Voters choose to boost sales tax

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County voters Saturday by a four-to-one margin decided to convert part of their county property taxes into a half-cent sales and use tax.

Passage of the measure will reduce county property tax by an estimated 30 to 40 percent and bring in about $3 to $4 million in sales tax revenue.

"I think the people of Midland realized that the proposal was in the best interest of the community," said County Commissioner Durward Wright. "We did considerable research before we called the election and we determined that statisically speaking, most of the people in the county would benefit from some degree by this proposition.

"Consequently, I'm very pleased that the issue passed. My only regret is the rather modest turnout," he said.

Totally, 5.6 percent of Midland County's 48,000 registered voters cast ballots in the special election. The measure passed by 2,155 votes to 535 votes.

Wright has estimated the tax will allow for a 30 to 35 percent reduction in property taxes and bring in $3.5 million in revenue.

However, the State Comptroller's Office and the State Property Tax Board predict the reduction could be up to 45 percent. And revenues generated by the tax could reach $4.6 million.

The purpose of the tax is to spread the tax burden more evenly across those living, visiting and doing business in the county.

Under the new system, transients, non-resident business people, tourists, conventioneers and out-of-town corporations will be brought into the circle of taxpayers.

But county officials say the effect of the sales tax on the poor and those on fixed incomes will be minimized because such critical items as prescription medicines, groceries, utilities, vehicles and motor homes are exempt from taxation.

The Midland County Commissioner's Court did not officially back the sales tax proposition, although each of the commissioners expressed individual support for the plan.

"It (the tax) is basically revenue neutral. It'll have a large effect on the tax rate, but it will have a small effect on the actual amount of taxes collected," said Commissioner Scott Welch.

"Actually, I was neutral on the issue, but then I decided I'd rather have a tourist pay part of my property tax, so I voted for it," he said.

Presently, Midlanders pay a 5.25-cent state sales tax and a 1 cent city sales tax. Last month, however, the State Legislature passed the largest tax increase in Texas history and raised the sales tax to 6 percent.

Soldier charged in wife's death

AUSTIN (AP) — A soldier whose wife was seven months pregnant was charged Saturday in her murder following identification of her severed head and arms, which were found in a trash bin a week ago.

The dead woman was identified as Lisa Marie Chappelle, 19, and Killeen officials charged Pfc. Ernest Jack Chappelle with her murder. Chappelle, 22, is stationed at Fort Hood in Killeen.

The cause of the woman's death has not been determined, but Austin police spokeswoman Kellye Norris said the Travis County medical examiner had stated that a knife with a 3-inch blade was used to dismember the body.

Austin and Killeen police issued statements in the case Saturday, and said the Army at Fort Hood had joined the investigation.

Austin Police Sgt. Jim Kortan said he hoped the announcement of Chappelle's arrest "will allow the citizens of Austin to possibly sleep a little easier tonight."

The body parts were discovered by transients Aug. 1 in a dumpster at a convenience store near the University of Texas campus.

Kortan told a Saturday news conference at police headquarters that family members reported the 5-foot-9, 160-pound woman missing Thursday to Killeen officials and they notified Austin homicide investigators of her disappearance Friday.

Kortan refused to comment on most questions, saying the investigation was continuing. He said, however, the main lead in breaking the case "was the fact that we believed the woman to be pregnant."

"And as soon as they got a report in Killeen, they did notify us of this possibility of a missing person," he said.

He would not say whether the rest of the woman's body had been found.

Kortan said the woman was identified as the murder victim late Friday, and Chappelle was arrested in Killeen early Saturday.

Chappelle was in custody under $1 million bond, according to Killeen Police Lt. J.W. Dunn, who said Chappelle would be transferred to Bell County Jail.

Kortan said he believed the woman's family was from the San Antonio area and that she had another child. He said he did not know Chappelle's hometown.

Killeen Police Lt. Phil Gadd, who is in charge of the investigation in that city, was not available for comment.

LULAC issues will be presented to appeals panel

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

On Sept. 14, the 15-member U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans will hear en banc the story of the Permian Basin League of United Latin American Citizen's grievances against the Midland Independent School District.

The plaintiffs' case — decided in their favor twice by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in Midland and once by three of the 15 appellate judges — seeks to have minorities "better represented" on the school board.

LULAC and the Black Advisory Council in 1985 filed the voting rights lawsuit against the school district.

Their petition claimed the district's at-large election method diluted the vote of and discriminated against minorities — making it "virtually impossible" for one to be elected.

LULAC and the BAC said they want seven single member-districts to be represented on the school board.

MISD stands by their platform — four single member-district and three at-large positions — on the grounds that it would provide every citizen the right to cast a vote in the election annually.

MISD has said a seven single member-district plan of election would limit every citizen to one vote every three years.

Bunton instigated a stay of election for the school district until the matter is decided upon.

Because of that, board members Bill Jackson, Ron Britton, Fred Newman and Joe Reed are serving expired terms.

Since the case was first filed in Midland, and subsequently heard by three appellate judges in New Orleans, various and sundry parties have been granted intervenor status and been allowed to file amicus curiae or "friend of the court" briefs.

One such intervenor was Midland's Taxpayer Awareness Group.

A motion by TAG to have Bunton's stay of election lifted was denied July 31, pending the the full appellate review in September.

TAG executive committee member Charles "Bro" Seltzer said his 200-plus member organization is not taking a stand on the merits of the lawsuit itself.

"But with a taxing entity that takes up 53 percent of the local tax dollars, we are entitled to a currently-elected board to supervise the spending of the board," Seltzer said Friday.

"We have no interest in the outcome of the lawsuit, but the largest taxing entity should have a board composed of those who can answer to the electorate," Seltzer continued.

Noting that TAG has no specific problems with the current school board, Seltzer said that people serving on boards past their term "answer to no one."

"Look at what is going on with the federal judges. They are on there for life."

Seltzer said the great irony of the situation is that school board members are prolonging their stay of duty by continuing their appeal.

Other groups who've received status as an "intervenor" or an interested but inactive party in the suit are the Midland Women's Political Caucus, Midland Parents in Action Committee, Our Lady of Guadalupe Knights of Columbus, Parents in Control and the Mexican-American Advisory Council.

An intervenor comes into play to protect his rights in the case, Seltzer explained.

TAG is limited in its concern in the case to the point they are only concerned with trying to get the stay lifted so that an election may be held, he said.

Four groups have gone a step further and have been granted permission to file friend of the court briefs.

Warships lead three tanker through gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Three Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag and escorted by four U.S. warships sailed through the Strait of Hormuz, then up the Persian Gulf in single file after a secrecy-shrouded departure Saturday.

Gulf-based shipping sources said that as the convoy cleared the strait, the biggest tanker, the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, moved to the front, a maneuver apparently designed to minimize the ships' exposure to mines.

The convoy is the second to move up the waterway under President Reagan's plan of reflagging 11 Kuwaiti tankers to afford them U.S. military protection.

"The ships are moving in single file — tanker, warship, tanker, warship, tanker, warship," said one source, adding that the fourth warship was seen "exploring" several miles ahead of the group.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the reports came from observers who saw the convoy. The reflagged supertanker Bridgeton was similarly used during the first convoy after it was damaged in the gulf July 24 by a submerged mine believed to have been planted by Iranians.

While the big tankers are relatively able to withstand the impact of a mine, U.S. Navy officers have expressed concern that their lighter warships, with as many as 400 to 500 men aboard, would suffer severe damage and casualties from such a blast.

In Kuwait, a Western diplomat said several floating mines were found in the gulf recently, none moored to the bottom and none in the channel where the Bridgeton was damaged while steaming under escort with the Gas Prince.

Shipping company sources said the U.S. warships had jammed Iranian radar and maintained radio silence during the convoy's 5½-hour transit of the dangerous strait, where vessels come within range of Iran's coastal anti-ship missile batteries.

Race is on in pari-mutuel betting controversy

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The $2 million autumn battle over the ponies has reached the starting gate. It's Tom Landry and Roger Staubach vs. Willie Nelson and George Strait; the pulpit vs. the barbecue.

Both sides are preparing a hard run at the Nov. 3 finish line to defeat or win voter approval of legalized gambling on horse and dog racing in Texas. Lawmakers approved the pari-mutuel legislation last summer, but — at the insistance of then-Gov. Mark White — set up the statewide ratifying election for this fall.

Funnelling most of their efforts through the Texas Horse Racing Association, backers are prepared to spend up to $1.6 million to convince a majority of the voters that racing will become a $1 billion-a-year shot in the arm for the Texas economy. A coalition of church and anti-gambling groups, working with a smaller budget, will try to portray racing as a sleezy industry that will take money from those who can least afford it and boost organized crime's influence in Texas.

With only proposed constitutional amendments and another referendum dealing with the State Board of Education on the ballot, voter turnout across the state is expected to be light. Historically in odd-year elections, only 10-to-12 percent of the state's registered voters come to the polls.

Ricky Knox, executive director of the Horse Racing Association, expects 900,000 to 1 million to vote this year. "Our strategy is pretty simple: we're working on trying to get our people to the polls on Election Day," he says.

Recent statewide opinion polls show 52 to 65 percent of Texans favor legalized wagering at races. Knox says his group is combing through old voter lists in search of those who regularly turn out for off-year elections and will use phone banks to get them out.

Peace still distant in Central America

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Central America's presidents have agreed on a new path toward peace, but still have a long, rocky road to travel to get there.

The pact they signed Friday now must be implemented, with many critical, contentious points remaining for further negotiations.

"We cannot have great expectations...that peace has arrived in Central America," President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua told reporters late Friday on his flight home from the talks.

The plan, which the five presidents were careful not to describe as a treaty, rests on some major assumptions.

— The first is that it will be supported by the anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua, the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador and outside parties blamed for interference in Central America, mainly the United States and Cuba.

— A second is that the Central American nations themselves can agree on issues that have divided them since they first began talking about peace more than four years ago.

The leftist rebel umbrella organization in El Salvador, known as the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front, had no immediate comment on the Guatemala plan.

The Nicaraguan Resistance, the main body of anti-Sandinista rebels commonly known as Contras, gave the pact a wary, conditional nod of approval.

In a statement, Contra leaders said they were willing to negotiate a cease-fire "in situ," or in place, with the Nicaraguan government.

But the new peace plan makes no direct reference to negotiations between the Contras and the Sandinistas, nor does it describe the proposed end of hostilities as a "cease-fire in situ."

A cease-fire in place presumably would allow the Contras to retain any territorial gains they had made inside Nicaragua prior to any subsequent peace negotiations with the Sandinistas.

In a nationally broadcast speech Saturday in Nicaragua, Ortega said a cease-fire must be established so that the rebels would have the chance to give up their arms.

But, Ortega added, the Sandinistas must continue "annihilating" the Contras, and a state of emergency in the country would only be lifted when the U.S.-backed rebels stop fighting to overthrow his government.

Managua newspapers Saturday quoted Ortega as saying the "future of the peace negotiations in Central America will be determined by the attitude" of the Reagan administration.

"While the United States maintains its decision to continue waging war on Nicaragua, we cannot create expectations," Ortega was quoted as saying.

Ortega said the Reagan administration "will try to torpedo these agreements and continue strengthening its terrorist actions," according to the papers.

In Washington Saturday, President Reagan said the United States will be "as helpful as possible" in working for peace in Central America and welcomed "this commitment to peace and democracy." The president, however, stopped short of endorsing the peace plan signed by the five countries.

Any such plan must take into account "the interests of the Nicaraguan resistance," Reagan said in a statement released by the White House press office. The Reagan administration has offered a separate peace plan.

The Contra leaders noted in their statement that "Daniel Ortega has signed a document that carries no sanctions for lack of compliance," yet calls on him to "dramatically reverse" the course of the Sandinista revolution.

"We will be on permanent alert to the unfolding of events and to the compliance of the Sandinista regime...to the stipulated conditions," the Contras said.

The agreement reached by Presidents Ortega, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador, Oscar Arias of Costa Rica, Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras and Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala leaves many issues to be resolved by their foreign ministers.

"It is a conceptual agreement," said Roberto Viera, the vice minister of communications of El Salvador who took part in the two-day presidential summit. "But it is a tremendous step forward."

Arias, arriving home in Costa Rica, said Ortega told him that Nicaragua planned to withdraw a suit it filed against Costa Rica in July 1986 in the International Court of Justice in The Hague. The suit charged Costa Rica with indirectly supporting the Contras by allowing them to operate from its territory.

"I interpret this to mean that after the accord reached yesterday in Guatemala there has begun a new climate of detente, and that the tension that has existed up to now in our relations with (Nicaragua) can change," Arias told reporters. Since becoming president in 1986, Arias frequently has warned Contras they will not be allowed to fight from inside Costa Rica.

Ortega and Azcona on Friday wrote jointly to the court asking a 90-day freeze on proceedings of a Nicaraguan suit, also filed in July 1986, charging the Honduran military with taking part in armed attacks against Nicaragua and aiding Contra attacks. The two presidents said they wanted time for the two countries to negotiate a settlement out of court.

One key issue of the Guatemala accord still to be resolved is the question of arms control, limitation and verification. This has been a stumbling block since regional peace talks first began on Jan. 12, 1983, under the guidance of the Contadora group, Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama.

MISD

They are the Texas Association of School Boards Legal Assistance Fund, the City of Abilene, the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, and the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law.

The school board legal assistance fund and Abilene are hoping for a decision in the favor of MISD; while the legislative caucus and the civil rights committee are hoping for a decision in favor of LULAC and the BAC, Mrs. Hernandez said.

A friend of the court attempts to petition the court to suggest it decide the case with a rationale consistent with its own views, Seltzer explained.

Attorneys for both sides of the suit said they have no smoking guns waiting to be released in the briefs they'll present to the appellate court Sept. 14.

MISD attorney, Charles Tighe, hesitated to talk details on the case for fear of "trying the case in the newspaper."

However, Tighe said the district is of the philosophy that the board should be composed of specific district members as well as those who represent the community at large.

"We are most interested in bringing this thing to a conclusion," Tighe said Friday, though not ruling out a Supreme Court request should the appellates rule for the plaintiffs.

In response to the TAG motion denied by the appellate court, Tighe said he had "a hard time believing it would be reasonable to have an election under some other system" only to have it reversed by the court.

"Then you might just have to undo what had happened."

The Midland County Hospital District — possibly facing its own suit with LULAC — "will be looking at the outcome" of the suit, MCHD director Barry Williamson said Friday.

Early last year, the district elected to enlarge its membership from five to seven members, but held off deciding on how to go about altering its totally at-large system of election.

LULAC threatened another lawsuit — aimed at the hospital district — but the matter was temporarily put on hold by both sides until the outcome of the MISD suit is final.

Williamson said however, the hospital district wouldn't be making decisions based solely on the outcome of the school district's case.

"That decision is limited to the school district," Williamson said.

However, "in the final analysis, the hospital board will make a decision based on what we think is best for the community and the district," Williamson said.

The 25-page brief to be presented by LULAC and the BAC to the appellate court cites the 1986 "Supreme Court case Thornburg v. Gingles as its primary backbone.

In Gingles, the Supreme Court found a history of discrimination and diluted rights of minority voters in North Carolina.

LULAC's legal counsel, Rolando Rios of San Antonio, said he compares the Gingles case with that of his Midland counterparts and feels "optimistic" about the outcome of the en banc or full bench hearing.

Rios, in his brief's conclusion, urges the court to affirm the lower court's opinion and allow minorities an opportunity to participate effectively in the political process "as promised by Congress and the Constitution."

Mrs. Hernandez said she is not trying to appear antagonistic in her drive to rid the community of what she considers polarized voting — a situation which dilutes the vote of the blacks and Hispanics, she said.

A native Midlander, Mrs. Hernandez, 43, remembers growing up near the corner of Illinois Avenue and Dallas Street in what was then a segregated Midland.

Hispanics and blacks weren't allowed in all-white beauty pariors, Laundromats, restaurants or swimming pools, she said.

In hospitals, she said further, minorities weren't allowed in the same areas as white patients and sometimes had to sit in separate medical office waiting rooms.

"Through the marriage of one of my daughters, I now have a fourth-generation Midland family," Mrs. Hernandez said.

"I always thought time would take care of racial problems, but it didn't.

"And although minorities can't afford to be paranoid about racial prejudice," she said, the time has come to speak out to let "others know we are unhappy."

Remembering her family, which has been in West Texas the past 400 years, Mrs. Hernandez said: "At first, we told them 'mi casa es su casa' (my house is your house), but then we wound up with no casa!"

The county receives 46.95 percent of its revenues from residential property; 21.87 percent from commercial and industrial real estate; 19.5 percent from oil, gas and utilities; and 10.81 percent from commercial and industrial personal property, the Midland Central Appraisal District reported.

Midland County's tax base in 1986 was $4.54 million. But the 1987 tax base is expected to drop to $4.2 billion due to the depressed local economy brought on by a slump in the oil industry and declining property values.

The sales tax proposition has received resounding support across the state. Last April, voters in 31 counties approved the the half-cent sales tax. One county — Nacogdoches in East Texas — rejected the proposal.

GULF

An Iranian frigate was later observed trailing the convoy, but remained several miles back and did not cause the warships to react visibly, a shipping source said. The Navy has said an Iranian frigate shadowed the first convoy as it moved south through the gulf the previous weekend.

Pentagon spokeswoman Elaine Mares in Washington said Saturday that Navy officials reported seeing an Iranian aircraft "conducting surveillance operations" of the escort transit group near the Strait of Hormuz and that the Iranian frigate was on "normal patrol."

"The three tankers have safely exited the Strait of Hormuz and are now in the Persian Gulf," Ms. Mares said.

Before dawn Saturday, the Sea Isle city, the 46,723-ton Gas King, and the 79,999-ton Ocean City and their escorts had weighed anchor about 50 miles outside the strait, where Iranian naval forces ended four days of military exercises at midnight Friday.

RACING

"Our polls are showing less than 6 percent of the people are undecided on this issue," Knox says. "In all the public opinion polls that I've ever looked at in the past 15 years, 91 days out from an election I have never ever seen the undecided so low. The people of Texas have made up their mind on this issue."

Opponents acknowledge they have a dual task. They must reverse the public support for the issue and then turn out the vote. The main focus is on church groups with statewide structures: the Southern Baptists, the Methodists and Assemblies of God.

"Our theory is that nothing is real until it's local," says Weston Ware of the Christian Life Commission, the lobbying arm of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. Ware says the Baptists will "spend a significant amount of money" printing and providing education material to the 16,000 churches of all denominations in Texas.

Centering around the churches, opponents hope to organize anti-gambling groups in each of the state's 254 counties. Admittedly behind because of their recently successful legislative fight against a state-run lottery, the opponents plan to send the local organizations everything from sample Sunday school lessons to instructions on running a phone bank.

Sue Cox of Dallas, executive director of the Anti-crime Counsel of Texas, has helped galvanized church, law enforcement and animal protection groups into "Texans Who Care." Ms. Cox says the opponents will spend $300,000 to $500,000 — most raised from church groups — to fight the issue.

Acknowledging Knox's figures on the low number of undecided voters, Ms. Cox says the final settlement of the state's budget crisis may help her change some minds. "When there's conflict going on, they look for an easy solution," she says.

"When that conflict goes away, then they have a chance to look at the real facts and find out there's going to be more problems than prosperity."

Big names, such as Dallas Cowboys' coach Landry and former Cowboys quarterback Staubach, have signed on. Ms. Cox says Landry told her, "Stay in contact because I want to do whatever I can to help."

They're also counting heavily on the clergy's ability to convince. "I think it is important for church people to hear where their pastor stands on the issue," says the Rev. Dean Posey, pastor of Davis Memorial United Methodist Church in Fort Worth and a member of the Methodist bishops' anti-gambling task force.

Counting on the broad-based support he says polls show for racing, Knox says he welcomes the churches' publicizing the issue. "You cannot go into one single pooling of people in any one body and not be turning out a majority for us," he says.

"They're going to be turning out our voters and that's fine with me."

Knox has a long-established network of businesses and professionals — horse breeders, feed growers, veterinarians — who stand to profit from legalized gambling and are collecting get-out-the-vote funds at barbecues, fairs and horse shows.

Environmental boards escape budget cuts

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State agencies that regulate the quality of air and water in Texas for the most part have escaped the wrath of the state budget ax, spokesmen say.

The Health Department's environmental program, on the other hand, will have to curtail enforcement having suffered a hefty cutback in its 1988-1989 budget, the commissioner of health says.

Although the Air Control Board will operate with a 20.6 percent reduction in its share of the state's general revenue fund, new fee collections from industry, plus federal funds, should allow the agency to maintain its current level of services, says Beni Engelke, director of administration.

Nearly $2.5 million in added fees over the biennium "will basically keep us at 1987 operating levels," Engelke says. An expansion of the fee base to include an additional 700 industries will lower the overall fee rate but increase air board revenues.

The board's enforcement duties, which in many instances include same-day responses to citizen complaints about dust and odor problems, will stay at current levels, says Jim Myers, director of that division.

"We have attempted to maintain a high profile regarding public complaint response, and we will be able to maintain that response," Myers says. "I don't see any letdown or reduction in the enforcement areas."

The new spending levels will not curtail the board's regular inspections of those permitted industries with airborne emissions. A new permit continuance program, in which the board reviews every 15 years what were once lifetime operating permits, should get the necessary personnel to do the job, Myers says.

"The inspections of major sources will be maintained," he says. "We could always use more money, but I think we have an effective program."

The power to levy administrative fines directly on industry violators, authority that the board received in 1985, helps beef up enforcement, Myers says. So far in fiscal 1987, the board has levied $613,125 in penalties in 173 cases.

Additional industry fees, along with an increase in federal funds, will keep the Texas Water Commission at current service levels during the next two years, despite a 9.8 percent reduction in state appropriations, spokesman Bill Colbert says.

Higher industry fees in the commission's inspections of wastewater treatment, water rights, the generation and disposal of hazardous wastes and other areas will create an adequate revenue source, he says.

"In general, the public will not notice any significant impact," Colbert says. "The additional fees will help us meet our obligations."

The commission has committed more resources to step up groundwater inspections, a program made more necessary because of tough economic times, he says. Service stations and similar businesses are shutting down across the state, and many of them are leaving behind underground storage tanks that still hold gasoline and other petroleum products.

"The tanks, left alone, may corrode and allow those products to seep into nearby groundwater," Colbert says. "So we will see some increases in groundwater inspections."

The Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the safety of oil and gas wells statewide, has not determined yet the impact of a 5.3 percent reduction in its share of state spending, says Chairman Mack Wallace.

"We have not fully realized the extent of the budget on our environmental duties," Wallace says. "We are going to give the program a high level of attention based on the money that is available."

The commission's goal, Wallace says, is to maintain environmental services at 1987 levels. To help do that, the commission has the flexibility to transfer up to 35 percent of its funds from one division to another.

The impact of a $1 million reduction in the Health Department's environmental program is clear, however. "We don't get out enough now (for inspections)," Health Commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein says. "How do you do more with less?"

Health inspectors keep an eye on safety concerns ranging from the condition of X-ray machines in dentists' offices to the quality of water in motor home parks.

"All water systems in motor home parks should be inspected once a year," budget director Bryan Shirley says. "But we don't have enough people to inspect all of them each year, so we will try to get to the older ones or those that have had problems before."

Inspections of X-ray machines, which should be done at two-year intervals, will now be done every two to five years. Inspections of laser light shows, popular among the rock'n'roll crowd but dangerous if mishandled, will not always be possible, he says.

The department's inspectors also try to keep tabs on nuclear plants, municipal waste systems, occupational safety and hygiene, general sanitation and the state's drinking water.

"The level of inspections will deteriorate in all of these programs," Shirley says.

Pickens-Boeing theory 'strengthened' by purchases

SEATTLE (AP) — The theory that T. Boone Pickens Jr. is interested in The Boeing Co. as an investment, rather than as a takeover target, is strengthened by his reported stock purchases in a second aerospace company, stock analysts say.

"I suspect that T. Boone is doing what he's doing because he sees an undervalued group, aerospace and defense," said analyst Paul Nisbet of Prudential-Bache Co. in New York. "I don't think he's really after any of these firms."

Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership said Friday it owned stock and options representing 4.4 percent of Singer's 21 million outstanding common shares. It also said it was notifying the Federal Trade Commission and expected clearance to acquire as much as 15 percent within 30 days.

"It's obvious Pickens is not planning on taking over The Boeing Co. if he's spending money elsewhere," said Bill Whitlow of Dain Bosworth in Seattle. "This latest announcement gives credence to the theory that he's just looking for a quick buck in an aerospace company."

On July 27, Boeing revealed that the Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa had said it was acquiring more than $15 million in Boeing stock. Mesa also received federal permission to acquire as much as 15 percent of Boeing, the free world's largest commercial aircraft maker and a major U.S. defense contractor.

Singer stock rose $4.62½ to $51.50 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange. Boeing's stock lost 87½ cents to close at $51.25.

In the past, Pickens has limited his takeover targets to oil companies. But he has invested in such companies as USX Corp., Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. and Burlington Northern Inc. Other than the formal notifications, Pickens hasn't revealed his intentions toward Boeing or Singer.

"What his strategy is, anyone can guess," said Nisbet. But he said Wall Street has tended to overreact to bad news in the aerospace and defense industries, and "when you look at them realistically, the stocks are too cheap. I think that's the way T. Boone looks at them."

Analyst Jonathan Squires of Conning International in Hartford, Conn., said Singer's stock is seen as undervalued because it took a big writeoff in the second quarter, although its prospects in aerospace technology are regarded well.

Boeing's stock soared more than $7 a share at the announcement of Pickens' interest, and has since slipped gradually lower. Nisbet speculated that Pickens might have sought to feint at Boeing, "the kingpin of the industry, then move to another firm that is much more a candidate for a takeover."

November voters will have power to ammend state's Constitution

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Levine

AUSTIN — Hope you hurried back from the voting booth Saturday, folks, you've got lots of work ahead of you if you want to be responsible democratic citizens this fall.

Bring out the lawbooks and torch that midnight oil, 27 decisions await you on the Nov. 3 ballot. No candidates are running, just issues, important issues. They must be important because they amend the Constition of the State of Texas.

Actually, just 25 are constitutional amendments, the other two are public referenda of questionable constitutional validity. But more on that later.

Yes, you the voter have the power to decide on 25 changes to our venerable old Constitution. That's a record. It's uncertain just what the previous high was, but this year for sure your lawmakers have trusted you with the opportunity to clutter up the Constitution 25 more times.

Now that's not to say some — or even all — of 'em aren't good ideas. Surely they have merit. But do they belong in the Constitution? Are they the sorts of things we voters are best suited to decide? Obviously not.

Do you think the Legislature should be able to expand the services of the Amarillo Hospital District to include part of Randall County? Do you care enough to want to know? Would you read about it if your local newspaper laid out all the pros and cons for you? Probably not.

Does it matter to you whether or not Gregg County abolishes its office of county treasurer? Me neither. You get to vote on that — and Fayette and Nueces counties too.

You've got $1.1 billion in bond issues to decide; some for water, some for prisons and MHMR, some for municipal public-works projects. There's five amendments dealing with property taxes, three relating to "economic development" and four that'll bring you back to the ballot box — if they pass — to authorize local bond packages.

Does all of this stuff have to be in our Constitution? Unfortunately, at this time, the answer is yes. Because of the archaic and detailed restrictions that've been in there since its 1876 inception, and the 287 amendments we've added since, the lawmakers who wrote up these proposals couldn't accomplish them without changes in the Constitution.

Of the 25 propositions, only one deals with the basic-framework-of-government issues that Constitutions are supposed to be about. With voter OK of that one, the state would be permitted to appeal some criminal cases that the defendant wins. That may or may not be good, but it's the sort of fundamental protection issue that deserves constitutional stature.

Ten years and 56 amendments ago — that's the most recent count available — the Texas Constitution was six times longer than the U.S. version and the fourth longest state constitution in the country. There's still a provision in there providing for "indigent and disabled Confederate soldiers and sailors...and their widows."

Notwithstanding the groans such a suggestion evokes from veterans of the disastrous 1974 constitutional convention, it's time to consider another serious overhaul of the document. A clean-up would not only eliminate much of the extraneous language but — if done right — would also reduce the number of amendments presented to the voters each year.

As mentioned earlier, the fall ballot also contains two statewide referenda: one that would legalize gambling on horse and dog racing and another that would let the voters decide how we select the members of the State Board of Education. Now the gambling deal will probably bring more folks out to vote, and that's good for the process.

The problem is, nothing in the Constitution allows the state to conduct a referendum on such issues. We're only voting on them to help protect some political hides.

Wary of political backlash, then-Gov. Mark White insisted on the statewide racing vote before he signed the pari-mutuel bill. Lawmakers stuck the education board plebiscite in there because they were unwilling to take the heat for making the decision on their own.

Study up, voters, you've got a lot of learning to do in the next three months.

Steve Levine heads up the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau. When opinion appears in the column, it is the opinion of the writer and not necessarily that of the newspaper.

Boy gives thank-you concert after surgery

DALLAS (AP) — A 4-year-old Baltimore boy who first played the piano when he was 8 months old gave a thank-you concert of Bach and Beethoven, Schumann and Stevie Wonder at a Dallas hospital where he underwent surgery to correct a deformity that has left him blind since birth.

Jermaine Gardner was born with Facial Clefting Syndrome — his eye sockets too far apart, his nose without a bridge, his forehead a deformed bulge. And he couldn't see out of the only eye he had.

When his parents, James and Jacqui-Kess Gardner, telephoned their other son to tell him of his brother's birth — and his deformities — they didn't expect his reaction.

"Oh," said Jamal, then 4. "Is that all? Bring him home and we'll be his eyes."

They've been more than just Jermaine's eyes over the past four years.

Mrs. Gardner, a hairdresser who also plays the piano, said she often would hold the boy on her lap when Jamal played the piano. She said she would place the baby's hands on the keys, hoping for some miracle.

Then one day, Jamal paused and Jermaine began to play what he had just heard, Mrs. Gardner said. "He couldn't walk, but he could sit up," she said.

At 8 months old, he also could play.

By the time he was 13 months old, he was playing Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," Mrs. Gardner said. He could immediately reproduce every classical music tape his parents could get when he was 2 years old, she said.

The boy also showed other signs of an above-normal intelligence, memorizing every state and its capital and names of dozens of classical composers, she said.

Jermaine now practices up to four hours daily and takes weekly lessons in technique at the Maryland School for the Blind, his mother said. His repertoire includes almost 200 classical compositions, which his mother said he prefers to popular music he calls junk — except, apparently, Stevie Wonder.

His first performance on a national newscast caught the attention of Wonder's friends, who fluew Jermaine to Beverly Hills, Calif., to play at Wonder's birthday party.

Another performance on a national newscast in April drew the attention of the Foundation for Craniofacial Deformities in Dallas, and foundation officials called the Gardners to offer help.

On Friday, less than a week after facial surgery in Medical City Dallas hospital financed mostly by the foundation, Jermaine played for almost an hour in a thank-you concert. More than 200 visitors, patients and hospital workers who stopped to listen were mesmerized by the music.

White powder 'not illegal"; Man released

HOUSTON (AP) — A man given a 10-year sentence after pleading guilty to possession of methamphetamine was released from prison after tests showed the white powder was not an illegal substance after all, authorities said.

David Collins, 22, of Houston, was released from the Harris County Jail Friday after being transferred there from a state prison in Tennessee Colony earlier in the day, officials said.

"I'm happy to be back out again," Collins said while standing outside the jail Friday evening in a striped shirt and beige Texas Department of Corrections pants. "I'm going home and (will) try to get some sleep and try to forget about all I done seen."

Collins was arrested June 21 by a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper for public intoxication while a passenger in a car. When officers searched him, they found a small packet of white powder that a field test indicated was methamphetamine, said assistant Harris County District Attorney Jim Buchanan.

Collins said he did not know what the white powder was because it was in a pocket of a pair of shorts he had borrowed from a friend just before they drove to the beach.

A day after his arrest, Collins pleaded guilty to the charge because he could not deny the powder was in his possession and because he did not want to risk a life term as a habitual criminal.

Collins had already been convicted of burglary three times and was facing 25 years to life in prison as a habitual criminal. His guilty plea netted him a 10-year sentence.

Teen-ager says shooting 'accident'

DALLAS (AP) — A teen-ager who is accused of fatally shooting a man who gave chase to two purse-snatchers says the shooting was an accident.

"I never tried to shoot anybody...Everything happened so fast," Shelia Ann Hill, 17, said during an interview at the Government Center Jail.

Glenn Michael Sims, 25, a champion gymnast, died Aug. 1 after he was shot in the heart. Police said he drove several miles along a highway, pursuing two women who snatched the purse of another woman in a shopping center parking lot.

Miss Hill said she and Sylvanna Quiroga, 23, also charged in the death, had planned to go swimming and then decided to go shopping. Miss Hill said she had a gun with her, but it was not loaded and she carried it to scare off men who sometimes bothered her on the street.

At the shopping center, Miss Hill said she waited in the car. She said Miss Quiroga returned and drove quickly out of the parking lot and then asked Miss Hill to check for followers.

Miss Quiroga declined to be interviewed, saying she had been advised by her attorney not to comment. Earlier, she said she did not know Miss Hill well and that she begged Sims to leave after stopping the car.

Miss Hill said that several times during the chase Sims pulled along side their car and shouted, "My car goes faster than y'all's" and "I have more gas than you women do."

At one point, Miss Hill said, Miss Quiroga slowed the car so they could talk to Sims who again had pulled up next to them. Miss Quiroga shouted to Sims, "Please sir, I'm sorry. We'll never do it again. I'll give you the purse back," Miss Hill told the Dallas Times Herald in a Thursday interview.

At that point a second gun was produced, Miss Hill said. She said she fired it once into the air and then tucked it into the waistband of her jeans.

The cars stopped and the three faced each other.

Meanwhile, two off-duty Richardson police officers who had been directing traffic nearby ran to the scene. The officers said they saw Sims struggle with Miss Hill, heard a shot, then saw the young man grab Miss Hill's hand, said Jerry Tobia, a Richardson police spokesman.

A second shot was fired, according to the officers. Then Miss Hill pointed the gun at Sgt. D.W. Stewart who wrestled the weapon from her, Tobia said. Miss Hill pulled her own gun, which she had been carrying in her purse and said was not loaded, and was disarmed again, Tobia said.

However, Miss Hill claimed she never drew a gun. She said the second gun was still in her waistband, and went off accidentally when she struggled with Sims.

The incident has left lasting scars. Sims' family in Garland mourned their son, saying it was typical of him to rush to the aid of another.

Miss Hill's mother, Hazel Pugh, said her daughter is a talented honor student who sang in the church choir and loved to work with children.

Sam Houston museum director mad over veto

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A budget veto by Gov. Bill Clements has outraged the acting director of a museum that showcases the home where revolutionary hero Sam Houston spent the last years of his life.

"I'll bet Sam Houston is rolling over in his grave," said Sam Angula, acting director of the Sam Houston Memorial Musuem.

Clements' $167.4 million in vetoes from the $38.3 billion two-year state spending plan included $308,680 in 1989 operating funds for the 15-acre museum on the campus of Sam Houston State University.

The cut, brought on by budget constraints, was not designed to close down the museum, Clements spokesman Reggie Bashur said Friday.

"They have a year to develop an alternative funding source, i.e. federal grant, private grant, or contributions," he said.

The museum's budget for fiscal 1988, which begins Sept. 1, was left intact.

"This museum has a long and glorious history," Angula told the Houston Chronicle, noting the site is visited by schoolchildren all over the state and contributes to the tourist industry.

Davis debts listed at $700 million

DALLAS (AP) — Industrialist Cullen Davis, who once estimated his worth at more than $100 million, will list potential personal and business debts of about $700 million, says his bankruptcy attorney.

The attorney, Eddie Roush Jr., said Davis would list assets of less than $5 million in court filings next month.

The $700 million includes about $500 million owed by the family oil business, Kendavis Industries International, which is also in bankruptcy court proceedings, Roush said.

Davis incurred up to another $200 million in personal debt as a result of real estate deals and investments, Roush said.

"It's shocking that it could happen," said Roush, who has counseled Davis on business matters for the past year. "I got to him too late."

Roush said Davis, who filed for voluntary liquidation of assets under Chapter 7 under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in July, would include corporate claims in the personal filing, because there have been indications that the corporate creditors may attempt to use Davis' personal assets to pay off family business debts.

"If I don't schedule it (in Davis' personal bankruptcy case), I can't discharge it," Roush said.

Davis' estate had a bank balance of $1,600 Thursday, but Roush said a lawsuit filed by Davis against his family business could net him and his brother, Kenneth Davis, more than $4 million. That lawsuit is scheduled for trial next month.

The Davis brothers were once listed among the 400 wealthiest Americans by Forbes magazine, and Cullen Davis was one of the richest men ever tried for murder. He was accused of killing his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, but was acquitted of the charges by an Amarillo jury.

He filed his personal bankruptcy petition after a mistrial was declared in a wrongful death lawsuit filed by his ex-wife, Priscilla Davis, over the death of the girl, Ms. Davis' daughter from a previous marriage.

Ms. Davis and Miss Wilborn's father, Jack Wilborn, had sought millions of dollars from Davis in the girl's death.

She was killed in an August. 2, 1976, shooting at Davis' Fort Worth mansion. Ms. Davis' lover, Stan Farr, also was killed, and she and a family friend, Gus Gavrel, were injured.

The bankruptcy proceedings have blocked the trial of further wrongful death cases stemming from the shootings. Bankruptcy Court Judge Massie Tillman on Thursday refused to let attorneys representing Farr proceed with their case.

Whitetail, mule deer crossbreeding studied

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Researchers are studying crossbreeding between whitetail and mule deer in the wild, a phenomenon that could have scientific and economic significance.

Evidence so far shows crossbreeding appears to be occurring between mule deer bucks and whitetail does, say researchers at Texas A&M University.

The study's economic twist is that mule deer hunting has a higher commercial value than whitetail hunting, said Steve Carr, a researcher in A&M's wildlife sciences department.

Over the last 40 years, biologists, ranchers and hunters have noticed a substantial encroachment by whitetails into mule deer country. The region along the Pecos River is currently considered the border between the two breeds.

The crossbreeding is also interesting scientifically.

"Whitetails and mule deer are good species, and the rules say that good species do not interbreed," Carr says.

Whitetails and mule deer differ in a number of ways. One of the most obvious differences is the antlers. Whitetail racks consist of a number of points coming off one main beam, while mule deer racks have multiple forks.

"The extreme case (of crossbreeding) that I've seen is a deer with a split beam on one side and a straight beam on the other," Carr said.

Biologists detect crossbreeding by observing the metatarsal glands on the hind legs. Whitetails have small glands, mule deers have large ones, and the hybrids fall in between.

Lytle Blankenship, an A&M biologist based in Uvalde, has accumulated data based on observation of live deer and the metatarsal glands of more than 100 deer killed by West Texas hunters.

He says that about one in every 100 deer is difficult or impossible to classify as either a whitetail or a mule deer; that is, characteristics of both are present in the animal.

Researchers believe that about 6 percent of the deer in the Pecos region are hybrids.

"When they do cross, captive studies show that the offspring tend to look more like the whitetails," Carr says.

There is no evidence, Carr says, that the hybridization is producing better animals.

Researchers say there is encouraging news about the encroachment of whitetails into mule deer territory. Studies done by biologists affiliated with Texas Tech University indicate that the whitetails move into new country only as the ground cover increases.

The encroachment into the arid areas of West Texas appears to be linked to expanded agriculture and irrigation, and therefore the encroachment will be limited.

STATE in brief

Austin school district sued

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin Independent School District has been sued by 11 students, a neighborhood group and the American Civil Liberties Union, who claim the district has a continuing policy of racial segregation that is purposely discriminatory.

Also listed as defendants in the suit, filed Friday in federal court, were Superintendent John Ellis and the seven members of the board of trustees.

Along with the suit, the plaintiffs filed a motion for a preliminary injunction, asking U.S. District Judge James Nowlin to stop a new student assignment plan scheduled to go into effect when school begins Sept. 1.

If the injunction is granted, the result could be a postponement of the beginning of school, affecting all of the district's nearly 63,000 students, Ellis said.

No date was set for a hearing on the plaintiffs' request. Nowlin was scheduled to be out of town on vacation for the rest of the month.

The suit was brought just two days after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans turned down a request by the NAACP and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund to block the end of crosstown busing of almost all of the district's elementary school students.

That busing was the result of a 1970 lawsuit by the U.S. Justice Department against the school district.

Methodists under pressure

DALLAS (AP) — Methodist leaders say they are considering a special inquiry to determine whether the Rev. Walker Railey should be defrocked, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

Methodist officials cited growing pressure within the denomination to take action in the case of the minister, whose wife remains in a coma after she was choked nearly to death April 21.

"I feel the church needs to speak to the public and say we have standards," said one official. "We don't approve of his lifestyle."

Railey's future in the denomination could be the main topic of debate when Bishop John Russell meets Thursday with his cabinet, the seven district superintendents who oversee the North Texas Annual Conference.

Railey, former senior minister of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas, has refused to talk to police since the day after the attack and declined to answer questions about the incident when called before a grand jury investigating the case.

"We had a lady call us up the other day and say, 'How long can you let this man go on? This is like Chappaquiddick. We have to get him out of the United Methodist Church,'" said the Rev. Dan Lewis, director of operations and personnel at the United Methodist Reporter.

Railey was relieved of his ministerial duties at the church after his wife, Margaret "Peggy" Railey, was found unconscious in the garage of the couple's Dallas home.

Job growth now seen

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas jobless rate took its first dip of the summer with a 0.3 percent drop to 8.3 percent last month, officials say.

Nearly 100,000 Texans found work in July, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Friday, while 703,000 others were still looking for jobs. The state's total labor force neared the 8.5 million mark.

The slight improvement doesn't signal a rapid recovery, officials said.

"Due to the nature of the economic problems of the last two years, improvement is likely to continue to be agonizingly slow," said BLS regional commissioner Bryan Richey.

The agency estimates Texas' mining and energy sector gained 200 jobs between May and June, the first increase since March 1985. The lift was not statistically significant, but it was a psychological boost, Richey said.

"Instead of continuing to see layoffs of oil field workers, we're beginning to see some people returned to work," he said.

The recent upward trend in oil prices also apparently contributed to a more favorable job outlook for the state.

Nuclear plant protested

AMARILLO (AP) — A retired Air Force lieutenant colonel attending a peaceful protest of a nuclear weapons plant says the lesson of the nuclear age is that war is useless, inhumane and stupid.

Dr. Robert Bowman also says he believes the Pantex Plant near Amarillo could soon be obsolete.

"The minute we have a sane administration in Washington, and I believe we're going to get one soon, the minute that happens, nuclear testing will end," Bowman said at a press conference Friday.

Bowman was in Amarillo this weekend for the Pantex Pilgrimage and Peace Camp, a peaceful protest against nuclear weapons production at the Pantex Plant, the final assembly point for the nation's nuclear weapons.

Bowman speaks more like an evangelical preacher than a weapons expert, but his credentials include serving as director of the Air Force "Star Wars" program under the Ford and Carter administrations.

"We can take great benefit for the advent of nuclear weapons if we learn the lesson of nuclear age that war, any war, is obsolete, is inhumane, is stupid," he said.

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — They were upstaged by their star witness, and saddled with conflicts they couldn't resolve, but members of the Iran-Contra committees say their hearings were successful because they got the story out.

Assessing what they accomplished in three months of prime-time television, six committee members — supporters and opponents of the Reagan administration — all agreed that the American people now have a reasonably clear picture of what happened.

"We won't know if (the late CIA Director) Bill Casey was a principal player or the principal player, but that's not really a necessary question to answer," said Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va.

"It's never possible to tie all the loose ends together," Trible said. "But our job has been to pull the facts together and let the American people judge what has gone on. I think we've done that."

Despite the unwieldy joint hearings that featured 26 lawmakers and a battery of lawyers, despite public squabbles about concessions to star witness Oliver L. North, the panel members said the hearings clearly informed Americans that:

— The secret operations to sell arms to Iran and rearm the Nicaraguan Contras during a congressional ban were run by the National Security Council by former NSC chief John Poindexter and his aide, North.

— Poindexter never told President Reagan about the plan to divert profits from the Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contras.

— North and Poindexter mistrusted Congress to such an extent that they used the private, for-profit enterprise of Richard Secord and Albert Hakim to carry out the operations.

— The arms-for-hostages negotiations were continued despite the objections of Secretary of State George Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

— North, possibly at Casey's urging, wanted to use the private enterprise to carry out other covert operations without using appropriated funds — a way of skirting requirements for notification of Congress.

As a result of the hearings, Trible said, "We know the National Security Council staff was out of control," and understand "the folly of making public policy private."

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said, "Identifying Hakim and Secord, their network of operatives, and the role they played in the actual negotiating process was important. It was important to...expose the operation and the boldness of it all."

Even more important, he added, was the exposure of North's plans for an "off the shelf, free-standing, independent capability that could be drawn upon, from time to time, to carry out covert activities without using appropriated funds."

"To me, this had the most important potential for abuse," he said.

To Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the hearings "accomplished a great deal, because they exposed a government within a government that Adm. Poindexter, Col. North and CIA Director Casey created.

"They showed that the president rejected the counsel and the advice of his long-trusted advisers, Shultz and Weinberger, and that they were frozen out...."

The chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra panel, Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, picked up on the constitutional theme, commenting, "I would say, appropriately, that the people of the United States have become a bit more interested in the Constitution."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said, "The story got told, lessons were learned, and there's a strong deterrent against it happening again because of the political penalties paid by the president." He added, "The Reagan legacy is tarnished because of this unwise undertaking."

Hyde said he also had a personal goal "to see a national focus on the Contra situation. I think it was accomplished." Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., agreed, "We apparently revived the opportunity for aid to the Contras."

Inouye, who rarely became rattled despite incessant objections by lawyers for North and Poindexter, said he would not have changed the way the hearings were conducted despite unhappiness by some members.

