East won with the king of spades and returned the jack of spades to dummy's ace. Now, since South couldn't develop a twelfth trick, he concluded that there is no Santa Claus.

CHRISTMAS DUCK

You may prefer turkey or goose, but duck is the right dish in this case. South must duck (play low) at the first trick.

East wins, but cannot afford to return a spade, so dummy's ace remains. South takes the club return with the ace, draws a round of trumps with the king, takes the top diamonds and ruffs a diamond.

Declarer next leads a trump to the ace and ruffs another diamond. South can then draw the last trump and reach dummy with the ace of spades to cash the last diamond.

The important thing is to save the ace of spades as the final entry to a good diamond. Do that, and your Christmas stocking is full of tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner deals and bids 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player doubles. You hold: S876; H643; D83; CKJ763. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. This is not the Stayman Convention since you would redouble with any good hand. You prefer clubs to not trump.

Letters to Santa

Dear Santa,

I am four years old and my mother's writing this for me. I am a good girl sometimes. I want a Schwinn Bicycle, a baby-come-back, a baby thataway, a weeble circus, and a record player, typewriter. Also, a Hansel and Gretel book. How is Mrs. Claus? How are you, Santa? How is Rudolph the red nose reindeer? We're going to leave some animal cookies for your elves and you. For Rudolph, I will leave a little Christmas ball. I wish you a merry Christmas and your reindeer, the elves and Mrs. Claus. Rudolph, too.

Love,
Lisa

Dear Santa:

I want:

a real tricycle bike with a flower basket on the front. I want a very good special what I like is Mickey Mouse puzzle and Stretch monster.

I want a real one like Mickey Mouse phonograph and marching Mickey Mouse, please Santa! I want a Mickey Mouse watch, "Baby Alive" doll, and Hoppity Mickey Mouse.

Please send me a McDonald's play tote and Mickey Mouse typewriter!

Merry Christmas, Santa!

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Lupus has mild dangerous forms

Dear Dr. Solomon: My neighbor, who is a woman in her late twenties, has just found out that she has lupus. But her doctor says it is the kind that is only on the skin and, therefore, not likely to be serious. I had always thought that lupus was simply one sort of disease and that it was very dangerous. Am I wrong?—Celia T.

Dear Celia: There are two kinds of lupus. The disease attacks connective tissue in the body, and one type affects only the skin. It is called cutaneous or discoid lupus erythematosus. The most characteristic symptom is a patchy, scaly rash on the cheeks and the nose—a little like the shape of a butterfly. Lesions may appear on other parts of the body.

The more serious form of the disorder is sytemic lupus erythematosus, which can affect the lungs, the heart and the kidneys. It may have the same external symptoms as discoid lupus, along with joint pains and fever.

The cause of lupus is unknown. Many of its characteristics suggest that it is an autoimmune disease—in other words one in which the body's defense mechanism mistakenly attacks the body's own tissues.

Too much sunlight or X-ray radiation may trigger discoid lupus, but it respons to treatment with sterids and antimalarial drugs. Systemic lupus varies tremedously from one patient to the next—from mild to serious to, occasionally, devastating. And women are much more apt to be affected than men—especially young women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was showing my little girl how to wash the dishes and dry them, and she asked how often one changes the sponges that are used for washing. It is a question that had never occurred to me. From a health point of view, should one change more frequently?—Mrs. T.G.

Dear Mrs. T.G.: One authority feels that sponges are health hazards. Dr. Betty C. Hobbs, a food microbiologist recently honored by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says it is impossible to keep them free of germs and that germs tend to multiply in them.

If you don't want to throw in the sponge, I would suggest soaping and rinsing them well after use and making sure they have a chance to dry out. Boiling would be good hygiene if the sponges can stand up to it. And changing them at regular intervals is also advisable—perhaps every week or so.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reistertown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Country's rural towns to lose post offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eagle City, Okla., may not be such a high flier soon.

Such towns as Eagle City may be without their money-losing post offices shortly as a result of regulations taking effect today. The new rules allow the Postal Service to close offices again after a moratorium that had been in effect since July 1, 1976.

The Eagle City Post Office serves 14 customers. Last year it took in $708, but cost $11,972 to operate. The American public made up the difference through their postal rates and income taxes.

This rural post office is one of thousands that are losing money. The Postal Service has been eyeing them for years, but rural congressmen have pressured the agency to keep the facilities open, leading to the 17-month moratorium on closings.

Under a law passed by Congress, the Postal Service cannot close a rural office merely because it is losing money. The law mandates that a list of procedures be met before any office is closed and that service as good or better be maintained afterward.

In the case of Eagle City, the Postal Service previously found it could keep the current level of service without an office in the town. "All customers are on the present line of travel of a rural route and can be served at virtually no additional cost," a report this year to the Postal Service's ruling board said.

The Eagle City facility was one of 231 scheduled for closing before the moratorium was imposed. The Postal Service had said the annual savings from those closings would be $2.3 million.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has repeatedly said there would be "no wholesale closing" of post offices and that each closing would be considered separately.

In the new regulations, the Postal Service has guaranteed that local residents will have a chance to register their views before any action. In addition, appeals on any closing decision will be allowed before the Postal Rate Commission, a separate agency.

The process is expected to take four to eight months before any office can be closed.

The Postal Service will allow residents to keep the community mailing address when a post office is closed. Thus, mail will still be addressed to such places as Smile, Ky.; Chicken, Alaska; and Zap, N.D., even if those towns no longer have their own post offices.

This was done because of complaints that a town loses its identity when its post office closes.

One Postal Service staff study found that $490 million could be saved by closing 17,000 of the nation's 30,000 post offices without hurting service. This compares to a postal deficit of $662 million in the last fiscal year.

Steel price hike slated by ninth-largest firm

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's ninth-largest steelmaker says it will raise its prices early next year, and it may be only a matter of time before other producers follow suit.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel said Sunday it will raise prices on flat-rolled and galvanized sheet steel products an average of 7 percent effective Jan. 3.

The affected products are used in the automobile and appliance industries, and price increases generally filter down to consumers.

"No steel producer in the free world can afford to ignore the inadequate profitability for sheet products emerging during recent years," President Dennis J. Carney said in a statement accompanying Wheeling-Pittsburgh's price announcement.

The White House, which traditionally has opposed steel price increases, declined comment.

President Carter has endorsed a plan to aid the ailing steel industry. His plan would cut import competition and permit domestic producers to raise prices to meet rising costs.

Other steel producers also declined comment. Some, including U.S. Steel, the nation's No. 1 steel company, have indicated higher prices are needed.

The industry raised prices on flat-rolled products in May by an average of 6 percent.

Carney said the increase is needed to offset rising energy, labor and material costs.

"Refusal to price steel products adequately may help inflation in the short range, but will have dire consequences for the economies of the free world," Carney said.

"The cost-justified price increases we are announcing today will improve returns on sheet products that constitute 78 percent of our total shipments this year," he added.

"They will not be sufficient to restore these products to past levels of profitability, and do not allow for further cost increases next year."

Wheeling-Pittsburgh lost $20.7 million during the first nine months of 1977, and has been negotiating for government-guaranteed loans needed to build a new mill and meet state and federal pollution control requirements.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh's said its costs have risen 42 percent since mid-1974, while prices have gone up only 30 percent.

Carney predicted strengthening markets for hot and cold rolled and galvanized sheets would support the increase.

Domestic steel demand has been rising because of a slackening of import activity due to anti-dumping suits filed by U.S. producers, some industry analysts say.

Knowing types of firewood helps in getting best fire

By The Associated Press

Millions of Americans are warding off the chill of long winter nights with roaring log fires. Consumers will find it pays to know something about the wood they burn.

Fireplaces seem to be growing in popularity. A spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders said Census Bureau figures show 58 percent of all new homes built in 1976 had at least one fireplace, compared to only 37 percent in 1972.

A growing number of people also are using firewood in wood-burning stoves. Since stoves are more efficient than fireplaces the price of the wood burned in them becomes competitive with that of other fuels.

But it is also important to realize that fires in fireplaces waste energy. As much as 20 percent of the air in your house can be pulled up the chimney in an hour when a fire is burning.

Unless you install special equipment, more than three-fourths of the heat produced by the fire will go up the chimney.

To select the right firewood, you must take into consideration the size of your fireplace and the type of fire you want.

The best fires come from a mixture of woods.

Softwoods like pine, spruce and fir catch fire easily and burn quickly with a hot flame. They are good to use to start your fire, but a blaze made entirely of this kind of logs needs constant replenishment or it will burn out rapidly. Your expensive woodpile also will disappear quickly.

For a long-lasting fire, you should choose denser hardwoods like ash, beech, birch, hickory, maple and oak. They burn with a shorter flame than softwoods but last longer. Oak gives the most uniform flame and provides steady, glowing coals.

