Broker: 'Easy days are over'

Markets continued to retreat Friday amid continued concern and frustration that the economy was not going to rebound anytime soon.

Unemployment jumped to 4.9 percent in August, a four-year high and the Dow Jones industrial average lost 235 points Friday. In two weeks, the Dow has lost 8 percent and the Standard & Poors 500 has fallen to a three-year low.

"For the first time, investors are going 'whoa'," said Tim Bryson, a local broker.

Unemployment rate jumps

WASHINGTON — For the past year, the optimism and free spending of American consumers have kept the nation, and maybe even the world, out of a recession.

Consumers drew their confidence from a job market that was remarkably healthy — until Friday.

The Labor Department reported the unemployment rate jumped to 4.9 percent in August from 4.5 percent in July, and now stands at its highest level in nearly four years. Payrolls plunged by 113,000 jobs.

"That is a big increase" in the jobless rate, said Katharine G. Abraham, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "You have to go way back into the 1980s to find a number that was quite that large."

President Bush made an unscheduled appearance at the White House to assure Americans that "we intend to do something about" rising unemployment.

Chevron, Texaco win FTC blessing on plan to merge

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

One of the last major hurdles by the proposed merger of Chevron Corp. and Texaco Inc. was cleared Friday when the Federal Trade Commission approved a consent order allowing the two companies to complete their merger.

Chevron

■ Shareholders of Chevron and Texaco vote on the merger Oct. 9 in Houston.
■ If shareholder approval is received, ChevronTexaco will begin operations Oct. 10.
■ Midland will be headquarters to the ChevronTexaco Permian Business Unit, one of seven the company will operate in North America.
■ The Permian Business Unit will be headed by Alan Kleier.

"The next step is the stockholders meeting Oct. 9," said Judy Stiranka, a spokeswoman for Texaco. "Until then, we're still separate companies."

Until Oct. 9, she said, the two companies act as competitors even though they've been working together through their CalTex joint venture launched 65 years ago, refining and marketing to Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

FTC approval was the first significant step since the planned merger was announced this past October, she said, but stockholder approval will be the final and most significant step.

The stockholders of both companies will meet in Houston Oct. 9 to vote on the merger and Ms. Stiranka said she anticipates no problem receiving approval of the merger. Once that approval is documented and formally approved, the new ChevronTexaco will begin business Oct. 10, she said, with stock trading under the new symbol CVX.

While it is too soon to know how the merger will affect the 278 Chevron employees and 660 Texaco employees in the Permian Basin, ChevronTexaco plans to establish a Permian Business Unit, headquartered in Midland, as one of its seven in its North America upstream operations. The Permian Busi-

Madrid gets 25-year sentence, to be eligible for parole in 2014

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Juan Bautista Madrid is headed to prison after a jury Friday sentenced him to 25 years of incarceration on a first-degree murder conviction.

The 25-year sentence makes him eligible for parole in 2014.

Madrid, 42, pleaded guilty Wednesday to murdering his wife in May of 1996. Taking the stand Thursday, Madrid admitted stabbing his wife twice after using cocaine with friends.

The first-degree offense meant he could have been sentenced up to 99 years in prison. Jurors said in their statement, read by 142nd District Judge Jody Gilles, they did not believe Madrid killed his wife, Yvonne "Jill" Madrid, in the heat of a "sudden passion."

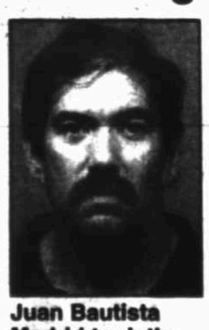
If the jury had found the murder to have been the result of a rising sudden passion in Madrid, the count could have been reduced to second-degree murder.

As Gilles read the sentence, family members of the defendant and Ms. Madrid showed little or no emotion.

Michael McLeaish, Madrid's defense attorney, said he believed there was no clear winning side in this case.

"You're never satisfied to see one of your clients go to prison. I would not say that anybody won this case," McLeaish said.

McLeaish said Madrid, who showed no emotion during the sentencing, knew what was coming, especially after he admitted stabbing Ms. Madrid.



Juan Bautista Madrid took the stand Thursday and admitted to stabbing his wife twice.

"He's accepting the verdict," McLeaish said. "He knows he owes a debt for what he's done."

The family on Ms. Madrid's side of the courtroom declined comment, but released a written statement.

"We would like to express our appreciation for the law enforcement agencies involved in this case, especially (Midland police detective) Kay Thurwhanger. We are also grateful to see that despite an extensive lapse in time, justice was served," the family said in the prepared statement.

District Attorney Al Schorre, who prosecuted the case, said the family refused the defense's original plea agreement of 20 years in prison. Early Friday, Schorre said the defense came back asking for a 30-year plea.

"We had hoped to get a higher sentence. I had anticipated it would be substantially higher than 25. We had requested 60 from the jury in my closing arguments," Schorre said. (The family) did not want to go for a 20-year sentence. Going through a trial like this just opens up old wounds."

After sentencing at about 4 p.m., Schorre requested a victim impact

Bush says his plan will revive economy

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush gave anxious Republican leaders an emergency Oval Office audience on Friday and then sought to reassure the nation he has a plan for tackling unemployment and protecting Social Security.

"We've got a plan to get our economy moving so Americans can find work," the president said. Privately he considered calling for across-the-board budget cuts next year if the economy worsens and spending starts eating into Social Security reserves.

The president spoke from outside the Oval Office, where he and Vice President Dick Cheney had just finished meeting with House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., and Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., to discuss the economy, rising unemployment and the Republicans' political predicament over Social Security.

The last-minute huddle was called after Bush's budget director, Mitch Daniels, gave lawmakers on Capitol Hill the worrisome news that, by the end of the month, the government could be dipping into Social Security reserves. That stoked Republican fears that Democrats could, in next year's elections, accuse the GOP of jeopardizing Social Security.

Daniels' update came on the heels of a Labor Department report Friday morning that the nation's unemployment rate soared to 4.9 percent in August, the biggest one-month jump in six years.

GOP leaders, with an eye on next year's midterm elections, see trouble if the economy worsens.

"The slowdown is real and it's affecting too many lives and we're concerned about it," said Bush.

He stopped short of announcing any agreement on spending cuts and abruptly turned away from news cameras as reporters tried to ask him about the developing deal.

AP Photo
President Bush, center, smiles back to reporters as he walks back to the Oval Office with, from left to right, Vice President Dick Cheney, Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R- Miss. and Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., after making a statement about the budget at the White House Friday.

Hastert, as he headed to the White House, told The Associated Press: "We said we wouldn't dip into Social Security, and we want to make sure it happens."

The four leaders, who had spent the week talking with lawmakers just returned from their August recess, hoped to reassure Americans that Republicans have a plan to revive the economy and work within a balanced budget that shelters the Social Security trust fund.

"Any American out of work is too many Americans out of work and that's why it's absolutely essential that we work together to put a growth plan in place to create jobs for hardworking Americans," Bush said.

"It starts by having a responsible budget that meets our nation's obligations without affecting Social Security or dipping into Social Security."

Already, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle had seized on the unemployment figures as fresh ammunition against Bush. "Today's news confirms our worst fears about the president's budget and its impact on the economy and on working families," Daschle, D-S.D., said in a statement.

Bush countered that such critics of the tax cut he signed earlier this year must want now to raise taxes, something he ruled out. Flanked by Cheney, Lott and Hastert, Bush said: "I can assure you the four of us on this stage are not going to let anybody pick the pockets of the American taxpayers."

Democrats said they had said nothing about raising taxes, that Bush was the only one bringing up the subject.

Advisers said Bush was seriously considering the GOP proposal to create a new mechanism in the law for triggering automatic across-the-board government spending cuts should a worsening economy force lawmakers to turn to Social Security surpluses to meet the general federal budget. Officials looking to blunt the unemployment news had hoped for an agreement to be announced Friday, but said details were still being worked out and an agreement was uncertain.

The officials, in Congress and the administration, spoke about the developing deal on condition of anonymity.

Historically, automatic, broadly applied spending cut proposals have received scant support from many Democrats and some Republicans because they would affect so many areas of government.

Also, such plans have usually been riddled with exceptions.

Earlier Friday, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said Bush was open to the across-the-board spending cuts proposed by Hastert and other GOP lawmakers concerned about threats to Social Security.

House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri emerged from a morning meeting with Bush pleased by the president's assurances.

The two met one day after Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, the top Republican on the Senate Budget Committee for the past two decades, said that with the economy slowing and overall federal surpluses dipping, it might be time to use some of the Social Security funds to pay for other programs.

Gephardt told reporters after speaking with the president: "I'm happy to note that he doesn't seem to agree with Mr. Domenici and (Rep.) Tom Davis, who today were quoted as saying they we needed to go in and start spending Social Security and Medicare trust funds."

Gephardt also disputed the White House formulation, spoken several times by Bush and his aides in recent days, that Democrats critical of his tax cut really mean to raise taxes.

"I don't know where he gets that. He's — best I can figure out — making it up," Gephardt said. "I haven't said that, and I don't know of other Democrats who have said that. What we are for is a more balanced budget."

Analysts say that using a small part of Social Security's surplus — which is expected to exceed $170 billion next year — would not damage the program's solvency, or have any effect on its ability to pay benefits.

Michael Jackson celebrates career with star-studded concert

NEW YORK (AP) — A who's who of the entertainment industry showed up Friday night to honor Michael Jackson and celebrate the 30th anniversary of his solo career.

The concert began nearly an hour late as Jackson — dressed in a white spangled jacket — was escorted to his seat with Elizabeth Taylor. Sitting next to him was Macaulay Culkin, and Jackson's parents, Katherine and Joseph.

The show got off to a rousing start with a dance-packed performance by Usher, Maya and Whitney Houston, doing "Wanna Be Startin' Somethin'" from Jackson's 1982 megahit album "Thriller."

But only moments later, it took a bizarre turn when Marlon Brando appeared onstage sitting on a couch. He rambled for a couple minutes about child abuse, starvation and disease.

People started to boo until Brando mentioned Jackson's name and said that Jackson was donating money to build a children's hospital in Florida.

The evening got back on track quickly with Billy Gilman's performance of another Jackson hit, "Ben."

Liza Minnelli sang Jackson's "You Are Not Alone" backed by a choir — then serenaded Jackson with "Over The Rainbow," the signature classic of her mother, Judy Garland.

The crowd grew restless at times during long lulls between performances. But fans erupted in cheers and jumped out of their seats when Jackson joined his brothers to sing a medley of their old hits.

Michael Jackson arrives with Elizabeth Taylor for Jackson's "30th Anniversary Celebration, The Solo Years" concert at New York's Madison Square Garden, Friday.

On Thursday night, Jackson stole the show at the MTV Video Music Awards by appearing briefly onstage with 'N Sync. And on Friday night, 'N Sync joined the Jacksons and performed.

The first of two heavily hyped concerts in Madison Square Garden had other scheduled appearances or performances by Gladys Knight, Eminem, Destiny's Child, Yoko Ono, Jill Scott, Alicia Keys, Shaquille O'Neal, Chris Tucker and Samuel L. Jackson.

"Michael doesn't do nothing small," said Rodney Jerkins, who produced much of Jackson's upcoming album, "Invincible."

Tickets for Jackson's show, which CBS intends to air, ranged from $45 to $2,500, and promoters said most sold within hours.

For those with $20,000 or more to spend, there was an after-hours party with Jackson.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Cops seek serial shoe sniffer

PITTSBURGH — Four well-heeled women have complained to police that a middle-aged man accosted them, removed their footwear and sniffed the shoes.

One women said the man complimented her footwear as she entered an office elevator on Thursday and asked if he could take a shoe. When she refused, the man bent down and removed it anyway, then sniffed it "like it was a bouquet of flowers."

The same day, Patty Cohen, 42, said a man kicked the back of her heel and knocked off her shoe on the street. After apologizing, he grabbed her shoe and smelled it.

"I lunged at him and said, 'Give me my shoe. What do you think you are doing, you weirdo?'" Cohen said. The man smiled and left.

A man of a similar description also accosted one women about two weeks ago and another in June, police said.

■ Denorex maker settles lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO — The maker of Denorex dandruff shampoo has settled a civil lawsuit that claimed the product had too much coal tar, a potential cancer causing substance.

Whitehall-Robins agreed to a payment of $427,500 and to lower the coal-tar content of the shampoo by 72 percent.

"We are going to formulate a new product," Whitehall-Robins spokesman Fran Sullivan said. "It will be out nationwide by mid-December." The company is a subsidiary of American Home Products.

The lawsuit was brought by Occupational Knowledge International, a nonprofit organization that has similar lawsuits pending against 20 other manufacturers of coal-tar shampoos. The lawsuits are based on a successful California ballot proposition.

"Proposition 65, which was passed by voter initiative in the late 1980s, meant that anyone exposing others to a carcinogen must notify them," said Perry Gottesfeld, executive director of San Francisco-based Occupational Knowledge International.

The other lawsuits include manufacturers such as Johnson & Johnson subsidiary Neutrogena, which makes T/gel, and Reedco, which manufactures Tegrin. Those cases are scheduled for trial in January.

Gottesfeld said he filed the lawsuits in January 1999, and the California Attorney General's Office joined shortly afterward.

■ Jaguar recalls 45,000 cars

WASHINGTON — Jaguar North America is recalling 45,000 vehicles that may not meet federal clean air emission standards due to a malfunction of the exhaust recirculation valve.

The recall covers 1995-1997 models of the XJ6, XJR and the Van den Plas and the 1995-1996 models of the Jaguar XJS, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

EPA requested the recall after testing officials found the malfunction at a lab in Ann Arbor, Mich. The agency said the fault could increase emissions of nitrogen oxides, major contributors to ground-level smog, which can trigger asthma and other respiratory problems.

The recirculation valve is used in cars to lower the temperature of engine combustion to prevent nitrogen oxide formation.

EPA said the malfunctioning valve also may cause the car to run roughly.

Jaguar has agreed to install a new valve and a new computer chip to control it, the EPA said.

Rich and poor in Appalachia:

Geography makes difference as old coal counties suffer

By Nancy Zuckerbrod
Associated Press

The city of Harlan, Ky., is shown just before sunset in this file photo. Forsyth County in Georgia and Harlan County in Kentucky are both in Appalachia, but that's about all they have in common. In Forsyth, the growth is booming, but in Harlan the population is dwindling.

WASHINGTON — Forsyth County in Georgia and Harlan County in Kentucky are both in Appalachia, but that's about all they have in common.

In Forsyth, near Atlanta, the growth is so explosive that schools can't be built fast enough. But in Harlan, along the Virginia border, schools are closing as the population dwindles.

Throughout Appalachia, areas near growing cities are booming, while more remote areas continue to battle poverty and lose residents.

"Appalachia has gone from a region of almost uniform distress to one of contrasts," said Jesse White, who heads the federal Appalachian Regional Commission.

Appalachia runs along the spine of the Appalachian Mountains from southern New York to northern Mississippi. A 1964 presidential report described the 13-state region as one "set apart, geographically and statistically," from the rest of the country.

A year later, the government created the Appalachian Regional Commission. The commission has brought in billions of federal dollars for highways, economic development, health care and education. The result has been a big reduction in the number of counties classified as distressed: 219 in 1960 to 114 now.

"We're halfway home, but we still have a long way to go," commission spokesman Mike Kiernan said.

The commission recently released figures showing the 406-county region experienced a 9.1 percent increase in its population in the 1990s, up from a 1.6 percent increase in the 1980s. But the growth has not been uniform.

