From Staff Reports

A driving rainstorm left water spilling over downtown Midland street curbs and deluged underpasses this morning as the remnants of Tropical Storm Waldo off the west coast of Mexico hit Midland.

"Most of the moisture we're getting is from Waldo which was off of Baja California," said a National Weather Service spokesman. "There are flash flood warnings for Southwest Texas, but none for here."

The NWS stated that more than a half inch of rain fell within a short period, although heavy rains continued as he spoke. He anticipated that the rains would ease up in the afternoon but would resume this evening.

Floods were on the mind of some Midland residents.

"Are we going to have another flood?" asked an operator for Texas Electric Service Company. "This looks just like it did the last time we had a flood."

The woman was referring to heavy rains that left Midland underwater in 1968.

Another Midland man, Tom Mitchell, reported that 3¼ inches of rain had fallen within an hour at his residence one mile south of Interstate 20.

"I just went and looked at my rain gauge and that's what it said," said Mitchell, a long-time resident of Midland. "This is the closest I've ever seen it to coming inside the house."

"I've been here 33 years and I've never seen it rain like this," he said.

Midland farmers and ranchers also reported high amounts of precipitation, but the rain, timely or not, was welcomed.

"It's raining slowly — real pretty," said farmer Norman Koonce. "We don't really need it right now. It came a little late for dry-land farms. I guess we can always use it. You can use it whether it's time for it or not."

Koonce was preparing his crop for stripping.

By mid-morning Wednesday, about one inch of rain had fallen on his farm northwest of Midland.

In the Greenwood area, "It was raining real hard," said Sharon Graham, wife of farmer Roy Graham.

At the Midland Farmers Co-operative, Charlie Wright, cotton gin superintendent, said the rain had been "pouring."

Most farmers don't need the rain now, since they are readying to strip their cotton or already have started stripping.

"It's liable to be 10 days of pretty weather before anybody can get out to strip," he said. "It kind of postpones things."

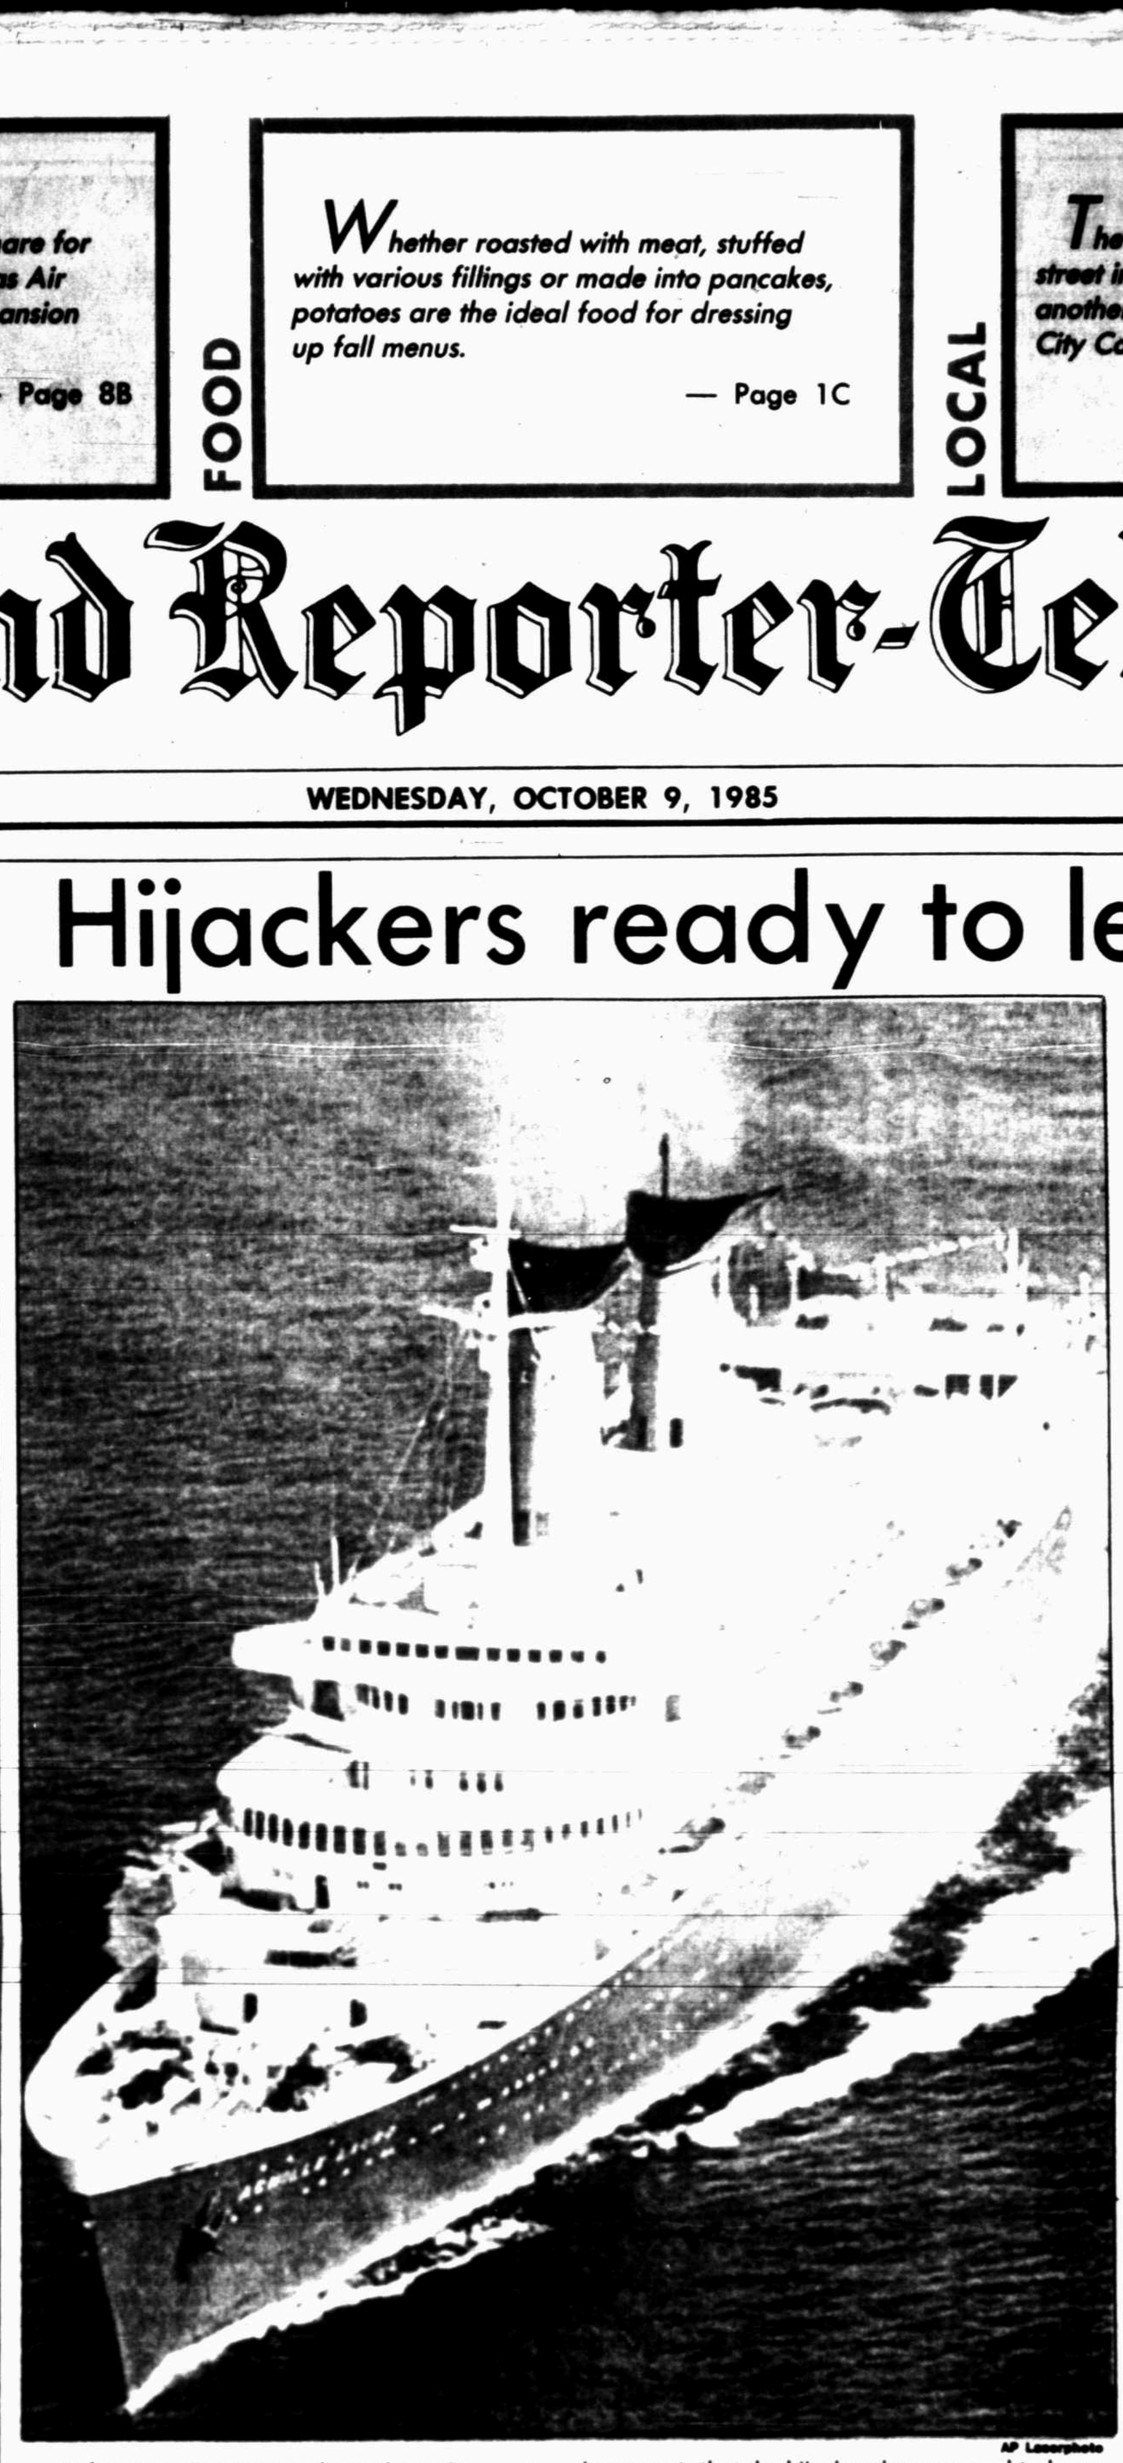

However, Wright said the co-op started ginning last Friday. Midland County farmer Lee Bell brought in the first cotton load to be baled this season.

"This (rain) is good for everybody," including wheat and alfalfa farmers, Wright said. "It's good for the old pastures. We take rain anytime we can get it."

Rain was falling generously in the Warfield community, noted Lenora Bray. She and her husband, Scot, farm there.

Hijackers ready to leave ship

A hostage situation involving the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro may be resolved today, following reports that the hijackers have agreed to leave the ship.

Details sketchy on radio pact

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — Palestinian gunmen who seized an Italian cruise ship with up to 511 people aboard agreed today to leave the vessel, according to a shipping source who monitored ship-to-shore radio.

"It looks like there's an agreement, and they are going to leave the boat," one source said. "It looks like it's over."

Reports of an agreement came about seven hours after the vessel dropped anchor 15 nautical miles off Port Said. The Palestinians took over the ship Monday night after the Achille Lauro left Alexandria, Egypt, and demanded that Israel free 50 Palestinian prisoners.

The Italian Foreign Ministry said today there could be as many as 511 people on the liner, 180 passengers and 331 crew members. On Tuesday, the shipping company said 413 people were aboard.

The reported agreement was reached during radio contact between a man identified as a Palestine Liberation Organization envoy code named Abu-Khaled and the gunmen.

It was not known immediately who Abu-Khaled is or who sent him.

"I heard Abu-Khaled tell them, 'There is someone you know and who knows you who will be coming to you. He will have some sign (to identify himself), and you can come down with him,' " said the source, who asked not to be identified.

The source said he expected the unidentified intermediary to take a small boat to the liner but could not estimate how long the operation would take.

Port officials and shipping sources said Abu-Khaled "tried to soothe the hijackers' rising tempers and clarify their demands."

The PLO headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia, has condemned the hijacking, and said it has sent envoys to Port Said and Cairo, Egypt, to help resolve the situation.

Ahmed Abdul Rahman, a PLO spokesman in Tunis, said in an interview the hijackers agreed to end the hostage drama "without any conditions."

The optimism at PLO headquarters appeared based on information reaching Tunis from the special delegation sent to Egypt by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

"The contacts and the discussions, the talks between our envoys and the Egyptians and the hijackers: the result of it is that the hijackers should leave the boat without any delay, without any conditions," the PLO spokesman said. "This is the orders from Arafat to his envoys."

Earlier, the hijackers denied killing any hostages and demanded to talk to Western ambassadors, port sources said.

"No one has been killed and no one will be released," shipping sources in Port Said quoted an unidentified hijacker as telling Suez Canal officials.

A man who said he was the captain of the Achille Lauro reported by radio Tuesday night that all aboard were safe, contradicting earlier reports that two Americans had been killed. The man pleaded against any rescue attempt.

MISD trustees told growth outstripping projections

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

An analysis of student population trends reveals the Midland Independent School District is growing at a much faster rate than previously predicted, the board learned at its Tuesday meeting.

Larry Lusby, MISD director of computer services, told trustees MISD is projecting a 1,000-student increase each of the next five years causing the district-wide enrollment to reach 23,607 by 1990. The projections are based on live births and a move-in growth rate of approximately 1 percent.

Lusby said enrollment is expected to peak in 1996 when it reaches 27,288 students, most of which will be at the elementary school level.

He added, geographical areas experiencing the most growth are the northwest and east sides of Midland.

Lusby, who called the projections "conservative," said MISD may need one or more elementary schools to facilitate the growth, and may have to construct a fourth junior high school by 1990.

Trustees had tabled discussion pertaining to the need for an additional junior high school based on 1984-85 projections.

But MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi said the recent analysis reveals "the need for a junior high school would be sooner than we thought it would be."

He added, MISD's elementary schools, which are currently "operating at capacity," would be unable to facilitate the population increase, especially by 1988 when the district must implement additional state reforms requiring a 22-to-1 class ratio for students in third- and fourth-grade.

In other business, trustees learned that MISD Scholastic Aptitude Test scores for 1985 are above or equal to the state, regional and national averages despite a drop in local averages from 1984-85.

The district's combined verbal and math score is 906 compared to 878 for the state, 886 for Texas' southwest region and 906 for the nation.

The average score at Midland High School, where 35 percent of the graduating seniors completed the test, was 937. Forty-three percent of Lee High School students took the test and the average score was 882.

Addition data revealed MISD students consistently outperformed their state and national counterparts on SAT sub-scores in reading comprehension, vocabulary and standard written English.

Also, the number of MISD females who took the test increased nearly 35 percent. Females also scored higher on the verbal and mathematics portion of the test.

Though school officials are pleased by the scores, they admit the average local scores "are not as good as they were last year."

Dr. Lamar Hebert, assistant superintendent of instructional services, said further analysis indicates a significant percentage of Midland students taking the 1984-85 SAT test were below-average students.

School officials 'still pursuing' information on VD film allegations

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees refused comment about the continuing investigation into allegations that an elementary school teacher showed films on venereal disease to elementary school students.

Oscar Villa, a Santa Rita Elementary School physical education teacher, was suspended with pay Oct. 2, after he allegedly showed a film on venereal disease to first-, second- and third-grade students.

The first-year school teacher reportedly showed the films — designed for junior high and high school students — to primary students during physical education classes on Sept. 26, MISD president Bill Jackson said.

According to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, the district will "continue to pursue" the matter and will evaluate the results of the investigation "within the next few days."

Baressi said trustees, who had not yet viewed the film, had an opportunity to do so following an executive session on Tuesday.

During a regular session, Midlander Mrs. John Nobles Jr. told trustees that although she had not seen the film, she "was horrified" when she heard that it had allegedly been shown to the youth.

"That film is not suitable for elementary school children," she said.

The Reporter-Telegram learned that Villa, a former teacher-coach with the Marathon Independent School District, had been involved in a similar incident that resulted, in part, in the non-renewal of his teaching contract with the Marathon ISD.

Marathon ISD attorney Ted Kerr of Midland said Villa reportedly showed a social studies film on "prejudice" to social studies students and to a junior high school earth science class.

Although the film was appropriate for that particular age group, "there was a question to the relevancy of the subject matter," Kerr said.

Villa was unavailable for comment regarding the charges despite numerous attempts to contact him.

Senate preparing to approve short-term credit limit extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate broke a deadlock early today and moved toward approval of a short-term increase in the government's credit limit, action the Reagan administration says is needed to keep federal checks from bouncing.

Democratic leaders fighting a proposed budget-balancing plan resigned themselves to defeat in the Senate. But House Democrats hardened their opposition to the plan that backers want attached to the credit ceiling authorization. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called the plan "a fraud."

Days of negotiations between Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., climaxed when a marathon Senate session ended after 3 a.m. today with a pact allowing a vote this afternoon on an amendment designed to eliminate the nation's deficit, currently about $200 billion, by fiscal 1991.

'White-oil' operators not allowed to produce without permission

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State District Judge Harley Clark today was expected to refuse to allow "white-oil" operators to produce oil in the Panhandle Field without the Texas Railroad Commission's permission.

After two days of testimony, Clark turned down the white-oil operators' request that he issue an injunction barring the commission from enforcing a rule which makes it more difficult for a wells to be classified as an oil well.

White-oil operators use refrigeration, or LTX, units to chill vapors to liquid before bringing them to the surface. This process converts natural gas to white oil.

Who can take Heckler's place?

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House efforts to quickly move Margaret M. Heckler out of the Cabinet and off to Ireland may be hampered by a lack of officials in her department legally qualified to serve as acting secretary until a successor is confirmed, government sources say.

The sources, who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity, said the long battle between Mrs. Heckler and the White House staff left so many high-level vacancies in the Department of Health and Human Services that only a handful of officials meet the legal requirements to temporarily fill her chair.

Mrs. Heckler agreed last week to step down as secretary and become ambassador to Ireland. President Reagan called it a promotion; others saw it as a move by White House officials, who opposed her style of operating, to get her out of the Cabinet.

Mrs. Heckler has not yet been nominated formally as ambassador and will remain at HHS until her appointment is confirmed by the Senate. But department sources say the White House is concerned about who could fill her chair between the time she leaves and a new secretary takes over.

Federal law requires that an acting Cabinet secretary already be a presidential appointee who has been confirmed by the Senate.

Ordinarily 16 HHS officials besides the secretary would fulfill those qualifications, including an undersecretary and five assistant secretaries.

But the dispute between Mrs. Heckler and the White House staff brought an impasse over appointments to fill key HHS vacancies. Nine positions are vacant or filled with temporary appointees who have not been confirmed by the Senate.

Of the remaining seven, only two are HHS officials serving at the assistant secretary level. They are Stephanie Lee-Miller, assistant secretary for public affairs, and Dorcas Hardy, assistant secretary for human development, who controls a $6 billion budget for programs such as Head Start. Hardy was mentioned early this year as a possible candidate to become Social Security administrator.

The department sources said the secretary's chair can be filled in two ways. Mrs. Heckler, upon her departure, could designate an assistant secretary as her acting replacement, though that choice would be limited to Ms. Lee-Miller or Ms. Hardy.

President Reagan, however, can name any of his appointees in the government to become acting secretary for 30 days, providing they have undergone Senate confirmation for their current posts.

Within HHS, that expands the possible list to include the inspector general; the surgeon general; the director of the National Institutes of Health; the director of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration and the commissioner of children, youth and families.

Minority health care seen as benefit of administration

HOUSTON (AP) — Margaret Heckler says that when she departs from the helm of the Health and Human Services Department, she will leave behind one legacy — the goal of improving minority health care.

One year ago, Mrs. Heckler said Tuesday, she appointed a panel of specialists from within the department to study inadequacies in the quality of minority health care.

The panel's study produced seven volumes of information on the issue that "will assessed and put together programmatically and leave a blueprint for my successor to follow," she said during a news conference at Texas Medical Center.

A week ago, reports surfaced that President Reagan was displeased with Mrs. Heckler's work. Reagan denied such reports, but said he offered her the position of ambassador to Ireland as a promotion. She has accepted Reagan's offer.

She said that she will leave her successor "a list of recommendations and also a how-to-do it book on what I've learned."

Among those priorities, Mrs. Heckler said, will be finding a cure for acquired immuned deficiency syndrome and Alzheimer's disease, improving care for the disabled and a "greater than ever stress" on preventive medicine.

The measure was proposed by Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

The plan would be attached to a bill raising the national debt to $2.078 trillion, enough to last through the fiscal year. Two test votes on Sunday indicated the amendment would pass.

That vote, at the end of a six-day deadlock, would clear the way for action on a short-term hike in the national debt — enough to carry the government through another week of its deficit spending. The interim hike, which must also be approved by the House, would allow Congress to leave for its Columbus Day recess this weekend without threat of the government defaulting on its obligations.

The Reagan administration supports the deficit-reduction amendment and has been keeping up pressure for quick passage of the amendment and the debt increase with daily warnings of dire financial problems. The government has reached its current legal limit of $1.824 trillion in debt, and has used up its cash reserves, officials said.

Deputy Treasury Richard G. Darman, in a letter to Dole Tuesday, said, "As of this morning, we project an ending balance for October 8 (today) of zero; and — absent remedial action — a negative ending balance for October 9 (tomorrow)."

When the balance goes below zero, the Treasury will begin notifying banks not to honor government checks, Darman said.

The Senate, with President Reagan's blessing, has been refusing to allow even a short-term increase in the debt limit before a vote on the deficit-reduction plan. Dole said early today that once that vote occurred he would move a debt ceiling extension to last through next Thursday.

"Hopefully we can dispose of that by voice vote," he said.

The House already approved the new deficit ceiling of $2.078 trillion when it passed the fiscal 1986 budget on Aug. 1. But the amendment, if approved in the Senate, would have to be sent back to the House, where Democratic leaders have been meeting on the issue since last Thursday.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings amendment would force Congress and the president to stay within progressively tighter limits on government red ink until 1991, when the budget would have to be balanced. Taxes, spending cuts, or both could be used to meet the targets.

If the politicians failed to meet the requirements of the plan, the president would be required to make spending cuts spread across government programs — with the exception of Social Security — government contracts already in place, and interest on the debt.

Democratic senators offered an alternative plan that also was scheduled for a vote today, with virtually no chance of success. That plan would limit the president's discretion in making any deficit-reducing spending cuts.

Many Democrats and some Republicans have questioned how evenly the cuts would be distributed under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. They also say the bill, in conjunction with the president's veto power, could give the executive too much power over government spending decisions.

O'Neill on Tuesday delivered his most pointed attack.

"In my opinion, of course, this bill is kind of a fraud," said O'Neill. The amendment is above current budget targets in the first two years, and would thus allow Republicans running for re-election in the Senate next year to claim they'd cured the deficits but "any great costs are going to come after you get your six-year election," he said.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., charged the amendment was designed "so the Republicans can avoid having the deficit as an issue in campaign 86."

Despite misgivings about political motives behind the amendment, the House Democrats said they would try to modify the proposal or offer an alternative.

"I think the worst thing we can do is stall the issue at this time," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

SHIP

An unconfirmed report reaching the Israeli government said an elderly Jewish couple from the United States was killed aboard the ship, a government official said today.

The official, speaking on a guarantee of anonymity, said the names of the couple were made available to Israel, but he declined to release them. He said there was no confirmation of the report from a second source.

The number of Americans on board was uncertain, but was estimated by the White House to be about a dozen.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the U.S. government had taken a number of unspecified steps "in coordination with other governments" to end the ordeal.

One maritime source told The Associated Press that an Egyptian naval vessel approached the Achille Lauro as it steamed toward Port Said early today, but turned back when hijackers threatened to blow up the liner.

Israel Radio's monitor, Mickey Gurdus, reported the ship was about 20 nautical miles off Port Said, the northern terminus of the Suez Canal, and that hijackers demanded that the British, U.S. and West German ambassadors be brought to the port to negotiate with them.

He said Egyptian authorities had forbidden the ship to enter its territorial waters, but had promised that the ambassadors were on their way.

Off Beirut on Tuesday, the hijackers said in a broadcast that they wanted to negotiate with Israel.

Hundreds of passengers were off the vessel for a one-day tour of Cairo and the pyramids when the hijacking occurred. They were to have reboarded the boat in Port Said.

An Italian Foreign Ministry official said Italian authorities have been told by the PLO in Tunisia that five to seven hijackers, using false South American passports, boarded the vessel in the northern port of Genoa, where the ship began its Mediterranean cruise with 735 passengers last Thursday.

The Italian news agency, ANSA, quoted police sources in Genoa as saying they were questioning Ast Kalaf Mohamad Zainab, 21, a Palestinian carrying Iraqi and Moroccan passports, in connection with the hijacking.

Italy's defense minister, Giovanni Spadolini, said Italy had not established contact with the hijackers and said there would be no negotiations for prisoners "that are not in our hands and over whom we have no power."

The Italian government has also said it will not give in to terrorist demands.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres said in Jerusalem that no government had asked Israel to free prisoners.

Israel said one of the prisoners whose release was demanded by the hijackers was Samir al-Kountar, who was captured after a 1979 raid on the Israeli coast in which an Israeli and his 5-year-old daughter were killed.

The identities of the other prisoners the terrorists are seeking to free were not known.

The Jordan Times newspaper today quoted Salah Khalaf, top political aide to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat as saying that PLO executive committee member Mohammed Abbas and Fatah central committee member Hani al Hassan were in contact with hijackers Tuesday night.

It quoted Khalaf as saying the hijackers were "very desperate" men, probably from Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps in Beirut, which have been besieged by Syrian-backed Shiite Moslem forces.

The newspaper quoted Khalaf as saying he believed the hijackers were reacting to events in the two camps as well as Israel's Oct. 1 raid on the PLO headquarters.

The pirates said they were from the Palestine Liberation Front, one of eight guerrilla groups that comprise the PLO. The PLF split into three factions during a 1983 revolt against Arafat.

Western diplomats in Damascus said Tuesday the Syrian Foreign Ministry told Italian Charge d'Affaires Pietro Cordone the hijackers claimed to have killed two Americans.

But a radio message, purportedly from the ship's captain, said Tuesday night, "I have one message. Please, please, don't try anything on my ship. Everybody is in very good health."

The vessel's master has been identified as Gerardo de Rosa.

U.S. awaits confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today cautiously awaited confirmation of reports that Palestinian pirates had agreed to surrender the Italian luxury liner they seized two days ago with up to 511 people aboard.

"We will not at the moment be commenting on those reports, since it is obviously a sensitive time," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

He said President Reagan was being closely informed of developments.

Speakes refused to discuss the whereabouts of Reagan's daughter, Maureen, when asked about a published report that she was aboard a different cruise ship in the Mediterranean and might have been the intended target of the hijackers. Ms. Reagan travels with U.S. Secret Service bodyguards.

The administration had said it was willing to talk — but not to negotiate — with the hijackers.

"We have been in touch with all governments that have an interest and a role to play. Contacts have continued through the night," Speakes said.

Speakes said he was not able to verify earlier reports that two American passengers had been murdered. In broadcasts from the ship, the hijackers denied that anyone had been killed.

The Italian Foreign Ministry said today there could be as many as 511 people on the liner, 180 passengers and 331 crew members. On Tuesday, the shipping company said 413 people were aboard. Speakes said it was carrying about a dozen Americans — "less than 20, for sure."

President Reagan, meeting in the Oval Office with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore, said, "The hijacking of the ship is the most ridiculous thing."

MISD

For instance, 35.4 percent of LHS who took the test were reported to be in the bottom three-fifth's of their graduating class compared to 23.7 percent last year.

Hebert said the reason for the increase in below-average students in unknown, but added, that he believes these students had a significant impact on the district's average score.

In addition to the large number of below average students, Hebert said, more than 10 percent of MISD's honor graduates failed to take the test because many colleges and universities no longer require the SAT in admitting students.

Hebert said, that a much greater number and percentage of MISD graduates took the SAT — 345 (39 percent) of 1985 seniors compared to 264 in 1984.

Generally, the higher the percentage of students who take the test, the lower the average score, he added.

Still, MISD reported a near record-breaking number of National Merit semifinalists and commended students, Hebert reported.

Thirty-three MISD seniors — more than any recorded since 1972-73 — were named semifinalists or commended students.

National Merit semifinalists represent the top ½ of 1 percent of all U.S. high school seniors. Only 15,000 U.S. students earn the honor annually. Commended students are those who place in the top 5 percent of more than 1 million students who compete in the annual National Merit Scholarship competition.