Logs from fruit and nut trees such as apple, cherry, hickory and pecan give off a pleasant aroma when burned. Add some of these after you've got your fire going.

Most wood will not burn well unless it is dry. The easiest way to make sure the wood is properly seasoned is to buy it several months before you use it. If this isn't practical, look for wood with cracks in the end pieces; freshly cut wood will have tight, solid ends with visible sawmarks.

The most common measure of firewood is the standard cord which measures eight feet by four feet by 128 cubic feet. A standard cord of dense, dry hardwood generally weighs about two tons and provides as much heat — assuming none of it is wasted — as a ton of coal, 150 to 175 gallons of heating oil or 24,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

Few people burn eight- or four-foot logs so most dealers cut the wood into smaller lengths and sell it in something called a face cord. A face cord of 16-inch lengths is one-third the size of a full cord. Look for a cord that is tightly stacked without large gaps between the logs. If you buy according to weight instead of volume, look for the driest wood. Don't pay for extra water.

Prices — and the amount you need — vary widely depending on where you live and how often you have a fire going. If you buy a hard wood and light a fire only once or twice a week, a face cord equal to one-third a standard cord shold be adequate for a season.

Cypriot President Spyros Kyprianou, right, reaches out to embrace his son Achilleas Sunday after the latter was released by kidnappers. Woman partially obscured in center is Mrs. Kyprianou. (AP Laserphoto)

50,000 rally in support of Kyprianou

By OTTO DOELLING

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Chanting "Death to the kidnappers," 50,000 Greek Cypriots jammed Freedom Square in downtown Nicosia today to demonstrate support for President Spyros Kyprianou following the release of his son by right-wing extremists.

The president repeated he has "forgiven" the kidnappers of his 19-year-old son Achilleas.

"For those who have repented, there is still a place among us. For those who have not there will be punishment," he said.

Schools, shops and offices were closed for three hours during the rally. It was the largest demostration seen in Nicosia since the late Archbishop Makarios, Kyprianou's predecessor, returned to Cyprus after five months in exile following the 1974 coup.

Achilleas Kyprianou, who was freed at dawn Sunday, stood with his father, mother and 17-year-old brother Marcos on the speakers' platform. The brothers wore uniforms of the National Guard, the Greek Cypriot army in which Achilleas is a second lieutenant.

Released after the president promised not to punish the kidnappers, young Kyprianou reported that he was kept blindfolded in a chilly underground hole that was 6 feet long and 6 feet wide but only 19 inches high.

The youth was kidnapped last Wednesday from outside a commando training camp in the Troodos mountains southwest of Nicosia. The kidnappers, who were believed to be members of the EOKA-B underground, demanded amnesty for all political offenders.

"At the beginning, I was almost sure they would execute me," young Kyprianou told a news conference, "and I asked them, as a reserve officer of commando forces, to be executed ... with open eyes and my hands untied."

He said they did not reply.

Kyprianou said he was treated better than he expected, but "conditions of my captivity were rather bad."

"The first two days we faced a big food problem. We had bread and water ...once or twice a day. But I

Peace plan draws fire from Saudi Arabia

By The Associated Press

Syria and Saudi Arabia denounced Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's peace proposals today, saying they would perpetuate Israeli occupation of Arab land, which the Saudis called "a dagger in the heart of the Arab nation."

The Egyptian-Israeli peace conference resumed in Cairo, meanwhile, and spokesmen for the two countries reported "marked progress."

The official radio of Saudi Arabia, an important financial backer of Egypt and the other Arab "confrontation" states bordering Israel, said there is no justification for optimism "as long as Israeli occupation of Arab territory and Jerusalem continues."

"This occupation is a dagger stuck in the heart of the Arab nation ... the dagger must be removed through Arab unity and cooperation," it said.

Syria's official radio said the Begin plan "actually is designed to retain Israeli occupation of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip." It also blasted the proposals for not allowing for the creation of a Palestinian state.

In Beirut, Lebanon, opponents of Sadat's peace overtures to Israel apparently tried to blow up the Egyptian Embassy. Police said an embassy guard spotted a 13-pound dynamite bomb near the entrance to the building, and police experts defused it 45 minutes before it was set to explode.

Begin's proposals, which also have been denounced by the Palestine Liberation Organization, would provide civil autonomy for the Palestinian Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza but would continue Israeli military occupation there and Israeli control of Jerusalem. Other details have not been disclosed.

Begin presented the plan to President Carter in weekend talks in Washington, and U.S. officials said afterward the proposals put the Mideast "on the road to peace."

Egyptian officials say the are awaiting a report on the plan from Carter. A statement by a "high authority" said Egypt believes the first step must be total Israeli withdrawal from war-won Arab lands, a step Israel appears unlikely to take.

Dan Pattir, the Israeli spokesman at the Cairo talks, refused to say whether the Begin plan would be introduced at that conference.

But he and Egyptian spokesman Morsei Saad el-Din, at their first joint news conference, said progress had been made at today's meeting.

Winding up a visit to Washington, Begin said Carter "considers the proposals I brought to him a fair basis to achieve peace." But he conceded that "the American endorsement couldn't be complete, of course. There will be many problems."

The prime minister's comment on the CBS television program Face the Nation appeared to contradict a more optimistic assessment in

Explosions mystify scientists

PALISADES, N.Y. (AP) — High-altitude explosions, some equal in force to a 100-ton dynamite blast, have been shattering windows and scaring residents from Connecticut to South Carolina. The explosions have scientists baffled.

William Donn, who conducts acoustical research at Columbia University's Lamont Laboratory here, said his air pressure equipment has detected seven separate explosions. Two blasts on Dec. 2 and five more last Thursday made readings on air pressure instruments, he said.

He said the explosions were much too violent to have been caused by supersonic aircraft.

A Pentagon spokesman said defense officials had no knowledge of the booms and knew of no military tests that could have caused them.

"It's amazing that something like this could happen without anybody knowing about it," Donn said.

The explosions occurred about 50 miles offshore and were too high to disturb ocean wave patterns, he said. Seismic equipment at the laboratory registered no earth movements at the time of the booms.

"What I heard was one loud boom, and the house sort of shook," said Joseph Manger, a police officer in Barnegat Township, N.J., of the Dec. 2 incident.

Donn said people on the South Carolina shore, where one of Thursday's explosions was felt, told him the boom shook their homes and in some cases broke windows.

Donn said employees at the Oyster Creek nuclear power plant in southern New Jersey heard the Dec. 2 explosion. "They thought it was an earthquake," he said.

Probers seek crash explanation

A team of 15 to 20 rescue workers located the wreckage of the jet Sunday but was unable to find any survivors or remains in snow up to four feet deep. The search was recessed at sundown and was to resume today.

The plane crashed at about the 7,300-foot level of a peak on the north side of Baer Canyon, officials said. The wreck was some 2½ miles from the nearest road, and rescuers had to hike in on snowshoes.

Davis County Sheriff Dub Lawrence said the plane hit just below the mountain top, scattering wreckage a quarter mile up the peak and down the other side. "I don't see how anyone could survive," he said.

United identified the crew as Capt. John Fender, 49, First Officer Phillip Modesitt, 46, and Second Officer Steve Simpson, 34, all of the Chicago area.

The plane was attempting to land in Salt Lake City early Sunday to pick up Christmas mail. The pilot had reported landing gear trouble and was ordered into a holding pattern.

William Lovett, chief controller at the air route traffic control center, said that just before the crash the plane left the holding pattern without explanation, headed east and could not be raised on radio by the tower.

It was the second commercial aircraft crash in the United States within a week. Last Tuesday, a chartered DC-3 crashed just after takeoff at Evansville, Ind., killing all 29 aboard, including the University of Evansville basketball team and head coach.

United spokesman Jack Gamble said the jet was loaded with about one-third its 90,000-pound cargo capacity. Another United spokesman said the cargo was "non-hazardous," and included 1,200 pounds of mail.

17 still missing in crash

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) — Rescuers searched Atlantic waters with dwindling hope today for 17 persons missing in the crash of a chartered Swiss jetliner off this resort island. Nineteen persons were killed and 21 survived when the plane, carrying tourists on a Christmas vacation trip, plunged into the sea on Sunday.

The charter operator said 56 of the 57 persons aboard were Swiss and one was a Portuguese woman just married to a Swiss.

The twin-engine Caravelle jet from Zurich and Geneva, bound for Santa Caterina Airport here, crashed about six miles off the beach at the village of Porto Novo. Witnesses said the plane stayed afloat about five minutes.

Swiss investigators were flying to Madeira to investigate the crash. There was no immediate indication of the cause.

Hospital officials in Funchal, the island capital, reported the survivors in generally satisfactory condition. The plane's pilot and two of the other four crew members were among those rescued.

"It was very cold and the rescue took too long — 2½ hours in the sea," said Yolande Thierrin, who came through the crash alive with her two children and later was reunited with her survivor husband at the hospital.