The most dramatic change has occurred in the South. Thanks to new roadways and other infrastructure improvements, many formerly rural, poor counties have turned into burgeoning bedroom communities for cities like Birmingham, Ala.; Greensboro-Winston-Salem, N.C.; Greenville, S.C., and Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn.

Nowhere is the growth more striking than in north Georgia, which had nine of the 10 fastest-growing counties in Appalachia during the 1990s. Forsyth County's population grew 123 percent, to 98,407.

"The main thing that has changed is now this area is accessible. Before this was rural. There were just two lane roads," said Sen. Zell Miller, D-Ga., who grew up in the mountain community Young Harris.

Miller said that isolation forced people to leave the region, rather than flock to it the way they are today.

"The people back then had to go elsewhere to find jobs," he said. "There was not any work here."

Such stories about north Georgia's past sound a lot like present-day Harlan County. Its population dropped 9 percent, from 36,574 to 33,202, in the last decade. The area, famous for a 1970s miners' strike that was the subject of the Oscar-winning film "Harlan County, U.S.A.," has struggled as coal mining jobs have disappeared.

"The real areas of distress are eastern Kentucky, a good deal of West Virginia, southwestern Virginia and southern Ohio, and the common denominator really is coal," White said, adding that Appalachia lost roughly half its coal jobs between 1987 and 1997.

Geography also is a problem for many of those areas.

"Typically these core coal counties are in topography that's characterized by extremely steep mountains and hills and very narrow valleys, which are in flood plains," said Ewell Balltrip, a Harlan native and the executive director of the Kentucky Appalachian Commission. "When we have these significant rainfalls, then you consequently have floods in the valley floors. You just simply do not want to build any facilities in the flood way."

Such terrain makes it difficult to construct highways, a key ingredient for growth. New roads, along with a mild climate and low cost of living, have helped attract retirees to the region, particularly in Tennessee and North Carolina. And highways also helped spur industry, notably automakers that have built plants in places such as Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina.

About 2,500 miles, or 80 percent, of a federal Appalachian highway system envisioned in 1965 has been completed or is under construction. Many of the remaining 500 miles are in remote, mountainous areas and may never be built because of the cost.

While still hopeful highways will come their way, local leaders in depressed areas of Appalachia are taking their own steps to spur development. In Kentucky, for example, Gov. Paul Patton has placed an emphasis on bringing satellite college campuses and industrial parks to the region in hopes of boosting education and employment levels.

The federal government has recognized that economically distressed areas such as Harlan need extra help. House lawmakers recently endorsed a new policy that would require half of the Appalachian commission's funding to go to counties such as Harlan.

Supremacist brothers plead guilty to torching synagogues, abortion clinic

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Two white supremacist brothers pleaded guilty Friday to federal charges of setting fire to three Sacramento synagogues and an abortion clinic in 1999.

Under their plea agreements with prosecutors, Benjamin Matthew Williams, 33, faces 30 years in prison and James Tyler Williams, 31, a 20- to 21 1/2-year sentence. Sentencing is set for Nov. 30.

The brothers still face state murder charges in the slayings of a gay couple, Gary Matson, 50, and Winfield Mowder, 40, on July 1, 1999, about two weeks after the fires. They have pleaded innocent; trial is set for next April and they could face the death penalty if convicted.

A search of the brothers' home in connection with the slayings had turned up evidence linking them to the arsons.

"The main event, the murder trial, is yet to come," Brian Matson, brother of Matson, said after Friday's hearing. "These arsons were just part of a single, hate-inspired spree of terrorism for which they must pay with their lives."

Though no one was injured in the fires, they caused more than $3 million in damage to the Congregation B'Nai Israel and Kenesset Israel Torah Center, both in Sacramento, and the Congregation Beth Shalom in Carmichael. The pair also pleaded guilty to setting fire to Country Club Medical Center, which houses the Choice Medical Group abortion clinic, on July 2, 1999.

Gays have tough battle to repeal Florida adoption law

MIAMI (AP) — Elaine Bloom has come to regret the day 24 years ago that she joined fellow members of the Legislature in voting to bar gays from adopting children.

"I have a grandson that's being brought up by two fathers," the former state representative said. "They are doing a magnificent job. They are two wonderfully devoted fathers. I just wish all children were as happy and well-adjusted as he is and bright and eager and loved."

She ruefully recalled that vote last week, when a federal judge upheld the 1977 law, which was passed around the time Anita Bryant, the TV spokeswoman for Florida's citrus industry, went on a crusade against a Dade County ordinance protecting homosexuals from discrimination.

"It was in the midst of the Anita Bryant hysteria," Bloom said. "We were wrong to let it get past us like that. Many were people like me who were considered moderate, traditional-type Democrats who just didn't want to make a major hurdle at the time because of the backlash.

Since the court ruling, gay rights activists have vowed to keep on fighting to get the law off the books, by way of either the courts or the Legislature. But the chances of the Legislature repealing the measure are seen as close to zero.

Florida is the first and only state with a law specifically banning any homosexual from adopting. Utah and Mississippi do not allow same-sex couples to adopt but have no prohibition against adoptions by gay individuals.

"Florida has a such a dubious distinction of having the most heinous law in the country," said David Smith, spokesman for the Washington-based Human Rights Campaign. "We would do whatever we could to overturn it."

In a case brought by two gay men who wanted to adopt foster children already in their care, U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King upheld the law Aug. 30, accepting the state's argument that married heterosexuals provide a more stable home. It was the first time a federal judge ruled on such a law.

The plaintiffs plan to appeal. The other option would be to ask lawmakers to repeal the law.

But former state Rep. Suzanne Jacobs tried that in 1992.

"It was the first bill I ever filed," she recalled. "I was a freshie and I didn't know any better in the sense I didn't realize what was going to happen to me."

She got hate mail from people "accusing me of every evil known to mankind, up to including satanic rituals." Jacobs said she was also pulled aside and told the bill had no chance of passing. She was promised an hour of debate in committee if she agreed to withdraw the bill afterward.

"The floodgates opened up," she said. Other legislators "did a whole dog-and-pony show and unleashed the most reprehensible, the most disgusting diatribe against gays that I heard in my life. They were talking about gays going to bathhouses and having 100 partners a night — things that have nothing to do with parenting."

statement be made by the family of Ms. Madrid. During the statements given by Ms. Madrid's ex-husband, Stacy Copeland, and Ms. Madrid's siblings, family members sobbed. Copeland brought his two children into the courtroom, who were mothered by Ms. Madrid and not present at any previous hearings.

During Copeland's prepared victim impact statement, he stared at Madrid calling him a "selfish coward" and an "evil person."

But, the surprise came when one family member told McLeaish he was a "miserable creature."

McLeaish responded later saying he thought, as an officer of the court, the comments were inappropriate.

"The emotions run high in a case," McLeaish said. "Somebody has to be a lawyer for the defendant. In the future I do not expect to be attacked in open court like that."

She married Barney Ruel Greathouse and they moved to Midland in 1929. Helen worked side by side with Barney to establish Midland Drug Company. She made potato salad and pies at night to take to the store the next day to sell at the lunch counter. She sold as much food at her downtown lunch counter as did the well-known Midland restaurateur Agnes nearby. The couple decided to sell their interest in the stores to the Walgreen Company in 1967 and began to travel around the world.

Throughout their lives, they both remained conscious of their obligation to help the less fortunate in their area, and both were very active in many capacities with many charitable institutions.

MERGE: Company would be 3rd largest producer in nation

(From 1A)

ness Unit will be headed by Alan Kleier, currently vice president of Texaco Exploration & Production's Central Business Unit. Already, space is being made in the Chevron building in Clay-Desta Plaza for the post-merger work force.

What effect the merger will have on Permian Basin employees won't be known for several months, said Mickey Driver, spokesman for Chevron in Houston.

"When the two companies come together Oct. 10, at that time people will meet together," he said. "Until then, we're still two companies and we're still competitors."

He added, legally, the companies can't discuss matters such as organizational charts or jobs and who might be affected by the merger until it is completed.

After the merger, he said, the business unit heads will meet with staff and begin to organize what the business unit will look like and decide what jobs are needed.

Driver stressed both Chevron and Texaco have significant operations in the Permian Basin "and they're not going away."

Ms. Stiranka said at the present it is known employees in Texaco's headquarters in White Plains, N.Y. and employees in Denver will be affected because the headquarters will be moved to San Francisco and the Denver office will be shut down.

Both companies date back to the early 1900s and have long histories in the Permian Basin and Ms. Stiranka said seeing Texaco folded into Chevron is difficult for longtime employees.

But, she said, "This is how the global marketplace is going," she said. "We have to compete and this is how you compete."

And, she said, the merger will create a world class energy producer.

ChevronTexaco will be among the largest in the world and the third largest producer in the nation with a market value of more than $100 billion and assets of $83 billion. Net proved reserves will be 11.5 billion barrels of oil equivalent and daily production worldwide will be 2.7 million barrels of oil equivalent.

To receive FTC approval, the two companies agreed to several terms including:

■ Texaco will divest its interests in the U.S. downstream joint ventures Motiva Enterprises LLC and Equilon Enterprises LLC. If Texaco is not able to complete a sale of its interest in Motiva to Shell and Saudi Refining, Inc., and its interest in Equilon to Shell before the merger, it will place the stock of the Texaco subsidiaries that hold those interests in a Divestiture Trust just before merger close for sale within eight months of the merger date.

■ Subject to certain conditions, Texaco will extend its license of the Texaco brand to Equilon and Motiva on an exclusive basis until June 30, 2003, and on a non-exclusive basis until June 30, 2006.

■ ChevronTexaco will divest Texaco's interest in the Discovery Pipeline System within six months of the merger date, and Texaco will resign as operator of the system.

■ ChevronTexaco will divest Texaco's interest in the Enterprise Fractionating Plant in Mont Belvieu, Texas, within six months of the merger date.

■ Texaco will divest a portion of its U.S. general aviation business.

JOBS: Unemployment report sends stock prices sliding sliding. The Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 234.99, or 2.39 percent, to 9605.85.

(From 1A)

The stock decline was blamed partly on concerns that fearful consumers might cut back their spending, one of the the last props under the sinking economy, just as the holiday retail season approaches.

The jobless report "is a wake-up call," alerting workers to the possibility that their paychecks may not be secure, said Michael Niemira, a senior economist at Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi in New York. "It's all starting to come home now."

Still, forecasting the next turn in the economy is difficult because so many contradictory factors are in play, he said. Federal income tax rebate checks of up to $600 per family may boost late-summer spending, he noted.

Also, the Federal Reserve Board has been trimming interest rates all year, and likely will do so again at its October meeting. In light of Friday's job report, the board "can't just sit there and do nothing," Niemira said.

Several economists pointed out Friday that joblessness tends to follow, not precede, weakness in the economy.

"The unemployment rate is always at its highest at the dawn of new recoveries," Ken Mayland, president of ClearView Economics, told the Associated Press.

BLS Commissioner Abraham said the new numbers offer few clues about what will happen to U.S. workers in coming months.

"Whenever you get a big jump (in the unemployment rate), it is not at all uncommon to have the next month be level or maybe even retreat a little," she said.

The August report "is not a forecast," she cautioned. "When these numbers jump this much, it means they are volatile," not necessary getting steadily worse.

As recently as last October, the jobless rate was 3.9 percent, a 30-year low. Since then, the rate has been slowly ratcheting up. According to a survey by Thomson Global Markets, most economists had been expecting the rate to inch up in August to 4.6 percent, and payrolls to decline by just 43,000 jobs.

The jolt was largely caused by the weakness at factories, which cut 141,000 jobs. Since July 2000, manufacturers have eliminated more than 1 million jobs.

Among the biggest August losers were workers who make durable goods, electrical equipment, furniture, apparel and chemicals. Retail and transportation workers also took big cuts. Computer services reported its first employment slide since the late 1980s, losing 5,000 jobs.

And the hits just keep on coming. On Thursday, Motorola Inc. said it would cut 2,000 jobs, boosting to 32,000 the number it plans to scratch from its original payroll of 147,000 by the end of the year. In recent weeks, Hughes Electronics Corp., AOL Time Warner Inc., American Express Co. and Ford Motor Co. also announced job cuts.

"The weakness is spreading from manufacturing" to all industries, said Niemira.

On Capitol Hill, Abraham presented the unemployment report to Congress's Joint Economic Committee, which reacted with deep concern. Committee Vice Chairman Jack Reed, D-R.I., described the news as "certainly unwelcome."

Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah, a committee member, said the bad news means "it's going to take longer than we thought" to resume healthy growth. He now looks for a turnaround in the second quarter of 2002 — a congressional election year.

Bush, speaking from outside the Oval Office, where he had met with Vice President Dick Cheney, House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., and Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., to discuss the economy and Social Security, said that "the slowdown is real, and it's affecting too many lives, and we're concerned about it."

The president said his administration will help the economy by "having a responsible budget that meets our nation's obligations without affecting Social Security or dipping into Social Security."

Bush also said to boost the economy, "Congress needs to enact an energy plan which will lower energy costs and create jobs ... (and) enact trade promotion authority so we can open up new markets for American products."

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said the jobless report "confirms our worst fears about the president's budget and its impact on the economy."

Daschle said "because the Bush tax cut is keeping long-term interest rates from falling, it is thwarting the Fed's efforts to lower short-term interest rates and spark an economic rebound."

LOCAL: Professor says some signs point to recovery

(From 1A)

ket is coming back to reality. Any gains will be more moderate and will be more difficult to achieve."

Investors must be patient and look for value stocks in good, solid, stable companies. He also predicted retaining capital will be their major concern for the time being.

"The easy days are over," he said.

Scott Carson, an assistant professor in the School of Business at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, pointed out that it's difficult to say where the economy is because by the time statistics give an indication of a turnaround or retreat, it's a month or several months after the fact.

One statistic reported last week — a sharp increase in manufacturing activity reported by the National Association of Purchasing Managers — could be a sign the economy is recovering, he said, but other signs will have to be seen to know for certain.

Three things appear to be working to strengthen the economy, he said:

- Monetary policy in the lowering of interest rates by the Federal Reserve;
- Fiscal policy in the tax rebate checks sent out last month; and
- Lower energy prices.

All three of those factors will benefit the economy, he said, but they take time to have an impact. In the meantime, he said, "we'll just have to hold our breath until the next reports come out."

Jerry Jones, president of the Midland Business Center, said he would like to think the economy has reached bottom but is pessimistic.

"I think we are paying for an error of judgment on the part of" Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve, Jones said.

Noting the Fed has reduced interest rates seven times this year, he likened it to a consumer shopping for a new car and the dealer offering to lower the price of the car $50 or $25 a month over the course of six or seven months.

"Put yourself in the position of that buyer," Jones said. "The natural thought would be to hold off, thinking the dealer would continue lowering the price. Would it not be better for the dealer to say at the beginning 'I can do this much' and end the speculation?"

He said he agreed with numerous other economists who wish Greenspan and the Fed had been more dynamic in cutting interest rates.

He went on to point out consumer spending has been holding up the economy while business spending has retreated in the face of the Fed's actions and shrinking bottom lines.

"The danger is if we begin to lose consumer confidence, we're in a position to see a much worsening situation," he said, stressing, "I fear we're in real danger that things could get much worse."

Bryson said he sees signs consumers are being worn down from supporting the economy, citing increases in credit card debt write-offs by companies who worked with consumers with less than stellar credit.