The internal strife centered on concessions to North, and the tactics of committee lawyers.

Brooks said he still believes he was right in opposing a committee agreement that allowed North to escape lengthy private testimony before his public session.

Contra adviser regrets inattention to detail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Miller, the consultant who faces a possible jail term for collaborating with Oliver North on Contra aid, says he thought he was doing his government's bidding but now regrets not paying more attention to "legal details."

Breaking his months-long silence, Miller described his fall from a pinnacle, where his thriving public relations firm was the toast of U.S. and foreign governments, into a spiral in which he was plagued by six federal investigations, beseiged by unfavorable publicity, and afraid even to divulge the names of his few remaining clients for fear of losing them.

Miller's troubles stem from his work with North, the former White House aide, to get private funds for the Contra rebels when U.S. aid was cut off.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Miller said he and North received $3.44 million for the Contras from conservative fund-raiser Carl "Spitz" Channell, who raised the money from wealthy conservatives. But he declined to elaborate on how they handled the funds, citing his cooperation in the Iran-Contra criminal investigation.

Miller has pleaded guilty to conspiring with Channell to defraud the government by using a tax-exempt foundation for a non-tax-exempt purpose — raising money for Contra weapons. The figure cited in the government's information that accompanied Miller's plea was $3.12 million.

The 34-year-old consultant said he doubts he will ever be vindicated for his role in the Iran-Contra affair, which has consumed the past six months of his life, devastated his once-flourishing business and left him with more than $400,000 in legal bills.

"I think vindicating myself is a pipe dream," Miller said. But he said his father taught him to never give up, so he hopes to rebuild his firm, International Business Communications, whose clients have included Philippines President Corazon Aquino and the State Department.

IBC's one-time staff of 14 is down to four people, as the investigations into the firm are being wrapped up by the independent counsel, the Internal Revenue Service, the House and Senate Iran-Contra committees, the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department.

Iran-Contra, Watergate seen in contrast

WASHINGTON (AP) — To an observer near the front of the Senate Caucus Room, the Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings, separated in time by a dozen years, were painted in contrasting colors, one green, one red.

Watergate was green.

The Iran-Contra hearings were hued in red.

Red for the red felt cloth stretched across the custom-built, double-tiered dais from which the 26 members of the combined House and Senate select committees gazed down at Lt. Col. Oliver North and the 28 other public witnesses, seated one-at-a-time below them.

Red also for covers of the press tables that stretched under the crystal chandeliers like a gridiron toward the rear of the cube-shaped room.

"It looked like the Supreme Soviet," drawled Alabama Democrat Howell Heflin, a member of the Senate investigating committee.

There were certain similarities between the two sets of hearings. But the differences were as sharp as green and red.

Similarities first:

Both were conducted in the formal splendor of the Senate Caucus Room.

Both were fact-finding expeditions in which courtroom rules of evidence — including bans on hearsay evidence — did not apply.

Both had stretches of plodding, eye-glazing dullness.

Both arrayed strong-minded witnesses against strong-minded committee members.

In both, staff lawyers did most of the initial questioning, not the members.

Testimony in both was marked by conflict, by faltering memories, by what Watergate Chairman Sam Ervin called convenient "forgetteries."

Both had star witnesses.

John Dean in Watergate, purposely toned down for his appearance, peering out from behind bookish horn-rimmed glasses that he normally did not wear. He droned through a 250-page, six-hour, opening statement, setting out his warning to Nixon that there was "a cancer on the presidency."

Oliver North was the adversarial star of the Iran-Contra probe, his Marine uniform crisp, his six rows of multicolored ribbons gleaming, his back parade-ground stiff, his eyes moist, his tone emotional, his instant-celebrity performance the very stuff for which television was invented.

In important ways, both hearings centered on the Constitution, on the duty of a president to make certain that "the laws are faithfully executed."

Then there were the differences:

Watergate produced evidence of campaign and election foul play — including the foiled burglary at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee — that led eventually to the resignation of a president — Richard M. Nixon.

The Iran-Contra hearings found no evidence President Reagan knew about the key issue in the investigation: the secret diversion to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua of millions of dollars in proceeds from secret arms sales to Iran.

The Watergate investigation was conducted by a single, seven-member, Senate panel. A pair of much larger House and Senate committees probed the Iran-Contra affair in rare and nearly unprecedented cooperation.

There was a sharp difference in the perceived conduct of the two presidents under fire.

President Nixon was accused of "stonewalling," of overseeing a "cover-up," while President Reagan was hailed for cooperation that included handing over thousands of official documents, waiving executive privilege for key associates and making available relevant sections of his personal diaries.

Beyond that, however, there was a difference in perception in the way the imagery of the investigations was perceived on television sets across the land.

Some say that perception may have been skewed by a difference as simple and as major as the way the furniture was arranged.

AIDS-minorities conference calls for expanded education program

ATLANTA (AP) — A no-nonsense education campaign targeted at blacks and Hispanics is needed to curb the spread of AIDS in minority communities, which have accounted for 38 percent of the virus' victims, doctors said Saturday at a federal conference.

Additionally, some educators and health professionals among those attending said they were tired of piecemeal campaigns and urged the federal government to commit more funds to finding a cure for the disease.

"It's the same old Band-Aid approach," said Robert Kunst, director of Miami's Cure AIDS Now. "I don't see any sense of emergency being stated here. Let's put $1 billion behind education and $5 billion behind research an stop playing games."

The conference on AIDS and minorities at the Centers for Disease Control came as the agency prepared a new $7 million campaign to educate minorities about the fatal disease. Another $3 million will be added in the next fiscal year.

CDC director Dr. James O. Mason said the education programs and support services for minorities should be greatly expanded.

CDC's tradition, he said, "is to get out from behind offices and get out into the field, where disease is occurring."

But some in attendance said laboratory work should not be neglected.

"This conference is writing off the 1.5 million people who are already positive (infected with the virus that can cause AIDS)," said Bill Bahlman, of New York's AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power. "Again, they're not talking in terms of medicine and treatment."

Dramatic statistics about the incidence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome formed the background of the two-day conference. Blacks and Hispanics, 19 percent of the U.S. population, account for 38 percent of all reported cases of AIDS. Among children with AIDS, 80 percent are black or Hispanic.

And according to the CDC, there are distinct racial breakdowns in the way AIDS patients get the disease: injectable drug abuse or heterosexual transmission account for 45 percent of black cases and 39 percent of Hispanic cases, compared to just 6 percent among white AIDS patients, the vast majority of whom are homosexual or bisexual men.

The disease, transmitted most often through sex or shared drug needles, has struck 39,594 people in the United States; so far, 22,747, or 57 percent, have died.

Dr. Donald Hopkins, deputy director of the CDC and the agency's top black official, called for tough talk in black and Hispanic communities about those groups' key risk factors for AIDS.

"AIDS will not be controlled in blacks and Hispanics without control of IV drug abuse and increased ...treatment for drug abuse," he said, adding that sexual promiscuity cannot be ignored, either.

Eunice Diaz, director of health promotion for Los Angeles' White Memorial Hospital, lauded federal efforts to better reach minorities, but warned that "there should not be any further discrimination and alienation against the Latino community."

And she blasted Hopkins and other federal officials for labeling victims as "promiscuous" and "drug-using."

"That must stop today," she said. "Behavior can put any one of us at risk."

Steve Sroka, a Cleveland public school teacher who has developed educational material on AIDS, said he worried that some of the emphasis on minorities might backfire.

"We have to be very sensitive not to stigmatize and discriminate," he said.

Gephardt, Dukakis 'face off' over trade

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Democratic presidential contenders Richard Gephardt and Michael Dukakis faced off in a trade policy debate Saturday, with Gephardt calling for tough action to curb imports and Dukakis warning such moves would start a disastrous trade war.

The hour-long debate capped a month-long feud over trade issues between Dukakis, three-term governor of Massachusetts, and Gephardt, a Missouri congressman.

While Dukakis accused Gephardt of courting a trade war with his protectionist policies and of vacillating on important issues, Gephardt said the governor was "out of step" on the topic. Dukakis, he said, "ought to start talking to the people who are getting crushed."

Gephardt has gotten attention for an amendment he sponsored requiring retaliation against nations which engage in "unfair" trading practices.

Dukakis has labeled that protectionist and says it would start a trade war.

For his part, Dukakis takes credit for an economic recovery in Massachusetts, while Gephardt claims the recovery was caused largely by a huge increase in military spending. The congressman has said Massachusetts' economic renaissance is not applicable to the rest of the country.

Throughout the debate at Drake University, Gephardt argued in favor of his tough trade policies. In addition, he defended his call for increasing oil import fees, which Dukakis said would strip 500,000 jobs from the economy.

Gephardt argued that the fees are the only effective way to cut dependence on foreign oil. He said they would drive up oil prices and would make ethanol fuels more economic and be a boon for Midwestern farmers.

Dukakis said "there are dozens and dozens of ways" to cut dependence without increasing taxes.

Post fairness-doctrine period taking shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three radio stations in the nation's capital are airing spots for and against Judge Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court: one series is paid advertising, the other uses air time given free.

The circumstance is a product of the fairness doctrine, and possibly one of the last applications of the policy that for 38 years required broadcasters to air contrasting views on "controversial issues of public importance."

The Federal Communications Commission voted last Tuesday to abolish the doctrine on the grounds that it is no longer necessary, inhibits the discussion of important issues and unconstitutionally gives government a measure of editorial control over radio and television stations.

Without the fairness policy, radio and TV stations will no longer be required to cover all sides of an issue.

Broadcasters say that as professional journalists, they will continue to balance their coverage. But doctrine supporters fear biased reporting will become the rule at some stations.

In the case of the Bork ads, the liberal group People for the American Way sought to buy commercials on three Washington, D.C., stations to criticize President Reagan's nomination of Bork.

The stations did not have to accept the ads, but once they did they were required under the fairness doctrine to make sure their overall coverage on the Bork issue is balanced. Each station had several options, among them selling ads to an opposing group to respond, giving time to an opposing group or covering the other side in regular news or editorial programming.

WTOP-AM, Washington's all-news radio station, asked the conservative Coalitions for America to respond to the anti-Bork ads. When the group said it could not pay for the ads, the station decided to give the time free, said Michael Douglass, WTOP vice president and general manager.

"The decision to provide free air time is one that is made as a consequence of reviewing the overall situation and deciding that is the best way to cover the opposing point of view" in a particular case, Douglass said.

"The system we have established internally to make sure all points of view are aired is sensible and workable and we plan to continue it," he said.

However, some groups fear many stations won't continue efforts to get the other side of a story. Even Coalitions for America, which has opposed the doctrine despite the benefits it is enjoying from it, admits concern about what the future holds for it and other groups that lack the resources to wage expensive media campaigns to assure air time for their views.

"We have asked some stations what their policy will be, and they say that just because the fairness doctrine expires doesn't mean they won't continue to offer free time in the future. But they're not making a commitment, and only time will tell," said Curt Anderson, president of the coalition.

People for the American Way sees much darker days ahead without a fairness policy — even for groups like it that can afford to buy air time to disseminate their views.

"We have tried to buy time in some markets and have been unable to buy time from any television station," said Anthony Podesta, founding president of People for the American Way. "I think a lot of TV stations would just as soon avoid controversies and do recipes and happy talk."

Coalitions for America said it was given time to air 19 spots on WTOP and WMAL-AM and sister station WRQX-FM to offset more than 40 paid commercials by People for the American Way.

The fairness doctrine does not require that different sides of an issue receive an equal amount of coverage. It is sometimes confused with the "equal time" section of the Communications Act of 1934 requiring stations to give candidates for the same office equal access to the airwaves. That provision remains in force.

The doctrine also does not tell broadcasters how to balance their coverage. Rather it requires that a station's overall programming reflect all sides of an issue. Douglass said WTOP and many other stations usually cover contrasting points of view in the same story during regular news coverage.

"Good journalism mandates that you do the story thoroughly" and good journalism is common to successful stations, he said.

"That's one of the reasons they're successful. If a station isn't successful, they probably don't have a very large audience so why's anybody worried about them anyway."

In a touch of irony, Bork helped pave the way for the demise of the fairness doctrine with an appeals court decision he wrote in September 1986 ruling that it was not law and could be abolished without action by Congress.

Congress, however, can short-circuit the FCC, and doctrine supporters have promised to try again to do that when they return from their recess next month.

Delegation to discuss MIAs with Laotians

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. delegation will visit Laos next week to spur that country's leaders to account for 549 American servicemen listed as missing on Laotian territory during the Indochina War, the State Department says.

The U.S. group will meet Lao officials for three days beginning on Monday "to discuss Americans still missing and unaccounted for from the war, and other bilateral issues," the department said Friday.

Sources in Southeast Asia had said earlier this week that such a meeting would be held.

Richard T. Childress, director of Asian affairs at the National Security Council, will lead the U.S. group for the first high-level discussions with Laos since last October.

Congressman's death eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least two investigations are being launched into the treatment of former Rep. John W. Wydler, who died earlier this week after being stricken in a congressman's office.

The District of Columbia public health commissioner and the Capitol's Office of the Attending Physician said Friday they will look into events surrounding the death of Wydler, a Republican who represented a Long Island district from 1962 to 1980.

A report in Friday's Washington Times quoted unnamed sources alleging that a doctor from the Capitol's Office of the Attending Physician improperly treated Wydler. In addition, the District of Columbia's Emergency Ambulance Bureau filed an "unusual occurrence" report on the death, said Carleen Baddy, of Tuckson's office.

Wydler, 63, was alone in the office of Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., on Tuesday when he suffered what appeared to be a heart attack, according to Stephanie Taylor, Lent's spokeswoman.

Ring members to be ID'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New Jersey woman has pleaded guilty to conspiring to sell military equipment to Syria and agreed to identify other members of the alleged arms ring that may include Syrian officials.

Rosemary Loughery, 42, of Mount Holly, N.J., agreed Friday to cooperate in the prosecution of her former partner, Philadelphia businessman Kevin Gilday. She also agreed to identify others in the conspiracy.

These may include high Syrian government officials who ordered sophisticated electronic air navigation equipment, according to the indictment against Gilday and Loughery returned earlier this year.

Ms. Loughery faces a maximum five-year sentence and a possible $250,000 fine for pleading guilty to conspiracy to violate the Arms Export Control Act. U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson scheduled sentencing for Sept. 11.

Deportation ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says a federal judge in Chicago has ordered a man accused of being a former Nazi labor camp guard deported to the Soviet Union.

Documents and witnesses identified Liudas Kairys,66, as a platoon leader at the Treblinka labor camp in Poland in 1943 and 1944. A U.S. District Court judge in Chicago stripped Kairys of his citizenship in December 1984 after finding he had concealed his SS guard service from immigration authorities.

Kairys, who entered the United States in 1949 under the Displaced Persons Act and became a citizen in 1957, maintains he is a victim of mistaken identity.

A case similar to Kairys', that of Karl Linnas, attracted wide attention this spring from Jewish groups seeking his deportation and conservatives deploring the reliance of U.S. courts on Soviet evidence.

Congress pushing deadline on passage of stop-gap debt bills

By STEVEN KOMAROW

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' inability last week to fix the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law highlights a pattern of inaction that has left virtually every fiscal decision unfinished with only three work weeks before fiscal 1988 begins.

The House and Senate recessed until after Labor Day on Friday night after passing a short-term debt bill — the fourth in less than a year — to provide the Treasury with credit until September 23. Another debt bill will be needed soon after that or the government will again face the threat of default.

The series of stop-gap debt bills is the result of continuing delays in deciding whether to enforce the Gramm-Rudman law's program for eliminating the government's $200-billion-a-year budget deficits by the early 1990s.

The Supreme Court a year ago ruled against the law's enforcement mechanism, automatic spending cuts that would slash programs across the board if Congress and the president failed to find more rational ways to achieve its deficit-reduction goals.

Supporters of Gramm-Rudman proposed last year a revised, constitutional cutback scheme as an amendment to a permanent increase in the national debt ceiling. But it died in the waning hours of the 99th Congress as Democratic opposition threw down roadblocks and GOP lawmakers decided they'd leave town for their re-lection campaigns.

A short-term debt bill passed then lasted until May. But little was done, and another stop-gap bill carred the government into July. Then another was needed.

The House and Senate finally both endorsed fixing Gramm-Rudman, but they left only four days of hard talks last week to find a compromise. Marathon negotiations failed to find the answer and they'll resume in September, thanks to the latest short-term debt bill.

But Gramm-Rudman is just one part of the complex fiscal picture. It provides the barest outline of what should be accomplished toward reducing the deficit, but it doesn't say how the goals should be met, whether through spending cuts, tax increases or any combination of the two.

Congress passed a fiscal 1988 budget just before its July recess — more than two months late — that called for a $19.3 billion tax increase, restraint on government spending and other savings to reduce the deficit by $37 billion.

The budget failed to meet the original Gramm-Rudman law's goal of a $108 billion, soaring least $25 billion over target. President Reagan's budget, which Congress rejected, got no closer and one of the revisions in the new Gramm-Rudman would be new, easier-to-meet targets.

Even with a budget going only part-way to its deficit reduction commitment, Congress has failed to implement its major provisons.

The House Ways and Means Committee — which was supposed to finish its work by July 28 — has barely started its discussions on which taxes to raise. Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and other Democrats were waiting for the Gramm-Rudman law to be fixed, on the theory that automatic cuts might get the president to back off his threat to veto any tax boost.

Concealed weapons law to leave thousands 'armed'

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Many more people will be licensed to carry concealed weapons in Florida next year under a new state law perhaps nine or 10 times as many people as at present.

"That's a frightening thought," said state Rep. Mike Abrams, who fought the legislation.

"The streets may be a little safer," said state Rep. Ron Johnson, the driving force behind passage of the bill that goes into effect Oct. 1.

State officials predict 120,000 people will apply for the state licenses to carry guns concealed on their bodies or in their purses, coat pockets or boots. And they expect most of the applicants will qualify.

No more than 10,000 to 15,000 people statewide currently are licensed by local governments to carry concealed guns.

The Legislature last spring passed both the concealed weapons bill and a companion measure that wiped out all the local gun-control ordinances in favor of uniform, statewide laws.

The local ordinances in most urban counties limited carry permits to people with a work-related need for a weapon.

But under the new law, a person with no criminal record need only pass a gun safety course, pay a $125 fee and express a need to carry a handgun, such as a concern for personal safety. They also will be fingerprinted.

Critics complained the new law would make getting a license to carry a concealed weapon easier than getting a driver's license. State Attorney General Bob Butterworth called it "the gun dealer relief act."

Abrams and others fear the law sends a bad message about lawlessness and retribution, particularly in light of a recent shooting spree that left three people dead in a Port St. Joe courthouse and random shootings on California freeways.

But Johnson said he finds the thought of armed citizens comforting. Thugs might think twice before menacing law-abiding people if they think they might be facing a gun, he said.

"It's our belief we might possibly see a decrease in the crime rate ... because criminals don't want to be shot," said Marion Hammer, a lobbyist for Unified Sportsmen of Florida.

Why Our Merger Is The Right Response For Texas.

There's been a great change that's come over Texas in the past few years. It's a change that has affected every aspect of Texas life. Including banking. InterFirst and RepublicBank's reaction to it has been unique. After 60 years of friendly competition, we have joined forces to become First RepublicBank.

Perhaps most important is that we'll be sharing a common philosophy. To provide superior service and better financial tools for our customers. In the coming months, we plan to introduce innovative new ideas to banking here in Texas.

Second, our partnership will make us a better bank. It puts us in a position to serve you better. Our combined facilities will make banking with us more convenient. And our combined operations will make banking more efficient.

Third, it makes us stronger. By combining assets, we've become the largest Texas bank ever. And our financial clout now goes beyond Texas' borders. As the twelfth largest bank in the country, our combined size gives us the necessary capabilities we need now and in the future.

These are a few of the reasons we at InterFirst and RepublicBank have come together. We know it was right for us. Now, we intend to show you how right it is for your banking needs as well.

The Right Response.

Scientists study supernatural, say 'whys, hows' are mystery

WORLD

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Scientists who investigate such mysteries as psychic spoon-bending, mind-reading and things that go bump in the night wound up an international conference Saturday saying there's something out there, but they aren't sure what.

"There is now enough information from research to suggest that some odd things do happen, but there's no cohesive theory as to why and how they happen," said American Professor Robert L. Morris of Edinburgh University.

Morris, 45, Britain's first professor of parapsychology, said in an interview that his science deals with "curious things that aren't explained."

"We don't know what the outcome of the many investigations will be and if it turns out that psychic phenomena are merely the application of known physics and biology, and can be explained in ordinary terms, well, that's fine," he said.

Morris, formerly of Syracuse University, New York, joined 140 other scientists in the field to discuss their work, in Edinburgh at the five-day, 30th annual conference of the Parapsychological Association.

A note of caution about believing fantastic stories was sounded by Dr. John Beloff, a retired Edinburgh University psychologist who organized the meeting with Morris.

"I consider that excessive credulity does far more harm than excessive incredulity," said Beloff.

In his address on the credibility of psychic claims, Beloff said there were fewer cases around of alleged psychic activity than there used to be.

He said Uri Geller, who gained fame with his claimed ability to bend spoons by thought alone, "has taken a terrible battering and the mini-Gellers have become even scarcer."

But from time to time, there were amazing claims, Beloff said. "Our ancestors called them miracles or witchcraft but modern researchers should adopt a neutral term such as 'extreme phenomena,'" he said.

If such extreme phenomena exist, it is intellectually dishonest as well as cowardly to discount them, Beloff said.

Morris said investigators of the paranormal have a handy short name for the apparently inexplicable. They call it psi, which rhymes with sigh.

Psi covers extrasensory perception or ESP, which is knowing things you couldn't have known by the usual means, like sensing the death of a relative at the moment of death, or dreaming of a plane crash that happens next day.

"I know of an Edinburgh woman who left her work suddenly because she felt something was wrong home and on arriving there sh found one of her children had bee sent home from school ill," Morri said.

The power of mind over matter like spoon-bending or rolling a string of winning combinations with dice by apparent will-power, is called psychokinesis or PK.

In a PK case cited by Alok Saklani of Garwhal University in Srinagar, India, a Himalayan shaman or faith-healer persuaded one group of wheat seeds to germinate more abundantly than another group, seemingly by concentrating her thoughts on them, and under test conditions.

Iran hopeful deaths fuel revolution

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran hopes the deaths of hundreds of pilgrims in the holy city of Mecca will help spread its Shiite Moslem revolution to the oil fields of Saudi Arabia and throughout the Islamic world.

The fundamentalist government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the nation's 87-year-old spiritual and revolutionary leader, blamed the United States for the deaths. Analysts say humbling the United States is probably Iran's favorite way of seeking to gain influence in the Moslem world.

"The blood which flowed ... the future nations and generations will satisfy their thirst from it and the oppressors shall drown and die in it," Khomeini said after the Mecca violence.

Nearly all Iranians belong to the minority Shiite sect, which has been at odds for more than 1,300 years with the Sunnis.

Sunnis make up more than 90 percent of the world's 850 million Moslems.

The Shiites, poorer and largely excluded from political power in many Arab countries ruled by Sunni Moslems, have become a potent force since Khomeini rose to power in 1979 in Persian Iran.

In Saudi Arabia's eastern province, site of much of the desert kingdom's oil installations, almost half the population is Shiite.

In 1979, Shiites there rioted to protest their poverty in the midst of oil riches. Iran is working to enlist their help to overthrow the Sunni ruling family and seize its vast oil wealth.

The catalyst for Tehran's latest call to action was the July 31 rioting in Mecca. Iran claimed Saudi police raked pilgrims with machine gun fire, killing 600 Iranians. The Saudis say 402 people died, including 275 Iranians trampled in a stampede or killed in rioting that followed.

"This calamity will be the harbinger of a great revolution," Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi said. "This is the same as exporting the revolution that our enemies have prepared the ground for."

Saudi leaders are followers of Abdul-Wahhab, who founded an austere Sunni Moslem movement more than 200 years ago in the Arabian Peninsula.

The desert kingdom is ruled by a monarch whose official title is first "guardian of the holy places" and only after that, "king."

After the Mecca riots, Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran must "divest the control of the holy shrines from the contaminated existence of the Wahhabis, those hooligans."

"The true revenge is to remove the colossal and precious wealth belonging to the Islamic world which lies under the soil of the Arabian Peninsula...from the control of criminals," he said.

Saudi officials said the Iranians had planned to take over the Grand Mosque, lock in thousands of pilgrims from all over the world and force them to swear fealty to Khomeini as religious leader of all Moslems.

Persia embraced the Islamic faith in 652 A.D., but the Persians later joined the Shiite sect and became deadly rivals of the dominant Sunnis.

An expert on militant Islam, Martin Kramer, wrote that the latest violence reflects a centuries-old drive by Shiites to undermine the Wahhabis' tutelage of the holy places.

For centuries, Shiites have sought through claims of persecution to blacken the reputation of successive Sunni rulers of Mecca, he wrote. Conversely, old Moslem texts often refer to attacks upon Shiite pilgrims who were suspected of polluting the city's Grand Mosque with excrement.

Kramer pointed out that this libel won widespread Sunni credence as late as 1943, when a Saudi judge ordered an Iranian pilgrim summarily beheaded for bringing excrement into the mosque.

Iran severed relations with Saudi Arabi over that incident and Shiite clerics called for an international Moslem regime over the holy city, a demand now renewed by Iran.

With its emphasis on martyrdom and its belief that volunteers killed in suicide attacks instantly gain access to paradise, the Shiite revolution in Iran has proved a formidable foe for Iraq, its enemy in a 7-year-old war.

Iran counters Iraq's better equipped and trained troops with human wave attacks.

In Sunni-ruled Iraq, the revolutionary Iranians hope to use the Shiite majority as a fifth column to topple President Saddam Hussein's secular-oriented government. They have vowed to keep fighting until Hussein is ousted.

In the Persian Gulf, Iran is training young men to ram American warships with explosives-packed speedboats in naval maneuvers codenamed "Martyrdom." In the gulf, the U.S. Navy is escorting Kuwaiti tankers that Iran has targeted for attack because it says Kuwait has transshipped supplies to Iraq.

Although no American warships have been attacked by Iran, the threat posed by small, explosives-packed speedboats has led to an unprecedented U.S. military buildup in the gulf.

In Lebanon, where unofficial estimates put the Shiite population at 30 to 40 percent of the 4 million population, underground groups backed by Iran killed more than 250 U.S. Marines or diplomats in three suicide truck bombings in 1983.

Now, they hold many of the 25 foreign hostages kidnapped in the past two years and are widely believed to be behind bombings in Paris last year that killed 11 people.

More moderate Shiite groups seek to share power in a multisect government but are increasingly upstaged by the fanatics of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The zealots are helped by the presence of thousands of Iranian Revolutionary Guards in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, who first arrived during the three-year Israeli invasion but stayed behind when Israel pulled out in 1985.

In Kuwait, a dozen Shiites were convicted last month on various charges, including bombing and setting ablaze oil installations. Four years ago, Iraqi Shiites car-bombed the French and American embassies in Kuwait.

Shiites form a majority in the gulf state of Bahrain, where the ruling family foiled an Iranian-inspired coup attempt in 1981. This year, a cache of weapons allegedly brought in from Iran was displayed by authorities.

WORLD in brief

Landmark Empress Hotel undergoes fire; Three die

MOOSE JAW, Saskatchewan (AP) — Fire swept through a landmark downtown hotel early Saturday, killing three people, police said.

The blaze struck about 3:48 a.m. at the four-story Empress Hotel in this city of about 35,000 people 50 miles west of Regina, the provincial capital.

Witnesses said the fire appeared to have started on the third floor.

It wasn't until the fire had been partially contained about 9 a.m. that police found the first of three bodies, said Sgt. Ken Haggerty.

Initial estimates put damage at $150,000 (Canadian), and there was a lot of water damage to the building, said Fire Chief George Dirkson.

Sikh kills Punjab leader

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh gunmen today killed a Punjab village leader while he slept, police said, and the search continued for militant Sikhs who killed 12 Hindu villagers.

Police throughout northern India were on alert in an effort to capture the militants who killed the villagers Friday and to prevent retaliatory attacks by Hindus on Sikhs.

The United News of India indentified the latest victim of the sectarian violence as Ujabal Singh, a Sikh and the head of Bhadur village about 20 miles southeast of the Sikh holy city of Amritsar.

AIDS in U.S. to be studied

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH

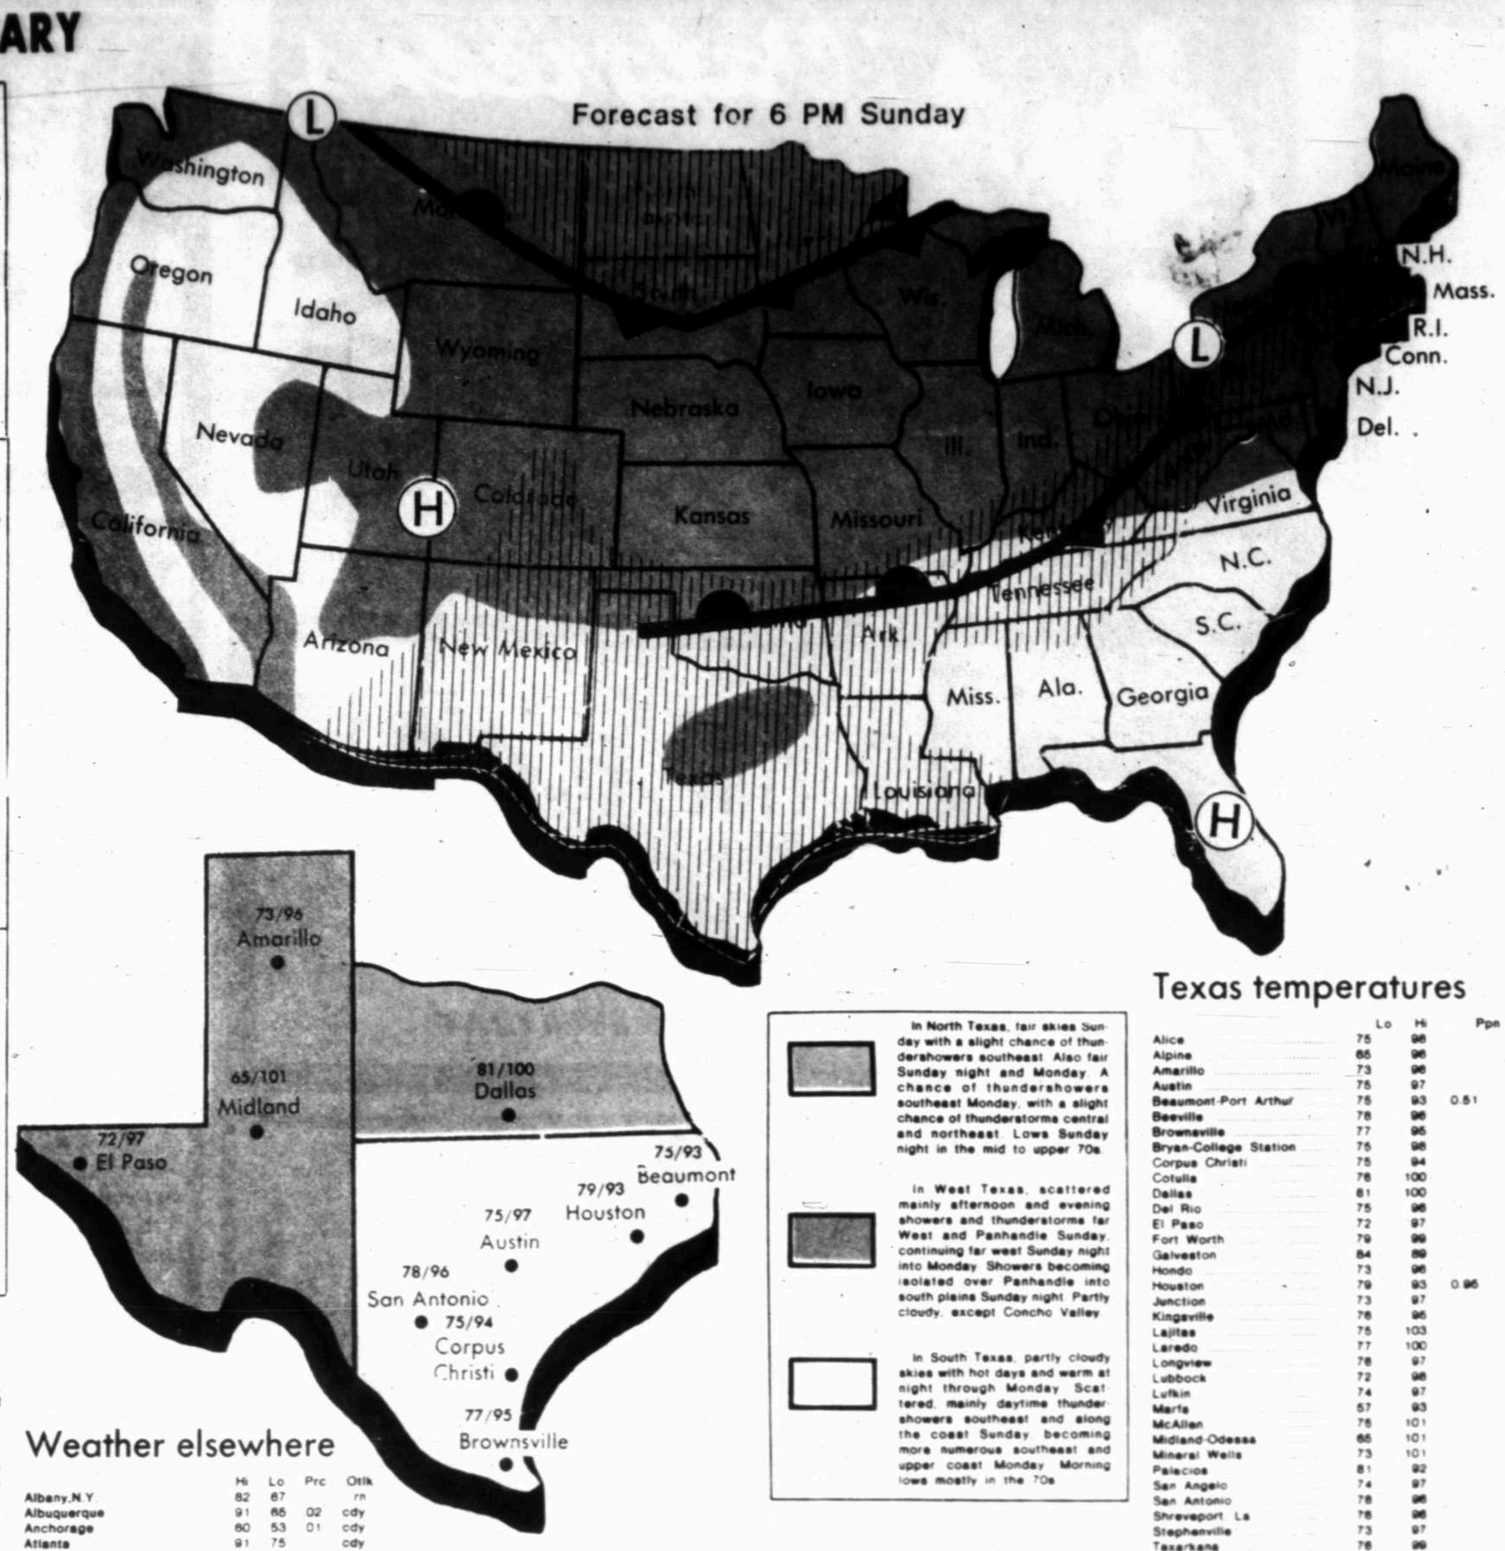
WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)



In North Texas, fair skies Sunday with a slight chance of thundershowers southeast. Also fair Sunday night and Monday. A chance of thundershowers southeast Monday, with a slight chance of thunderstorms central and northeast. Lows Sunday night in the mid to upper 70s.

In West Texas, scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms far West and Panhandle Sunday, continuing far west Sunday night into Monday. Showers becoming isolated over Panhandle into south plains Sunday night. Partly cloudy, except Concho Valley.

In South Texas, partly cloudy skies with hot days and warm at night through Monday. Scattered, mainly daytime thundershowers southeast and along the coast Sunday, becoming more numerous southeast and upper coast Monday. Morning lows mostly in the 70s.

Hot weather continuing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures today are not expected to reach the century mark — unlike Saturday when an official high of 101 was recorded — but continued hot weather is expected, according to forecasters at Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 90s and a slight chance of thunderstorms. Winds will be from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph. The chance of rain will be less than 20 percent.

Sunday night will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s.

Monday will be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s.

Saturday's high of 101 was three degrees cooler than the record high of 104, which was set in 1952. The record low temperature of 62, set in 1976, was three degrees cooler than Saturday's low of 65.

STATE

Scattered showers along with isolated thunderstorms continued to dampen Southeast Texas and the upper Coastal Plains Saturday while partly cloudy conditions prevailed over much of the state.

Some of these storms contained locally heavy rain along with gusty wind. Hobby Airport in Houston received almost an inch of rain in an hour, the National Weather Service said. The Beaumont airport reported over half an inch of rain along with a wind gust of up to 45 miles an hour.

Meanwhile high pressure in the upper levels remained over North Texas while a weak cool front sliced across the Panhandle near Amarillo.

Southerly winds breezed across most areas of Texas while a northwest wind brushed across the Panhandle behind the frontal zone at 10 to 20 miles an hour.

NATION

Heavy rain drenched parts of the northern Plains and Midwest on Saturday, prompting flood warnings in Iowa and Nebraska, while record-breaking heat hit Florida's Gulf Coast.

A band of rain and thunderstorms extended from Lake Erie, across lower Michigan, Wisconsin and southern Minnesota into eastern South Dakota and from Illinois across northern Missouri into central Kansas.

'Friendly forces' will soon storm Saragosa

Son joins father for rebuilding

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

SARAGOSA — Jose Candelas is helping his community rebuild even while he is awaiting the "big push" over the Labor Day weekend, when about 500 volunteers will be rebuilding Saragosa.

"I think it's a good thing, you know," said the 67-year-old merchant who lost his house and grocery-dry-goods store in the May 22 tornado that left 30 men, women and children dead and destroyed 61 houses. "It's real good for the people. I'll just wait my turn for the house" to be built by volunteers.

He plans to rebuild the store.

"Anyway, I'm going to try," he said. "I'm going to build my store myself. I lost everything, but my family is OK." His 10-wheel flat-bed truck, which he drove in hauling cantaloupes, chilies and onions, was wrecked by the raging storm. "Now, no chance," he sighed, of repairing the truck and again hauling produce.

Candelas, who has lived here since 1942, built the original store in 1950. It was the community's only store and now is marked by a United States flag waving in the breeze. "My flag is pretty."

The storekeeper and his family are living in temporary quarters in a mobile-home community, set up for the tornado's survivors, less than a mile from this Spanish-speaking Catholic community of mostly farm workers.

Candelas reflected on the sadness of a man's who lost his "life's work" to the tornado. "I've tried hard to make my life — to build my store."

"I don't have no money. I'm completely broke. But I'm going to try myself again."

'Big push' scheduled Labor Day

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

SARAGOSA — The West Texas community of Saragosa, ravaged by a spring tornado, may be overwhelmed by an influx of friendly forces in September in a mission to rebuild the town.

About 500 church volunteers, mostly Baptists and Mennonites, will stage their "big push" over the long Labor Day weekend.

"It is just a job to be done that God wants us to do," said John LaNoue, the 52-year-old coordinator of the volunteer effort and associate director of the Dallas-based Texas Baptist Men, a branch of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. "And we're doing it with joy."

Since May 22, when the tornado destroyed much of this town, survival and rebuilding efforts have been underway. More than 60 houses and buildings — including a church, store, community center and school — were destroyed, and 30 lives were lost.

"God is using us and others who are volunteering as an expression of His love," LaNoue said. "God is the One who is getting it done."

A less ambitious building and repair program already is underway by Mennonites from Kansas and Baptists from Texas.

The Baptists, for example, built a house in Waco, dismantled it, hauled it to Saragosa, and re-assembled it here — complete with cabinets, carpeting, ceiling fans — a turn-key job, said LaNoue.

Just across the highway from the community center where several children and adults died, the Mennonites last week were finishing up a two-bedroom, 960-square-foot house.

"We feel that we can help our fellow man," said Vern Miller, a 47-year-old church layman-carpenter from Hutchinson, Kan. "We can put our faith into action by helping people who are in need."

Ector County's attorney, DA embroiled in dispute

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A dispute has erupted between two of Ector County's top law enforcement officials. Involved are a drug investigation, efforts to close a topless bar, allegations of police corruption and a federal investigation of organized gambling in the Ector County area.

The dispute grows out of a proposal by the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission to revoke the license of an Odessa topless bar because of alleged drug sales, the result of an initial investigation into alleged corruption on the part of a police officer, who was instrumental in investigating a gambling operation that led to the arrest of several friends and acquaintances of Ector County Attorney Gary Garrison.

Thursday afternoon, Garrison issued a prepared statement concerning his investigation into alleged police corruption he says he began about 16 months ago "after being approached by officers of the Odessa Police Department who made startling allegations concerning the activities of one certain police sergeant."

Garrison goes on to say he was told "about bomb threats directed at our courthouse and of plans to install bugging devices on telephones of elected officials while the building was evacuated."

In the statement bearing his signature, Garrison said that, after receiving this information, "I then went to the County Judge and, through the Judge and the Sheriff's office, funds were obtained and authorization granted to conduct an investigation into the allegations." Various reports from usually reliable sources indicate the amount of funding obtained for this investigative effort ranged from $35,000 to $40,000.

"My investigation," says Garrison, "revealed a pattern of protection of dope dealers and, possibly, participation in drug trafficking by the particular officer," he stated.

The investigation primarily involved two topless bars, the Doll's House on Andrews Highway and the Bunny Club on East 8th Street, and showed, Garrison contends "a long history of close association with persons who were major dope dealers in our community."

In January 1987, Garrison and one of his criminal investigators, Art Allison, arranged for a female informant, a former Doll's House waitress, to make two separate purchases of suspected cocaine from a Doll's House waitress.

Feb. 3, 1987, Allison obtained two felony warrants and a search warrant for a raid on the Doll's House, which resulted in the arrest of the club's manager and a waitress and the seizure of a quantity of marijuana.

Testifying during a May Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission hearing in Austin, Garrison stated, "The buys and busts went down with the knowledge and cooperation of Eric Augeson, who's our DA (district attorney)."

Late Thursday afternoon, Augesen denied this was true, saying Garrison kept the raid "a secret" from him, that he knew nothing about it until he heard about the raid from the media.

Concerning Garrison's allegations that charges against the Doll's House manager and waitress were never presented to the grand jury, Augesen stated Thursday he specifically withheld presentation of the charges to the grand jury at Garrison's request because the county attorney hoped to use the charges "to turn them into snitches," who would provide more information about corruption on the part of a police officer.

Garrison criticized assistant District Attorney Roger Jones because he "sided with topless bar owners and dope dealers" during the May TABC hearings.

But Augeson stated that Jones had been subpoenaed to testify, adding, "it is a blatant lie to say Roger testified for the topless bar."

As to a 70th District Court grand jury hearing earlier this year concerning allegations Garrison's investigation had produced concerning police department corruption, specifically involving Sgt. Terry Tyree, and Garrison's allegation that Augesen tried to "restrict my presence in the proceedings," the district attorney said the county attorney's presence was restricted only because the state statute governing who may be present during a grand jury does not include county attorneys.

Garrison's statement also contains a reference to the fact Tyree lives "in a large home in Country Club Estates, drove a Mercedes Benz, and had recently paid a large amount of money for a new swimming pool. Knowing how drastically underpaid our police officers are," the county attorney stated, "I found this strange indeed."

Augesen said the details of Tyree's home ownership, the expensive car and swimming pool were all explored by grand jurors and that he had communicated all the relevant details to Garrison.

The home in Country Club Estates, he said, was purchased from Jones after Tyree sold, at a significant profit, a home he had owned and paid off over about a 15 year period.

Title searches to lay groundwork for Lamesa Road project

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

City officials can't notify for two months most of the businesses and homeowners who will have to move because of the Lamesa Road project, as efforts to ascertain who owns what land get underway.

During their regular 9 a.m. meeting Tuesday, the City Council will choose between two realignment plans that will straighten Lamesa with its arterial south of U.S. Highway 80.

Public Works Director Fred Baker will recommended the city choose the alignment that would run through one of the few adobe buildings left in Midland because this plan lines up better with south Lamesa and affects fewer businesses, he says.

The total project is expected to relocate about 15 homeowners, 14 renters and three businesses, according to Nancy Vickrey, a city consultant who is coordinating the project.

Most of the people likely to be tapped to pull up stakes cannot be notified until a title search — expected to take two months — is completed, she said.

However, four business owners who may be affected by the road construction have been notified, she said.

The surrounding eastside community is aware of the Lamesa road project, she said. The project has been explained at several neighborhood meetings this year.

"We're trying to work with the people that are going to be affected," she said.

While several business owners have been contacted about the construction and its potential affect on their property, no homeowners have been approached yet, Ms. Vickrey said.

"Until we actually know where the road is going to go and who owns the property — who the actual legal owner is — we can't talk to anybody," she said.

"As soon as they are identified, we will send them a letter," she said.

Several curious homeowners who called the city already have been told whether they are affected by either of the two plans, she said.

Other homeowners with the same question can call Ms. Vickrey at 683-4281, ext.422.

Once a title search has pinpointed all the owners, individuals will be notified with a letter and invited to accompany an appraiser to view the land before the city negotiates to buy right of way, Ms. Vickrey said.

On July 15, the City Council allocated $767,803 to buy rights to about 195 parcels.

Justification for undertaking the Lamesa Road project was reinforced by a June 1986 Eastside Economic Development Task Force survey of business owners along the street, Ms. Vickrey said. The owners said they wanted the area cleaned up and better street access from Loop 250 and U.S. Highway 80.

"It didn't come from the city down, it came from the community up," said Ms. Vickrey of support for the project.