"We were found by a small fishing boat with three men inside, but there were six of us and a bigger ship finally took us ashore," she said.

The Portuguese survivor, Maria Luciana Oliveira Pult, was on her honeymoon. She said after the pilot announced they were about to land, she heard a strange noise in the wings.

"Suddenly I felt the plane hit something and the roof split open," she continued. "Someone handed me a lifebelt. I asked for another for my husband and it was passed over.

"I don't know how we got into the water but the next thing we knew we were holding on to a fishing buoy and freezing."

Her husband was rescued with her.

Funchal air traffic control said the plane was in radio and visual contact with ground controllers when it started losing altitude during an otherwise normal approach.

A controller said the pilot was told to pull up but there was no reply. "We tried repeatedly to contact him but there was no answer." Then "the plane went off our radar screen."

Mayor to hear what farmers want

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The mayor of Lubbock was to meet with representatives of the American Agriculture movement today to find out what striking farmers want from him.

A source within the movement said his group would put "as many tractors as we can lay our hands on" into the city on Texas' High Plains before dawn Tuesday as the kickoff to what he called phase two of farmer demonstrations in support of a national strike.

Texas farmers have used tractors as symbols of their quest for parity, a term meaning a return to prices at least equal to the costs of producing their products. Most demonstrations have taken the form of tractor caravans, parades, or "park-ins."

Some 250 farmers parked their vehicles at Lubbock's biggest shopping center Saturday in a peaceful protest that lasted nine hours. American Agriculture representatives said that demonstration was "spontaneous."

Mayor Roy Bass said he had been contacted by the farmers group and agreed to the meeting today.

"We want to see what the situation is...what they really want," Bass said.

What they want, the source said, is for Bass to declare Tuesday American Agriculture day.

Told of that, Bass said: "I don't feel like a proclamation that would encourage people to shut down their businesses...was part of my function as a mayor. My opinion is that the people around here are about 105 percent in support of the farmers already. My hope would be that they wouldn't do anything to alienate that support they already have."

The source said there were no plans for blockades of food storage warehouses in Lubbock Tuesday. "But we'll do what we have to do. We plan right now to have more tractors in there than anyplace else. We will be asking wholesale food outlets to honor the protest and close down for 24 hours."

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

From all appearances, the Christmas spirit sometimes evades the thieves among us.

Diana McCleskey found that out, and now she wants her holly wreath back.

Miss McCleskey, a 17-year-old Midland High School senior who earns her spending money as a bus girl, put out a brand-new wreath to symbolically share her good tidings with passers-by.

She didn't intend to make a "gift" of it.

"Christmas will not be the same for the 'little girl' in me," she wrote in a letter to the newspaper.

"One day last week, my mom and I went shopping," she wrote. "While out, we decided to buy some holly sprigs and a ribbon to make a new wreath for our door. (The old one was beginning to look a bit shabby.)

"We got home, put it together and hung it on our front door. Later that night when I got home from work, I thought perhaps I should bring it in. Then I thought, how silly! No one would steal a Christmas wreath.

"How wrong I was! The next morning — poof! It was no more. I could understand it if the wreath had been an expensive one, but a $3.50 wreath, including tax!

"Mr. Thief, you must have been pretty hard up for a good time to steal my Christmas wreath. Where is your Christmas Spirit? Haven't you ever

Saudi Arabia, Syria blast Israeli proposals

Jerusalem by Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arieh Noar.

"For the first time since the establishment of the state," Israel and the United States "have an identity of views on the content of a peace agreement," Noar said.

Begin said his proposals call for "self rule" for the one million Palestinian Arabs now living under Israeli occupation on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip. He said they would be entitled to settle in Israel and "Palestinian Jews" would have the right to live freely on the West Bank, an area Israel has dotted with Jewish settlements during the 10-year occupation.

The Palestine Liberation Organization rejected Begin's proposal, saying it "aims at the rejection of the right of the people of Palestine to form their own state, under PLO leadership."

Despite repeated questions, Begin refused to divulge other details of his peace proposals, saying he had a "moral obligation" to discuss the plan first with President Sadat. The plan reportedly calls for the return to Egypt of all the occupied Sinai Peninsula with safeguards for Israeli security and shipping.

Begin went to New York for a meeting today with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and goes home Tuesday, stopping en route in London to see Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Sadat, briefed on the Begin proposals by President Carter in a telephone call, said Saturday he was "more optimistic" about the prospects for peace. But he indicated the proposals did not go far enough toward meeting Arab demands.

Egyptian sources said Begin and Sadat will meet toward the end of this week or the beginning of next week at a presidential villa on the Suez Canal near Ismailia.

More than 500,000 Syrians crowded the streets of Damascus Sunday to shout their rejection of Sadat's negotiations with Israel. But in Tel Aviv, more than 50,000 Israelis held a rally to endorse the peace drive.

King Hussein of Jordan arrived in Riyadh Sunday for talks with Saudi Arabian leaders.

Bloodless bullfights draw few spectators

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Los Toros kept their skin, and ears, in the famous bloodless bullfight, but the padre who staged the event — unhappy over the size of the crowd and it's lack of enthusiasm — isn't so sure he would do it again.

Five pickets paraded outside Saturday to protest the first bull fights at the Cow Palace arena in 25 years.

Representatives of the Humane Society, who failed in their efforts to prevent the show, watched the proceedings like hawks for any signs the bulls were being abused.

The crowd applauded and shouted "Ole" during the 3½-hour show, but its size disappointed the sponsor of the event.

Monsignor Val Fagundes, pastor of St. Elizabeth's Church in Sacramento, had scheduled the fights to celebrate the Feast of Our Lady of Fatima.

Fagundes said the show would "just about break even" and added: "Whether we do it again is something to which I'll have to give a lot of long hard thought."

Robert K. Hillman of Sacramento, who represented the National Council of Animal Protection, commented:

"You can see that people here are bored. The next thing you know they will be wanting to put on real bull fights. It's just a step from there to bear-and-bull contests."

The fights went off without injury to man or bull, and two veterinarians on hand had no work.

There were seven fights instead of six because the fourth bull to come out didn't want to play the game, so a substitute was brought in.

Each fight lasted 10 to 15 minutes. The matador had a sword, but used it only to maneuver his cape. Five assistants for each fight helped direct the bull toward the simulated combat.

When the bull appeared too beaten to continue charging, the fight was over. The matador then walked over and patted the bull on the shoulder or back and bowed to spectators' cheers.

24-year-old's condition told

Twenty-four-year-old Tommy Lee Johnson of the 1900 block of East Pecan Avenue was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning and had been moved out of the intensive care unit, a hospital spokesman said.

Johnson was admitted to the hospital Saturday night with a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

He apparently had been shot at about 1:13 a.m. Saturday at a bar in the 300 block of North Lee Street, police said. According to witnesses, Johnson was shot three times following an argument.

Rankin Lions dinner slated

RANKIN — The Rankin Lions Club will hold its annual Ladies' Night Christmas dinner at 7 p.m. today at the Rankin Park Building.

The club's annual Christmas party for youngsters was held last Saturday at the park.

Three white teen-agers held for church fires

WASHINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Three white teen-agers are being held in connection with fires that broke out within minutes of each other and gutted four black churches in rural east Georgia.

The wooden frame churches were unoccupied and there were no injuries in the blazes Sunday night.

"The fires were all within 20 miles and all in the same direction," Wilkes County Sheriff Cecil Moore said. "They started from the east out of Lincoln County and went west into Wilkes (County)."

Moore said there has been no trouble between blacks and whites in the area.

Albert Rucker, a deacon of the Mulberry Baptist Church, said that the burning of his and three other churches had nothing to do with race.

"It had none whatsoever to do with that," he said. "It's the same reason other things happen in the world. There was just no point in it." The Georgia Bureau of Investigation and state fire marshal's office reportedly were investigating.

The suspects, unidentified because they are juveniles, were all about 16 years old, Moore said. All are from Lincoln County and were arrested there.

Moore said the youhs had "been drinking — that's all."

The first blaze erupted at about 8:30 p.m. EST at Mt. Zion Baptist Church in Lincoln County, and fires started minutes later in the other three churches, Moore said.

Woman misses three rings

Three rings valued at approximately $1,115 were taken from the Edelle Daily residence in the 400 block of West Kansas Avenue sometime Friday or Saturday, Mrs. Daily told police late Saturday.

According to Mrs. Daily, the rings were taken between noon Friday and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Missing are a crescent-shaped diamond dinner ring, an opal ring and a lava and turquoise ring.

More wind, blowing sand to follow cold fronts

Two cold fronts, one from Canada and one from the Pacific Coast, passed through Midland about 7:30 a.m. today. Cooler temperatures and more blowing dust is expected to follow in the aftermath, says the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

It won't be as bad as Friday's 69 mph wind, says one weather forecaster. "That was an unusual set of circumstances."