Strong energy prices have traditionally insulated the Permian Basin somewhat from national downturns, he said, with at least one businessman telling him their Midland operations are faring better than other locations. But a significant downturn in the national economy, he said, would affect the region.

What is unusual, he said, is on Capital Hill, Democrats are wanting to rescind President Bush's tax cuts — "entirely the wrong medicine" while conservative Republicans are calling for a cut in the capital gains tax — "now may be the time to do a capital gains cut."

"Normally those that support stimulating the economy are opposing measures and some would like to blame Bush for the problems, which began long before he took office," said Jones, decrying what he called partisanship rather than cooperation to help the nation's economy.

Another potential problem, he said, is high consumer debt and a savings rate that is almost zero. Combine those with a loss of consumer confidence and cutbacks by small businesses, he said, and serious economic problems could develop.

Eight-year-old charged in stabbing death of 4-year-old

NEW YORK (AP) — An 8-year-old boy was charged with criminally negligent homicide Friday for allegedly stabbing to death a 4-year-old neighbor who police say had been bullied for more than a year.

The suspect's 9-year-old brother was charged with assault for his role in the attack, police said. Both were charged as juveniles.

Police said the 8-year-old stabbed Emanuel Barima in the neck — piercing his jugular vein — as the boy played with his sister in the hall outside their Bronx apartment Wednesday. Tests were being done to determine whether a set of house keys or a pen was the murder weapon.

The brothers are among the youngest people ever charged in the United States in a slaying. Criminally negligent homicide is a lesser offense than murder or manslaughter.

"From what we understand, it was one smack to the neck area or the striking of the neck area," Deputy Police Chief Joseph Reznick said. "It all happened so fast, they may not have realized they actually caused the death."

Emanuel Barima, 4, left, is shown next to his sister, Abigail, 5, in an undated photo. Emanuel was fatally stabbed in the neck while playing in a hallway outside their Bronx apartment Wednesday night.

Police said the boys are too young to be placed in a detention facility; they could be referred to counseling, to a group home or to foster care. Reznick said the two brothers did not seem to realize how much trouble they faced.

"I don't think reality has set in yet," he said. "I think they soon will learn that this is something very, very serious."

Reznick said Barima and his 5-year-old sister, Abigail, were victims of "bullyism at its peak" at the hands of the brothers, who would tease them, spit on them and push them around.

The victim's mother, Elizabeth Ghunney, was baby-sitting and had sent Emanuel and his sister to throw away a soiled diaper in a hallway chute. Emanuel returned to the apartment and collapsed.

"They opened the door, and I heard that they were screaming," Ghunney said. She called 911 and used a dish towel to try to stop the bleeding.

"I kept on praying and praying and then they told me he wasn't going to make it," Ghunney said. Emanuel died about an hour later.

Neighbors set up a small shrine, with candles, flowers, teddy bears and balloons outside the five-story apartment building.

Thursday was supposed to be the first day of preschool for Emanuel, who wanted to be a doctor. Emanuel, the youngest of the family's five boys and one girl, was so excited that he packed his book bag days in advance.

Reznick said he hoped Abigail would be able to cope with her brother's death.

"You look at her and it's synonymous with innocence — she's just a little 5-year-old kid who saw her brother being killed," he said.

Search for Simi Valley suspect leads to car, body found nearby

OJAI, Calif. (AP) — A body was discovered deep in Los Padres National Forest Friday near where authorities found the rented vehicle used by a man suspected of killing three members of a Simi Valley family, police said.

"We have confirmed that it is the vehicle, and I have heard that there is a body but nobody has confirmed to us that it is him," said Sgt. Bob Gardner, a spokesman for the Simi Valley Police Department.

"The rangers up there found the car and saw a guy running away from it and that's where we are," Gardner said.

The body was found about 1 1/2 miles from a sport utility vehicle parked in clearing in a remote wilderness near Reyes Peak, about 30 miles north of Ojai in western Ventura County. Simi Valley and the national forest are northwest of metropolitan Los Angeles.

"A vehicle was seen that matched that of the suspect. U.S. Forest Service rangers saw him running into the brush," sheriff's Deputy Steve Mayorga said. "He was seen right in the area where a body has been found."

Simi Valley police and county sheriff's deputies were looking for Reynaldo Herrera Rodriguez, 35, a state highway department civil engineer they say targeted the family of a young woman with whom he had once had a relationship.

The discovery in the forest came after authorities revealed that Rodriguez had wrongly believed that the woman, Maria Rios, 24, had given him a blood disease.

Rios wasn't at home when a gunman walked into the family home and opened fire, killing her daughter, Shantal Rios, 4; brother Ricardo Calderon, 12, and grandmother, Esperanza Martinez, 80.

Research: AIDS vaccines might help those already infected

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vaccines intended to protect people from getting AIDS may also work as a treatment for those already infected, boosting their immune system so they can temporarily stop taking AIDS drugs.

So-called therapeutic vaccines, which harness the body's own immune system to control HIV, have long been a goal of research. However, data released at an AIDS vaccine conference in Philadelphia on Friday are the first to hint this may be an effective strategy when combined with standard AIDS drugs.

The idea is to give people a break from their AIDS medicines that could last for weeks, months or even years. Experts caution that much more experimentation is needed to know whether vaccines could be used safely and effectively this way.

Nevertheless, dozens of possible new AIDS vaccines are in development, and while most have not yet reached human testing, drug companies are designing many of them for use both to prevent AIDS and to treat it.

Furthest along in this kind of dual testing is Aventis Pasteur's ALVAC-HIV, which has been given to more than 1,900 people worldwide and will enter large-scale testing to prevent AIDS next summer. The vaccine consists of a harmless canary pox virus that is genetically engineered to carry several genes that make HIV proteins. The company is sponsoring 14 studies of the vaccine as a treatment for infected people in the United States and Europe.

Normally, when people stop taking their AIDS drugs, the virus can reproduce again rampantly, producing billions of new copies. By exposing the immune system in advance to HIV proteins, experts hope it will mount a vigorous defense against the re-emerging virus, knocking it down to acceptably low levels.

At the meeting, called AIDS Vaccine 2001, Dr. Martin Markowitz of the Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center in New York City described the first results of this strategy using ALVAC-HIV. The study was conducted on patients who began taking AIDS drugs within four months of catching HIV.

Thirteen of them took four doses of the vaccine before stopping their AIDS medicines, while five others stopped treatment without being vaccinated.

The researchers were disappointed that the virus returned to detectable levels in all the vaccinated volunteers. Nevertheless, virus levels fell back down to low levels in six of the vaccinated patients, compared with just one of those who was not vaccinated.

Markowitz said this is the first study to suggest that inducing an immune response with a vaccine influences patients' health when used in combination with standard AIDS drugs.

"There is clearly an effect of the vaccine that justifies continuing in this direction," he said. "It's a hint of something good."

The goal is to find a strategy that will allow patients to stop taking AIDS drugs, at least temporarily. These combinations of medicines have revolutionized AIDS treatment over the past five years, changing HIV from a death sentence to a manageable infection. Nevertheless, the treatment requires taking several pills a day and can cause a variety of unpleasant side effects, such as odd accumulations of body fat.

Dr. Douglas Richman of the University of California at San Diego said priming the immune system with a vaccine is a more sensible way to accomplish this than simply cycling people on and off treatment, a strategy enthusiastically discussed last year but largely abandoned because of poor results.

Dr. Lawrence Corey of the University of Washington said a big challenge is trying to invigorate an immune system already weakened.

"There is no proof in any system that a vaccine has any clinical utility," he said. "The consensus in HIV is that there is no consensus."

Miami officers accused of cover-up in fatal shootings

By Catherine Wilson
Associated Press

MIAMI — In the city's worst police scandal since the days of "Miami Vice," 13 current and former officers were accused by federal prosecutors Friday of planting guns, lying to investigators and otherwise trying to cover up four shootings in which three people died.

In one of the shootings, a SWAT team fired 123 bullets into an apartment during a 1996 drug raid and then lied about finding a gun in the hand of the dead 73-year-old man inside, the FBI said.

The investigation also involved the deaths of two young black men who were shot in the back by officers after stealing purses on a highway ramp.

All of those charged were veterans assigned to SWAT teams, narcotics units or special crime-suppression teams in the late 1990s.

Prosecutors said that in at least three cases, police planted guns at the scene to justify shootings by officers.

"These officers put a stain on the badge of every hardworking, honest, faithful, honorable police office who puts his or her life on the line every single day," U.S. Attorney Guy Lewis said.

Lewis said the officers "planted weapons, they lied about their roles in the shootings, they lied about what they saw, they falsified reports, they tampered with crime scenes."

He also said the officers stole money, guns and other property from people in unrelated cases and later planted the weapons at police-involved shootings.

AP Photo
Miami police officer Jose Acuna, center right, leaves the U.S. courthouse in Miami with his family after a bond hearing Friday. Thirteen members of special Miami police squads have been charged in an FBI investigation into guns planted at crime scenes and lies to cover wrongful police actions in four questionable shootings.

Eleven officers were arrested Friday on an indictment charging them in a plot to obstruct justice and violate civil rights. Two retired officers pleaded guilty to conspiracy earlier this week and are cooperating with investigators.

"This is painful, but this is something we have to go through to get better," Police Chief Raul Martinez said.

All but one of the 11 indicted officers were freed on $100,000 bail. If convicted, they face five to 25 years in prison.

Several officers refused to comment. Defense attorneys dismissed the allegations as more spectacle than substance.

"It's like a rerun of everything we've seen before. It's a lot of hype," said attorney Janice Sharpstein, who represents two officers.

The case is smaller than the 1980s "Miami River Cops" scandal in which uniformed officers stole cocaine from drug traffickers and sold the drug themselves. Three drug boat guards drowned when they jumped into the Miami River to avoid the gang, an episode that gave the ring its name. Eventually, more than 100 Miami officers were arrested, fired or disciplined.

The latest arrests expanded on a March indictment charging five Miami SWAT officers with conspiracy to obstruct justice for allegedly lying to investigators after the deadly 1996 drug raid. The city settled a lawsuit with the man's family for $2.5 million last year.

The investigation also included the police shooting of a homeless man, who was wounded in the leg. Officers said he was holding a weapon to the head of a friend, but it turned out to be a small radio. Jesus Aguero, the only officer held without bail Friday, was fired for allegedly planting a gun after the shooting.

"Make no mistake. This circle of officers is not yet closed," said Hector Pesquera, the FBI chief in Miami. "Time is running out for those who have not come forward with the truth."

Relations between police and the public have been delicate in Miami for years. Riots erupted four times in the past two decades after police shot a black man or officers involved in a shooting were cleared.

Police officials on Friday asked the U.S. Justice Department for a review of departmental procedures. Similar investigations were launched in Los Angeles, Cincinnati and the Washington, D.C.

Activist Hattie Willis, president of Communities United, commended the police chief for seeking the federal investigation but asked: "Can we ever heal the wrongs that have been done to these families?"

County grand jury to study flight attendant's claims against Condit

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — A county official said Friday that a grand jury has reached a decision on whether it will investigate claims that Rep. Gary Condit obstructed justice by asking a flight attendant to deny they had an affair.

The results of the secret vote of Stanislaus County's 19-member civil grand jury Thursday night won't be made public, said Marnie Ardis, the county employee who oversees the panel.

Smith

Condit

She said the decision was being relayed in a letter sent Friday to the attorney of flight attendant Anne Marie Smith.

The unusual hearing came after Smith's attorney, James Robinson, said last week he was going directly to the civil grand jury with allegations that Condit, his chief of staff, Mike Lynch; and Don Thornton, an investigator for a California lawyer who has represented Condit, obstructed justice by encouraging Smith to commit perjury.

Smith, 40, claims the Democratic congressman and his intermediaries tried to get her to sign a false affidavit denying they had an affair. She said they had a 10-month romance.

Condit has denied asking anybody to lie. His attorney, Abbe Lowell, said Smith and the congressman apparently have different definitions of the word "relationship."

The grand jury could decide to investigate or reject Smith's complaint. But Ardis said the panel — convened to oversee local government — cannot indict anyone on criminal charges.

Citizen criminal complaints are usually made directly to police or prosecutors, who can present evidence to the county's criminal grand jury.

Woman rewarded for returning $120,000 that had fallen off truck

By Russ Bynum
Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Wanda Johnson, a single mother of five struggling to pay her bills, is getting a big helping hand after she returned $120,000 in cash that fell from an armored car.

Johnson, 34, was driving to pawn her television Wednesday so she could pay her electric bill when an armored car turned a corner ahead of her, spilling a large plastic bag in the street.

Johnson, picked the money up and went on to work at her job as a housekeeper at Memorial Hospital. After work, she went to her pastor's home and he encouraged her to return the cash.

"It's really all about God, putting him first," Johnson said Friday during a news conference at SunTrust Bank. She said she had prayed about her financial troubles, and viewed the lost money as a test of her faith.

"I said, 'How in the world is this going to work out?' And he did it," Johnson said.

SunTrust gave Johnson $5,000, half in a check and the rest deposited to an account in her name for others to donate on Johnson's behalf.

The armored car company, EM Security of Savannah, gave Johnson a reward and donated to her church. The company's chief executive officer, Richard Estus, declined to name the amounts. "We gave her at least what the bank gave her," he said.

SunTrust and the security company said they want people to know that good deeds reap rewards.

Though their money is insured against theft and loss, the policies come with steep deductibles.

"We wanted to reward and reinforce somebody standing up and doing the right thing," said SunTrust Savannah President William D. Haile, who gave Johnson her check for $2,500. "If we can reinforce when people do the right thing, that money will come back to us many, many times."

Threatening revenge, Palestinians pour into streets

By Laurie Copans
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Chanting for revenge, thousands of Palestinians poured into the streets of the West Bank on Friday for the funeral of two gunmen killed in an Israeli helicopter attack. Protesters burned a cardboard model of a helicopter to cheers from the crowd.

In Israel, a 23-year-old army lieutenant who was killed in a revenge attack for the helicopter strike was buried Friday.

Palestinian officials, meanwhile, suggested Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres' announcement that he would meet next week with Yasser Arafat was premature. More preparation is needed, and a time and place have not been set, said Palestinian Planning Minister Nabil Shaath.

In the West Bank city of Tulkarem, local militia leader Raed Karmi threatened to carry out further attacks against Israel as revenge for a missile strike that narrowly missed him on Thursday. Karmi, who was the target of the attack, jumped from a car moments before missiles slammed into it, but two of his gunmen were killed.

"We will continue our armed struggle," a stone-faced Karmi said as he led a crowd of 8,000 mourners. He wore a bulletproof vest as well-wishers kissed and hugged him. Several gunmen, some shooting in the air, escorted Karmi.

Shaking their fists in the air, women chanted slogans against Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon: "Sharon, just wait, Raed Karmi will dig your grave."

Israel says Karmi has carried out numerous shooting attacks this year and has killed six Israelis. Karmi has admitted personally killing at least two Israelis.

Karmi said Friday his militia killed the Israeli army lieutenant in a shooting attack near Tulkarem hours after the Israeli strike. A female officer traveling in the same car was injured and remained hospitalized Friday.

AP Photo

A model of a tank with "Made in U.S.A." printed on the front, is burned during a demonstration against Israel's controversial targeted killings of Palestinian leaders Friday in the West Bank city of Ramallah.