OIL

But the new commission rule, issued May 13, requires hydrocarbon liquids to be liquid in the reservoir, liquid in the well bore and liquid at the surface if a well is to be classified as an oil well.

Natural gas operators, siding with the commission, argued during the two days of testimony that white-oil operators were using LTX units to drain off their reserves. The white-oil operators, attorney Pete Schenkkan said, had drained "millions of cubic feet of gas from my clients, which they'll probably never get back."

Although the ruling was a victory for the commission, Clark directed commissioners to rewrite the May 13 order under proper "rulemaking" procedures. On Sept. 13, Clark held the commission's order "null and void" because it did not follow rulemaking procedures Texas law requires.

Tuesday, Clark again ruled that the rule's "substantive merits" are in keeping with Texas law.

"The judge's ruling was consistent with his Sept. 13 ruling and I was glad to see that," Schenkkan said. "I believe it was a correct interpretation of substantive law."

Still, Schenkkan said he would appeal the court's ruling that commissioners did not follow proper rulemaking procedures in drafting the May 13 order. If he wins that appeal, that would remove another legal weapon from the white-oil operators' arsenal.

Attorneys for the white-oil operators wouldn't comment on whether they would appeal Clark's order. But courtroom observers have said all along the case will probably reach the Supreme Court of Texas.

City officials gambling on resurrecting Underground Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — City officials are betting $131 million they can resurrect Underground Atlanta, the once-booming subterranean nightspot that attracted more than 3 million visitors a year but is now empty, dusty and littered.

The area of 1880s-vintage buildings under the city's streets opened in 1969. In its prime it housed 76 shops, restaurants and taverns.

"It was a terrific place," said former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, who ran a novelty shop and a restaurant in Underground Atlanta. "It had the gifts, the entertainment. It was a place to go see a crowd."

Underground's old-fashioned gaslighted streets were narrow. Entrances were ornate and fences were wrought iron. In 1973, 3.5 million people visited Underground.

"It was a carnival, a good time," said Paul Mitchell, a jazz musician who played there for 10 years. Underground, he said, "was the kind of place you could go and find almost anything you wanted in entertainment."

But Underground eventually withered and died — the victim of poor planning, an economic recession, a lowered drinking age and the perception, at least, of urban crime.

The city transit authority built a rail line through part of it in 1978. "That was like taking away about three-fourths of it, really," said Maddox.

The recession that hit the country in the 1970s also hurt, as did the state lowering its drinking age from 21 to 18. "Before that there were very few teen-agers because it wasn't designed for them," said Mitchell. "When they started coming in, the clubs started changing, and people stopped coming because they didn't want to hang out with children."

The area was plagued as much by a perception of crime as the real thing. Its status as a landmark probably hurt because news reports would place a crime "near Underground," Maddox said.

By 1980 there were but 26 businesses in Underground. A year later there were 10. Now there are none. The area is sealed off, but is home to vagrants.

The people trying to revive Underground want it as more than a stop for Atlanta's several million conventioneers. They hope it will anchor a city fragmented by suburban development.

An important player is the Rouse Co. of Columbia, Md., which was responsible for Boston's Quincy Market, Baltimore's Harborplace, and New York City's South Street Seaport.

Most of the financing will come from an $85 million bond issue by the Downtown Development Authority and backed by the city. The rest will come from private investors, a $14 million one-time sales tax commitment from the city and government grants.

Joe Martin, president of Underground Festival Development Co., which is coordinating the project, acknowledged that resurrecting Underground is a gamble.

"There are a lot of land mines left out there," he said. "This could come to an abrupt end for any number of reasons."

One of the tests is raising money from private sources. Martin said his group is near its goal of $15 million, but declined to say how close.

With $131 million in the balance, the new developers are acutely aware of past problems. The new development will contain almost twice as much retail space, about 220,000 square feet, and many of the improvements will be above ground.

The Downtown Development Authority will build two plazas, a 1,200-space parking area and streets. The DDA will retire the bonds with income from rent, interest and parking.

"The old Underground will be a component of the new one, but this is really a redevelopment of a large portion of the central district, almost six blocks."

Town nonexistent according to Bell

GLENPOOL, Okla. (AP) — It's bad enough when residents of expanding and adjoining suburbs find themselves living on top of or on the other side of blurry boundaries.

But now a new directory distributed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. lists residents and businesses in this Tulsa suburb of 7,000 people under two other neighboring towns, Kiefer and Jenks.

"In essence, Southwestern Bell says Glenpool doesn't exist," said Glenpool Post editor Charles Biggs.

Health care groups: Gramm's proposal would cut programs

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of Texas health care organizations say U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's proposed budget cuts would wipe out much of the recently approved health care improvements for those unable to pay doctors' bills.

"Sen. Gramm's hastily concocted scheme would effectively gut improved health programs enacted by the Legislature last session," Michael Hudson, director of the the Children's Defense fund, told a news conference Tuesday.

"This is cost-shifting to the states," said Jose Comacho, director of the Texas Association of Community Health Centers. "We either enact new state taxes to replace these federal funds or leave thousands of uninsured Texas mothers and babies without critical health care."

A Gramm spokesman dismissed the criticism as uninformed.

STATE

"They lack even a rudimentary understanding of the legislation," said Larry Neal, Gramm's press secretary in Washington.

The Gramm-Rudman Amendment, present in Senate debate on the national deficit, would require Congress and the White House to abolish the $180 billion deficit by 1990. Across-the-board spending cuts would be imposed automatically if the president and congress failed to meet annual budget targets.

Hudson said under the Gramm amendment, Texas would lose $1.3 million the first year in funds for prenatal care and post-natal services. The $5.7 million in funds for immunizations and direct services to local health clinics would be cut 10 percent. He said funds for prevention and treatment of veneral diseases, including AIDS, would be "significantly reduced."

Comacho said the 27 Texas community health centers would lose $2 million the first year, eliminating services to almost 31,000 people.

Neal said the figures "are very obviously pulled out of thin air."

White's team loaded with ex-Baylor Bears

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

White

AUSTIN — Mark White is an avowed Dallas Cowboys fan, but the governor runs his administration like the Pittsburgh Steelers — his backfield is loaded with Baylor Bears.

While Steelers Coach Chuck Noll starts ex-Bears Walter Abercrombie at halfback and Frank Pollard at fullback, White has drafted more than 90 Baylor grads since he took over the reins of the Texas State Government team in January 1983. However Noll, a graduate of Dayton College in Ohio, hasn't been looking overwhelmingly to his alma mater to fill the Steelers' roster. White, a Baylor-ex, has.

Some of White's most publicized recruits have come not just from the Baylor academic gridiron — where the governor earned his bachelors in business administration in 1962 — but more specifically from the All-America team at Baylor Law School. White "played" his final year there in 1965.

On July 23, White satisfied his pledge to play more West Texans on the team when he drafted Odessa lawyer Ray Stoker to start for the Highways and Public Transportation Commission. A little more than a month later, White dodged an all-out blitz from the lightning-quick Environmentalists and burly Developers by dumping the Water Commission ball to little-known rookie John Houtchins of Houston.

Both Stoker and Houtchins spent their law school days at Baylor. Both roomed with quarterback White. (That's Mark, not Danny).

The governor reportedly wants to fill the gaping hole in his Public Utility Commission line with another classmate. Austin utility consultant David E. Young, a Beaumont native, earned his chemistry degree from Baylor in 1962, the same year White wore his first green-and-gold cap and gown.

A look at the first 31 months worth of White draft choices reveals that the governor has called on ex-Bears to a degree far exceeding their proportions in the general population. Of 949 gubernatorial appointments, the official government team press guide lists no alma mater for 86 selections.

Of the 638 non-lawyers on the squad, 37 either studied at or graduated from the Waco institution. That's 5.8 percent. Texas college stats reveal that Baylor grads comprise just 3.2 percent of the total.

The numbers for the attorneys White has called on are even more astounding. The governor has handed off authority to 255 lawyers in his first 31 months of running the team; 52 of them — 20.4 percent — earned either their undergraduate or law degrees from Baylor. The State Bar reports that former Bears make up just 7.3 percent of the 44,514 licensed Texas lawyers.

With that completion rate in excess of 2¼ times the average, White just isn't giving other schools' grads an even chance to make the team.

Thanks to an excellent series of articles coming out of Dallas last weekend, we find another interesting statistic. Anglo males who have contributed to White's campaign fund appear to have a better than average chance of making the cut. Some, like Houtchins, Aeronautics Commissioner Walter Umphrey, Banking Board member Gene Reamer, Texas A&M Regent Joe Reynolds and Parks and Wildlife Commissioner Richard Morrison doubly attracted the attention of White's scouting crew. They wore the Baylor colors and either contributed to or guaranteed a loan for the governor's campaign fund.

Political scientists say the appointments power is the strongest weapon in a Texas governor's playbook. It ranks right up there with the veto in scoring potential.

With three Republicans looking to win the 1987 starting job away from White, look for instant replays of this appointments record to crop up throughout the 1986 season. Look for the contenders to try to convince voters that this lack of a balanced attack is hurting White's offense and might lead to a fumble.

Daughters on opposite sides in mother's murder trial

ATHENS (AP) — Jurors heard testimony from two daughters of a woman accused of killing two former husbands, each taking different sides in the courtroom.

The defense for Betty Lou Beets, on trial in this East Texas city in the slaying of Dallas Fire Capt. Jimmy Don Beets, called Faye Lane to the stand Tuesday as its first witness.

Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Beet's daughter by another former husband, told the jury she had never heard her sister Julie or her brother Robbie talk about helping bury Beets and had not heard about her mother planning to kill him.

But another of Mrs. Beets' daughters, Shirley Stegner, 26, testifed as a prosecution witness that her mother told her she planned to kill Beets a couple of days before he was reported missing.

Both daughters are residents of Balch Springs, a Dallas suburb.

Police unearthed Beets' body June 8 from the front yard of the couple's home. He had been buried four feet deep under a mock wishing well in the front yard of the home.

Investigators also dug up the body of Doyle Wayne Barker, a construction worker who married Mrs. Beets 11 months before his disappearance in 1981. Mrs. Beets is charged with capital murder in Beets' death and murder in Barker's death.

Ms. Stegner, also accused in Barker's death, had been charged in the Beets slaying but that charge was dropped and she was released from the Henderson County Jail on a $100,000 bond. During Tuesday's testimony, Mrs. Stegner said her mother called her around midnight on Aug 5, 1983 saying she needed to talk.

"When my mother first told me she was going to kill Jimmy Don, I told her I didn't want to discuss it and I didn't want anything to do with it," Ms. Stegner told the eight-woman, four-man jury.

Ms. Stegner told jurors her mother asked her to come over but when she arrived Mrs. Beets told her everything had been taken care of and she could go home.

SMU senate OKs measure on South Africa

DALLAS (AP) — The Southern Methodist University student senate by a vote of 31-2 has approved a resolution asking school trustees to consider ending investment in firms doing business in South Africa.

The resolution on Tuesday fell short of asking trustees to divest when senators removed an amendment to the measure and instead asks them to consider divesting.

The resolution with the amendment probably would not be accepted by trustees, student body President Bill Koch said.

"The fact is, that request was made before about two years ago and the fact is, that request didn't go anywhere beyond the student senate."

The measure also condemned "the isolation of the human and civil rights of all individuals of South Africa."

SMU has $3.27 million invested in 29 corporations doing business in South Africa, said Arif Virji, a senator from the law school and sponsor of the resolution.

Janet Watson said she voted against the measure because South Africa's poor classes will be hardest hit and because it would cut American access to strategic metals such as platinum.

Man who pleaded guilty in mosque bombing gets 10-year prison term

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to federal charges in the bombing of a mosque has been sentenced to 10 years in prison and ordered to pay $46,169 in restitution.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling on Tuesday sentenced Daniel Allen Russell, 21, of Houston and said the former apartment maintenance worker should share the responsibility of restitution with two other men charged in the bombing.

Russell and two others are accused of bombing the Daar Us Salaam mosque in southwest Houston on June 22, causing more than $50,000 in damage. They have pleaded guilty in the incident.

Randy James Jones, 21, an air conditioning worker, and Stephen Charles Ahern, 22, a college student, are scheduled to be sentenced later this month by U.S. District Judge Norman Black.

Two-year-old dies of menningitis

MCKINNEY (AP) — Employees and children at a child care center in this North Texas city have been voluntarily receiving vaccinations and medication protecting themselves from bacterial meningitis, officials said Tuesday.

Natasha Edwards, 2, died of the disease over the weekend. She was admitted to a Dallas hospital Sept. 28 after child care officials alerted her parents to an eye infection.

"We are trying not to overreact, but we have asked parents to check with their individual physicians to make sure," said Howard Duck, a Griffin Learning Center director.

Menningitis is an inflammation of the lining around the brain and is caused by bacteria that usually enters through the nose or throat.

Oil group endorses water plan

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of a trade group representing the Texas petroleum industry say they have endorsed the statewide water plan on the Nov. 5 ballot.

The Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association urged voters to support Propositions 1 and 2, which would provide $1.43 billion for projects designed to ensure adequate water supplies for cities and farms.

The association represents 3,000 energy producers, refiners, transporters and retailers. The group's executive committee adopted a resolution supporting the water plan at its 66nd annual meeting last week in Dallas, said spokesman John J. Cassel.

The Legislature placed the plan on the November ballot at the urging of Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

City offices 'bombed 'with garlic

DALLAS (AP) — At first, the smell of garlic came wafting pleasantly through the hallways of the old Dallas Municipal Building on Main Street, an appetizing aroma that conjured up visions of Italian cuisine.

"I was looking for the spaghetti," said Ed Spencer, a public information officer for the city police.

But the odor grew stronger and the appetites disappeared.

"It was sickening," said Danny Perkins, general manager of the five-story building which houses police and fire department offices and the municipal courts.

Fire department investigators believed they had been stink-bombed by a spice factory employee who had been upset and smelled like garlic, when they brought him in for questioning Friday in an arson case.

A brief search turned up a plastic bag of highly concentrated garlic oil that had been poured on the walkway outside the building — right below an incoming ventilation duct.

The spicemaker, Jose Socorro Corral, 26, of Dallas, was charged Monday with disorderly conduct, fire marshals said.

Young liver transplant patient dies

DALLAS (AP) — A 9-year-old San Antonio girl who underwent liver transplant surgery died Tuesday at a Dallas hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Raquel Garcia-DeAlba had received a new liver Monday after being in almost 20 hours of surgery at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

She died 12 hours after the surgery, said Mary Plaut, Children's Medical spokeswoman.

Ms. Plaut said Raquel stopped breathing after suffering bleeding in her lungs.

She suffered from alagille's syndrome, a congenital liver disease carrying several abnormalities including an absence of bile ducts in the liver, Ms. Plaut said.

Hobby declares 'Taiwan Day'

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has issued a proclamation declaring Thursday as "Republic of China on Taiwan Day" in Texas.

Hobby, acting in the absence of Gov. Mark White, said the proclamation "highlights the importance of our continuing friendship with the Republic of China on Taiwan."

Thursday is Taiwan's 74th anniversary, according to the proclamation, and Hobby said, "I made a brief visit to the Republic of China on Taiwan and was struck by the similarities of that part of the world to certain parts of our state.

"In addition, I noticed the aggressive economic posture of the people on the island. They are indeed, full training trading partners wth the United States in general, Texas in particular."

Man convicted in officer's death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Jurors must decide whether a former oilfield worker convicted in the shooting death of a rookie Huntsville policeman deserves life in prison or death by injection.

A state district court jury took less than one hour Tuesday to convict Patrick Harvard, 23, in the March 9 slaying of policeman Kevin Williams.

Testimony was scheduled to begin today in the punishment phase of the trial.

Williams, 28, was responding to a domestic disturbance call at the Woodcreek Apartments when he was shot in the forehead with a .22-caliber rifle. Havard admitted he shot the policeman but claimed it was self defense.

Police seek newborn's parents

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Police in this North Texas community are searching for the parents of a newborn baby found in the bed of a pickup truck outside a hospital emergency room.

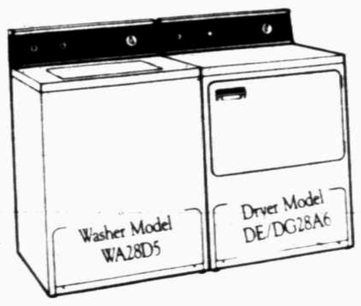

The infant was four hours old when it was discovered lying in the bed of pickup truck wrapped in a motel sheet.

A hospital maintanence man said he heard the baby crying while he made his rounds Monday morning.

Police searched area motels but had no leads by late Tuesday. The baby has been turned over to the Texas Department of Health and Human Resources, which will wait 21 days before putting the child up for adoption.

Frustacis suing doctor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patti Frustaci, who gave birth to America's first septuplets, called the event a catastrophe as she and her husband filed a $2.2 million suit against the doctor and clinic that gave her fertility drugs.

"I cannot begin to put into words how painful it has been to lose four children," she said in a statement.

The suit by Patti and Sam Frustaci of Riverside alleges medical malpractice, four wrongful deaths, loss of earnings and of earning capacity as a result of overprescription of fertility drugs at Tyler Medical Clinic by Dr. Jaroslav Marik.

Farm bill a 'holding pattern'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a 1985 farm bill that even its backers concede is at best "a holding pattern" to support farm income while the agricultural economy finds its way out of a serious slump.

Lawmakers voted 282-141 late Tuesday in favor of the bill, which reauthorizes farm and food programs into 1990 at a projected cost of $141 billion. But they agreed it fails to address many of farming's current problems.

"Our commitment was that we send a message that we cared, that we not reduce drastically their income," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas. "I think we did that."

"I guess you buy time while you address the other issues," de la Garza added. "There are many issues not addressed in the bill" such as unfair trade competition, high interest rates and the overvalued dollar. "I guess it's a holding pattern."

Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., agreed, adding that the bill makes little fundamental change in traditional farm law.

"It keeps the safety net in place," Madigan told reporters. "I think stability is the key word."

This year's farm bill debate has taken place against a backdrop of the most severe farm financial crisis in decades, concentrated in the grain belt of the Midwest. While lawmakers railed against current farm policy when work on the new bill began months ago, in the end they shied from making radical changes.

"All we did was freeze things the way they are," said Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who favored a strict production-control approach that was defeated in several floor votes, and who ultimately voted against the bill. "That is going to spell disaster over the next few years for a lot of farmers in the upper Midwest."

Attention now turns to the Senate, which plans to take up its version of the farm bill next week at the earliest. Agriculture Secretary John Block said the legislation "still has a number of problems" that the administration will try to address as it goes through the Senate and later when the two chambers meet to work out differences between their two versions.

The House bill retains the basic system of crop price-support loans and farm income subsidies that has been in place since 1973. But it does make a concession to the Reagan administration and others who believe U.S. agriculture's only salvation lies in increased exports.

Under the bill, the price-support loan rates that in the past have steadily edged upward could instead be lowered by the secretary of agriculture by up to 25 percent if deemed necessary to restore the international competitiveness of U.S. commodity prices.

But for virtually every dollar farmers lose in the quest for competitive prices, the government would add back a dollar in direct income subsidies, called "deficiency payments." That means federal spending for farm programs, which has hit record levels in the past three years, is unlikely to decline much, if at all.

The measure includes price supports for crops such as wheat, corn, cotton, rice and soybeans; a new soil conservation package; money for agricultural extension and research; and new statutory authority for food stamps and overseas food aid.

As it worked toward completion of the bill on Tuesday, the House also:

— Rejected, 230-195, an amendment offered by Rep. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., that would have abolished the system of tobacco allotments and price-support loans in 1986 and opened tobacco growing to any producer who wanted to plant it. Tobacco-state lawmakers argued that the decades-old allotment system supports a network of small family farmers who depend on tobacco income.

— Turned back, 368-59, a last-ditch attempt by Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., to include in the bill a farmer referendum on mandatory production controls coupled with sharply higher price support levels for major crops.

— Declined, 227-199, to deny federal farm program benefits to producers with 10 or more employees who fail to provide drinking water, wash water and toilets to their field hands. Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., had sought the action to counter what he called administration reluctance to adopt similar regulations.

Polovchak's battle with Soviet parents ends with 18th birthday, U.S. citizenship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet-born teen-ager Walter Polovchak, who chose life in the United States over life with his parents in the Soviet Union, is now an American citizen.

Polovchak took his citizenship oath Tuesday night in a Capitol Hill ceremony.

More than five years ago, Polovchak, then age 12, ran away from home rather than return with his parents to the Soviet Ukraine.

In contrast to his parents, who disliked their brief taste of American life in Chicago, Polovchak said he enjoyed U.S. freedoms.

"I knew what I was doing," Polovchak, now 18, told an audience of about 200 well-wishers. "I'd been living under communism for 12½ years and after six months in a free country, the difference was pretty obvious."

At the ceremony, Polovchak directed a message to his departed parents: "I wish you well and hope someday we can be together again. But it will have to be in the West because as long as I live, I'll never set foot in the Soviet Union."

He was presented with a letter of congratulations from President Reagan, which said, in part, "Our home, America, is your home, and we take you to our hearts with great affection."

The ceremony and birthday reception for the youth, who turned 18 last week, were sponsored by Liberty Institute, a politically conservative group, and co-sponsored by several others, including the Freedom Federation, a coalition of ethnic groups whose members have fled communist-dominated countries.

Julian Kulas, the young man's attorney, said that while Polovchak still lives in Chicago, he wanted to hold the oath-taking in Washington.

Polovchak's citizenship oath was administered by U.S. District Judge Charles P. Kocoras of Chicago. The youth's older sister, Natalie, who also stayed in the United States, held the Bible as he took the oath under the glare of television floodlights.

Polovchak's sister did not go through the court battles he touched off in 1980 because she was old enough legally to decide where she wanted to live.

Polovchak was granted asylum by the Carter administration within days of running away. He later became a ward of the state.

Get the job done

Five months ago Midland County voters, by way of a bond issue election, told county commissioners to spend no more than $3 million to renovate and expand to the extent possible the existing county jail facility, expand Culver Youth Home and order a major study of jail, courthouse and library needs.

Five months later some observers believe commissioners still have not decided whether or not to do that.

That is one of the conclusions that could be drawn since little has been done since the election and what has been done doesn't seem to be what voters had expected. One of those is the latest architect's estimate of cost of doing what voters approved when they went to the polls on May 11. Those estimates for the jail alone almost total the $3 million which was to cover jail, youth home and study.

Certainly the commissioners court can be faulted for coming up with unrealistic figures to begin with. But no matter how they arrived at the initial $2.4 million for jail work, once they accepted that figure and took it before the voters it became theirs. It does not belong to the Citizens Committee or the Chamber of Commerce or the Task Force or the taxpayers.

It may be simplistic for commissioners to tell their architects to go back to the boards and come up with estimates that are more in line with what voters approved but that might be a starting point. As far as Commissioner Durward Wright's module plan is concerned, not enough details are known at this point. If it is considered, however, that should be done in the context of whether such a plan responds to voters' wishes to address the jail problem in the least costly way possible, realizing that the jail renovation-expansion bond issue never was viewed as a permanent solution to the jail problem. And that means it should fit, along with other aspects of the bond issue, within the $3 million limit.

Certainly it should not be considered as a way to get a "foot in the door" as far as a future multi-million-dollar jail located east of Midland is concerned. Too much opposition exists in regard to that location and, as recently as this year, voters turned that idea down. Location could have been at least a small part of the reason. One element that should be considered, in event the idea of purchasing as opposed to leasing a module is contemplated, is the likelihood of resale if and when it no longer was needed.

The dilemma facing commissioners today can be traced to failure to obtain strong community support for past jail bond issue elections and to sufficiently inform voters and taxpayers of the needs. That was followed by a presumption that the issuance of certificates of obligation would not be met with opposition. Whether that could or could not have been foreseen, it did come about. And in preparing for this year's bond election, commissioners once again failed to take the measures necessary to inform voters and gather support. The result was an approaching two-part bond election with both parts almost certain to be defeated. And although hundreds of thousands of dollars had already been spent on architects' fees for a major facility, voters did approve a different approach. We believed it was the best way to go at the time, taking all things into consideration, and we still do.

Most of that is hindsight, of course, but we believe there are important lessons to be learned from it for the future.

As for now, commissioners should get on with the task of doing what voters told them to do. Granted, the small turnout in the May election may not qualify the results as being a "mandate from the people" but those who voted did deliver a message through the polls.

If the Commissioners Court cannot do that, it should ask for the formation of another blue ribbon committee or task force or whatever is needed to help get the job done.

Free-spending officials

It was journalistic genius to put the article on higher taxes for Midland property owners on the same page as an article reporting our irresponsible City Council's three-day retreat at the Inn of the Mountain Gods near Ruidoso, N.M. (Sunday, Sept. 15.)

The Inn of the Mountain Gods is in a very beautiful area — a very expensive resort area. It is not a place I like to think of elected officials spending three days on taxpayers' money!

Surely these imaginative people can assess last year's achievements and plan this year's goals in some less costly setting — perhaps in Texas — possibly even in Midland! Our business community would welcome them and perhaps give discount rates at local motels and restaurants. Also, the problems of our community would be available for first-hand inspection with no mountain views to obliterate them.

Or is it too much to ask that our elected officials show a modest restraint in spending our tax money on themselves while dreaming up ways and means to raise our taxes for next year?

Lifestyle isn't 'normal'

I am sick and tired of perverted, sexually deviant people, so-called Gays, trying to cram down the throats of society the ridiculous notion that they lead a normal lifestyle.

Only 4% of the population is bi- or homosexual, yet these deviants perpetrated between one-third to one-half of all recorded child molestation cases last year. That means these perverts are at least 12 times more likely to molest children. If people could see two men making love, they would not tolerate the present liberal-minded media of today trying to pass this kind of sewer sex off on the God-fearing people of this country.

Sexually-transmitted diseases such as AIDS would never have been brought to the height of awareness that it occupies today had Christian ethics and morals been given the same amount of media hype that these perverted, deviant social fools have received in television and print today.

India developing hydrogen bomb

WASHINGTON — India, which exploded a nuclear bomb 11 years ago, can set off a second one within two months of a decision to do so, and is already storing enough material to build an entire nuclear arsenal.

Jack Anderson

In addition, the Indians appear to be mastering the more sophisticated technique of building a hydrogen bomb.

This is the latest information we've gathered from CIA sources and a recent trip to India. It adds fresh cause for concern to our recent report that Pakistan could also produce a nuclear bomb within a matter of weeks. Our sources say there's no question that India is far ahead of its neighbor and potential adversary.

India's 1974 device, which had about the power of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima, was essentially a plutonium-fission device. Since then, the CIA has received reports — still highly classified — that India was about to detonate another bomb. In early 1976, for example, President Ford was alerted to a report by a "reliable clandestine source" that India would complete its second nuclear bomb within three or four weeks, and would test it underground. But the test was never made.

Although his late mother, Indira, pushed the nuclear program when she governed India, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi was thought unlikely to follow her lead in this area. But he changed his mind earlier this year when he became alarmed at the progress Pakistan was making in nuclear weapons development. On May 4, he stated publicly that Pakistan's "persistent efforts" to join the nuclear club had compelled India to review its nuclear policy.

So far, however, the CIA has had difficulty learning many details of the Indian nuclear program. "Indian security is extremely tight on any aspect of its program relating to nuclear explosives," lamented one top-secret CIA report we've seen. To make matters worse, good satellite photography of India's possible A-test areas has been hampered by poor weather, the report adds.

"September and October of each year are good months climatically for tests in the western desert regions of India," the CIA report stated, adding: "Weather is not a controlling factor in scheduling a test, but the Indians have indicated that they regard it as important."

Although the CIA believes that "worry about potential reactions of other nations" has caused India to hold off on a second test, the top-secret report notes that "in fact, the world response to the first test was less severe than India expected, particularly from Western aid donors."

According to CIA sources, India is simultaneously going ahead with work on a hydrogen bomb. Unlike the crude atomic bomb it detonated in 1974, a hydrogen bomb is a fusion device triggered by an A-bomb, and thus far more complex to develop.

The H-bomb is being built at the Bhabha nuclear research center near Bombay. About three dozen scientists there are trying to refine a process called "inertial confinement fusion." The CIA acknowledges that this process can be used for peaceful purposes, but the expense and concentration of scientists on this project suggest that if it is not already a weapons program it could easily and quickly be converted into one.

Meanwhile, at a reprocessing plant less than a mile from its U.S.-built Tarapur atomic power plant, India since 1983 has been stockpiling separated plutonium that is ideal for weapons. At full capacity, the plant can reprocess 100 tons of spent fuel a year, separating out as much as 150 kilograms of weapons-grade plutonium. Six to 8 kilos are enough for a nuclear bomb.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: "Baksheesh" is the time-honored way of doing business in the Persian Gulf, the necessity of bribing government officials has irritated and sometimes impoverished American businessmen trying to make a buck in the region. Now there are signs that the gulf nations, faced with tighter budgets as a result of the drastic drop in oil revenues, are taking belated steps to crack down on official corruption. In Abu Dhabi, for example, the government has set up an "autonomous auditing authority" to oversee the operations of government departments and companies in which the state has an interest. Old hands are still betting on baksheesh, though.