After the property appraisals — expected to take another two months — are completed the city will set up a meeting with each owner, said Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher.

Owners disagreeing with the city's appraisal can appeal and have another appraisal done, he said.

Because of the numerous property owners involved, the city and a few property owners probably will not be able to agree, Stretcher said.

As a result, some owners may have to undergo condemnation proceedings, he said, adding that "We hope the majority of them will agree."

Ott

I can't remember the man's name, and that's a shame. I'd like to give him some credit.

I did thank him profusely and even offered him what little cash I had on me at the time. He refused it. Just shook my hand and said, "Don't worry about it," is all he did. Most decent human beings are like that.

They lend a helping hand because it seems like the thing to do, not as a means to gain financial reward.

I was headed back to Midland from San Angelo. It was about 8:30 p.m. and the sun was slowly disappearing in the west. The car radio was tuned to a country-western station. What else is new? Conway Twitty, not one of my favorites, was singing, as I recall.

When I first heard the noise, I wasn't sure what it was or where it was coming from. But it was getting louder.

I turned off the radio and air conditioner and tried to gauge the sound better. It was still there. A sick feeling began to sink in.

As I pulled the Renault off the road, I muttered a quick prayer. "Please God, don't let there be anything wrong with my car."

God doesn't always answer your prayers. My dad told me that when I was nine years old. Sometimes you are on your own, he had said.

This was one of those cases.

The sound was most definitely coming from my car.

I became convinced of that fact when I turned off the ignition and the sound ceased. I turned on the ignition again and the sound resumed.

Yeah, I told myself, we've got us a full-fledged problem here. Never say this old boy can't figure out a mystery when he sees, or hears, one.

It was a lonely stretch of highway. I had seen, oh, maybe four cars in the past 30 minutes. We were all in our own little world. Now I was in desperate need of a friend.

I lifted the hood, but, of course, had no earthly idea what I was looking for. I turned on the engine and listened to the noise again. It sounded awful. "Why didn't I go to mechanic's school?" I said to myself. I also kicked the left front tire and called it a horrible word. That was a dumb thing to do because the noise wasn't coming from the front left tire. Even I could figure that out. I apologized to the left front tire.

A couple of motorists had passed me while I surmising the situation. Neither had even slowed down, though the first one did honk and wave. I gave him an obscene gesture in return. And I didn't apologize, either.

A few minutes later, as I was contemplating various ways to commit suicide, a green pickup truck zipped past me.

But this one was different. He slowed down, pulled off the side of the road, did a U-turn and headed back my way.

"Well," I thought. "This is it. He's either going to help you or kill you. And, frankly, I don't really care which at this point."

He helped me.

He quickly figured out I didn't know the first thing about cars, so he just sort of took over. He looked under the hood and almost immediately determined what was wrong.

He explained it to me, which was a waste of time. All I remember is something about a bolt coming off, causing something or other to come loose and rattle around, thus creating the weird noise.

It took him all of five minutes to make the necessary repairs.

Still, he was my hero. I shook his hand wildly, slapped him on the back and thanked him repeatedly. I was gushing with sincerity.

He seemed rather embarrassed.

"Look," I said, pulling out my wallet. "All I've got on me is $18. Take it. If you need more, I'll mail it to you."

"Don't worry about it," he said. "All I did was replace a bolt. It's no big deal." Then he got in his truck and drove off.

He was wrong. It was a big deal. And, I wish I could remember his name. I'd send him the 18 bucks, just the same.

VOLUNTEER

Several Mennonites and on-the-job carpenter-trainees from Saragosa built the house in far less than a week.

"We're not here for any big show or big to-do," Miller said. "We're here to meet the needs of the people."

Miller cited the cooperation among the religious sects, including Seventh-day Adventists, Mennonites and Baptists, who have and are donating the services of their skilled workers to rebuild the Spanish-speaking Catholic community. Prior to the tornado, the community's population was about 300.

"We have one common thing in mind," Miller said. "We have Christ as our Savior. We are Christians, and being Christians unites us together. It puts us on common ground."

Two weeks ago, the Mennonites built an addition to the Balmorhea house of a woman whose mother's Saragosa house was destroyed. The mother will be living with her daughter. Balmorhea is about eight miles from Saragosa.

Last week, the Mennonites started construction of two one-bedroom houses in Saragosa.

On a shaded work bench, two retired San Angelo men who are members of Texas Baptist Men, were readying electrical boxes for mounting on poles.

"We both are retired," said Delle Bolin, 66, "and we wanted to do something for somebody else."

His friend, Horace West, 72, said the work "gives you a feeling of satisfaction of doing something for these (Saragosa) kids that are going to be grown one day."

Down the road from Saragosa in an old cotton gin, an 80-year-old retired Texas Christian University biology professor was building framework for Saragosa houses.

"I left those doctoral degrees behind," said Dr. Sanders Truman Lyles of Fort Worth. "Everybody calls me 'Sandy.'"

In explaining his mission here, Lyles noted that "the Christian life goes beyond home. My Christian life supersedes everything else."

"Come Thursday before Labor Day," Lyles said, "we'll attack it big. We'll do 12 times this much in one run. That's 'the big push.'"

John LaNoue
... Baptist

Vern Miller
...Mennonite

COORDINATING "the big push" is John LaNoue of the Texas Baptist Men's Disaster Services, which serves food and rebuilds in the wake of natural disasters, such as earthquakes, hurricanes, floods and tornadoes.

The organization has served in disaster sites in Mexico City, Corpus Christi, New Orleans, Galveston, Wichita Falls, Sweetwater, the Golden Triangle of Beaumont-Port-Arthur-Orange, Guatemala and Haiti.

Over the long Labor Day weekend, the thrust of the building boom is to hit Saragosa.

"Of course," he said, "it's best for us when we're able to build a bunch of houses at one time.

Many of the estimated 500 builders who will be working here for the "big push" will be retirees headed by Olen Miles, the 80-year-old director of Texas Baptist Men's retired builders. Wilton Davis, president of Texas Baptist Men, will head up other volunteer-builders.

By Aug. 24, the buildup of materials, bought with American Red Cross and Federal Emergency Management Administration funds, and floodlights for 24-hour building are to be in place.

At the outset, volunteers will be building 24 one-, two- and three-bedroom houses of up to 960 square feet.

Those 24 houses will replace owner-occupied houses which were destroyed by the tornado.

Of the 61 houses that were destroyed by the storm, most were not occupied by owners. As a result, households who lived in houses unowned by them failed to achieve eligibility for building grants, LaNoue said.

However, grants for funds to build the remaining 37 houses may be forthcoming from the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

"IT COULD be that we are going to build back 61 houses instead of 24," LaNoue said.

The volunteers' work has reached beyond tornado victims.

"We're getting ready to build one house for a lady who wasn't even a victim," LaNoue said. "But a church in Pecos took one look at her house and said 'that woman needs help,' so here's a Baptist church committing the money to build a house for a Catholic lady."

The spirit of the program follows the ministry of Jesus Christ, LaNoue said.

"Jesus did two thing in all of his life on Earth," LaNoue said. "He met human needs where he found them, and he introduced them to God. He used his meeting of human needs as a springboard to introduce them to God."

Baptist LaNoue recalled the 3½-year rebuilding project following the 1979 Wichita Falls tornado, a disaster in which 42 people were killed, 1,740 others were injured, 3,000 homes were destroyed, and 20,000 people were left homeless.

After the rebuilding, parts of the city were flooded, and volunteers returned to Wichita Falls to clean out the mud and to repair houses. But only one Mennonite, a spokesman, showed up for the second round of work. "Praise God (for) those wonderful people," exclaimed a Methodist minister at the time.

But the lone Mennonite, said LaNoue, noted that his ilk were not returning to Wichita Falls in the aftermath of the flood.

"'You see,' he explained, "'we came during your tornado, and we stayed 3½ years building houses in trying to show you how Christians are supposed to respond to brothers in need. They sent me back to see if you've learned your lesson.'"

And the others, recalled LaNoue, shouted "'Let's get with it.'"

DEATHS

Ruth Phillips

Services for Mrs. W.M. (Ruth) Phillips, 75, of Midland will be held 2 p.m. today at the Crestview Baptist Church with Dr. Kenneth Hall officiating. Burial will follow at the Andrews Cemetery at 4 p.m. with Rev. H.A. Hanks of the First Baptist Church of Andrews officiating.

Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Phillips died Friday afternoon at a local hospital.

She was born Sept. 1, 1912, in Claude. She was reared in Panhandle, where her family was one of the founding families of Carson County. After graduation from West Texas State Teachers College in Canyon, she taught school in Panhandle for two years.

She married W.M. "Phil" Phillips on Oct. 1, 1933, in Canyon. The couple lived in Andrews and reared their six children there beginning in 1955. They moved to Midland in 1985.

Mrs. Phillips was active in the First Baptist Church in Andrews and Crestview Baptist Church in Midland. She was preceded in death by her husband and a son, Walter Ray "Buddy" Phillips.

Survivors include a son, Joe T. Phillips of Midland; four daughters, Mrs. Anna Gallagher and Mrs. Joyce Besek, both of Midland; Mrs. Billye Swanson of Lubbock, and Mrs. Jackie Churchill of Phoenix, Az.; 13 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Joe T. Phillips II, Eddie Gallagher, Danny Swanson, Ray Salazar, Steve Smith, Ray Gallagher, Dale Allen, Billy Glazier and David Dunn.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Cal Farley Boys' Ranch in Amarillo.

Lois M. Ricketts

Graveside services for Lois M. Ricketts of Midland will be held 10 a.m. Monday at New Bateman Cemetery with Rev. Mack Blackwell officiating.

Mrs. Ricketts died at a local hospital early Saturday.

She was born Dec. 18, 1914, in Red Rock, was reared in Bastrop County and moved to San Antonio in the 1930s. After living there for 40 years, she moved to Midland in 1980. She was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Oldfield of Modesto, Calif., Mrs. Miriam Hayes of Midland and several nieces and nephews.

FATHER

Candelas has been joined by his 36-year-old son, Saul Candelas of El Paso, in building a work shed and in making concrete building tile for his new store. American Red Cross funds, which will be used in buying materials for houses, cannot be used to replace commercial buildings.

"Most everybody plans to stay here," he said.

His son, who is head of the El Paso Community College's Computer-based Occupations Division, is helping his father rebuild.

And the younger Candelas is interested in improving the literacy level of Saragosa's people by encouraging the setting up of a literacy center.

"They need a literacy center," he said. "This whole town would progress much faster if this town were literate, and it's not just English (but also Spanish).

"They've got to learn to read. It's just basic," he said.

The senior Candelas and his son have been working in the early mornings and late afternoons and nights, because daytime temperatures, occasionally cooled by showers, sometimes rise to 114 degrees.

"It's a beautiful place to stay," Jose Candelas said.

"It's too hot, but still, it's beautiful," he said. "Life is peaceful here, not much trouble, not much crime, just quiet."

Marlin struggles to deal with deadly legacy

MARLIN (AP) — For 18 months, Jimmy Glenn Etheridge sold insurance to Marlin's low-income families and ingratiated himself with his clients and their sons.

Now, six weeks after his death, Marlin's 7,000 residents are trying to deal with the legacy left by Etheridge, one that could kill.

Etheridge brought AIDS, the distant danger, to town. He may have spread it to more than 50 of the young sons of his insurance clients, authorities say.

"He told them that he wanted to be like a big brother and take care of the kids," said G.J. Kouba, the policeman who found Etheridge's body June 30. "He bought them expensive gifts, all the things their mothers couldn't provide for them. He would do things with them, make them feel like they were worth doing something with ... but he had other ideas in mind."

Etheridge was shot to death by a 16-year-old boy described as a housemate, who Falls County District Attorney Thomas Sehon said would not be prosecuted.

After the boy told Kouba of a trunk containing homosexual magazines and Polaroid photos of Etheridge with young boys, investigators discovered computer files detailing explicitly his sexual contacts with boys.

The horror story grew when an autopsy showed Etheridge had been exposed to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the disease that kills by destroying the body's ability to fight infection. Experts believe sexual contact is among the leading ways AIDS is spread.

It is juvenile probation officer Debra Coca's job to contact the families of the 54 children whose names and addresses have turned up so far in Etheridge's computer files, which were retrieved with the help of a computer expert in nearby Waco.

Ten of the boys live in Marlin, in Central Texas. The others are in Louisiana, Colorado, California, Mississippi and Mexico. So far, six local children have been tested for AIDS, but officials are not releasing results.

"People in town who knew Mr. Etheridge find it hard to believe that he could have that type of life in his background, hidden away. He seemed to be such a nice person," Ms. Coca said.

In addition to notifying families of children in the computer files, officials are trying to notify everyone who bought insurance from Etheridge, a 38-year-old divorced father of two.

"My elected job is to prosecute criminals, but I have a moral responsibility to take it beyond just the murder part," said Sehon, the local district attorney. "We don't know how many people it will be. It's probably impossible to notify every single person who said hello to him or shook his hand."

Marlin School Superintendent Joe Campbell, who lives down the street from the modest frame house Etheridge rented, said the district is trying to figure out how to handle the problem.

"We read about AIDS and it's always in the big cities and now, suddenly, it's here," he said.

Chad Brown, the local public health officer, said he knew of only one previous AIDS case in the area, involving an out-of-town man who came for an exam while visiting his mother in a nearby city. The man died.

"Physicians see (AIDS) in a different light than the average layman. We know that it's out there most everywhere, whether it's Marlin, Texas, or New York City," Brown said. "Various deviations from normal sexuality are everywhere. But, again, you don't expect fleas in your own home."

The Rev. Richard Hume, pastor at the First United Methodist Church, is waiting to see public reaction to the AIDS threat, but plans to make it the topic of a sermon in the coming months.

"I will talk about the issue from a human justice point of view. We still tend to, within certain segments of the religious community, think of AIDS as kind of a punishment for a particular type of lifestyle," Hume said.

"If word leaks out in the community of who these children are that may or may not have been exposed to AIDS, I'll be interested to see what the community's reaction to those children is, especially in terms of school attendance," he said.

"It's all so surprising," said Larry Wolfe, owner of a Dairy Queen not far from the house where Etheridge lived and died. "A lot of people believe this is something that would happen to everybody else. Now it's close to home. It's frightening."

Wolfe has a 14-year-old daughter who will start high school in Marlin next month.

Wolfe is not completely soothed by the medical community's confidence that AIDS cannot be spread by casual contact.

"Nobody knows," he said.

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the early Saturday morning robbery of a local convenience store by a knife-wielding man, according to reports.

About 3:25 a.m., a man walked into the Kent Kwik convenience store, 2910 N. Big Spring, and produced a knife with a three-inch blade when the clerk walked behind the counter, police said.

The man then threatened the clerk and ordered him to open the cash register. He ran out of the store and fled on foot, according to reports.

The clerk was not injured, police said.

The suspect was described as a black man in his mid-20s, five feet seven inches tall to five feet nine inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a gray T-shirt, beige shorts, and blue tennis shoes with white socks.

Police K-9 units were called to search the area, but the suspect escaped, according to reports.

In other reports, police have identified a suspect in the burglary of a room at the Ramada Hotel, 3100 W. Wall St. A radar detector valued at $300 was stolen between 9 a.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday from a room rented by a guest, reports said.

Police also also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1700 block of Dallas Street. A videocassette recorder valued at $300 was reported stolen Saturday between noon and 12:30 p.m., police said.

Plane lands for passenger's safety

From Staff Reports

A TranStar Airlines jetliner made an unscheduled landing in Midland Saturday morning after a passenger was found unconscious. The passenger was later treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a nursing supervisor there said.

The pilot of the DC-9, which was bound for California, radioed the control tower at Midland Regional Airport shortly before 10 a.m., according to Midland Fire Department reports. An ambulance was dispatched to the airport, and the man, identified as Frank Walters of Houston, was transported to MMH, the supervisor said.

The man had regained consciousness by the time paramedics arrived at the airport. The supervisor said she did not know why the man lost consciousness.

The airliner took off for its destination after the man departed the aircraft, fire officials said.

Unincorporated Leroy Bank closed by state commissioner

LEROY (AP) — The Leroy Bank was under guard by a lone watchman Saturday after the Texas banking commissioner closed the private, unincorporated bank.

The bank, which was opened in 1907, was declared insolvent late Friday and no outstanding checks will be honored, officials said.

Leroy is a town of about 230 people 15 miles northeast of Waco. Most of the bank's customers were from Leroy and the adjoining towns of Tours and Gerald.

The bank held deposits of about $6 million. Because the bank is unregulated, the 600 depositors may lose most or all of their money. It is unclear whether the deposits were insured.

"The loan portfolio was in bad shape," said Texas Banking Commissioner Ken Littlefield. "Many loans were past due several years and the documentation was extremely bad. If you just took the notes at face value, they were balance sheet insolvent at $800,000."

Littlefield said that when the Chilton Private Bank south of Waco was closed May 14, the Leroy Bank started experiencing a "runoff of deposits."

With the shutdown of the Chilton bank and the Leroy Bank, only three other private banks remain in the state.

On May 14, Leroy bank was sold to Ronald O. Bailey of Berkeley, Calif., by W.H. Janes of Leroy, whose father helped found the bank 80 years ago.

DISPUTE

The Mercedez Benz automobile, Augesen said, did not belong to Tyree, but to a friend who asked him to take care of it while he was out of town for a fairly lengthy period of time. The swimming pool Tyree built, which Augesen estimated cost "$11,000 to $12,000," was paid for out of some of the remaining funds he had left from the sale of his home.

It is for this and numerous other reasons, Augesen said, the holdover grand jury, after spending some 40 hours looking at evidence submitted by Garrison, issued a statement saying no evidence had been found to substantiate the county attorney's allegations of police department corruption.

During testimony before the TABC hearings officer, Lowell Lasley, Jones and Tyree each stated they believed the effort to revoke the alcoholic beverage license of the Doll's House was an effort, on the part of Garrison, to retaliate against Tyree for his part in the federal gambling investigation that resulted in the arrest of some of his close friends.

Concerning Jones' statement about retaliation against Tyree, Garrison said, "I will tell the world that Mr. Jones' testimony is simply not true."

MADD chapter closing

HOUSTON (AP) — The Harris County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving is shutting down this month because of a lack of leadership, a spokesman for the national office said.

The closing of the local chapter Aug. 21 comes about a year after its officers were fired in July 1986 by the national office over allegations of mismanagement.

Former president Marinelle Timmons, who founded the chapter after her son was killed by a drunken driver, expressed disappointment over the chapter's demise.

"I feel, in a way, that a part of me has died. I started MADD to do something so that my son's life wouldn't have been lost for nothing. ... This whole situation has been really difficult for me, because I'd put so much into it and hoped it would be there forever," she said.

Sanitation Division gives needed service

By LYN MILLER

A salute to those city of Midland employees in the Sanitation Division who so diligently collect the refuse we so generously discard:

The Sanitation Division of the Public Works Department provides a needed service to all residents and commercial businesses in Midland. This division removes and disposes of an average of 350 to 400 tons of refuse per day. On holidays, the amount increases to over 600 tons per day. Service is provided on a twice-a-week pick up schedule for residential customers and on a more frequent basis to commercial customers, if needed. The residential rate is $6.75 per month, with commercial customers paying approximately $21 per month.

The use of the three-cubic-yard refuse containers for service to residential areas was pioneered in the city of Midland. Numerous cities throughout the nation adopted the residential container program, with one city currently using 46,000 containers. Four routes were included in the first large scale test area in 1967 and 1968. Residents receiving this increased level of service accepted it enthusiastically, so in 1970 and 1971, when funds became available, the rest of the city was converted to the system.

The Sanitation Division has been in operation with the same number of personnel since 1971 when the conversion was made. Efficiency has increased greatly due to the use of updated equipment and proper routing of the refuse collection units. The number of customers increased by more than 10,000 during the period.

This division operates with a total of 42 employees, 36 of which are equipment operators or container maintenance personnel. The container program has 27 operators, 27 trucks and services 21 routes with pick up on Monday and Thursday, and on Tuesday and Friday, respectively. On Wednesday, refuse is picked up from daily commercial users and from any containers that may have been missed on the Monday or Tuesday routes. This assures the collection of the heavy load that is normally generated during the weekend. Standby personnel operate the hand load truck and assist on the boom truck in the removal of heavy items from alleys. These two pieces of equipment are operated only if standby drivers are not needed on the regular collection routes.

Another service provided by this division, at no additional cost to the individual residential user, is the removal of large bulky items, such as stoves, dishwashers, refrigerators, chairs or divans from the alley. To have these items picked up, call the Sanitation Division, give them the address, what the items are and when they are to be placed in the alley. This allows for the scheduling of a special truck to remove these specific items as soon as possible.

Midland's Sanitation Division provides one of the highest levels of service for residents and has the lowest number of personnel per 1,000 customers of any city in Texas.

The budget for the Sanitation Division is $2.4 million, with an income of $3.1 million for the current year. The difference between the income and the actual operating cost is placed in the city of Midland General Fund to pay the Sanitation Division's share of services furnished. These include personnel, adminstration, legal, finance and support for the Street Division in maintaining alleys used primarily by the Sanitation Division.

Due to the large volume of refuse generated by offices, shopping centers and the downtown area, the use of stationary compactors was implemented in 1976. These units have a 30 to 423 cubic yard capacity and a compaction unit that reduces the volume of material deposited. These units are serviced by a special truck that picks up the entire unit and transports it to the landfill, empties it and replaces it for use at the customers' site. This was the first program in which stationary compactors were placed in city alleys for use by multiple customers. Because of the success of this system, several cities across the nation have initiated the program.

The container method of service provided in Midland has greatly reduced the amount of debris and litter in streets and alleys and the availability of food for strays dogs or wild animals.

The Sanitation Division suggests some dos and don'ts with regard to proper use of the containers. Do put all trash in the container. Do crush boxes before putting them in. Do keep material below the lip of the container. Do leave space in the container for your neighbor's refuse. Do keep your half of the alley free of litter, debris and tall weeds. Don't use someone else's container. Don't place discarded materials outside the container. Don't put construction material — bricks, rocks or dirt — in the container. Any container loaded to more than 1,600 pounds will result in an additional charge.

Each citizen can assist in assuring a well-run program for a cleaner Midland by following these suggestions.

The contractor plans to begin construction on the west half of Midkiff. Those streets entering Midkiff on the west side will be closed periodically during that phase of construction.

The project includes the complete reconstruction of the intersection of Midkiff and Maxwell.

Maxwell Drive will be closed on the west side of Midkiff for approximately five weeks.

Motorists who normally use that portion of Midkiff are urged to consider alternate routes during construction to avoid traffic congestion in the affected area.

Infant made 'native'

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — An 8-month-old boy was declared an official native son after his parents worried that his out-of-state birth could make him less than Texan.

The declaration by Attorney General Jim Mattox capped efforts by Marine Sgt. Eamon and Lori Riley to get their child, Logan Patrick Riley, declared a Texan even though he was born in a Navy hospital in Beaufort, S.C.

Tribute to a Nice Man

SEVERAL DAYS AGO...

we were humbled to be asked to conduct services for our friend and yours, Harlan M. Howell. All of us know that he was honest, civic-minded, and law abiding. Naturally, being all of these, he would never have been involved with the police of our community. He was though...several days ago.

Following services at the First Baptist Church, he, his family and a host of friends were escorted to his place of burial by the traffic division of the Midland police department. It has been a custom in our country for many years for the community law enforcement agency to provide a safe and timely escort to the final resting place.

Many would feel Harlan was due this respect because most of his adult life he paid taxes here, promoting and making Midland a better place for all of us to live. You are doing the same, but if our city council decides to forego this custom, then, in the future, Harlan's family and your familywill have to pay an additional charge of from $50.00 to $150.00 at the time for the priviledge of being escorted to the final resting place.

Have we "progressed" to the point that we can no longer provide the community time or means to show our respect for the dead? Is it quite fair? Is this to be a tax on existing taxes we already pay? Is it progress, or is it one more step down the road to dehumanization by doing away with tradition, common courtesy, and respect for one another?

Let your mayor and city councilmen know how you feel on this issue by calling or writing them.

Peace initiative a revealing plan

Almost from the moment it was proposed, the Nicaraguan peace plan offered by President Reagan and House Speaker Jim Wright was labeled a half-hearted attempt to toss Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega a rejectable olive branch.

However, that thought is flawed on the surface. There's little chance Wright would go along with such an initiative knowing it was doomed to failure or that he was giving Reagan a way to wriggle past the politically embarrassing Iran-contra hearings and, at the same time, possibly collecting needed congressional support for future funding for the contra effort. Jim Wright isn't that politically naive and Ronald Reagan isn't that ideologically uncommitted.

Anyway, what's wrong with simply saying, as Reagan and Wright seem to be doing, let's at least get the shooting stopped, the heads cooled a little, and the involved parties sitting down and talking about the future? Isn't that what the Nicaraguan conflict has been missing all this time — a common ground for discussion?

We're not naive enough to assume that Ortega will now dash to the table and agree to all the requirements of the initiative, which stipulate the restoration of democratic freedoms, a ceasefire in return for a suspension of U.S. military aid to the contras, and the rejection of Soviet bloc military aid. Rather, we suspect he's merely "buying time" by not flat-out rejecting the peace initiative. In the past few years he's become politically astute enough to realize that waiting can be beneficial, particularly where the U.S. Congress is concerned.

In fact, in addition to the previously listed peace plan requirements we'd like to see the inclusion of one calling for creation of a monitoring committee comprised of representatives from both Congress and the other Central American nations to ensure that the mandated steps are being taken and that political abuses and human rights violations are not taking place. But odds are Ortega and his crowd would never go along with such a reasonable plan.

And, of course, Congress already is skeptical of the Reagan-Wright plan and that doesn't bode well for its chances of success. Regardless, the plan is worth offering. Even if Ortega eventually rejects it or fails to live up to it, little of value has been lost and the Congress, if it truly is worried about the communist incursion into Nicaragua, could approve the contra aid anyway, making it conditional so that it would begin only if Nicaragua failed to meet terms of the plan. After all, the Congress seems to do pretty much as it pleases in regard to attaching strings to other kinds of aid. So why not this?

At the very least, this plan could show the true intent of the Sandinistas in regard to democratic government. And that may be exactly the "final straw" some members of Congress are waiting on before throwing support behind the contra rebels once and for all.

Another View:

Recognizing a need

What might be called the Arias-Wright-Shultz-Baker-Reagan peace plan for Central America represents progress, inside the administration at least. It offers a gleam of hope that President Reagan and his aides realize the need for negotiations, and perhaps even for compromises, to end a bitter conflict within and with Nicaragua. The pity is the taint of coming so late in the Reagan presidency — and so soon before a showdown vote in Congress on aiding the Nicaraguan rebels.

Finally and wisely, the White House has made clearer its backing for the regional peace effort promoted by Costa Rica's president, Oscar Arias. Yet it was all but compelled to do so. Congressional Democrats and moderate Republicans have joined in applauding Arias's idea of a regional cease-fire meshed with steps to democracy. The idea has developed some support in Central America, as attested by the regional meeting just under way in Guatemala. And all this is happening on the eve of a September showdown over voting another $100 million plus in military aid to the contras.

With this in mind, House Speaker Jim Wright proposed a crucial modification in the Arias plan. The White House had objected that in return for an actual cease-fire, Nicaragua was asked only to promise steps to democracy. Wright proposes simultaneous deeds by a Sept. 30 target date: cease-fire, restoration of freedoms, a halt to all outside military aid and to U.S. maneuvers in Honduras. His proposal was taken up by Secretary of State Shultz and Howard Baker, the White House chief of staff. They have evidently persuaded President Reagan to go along.

But dangers and traps abound, and Congress has to be clear-eyed. The administration's record of hostility to compromise has to give pause. This is the first time in seven years that Reagan has put his name to terms that fall short of demanding that the Sandinistas surrender power. Hence the suspicion that he has put forward the peace proposal in the expectation of its failure.

The bleak prospects for negotiations have to be faced, even as the bargaining is earnestly pursued. Even with Reagan's support, a negotiated settlement in Nicaragua, or El Salvador for that matter, will be extremely difficult to arrange. Adversaries in civil wars tend to demonize each other. And since personal, not just political, survival hangs on the outcome, adversaries are bound to hang back. By no reasonable measure is there time in 60 days to resolve bitter conflicts.

Congress thus has to avoid being squeezed into voting large aid commitments for the contras if peace is not achieved by October. Democratic leaders, including Wright, insist they have made no such pledge.

By all means let Congress welcome Reagan's recent conversion to diplomacy, but keep up the pressure that brought it about. Whatever the progress in Central American bargaining, Congress has to demand hard information about the contras, their failure to develop visible support within Nicaragua and their human rights abuses, now documented by the administration's own investigators. And Washington has to keep the faith with all of Central America's democrats — including the internal opposition in Nicaragua — in opposing thuggery from every quarter, Sandinista or contra.

If the Reagan administration has come to an appreciation of these complexities, then a serious attempt at negotiations can finally begin.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 9, 1945, the United States dropped a second atomic bomb on Japan, destroying part of the city of Nagasaki. An estimated 74,000 people died from the blast or its aftereffects. Nagasaki was not the original target; heavy clouds prevented the bombing of Kokura in northern Kyushu.

Mideast war clouds have silver lining

WASHINGTON — There's a silver lining to the war clouds that hang over the Middle East: There is little chance of an Arab-Israeli war any time soon.

Jack Anderson

With the continuing Iran-Iraq bloodshed, the threat to Persian Gulf shipping and U.S. Navy escorts, and the recent Iranian-instigated rioting in Mecca, the lack of an Arab-Israeli war may seem scant grounds for optimism. But while the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war and Iranian subversion of its neighbors can probably be contained before a holocaust erupts, another Arab-Israeli war probably could not.

The reason is simple: Israel has the nuclear bomb, and would use it if necessary. Moslem countries, with Pakistan in the lead, are not far from membership in the nuclear club. And if a general conflagration erupted between Israel and its Arab enemies, the two superpowers have so much at stake that they might easily become involved.

Why is an Arab-Israeli war so unlikely? Because no Arab nation will take on Israel singlehanded — specifically, without the support of either Egypt or Jordan. And this is unattainable at the moment. Egypt, in addition to its peace treaty with Israel, has enough domestic problems not to go looking for another bloody nose from the Israeli armed forces.

Jordan's is a more interesting case. A secret State Department assessment summarizes Jordan's crucial importance both to the United States and to the prevention of a future Arab-Israeli war:

"U.S. interests in Jordan are limited and precise. They center on the importance that Jordan's geographic location and political moderation have for our larger interest in avoiding war in the Middle East and maintaining political stability in the oil-producing states of the Arab peninsula.

"Vital global interests of ours are at stake in avoiding another Arab-Israeli war. That means ... trying to keep the Arab states from launching or provoking hostilities with Israel. ... Jordan's decision whether to join aggressive acts or even whether to encourage or discourage others' plans is important because of Jordan's long frontier with Israel."

State Department experts correctly summed up Jordanian King Hussein's viewpoint this way: "Jordan does not want war with Israel, which it knows it could not win and could well result in overturning the regime. King Hussein's disposition is not to start, provoke or be drawn into such a conflict against his better judgment."

Hussein's commitment to peace with Israel was born in defeat: the humiliation of his army in the Six Day War of June 1967. The war started on Israel's border with Egypt, but Jordan fired first on the eastern front — and paid dearly, with the loss of Old Jerusalem and the West Bank territories. Even ardent admirers of Hussein consider Jordan's involvement in the 1967 war the usually pragmatic monarch's greatest single lapse of judgment.

Unique insight into the reasons for Hussein's costly error is provided in a new book, "Jordan in the 1967 War," by Samir A. Mutawi, a Jerusalem-born Jordanian journalist. He is now Hussein's press chief — but this was no reward for writing a sugar-coated apologia. Instead, Mutawi's book took advantage of unprecedented access to the king, his senior advisers and secret military and intelligence files to produce an authoritative, brutally candid account.

Mutawi told Dale Van Atta in Amman that he considered his book unusual because "usually the victorious like to talk a lot and the defeated like to keep silent."

The author doesn't shy away from embarrassing facts — such as the total annihilation of Jordan's air force and the destruction of 80 percent of its armor in less than three days. Only six of Jordan's 186 tanks retreated to safety across the Jordan River, he disclosed.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Presumed Innocent' shows justice's flip side

WASHINGTON — Every August this column, as a courtesy to readers and a service to Literature, draws a veil over the world of politics and recommends a novel with which to while away the waning hours of summer. This year's selection is Scott Turow's "Presumed Innocent."

George F. Will

Turow will not soon be forgiven for his unspeakable faux pas of writing a novel that is a stunning commercial as well as artistic success. It is published by Farrar, Straus & Giroux, which is known as a "literary house." This has agitated some critics who seem eager to disparage the public by questioning the quality of any work that finds a mass market. It is, they suggest, tacky for a "literary house" to publish a book that is only a "courtroom thriller."

Actually, Turow's novel is not merely a thriller, although thrilling it certainly is (and steamy and grisly). It is not merely about a murder trial any more than "Macbeth" is merely about Scottish politics. Turow gives a shattering depiction of what it feels like to be in the skin of someone falsely accused of a terrible crime. It is the story about the moral vertigo that strikes when one's sense of safety, social standing and moral worth are suddenly and unjustly overturned by institutions of justice.

Criminal prosecution is a minuet of tamed brutality, stylized and decorous but irreducibly brutal nonetheless. Turow's protagonist is a prosecutor who when younger "could feel the fear, the hot frustration, the haunted separateness" of those he prosecuted. Now nearly 40, he has become "a bureaucrat of good and evil," aware that "the business of accusing, judging, punishing has gone on always; it is one of the great wheels turning beneath everything we do." Suddenly he is indicted and the ground opens beneath his feet.

Transformed by an act of a grand jury from a pillar of the community to a pariah, he is seized by fatalism, a sense that life is not reason or order, merely experience. He feels an adhesive dread, a sudden acquaintance with the wilder elements and darker side of mankind.

Imagine being arraigned — being called a murderer in public — while hundreds of fascinated eyes are fastened on your facial reaction. Imagine, as Turrow does, the cyclonic impact of panic, like groping in the dark for a light switch you are not sure you will ever find.

Pity for others requires, Aristotle said, believing that what afflicted them could afflict you. Turow makes you believe. You will pity his protagonist caught in the toils of the law, and the law will seem terrifying.

Therein lies the novel's emotional wallop and moral message. It teaches, by that terror, how much our sense of life's livableness depends on faith in the criminal-justice system — faith that justice has been systematized by social arrangements.

Our emotional equilibrium depends more than we normally know on the sense that there is a moral economy in the world, that good is rewarded and evil is punished. We want life to unravel for the criminal, as it did for Macbeth — but not for the innocent, least of all at the hands of the law. Otherwise, life is a tale told by an idiot.

In other ages, people believed that intervening gods, or God, allocated justice, in this or another world. The waning of that faith has coincided with the rise of law, and lawyers, to a great and stately jurisdiction. They are custodians of the arrangements that keep chaos at bay. Through fissures in that inevitably imperfect system, we glimpse the moral void that deranged Macbeth after he murdered.

Turow alarmingly conveys how many and wide are the fissures through which proof, truth and justice can leak away. No matter how refined the procedures for unraveling the tangle of human motives, a trial is less akin to the tidiness of mathematics than to the tentative gropings of pre-modern medicine.

Turow, a former prosecutor, looks unblinkingly at the harshness that sustains civility. (He writes four paragraphs on prison life that will turn your hair white.) Turow knows the arcana of police procedure and the intricacies of litigation. Judge Learned Hand once said that few things so filled him with fear as the thought of being the defendant in a trial by jury. You will understand why when you read Turow's meticulous creation of a murder trial.

If you do not read it, you will be left out of conversations. There already are half-a-million copies in print. (Paperback rights just sold for $3 million, a record for a first novel.) But do not start the novel on a night when you need your sleep. A sophisticated editor at another "literary" publishing house reports that "Presumed Innocent" caused him to suspend (for his own benefit) his rule against reading at the dinner table. You have been warned.

RUSSELL BAKER

If he's lying, is he doing it patriotically?

TAKING THE OATH

"Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, except for evasions, withholdings of information and lies necessitated by your patriotic instincts?"

PRESIDENTIAL SPEECH

Russell Baker

"Fellow Americans, I come before you tonight on a matter of vital importance to our country. On a matter so sensitive to our national security, however, I realize you do not wish me to state the unvarnished truth to a national television audience, some of whose members may include enemy agents, congressmen capable of leaking it to the press, and persons so lacking in patriotism that they may very well oppose our policy if they are able to learn what it is.

"For this reason I shall blend the truth with an assortment of lies, in accordance with our great new American tradition of never being too stuffy about principle to tell a few whoppers when national security is at stake ...."

NEWS STORY

Sims Badger, one of the several dozen front-running candidates for the nomination, was overwhelmed by adulatory telegrams tonight after a weeping TV appearance to deny that he keeps a beautiful model chained in his apartment.

"As a patriot," said Badger, "it is my duty to confess that the woman chained in my apartment is not a beautiful model, but an ancient, physically repulsive but brilliant professor of constitutional law whose duty is to lecture me on the Federalist Papers."

Badger said he "almost wished" the woman was a beautiful model so he could lie for love of country by saying she wasn't. "Sims Badger will never let America's honor be besmirched in the eyes of the world by confessing that a front-runner is capable of prurient interest in beautiful chained models."

CONGRESSIONAL ADJUSTMENT

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wherever.

Thank you, Mr. Chair. In pursuance of Order No. 74649, your Special Committee on the Acute Patriotism of the Situation has studied the problem of how to deal with the vast glut of patriotically prevaricating witnesses. Our recommendation is embodied in the resolution calling for establishment of a Standing Committee on Patriotic Mendacity.

Said committee shall be constituted as the sole congressional body authorized to hear evasive or misleading testimony, as well as bald-faced lies, whenever the White House and/or other branches of the executive notify this body that honest, frank and truthful representations to the Congress and the public would be unpatriotic.

Such committee, composed of junior members with inordinate amounts of idle time on their hands, will relieve important committees of the necessity to waste time listening to liars, while simultaneously granting important administration officials the opportunity to win public favor by fervently issuing patriotic falsifications.

SCOUTS KEEP APACE

Deems Fluttlecock is the first Eagle Scout in history to win the new Merit Badge for Patriotic Fibbing. To receive the Badge, Fluttlecock had to invent 20 lies that an up-and-coming young member of the national-security apparatus might justifiably tell the Congressional Committee on Patriotic Mendacity.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The boom in patriotic lying is deeply disturbing to powerful administration figures who hope to get President Reagan's attention long enough for him to sign a directive on patriot-testing.

Ever since lying became prima facie evidence of patriotic character, so many people repugnant to the administration have had themselves wrapped in the flag by doing the Baron Munchausen number that biggies like Ed Meese are getting sick of it.

As one old Reagan type notes: "We have always had terrific success by running against unpatriotic rats. Unless something is done soon to stop every liar on the landscape from getting a flag-waving license, there won't be any unpatriotic rats left to run against."

A believer in testing, Meese wants Reagan to make all federal employees submit to testing for patriotism before they are permitted to lie either to Congress or the press. The problem here is that urinalysis doesn't tell much about a liar's sincerity and nobody has yet built a reliable patriot detector.

IMPERIAL CYNIC

The Emperor Franz Josef of the Austro-Hungarian empire, upon being told that a notorious military officer was a patriot, replied, "Ah, but is he a patriot for me?"

'Values-neutral' system danger to U.S. way of life

Modisett

Hard lessons aren't always taught in school. The toughest, in fact, have to come after we've already left those hallowed halls of learning and are on our own with no one around to explain what is right and what is wrong.

That's why basic values reinforcement is so essential to maintaining American standards of decency, honesty, and love of country, and why the "values-neutral" system being stressed in so much of society today is a great danger to our way of life.

In a society that stresses traditional values, the young learn what is good and is bad, and what makes the difference between the "value" of the two. Respect for others is good; murder is bad; freedom is to be valued; oppression is stifling. But in a social system that does not put value ratings on good and bad behavior, the young soon lose touch with values that have been reinforced over generations. In that context, they become a rudderless ship, sailing without direction on an ocean fraught with hazards.

To an extent, I believe this trend contributed to the present Iran-contra flap in Washington D.C. Americans have become so obsessed with rights and so intent on following a certain pathway through the maze of government that they have allowed politicians to slowly but certainly tie the hands of elected leaders. Witness, please, the five Boland amendments which were enacted with only one intent — to keep the American president from channeling support to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

In fact, there probably would have been no Iran-Contra hearings had there been no attempt to restrict presidential authority through use of the Boland amendments. But the attempt was made.

Suddenly the United States has bumped into one of those situations wherein you "can't get there from here" — the road is blocked, and we, through our elected representatives, blocked it. A communist government is operating in Central America but we have restricted ourselves from doing anything about it on the basis that it might draw us into "another Vietnam."

Nicaragua's war isn't a question of another Vietnam. Rather it poses the question of whether Americans potentially want to eventually share a border with a communist state. Do we?

That's where it all comes back to the issue of values and what we want life in the United States to be like for our children and grandchildren. Americans inherited a cherished land of freedom from this country's founders, but no quarantees. Maintaining it is up to us and our descendants.

Can we do that if we do not stress the values on which this nation was based and effectively counter threats from authoritarian governments like that now present in Central America? I sincerely doubt that anyone who does not understand the value difference between freedom and slavery will be willing to do what is necessary to keep freedom alive.

In the interest of seeing the sun rise over a land of liberty tomorrow, we'd better start stressing values once again.

Some 33 years later, similar national Senate investigative hearings have recently concluded questioning anti-communists trying to protect our country.

Is this an indication of the direction in which our country is moving?

WILLIAM SAFIRE

U.S. will suffer if officers go unpunished

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

William Safire

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, who supported the appeasement ring within the White House, says he sees no crime revealed in the Iran-Contra hearings. Ed Meese, the tenderest cop in America, thinks prosecution would be a tragedy. Many of my conservative brethren, relieved that the president was absolved of guilty knowledge of the diversion of ransom profits to the Contras, are inclined toward non-prosecution, clemency or outright pardon.

But conspiring to defraud the government of $8 million is a crime; deliberately misleading officials charged with oversight of appropriated funds is a crime; destroying potential evidence being sought by lawmen is a crime; pretending while under oath not to remember what you well remember is a crime.

Ah, but what of Jefferson's "higher obligation" than the "written law"? All the technical infractions, say the defenders of the appeasement ring, were committed in a good cause — to make friends in Iran, to buy back our hostages, to finance the Contras. What neat symmetry, to use the byproduct of appeasement of terrorists to subvert Sandinistas.

Ollie North, we are told, may be a rogue but is a decorated Marine who meant well and now has a political following. John Poindexter belatedly took responsibility for approving the double dealing, and deserves thanks for being the fall guy. Who but a bloodlusting dovish liberal partisan out to discredit the Reagan administration would want these patriots tried, and if convicted, punished?

Count one hawkish conservative and consistent Contra supporter among the unforgiving. The reason has to do with a principle as high as any "higher law."

Suppose the next president is a dovish Democrat. Suppose a small ring of much-decorated officers within the national security staff, motivated by noble patriotic aims, sees an opportunity to achieve a breakthrough in arms reduction negotiations by secretly supplying the Soviet Union with details of our Star Wars technology, and the man in charge chooses not to tell the president in order to spare him political embarrassment if the secret leaks.

In the ensuing uproar, the future appeasement ring would say its purpose was advancing our national security, not espionage; that its zealous members understood it to be the president's policy to promote detente; and that they followed the Poindexter-North-Secord path, which had been tacitly approved in the late '80s when the perpetrators of the Iran-Contra appeasement and diversion went not only unpunished but were lionized.

My conservative colleagues would howl 'Yalta betrayal' Usurpation of the powers of Congress' Pinko takeover of the presidency' They would be right, but they would not have a leg to stand on. The coup that goes unpunished leads to more coups that cannot be punished.

We know Poindexter to be the apostle of disinformation. This professional note-taker, whose career in the NSC was built on his ability to provide "memcons" of what happened at meetings, suddenly blanks out when asked about a face-to-face meeting with William Casey at the height of the crisis. His sworn testimony was considered "not credible" for good reason; his amorality was demonstrated last year when his policy of official lying was exposed.

But Poindexter defiantly asserts he has no apologies. He does not have even the shabby defense, claimed by the proudly self-proclaimed liar North, that he was only following orders. In the warped Poindexter thinking, the national security adviser has the authority to destroy secret presidential findings to avoid political embarrassment; he claims the power to seize the buck of accountability, keeping from his elected leader the secret of a venal diversion that would cause widespread revulsion.

That undemocratic view erodes national security. We have laws to prevent such obstruction, a code of conduct to stop such power seizure in the guise of staff slavishness.

Let us not, my fellow Contra supporters, be suckered into defending the appeasement ring in the White House merely because a small portion of the ransom profits was directed to a good cause. What the president did in going soft and appeasing the Iranian terrorists was stupid, and he has rightly suffered for it; what his agents did in diverting the profits, if criminal, must not go unpunished or we will all suffer for it.

Think about the consequences of going soft again. Do not invite the next crowd to stage a similar coup with impunity.

ALL-STAR program blessing to Midland

We cannot find the words to express the excitement we feel about the ALL-STAR program that is coming to our beautiful city, not to Lee High School or Midland High School but to our city, Midland, Texas.

The Activity Leadership Laboratories — Student Teaming Around Responsibility (ALL-STAR) program invites junior and senior high school students to focus on their responsibility to themselves, their families, their school, their community.

As parents of teenagers, we know that the ALL-STAR program is a blessing to our city and an answer to parents' prayers. We know that we have the best teenagers in Midland, the future generation of our country, but we also know that there is a tremendous amount of negative peer pressure. The ALL-STAR program will train our teenagers to use this peer pressure in a positive way, to be responsible for their activities and their actions, therefore reducing harm to their bodies, health or education.

We are very fortunate to live in Midland where there is opportunity for our teenagers to receive the best quality education in the country thanks to all our community leaders. Let's all support the ALL-STAR program.