Winds are expected to be northerly between 15 and 20 mph and gusty tonight. The low tonight is expected to be near 30 degrees with the high on Tuesday in the lower 50s.

Sunday's high temperature of 77 degrees was just one degree shy of the record set in 1939.

The overnight low was 44 degrees. A low pressure system in Oklahoma is expected to bring the winds. It was an extreme low pressure system in Kansas that led in part to Friday's heavy wind, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

It was clear, still and cool this morning in Andrews, Rankin, Stanton, Odessa, Crane, and Big Lake.

At 5 a.m. today, temperatures ranged from 43 at Amarillo and El Paso to 57 at Beaumont-Port Arthur, 65 at Corpus Christi, 47 at Del Rio, 46 at Midland-Odessa, 49 at Wichita Falls, 48 at Dallas-Fort Worth and Wink and up to a balmy 70 at Brownsville at the extreme southern tip of Texas.

Skies over the state were clear with the exception of some low clouds over Corpus Christi and fog along the Gulf Coast.

It will be cooler and windy over much of the west and north sections of the state by tonight, according to the forecast. Blowing dust will blanket Texas by tonight.

Forced to lie prone because of the low roof of his cell, the young man said he could not attempt to escape because he was blindfolded, bound and guarded contantly by "two men who definitely were not beginners."

"I have forgiven the kidnappers," President Kyprianou told reporters. "They are free to leave or stay in Cyprus. It is up to them to decide."

Christmas lost on wreath thief

heard of 'Goodwill Toward Men'? That does not mean (to) steal my wreath!

"Pilfering Thief, if you by coincidence read my letter, please hear my plea —

"BRING HOME MY WREATH!!!"

Ideally, we should be predisposed to think the best of others year-round . . . especially at Christmas time . . . at least until proven wrong.

So, perhaps the person who took it has posted Miss McCleskey's wreath on his or her front door. Now, that does sound somewhat like a paradox, even perverse. But there may be something good in all thieves, just like there's something tainted in the best of "good" folks.

So be it.

Miss McCleskey is still sharing her Christmas spirit via her goodwill flag — the wreath of good tidings. That old shabby holly wreath, the one she tried to replace, is back on the front door.

Wednesday rites slated for Cyril Ritchard, 79

CHICAGO (AP) — Cyril Ritchard, whose stage career spanned six decades but who is most remembered for his television portrayal of Captain Hook in the musical version of "Peter Pan," will be buried Wednesday beside his wife, actress Madge Elliott.

Ritchard, whose 79th birthday was Dec. 1, died early Sunday of heart failure at Northwestern Memorial Hospital. He had been in a coma since Nov. 25, when he collapsed on stage during a performance of "Side by Side by Sondheim."

His foster son, David Bean of Chicago, said Ritchard would be buried in a private service at Ridgefield, Conn., where he maintained one of his homes.

The Australian-born actor was especially noted in the United States for three Broadway performances — as the delightfully devilish Captain Hook in "Peter Pan" in 1954, in Gore Vidal's "Visit to a Small Planet" in 1957, and in the musical "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd" in 1965.

It was his role as Hook, with Mary Martin as Peter Pan, that brought Ritchard his greatest fame in the United States.

Born Cyril Trimmell-Ritchard in Sydney, Australia, in 1898, he began medical studies at Sydney University but dropped out to go into the theater. He made his stage debut in 1917 as a chorus boy in "A Waltz Dream." He made debuts in New York and London in 1925.

Ritchard married Miss Elliott in 1935 after what he once called "a whirlwind courtship of 15 years."

Beginning in the 1920s the couple reeled off a series of successes on the London stage that prompted Noel Coward to dub them "the musical Lunts." They reigned as stars of English musical comedy until her death in 1955.

Among Ritchard's other credits were performances in early television that included appearances on the "Milton Berle Show" and "Mr. Peepers." He also starred in "The Relapse," "Make Way for Lucia" and "The Millionairess."

In 1957, he directed and performed in Offenbach's "La Perichole" for the Metropolitan Opera.

He directed "Jane" in 1952, "Misalliance" in 1953 and "The Reluctant Debutante" in 1956.

Baker eyes state post

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — James Baker III, who directed Gerald Ford's presidential campaign last year, said Sunday he has made us mind to run for attorney general if he can do it "right" — which means with plenty of money to campaign.

Democrats Price Daniel Jr., former House speaker, and Mark White, former secretary of state, already are campaigning for the job.

Baker told interviewers on the weekly television show "Capital Eye" that a "credible statewide race" would require at least $1 million.

To run, said Baker, a Republican lawyer from Houston, he would need approximately $250,000 in pledges. He said he has about $200,000.

"I'm getting close," he said, "to making a decision."

Asked if he had heard one GOP theory that Baker was being "prepped" for the 1982 governor's race, Baker said he had not.

Crash causes cited

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Human error was to blame for the crash of a military jet on the top-secret Manzano Base three months ago that killed all 20 men aboard, an Air Force accident report revealed.

The report released Saturday said a plane that was too heavy and a runway that was too short combined with miscalculations by the crew caused the Sept. 14 crash in the Four Hills area east of Albuquerque.

An accident investigation board based at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia compiled evidence from witness interviews in putting together the report.

Witnesses who saw the plane take off from Kirtland Air Force Base said they were surprised that the aircraft used so much runway before it finally lifted off.

"In the summer, TWA has a 707 that flies to Chicago and I'm so used to seeing that take off; this guy in the Air Force plane exceeded that just unbelievably," said Derek Etzcorn, who was working at Southwest Air Rangers the night of the crash.

A sergeant stationed at Kirtland, James L. Trotter, said he didn't think the plane was going to make it off the end of the runway.

He said he had seen many airplanes of that type take off from Kirtland, and that it used considerably more runway than usual.

The report said part of the plane's weight problem may have stemmed from some 670 gallons of water loaded onto the aircraft at Kirtland for use in the water-injected engines.

DEAR ABBY

Parents' decision needs no justifying

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter (I'll call her Beth) has been going steady with Rick since school resumed last fall. Beth is 15 and Rick is 17.

Rick's people are way out of our class financially. Today I received a telephone call from Rick's mother asking if Beth could go to Hawaii with their family over Christmas. Beth had never mentioned that she was invited, so I was shocked. I said I'd talk to my husband and we would let her know.

Beth is begging us to let her go. Her father says he doesn't like the idea because Rick has his parents wrapped around his little finger and seems to have no supervision whatsoever.

I don't want to insult Rick's parents, but I agree with my husband.

We trust Beth but think she is a bit too young to be in Hawaii with doubtful supervision.

How should this be handled?—DELICATE PROBLEM

DEAR DELICATE: Don't feel that you must justify your decision. Tell Rick's mother that you and your husband agree that Beth is too young for that type of vacation.

DEAR ABBY: I received a call from a family member today who suggested that we should all stop giving Christmas gifts—except to the children.

That's fine, but my husband and I have no children and this relative has four. In other words, she's telling me that we should buy her kids Christmas gifts, but we shouldn't expect any.

I think she should have said, "Please don't buy our kids anything this year because you don't have any kids." Or else, "If you buy our kids Christmas gifts, we will buy you and your husband something in return."

What do you think?—WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think all gifts should be voluntary. If one expects to be repaid in kind for a gift, it ceases to be a gift—it becomes a trade-off.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I was a small child, I've loved dogs. I'm 23, and I still love dogs.

My parents never cared for dogs, so I was never allowed to have one. I always dreamed of the day when I was grown and on my own so I could have a dog.

I've been happily married for a year, and my husband and I are renting an apartment upstairs from my parents. Would you believe it, they still refuse to let me have a dog? They won't even discuss it. No dogs on their property, period!

I feel bitter and angry, but there's nothing I can do except move, which would be foolish because we never could find a place as nice as this for what we're paying.

It's been a year now and I've built up a terrible resentment against my parents. Am I wrong to feel this way? Or are they wrong to continue to treat me like a child?—BITTER IN N.J.

DEAR BITTER: It's your parents' property, and if they don't want dogs it's their privilege. Don't take it personally. If you can't accept their decision with grace and maturity, move.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SWINGING IN CLEVELAND": Your suggested Eleventh Commandment, "Thou shall not get caught," is very catchy, but if you obey the first Ten, you won't need an Eleventh.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope to ABBY in care of this newspaper.

Midland Savings' Individual Retirement Account and other tax saving plans

The Individual Retirement Account is a tax deduction for today and a retirement program for tomorrow. The Individual Retirement Account is designed for the person who is not already covered by a retirement program. It invites that person to contribute to his own account up to 15% or $1500.00 (whichever is less) of his earned income. It allows him an immediate 100% income tax deduction for his contribution.