BYE-BYE BRASS? The Pentagon, whose occupants regularly warn that the sky is falling, is itself sinking slowly into the Potomac mud. The fill dirt brought in when the huge building was built during World War II has become saturated, and some basement corridors have sunk 4 inches under the weight of all that brass and paper. Repairmen are pumping in concrete and more fill dirt to deep the building from sinking out of sight.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Another "near-miss" at Washington's National Airport a couple of weeks ago demonstrated for the nation what everyone who lives here knows as inescapable truth: This government-owned facility on the banks of the Potomac is horribly overused and downright dangerous. And there is one primary reason: The congressmen who regulate it find it just too handy. Not for them the 40-minute trip to Dulles, the underused airport in the Virginia countryside, which could handle the traffic shunted from National. Putting it bluntly: The legislators are gambling with our lives for their convenience.

JAMES RESTON

'Neighbor's' trade plan logical

WASHINGTON — The Canadians, our best and closest friends, have a quiet way of coming up the back porch with sensible and practical suggestions in times of trouble, and they did it the other day when President Reagan needed a helping hand.

James Reston

He was out at a soap factory in Cincinnati peddling his tax-reform plan, which is next year's issue. He was flying around defending and then withdrawing his support of Israel's raid on the PLO headquarters in Tunisia. He was responding to Mikhail Gorbachev's mystifying clarifications of Soviet nuclear policy, and he was tossing Margaret Heckler out of the Cabinet into Ireland, which had done nothing to deserve or provoke her "promotion." In short, Reagan didn't have a very good week.

Amid all this, the prime minister of Canada, Brian Mulroney, came forward with a proposal that, unlike all these other tangles, Reagan might be able to do something about.

"Economics, geography, common sense and the national interest," Mulroney said, "dictate that we try to secure and expand our trade with our closest and largest trading partner."

This is a sentiment right out of Ronald Reagan's Book of Maxims, and the critical words in Mulroney's sentence are "common sense."

Trade between the United States and Canada this year will exceed $120 billion, which is more than U.S. trade with Europe or Japan. It's not exactly equal: About 75 percent of Canada's exports come to the United States, while only about 22 percent of U.S. exports go to Canada.

Mulroney, like Reagan, is a smart Irishman, and it can probably be presumed that, in suggesting a more liberal U.S.-Canadian trade agreement, he was not thinking about Washington's problems or being indifferent to Ottawa's.

There are some awkward problems, as between all neighbors. For example, Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige, one of the most sensible and thoughtful members of the Reagan Cabinet, noted last week that 80 percent of Canada's exports to the United States will come in free at the end of the Tokyo round of tariff reductions, compared with 65 percent of our goods going north. Even among friends, that's some difference.

Specifically, the guys who cut and sell lumber in the United States are not amused by the fact that in the last 10 years the Canadian share of the U.S. softwood lumber market has increased from 18 percent to 34 percent.

And there are other conflicts: over fish and autos and labor unions and the passage of U.S. ships through the ice at the top of the continent and the cultural influence of U.S. television on the Canadian people.

Okay, says the new Canadian prime minister, let's stop fussing about our differences in the press, Congress and the Parliament. Let's get some knowledgeable guys together and show the world what freedom and cooperation can really accomplish.

He's not suggesting a common market, as Reagan did during one of the most hopeful moments of his election campaigns, or even free trade, but a practical analysis of the economies, the hopes and anxieties of our two countries.

Also, Mulroney happens to be talking about one of the few Reagan convictions on foreign policy that has the support of all the political parties in Canada: namely, that the firestorm of trade protectionism in the Congress is a threat to the alliance and the economic order of the world.

Reagan welcomed Mulroney's proposal, but he and his Cabinet are so preoccupied with the problems of outer space and the inner cities, with the budget deficit, the farm deficit in the Middle West and the terror in the Middle East that they haven't had much time to think about our common problems on the northern border with Canada or even of the tragic human and economic problems in Mexico to the south.

Some powerful Canadian forces, of course, are worried about getting too close to the United States. As former Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau once observed, living with the United States is like sleeping with an elephant.

But clarity, like charity, begins at home, and not in dreams of "Star Wars" in the 1990s. If we go on concentrating on what's in Gorbachev's mind or in Reagan's mind at the summit, we could wind up in the cellar.

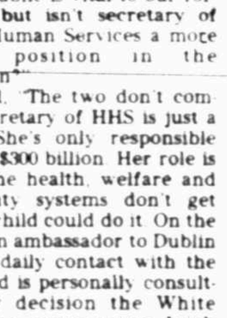

Better to make a fair and liberal trade deal with the Canadians, provided of course that Mulroney begins by instructing the Toronto Blue Jays to stop beating up on the New York Yankees.

ART BUCHWALD

Heckler's job change a promotion

People in Washington were skeptical last week when the White House announced Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler was being "promoted" from a cabinet post to American Ambassador to Ireland.

Art Buchwald

The story circulating for the past month was that the President's chief of staff, Donald Regan, led the "dump Heckler" movement because he was dissatisfied with her performance.

The rumors of the secretary's imminent departure were leaked privately and then denied publicly by almost everyone who worked for the President.

Just as I was about to be swept up in the hysteria, I was calmed down by a White House aide who vigorously denied that there was any effort by the administration to force Mrs. Heckler out of her job.

"This is what really happened," he told me in confidence. "The President has been trying for the better part of a year to find a new ambassador to Ireland. He wanted a person whom he could trust, who had the ability to circulate amongst the ruling classes, but most of all someone who could speak the language. That person would be the President's eyes and ears in the most sensitive diplomatic post in the world."

"I didn't realize Ireland was that important," I said.

The White House aide looked around the room before he whispered. "Everything that floats down from the North Sea eventually winds up on the beaches of Ireland. It's the perfect place to keep track of Irish exports to the United States. But the most strategic value the Dublin spot has for the United States is that it's the ideal location to monitor the BBC."

"I know that being ambassador to the Irish Republic is vital to our foreign policy, but isn't secretary of Health and Human Services a more important position in the administration?"

He laughed. "The two don't compare. The secretary of HHS is just a figurehead. She's only responsible for spending $300 billion. Her role is to see that the health, welfare and Social Security systems don't get fouled up. A child could do it. On the other hand, an ambassador to Dublin has to be in daily contact with the President, and is personally consulted on every decision the White House makes concerning Irish linen."

"If it's such a good job why does it pay $16,000 less than Secretary of HHS?"

"Because it's so much cheaper to live abroad."

"How did the President persuade Mrs. Heckler that he was not getting rid of her?"

"He told her the last thing Pat O'Brien said to him before he died was, 'It's always been my dream to have a woman ambassador to Ireland.'"

"And Heckler bought it?"

"The President reads the line much better than I do. Reagan can be very persuasive when he sets his mind to it. It's my understanding Mrs. Heckler broke into tears when the Chief started talking to her about his relatives who were caught up in the potato famine."

"What else did he tell her?"

"He said, 'Margaret, never forget this. A President has 19 cabinet officers to serve him, but only one ambassador to Ireland.'"

I looked at the White House aide, "Then you are telling me no one in the White House had anything to do with bouncing Mrs. Heckler out of her post."

"We didn't knock her out of a job. All we did is give her a better one. This administration has never stopped anyone from getting ahead."

Standard tax deductions may rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, parting company with President Reagan on some major elements of tax overhaul, has given tentative approval to higher standard deductions while rejecting the $2,000-per-person exemptions recommended by the president.

As with all the decisions the committee is making behind closed doors in the search for a new tax system, the votes taken Tuesday are subject to change later. But for the moment, the panel's plan would:

— Raise the standard deductions, which are used to reduce the taxable income of people who do not itemize, significantly higher than the president recommended.

Under present law, the deductions are expected to be $3,670 in 1986 for couples filing joint returns, and $2,480 for single people and heads of household, who usually are divorced women with children. The committee voted to raise those figures to $5,950 for couples, $4,775 for heads of household and $3,525 for single people. A taxpayer would get an additional $500 deduction for each dependent plus an extra $500 for being over 65 or blind.

— Raise the personal exemption, now $1,080 for 1986, to $1,500, rather than the $2,000 figure that Reagan aides have called a non-negotiable part of his proposal. Reagan has labled this provision "pro-family."

The committee rejected amendments by Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., that would have substituted Reagan's $2,000 exemption. The key vote was a 24-12 split against the president's plan.

— Increase the value of the earned-income credit, which benefits working families with children, and extend it to more families.

— Repeal, as Reagan recommended, the special deduction of up to $3,000 a year for two-earner couples. The deduction is designed to offset part of the "marriage penalty," which requires many such couples to pay more taxes than if they were single. Reagan says the changes in rates, standard deductions and exemptions would make this deduction unnecessary.

Congress protests rebuff of World Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional critics of President Reagan's decision to limit U.S. recognition of World Court rulings are searching for ways to block the move, but concede their chances of prevailing are slim.

So far, the opposition has taken a largely symbolic form, with the introduction in both the House and Senate of non-binding resolutions deploring the administration's unexpected action and reaffirming support for "the international rule of law and the role of the International Court of Justice."

But even that measure faces an uncertain future in the Republican-controlled Senate, a source said Tuesday.

In the interim, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said he would press for "any and all hearings that could possibly be held" to rally opposition, and a request for hearings also is possible in the Senate. If little else is accomplished, he said, that would "keep the issue alive so that a future administration will reconsider."

In addition to hearings, lawmakers are researching the possiblity of filing a court suit to block the Reagan decision that the United States will no longer agree to be bound by World Court rulings. And, with Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., in the lead, they are considering drafting legislation that would accomplish the same goal.

But other officials, speaking only on condition of anonymity, quickly added that the prospects of winning a court suit appear slim. They pointed to an unsuccessful effort led six years ago by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who had sought a court ruling to block then-President Carter's abrogation of a treaty with Taiwan.

Corps won't release gay Marine of the Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 1984 Marine of the Year battling the Corps over a request for an honorable discharge on grounds of homosexuality said life as a gay leatherneck has gotten tough.

"It's getting harder and harder to conform to their standards because I'm on my own, not living on a base," said Sgt. Rolf Lindblom, who has spent five years in the Marine Corps, including stints in Okinawa and South Carolina.

"I'm 25 now, I'm getting older. I'm in LA too, not South Carolina. There's nothing to do in South Carolina, less overseas," Lindblom said.

Lindblom's superiors want him to prove that he is homosexual to qualify for the discharge, but he says such a disclosure could end in a court martial that would stain his service record and reputation.

"What they're asking is for me to make official statements that I have practiced homosexuality and committed sodomy," he said Tuesday. "If I were to make those statements, they could court martial me and destroy the character of my discharge."

Lindblom, 1984 Marine of the Year at the U.S. Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Center here, told his superiors in July that he was a homosexual and wanted to be honorably discharged.

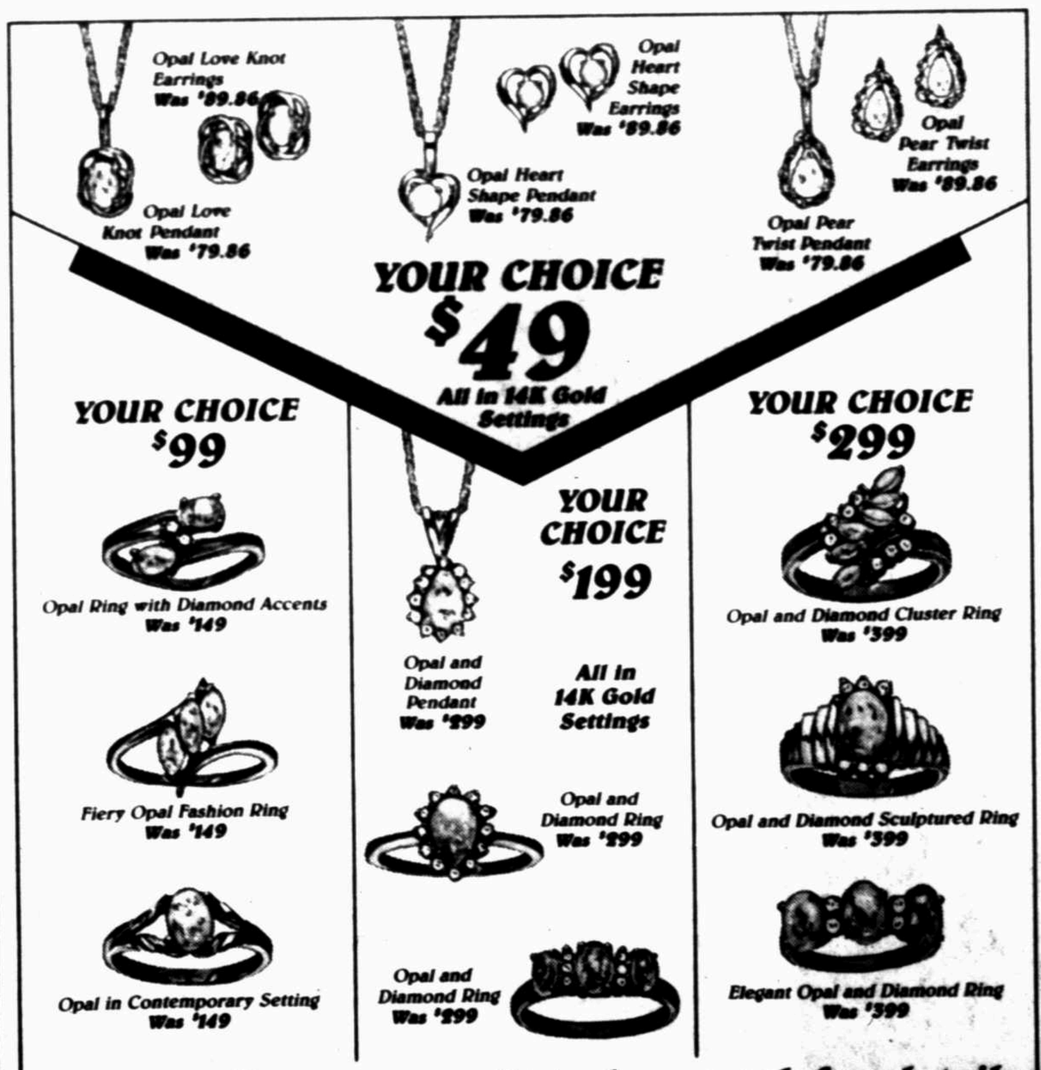

"Marine Corps and Navy regulations state that homosexuals will be given honorable discharges unless they are prosecuted and found guilty of a violation of our regulations," said Maj. Bill Wood, 4th Marine Division spokesman.

Lindblom said he re-enlisted when his first tour of duty ended because he had no trouble disguising his homosexuality.

RAIN

The annual Midland County Farm Tour, scheduled to begin today at Bray's cotton farm, was cancelled. She said Midland County Agricultural Agents Earnest Kiker and Alan McWilliams were trying to get Charlie Welch's horse training unstuck. Welch had hauled a couple of Clydesdales, large draft houses, for the tour. They were put in the barn.

"It's been raining out here all night," Mrs. Bray said.

Surprisingly, the heavy rainfall this morning left most Midlanders unaffected, although construction and roadwork were temporarily suspended.

"We're temporariiy shut down," said Tommy Jones, assistant director of aviation at Midland Regional Air Terminal. Jones was referring to construction projects at the airport and not the flow of daily flights. "We're stil, hauling rock but we can't do any concrete pouring."

A spokesman for the City of Midland also stated that the rain would "hold things up for awhile."

Becky Ferguson, a spokeswoman for the Midland Independent School District reported that "everyone was in the buildings," and that she had not heard of any problems so far.

The Texas Department of Public Safety had no reports of weather-related traffic incidents.

Midland police reported, however, that an MISD employee was injured in a mid-morning traffic accident at the intersection of Front and Carver streets.

Speech pathologist Mona Gail Gibson was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital following the collision which occurred about 10:30 a.m. Her condition and the extent of injuries were unknown at presstime.

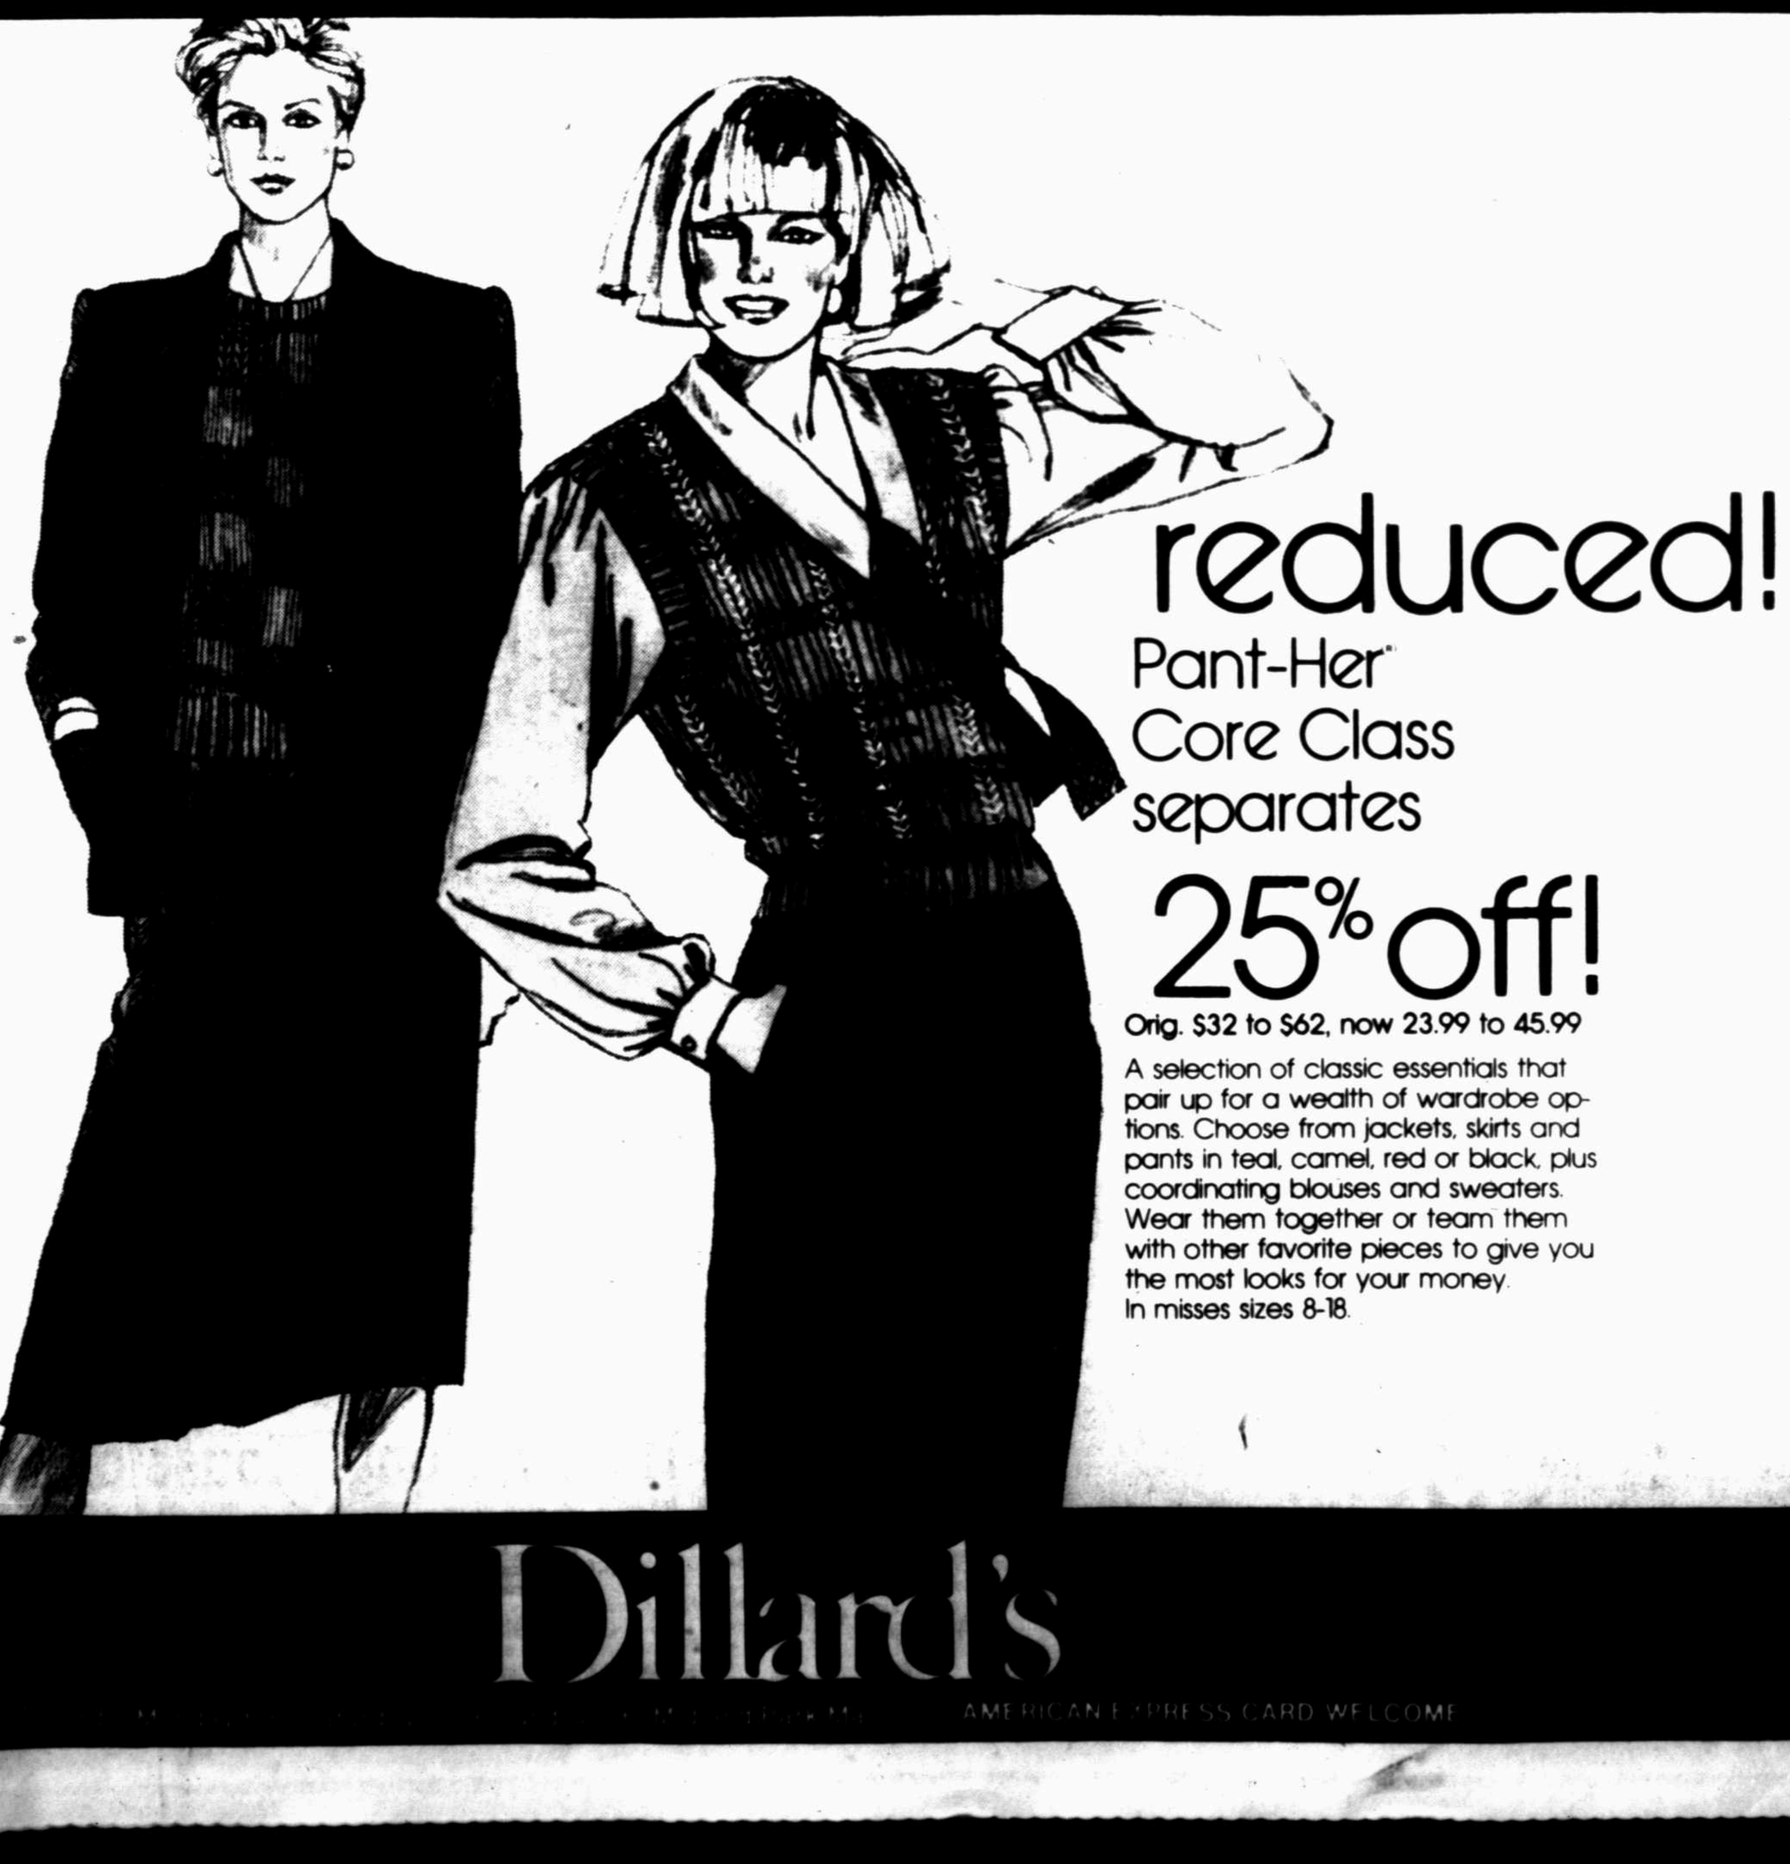

Unofficial police reports also stated, that "cars were all over the place" at the usually-inundated intersections of Wadley and Midkiff and Wadley and Garfield Streets.

Police said one car was found under the Big Springs underpass, but was unoccupied. Another vehicle, with "water up to the windows," was found near Illinois and Andrews Highway and police discussed the possibility of closing off that street temporarily.

At least one downtown business reported minor flooding as the result of the rainfall. Mike McMahan, owner of Wall Street Bar and Grill, said the two-to-three inches of water that covered the floor would not have an effect on the restaurant's business. There were indications other building may have received minor water damage, as well.

STATE

The onslaught of Hurricane Waldo near the west-central Mexican coast prompted a flash flood watch for Southwest Texas through tonight, with rains between 2 and 4 inches possible in the Trans Pecos region.

Jays' Stieb beats Royals when it counts

KC has 10-game playoff losing streak

TORONTO (AP) — It's almost a Toronto trademark. Get the early lead and coast to victory.

That formula — which saw them fashion a 62-20 record when they scored first — worked again Tuesday night when the Blue Jays got all their runs in the first four innings of a 6-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals in the first game of the American League playoffs.

Only this time there was one difference. This time right-hander Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays' best pitcher, was the beneficiary of Toronto's outburst.

"It felt good to get some runs tonight," Stieb said. "I had said that's all it would take. I was glad to see the runs come early."

It was easy to understand Stieb's relief. He went 0-3 against the Royals during the regular season, and that figured heavily in the 14-13 record he posted despite leading the league with a 2.48 earned run average.

"Everything was going well tonight," Stieb said. "I had good control and my fastball was moving well. I threw my changeup for strikes."

STIEB'S CONTROL, insisted batterymate Ernie Whitt, was the key ingredient in an eight-inning, three-hit performance.

"We kept the first two hitters (Lonnie Smith and Willie Wilson) off base and that's what we need to do," Whitt said. "That way, we don't have George (Brett) up there with men on."

That analysis was borne out by the fact that Smith and Wilson were a combined 1-for-8 and off the bases for two of Brett's three hits.

The Royals, who will try to even the series today in Game 2 at 2:05 p.m. CDT, were one of only two teams (the Boston Red Sox were the other) to hold an edge over the Blue Jays during the regular season, winning seven of 12 games.

But if the Royals, who managed just five hits, are going to turn the best-of-seven series around, they are going to have to snap a 10-game post-season losing streak that dates back to the final two games of the 1980 World Series.

"I don't think the first game is as important as if it was a five-game series," said Brett. "I think you can bounce back with seven.

"Nobody is hanging their head. I think we can bounce back if we can win tomorrow. If we don't do that, we've got a long road ahead of us."

The Blue Jays, who were only 24-28 against left-handers this season, jumped on Charlie Leibrandt for two runs in the second and chased him with the bases loaded and nobody out in the third.