In the West Bank town of Ramallah, thousands of Palestinians joined a symbolic funeral for a suicide bomber who blew himself up outside a school in Jerusalem this week, injuring 20 people. Marchers burned a cardboard model of an Israeli helicopter. Some held pictures of Sharon and President Bush with a caption reading "partners in crime."

In the Gaza Strip, Israeli tanks briefly entered a Palestinian-controlled area near the Karni crossing and fired one shell at a building there in response to Palestinian fire on troops, Palestinian witnesses and the army said. The army said the structure had been used as a base for shootings at troops.

Elsewhere in the Gaza Strip, three Palestinians were moderately injured near Rafah when Israeli forces fired in retaliation for grenades thrown at troops, Palestinian witnesses and doctors said. The army denied Palestinian allegations that tanks fired shells in the area.

The army imposed a curfew on the West Bank village of Jelaboun for several hours late Friday as part of an operation in the area to prevent Palestinian militants from entering Israel to carry out attacks, the army said.

Peres, who is attending an economic conference in Italy, said he hoped a meeting with Arafat could stop the bloodshed. "The air is loaded with mistrust and anger and accusations. We have to operate under heavy clouds. But by shooting nobody will win and everybody will pay. By talking everybody will win."

The first of three meetings will probably be held at the Erez crossing between Israel and the Gaza Strip, Peres said. When asked when the first meeting would take place, he would only say after Sunday.

Palestinian officials say Arafat wants to wait for a gathering of Arab foreign ministers in Cairo on Sunday before making a decision on talks with Peres.

The Palestinian Cabinet, meeting in Gaza late Friday, said in an official statement that it would not allow talks on a cease-fire without a discussion on the resumption of peace talks.

Sharon has said repeatedly that he will not allow any peace talks to be part of negotiations on a truce since Israel will "not negotiate under fire."

The Cabinet called for the "immediate implementation" of two U.S. plans for a cease-fire that have not taken effect.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Man gored to death by bull

MEDINA DEL CAMPO, Spain — A bull gored an 81-year-old man to death on Friday as he filmed a running of the bulls in the central Spanish town of Medina del Campo, the mayor said.

Felix Rodriguez, of Rouen, France, was cornered by a young bull in a section of the route known as "The Funnel" at the entrance to the town's center, Mayor Crecencio Martin Pascual told the Spanish news agency Efe.

The bull fractured Rodriguez's skull, and he was pronounced dead upon arrival at a hospital, the mayor was quoted as saying.

Rodriguez, whose nationality was not immediately known, is the first person to die in a bull run in the town since it reinstated the tradition in 1970.

■ Police: Euros stolen

BERLIN — The driver and an accomplice got away with 1.2 million euros — worth $1.8 million — from a German cash transport truck in what is believed to be the first robbery of Europe's new money, police said Friday.

Police said all seven denominations, from five to 500 euros, were on the truck robbed Thursday near the western town of Giessen.

"One has to expect that all types of bills fell into their hands," said Reinhard Huebner, a spokesman for Giessen prosecutors.

The figure on the euros stolen came from the cash transport company, Securicor, police said. At least $139,000 in German marks also were missing, police said, revising the original figure of up to $2.7 million worth of marks.

The euro will replace local currencies as legal tender in 12 European Union countries on Jan. 1.

■ Artists wanted for Diana tribute

LONDON — Officials on Friday launched a design competition for a $4.2 million fountain in memory of Princess Diana.

The fountain will be built in a former pump house in London's Hyde park beside a lake that Diana often visited. It will be finished during the summer of 2003, planners said.

"This is a unique opportunity for artists and craftsmen to make history," said Rosa Monckton, a friend of the late princess and head of the memorial fountain committee.

"It is so very important to make her national memorial very special, and that is why the competition for a design is going worldwide," she said.

The fountain, initially announced by Prime Minister Tony Blair in 1999, will be paid for with public funds and by the sale of official commemorative coins.

Chess grandmasters will not play in championship

By Leonid Chezhov
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Chess grandmasters Garry Kasparov and Vladimir Kramnik said Friday they would not participate in the World Championship that the International Chess Federation, FIDE, plans to hold in the Russian capital this year.

Kirsan Ilyumzhinov, the president of FIDE, announced Aug. 30 that the next World Championship would be held from November through January in Moscow and that FIDE would invite Kramnik, Kasparov and another former world champion from Russia, Anatoly Karpov, to participate.

FIDE claims sole legitimacy as the sponsor of the world championship, but the world has had two world champions since 1993 when Kasparov, who was then reigning champion, broke away from FIDE to form the Professional Chess Association.

Kasparov defended his title twice under the auspices of the Professional Chess Association, which disbanded in 1998. Last November, Kramnik defeated Kasparov for the world tittle in a match sponsored by Brain Games Network.

Jobs may not solve migration problem

By Julie Watson
Associated Press

JALPA, Mexico — Surrounded by tropical fruit trees and lush mountains, this picturesque town of colonial churches and brightly painted buildings looks like the kind of place few would want to leave.

But since World War II, more than 70 percent of the young people from this seeming paradise in central Mexico have been heading north to work in the fields, factories and restaurants of the United States.

Experts say the only real solution to slowing the flow of migrants is providing jobs in towns like Jalpa, but that's easier said than done.

Five years ago, the first factory opened in this town in central Zacatecas state. Few people were willing to work for $5 a day when they could earn more in an hour in the United States, and the plant closed a year after it opened.

A second plant was abandoned during construction after it, too, failed to recruit enough workers.

"Why would I work for so little when I've made $6.50, $7.50 up to $9 an hour in the States?" said Jaime Saldivar, 30, sitting on a bench in the town's tree-lined plaza and wearing a New York Yankees baseball cap.

In a joint statement this week, President Bush and Mexican President Vicente Fox announced plans to form the public-private "Partnership for Prosperity" to find ways to spur economic growth in Mexico as a means to reduce migration.

Zacatecas has been struggling for years to develop rural towns like Jalpa. Because of the exodus of workers, more than half the state's municipalities have been reduced to communities of women, children and the elderly.

Mexico has long based its economic development on luring foreign companies to its impoverished regions by offering them cheap labor. But for many Mexicans jobs are not enough. They don't expect to earn as much as in the United States, but insist on enough for a decent standard of living.

That's especially true in states like Zacatecas, where migration dates back three generations and residents are long accustomed to U.S. wages.

Many, like Saldivar, are following paths blazed by their grandfathers, who were hired to work in U.S. factories during World War II to fill vacancies left by those who'd gone off to fight. The so-called Bracero program was disbanded in 1964.

Since then, families here have established underground railroads to get workers across the border, find them places to stay and secure them jobs.

The smugglers they hire are cousins, uncles, friends or neighbors in their hometowns — not the stereotypical shysters in dark sunglasses who wait on the border to take their money only to abandon them in the searing desert or freezing mountains.

Since the journey is inherently safer, many are more than willing to try their luck at crossing the line.

Mexican migrants Jaime Cruz, left, and Miguel Munoz, center, celebrate during a visit home, to traditional northern Mexican music from a four-piece band in a bar in Jalpa, Mexico. Since World War II, more than 70 percent of the young people from this seeming paradise in central Mexico have been heading north to work in the fields, factories and restaurants of the United States.

"It's rare that you hear a migrant from Zacatecas has been found dead in the desert," said migration expert Rodolfo Garcia Zamora.

Garcia Zamora said the solution to stemming migration is getting Mexicans who have built successful businesses in the United States to invest in projects in their hometowns that can be profitable and offer decent salaries.

Migrants send back more than $1 million a day to Zacatecas from the United States. Jalpa receives more than $100,000 a day. But most of the money is used to support families in Mexico and to buy land and houses.

In Jalpa, teen-agers don Nike clothes and ride skateboards. Shiny minivans line the streets.

But despite the town's healthy appearance, "our banks are practically empty," said Deputy Mayor Jesus Guerrero, 58, who worked in California for eight years. "People invest their money in the United States — not here."

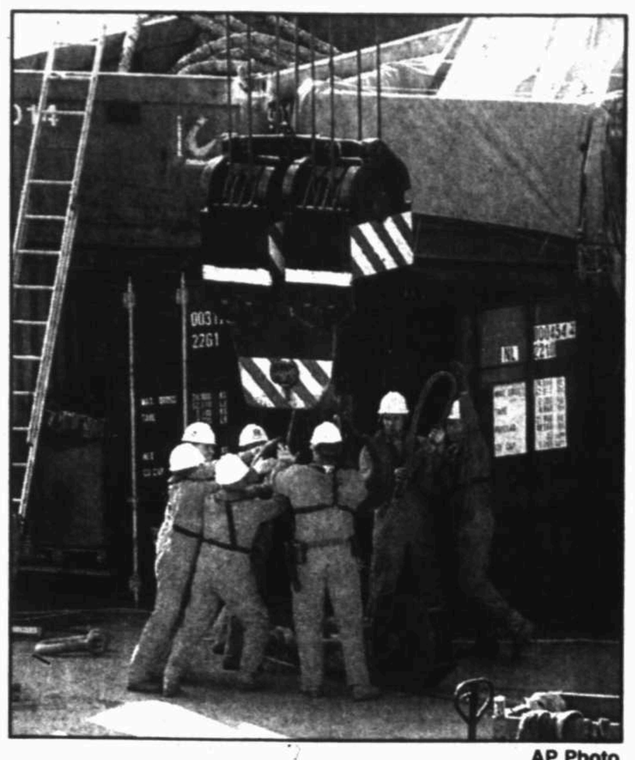
Jalpa has no factories. The majority work in the guayaba fruit plantations, but often only long enough to save for their illegal odysseys north.

Garcia Zamora and a team of experts have drafted a plan to find U.S. markets for crops grown in Zacatecas and launch projects backed by entrepreneurs, the government, international financing institutions and migrants who've made their fortune in the United States.

In Jalpa, officials are mobilizing the women of the town who have been left behind.

In April, the city formed a cooperative of 167 women to make traditional, embroidered clothing for Mexican women in the United States. Thus far, they have no transportation costs: Returning migrants carry the merchandise with them. But how much of a dent these projects can make remains to be seen.

Work resumes on sunken sub



AP Photo

Workers prepare to lower components of an underwater saw intended to sever the sunken Kursk nuclear submarine's front section on board the Carrier barge, which sails above the sunken submarine in the Barents Sea, Sept. 4.

MOSCOW (AP) — Salvage workers used a huge underwater saw to cut away half of the mangled bow of the sunken nuclear submarine Kursk, which is to be raised in mid-September.

The Kursk has been on the Barents Sea floor since it suffered explosions and sank on Aug. 12, 2000, killing all 118 men aboard. Russian officials say the Kursk must be lifted to avert a potential threat from its two nuclear reactors, and to help determine the cause of its sinking.

The disfigured fore section is being cut off and will be left on the sea bottom because officials say it may contain unexploded torpedoes and may threaten the lifting operation.

The Russian navy has said it will consider lifting the front section or some of its fragments next year.

A snapped cable had stopped the saw from working Tuesday, but it resumed operation Thursday, the Dutch companies raising the submarine said.

Tokyo establishes task force to rid capital of crows

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo's city government declared a crackdown on crows on Friday, appointing a team of experts to wipe out the pesky birds that gorge themselves on garbage and squawk menacingly at passers-by.

Officials believe the Japanese capital is home to at least 21,000 crows, up from 7,000 in 1985. The birds are believed to have migrated from jungles in Southeast Asia.

The government said Friday it was forming an 18-member committee of experts in forestry, civil engineering and veterinary science to draw up a plan to eliminate the pests once and for all.

"The goal is to eradicate crows," said Tokyo government spokesman Nobuyuki Yokoo.

The crow control plan is to be completed by the end of September. Previous measures did little to curb the rising population.

City officials said the birds are a real threat, with scythe-like beaks and wingspans of more than three feet.

"We did receive reports that several people were slammed by their wings or kicked, or cut by their beaks," said Kunio Momozawa, an official at Tokyo government's bird and animal protection department. "We really need to take comprehensive measures."

This year, the Tokyo government received 2,891 crow control requests from May to August.

Experts were dispatched to take care of 484 of them. A total of 464 nests were removed, 1,064 chicks killed with carbon dioxide spray, and 105 eggs destroyed, Momozawa said.

Carcasses of 30 elephants, four rhinos found after fire

SKUKUZA, South Africa (AP) — The charred carcasses of 30 elephants and four rhinoceroses have been recovered at a national park in South Africa where a brush fire killed 23 people, park officials said Friday.

Park rangers were still tallying the total number of animals killed after a fire broke out Tuesday afternoon in the southwestern part of Kruger National Park, spokesman William Mabasa said in a statement.

Firefighters had the blaze under control by Wednesday, but it continued to burn in places on Friday. Officials were unsure what started the fire.

Most of the people killed were women from neighboring villages who had been hired to cut grass. Park officials said they were overcome by smoke when they fled their temporary camp.

Four park rangers who had been part of the rescue effort were also killed. A memorial service was planned for Tuesday at the park.

At least six other people were treated for injuries at nearby hospitals.

Two park rangers remained hospitalized with severe burns on Friday. One was still in intensive care, but the other was improving, Mabasa said.

Kruger National Park is one of South Africa's most popular tourist destinations, drawing close to 1 million visitors a year. The 5 million-acre park — roughly the size of New Jersey — has more than 1,100 different species of animals and trees.

Park officials said the fire had destroyed about 110,000 acres of vegetation.

Bush fires, often started by lightning, are common at Kruger, but this was the first time that trail camps were burned, Mabasa said.

Runaway fires devastated at least a quarter of the park in 1996, killing hundreds of animals.

Negotiators work to resolve demands at racism conference

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

DURBAN, South Africa — European negotiators at the U.N. conference on racism agreed to a carefully crafted statement Friday that they termed an apology for slavery, a move aimed at fending off lawsuits seeking reparations.

But delegates remained deadlocked beyond the conference's scheduled closing Friday night, struggling over how to address the Middle East conflict and African demands for some kind of compensation for slavery.

Formal negotiations wound down around midnight and were to resume later in the day Saturday. Officials said informal talks would likely continue through the night.

The chief Arab negotiator denied there had been a breakthrough on the Mideast but held open the possibility the session would be extended to try and reach a compromise.

"The concrete results of this conference are essential to the fight against racism around the world," said Belgian Foreign Minister Louis Michel, who is leading the European Union negotiators at the conference.

The European Union agreed earlier Friday to a compromise calling on those responsible for slavery to find ways to restore the dignity of victims, resolving a key issue deadlocking the World Conference Against Racism.

The statement amounted to an apology, said EU spokesman Koen Vervaeke, but would block any lawsuits seeking reparations. While the conference's documents are not legally binding, once adopted all countries promise to fulfill the applicable pledges made.