Parents should back ALL-STAR program

During the week of Aug. 25-30, a very important and exciting event will be taking place in our two high schools — the MISD ALL-STAR Program. ALL-STAR is a positive peer leadership program involving students, teachers, school administrators, and parents that has been run with great success in schools all over the United States. We are expecting approximately 500 students from the ninth through twelfth grades to be involved from each high school. Results expected are students better equipped to make quality decisions about drugs, alcohol, and other major items confronting them on a daily basis.

My wife and I are excited to have the opportunity to participate in ALL-STAR along with our two sons. It is so refreshing to work alongside our very fine teachers and administrators that are giving many extra hours of their time this summer in preparing for the retreats at Midland and Lee High Schools. The teamwork and cooperation between representatives from each high school have been fantastic. I truly feel that the ALL-STAR Program will be the highlight of the upcoming school year.

We now need all of Midland to get out and support this very valuable program. If your high school student was invited, encourage them to attend the retreat in August. If you are asked to assist by giving time, money, or food, do it willingly. Most important of all, learn all you can about ALL-STAR and support our youth and our fine school system.

Get ready Midland because ALL-STAR works!

Bill C. Sewell
Midland

Parents should be excited by ALL-STAR

We are impressed with the new ALL-STAR Program being initiated by MISD this school year. One of the great things about this program is that it teaches young people to be responsible for their own behavior. We believe that all parents should become excited and enthusiastic about this type of program wherein young people inspire their peers to clean up their act.

After participating in only a portion of the ALL-STAR introduction to parents and teachers, we are convinced that parent support and encouragement of their children to become ALL-STARs will result in positive contributions to the program. We especially want to encourage our black parents and students to participate in this worthy project. Let's get Rambo about our young people and save them from drugs, alcohol, and all other destructive behavior.

It is through programs such as this one that our children can learn to make worthwhile contributions to home, school, and neighborhood. We will be happy to answer any questions pertaining to this program. Call us.

Readers' views on: Area fire station closings

Closing of two fire stations protested

Am I the only Midland resident who feels like I am in a field of flack? The city is closing two fire stations because of budget deficits, but our budget can be extended to cover a newly-created job that will pay a $50,000 per year salary, plus the dollars that will be spent to locate this person.

Awhile back it was reported in the newspaper that the city was going to purchase a computerized mapping system for the public works division. The city is also going to install a new 911 system. We have survived several years without these systems and departments so why do we have to have these things now at the expense of Midland residents and the cost of losing two fire stations?

Will the new things pull an unconscious person out of a car or a burning building? No. Will the new things prevent someone's property from burning to a pile of ashes? No.

If I was in the northern part of Midland I would attack City Hall and the City Council in force. Do we have a City Council that sits there and says yes to City Hall's private wants and toys? It seems to be a big yes!

I know that when the fire stations close my fire protection services will definitely suffer and I am not in those two districts. Everyone in Midland should be concerned in these fire stations closing. We have fire stations as we have life insurance policies. We hope we never have to see them used.

I, for one, will be at the public hearing Aug. 25 to protest the closing of these stations and I hope to see all of the Midland residents there.

Ruth Courtney
Midland

Fire station closings cause for concern

I am concerned about the closing of the two fire stations. The City Council said these two stations did not get as many calls as the other stations. This may be true, but is the area as thickly populated as the other areas? Does less calls make it less needed? Why shouldn't this area gave the same protection as others in the city?

An emergency or fire in that section, even a few houses, is just as important as any family or home in town. Please try to cut the budget without cutting needed services for any of our people.

Authula Harris
Midland

Area should stand up about stations

The people of Green Tree are sitting on their hands. They are going to let our fire stations close without a fight. For the people who live in other districts, it is hard to understand.

I know if it were my home, my life, and the lives of my children, I would want help in two minutes instead of 10.

We may not be able to stop the closing of our fire stations, but at least we should all be able to say we tried. The firemen have always been there for you; it's time for the citizens of Midland to stand up for them.

Please voice your concern at our City Council meeting Aug. 25.

Urging superconductivity program could be Reagan coup

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN SIMEON — Overshadowing in far-reaching importance the distressing news we get so often, be it Iran's medieval madness or some other catastrophe, there has been a scientific breakthrough which is great good news for our children and grandchildren.

That is the research breakthrough in superconductivity which President Reagan has said "brings us to the threshold of a new age." The President's recent address in Washington to a group of scientists, business and educational leaders brought home to me the stupendous significance of this scientific miracle — a breakthrough which one of our scientific geniuses, Edward Teller, told the President "the optimists had thought we wouldn't make for 200 years."

At present 10 to 15 percent of electricity is lost before the energy reaches customers due to resistance in the power lines during distribution.

Superconductivity is the process by which electricity is conducted along power lines with no loss of energy because of resistance normally experienced. It could lead one day to less costly generation and transmission of electric power, to smaller electric motors, levitated (raised in air) trains and less pollution.

Materials have to be cooled before they become superconductors. Until recently they had to be made colder than 400 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Now it has been found possible to cool less, though still not economically feasible. However, scientists believe the cooling problem can be solved and that room-temperature superconductivity may even exist in nature.

President Reagan has authorized a multi-point planning program to get superconductivity out of the lab and into commercial use before Europe and Japan do so. Urging that the U.S. "herald in the new age with a rush," he said the government should help the private sector in basic research. With economic recovery, tax reform and bright prospects for an historic nuclear arms reduction agreement with the Soviets already to his credit, expediting superconductivity development could be another great achievement of the Reagan presidency.

As for the President's tax reform initiative, which resulted in Congressional legislation last fall that will bring the income tax down to as low as 15 percent for 85 percent of all taxpayers by 1988, Canada has decided to adopt a similar tax reform program. Remember how the President was excoriated when five years ago he lowered the top rate from 70 percent to 50 percent.

Fall pre-registration sessions crowded

By H.A. TUCK

Tuck

The Student Services Office probably could have handled a few more prospective students last week as fall pre-registration began. But they would have had to utilize buses, since the parking lot around the Administration Building was filled to capacity.

After the first couple of days, the crush slowed slightly. But early indications are that the 4,000 students forecast for the fall term won't be too far off.

Pre-registration continues from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday of this week. During the final week, Aug. 17-20, hours will be 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Registration is Aug. 25-26 and classes start Aug. 31.

Those who don't pre-register will be registered only during the final two hours of the second day of registrration or they'll have to wait until classes begin and late register. That costs an extra $5 late registration fee.

While thousands are beginning their college careers, at least 26 Midland College students are completing specialized training in three health care fields.

The event starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

Since we've just returned from vacation, it was a shock to learn of the death of Dr. David Norton, who retired three years ago as Assistant to the President. David was one of MC's quiet assets during the early years.

He'd been on the state Coordinating Board staff and a community college president.

One of his primary responsibilities was supervision of the two campus construction phases. He also was widely recognized for his work with Boy Scouts and Lions Club. I think he was more pleased over two of his young Scouts who attained Eagle rank than he was from receiving the Silver Beaver Award from the Boy Scouts.

I returned from a nice vacation, including a fishing trip to Lake Texoma, with new glasses. Some elderly fish in the lake likely is seeing better through my bifocals, which were hooked off my face and tossed into the lake when I stood up and got in the way of a vigorous cast.

We didn't catch any fish either, so it's hard to assess what the glasses really cost.

Latest issue of Higher Education and National Affairs reports that one in seven high school diplomas awarded in the United States each year is based on GED (General Education Development) tests. It also said that about 55 percent of those who earn a GED plan to continue their education at the college level. Texas ranks second in the nation in the number of GED diplomas earned, behind New York and ahead of California, Florida, and the other states. The average age of those earning GEDs in 1986 was 26.5 years, nearly one-third were 19 or younger, 43 percent were 20 to 29, 18 percent were 30 to 39, and 11 percent were 40 or older.

If you would like information about how to enroll for the free GED classes at MC, just call 685-4566.

Basketball coaches Reggie Franklin and George Walker were all smiles after the recent Texas Coaches All-Star Basketball game in Fort Worth.

Their last signee, 6-1 guard Charles McCovery of La Porte, had quite a night. He scored 19 points for the South team, second high; and led both teams in rebounding with 12 and in assists with 8. McCovery helped lead La Porte to a 40-0 record and the state championship this spring. He signed with Houston, but later decided to attend MC instead.

The MC commercial being heard this month on radio is a J&J Production. Actually, I just made up that name for two MC faculty members who collaborated on the commercial. Jerry Watson, radio and television, did the narration and Jerry Tubb, commercial music, wrote the music. It was recorded in the college's great commercial music recording studio. It's really nice to have kind of talent available.

Tentative approval of the 1987-88 fiscal year budget was a big relief for the Board of Trustees, when they met Tuesday. But it probably was a bigger relief for the administrators, faculty, and staff, as they finally learned what funds would be available for them to use this week.

But the greatest surprise was that small salary increases were included in the budget...all done without any increase in taxes.

Baryshnikov cancels

DALLAS (AP) — Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov has canceled his sold-out appearances in Dallas this week because of a recent ankle injury in Atlanta, tour sponsors say.

"We are very disappointed, of course, but we certainly had warning, since everybody knew about the injury," said Tom Adams, director of the International Theatrical Arts Society in Dallas.

GISD teachers attend sessions about dyslexia

From Staff Reports

A team of educators from Greenwood Independent School District, with the assistance of Dr. Bertha Hildreth from Texas Tech University, recently conducted a special in-service training in dyslexia.

Greenwood teachers are receiving training in appropriate instructional strategies to help students who demonstrate some characteristics of dyslexia. Dyslexia is a disorder in learning to read, write or spell — in spite of conventional instruction, adequate intelligence and socio-cultural opportunity.

It was out of concern for these children that the Texas Legislature approved new legislation that requires Texas schools to identify and work with students with reading problems.

Greenwood was assisted in its training efforts by Dr. Gerry Haggard, reading coordinator for the Plano Independent School District. She utilized a program developed in New Zealand, "The Early Detection of Reading Difficulties" developed by Dr. Marie M. Clay.

The program has been used with great success in Plano and other school districts in Texas and throughout the nation. A district plus is that this program can be used with any adopted text and supplemental readers that a school may have.

According to Jean Schwisow, curriculum director for GISD, the new program will be a major step in helping students attain their maximum potential.

English course set off campus

From Staff Reports

An additional English As A Second Language course opens next month through sponsorship of the Midland College Adult Learning Center.

The Level I class will be taught at the Permian Basin LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens) office, 502 E. Nobles St.

The class will meet on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7-9 p.m., starting Sept. 15 and lasting until Dec. 17. There is no charge for the class.

"We're excited about the opportunity to provide additional classes for those who wish to learn English and appreciate the cooperation of LULAC in providing facilities for the class," said Cindy Turland, coordinator of the college's Adult Learning Center.

Ms. Turland said the class would concentrate on the practical applications of English-speaking skills. She felt the class would be of particular benefit for those residents who are applying for resident status and eventually will be seeking U.S. citizenship.

"This class, to be taught by a qualified bi-lingual instructor, is really the first step for those wishing to learn English. Upon completion of this class, they can enroll for Level II and Level III classes and citizenship classes through Midland College," Ms. Turland said. "A number of those who complete the ESL classes also take classes to qualify for their GED high school equivalency diplomas and eventually enroll as academic or vocational students at Midland College."

Persons interested in enrolling for the ESL class at the LULAC office may call 687-0674. Anyone wishing additional information about ESL or GED classes at Midland College can call 685-4566.

TX. to begin site testing for nuclear waste dump

AMARILLO (AP) — The Department of Energy will announce on Monday selection of a Massachusetts engineering firm to conduct site characterization at the proposed nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County, the Amarillo Globe-News reported today.

Stone & Webster Engineering Corp. of Boston beat out Westinghouse Inc. to win the three-year, $320 million contract for detailed examination of the Texas site, the newspaper quoted congressional sources, who preferred to remain anonymous, as saying.

Texas is one of three states being considered for the nation's first underground dump for the nuclear wastes piling up at commercial reactors around the country.

The Stone & Webster contract runs for three years, but it allows seven one-year extensions with fees to be negotiated, the newspaper said.

DOE expects Stone & Webster will move several hundred employees to Amarillo starting in late summer, a source told the newspaper.

Based in Boston, Stone & Webster employs 11,000 and had gross sales of $303.9 million in 1986.

Stone & Webster builds large, technological projects which have ranged from the first commercial nuclear power plant to a hydroelectric station with the world's largest turbines.

"We have been involved in preliminary site work in Deaf Smith County already," company spokesman John Harris said.

Associated Press

Thursday, Aug. 9, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY
Today was clear and warm until afternoon, then showers and an evening thunderstorm moved in.

CONFEDERATION TODAY
Seven states and Mr. Varnum of Rhode Island were present, and Congress met.

The delegates of South Carolina presented an act of the state legislature ceding certain land to the United States, and Congress accepted.

The committee on reducing expenses recommended that Congress abolish the offices of comptroller and auditor, transfering the work to the Board of Treasury, and limit the secretary of war to two clerks.

President St. Clair wrote to Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth, executor of the estate of Gen. Nathaniel Greene and a good friend of the general's widow, Kitty. He enclosed the gold medal struck to commemorate Greene's victory at Eutaw Springs. St. Clair also wrote Horatio Gates enclosing the gold medal ordered to commemorate the Battle of Saratoga.

CONVENTION TODAY
Article V, Section 1, came under consideration.

"The Senate of the United States shall be chosen by the Legislatures of the several States. Each Legislature shall chuse two members. Vacancies may be supplied by the Executive until the next meeting of the Legislature. Each member shall have one vote."

James Wilson (Pa.) objected to having the governors fill vacancies. Edmund Randolph (Va.), Oliver Ellsworth (Conn.), and Hugh Williamson (N.C.) urged its necessity, and the motion to strike it out lost.

Randolph wished to postpone the vote on "each member shall have one vote" pending reconsideration of the money bill provision. Caleb Strong (Mass.) agreed; George Read (Del.) explained that he had voted against House origination because he thought the large states didn't regard it as important; if they did, he would change his vote. While this debate was out of order, the chair let it continue, with Wilson, Ellsworth and James Madison (Va.) opposing House origination and Benjamin Franklin (Pa.), George Mason (Va.) and Williamson urging that a deal is a deal. All of Section 1 except the last sentence was then approved.

The delegates then turned to Article V, Section 3 (senators to be at least 30 years of age, citizens for four years, and a resident of the state for which he shall be chosen). Gouverneur Morris (Pa.) wanted 14 years citizenship; his motion touched off a lively debate. Fourteen years was defeated. Thirteen years lost, and then 10 years lost. After more debate, the delegates agreed on nine years.

DELEGATES TODAY
Forty-three-year-old Elbridge Gerry (Mass.) wrote to his wife of a year-and-a-half, 21-year-old Ann Thompson Gerry.

"...How is my dearest girl, her little Pet (infant daughter Catherine), and family Friends. An answer to such questions as these is more interesting to me than all the delusive prospects of pleasure or Happiness from other Quarters. When I went to bed last evening, I began to reproach myself and have continued to do so ever since, for leaving behind my little 'comforter,' in the absence of my lovely Friend. I mean her portrait. How happened it to escape your memory as well as mine?"

LOOKING BACK
Senatorial Qualifications
The Constitutional requirement that a United States senator be a citizen of for at least nine years has not played a large part in our history, although at least one man (Albert Gallatin) was denied a seat by the Senate on the pretext that he didn't meet this test. James Madison's notes on this debate, however, are illustrative of the range of ideas and the quality of their expression which characterized the Convention:

"Mr. Govr. Morris moved to insert 14 instead of 4 years citizenship as a qualification for Senators; urging the danger of admitting strangers into our public Councils. Mr. Pinkney 2ds. him.

"Mr. Ellsworth was opposed to the motion as discouraging meritorious aliens from emigrating to this Country. Mr. Pinkney. As the Senate is to have the power of making treaties & managing our foreign affairs, there is peculiar danger and impropriety in opening its door to those who have foreign attachments. He quoted the jealousy of the Athenians on this subject who made it death for any stranger to intrude his voice into their legislative proceedings.

"Col. Mason highly approved of the policy of the motion. Were it not that many not natives of this Country had acquired great merit during the revolution, he should be for restraining the eligibility into the Senate, to natives. Mr. Madison was not averse to some restrictions on this subject; but could never agree to the proposed amendment. He thought any restriction (however) in the Constitution unnecessary, and improper. Unnecessary; because the Natl. Legislre. is to have the right of regulating naturalization, and can by virtue thereof fix different periods of residence as conditions of enjoying different privileges of Citizenship: Improper because it will give a tincture of illiberality to the Constitution: because it will put it out of the power of the Natl Legislature even by special acts of naturalization to confer the full rank of Citizens on meritorious strangers & because it will discourage the most desirable class of people from emigrating to the U.S."

Method of electing lower house debated

Wednesday, Aug. 8, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY
The day was very hot and humid.

Today's Pennsylvania Gazette carried "An Essay on the Means of Promoting Federal Sentiments in the United States, by a Foreign Spectator," and a story datelined Nassau, the Bahamas, detailing procedures for "applications for the admission of claims of parties incapable of attending in person," published by the commissioners for "enquiring into the claims of American loyalists."

CONFEDERATION TODAY
Since only six states were present, Congress could not proceed to business.

CONVENTION TODAY
Debate resumed on having the lower house elected by citizens eligible to vote for the most numerous house of their state legislature. John Francis Mercer (Md.) grumbled about the whole plan, Nathaniel Gorham (Mass.) defended the lack of property requirement for voters, and the section passed without opposition.

The delegates then turned to Article IV, Section 2 of the plan proposed by the Committee of Detail.

This section proposed that members of the House be at least 25 years old, shall have been a citizen for three years, and at the time of election be a resident of the state in which he is chosen. The section was amended and approved.

The delegates then considered the remaining sections of Article IV. They spent considerable time on Section 4:

"As the proportions of numbers in (the) different states will alter from time to time; as some of the States may hereafter be divided; as others may be enlarged by addition of territory; as two or more States may be united; as new States will be erected within the limits of the United States, the Legislature shall, in each of these cases, regulate the number of inhabitants, according to the provisions herein after made, at the rate of one for every forty thousand."

Rufus King (Mass.) immediately attacked including slaves in determining the basis for representation — "The importation of slaves could not be prohibited.—exports could not be taxed. Is this reasonable?"

James Madison (Va.) objected to making one for every 40,000 inhabitants a rule; with population growth, the number of representatives would be too large. Gorham didn't think that to be a problem because it was improbable that "this vast country including the Western territory will 150 years hence remain one nation." Roger Sherman (Conn.) and Madison moved, and the Convention agreed, to insert "not to exceed" before "one for every forty thousand."

Gouverneur Morris (Pa.) then moved to insert "free" before "inhabitants," supporting the motion with a vehement attack on slavery. Jonathan Dayton (N.J.) seconded to get his position on the record. The motion lost.

DELEGATES TODAY
Massachusetts Congressman Samuel Holten wrote Nathaniel Gorham that he was leaving Congress in a few days, and Massachusetts would not be represented. The election of officers for the Northwest Territory was coming up. Holten favored Arthur St. Clair for governor and recommended "to your particular notice my friend" Maj. Winthrop Sergeant, for secretary.

LOOKING BACK
7,551 Congresspersons
The Convention had a problem with the size of the House of Representatives. As "representative" implies, House members were to represent a broad cross section of America. To insure reasonably complete representation, there should be a large number of representatives. However, if there were too many, the House would be terribly inefficient. Also, the country was going to grow and fill up the vast areas between the Appalachians and the Mississippi. The country might have 20,000,000 people some day — and these folks should be represented.

The delegates determined that the first House of Representatives should have 65 members, that every 10 years a census would determine the proportion of the total number each state would have, but Congress would determine the size of the House. Future generations should not be tied to a fixed rule.

Penn among crowd greeting Madonna

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Pop star Madonna came home to a welcoming party of 42,000, including her husband, Sean Penn.

The fans, including Penn, who was on leave from serving a probation violation sentence in California, crowded into the Pontiac Silverdome for a concert by the "material girl," who grew up in nearby Rochester Hills.

Madonna, who once rode her bike where the Silverdome now stands, told the audience, "I was (angry) when they tore down these trees and built this place."

Thousand of girls in the audience dressed like the pop star, who's on her Who's That Girl World Tour, coinciding with the opening of her "Who's That Girl" movie.

"What other chance are you going to have to wear something like this?" said Kristin McGregor, 18, pointing to her skimpy undergarments.

She said she liked Madonna because she was gutsy. "She's pretty, she's got brains, she's not dumb and she doesn't take anything from anybody."

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Actor Richard Moll promises that sparks will fly during the new season of "Night Court," literally.

Moll, who plays the gentle giant bailiff Bull Shannon on the NBC comedy series, said his character will be struck by lightning and have an out-of-body experience during the season.

"But they just tighten up the bolts in his head and he's good as new again," Moll said.

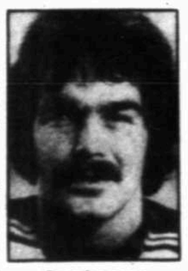
Indeed, before his big break on the hit network program, Moll was a serious Shakesperean actor. Born in Pasadena, Calif., he graduated from Berkeley in 1964 — "before the revolution. We wore Oxford shirts and polished cotton pants."

As a youngster, Moll spent several years in Jackson, Wyo., and says he learned to fish as a kid. Casting a fishing line into the Stillwater River on Friday — after quoting lines from "Richard III" — Moll said his visit to Montana was "kind of like being home...makes me feel good."

Moll is known for his quick wit offscreen and, before the cameras, for his bald pate and imposing stature — nearly 6 feet, 8 inches.

Of his fellow "Night Court" actors, Moll joked, "I hate them all."

• • •



Sanderson

EAST BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — Derek Sanderson, a high-flying hockey star with the "big, bad" Boston Bruins before he was brought down by drugs and alcohol, is back and he has a message.

Say no to drugs.

Sanderson, a sportscaster, has been traveling around New England advising kids not to follow his path that took him through bouts of alcohol, drug and steroid abuse.

Many of the kids he talks to weren't even born when he was crashing the boards on the way to Stanley Cup championships in 1970 and 1972.

His stride is slowed by several hip operations following an NHL career marked by a free-wheeling style, a flowing mane of hair, Fu Manchu mustache, cocky attitude and quick fists.

But Sanderson's delivery is still direct, to the point, as he urges his listeners to "say no."

"It's there. It's a fact of life and what I'm trying to say is, 'you don't need it,'" he told about 200 students during a recent stop at a junior high school here. "You'll eventually pay the price if you do use drugs."

Sanderson's message to students, clergy and parents is being funded by Browning-Ferris Industries, a Houston-based international waste disposal corporation.

Dershowitz

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Philadelphia councilman convicted of extortion is the latest client of defense lawyer Alan Dershowitz, known for his successful defense of Danish socialite Claus von Bulow.

Councilman Leland Beloff, 45, a millionaire nursing home operator, was sentenced to 10 years in a federal prison Wednesday for conspiring with reputed mob boss Nicodemo Scarfo in a bungled plot to extort $1 million from a waterfront developer.

Beloff also was found guilty of taking bribes in cash and an apartment for a girlfriend from other builders.

Dershowitz, a Harvard Law School professor and author, said he would ask the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to set aside the conviction and sentence and grant a new trial on grounds that some secretly taped evidence improperly inflamed the jury.

"When you've tried everything else and you've lost, then you come to me," Dershowitz once said.

Besides von Bulow, Dershowitz has represented Patty Hearst, former U.S. Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and Soviet refusenik Natan Sharansky.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warren Beatty's $40,000 Mercedes-Benz, minus its battery and radio, was found parked on a street two days after the actor reported it stolen, police said.

The 1973 Mercedes 450 SL was found Friday night in southwest Los Angeles, about 10 miles from where it was stolen, said Sgt. Mike Darling. There were no arrests.

Beatty told police he parked the car around the corner from a Sunset Strip restaurant where he dined with friends Wednesday night. When he came out of the West Hollywood establishment around midnight, the car was gone.

Beatty has starred in such films as "Bonnie and Clyde," "Shampoo" and "Heaven Can Wait." He won an Oscar for directing the 1981 film "Reds," in which he also starred.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Beastie Boys won a temporary injunction Friday against the "adult subject matter" warnings city officials ordered printed on tickets for the rap group's Sunday show here.

U.S. District Judge John H. Moore ruled the city must remove the warnings from all advertising and tickets sold between Friday and the performance at the Jacksonville Coliseum.

The group's attorney, Ken Anderson of New York City, said the city's warning was unfairly aimed at excluding young people from the show.

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Midland's slim second half lead remained ½ game over the El Paso Diablos as the fourth game in the five-game series was rained out Saturday night in at Dudley Field.

The Angels and Diablos will make up the rain out with a doubleheader tonight beginning at 6 p.m. Steve McGuire, 3-2, will oppose El Paso's Jim Hunter, 3-4, in the first game. The second game starters were not announced.

The Angels will leave for five more games in San Antonio starting Monday after Sunday's action. Midland returns home for a final 10-game homestand on Aug. 15 against El Paso and San Antonio.

Midland held a 2-1 lead in the second inning before torrential showers ended all hopes of finishing the contest. Marty Reed was throwing for Midland and Arturo Gonzalez for the Diablos.

Rebels sell out season tickets

From Staff Reports

Season tickets for Midland Lee football games have already been sold out and will not be available when the Memorial Stadium ticket windows open Monday morning.

According to Athletic Director Gil Bartosh, Lee football tickets will be available during the season on the visitors side only. They can be purchased the week of the game on a first-come basis.

While the Rebels are sold out Midland High still has plenty of tickets for the 1987 season.

New coach for a new tradition

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

When Class 3A Greenwood takes the field for the first day of two-a-days Monday, head coach Bob Purser will be trying to do more than just build a winner in his first season with the Rangers.

Purser will be setting the foundation for what he hopes will be the beginning of a solid Ranger football tradition.

"I want it to be important for these kids to be a Ranger," Purser said. "I want to start a new tradition. West Texas has always been football country and we'd like to get a little of that enthusiasm here in Greenwood."

Purser is trying to generate some of that enthusiasm, beginning in the Ranger locker room. A new carpet and sparkling Ranger emblem now adorn the floor in the varsity locker room, creating a much more homey atmosphere.

"Football is always going to be a game where 90 percent of winning is mental attitude so you have to find an approach to develop the proper mental attitude," Purser said. "We started with the dressing room because it was the easiest. It's something all our players can see. Maybe some day younger kids will say 'I want to be a Ranger.'"

Purser spent the last five seasons as the head coach at Class 2A Lockney, compiling a 28-19-7 record and has been an assistant coach in such West Texas towns as Anton, Granbury and Big Spring since 1972.

Purser has taken over for a program that shot up from Class 1A to Class 3A in a span of three years — and has experienced all the growing pains that come with such a jump. And with the school only fielding a football team for eight years, there has not been the tradition to fall back on.

Area teams ready to go

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Area schools from Class 1A Garden City to 4A's Big Spring, Andrews and Lamesa will lace up the football cleats Monday for the first session of two-a-days in preparation for the 1987 football season.

All 1A to 4A schools will practice in shoes and shorts until Friday when the first full-contact workouts can be held. Class 5A schools Midland High and Midland Lee won't open practice sessions until Aug. 17.

"We've got all the equipment passed out and we're ready to go Monday morning," said Stanton-Coach Dale Ruth. "We've got 12 lettermen returning and we're looking forward to a good season."

Stanton will begin its second year of play in District 6-2A, joining state-ranked Reagan County, Rankin, Ozona, Forsan and Eldorado. The Owls, state-finalists last season, are ranked sixth in the preseason Texas Sports Writers Association poll.

In the area's other 2A district, McCamey and Iraan will again be favored over Van Horn, Marfa and Presidio in District 5-2A.

District 2-4A, which stretches from Sweetwater in the east to Pecos in the west, will again feature a heated battle for the two state playoff berths. Defending champion Big Spring will put its title on the line against all comers, most notably Monahans and Sweetwater, but a wide-open race is expected. Pecos, Fort Stockton, Lamesa, San Angelo Lake View, Snyder and Andrews are all looking for contender's status.

The Steers, just one season removed from the wars of District 4-5A, were 8-0 in their first go-round in 2-4A and are ranked 14th in the TSWA poll released in late July.

Greenwood makes its second venture into Class 3A, butting heads with perennial powerhouses Kermit and Crane and western schools Clint, Fabens and Alpine. The Yellowjackets are ranked 19th in the state.

In District 6-A, Garden City will try to improve on last season's 1-9 mark with new coach Sam Scott at the helm.

Unbeatens battling for Class C title

From Staff Reports

Two of the four undefeated teams left in the State Class C Softball tournament at Hogan Park this weekend were still playing at midnight Saturday, looking for a spot in today's finals.

Georgetown Downtown of Georgetown made it through undefeated Saturday by defeating the Sweetwater A's in a late game and Big John's Bar-B-Q of Buchanan Dam beat The Pumpers of Wichita Falls 8-4. The other two games were still in progress at press time.

A pair of Midland teams were still alive late Saturday, but both were playing for their lives in the loser's bracket.

Exxon E&P and The Slammer each won a pair of games Saturday before falling into the loser's bracket with a loss. Exxon beat Los Paisanos of Eagle Pass, 4-3, and the Slaton

Who wants PGA lead?

McCumber, Weibring take their turn

By BOB GREENE

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Mark McCumber is scared. And for him that means he's having fun.

McCumber and D.A. Weibring were the chief beneficiaries of a collapse by the leaders Saturday and gained a share of the lead going into the final round of the 69th PGA championship.

Weibring, who started play in sweltering heat five shots back and tied for 14th, gained his tie for the top with a bogey-free 67 that tied the course record set in 1983 by Jim Albus.

McCumber, who has gained three of his five career victories on the bermuda-grass greens of his native Florida, got his share of the lead with a two-putt birdie-4 on the final hole. It finished off a 69 that left him tied with Weibring at 212, four shots under par.

"I'm looking forward to tomorrow (Sunday)," he said. "I know I'll be nervous. But I always think about what my daughter Adde said. We were at an amusement park and she wanted to go on one of those wild rides.

"She said, 'if you're not scared, you're not having fun.' I'll try to remember that tomorrow."

First, it was Lanny Wadkins who gave away the lead Saturday.

He gave it over to Ray Floyd.

Floyd gave it to Seve Ballesteros.

And Seve left it in a lake on the 16th hole at the PGA National Golf Club.

"I'm tired," Seve said. "I think I played too many shots on those last three holes."

Their troubles opened the way for McCumber and Weibring.

"I want to be a winner," said Weibring, who has gained a single victory in an 11-year PGA Tour career.

"If I can play well, I think I have a good chance. I'll just try to play the best D.A. can play," he said.

WHILE THEY backed away in the blistering heat, Floyd, Wadkins and Ballesteros remain very much within striking distance.

"I have my destiny in my hands," said the 44-year-old Floyd. "I wasted a heck of a round today.

"I'm still playing well. My attitude is good. I'm not down."

After a third-round 73, he's down by one shot at 213 and tied with Bobby Wadkins, who engineered another flip-flop with brother Lanny.

Powe added to injured list

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Second-year wide receiver Karl Powe suffered a shoulder injury Saturday on the last play of the Dallas Cowboys' Blue-White scrimmage in which the defense downed the offense 33-20.

Powe, who missed the 1986 NFL season with a neck injury, went down on the last play of the scrimmage in a tangle with rookie cornerback Ron Francis.

Powe caught 14 passes for 237 yards in 1985.

Dr. Pat Evans said "It's a least a sprain and we sent him (Powe) to a hospital for X-Rays."

Poe is the sixth wide receiver injured this week in the Cowboys' training camp.

Giants' confidence giving Cincinnati fits

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants gave their pitcher, Atlee Hammaker, a feeling of confidence in the first inning Saturday — while giving Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose fits.

The Giants began the bottom of the first with four straight hits off Tom Browning, scored four runs and went to to beat the Reds 5-2.

"With a four-run lead and knowing what kind of bullpen we have, I was able to stay aggressive. It made things a lot easier for me," said Hammaker, who pitched a four-hitter for his second complete game of the season.

Hammaker, 7-8, had a one-hit shutout with two outs in the eighth before Eric Davis hit an 0-2 pitch for his 31st home run.

Browning, 5-9, pitched six innings and allowed only two hits and one run after the first — but the damage already was done.

"He's given up three, four, five runs in the first inning almost every game recently," Rose said. "He's got to give his team a better chance."

The Giants' bullpen got a second consecutive day off, which should mean the pitching staff will be at full strength for a doubleheader on Sunday.

Hot-hitting Will Clark drove in two runs, wrapping up the scoring in the first inning with a sacrifice fly and hitting his 23rd homer in the sixth off Browning. Clark has eight homers and 22 RBI in his last 18 games.

The victory pulled San Francisco within three games of the first-place Reds in the National League West race.

The Giants opened the first with four consecutive hits, starting with Robby Thompson's double. Kevin Mitchell had an RBI single, went to second on Jeffrey Leonard's single and scored on Candy Maldonado's double.

Braves 9, Dodgers 7

LOS ANGELES — Dale Murphy hit two homers to drive in four runs and Gerald Perry added a two-run homer as Atlanta defeated Los Angeles.

David Palmer, 6-9, allowed three hits, struck out four and walked two in five innings. He left for a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning after being hit by a line drive by Dave Anderson in the bottom of the fifth.

Jim Acker pitched three innings, allowing Mickey Hatcher's two-run homer in the sixth and solo shots by Mike Marshall in the eighth and pinch-hitter Ken Landreaux in the ninth.

National League

The Braves scored twice in the fourth off Orel Hershiser, 12-10. Perry opened the inning by beating out a grounder to second. Singles by Murphy and Ken Griffey produced one run, and Glenn Hubbard drove in the second with a bases-loaded fielder's choice grounder.

The Braves made it 5-0 in the fifth when Ken Oberkfell drew a one-out walk and Perry and Murphy hit consecutive homers. It was Perry's eighth homer and Murphy's 31st.

Oberkfell singled and Perry doubled in the seventh before Murphy made it 8-2 in the seventh with a three-run homer off reliever Ken Howell. The Braves added another run later in the inning on Acker's RBI single.

Pirates 5, Expos 2

PITTSBURGH — R.J. Reynolds had three hits and three RBIs, including a two-run homer, as Pittsburgh beat Montreal.

Reynolds hit his fifth homer of the year — and first since June 24 — off Bryn Smith, 7-6, in the fourth. It followed Bobby Bonilla's single.

Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers asked that Reynolds' bat be impounded and plate umpire Steve Rippley and crew chief Lee Weyer complied. The Expos also played the game under protest.

Montreal's Tim Raines hit a two-run homer off Doug Drabek in the sixth and the Pirates demanded that his bat be impounded, and also played the game under protest.

Raines' 13th homer came after Herm Winningham's pinch double off Drabek, 4-10.

Drabek allowed four hits over six innings and won consecutive starts for the first time this year. John Smiley finished for his fourth save.

The Pirates added a run against Andy McGaffigan in the sixth when Reynolds doubled and scored on Al Pedrique's double.

Reynolds hit an RBI single in the seventh to score Johnny Ray, who reached on McGaffigan's error and took third on a single by Bonilla.

Pittsburgh's first run came in the third when Pedrique doubled, moved up on a bunt and scored on Barry Bonds' sacrifice fly.

Cardinals 9, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Tommy Herr homered, doubled twice and singled and drove in three runs and Tony Pena added a three-run shot and an RBI single to lead St. Louis over Philadelphia.

Todd Worrell, 6-6, the third of four Cardinal pitchers, was the winner.

Danny Cox, who has been on the disabled list since July 10, started for St. Louis and allowed five hits and three runs in four innings.

The Cardinals took a 3-0 lead in the second on a single by Terry Pendleton, a walk to Jim Lindeman and Pena's fourth home run of the season off Dan Carman, 7-8. The Cardinals made it 4-0 in the third on an RBI single by Willie McGee.

Cubs 5, Mets 3

The Cubs stopped their three-game skid before a crowd of 47,893 and halted the Mets' longest winning string of the season. The Mets dropped 4½ games behind division-leading St. Louis in the National League East.

Mike Mason, 4-1, gave up three runs on five hits in 5⅔ innings. Frank DiPino retired Mookie Wilson on a fly ball with the bases loaded to end the sixth and put Chicago ahead 4-3.

Jay Baller struck out Howard Johnson with the bases loaded to end the seventh and preserve the one-run lead. After Jerry Mumphrey's RBI groundout in the Chicago eighth, Lee Smith worked the final two innings for his 27th save.

Kruk's hit spoils Astros in 10th

SAN DIEGO (AP) — John Kruk singled home a run with one out in the 10th inning to give the San Diego Padres their fourth straight win, a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

Tony Gwynn drew a one-out walk in the 10th off Dave Meads, 5-2, and went to second when Shane Mack blooped a single to right which just eluded second baseman Bill Doran.

The Astros had a 3-1 lead before the Padres tied it in the ninth on a two-run single by Benito Santiago off Houston relief ace Dave Smith. Carmelo Martinez and Kruk had singled and the runners were moved into scoring position by a sacrifice before Santiago's base hit.

Earlier, Nolan Ryan had pitched three-hit ball over six innings for the Astros and left the game in the hands of Larry Andersen after giving up Kruk's leadoff homer in the seventh, his 15th.

Rangers claim easy win

Weaver ball haunts Orioles in 11-5 loss

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Tom O'Malley finally hit a three-run homer in Baltimore, the kind Earl Weaver, his old manager with the Orioles, used to covet.

But O'Malley connected for his new Texas teammates, helping to power the Rangers to an 11-5 victory over the Orioles Saturday night.

Oddibe McDowell and Ruben Sierra also hit homers for the Rangers, who had been outscored 61-39 while losing seven of nine previous games.

"I had some conversations with Weaver about hitting more home runs," said O'Malley, who hit just one homer during a stint under Weaver last season.

"But that's out of my game," O'Malley said. "When I start to pull, that leaves a lot more parts of the plate wide open, and I try to do things I'm not able to do."

O'Malley's homer came following an intentional walk to Geno Petralli after the count reached 3-and-0.

"That doesn't show much respect for the hitter behind him, but that's what the pitcher has got to do," O'Malley said. "And, against the Orioles, there might be a little more incentive involved."

O'Malley, playing his third game since being recalled from the minors on Wednesday, hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning to give the Rangers a 6-1 lead. Sierra, who has homered in each of his last three games, his his 22nd in the first inning and Texas scored two unearned runs in the second to make it 3-0.

After Pete Incaviglia was safe on third baseman Ray Knight's fielding error, singles by Larry Parrish and Oddibe McDowell loaded the bases. Incaviglia scored when Geno Petralli was hit by a pitch from Mike Boddicker, 7-6, and Parrish scored as O'Malley grounded into a double play.

McDowell hit a two-run homer off Boddicker in the Rangers' five-run eighth following a walk to Parrish. Jerry Browne and Sierra had RBI singles in the inning off Tom Niedenfuer, who also wild-pitched a run across.

Bobby Witt, 6-5, beat Baltimore for the second time in a week. He allowed four hits and fanned seven while pitching five innings in oppressive 89-degree heat and 90 percent humidity.

The Orioles stranded nine of their 14 runners during Witt's stint, leaving the bases loaded in the third and fourth innings. The only run off Witt came on Larry Sheets' 21st homer in the second. Sheets also homered in the ninth, his second straight two-homer game.

Baltimore scored in the sixth and seventh innings off Steve Howe, appearing in his second straight game since battling back from five suspensions because of drug use.

A pinch single by Mike Young scored a run in the sixth and Knight's RBI double finished Howe in the seventh.

Brewers 5, White Sox 3
White Sox 8, Brewers 6

CHICAGO — Ray Burris came out of Milwaukee's front office at age 36 to win his first AL game in almost two years as the Brewers beat Chicago in the first game of a doubleheader.

The White Sox won the second game 8-6 as Greg Walker and Ken Williams each drove in two runs, ending Milwaukee's five-game winning streak and Chicago's five-game losing streak.

Burris, 1-0, making his first AL start since Oct. 4, 1985, joined the Brewers' front office in April as a special assistant to General Manager Harry Dalton.

Juan Castillo's one-out double drove in the go-ahead run in a three-run sixth inning. Milwaukee's Paul Molitor hit safely in both games, extending his hitting streak to 23 games.

Because several young Milwaukee pitchers found it difficult to adjust to the majors, Burris asked permission to try a comeback. He made his first appearance in relief July 31 against Chicago, giving up one run in three innings.

His last AL victory came while pitching for the Brewers on Aug. 26, 1985, against Cleveland. Burris' last major-league victory was on June 24, 1986, for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Red Sox 8, Royals 3

BOSTON — Rookie Ellis Burks had a two-run homer and a pair of doubles for his eighth three-hit game of the season as Boston rolled to a victory over Kansas City.

Staked to a 7-0 lead in the first three innings, southpaw Bruce Hurst, 13-6, matched his career single-season high for victories. He allowed nine hits, struck out seven and walked three to improve his Fenway Park record to 10-1.

Yankees 7, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Tommy John pitched a two-hitter, and the New York Yankees reclaimed first place in the AL East with a victory over Detroit.

Dan Pasqua hit a two-run homer while Rick Cerone, Gary Ward and Don Mattingly hit solo shots for the Yankees, who had been pounded 12-5 and 8-0, respectively, in the first two games of the weekend series.

The victory, coupled with Cleveland's 3-1 triumph over Toronto, put New York back on top, half a game ahead of the Blue Jays and 2½ ahead of the third-place Tigers.

John, 11-4, faced the minimum number of batters through the first four innings in pitching his first shutout and second complete game of the season. John hit Tigers leadoff man Lou Whitaker with a pitch in the first, but a double play erased that mistake.

Indians 3, Blue Jays 1

Candiotti, 5-11, struck out three and walked two while tossing his fourth complete game. The right-handed knuckleballer allowed only a solo home run to George Bell in the sixth inning. It was Bell's 35th homer and AL-leading 96th RBI.

Toronto starter Jose Nunez, 1-1, took the loss. Nunez gave up two runs in 2⅓ innings, yielding only one hit but issuing four walks. Jeff Musselman allowed Cleveland one run over the next four innings before Mark Eichhorn and Tom Henke finished up.

Twins 9, Athletics 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Steve Carlton pitched a six-hitter over 8⅔ innings for his 329th victory and Kirby Puckett went 4-for-4 with a homer and two doubles as Minnesota beat Oakland.

Carlton, 6-10, making his Metrodome debut and his second start since the Twins acquired him from Cleveland on July 31, pitched the American League West-leading Twins to their third straight triumph and dropped Oakland three games off the pace.

The Twins used an 11-hit attack, mostly off A's starter Curt Young, 10-6, to improve their home record to a major-league-leading 36-16.

The 42-year-old Carlton walked three, struck out two and lost his bid for his 56th career shutout and first since Aug. 15, 1983, with one out in the ninth when Luis Polonia tripled and Alfredo Griffin singled.

The Twins took a 4-0 lead in the first inning when Dan Gladden walked, Greg Gagne singled, Puckett doubled a run home, Gary Gaetti hit a two-run triple and Tom Brunansky drove in a run with a grounder.

Brown upholds Niekro's suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — American League President Bobby Brown on Saturday upheld the 10-day suspension of Minnesota Twins pitcher Joe Niekro, who was caught with an emery board and sandpaper in his pocket in a game earlier this week.

Brown heard an appeal of the suspension Saturday via conference call from his New York office with Niekro, Twins Manager Tom Kelly and club General Manager Andy MacPhail.

"After considering all of the items presented by Joe Niekro and the Minnesota Twins, the suspension has been upheld and will commence today," Brown said in a prepared statement.

Niekro, 42, was suspended last Wednesday, two days after he was ejected from a game against the California Angels.

Niekro, the first player to be suspended for doctoring baseballs since Gaylord Perry in 1982, was caught with the nail file and sandpaper after umpires already had collected several baseballs that appeared to have been scuffed.

The knuckleballing pitcher said he used the equipment to manicure his fingernails during a game. "I don't have to scuff a knuckleball, and I threw mainly knuckleballs," Niekro said.

The appeal was heard by conference call "in lieu of a formal hearing," the league said. The call was made at about 4 p.m. EDT.

The suspension will continue through Aug. 17.

"During that period, he will be allowed to work out with the team; but cannot be in uniform or sit on the bench or in the bullpen during the game," Brown said.

Niekro made one start while the suspension was held in abeyance pending the hearing. Friday night, Niekro threw eight strong innings in a 9-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics, improving his record to 6-8.

RANGERS

With enrollment growing by leaps and bounds, Greenwood moved out of Class 1A competition after the 1983-84 school year and into District 8-2A with traditional football strongholds like Reagan County and McCamey.

Even though the Rangers stayed competitive, playoffs weren't part of the post-season ritual. And while other West Texas communities were seeing enrollment decline in the mid-1980s, Greenwood continued to blossom, and beginning with the 1986-87 school year, the Rangers were bumped up to Class 3A.

In their only year in District 4-3A in 1986, the Rangers and first-year coach Maurice Hodges struggled to a 2-3, 3-7 record.

OUR DISTRICT is plenty tough, there's no question about that," Purser said of rivals Kermit, Crane, Alpine, Fabens and Clint. "Being in Class 3A is a growing process for the team and the community. Being a 3A school, you can't do things the way a real small school can.

"And we're going to stay at 3A, we've got 100 kids playing football on the 7th and 8th grade level and more coming each year. With an increase in enrollment, we can expect a lot more kids to play. And the more kids are involved, the more parents and others are involved. We'd like to get that going and build on that for the future."

With Hodges' stay cut short after one season, some of Purser's players will be playing for their third coach in three years. But Purser is hoping to add some balance to a program that has been unstable since Joe Longley's five-year stint ended in 1985.

"Football hasn't always been a priority here — and that's OK. I like to see a balance among sports. But I'd like to be as competitive in football here as we have been in basketball," Purser said. "Getting there is going to be the big trick."

PGA

again went ahead of Lanny with a 71.