All three baserunners eventually scored, and Leibrandt, 17-9 and 3-0 against Toronto, was a beaten pitcher.

"I don't think Leibrandt's stuff was bad," Manager Dick Howser said. "They got some seeing-eye hits. They just pinged him to death, that's all."

Howser said he may bring Leibrandt back as early as Saturday because he pitched to only 15 batters.

The Blue Jays got two runs in the second.

Jesse Barfield started the rally with a single and moved to second base when Leibrandt hit Willie Upshaw with a pitch. Smith then dropped Garth Iorg's routine fly to left, but Barfield, heading back to second, was forced at third.

Whitt followed with a ground single to right, scoring Upshaw and sending Iorg to third. Tony Fernandez singled Iorg home.

"The record shows that we haven't fared as well against lefties," Whitt said. "The key to the series is Cliff Johnson. We need him in the lineup and we need him swinging a hot bat."

JOHNSON, THE Blue Jays' designated hitter, started a three-run third with a double that rolled to the center-field wall. Leibrandt walked Barfield and Upshaw singled to load the bases with nobody out.

Steve Farr relieved Leibrandt — making his earliest exit of the season — and Rance Mulliniks, batting for Iorg, singled Johnson home. Farr walked Whitt on a 3-1 pitch to force Barfield across and Fernandez hit a sacrifice fly to score Upshaw and make it 5-0.

"I don't know what it was," said Leibrandt, whose shortest previous stint this season was 2⅓ innings. "I don't know if it was bad location or what, but I didn't make enough good pitches."

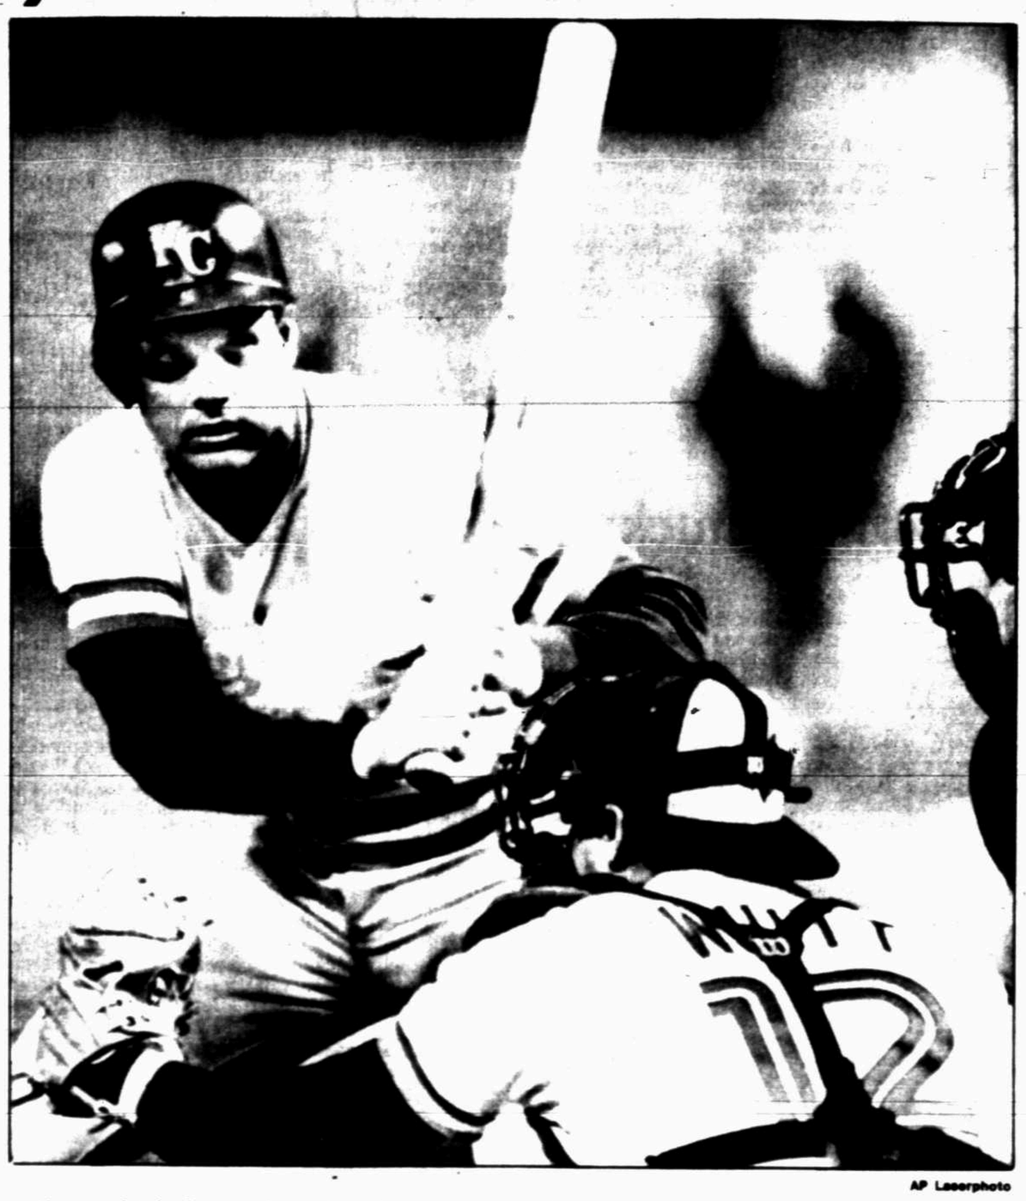

Leibrandt said the fact that the Royals were never in the game would make it easy to forget. But the Blue Jays, playing before an Exhibition Stadium crowd of 39,115 in the first AL playoff game ever staged in Canada, wanted to make it a night to remember.

"It's important for us to win this first game and also to win at home," Whitt said. "This gives us confidence that, yes, we can hit left-handers.

They have a chance to prove it all over again today when Bud Black, 10-15, takes the mound for Kansas City in a battle of southpaws with Toronto's Jimmy Key, 14-6.

The Blue Jays scored their final run in the fourth, thanks to some baserunning brashness by George Bell.

After Bell opened the inning with a single, Johnson hit a routine grounder to short. Royals shortstop Buddy Biancalana fielded the ball and threw to first baseman Steve Balboni to retire Johnson. But Bell rounded second on the play and dashed toward third, and when Balboni's throw back across the diamond sailed over Brett's head for an error, Bell was awarded home.

Kansas City's George Brett doesn't seem to believe this strikeout call while batting against Toronto's Dave Stieb in the opening game of the American League Championship Series.

Lasorda jokes, Herzog worries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals and Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers, two of baseball's more successful managers, seemed back in their element as their clubs prepared to open the National League playoffs tonight.

"I think it's going to be a tremendous game and a tremendous series," the ebullient Lasorda said on the eve of the best-of-seven series.

"I think of the thousands who'll be in the ballpark, the millions watching on TV, I don't think they're going to find this boring," Lasorda said. "It's two teams that can do a lot of things."

The two managers, their preparations complete, were in a jovial mood when they crossed paths Tuesday evening at an informal press conference at Dodger Stadium.

Herzog gleefully grabbed the Dodger manager and yelled, "How come you got to work out at 5 o'clock? I wanted to work out at 5 o'clock. Why'd we have to work out at 6?"

Herzog then suggested that he and Lasorda adjourn to one of the Dodger manager's favorite restaurants. As Herzog was looking for the door leading back to the Cardinals' clubhouse, he asked Lasorda, "How do you get out of here?"

Lasorda grinned and pointed, saying, "Right back through there, around that way ... and onto Interstate 5."

Herzog, who has guided St. Louis to the playoffs for the second time in four years, was teasing about the Cardinal workout schedule, but he was serious in questioning why the two playoff games here are scheduled to start in the California twilight.

"It seems a shame to me that you have to come out to play at 5:30," he said. "I know why it's that way, because of TV. But this is not a good ballpark to play in at that time.

"You work your tail off to get here, then you have to play at that time. I don't think it's fair."

Lasorda, who took the Dodgers to division titles three times in five years, scoffed at Herzog's complaint that hitters are at at disadvantage in the dimness of twilight.

"I'd feel bad if they were playing at 8 and we were playing at 5," he said. "But it's the same time for both teams, the same mound, the same plate. I've seen games here at 5 when pitchers got wracked up pretty good."

John Tudor, 21-8 with a 1.93 earned-run average and a major league-leading 10 shutouts, was Herzog's choice to pitch against the Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela, 17-10 with a 2.45 ERA, in the first game.

Tudor, a 31-year-old lefty, stumbled to a 1-7 start, but has been on a roll since by winning 20 of his last 21. The only blotch during that streak was a 3-0 loss to Valenzuela and the Dodgers on July 20.

Valenzuela, on the other hand, has been in a slump, posting just one victory since Aug. 26.

"Fernando hasn't had as much of a problem as people think," Lasorda said. "He lost some leads, but he was just missing with his pitches. He's the kind of guy you want out there. He's been though big ball games and he has that poise."

Herzog ended two days of speculation by saying that rookie speedster Vince Coleman, who stole 110 bases during the regular season, would remain in the starting lineup. Herzog had talked of perhaps starting Tito Landrum in place of Coleman, who has been in a batting slump and is yet to show an ability to hit Valenzuela.

"Yeah, I toyed with that idea," Herzog said. "He (Coleman) had been in a little slump, but he had five or six hits the last couple of games he played, and he went 1-for-8 against Fernando this year, and we've got a lot of others who did worse."

Herzog said Cesar Cedeno, who pulled a muscle in his side last Saturday, was expected to start against the Dodgers.

National media fights for space in Memorial box

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

When Oklahoma and Texas wage their annual war in the Cotton Bowl, it's usually referred to as the Battle of the Red River, that snakelike ribbon of cimmarron which winds its way between the two states.

The way Midland Lee-Odessa Permian is piquing national curiosity, somehow it seems appropriate that the neighboring cities soon investigate the possibilities of rerouting the Rio Grande or Pecos River so that the biannual high school showdown would have a suitable geographical bone of contention.

However, the woeful lack a natural barrier between the cities seems to have gone unnoticed as the frenzy mounts for Thursday night's 7:30 kickoff at Memorial Stadium.

Time-Life, who also publish Sports Illustrated, will cover this mesquite country classic.

The New York Times inquired in disbelief when it learned a National League playoff game would be preempted for a high school football game.

The Dallas Times-Herald will have a reporter and photographer here and then, the other side of the coin, there are those who want to come but couldn't be accommodated. And then there are the ingrates, those "lucky" enough to be granted press credentials, but are unhappy over the location.

AND IF Midland Schools Athletic Director Gil Bartosh thought he had solved the ticket problem by throwing open season tickets on a first-come, first serve basis as long ago as last summer, he has discovered otherwise in the last few days.

Even TV coverage, which was expected to placate disappointed fans, hasn't quelled the savage beast turned away at the ticket office.

"We've had some real hostile calls over the fact that no tickets were saved for the general public for sale the week of the game." Bartosh admitted.

The Midland Athletic Office has been kept busy this week answering the phone inquiries of Odessa Permian fans lucky enough to draw tickets for the game. "They want to know where the tickets are located....on the 10, 20, or 40 yard line," says MAO secretary Janelle Dozier. "I usually tell them, if they complain about the location, they should feel thankful they have any tickets at all."

BARTOSH informs that requests from coaches and administrators, not to mention "old friends," have had to be turned down, "there just aren't any tickets left. It's not like the playoffs where you have some flexibility because of larger stadiums."

One empty seat for Thursday

"If our kids aren't important to us, we have no hope for the future. They need to learn how to win and lose before they face a real crisis."
Gil Kenney, 1984

There will be one empty seat at Memorial Stadium Thursday night when Midland Lee meets Odessa Permian and I wish it wasn't so. I wish Gil Kenney could be there with the rest of us.

God's angels came and took Gil from us last Saturday and this city feels the loss. You don't replace a Gil Kenney, but we hold fast to his example for what is important in our temporary world.

To me, Gil Kenney represents what is good about this world. He knew how to give of himself. He knew how to love the kids, his own and yours, in this community and he devoted his life to seeing that they had an opportunity to compete and grow.

When there was a job that needed to be done in Midland, Gil was one of the first you called. He could bring opposing factions together and make it work. He rolled up his sleeves and did a lot of the dirty work no one else would do.

Gil was serving as president of the Midland Lee Booster Club when he died, but that was just the tip of this man, who knew no real school or city boundaries.

He served for years as commissioner of junior baseball. He helped create the Greater Midland Football League. If there was a kid who needed help in participating, he was always there. It didn't matter what side of town he lived in. He was much more than Midland Lee. He was what we want Midland to be.

He never asked or sought fanfare for himself. His concern was the kids. Gil wanted the kids to have the best facilities — the best of everything. Gil thought the kids deserved whatever we could give them. His behind-the-scenes work has made Midland a better place to live.

I know this all sounds like a character out of some fairy tale, but if you knew Gil, you know it's the truth. You don't find a Gil Kenney every day and that's a shame, too. Midlanders will never know all the things Gil did for this community. Most of it went unnoticed by the masses, but the result was felt and we have the example for future growth.

The last thing Gil Kenney would want is to be a disruptive force during this key football week. He would want the game to go on and for the Permian-Lee legend to grow.

But his untimely death is a reminder that Lee-Permian is just another football game. His death returns us to the stark reality of our fleeting presence in this world. But we will never lose the intensity of life because of men like Gil Kenney.

Our comprehension of heaven is limited at best, but somehow, I feel like Gil Kenney will be with us Thursday. We'll never lose what he has given us.

Thursday night, the Lee-Permian legend will grow — and Gil would have wanted that.

The annual Midland County Farm Tour, scheduled to begin today at Bray's cotton farm, was cancelled. She said Midland County Agricultural Agents Earnest Kiker and Alan McWilliams were trying to get Charlie Welch's horse training unstuck. Welch had hauled a couple of Clydesdales, large draft houses, for the tour. They were put in the barn.

"It's been raining out here all night," Mrs. Bray said.

Surprisingly, the heavy rainfall this morning left most Midlanders unaffected, although construction and roadwork were temporarily suspended.

"We're temporarily shut down," said Tommy Jones, assistant director of aviation at Midland Regional Air Terminal. Jones was referring to construction projects at the airport and not the flow of daily flights. "We're stil, hauling rock but we can't do any concrete pouring."

A spokesman for the City of Midland also stated that the rain would "hold things up for awhile."

Becky Ferguson, a spokeswoman for the Midland Independent School District reported that "everyone was in the buildings," and that she had not heard of any problems so far.

The Texas Department of Public Safety had no reports of weather-related traffic incidents.

Midland police reported, however, that an MISD employee was injured in a mid-morning traffic accident at the intersection of Front and Carver streets.

Speech pathologist Mona Gail Gibson was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital following the collision which occurred about 10:30 a.m. Her condition and the extent of injuries were unknown at presstime.

Unofficial police reports also stated, that "cars were all over the place" at the usually-inundated intersections of Wadley and Midkiff and Wadley and Garfield Streets.

Police said one car was found under the Big Springs underpass, but was unoccupied. Another vehicle, with "water up to the windows," was found near Illinois and Andrews Highway and police discussed the possibility of closing off that street temporarily.

At least one downtown business reported minor flooding as the result of the rainfall. Mike McMahan, owner of Wall Street Bar and Grill, said the two-to-three inches of water that covered the floor would not have an effect on the restaurant's business. There were indications other building may have received minor water damage, as well.

STATE

The onslaught of Hurricane Waldo near the west-central Mexican coast prompted a flash flood watch for Southwest Texas through tonight, with rains between 2 and 4 inches possible in the Trans Pecos region.

Jays' Stieb beats Royals when it counts

KC has 10-game playoff losing streak

TORONTO (AP) — It's almost a Toronto trademark. Get the early lead and coast to victory.

That formula — which saw them fashion a 62-20 record when they scored first — worked again Tuesday night when the Blue Jays got all their runs in the first four innings of a 6-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals in the first game of the American League playoffs.

Only this time there was one difference. This time right-hander Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays' best pitcher, was the beneficiary of Toronto's outburst.

"It felt good to get some runs tonight," Stieb said. "I had said that's all it would take. I was glad to see the runs come early."

It was easy to understand Stieb's relief. He went 0-3 against the Royals during the regular season, and that figured heavily in the 14-13 record he posted despite leading the league with a 2.48 earned run average.

"Everything was going well tonight," Stieb said. "I had good control and my fastball was moving well. I threw my changeup for strikes."

STIEB'S CONTROL, insisted batterymate Ernie Whitt, was the key ingredient in an eight-inning, three-hit performance.

"We kept the first two hitters (Lonnie Smith and Willie Wilson) off base and that's what we need to do," Whitt said. "That way, we don't have George (Brett) up there with men on."

That analysis was borne out by the fact that Smith and Wilson were a combined 1-for-8 and off the bases for two of Brett's three hits.

The Royals, who will try to even the series today in Game 2 at 2:05 p.m. CDT, were one of only two teams (the Boston Red Sox were the other) to hold an edge over the Blue Jays during the regular season, winning seven of 12 games.

But if the Royals, who managed just five hits, are going to turn the best-of-seven series around, they are going to have to snap a 10-game post-season losing streak that dates back to the final two games of the 1980 World Series.

"I don't think the first game is as important as if it was a five-game series," said Brett. "I think you can bounce back with seven.

"Nobody is hanging their head. I think we can bounce back if we can win tomorrow. If we don't do that, we've got a long road ahead of us."

The Blue Jays, who were only 24-26 against left-handers this season, jumped on Charlie Leibrandt for two runs in the second and chased him with the bases loaded and nobody out in the third.

All three baserunners eventually scored, and Leibrandt, 17-9 and 3-0 against Toronto, was a beaten pitcher.

"I don't think Leibrandt's stuff was bad," Manager Dick Howser said. "They got some seeing-eye hits. They just pinged him to death, that's all."

Howser said he may bring Leibrandt back as early as Saturday because he pitched to only 15 batters.

The Blue Jays got two runs in the second.

Jesse Barfield started the rally with a single and moved to second base when Leibrandt hit Willie Upshaw with a pitch. Smith then dropped Garth Iorg's routine fly to left, but Barfield, heading back to second, was forced at third.

Whitt followed with a ground single to right, scoring Upshaw and sending Iorg to third. Tony Fernandez singled Iorg home.

"The record shows that we haven't fared as well against lefties," Whitt said. "The key to the series is Cliff Johnson. We need him in the lineup and we need him swinging a hot bat."

JOHNSON, THE Blue Jays' designated hitter, started a three-run third with a double that rolled to the center-field wall. Leibrandt walked Barfield and Upshaw singled to load the bases with nobody out.

Steve Farr relieved Leibrandt — making his earliest exit of the season — and Rance Mulliniks, batting for Iorg, singled Johnson home. Farr walked Whitt on a 3-1 pitch to force Barfield across and Fernandez hit a sacrifice fly to score Upshaw and make it 5-0.

"I don't know what it was," said Leibrandt, whose shortest previous stint this season was 2⅓ innings. "I don't know if it was bad location or what, but I didn't make enough good pitches."

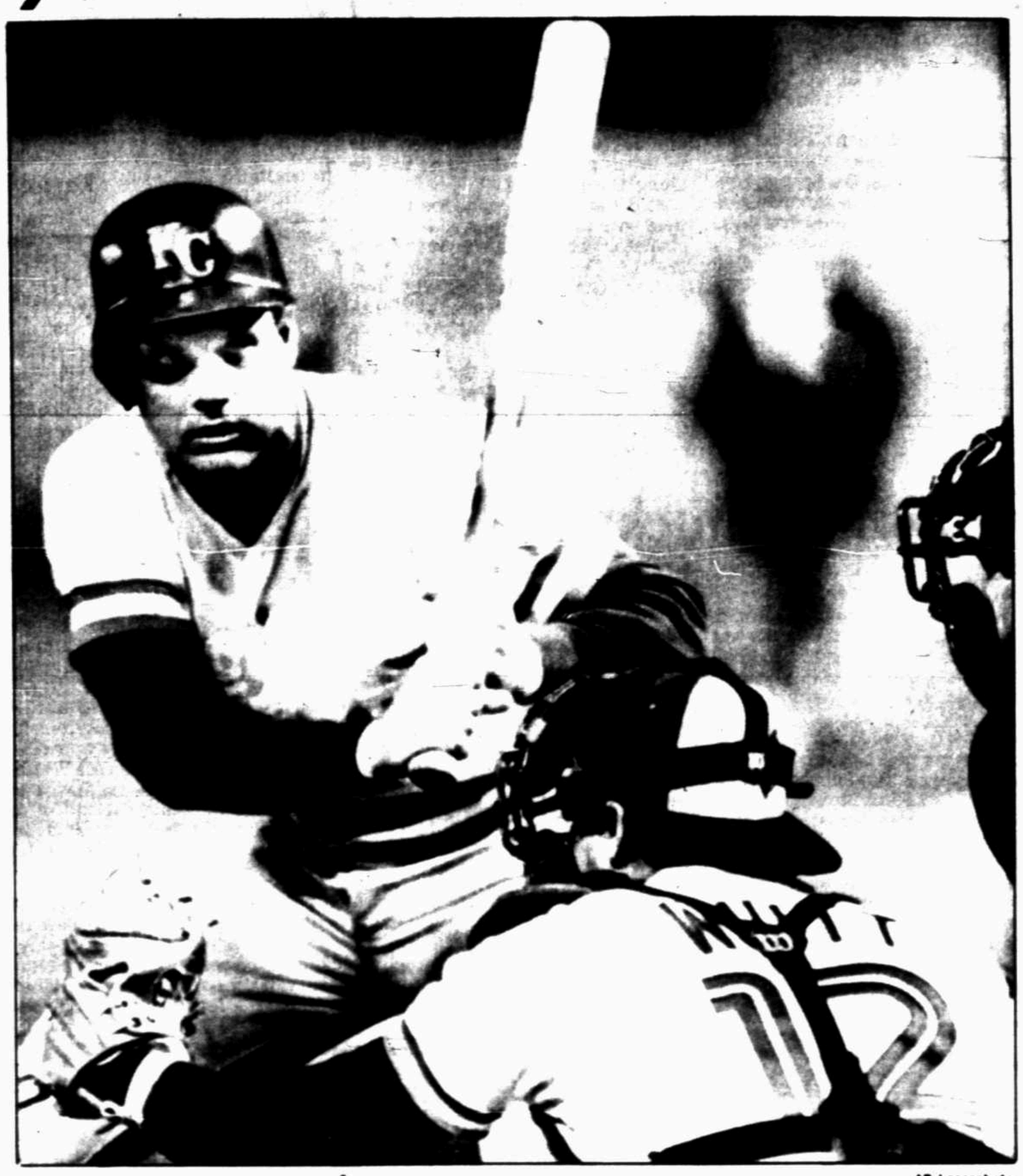

Leibrandt said the fact that the Royals were never in the game would make it easy to forget. But the Blue Jays, playing before an Exhibition Stadium crowd of 39,115 in the first AL playoff game ever staged in Canada, wanted to make it a night to remember.

"It's important for us to win this first game and also to win at home," Whitt said. "This gives us confidence that, yes, we can hit left-handers.

They have a chance to prove it all over again today when Bud Black, 10-15, takes the mound for Kansas City in a battle of southpaws with Toronto's Jimmy Key, 14-6.

The Blue Jays scored their final run in the fourth, thanks to some baserunning brashness by George Bell.

After Bell opened the inning with a single, Johnson hit a routine grounder to short. Royals shortstop Buddy Biancalana fielded the ball and threw to first baseman Steve Balboni to retire Johnson. But Bell rounded second on the play and dashed toward third, and when Balboni's throw back across the diamond sailed over Brett's head for an error, Bell was awarded home.

Kansas City's George Brett doesn't seem to believe this strikeout call while batting against Toronto's Dave Stieb in the opening game of the American League Championship Series.

Lasorda jokes, Herzog worries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals and Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers, two of baseball's more successful managers, seemed back in their element as their clubs prepared to open the National League playoffs tonight.

"I think it's going to be a tremendous game and a tremendous series," the ebullient Lasorda said on the eve of the best-of-seven series.

"I think of the thousands who'll be in the ballpark, the millions watching on TV, I don't think they're going to find this boring," Lasorda said. "It's two teams that can do a lot of things."

The two managers, their preparations complete, were in a jovial mood when they crossed paths Tuesday evening at an informal press conference at Dodger Stadium.

Herzog gleefully grabbed the Dodger manager and yelled, "How come you got to work out at 5 o'clock? I wanted to work out at 5 o'clock. Why'd we have to work out at 6?"

Herzog then suggested that he and Lasorda adjourn to one of the Dodger manager's favorite restaurants. As Herzog was looking for the door leading back to the Cardinals' clubhouse, he asked Lasorda, "How do you get out of here?"

Lasorda grinned and pointed, saying, "Right back through there, around that way ... and onto Interstate 5."

Herzog, who has guided St. Louis to the playoffs for the second time in four years, was teasing about the Cardinal workout schedule, but he was serious in questioning why the two playoff games here are scheduled to start in the California twilight.

"It seems a shame to me that you have to come out to play at 5:30," he said. "I know why it's that way, because of TV. But this is not a good ballpark to play in at that time.

"You work your tail off to get here, then you have to play at that time. I don't think it's fair."

Lasorda, who took the Dodgers to division titles three times in five years, scoffed at Herzog's complaint that hitters are at at disadvantage in the dimness of twilight.

"I'd feel bad if they were playing at 8 and we were playing at 5," he said. "But it's the same time for both teams, the same mound, the same plate. I've seen games here at 5 when pitchers got wracked up pretty good."

John Tudor, 21-8 with a 1.93 earned-run average and a major league-leading 10 shutouts, was Herzog's choice to pitch against the Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela, 17-10 with a 2.45 ERA, in the first game.

Tudor, a 31-year-old lefty, stumbled to a 1-7 start, but has been on a roll since by winning 20 of his last 21. The only blotch during that streak was a 3-0 loss to Valenzuela and the Dodgers on July 20.

Valenzuela, on the other hand, has been in a slump, posting just one victory since Aug. 26.

"Fernando hasn't had as much of a problem as people think," Lasorda said. "He lost some leads, but he was just missing with his pitches. He's the kind of guy you want out there. He's been though big ball games and he has that poise."

Herzog ended two days of speculation by saying that rookie speedster Vince Coleman, who stole 110 bases during the regular season, would remain in the starting lineup. Herzog had talked of perhaps starting Tito Landrum in place of Coleman, who has been in a batting slump and is yet to show an ability to hit Valenzuela.

"Yeah, I toyed with that idea," Herzog said. "He (Coleman) had been in a little slump, but he had five or six hits the last couple of games he played, and he went 1-for-8 against Fernando this year, and we've got a lot of others who did worse."

Herzog said Cesar Cedeno, who pulled a muscle in his side last Saturday, was expected to start against the Dodgers.

Los Angeles' Bill Madlock, left, and St. Louis' Ozzie Smith share a joke before getting down to serious business tonight.

National media fights for space in Memorial box

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

When Oklahoma and Texas wage their annual war in the Cotton Bowl, it's usually referred to as the Battle of the Red River, that snakelike ribbon of cimmarron which winds its way between the two states.

The way Midland Lee-Odessa Permian is piquing national curiosity, somehow it seems appropriate that the neighboring cities soon investigate the possibilities of rerouting the Rio Grande or Pecos River so that the biannual high school showdown would have a suitable geographical bone of contention.

However, the woeful lack a natural barrier between the cities seems to have gone unnoticed as the frenzy mounts for Thursday night's 7:30 kickoff at Memorial Stadium.

Time-Life, who also publish Sports Illustrated, will cover this mesquite country classic.

The New York Times inquired in disbelief when it learned a National League playoff game would be preempted for a high school football game.

The Dallas Times-Herald will have a reporter and photographer here and then, the other side of the coin, there are those who want to come but couldn't be accommodated. And then there are the ingrates, those "lucky" enough to be granted press credentials, but are unhappy over the location.

AND IF Midland Schools Athletic Director Gil Bartosh thought he had solved the ticket problem by throwing open season tickets on a first-come, first serve basis as long ago as last summer, he has discovered otherwise in the last few days.

Even TV coverage, which was expected to placate disappointed fans, hasn't quelled the savage beast turned away at the ticket office.

"We've had some real hostile calls over the fact that no tickets were saved for the general public for sale the week of the game." Bartosh admitted.

The Midland Athletic Office has been kept busy this week answering the phone inquiries of Odessa Permian fans lucky enough to draw tickets for the game. "They want to know where the tickets are located....on the 10, 20, or 40 yard line," says MAO secretary Janelle Dozier. "I usually tell them, if they complain about the location, they should feel thankful they have any tickets at all."

BARTOSH informs that requests from coaches and administrators, not to mention "old friends," have had to be turned down, "there just aren't any tickets left. It's not like the playoffs where you have some flexibility because of larger stadiums."

One empty seat for Thursday

"If our kids aren't important to us, we have no hope for the future. They need to learn how to win and lose before they face a real crisis."
Gil Kenney, 1984

There will be one empty seat at Memorial Stadium Thursday night when Midland Lee meets Odessa Permian and I wish it wasn't so. I wish Gil Kenney could be there with the rest of us.