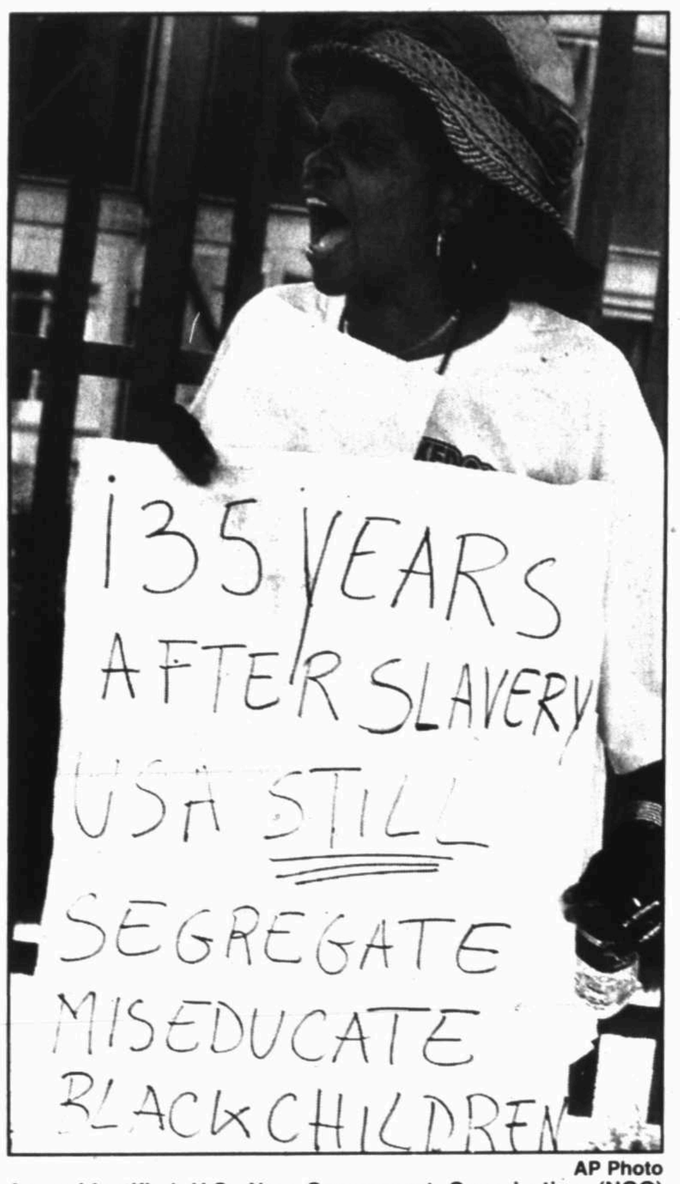
Meanwhile, the issue of how to deal with the Middle East conflict in conference documents also remained in limbo Friday.

Muslim countries were considering whether to walk out of the global meeting because they said proposed language on the Middle East was too weak. The United States and Israel walked out Monday after the Arab states rejected a compromise proposed by Norway.

African countries still were pushing for slavery and colonialism to be labeled "crimes against humanity" and for Western countries to pay reparations. The EU rejected both calls, said Vervaeke.

"There was a breakthrough on the notion of an apology," said Vervaeke, a spokesman for Michel. "In the way it's drafted now there can't be any legal consequences."

The European Union has been unwilling to issue an apology because it felt that would leave it open to lawsuits.



AP Photo
An unidentified U.S. Non Government Organization (NGO) attendee at the U.N. Racism Conference in Durban, South Africa, Friday holds a placard while shouting slogans calling for reparation for victims of slavery. The seven-day conference, which finishes today, has seen the withdrawal by the U.S. and Israeli delegations.

The text on slavery to which the parties agreed to on Friday read:

"The World Conference Against Racism further notes that some have taken the initiative of regretting, or expressing remorse, or presenting apologies, and calls on all those who have not yet contributed to restoring the dignity of the victims to find appropriate ways to do so, and to this end we appreciate those countries that have done so."

But the issues of reparations and declaring the slave trade a crime against humanity remained stumbling blocks, said Zimbabwean Minister of Justice Patrick Chinamasa.

"They cannot deny the slave trade was a crime against humanity," Chinamasa said, adding that the reparations issue was still the biggest problem. "They are more worried about their wallets than moral issues."

The European Union, however, remained firm in its refusal to accept that language.

"Slavery today is of course a crime against humanity, slavery yesterday, in the past, was of course ... a very grave thing, a very horrible thing," Michel said. "It is very difficult to consider that you can compare slavery today to slavery in the past."

Mary Robinson, the U.N. high commissioner for human rights and the secretary-general of the conference, had said Friday morning that the likely final declaration from the conference would be nothing to get "very excited about" because of the compromises needed to reach consensus.

"This is very difficult for (the delegates)," Robinson said. "The great achievement will be to get an agreement at all."

If negotiations continued past the scheduled closing of the eight-day gathering, the conference could be extended into Saturday and beyond to allow the talks to continue, said Sue Markham, spokeswoman for the conference.

Arab states rejected a South African proposal on wording on the Middle East conflict that sought to find a compromise between the Arabs' call for the conference to condemn Israeli practices as racist and the European Union's refusal to allow the conference to take sides in the conflict.

The EU had accepted the proposal offered Thursday, Vervaeke said. He said the proposal was the EU's bottom line.

"The ball is now in the Arabs' court," he said.

Nasser al-Kidwa, a Palestinian and top Arab negotiator at the conference, said talks Friday night with the European Union were going "nowhere," denying reports that there had been a breakthrough.

"We have repeatedly said the text was unacceptable," said al-Kidwa, the Palestinians' representative to the United Nations. But he added that a deal might still be obtainable and that the talks would probably go into Saturday.

"I smell the possibility of movement," he said.

The rejected proposal recognized the Holocaust and condemned anti-Semitism and Islamophobia.

A copy of the text, obtained by The Associated Press, also expressed concern "about the plight of the Palestinian people under foreign occupation" but did not specifically criticize Israel or mention Zionism.

If a consensus cannot be reached on any part of the conference's final documents, delegates hold a vote, with a two-thirds majority of nations needed to adopt a substantive paragraph.

Delegates from the Organization of Islamic Conference, an umbrella group of 56 Muslim countries, were disappointed the compromise proposal did not discuss Palestinian suffering and Israel's policies in the occupied territories, a delegate at a meeting of the organization said.

Vienna's landmark Hotel Sacher celebrates anniversary in style

By Susanna Loof
Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — Just a few hours after arriving from Canada, John Bergeron and his wife headed to the attraction topping their Vienna must-see list: the Hotel Sacher.

The hotel — a Viennese landmark with a decor as rich as the chocolate cake that made its name famous worldwide — celebrates its 125th anniversary Sunday with a future as bright as its crystal chandeliers.

"This is how we wanted to start it off. Elegance, civilization and excellent dessert and coffee," said Bergeron, who came to Vienna from Montreal for a scientists' conference.

Like most visitors, Bergeron and his wife, Kathleen Dickson, aren't staying at the hotel, whose ornate, spacious accommodations range from $175 for a single room to $2,900 for the most luxurious suite.

Instead, they visited the hotel's coffee house and then wandered the sumptuous halls, admiring the glittering chandeliers, silk tapestries and gilt-framed paintings.

"It's outstanding. We've stayed in really nice hotels ... but this is very elegant and old world," Bergeron said.

Sunday's birthday bash will include a matinee at the Oper, or central opera house, another Vienna landmark just across the street. Selected guests will be treated to a play, opera and ballet performances, all highlighting the Hotel Sacher's role in history.

Eduard Sacher — whose father created the Sacher torte, Vienna's famous chocolate cake — opened the hotel in 1876. But it was his wife, Anna, who created its dignified atmosphere.

"Due to her special talent, the hotel became very famous because it was a meeting place," said Elizabeth Guertler, who runs the hotel today.

International politicians, royalty and famous artists met in the hotel's 12 private dining rooms for important and secret discussions. Waiters always coughed discreetly before entering.

The hotel's glory began to fade after World War I; many of its regulars had become impoverished and stripped of their titles. It went bankrupt in 1934.

Two families bought the hotel, but at the end of World War II, after serving as the British Senior Officer's Club, it again seemed near death.

Six years later, Hotel Sacher reopened. Today, it's flourishing with a 78 percent occupancy rate and plans to add 40 rooms.

The list of famous guests — Queen Elizabeth, Ernest Hemingway, Luciano Pavarotti, Princess Grace of Monaco, Leonard Bernstein — keeps growing. U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan has stayed at the Sacher. Hillary Rodham Clinton and Chelsea Clinton dined here, and John F. Kennedy Jr. was a guest shortly before his death.

Workers struggle to drain crater lake

ATOP MOUNT PINATUBO, Philippines (AP) — The draining of a dangerous volcanic lake has been a struggle with the elements, fatigue and superstition — and there's no guarantee that the effort will prevent flash flooding.

Experts say that without relief from the weight of water building to dangerously high levels, the jagged crater walls of Mt. Pinatubo could crack, burying villages up to 25 miles away in debris.

Workers shrug off the perils.

"It's just another job for us," Army Capt. Genaro Candalera, 43, said of what is believed to be the first attempt to gouge a canal through the volcano's rim. "Of course, the fact that you are on top of a volcano crater will always be at the back of our mind, Candalera added."

Beyond him lay Pinatubo's cloud-shrouded lake, where more than 50 Aeta tribesmen have been joined by soldiers, police and scientists trying to avert the threat of flash floods that could inundate the town of Botolan 25 miles away.

The volcano, 55 miles north of Manila, erupted in 1991, killing 800 people and spewing billions of tons of debris. The eruption blew off its top, leaving a crater with an area of 2.1 square miles that has acted as a collecting pot for rainwater.

The eerie quiet atop the 4,740-foot volcano is broken only by yells from workers lifting buckets of stone and sand by hand and rope. Shovels and iron bars clink as they smash into buried rocks.

A sudden downpour signals a break as workers scamper out of the canal into nearby tents. One soldier takes shelter under an upturned wheelbarrow, propped up by his M-16 rifle.

This is the rainy season, so such sights come all too often. The workers recalled one windy downpour that kept them awake all night as sections of the crater wall cracked off and splashed into the lake.

In addition to the physical dangers and difficulties, the outsiders have to deal with the superstitious Aeta tribe, who believe their god lives in the volcano, Candalera said.

GOP committee talks about luring Hispanic voters

By Chris Roberts
Associated Press

EL PASO — Texas Republican leaders will try to convince traditionally Democratic Hispanics that their party is taking them for granted and that Republicans will spend more money on their issues.

The strong Hispanic support for Laredo businessman Tony Sanchez, a Democrat who announced his candidacy for governor this week, shouldn't be taken for granted, said Susan Weddington, chairwoman of the Republican Party of Texas.

Weddington was in El Paso overseeing the quarterly meeting of the state Republican Executive Committee. She said the meeting was held in El Paso to emphasize the party's commitment to border issues.

"Some people might vote for (Sanchez) simply because their name and his name sound like the same race," Weddington said Friday. "But they're going to make choices about what's best for their lives and what is best for their community."

Gov. Rick Perry, so far, is the sole Republican candidate for governor.

Weddington said that in 1991, under Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, the Texas Department of Health spent $800 million in the 32 border counties, which have large Hispanic communities. Under Republican Gov. George Bush, she said, the department spent $1.53 billion in the same counties.

Ken Sutherland, an El Paso member of the state Democratic Executive Committee, said he couldn't react specifically to Weddington's numbers, which represent spending levels nearly a decade apart, because he doesn't know how they were compiled.

Bush "sure hasn't done a good job getting money in the right place," Sutherland said.

"Look at the (Children's Health Insurance Program)," he said referring to the program that provides insurance for children in low-income families. "He got into it late and we didn't get our fair share (of federal funds) initially so we're kind of catching up."

Weddington also said that the Democratic Party in Texas has failed to appoint Hispanics to positions of power, whereas Republicans have put them in high-profile posts. Sanchez was appointed by Bush to the University of Texas System Board of Regents.

Sutherland said most of the appointees are "tokens."

"They're not people who understand working class families," he said.

On the issue of granting illegal immigrants amnesty, which has been opposed by most congressional Republicans, Weddington said that could drive Hispanics away from her party. But, she added, that there are larger issues.

"Here in El Paso there are (immigrants) who are legal citizens who are barely surviving," she said. "It becomes a political ping-pong game."

The strong Hispanic support for Laredo businessman Tony Sanchez, a Democrat who announced his candidacy for governor this week, shouldn't be taken for granted, said Susan Weddington, chairwoman of the Republican Party of Texas.

Officials raise possibility of delay in power deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials have repeatedly said full-scale electric deregulation, under which most Texans could change power companies, would start as scheduled on Jan. 1, but on Friday there were hints that a delay is possible.

Rep. Steve Wolens, who helped write the 1999 deregulation law, said he told electric-industry officials that if an extra month or two was needed to prepare for deregulation, the state would grant a delay.

"It's more important that we do it right than do it fast," Wolens, D-Dallas, said during a hearing of a legislative oversight committee on electric deregulation.

Public Utility Commissioner Brett Perlman told lawmakers if the commission is not ready on Jan. 1 to make sure that customers would be billed accurately, Texas should not move into deregulation.

"I don't think we have any reason to think it won't work," Perlman said, adding that nobody is at the point right now of deciding whether deregulation should be delayed.

While Wolens and Perlman raised concerns about the pace of deregulation, Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, the co-author of the 1999 law, said after the hearing he was more encouraged than ever that the state would be ready.

"For the first time, I am confident that they will be up and running on Jan. 1, 2002," said Sibley, who with Wolens is a co-chairman of the deregulation oversight committee.

Computer glitches at Electric Reliability Council of Texas, or ERCOT, which operates the state's main power grid, have caused repeated delays in a pilot program to test deregulation with a limited number of customers.

The pilot program started two months late, and as of Friday only about 1,200 customers were receiving power from a new provider while 70,000 other orders were on backlog.

ERCOT has been plagued by other problems, including short-term price spikes in wholesale electricity.

In addition, one of the companies expected to provide new competition to former monopoly utilities pulled out of Texas. About 40,000 customers had signed up with Shell Energy Services, and they will have to find another source of power.

ERCOT director Tom Noel said Friday that his organization is making progress at switching customers who signed up for the pilot program. By mid-November, all who signed up should be getting power from their new provider, he said.

"What you heard today is ERCOT is ready," Noel said.

Perlman, the PUC commissioner, said he believed bugs have been worked out but he was still worried that there wouldn't be much time to test customer-billing systems because of delays in the pilot program.

"We are right up against the wall here, and I think if everything goes well, we will be fine," Perlman said. "I am very concerned that we do have sufficient data to look at this."

Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, said he believed deregulation would start on time but that he might change his mind if pilot-program customers still had not been switched by November.

"I think we need to put the fire under some people to make sure they do what they need to do," Turner said.

Members of the joint legislative committee also criticized ERCOT officials over a contract with consulting firm Accenture, which integrates the main functions of ERCOT.

Terms of the contract are not public, and Wolens asserted that there could be a conflict of interest because Accenture also does business with two investor-owned utilities, TXU Corp. and Reliant Energy.

Long night for Midland Lee

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

LONGVIEW — It was a matter of momentum for the Midland Lee football team Friday night, as within the space of one play the Rebels had it all, then lost it all.

Leading Longview by four points, No. 2 Lee was in a prime position to put the game away with the ball sitting at Longview's 2-yard line late in the third quarter. But following a time out, a penalty and an interception in the end zone, momentum, the lead and eventually the game collapsed for the Rebels.

When Longview cornerback Lemario Hollis picked off Lee quarterback Cole Sampson in the end zone, the jolt it gave the Lobos and their home crowd was unmistakable. Longview parlayed that turn of events into 20 fourth quarter points, thanks to three short scoring runs by Fred Hawkins to stun the Rebels 33-17, evening the records for both teams at 1-1.

Longview	33

For the three-time defending state Class 5A champions, it was an uncharacteristic way to squander a potential victory. The call which led to the interception is open to a lot of second-guessing, and Lee coach John Parchman took full responsibility for it.

"I've got to answer for it since I call the plays, and I take the blame for it," said Parchman.