Save $242.00 per year in income tax. A family of four with an income of $12000 will pay $1228.00 in income tax. However, if that same family contributes $1500 to an I.R.A., the $1500 deduction will save them $242.00 in income tax annually. Effective tax year 1977, a working spouse can set up an I.R.A. for a non-working spouse, provided he or she is participating in an I.R.A. plan. The maximum combined contribution can not exceed $1750.00.

The Keogh Plan. The Keogh Plan is similar to the I.R.A. but it is designed specifically for the self-employed individual. The Keogh Plan automatically includes the self-employed individual along with all his eligible employees. The plan allows an annual deposit of 15% or $7500 (whichever is less) of an individual's earned income.

I.R.A. Rollover. Ask about Midland Savings' I.R.A. Rollover. This plan is designed for the individual who has completed a qualifying retirement program, and who wishes to roll his lump-sum distribution over into an I.R.A., to receive the tax advantage.

Most persons agree 'incentive' big issue

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — There's an anti-oil industry story going around town these days about a petroleum company chief executive who is interrupted in his office by an excited geologist. The geologist blurts out that a huge pool of oil and gas has been discovered beneath company property.

"That's fine," says the oil industry executive, "but what we really need are more incentives."

If you're not a member of the oil and gas fraternity or involved in energy politics in some way, the story may seem nothing more than a non sequitur. To insiders, however, it goes right to the heart of a major debate now going on among U.S. lawmakers — a debate that could affect American consumers and taxpayers for generations to come.

In the current agonizing over a national energy plan, most policy makers and other observers here agree that the word "incentive" has become a central issue.

Webster's dictionary defines incentive as something that incites to determination or action, and in this current controversy, that "something" is money — or at least oil company profits — in the form of higher prices for oil and gas.

The petroleum industry and much of Congress believes that U.S. oil companies need more incentives to search for and to produce the quantities of new oil and gas necessary to seriously attack the nation's energy problems.

That is, the oil industry wants the removal of government price controls, or at least higher prices than those currently proposed by the Carter administration. The extra profits are needed, the industry argues, so that more oil company funds may be spent on exploration and development.

President Carter, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and other Washington lawmakers contend, however, that the oil industry has, or will have after the energy bill is passed, all the incentives it needs; that decontrol or prices higher than those proposed would stimulate very little in the way of new oil and gas production.

To them, the oil industry's campaign for greater incentives amounts to little more than a "holy war" for windfall profits. Administration spokesmen have accused the industry of "greed," and of trying to promote a "rip-off" of American consumers.

Unfortunately, such strong language tends to cloud the real issue: What is the best, and cheapest, way for America to lessen its dependence on imported foreign energy and begin shifting toward new, more abundant sources of power to heat its homes and run its factories?

The intensity of congressional debate alone suggests that the U.S. petroleum industry has more to its side of the story than merely a quest for windfall profits. Indeed, many senators and representatives strongly believe that greater incentives for the petroleum industry will, in the long run, actually save consumers billions of dollars.

Shed of rhetoric, the debate over oil industry incentives offers the nation some hard and divergent choices about how to accomplish its energy goals.

As both sides basically agree, the nation's energy problem is this: the demand for fuels continues to grow, while the supplies of oil and natural gas — which account for about three-fourths of the nation's energy needs — are falling.

The short-term effect of this situation is that America must depend increasingly on imported foreign oil (about 42 percent of 1976 requirements), which could be shut off in the event of another Arab-Israeli war, or could be priced higher and higher.

In the longer run, America must shift to alternative sources of power. To avoid serious economic disruptions, this shift must be accomplished gradually, and that is why Carter, Congress and other observers feel a national energy plan must be adopted as soon as possible.

Thus, the President, most of Congress and the oil and gas industry also agree on what the goals of a national energy plan should be — that is, to develop new energy sources and, at the same time, to decrease America's dependency on foreign imports thorugh conservation and increased oil and gas production here at home.

It is this last matter — increased domestic production — on which the disagreement over incentives is based.

To American consumers, who have seen the retail price of gasoline double in the last few years, more incentives (higher prices) for the petroleum industry may seem unjustified, yet even Carter's energy proposals include specific oil and gas price increases designed to stimulate domestic production.

Under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act passed in December, 1975, producers generally are subject to a price ceiling of either $11.28 per barrel for newly found oil, or $5.25 a barrel for old oil.

The Carter plan would allow these prices to rise with inflation. More importantly, the President also proposes the creation of a third category — "new new oil" — the price of which would be allowed to rise to world levels (about $13.50 per barrel) over a three-year period.

"This (new new) price should provide all the incentives needed for the development of new oil production in the United States," according to the Carter energy plan.

The oil industry disagrees for two reasons. One, the Carter plan defines new new oil as that produced from a well 2 1-2 miles from any existing well, or 1,000 feet deeper than wells in the same area.

"This limitation shuts off the incentives for a major part of the country's known reserves," says George T. Patton, an economist with the American Petroleum Institute in Washington.

The industry's second objection is more complicated. Says Patton: "Under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act, the government must administer the volume and price of old oil and new oil so that the average price does not exceed a specified composite ceiling — now just over $8 a barrel.

"Because Carter's plan would keep that composite in effect, any new oil brought into the marketplace at $13.50 or so would have to be counterbalanced by a drop in the price of the older oils," adds Patton. "In other words, the government would have to rob Peter to pay Paul."

The U.S. petroleum industry, and a small segment of Congress as well, would rather see total deregulation. The anticipated rise in prices here to the world level would not only stimulate an unprecedented search for new fields, but would also encourage consumer conservation, they say.

While the Carter plan and the energy bills passed by the House recognize this latter benefit — a proposed wellhead tax would raise energy costs to consumers — the administration thinks total deregulation would merely result in a "massive transfer of income" from consumers to the oil companies.

Director announced

Raymond E. Batchelor Jr. has been elected to the board of directors of the Bovaird Supply Co. headquartered in Tulsa, Okla.

He is vice president and general manager of the oil field supply firm.

Batchelor began his career with Bovaird in 1957 as a clerk in Farmington, N. M. His father, a retired Bovaird executive, also serves as a director of the 106-year-old supply company.

Sales head announced

DALLAS — American Petrofina, Inc., has announced the promotion of William H. Frank to general manager, Distributor Sales, from manager, Distributor Sales, in the company's Transportation and Marketing Department.

Other changes announced by R. C. Low, group vice president, include T. F. Dolan from assistant Distributor Sales manager to senior assistant Distributor Sales manager and the appointment of G. S. McFarlane as manager, Planning and Coordination.

In line with the reorganization of Marketing, Low said Frank will assume the added responsibilities for three wholly-owned jobbership subsidiaries and three other marketing affiliates. Also, dealer training was transferred to Distributor Sales as part of an expanded Merchandising program.

Frank joined Fina in November 1957 as a sales representative in Big Spring. He transferred to Wichita Falls in August 1958 as manager of the then newly-formed sales district.

In October 1960 he was named assistant Distributor Sales manager, moving to Dallas. He advanced to Distributor Sales manager in January 1965.

Frank umpired in the Longhorn and West Texas-New Mexico baseball leagues three years.

TCC elects new officers

AUSTIN — Fred P. Bergeron of Rockdale, area manager for Aluminum Co. of America, has been elected 1978-79 president of the Texas Chemical Council.

Bergeron replaces A. D. Cyphers Jr., plant manager of DuPont in Victoria.

In addition, the council elected R. G. Dillard, general manager of Shell Oil & Chemical at Deer Park vice president, and re-elected T. Brockett Hudson, president of Southwest Chemical Service, Inc., in Houston secretary-treasurer.

Demand for OPEC oil could show decrease

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Industrialized countries' demand for imported oil from the international oil cartel will remain the same next year or decline slightly according to an unpublished assessment by the International Energy Agency.

This slackening in demand, which U.S. government and oil industry officials also foresee, is a function of new production from the North Sea and Alaska and lagging economic recovery in some industrialized countries, oil analysts say.

Industry and government analysts are anxiously weighing projections of world oil demand in anticipation of the meeting this week of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The meeting is scheduled to open Tuesday in Caracas.

There is wide speculation that there will be a continued price freeze. This speculation is fueled, in part, by the soft condition of the world oil market. The shah of Iran and Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Zaki Yamani, have said they favor a price freeze.

"There will be a flat demand for imported oil next year," said James W. Reddington, a senior economist with the Paris-based IEA, in a telephone interview.

The 19-nation IEA is made up of the industrialized countries, with the exception of France. Nearly all of the members are oil importers.

Reddington describes the IEA's analysis as "a current assessment" of demand for oil imports. Free-world demand for OPEC oil rose slightly in 1977 to 28.8 million barrels a day, up slightly from 28.3 million barrels a day in 1976, and "imports will remain essentially unchanged for 1978," he said.

In Washington, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Stephen W. Bosworth said the State and Energy departments agree with the IEA forecast. "Demand for OPEC oil is going to remain relatively flat because of North Slope and North Sea oil. Another major factor is the final shape of U.S. energy policy."