God's angels came and took Gil from us last Saturday and this city feels the loss. You don't replace a Gil Kenney, but we hold fast to his example for what is important in our temporary world.

To me, Gil Kenney represents what is good about this world. He knew how to give of himself. He knew how to love the kids, his own and yours, in this community and he devoted his life to seeing that they had an opportunity to compete and grow.

When there was a job that needed to be done in Midland, Gil was one of the first you called. He could bring opposing factions together and make it work. He rolled up his sleeves and did a lot of the dirty work no one else would do.

Gil was serving as president of the Midland Lee Booster Club when he died, but that was just the tip of this man, who knew no real school or city boundaries.

He served for years as commissioner of junior baseball. He helped create the Greater Midland Football League. If there was a kid who needed help in participating, he was always there. It didn't matter what side of town he lived in. He was much more than Midland Lee. He was what we want Midland to be.

He never asked or sought fanfare for himself. His concern was the kids. Gil wanted the kids to have the best facilities — the best of everything. Gil thought the kids deserved whatever we could give them. His behind-the-scenes work has made Midland a better place to live.

I know this all sounds like a character out of some fairy tale, but if you knew Gil, you know it's the truth. You don't find a Gil Kenney every day and that's a shame, too. Midlanders will never know all the things Gil did for this community. Most of it went unnoticed by the masses, but the result was felt and we have the example for future growth.

The last thing Gil Kenney would want is to be a disruptive force during this key football week. He would want the game to go on and for the Permian-Lee legend to grow.

But his untimely death is a reminder that Lee-Permian is just another football game. His death returns us to the stark reality of our fleeting presence in this world. But we will never lose the intensity of life because of men like Gil Kenney.

Our comprehension of heaven is limited at best, but somehow, I feel like Gil Kenney will be with us Thursday. We'll never lose what he has given us.

Thursday night, the Lee-Permian legend will grow — and Gil would have wanted that.

PRESS BOX

The only tickets left are student tickets and even they present a problem. "A lot of adults try to get in on student tickets and that only proves embarrassing to them and to us when we have to turn them away," says Gil.

And if the crush for space is bad outside in the stands, it's worse than squeezing a 12EE foot into a 4B shoe in the press box. And a lot of people are unhappy.

Midland, San Angelo, Odessa and Lubbock newspapers will have reporters in the press box, but all other newspapers will wind up on the sidelines.

IN ADDITION, there will be two scouts from Abilene, Abilene Cooper, San Angelo and Big Spring, representing the next two opponents of Permian and Lee, in the press box. This is standard.

"At one time, there was talking of putting a 'scout box' on the east side," said Bartosh, "But it would have meant putting supports through the field house under the east stands and it just wasn't economically feasible."

Two radio stations will be in the press box and, of course, the play-by-play film crews. In this case, one high school will film the game and make a print for the other. It's the only way.

WITH ONE of the six TV cameras, which will be used for the live coverage of the game by Channel 9 being located in the press box, it means the Reporter-Telegram booth will be taken over by an Odessa radio station. "They aren't too happy about that," says Bartosh, "since they will have room for only two announcers in the booth." Ed Clements and the KCRS crew will be in the other booth and, of course, Bobby Dunn, who does the PA for the game, will be in another booth.

That means the Time-Life representatives, the Dallas Times-Herald and any other media members able to worm passes to the game will be along the sidelines.

And Bartosh not only has to contend with unhappy fans, radio, press, coaches, administrators, but "there are the TV battles. The other area stations can't understand why they can't operate as usual, although KPTX paid $9,000 for exclusive coverage."

Police coverage for the game will be tripled for the parking, TV and crowd control it will take to handle the game.

As for TV coverage, there will be six cameras at work, one on the 50-yard line in the press box, cameras will be on the 20-yard lines on the west side, a couple in the end zone and, in addition, there will be one portable camera for sideline and crowd shots.

That will require a crew of 23 on the TV crew, five in the press box, nine on the sidelines and nine in the field area.

There will be no sky-crane camera.

The Thursday night kickoff also has necessitated moving the Midland High-Odessa JV game to 7 p.m. tonight at Memorial Stadium while the Sophomore game between MHS-OHS will be played at the Memorial Stadium practice field at 10 a.m. Saturday.

While fans will jostle for elbow room in the stands and tempers may become frayed in the press box, Bartosh prefers to look at the brighter side of crowd crush, the one many fans will view with relief.

"There won't be any lines for the rest rooms. Since they were enlarged before the 1984 season, we haven't had any problems."

And despite the complaints of those who haven't had things their own way, Bartosh is still all smiles, "It's exciting. A lot of problems, it's true, but lot of people would like to have the same kind of problems."

Western Kentucky seeks player with ad

Associated Press

"WANTED — Due to injury and desperation, looking for a person to snap for punts and field goals."

Classified advertising for football players?

It worked for Western Kentucky football Coach Dave Roberts last year, and Kentucky Coach Jerry Claiborne gave it a try this year.

So Roberts decided when snapper Dennis Cecil was injured Saturday, he'd give the classified ads in the College Heights Herald another whirl.

The ad is scheduled to appear in Thursday editions of the campus newspaper, said Jo Anne Thompson of the paper's publications section. She said Roberts had hoped to have the ad in Tuesday editions, but it was submitted too late for advertising deadlines.

The ad tells anyone who has previous snapping experience and wants to play on the college level to call offensive coordinator Steve Shankweiler.

A similar ad brought Cecil to the team last year, Roberts said. And Kentucky Coach Jerry Claiborne advertised for a kicker in the UK student newspaper earlier this season.

"At a school with 13,000 students, somebody's got to have snapped before," Roberts said.

Cecil, who Roberts said hadn't made one bad snap, tore a tendon in his knee in Saturday's 34-32 loss to Akron. He underwent surgery on Monday and will be out for the rest of the season.

Lance Alm, a tight end who had snapped some in high school, was inserted into Cecil's position. But Alm's absence from snapping was readily apparent.

Two bad snaps on point after attempts cost Western two points and a possible tie, said Roberts. Also, a bad snap contributed to one missed field goal and to one Akron touchdown, when the punter couldn't handle the snap and had to fall on the football in Western territory.

"It's an important position," Roberts said. "You don't play a lot, but it could mean ballgames. You saw that Saturday."

Justin Diel, a backup quarterback last year who is not on the team this year, will try out for snapper, Roberts said. And he hopes to have a few more once the ad is published.

Midland Lee's Ann DelLlano (30) and Midland High's Amy Hubbard stage a battle at the net during Tuesday nights District 4-5A volleyball game at the Lee gym.

Bulldogs down Lee in volleyball

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Since both the Midland High Bulldogs and Midland Lee Rebels are on the lower end of the District 4-5A volleyball rating's scale this year and both halfway through the schedule, there isn't much for them to shoot for other than the city title.

Well, Tuesday night, the Bulldogs took a step toward achieving that crown by posting a 15-12, 15-7 victory over the Rebels at Lee Gym.

The Bulldogs, sporting the best record of the two schools at 3-4 in 4-5A play and 9-12 overall, have reduced their chances of a playoff berth to long-shot odds at best so Coach Sonja Pittman wants her team to take someone else down with them.

"We're ready for the second half of the season," said Pittman. "I feel like we might as well go for it, try to win every one bacause some of the other strong teams in the district like Odessa High and Abilene High might do some damage to Big Spring and San Angelo and that could open up the district."

Big Spring and San Angelo went into Tuesday's meeting with perfect 6-0 records in district play and, as Gomer Pyle would say, "Surprise, surprise, surprise." The Steers manhandled the many-time defending conference champion Bobcats, 15-12, 15-6. The Bobcats, who lost their only game of the season in the playoff semifinals last year, suffered their first district setback since 1983.

MHS AND Lee both had trouble with their power game, hitting by far more shots into the net or out-of-bounds than putting down winners. Early on, however, before the troubles began and then got worse for Lee, it was a close match.

The Rebels took early 7-3 and 8-4 leads before the Bulldogs started cutting into the advantage. Midland High managed to pull even at eight, but gave up three quick points to trail by three, 11-8 and again at 12-9.

But, Lee was finished offensively. Liz Pratt took the serve for MHS at 9-12 and started six straight volley winners.

In the second game, it was MHS jumping out to the early lead, 4-0 and then and 6-2 before the Rebels ran out of gas. After cutting Midland High's lead to three, 7-4, the Bulldogs jumped out to an 11-4 edge and coasted to the 15-7 victory.

On Saturday, both the Bulldogs and Rebels, now 1-6, 6-16, take on out of town opponents. The Bulldogs travel to district leader Big Spring while Lee hosts San Angelo.

In junior varsity action Tuesday, Midland High added a three-game victory over Lee, 15-9, 5-15, 15-10 to improve the MHS JV record to 20-4.

In another key 4-5A contest, Odessa High defeated Odessa Permian, 15-8, 15-6, as the Bronchos climbed to 5-2 after the completion of first half play. Permian fell to 2-5.

Landry sees no jinx with Steelers

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have lost five consecutive games to the Pittsburgh Steelers, but Coach Tom Landry doesn't consider them a jinx for the Cowboys.

"They were a great team in the 1970s, one of the top teams I've seen since I've been in the National Football League," Landry said. "Now we are both teams struggling for identity."

The Cowboys are four-point favorites over the Steelers on Sunday in Texas Stadium. The last time Dallas won was in 1972, over a Terry Bradshaw-led team, 17-13.

Pittsburgh leads the series 12-10, including victories in Super Bowl X and XIII. In the most recent meeting, the Steelers snapped the Cowboys' NFL-record of 17 consecutive opening victories with a 36-28 triumph behind three Bradshaw touchdown passes.

Pittsburgh is 2-3 this year with two straight losses while Dallas is 4-1.

"I have great respect for (Coach Chuck) Noll," said Landry. "He's wearing four Super Bowl rings. That's all you need to know about him."

Landry said he wouldn't have guessed the Cowboys would be leading the National Conference Eastern Division this early in the year.

"I'm surprised," Landry said about the Cowboys' one game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants, two over Washington, and three games over the Philadelphia Eagles. "There is still a long way to go."

Landry predicted the NFC East "will be even tighter than it was last year. Washington proved it is back (with a 27-10 victory over St. Louis Monday night). It's going to go down to the wire."

He said the Cowboys needed the rapid start because "the toughest part of our schedule in the last half of the season. We would like to be in the position of competing for the title when we play those big games in the last part of the season."

"We are still having problems scoring once we get inside the 20-yard line," Landry said.

Redskins turn funeral into Monday party

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The relief was so obvious in the Washington Redskins locker room that George Rogers was amused by something football players usually don't find very funny.

"Hey George, you fumbled!" someone yelled at him.

"Twice!" Rogers yelled back, bursting into laughter.

A lot of people showed up for the Redskins' funeral Monday night. They came to bury a team that was 1-3 and seemingly about to go 1-4 and drop out of the race for the NFC East title it had won three years in a row.

And they came to see a Washington institution with which the often fickle nation's capital had become disenchanted.

The Redskins, the critics said, were:

— Too old, 36-year-old Joe Theismann and 36-year-old John Riggins in particular.

— Lacking leaders. Theismann and Riggins were too concerned with themselves and players like George Starke had been forced into retirement. "George Starke was old, but he was loose in the locker room," said tackle Mark May.

— Poorly coached. Joe Gibbs, a certified genius when he took the team to two straight Super Bowls, had become too intense, was wrapped too tight, couldn't see the forest for the trees. Specifically, he couldn't find the right formula for alternating Riggins and Rogers, both used to playing full-time.

— Lacking intensity, particularly on special teams. The kicking team surrendered a 99-yard kickoff return to Willie Gault that reduced what had been a 10-0 Washington lead to 10-7 on the way to a 45-10 Chicago victory.

Off a 27-10 National Football League victory over St. Louis Monday night, those accusations proved to be wrong, wrong, wrong and wrong.

Rogers ran for 104 yards, Riggins for 103.

Theismann passed for just 83 yards but it was a productive 83 — two of his 11 completions went for touchdowns and he ran for a third score on a 14-yard bootleg on fourth and one.

The maligned special teams pinned the Cardinals back all night.

On its first nine possessions, St. Louis' best starting field position was its own 26 — on a fumble. On the other occasions, the Cards started at their 16, 13, 21, 6, 20, 20, 20, and 7.

Meanwhile, the Redskins, who had only started beyond midfield once in four games, began their first three drives in Cardinal territory, primarily because of the field position established by the special teams.

And all this was the result of a game plan put together by Joe Gibbs, who also managed to get his team up for the game. "If you put the emotion of this football team tonight on a scale of one to 10, we were 11," Theismann said after the game.

"I think we've begun to find the formula," Gibbs said of the Riggins-Rogers problem, although he lifted Rogers for Riggins after the two fumbles. "George is quick, John is great in short yardage and goal-line situations."

As four games with one win didn't bury the Redskins, one impressive victory didn't get them out of the trouble. They still remain a game behind the Cardinals and New York Giants and two behind the Dallas Cowboys.

"This is the toughest division in football," Theismann said.

Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer responds to questions from reporters during media luncheon. The Sooners face Texas Saturday in Dallas. The teams tied, 15-15, last year.

Texas Tech's Hastings, Texas' Dodge honored

Associated Press

It should come as no surprise that Brad Hastings is leading the Texas Tech Red Raiders in tackles. After all, he had 141 tackles to lead the team last year.

However, the Red Raider junior linebacker from Arlington outdid even himself on Saturday night, recording a school-record 29 tackles, including 10 unassisted in a one-point loss to Texas A&M.

The performance earned him The Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week award.

Quarterback Todd Dodge of Texas, booed by his own fans earlier this season, heard only cheers in a record passing show in a 44-16 victory over Rice.

For his performance, which included 11 completions in 19 attempts for 359 yards and three touchdowns, Dodge was named The AP's offensive player the week.

Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore said Hastings "Has taken up where he left off last year with 141 tackles. It's good seeing him playing back at that level."

The 6-foot-3, 235-pound Hastings said "I feel like I might be playing even better this year. I really didn't think I had that many tackles against the Aggies. I like it when we play a physical team like the Aggies. I like going against a team like that more than a finesse team."

Dodge's 359 passing yards also was a school record, breaking the record of 306, set by Donnie Little against Rice in 1980.

"It's not the kind of thing you go into a game thinking about. You just try to do the things you have to do to win and sometimes all those records just happen," Dodge said.

Dodge, a former schoolboy star at Port Arthur Jefferson, threw a school record 19 interceptions last season and was booed in Texas' opener against Missouri by a home crowd.

TCU's Davis estimates $18,000 in payments

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Texas Christian University running back Kenneth Davis estimates he received about $18,000 in payments from boosters but added that football coach Jim Wacker was wrong in suspending him, according to The Dallas Morning News.

The newspaper, in a copyright story published in today's editions, reported Davis' payments began with $1,000 when he signed a national letter of intent in 1981 and ended in August 1985 with a $400 payment.

"I didn't know it was wrong when they were paying me the money," Davis told the newspaper. "I thought it went along with the package. All the colleges that recruited me offered me money. Mr. (Dick) Lowe paid me the money.

"He was on the board of trustees of TCU, so I thought it was OK to take the money. In all, I got about $18,000, give or take a little. Where did it go? Good question. I have $30 in my pocket now," said Davis.

Davis was one of seven players suspended on Sept. 20, one game into the 1985 season, when college officials said they determined the players had taken illegal cash payments from boosters.

In another report, television station WFAA reported that Davis estimated he had been paid $23,000 during his years at the Fort Worth school.

Davis was in New York on Tuesday with his agent, Mike Trope, for a 75-minute meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to discuss Davis' request for a supplemental draft. Rozelle said he will make a decision by the end of the week.

The league has a rule prohibiting a player from playing in both college and professional games the same season.

Davis, a fifth-year senior who wants to play with the NFL this season, told The News that the first payment made by Lowe was for $1,000 when Davis signed a national letter of intent.

The payment was followed by $500 for signing the binding letter of intent to attend TCU. Lowe told The News on Sept. 20 that he was involved with the payments to players and has since dissociated himself from the TCU football program.

"That's accurate; it's nothing new. I've said all of it before," Lowe said Tuesday concerning Davis' statements about payments.

Davis, who said Wacker "did me wrong" by removing him from the team, told the newspaper that booster Chris Farkas allegedly dropped an envelope containing $3,700 by his feet while Davis was sitting on the bench during a TCU practice during his freshman year.

"I was injured and just sitting on the bench," said Davis. "Farkas came over and left the envelope. I took it over to another practice field and stuck it in a tire that was lying around. When I went back, I looked inside. There was $3,700."

Davis said, despite his knee injury before his freshman year, the payments from Lowe were always on schedule. Davis said he received $200 a month from Lowe for his first two years at TCU, covering his red-shirt year and his freshman year of eligibility.

"I needed the money," Davis told the newspaper, "but I didn't bargain for it. I didn't ask for the extra money."

Wacker held a team meeting on Sept. 19, asking his players if anyone was receiving money from boosters.

"The only time that I have ever told anybody I received money was when the NCAA came and talked with me after this happened," Davis said. "I never told Coach (Tom) Perry or Coach Wacker anything.

"After that team meeting, Coach Perry asked me to come to his office. It was just a casual conversation. We talked about what was going on with the team, how we played in the first game, how we were looking forward to the second game. ..."

Davis said the meeting with Perry began about 5 p.m. and didn't last very long.

"At 9:45 that night, Coach Wacker called me into his office and said I wasn't playing football anymore," Davis said. "He had spoken with Dick Lowe, who told him about the payments. I said, 'Coach Wacker, this doesn't make any sense.'

Davis said he never thought Wacker would kick him off the team.

"I haven't lost any respect for him as a human being, but the last thing I expected was that he would throw me to the wolves. I think he did me wrong, but I'm just trying to go on with my life. Ask the people to pray for me."

Running game key to Texas-OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The inexperienced running games of both teams will determine the way this week's game between Oklahoma and Texas will be played, Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

Both clubs have shown improved passing games this year. Second-ranked Oklahoma, 2-0, got a 177-yard passing game from sophomore Troy Aikman last week, while senior Todd Dodge threw for a school-record 357 yards for No. 17 Texas in a victory over Rice.

Switzer, however, told writers and broadcasters at his weekly luncheon that the running game will tell the story.

"They're always going to take their shots and try to go deep off play-action fakes," he said of the Longhorns. "But it depends on how well they run the football."

Switzer, who is 5-5-2 against Texas, said Texas "would be quick to throw if we could stop the run," and later added that "they're not going to go out and assume they can't run the football against Oklahoma."

The thing that most impressed Switzer about Texas, he said, was the Longhorns' speed on offense.

"I look at Texas as having a great potential as an offensive team," he said. "Texas has probably never possessed as much speed with its skill people as it does in its young people. They are exciting offensive talents."

Defensively, he said the 3-0 Longhorns are as inexperienced as they have been in some time.

"They're probably not as big and strong in the front line as they have been," he said. "They run well and have good quickness and speed, but they don't have the physical stature they have had in the past."

It may be young, but Switzer said the Texas 4-3 front and man-to-man secondary coverage is tough to beat.

"No one in college football plays that scheme of defense," he said.

Switzer said the backfields for both teams are alike except at one position.

"We are exceptionally young ... it's very similar to Texas' situation," he said. "One ingredient they do have is a fifth-year senior quarterback with three years of experience. We don't have that, and obviously you'd rather play with experienced players."

Oklahoma's defense has allowed only 13 points this season, the lowest figure for the first two games since 1972. The defense is ranked first in the nation against the rush, allowing only 39 yards per game.

But Switzer said the Sooners' first two opponents, Minnesota and Kansas State, don't do as much with the ball as Texas.

"If we can get through Texas and Miami, it will tell me a lot about our defensive secondary," he said. "I think we're tentative, cautious, which is understandable because of our youth."

The player Switzer said the secondary most needed healthy, free safety Ricky Dixon, is questionable for Saturday's game due to a knee sprain.

"He has the ability to play man-to-man coverage," Switzer said. "We've got one like that and they've got four or five."

Oklahoma is a touchdown favorite, but Switzer seemed unimpressed.

"I thought we might be favored, but that doesn't mean anything."

Kickoff for the game at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas is scheduled for 12:05 p.m.

SMU, Baylor: lost in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Ask the man on the street in Dallas what college football game is in town this weekend and the answer most of the time will be Oklahoma-Texas.

The Baylor-Southern Methodist clash, which falls on the Oklahoma-Texas weekend in Dallas every two years, is fast becoming known as The Lost Game for the lack of attention it draws.

This year it is No. 2-ranked Oklahoma against No. 17-rated Texas in a clash of unbeatens. SMU is 16th ranked going against No. 19 Baylor

"I've been mildly irriated that through the years we have had to play second fiddle to the Texas-Oklahoma game," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "A lot of times we have had the much better game but nobody seems to know it."

Teaff would like for the SWC office to find a solution but isn't sure what it would be.

"We tried playing the game in Waco every year but SMU really didn't want to do that," said Teaff. "Sometimes we have a lot better football game and I'd like to see the game get more recognition."

Asked about the billing competition against Oklahoma and Texas, SMU Coach Bobby Collins joked, "Oh, I didn't realize they were playing."

Getting serious, Collins said an example of how Texas-Oklahoma gets top billing was the SWC broadcast log released this week.

"I was amazed that the Southwest Conference radio bill headlined Texas and Oklahoma," said Collins. "Our game with Baylor is a Southwest Conference game. You would think it would have been on top."

Collins said the Baylor-SMU game is always exciting. Teaff said the game was usually wide open and close.

In nine of the last 14 games, the outcome has been decided by less than a touchdown, Teaff said.

The Mustangs nipped Baylor 24-20 in a driving rain last year to take a 35-25-7 edge in the series. SMU has won the last four games.

Baylor is leading the SWC with a 2-0 record while SMU, coming off its worse loss under a Collins-coached team, can't compete for the SWC title. However, games against SMU count in the SWC standings for the team playing the Ponies.

"This is not the best time to be playing a team with outstanding talent like SMU," said Teaff. "We're catching them when they are going to be mighty mad."

Teaff said the rivalry with SMU goes back to the time when the winner could claim it was the church school king of the SWC.

"That private school stuff has been dead since we got into the Cotton Bowl in 1974," Teaff said. "We've been competing on an equal basis for a decade or so now."

All except, Teaff will tell you, in the public attention it draws when two large state schools tangle in the same area on the same day.

This year the Texas-Oklahoma game is at noon in the Cotton Bowl. SMU and Baylor don't meet in Texas Stadium until 7:30 p.m.

In 1979, the Baylor-SMU game drew a capacity crowd of 65,101 fans, many of them part of a big Russ Potts give away. The crowds have begun to dwindle in recent years. There were 45,000 on hand in 1983.

"It will be a great game again," Teaff said. "I think we'll get a good crowd. It's just a shame it doesn't get the attention it deserves."

Birds ink Weaver to another year

BALTIMORE (AP) — When Earl Weaver was a $1-a-year consultant to the Baltimore Orioles, owner Edward Bennett Williams used to joke that the former manager was overpaid.

At the time, Weaver said perhaps his boss was correct. But the feisty skipper figures to earn every bit of his 1986 salary, estimated at $600,000, when he tries to breathe new life into the Orioles.

Although he posted only a 53-52 record after being lured out of retirement and rehired as manager on June 14 to replace Joe Altobelli, Weaver resumed his duties with a vigor he lacked when he retired at the end of the 1982 season.

Williams, always a Weaver backer, saw enough in 1985 to place the club in his hands for another season.

The way Weaver sees it, though, he has virtually a lifetime deal with the American League club.

"Even after this year, I'm tied up with them for two or three more years," he said, referring to the renewed consultant's agreement he once canceled to avoid conflict of interest while a television commentator for the 1983 World Series in which the Orioles played.

The ink had hardly dried on his new contract on Tuesday when Weaver was asked whether he'd call it quits again after one year at the helm.

"I could go on. That's a possibility," he said. "But I'll have to wait and see. That would be up to Mr. Williams and Mr. Peters (general manager Hank Peters)."

Despite a fourth-place finish in 1985, marking the first time since 1965 that the Orioles had gone two consecutive seasons without finishing first or second, Weaver insisted he was optimistic about next year. He retained his entire coaching staff and announced a goal of winning the American League East.

"I think we can win 100 games with the current personnel," which would tie Weaver with Joe McCarthy as manager of six 100-victory teams. "We have to have a winning record against the stronger clubs, and play about .600 baseball to win."

The Orioles played at a .650 pace, starting on Aug. 10, by winning 26 and losing 14, but dropped 10 of the next 11 to finish fourth, 16 games behind Toronto.

The Orioles led the major leagues with a club-record 214 home runs, but their usually reliable pitching and defense faltered. The team earned-run average of 4.38 was the worst in the club's 32-year history, and the Orioles lost 48 of 57 games in which they scored three runs or less.

Another problem was fielding. The Orioles were eighth this year after leading the league in that category eight of 11 previous seasons.

From Wire Reports

BASEBALL

The San Diego Padres are reportedly interested in obtaining disgruntled Cincinnati Reds outfielder Gary Redus, who criticized Reds player-manager Pete Rose last week. The Cincinnati Enquirer reported Tuesday that Padres General Manager Jack McKeon has suggested that he would be willing to trade San Diego left-handed starting pitcher Mark Thurmond to Cincinnati for Redus. McKeon has not made any such announcement publicly.

Rose has said the Reds, who finished second in the National League West to Los Angeles, must strengthen their starting pitching staff to compete with the Dodgers in 1986.

Graig Nettles, the 41-year-old third baseman for the San Diego Padres, signed a new contract with the club and will return for an 18th major league season, team officials said Tuesday. The one-year deal reportedly was worth about $800,000. Nettles, obtained by San Diego in a March 1984 trade with the New York Yankees, has a lifetime batting average of .251 with 363 career home runs and 1,212 RBI.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Hayden Fry says he doesn't think being No. 1 is a burden, but he does feel his Hawkeyes should be commended for retaining the honor for a second week. "I read somewhere that the No. 1 team once changed seven consecutive weeks," Fry said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "Considering we've held it two straight weeks, we should go into the Hall of Fame."

Asked if being No. 1 was an added burden, he said, "Not at all."

"You have to realize we haven't been in that position since 1961. We have nothing to compare it with.

PRO FOOTBALL

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday he hopes to decide within the next few days whether Kenneth Davis former Texas Christian University running back, is eligible for a supplemental NFL draft.

Davis, an All America last year, and six other players were suspended from the TCU team on Sept. 20, one game into the 1985 season, when it was determined they had taken illegal cash payments from boosters. The NFL, in what is commonly known as the "Red Grange Rule," prohibits football players from playing both college and pro games in the same season.

GENERAL

Sportscaster Howard Cosell says TV Guide "obviously tried to sell as many copies as they could" when the magazine took excerpts from his new book regarding comments about his former ABC Monday Night Football co-workers.

Cosell, speaking to the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters meeting in Winston-Salem Tuesday, said the magazine used only the most sensational quotations from the book "I Never Played the Game." A chapter of the book contains Cosell's observations of Frank Gifford, Don Meredith and O.J. Simpson.

"The book is hardly about my former colleagues on Monday Night Football," Cosell said. "It has 380 pages and has to do with far more important material than that."

Permian still fifth in AP's 5A rankings

Associated Press

The leaders in all five classifications — Houston Yates in 5A, Tomball in 4A, Hempstead in 3A, Electra in 2A and Munday in A — easily retained top rankings in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll following a weekend of record-setting games.

Yates blanked Houston Milby 51-0 for its 43rd consecutive district victory.

Yates, which seeks the record against Houston Madison Friday night, received 23 of the 26 first place votes cast and held a comfortable 247-202 point margin over cross-town rival Houston Aldine.

Aldine moved up a notch for the second straight week after No. 2 San Antonio Judson was upset 21-17 by San Antonio Madison and dropped to 10th this week.

San Antonio Clark jumped one spot to third and Dallas Carter, sixth a week ago, took over the No. 4 position, leap-frogging Odessa Permian, which remained fifth.

West Orange-Stark moved up from seventh to sixth after a 41-10 victory over Beaumont West Brook, followed by Sugar Land Willowridge, Conroe, Temple and Judson.

IN CLASS 4A, No. 10 Brownwood gave Coach Gordon Wood his 400th career victory with a 15-9 decision over Crowley.

There were no losers on the 4A list and only one change with Brownwood dropping from ninth to 10th and Lubbock Estacado moving from 10th to ninth.

The biggest shakeup came in 3A where No. 3 Littlefield lost to Idalou 20-14, and No. 5 Columbus lost to Bellville 17-0. Littlefield dropped to 10th and Columbus fell out of the rankings.

Cuero, 5-0, a 34-7 victor over San Antonio St. Gerard, moved into the No. 9 spot.

Crandall, ranked No. 7 in 2A last week, lost to Rains 27-12 and fell from the top 10. The newcomer in the No. 10 position is Morton, 5-0, which defeated Friona 20-14 last week.