If Parchman wants to take some blame for the loss, certainly some credit should be given to Longview. On paper, the Lobos had to be considered underdogs, but there were few signs throughout the game that the Rebels — who defeated Longview 40-7 at home last season — were capable of thoroughly dominating the Lobos.

In fact, it was Longview which ended up doing most of the dominating. The Lobos jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter and won practically every statistical category, including out gaining the Rebels 420-255. It showed that whatever huge gap existed between the two teams last season has been closed consider-

SWEETWATER AT GREENWOOD

Sweetwater flees away with win

Greenwood comes up short against state ranked team

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD — So very, very close.

For the second straight year, the Greenwood Rangers' opportunity to upset a state-ranked team at J.M. King Memorial Stadium slipped through their fingers Friday night.

In a game reminiscent of last year's battle with Lamesa, the Greenwood Rangers had the No. 8 Mustangs down in the first half only be worn down in the second half with Sweetwater's depth.

Like most top 10 teams in the state, the Mustangs found a way to win as they came back from a 21-10 deficit at the half with 14 unanswered points in the third quarter for a hard-fought 24-21 victory.

Greenwood (1-1) had scratched and clawed for most of the game but the Mustangs (2-0) simply had too much muscle in the end.

"It was exactly like Lamesa," said a dejected Greenwood coach Bob Purser after the game recalling the 24-10 loss to Lamesa last year. "They wore us down, but you can't use that as an excuse. We've got to play people both ways. We're playing a 700 enrollment school so they've got two more kids for every one we've got. You've got to get tougher. I think you can do that in the long run, it's just tough to do that early in the year."

The game was a nail biter until the end. It wasn't until defensive back Mychal Carrillo batted away a Brandon Smith pass deep in Mustang territory that Sweetwater could call itself victorious.

"I saw it go in the air and I just remembered what they tell us in practice to not get beat deep," said Carrillo, talking about his defensive play late in the game. "When they threw the ball up, I knew I had a chance, so I just went up an knocked it down."

Carrillo not only came up with the big plays on defense, he was the engine that made the Mustang offense go. Whether it was running for 105 yards on 20 carries or delivering the decisive blow with a 71-yard scoring pass to Robert Henson with 35 seconds left in the third quarter, Carrillo proved the be a one-man Ranger killer.

"Greenwood's a great football team," Carrillo said. "They came out and put it to us. We knew we were coming into a tough environment but we just kept it together. We stayed in it and gave ourselves the opportunity to step up when we needed to."

Greenwood got off to a very good start in the game when Smith hooked up with Brandon Audas on a 67-yard TD pass. Audas broke tackles at midfield, made a spin move and dashed to the end zone to put Greenwood on top 7-0 in the first quarter.

But other than that big run by Audas, he was kept rather quiet by the Mustangs defense with 13 carries for 54 yards on the ground.

Sweetwater then came back to take a 10-3 lead with a 39-yard field goal by Allen McGee and then a 52-yard run by Jack Squires up the gut.

After a fabulous 74-yard kickoff return by Jordan Johnson, the Rangers marched to the Sweetwater 5-yard line where Smith punched in for a score to retake the lead for Greenwood, 14-10.

Stanton beats Reagan County with strong defensive effort

By Evan Pierce
MRT Correspondent

STANTON — The Stanton Buffaloes proved the old adage that the best offense is a good defense in a 20-7 victory over the Reagan County Owls.

One week after getting blanked in a crushing loss to the Greenwood Rangers, Stanton coach Mack Cotton and his Buffalos came within three minutes of posting a shutout of their own.

"I wish we'd got the shutout," Cotton said. "This win proves our character by being able to come back.

"This helps our confidence level but we can't rest on this win."

Stanton's offense never seemed to pick up steam the whole game but a strong defensive effort more than made up for it. The Buffalos (1-1) held the Owls (0-2) to a minus-13 yards rushing in the first half and only 24 yards on 21 carries for the entire game.

"Last week we played (defense) pretty decent. We just gave up big plays," Cotton said. "This week we didn't let that happen. We had to simplify things some."

The second asset Stanton seemed to possess Friday was a team of playmakers. Arturo Cazares blocked a first quarter field goal attempt by the Owls to set up a scoring opportunity by Jesse DeLeon.

Early in the fourth quarter, Javier Juarez opened up the Buffalo lead by taking a fumble recovery 52 yards for the score. Minutes later, Juarez struck again when he returned a punt 48 yards for a touchdown. Also in the fourth quarter, Stanton came up with a massive stop on a fake field goal attempt by Reagan County.

"When I saw the opportunities I took them," Juarez said. "I didn't play well last week. I had to make up for it."

Reagan County robbed Stanton of its potential shutout late in the fourth quarter when Charlie Gonzales connected with Michael Reyes for a 7-yard touchdown pass.

Gonzales threw solidly all night, it's just that most of his incompletions came in the form of dropped passes by his receivers.

U.S. Open will feature Williams sisters in final

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Serena Williams clubbed one last service winner on match point, then thrust out her arms, wiggled her hips and happily skipped to the net.

Barely two hours later, Venus Williams closed out her own semifinal victory Friday at the U.S. Open and celebrated with her trademark wave and pirouette.

The sisters paraded into the final with stunning ease, beating the world's two top-ranked players. Their prime-time sibling showdown to cap Super Saturday will be the first Grand Slam final between sisters in 117 years.

"All my life I've been waiting for this," said their mercurial father and coach, Richard Williams. "And now it can happen."

The pairing is no surprise — Serena won the Open in 1999, and defending champion Venus has won three of the past five major titles. But the way they waltzed into the final was remarkable.

Halfmann leads Rankin to victory

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

RANKIN — Marcus Halfmann's shoulder was separated. But it wasn't broken off.

The Rankin senior sat out during last week's season opener, a 7-0 win over Irion County, but he didn't want to miss another game. On Friday night, the tailback returned to the lineup and rushed for 146 yards and three touchdowns in only one half of work, leading his Red Devils to a 39-14 win over Sterling City.

"It is, partially (separated)," said Halfmann, whose team improved to 2-0. "I took a few hits on it, but it felt all right."

The Rankin offensive line made sure that Halfmann didn't have to take too many hits. After scoring on a seven-yard run to open the scoring late in the first quarter, Halfmann got much of his yardage on a pair of 51-yard touchdown runs in the second quarter. The second 51-yarder

Wind wrecks havoc in LPGA

Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Kelly Robbins needed no introduction to the gusty wind that sent shots soaring into the water and woods in the inaugural Williams Championship on Friday.

All too familiar with Oklahoma's devilish breezes, the former University of Tulsa player shot a 2-under-par 68 to tie Gloria Park for the first-round lead.

"There's nowhere with wind like it is here," Robbins said. "It's gusty all the time. It's funny — the first two days here it was pretty calm. I was telling people I couldn't believe it."

Play opened with morning showers at Tulsa Country Club. Then came the wind.

By the afternoon, players were left guessing on every shot as gusts exceeded 30 mph and leaves swirled on the greens. Only four players finished under par, the lowest number in a first round this year on the LPGA Tour.

Australian star Karrie Webb finished with a 74. She triple-bogeyed the 158-yard par-3 sixth hole, landing first in a pond and then in a bunker with her ball plugged in the sand.

"It was really tough out there," she said, "and you paid the penalty in bad shots."

Park, who lives in Australia, where she's used to strong winds, hit the fairways and nailed her approach shots. Her four birdies came on putts of 3, 4, 5 and 6 feet. She was 4 under when No. 6 snagged her.

"When I hit the ball I just hit it, and the wind came up and the ball was in air and got caught and I was not close to green and ended in the water," she said.

Robbins was 3 under before overshooting the 18th green. She chipped short, then sank an 8-foot putt for her second bogey.

Susie Redman and Australia's Rachel Teske were a stroke back at 69 and nine players followed at even par.

Former University of Tulsa player Nancy Lopez, who hadn't played in Tulsa since her college days, struggled after sitting out 1 1/2 months with an injured shoulder and knee. The Hall of Famer finished with a 12-over 82.

Miller strikes out 10 in win for Houston

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Wade Miller beat Milwaukee for the fifth time this year and the Houston Astros increased their NL Central lead to a season-high 5 1/2 games with a 5-3 victory over the Brewers on Friday night.

The Astros won for the 25th time in 34 games. They boosted their edge over Chicago, which lost to Atlanta 3-2.

Miller (16-7) struck out 10 and gave up one in eight innings. He improved to 7-0 lifetime against the Brewers, including 5-0 this season.

Miller tied a team record for most wins over one team in a single season. He matched Jim Golden (vs. New York in 1962), Joe Niekro (vs. San Diego in 1979) and Mike Scott (vs. Los Angeles in 1989).

Rangers 8, Royals 2

ARLINGTON— Alex Rodriguez broke his own American League record for homers by a shortstop with his career-best 43rd as the Texas Rangers beat the Kansas City Royals 8-2 Friday night.

Texas has won nine of 12 and is 43-34 since June 15. The Royals have lost four of their last five.

Pride takes Canadian Open lead

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Tiger Woods uncoiled his body with frightening speed, launching a drive that sailed so far down the right side of the fairway that fans must have wondered if it would ever come back to earth.

That was the problem. It never did.

With a ball lodged 20 feet high in the trees, Woods wound up with a triple bogey to fall seven strokes behind Dicky Pride and a bunch of other unlikely suspects at the top of the leaderboard Friday after two rounds of the Canadian Open.

The good news?

He gets to come back Saturday, still in the hunt to become the first player in 50 years to win golf's third-oldest national championship twice in a row.

"Anybody under par has a chance to win," Woods said.

Just about everybody who teed off early Friday in calm conditions was well under par, a record assault on the Blue Course at Royal Montreal Golf Club.

Pride made three straight birdies on the back nine and finished at 64, tying his career low round and giving him the course record.

The record lasted five minutes.

Scott Verplank, the first rookie to be a captain's pick for the Ryder Cup, birdied his last three holes for a 63. About an hour later, Canadian David Morland IV matched the 63.

When a wild day final came to an end, Pride no longer had the course record, only the lead.

"I've hit the ball solid and I'm putting well, so I'm giving myself opportunities to make birdie and that's kind of what you need to do," said Pride, who hasn't finished better than 46th all year and was the 36-hole leader for the first time in his career.

He was at 131 and had a one-stroke lead over Morland and Matt Gogel, who had a 67 despite playing in the afternoon when Royal Montreal became hard and crusty and difficult to navigate in swirling conditions.

Morland has a chance to become the first Canadian to win his national golf championship since Pat Fletcher in 1954.

His first memory of the Canadian Open was in 1986 when he was a 14-year-old volunteer in the media center. That was the year Greg Norman had a 62 in the third round at Glen Abbey.

"I thought, 'How could someone shoot 62 on that golf course?'" he said.

Others were wondering the same thing about Morland and Verplank. The explanation was simple — no wind, no problems. Six players who had early times shot 65 or better, which previously was the course record.

Vijay Singh missed the cut after rounds of 72-71, ending the second-longest streak among active players at 24.

Bob Estes, who went wire-to-wire to win in Memphis this year, had a 65 in the morning and was at 134 with Paul Gow and Mark O'Meara, who hasn't won anything since the Masters and British Open three years ago.

Steve Jones, who won the Canadian Open the last time it was played at Royal Montreal, was another stroke back after a 68, along with Match Play champion Steve Stricker.

Divots: Joel Edwards, coming off his first victory last week in Vancouver, was in jeopardy of missing the cut until playing his final 11 holes in 4 under. That was no small task considering he was playing with Woods and had to deal with a horde of photographers unaware that anyone else was playing golf. As Edwards was about to hit his approach on No. 2, three photographers ran across the fairway about 50 yards in front of him. "It was a circus," Edwards said. "But it was fun. I'd like to play with him again."

OPEN: Sampras, Marat will meet today

(From 1B)

tennis in beating No. 1 Martina Hingis 6-3, 6-2. Venus, at 21 the older sister by 15 months, then overpowered No. 2 Jennifer Capriati 6-4, 6-2.

"It's sweet. It's sweet. Just real nice, had a lot of blessings from God, and we're happy that we're healthy, and we're happy to be here," Venus said.

Added Serena: "It will be great history."

Super Saturday will also include a rematch of the 2000 men's final, with a recently rejuvenated Pete Sampras trying to avenge his loss to Russian Marat Safin in the semifinals. Another Russian, Yevgeny Kafelnikov, will play Australian Lleyton Hewitt for the other berth in Sunday's final.

Then the sisters, also best friends, will take the stage for the first prime-time Grand Slam women's final. It's the latest, most dramatic achievement in their remarkable rise from the mean streets of Compton, Calif., to magazine-cover celebrity.

Venus had the tougher match Friday against Capriati, who has done wonders for the game's popularity herself this year with a resurgence that included back-to-back Grand Slam titles.

As her barrettes and groundstrokes sparkled in the sunshine, Capriati raced to a 4-1 lead, but soon shadows crept across the court and the sparkle was gone. Williams, repeatedly picking on Capriati's backhand, won seven consecutive games to take command.

Capriati, playing in her first Open semifinal since 1991, became increasingly frustrated and frequently looked at her family between points. She reacted to one wild shot with a rueful grin, shrug and wave of helplessness to her father, Stefano. He smiled back.

Richard Williams, meanwhile, nervously roamed the stands, chatting with fans and taking photos.

The crowd was firmly behind Capriati, erupting in boos when a close call went against her in the final game of the first set. But at the end they applauded the second Williams win of the day.

"Venus, are you going to play another set?" Richard Williams shouted as she stuffed her racket in her bag. "I've still got some film."

The statistics told the tale of Serena's domination of Hingis. Williams smacked 40 winners, including serves, to five for Hingis. Williams hit 10 aces with no double faults, missed only seven first serves and won seven games at love.

In the last five games, Hingis put only four of 21 returns into play. Things went no better when she served, as Williams repeatedly feasted on her 65-mph second serve.

Hingis was on the defensive from the start, losing the first six points and falling behind 5-1. Williams hit three aces and a service win to win the final game of the opening set, then walked off the court flexing her arm like a bodybuilder.

By the time she ran off 10 consecutive points midway through the final set, Hingis was clearly flustered. Her next serve barely made it to the bottom of the net, and soon she was in the interview room explaining her latest Grand Slam defeat.

"I couldn't read her serve," Hingis said. "She was hitting the lines in the corners. It was difficult to reach and even if I got there, there was not much I could do with it."

The only previous Grand Slam final between sisters took place at 1884 Wimbledon, when Maud Watson rallied to beat her sibling Lillian for the first major tournament title. Although Richard Williams called Saturday's match a dream come true, he said he planned to head home to Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., and wouldn't watch, not even on TV.

"I doubt any person in their right mind would want to see their kids out there fighting like hell in an arena," he said.

Spencer completes Busch season sweep at Richmond

Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Jimmy Spencer pulled away from fellow Winston Cup regular Matt Kenseth on a restart with 35 laps to go Friday night and won the crash-filled Autolite Fram 250 Busch Grand National race.

The victory was Spencer's third in 13 starts in the series this year and gave him a sweep of the Busch races at Richmond, both in dominating style. He led 192 laps in May, and led 169 laps this time.

The race also put life back into the series points race as Kevin Harvick struggled with an oil leak and wound up 27th. The poor showing cut his lead over Jason Keller from 316 points to 274 with seven races left. Keller finished 13th.

Spencer appeared to have the strongest car, but he rarely got a chance to show off his Chevrolet's power because of a string of nine cautions that slowed the race for 58 laps until the final green flag on lap 235.