Lanny Wadkins, the 1977 winner of this title, and Ballesteros were another shot back at 214. Lanny, who simply could not make a putt, suffered through one stretch of four bogeys in five holes, and had a 74.

Ballesteros, twice a winner of the British Open and a two-time Masters champ, self-destructed by shooting two balls in the water over the last three holes.

He played those last three holes 6-2-6 and finished with an erratic round of par 72 that included five birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey.

The only other golfer under par after three rounds was Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA titleholder. Nelson shot 73 and was one under at 215.

South African David Frost, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw, with a 74, were next at par 216.

A PGA spokesman said the official high for the day was 94 with 68 percent humidity. ABC-TV said the figures were 95 and 80. And a thermometer on the golf course registered 103.

Lanny Wadkins took the early lead with birdie putts of 12 and 25 feet on two of the first three holes, then let it get away with bogeys on four of the next five holes.

Floyd then took over. But only until he missed the green on the seventh, pitched through the green into deep rough and made double bogey.

That handed it over to Ballesteros, who got two shots in front with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 10th. He gave that shot back after driving into the rough on the 12th but still had a share of top spot going to the 16th.

There, he hit into the water and made double bogey, handing the lead over to Weibring and McCumber. McCumber two-putted from 30 feet for birdie-4 on the final hole.

Weibring got short irons inside of three feet to go three under on the first six holes.

"I didn't know how I stood in relation to the rest of the field. I figured I was doing pretty good," Weibring said. "But I just concentrated on staying calm, playing within myself, knocking off the holes one by one."

"I just wanted to keep in the same good, positive frame of mind and get it home," he said.

Weibring did that, and added a 12-foot putt for birdie on the 11th and another from 15 feet on the 15th.

"This is a tough game. We'll have to learn to weather the storm," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

Twenty-one players including running backs Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker and defenders Randy White and Mike Hegman didn't suit up for the game because of injury.

The defensive Blue team whipped the offensive White team through a complex scoring system which includes points for fumbles recoveries, interceptions, and holding the offense without a first down.

"The defense should be better at this stage," Landry said. "We didn't move the ball consistently. Victor Scott and Francis looked good in the defensive backfield."

Tailback Robert Lavette was the leading rusher with 41 yards on 11 carries, including a two-yard touchdown run which was the only score for the offense.

He earned a starting job in next Saturday's first preseason game against the San Diego Chargers.

"Lavette looked good and will start against the Chargers," Landry said.

Quarterback Danny White hit 3 of 5 passes for 76 yards, including a 52-yard strike to Gordon Banks, who has been elevated to Sherrard's starting split end position.

Steve Pelluer hit 3 of 6 for 61 yards including a 49-yarder to Powe.

Taylor gives 49ers good start for '87

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — John Taylor, who spent 1986 on the San Francisco 49ers' injured reserve list, didn't want to waste any time reminding Coach Bill Walsh what he can do.

Walsh seemed thoroughly convinced after Taylor returned one punt 64 yards for a touchdown and another 49 yards to set up San Francisco's other touchdown Saturday as the 49ers beat the Kansas City Chiefs 20-7 in the annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame game.

"John Taylor will be a valuable player for us, both as a receiver and as a special teams player," Walsh said. Taylor, a third-round draft choice from Delaware State in 1986, sat out last season because of a back injury, and he is trying to win a job as a receiver despite heavy competition at that position. Among the 49ers' newcomers this season is former Dallas Cowboy receiver Tony Hill.

"Everybody's battling for position, really," Taylor said. "I want to start (as a receiver), but special teams is OK."

The collapse of the Chiefs' punt coverage unit caused some concern for new Coach Frank Gansz, the former special teams coach who was elevated to replace the fired John Mackovic.

"I'm not worried, but today showed you can't take anything for granted," Gansz said. "You can't think about last year."

Taylor returned a Lewis Colbert punt 49 yards to the Kansas City 41-yard-line early in the second quarter to start the 49ers' first touchdown drive, and he sprinted 64 yards down the right sideline just before halftime to put San Francisco up 20-0.

Taylor also had a 17-yard return.

"Our special teams played well, considering the reputation Kansas City has as the best in football," Walsh said.

Veteran Joe Montana started at quarterback for the 49ers and played most of the first half, although Steve Young, the newcomer from Tampa Bay and the United States Football League, relieved him for several downs.

Montana completed nine of 14 passes for 120 yards, including a 39-yarder to Jerry Rice that set up Ray Wersching's 25-yard field goal in the first quarter. He also completed three long passes on a second-quarter drive capped by Jeff Brockhaus' 42-yard field goal.

Montana did not play in the second half.

The Kansas City offense, which ranked last in the NFL a year ago, showed little improvement Saturday, penetrating no farther than the 49ers' 38-yard line until a 41-yard pass interference penalty set up Andre Garron's 1-yard TD run in the fourth quarter.

The game at Fawcett Stadium followed the inductions of seven players into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Enshrined were Miami fullback Larry Csonka and center Jim Langer, Kansas City quarterback Len Dawson, Pittsburgh defensive lineman Joe Greene and running back John Henry Johnson, New York Jets receiver Don Maynard and Oakland Raiders offensive guard Gene Upshaw.

The only encouraging sign for the Chiefs' offense came from second-round draft pick Christian Okoye. The Nigerian-born 253-pounder, who has played organized football for only three years, ran the ball eight times for 74 yards.

Rodriguez birdies way to four-stroke lead

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez finished with three straight birdies Saturday for a 6-under-par 66 and a four-stroke lead after two rounds of the $250,000 Seniors PGA Classic at Nashawtuc Country Club.

Rodriguez, seeking his sixth victory on the Seniors Tour this season, was at 11-under 131, a tournament record, after 36 holes. He matched his best 36-hole score of the year.

Roberto DeVicenzo shot a 69 for a 142 total that earned him $8,000 in the 36-hole Super Seniors competition for players 60 and over.

Rodriguez sank a two-foot putt for a birdie on the 16th hole, waited out an 18-minute rain delay, then sank an 18-footer for another birdie on the 17th.

He settled for another birdie on the 18th after barely missing a bid for an eagle.

Bears 14-4 before losing to Borski Homes of Bryan, 11-1. The Slammer defeated the Fort Hood Demons 11-7 and the Albany A's 11-2, but lost to last year's runner-up Big John's Bar-B-Q of Buchanan Dam, 16-1.

Three other Midland teams were eliminated Saturday, suffering second defeats.

Coastal Oil & Gas finished the tourney 2-2 with a 4-2 loss to The Renegades of San Angelo. Also eliminated was One Hour Photo by a score of 15-8 to Odessa Rumors. Stadium Sports was beaten by defending state champion Ray Vess Jewelers of Alice, 16-13.

Ray Vess was working its way through the loser's bracket after losing early in the tournament to McLeod's Jeweler's of Snyder. Ray Vess had already won five loser's bracket games, but needed three more to make the championship round.

Rojas wins title decision over Laciar

MIAMI (AP) — Sugar Baby Rojas became the new World Boxing Council junior bantamweight champion Saturday night when he defeated Santos Laciar by unanimous decision.

Rojas, the first world champion from Barranquilla, Colombia, outlasted Laciar with a steady attack that had the ex-champion from Argentina back peddling for most of the 12 rounds.

"I had to come out and be aggressive," Rojas said after the bout at Taniami Arena. "He had said, before the fight, that he was going to kill me. So I had to come out and be the aggressor."

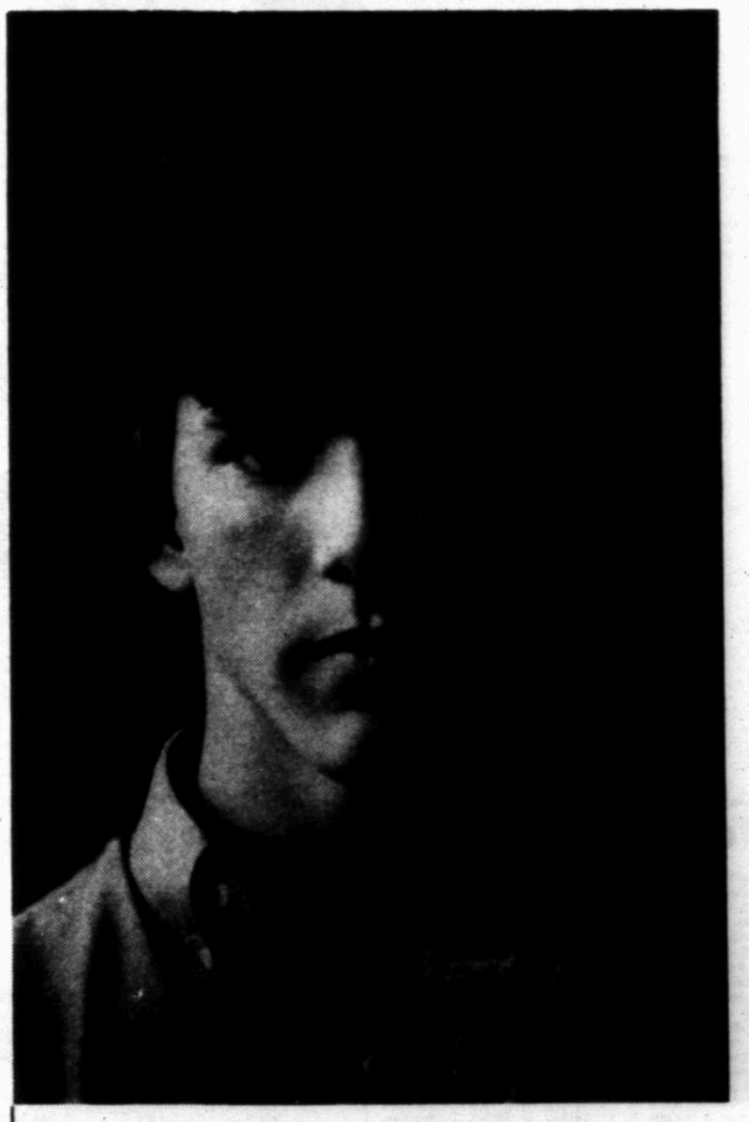
"It was definately a tough fight for him," Rojas said. "I had no idea the crowd was going to be so one-sided. But I'll take it any day. You could tell the response of the crowd hurt him."

Laciar's trainer, Marcelo Tejero, said it was the heat that did in his fighter.



I wanted to be like my dad, "Order me a dry martini."

Lendl to face McEnroe

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Ivan Lendl struggled past 17-year-old Andre Agassi 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 and John McEnroe overcame his own shaky serve to beat Christo van Rensburg 6-4, 6-2 Saturday to reach the final of the Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

The resumption of their unfriendly rivalry today will be their first Grand Prix meeting since Lendl replaced McEnroe as the world's top player by beating him in the U.S. Open final in 1985.

McEnroe, trying to win his first tournament since October and regain the form that made him No. 1 in the world from 1981-85, was seldom troubled by van Rensburg, although McEnroe put only 46 percent of his first serves into play.

Lendl fired 17 aces and needed them all, as Agassi was able to match Lendl groundstroke-for-groundstroke.

Lendl broke Agassi twice to win the first set and appeared on his way to an easy victory when he broke again for 4-3 lead in the second set.

But Agassi broke back and won the set in the 12th game when Lendl double-faulted and netted a groundstroke. Agassi hit a sparkling return of a backhand and Lendl netted the break point.

Lendl took control again in the third set when Agassi netted one shot and hit two others out before Lendl hit a service return forehand winner to win the third game.

Agassi, ranked 90th in the world, went down fighting, going to five deuces on his serve before barely missing two shots down the line in the final game.

"He played better than 90 today," said Lendl, who is seeking his third straight Volvo title. "It was fun out there for awhile."

Even during the final set, Lendl joked with Agassi, and at one point after hitting three straight aces he quipped, "When you get to be 25, 15 years from now, you'll need aces to win, too."

Sunday's match against McEnroe promises to be more serious although Lendl said beating McEnroe meant "nothing" to him.

McEnroe, however, looked at the match differently.

"I feel I'm on the right track," he said. "Playing Lendl would be a good barometer for me to see how far away I am."

Although he struggled with his first serve, McEnroe volleyed effectively and took advantage of van Rensburg's mistakes at key moments. He went to the net 45 times and won 34 points.

"I need to be a lot more consistent with my first serve," said McEnroe, who blamed part of his problems on the wind that he said disrupted his rhythm. "I can't give a guy like Lendl that many chances on my second serve."

Three knotted at 5-under for Henredon lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Beth Daniel, in search of the touch which made her one of the LPGA's premier golfers in the 1980s, shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to share the lead with three other golfers in the $300,000 Henredon Classic.

Daniel, with 14 career victories in eight years, but who has not won since 1985, has a two-round total of 5-under-par 139. Heather Drew also shot a bogey-free 69 in the hot and humid conditions at Willow Creek Golf Course.

Colleen Walker shot a 1-under-par 71 for her share of first place, which is worth $45,000. Missie Berteotti mastered the heat with three birdies on the back nine and turned in a 5-under-par 67.

Daniel was at 6-under-par through 15 holes and missed raising that score when her 5-foot putt for birdie at 15 rimmed the cup. Her tee shot at the par 3, 16th hole landed in a sand trap, and after blasting out, she had to two-putt from 12 feet for bogey. She went out in regulation.

"I have not been in contention too often this year and it's just nice to be in contention for a change," Daniel said. "I started feeling a little like the Beth Daniel I used to know."

Daniel said she is not focusing on winning the tournament, but merely trying to boost her confidence with a good finish on the 6,244-yard course, which was drenched by three hours of rain Friday, thus washing out the second round and shortening the tournament to 54 holes. Seventy-two golfers made the cut at 146.

"It's been a real tough year for me. I've had a lot of problems," she said.

"This is the best life in the world when you are playing well," Daniel added. "It's the worst when you're playing bad. I can definitely say I've learned a lot through this experience."

SUNRISE, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Joe Young scored a seventh-round knockout of former World Boxing Council junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor Saturday night in a bout marked by Pryor's antics.

Pryor, who was unbeaten in 36 previous fights, was attempting to come back after a bout with cocaine addiction. His strange behavior in the ring included taking a swipe at Young's trainer before the fight, helping the timer count him down after a first-round knockdown and crossing himself several times while on one knee while being counted out in the seventh round.

"It was a good tuneup for me," said Pryor, who made very little sense in the post-bout news conference. "It put me on my Ps and Qs. That's the first time I lost. Merry Christmas. So what."

Young landed a powerful right early in the seventh round that sent Pryor flopping to the canvas. He stood up but then went back down to his knee and began to cross himself. Referee Bernie Soto stopped the fight when Pryor still was on his knee at the count of 10.

"The right I hit him with, I wasn't surprised that it put him down," said Young.

Pryor's corner filed a protest early in the fight because they claimed Young's corner had used an ammonia capsule to keep the fighter sharp between rounds.

Dr. Paul Berman said Pryor had blood coming from his right ear and an ear injury could have hurt his balance. But Pryor said he wasn't hurt.

Young floored Pryor in the first round with a right to the head. Pryor went down hard, but came up smiling and helped the timer count down the eight seconds. Then he faked wobbly legs before Soto called for the fight to resume.

Pryor walked into a hard left in the second round and looked dazed. The former champ was on his heels the entire fight, but landed a few punches in the third round and won the fourth.

After the fight, former junior welterweight champ Alexis Arguello, who lost twice to Pryor, said he didn't think his old nemesis should be allowed in the ring again.

"If any commission in the world accepts him to fight, it would be terrible," Arguello said.

Pryor said he wants to fight again. He even said he was thinking about possible matchups with Hector Camacho or Sugar Ray Leonard during Saturday night's fight.

Pryor, 32, of Cincinnati, admitted he has spent much of the past 28 months in a cocaine-induced stupor. He claims he has beaten his cocaine addiction and is completely drug-free now.

The man known as "The Hawk" during his rise to boxing stardom in the early 1980s last fought 28 months ago when he scored a 15-round decision over Gary Hinton.

He already was using cocaine then, and he reached the nadir last February when he was arrested on kidnapping and assault charges.

Csonka, 6 others inducted to Hall

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Miami fullback Larry Csonka considered himself an emotional football player, so he wasn't at all surprised when he had to fight back tears as he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday.

"My family is here, and this is where it gets tough," Csonka said several minutes into his acceptance speech on the front steps of the hall.

Struggling to get the words out, he said: "It's been a long and costly road, but we're here. I love you, mom. Just please don't call me 'Gooch' in front of these people."

Joining Csonka were his teammate from the Dolphins' perfect 1972 season, center Jim Langer; Kansas City Chiefs' quarterback Len Dawson, Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive tackle Joe Greene and running back John Henry Johnson; New York Jets' receiver Don Maynard; and Oakland Raiders' offensive guard Gene Upshaw.

Don Shula, the coach who guided the Dolphins to their 17-0 season in 1972, presented both Csonka and Langer for induction.

"Our offense had the keen ability to keep the ball away from opponents with long, time-consuming drive," Shula said. "He (Csonka) was simply the best fullback of his time. He was blood and guts and dirt all over him. In his career, high school, college and the pros, he had 12 broken noses."

Csonka rushed for 8,061 yards in his career, yet he fumbled only 21 times.

Langer, who played every down of the Dolphins' perfect season, said the Miami offensive line worked harder for Csonka because of the effect he had on opponents.

"He could wear people down. We enjoyed getting him through the secondary so he could wear down the secondary," Langer said.

Dawson, who passed for 28,711 yards and 239 touchdowns, grew up in nearby Alliance and once played a high school game in Fawcett Stadium, where the annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame game featured the Kansas City Chiefs and San Francisco 49ers Saturday afternoon.

"For me, this is where it all began," Dawson said. "It's come full cycle."

The biggest cheers during the induction ceremony came from a large section of Pittsburgh rooters who made the two-hour drive to Canton to honor Greene. Greene responded by leading the enthusiastic crowd in a chant of "dee-fense" to wrap up his speech.

The Pittsburgh fans also gave appreciative applause to John Henry Johnson, a running back who in 1962 became the first Steeler to rush for 1,000 yards in a season.

Maynard, who compiled 11,834 receiving yards and grabbed 88 touchdown passes, was introduced by Joe Namath, his former Jets' teammate.

"Don worked with 25 quarterbacks in his career, and he made most of us better players," Namath said.

Maynard ended his speech with a poem that concluded, "I played the best, I believe I passed the test. I'm glad this is over, because I need the rest."

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Dallas wide receiver Mike Sherrard said Saturday he was tired when he broke his right leg four days ago, but he refused to blame fatigue for the freak accident.

"My legs were tired, but I don't know how that affects the bone," he said. "There wasn't much muscle there (where the leg broke)."

The wheelchair-bound Sherrard, at his first news conference since the accident Wednesday during a passing drill against the San Diego Chargers, said he thought he had broken his leg two days earlier during practice...

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Dallas has reached a tentative agreement with Seattle to acquire seven-year NFL veteran offensive tackle Ron Essink.

Seahawk GM Mike McCormack said the Cowboys would have to talk to Essink before working out the deal, while Cowboys President Tex Schramm said a conditional pact had not been reached.

McCormack said a tentative agreement to trade a draft choice for Essink had been reached. Officials on both teams would not reveal the draft choice, and sources told the Dallas Morning News that the Cowboys would instead be making one final push for Kansas City's Irv Eatman this weekend...

WILMINGTON, Ohio — Offensive tackle Anthony Munoz has rejected an offer of a three-year contract from the Cincinnati Bengals, according to Assistant General Manager Mike Brown.

Brown said the team's offer would pay Munoz, an All-Pro holdout in training camp, "in excess of $500,000 per year."...

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Geoff Bodine wrapped up the 11th IROC title and the accompanying $175,000 payoff with a wire-to-wire victory in the fourth and final round of the all-star series.

Bodine, a NASCAR stock car star in his first IROC series, easily held off his closest competitor, defending IROC champion Al Unser Jr., throughout the 30-lap, 72.84-mile race on the road course at Watkins Glen International.

The winner, driving one of 12 identically prepared IROC Z-28 Camaros, started from the pole, alongside Unser, and led throughout, maintaining a lead of about 2 seconds nearly all the way and crossing the finish line 2.02 seconds ahead at an average speed of 110.457 mph...

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Igor Dmitriev, who reportedly will be the next USSR national ice hockey team coach, said he would not be surprised if several Soviet stars are in NHL uniforms as early as next season.

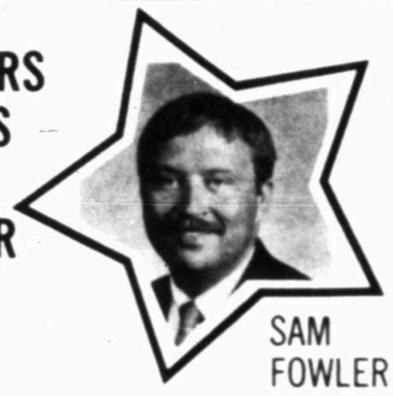
ELEVEN YEARS OF CHANGES AT BERG MOTOR COMPANY



SAM FOWLER

When I started work at Berg Motor Company in May of 1976 I thought after one year I would know everything about the automobile business which days, weeks, and months would be good and which ones would be bad. Well, eleven years and about 2,500 sales later one thing I'm sure of is that there is no set pattern. Each and every day is different.

Although there is one thing that hasn't changed and that's the great people in the Permian Basin. I'd like to thank all my friends and customers over the past eleven years and invite you and yours to join me in making the next eleven years happy and successful ones.

Light and Airy

A young-feeling house, this residence at 5507 Beechwood is full of open spaces and windows that encourage the morning light to cascade in.

Builder David Yancy outdid himself with this cul-de-sac home in beautiful Greentree Estates. Built with the family in mind, this three bedroom, two and a half bath home is simply waiting for some enthusiast to come and make it their very own.

A combination breakfast-morning room make the kitchen area the focus of this house. Large enough for a small couch and entertainment center, as well as dinette, Mom won't miss out on any of the fun while cooking. This is the place your family will congregrate all day long.

Dear Readers,

We are pleased to present the Sunday Homes and Living section. This weekly feature will focus on a particular aspect of residential or commerical real estate. In addition, each week you will enjoy reading various home related articles that are useful whether you are presently a homeowner, or home ownership is in your future.

We invite your comments and suggestions. We hope you will find Homes and Living very informative and enjoyable.

LIGHT

Adobe red Dehanus tile is the perfect compliment to this kitchen and continues on out into a wide hall, which runs the length of the house.

A vaulted ceiling with two ceiling fans, skylights and large windows on three sides of the kitchen add to the charm of this room, but don't let that fool you. This is a kitchen that was meant to be used.

Appliances include a built-in microwave and oven, cooktop, dishwasher, compactor and disposal. Cabinet space is abundant and a large pantry makes efficiency the name of the game.

A built-in desk with overhead book shelves will help you keep those household accounts in order and easily accessible.

The large living area features a floor-to-ceiling brick fireplace with heatalator. The vaulted ceiling ennobles this room with a feeling of even more space, while French doors lead to the backyard.

Built-in bookshelves and wet bar with ice maker complete the list of amenities in this room.

Also, you needn't worry about the hot, West Texas sunlight driving up those energy bills, because this home is passive solar. Double glass windows with mini-blinds between the panes afford an instant change of temperature with the turn of a knob.

The master bedroom also gets the morning sun and has been customized to hold an entertainment center in one corner.

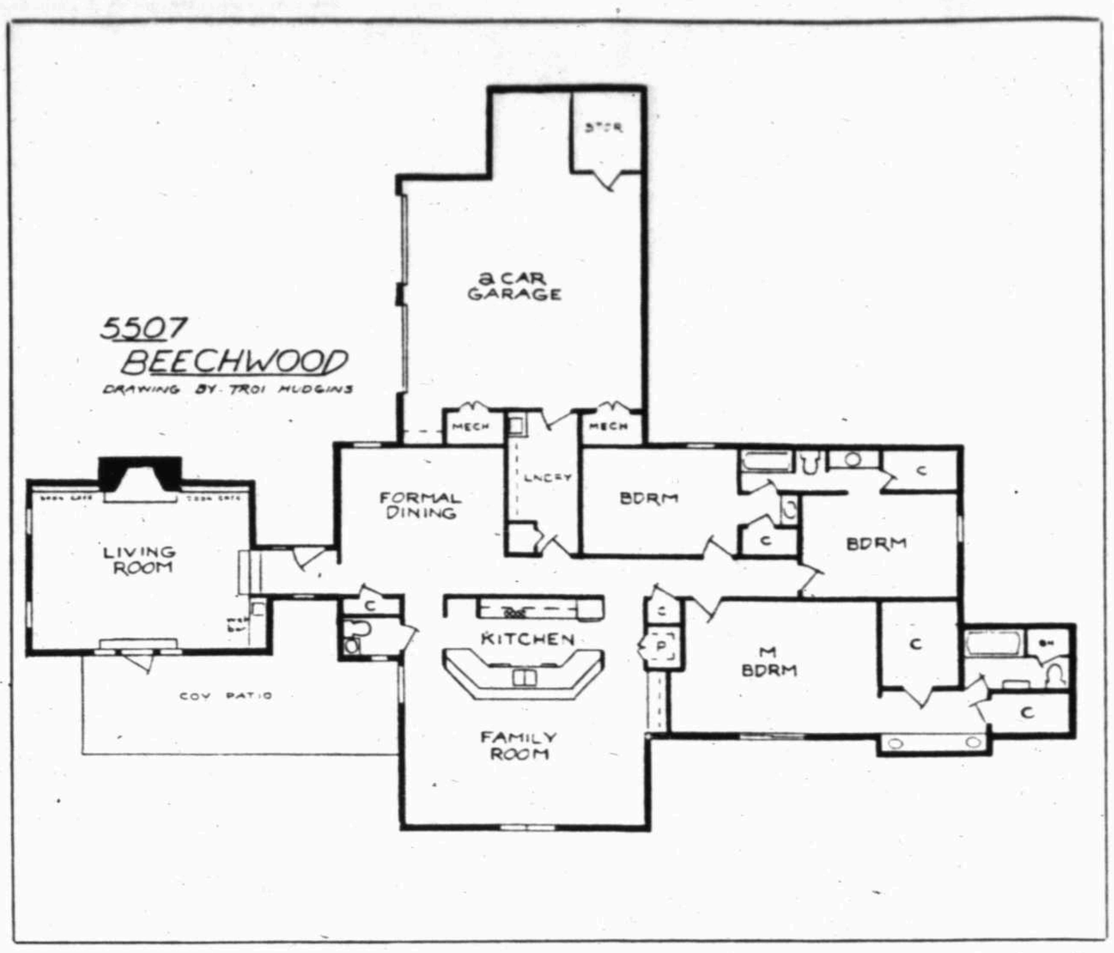
The two smaller bedrooms both have walk-in closets and personal vanities.

Outside, the house is accented with rough hewn cedar. The front yard has been beautifully landscaped and a sprinkler system is in place.

The backyard is large enough for a pool, if future owners should so desire. A covered patio and redwood decking invite you to use your imagination and bring into existence a haven of your own making.

A double garage, with automatic opener and golf cart storage conclude the physical description of this week's featured home. Listed at $149,000 by Carriage Co., 5507 Beechwood boasts approximately 2,700 square feet of living space.



The floor plan of this home can't show all the features available. For example, the hall which runs the length of the home is floored with adobe red Dehanus Tile.

The combination breakfast-morning room will make the kitchen of this home a natural place for your family to congregate.

Caution motivates real estate developers

By LAWRENCE J. DE MARIA
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — Few, if any, real estate developers who have been in the business any length of time will forget 1981.

That was the year when interest rates caught them in a vise. On one hand they had to pay 17 percent or more to borrow the funds they needed to build their projects; on the other, potential customers were scared off by higher mortgage rates.

Things have quieted down since then. But the memory lingers. Developers are always casting about for ways to hedge their risk, especially since many real estate loans today are structured with variable rates.

"In 1981, I really got whacked," recalled Laurence Shapiro, a Boston developer. Shapiro, who is working on a 211-unit condominium project in Springfield, Mass., has decided that he needs more than the traditional protection that is available. Such protection includes pre-sales of project units, interest rate caps on variable loans, and "swapping" variable loans for those with fixed rates.

Variable loans can become an albatross for a developer if rates head sharply higher, increasing loan payments before office buildings, townhouses, single-family homes, and condominiums can really get off the ground.

So Shapiro and others have turned to the Federal Interest Rate Protection Corp., believing that it has a way to help them out.

Federal Interest, based in Boston, was formed six months ago, the brainchild of two men: Robert P. Regan and Philip I. Lewis. Regan was a real estate developer who, while putting together an apartment deal, went to some brokerage firms to seek protection against interest rate swings.

At one firm he met Lewis, a futures trader who was developing a computer program that sought to predict when interest rates were heading higher.

Lewis left the brokerage house and, along with Regan and Serge Curham, another brokerage industry executive, established Federal and developed Pro-Tect, a proprietary financial futures trading system that, depending upon certain signals, makes selective investments in the financial futures market to hedge against wide swings in variable-rate real estate loans. Their system, they contend, has been tested against data going back to 1979 and would have offered protection for all interest rate swings since then — including the 1980-81 upheavals.

Hedging with financial futures is not new, and is straightforward enough. If interest rates rise, the price of such investments as United States Treasury bonds and notes, which have fixed coupons, fall. By selling such bonds and notes — or futures contracts based on them — "short," an investor will reap profits if rates go higher. That is because the investor can buy the Treasuries or futures contracts back after they have fallen in price.

A real estate developer, or for that matter, anybody who has a lot of interest rate exposure, could hedge by selling Treasuries or futures short. But timing is crucial, and few developers would have the expertise to trade successfully.

And, while a brokerage house or investment adviser could put on a hedge for a developer, the relationship may be fraught with conflict of interest, since the best hedges may have to be actively traded. Hedging a three- or five-year loan with Treasury contracts that expire in nine months can be tricky and expensive. There is always the danger that an account will be "churned" — traded more than necessary.

Shapiro, the Boston developer, said: "I've got 15 projects going. What am I going to do, call a broker every day?. You've got to hire good people, lawyers, accountants."

Federal does not sell financial futures. Its service is fee based, with an annual charge of 0.75 percent of the loan amount being protected. The client is also required to deposit 0.80 percent of the loan amount in a brokerage house for each year the loan is to be protected. The client chooses the brokerage house and gives Federal trading authority over the account.

"We're not traders," said Lewis, president of Federal. He said the Pro-Tect system has issued few trading signals so far, because interest rates have been fairly stable.

"I have more than $5 million borrowed, but I decided to protect myself for $5 million," Shapiro said. "They have a yearly fee of $37,500, and I opened up a margin account at a brokerage of my choice. I put $200,000 in a margin account. The brokers trade for me based on what Federal tells them to do. At any time I can withdraw the $200,000."

The minimum loan Federal will hedge is $250,000. Clients can withdraw their funds with the broker at any time and keep all trading profits, if there are any. Losses in the account should be offset by lower interest rate payments on the loans. Shapiro says that the cost of the system is much less than alternative strategies he has used. Banks charge big fees for "swapping" variable-rate loans for fixed-rate loans or for putting an interest rate cap on a variable loan. A cap on a $100 million loan could cost as much as $2 million.

Shapiro has estimated that "the effective rate" of his newfound protection "is three-quarters of a point."

"When Julie and I were first married, we made some plans . . . set some goals. One of the most important was owning our own home."

"Scott and I really wanted a place of our own. We dreamed about it . . . with a gourmet kitchen and lots of room for the future. But, making that first step was a little scary."

"Luckily, we relied on Dene Kelly Realtors. Our associate helped us find the right home, then explained the buying process step by step. He answered all our questions . . . made it easy to understand."

"Now, we've got the perfect home. The kitchen has everything I need, and one room's just the right size for a nursery. Our dream became a reality . . . thanks to Dene Kelly Realtors."

Text by MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Graphic by MATT HOLTEN

The audience collectively held its breath as the wimpering heroine narrowly escaped being killed by a zombie in a graveyard where she and her brother had come to put flowers on her mother's grave (the brother was not so lucky). She stumbled into an abandoned farmhouse. As she explored it, she heard something dripping, ... dripping ... dripping. She went upstairs, saw something, screamed ... and the camera zoomed in on the mutilated head of a corpse.

Screams and groans filled the theater auditorium right up to the final seconds of the relentless horror movie. Some people ran out the doors only to get back in line for the next showing.

THE MOVIE was the 1968 "Night of the Living Dead" directed by George Romero. Made on a $200,000 budget with a large percentage of the cast consisting of Romero's friends and townsfolk, the black-and-white film has made millions on the midnight movie circuit as a cult film. Later it boomed again when it was released on video tape in its original version and a new colorized version.

How could something so gruesome be so successful? Why do people pay good money to be scared witless? Why are theaters overflowing with people who want to be scared to the limit by watching a madman with an ax or vampires in suburbia? Why do best seller lists inevitably contain at least one horror novel? Why such fascination?

PSYCHIATRISTS HAVE many views about why people are so fascinated with the horror genre. The only certainty is that people are attracted to horror films. They seem to have the effect of a thrilling roller coaster ride. Some people can hardly stand the nerve-shattering intensity, yet as soon as the movie or ride is over, they can't wait to experience it again.

In an essay titled "The Psychology of Horror and Fantasy Fiction," from the book "How to Write Tales of Horror, Fantasy and Science Fiction," Katherine Ramsland, Ph.D. said, "Horror springs from the urge to preserve ourselves from the social dynamics of uniformity and security, which can eclipse who we are as individuals just as surely as can the vampire who visits us in the night to suck the life out of us.

"For many of us, horror is a means by which we can keep our fingers on the pulse of our own humanity ... we create things to which we can humanly relate, but which bring us so close to our mysterious primal core that they frighten us."

Friends of Nancy Jones recently gathered to commiserate with her on the occasion of her Big Four-Oh.

A gala surprise party was planned by her husband, Paul. To carry out the ruse, Paul invited his mother, Virginia Burns; the couple's sons, Chris and K.C., and Susan Woolard, to join Nancy and him for dinner at the Plaza Club. Meanwhile, back at the Jones home, friends were assembling to set the party plans in motion.

Decorations included black and silver balloons and a large table centerpiece of black crepe paper flowers with a crying towel. In addition to a lovely cocktail spread, a black-iced birthday cake, inscribed with the reminder, "Over the Hill, Nancy," was served.

The honoree was the recipient of a number of humorous gifts and cards and says she particularly "treasures" her Forties Survival Kit.

PARTIES IN MIDLAND, Houston and Austin preceded the wedding of Paige Thomas and Stewart Laufer Saturday in Austin's St. Mary's Cathedral.

The groom's parents, Sylvia and Walt Laufer, hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening in the Driskill Hotel's Maximillian Room. The wedding reception was held at the Austin Club. The bride's parents, Gail and Ed Thomas, are hosting a back yard barbecue today at their Austin home for the out-of-town family members.

The newlyweds were honored in Midland earlier this summer with a patio party at the home of Sylvia and Phil Roberts. Cohosting were Peggy and Homer Adams, Becky and Jack Huff, Charleen and Dick Rosebery, Janna and Bob Ross, Betty and Jack Sappington, Wanda and Ken Sewell, Marian and Bob Spears, Edie and Frank Stahl and Marge and George Tope.

In addition, Julie and Pat Brower, Suzanne and Doug Laufer and Bonnie and A.J. Cain entertained for the couple and their families with a brunch in the Brower home.

Among the other festivities were a shower given for Paige by her fellow teachers at Spring Branch Independent School District and a couples' shower hosted by her former UT-Austin roommate, Angela Hill.

BUSINESS PARTNERS, Sharon Spear-Smith and Dorothy Parsons, celebrated their joint July 27 birthdays with a "Christmas in July" party at the home of Sharon and her husband, Gene.

Christmas carols were playing on the stereo as guests arrived. A holidayish atmosphere was created with outdoor twinkle lights, a Christmas tree decorated with ornaments dating back to Sharon's childhood, and her collection of rabbits in a variety of media, each decorated for the season with a red bow, a spring of holly or some other Christmas touch. Sharon tells us her interest in collecting rabbits stems from the fact she was born in the Chinese "Year of the Rabbit."

The lavish buffet featured such delicacies as shrimp pate, caviar-stuffed cherry tomatoes, marinated beef with tea rolls and assorted cheeses.

Among those present were Sharon's mother, Fern Heth, and Dorothy's daughters and sons-in-law, Fredda and Jeff Hall, Kathy and Rick Shepherd and June and Glen Hale. The guest list also included friends, clients and co-workers of the women, who are co-owners of Permian Interiors.

MARJORIE AND DAN KOZAK recently returned from the Texas Gulf Coast, where they enjoyed a bon voyage weekend on Galveston Island with their son and daughter-in-law, Lee Ann and Dr. Jeffery Kozak, and their 18-month-old daughter, Ashley Elizabeth.

Following the get-together, Jeff and his family enplaned for London, where Jeff has accepted a year's fellowship in spinal surgery. He recently completed his residency in orthopedic surgery at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and has decided to sub-specialize in spinal surgery. He is the recent recipient of the Dr. Paul Harrington Award for excellence in orthopedic surgery.

While in London, Jeff will be working under renowned spinal surgeon Dr. John P. O'Brien and with other widely-acclaimed spinal surgeons in France and Germany.

Before returning to Midland, Marjorie and Dan enjoyed the sun, sand and surf at South Padre Island and the beautiful Texas Hill Country.

SEVERAL GALA PARTIES in Abilene preceded the Saturday wedding of Kim Daniels of Abilene and former Midlander Phil Carleton of Dallas.

Parents of the couple are Judy and Danny Daniels of Abilene and Corinne and Toby Carleton of Midland.

Also a picnic dinner-dance at Karen and Jim Rose's ranch; a kitchen shower given by Mara McCoy and Janet Spivey, and a bridesmaids luncheon hosted by Celinda C. Clark at the Petroleum Club of Abilene. The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Petroleum Club.

Following the wedding at St. Paul's United Methodist Church, a reception was held at the Abilene Country Club.

Better, not older

Copley News Service

Maybe you didn't know it, but mature females over the age of 50 are actually younger-looking, sexier and more confident than their mothers were at the same age, say today's female-over-50 set.

Apparently, the majority — 59 percent — agreed in a recent survey conducted by the Celanese Textile Fiber Co. And adding credibility to their opinions is Nancy Abrams, the director of beauty and fashion for Family Circle magazine, who says the evidence is exemplified by the new attitudes toward mature women in current films and television.

SHOCK

"Horror fantasy acts like a valve that allows steam to escape when the buildup is too great," Ms. Ramsland said. "It invites us into a world where we can experience the possibilities suggested by ambiguity in their most extreme forms, yet the fictionality allows respite from a confrontation so strong that it would overwhelm us. It can provide a cathartic release without oppressing us with more than we are able to endure."

Well-known horror writer Stephen King agrees that horror films help viewers cope with the horrors of the real world. In his non-fiction book, "Danse Macabre," an attempt to describe the entire horror phenomenon from 1950-1981, King said he is often asked: "Why do you want to make up horrible things when there is so much real horror in the world?"

"The answer seems to be that we make up horrors to help us cope with the real ones," King said. "We take horror in hand and use it to destroy itself, a trick akin to pulling one's self up by one's own bootstraps. For now the worst has been faced and it wasn't so bad after all. There is that same feeling that comes when the roller coaster stops at the end of its run and you get off with your best girl, both of you whole and unhurt."

Jim Farber in "Seventeen" magazine said horror films are popular because fans enjoy the anticipation of not knowing what will happen next. "In a horror film, reality is transformed into a series of trapdoors," Farber said. "Anything can happen beyond those doors, and though we know whatever does will probably be bad, we can't help wanting to peek."

KING ALSO discusses the need-to-peek concept in his foreward to "Night Shift," a compilation of his short stories.

"The great literature of the supernatural often contains the same 'let's slow down and look at the accident' syndrome ... the fact is — and most of us know this in our hearts — that very few of us can forgo an uneasy peek at the wreckage bracketed by police cars and road flares on the turnpike at night. Senior citizens pick up the paper in the morning and immediately turn to the obituary column so they can see who they outlived.

> "In a horror film, reality is transformed into a series of trapdoors. Anything can happen beyond those doors, and though we know whatever does will probably be bad, we can't help wanting to peek."
> —JIM FARBER

"No need to belabor the obvious; life is full of horrors small and large, but because the small ones are the ones we can comprehend, they are the ones that smack home with all the force of mortality."

Some psychiatrists say horror films are harmless because people don't really believe what they are seeing. Ms. Ramsland said, "It is not only the call to self that motivates people; it is also the spirit that took David out to meet Goliath — the urge to issue a challenge to something beyond themselves, which may be more horrifying than they can bear, and then to return intact."

Most horror film makers and horror writers capitalize on fear and death, the two constants in life which give viewers such an opportunity for identification and catharsis.

"The entire field of horror and the supernatural is a kind of filter screen between the conscious and the subconscious," King said. "Horror fiction is like a central subway station in the human psyche between the blue line of what we can safely internalize and the red line of what we need to get rid of in some way or another."

DESPITE MANY claims that viewing horror films is harmless, they can have a frightening effect on young, formative minds and some adults. There are theories that violence (not limited to horror films) begats violence.

"Those who move beyond reading and/or watching horror fantasy to creating it have achieved a stage in their self-development at which the boundaries between sanity and madness are titillating as well as frightening," Ms. Ramsland said.

Farber points out that "most experts tend to agree that watching such movies does not cause any related problems, even though they do provoke powerful and sometimes unpleasant feelings. Overall, horror films offer harmless fun and entertainment."

The core horror film audience is 12-20, according to the "Seventeen" article, which is not surprising considering the great fun teens can have holding hands during the "scary parts." Teens represented over one-third of the 113.9 million Americans who went to the movies last year. Among horror moviegoers, the percentage of teenagers was even higher.

Whether it's to see a pack of man-eating zombies or a disfigured man with claws killing teenagers by entering their dreams, audiences continue to return to the theaters for the thrills and chills of the horror films.

"The danse macabre is a dance with death," King said. "Like the rides in an amusement park which mimic violent death, the tale of horror is a chance to examine what's going on behind doors which we usually keep double-locked. Yet the human imagination is not content with locked doors."

IT SEEMS inevitable that despite the controversy surrounding the horror genre, many will still line up to view the films about "things that go bump in the night."

"Dark fantasy serves the same function as ordinary fantasy but provides a more jolting, raw confrontation with ourselves," Ms. Ramsland said. "While horror scares us on one level, you see, it preserves us on another."

Neglected comedy feature films provide laughs

By JERRY ROBERTS
Copley News Service

A friend was bending our ear the other day with complaints that comedy in the 1980s has become repetitive. He saw Mel Brooks' "Spaceballs" and Steve Martin's "Roxanne" and grieved that every joke was one he'd heard before.

We told him maybe he saw different movies than we did, then considered his complaint. Movie comedies in the last seven years have been mostly big-star vehicles with high-concept plots, or sleazy B-movie serials that have cannibalized their own reputations, stuff like the "Police Academy" and "Porky's" movies.

In Hollywood vernacular, high-concept throws together major stars, major supporting players and a big-name director with a script that collates the best ideas ripped off from the top five box-office successes of the previous year.

DESPITE THE sleaze clones and high-concept stuff, there have been a few worthwhile small comedies peppered through this decade and we're here to call attention to a few of them.

In selecting the best of the non-blockbuster comedies of the '80s, we reasoned that anything with a high-powered comedy star like Steve Martin, Chevy Chase, Bill Murray, Eddie Murphy, John Belushi or Goldie Hawn was out. Woody Allen's movies don't count, although we could make cases for both "Zelig" (1983) and "Broadway Danny Rose" (1984) as qualifiers for the neglected category.

Some of the below-mentioned films received blanket critical acceptance and found an audience in limited release. A few died a slow death from lack of publicity, like "Used Cars" (1980), and others from being too eclectic, like "Stranger Than Paradise" (1985).

THIS MOVIE is a thoroughly neglected and bonafide comedy classic. Before Zemeckis and his writing accomplice, Bob Gale, hit the big time with "Back to the Future" (1984), they came up with this side-splitting depiction of rival, unscrupulous car dealerships, which resort to the most ungodly lengths to sell cars, run for public office and advertise. They hire electronics experts to patch their sleazy live-TV commercials illegally into Monday Night Football telecasts and a presidential address. Russell has never been better and Warden, in a dual role, is a scream. The dog is great, the girl is terrific and remember, $50 never killed anybody.

Estevez is a nihilistic punk who becomes a car repossesser under the tutelage of veteran repo man Stanton. This is part science fiction, part social commentary filtered through Cox's skewed sense of humor.

"Stranger Than Paradise" starring John Lurie, Eszter Balint, Richard Edson, Cecilia Stark. Directed by Jim Jarmusch. 1984. (Key Video, 90 minutes).

TWO GUYS in porkpie hats, a brooding New York card sharpie and his affable buddy, drive through a snowstorm to Cleveland, convince the card player's Hungarian cousin to take a vacation, and all three drive to Florida. This distinctive and original road movie was the best picture at the Cannes Film Festival and for the National Society of Film Critics.

"Local Hero" starring Peter Riegert, Burt Lancaster, Fulton MacKay, Dennis Lawson, Norman Chancer, Jenny Seagrove, Peter Capaldi. Directed by Bill Forsyth. 1983. (Vestron Video, 111 minutes).

An oil company executive is sent to a Scottish coastal village to buy up land and falls in love with the quirky lifestyle of the inhabitants. A strange little charmer, this Forsyth gem is full of extemporaneous characters and off-cant situations.

A boozy and suicidal Scottish poet exploits his own reputation by surviving on the garden-club-reading luncheon circuit. The laughs outweigh the poignant moments in this bittersweet romantic comedy, which garnered Conti a best actor Oscar nomination and lifted McGillis out of obscurity.

"Serial" starring Martin Mull, Sally Kellerman, Tuesday Weld, Bill Macy, Nita Talbot, Tom Smothers, Christopher Lee, Barbara Rhoades, Peter Bonerz, Jennifer McAlister, Pamela Bellwood. Directed by Bill Persky. 1980. (Paramount Home Video, 86 minutes).