Italy, No. 10 in A last week, jumped two notches to eighth after a 42-0 victory over Trinidad.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	5 ♠
5 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

There is a basic rule of bridge: If you have made a preemptive bid, any further move is up to your partner; you described your hand with your preemptive action. Thus, if the preemptor does act again, it should be to convey a specific message.

South's opening bid was artificial and forcing and North made a negative response. East, Leslie West of Houston, decided to make life interesting for all concerned by leaping to five clubs before the opponents had even started to mention their suits. When South's five heart bid came back to him, he elected to double.

Obviously, East could not have the high-card values to double five hearts. Therefore, his double had to be lead-directing—or lead-inhibiting, to be precise. Since only one suit had been bid naturally by the declaring side, East could not be asking for a specific suit. He was simply telling West that he did not want a club lead—the suit he had bid.

In such circumstances, you would normally lead your long suit. Here, West, J. Paul Ivaska of Las Vegas, did not have a suit of any great length to lead. Still, he decided that he would heed his partner's instructions and selected the longer of his two unbid suits—diamonds.

He hit the jackpot! East ruffed the diamond lead with his only trump and tried to cash the ace of spades. Declarer ruffed, but he had no way to avoid losing a trump trick and a trick to the king of diamonds—down one.

At the other table, too, North-South were forced to five hearts. Here, however, East did not double and, after a club lead, declarer easily romped home with 11 tricks, losing only one heart and one diamond.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. Peggy Lee undergoes bypass surgery

Peggy Lee

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Singer Peggy Lee likely will spend a week to 10 days in the hospital after a four-hour double-bypass heart operation that followed four previous rounds of minor heart surgery, her doctor and daughter said.

Miss Lee, 65, was in satisfactory condition after the Tuesday surgery at Touro Infirmary, where she checked in Sunday with chest pains, hospital officials said.

The Grammy Award-winner should spend a week to 10 days in the hospital, then head back to California, said Dr. Tom Oelsner, an internist who has been treating Miss Lee since Sunday. She should be back to normal in two to three months, he said.

Miss Lee had suffered minor heart problems in the past and earlier this year underwent four angioplasties — balloon surgery in the heart — but they did not clear up the problems, her daughter, Nicki Foster, said.

She was in New Orleans for an engagement at the Fairmont Hotel's Blue Room.

Winner of a Grammy in 1969 for "Is That All There Is?" Miss Lee has a long list of hits, including "Manana," 1948; "Fever," 1958; and her first, with the Benny Goodman Band in 1942, "Why Don't You Do Right?"

Andre Previn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andre Previn, who left Hollywood 25 years ago after winning four Academy Awards as a film composer, said the offer to return as head of the Los Angeles Philharmonic was too good to turn down.

"The Los Angeles Philharmonic is an internationally renowned orchestra, and they asked me," said Previn, 56, who makes his debut Thursday as the orchestra's music director.

"The fact that it's the city where I spent a great deal of my youth is a plus, but I couldn't have come if it weren't for the orchestra," he said in a recent interview. "It is undeniable that after 17 years in England, there is something to be said for bankable sunshine."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actress Jessica Lange, who plays singer Patsy Cline in the movie "Sweet Dreams," will have a chance to pay her respects to the late country star.

Ms. Lange will join singers Loretta Lynn and Anne Murray on the nationally televised Country Music Association awards show Monday night to salute Miss Cline, who died at age 30 in the crash of a small plane in 1963, an association spokeswoman said. The show will be telecast on CBS.

NEW YORK (AP) — Catholics among the thousands of demonstrators at the U.S. premiere of a movie denounced by Pope John Paul II for its depiction of the Virgin Mary as a gas station attendant knelt in prayer and sprinkled holy water on those arriving for the showing.

The film, "Hail Mary" by French director Jean-Luc Godard, opened to similar protests in Europe earlier this year.

The demonstrators outside Lincoln Center Monday evening clutched rosary beads, held lighted candles, recited the "Hail Mary" and sang its musical version, "Ave Maria." Police Sgt. Thomas Lynott estimated the crowd at 7,500 to 8,000 people.

In Godard's film, Mary is an avid basketball player who works at a gas station. Joseph is a dreamy and frustrated cabdriver. Gabriel an unshaven, unsavory-looking angel who travels by jet.

As in the Biblical story, Godard's Mary is a pregnant virgin, and Godard focuses on the struggles of Mary and Joseph to come to terms with divine insemination.

The film takes little interest in the child.

At one point, Gabriel and a little girl angel tell Joseph that he must have trust. "And love, you jerk!" Gabriel adds, slapping Joseph hard.

NEW YORK — It was 1 a.m. when Sally Beauman opened the door of her London home to find her literary agent, Pat Kavanagh, standing on her doorstep.

"I don't drink," Beauman said, "but on that occasion I did have a whiskey."

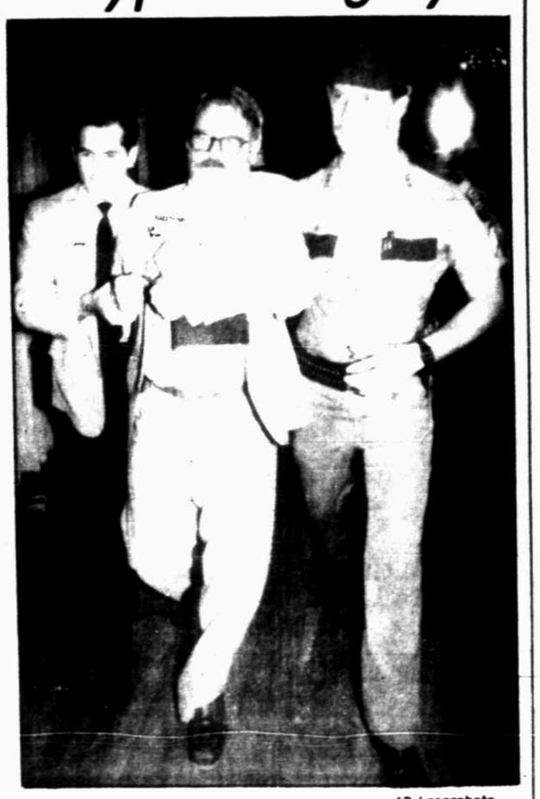

Kavanagh had just conveyed to Beauman the news that "Destiny," her unfinished novel, had been sold for more than $1 million.

The figure was said by Bantam Books to be the most money ever paid for a first novel by an unknown author. "Destiny" will be published as a Bantam hardcover sometime in 1987.

The book was the subject of a fiercely competitive auction involving Bantam, Atheneum, Scribners, Crown, Random House, Putnam and Summit Books-Pocket Books.

"The auction went on all week," said Stuart Applebaum, Bantam's vice president for publicity, "making it one of the longest on record."

The bidding extended through early mornings, late nights, a weekend and a Jewish holiday. In fact, said Bantam editorial director Stephen Rubin, "I didn't find out that Sally had accepted our offer until the Friday of Hurricane Gloria."

People Express outbids Texas Air for Frontier

DENVER (AP) — People Express intends to acquire Frontier Airlines, the carriers announced Tuesday, in a deal that would greatly expand the discount airfare pioneer's reach West and end a bidding war with Texas Air Corp. and a labor group.

People has a "binding agreement" to pay $24 a share for the Denver-based carrier, according to a statement from People and Frontier Holdings Inc., the the financially strapped airline's parent.

The airlines announced the agreement a few hours after Texas Air announced it was increasing its bid from $20 a share to $22 for the 12.5 million shares.

People's offer includes purchase of nearly 5.2 million Frontier shares, the largest single block, held by RKO Enterprises Inc., the airlines said.

People Express Chairman Donald C. Burr and Frontier President Joseph R. O'Gorman said Frontier will continue to operate under its present name. The airlines will coordinate schedules and marketing, the executives said.

Texas Air spokesman Bruce Hicks said he had no immediate comment.

For the fast-growing People, the acquisition would be a natural step to move into western markets, said John Pincavage, an industry analyst for the investment firm PaineWebber.

The Newark, N.J.-based no-frills airline is noted for its low-cost, high volume coverage of the Eastern Seaboard. It has also launched intercontinental and cross-Atlantic routes, entered the competitive Chicago market and just announced non-stop service between California and Belgium.

Pincavage said the Frontier takeover could give the low-cost carrier a "second hub" in Denver, where Frontier runs more flights than any airline but United Airlines.

People "could run a 'Newark' for the whole western part of the United States," said Pincavage.

On Sept. 30, Houston-based Texas Air launched its offer to buy 60 percent of Frontier's 12.5 million shares of outstanding stock. It later said it would buy all the outstanding shares.

The takover, which Frontier said still must be approved by various government agencies and by employees, who suppport the People Express offer, pits People Express co-founder and President Donald Burr against his former boss, Texas Air president Frank Lorenzo.

Also attempting to acquire Frontier was a coalition of four of its employee unions, which offered $17 a share for Frontier Holdings Inc.

The employee buyout had been seen as an answer to Frontier's financial woes. Despite millions of dollars in wage and benefit concessions over the past few years, Frontier lost $31.4 million in 1984.

Earlier this year, Frontier sold about half its fleet of jets to United and then leased them back.

It took the employees nearly a year to come up with the financing for the proposed buyout shareholders were to vote on later this month.

The union coalition filed a federal lawsuit to block Texas Air's attempted buyout, charging that Texas Air president Lorenzo was making a "blatant attempt" to trim competition in Denver. The case is pending.

People Express earned $1.65 million in 1984, an 85 percent decrease from the previous year which management said was due to its rapid expansion.

Earlier in the day, People Express said it will begin once-a-week, $249 non-stop service between San Francisco and Brussels, Belgium, next month.

The price for the flights will be $249 for one-way coach and $469 one-way premium class.

Trading in People Express and Frontier stock was suspended in advance of the announcement just before the markets closed.

At the time, Frontier was up 37½ cents on the day at $19.75 a share on the American Stock Exchange.

In over the counter trading, People's was suspended while trading at $10.12½ a share, also up 37½ cents.

Texas Air closed routinely on the Amex, down 12½ cents at $17.12½ a share.

Farm bill okayed as bank lowers credit card charge

Associated Press

A farm bill that pins hopes for recovery of the U.S. agricultural economy on increased export sales and offers a safety net of farm income guarantees in the interim has cleared the House.

The five-year, $141 billion farm bill includes price supports for major crops like wheat, corn, cotton, rice and soybeans, a new soil conservation package, money for agricultural extension and research, and new statutory authority for food stamps and overseas food aid.

The Senate is not scheduled to act on its version of the farm bill until next week at the earliest. Prolonged House-Senate negotiations appeared likely before a final measure can be sent to President Reagan.

Meanwhile, a leading provider of credit cards, Manufacturers Hanover Corp., said Tuesday it had reduced the interest charge on its credit cards by two percentage points to 17.8 percent.

Some private analysts called the reduction overdue, but no other major banks moved immediately to match it.

The farm bill that cleared the House on a 282-141 vote retains as its key elements the crop price supports and farm income subsidies that are the essential structure of current farm law.

It makes one change regarded as crucial by the Reagan administration, which sees increased farm exports as the only way to restore health to an ailing rural economy. The measure would permit the secretary of agriculture to cut crop loan rates by up to 25 percent to bring prices down and make U.S. goods more competitive on world markets.

U.S. farm production has far outpaced domestic demand, and exports have grown to soak up much of American farmers' excess production. But because of high price supports, a strong dollar and other factors, farm exports have fallen dramatically in the past four years.

House Republicans, meanwhile, unveiled their plan for the nation's trade problems. It included the possible sale of Alaska oil and new powers for the U.S. trade representative.

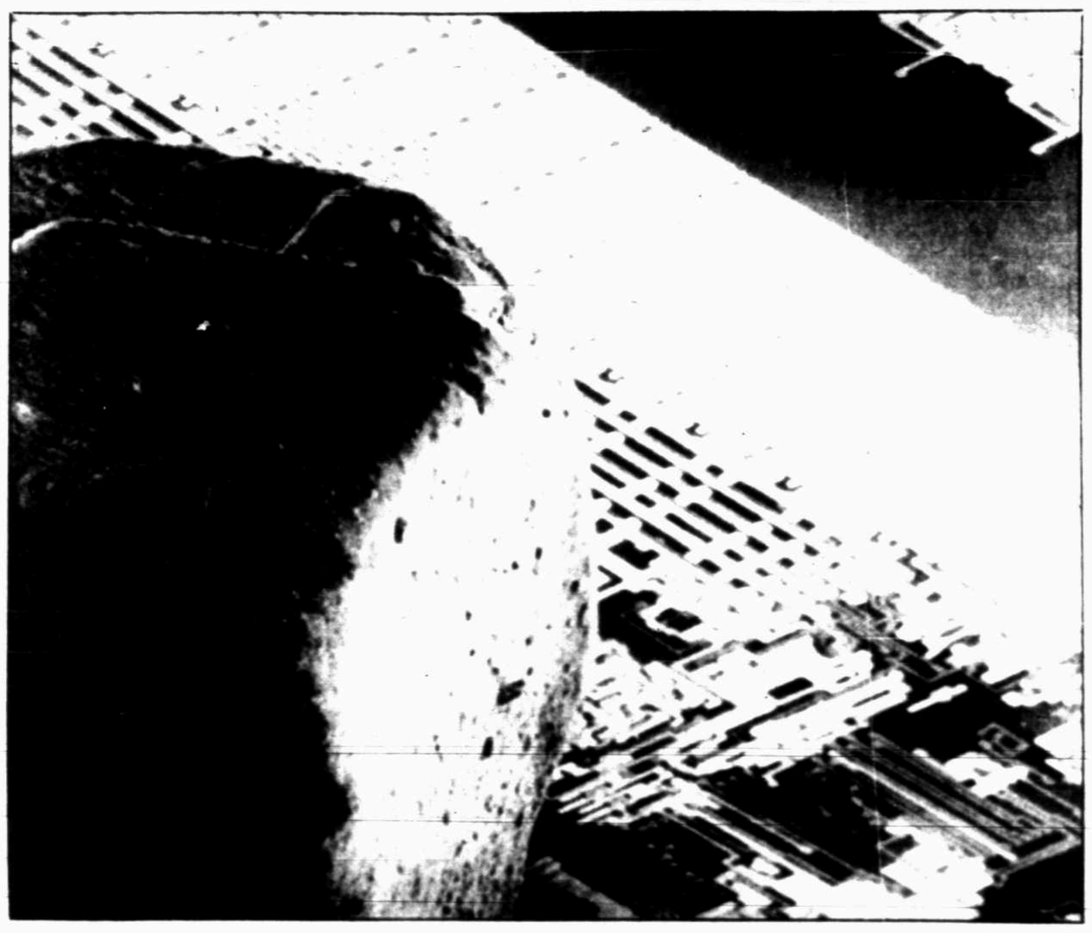

The Republican proposal "puts our trading partners on notice that we will not tolerate foreign trade practices which bar U.S. goods from their markets," House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said.

Key Democrats are sponsoring legislation to impose a 25 percent, across-the-board tariff on imports from Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Brazil unless those nations lower barriers or decrease surpluses.

In reducing its credit card interest charge, Manufacturers Hanover cited lower prevailing interest rates.

It said it has about 5 million credit cardholders in all 50 states and more than 85 countries.

Manufacturers Hanover has been charging an interest rate of 19.8 per cent on most of its credit cards.

Chrysler buys consumer finance company

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Tuesday it will buy FinanceAmerica, a BankAmerica Corp. subsidiary, for $405 million. Analysts saw the move as a way to use consumer loans to subsidize low-interest auto loans and boost car sales.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said the automaker's purchase of FinanceAmerica "puts Chrysler Corp. in the heart of the consumer finance business."

The acquisition makes Chrysler Financial Corp., the automaker's lending subsidiary, "one of the nation's largest and most diversified finance companies with a broad range of services in the automotive, real estate, equipment, insurance and commercial fields," Iacocca said.

The transaction, scheduled to close Nov. 30, would be the third major expansion this year by Chrysler Financial.

In May, Chrysler Financial formed a joint venture with General Electric Credit Corp. and three months later bought E.F. Hutton Credit Corp. for $125 million, renaming it Chrysler Capital Corp.

Arvid Jouppi, an automotive analyst in Detroit, said the expansions and similar moves by General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. broaden the automakers' lending profits, making it easier for them to offer low-interest loans to car buyers.

CHRYSLER CORPORATION

The domestic automakers closed out their 1985 model year with 7.7 percent and 7.5 percent financing on some cars, increasing sales to as much as 70 percent above their levels of a year ago, and GM this week announced 8.8 percent financing on some of its 1986 models.

"The car companies felt they ought to make more use of their financial strength and their financial management ability by moving into non-automotive financial services," Jouppi said. "It is especially difficult right now for the Japanese importers because they find a new weapon against them through the captive financing arms of the car companies," which offer low rates the Japanese can't match.

FinanceAmerica consists of two BankAmerica subsidiaries, FinanceAmerica Corp. and BA Financial Services Corp., and earned $15.8 million in 1984 and $9.9 million in the first half of 1985, and had $2.8 billion in assets on June 30.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

PSI begins auction of Marble Hill Equipment

NEW WASHINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Would-be buyers from as far away as Guam were on hand Tuesday as Public Service Indiana began auctioning off equipment at its defunct Marble Hill nuclear power plant.

Everything that might be found at a construction site — from cranes to office furniture — was up for bid, except nuclear equipment. The equipment being sold was valued at $6 million to $8 million, and the utility hoped to receive 15 to 25 percent of that, company spokeswoman Chris Combs said.

Nuclear equipment is being offered for sale directly to other utilities, PSI officials said.

"Basically there's no difference between the material here and that at a conventional plant," said Clark Smilie, a specialist for auctioneer Rene Bates of McKinney, Texas.

As a result, the approximately 500 bidders included salvage specialists hired by small industrial shop managers.

Sun Co. planning to sell Texas oil properties

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sun Co. has agreed in principle to sell several oil fields in western Texas for about $825 million, the company announced.

The properties represent just under five percent of the company's total oil production and reserves, a spokesman said Monday.

The company declined to disclose the names of the prospective buyers for any of the properties. The sales should provide a net $190 million fourth quarter gain for Sun, said spokesman Kurt VanVlandren.

He said the company was also evaluating additional offers, valued at $25 million, for other properties.

The fields are located in Yoakum and surrounding counties and produce about 12,000 barrels of oil daily, amounting to total annual revenues of $118 million, he said. Their reserve capacity is approximately 46 million barrels, he said.

VanVlandren said the properties number fewer than ten, but he would not disclose exactly how many were for sale. The sale is expected to be completed sometime in November, he said.

Sun last week announced it was changing its ownership structure for U.S. gas and oil exploration and development operations by placing them into a master limited partnership.

The partnership, Sun Energy Partners, will get proceeds of the sales, the company said in a statement.

With 1986 model American cars due on dealer lots in Midland next month, you may already be shopping for an auto and an auto loan. If so, you may have come across what sounds like a good deal: a balloon car loan.

But, BEWARE THE BALLOON, according to information released in the Sept. 16, 1985, issue of 100 Highest Yields.

With this type of loan, you make interest and insurance payments for 3-5 years, and then pay off the balance in one lump sum. It's attractive because the monthly payment is generally lower than that on a conventional car loan, and you still get to deduct the interest costs from your taxes.

But there are problems with the balloon loan. The problem is that final big payment, which can be refinanced or paid in a lump sum. If refinanced, it could be at a higher used car rate, and you may end up taking seven years to pay for a car. Also, the lender dictates in the contract the "acceptable normal wear and tear" on the car. If you don't ask about the specifics of "normal wear" before you borrow, you could jeopardize the loan agreement and owe more money.

In addition, you do not build up any equity when financing with a balloon loan.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

There aren't any laws prohibiting splitting stocks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Are there any government regulations on the splitting of stocks, such as a two-for-one split? What is the reasoning behind such a move, especially if the stock is selling at a low price, such as $20 a share?

A. There are absolutely no federal, state or local government regulations on stock splits. If a company wants to split its stock, it can go right ahead and do so — providing that action is authorized by the company's charter and bylaws.

In some cases, a company's board of directors has the authority to split the stock. More often, the split must be approved by vote of a majority of the company's "outstanding" stock — shares owned by stockholders.

Doyle

A stock split simply creates mores shares by cutting each share into smaller pieces. If a company has 10 million shares outstanding before a two-for-one split, it will have 20 million shares outstanding after that split. Each of the doubled number of shares then will represent half as much ownership in the company as each of the presplit shares.

And, in this example, each of the split shares will have a market value equal to half that of the presplit shares immediately before the split became effective. Note I wrote "immediately."

The rationale given for a stock split usually is that it lowers the share price and potentially broadens ownership. More people prefer buying lower-price stocks than higher-priced issues. So, a split can bring in more buyers.

News that a stock split is in the works attracts attention to the stock involved and often — not always — increases buying volume before the split actually happens. That's why I used the word "immediately" above.

Most splits take place when stocks are selling at rather high prices — $50 or more. Splits of stocks trading at $20 or lower are rare, or just plain foolish. Splitting a stock so that it sells at $10 or less can cause many investors to shy away, because they consider such low-priced stocks to be "cats and dogs."

Q. A certain stock is quoted at "22" — $22 a share. I order shares from the broker. He tells me he bought the shares for me at 23½ — $23.50 a share. He charges me that price, plus commission. The Sunday newspaper lists that stock's price range for the week as "22, high; 22⅛, low." How do I know I wasn't cheated?

A. Based on your scenario, you were.

If you bought a "round lot" — 100 shares, for most stocks — you should have paid no more than that stock's high price, plus commission, on the day your order was executed.

If you bought an "odd lot" of from one to 99 shares, you should have paid no more than the high price, plus odd-lot fee and commission. The odd-lot fee normally is 25 cents a share. It is included in the purchase price when you buy, deducted from the sale price when you sell.

According to your story, there's been a foul-up. Ask for a detailed explanation from the broker.

Q. I have been keeping a record of my stock certificates for many years, using the certificates' issue dates and serial number. My certificates are in my safe deposit box, of course. Recently, I have been hearing on radio and television that a record of the certificates' CUSIP numbers should be kept. What is the significance of the CUSIP number on a stock certificate?

A. CUSIP stands for Committee on Uniform Securities Identification Procedures, an agency of the National Association of Securities Dealers responsible for issuing identification numbers for publicly owned securities.

XYZ Corp. stock has one CUSIP number, QRS Co. stock another CUSIP number. CUSIP numbers are intended to simplify and speed up of stock transactions by making it easier for brokers, transfer agents and registrars to identify the stock certificates they handle.

It is advisable to record your certificates' CUSIP numbers. If a certificate is lost, stolen or destroyed, that number, along with the serial number and issue date, will help support your claim to ownership.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM"="43 22 61"; "BX"= "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

FALL'S HARVEST BOUNTY Brings Exuberant, New Eating To Your Table

Just when you're ready to say "enough" to lightweight salads, cold soups and summer barbecues, along comes a treasure trove of fall goodness to satisfy your family's yearning for heartier foods.

Take a look at the autumn bonanza your supermarket offers: eye-appealing fruits and vegetables in the produce section, fresh, appetizing cuts in the meat case, and a wide selection of tried and true as well as new items on the grocery shelves. It's positively inspirational!

So let us inspire you with some fall menu suggestions you can serve with pride. Start with Bountiful Beef Pot-Roast, truly delicious in its natural gravy made flavorful and aromatic with the addition of prunes, apples, onions and a pleasing blend of spices.

For a really fine side dish try golden Carrot-Stuffed Idaho Potatoes, baked, scooped and restuffed with an interesting vegetable mixture, a true companion to the beef pot-roast.

Bountiful Beef Pot-Roast will look and taste extraordinary, but its preparation is as uncomplicated as the favorite pot-roast you've always prepared. Only a few extra ingredients produce an all-important difference. A boneless beef cross-rib pot-roast makes good sense if you're watching the food budget. It's compact, with virtually no waste, and generously yields two and a half servings per pound. Braising will bring it to a juicy tenderness, from the richly browned end pieces so many people prefer to the moist center slices.

If flavor and economy aren't enough, beef is also an excellent source of high quality protein, as well as the vitamins thiamine, niacin, riboflavin, B-6 and B-12. Iron and zinc are especially important among its mineral contributions.

You might want to try variations on our harvest time meat and potatoes dishes. Paprika Beef Stew is easily made with economical beef chuck simmered stove-top or in a microwave oven. Potato pancakes are perennial favorites, all the better when made with a little flair.

Pick a menu pair to suit your family's preference and be happy that fall has arrived with its amazing bounty.

BOUNTIFUL BEEF POT-ROAST

3-1/2 to 4-pound boneless beef chuck cross-rib pot-roast
1/4 cup flour

Cookbook stresses low-cholesterol Italian food

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Ed Giobbi's career as an artist is a distingushed one. He also has what he calls "the happiest of avocations" — cooking. During the day he paints in his studio in a lovely part of the New York countryside where he makes his home. But at five o'clock — right on the dot — he relaxes: he goes into the Giobbi kitchen to prepare dinner for his wife and himself, perhaps one of their three children (now grown) who is visiting and often for friends who flock to taste his creations.

Ed's cooking began attracting admirers about 20 years ago when some of his recipes were first featured in The New York Times. So popular were they that he still gets requests for one of them. In 1971 his "Italian Family Cooking" was published by Random House.

Now his new book, "Eat Right, Eat Well — the Italian Way," written in collaboration with Dr. Richard Wolff (Knopf), has just appeared. It includes over 550 low-fat, low-cholesterol recipes. Wolff, a Boston cardiologist, provides a breakdown of fats and cholesterol for each of the recipes and it was he who persuaded Ed to develop them.

When Ed first considered using Wolff's guidelines, he says, "I was afraid I might have to make too many compromises. But to my delight I discovered the adjustments were minor, and over the nine years or so I worked on these dishes, everyone who tasted them thought they were delicious."

Each year Ed visits Italy, where he collects recipes from members of his family, friends, acquaintances — and even strangers. In one of the delightful anecdotes preceding many of his recipes, he says doing this is "like a treasure hunt."

Ed couldn't put together a recipe that wasn't good. Here, for example, is one that makes a simple, satisfying and thrifty main course.

ED GIOBBI'S CHICKEN WITH PASTA AND BROCCOLI

6 cups broccoli cut into bite-sized pieces
2 tablespoons safflower oil
½ medium onion, chopped
Hot pepper flakes to taste (optional)
4 cups chopped tomatoes, fresh if possible (drain if canned)
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried
Salt to taste
2 tablespoons good olive oil
¾ pound cut pasta, such as ziti, penne, rigatoni
1 whole chicken breast, skin, bones, and any excess fat removed, cut into ½-inch strips
1 clove garlic minced
Garnish: Chopped Italian parsley

Blanch broccoli in boiling water and drain.

Heat 1 tablespoon of the safflower oil in a medium skillet, then add onion. When it begins to brown, add hot pepper flakes and tomatoes. Cover, lower heat, and simmer for 15 minutes; then run the sauce through a food mill or food processor. Return to skillet, add broccoli, basil and salt, and cover. Simmer slowly until broccoli is tender, about 8 minutes. Add the olive oil.

Boil pasta in rapidly boiling salted water until al dente. While pasta is cooking, heat remaining 1 tablespoon safflower oil in a wok or medium skillet, then quickly saute chicken, tossing, over high heat about 1½ to 2 minutes. Do not overcook. Add garlic and cook another minute or so. Add the chicken to the sauce, pour over pasta, and serve. Garnish with parsley. Serves 6. From "Eat Right, Eat Well — The Italian Way" by Edward Giobbi and Dr. Richard Wolff. (Knopf).

Pasta could cut suicides according to researcher

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Pasta, peanuts and poultry may form the basis for an anti-depression diet that could reduce suicide rates, according to a researcher at San Diego State University.

"If I were to make any clinical suggestion," said Dr. Howard I. Kushner, Ph.D., "it would be that dietary alterations be attempted before mind-altering drugs are used, because these (drugs) have dangerous side effects."

On the other hand, Kushner found, high-protein diets may trigger depression.

Not everyone agrees with Kushner.

Dr. Charles L. Rich, a psychiatry professor at the University of California at San Diego who specializes in depression and suicide, said that Kushner's conclusions were "highly speculative."

"It would require a lot more specification before anyone should take it seriously," he said.

Kushner, a history professor who says he practices psychoanalysis, said his research is based upon studies of ethnic populations, their diets and suicide rates.

In essence, he said, depression and suicide are tied to an improper balance of amino acids consumed in the diet.

Amino acids, the chemical building blocks of protein, are important for the manufacture of certain chemical brain messengers called neurotransmitters. These chemicals, released at nerve endings known as synapses, are responsible for the transmission of information from one part of the brain to another.

According to Kushner, high levels of one of these transmitters — serotonin — are associated with low incidences of suicide and depression.

Serotonin — which has tryptophan as its chemical source — cannot be manufactured by the body, but must be supplied by the diet. Poultry, fish, lean meat and peanuts contain high levels of tryptophan.

But tryptophan, by itself, has a tough time competing against other amino acids for a place in the brain. In order for it to cross the so-called blood brain barrier, it must beat out its chemical cousins.