Then, beating Kenseth to the first turn, Spencer gradually pulled away, building a lead of more than a second and winning going away.

His margin of victory was 1.345 seconds.

Kenseth held on for second, followed by Virginia native Kevin Grubb, Geoffrey Bodine and Johnny Sauter in his Busch debut.

"This is unbelievable," Sauter said.

Defending race champion Jeff Burton finished ninth.

The race was the first since NASCAR levied fines against four Busch drivers for their actions during the race at Darlington Raceway last Saturday, and more fines are likely after another ugly confrontation.

Greg Biffle, third in the points race, had tangled with Jay Sauter earlier in the race, and was passing him on lap 184 outside of Turn 4 when Sauter's car suddenly veered into Biffle's, sending both in the wall.

The wrecked cars were still steaming on the track when Biffle climbed from his, walked over to Sauter's and delivered a roundhouse right-hand punch, apparently to Sauter's face, through the window of the car.

"I think it was pretty obvious that the 43 wrecked us back," Biffle said, claiming Sauter's crew had promised revenge earlier in the race.

"Muhammed Ali he's not," Sauter said after leaving his car.

Biffle finished 35th and dropped to fourth in the points race.

Pistons trade Cleaves to Sacramento

Eds: UPDATES with comment from Kings' Petrie

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Mateen Cleaves, a homegrown star who led Michigan State to a national title before going to Detroit as a No. 1 draft choice, was traded to Sacramento on Friday.

The Pistons traded Cleaves, who led the Spartans to the 2000 championship, for guard Jon Barry and a future No. 1 draft pick.

"Sometimes you have to do things that aren't going to be popular," Pistons president Joe Dumars said. "But we think we upgraded our backcourt and we were able to add a first-round pick."

Cleaves will join former Michigan star Chris Webber, who chose to re-sign with the Kings during the offseason after considering coming home to play in Detroit. Cleaves will backup Mike Bibby and battle Bobby Jackson for playing time.

"Mateen's a very physical, young point guard who is obviously still very early in his career," said Geoff Petrie, the Kings' president of basketball operations. "He gives us additional depth and insurance at a very important position in our league."

Cleaves' mother, Frances Cleaves, said her prayers have been answered.

"I wanted Mateen to play with Chris Webber, but I was praying that it would happen here," she said. "But I guess it's still going to work out."

Dumars said he insisted on getting a first-round pick in exchange for Cleaves, although the Kings will not have to give up the pick earlier than 2004.

"They got a lot for Mateen," said Cleaves' agent, Charles Tucker. "He hates to leave, but he just wants to play."

Cleaves lit up the Target Center in Minneapolis with an ear-to-ear grin when the Pistons drafted him in the first round last summer.

He averaged 5.4 points, 2.7 assists and 1.7 turnovers in 78 games last season.

RANKIN: Red Devils rush for 447 yards came with only seven seconds left in the first half, giving Rankin a 27-0 lead at the intermission.

"I give all the credit to the line," Halfmann said. "All I saw was green grass. All I had to do was run it."

Halfmann didn't carry the ball in the second half, except on a punt return. He didn't do much wrong in the game. He hit only 3-of-5 extra point kicks, but he could be excused if his leg was tired from all that running. He did fumble the ball once, but even that was cause for celebration in a way: last week, the Red Devils lost six fumbles, but this week they only lost that one.

"It's strange when you can say, 'Thank God for one fumble,'" Rankin coach Jeff Butts said.

Halfmann wasn't the only Red Devil that ran well on Friday. Fullback Alex De La Paz scored on an eight-yard run in the second quarter. Garrett Rogers dashed 57 yards for a TD late in the third to put Rankin up 33-0. Rogers finished with 112 rushing yards on only five carries.

After Sterling City broke up the shutout late in the fourth quarter, Rankin freshman Daniel Rivera answered with a 67-yard TD run, going nearly untouched — all any Eagle could do was yank on Rivera's jersey at the line of scrimmage.

In total, Rankin rushed for 447 yards on 43 carries.

"That's going to be our game," Butts said. "We don't mind throwing the ball, but... we're going to rely on our offensive line (and running game). It still needs some work, but they've made great strides, and I'm proud of their effort. I know each day in practice and I hope every Friday night, that they're getting better."

Quarterback Junior Garcia didn't complete a pass in two attempts — he didn't have to. He did have an interception, but it was he who did the intercepting, picking off Sterling City's Sims Price on the last play of the half. Garcia added 68 yards on the ground.

The Rankin defense held the Eagles to only 72 yards of total offense in the first half, and Sterling City's only scores came in the final two minutes of the game. Price, the Eagles' quarterback, hit 11-of-23 passes for 101 yards in the game, but much of his success (and 65 yards) came on Sterling City's last two possessions of the game.

Price connected with Richard Leija on a 19-yard pass to put the Eagles on the board with 1:52 left, cutting Rankin's lead to 33-7.

After Rivera's lightning strike of a touchdown run, which came on the first play of Rankin's next possession, Price was able to complete three more passes, including a 28-yard TD pass to Justin Hankamer.

Butts was glad to get another win, and this one was much prettier that the fumble-filled 7-0 win over Irion County in the opener. But while Friday's game was an improvement, Butts said the Red Devils will have to keep improving.

"The (teams) we have left to play are all big-time testers," he said. "There's no off week for us. We've got to play hard and continue to get better."

LEE: Rebels end 10-game winning streak

ably.

"I think it's a tremendous step forward for our program," said second year Longview coach Pat Collins. "Our kids all had to start from scratch to put it all together. They've worked extremely hard for a year to get to this point."

It was immediately clear that the Lobos weren't going to be pushed around the way they were last season. Quarterback Joel Armstrong, in his second year as a starter, was harder to pin down than Gary Condit in an interview, posting 207 yards of total offense.

Armstrong's other backfield mates, Hawkins and wingback Willie Andrews (133 yards on 14 carries) were slippery as well, as they broke several tackles en route to making big plays.

"We thought assignment wise we would be all right, but we got in positions throughout the game where we didn't tackle them," said Parchman.

The Rebels got untracked offensively in the second quarter to tie the game 10-10, as Freddie Jones scored on a 3-yard run and Fletcher Pendergrass kicked a 21-yard field goal. Longview took a 13-10 halftime lead when Alex Cammack kicked a 42-yard field goal with 12 seconds left in the half.

Lee got down to basics in taking the second half kickoff and going 75 yards in 10 plays to score. Nine of those were runs, as Jones capped the drive by going in from a yard out to give the Rebels their only lead of the game, 17-13.

Jones, subbing for the injured Jacobe Kendrick, led all rushers with 158 yards on 25 carries, proving that he could be a workhorse.

"We were pleased with the way Freddie did and we moved the ball most of the evening," said Parchman.

Lee then made what looked like a key stop, forcing Longview to punt for the only time all evening, and when Drew Winston blocked Larandall McKind's kick, the Rebels took over at Longview's 45, and looked ready to take hold of the game for good.

The Rebels got two first downs on penalties and had the ball with a first-and-goal at Longview's 2. But some confusion on the field forced a timeout, then Lee got moved back to the seven because of an illegal procedure penalty.

After moving the ball so effectively on the ground, Parchman chose to throw it on the first crack at the end zone.

"That was not the most genius thing in the world," said Parchman. "It wasn't anybody's fault but mine. We couldn't get anybody open."

Sampson rolled right as the play took a long time to develop, and Hollis intercepted the pass in the end zone. Although Hollis fumbled the ball as he was running around in the end zone, he fell on it and the Lobos got the ball at their own 20.

"To me that was a big turning point in the game," said Collins. "It gave us a great deal of enthusiasm on the sidelines."

Two plays later, Andrews busted loose for a 57-yard gain to Lee's 10, and on the first play of the fourth quarter, Hawkins went in from two yards out to give Longview a 20-17 lead.

It was all downhill from there for the Rebels. After Hawkins capped a short drive with a five-yard run to make it 27-17, Lee's Erick Gutierrez fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Longview took over at Lee's 13. Hawkins scored from seven yards out on fourth down to put the finishing touches on the upset.

The loss ended a 10-game winning streak for the Rebels, but Parchman wants his team to concentrate on starting a new streak.

"The thing is to come back and grow from it and harden a little bit as a group," said Parchman. "We're going to feel down about it for a little while, but we'll move on."

NOTES: This was the first loss by the Rebels to a non-District 4-5A team from the state of Texas since 1997, when they lost in the bi-district round of the playoffs to Amarillo High. That was also the last playoff game Lee lost.

RANGERS: Greenwood has 75 yards of total offense during second half

(From 1B)

Smith later added a 1-yard run late in the second quarter to give Greenwood the 21-10 advantage at the half.

Sweetwater would then respond in a big way to start the second half. On time-consuming drive, the Mustangs started to use their backfield depth to wear down the Rangers. The 11-play, 69-yard drive culminated with a 1-yard run by Scott Reddic to Greenwood's lead 21-17. Most of the work on the drive came from fullback Squires, who ended with 108 yards on 16 carries, and Carrillo.

"We just all got focused and asked the linemen to respond to the challenge," Carrillo said. "That drive was huge because we went on and scored. We knew we were in the game."

A big key in the second half was the inability of the Rangers to move the ball. Greenwood managed just 75 yards of offense in the second half.

"We made some plays in the first half and we didn't make any plays in the second half and they did," Purser said. "The longer our defense had to stay out there, the worse it got. We just didn't run enough plays in the second to do much adjusting."

Florida officials declare Dupay ineligible to play

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Known best as the bad boy of Florida basketball, Teddy Dupay faced his most humbling moment Friday, forced to say goodbye to the Gators after school officials declared him ineligible.

The senior point guard announced the punishment himself, standing before media and delivering a prepared two-minute speech. He then stepped away from the podium, hugged coach Billy Donovan and walked away, his eyes glassing over with tears.

"I understand that I have violated NCAA rules and I take full responsibility for those actions," Dupay said. "I put myself in a situation that I should not have put myself in, and I am paying the price for that."

Athletic director Jeremy Foley said student confidentiality laws kept him from revealing specific reasons for the action. He did confirm that the investigation began in April, and that campus police had reached a point where "we felt the investigation was complete."

Later, campus police released a statement saying they had sent to the state attorney's office results of an investigation they began April 5 "into allegations of minor gambling infractions by a University of Florida student."

The NCAA mandates a one-year suspension for any student who solicits or accepts a bet involving college or pro sports. Foley said it was his understanding that Dupay would not be eligible to play elsewhere in college. NCAA gambling expert Bill Saum did not immediately return telephone messages left at his office.

Foley said the NCAA had determined Dupay's situation was an "individual eligibility issue, and not an institutional issue."

A 5-foot-11 guard who set the state prep scoring record at Mariner High in Cape Coral, Dupay walked into Donovan's office during his sophomore year of high school and told him he wanted to play for the Gators.

That was before playing for Florida was in vogue, and Dupay was considered the beginning of Donovan's incredible recruiting streak that still continues.

"I love Teddy," Donovan said. "There are people who do things wrong, but I will stand by him the rest of his life. I think he knows in his heart that I'm behind him. I'll miss not having him around, but our relationship will go on for a long, long time."

Gordon wins pole at Richmond

Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Jeff Gordon's championship drive rolled on Friday as the Winston Cup points leader posted a fast lap at 124.902 mph to win the pole position for the Chevrolet Monte Carlo 400 on Saturday night.

Gordon, who has a 342-point lead over Ricky Rudd with 11 races remaining in the season, earned his fourth pole at Richmond by knocking short track specialist Rusty Wallace to the outside of the front row.

"That was an awesome effort there today," Gordon said, noting he started off near the bottom in practice. "We threw a lot of things at this race car today — changed gears three times, and shocks and springs."

The pole is the sixth season for Gordon, the defending race champion.

In a points race that he's taken control of over the past month, turning a 45-point lead into its more comfortable current margin, Gordon said things have just broken right for his team after lots of hard work.

Wallace, who was clocked at 125.510 mph, will start second for the fourth time this season. He's still seeking his first pole of the year, this after dominating the series a year ago by starting first nine times.

"I guess the upsetting thing about it is that every single time I've qualified second this year, I got beat right at the very end by Gordon," said Wallace, now second to Gordon three times. "I knew when he had to go out behind me that it was going to be a shootout, but it was a good run."

The front row features possibly the best two short-track racers in stock car racing's premier series, and competitors who have had their share of confrontations on the track and in the pits at Richmond.

In May, both seemed poised to challenge leader Tony Stewart for the victory in a late race restart, but Wallace ran Gordon up the track, slowing both of them down as Stewart went on to an easy victory.

A few years earlier, after leading most of the way, Wallace was passed by Gordon and immediately bumped him from behind in the second turn, sending Gordon slamming into the wall in the midst of the title chase.

Both confrontations, and many others between the two, have ended with Gordon seething, Wallace acting surprised and the tension festering.

After Gordon's Chevrolet and Wallace's Ford, the second row will have Sterling Marlin in a Dodge and Virginia native Jeff Burton's Ford.

Burton's older brother, Ward, earned the fifth spot, also in a Dodge, and will start just inside Bobby Labonte, the top qualifying Pontiac.

Croce may join NBC

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Former 76ers president Pat Croce is close to joining NBC sports as a member of its NBA studio show, a source familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press on Friday.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Croce's primary role would be to provide an executive's perspective. Croce won't be an analyst.

Kevin Sullivan, NBC's vice president of communications, said the network is in the process of finalizing its plans.

"We'll have an announcement in due course," Sullivan said.

In his five years as president of the Sixers, Croce was known for his zany antics. His last stunt came during the NBA Finals against the Lakers when he scaled a suspension bridge and helped hang a giant banner with the words: "Go Sixers, Beat L.A."

Croce stepped down as president of the Sixers on July 25.

Texas A&M quarterback Mark Farris, left, scrambles past Wyoming's Jon Aimone for a long gain Thursday during the fourth quarter of Texas A&M's 28-20 victory over Wyoming.

Farris passes for career-high in yards as Aggies escape Wyoming

Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — The chilly mountain air, Wyoming's 7,200-foot elevation and the Cowboys' no-huddle offense nearly sent Texas A&M home with a loss.

With the temperature sinking to near 40 degrees, Mark Farris passed for a career-high 341 yards and a touchdown to lead Texas A&M to a 28-20 victory over Wyoming on Thursday night.

"It's probably the game of the year for them, so we're glad to come up here and take their best shot and get it done," he said.

Texas A&M safety Jay Brooks, who tipped a pass that led to an early interception by Jonte Buhl, said Wyoming's no-huddle gave the Aggies fits.

"With the altitude, it was affecting everybody," he said.

A&M kicker Cody Scates missed field goals of 24, 43 and 52 yards and an extra point, costing the Aggies 10 points.

"Those were critical kicks we didn't make," Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said. "We've got a lot of work to do before we win again."

In the end, Farris made the difference, completing 30 of 42 passes, including 12 of 14 on third down. His previous high was 311 yards against Baylor last year.

"He's got a lot of poise. He's got a lot of confidence," said receiver Greg Porter, who had four catches for 45 yards. Teammate Bethel Johnson led all receivers with six catches for 50 yards.

For Wyoming, it was a 40-point improvement from last year's 51-3 loss in College Station, Texas. But it still hurt.

"We know we're a better team this year, and everybody knows that," Cowboys running back Nate Scott said. "We want that 'W' bad, but we're not going to hang our heads."