The lack of significant growth in industrialized countries' oil imports and the so-called oil glut are having an effect on OPEC production. Saudi Arabia, the cartel's leading producer and Abu Dhabi, a member of the United Arab Emirates, have announced cuts in oil production over the last two months that will reduce OPEC production by 1 million barrels of oil a day.

OPEC is now producing about 31.5 million barrels of oil a day, and could produce 7 million barrels more.

Slackening demand for imports could make it more difficult for the cartel to make a price increase stick, unless production is reduced.

Reddington said the IEA projections, which do not include 1977 year-end consumption data from member countries, take into consideration the growth of imports to the United States and Japan to fill strategic oil reserves. Together, both countries will be importing 500,000 barrels of oil a day or more next year for storage. Japan recently announced an ambitious program to have 90 days' oil supply in storage by 1980. President Carter has set of goal of 1 billion barrels of oil in storage by the early 1980s.

John Lichtblau, an international oil consultant, said his analysis shows a slight, but not significant, increase in demand for OPEC crude oil. "Under our assumptions we see a very small growth, but one could also come up with no increase in demand for OPEC oil because of new supplies," says Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York.

The IEA projections also forecast a reduction in U.S. imports for 1978.

Recently, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger Jr. said U.S. imports would decline in 1978, "though not as a result of a reduction in demand." Due to increased production from Alaska, U.S. imports, including oil for the strategic reserves, will drop from about 8.7 million barrels of oil a day to 8.3 million barrels or fewer he said.

Reddington emphasized the need to press for aggressive conservation programs and efforts to increase alternatives to OPEC oil in the industrialized countries. "We just happen to have a happy confluence of increases in supply, while we have a pause in energy requirements," he said.

Kerr-McGee fills post

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Jack R. Williams has been named manager of exploration and Paul D. Baranyae has been named regional exploration supervisor for the Gulf Coast Region of Kerr-McGee Corp.'s Petroleum Exploration Division.

Williams and Baranyae are based in Houston.

Williams, who previously served as regional exploration supervisor for the upper Gulf Coast Region, succedds Robert Ardell who has left the company.

Baranyae, who will be responsible for offshore exploration, holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in Geology from Michigan State University.

Williams holds a bachelor's degree in Geology from Mississippi Sate University and a master's degree from Texas Tech University.

Dr. Hagler appointed Tech interim director

LUBBOCK — Dr. Marion O. Hagler, professor of electrical engineering, has been named interim director of the Texas Tech University Center for Energy Research, reports Dean John B. Bradford of the College of Engineering.

Bradford said Hagler's interim appointment would continue through the remainder of the academic year. At that time, he said, it is anticipated that a permanent appointment will be made.

Hagler succeeds Dr. Stanley R. Liberty, who resigned to become head of the Department of Electrical Engineering at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va.

Hagler, whose primary research interests are in fushion energy and optics, earlier had served as director of the Institute for Energy Research out of which the center grew. He is co-director of the Electrical Engineering Department's plasma laboratory.

Hagler holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees from Rice University and the master's and doctor's degrees from The University of Texas at Austin.

The work of the Center for Energy Research is supported, in part, by a state legislature appropriation of $250,000 per year for each year of the biennium.

Radical change brings prosperity, adversity

By SHARON ROSENHAUSE
The Los Angeles Times

DHARMSALA, India — Seventeen years have passed since the Dalai Lama settled here after fleeing from the Chinese in Tibet, and the years have brought radical change to this Himalayan village.

N.N. Nowrojee, 63, whose family has lived here for five generations told a reporter that while the change has meant prosperity for some, it has meant adversity for others.

The Dalai Lama, the spiritual leader of Tibet's Buddhists, came to India when Chinese troops occupied his country in 1959. He established a government-in-exile here in Dharmsala the following year.

Thousands of followers accompanied the Dalai Lama and others have arrived since. The influx proved to be a boon to Dharmsala's economy, which had been in decline since the British pulled out of India in 1947.

But the Dalai Lama's presence has also attracted great numbers of young foreigners, who, as Nowrojee said, "are drug addicts, stink and are a nuisance."

Today he said, Dharmsala is "dirty, noisy, being ruined."

Actually, there are two Dharmsalas — lower and upper. Five miles of narrow, winding mountain road separate them. Upper Dharmsala, where Nowrojee and the Dalai Lama live, has become a little Tibet.

On Dharmsala's main street is a Buddhist stupa, a dome-like shrine erected 12 years ago. It is a center of quiet activity. Men and women, young and old, lamas wearing maroon wool robes and Westerners wearing jeans, stop at two rows of prayer wheels. They spin the wheels, chant, then go on about their business.

Business in the upper Dharmsala is dominated by the refugee community. Tibetans buy from Tibetans, and the foreigners tend to buy from Tibetans.

Elsewhere in India, shops often display photographs of political leaders, usually of the independence leader Mahatma Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister. But in Dharmsala the pictures are of the Dalai Lama.

There are more Westerners than Indians in the upper Dharmsala. As a consequence, Nowrojee said, he and his wife keep to themselves.

According to Nowrojee, he is responsible in part for the change in Dharmsala.

"I was one of the architects of the plan to get the Dalai Lama here," he said. "I had been trying since 1947 to get this place rehabilitated, but without luck."

Then, when he heard that the Indian government was going to relocate the Dalai Lama from Mussoorie, where he first settled after leaving Tibet, Nowrojee made his move.

He was looking after some vacant houses in Dharmsala and "had some pull in government," so he offered the houses for rent for the Dalai Lama's entourage. The offer was accepted.

"For the first few years," Nowrojee said, "he was a big attraction. So many people came."

In those days, before the Tibetans opened their own shops, Nowrojee did well in his place of business, which his great-great-grandfather opened in 1860. But the shop that once supplied the British with "everything from a pin to an elephant" is now reduced to selling an occasional newspaper, soft drink or package of cigarettes.

Nowrojee is not bitter. He is glad that the refugee community has "improved the economy," even though "I personally may not have gained much."

Sitting on the veranda behind his shop and taking in the breathtaking view at 6,000 feet, Nowrojee said he remembered Dharmsala as a "very clean, decent town." He misses those days.

The British came here to escape the heat of the plains. When India became independent, Dharmsala became a ghost town. Nowrojee stayed on, he said, because his family owned property that had to be looked after, and because "we have this attachment."

Nowrojee grimaced when he mentioned the young foreigners who have been drawn to Dharmsala. They are different, he said, from the hippies of the mid '60s.

He told of a young man who left Dharmsala in the robes of a Buddhist monk and returned in the robes of a Hindu sadhu, or holy man.

Armed conflict specter in committee report

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The chilling specter of armed conflict between America's two most important oil-producing allies — Iran and Saudi Arabia — has found its way out of popular fiction and into serious study in a Senate committee report.

The report, released Sunday night, suggests that the United States should condone an Iranian invasion of Saudi Arabia in certain circumstances.

"If Iran is called upon to intervene in the internal affairs of any (Persian) Gulf state, it must be recognized in advance by the United States that this is the role for which Iran is being primed," the Senate study says. "Blame cannot be assigned for Iran's carrying out an implied assignment."

The report, prepared for the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources chaired by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., argues that the United States has "a direct interest" in ensuring that Iran has sufficient military capabilities to prevent the Soviet Union or radical forces from taking power in any of the oil-rich Gulf states, especially Saudi Arabia.

The outlines of the report, written at Jackson's request by consultants Fern Racine Gold and Melvin A Conant, resemble the fictional thriller, "The Crash of '79", which portrays an Iranian invasion of Gulf oilfields triggering worldwide economic collapse.

But the report's implicatioins are far more political than literary. Jackson is an avowed champion of both Israel and Iran, two countries whose supporters are showing increased concern over the Carter administration's growing reliance on Saudi Arabia's oil supplies and financial reserves.

Jackson is expected to lead a Senate fight next year to deny Saudi Arabia the right to buy 60 F-15 fighter-bombers promised by the administration.

While arguing that the U.S. has an interest in Iran's military strength, the report offers no such endorsement for Saudi Arabia. Moreover, it calls political stability in Saudi Arabia "a complementary interest" for the United States, after the primary goal of "maintaining access to the vital oil reserves of Saudi Arabia."

The United States imports from Saudi Arabia 25 percent of the 8.5 million barrels of oil it consumes daily. Iran provides 6 percent of American imports.

Production in Iran, which has embarked on an ambitious but still faltering economic development program, and whcih has built up one of the world's most sophisticated military machines, is falling. Saudi Arabia, which has a small, poorly trained army, sits atop the world's richest pool of oil reserves.

In summing up the "implications" of U.S.-Iranian ties, the authors of the report appear to try to soften the impact of their strategic analysis by pointing out that "the United States is not committed to resupply Iran with military equipment or parts in the event of an Iranian military action which does not serve U.S. interests."