This can be accomplished with pasta or a carbohydrate, Kushner suggested, which causes insulin to be secreted. Insulin lowers the levels of all other amino acids, while allowing tryptophan to escape into the brain.

Since different ethnic groups rely on different diets, Kushner continued, their suicide rates could be related to their diets.

Irish and Italians — who rely on potatoes and pasta — have low suicide rates, while Danes and Germans — with high protein diets — have high suicide rates, Kushner said.

"So, if you want to have the maximum amount of serotonin, what you have to have is a meal high in carbohydrate and sufficient in protein, but not too high. So in the days of old, when people had these high-protein diets to lose weight, they also found they were depressed.

"The reason was that very little tryptophan was getting into the brain."

The results of Kushner's studies were published in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Journal of Interdisciplinary History.

Rich said he hadn't read Kushner's study.

But after parts of the study were explained to him, he said the connection appeared "slim."

DEAR ABBY

Poem answers X-rated invitation

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently a father wrote to you regarding a dilemma faced by himself and countless other fathers at the time of their sons' wedding: What to do when invited to the bachelor party, complete with X-rated films?

Thankfully, many young men have already outgrown this adolescent phenomenon, but for those still stuck in puberty, perhaps their fathers could offer this response:

"Dear son, you've invited me to your party tonight,

"And while it's not exactly a matter of wrong or right,

"I think I'll take a raincheck on your invite,

"And spend the night at home, with my own delight.

"You see, I've learned a few things along the way,

"And, if you would, accept this merely as a relay:

"It's the woman you marry that's worth viewing,

"Not the ones you pay.

"And I've also learned that old pornos never die,

"They just smell that way!"

— FATHER GUY GURATH, PASTOR, ST. MARY'S RECTORY, CASCADE, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: This letter isn't really to you — it's to my in-laws. I want to answer some of the questions they've been asking me, but I don't have the courage to do it to their faces.

You ask me why your son rarely comes to family gatherings, and why he isn't a better father to our children. You keep asking me why he avoids you, and wonder if he's mad at you for some reason.

Well, I can give you an answer that will sum up everything. He's an alcoholic. Although all he drinks is beer, he's been a heavy drinker since his teens. So far, he hasn't tried to overcome his drinking habit. I hate to tell you this, but I can't bear it alone anymore. I've been going to Alanon for six years. It has helped me to live with your son's drinking problem, but nothing will help him until he admits that he has a problem and wants to do something about it.

Abby, please tell your readers that if someone's drinking is a problem in their life, they should seek help through the Alanon program. It's been a lifesaver to me. — NO EASY WAY OUT

DEAR NO EASY WAY: I hope your in-laws see this, but in case they don't, I urge you to gather the courage to tell them that if they have questions concerning their son, they should ask him — not you. And since his drinking is a problem to his parents, they should also join Alanon.

DEAR ABBY: I just received a wedding present that I had given to my husband's friend. It was left on my doorstep with a note that read: "Thank you for the gift. Unfortunately, it does not go with our decor. Since there was no clue as to where these navy blue towels were purchased, could you please exchange them for either peach or rose?"

Abby, I bought these towels a long time ago on sale and decorated them with lace myself to make them look classy, so returning them to the store is out of the question.

Should I send the towels back to the bridal couple and explain that I spent hours making those towels and cannot exchange them? Or should I keep the towels and buy new ones in either rose or peach? Or should I keep the towels and leave them empty-handed? — BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: They deserve to be left empty-handed, but I think you would feel better knowing you gave them a gift. So return the navy blue towels with a note explaining that you decorated them yourself and can't return them.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Tomato handy for cook trying to 'ketchup'

Copley News Service

Tomatoes, in addition to their fresh taste and eye-catching color, have a special appeal for the cook in a hurry — there are dozens of ways to quickly turn a few tomatoes into a feast.

If you've ever grown tomatoes, you know that they resemble Ogden Nash's description of what happens when you shake a ketchup bottle — "None will come, and then a lot'll." Fortunately, there are lots of ways to convert a bumper crop of tomatoes into sauces, pickles and condiments that will last almost until the next year's crop is ready for harvesting.

If you lack either the space or the inclination to grow your own tomatoes, roadside stands can be a source for fresh, juicy tomatoes. Store-bought tomatoes often seem to have been chosen for their ability to survive long-distance shipping rather than by any criteria of taste or texture.

A writer for the New Yorker magazine, angered by the perfect-looking but tasteless tomatoes at his local market, conducted an impact test which proved that the tomatoes exceeded the federal standards for car bumpers.

Wherever your tomatoes come from, a few tips will help you prepare them to perfection.

To skin tomatoes, immerse them in boiling water for 30 seconds or so — the skins then will peel off easily. To flavor the tomatoes before peeling, boil them in vinegar or in a mixture of vinegar and water. Holding tomatoes on a skewer over a gas flame until the skin blackens will also make them easy to peel, and imparts a delicious smoky flavor.

To seed tomatoes, cut them in half crosswise and squeeze out the seeds into a sieve set on top of a bowl, to save the juice.

Filet quick, convenient alternative

By MERLE ELLIS

It never ceases to amaze me, the money some folks seem willing to spend for what they perceive of as convenience foods. Many people think nothing of spending $2.69 to $2.79 for a single-serving pouch of some low-cal something or other with rice because all you have to do is pop it in the microwave for 5 minutes, dump it on a plate and enjoy.

The most expensive cut of beef there is, the filet, can be a bargain compared to some of those frozen low-cal convenience entrees that have become so popular in the last year or so. Even at $6 a pound a 4-ounce serving (more than you are apt to get in any pouch) is only $1.50 — considerably less than most of the convenience foods in their single-service pouches. And nothing could be easier, more convenient or more elegant to prepare. It is the ultimate convenience food.

If you buy beef tenderloin (filet), one steak at a time, it is going to seem expensive — $5 or $6 a pound is not unusual. But considering the fact that there is no waste, one pound can feed three or four people and it can be cooked in minutes, that price is not out of line with other convenience foods.

The cut can be had a whole lot cheaper, however, if you buy a whole tenderloin and cut it up yourself.

The French label different cuts of the tenderloin depending upon where they come from on the whole filet. Here in the United States, cuts from the tenderloin usually are labeled filet or "filet mignon." The following recipes are so quick and easy you could call them convenience foods, but preparing them also qualifies as cooking.

FILET OF BEEF WITH ONIONS

3 tablespoons butter, divided
2 large onions, sliced thin
8 ¼- to ½-inch thick slices beef tenderloin
½ teaspoon salt (coarse-ground preferably)
½ teaspoon coarsely-ground pepper
3 tablespoons dry white wine

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a heavy skillet over medium high heat; add sliced onions and saute until light golden in color. Push the onions to the edge of the skillet and add the steaks. Brown the filets well on one side, turn and brown on the other; push to the side of the skillet and season the pan juices with salt and pepper; add the wine and stir well. Add the remaining butter and stir in. Transfer the steaks to a preheated platter, cover with sauteed onions, pour the pan juices over and serve.

PEPPER STEAK

3 tablespoons peppercorns
8 ½-inch thick slices beef tenderloin
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt to taste
¼ cup beef broth or 1 bouillion cube dissolved in ¼ cup water
2 tablespoons brandy (optional but good)
1 tablespoon butter

Put the peppercorns in a plastic bag and crush them gently with a rolling pin into irregular pieces. Press the crushed pepper into both sides of the steak making sure it sticks to the steak. Trust me, you don't have too much pepper.

Heat the butter and olive oil in a large, heavy skillet over high heat. Brown the steaks in it on both sides and cook until they are at the desired degree of doneness. Season with salt. Remove the steaks to a warm serving platter.

Reduce the heat slightly and add the beef broth. Stir well with a wooden spoon to loosen all the goodies from the bottom of the pan. Add the brandy and flame, if you wish. Continue cooking until the sauce has reduced slightly and taken on a nice glaze, then stir in the butter, pour over the steaks and serve.

MUSTARD STEAK

2 tablespoons mustard
8 ½-inch thick slices beef tenderloin
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons gin (or your favorite booze)
4 tablespoons sour cream
1 sprig chopped parsley
Pinch cumin seeds

Spread the mustard generously on both sides of the steaks. Heat the butter and olive oil in a large, heavy aluminum or cast-iron skillet. Add the steaks and brown on both sides. Season with salt and pepper. Splash on the gin and cook until it evaporates or flame if desired. Remove the steaks to a warm serving platter. Add the sour cream to the pan juices and cook over moderate hat, stirring continuously until thoroughly blended. Add chopped parsley and cumin seeds. Reduce the sauce slightly over high heat and spoon over steak.

GRILLED CHATEAUBRIAND

1 Chateaubriand section of beef tenderloin, approximately 2 pounds
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly-ground black pepper
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Cut the tenderloin into two equal pieces. Flatten each slightly with the side of a meat cleaver. Brush on both sides with olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Pan broil or grill over hot coals to the desired degree of doneness, basting occasionally with melted butter. Remove to a warm platter. Serve with bearnaise sauce, if desired, and garnish with fresh watercress.

BEARNAISE SAUCE

¼ cup tarragon vinegar
¼ cup dry white wine
2 tablespoons shallots, finely chopped
1 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
¼ teaspoon ground white pepper
3 egg yolks
¼ pound butter, cut in small pieces
Salt and cayenne pepper

Combine vinegar, wine, shallots, tarragon and white pepper in a non-aluminum skillet over high heat. Boil until the liquid is reduced to approximately ¼ cup. Let cool. Whisk in the egg yolks over low heat until the mixture begins to thicken slightly. Whisk in butter, a few pieces at a time, until the mixture is light and fluffy. Strain the sauce and season to taste with salt and pepper.

Resident of Sun City uses sunshine for his cooking

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — This summer, when it felt so hot you could cook an egg on the sidewalk, Joe Jamieson was doing something along that line.

What he actually did was cook everything from eggs to bread in a solar oven. He has done so for almost two years now.

The former newsman and his wife, Judith — both staunch advocates of solar power — became interested in the unconventional oven-cooking method while visiting a friend in Prescott. They bought the solar cooker she wasn't using.

The Jamiesons, who came here from Bethesda, Md., say solar ovens are perfect for the desert clime.

One of the first things the couple did when they purchased their home six years ago was install a solar hot water heater.

"It's just a shame more people don't use the sun. Look at that," Jamieson said, motioning toward a clear summer sky. "Isn't that gorgeous? It's free, too. Nobody charges you for the sun."

One reason why others might be reluctant to try solar cooking, he explained, is the constant attention that must be paid to the oven.

At the top of the cooker, which resembles a mirrored satellite dish, is a tiny spike — like a sundial.

"You have to keep the pointer to the sun," Jamieson explained, making a minor adjustment to the oven. "You should eliminate the shadow."

Every 15 minutes or so, the solar chef ventures out from the air conditioning and into the sunlight to adjust the oven. More expensive solar ovens are equipped with motors to automatically track the sun, but Jamieson said he doesn't mind the bother of doing it himself.

Food is put in the center of the oven, underneath a glass cover. Steam escapes through a small pipe. Otherwise, he noted, trapped steam would prevent the sun's rays from penetrating the glass.

Glass pans are best for solar cooking, he advised. Moist foods must be put in plastic cooking bags.

He claimed just about anything can be baked in a solar oven: barbecued chicken, beef stew, apple crisp, breads and even a super-moist pound cake.

His wife is clearly in charge of the indoor kitchen, he added. Together, the couple has sampled culinary treats from all over — especially Jamieson, who traveled a lot in his journalism career.

Jamieson worked for The Associated Press for 30 years, serving as assignment editor and photo editor. He also worked at the Washington Post and The New York Times.

Jamieson also looks forward to a long winter cooking season for his solar oven.

In the summer, he can cook from 10 in the morning to 2 or 3 in the afternoon. On shorter winter days, he cooks from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Jamieson bakes a lot of bread in his oven, such as Raisin-Graham Bread and Quick Brown Bread, both recipes given to him by friends. The breads may be made in home conventional ovens by following the same directions.

RAISIN-GRAHAM BREAD

4 cups water
15-16 ounces raisins
3 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup sugar
4 cups graham flour

Grease and flour one regular meat loaf pan or two smaller tins. Bring water and raisins to a boil and remove from heat. Add baking soda. Let cool. Add salt, eggs and sugar. Mix in graham flour. Bake at 325 degrees for 60 minutes or until done.

QUICK BROWN BREAD

3 tablespoons margarine
2 cups white flour
2 cups graham flour
¾ cup molasses
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup brown sugar
2 cups sour milk
½ cup raisins
2 heaping teaspoons baking soda

Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Put in two pans to rise in a warm place for 45 minutes or until almost double in bulk. (Jamieson said coffee cans used as baking pans work well.) Bake in moderate oven until done.

The bread goes well with baked beans, says the solar cook.

Council to leave light at corner of Wadley, I

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The traffic light at the Wadley and I intersection will be around for at least another year, under a motion unanimously approved by the Midland City Council Tuesday.

Councilman David Godfrey initiated the motion that would "leave the light as it is throughout the balance of the school year."

During the interim, the Council will consult with Midland College, 3600 Garfield, The Hillander School, 1600 W. Wadley, and the Midland Community Theater, 2000 W. Wadley, about the traffic light.

The Council heard almost a hour of testimony Tuesday from Midlanders representing area neighborhoods, Midland College, the Hillander School and the Midland Community Theatre.

Greg Elsner of the Community Theater told the Council, "Thank you for the light. It's let us move 300 to 400 cars in and out of that area safely."

Other Midlanders testified that removal of the light would increase accidents and make it impossible for them to get onto Wadley Avenue safely from adjacent side streets.

The city traffic engineering department is requesting the removal of the light because it causes "tremendous" delay and cost to the people who use Wadley Avenue, said city traffic engineer, Fred McGary.

McGary said waiting at the traffic light costs each average motorist 30 cents extra in fuel per day. He said about 21,000 cars use Wadley Avenue every day, while only 1,264 cars a day use I Street.

The light has been in full operation for about one year, McGary said. The signal was turned on last summer when Garfield Street was being paved, to open a back entrance to Midland College, McGary said.

McGary said most people want the light to slow down traffic so they can get onto Wadley Avenue from a half of block away or further from the actual intersection. McGary said there is not enough traffic on I to warrant a stoplight there.

"A signal or stop sign isn't put there to slow down traffic. A signal is put there to assign flow to the side street. So the side street traffic can get out into the stream," McGary said.

In other action the council approved the following resolutions that will:

- appropriate funds for Police Department uniforms and leather goods.

Hance doesn't think switch to GOP will hurt him with voters

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

When Kent Hance last held a press conference at Midland Regional Airport, he was running for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator.

After narrowly losing that race to Lloyd Doggett, Hance switched parties. At Tuesday's airport press conference, the former congressman from Lubbock was pushing his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and he dismissed suggestions that his Johnny-come-lately status in the GOP would hurt him with voters.

"The Republican Party is not a social organization, it's a political organization" based on merit, he said. "And merit produced Ronald Reagan — and seniority produced Tip O'Neill."

Hance said his party switch was based on philosophy, not opportunism, and claimed he would have beaten Gov. Mark White in the Democratic primary had he not become a Republican instead.

"The Democratic leadership didn't agree with my philosophy," he said.

The three-way race for the GOP nomination between Hance, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Gov. Bill Clements "will be good for the party," said Hance. Some GOP pols had hoped he would run for attorney general instead, but Hance insisted he is the strongest candidate against White.

"You don't take your fastest horse and put it in your third race," said Hance, who accused White of showing a lack of leadership.

"I think Mark has a tough time making up his mind on a lot of issues," said Hance, who also feels the governor is too partisan in his appointments. But the centerpiece of Hance's campaign strategy appears to be his stand against higher taxes — a stand reminiscent of White's four years ago.

"State government spending since 1974 has grown 246 percent while inflation has risen 82 percent," said Hance, who pledged to use the veto to curb the legislative appetite for spending taxpayers' money.

While he conceded Texas is not highly taxed compared with other states, "I think we're on the verge," Hance said. "The public hasn't felt the impact yet" of tax increases to pay for education reform and other new programs.

"It will be my goal to use all the power of the Governor's Office to further develop our state, in an environment of economic opportunity, free from unnecessary, restrictive government," Hance said.

He also called for building more prisons instead of letting prisoners out early; said as governor he would lobby Congress to make sure any bill on illegal immigration would be acceptable to Texans; and pledged to help bring in new industries to revitalize declining rural counties.

"We have the talent and resources to be stronger and more prosperous than ever as we enter the 21st century," Hance said. "I want to work as your governor to lead our state to a new confidence, a new prosperity and a brighter future."

MC instructor's First Amendment trial to start

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What is or isn't profane — particularly in the classroom — the reputation of a college economics instructor who allegedly used uncouth language in teaching at Midland College, and his constitutional right of freedom of speech will be addressed next week in a federal-court trial here.

Dr. Jay Dee Martin, an eight-year Midland College economics instructor who was fired last year after being warned to cease using profane language in the classroom, contends he has a First Amendment constitutional right "to engage in any teaching method of his choosing."

The Midland College administration disagreed.

Martin was fired in 1984 and currently is teaching economics at a four-year college in Virginia.

His firing came after two students, Richard A. Sexton and Tim Rogers, had complained by letter to the administration — via Dr. Raymond Yell, dean of Midland College.

Sexton, a lieutenant in the Midland County Sheriff's Department, cited Martin's "anger" in the classroom on June 19, 1984, and his use of such words as "sucks" and "bullshit." Rogers, an investigator in the sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division, complained about Martin's alleged "verbal attack on the class" on the same date; complained about his use of "foul language," including the word "sucks," and complained "about his discourteous and belittling treatment of students," according to court records.

A year earlier, Martin had been issued a "warning" on his use of verbal obscenity in the classroom by Dr. Don Hunt, Midland College vice president, upon the recommendation of Dr. Will Morris, Martin's divisional chairman and chairman of Cultural Studies.

In depositions taken this summer at Midland College, Hunt and Yell were queried by Martin's attorney, John L. Barnhill of Crosbyton, on their views on "profane" language.

"Now, is there a policy on profanity or use or forbidden profanity at Midland College?" Barnhill asked Hunt.

"Not to my knowledge that there is one that says if you cuss you are fired," replied Hunt.

Hunt had defined profanity as "unacceptable, dirty language."

"And anybody that uses unacceptable, dirty language needs to be looking about their job," he said.

Barnhill asked Hunt to give him examples of "unacceptable, dirty language."

Hunt listed several words. He also said "hell" was an offensive word and that "darn" held "a degree" of offensiveness.

Odessa music store suit alleges monopoly

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An antitrust lawsuit, seeking damages of $750,000, has been filed in federal court in Midland against an Odessa music store, Ector County school district, seven band directors and two manufacturers of musical instruments.

In the suit filed on behalf of Ernest F. Shelton, longtime owner of Shelton Music Co., 410 N. Grant, Odessa attorney Gerald Lopez charges "defendants have combined, conspired and monopolized the retail sales industry of band instruments and attempted to drive the plaintiff out of business."

The lawsuit specifically alleges "The Ector County Independent School District through its agent J.R. McIntyre (school district band director) has established certain lists of accepted brand names for use in their band program and classes for beginning students."

Named in the suit, in addition to the ECISD and McIntyre, are May & Duncan Music Co., C.G. Conn Ltd, Elkhart, Ind., LeBlanc Corp, Kenosha, Wis., and the band directors at Hood, Nimitz, Crocket and Ector junior high schools, as well as two school district violin teachers.

"As part of the conspiracy or combination to insure that only the defendant May and Duncan Music Company receive the major part of the band instrument sales business, the lists include brand names which are sold only by the defendant," Lopez contends in the petition filed.

In addition to alleged lists compiled by McIntyre, the suit further alleges "junior high music directors have from time to time also composed their own lists which are passed out to students." Instrument manufacturers Conn and LeBlanc, "and possibly other manufacturers," are alleged to "have refused to sell instruments to the plaintiff," Shelton Music Company.

Lopez contends May and Duncan "has threatened these and other suppliers with withdrawing its orders from such manufacturers if such manufacturers agree to sell" to Shelton.

The suit contends ECISD has a written policy that states "no employee of the district shall recommend a particular store or brand of instrument." The several band directors, Lopez alleges, "have violated this policy by telling parents and students that they will privately recommend a store or brand or trademark."

McIntyre, as school district band director, the petition contends, has allowed band director to accept "such gratuities as Thanksgiving and Christmas turkeys" and "attend get acquainted meetings at May and Duncan."

Support groups growing steadily

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Their numbers are growing. A quick glance through any "what's happening this week" section of a newspaper lists dozens of support groups for people with a myriad of interest and problems.

Most share certain characteristics in common. They have been formed by one or several persons who had decided that they would not bear a burden alone, are usually small, change members periodically and meet once or more times a month.

One of the newer groups to form, Family and Individual Reliance (FAIR), has steadily grown since its formation in April.

"The growth has been very slow, but very solid," said Sarah Boering, who started the Austin-based mental health group after seeing the mental demise of a close friend. "We started in early spring and had to weather the summer months, but have real meetings with real people."

Ms. Boering formed the group after a crisis during which she met some relatives of the founder of FAIR, a state-wide web of support groups under the auspices of the Mental Health Association in Texas.

"I was in Louisville at a hotel because a close friend who had been fighting a running battle with mental illness for 20 years was in a hospital," she recalled in an earlier Reporter-Telegram article. "I walked out on the patio because I couldn't stand the babbling anymore and thought, 'I really need to talk to someone.' "

While at the hotel, Ms. Boering met the in-laws of Hal Harrolson, the FAIR co-founder, and later met Harrolson, who encouraged her to form a FAIR group in Alpine where Ms. Boering was living at the time. Although the group never got off the ground, she was contacted again by another FAIR co-founder, Dian Cox Leighton who asked her if she was still interested.

Ms. Boering accepted the challenge after being warned that "Midland was a hard nut to crack due to its conservative nature."

"I came back with the resolve that if we only had two people in the county who were interested, we would form a group," she said.

Today, Ms. Boering has five times that many members in her group, which she describes as "alive and kicking."

Most Midlanders hopeful about secure financial future

RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Experts are predicting an upturn the U.S. economy after a year-long mp.

ast week the Commerce Depart- t in Washington reported a 0.7 ent increase in economic activi- or August. Civilian unemploy- t was 7 percent in August, while umer spending, housing, con- ction and industrial production increased.

light of the bright economic cast, Midlanders were asked in a dom survey whether they ght they would be better off fi- ially in five years. Out of 16 peo- polled, only two predicted a y financial future. Fourteen were hopeful and predicted a re future money-wise for elves.

bara Fennell, a secretary who on Route 6, said, "I think it's going to get better. I think Reagan is going to do something. I think all the stuff he's cutting is going to help."

Mike Hedrick, an oil operator who lives at 902 Country Club, said he will be better off in five years because, "In terms of Midland, the economy will be better. The oil industry will remain good as long as we live."

Jim Brookman, 4406 W. Storey, who works for a paper company, said he also believes he will be better off in the future because Midland will have another oil boom by then.

"We'll have more booms. I believe oil will go up," Brookman said.

Steve Prewit, 516 North Loop 250 West, a surveyor, was also optimistic about his financial future because the oil business has increased his business.

"Our business has picked up considerably. We've been real busy and don't expect it to slack off that much," Prewit said.

Jim Harris, 3107 Haynes, an oil operator, said he will be better off financially because of his upcoming retirement.

"I'll be retired. I will have my own peanut stand and will be making more money," Harris said.

Gabriel Medellin, No. 17 Industrial Loop East, a heating and air conditioning parts store manager, said he'll be better off if the trade deficit is reduced.

"The economy seems to be on a 'uptrend.' I think once they primarily get the trade deficit under control it will help. The trade deficit is where we're hurting the most," Medellin said.

Tom Altman, a mud engineer, who declined to have his address printed, said his financial future depends on the rate of inflation. "It all depends on what the rate of inflation is. If it's going to go up then we'll have less spending power. If you have more money it doesn't matter," Altman said.

W.E. Holeman, who lives in rural Midland and manages a chemical company, said he will be better off financially no matter what happens, because the country has the ability to adjust.

"I think from 1982 until now, we've had to adjust some. I think regardless of what comes, we can make the adjustment and do even better," Holeman said.

Roxanne Green, a housewife who lives at 1700 W. Washington, said she expects to be better off in five years because "it would be stupid to think it would be worse off. We ought to think we'll better off."

Perry Connell, 1002 Sinclair, a moving and storage business manager, said he was hopeful about his financial future because, "I think our trend is turning around slowly. I think it's going upward. It's a slow process but I think it will be a good process."

Geologist Larry Marquez, who didn't want his street address published, also said he believes the economy is going to turn around. "You gotta look forward, you can't go backward," he said.

The two Midlanders who doubted financial security in the future included Roger Taylor, 1200 Community Lane, who works at the Midland County Public Library. Taylor said he will not be better off financially in five years because, "I'm going to move to someplace like Alaska and make do with the bare essentials of life."

The other Midlander who didn't want her name used said she'll be worse off in five years because "things are bad now."

Resident of Sun City uses sunshine for his cooking

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — This summer, when it felt so hot you could cook an egg on the sidewalk, Joe Jamieson was doing something along that line.

What he actually did was cook everything from eggs to bread in a solar oven. He has done so for almost two years now.

The former newsman and his wife, Judith — both staunch advocates of solar power — became interested in the unconventional oven-cooking method while visiting a friend in Prescott. They bought the solar cooker she wasn't using.

The Jamiesons, who came here from Bethesda, Md., say solar ovens are perfect for the desert clime.

One of the first things the couple did when they purchased their home six years ago was install a solar hot water heater.

"It's just a shame more people don't use the sun. Look at that," Jamieson said, motioning toward a clear summer sky. "Isn't that gorgeous? It's free, too. Nobody charges you for the sun."

One reason why others might be reluctant to try solar cooking, he explained, is the constant attention that must be paid to the oven.

At the top of the cooker, which resembles a mirrored satellite dish, is a tiny spike — like a sundial.

"You have to keep the pointer to the sun," Jamieson explained, making a minor adjustment to the oven. "You should eliminate the shadow."

Every 15 minutes or so, the solar chef ventures out from the air conditioning and into the sunlight to adjust the oven. More expensive solar ovens are equipped with motors to automatically track the sun, but Jamieson said he doesn't mind the bother of doing it himself.

Food is put in the center of the oven, underneath a glass cover. Steam escapes through a small pipe. Otherwise, he noted, trapped steam would prevent the sun's rays from penetrating the glass.

Glass pans are best for solar cooking, he advised. Moist foods must be put in plastic cooking bags.

He claimed just about anything can be baked in a solar oven: barbecued chicken, beef stew, apple crisp, breads and even a super-moist pound cake.

His wife is clearly in charge of the indoor kitchen, he added. Together, the couple has sampled culinary treats from all over — especially Jamieson, who traveled a lot in his journalism career.

Jamieson worked for The Associated Press for 30 years, serving as assignment editor and photo editor. He also worked at the Washington Post and The New York Times.

Jamieson also looks forward to a long winter cooking season for his solar oven.

In the summer, he can cook from 10 in the morning to 2 or 3 in the afternoon. On shorter winter days, he cooks from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Jamieson bakes a lot of bread in his oven, such as Raisin-Graham Bread and Quick Brown Bread, both recipes given to him by friends. The breads may be made in home conventional ovens by following the same directions.

RAISIN-GRAHAM BREAD

4 cups water
15-16 ounces raisins
3 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup sugar
4 cups graham flour

Grease and flour one regular meat loaf pan or two smaller tins. Bring water and raisins to a boil and remove from heat. Add baking soda. Let cool. Add salt, eggs and sugar. Mix in graham flour. Bake at 325 degrees for 60 minutes or until done.

QUICK BROWN BREAD

3 tablespoons margarine
2 cups white flour
2 cups graham flour
¾ cup molasses
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup brown sugar
2 cups sour milk
½ cup raisins
2 heaping teaspoons baking soda

Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Put in two pans to rise in a warm place for 45 minutes or until almost double in bulk. (Jamieson said coffee cans used as baking pans work well.) Bake in moderate oven until done.

The bread goes well with baked beans, says the solar cook.

Council to leave light at corner of Wadley, I

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The traffic light at the Wadley and I intersection will be around for at least another year, under a motion unanimously approved by the Midland City Council Tuesday.

Councilman David Godfrey initiated the motion that would "leave the light as it is throughout the balance of the school year."

During the interim, the Council will consult with Midland College, 3600 Garfield, The Hillander School, 1600 W. Wadley, and the Midland Community Theater, 2000 W. Wadley, about the traffic light.

The Council heard almost a hour of testimony Tuesday from Midlanders representing area neighborhoods, Midland College, the Hillander School and the Midland Community Theatre.

Greg Elsner of the Community Theater told the Council, "Thank you for the light. It's let us move 300 to 400 cars in and out of that area safely."

Other Midlanders testified that removal of the light would increase accidents and make it impossible for them to get onto Wadley Avenue safely from adjacent side streets.

The city traffic engineering department is requesting the removal of the light because it causes "tremendous" delay and cost to the people who use Wadley Avenue, said city traffic engineer, Fred McGary.