This may be the ultimate satire on yuppie trendiness. The obsession with fads, diets, hot tubs, psychological trends, sexual experimentation and social status in Marin County, Calif., gets a sarcastic going over in this adaptation of Cyra McFadden's book.

"The Best of Times" starring Robin Williams, Kurt Russell, Donald Moffat, Pamela Reed, Holly Palance, M. Emmet Walsh, Donovan Scott, R.G. Armstrong, Dub Taylor, Carl Ballentine, Margaret Whitton. Directed by Roger Spottiswoode. 1986.

WHEN WE originally saw this one, we weren't impressed, but after a third viewing, it kind of grew on us. The performers are all first-rate, especially Russell and Williams as old high school football buddies Jack Russell and Reno Hightower, who get the old team together to replay the famous championship game of 10 years ago.

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Two family counselors here have teamed up to market a game they developed to help families express their feelings.

"Feeling Faces," a set of round cards depicting human emotions, invites players to match cards and encourages participants to talk about their feelings.

Creators Anna Louise Walker and Kathy McCaughey Wright both have worked with troubled families involved with the Flathead County Juvenile Probation Department. They knew that families needed to learn communication skills in order to improve home life, but found a critical lack of materials to help them.

Ms. Wright said she began developing the Feeling Faces game after she noticed that youths' attention was drawn to a series of smiling and scowling faces in her notebook.

Expressions on the Feeling Faces cards are happy, sad, puzzled, determined, scared, excited, lonely, etc. Players can simply match them, as in many simple card games, or they can use them to stimulate discussion about emotions.

In families where communication skills have not been developed, Ms. Wright said, "People who are angry think that they have to fight. When families talk about anger, they learn that it's okay to be angry, and learn to share those feelings in an appropriate way. They need to learn how to share their positive feelings, too."

Ms. Wright said that when parents and children discuss what makes them feel scared, for instance, or the last time that were scared, they learn a lot about each other.

Such conversation enables everybody to build vocabulary, learn listening skills and gain the ability to identify feelings, she said.

"Every family wants love and understanding," she said, but many don't know how to obtain it. The women believe that the key is to increase communication.

1987 a 'hot' year for innovative video products

Associated Press

A deluge of new and innovative products will be appearing in video stores across the country this fall. In fact, 1987 may well go down as one of the hottest years for new products in the history of the industry.

The introduction of Super VHS by JVC will bring with it a significant improvement in home recording and picture quality. Sony's answer to Super VHS — dubbed ED (for extended definition) Beta — also will be introduced. The new formats will lift the performance of home VCRs from acceptable to nearly professional, according to an article in the current issue of Video Magazine.

Blank tape manufacturers will introduce new high-quality tape cassettes with coatings of ultra-fine metal particles to take advantage of the recording quality of the new formats and for other high-fidelity video uses. These will provide better color and less "jitter." Expect to pay $20 for a two-hour cassette.

Bar-coding will make the leap from supermarket checkout counter to VCR with the introduction of that feature by Canon and Panasonic on some decks. Instead of having to push the tiny buttons on the front of a VCR to select a program, the user will simply run a scanner over the appropriate bar code.

Quick loading also will make an appearance this fall. Akai is bringing out four quick-start CRs. While it usually takes about eight seconds for a VCR to go from stop to play, the new Akai VCRs will do it in one second.

The popular camcorders manufactured by JVC, RCA, Panasonic and Magnavox will get high-speed shutters this fall. Shutter speeds as high as 1-1000th of a second will provide sharper, blur-free images of scenes with rapid action.

Comact Disc-Video of CD-V will also be vying for its share of the video limelight. CD-V is a catch-all term that includes the 10-year-old LaserVision system with its 8- and 12-inch discs, and the new single discs. These compact discs can hold five minutes of video along with 20 minutes of audio sound.

Casio is introducing a 2.1-pound still video camera, capable of putting 50 eraseable color pictures on a 2-inch floppy disc. While a complete electronic still photography system consisting of camera, programmer-player, video printer and transceiver used to cost thousands of dollars, the new Casio system will retail for about $899 without printer and $2,899 with.

Universal remote controllers also will be introduced. They can handle any number of infrared controlled machines, rather than having to have a separate controller for each. The universal controllers will learn the infrared codes of each machine, often from the gear itself. The cheapest is a $100 Memorex unit which can handle up to eight components.

Performance anxiety at bedtime solved

By MIKE DALE
and CHUCK EDWARDS
Copley News Service

You don't have to act like Lord Laurence Olivier when reading a bedtime story to the kiddies.

But it helps.

In the book "Taking Books to Heart," literacy expert Paul Copperman says most parents suffer from "performance anxiety" when reading bedtime stories.

He implores parents to tell bedtime stories with excitement and tension.

But most of all, Copperman says to pause after a brief passage to let the characters sink into your child's fertile imagination.

Statistics about snoring awakening

Copley News Service

How many people snore? Professor Karlheinz Meier-Ewert, head of a neurological clinic in Treysa, West Germany, says 50 percent of men and 40 percent of women snore by age 60.

The German Pharmacists' Association has a more disturbing figure; it says nine out of 10 adults snore.

Gardener opens gate to flowers without fuss

She opened her back-yard garden for business four years ago, allowing passers-by to come inside her white picket fence and wander among her 17 flower beds, cutting their own bouquets.

"I thought, 'I'll bet there are a lot of people who would like to have garden flowers as opposed to florist flowers,'" recalls Mrs. Burns, a retired X-ray technician with a square jaw, short hair and boundless energy.

A florist flower, she explains, is one grown in a carefully controlled environment to preclude any flaws, while a garden flower "is grown willy-nilly and if it has a bug hole in it, well, that's all right."

It's probably not the bug holes that draw folks to The Cutting Garden, a half-block expanse of shade trees and flower beds in various stages of bloom that spreads out behind Mrs. Burns' Norman home.

More likely it is the opportunity to stroll through beds of larkspur, asters, coneflowers, tiger lilies, cosmos, snapdragons and zinnias, to name just a handful currently in bloom.

"Every season it's something different," Mrs. Burns says. Before opening for business, she perused seed catalogs, and ordered "everything anyone could conceivably want in a flower garden," she says.

CUSTOMERS ENTER through an arched gateway in a white picket fence that borders the garden on its street side. At a wood gazebo, they can get pails and scissors to gather their bouquets, and it is there that purchases are totaled up, usually 25 cents a stem, and carefully wrapped in green florist paper.

Throughout the garden are several sturdy tables and chairs, where friends and neighbors sometimes gather for impromptu picnics.

So she installed a flower bed where children can not only touch, but pick the flowers, for a penny a stem.

"I ask that it be a penny that they've earned — not that someone's given them. If they spend it to buy a flower to give their mother, they're really giving something of themselves," she says.

"I've had nursery school classes come over here clutching their pennies," she says.

"Kids are the cutest" of her customers, she says, but she also has quite a few young men selecting bouquets for their girlfriends, or husbands picking flowers to punctuate an apology to their wives after a fight.

"Many of my customers are fellows just wanting to get out of the dog house," she says. "A lot of times they'll say they don't know anything about flowers. I just tell them, 'All you have to know is if you like them,'" she says.

MRS. BURNS knows considerably more. When neighbors have questions like which plants to use as groundcover, or what herbs make a good border, they're likely to come to her, and they are just as likely to get more information than they bargained for.

Despite her knowledge, Mrs. Burns was a late-bloomer herself when it comes to gardening.

"My husband liked to putter in the garden, but not me," she says.

When she retired from hospital work following a heart attack, "my husband decided I needed a greenhouse to putter in," Mrs. Burns recalls.

"At the time, this was all vacant," she says, waving a brown hand out over the gardens. "I thought, 'I've got all this back yard, what can I do with it?"

As far as Mrs. Burns knows, she is a pioneer in the cutting-garden business. "Why no one else is doing this, I don't know."

Mrs. Burns says when she first was making plans for her business she was advised that it probably wouldn't be profitable. "One man said, 'You'll probably have fun but you'll never get rich.'

"That's true. I probably give away as many flowers as I sell."

Tips for avoiding skin cancer offered

NEW YORK (AP) — About 5,800 of the 500,000 Americans who contract skin cancer this year will die, according to dermatology experts at a recent national symposium.

Although one-third of all cancers are skin cancers, most are curable, said Dr. Alfred Lane, assistant professor of dermatology and pediatrics at the University of Rochester (N.Y.) Medical Center.

Cancerous melanoma, which is fatal in 25 percent of cases, will strike more than 25,000 people in the nation this year, he added.

Children playing outdoors without protection from sun exposure are of great concern to experts in the field.

"Today's tan can become tomorrow's cancer," he told the symposium, which was supported by an educational grant from Johnson & Johnson Baby Products Co. "A tan is the body's reaction to damage from the sun."

Because 80 percent of lifetime exposure to the sun is obtained by age 20, parents must help children protect themselves, Lane said. He urged parents to teach youngsters to stay out of the sun during the midday hours, wear protective clothing and use high sunscreen protection.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Patient-doctor relationship vital

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

Because people are living longer lives, it is often difficult to find a doctor who an elderly patient feels comfortable with. Though our nation is blessed with many competent physicians, not all doctors are well-versed in the care of older people.

Some physician may lack communication skills, sensitivity and patience, all of which are necessary requirements in working with the elderly patient. In addition, some physicians do not have an understanding of the aging process and the multiple problems that face our geriatric section of society.

For these reasons, it is crucial for older people to find a physician who fits their needs.

The chances of a person becoming chronically ill, requiring multiple medications and having increased medical problems intensifies with age. For this reason, older patients usually want to find a doctor who is professionally competent, personally compatible and associated with a good hospital. It is helpful if the older person can find the right physician early in the patient's retirement years in order to build a good medical history with the doctor.

When looking for a physician, it is a good idea for the patient to find a good internist to take care of their general health. Today, the internist is the closet counterpart to the family doctor of times past. Most good internists are equipped to deal with the chronic illnesses of the elderly and know when to call on specialists for additional consultation or treatment. It is not good for a patient to search for a medical specialist before finding an internist. The internist should decide if and when what type of specialist may be necessary in each individual case.

If a suitable doctor with good hospital connections has been selected, consider these questions concerning the first office visit:

■ Has sufficient time been made available for this initial visit? Elderly people need time and compassion from their physician in addition to technical competence.

The doctor should allow ample time to document a good patient history, learn family medical idiosyncrasies, discover any unusual incidents or common complaints and to perform standard tests. Doctors also should allow time for conversation in order to get a feeling of the patient's personality and anxieties. The patient should inform the doctor of any social and or economic circumstances. All of these points are important.

It is up to the physician to put the pieces together concerning the patient. Often the medical problem is not what the patient thinks it is. If the visit is too abrupt or too mechanical with little dialogue, then the physician may not be desirable for the older patient. If this is the case, it is better to find a new doctor immediately — unless the physician's competence is essential as a specialist or surgeon or if it is an emergency.

■ During following visits, does the physician give the attention the condition requires? Following the initial diagnosis the physician should be reasonable about answering questions and explaining procedures so that the patient knows what is happening, what to do and what to expect.

■ Is the patient confident that this physician is aware of the limits of his/her own knowledge? Patients are sometimes shaken when the doctor calls in another physician or specialist. However, a good doctor is one who knows when to call another member of the medical community for help in diagnosis. Patients should see this broad medical support as good. It is not a sign that their physician is limited in medical knowledge.

■ Does the physician object if the patient wants another opinion? For many insurance companies, it is mandatory to acquire a second medical opinion concerning radical treatment or surgery. Patients should feel free in their relationships with their doctors to request this.

Patients must overcome their awe of doctors and open the doors to better communication. They should find a physician who is truly interested in them and that they can work cooperatively with in the prescribed treatment.

Copley News Service

If you have hay fever, the worst way to start your day is to have a bowl of cereal and milk, because cereals contain wheat allergens that bring on itchy eyes and milk clogs the respiratory system.

A study by allergist Dr. Keith Mumby Mumby reveals that 70 percent of allergy sufferers find rapid relief by cutting out wheat and dairy products on high pollen count days.

He claims breakfast cereals and dairy products are dynamite to allergy sufferers and therefore should be avoided.

Instead of those foods, Mumby says allergy sufferers should stick with meat, fish, eggs, vegetables and fruit.

International travel can be hazardous to health

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some 8 million Americans travel each year to developing countries where their health is at risk, and 75 percent to 85 percent of them fail to take the proper precautions, an expert on international medicine says.

"As a result, 10 to 15 percent of them come home with problems significant enough to need treatment," said Dr. Adel Mahmoud, director of the division of international medicine at the Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine.

According to Mahmoud, some of the most important considerations include:

■ Immunization. Getting up-to-date protection against polio, diphtheria and tetanus.

■ Water. Whether you are using it to drink or brush your teeth, there are three safe alternatives to water: carbonated water in a tightly sealed bottle (soft drinks are OK), boiled water and water that has been treated with a cleaning tablet of the type used by campers, though in heavier concentrations.

■ Food. Meats, fresh fruits and vegetables all can be dangerous. Salads are a disaster in most developing countries.

New York Times News Service

Elimination of measles from the United States is proving to be a more difficult goal than many specialists had expected. A decade ago, federal health officials announced a national goal of eliminating the infectious disease, by immunizing all children against the virus that causes it. But the number of cases has been climbing each year since the all time low of 1,497 cases reported in 1983.

Last year's provisional total was 6,273, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. This is only one or two percent of the annual toll of a half million or more cases in the days before vaccine was introduced in the mid 1960s, said Dr. Stephen Preblud, a medical epidemiologist of the CDC, but the goal of total elimination has proved elusive.

Preblud said federal health authorities see two probable reasons for persistence of the disease; failure of some parents to have their young children immunized and failure of the vaccine to produce immunity in a few cases. The vaccine is estimated to be 90 percent effective in recipients 15 months of age or older, the age at which immunization is recommended. Some babies are immunized at 12, 13 or 14 months when the vaccine is effective in only about 80 percent of cases.

In this country measles no longer constitutes a a major health problem. The effects are usually limited to fever and rash. But in 1962, before vaccine was available, there were more than 500,000 cases a year and 500 deaths from complications.

A federal advisory committee on immunization practices is expected to recommend within the next few weeks that revaccination programs be set up in communities where outbreaks are detected. A prime target would be those children who first took the vaccine before the age of 15 months.

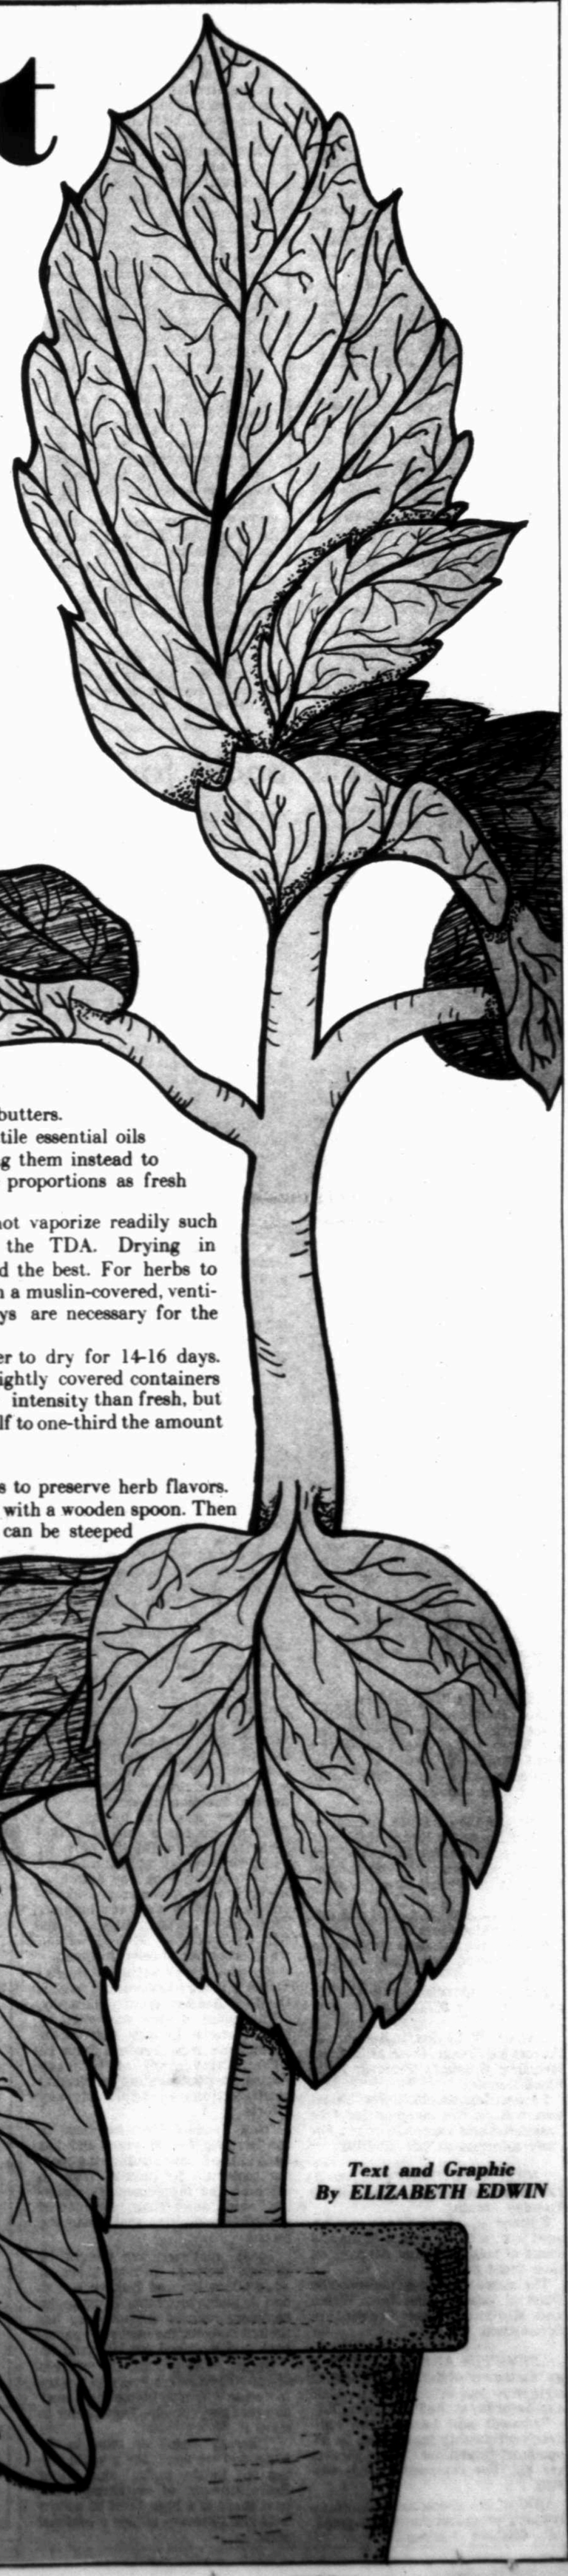
HERBS: Cut and Dried



Whether you are looking for a food seasoning, an aromatic ground covering, a plant of unusual foliage for the garden or windowsill, or a medicine — there is probably an herb that will fill the bill.

An herb is usually defined as a non-woody plant that dies down to the ground after flowering. But the term "herb" is often applied more generally to any plant, part or all of which has been used for such purposes as medical treatment, nutritional value, food seasoning, or coloring and dyeing of other substances.

For centuries, herbs have been used for a variety of purposes, especially culinary and medicinal purposes, and their effects are still being studied and discovered today. Although modern medicines and fast food conveniences have smothered many of the traditional uses of herbs, there seems to be a renewed interests in their past.

Written studies of herbs date back to over 5,000 years ago when the Sumerians described well-established medicinal uses for such plants as laurel, caraway and thyme. According to "The Herb Book" by John Lust, the first known Chinese herb book, dating from about 2700 B.C., lists 365 medicinal plants and their uses — including ma-huang, the shrub that introduced the drug ephedrine to modern medicine.

Around 1000 B.C., there are records that show the Egyptians used garlic, opium, castor oil, coriander, mint, indigo and other herbs for medicine, food and dyes, and the Old Testament also mentions herb use and cultivation including mondrake, vetch, caraway, wheat, barley and rye.

DOCUMENTATIONS OF the uses of herbs by the ancient Greeks and Romans are especially important. These cultures valued plants for various uses such as medicines, symbols and magical charms, food seasonings, cosmetics, dyes, room scenters and floor coverings. Their preserved writings of their medical practices, particularly of Hippocrates and Galen, provided patterns for later western medicine.

Herbs were introduced commercially in America in 1896, according to John Lust, when Dr. Benedict Lust, under the direction of the German physician-priest Father Sebastian Kneipp, opened the first health food store in the country. Native plants, in addition, provided Americans with new beverages and new colors for dyeing fabrics, many of which were exported back to the Old World.

The system Benedict Lust and Kneipp operated with was called naturopathy, which relies on simple herbal remedies, in conjunction with fasting, exercise, fresh air, sunshine, water and diet, to help the body regain health naturally.

The philosophy of natural healing is that the body is capable of healing itself, once the proper conditions are provided. Therefore, natural healing remedies and diets are general in scope and are designed to neutralize or eliminate from the body the harmful substances that impair its power to heal itself.

Herbs are a part of almost everyone's life, although they may not be recognized as such. The mustard on the table and many of the spices on the kitchen shelf come from herbs, and in the yard, many of the plants growing there (whether by design or accident) also are herbs.

In general, the use of herbs has been ignored during the 20th century. Herbs have been overpowered by a quest for faster, more convenient ways to do things. But with the current health trends making people more aware of the importance of a healthy diet and lighter meals, cooking with herbs is experiencing a resurgence of popularity.

IN FACT, herbs are recommended for many people who have health problems requiring a low-sodium diet. Herbs add the flavor that is usually achieved with salt, but without the side effects, according to home economist Carol Ware of the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Because dietary recommendations are that we should cut back on salt and sugar, more cooks are learning about seasoning dishes with herbs, according to the TDA.

Some of the herbs being used in salt substitutes, alone or in combinations, include aniseed, basil, celery seed, clove, coriander, cumin, garlic, lemonpeel, lemon-thyme, marjoram, oregano, pepper, rosemary, sage, sassafras, savory and tarragon. Herbal sweeteners, which are not as familiar, include angelica, artichoke, balm, cardamom, chicory, cicely, licorice, miraclefruit, perilla, polypody, serendipity fruit, skirret, stevia, sweet herb and sugarleaf hydrangea.

There also are several herbs that smell like or can serve as a substitute for lemon in herbal teas such as citronella, lemon basil, lemon balm, lemon eucalyptus, lemon geranium, lemon grass, lemon pittosporum, lemon thyme, lemon verbena and the lime geranium.

On a fresh basis, herbs provide a good source of protein, carbohydrates, iron, calcium, vitamins A, C, and E, and many other minerals. Many people believe that fresh herbs provide foods with more flavor, subtlety, than dried ones. But fresh herbs are not always easy to come by. In Texas, during the fall and winter months when the weather is colder and the sunlight is weaker, it is difficult to grow many herbs. During these months, it is convenient to be able to dig into the freezer and pull out a packet of frozen herbs or delve into the cabinet for herb vinegars.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR growing, harvesting and preserving can be obtained from the TDA or from books and magazines in your local library.

Texas has three main growing seasons for herbs and mass cuttings, as a rule, which take place during early spring, summer and just before the beginning of fall. Farmers markets and some supermarkets are recommended shopping areas for herbs. They also can be grown in home gardens or in windowsill gardens.

Harvests should be done on a warm, dry morning after the dew evaporates, but before the sun is high in the sky. Special care is needed in harvesting certain herbs, therefore reading about proper procedures or consulting with a nursery is advisable.

Certain herbs, such as dill, basil and chervil, have volatile essential oils that won't survive drying. The TDA recommends freezing them instead to keep the flavor. Frozen herbs should be used in the same proportions as fresh herbs would be.

Drying is effective only with herbs in which the oils do not vaporize readily such as oregano, mint, sage and a few others, according to the TDA. Drying in bunches is the traditional method, but it is not considered the best. For herbs to dry more evenly, they should be placed in a single layer on a muslin-covered, ventilated rack in a dry, airy room. Usually two to four days are necessary for the herbs to completely dry.

Seeds should be put in a dry place and covered with paper to dry for 14-16 days.

Once dry, the leaves should be removed and stored in tightly covered containers away from light. Overall, dried herbs have more flavor intensity than fresh, but are best if used within six months. For dried herbs, one-half to one-third the amount of fresh herbs called for in a recipe should be used.

HERB VINEGARS are said to be one of the easiest ways to preserve herb flavors. Simply stuff a jar full of herb cuttings and crush them with a wooden spoon. Then fill the jar with white, cider or wine vinegar. Herb vinegar can be steeped in a brightly lit area, but not direct sunlight, for two weeks for a more intense flavor. Herb butter is softened butter blended with finely chopped herbs. This mixture can be frozen.

Other than the culinary aspects of herbs, they also are widely used for medicinal purposes. There are many folk remedies using the attributes of herbs.

Parsley has dozens of folkloric medicinal uses. Rich in iron and calcium, it has been said to be helpful (as a herb tea rather that as a garnish) for gallstones, kidney stones, and the like. Some believe chewing on the sprig will mask halitosis.

Sage also has dozens of folk medicinal uses such as making a gargle for sore throats, while rosemary is said to greatly improve a bad memory, help darken graying hair, and prevent baldness and wrinkles.

Basil is generally associated with the stomach and its related organs and has been recommended for headaches.

So if you are looking for seasonings, plants or medicine, you need not look any farther than the nearest herb. In fact, it may be in your pantry, refrigerator or backyard right now.

Reading means privacy for some

By ANNA QUINDLEN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — I got in a lot of trouble when I was a kid for not getting enough fresh air. There was a big chair in our living room, overstuffed and worn, and even on the nicest day of the year I could be found there, my legs draped over one arm of the chair, reading.

I read a great deal, with no particular sense of originality or discernment. I read the Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew, C.S. Lewis and Robert Louis Stevenson, "A Little Princess" and "A Wrinkle in Time." I read pretty awful stuff, like magazines for teenagers, and I read pretty adult stuff, like "Wuthering Heights." I still remember reading "Ulysses" when I was 13 and thinking, "What a weird book."

My mother was thinking, "What a weird child." When the sun was shining and the neighborhood kids were playing "Monkey in the Middle," my mother was always yelling at me to go and experience the great outdoors. She did not understand the appeal of the great indoors.

To force the issue one summer, my parents sent me to camp. Thinking of it even today is, as Evelyn Waugh's Bright Young Things say, "too, too sick-making." All those people and all that activity all the time. I'll never forget it.

I STILL read, constantly; if my kids ever go into analysis, I am sure they will say they don't remember my face because it was always hidden by a book. Obviously, this is in part because I like books. But another reason is that I like to be alone. I like to go deep inside myself and not be accompanied there by anyone else.

But I am the oldest of five children, and when I was young I had about as much chance of being alone as I did of being a lion tamer. Reading was for me then a way of lifting myself out of a crowded environment into a place where I could be by myself. No wonder my mother was concerned. Being by yourself was considered, at my age and in my family, aberrant behavior. Camp was normal. Camp was fun. Camp was crowded. Camp was horrible.

We pay lip service to the notion that privacy is important, but I don't really think we believe it. When anyone lives alone we have a tendency to think they are just waiting to meet the right roommate; we have an impulse to pair off our friends or to introduce them to others. Single people eating in restaurants are assumed to be there for lack of a companion, not because they like their own company.

IT IS difficult for us to accept that a great many outwardly gregarious people are often inwardly private, that they have a chocolate-covered almond kind of character. This happens to be the case with me, although societal conditioning has made me think about these two parts of myself as a little like the geography of the state of Michigan.

I am so gregarious that I was once the perfect mourner at an Irish wake, even though I realized when I approached the coffin that I was in the wrong viewing room. At the same time, I love solitude so much that one of my favorite parts of the week is when I have finished my work before the sitter is due to leave and I can hide out in my room for half an hour reading.

I have cultivated pastimes that make this type of behavior socially acceptable. I do needlework, watch television and, yes, read — all excuses for chewing the cud, ruminating over whatever crosses my mental screen. Or, like a narcoleptic, I can simply lapse into my middle-distance attitude. My eyes unfocus and my mouth drops open just a bit. I look like a fish that was sideswiped by the Queen Elizabeth 2 and never knew what hit it. My family calls this my "zone look." It means do not disturb.

I also have a child who habitually lapses into the zone look, although at his age I cannot imagine what he is thinking. Friends have started to ask me when he will begin lessons: swimming, piano, art and the like. I want him to have the best of everything, but the best of everything for me was often staring off into the middle distance. I want him to have lots of time for that. If I were asked what I am most afraid of his missing in his life, I think I would answer "solitude." I would say the same for me.

Violin maker still practices art

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill. (AP) — Jack Batts doesn't make just any kind of violin. The West Frankfort violin-maker creates concert instruments fit to be played by the finest musicians in the finest halls.

Batts no longer makes violins on commission, because when he did, he had so much work he could scarcely keep up. Musicians who want to buy violins from Batts now choose among those he has made.

Each year, Batts produces three to seven concert violins. They are lovely instruments whose honey-hued wood glows from careful varnishing and polishing.

Even before coats of varnish are applied, the wood gleams. It is the best violin wood available, imported from Europe. Batts chooses the pieces of maple and spruce he uses for acoustic excellence.

"A good piece of wood, you can pick it up like this," Batts says, bringing to his ear a piece of maple and tapping it with his finger. "And it will ring like a bell. There's a lot of science of sound that goes into making a violin."

To a violin-maker like Batts, wood that is not perfect is more than a minor nuisance, it's a costly problem. A single piece of wood used to make the back of a violin costs $250.

The violins Batts creates are as individual as the different pieces of spruce and maple he uses. His violins have been played in symphonies the world over.

He takes obvious pride in ticking off the list, beginning with an instrument he made that was used at a concert at St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice, Italy, and instruments for first, second and third violin positions in a youth symphony in China.

It's one thing to make a violin for someone who simply plays for leisure, Batts says, and quite another matter to create an instrument good enough for someone whose career and reputation depends on its quality.

Books for new adult readers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Adults trying to live in a world they cannot understand find help in books from New Readers Press.

The press publishes books for adults who are just learning to read, most of whom are enrolled in various literacy programs.

No topic is too complex. New Readers Press offers 200 titles on subjects from childbirth to food and science to algebra.

All the books are written to be understood by someone whose education stopped at the fifth grade. Most important, all subjects appeal to adults.

"Our readers span a wide range of intelligence and have many talents. One thing we try to assure our readers is that they are accomplished — they just cannot decode words," said Dennis Cook, executive director of New Readers Press.

The Syracuse publishing company is a division of Laubach Literacy International, the nation's largest nonprofit organization devoted to adult literacy.

New Readers Press already sells 1 million books a year, and expects to do even more business with the growing national focus on combating illiteracy. It is the nation's single largest producer of books written for adults below the fourth grade reading level.

Despite the emphasis on adults, 40 percent of the company's sales are to public schools for use with teenagers unable to read at their grade levels.

And Cook said only an estimated 4 percent of the millions of adults who need reading help are receiving it.

To attract readers who may have been turned off by school, New Readers Press has designed its newspapers and books to be inviting but not childish, featuring adults in stories with adult themes.

One book, "Economics: It's Your Business" by Henry Billings, talks about economic theories, inflation, the stock market, the national debt and the value of the U.S. dollar — and all at a fifth-grade reading level.

"What we're looking to do is publish materials that enable people to live more ably in society," said senior editor Wendy Stein. "What I want to do is present information I need to function in society."

Besides practical books, New Readers also has a line of fiction called Sundown Books, most of which are written at a third-grade level. "Lady in Pink" by Judith A. Bosley is about a woman housekeeper in a children's ward at a hospital. "Just Once" by Mary Blount Christian tells about a battered woman who leaves her abusive husband.

If a book is well written, it doesn't matter if it has a low reading level, is the New Readers Press philosophy.

That point of view was noted by the American Library Association, which gave New Readers Press its 1986 Achievement of Literacy Award for outstanding publishing contributions to adult literacy efforts.

"New Readers Press has been in the business for 20 years and has been in the front of publishing reading materials for adults, both in teaching and supplementary materials," said Daniel Gann, chairman of the ALA committee that made the award.

Today, materials are bought by schools, prisons and sponsors of adult education and English as second language programs. Because the company realized its audience has limited budgets, the books are paperback and most sell for less than $3.

Unlike some groups, the publishers of New Readers Press do not try to decide who is to blame for America's reading problem. They prefer to solve it.

"Literacy wasn't an issue in the 1970s and we were like a voice crying out in the night," said Millar Brace, director of marketing. "But now there is a high level of awareness and illiteracy is now a national issue."

AT WIT'S END

Independence important to elderly mothers, too

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

It's hard to name the exact moment when the mother becomes the child and the child becomes the mother.

It's a lot of firsts. The first time you hook your mother's dress because she can't get her arms over her shoulders. The first time you dial a phone number for her because she can't find her glasses. The first time you put your hand out when you stop the car suddenly. You get a chill when you realize it was she who used to dress you, dial phone numbers because you couldn't read, and protect you from going through the windshield because you weren't paying attention.

Sometimes, it's a series of physical things. The legs that wore hose now wear anklets to bed to keep her warm. The long hair that once was secured by combs is now short because it's "practical." The unsteady steps when you find yourself tucking her arm under yours to keep track of her so she won't dawdle or become lost.

It feels good at first. We tell ourselves we're finally paying her back for all that love and attention she showered on us. It's her time to relax and not have to think about anything anymore. We are ready to ascend the throne of maturity and assume responsibility for yet another child in our life.

Don't be in such a hurry to declare Mom's Day of Dependence.

As long as Mom has a mind, let her use it. As long as she has legs, let her push them to the limits. As long as she has ideas, let her develop them. As long as she has opinions, let her express them. As long as she has purpose, let her be.

It's heavy duty. I cannot tell you the times I have wanted to take over and impress my mother with what a good daughter I am. Instead I have told her to pay the cabdriver and figure out the tip, let her wander around New York City by herself and find her way back to the hotel, remained silent while she struggled with problems and their solutions.

Recently, my dad became very ill and my mother was called upon to do things she never knew she could do before. She drove in rush-hour traffic, learned how to regulate oxygen and fill portable tanks, used a copier in the supermarket, paid bills and made decisions. It called upon every bit of confidence in herself she could muster. I was so proud of her I could have screamed.

There isn't a daughter in this world who doesn't ache to button the top button on her mother's coat, offer to drive, insist on having the family for Thanksgiving and Christmas, give advice on her hemlines, plan her outings, pay for her lunch and put a sweater on her when she isn't cold.

Whenever you are tempted to do for her what she can still do for herself, just remember, she allowed you to be independent — now do it for her.

Eating disorders reported rising

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Eating disorders — mainly bulimia and anorexia nervosa — are on the increase among Americans, according to Internal Medicine News.

The medical journal says a report by the American College of Physicians indicates about 90 percent of those afflicted are female, with those at risk including models, dancers, actors, gymnasts and others who strive for unnaturally low body weight.

Bulimia is a syndrome characterized by secretive episodes of "binge" eating followed by self-induced purging. Health experts estimate up to 18 percent of adolescent and college-age females in the U.S. are affected.

Anorexia nervosa, a psychological and endrocrine condition involving an inordinate fear of becoming overweight, affects roughly 10 percent of young American women, according to the report.

Stress and social pressures — the usual causes of morbid fear of obesity — are given as the sources of these eating disorders.

Doctor says working moms face challenge

Sanger, a New York City infant and child psychiatrist, said "I have no right to tell women not to work or to work. I don't think that's my job."

More important, he said, with 20 million working mothers in this country, the question is no longer whether or not mothers should work outside the home, but rather how to help them be the best parents they can be.

Sanger specializes in the unique needs of working mothers and their children up to the age of 5. He is critical of what he calls "glib, and in many ways, guilt-inducing advice" about parenting that is directed at working mothers.

Sanger said children of working mothers can be made stronger, more flexible and socially skilled than the children of at-home mothers.

"A mother's work changes her child's development dramatically, by introducing him or her to the real world earlier," he said. "This early introduction to 'real life' can have many advantages for the child, but it creates certain risks and vulnerabilities, too.

"I teach mothers how to minimize the difficulties and maximize the strengths to make their work a positive force in their children's lives," he said. "I want to help them do the best they can for their kids."

Sanger is the author of three books including his latest, "The Woman Who Works, The Parent Who Cares."

He founded the Parent-Child Interaction Program at St. Luke's Roosevelt Hospital in New York City in 1971, where he continues to do community work, and the Early Care Center in 1982, where he maintains his private practice.

The Early Care Center explores all the ways parents can promote optimal development and makes recommendations for nurture and play based on each infant's and child's unique emotional characteristics.

Sanger uses a video studio — actually a big playroom with lights and video cameras — to record mothers at play with their infants and children. He reviews the tapes and offers suggestions.

His program for working mothers and their children, called Reality Attuned Parenting (REAP), is meant to reflect what Sanger says he believes to be the defining characteristic of the working mother's child: The real world enters his life earlier.

"We try to introduce reality earlier in the child's life because the working situation pushes the child into the real world earlier. They have to be more resourceful, more independent children; all the things the mothers are in their own lives, that's what their children have to be as well. So we do have many ways of showing parents how to help their children be more in this world without sacrificing their childhood."

REAP is designed to provide a young child with the security, the self-confidence, flexibility, sense of personal competence and capacity to cope with stress and frustration that he needs to operate efficiently and beneficially outside his immediate family circle.

Sanger said working mothers are changing the developmental timetable for the first 5 years of a child's life, and that despite the long history women have of working outside the home, today's working mother is being attacked from many sides.

Sanger said mothers should stop worrying about what possible negative effects their working outside the home might have on their children. "Every child wants his parent to be happy and smiling and a viable individual.

You can rely on these people to lend direction to your community hospital.

They're dedicated professionals who serve on the governing boards at Midland Memorial Hospital. Providing the leadership for responsible financial planning. Meeting the challenges of health care management. Working together to ensure the availability of medicine's latest technologies to our community.

"For 40 years, the Board of Governors has been raising funds for Midland Memorial. That's one of our primary functions. In the last seven years, the Governors have raised more than $6 million. But it's the spirit of teamwork we share with the other governing bodies that helps us realize our goals."

K.M. Jastrow, Chairman,
Board of Governors

"The Trustees' responsibility to the hospital is clear, but certainly not simple: to govern day-to-day operation, to ensure the hospital is properly managed, and to provide quality care at a reasonable cost. We volunteer our time, talents, and energies to make sure that the citizens of Midland receive excellent medical care."

Betty Sumner, Chairman,
Board of Trustees

"Midland Memorial Hospital is tax-assisted, not tax-supported. To keep your hospital taxes as low as possible, we use tax revenues only for indigent care. That's why our tax rate is one of the lowest in the state. Like other community hospitals, we depend on room and service charges to buy supplies and pay salaries. With the commitment of dedicated individuals, our community will continue to receive the medical care it needs and deserves."

DEAR ABBY

Man's dangerous weapon is car

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a habit that upsets me a whole lot. He drives full speed through a flock of birds. First he says, "I can't stop because I might cause an accident." Then, "They always manage to get out of my way." I wonder about that.

Last week, we were driving down a one-lane paved country road that was straight as a pin, and there wasn't a car in sight. About 200 to 300 feet ahead was a small flock of birds right in the middle of the road. He was going 55 mph and never once did he let up on the gas. As we came closer, the birds tried to get out of his way, but he plowed right into them. It was a gruesome sight. I felt sick inside. I've been through this many times. I've asked him to please slow down and give the birds a chance, but he pays no attention.

Since we were not in any way rushing to get anywhere, I can't for the life of me figure out why he would deliberately slam into fleeing birds.

What gives? Am I an oddball for caring about the birds? I am truly one very disappointed woman. I've been driving for as many years as he, and I've always tried my best not to kill anything. — SICK INSIDE IN LOCKPORT, ILL.

DEAR SICK: You are not an oddball. Your husband is clearly a cruel and heartless man to deliberately kill birds. Some people use guns. Your husband uses an automobile.

DEAR ABBY: In a few weeks, my live-in gentleman friend and I will be taking our long-awaited European trip.

My problem: How can we go about making others (on the tour) think we are married and get away with it? We've purchased the tour and airline tickets under "Mr. and Mrs. ( )" but our passports say otherwise.

Can this create some legal problems? If so, please tell us what to do (other than get married). — PACKING TO GO

DEAR PACKING: You may introduce yourselves as "Mr. and Mrs. ( )" to others on the tour, and your relationship will not be questioned. You could also introduce yourselves as "Mary Smith" and "John Brown" — a couple of very good friends, and few would give it a second thought. Good friends who do not sleep together may take a twin-bedded room to save expenses.

As for the "legal" aspects, consult a lawyer. In some states couples establish a common-law status by passing themselves off as married.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding. We want to invite some friends from work. These are the co-workers we socialize with outside of work. We're not inviting those we have only a working relationship with. Would it be in poor taste to enclose a brief note with the invitations asking them to please keep quiet about our wedding? We don't want to offend those who aren't invited, but we can't afford to have everybody we work with.

Also, would it be tacky to ask our parents to pay for their friends — the ones we don't know, or haven't seen in years? We are paying for our own wedding and want to keep the cost down. — STRESSED OUT

DEAR STRESSED: It would be in poor taste to include a note with the invitations asking your co-workers to keep quiet about the wedding. (It would be easier to smuggle dawn past a rooster.)

And don't ask your parents to pay for their friends. If they should offer, though, you could cave in.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

'Space revolution' expected to bring economic benefits

Copley News Service

Everyone has heard how permanently manned space stations will bring about a revolution in medicine, energy and machinery here on Earth.

But James Muncie, a lobbyist for the space advocacy group known as "Using Space for America," says a space revolution should really be thought of as a stepping-stone to more profitable adventures.

In the decades ahead, he says humankind will turn its attention to the moon, Mars and planets beyond.

Muncie says just a permanent moon base alone should create 35 million new jobs on Earth and a $1 trillion space economy.

Groomer: Have van, will travel

ROMEOVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Jean Fleming deals with some pretty hairy customers in her line of work — and she has the scars to prove it.

"I had a German shepherd corner me in the garage years ago. It took me an hour to get out to call the owner to come and hold him," she says.

"I put a phone in the garage the next day."

Fleming escaped being bitten that time, but she has had many battles with reluctant canines during her 17 years as a dog groomer. "It comes with the business.

"I have a girl who works with me, and if we get a mean one, she holds him and we (wash) his face and put a muzzle on him. Once you put the muzzle on, he has no choice but to sit there and be good."

Even with the bites, the 38-year-old Fleming says she still loves dogs. She owns a Rottweiler, three poodles and a dachshund.

For years, Fleming groomed dogs in her garage. That changed in March, when she began making house calls in her grooming van.

Inside the van, Fleming can bathe, clip, dip and brush dogs. She has a 55-gallon water tank, a propane-fueled water heater, a 55-gallon holding tank for the dirty water and a high-powered blow dryer. The electric grooming tools are powered by a generator.

Dogs and cats aren't the only customers Fleming gets.

"I've had a few rabbits come in for a bath and their nails trimmed. I cut a guinea pig's nails yesterday."

WHERE HAS THE HOPE GONE?

The signs of stress are showing. Family problems, confusion, mood swings, depression, drinking more than you should. You know it's not working. You've tried everything you can think of, but it's still no better. At Glenwood, we can help you discover the alternatives in your life. Don't let depression and distress continue. Call us anytime of any day. We can put you in touch with professionals and treatment programs. It can be different.

Non-performing loans continue to trouble Texas banks

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Non-performing loans continue to plague the entire banking industry, with Midland County being one of the most troubled areas in the state according to an advisor to the banking industry.

In a report prepared by the Austin-based Sheshunoff & Co., which represents 75 percent of the nation's banks and S&L's, president Alex Sheshunoff said that while Texas banks may have bottomed out on energy non-performing energy loans, they are now seeing the ripple effect in real estate loans.

Of the metropolitan areas statewide, Midland was second highest in the state for non-performing loans in the first quarter, being barely edged out by Houston.

In Harris County, 8.38 percent of gross loans totaling almost $2.4 billion were rated as non-performing, while Midland County rated 8.08 percent of its $57 million total in the non-performing category.

Other metropolitan counties listing more than five percent of gross loans as non-performing in the first three months of the year were Travis (Austin), 7.38 percent; Dallas, 7.07 percent; Potter (Amarillo), 6.14 percent; Ector (Odessa), 6.17 percent and Nueces (Corpus Christi), 5.40 percent.

El Paso with 2.10 percent was the lowest of the metropolitan areas, even though it experienced a 36.3 percent increase from December 1986 through the first quarter of 1987.

On the other hand, Midland County saw a reduction of 1.7 percent in the same quarter. Dallas and Travis counties, perhaps feeling the real estate ripple, saw increases in non-performing loans of 25 and 20 percent, respectively, during the quarter.

Among Midland banks in the first quarter, First RepublicBank Midland continued to have the highest percentage of non-performing loans with 13.58 percent, and UnitedBank had the lowest with .62 percent, the result of a 59.4 percent decline since year-end.

ClayDesta National Bank listed 3.2 percent non-performers; Community National Bank, 4.46 percent; FirstCity National Bank, 7.89 percent; Midland American Bank, 2.56 percent; Texas American Bank, Midland, 3.86 percent and Texas Commerce Bank, Midland, 1.35 percent.

While Midland County ranked high for non-performing loans among the metropolitan areas, some rural counties fared much worse. Numerous counties, including nearby Martin County, had non-performing loans of 10 percent or more.

The highest percent of non-performing loans were in Swisher County which had almost 18 percent non-performing loans in its four banks, primarily a result of 25.38 percent bad loans in the First National Bank of Tulia.

On the other side of the ledger, Edwards County declared only .02 percent of its $4 million in loans as non-performing.

Non-performing loans also proved a problem nationwide, jumping 36.5 percent in the first quarter of 1987.