But the pro-Iranian thrust of the report is reflected by the fact that, although in the original draft, obtained by The Washington Post, the authors had added, "Iran does not have a free hand and must not have one," those words were struck from the version issued by Jackson.

Saudi Arabia and Iran accounted for 44.6 percent of the United States' $8.7 billion in foreign military sales last year. Iran and Israel are the first and second largest purchasers of U.S. arms, followed by Saudi Arabia. Much of the Saudi's purchases is devoted to building infrastructure projects such as airports.

Calling the American dependence on oil imports from the two largest oil-exporting states "unprecedented", the analysis says the United States should be watchful for differences between the Saudis and their non-Arab neighbors across the Persian Gulf in Iran.

While both Iran and Saudi Arabia are essentially pro-American and share Islamic values, the two countries have had an uneasy relationship in recent years.

The Shah, for example, has cultivated close relations with Israel and is Israel's largest oil supplier.

Eastern plantation life little changed since Maugham's time

By LEWIS M. SIMONS
The Washington Post

PEMATANG STANTAR, Indonesia — This is rubber country. Millions of slender trees at stiff attention in endless files across the flat, jungled land, oozing their lifeblood away for tires and soles, basketballs and galoshes.

It's Somerset Maugham country. Just the sort of place where the crusty teller of tales of the East set so many of his stories of colonial-era planters coping with the mysterious, dusky natives who served them. And with each other.

"Christ, how I hate this country," Maugham had Vesta Grange complaining in "Flotsam and Jetsam," a turn-of-the-century short story. "I hate that river. I hate this house. I hate that damned rubber. I loathe the filty natives."

Plantation life has changed since Maugham wrote of the embittered Vesta and her planter husband. But the indefatigable traveler would have no trouble recognizing the trappings and customs, the pleasures and problems of an American planter, Park Chrestman, and his wife, Roscrana, who make their home on the vast Goodyear rubber estate here in nothern Sumatra.

The orderly beauty. The endless ranks of rubber trees, each fitted with a little tin cup catching the dripping latex beneath chevrons of slashes.

The Dutch-styled white-and-green bungalows of the senior planters set in a manicured, nine-hole golf course along a narrow road lined with towering, royal palms.

The "natives" of Vesta Grange's outcry, today as then moving quietly through the rubber trees, tapping and collecting the precious latex even before early sunlight pierces the dark, cool columns.

And the isolation. Twenty-two thousand people living and working on the plantation, but only a handful to talk to. The telephone a hand-cranked set that reaches only to the nearest villages. Contact with the outside world through a crackling two-way radio set. No school for their two young daughters. Mrs. Chrestman teaching in the living room.

It's an unusual life. It was, even when there were more Westerners running the plantations of Sumatra, Borneo and Malaya back in Maugham's day. Today, there are very few and they tend to be people who are orderly minded and self-contained, who find life's satisfactions in themselves. The Chrestmans have been here for a year and they're still adjusting.

They recognize some parts of their lives in the Maugham stories. "There are the intensive, magnified relations between husbands and wives and with the other couples on the estate and the jostling for places in the pecking order which Maugham saw in the confined atmosphere," Mrs. Chrestman recalled the other day.

"When we got here, I expected to bacome an anachronism in the middle of the jungle. But the Indonesians on the staff have made us welcome and, in some ways, it's easier fitting into the life here than it would be in a suburb of Akron" (where Goodyear has its corporate headquarters).

"There are no hardships," she went on. "What I like most about it is the fresh air, the fresh food, learning a new culture and a new language. The only thing I really miss is more varied conversation. We're definitely restricted within a very small society here. I don't really know what's going on anywhere else."

Probably an exaggeration. Near her in the cool, high-ceilinged house as she spoke were stacks of New Yorkers, Economists and International Herald Tribunes. And a large shortwave radio tuned to the BBC.

In his teak-paneled office not far from the house, Chrestman, craggy and soft-spoken, looked over the low roofs of warehouses and processing mills. "Personally, I find estate life pleasant," he said. "It's not as static as it appears. We do get visitors from time to time. It's not that isolated an existence."

Chrestman, whose long years of experience in the rubber industry until coming to Sumatra were confined to administration and sales, said he conducts the estate "like any modern, corporate organization." His titles are managing director and vice president.

"He was up before daybreak," Maugham wrote of Vesta's husband, Norman Grange, "to take the roll-call of his labor and then walked over the estate to see that the tapping was properly done."

With 4.1 million rubber trees spread over 32,000 acres, Chrestman doesn't walk, or drive for that matter, over the estate's 150 miles of roads on a regular basis. Keeping track of the tappers, weeders and others of the 6,000 "labor" is left to foremen and supervisors. But Chrestman is at his desk at 7 a.m. six days a week.

In addition to the latex collecting, the plantation encompasses four small factories that produce latex concentrate, smoked rubber sheets, crepe sheets and crumb rubber, used mainly for tires. The estate is the most extensive in Sumatra and the largest owned anywhere by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., which in turn is the largest rubber producer in the world.

Chrestman said he already has learned a great deal about the botanical and agricultural angles of the rubber industry. But he's yet to work out to his own satisfaction a role as the estate's community leader.

Speaking of the huge labor force and their families, he said, "I must admit I'm far removed and my concern should be to improve their living conditions. This estate is a long-term proposition and we want our people to stay and their children to progress in life."

Mrs. Chrestman, similarly, is trying to establish a community role for herself. "I refuse to become a memsahib," she said, "sitting up in the big house and smiling when the workers and their wives come by and doff their hats."

Yet, the social structure of the plantation, established under Dutch colonial rule, seems to demand a certain residual paternalism. One evening, the Chrestmans presided over an Independence Day celebration at the estate clubhouse.

Mrs. Chrestman, with crisp, curly black hair and large brown eyes, wore a snug, black-lace blouse and batik sarong, the Indonesian national dress — "it's a gesture and it pleases the Indonesians" and placed a sequined crown on the head of a fashion show winner.

Chrestman, wearing a blue-flowered batik shirt, read a patriotic speech in Indonesian. "I wrote it myself, in English," he admitted with a smile later. "But it's the first time I've understood what I've said in Indonesian."

His only real complaint was similar to his wife's. "Of course, you must accept that you're too far from other social contacts, so social life is limited and restricted to some small number of people on the plantation."

The major social event is the daily 4:30 tennis game, when all the regulars meet on the club's two clay courts. Bridge and a little golf fill other gaps.

They're big on board games. Coffee tables, cupboards and shelves are stacked with backgammon, Othello, Monopoly, Scrabble and dozens of puzzles, useful in entertaining visiting wives of Indonesian staff members, most of whom speak little or no English.

"In most planters' houses," Maughm wrote, "there is not more than a shelf or two of books and for the most part they're detective stories."

Not so at the Chrestmans. Their compact library is crammed with hundreds of books, classics and best-sellers and a number of newly purchased volumes on Sumatran and Indonesian culture, history and politics. Conversations are frequently interrupted for references to an atlas or an almanac.

"I never feel tied to the place as long as I have something fresh to read," Mrs. Chrestman said. "Unfortunately, we do run out because there are customs regulations on the number of books you're allowed to import."

Much of Mrs. Chrestman's time is taken up teaching 8-year-old Eugenia through a correspondence course. There are no other Western children on the estate. Daughter, Sadie, 10, goes to a boarding school in Malaysia, across the narrow Straits of Malacca.

"Genie has learned Indonesian quickly and she plays with the servants' children," Mrs. Chrestman said. But mother and child find the home teaching difficult. "It means Genie and I are together 24 hours a day, without the normal five-hour break most mothers and children get. It's not fair to eithsr of us."

Occasionally, visitors come. One week recently they had two families, 11 people in all, as house guests. "You're a survival kit," Mrs. Chrestman, 37, said with a smile during drinks before dinner one evening.

"They began to talk over the whiskey and sparkler with which, following the Eastern habit, they celebrated the setting of the sun," Maugham wrote of the Granges and a rare visitor.

Similarly, when the sun casts long, spidery shadows of giant rain trees across the rolling lawns, the white-uniformed butler, Sulaiman, pushes a trolley of drinks over the red-tile floor to the well-lit corner of the airy living room where the family gathers.

Two housekeepers maintain the spacious but simple three-bedroom bungalow and a cook prepares meals, mostly "from scratch," including brown bread and yogurt, Mrs. Chrestman said, because conveneince items aren't available. Shopping is done at a small, nearby village except for occasional visits to the port city of Medan for treats like canned ham, jam and cheese.

Except when Chrestman must make the two-hour drive to Medan to place phone calls to Akron or fly to Jakarta for consultations with government officials, he's at home for three meals a day.