McGary said waiting at the traffic light costs each average motorist 30 cents extra in fuel per day. He said about 21,000 cars use Wadley Avenue every day, while only 1,264 cars a day use I Street.

The light has been in full operation for about one year, McGary said. The signal was turned on last summer when Garfield Street was being paved, to open a back entrance to Midland College, McGary said.

McGary said most people want the light to slow down traffic so they can get onto Wadley Avenue from a half of block away or further from the actual intersection. McGary said there is not enough traffic on I to warrant a stoplight there.

"A signal or stop sign isn't put there to slow down traffic. A signal is put there to assign flow to the side street. So the side street traffic can get out into the stream," McGary said.

In other action the council approved the following resolutions that will:

- appropriate funds for Police Department uniforms and leather goods.

Hance doesn't think switch to GOP will hurt him with voters

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

When Kent Hance last held a press conference at Midland Regional Airport, he was running for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator.

After narrowly losing that race to Lloyd Doggett, Hance switched parties. At Tuesday's airport press conference, the former congressman from Lubbock was pushing his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and he dismissed suggestions that his Johnny-come-lately status in the GOP would hurt him with voters.

"The Republican Party is not a social organization, it's a political organization" based on merit, he said. "And merit produced Ronald Reagan — and seniority produced Tip O'Neill."

Hance said his party switch was based on philosophy, not opportunism, and claimed he would have beaten Gov. Mark White in the Democratic primary had he not become a Republican instead.

"The Democratic leadership didn't agree with my philosophy," he said.

The three-way race for the GOP nomination between Hance, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Gov. Bill Clements "will be good for the party," said Hance. Some GOP pols had hoped he would run for attorney general instead, but Hance insisted he is the strongest candidate against White.

"You don't take your fastest horse and put it in your third race," said Hance, who accused White of showing a lack of leadership.

"I think Mark has a tough time making up his mind on a lot of issues," said Hance, who also feels the governor is too partisan in his appointments. But the centerpiece of Hance's campaign strategy appears to be his stand against higher taxes — a stand reminiscent of White's four years ago.

"State government spending since 1974 has grown 246 percent while inflation has risen 82 percent," said Hance, who pledged to use the veto to curb the legislative appetite for spending taxpayers' money.

While he conceded Texas is not highly taxed compared with other states, "I think we're on the verge," Hance said. "The public hasn't felt the impact yet" of tax increases to pay for education reform and other new programs.

"It will be my goal to use all the power of the Governor's Office to further develop our state, in an environment of economic opportunity, free from unnecessary, restrictive government," Hance said.

He also called for building more prisons instead of letting prisoners out early; said as governor he would lobby Congress to make sure any bill on illegal immigration would be acceptable to Texans; and pledged to help bring in new industries to revitalize declining rural counties.

"We have the talent and resources to be stronger and more prosperous than ever as we enter the 21st century," Hance said. "I want to work as your governor to lead our state to a new confidence, a new prosperity and a brighter future."

MC instructor's First Amendment trial to start

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What is or isn't profane — particularly in the classroom — the reputation of a college economics instructor who allegedly used uncouth language in teaching at Midland College, and his constitutional right of freedom of speech will be addressed next week in a federal-court trial here.

Dr. Jay Dee Martin, an eight-year Midland College economics instructor who was fired last year after being warned to cease using profane language in the classroom, contends he has a First Amendment constitutional right "to engage in any teaching method of his choosing."

The Midland College administration disagreed.

Martin was fired in 1984 and currently is teaching economics at a four-year college in Virginia.

His firing came after two students, Richard A. Sexton and Tim Rogers, had complained by letter to the administration — via Dr. Raymond Yell, dean of Midland College.

Sexton, a lieutenant in the Midland County Sheriff's Department, cited Martin's "anger" in the classroom on June 19, 1984, and his use of such words as "sucks" and "bullshit." Rogers, an investigator in the sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division, complained about Martin's alleged "verbal attack on the class" on the same date; complained about his use of "foul language," including the word "sucks," and complained "about his discourteous and belittling treatment of students," according to court records.

A year earlier, Martin had been issued a "warning" on his use of verbal obscenity in the classroom by Dr. Don Hunt, Midland College vice president, upon the recommendation of Dr. Will Morris, Martin's divisional chairman and chairman of Cultural Studies.

In depositions taken this summer at Midland College, Hunt and Yell were queried by Martin's attorney, John L. Barnhill of Crosbyton, on their views on "profane" language.

"Now, is there a policy on profanity or use or forbidden profanity at Midland College?" Barnhill asked Hunt.

"Not to my knowledge that there is one that says if you cuss you are fired," replied Hunt.

Hunt had defined profanity as "unacceptable, dirty language."

"And anybody that uses unacceptable, dirty language needs to be looking about their job," he said.

Barnhill asked Hunt to give him examples of "unacceptable, dirty language."

Hunt listed several words. He also said "hell" was an offensive word and that "darn" held "a degree" of offensiveness.

Odessa music store suit alleges monopoly

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An antitrust lawsuit, seeking damages of $750,000, has been filed in federal court in Midland against an Odessa music store, Ector County school district, seven band directors and two manufacturers of musical instruments.

In the suit filed on behalf of Ernest F. Shelton, longtime owner of Shelton Music Co., 410 N. Grant, Odessa attorney Gerald Lopez charges "defendants have combined, conspired and monopolized the retail sales industry of band instruments and attempted to drive the plaintiff out of business."

The lawsuit specifically alleges "The Ector County Independent School District through its agent J.R. McIntyre (school district band director) has established certain lists of accepted brand names for use in their band program and classes for beginning students."

Named in the suit, in addition to the ECISD and McIntyre, are May & Duncan Music Co., C.G. Conn Ltd, Elkhart, Ind., LeBlanc Corp, Kenosha, Wis., and the band directors at Hood, Nimitz, Crocket and Ector junior high schools, as well as two school district violin teachers.

"As part of the conspiracy or combination to insure that only the defendant May and Duncan Music Company receive the major part of the band instrument sales business, the lists include brand names which are sold only by the defendant," Lopez contends in the petition filed.

In addition to alleged lists compiled by McIntyre, the suit further alleges "junior high music directors have from time to time also composed their own lists which are passed out to students." Instrument manufacturers Conn and LeBlanc, "and possibly other manufacturers," are alleged to "have refused to sell instruments to the plaintiff," Shelton Music Company.

Lopez contends May and Duncan "has threatened these and other suppliers with withdrawing its orders from such manufacturers if such manufacturers agree to sell" to Shelton.

The suit contends ECISD has a written policy that states "no employee of the district shall recommend a particular store or brand of instrument." The several band directors, Lopez alleges, "have violated this policy by telling parents and students that they will privately recommend a store or brand or trademark."

McIntyre, as school district band director, the petition contends, has allowed band director to accept "such gratuities as Thanksgiving and Christmas turkeys" and "attend get acquainted meetings at May and Duncan."

Support groups growing steadily

By RON GILMORE

Their numbers are growing. A quick glance through any "what's happening this week" section of a newspaper lists dozens of support groups for people with a myriad of interest and problems.

Most share certain characteristics in common. They have been formed by one or several persons who had decided that they would not bear a burden alone, are usually small, change members periodically and meet once or more times a month.

One of the newer groups to form, Family and Individual Reliance (FAIR), has steadily grown since its formation in April.

"The growth has been very slow, but very solid," said Sarah Boering, who started the Austin-based mental health group after seeing the mental demise of a close friend. "We started in early spring and had to weather the summer months, but have real meetings with real people."

Most Midlanders hopeful about secure financial future

Experts are predicting an upturn in the U.S. economy after a year-long slump.

Last week the Commerce Department in Washington reported a 0.7 percent increase in economic activity for August. Civilian unemployment was 7 percent in August, while consumer spending, housing, construction and industrial production have increased.

TDHS investigates school play

EL PASO (AP) — The Texas Department of Human Services is investigating whether a play that was staged at a religious school and that used a hypodermic syringe, a knife and ketchup-covered cotton balls as props involved "questionable content" for children.

Pat Ayala, public information officer for the department's El Paso office, said Monday the drama was performed Sept. 20 at the Community of Faith Christian School.

The play, which focused on a make-believe surgical operation to remove "sin" from a person who "would not praise the Lord," was attended by children as young as 2½ years old, Ms. Ayala said. The oldest were third-graders, she said.

"There were people dressed as doctors and a person lying down," she said. "The doctors pretended to inject him with a syringe, minus the needle, and they rubbed a knife on the table, symbolizng cutting his neck."

She said cotton balls covered with ketchup were held up, labeled with reasons the person "would not praise the Lord. Then the person got up and said he could now praise the Lord."

Ms. Ayala said the Department of Human Services, which investigates alleged child abuse and licensing violations at child-care institutions, began looking into the drama after receiving a complaint from a parent who said the play upset his child. She would not release the name of the parent.

School director Anthony Mixer said the drama was performed, but said it was done in "an upbeat, happy style."

"The program was one of instruction," he said, adding that the children were shown the play's props before the performance and that they knew it was "pretend."

Mixer said that during the drama, children were laughing, singing and clapping.

"I don't perceive any negative effects on the children, though some may not have known what was going on," he said.

One parent who agreed with Mixer, Amy Reynolds, said, "The incident has been misrepresented."

Mrs. Reynolds said her 4-year-old son, Kirk, has attended the school for a year.

She said he came home after the play and told her his teacher "wouldn't praise the Lord and they knocked her in the throat."

"I checked at the school about what had happened, then talked about it with Kirk," she said. "He said he knew it was just pretend."

Mrs. Reynolds also defended the school, praising its "strong discipline and good academics."

She said the school includes "prayer, praise and Bible study" in its curriculum.

The drama was put on by members of the Jesus Chapel West, a nondenominational church attended by some families with children at the school.

Ms. Ayala said the Department of Human Services has sent letters to parents of the children who saw the play, describing the complaint and asking permission to interview the children.

She said the agency's investigation probably should be completed by the end of the week.

If found guilty, the school probably would be given a citation and asked to comply with standards, Ms. Ayala said.

"We believe this is a religious way of teaching children, and there's a fine line between church and state," she said.

GROUPS

"We've had a real positive response," she said. "The members have expressed an absolute delight in talking to others. It's important that someone who has a mental health problem or who is the family member of someone with a problem, not feel like the Lone Ranger."

Ms. Boering indicated that trying to talk to people about mental illness who have not experienced it is "like telling a goldfish what a chocolate soda is like."

"It's just so nice to hear someone say, 'yes, I understand,'" she said.

Currently, FAIR is meeting on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 7:30 p.m. at Good Shephard Lutheran Church. Ms. Boering may be contacted at 563-9051.

Success, however, is not limited to new groups like FAIR. Another group, the Midland Stroke Club has been in existence for a year and a half, and is also described as "alive and well."

"We just had a really exciting meeting — you should have been there," said founder Loretta Lee in her continously positive manner. Ms. Lee is director of the Midland Speech, Hearing and Language Center where she works with many stroke patients.

"We showed the 'Patricia Neal Story' and had about 20 people who all discussed what had happened to them," she said.

The support group, which was formed to "get people out," recently initiated a new community service, which gets one couple out on a regular basis.

"We just started a visitation program for family members of stroke patients," said Ms. Lee. "A former stroke patient and his wife, both members of the group, decided that is was needed."

"For someone in that position it really is needed," she added.

Ms. Lee stated that there is some turnover in her group, "although some have stayed in the whole time."

The Midland Stroke Club meets on the third Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at Kimberly Club House at Maxwell and Midkiff streets. For more information, call 694-6981.

Nothing objectionable found in Odessa charter provisions

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The U.S. Department of Justice Civil Rights Division has notified Odessa City Attorney Joel Roberts it has concluded an examination of two city charter provisions approved by Odessa voters last April and found nothing objectionable in the proposed changes.

The specific charter provisions that drew attention of the justice department set forth attendance requirements for city council members and the mayor (with a procedure for removal for failure to comply) and mandated a runoff election when no council or mayoral candidate wins 50 percent or more of all votes cast. The new attendance provision calls for the removal of any council member who misses 50 percent of the regular council sessions during a six month period. The council meets twice monthly in regular session.

Southside Councilman Thomas Perkins had objected to both charter changes. He contended the new charter amendments were discriminatory and stripped southside voters of their right to select representatives.

The justice department, following a nearly three month review of the two charter amendments, determined no discrimination was intended.

The attendance requirement was prompted, in part, by the fact that Perkins failed to attend all but a couple council meetings between the time he was elected April 7, 1984 and October 1984.

Perkins, a captain in the U.S. Army Reserve, had volunteered for a tour of active duty. After questions were raised concerning his lack of attendance, Perkins named a group of southside citizens to monitor activities in his district and report to him.

MARTIN

"OK," said Barnhill. "Now, how do I know these things as a teacher?

"How do you know them as an attorney," retorted Hunt.

"I don't know," replied Barnhill. "I can't. Personally, I have a heck of a hard time defining what is profane, OK?"

Barnhill asked Hunt "What's profane and what is not profane?"

"Well, to me," Hunt said, "any unacceptable, dirty language."

Barnhill asked Hunt if profanity is "a standard that fluctuates from time to time?"

"I would hope not," said Hunt.

In his deposition, Yell recalled that in 1983, when Martin was warned not to use foul language in the classroom, Yell said "...Jay Dee made the point that he could use alternate methods (of teaching) without using profanity."

"Did ya'll discuss the possible consequences of continued use of (foul) language?" asked Barnhill.

"Absolutely," said Yell.

"What did you lay out as a possible consequence?"

"Continued use of profanity would result in suspension, termination or both," said Yell.

In addressing standards, Yell said he perceived a "difference" in using "some words on an oil rig than you do here (in the classroom)."

"I think there is commonly accepted standards in the community that you live in, that due to the fact that you are a teacher that you are in a different situation than if you you are on an oil rig. It makes a difference of what language you use," Yell said.

Midland College, represented in the litigation by Midland attorneys Harrell Feldt and Barbara Goolsby, claims that Martin "does not deny that he used profanity, and thus waives his due-process claim."

Martin's employment termination was upheld by the college's board of trustees following a public hearing. "The college board did not want students subjected to profane language from a teacher in the classroom," Midland College contends.

Bids to be taken for dam bonds

From Staff Reports

Bids will be opened at 11 a.m. Oct. 15, for $5,590,000 revenue bonds for the Colorado River Municipal Water District to finance the Stacy Reservoir.

Official statements for use of bidders have been completed by First Southwest of Dallas, fiscal agent, on the 30-year issue. Cost of the project is estimated at $68,149,000, and the district will be required to post $2,950,000 on a reserve fund, plus some $302,963 in cost of issuance for a total outlay of $71,401,963. Funds to be supplied to offset this include the $53,590,000 from sale of the bonds, earnings of $17,811,963 on these funds during planning and construction.

Prior to the bid opening, directors of the CRMWD will consider adoption of an operating budget for the fiscal year beginning Jan. 1, 1986. Consideration also will be given to purchase of a tractor truck, the relining of the 1,000,000-gallon storage tank in the Ward County field, and other operational items. The budget and personnel committees will meet an hour in advance of the 10 a.m. board session.

Loss of items worth $700 reported

From Staff Reports

A Midland man reported the loss of property worth about $700 in one of two early-morning burglaries reported to Midland police.

Robert M. Kimbrow, 1100 Humble, reported the loss of a $400 car stereo, a $250 radar detector and a $50 garage-door opener in an auto burglary which occurred sometime between 2:30 and 3:30 this morning, reports said.

Al Garcia, 1511 N. Weatherford, reported the loss of $550 in assorted coins in a burglary at Al's Grocery #2, 1306 N. Lamesa. There was $270 in damage to a glass door in the burglary, which occurred about 2 a.m., reports said.

Lawyer announces court candidacy

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — A Denton lawyer announced his candidacy for the Court of Criminal Appeals Tuesday, pledging to be "neither an advocate for the defense nor the prosecution," but "an advocate for justice."

Rusty Duncan, a trial lawyer with 15 years of experience, will run in the 1986 Democratic primary for the seat Judge Tom Davis is vacating.

"We're going to hear a lot of talk in this race about 'tough' judges, because citizens are, understnadably, concerned about the ever-growing crime rate," Duncan said at a Capitol news conference.

"But, citizens need to be aware that the Court of Criminal Appeals is not a trial court. Its role is to determine if the law has been properly applied in decisions by trial courts and the Court of Appeals, and its judges are limited by law to peforming that responsibility."

Duncan, 40, becomes the third announced candidate for Davis' spot on the bench. San Antonio Court of Appeals Judge Preston H. Dial and University of Texas law School professor Bob Dawson have also thrown their hats into the ring.

White announces grant for MHMR

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White Tuesday announced an $14,787 grant to a Midland organization for drug abuse treatment and preventive services.

Permian Basin MHMR of Midland is one of 45 centers statewide that will share in $1.4 million in federal funds.

"In order to effectively address the problem of drug abuse in Texas, we must recognize the continuing importance of treatment and prevention programs like these, which operate in communities throughout the state," White said.

Lunch to raise funds for Kennedy

AUSTIN (AP) — About 100 selected residents of the Austin area have been invited to a private $500-a-plate lunch Friday for Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who has not yet announced his 1988 political plans.

"This is sort of a joint venture," said Joy Anderson, executive assistant to former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, one of the four hosts.

"They are hoping to begin a dialogue with the senator since he is now supporting oil and gas deregulation and he also is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee," Ms. Anderson said.

The other hosts are Shannon Ratliff, Gov. Mark White's campaign treasurer; Austin businessman Jack Martin, a former aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Bentsen's 1982 campaign manager; and Ed Wendler, Austin land developer and lobbyist with strong ties to the Texas Democratic Party.

Ms. Anderson said the Austin lunch had no connection with a $1,000-per-person dinner in Houston Friday night sponsored by Billy Goldberg, former chairman of the Texas Democratic Party.

Goldberg said he was asked to host the private dinner to raise funds for a Kennedy political action committee that would benefit other Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senate.

Ratliff said he was told the funds raised in Austin would be for the 1988 re-election campaign.

Kennedy's Senate seat will be up for election in 1988, a presidential election year. Kennedy has not said what his 1988 political plans will be.

Ratliff said Tuesday, "It is my thought the money will be for the senator's position in the Senate."

Ratliff said he agreed to host the Kennedy lunch without asking White, who is on a trade trip to Japan.

SUIT

ECISD is alleged to have allowed, "with the concurrence of J.R. McIntyre," the placing on the list of acceptable beginners books, including a book written by a former member of the school district.

Shelton contends the combined action has cost him more than $250,000 over the years, Lopez says but, as provided under law, is asking the court to award triple damages, plus attorney's fees and other costs.

Accident victims in stable condition

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two Odessa residents were listed in stable condition in Medical Center Hospital this morning after a Tuesday accident west of Odessa which claimed the lives of a 28-year-old Odessa man and one of his passengers, according to reports from the hospital and the Department of Public Safety.

Gregory Mark Aaron, 134 Belle, was driving a 1976 Chrysler east on the north service road of Interstate 20 near Knox Drive about 7:10 a.m. when he struck the back of a tanker being pulled by a truck driven by Guadalupe Robles of Odessa, reports said.

Killed were Aaron and 15-year-old John Easterling, also of 134 Belle. Listed in stable condition with broken limbs were Deborah Bounds Aaron, 34, and 13-year-old Eddie Easterling, who were also riding in the Chrysler and who also lived at 134 Belle, reports said.

British Conservatives may endorse arms changes

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Despite an unprecedented offer from the Soviet Union to negotiate nuclear arms control, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party was virtually certain to endorse today an improvement of Britain's nuclear force.

Before the Conservatives' 5,000-member annual party conference was a resolution stipulated that only the costly and potent U.S. Trident nuclear system will ensure Britain's defense into the next century.

Mrs. Thatcher has agreed to buy the Trident system, at a cost now estimated at least $12 billion, to update Britain's Polaris nuclear missile force. Polaris will be outdated by the 1990s.

The conference was unlikely to go against Mrs. Thatcher's wishes.

Last week, during a visit to Paris, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced that Moscow wants direct nuclear arms control talks with France and Britain.

France rejected the offer outright. Mrs. Thatcher's government responded coolly, but did not reject Gorbachev's proposal. Apart from the United States, France and Britain are the only nuclear powers in the 16-nation NATO Western alliance.

France and Britain have long refused to have their comparatively small nuclear arsenals included in nuclear arms negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States. Britain maintains the superpowers should first agree on substantial reductions.

Both Britain's opposition parties have pledged to cancel purchase of the Trident system. The socialist Labor Party is committed to scrapping Britain's nuclear weapons, regardless of any reciprocal gesture from the Soviets, and shutting down U.S. nuclear bases.

Angolan rebels 'beat back Marxists'

By JAMES F. SMITH

WORLD

LOMBA RIVER, Angola (AP) — Rebels say they beat back one of the Marxist government's fiercest offensives of the 10-year-old guerrilla war in Mavinga, a desolate town in the desert bush they captured four years ago and turned into a logistical center.

Jonas Savimbi, the leader of the anti-Marxist Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, told reporters Monday at a bunker near Mavinga, that government soldiers and Soviet and Cuban allies pushed toward the town with about 4,600 soldiers beginning on Aug. 19.

They approached Maving from two directions, joining up on the south bank of the Lomba River on Sept. 7, Savimbi said.

However, he said the rebels stood firm. "They were here for 21 days without making any headway," Savimbi said. "In Mavinga, we were prepared to give our maximum."

If Mavinga had fallen, Savimbi said, the government troops would have won an important staging point for a thrust against Jamba, a sprawling center of 10,000 UNITA guerrillas about 200 miles farther to the southeast, near the border with South-West Africa.

In four years, the rebels carved Mavinga, which consisted of a half-dozen empty and broken houses when they captured it, into a logistical center. They used its dirt airstrip to bring in supplies from South Africa for forward rebel positions, helping stretch their control to most of the southeastern third of the country.

He said his forces suffered 410 dead and 832 wounded in the battle of the Lomba River, involving more than 10,000 soldiers. He estimated the government lost about 2,300 dead.

Savimbi's figures could not be confirmed independently. Angola has not given any overall casualty figures for the fighting, although it has said it lost "dozens" of troops in what it said were three separate air raids by South Africa since Sept. 16.

By Monday, the guerrilla chieftain said, the Angolans were back at Cunjamba, 30 miles northwest of Mavinga and were still being pursued by UNITA troops.

Reporters took three bone-crunching hours Monday to travel the 20 miles with UNITA field commanders to the Lomba battlefield, riding on trucks along small tracks and sometimes bashing through the bush.

At the battle site, dozens of burned-out Soviet BRDM armored cars and supply trucks lay derelict. The few bits of grass that grow from the sand were burned black, apparently by mortar rounds.

At one spot where a BRDM was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade, eight Angolan soldiers lay dead. One soldier who had been sitting in the back of a truck when it burst into flames was burned to a near skeleton.

At another spot, an MI-25 helicopter gunship had been brought down by the shock of a mortar blast while it hovered above the ground, said Lt. Col. Paulo Gato. The cylindrical rocket pods on the helicopter were still half full. Gato said two crewmen were killed and a third captured.

Savimbi said 17 aircraft, mostly helicopters, but some MiG-21 fighters, were shot down by UNITA forces during the battle. Although the ground forces had withdrawn, Angolan MiG-21 and MiG-23 jets still returned almost daily to try to bomb the airstrip and trucks on open spaces, he said.

UNITA has no air power of its own and Angola's Defense Ministry has said South African jets caused the bulk of the losses, not UNITA's array of ground weaponry.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Puerto Rican flood scene labeled disaster area

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP) — The governor declared three days of mourning and announced a multi-million-dollar emergency aid plan for victims of flooding and mudslides that he called the worst tragedy the island's history.

Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon also said late Tuesday he had talked to White House officials about obtaining technical help and federal aid in the aftermath of a tropical deluge that triggered the floods and mudslides, killing at least 66 people.

Estimates of the number of missing ranged from 75 to hundreds.

Jose Dapena Thompson, mayor of this Caribbean city of 190,000 people, urged President Reagan to declare Ponce a federal disaster area "as soon as possible." He estimated damages in the southern region of the island will total "more than $100 million."

About 300 National Guardsmen, called out when the governor declared a state of emergency Monday, worked through the night with civil defense workers and volunteers in search of bodies in the Mameyes shantytown, where mud and rocks buried some 400 shacks before dawn Monday. At least 25 of the dead came from the impoverished community.

Mexico will be 'test case'

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Earthquake-ravaged Mexico will be the first test of a U.S. proposal that banks provide additional loan money to poor countries, French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy said today.

"Will the banks go in? What assurances will they ask? Those are the two questions," he told reporters.

U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III on Tuesday presented his proposal that banks lend an additional $20 billion over the next three years to heavily indebted countries.

One killed in Tunisia

JERUSALEM (NYT) — A Tunisian security officer fired into a group of people on the Tunisian island of Djerba, killing one person and wounding several, the official Tunisian news agency said Tuesday.

The officer, who the agency said was "suddenly seized by a fit of madness," was reported to have been seriously wounded by his colleagues and quickly overpowered.

Djerba, a popular resort for Tunisians that is in the Mediterranean just off the Tunisian coast, about 200 miles southeast of Tunis, is the home of an ancient Jewish community. The Tunisian news agency, in a report monitored here, said the group shot at by the officer reportedly included Jews.

Since the Israeli bombing of the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Army near Tunis last week, the Tunisian press has been filled with anti-Israeli stories and editorials. The Tunisian Jewish community quickly proclaimed its solidarity with the government of President Habib Bourguiba after the raid, and strongly criticized the air attack.

Soviets' release sought

BONN, West Germany (LAT) — The United States is seeking to gain the release of Soviet dissidents Andrei Sakharov and Anatoly Shcharansky through the mediation of Wolfgang Vogel, the East German lawyer who often acts as an intermediary in the exchanges of spies and political prisoners, Western intelligence sources said.

American and West German officials have refused to divulge details about Vogel's role in secret negotiations or who initiated the contacts. But intelligence sources confirmed that Vogel is involved in negotiating terms for the freedom of Sakharov, the Nobel Prize-winning physicist, and Shcharansky, a Soviet Jew and computer scientist.

An early release of the two renowned dissidents has acquired greater urgency because both of them are known to be in failing health. Shcharansky, denied the right to emigrate to Israel to join his wife, was jailed seven years ago and is being kept virtually incommunicado. Sakharov, forced to live under internal exile in Gorki, was last seen in two film reels released in June undergoing medical treatment for serious heart and circulatory problems.

Cotton crop harvested

MOSCOW (LAT) — Two thousand miles from Moscow, in the Soviet Union's deep south, the annual campaign is under way to harvest the white gold of Central Asia, as the official press reverently describes the cotton crop, the country's only important agricultural export.

According to official reports, Central Asian children often spend 60 to 70 days out of school each fall picking cotton. Some are sent hundreds of miles from home.

Protect Your Child!

Have Your Child Videoprinted™ at National Video During Operation Safe Child℠ Week Tues., Oct. 22 - Thurs., Oct. 24

OPERATION SAFE CHILD℠

Videoprinting. An Invaluable Free Identification Aid

On October 22nd, 23rd and 24th, participating National Video stores will be offering to videotape your child. This special filming is called videoprinting. Videoprinting is more effective than a one dimensional photograph because it conveys a sense of the whole child, something a photograph can never do. For instance, it shows that funny little mannerism that makes your child unique, that certain walk or the way he or she talks.

So, if it ever becomes necessary, you'll have an accurate identification tool of your child, which can immediately be aired on television for public viewing. Videoprinting your child each year and again on special occasions also provides lasting memories of your child's "growing years" that you will treasure forever.

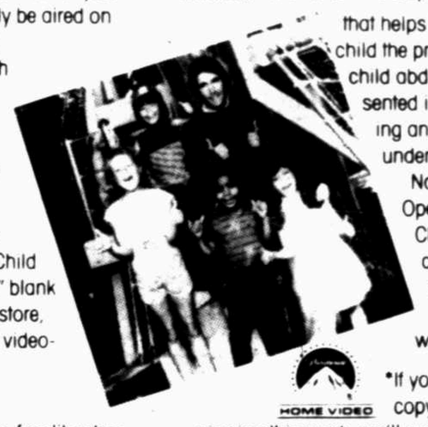

Just visit a National Video store during Operation Safe Child Week, and bring in a VHS ½" blank tape, or purchase one at the store, and you can have your child videoprinted for FREE.

Valuable Free Literature

In addition to videoprinting, free literature will be available, filled with helpful safety tips on how to protect your child against abuse and abduction.

Free Rental of The Video Program No Family Can Afford To Be Without

As part of Operation Safe Child Week, National Video will also offer the free overnight rental of a one-of-a-kind program, Strong Kids, Safe Kids, hosted by Henry Winkler, "The Fonz." It's a special program that helps teach your child the prevention of child abduction, presented in an entertaining and easy-to-understand way. National Video's Operation Safe Child Week is a community service program you won't want to miss!

*If you reserve a copy for future viewing this week, we'll rent it to you for one night free. Strong Kids, Safe Kids can also be purchased at a special low price.