It is worth noting, however, that energy states play a strong role in the negative numbers. The top states ranked for non-performing loans as a percent of gross loans are: Alaska, Wyoming, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Montana and Texas in that order, with Alaska leading at 10.90 percent and Texas in sixth at 6.17 percent.

As might be expected, non-performing loans put the same states, with Colorado added, at the bottom of the pack in earnings. Texas banks showed extraordinarily low earnings with negative return of .05 percent on assets, trailing only Alaska's -.69 percent return on assets.

REORGANIZATION

MGF merger plan enters home stretch

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

After more than two and a half years and at least five unconsummated reorganization plans, beleaguered MGF Oil Corp. may be within four months of an end to its extended economic ordeal.

This week, all creditors of the Midland-based company received a merger plan issued by Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. Included in the disclosure statement package is a ballot to approve the Parker & Parsley reorganization proposal.

The P&P plan, which, according to the statement, has been endorsed by MGF management, calls for a cash payment by P&P's parent company Southmark Corp. to relieve bank debt owed by MGF. The total payment, subject to adjustments, is "roughly $42 million," said Scott Sheffield, president of P&P.

Included in the $42 million price tag is a secondary deal which will transfer ownership of seven drilling rigs belonging to partnerships in which MGF was the general partner.

MGF president Phil Marcum is reserving comment until after the October deadlines for voting and confirming the plan, Sheffield said, but his signature has been affixed to a merger agreement which is contingent on approval of the proposal that creditors are currently evaluating.

The approximate $250 million owed to non-bank creditors and to banks for the unsecured portion of debt will be satisfied through issuance of more than 17 million shares of common stock in a reorganized "New MGF." Southmark will retain control of MGF through a 65 percent ownership stake in the common stock issued.

A majority of each class of creditors — bondholders, banks, business creditors, and other claimants — who submit ballots before the Oct. 2 deadline must approve of the P&P plan. In addition, those votes must represent more than two-thirds of the total amount of credit value voting.

Parker & Parsley began investigating the feasibility of working out an acquisition of MGF late last year for a couple of reasons, said Sheffield. "We think there is a value in keeping control of MGF's significant assets in Midland. If the company were liquidated, there is no assurance that the assets or the jobs would remain local."

If accepted by creditors the merger is not expected to affect employment levels, which locally account for about 50 jobs. "Any time you acquire properties, you need the expertise of the people who have been working with them. You can't afford to start from 'ground zero,'" noted Sheffield.

MGF's Chapter 11 status "could be converted to a liquidation under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code (liquidation bankruptcy) or a possi-

Town gushes over well

HALBUR, Iowa (AP) — Many in this farm town of 229 people seem to agree with Marie Eischeid's assessment: "It's been a lot of fun this year in Halbur."

She and her husband, Ed, may be having the most fun of all — leasing their 320-acre farm to Amoco Corp., which has erected a 178-foot-tall blue-and-white derrick just northwest of the couple's farmhouse.

The exploratory oil rig, rising high above the cornfields, grain silos and hog pens, has meant instant attention for the tiny German-Catholic community.

"We all hope there's oil there; it sure would be nice if it would come in," said Jerry Mescher, a hog farmer who is leasing his 160 acres north of town to Amoco.

"I feel kind of proud and honored to have something like this happen," Mescher said as he carried a sack of flour out of Schenkelberg's Grocery and Meat store. "When I go out of town I wear my Amoco cap." While in town, he was wearing a battered yellow seed corn cap.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Tucker Sutherland puffed on his trademark pipe, remembering the lean years of his early newspaper career.

It was 1960 and the recent Texas A&M University graduate had just married Carole Sparks and had landed a dual job as sports editor and advertising manager of the Robstown Record.

"We lived in a garage apartment when we first got married," Sutherland chuckled. "We paid $50 a month, furnished, and the woman who owned it raised our rent $5 and we had to have a meeting with her to discuss whether we were going to move out or what. It was going to kill us."

Within 14 years, Sutherland and his wife and their children would move 11 times as he yearned to succeed.

Sutherland spent 18 years with Harte-Hanks Communications, rising to the presidency of the corporations's newspaper division before venturing out in January to form Sutherland Media Inc.

Soon after he formed his company, Sutherland acquired newspapers and magazines that once were owned by Harte-Hanks, including the successful Corsicana Daily Sun, the Copperas Cove Leader-Press and San Antonio Monthly.

Sutherland says although he has been called a risk-taker, he doesn't make decisions on whims.

Is it the Prudhoe Rift?

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

"Everybody wants to know everything they can about oil. There's a new fever in Iowa and it's oil fever," says Midland landman Marc Jacobsma, a former resident of Souix City, Iowa. The fever is justified, not only for Iowa, but the entire oil industry, because the Midcontinent Rift, (known more formally as the Midcontinent Geophysical Anomaly) on which Amoco is drilling its No.1 E.G. Eischeid could be the next Prudhoe Bay.

The shots are long on the Midcontinent Rift, but the rewards are great, says Jacobsma, who made an extensive study of the Rift in anticipation of doing land work there. Througout the world rifts such as the one in Iowa are famous as hydrocarbon rich formations. Some of the smaller basins, such as the Suez Basin, within the rifts have been known to have reserves of 5 billion barrel. Prolific oil producing rifts are found in Europe, East Africa, Siberia, Egypt, Libya, and Bahrain. China has three productive rifts and geologists see no reason why the Midcontinent rift should not have extensive reserves.

That's why oil companies are so secretative about leasing

Pitts

All three news networks were in town last week, shooting footage for news stories about Midland in light of new oil prices. The word they are apparently hearing is that "things are getting back to normal."

We know things are still not back to "normal" — whatever that means for a city that swings between booms and busts. But things are getting better.

Many outside the oil patch, like the networks, mistakenly assume that as soon as oil prices improve, the general economy of the oil patch improves. Some things do improve immediately with higher oil prices, but to look for a "new boom" story in Midland at this time is probably premature.

Considerable lag time is always found between initial improvement of oil prices and full recovery. There are four phases that accompany a bust or a boom. They are improvement in production employment; then, the oil field service sector; next development drilling; and finally, exploration.

Right now, Midland is somewhere at the end of phase one or the start of phase two on the road to recovery. Injections of improved cash flow brought about by higher oil prices has stopped the hemorrhage of jobs that was bleeding the economy to death and is just now beginning to flow into the service sector.

For those who have ever wondered how oil prices, cash flow, jobs and the price of eggs in Coyonosa all link together, and where we stand now on the road to recovery, let me offer this elementary outline:

The Permian-Basin sells basically one commodity — oil and gas. A handful of crude oil buyers purchase the entire production of the Permian Basin, and resell it to refiners at a slight markup. Pipelines, selling gas to industries and utilities, in places like Houston, Nebraska, California buy most of the gas.

The dollars paid for the petroleum products goes to the producer, who then spreads the wealth by paying partners, royalty owners, tax collectors, and employees such as accountants, secretaries, engineers, geologists, pumpers.

The first thing that happens when oil prices go up and cash flow improves is producers normally stop firing employees — jobs are saved.

That's what we are seeing now. While many people are still unemployed, overall the situation is stabilizing, as fewer people are applying for unemployment. The job hemorrhage has stopped.

Looking back at the bust of 1986, when oil prices fell the first thing to be affected was exploration. Geophysical work was cancelled, rank wildcat prospects were put on the shelf, step-out wells from known production were put on hold. As the pinch got tighter, development wells within fields were halted. And when oil approached $10 wells were shut in and maintenance deferred on many producing wells. Many were plugged.

Now that oil prices are going up, the reverse is true. Improved cash flow will first halt the loss of jobs, then flow into into the service sector, development and finally exploration.

With oil prices back over the $20 mark, the Permian Basin is now at the initial stage of taking care of marginal production that was neglected in the downturn.

Locally, well service companies report a significant increase in activity, and firms like Halliburton have cancelled furlough programs. Wells are being acidized; pumps and tubing changed out. Tank batteries are being painted, and more chemicals are being bought to treat sick wells. Higher oil prices paid to producers are being passed on to service companies, who use it to make improvements in their own operation. The contractor uses it to rehire employees, repair and renovate rigs that have been stacked, or maybe even buy a new pickup or new tubing tongs.

From the oil field service sector the money passes out into the general economy as wages and profits spent for food, clothing, shelter, transportation, entertainment and luxuries. The general economy will improve slowly with every phase of recovery.

We are not seeing much improvement in the rig count yet, but we ble alternative is forced liquidation in which lenders would seek to enforce their liens on substantially all of the property of MGF," the P&P disclosure statement reads.

"In addition, MGF's properties are a tremendous fit with Parker & Parsley's operation," Sheffield said. A $38 million acquisition of Mizell Petro Resources earlier this year got the company involved in Colorado's Denver-Julesburg Basin. "Along with the HCW deal last year which brought us some Oklahoma properties, that gives us existing operations in virtually every area where MGF is active operating more than 500 wells.

"Also, we were able to come up with a plan to give creditors more value, with greater future earnings potential than simply distributing assets among the lenders as had been proposed under previous plans," Sheffield said.

In February, MGF submitted its third amended reorganization plan, which it has since withdrawn and recommended acceptance of the P&P Plan. Prior to the oil price collapse of early '86, MGF had a reorganization plan which had been confirmed by its creditors, by when the bottom fell out of the oil revenue picture for the company, the plan had to be scrapped, Sheffield said.

One feature of the Parker & Parsley plan missing from others is the issuance of subscription rights along with common stock for the creditor classes receiving stock. These rights allow the "new" stockholders dilution protection and the opportunity to participate in upside stock potential through future cash investment to protect the share of ownership in the company.

In addition to management support from MGF, the merger proposed by Parker & Parsley has been endorsed by the official creditors' committee. Four committee representatives voted in favor of the P&P plan at a June meeting attended by five of the seven committee members. Only bondholder Seymour Light, who abstained, failed to back the plan.

"We fully expect to have the full support of the banks involved in the lenders' agreement as well," said Tim Dunn, senior vice president of Parker & Parsley. The banks involved in the agreement are Texas Commerce Bank N.A., Houston; First RepublicBank Dallas, as successor to InterFirst Bank Dallas; and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as liquidator for the First National Bank of Midland.

Currently the confirmation hearing, when the results of creditor voting will become public before the federal bankruptcy judge, is set for Oct. 29. "If the plan is confirmed, we hope to close the deal within 30 days," said Dunn, who was a primary architect of the multi-million dollar merger since coming on board with P&P earlier this year.

"For the time being, we will leave them stacked," Sheffield said of the 35 drilling rigs which could soon be part of HCW Drilling Corp., the corporate structure P&P intends to use for the merger, although, Sheffield adds that MGF's operation is not likely to change names.

"If the market continues its return, we may be able to participate in the contract drilling business sooner than we expected."

and drilling. Amoco has barred all visitors from its well. Texaco drilled its No.1 Noel Poersch, inside a fenced and secured location on the rift three years ago and has yet to release any well data. Rumor has it that the oil company discovered not oil, but hard mineral prospects in the northeast Kansas well.

Rifts are essentially areas created millions of years ago by a tearing of the earth's granite shield. Volcanic magma came up through the tears, creating lava flows. The flows caused ponds to form within the rift-area, making possible marine life and and organic sedimentation within the rift. Sedimentation was also carried into trenches within the rift through erosion and tributaries. In the Midcontinent region the product is an anomaly 50 to 80 miles wide, stretching from the Great Lakes through Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska to Kansas — an anomaly packed with productive potential.

Interest in the Rift was first aroused by Denver geologist Duff Kerr in 1980, who had worked the area ten years earlier as a geologist for Shell Oil Co. Kerr said he felt like 1980 was the right time to go for the "big one." The Amoco well could very well be the "big one," but it will be sometime before the world knows. According to an AP news story, Amoco has worked out a deal with the state of Iowa that gives it 18 months before it must disclose well data.

It is the contention of some geologists that the No.1 E.G. Eischeid could be a big one, because unlike the Texaco well which was drilled in the middle of the Rift, where volcanic heat could have boiled out hydrocarbons, the Amoco well is drilled on the flank of the Rift and on the edge of an adjacent basin. These adjacent basins are also thought to have hydrocarbon potential.

"Amoco will get two rather than one shot at finding another Prudhoe," said Jacobsma.

should soon, as deferred development comes back. Companies with improved cash flow will begin to drill field wells that have long needed to be drilled, others will drill wells to tighten injection patterns and squeeze out more oil.

At some point, sensing that things are getting back to normal, producers will rush to take advantage of low, downturn drilling prices before they head back up and certain shortages will develop, indeed causing drilling prices to recover.

If oil prices hold above $20, we should see improvement in the rig count before the end of the year, primarily as a result of development drilling.

Lastly, when confidence has been revitalized, and prices are once again high enough to hide some of the risk, exploration will come back in the final phase of recovery. Investors with outside money will pour it into Permian Basin exploration programs and full recovery will be achieved.

We should see significant recovery of the domestic industry by the latter part of 1988 or early 1989 if prices hold and continue to ease upward. Some recovery could come as a result of skyrocketing oil prices brought about by a conflict in the Middle East, but it would probably not be genuine or lasting.

person," the 49-year-old executive said. "I have an abundance of ideas and that's probably my No. 1 strength.

"I'm also not paralyzed by fear of failure. People too many times are afraid to fail," he said.

Sutherland says he left a successful newspaper career to form his own company because he thought the time was right. Harte-Hanks had decided to sell some publications, and the oil slump was attracting venture capital investors to publishing, among other non-traditional areas.

"People had been looking for safer deals, more solid places to put their money," Sutherland said. "The venture capital arena has been growing in numerous years and I think they were attracted with my expertise, background in newspapers and magazines."

Sutherland has declined to give the purchase price of his properties, which also include two Kansas City magazines that he has combined into one and Houston-based Ultra magazine, the glossy publication targeted to wealthy Texans.

Other newspaper groups also have benefited from venture capital investors.

One group is Westward Communications, a company formed by Will Jarrett and Ken Johnson, former editors of the Dallas Times Herald.

"The venture capitalists in Texas are pretty adept at switching from the traditional businesses that they were involved in — high tech, energy and, in some cases, real estate — and as they saw those things diminishing, they were fairly adroit at looking at publishing and deciding it would be a good investment," Jarrett said.

"When my partner, Ken Johnson, and I went out and met with the venture capitalists, we, like Tucker, had an extensive experience in the industry and we had already a couple acquisition targets in our minds."

Westward now owns two small dailies and one weekly in Colorado and seven weeklies in East Texas.

Like Westward, Sutherland expects his company to expand beyond the state, and even delve into the broadcast medium.

"We're diversifying our company to be a company that has a lot of small divisions. We're trying to keep things a whole lot simpler," Sutherland said.

He has cut staff at some of the newly acquired publications, curtailing to about 200 the number of employees within his group.

Sutherland's ties with Harte-Hanks aren't completely severed. He maintains an office in the Harte-Hanks Tower and he retains Harte-Hanks job description and management-by-objective policies.

Sutherland says he knew little about newspapers when he graduated from Texas A&M, but after his stint in Robstown and subsequent low-paying reporting and editing jobs, he became interested in the business side of the industry.

Sutherland says he learned that pay for journalists increased as their duties and responsibilities grew.

"From an economic standpoint, the problem in journalism is a supply-and-demand question," Sutherland said.

"There are few other ways that a young person can become important in a community and that makes it an extremely attractive profession. Because there are so many (journalists) available, it keeps the pay low," he said.

Over the years, pay for journalists, especially editors, has improved, says Sutherland, whose first car was a used big-finned Plymouth.

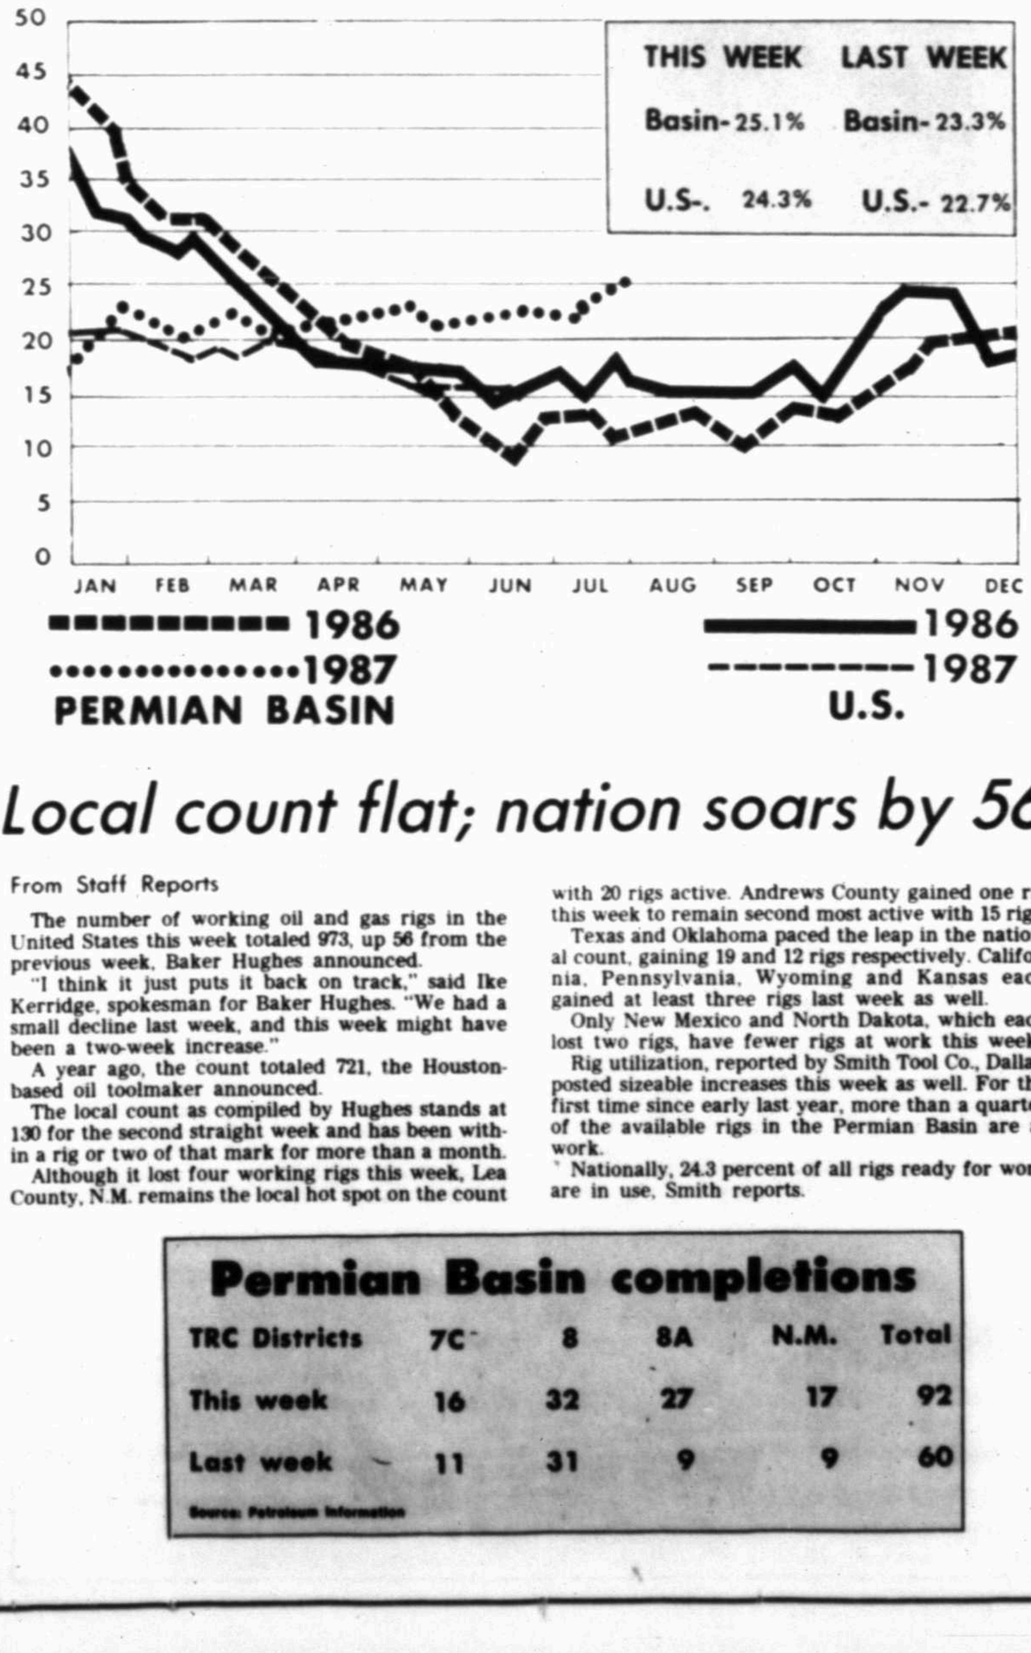
Rig Utilization



Local count flat; nation soars by 56

From Staff Reports

The number of working oil and gas rigs in the United States this week totaled 973, up 56 from the previous week, Baker Hughes announced.

"I think it just puts it back on track," said Ike Kerridge, spokesman for Baker Hughes. "We had a small decline last week, and this week might have been a two-week increase."

A year ago, the count totaled 721, the Houston-based oil toolmaker announced.

The local count as compiled by Hughes stands at 130 for the second straight week and has been within a rig or two of that mark for more than a month.

Although it lost four working rigs this week, Lea County, N.M. remains the local hot spot on the count with 20 rigs active. Andrews County gained one rig this week to remain second most active with 15 rigs.

Texas and Oklahoma paced the leap in the national count, gaining 19 and 12 rigs respectively. California, Pennsylvania, Wyoming and Kansas each gained at least three rigs last week as well.

Only New Mexico and North Dakota, which each lost two rigs, have fewer rigs at work this week.

Rig utilization, reported by Smith Tool Co., Dallas, posted sizeable increases this week as well. For the first time since early last year, more than a quarter of the available rigs in the Permian Basin are at work.

Japan best customer for Mexican oil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Japan was the leading buyer of Mexican oil during the first six months of the year, purchasing an average 173,000 barrels daily, the government oil monopoly Pemex said this week.

In a brief press release, Pemex said Japan bought a total $533 million worth of crude oil from Mexico in the first half of 1987.

The average price per barrel of both Isthmus light and Maya heavy crude for Japanese customers rose 38 cents in July, Pemex said. The Isthmus sold for $17.98 a barrel, up from $17.60 in June, while Maya was priced at $15.23 in July, up from $14.85 in June.

Pemex said the higher prices were consistent with the general rise in prices of Middle Eastern oil.

The press release did not mention prices to Mexico's other customers, which include the United States and some European nations.

Phillips chief: Long-range oil plan necessary

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The head of an oil firm says his industry is trying to advise the public on energy shortages and the possibility of another oil crisis.

C.J. Silas of Phillips Petroleum says the creation of a national energy policy would help the U.S. oil industry. But "long-range planning is difficult because people in office have two-, four-, and six-year terms, which require their time frames to be limited," Silas says.

Industry figures show the United States imported 37 percent of its oil in 1986, up from 31 percent the previous year.

Natural gas prospects heating up

New York Times News Service

With all the uncertainty in the Persian Gulf, rising oil prices are in the news. But energy analysts also predict climbing prices for another energy source — natural gas.

"At this time, the most attractive investment is drilling for natural gas," said Malcolm Rudolph, chief executive of Derand Resources, an Arlington, Va., investment banker.

By February, Rudolph said, the price of natural gas is likely to rise at least 33 percent from its current average — $1.40 to $1.50 per 1,000 cubic feet. The reason: "Americans are using three times as much at the burner tip as is being drilled for and added to reserves," he said.

Others agree that natural-gas prices will rise, though they see a slower climb. "I think the average price will push $2.00 in 1987, but I see a gradual increase over the longer term, not a quantum jump," said Richard Sparling, an economist for the Independent Petroleum Association. Sparling predicts a 10 percent annual increase in natural gas prices for the next five years.

RAILROAD COMMISSION NEWS

Midland firm fined for salt water leak

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has levied a $12,400 penalty against Cibolo Enterprises Inc. of Midland for problems with a saltwater disposal well in Andrews County.

Commission inspectors discovered casing problems with the saltwater disposal well on the company's Bakke SWD lease in Andrews County. The problems "posed a pollution threat," the commission said.

A disposal well is used to inject into the ground saltwater that sometimes accompanies crude oil pumped from a well. In this case, inspectors found corrosion in the well's below-ground casing, commission spokesman Brian Schaible said.

The commission spent $12,400 to plug the well and ordered Cibolo Enterprises to reimburse the state. The company has 30 days to make the payment before the commission turns the case over to the attorney general's office, Schaible said.

Wallace: First half residential gas bills lower

AUSTIN (AP) — Most residential gas customers in Texas had lower gas bills during the first half of 1987 compared with the same period in 1986, according to Chairman Mack Wallace of the Railroad Commission.

The commission analyzed 25 cities and found that a monthly bill for 6,000 cubic feet of gas averaged $30 in 1987, a 3 percent decrease from the previous year. The average bill includes the cost of gas and the cost of providing gas service.

Gas customers in Amarillo had the lowest bills among the 25 cities — $19.56, down $1.42 from 1986. The highest monthly bills reported were in Tyler where customers paid an average of $40.52, up $1.98 from the previous year.

Corpus Christi gas customers showed the largest drop in their average monthly bill for the first half of 1987, down $7.97 to $34.12.

Retired trucker to head transportation board

AUSTIN (AP) — C. Thomas Clowe Jr., founder of Quality Service Tank Lines, Inc., a San Antonio-based trucking firm, has been named director of the Transportation Division for the Railroad Commission.

After Quality was purchased by Trimac Transportation, Inc., of Calgary, Canada, Clowe was named president and chief executive officer and held those positions until his retirement in July 1986.

The cost of living in the U.S.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) is one of the key measures of the inflation rate. During the last 20 years, the annual increase in the CPI was largest in the mid 1970s and early 1980s. The sharp rises in the CPI can be largely attributed to simultaneous increases in the "energy" CPI, which keeps track of the change of the costs of heating fuel, oil, coal, bottled gas, gasoline and electricity. The overall CPI fell to a 20-year low between 1985 and 1986, when it increased only 1.9 percent -- this mostly due to a decline of 13.2 percent in the cost of energy.

TMOGA hails air quality study

AUSTIN (SWN) — The chairman of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, Richard C. Hudson, hailed the results of a new study which shows that air quality in Dallas and Houston, as well as most U.S. metropolitan areas facing possible federal sanctions for air pollution levels, is considerably better than generally perceived.

Hudson, of Houston noted that the American Petroleum Institute study evaluated government data on ozone levels in 25 major urban areas from 1981 through 1985 and found that most of most of the areas were in compliance with ozone ambient air quality standards more than 99-percent of the monitored hours.

In Dallas the hourly ozone monitor readings were at or below the standard 99.83-percent of the time, while in Houston the hourly ozone readings were at or below the standard 99.47-percent of the time, Hudson reported.

The Dallas and Houston metropolitan areas are among more than 70 U.S. metropolitan areas which the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency considers unlikely to meet the ozone air quality compliance deadline set for the end of this year. Further, the Dallas/Fort Worth metropolitan area was among 14 singled out by the EPA June 29 for possible federal sanctions for failure to meet these air quality standards.

The Eischeids would get one-eighth of the revenues of any oil, gas or minerals that Amoco produces. "We're not tired of this at all," said Mrs. Eischeid, displaying a nearly full scrapbook of clippings about the project.

She also keeps a notebook to be signed by visitors whose cars and vans clog the gravel road that runs north of the family's home.

"I've got signatures from people from Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, all over," said Mrs. Eischeid. "There was a couple of guys, older guys, who just drove out here from Indiana. They used to be involved in the industry and just wanted to see it."

The Eischeids' son, Rahn, 20, one of eight children, has established a souvenir shop of sorts on the front porch, where he sells T-shirts, sweatshirts, caps and bumper stickers proclaiming, "Halbur, oil capital of the Midwest."

Amoco is spending about $4 million to drill 15,000 feet to look for oil and gas hereabouts.

Geologists say the area around the Eischeid farm lies at the heart of the Mid-Continent Rift, which they believe is ripe with oil- and gas-bearing hydrocarbons.

The company is leasing about 80,000 acres of land in western Carroll County, which includes roughly 95 percent of the farmland around Halbur. The leases — $1 per acre each year for the next 10 years — include downtown business lots.

The company announces the weekly depth of the well, but that's about all.

Not even the Eischeids are sure what's going on at the eight-acre site the company rents for its derrick and trailers, which serve as living quarters for some of the workers.

"They could hit oil and you'd never know it," said Eischeid, 68.

Geologists, scientists and computer operators at the site appear on a five-minute radio show each Friday. Run in conjunction with the show is a "How Deep Is Amoco" contest at the Halbur hardware store.

"They guess what day, hour and minute it will take Amoco to hit the 2-mile mark, the 2¼-mile mark and the 2½-mile mark," said Neil Trobak of radio station KCIM in the neighboring town of Carroll.

"Then we put the winner on, followed by two or three minutes with someone out at the rig," he said. "It keeps the whole community interested ...

Tobacco profits still strong

NEW YORK (AP) — Operating in a business that has been under siege for more than two decades, the tobacco industry's finances are in remarkably strong shape these days.

Companies like Philip Morris, RJR Nabisco and American Brands have recently reported solid gains in earnings for the April-June quarter, and are expected to ring up record profits for the year.

Despite continuing product-liability suits and the threat of an increase in the federal excise tax on cigarettes, the prices of those companies' stocks all have hit new highs as recently as last winter.

At some tobacco companies, in fact, one of the big challenges facing management is what to do with the torrent of cash that is pouring into the corporate treasury.

Philip Morris, for one, recently announced plans to use $1 billion to buy back as many as 10 million of its outstanding common shares.

All this plainly doesn't square with the popular view in much of American society — that the ashtray is headed the way of the spitoon.

In fact, the numbers show that cigarette consumption in the United States peaked six years ago, and since has fallen into a steady decline.

The Value Line Investment Survey, in its latest quarterly appraisal of the tobacco industry, projects a continuing annual decrease of 1 percent to 2 percent into the early 1990s in the number of cigarettes sold in this country. A bigger drop is quite possible next year, it says, if the excise tax is increased.

But profitability in the industry is another matter. Value Line estimates that manufacturers averaged a profit of $4.25 per 1,000 cigarettes in 1981. By 1986, the firm says, that figure more than doubled to better than $9 per 1,000.

How did they manage this? The short answer, just about everyone agrees, is price increases, posted every six months or so.

Value Line also cites stable costs for raw materials and packaging, plus "tremendous manufacturing economies of scale from high-tech equipment that cut labor needs and improved operating efficiency."

Ever since the earliest days of health warnings and anti-smoking sentiment, the tobacco industry has been busy spreading itself out.

Philip Morris today can sell non-smokers Post cereal, Maxwell House coffee or Miller beer. RJR made its biggest move in a 1985 merger with Nabisco Brands. American Brands' stable includes such diverse items as Sunshine crackers and Swingline staplers.

As multinational consumer-products enterprises, these companies have also benefited from the dollar's decline in foreign exchange. A lower dollar enhances the profits realized from sales to customers who buy with yen or francs or pounds.

The industry's circumstances would presumably change dramatically if courts rule against it in legal cases that seek to hold tobacco companies liable for deaths or illnesses of smokers.

Nearly 150 suits of that type are still pending, Value Line notes, although key rulings will probably arise from far fewer than that.

One important point to be decided, perhaps eventually by the Supreme Court, is whether health warnings printed on cigarette packages and in advertisements are sufficient to serve as "shields" against liability claims.

Nevertheless, from what is known today, Value Line concludes: "There's still plenty of life left in the cigarette business, and the enviable profitability of the big U.S. cigarette producers should remain intact for many more years."

Texans take to New York cheesecake

NEW YORK, Texas (AP) — Lyn Dunsavage woke up one morning with the perfect product and the perfect name: The New York, Texas, cheesecake.

Marketed from her spacious farmhouse overlooking the hills of New York in Henderson County, her cheese-cake is capturing the attention of tastebuds around the state.

Jones' description, quoted in promotion material for the cheesecake, is as close as words can come. The New York, Texas, cheesecake is a four-pound concoction that stands about four inches high atop an ample graham cracker crust. It's firm, but fluffy. Rich, but light.

"I just really think this could be the cake of Texas," Mrs. Dunsavage says.

Her marketing strategies include a debut at the State Fair this year and inclusion in the Taste of Texas promotion through the state Department of Agriculture.

New York, Texas, was named in 1856 by Davis Reynolds, who hoped the town would become as big as its namesake. But, his dreams faded when the railraod bypassed New York in 1901, and the post office was moved to LaRue.

Today, New York retains the church, store, and cemetery established by the Reynolds family and still maintained by their descendants.

Mrs. Dunsavage began her cheesecake venture just nine months ago. She had sold The Dallas Downtown News, a newspaper she had founded 10 years earlier, and with it had sold her privilege to write in the Dallas market. She also had a niece who was looking for a job.

Lyn Dunsavage needed an idea.

It came to her early one morning in her second-story bedroom as she looked out over the green hills toward New York.

"I woke up one morning and said, 'Aha,' I have the perfect product and the perfect name."

She baked a few of the cheesecakes she had become known for and took them to Dallas. The first week, she had orders for 10. The second week, she sold 35, and the third, 135.

Mrs. Dunsavage was baking all night and on weekends and peddling her product in Dallas.

Her husband, Peter, jumped in to help. He formerly worked for the Environmental Protection Agency in Dallas.

"He said, 'The first thing you can do is teach me to bake it because I'm a better baker than you are,'" Mrs. Dunsavage said.

Peter and Lynn Dunsavage market Henderson County cheesecake that is taking Texas taste buds by storm.

"As a child, I went to Philadelphia and New York with my grandparents. I remember the cheesecakes seemed to be large, fluffy and sweet," she said. "For years people have been calling something cheesecake that isn't."

Mrs. Dunsavage found a handwritten recipe in a book of her mother's after she died. Looking through old cookbooks is a hobby of hers.

"Mother's recipe tasted like I remembered, but it wasn't high enough." Mrs. Dunsavage experimented with the recipe through the years until she had a cake that was as tall and light as she remembered the ones of her childhood being.

"For years, people have been saying, 'That's the most fabulous cheesecake I've had,'" Mrs. Dunsavage said.

The label lists the ingredients in order of the amount: cream cheese, sour cream, sugar, graham cracker crumbs, eggs, flour, vanilla extract and lemon. The Dunsavages boast the ingredients are all Texas-made, except for the graham cracker crumbs.

Soon after Mrs. Dunsavage started peddling her cakes in Dallas, Neiman Marcus called her in for a testing.

Thirteen chefs and executives sat around a table holding forks, plates, water pitchers and a bowl "in case they wanted to spit out what they were eating." It was quiet except for the sounds of their forks hitting their plates and their lips smacking.

"That was probably the most excruciating thing I've ever done," Mrs. Dunsavage said.

Neiman Marcus mentioned their new product in a mailout for preferred customers earlier this year, and the Dunsavage phone started ringing.

"We quickly had to get packaging and other materials," Peter Dunsavage said.

The back porch was conyerted into a kitchen. The 40-by-10 room still has paintings hanging on the walls, but now holds four ovens and three refrigerators. The temperature is maintained at 78 degrees.

The recipe requires special handling and cooking techniques, Dunsavage said. It takes two hours to make one cheesecake and the Dunsavages can bake eight at a time. The porch-turned-bakery has the capacity to turn out 100 cakes a day. The bakery produces about 100 a week now.

The cakes are frozen and packed in a cardboard box and then set into a Styrofoam carton for shipping. With overnight shipping, the cake is still frozen when it arrives.

Cautious optimism stirring again in U.S. oilpatch

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

Besides the metronomic pulse of pumping, that noise coming from oilfields around the country is the clink of tools being picked up again by mechanics, the beat of helicopters heading offshore. It's the sound of optimism stirring, even if it's still muted.

"The drilling is picking up. ... Landmen are going back to work. It's looking pretty good," says Tom Keating, who arranges leases in Montana.

"Our production will continue to expand, but at a slower rate," predicts Jim Bob Moffett, chief executive of an oil, gas and mineral concern based in New Orleans.

"Right now," chimes in Ed Eboch, an economic analyst in the Alaska Labor Department, "there just seems to be an air of optimism."

Prices of crude oil futures have fluctuated recently but stayed above $20 a barrel, and that has accelerated oilfield activity that had picked up earlier in the year. Depressed petroleum prices began a slow recovery a few months ago, industry officials say.

Delinquent loans to oil producers will turn around with an upswing in prices and production, but beyond that, he said, even loans made to motels and shopping centers in better times will gradually be repaid as the oil patch economy expands.

Optimism breeds a sense of security, which prompts people to spend money and changes the direction of the economy, said Eboch.

For the first time since last November, the delinquency rate on home loans made through the Alaska Housing Finance Corp. held steady in June at 15.5 percent, said spokeswoman Margaret Nelson.

And Alaska legislators cited the stabilization of oil when they refused to go along with Gov. Steve Cowper's plans for reinstating an income tax, a motor fuels tax and many state fee increases.

At the University of Oklahoma, where enrollment in petroleum engineering courses has been off sharply, Roy Knapp, head of the geology department, echoed others when he said he just hopes the price rise holds steady.

"I think more than high prices we need predictable prices. I hope it doesn't go too high too fast," Knapp said.

"When you're cautious, you do things wiser," he said, noting that companies have learned from their losses in recent years. "To jump back in with both feet ... it's a marvelous place to lose their shirt."

"I think more than high prices we need predictable prices. I hope it doesn't go too high too fast."
— Roy Knapp, head of geology department, University of Oklahoma

"We are beginning to see a few bright spots in the country, but we're moving very slowly," he said. "We have re-employed some of the ones we have laid off, and some have turned us down. They're not sure if it's going to be a sustained thing."

In Texas, drill pipe manufacturer Lone Star Technologies has upped its production capacity 5 percent from a year ago and quietly hired back 300 workers in recent months, officials said. The company had laid off about two-thirds of its workforce of 4,000 last year.

Temporary workers and contract labor will be used for the time being in the Kern County, Calif., projects of Chevron Oil, said the company's division manager for production, Bob Connon.

The company "is still cautious about oil prices and our caution is reflected in our hiring practices," he said.

Still, production in Kern County, the largest oil-producing county in the nation, is increasing — with about 30,000 wells operating in March compared to 28,800 at the low point last September, when prices tumbled below $10 a barrel, according to Bill Guerrard, senior engineer for the California Division of Oil and Gas in Sacramento.

"We're seeing some exploratory drilling and a lot of development wells being drilled," observed Ed Welge of the division's Bakersfield office. "We've seen this upturn since the first of this year."

Far from the fields producing thick Kern River crude, those that give up Louisiana Sweet are also growing more active.

In mid-July, 145 rigs were running in Louisiana, 61 of them offshore; at the same time last year, 103 rigs were in operation, 44 offshore.

The exploration push has set off a scramble for oil-field equipment in the Lafayette, La., area. Drilling companies report shortages — and a quick jump in prices — of drill pipe, casing, tools and diesel power units as well as trained talent to run and maintain rigs.

In Louisiana, officials counted on prices strengthening. Ralph Perlman, state budget director, said the 1987-88 budget is based on severance tax, bonus and royalty revenues of $850 million and oil priced at $20 a barrel. Oil traders and petroleum economists have said they expect the price of Louisiana Sweet crude to stay in the $20 range for the rest of the year, barring any upheaval in OPEC.

In New Mexico, every dollar above state budget-makers' $15 per barrel estimate of oil prices means an extra $3 million in revenue to the state.

"The biggest impact will be in terms of some unexpected increases in the state's general fund that comes from oil and gas taxes," said Brian McDonald, director of the University of New Mexico's Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Beyond that, oil and gas severance taxes provide the bulk of funding for state capital projects through severance tax revenue bonds, he said. "With oil prices coming back to those kind of levels, the state should have additional bonding capacity for projects."

Only one in four dailies independent

Those 434 dailies account for about 19 percent of the total U.S. daily circulation, says the association.

Only 16 of those have circulations of more than 100,000.

American Airlines considering propjets

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines officials say they are considering expanding their fleet with a $3 billion purchase of planes powered by propeller-driven jet engines.

The three planes under consideration are the Boeing 7J7, the McDonnell Douglas MD-91/92 and the Airbus Industries A-320, said Donald Carty, American's senior vice president for planning.

If American orders the Boeing or the McDonnell Douglas plane, it would become the first airline to venture into a new era of jet propulsion.

"American may be making a giant leap forward in cost efficiency by ordering one of the new high technology aircraft," said Julius Maldutis, airline industry analyst for Salomon Brothers Inc., a New York investment firm.

Carty said the 7J7 and the MD-91/92 will burn about 70 percent less fuel than the 727s because of a new type of engine called the unducted fan. The engine has twin, curved propellers at its rear.

The engines, which have under development for years, are being tested on existing airplanes. Planes can fly just as fast with the engine, which is said to be much quieter than a conventional jet engine.

The A-320's conventional jet engines are about half again more efficient than the 727, said Paul Nesbit, aircraft manufacturing analyst at Prudential Bache investment bankers in New York.

American Airlines may order 400 of the new planes if they prove as economical as their manufacturer claims and if business is good enough in the 1990s, Carty said.

Trinidad hoping for natural gas boom

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad and Tobago (AP) — The people of this twin island Caribbean nation are hoping natural gas will fuel the prosperity of the next decade, just as oil did in the last.

Trinidad, which can produce oil in its offshore fields for as little as $5 a barrel, had the third-highest per-capita income in the Western Hemisphere, behind the United States and Canada, when world oil prices soared above $30 per barrel in the late 1970s.

But the weakening of oil prices in the early 1980s — to as low as $10 last year — touched off a recession in this former British colony that has not yet ended.

"The economy is headed in the same direction it has since 1981 — down," said Joseph Pires, Chamber of Commerce president. "There is a leveling off, but we have not seen the bottom."

Oil prices have recovered to $20-22 a barrel, but higher prices do not offer a long-term solution. Exploration has turned up no major new fields, Energy Minister Kelvin Ramnath says, and the existing reserves of 600 million barrels are expected to run out in about 10 years.

Proven reserves of natural gas, however, stand at 17.6 trillion cubic feet, enough to last well into the next century at current levels of production, and exploration is expected to turn up much more.

"It is quite clear that natural gas will play an increasingly important role in the future as an energy source, replacing oil in many industrial and domestic applications," Ramnath said in an interview.

Oil brought unprecedented wealth to Trinidad and Tobago, a nation of 1.2 million people just off the Venezuelan coast. Per-capita income rose to $6,800 in 1982, spurring an increase in imports and construction.

Oil dependence was a mixed blessing even in the best years, however. The inflation rate was double-digit for most of the 1970s, and work, consumption patterns and personal expectations changed in ways that only an expanding economy could sustain.

"The oil industry set the standard for wages. Farmers had no way to keep younger people in agriculture," Agriculture Minister Lincoln Myers said. "Because we had oil, agriculture never had a very high priority. We could afford to buy food."

Myers noted that Trinidad exported food in the 1950s but now imports about $312 million in food each year.

"At the height of the boom years, we imported tomatoes that we certainly can grow here. ... Apple pie is still more prevalent than mango pie."

Southland to quit gasohol

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The chain of 7-Eleven and Quik Mart stores in Louisiana is dropping gasohol as it's gasoline product because of declining sales, Southland Corp. has announced.

The decision further hurts the ethanol industry, which gets a cash subsidy from the state based on how much gasohol is sold. Gasohol is 10 percent ethanol and 90 percent gasoline.

The Legislature granted the subsidy to build a new industry and to help Louisiana farmers. To get the subsidy, ethanol plants must buy Louisiana-grown grain.

Bob Amass, Southland's South Central Division gasoline manager, said Tuesday the drop in sales was "significant enough to convince us to stop selling the fuel" in the corporation's 150 outlets in Louisiana.

"We are trying to provide the customer with what they wante. The customer votes every time they spend a dollar with us. If the number of votes or dollars is declining, then we are losing the election," said Amass.

There is $15 million in the state budget for the subsidy program for the 1987-88 fiscal year that began July 1.

Ethanol interests had complained the state's labeling requirements for the product drove motorists away because the sign resembled a a warning. In June, the Legislature approved a smaller label on pumps to appease the industry.

THE OPPORTUNITY PLUS C.D.

Liquidity Plus a Guaranteed Increasing Rate

Briercroft has changed the traditional "one way CD." With our new Opportunity Plus CD, you don't have to pay a penalty for early withdrawal and we will guarantee a 1.00% rate increase if you choose to renew your CD. Our rate increase guarantee means the longer you leave your money in, the more money you make. Most certificate of deposit investments work one way. You put your money in, then wait for a fixed period of time to withdraw your principal. If you take your money out before the maturity date of your CD, you incur a substantial penalty for early withdrawal. The Opportunity Plus CD gives you liquidity and a guaranteed higher rate if you renew.

Money When You Need It

At Briercroft, we know there are times when you need a liquid investment. Should you need your money for an emergency, you may withdraw anytime after the first 90 days with no penalty and without giving prior notice. Even if you withdraw a portion of your principal, we will still guarantee a 1.00% rate increase on the remaining principal when you renew your certificate.

Here's How It Works

When you invest a minimum of $10,000 for one year, you can withdraw your funds as often as once every 90 days with no interest penalty. Your interest will be paid quarterly. At the end of the year, you have an option. You can either withdraw your money or, if you choose to renew for a second year, Briercroft will guarantee a 1.00% increase over your original rate of interest. If you choose to renew at the end of year two, Briercroft will guarantee another 1.00% increase over the second year rate of interest.

D&D will hear talk on potential

Stokes

The Midland Desk & Derrick Club will hear Vernon D. Stokes, executive director of Region 18 Education Service Center in Midland speak on "Achieving Your Potential."

A native of Sundown, Texas, Stokes is a graduate of Wayland Baptist University at Plainview and holds masters' and doctorate degrees from Texas Tech University. He has also completed post-graduate work at the University of Texas, North Texas State and Texas Woman's University.