Each morning, promptly at 9:30, he and his expatriate colleagues gather at one of their homes for coffee and cake. "It drives me bonkers," Mrs. Chrestman said. They see each other eight hours a day and, when it's time for a break they take it together."

A stranger visiting the plantation for the first time is likely to have mixed feelings about the Chrestmans' lives here. On one hand, they're surrounded by extraordinary natural beauty and waited on by trained servants.

But most visitors would go away most concerned about the feeling of isolation and limited social contact; too few people who see too much and know too much of each others' lives, tend to magnify and dwell on petty irritants.

Although the Chrestmans have studied Indonesian and speak it passably, their regular contacts with local people are limited largely to the estate's elite.

"We can only entertain and mix with one social level at a time," Mrs. Chrestman said. "We'd like to try mixing a few levels together, but our early attempts proved disastrous and we've succumbed to the pressure of the inflexible social structure."

The Chrestmans expect to remain on the plantation for another 8 or 10 years. Chrestman, 54, who comes from Spiro, a small Oklahoma village, will retire then and they plan to live in Australia, where he began his overseas experience in 1953, or possibly in Hawaii.

Mrs. Chrestman grew up in Australia's western Victoria on a remote sheep station owned by her father, Sir Magnus Cormack. "We were much more isolated there than we are here on the plantation," she recalled. The Chrestmans' rural backgrounds and years in India, Singapore and other foreign posts have no doubt helped them adjust to life here.

"I admit that I do occasionally miss going to the movies, the theater and the ballet," Chrestman said. "But whenever we go on leave, I gorge. And besides, if you live in Akron, or even New York or London, how often do you go to the theater or a concert?"

Letters to Santa

Dear Santa,
I want to pick something out. I've been very good.
I'll have a Big Bird watch. I want my own bouncy ball. I like Rocky Ford moving vans. 'Brown Bagger' ends many airport delays

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The Duke and Duchess of Argyle did it. Gov. Jerry Brown of California did it. Now I've done it, flown the "Brown Bagger," the no frills, pack-your-own lunch flight across the Atlantic.

But they didn't fly back on the Concorde, as I did, which is another story.

Freddie Laker, a British chap who used to sweep out aircraft hangars before he rose up in the world to own his own airline, had to fight his own government for years to bring about his dream of a low-priced air shuttle service between New York and London.

His Skytrain, already dubbed the Brown Bagger by New York cabdrivers, began service late in September offering no frills flights to London at $135 (or to New York at $105 because of currency differences) and caused Pan American, TWA and other competitors to provide similar rock bottom flights. Now prices are falling and frills are being snipped from the Miami and Fort Lauderdale runs.

Tickets for the Skytrain can only be bought on the day of the flight, but the ticket office located out on Queens Boulevard in the wilds of Jimmy Breslin country gives telephone advice beginning at dawn on how many seats are still left.

I called at eight in the morning from my Connecticut hideaway and was advised by a pleasant English accent, reminiscent of Greer Garson in "Mrs. Miniver," that 310 seats remained out of 345.

When I reached the ticket window at 10:30 a.m., I handed over my passport for perusal, my credit card for payment, my suitcase for checking and, on the big board, chose seat No. 4A, which was a window in the non-smoking section. The little charmer behind the desk told me I was passenger No. 70.

The place was empty. The whole transaction took three minutes, pretty close to an airline counter record in my two decades of flitting about the globe. She told me to be back at the same office by 9:45 p.m. to catch the last free Laker bus to the United Airlines terminal at Kennedy or else proceed there on my own.

Investing 50 cents in a subway ride into Manhattan, I wandered along Madison Avenue peeking into some of the specialty food shops that now pack picnic baskets for the transoceanic shuttle.

For $46, one featured "a Concorde-style supersonic snack for the no frills passenger." It included a thimbleful of caviar, roast squab in little booties and a half bottle of Moet — Chandon bubbly.

I walked over to Zeb's sandwich shop behind Grand Central Terminal and had the takeaway man build me a double pastrami on rye with a side order of cole slaw, letting it be known that his handiwork would be consumed somewhere off Newfoundland.

"Big deal," he said, scowling, but he threw in a couple of dill pickle slices for the road.

The last bus to the airport evoked the last train from Berlin, piled high with duffle bags, backpacks, blanket rolls and guitars, as if the occupants, some carrying babies in pajamas, were thrown in with all their earthly impediments.

After passing through security,

there were no further check-in procedures and the Big DC-10, arrayed throughout with nine seats across the aisle, pulled away from the gate at precisely 11 p.m. Already there were veteran Brown Baggers who knew enough to assert the terriorial imperative. With a tough refugee mentality, they scarfed up every pillow and blanket in sight and stretched out on the empty seats for an all night nap.

Our ranks included 258 passengers and 2 infants that night. I was one of three wearing a tie. As soon as the seat belt sign went off, the 10 stewardesses in tall Trilby hats rolled the drink carts down the aisles, offering liqour at 50 cents and beer for a quarter. There was no wine or champagne to set off Chef Zeb's delectation.

A cold dinner was sold in advance for $3. I asked the bearded chap across the aisle what his tray contained. "Chicken," he said, "No, wait, maybe it's shrimp." He never could decide.

For $2, I rented earphones for the in-flight movie, despite the jests of some students who predicted it would be an old Army V.D. film. It turned out to be Jackie Gleason in "Mr. Billions," which immediately put the whole plane to sleep, except for a crying baby and two Australians who went to work on their duty free liquor purchases.

The $2 hot breakfast, which I essayed, was a disaster of burnt sausage, a tired omelet and the unusual British put-down of coffee. But the old Brown Bagger was 10 minutes early getting into London's Gatwick Airport, and the cringing porter immediately mistook me for Gov. Brown.

"Where to, Governor," he nattered through yellowing teeth, "the taxi stand or the train to Victoria?" I took the train, of course, in the spirit of Freddie Laker's economy breakthrough.

Capitol Hill boasts have familiar ring

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Absence may not make the White House grow fonder of Congress, but at least the record looks better from a distance.

It is the habit of congressional leaders, and of presidents if they happen to be of the same party, to boast of the year's work on Capitol Hill no matter what happened there.

On the legislation that President Carter said would be the year's major product, what happened was stalemate. There is no master energy program. The negotiators are still at work. And now Congress can contemplate the prospect of raising the price of gasoline, perhaps by seven cents a gallon, to keynote a congressional election year.

According to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, the session just ended was the most productive since Lyndon B. Johnson succeeded the assassinated John F. Kennedy in 1963.

"The wheels were spinning pretty fast then," O'Neill said. "Other than that, you would have to go back to 1933."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Congress had an excellent record, one of "extraordinary achievement." As for Carter, Byrd said, "He has done very well for a new, new president, a man who had no previous experience with Congress or Washington."

Such getaway speeches are in the grand tradition, even after a less-than-grand year. It just hasn't been quite what was advertised when a Democratic president, the first in eight years, took office to work in supposed harmony with a Democratic Congress.

Carter said in those days that he expected they'd get along just fine — but that he wouldn't hesitate to go to the country if he saw Congress kowtowing to special interests.

He made a few remarks like that, especially on the stalled energy bill that was supposed to be the year's monument. But no sooner were such words uttered than White House spokesmen were hastening to add that the president meant no offense.

And there certainly was no campaign to mobilize the country and put the heat on Congress. O'Neill told Carter that would be a mistake. It was a risk the president didn't take.

Instead, he played the game the way it is always played and, at adjournment time, said it had been a very good year.

By implication, he took part of the blame for work that went undone.

"We will have a much more carefully considered agenda for 1978, broadly encompassing the commitments that I have made to the American people and the issue that I have identified since I have been in office ..." he said. "I would say it is more an effective presentation because we now know better when the Congress can move rapidly and when they can't ...

"I am not discouraged about it. I am very pleased at what has been accomplished so far, although we didn't conclude 100 percent of what we proposed."

Carter cited the creation of a new Department of Energy, the approval of a $21 billion tax, jobs and public works program to stimulate the economy, and a new farm bill as among the year's gains.

He also got the authority he sought to reorganize government agencies, subject to congressional veto. Congress approved major housing legislation and has started on his welfare program.

But negotiators still are struggling to write an energy program, new department or no. There will be another effort to stimulate the economy next year, with unemployment still running close to 7 percent. There's a new farm bill, but there's also a farmers' strike for higher prices.

Overall, Carter had the worst time on the most visible issues, energy chief among them.

It wasn't long ago that Carter was saying energy legislation was "the major legislative product that we expect this year.

"And for us to devote a full year of work and come out with an inconsequential or inadequate energy program is something that I don't believe the Senate will face," he said on Sept. 29. "They have their own reputations to protect."

Well, they faced it.

Carter now says that energy was the year's only major failure in Congress, and that it will be settled quickly next year.

And of course it is only half time for the 95th Congress. But 1978 will have to be quite a session to validate Tip O'Neill's comparison to the days of FDR and LBJ.