He has spent 27 years in public education, teaching at all levels from elementary to college, and has had wide experience as a school administrator. Stokes has eight years experience as an education consultant, and is a frequent speaker for area and state conventions, graduation exercises and civic organizations and churches.

WTGS to hear exploration talk

Mike Grace with Schlumberger Well Services Inc. of Dallas will speak to members of West Texas Geological Society Tuesday, on the use of dipmeter analysis in the exploration of braided stream environments.

Grace says longitudinal bars deposited in braided streams form some of the more prolific hydrocarbon traps in fluvial sequences, and that the exploration and development of such systems are challenging despite the simple sand geometry involved.

The cost of the luncheon, to be held at Midland Center at 11.30 a.m., is $7. Reservations may be made by calling the WTGS at 683-1573 before noon Monday.

Accountants slate board meeting

The Permian Basin Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will hold its last board meeting for the summer Thursday, 7 p.m., in the office of newly elected president Ron Wade at E.K. Williams Co., 4500 W. Illinois. All officers and directors have been asked to attend the meeting to provide input for the upcoming year.

The first technical meeting for NAA is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 8, at Mission Country Club, and will be a session on the Tax Reform Act.

Pension fund takes writedown

DENVER (AP) — A major real estate investment pension fund manager has taken a substantial write-down on two Denver office buildings, which experts say may be just the first of many in Denver's depressed real estate market.

San Franciso-based RREEF Fund says it has taken a $100 million write-down on nine properties located in Denver, Houston, and Dallas — a write-down of roughly 40 percent of the properties' value at Dec. 31, 1986.

The two Denver properties are 400,000 square feet of office space in downtown Denver and 100,000 square feet of Englewood office space. RREEF didn't specify the value of the Denver properties, but the write-downs averaged 25 percent.

"We just felt we should be more realistic in realizing what was the bottom of the market," said John Dayton, a principal with RREEF, which has $3.1 billion in real estate under management. "We felt that our external appraisals were lagging the leasing markets."

Denver's downtown office vacancy rate was 29.5 percent in June, one of the highest in the nation, according to a survey by Coldwell Banker. At the Denver Tech Center, vacancy rates were running 21.9 percent.

Appraisers and real estate brokers said they wouldn't be surprised if other write-downs follow RREEF's move. Accountants said most property owners, however, are not required to adjust property values to current market until the property is sold. In some cases, today's market value is 50 percent below what was paid four years ago.

Oilman says prices may skyrocket

HOUSTON (SWN) — If the escalating turmoil in the Middle East leads to a shutdown of the Strait of Hormuz, oil prices will skyrocket and the United States will be subjected to an energy crisis at least as devastating as those of the 1970s, oilman George P. Mitchell warned Wednesday.

Participating in a press briefing with Mitchell was Houston economist Arved Teleki, who calculated that disruption of the Hormuz access for 90 days could drive oil prices as high as $45 to $55 per barrel. Prices would then decline, leveling off around $30, he added.

"Just a few months ago, some of our national leaders were singing the praises of cheap imported oil and ignoring the destruction of a large part of the domestic oil industry," Mitchell said. "With increased tensions in the Persian Gulf and the potential for expansion of the armed conflict, it should now be apparent to all that there is a clear and imminent danger to the nation's economic and military security."

Mitchell, who is chairman and president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., said it is imperative that our leaders in Washington recognize energy as a top-priority issue and forge a sensible policy that will increase the nation's self-sufficency. "Repeal of the windfall profit tax would be a good start," he said, noting that the tax acts as a disincentive to domestic production.

U.S. energy policy should stress the development of American natural gas as a substitute for imported oil, Mitchell added.

GAS BOOM

Oil revenue to the government peaked at $1.7 billion in 1981. Oil sales this year are projected to provide only one-third as much, about $527 million. Foreign reserves that topped $3.3 billion in 1981 shrank to $333 million last year, when Trinidad's balance of payments and budget both were uncharacteristically in deficit. The unemployment rate has crept steadily upward from about 10 percent during the oil boom to the current 17-20 percent.

Economic reforms began under the former government of Prime Minister George Chambers and have continued under Prime Minister A.N.R. Robinson, elected last December.

Chambers devalued the Trinidad and Tobago dollar by one-third in December 1985, when it was worth 42 U.S. cents. Today it is worth 28 cents.

Robinson has suspended cost-of-living allowances for many government employees, reduced subsidies and drawn up plans to divest state-owned enterprises, such as the money-losing Iron and Steel Co.

The boot-shaped island of Trinidad still is well-to-do by Third World standards. Per-capita income is $4,300. Shoppers in Port-of-Spain, the capital, are dressed fashionably, and stores are well-stocked and air-conditioned.

New buildings dot the capital and even poor neighborhoods have access to running water and electricity. Roads are abundant and well-maintained, and Trinidadians have enough cars for traffic jams to reach several miles in length at rush hour.

The economic downturn has spawned little social disorder. The biggest repercussion so far has been the voters' rejection of Prime Minister Chambers.

DALLAS (AP) — Little by little, the competition dried up.

Chromalloy Drilling Fluids Co., based in Houston, went out of business. Hughes Tool Co.'s fluids subsidiary acquired one owned by W.R. Grace & Co. Baker International Corp. took over Newpark Resources Co. Baker and Hughes themselves merged. Then Halliburton Co. and Dresser Industries Inc. combined their fluids operations in a joint venture.

Where in 1983 there were eight rivals for shares of the drilling fluids market in the United States, by 1987, there were only three.

It was a swift and drastic condensation of a business sector, but not the only one in the oil-field services industry.

"The downsizing has been tremendous," said James Crandell, an analyst with Salomon Brothers Inc. in New york. "Has it been good for the industry? Yes. It has been good for the companies specifically.

"It's bad if you want to hire them to do a job for you, but it's good if you own their stock."

Six years after domestic energy exploration activity peaked, and one year after it slumped to its all-time low, the industry is coming to terms with the new state of affairs in its business — and is beginning to flourish in it.

The well-servicing rig count tumbled from more than 4,500 in 1981 to fewer than 2,500 in 1986 and hasn't recovered. U.S. demand has been lackluster for drilling rigs, for casing and tubing, for logging and drill-stem testing, for well workover services.

In 1986 alone, the two Dallas-based giants Dresser and Halliburton cut employment by more than 24,000. Services operations at Halliburton brought in half as much money in 1986 as in 1985, and in the first quarter of this year its services and products divisions lost more than $29 million.

The five services-oriented divisions at Dresser are, by Dresser's estimate, about 50 percent of the size they were one year ago, and the company's final second-quarter sales down 17 percent from the previous uyear.

But downsizing in 1986 made a brighter 1987 possible. Schlumberger Ltd., the biggest services company in the world, reported that though second-quarter profits that were down 61 percent from the same quarter last year, every operating division enjoyed better results than in the first quarter of this year.

Stocks of service companies in general have been favorably recommended recently by securities analysts and brokers who, like John Hughes of Rotan Mosle Inc. in Houston, believe that "the ones that have survived are in a position to make money."

This year, if there is truth behind the predictions that the drilling rig count will continue to rise through the summer, "could be the low point in the cycle," said Jim Carroll of Paine Webber Inc. in New York.

"The industry went through a huge inventory liquidation last year, and the price discounting was aggressive," Carroll said. "The discounts (off peak-year 1981 prices) averaged 40 percent in 1986, and this year they are already averaging only 20 and 25 percent. There's still plenty of competition, but there are fewer competitors, and we'll see the impact in the next few years."

The scope of the competition was reduced considerably last year, when Hughes Tool and Baker International combined their resources in a stock deal valued at more than $1 billion. Also last year, Smith International Inc. filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws and has been selling off assets to competitors.

Dozens of mom-and-pop operations closed up shop.

"The trend seems to be that the big guys are getting bigger and the little guys aren't making it," Ryan said. "They just don't have the economies of scale."

Joint ventures have come increasingly into vogue. In the past two years, Dresser has entered into joint ventures with Ingersoll-Rand Co. in compressor manufacturing and drilling rigs, with Litton Industries Inc. in wireline services and with the old Hughes Tool Co. in pumping services. Halliburton and Zapata Corp. launched a joint venture in the marine fleet business.

Retail failures leading in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Local retail failures continue to accelerate and represent 43 percent of all business bankruptcies in the area for the second quarter of this year, an accounting firm survey shows.

Retail failures have risen during the most recent four quarters and remain near the record level at 186 in the second quarter, a survey released Wednesday by the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse shows. During the second quarter of 1986, 84 retail failures were reported.

"While the number of failures is increasing, most are relatively small businesses," the survey says. "Retail sales through May have improved substantially in Houston, increasing 12.4 percent over the prior year."

Real estate and contruction failures were slightly lower in the second quarter at 117 compared to 122 for the first quarter of this year, the survey showed. Eighty-three real estate and construction failures were posted in the second quarter of 1986.

The failures for the second quarter of 1987 make up 27 percent of all area bankruptcies.

In dollar terms, real estate and construction failures continue to make up the largest portion of business bankruptcies. The 10 largest business bankruptcies for the second quarter all were related to real estate.

"Much of this trend in real estate and construction failures can be attributed to the decrease in occupancy levels. Houston office vacancy rates averaged 31.3 percent during the second quarter," the survey said. Year-end 1986 statistics showed an overall vacancy rate of 29.8 percent.

The survey also showed oil and gas industry failures dropped to 10 during the second quarter, versus 45 during the same period in 1986 and 14 in the first quarter.

"This result, the best performance in two years, is attributable to the oil price increase during the past nine months coupled with the fact that companies surviving to 1987 have been the most viable competitors," the firm reported.

Only 2 percent of the failures recorded were oil- and gas-related, compared to 36 percent of all business failures five years ago.

Six percent of all failures this quarter were restaurants and 5 percent were manufacturing, the survey showed.

Analysts in the banking industry expect the high rate of failures of financial institutions to continue as bad real estate and energy loans take their toll, primarliy on the state's smaller banking facilities, the firm reported.

Through June, there have been 31 Texas financial institutions closed. For the first half of 1987, five more Texas financial institutions have failed than during all of 1986.

PCBs found in pipelines

HOUSTON (AP) — Evidence of hazardous chemicals were found at 13 of 18 of a local pipeline company's compressor sites in Pennsylvania, but technical experts say there is no immediate hazard to public health.

Polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, and other chemicals were found in groundwater below the Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. sites, a Department of Environmental Resources report said Tuesday.

Testing confirmed the presence of the chemicals at nine sites and preliminary results point to contamination at four other stations, although those results are considered inconclusive.

The report, which covers four months of investigation by the department and Houston-based Texas Eastern, cautioned that contamination may cause health risks unless the spread of the chemicals is prevented.

Texas Eastern has reported PCBs at 51 pits in 14 states, including Texas.

A company officer testified earlier this year that Texas Eastern continued to dump toxic wastes until 1984, two years after agreeing with the Environmental Protection Agency to properly dispose of the material.

PCBs were used in oil to lubricate the compressors moving natural gas through the pipelines.

Twin Cities Speedway

The ground shakes. The deafening sound makes talk impossible.

Suddenly, the red flag goes down when two cars sideswipe each other in the east turn. One veers off the track into the infield, the other slides over the track's curve toward the fence. Another car makes a 180 degree spinout to avoid being hit.

The noise level lessens as the cars slow their pace. Spectators' eyes zero in on the car sliding toward the fence. The announcer's voice blasts out a second by second description of the scene.

The car slides to a stop inches from the wooden posts set just inside the fence. Relief flows across the crowd. Fans don't want drivers hurt, but they don't want to miss the action either.

The green flag goes down, the race is on again. The new Twin Cities Speedway, west of Coors Road between Highway 80 and I-20, engages in a raceway's usual business — bringing spills, thrills and chills to racing fans.

The speedway, which is equipped with new concession stands and restroom facilities, has had overflowing crowds since its grand opening July 17. And John Foster and John David, who operate the facility and are the two major owners, are anticipating using Twin Cities Speedway for events other than racing.

"West Texas needs an outdoor entertainment center," Foster says. "The center's going to work very well for a lot of types of events.

"We have had concerts there and are in negotiations right now for some additional concerts, some chili cookoffs, tractor pulls and, in March of next year, there's a big top circus looking at our facility for an outdoor circus. Already people are seeing the advantages of a facility located between the two cities. It's going to lend itself to a lot of outdoor activities."

Foster recalls the July 10 Sawyer Brown concert.

"Right away, people started using the straightaway on the raceway as a dance floor. The weather was awfully nice. We had a cool breeze, a full moon and dancing under the stars."

Twin Cities Speedway, which is available to promoters and organizations for special events, will have a full stock car racing schedule through Oct. 17. To get to the speedway from Midland, take Highway 80 to the light at Coors Road. Turn left at the light, then right on the frontage road and follow the signs.

"We have Super Saturday coming Sept. 12, and that's when our racing activities will switch from Friday to Saturday night," David says. "We'll have all four of the classes run feature races, and then we'll have our annual National Demolition Derby. That'll be our first stock car race and demolition derby, so it's going to be quite a show. Very seldom do you get two shows like that in one evening."

The purse Sept. 12 for the races and the derby is $5,000. The reason for the switch from Friday to Saturday night is obvious to longtime West Texas residents — high school football.

Racing season will close as it opened — with the return of the Grand American Racing Tour — GART Racing Association — Oct. 17.

Temple

Winston Churchill is credited with having said, "Never give up." A good example of taking that attitude to practice in the arts community is Ballet Midland. When I started working for the Reporter-Telegram Feb. 20, 1980, the ballet had no full-time artistic director, no ballet academy and no adult company. Classes were taught, productions were staged, guest artists were brought in as well as an artistic director, who was only here on a part-time basis.

Now, the ballet is working with its second full-time artist director, Diane Gaddy, who took over when Anthony Ferro left in May.

In reflecting back on his time here, Tony talked of the distance the organization had come since he'd arrived in August 1984: "When I first came here, we were a sponsoring organization who flew in guest artists almost every show, and the dramatic difference between the guest artist and everyone else on stage was so apparent; people would come to see the guest artist and their child. Now the audience isn't just parents. We have choreographers here, performers here, students, who are coming up, are more of a balance."

"I happened to luck out — a few Midland students had studied professionally and had been in town when I arrived. I started doing a class in rehearsal in the morning, and they wanted to be involved. I pulled on them, and instead of being a student recital, all of a sudden, our productions were a little more sophisticated."

He also wanted to guide the students' training and thus Ballet Midland Academy was born. The academy began with three levels of instruction and in the past two years, has grown to include two sections of Little ballet for 3 to 5 year olds, classes for Level 1 through 5 and an Apprentice Program.

Friday marks the end of the Ballet's month long summer workshop. That night the ballet will stage a free, public performance at 7:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium on the campus of Midland College. Performing will be Ballet Midland Company and from Ballet Midland Academy, students in the Apprentice I and II Program.

The performance is an opportunity to see, at no cost but a couple hours of time, the distance marked by this organization. And, Miss Gaddy will dance the pas de deux from "La Fille Mal Gardee," partnered by James Cramer. The performance marks her first in Midland since her arrival this summer.

Season ticket brochures and brochures for Ballet Midland Academy will be available at the door. The fall semester begins on Sept. 8.

When I think of how close September is, I wonder what happened to the summer. I remember April and May and the Celebration of the Arts, then suddenly it was July and now it's August. The next time I look up, will it be time for the annual Midland Jazz Classic? That event, which brings in 20 top professional jazz players, is set for Oct. 1-4 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Dates to remember in the meantime for art auction lovers are Sept. 10, European and American paintings; Sept. 14-15, John James Audubon, "The Birds of America"; Sept. 23, art nouveau and art deco; Sept. 30, 19th and 20th century American paintings; and Oct. 1, American paintings, drawings, watercolors and sculpture of the 18th, 19th and 20th century. The place? None other than Christie's, 502 Park Ave., New York.

Although we in West Texas may have been suffering hard economic times, Christie's in New York has not. Christopher Burge, president, says, sales in 1986-87 "on this side of the Atlantic topped $300 million for the first time ever."

Listed among those sales are such items as:

— Andy Warhol's "White Car Crash 19 Times," synthetic polymer silkscreened on canvas, painted in 1963, estimate: $500,000-$700,000, sold May 5, 1987 for $660,000, a record price for a work by the artist;

— Francis Bacon, "Study for Portrait II," oil on canvas, painted in the summer of 1953, estimate $700,000-$900,000, from the collection of Baron Leon Lambert, sold May 5, 1987, for $1,760,000, a record price for this artist;

— and Jean Antoine Houdon, "A Painted Plaster Bust of Thomas Jefferson," including white marble socle, estimate: $400,000-$600,000, sold May 29, 1987, for $2.86 million, a record for any pre-20th century sculpture, any portrait bust and for a work by the artist.

In addition, the "Colossus," a violin by Antonio Stradivarius, made in 1716, sold at Christie's in London for $726,000 April 29, 1987, creating a new world record at auction for any musical instrument.

And in the world of jewels, the Pelegrina pearl of 133.20 grams sold for $467,123 May 14, 1987, breaking the world record for the highest price paid for a single pearl. The jewel, formerly in the collection of the Youssoupoff family of Russia, was the highlight of the May auction of "Magnificent Jewels," which totaled $14,581,026.

Of course, who cares about such things when they can live in the heart of FDIC country, with 100-degree weather and cicida music?

Cassidy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shaun Cassidy says he did not want to play a "typical good guy" when he was asked to make a limited appearance on ABC's daytime soap opera "General Hospital."

"They had some suggestions about the character and I had some of my own," said the singer-actor. "The character kind of evolved. I said I was eager to play someone who was not a typical good guy.

"I wanted someone darker. A kind of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' character. He's in jail when you first meet him — not because he's a criminal but because he finds it cheaper than a hotel."

Cassidy, who comes from a show business family, is best known as a singer and for the good guy roles in two series, "The Hardy Boys" and "Breaking Away." His mother is Academy Award-winning actress Shirley Jones and his father is the late Jack Cassidy. An older half-brother, David Cassidy, was a teen idol on "The Partridge Family" and brother Patrick was in "Bay City Blues." A younger brother, Ryan, is still in school.

On the top-rated "General Hospital," he plays a likable young drifter named Dusty Walker who comes to Port Charles with, in the words of an ABC press release, "trouble on his mind." Dusty has some musical talent and becomes involved with aspiring singer Terry Brock, played by Robyn Bernard.

But the big thing is that Dusty turns out to be some sort of "Manchurian Candidate."

"He gets calls from a mystery woman and she plays a melody on a cassette recorder and he goes into a trance," said Cassidy. "She sends him out on hits and he has no memory of it. The audience thinks he's killing people, but whether he actually is, even I'm not sure of. In fact, I don't know how it will end.

"Dusty is very unpredictable. One minute he's with Terry, the next minute he's Lon Chaney." (Chaney, the "man of a thousand faces," was a silent screen star who frequently played monsters. His son, Lon Chaney Jr., followed in his footsteps.)

Cassidy, who started on the soap opera in late May, originally signed for three months. But, thanks to pre-emptions for the congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra scandal, he will probably stay longer.

"If I'm going to be in it (show business) I want to do the best I can. The negative aspect is that people assume you're in it because of your family..."
— Shaun Cassidy

"They wanted me to stay another three months," he said, "but my agent had other ideas. But I probably will stay an extra three weeks to make up for the pre-emptions."

Next up on his schedule are several television films he is developing as a producer under a contract with MGM Television. He is also talking to a number of people about another series. He is also working on another record album.

"I've shied away from doing another series," he said. "Having done two, I know how they dominate your life. I'd gotten married and had children. Theater offered me more time with my family and allowed me to develop as an actor. If I do another series it'll probably be a half-hour show.

"When you do an hour show your life is built around the show. While a successful career is important to me, a successful life is more important. It's hard to have both."

His wife, Ann, is a former model, and they have two children, plus a daughter from her first marriage.

Cassidy also played a Southern law student who turned detective on a special episode of "Murder, She Wrote." There was talk of that being spun off as a series, but as yet nothing has come of it.

He said that growing up in a show business family "allowed me to see it more as a business than as a fantasy."

He added: "If I'm going to be in it I want to do the best I can. The negative aspect is that people assume you're in it because of your family. It's only after a body of work that you establish yourself. The first thing I did was 'The Hardy Boys' so I didn't have to spend much time as someone's son or brother."

Museum to hold archaelogy program for teachers

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum is sponsoring a teacher's in-service program on the science of archaeology and the Indians of Texas beginning at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

All attending will be given credit for the day-long program. Teachers throughout the Permian Basin are invited to attend and will receive credit from their school district, says Anne Sherburn, Museum director. The free program is open to all interested adults.

The program begins with registration and refreshments. Ms. Sherburn will provide an overview of the Museum facilities, upcoming exhibitions and special educational programs available to teachers through the Museum. she will also highlight the resources of the Museum's John Ben Shepperd Jr. Memorial Library.

Then, from 9:45 a.m. until noon, Eunice Barkes, curator at Midland's Museum of the Southwest, will discuss in-depth the archaeology of West Texas.

"Her lecture, richly illustrated with slides and actual artifacts, will take the participants through the rigors of an actual archaeological dig, of processing artifacts and interpreting the material remains of early Texas residents," Ms. Sherburn says.

"Ms. Barkes will show how archaeology and the thrill of discovery can be combined with science, history and even English. Participants will learn nomenclature, scientific procedures, artifact identification and ethical considerations facing archaeologists."

The program will resume at 1 p.m. with a stody of the Indians of Texas taught by John Dockall of Texas A&M University. Based on the artifacts left behind by these early residents, participants will learn about the culture, behavior and life style of the Paleo-Americans, Archaic Indians, Neo-Americans and those of the Historic Period. Dockall will explain how to read the messages in artifacts to learn about the Indians of Texas who roamed the state from about 10,000 years ago.

Included in Dockall's portion of the program will be a demonstration of flint-knapping, the process of making stone tools. He will show the technology used to make projectile points and other lithic tools needed to survive.

To register or for more information, call the Museum, 1-332-7123.

SPEEDWAY

"The last time GART was here, the association brought in 23 of the finest late model stock cars from a six-state area," Foster says.

Events such as this one, Foster says, boost the local economy.

"We had approximately 500 people from out of town following these cars, and a lot of them were here from Friday through Sunday. It was awfully nice to fill a lot of the motels up and have the racing people come to West Texas, where we can stand a little shot in our local economy."

Foster, who has loved auto racing since he was a child, began racing himself when he was 19. Since he doesn't drive "very much anymore," he finds his current position offers him the opportunity to give something back to the sport and help it grow in Texas.

David agrees. He was 10 years old when his father, Tommie "Sandy" David, managed a dirt track in Odessa.

"I never had the desire to drive a car, but I love to build them," David says. "The love for this sport for John and I both started before we were teen-agers."

Both see a need in Texas for good racing facilities.

"I think we're going to have one of the best when it's completed," Foster says. "We've already had word from Austin and San Angelo. They've been here and looked at our facility and plan to possibly pattern after ours."

"The track is very wide, and it's semi-banked," says David. "The track is three-eighths of a mile and 55-feet-wide where most of the tracks in Texas are 40-feet-wide."

Ideas for this asphalt track's design originated with Foster and David's experience with tracks across the country. Briley Construction did the actual work.

"We're only four weeks into our racing season, and we already see evidence that the track will be a two-lane race track and possibly at times a three-lane race track," says David. "The curves were worked out so that it's not overly banked, but it's banked enough to provide high speed racing."

"Down the front straightaway, we have a cement wall to catch any car before it would endanger any spectator," David says. "We have a very high wheel fence — 16-feet, and that's all the way around the racing facility. On the corners in the back straightaway, we have moved our fences back 60-feet, and the cars do have a run-off area if they have a problem."

"We had a great example the other night when Doug Pyle of Midland won the race, but then his throttle hung open," Foster says. "That's always a very dangerous situation to be in. He was able to go over the end of the track and get the car stopped just as he touched the wall. So we saved an automobile and possible injury to the driver with this design."

Other asphalt tracks in Texas include San Antonio, Austin, Corpus, Amarillo and the two-mile Texas World Speedway at College Station.

The late model stock cars have special frames, and are highly modified automobiles which can weigh in the neighborhood of 2700-2800 pounds with engines that have up to 600 horsepower, Foster says.

"They're extremely fast," he says. "There're some cars that we currently have running that it would take $30,000 to replace."

The next class is the Pro-Stock Division. Cost for a car in this division can run around $10,000.

"These cars look identical to the Grand National stock cars," Foster says. "They are modified in the frame area and the engine area. It's a class of the future, and a lot of tracks are already starting to follow this type of car."

Cars in the Street Stock Division have few modifications and cost between $1,200 and $3,000. The least expensive cars running are in the Bomber Division.

"Our bombers — that's the exciting class," David says. "These cars are basically just anything you'd bring to the race track. Take the windshield out, put a roll cage in, that's all you can do to them. They're not set up for racing, that's where the slamming and the banging comes in."

In addition to developing a new sand drag track and adding more grandstands, concession stands and parking, the owners of Twin Cities Speedway are planning a children's area, complete with swings and slides.

"Racing is a family sport," Foster says. "As we expand our facility and add the bleachers, we also have an area that we're developing for the youngsters that are not really involved in auto racing." David adds, "That way Mom and Dad can bring the entire family, and they'll be something for everyone to do."

'Lost Boys' blends horror, humor

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Salcedo

They can fly. They'll never get old or die. Wild and free, the Lost Boys are immortal. However, unlike their namesakes in "Peter Pan," this gang of street waifs in Warner Bros.' "The Lost Boys" aren't lifted up by faerie dust or the power of thinking happy thoughts. Instead, these boys — who have joined the legions of the undead — are driven by a need to feast on human blood.

The modern day Lost Boys in the black comedy "The Lost Boys" are a motorcycle gang of vampires, and their Never-Never land is a dark nether-world which alternates between blood-lust and sleep. Their leader, David (Donald Sutherland's son, Kiefer Sutherland) attempts to recruit Michael (Jason Patric) to his world of eternal youth with the same charm as Peter Pan, who attempted to recruit the children in the Darling nursery to his world of unsupervised, eternal youth.

Except that in "The Lost Boys," the gleefulness of children "getting away" with being children is exchanged for the grimness of a world where death goes unnoticed almost as easily as missing children.

The plot involves a divorcee, Lucy (Diane Wiest), who packs up her two sons living with her in Phoenix and moves in with her eccentric father in the fictitious California town of Santa Carla. The twist is that Santa Carla, a modern-day big city horror — complete with street people, posters of missing children and adults, and indifference — is a haven for vampires.

Corey Haim plays Sam, the enormously appealing younger brother of Michael, whose earnest acting nearly pulls off the intriguing concept of dressing realism with humor, slyness and fantasy — a concept which would put the audience through an emotional wringer akin to a roller coaster ride making them wonder whether they should laugh or scream. Although the "tall order" of successfully blending humor with horror worked exceptionally well in "An American Werewolf in London," "The Lost Boys" is a black comedy heavy on the humor and light on the horror, which may be just what the general audience of today demands.

A sort of "Goonies" meets "Dracula," "The Lost Boys" succeeds in being a contemporary comedy which laughs at the very same genre it embraces. By instilling the characters with a matter-of-fact response to the unnatural world of the suburban undead where bathtubs are filled with holy water and vampire exterminators consist of two avid comicbook fans known as the "Frog Brothers," the opportunities for chuckles are rife, and richly used.

Haim is perfectly cast, and Sutherland has a smirk to rival Billy Idol. The apt direction and haunting photography has enough sense of irony to portray the evil David in an angelic manner by flooding his pale skin and platinum locks with light. There are also some clever special effects involving vampires hanging by their feet and mist rising from a cliff's edge.

There are also enough one-liners to stock a sit-com for weeks. Unfortunately, "The Lost Boys," which gains speed toward the end, plummets into the same sort of silliness during the climatic scene that is expected of "The Brady Bunch"

Though horror buffs may scoff, "The Lost Boys" manages to be surprisingly light on gore, long on fun, and adventurous as any Spielberg romp. If you can go without expecting to be frightened, prepared to enjoy satiric humor, and if Captain Hook was your favorite character in "Peter Pan," then you'll probably love "The Lost Boys."

"The Lost Boys," rated R for violence, soft-focus nudity and language, is playing at North Park Cinemas.

Dalton brings suave freshness to Bond role

He's dashing, he's debonair. Whether skydiving or posing in a tuxedo, his presence is riveting. He's "Bond...James Bond." Timothy Dalton plays the latest Bond, the British adventurer out to save the world from spies and counterspies. This Bond is definitely a man of relentless action in a film where the word "action" is an understatement.

From the opening moments of skydivers involved in war games gone awry, the film employs stunts to rival the man-dragged-behind-the-truck scene in "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

"The Living Daylights," the 16th film based on the spy created by novelist Ian Fleming, has a dazzlingly energetic and engrossing plot with enough global juggernauts to keep traditionalists happy.

Dalton brings a certain roguish interpretation (not unlike Harrison Ford's Indiana Jones) to the role of Bond. And the big surprise is that Bond is presented as monogamous for the first time.

The plot is awash with honest and dishonest KGB agents, an American renegade arms dealer (no, not Ollie) and Afghan freedom fighters. Opium and arms deals are mixed-in, giving "The Living Daylights" a modern-day touch.

Maryam D'Abo plays Bond's lush Czech damsel, Kara Milovy, and travels with him to breathtaking locales. The scenery includes the snow-covered slopes of Austria, a desert chase in Afghanistan and an outdoor Viennese waltz being performed in Vienna.

Although the fast-paced film contains the usual high-tech trappings of gadetry and weapons, the machinery doesn't overwhelm the people. Director John Glen highlights the people, a real plus. But the film primarily works because Dalton brings a suave freshness that the Bond series has lately been lacking. He also adds more thoughtfulness and emotion than the role may require, but it works.

Unfortunately, there are few dramatic highs or lows, merely the endless string of crises that help to keep Bond in business. The pace can be tiring, and one shoot-out in Afghanistan was way too long.

Quibbling aside, "The Living Daylights" is entertaining despite its small problems of being plot heavy, overly long, and having a title that is a mystery.

Archaeology exhibit displayed at Presidential Museum

ODESSA — On display through Sept. 5 at the Presidential Museum is the traveling exhibit "Archaeology of Texas," which is produced by The University of Texas Institute of Texan Culturesat San Antonio.

The exhibit explores how archaeological research helps Texans gain an understanding of the state's first inhabitants.

"Texas history and material culture have been revealed and studied through various sites around the state," says Anne Sherburn, the museum's director. "For example, dark stains in the soil indicate...hearths and so describe the settlement patterns of early Texans. Stone tools and pottery detail the trade routes, diet and artistic development of those living in the Neo-American Period."

Through artifacts loaned from Midland's Museum of the Southwest, the pre-history of Ector County and West Texas is documented. From the early spear points produced by Paleo-Americans over 10,000 years ago, to finely crafted bone musical instruments, the lifestyle of Ector County residents is revealed. Complementing the artifacts, are photographs of pictographs and rock art found in Ector County.

In addition to learning about early man through the artifacts he left behind, the exhibit explains the science of archaeology. Field techniques are detailed, excavation procedures are highlighted and laboratory processes are explained throughout the exhibition. The importance of preserving the artifacts and archaeological record is emphasized.

The Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. No admission is charged.

DALLAS (AP) — People went ape over Kanda the Gorilla's human-like skills of walking tall and picking football winners, but the primate is now winning raves at a Colorado zoo for his ability to act like an animal.

"He caught on very quickly," said Karen Murray, marketing and development director at Cheyenne Mountain Zoo in Colorado Springs. "He has shifted his need for human attention to attention from other gorillas."

In 1983, the gorilla's repeated success at predicting the winners of professional football games won him several appearances on national television.

He was sent to the Colorado Springs zoo last January to learn more about being an ape.

Officials there said that after six months of training, Kanda is at the head of the class.

However, Kanda has yet to learn the most important lessons — those about the birds, bees and gorillas. Zoo officials hope the animal, part of an endangered species, ultimately will learn enough to breed.

"When he reaches the age of 11 (and sexual maturity), and if he knows he is a gorilla, then we can send him to another zoological institution to breed," said Gerry Brady, general curator of Cheyenne Mountain Zoo.

The zoo, however, has limited human contact.

"The keepers just love him," Brady said, "but we have to warn them to keep their distance."

Today, Kanda is walking more like a gorilla and exhibiting their communication and grooming tendencies, Brady said.

Yet he remains torn between the gorilla contact in which he has been immersed and the human contact with which he grew up, Brady said.

"He still looks a little bit like a kid who isn't quite sure he fits in," said Bill Aston, vice president of the Dallas Zoological Society.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Spend more time with the people you have missed and your life will become more well-rounded. Your new sense of balance will improve your business and personal relationships. Plan ahead and be organized. Include all family members in a financial discussion. Others should not expect you to always bail them out. Learn to say "no" more often.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It is time for you to look to the future. Check out long-term investments. You may want to buy a home or other real estate. You can get a lot done today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are attracted to people who show emotional maturity. Capricorns are especially lucky for you! You need to attend a meeting with a clear head and a specific plan. Do your homework.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make this a day for digging out the facts and you could end up with a gold mine of information. Big bucks lie ahead! Consider the side effects of changing jobs now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to reveal your plans and get on with your life. Give parents a break. Keeping secrets will only cause you and them unnecessary stress. Do something about a faltering relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you need advice, go to someone who has had wide experience. Expert counsel is worth the expense. It is time to take care of those details you have been trying to avoid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on straightening out the communication problems between you and another. You do not have to put up with someone who tries to tell you how to live your life. Romance soars.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do everything possible to get a personal relationship back on track. Business prospects improve, thanks to new clients and alliances. Obtaining cooperation and support is the key to your success. Repay all favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good time to handle distant affairs. Use your energy in constructive ways. Ignore the advice of well-intentioned friends or relatives. Impulsive buying can wreck your budget. Exercise more self-control.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hold back on a project you are keen to get underway. You need to do more work on it before seeking financial backing from key people. Loved one could be in a forgetful mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business matters should go smoothly. Better keep your savings in the bank if a friend approaches you with a get-rich-quick scheme. A loan comes through for a college-bound teen-ager.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Evaluate current spending patterns and revise your budget to allow for new essentials. The more you rely on yourself, the better things will go for you. Seek the company of close friends tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money should be a good deal easier to come by now. Use tact when discussing what appears to be a touchy marital problem. Exercising self-discipline will boost productivity. Limit social engagements.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	3 ♠	Pass
4 S	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠

Here's an opportunity to test your skill as declarer. Cover the East-West hands and decide how you would play four spades after West overcalls your one spade opening bid with two hearts, then leads a trump.

You have stretched a little in the auction to get to game. After the overcall, your partner should have devalued his flat holding with no intermediate cards and settled for a quiet two spades instead of a limit raise. And you might have discounted the worth of your king of hearts. With a full opening bid, however, it would have been cowardly to refuse partner's invitation.

With West marked with the king of diamonds and ace of clubs for his vulnerable overcall, you can claim your contract if diamonds are 3-3, if the jack comes down on the second round or if you choose to finesse East for the jack. Win the trump lead in hand and lead a low diamond. West can do no better than take the king and exit with another trump. Again win in hand, and this time lead a low club. West must play low, otherwise he sets up a club for a heart discard. After the king of clubs wins, cash the queen of diamonds and continue with a diamond.

Assuming you pick up the jack of diamonds, you are home. On the ten of diamonds you discard a club from dummy, then lead the queen of clubs. West wins the ace, but he is end played. Another club will allow you to ruff in dummy while you discard a heart from hand, which limits your heart losers to one. And a heart lead from West sets up your king of hearts for the same result.

Either way, you lose only one trick in each side suit. Poor West has been penalized for doing no more than making an overcall.

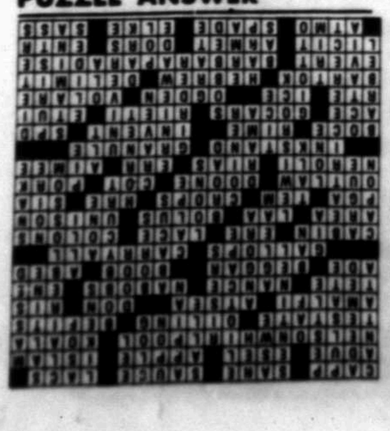
PUZZLE ANSWER



Grocer's vegetables getting fancier

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The carrots look cuter and the broccoli fancier in some supermarkets these days.

A new breed of young, upscale shopper is demanding less meat and more offbeat, attractive and upscale foods such as mangoes and avocados, forcing retailers to make fundamental changes in what they sell, experts said last week.

"In the past 10 years we've gone from an average of 85 produce items in stores to an average of 250. In some stores, it's 400...," said John Allen, a professor of food marketing at Michigan State University.

Allen said demand for the exotic has opened doors to such items as Oriental celeries and endless varieties of lettuce.

Staples such as potatoes and carrots are being sold in miniature versions because many shoppers find them more attractive and identify them with the small vegetables they see in finer restaurants, experts said.

Monroe not just person, she's legend, writer says

By LINDA DEUTSCH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On Crypt 33 at the tiny cemetery, a scribbled note tucked in a vase of flowers is scrutinized by a passing tourist. The simple, anonymous message is read aloud: "Marilyn, we understand."

Every day, flowers arrive and a caravan of cars glide past the last resting place of Hollywood's lost goddess, Marilyn Monroe, at Westwood Memorial Park.

It is 25 years this summer since her breathy half-whisper was hushed forever by what was termed a probable suicide. The story of the tragic beauty with the porcelain skin who became one of Hollywood's biggest legends ended at the age of 36 on Aug. 5, 1962.

But today Marilyn's image is more vibrantly alive than ever.

"Marilyn Monroe is bigger than she ever was in her lifetime," says Randall Reise, co-author with Neal Hitchens of a new book, "The Unabridged Marilyn: Her Life from A to Z."

After her death, she became one of the most talked about and imitated stars — the rock singer Madonna has copied Marilyn's blond, sex kitten look. A musical biography even hit Broadway in 1983, but flopped.

BUT NOWHERE is her impact more evident than in this fabled town where she chased fame as young Norma Jeane Mortenson and found her dreams lined with heartbreak.

Amid the bright neon and garish billboards of Hollywood Boulevard, her face and form decorate storefronts, theater facades and brochures advertising the wonders of movieland.

Bookstore shelves overflow with new volumes analyzing the Monroe legend, and souvenir shops offer cologne, pillows, sheets, towels and even toothpicks. Hundreds of fans recently flocked to the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel where an exhibition of Marilyn memorabilia and photos drew some who knew her and many who wished they had.

In the courtyard of Mann's Chinese Theater, with its famed celebrity handprints and footprints, visitors head directly for the spot where Marilyn made her concrete impressions. It was 1953, right after "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" solidified her standing as an authentic star. She appeared in 30 movies. But by the time she was fired from her last, "Something's Got to Give," right before her death, her career had plunged.

Miss Monroe's beginnings were humble. She was born out of wedlock in Los Angeles County General Hospital to Gladys Baker, a movie cutter. Her father was a Danish immigrant named Edward Mortenson. Her mother had a nervous breakdown shortly after she was born and remained in and out of institutions.

Marilyn was shunted from one foster home to another, occasionally the victim of child abuse. She married an aircraft worker named James Dougherty at the age of 16 and they divorced after the war.

She was an extremely attractive and sexy young woman. A photographer spotted her at the war plant where she worked and took pictures which led to a modeling career and eventually her first movie, "Scudda Hoo, Scudda Hay."

THE MONROE hype became one of the greatest in Hollywood history. But with childlessness, failed love affairs and marriages — to baseball great Joe DiMaggio and the playwright Arthur Miller — fame did not bring happiness.

"Everybody is always tugging at you," she once said about fame. "They'd all like sort of a chunk of you. They kind of like to take pieces of you."

Tributes to the late star never stop at the hidden cemetery where she is buried.

"They come from all over the world to see her. Some of them can barely pronounce her name," says Bill Pierce, whose family owns and operates Westwood Memorial Park.

On Aug. 5, a fan club called "Marilyn Remembered" plans a ceremony in the small chapel on the cemetery grounds. Pierce expects some familiar faces who have come over the years to pay tribute and touch the marble slab of her crypt.

"There's one guy who comes from Germany once a year," he says. "He comes and stands in front of the crypt for an hour or two every day that he's here."

A young woman used to kiss the crypt, leaving lipstick prints. But Pierce stopped the practice because the lipstick was being absorbed by the marble.

MISS MONROE'S former husband, Joe DiMaggio, daily sent roses for the first 20 years, then stopped. But the flowers didn't.

"An order comes in once a month from a man in the Midwest for a dozen white roses," says Pierce. Others bring them in person.

"People leave flowers and plants. Sometimes they put a note on the crypt saying things like, 'Marilyn I love you. I'll always remember you.'

"You know, there are a lot of other top celebrities who have passed away, and they don't get the same notoriety."

Looking for reasons for Marilyn Monroe's enduring legend is akin to searching for the real story behind her death. Everyone has a theory.

"There's something deeply touching about her," says author Reise. "There was this fragility about her that made people care. Here was this little orphan girl who had nothing and proved that in Hollywood anything can happen."

"There's just something about her," says Janice Ogata, a clerk at Hollywood Book City who sells and collects Marilyn books. "She died one year and three months before I was born. But I find her fascinating. She strikes me as a woman caught up in circumstances she couldn't control."

IN HER book, "Marilyn," Gloria Steinem writes: "One simple reason for her life story's endurance is the premature end of it...When the past dies, there is mourning, but when the future dies our imaginations are compelled to carry it on."

But there is something else — the mystery surrounding her untimely death from a barbituate overdose.

Ten years after her nude body was found sprawled on a bed in her Brentwood home, Milo Speriglio, a private detective, was hired to look into the case. The colorful director of the Nick Harris Detective Agency, accepted the mission from Robert Slatzer, who claims to have been briefly married to Miss Monroe.

"The first thing I noticed was the autopsy," Speriglio said. "It didn't look like a suicide to me."

In succeeding years, Speriglio's probe led to the opening of police files on the death and calls for a grand jury investigation. The FBI had kept a file on Miss Monroe because she had been friendly with President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. A censored version of the file was turned over to the district attorney's office, which concluded her death was either a suicide or accidental and there was no need for further investigation.

"I know she was murdered," said Speriglio. "She was murdered by organized crime. She was put away by people in the government and organized crime." He published his theory in the book, "The Marilyn Conspiracy."

Speriglio, who is planning a movie and another book on Miss Monroe, says that because of official unwillingness to look more closely, the true story of her death will forever remain a mystery.

Did Anderson live fairy tale life?

By ARTHUR MAX

SLAGELSE, Denmark (AP) — The son of a shoemaker and a washerwoman is born in poverty, so ugly that he has no friends. But he is watched by a guardian angel and grows up to become wealthy and famous. It turns out that he is really the child of a king.

A fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen? Perhaps not.

New research supports the theory that this was the secret, real-life story of Andersen, creator of "The Ugly Duckling," "The Emperor's New Clothes" and other tales.

Historian Jens Jorgensen said the writer, who died in 1875 at the age of 70, was probably the illegitimate child of Denmark's crown prince and later king, Christian VIII, and a Danish aristocrat, Elise Ahlefeldt Laurvig.

The secret lovers were unable to wed because the prince's marriage had to be reserved for a political alliance. So the child was given into the care of a housekeeper, "a fallen woman" who already had one daughter out of wedlock, Jorgensen said.

Andersen's biographers have long distrusted the author's own accounts of a lowly birth. Elias Bredsdorff wrote in a 1975 biography: "Much of what he told about his family background was pure fiction."

Jorgensen has assembled circumstantial evidence that he says explains many of the anomalies of Andersen's life. A book setting out his case is scheduled for publication in Denmark in October.

He said he started his search in the records of the Slagelse high school, which Anderson attended from 1822 to 1826 and where Jorgensen is now principal.

...(Jens) Jorgensen said the real moral of the story ("The Ugly Duckling") is that "it doesn't matter that you are born in a duck pond if you are hatched from a swan's egg."

Looking through musty records, Jorgensen found that Andersen paid more than twice as much as other students to attend the school, and he traced the tuition to the royal family. Yet Andersen's name never appears on the rolls.

"To enroll you had to show a birth certificate. But he didn't have one," said Jorgensen, who also writes children's stories.

He said Andersen's only existing birth certificate was issued in 1823, when he was 17 years old.

The biographers say Andersen was born April 2, 1805, two months after his parents were married. His father, shoemaker Hans Andersen, was then 22, and his mother, Anna Maria Andersdotter, was nearly 40.

Andersen claimed to have been born in Odense, but Jorgensen has pieced together another story more fitting Andersen's world of make-believe.

He said he believes Andersen was actually born in the castle of Broholm, where oral tradition says an illegitimate son of Prince Christian was born on April 2 "and was given to good people."

The baroness of the castle, Edel Marie Kjier, was close friends with the 17-year-old Elise Ahlefeldt Laurvig, who was known to have been pregnant around that time, he said.

Records show that a woman with the same name as Andersen's mother, Anna Marie Andersdotter, was a housekeeper for the baroness's parents. All traces of the housekeeper are lost after 1805, Jorgensen said.

He said Andersen clearly had royal patronage from an early age. When he was about 5 he started making regular visits to the castle in Odense, where he played with Christian's son Frederik.

The cobbler's son had the quiet help of the royal family for many years afterwards. Though he showed no talent as an actor or singer, he was employed by the Royal Theater in Copenhagen for three years.

Jorgensen said he found letters from the period when Andersen attended school in which townspeople expressed wonder at Prince Christian's frequent visits to Slagelse, then a quiet town of 5,000.

He said that many of the sources he drew on have been previously available, but the idea of Andersen's noble birth was too incredible to believe. "No one was ready to draw the conclusions," he said.

Andersen wrote that "The Ugly Duckling" was a story about himself, but most believed he was talking about his ungainly appearance.

But Jorgensen said the real moral of the story is that "it doesn't matter that you are born in a duck pond if you are hatched from a swan's egg."