Joe Weber had three short scoring runs as the Aggies finished with 507 yards in offense, including 166 on the ground. Redshirt freshman Keith Joseph led all rushers with 105 yards on 21 carries.

Texas A&M held a 507-273 advantage in total offense.

The Aggies had a chance to go up by 21 late in the first half but a 60-yard drive ended with Wyoming's Lamar James picking off a pass by Farris in the end zone.

The game remained in doubt until the Aggies' Jarrod Penright sacked Cowboy quarterback Casey Bramlet and forced a fumble for a 13-yard loss at the Wyoming 42 with about two minutes left. The Cowboys recovered the ball, but a long pass on fourth-and-23 fell incomplete.

After trailing 21-14 at the half, Wyoming closed to 21-20 on Jarvis Wallum's 25-yard field goal with 2:18 left in the third quarter. His 52-yarder, a career-best, cut A&M's lead to 21-17 nine minutes earlier.

Interceptions by Sammy Davis and Buhl led to 21 straight first-half points by Texas A&M after Wyoming jumped to a 7-0 lead on a 4-yard run by Scott. All three first-half touchdowns by the Aggies were 1-yard runs by Weber.

Bramlet, 11-of-26 for 171 yards, hit Malcom Floyd for a 30-yard touchdown pass to draw Wyoming to 21-14 with 3:47 left in the first half.

Davis' interception, his third of the season, and an 18-yard return set up Weber's third TD, which came at 7:37 of the second quarter, and a conversion pass from Farris to Johnson put the Aggies up 21-7.

Charges accuse Alabama of major recruiting violations

Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — NCAA charges released Friday accused Alabama's football program of major recruiting violations, including paying cash for players, academic fraud and throwing parties with strippers.

The alleged violations occurred from 1995 until last year — before the current Crimson Tide coaching staff was hired.

But the allegations painted a sordid picture for a scandal-plagued program once known for winning national championships and boasting that it stayed out of the NCAA doghouse.

A booster offered a high school coach $115,000 for a player and actually made three payments of $10,000, the NCAA charged. Ex-Tide coaches were accused of repeatedly breaking rules and then denying any wrongdoing to investigators.

The NCAA said more than just money was involved in the improprieties.

Prospective players were allegedly entertained by strippers several times during parties at a university apartment between 1997 and 1999. And a former assistant coach failed to report knowing about a recruit who let someone take a college entrance exam for him, the charges alleged.

Those violations and most of the rest occurred under former head coach Mike DuBose, who became embroiled in a sexual harassment scandal before resigning last year at the close of a 3-8 season.

But the allegations went back six years, when Gene Stallings was head coach. The NCAA at the time was already investigating the Crimson Tide for other violations under Stallings.

The NCAA charged that a booster in 1995 promised a recruit $20,000 to sign with the Tide. He paid in $10,000 cash payments delivered in a plastic grocery sack and, later, in a big envelope, the NCAA said.

The university did not make public the identities of anyone involved in the charges.

The public airing of the charges gave Alabama fans their first full look at the results of months of work by NCAA investigators, but university President Andrew Sorensen said there were "no surprises" for the school.

"The allegations involve incidents we either self reported or investigated jointly with the NCAA over the past 10 months," Sorensen said.

Athletic Director Mal Moore said the school would respond to the charges quickly.

Sorensen and Moore read short statements during a media briefing that was broadcast live in many cities across the football-crazy state. They left without taking questions.

There was no mention of possible penalties, but sanctions could include a loss of scholarships, a ban from TV or bowls, and a loss of postseason revenues. The university could impose some penalties on itself before an expected appearance before the NCAA Infractions Committee.

In one bright spot for the university, officials were not accused of having a lack of institutional control — a charge that could have resulted in the most severe sanctions.

Alabama football lost scholarships, was banned from a bowl appearance and was placed on probation during its last scrape with the NCAA, in 1995. The basketball program avoided penalties in 1999 after reporting claims a former assistant basketball coach had tried to create a fund to pay players.

Alabama could be considered a "repeat offender" under NCAA rules, leading to a possible shutdown of the football program. But such a harsh penalty was considered unlikely because the university has said it cooperated fully with the current investigation.

Oklahoma defense headed for greatness

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — North Texas made only five first downs in a loss to TCU last weekend. Now it faces an Oklahoma defense that Sooner coach Bob Stoops says is ahead of where it was this time a year ago.

"In fact, it's not even close," Stoops said.

Linebacker Rocky Calmus and strong safety Roy Williams, Stoops said, are as good at their positions as any players he has seen.

Williams and cornerback Derrick Strait began the year on the watch list for the Jim Thorpe Award, which goes to the nation's top defensive back, and this week safety Brandon Everage was added to the list.

The defense had a shaky fourth quarter against North Carolina in the opener two weeks ago, giving up two touchdowns. But it followed that with a dismantling of Air Force's tricky option game.

In a 44-3 victory, the third-ranked Sooners held Air Force without a touchdown for the first time in 70 games. It was the lowest Air Force point total since a 30-3 loss to Brigham Young in 1993.

"I think people need to have great respect for our Air Force game," Stoops said. "You don't see anyone else who wants to go up there and play them. ... We've got a chance to be a very good defense."

The Oklahoma defense this year, he said, has a chance to be the best he has coached.

"We're close to being where we were at the end of last year," he said. "We just need to continue to play more to get back to that level."

That level is what carried Oklahoma to the national championship last season. As the offense sputtered in the closing weeks, the defense came through with big stops and big plays. It was most dominant in the Orange Bowl, when the highly regarded Florida State offense failed to score.

Oklahoma has already scored three touchdowns on defense — an interception return by Strait, and fumble returns by Calmus and defensive end Cory Heinecke. Air Force managed only 137 yards rushing — about 150 fewer than its season average last year.

"I thought was just an exceptional football game," Stoops said. "It just says a lot about the way we're playing team defense."

Fighting Irish ready for rematch at Nebraska

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska has played two games to warm up for Notre Dame, and the Fighting Irish open their season after eight months of preparing for the Cornhuskers.

The fifth-ranked Cornhuskers (2-0) and the No. 17 Irish play Saturday night in a rematch of last year's overtime thriller, which Nebraska won 27-24. It renewed a rivalry that isn't exactly friendly.

The Irish still remember Eric Crouch's 7-yard touchdown run, his third of the game, that ruined a two-touchdown comeback.

They are ready for another shot at the Huskers.

"I hope everyone in those stands is wearing red just to give me all the more desire to show them," linebacker Rocky Boiman said."

The Huskers have already had two chances to show what they've got, and so far it hasn't been much on offense. They beat TCU in the season opener 21-7 on just 310 yards of offense and last week got a 42-14 win over Troy State after the Trojans stopped two Husker drives inside the 20-yard line.

Nebraska's defense has held both opponents to fewer than 200 yards and given the offense a chance to work through the kinks as its seven new starters adjust.

Nebraska I-back Dahrran Diedrick, who ran for 177 yards and three touchdowns last Saturday, said the two games should have been enough to prepare the younger players for Notre Dame.

The Irish have been waiting for this weekend for a very long time. Notre Dame was within range of upsetting the top-ranked Huskers a year ago by breaking a kickoff return and taking a punt back for second-half touchdowns that forced the overtime.

The Irish got a field goal and were two plays away from ending the game in overtime, only to let Crouch get away.

"They know what the challenges are. That's what they came here to be a part of," Irish coach Bob Davie said. "For us to get it back, we need to go win."

RELIGION

Protestant magazines salute 'The Simpsons'

By Richard Ostling
Associated Press

How God appeared in a dream: "Perfect teeth. Nice smell. A class act all the way."

The family religion: "You know, the one with all the well-meaning rules that don't work in real life. Uh, Christianity."

Church signboard slogan: "God Welcomes His Victims."

This is just a very small sample of one-liners about religion from "The Simpsons."

For 12 seasons and counting, the animated series has mined religious subjects for laughs like no other show on television.

The staple of the Fox network has sometimes been called sacrilegious — rather than satirical — for its jabs at clergy and the faithful alike. But religious commentators, especially this year, have looked at the animated series and found plenty to like.

In a rare coincidence, two leading Protestant magazines, the liberal Christian Century and conservative Christianity Today, simultaneously ran friendly cover stories on the show. Christian Century said it's appreciated in religious circles, while Christianity Today hailed the good-guy characterization of the Simpsons' evangelical neighbor, Ned Flanders.

An anthology, "The Simpsons and Philosophy: The D'oh! of Homer" (Open Court), reported religion was an element in 70 percent of randomly selected episodes and the major theme in 10 percent.

A new book, "The Gospel According to the Simpsons," says the animated series shows respect for religion.

PERFECT PARTNERSHIP

First Presbyterian serves as neighbor to MHS

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

On the wall of the gymnasium at First Presbyterian Church are written the gym's rules, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your strength, and with all your mind. Love your neighbor as yourself."

The church's activities director, Ron Schroeder, said after posting that Luke 10:29 passage, he didn't see a need for other rules.

"We started to post a list of 'Nos'," he said, "No cursing, no gum chewing, no playing without shirts, but that (Luke 10:29) says it all." It's a rule that guides the church outside the gym as well.

First Presbyterian and Midland High School have been across-the-street neighbors through about five generations. And like good neighbors, they've grown to love and care for one another without a tit-for-tat accounting of favors done, or paybacks owed.

The Rev. Jerry Hilton, pastor at First Presbyterian, said he sees the church's proximity to the landlocked Midland High as a wonderful opportunity to carry out its mission statement "... to be faithful and obedient servants.

"We like to understand ourselves as a servant congregation," said Hilton. "Every teacher in this community is doing a holy work, and we want to aid in that every way that we can.

"As far as Midland High is concerned, we try to never say no to any request that they may have. We're a partner in education, and it's a vital part of our ministry."

That partnership has manifested itself in some extraordinary ways in the last few years, as the landlocked and aging Midland High has struggled to cope with a burgeoning census and cramped facilities.

Perfect reason assumed a beastly body and held the two in perfect tension

Williams

A society matron once quipped, "The difference between us and the beasts is their failure to accessorize." My mind immediately conjured images of lady pigs with scarves and matching purses, or men pigs wearing cravats and monogrammed cufflinks, right out of George Orwell's "Animal Farm."

And then there's the comment made by a friend as we were observing a room full of 2-year-olds shoving and grabbing each others' toys: "You know," she said, "little children are not like little animals." She paused for effect. "Little children are little animals."

Fact is, we are beasts; we are animals — with a difference, of course. We are beasts with a better brain, animals with an animus: We have higher IQs and we have souls. This means reading poetry has at least as valid a claim as gorging on chocolate. Personally, I think there's a time and a place for both poetry and chocolate; nevertheless, the point is we are not held hostage by our lower natures. We are trainable. In fact, the courting habits of 14-year-olds provide a glimpse into the process of how intelligent and civilized men and women learn to curb and channel that initial impulse shared by the animal kingdom, (including peacocks, rhinoceri and monkeys, etc.) when a female parades past a male.

The history of thought includes the history of how humankind has sought to resolve this dichotomy. The ancient Greeks gave worth to only one-half of the soma/sema split — Logos (reason) was good, but the body was as worthless as a used paper sack. The Enlightenment also thought highly of reason; Jonathan Swift never did get over the fact that he was part Yahoo.

Jesus provides us with the best example of the integration of body, mind and spirit. Perfect reason (Logos), God assumed a beastly body, just like ours, and in the person of Jesus, held the two in perfect tension, without sin. Several miracles are involved here. First, that the God of the universe allowed Himself to become susceptible to warts, pneumonia, hunger, temptation and the heartbreak of psoriasis is beyond the imagination. All to save us from ourselves.

The second miracle is that Jesus came to save our souls, but He also includes our bodies in the divine scheme. Our bodies will be resurrected, only they will be different — no itching, no aching, no inordinate desire. I can't even imagine how lovely that will be.

In the meantime, what I'd really like to do is finish off the box of chocolates sitting on top of the refrigerator. Instead, I guess I'll settle for one (well, maybe two), and go read a poem.

NEIGHBOR: Bible verse serves as gym's rules

(From 1C)

In 2000, the church completed a family life center, including classrooms adjacent to the kitchen, and a regulation-size gymnasium complete with an upper-level walking track, which the church's governing board immediately opened to the community.

One of the first beneficiaries of the family life center was Midland High's sports department. First Presbyterian has in effect given Midland High three gyms instead of two for their six volleyball and basketball teams, thus eliminating the necessity of late after-school practice.

The center hosts practice sessions for the Lady Bulldogs' volleyball and basketball programs, as well as pre-season scrimmage games.

TAAS testing is done at First Presbyterian, as well as tutoring for TAAS; church member volunteers do the tutoring.

While the center has exponentially increased Midland High's presence across the street, the church's participation in Midland's education system extends far beyond Midland High, and goes back earlier than the past two years.

Five or six years ago, the church began to host monthly prayer luncheons for Midland's teachers. Various ministers throughout the community are invited to come and give devotionals on a rotating schedule, and teachers may bring concerns of staff and students. Notes of these are placed on the prayer list and prayed for by First Presbyterian parishioners who come to the church's prayer closet and pray each day.

Drew Anderson, the church's business administrator, said he thinks the prayer luncheons are key to the church's ministry to the schools.

"I think of all the things we do, that that's the most important. Teachers turn in prayer requests that are usually anonymous, and we disburse those among the prayer resources we have here, where, a couple of hours a day, every day, a member will pray for all the concerns both of the church members and the members of MISD."

Every Friday, First Presbyterian hosts "Lunch Bunch" for Midland High students, where they're served all the pizza and cookies they can eat for $3, and once lunch is over, can work off the meal in the gym. About a year ago, the students initiated a short devotional time during Lunch Bunch. It all began, Anderson said, when a couple of girls forgot their lunch money.

"But they called and asked if they could come over anyway, and say grace," he remembered. "So we said sure, and when they came over, they didn't say the blessing, they sang it. It was great! Ever since, kids have been giving devotionals. Nobody goes into the gym until the devotional is over."

The band also uses the family life center, with sectional practice going on during summer, when the school is closed. Hilton said now that school has started, he misses the music.

"It's great to come in and hear the trumpets," said Hilton. "It really gets you going."

The Rev. Jim Houston-Hencken said he enjoyed it, too, but probably would get more paperwork done now that the music has stopped.

"Every time they played the 'Star Spangled Banner,' I would have to stop what I was doing and stand at attention," he said, joking.

Anderson said the students' use of the building, while largely secular, has served to make them more comfortable in a building devoted to worship.

"Probably 90 percent of the kids who come over are not Presbyterian, and many don't have a church home. We're creating a window for unchurched kids who can come in and get to feel comfortable in a church."

Hilton said though, that they avoid sectarianism.

"We're not interested in creating a bunch of Presbyterians. We're interested in sharing the love of God in any way that we can through servanthood, and that includes luncheons and activities, and making our facilities available whenever they need them."

First Presbyterian's outreach extends beyond the schools, however. The custodians open the doors of the center at daily at 6 a.m. for the benefit of early morning walkers who want to use the gym's walking track. Twice each week at lunchtime and three times a week at night, downtown businessmen use the gym for basketball.

Once a month, the church hosts an open forum, inviting community leaders to speak during the noon hour, during which time anyone wishing to eat lunch may do so for $5. Last month the speaker on the hot seat was MISD Superintendent Robert Nicks.

Hilton reiterated this "open door" policy of the church has resulted in untold blessings.

"As we said, as a outcome of our emphasis on servanthood, we want people to feel comfortable here, to feel at home, so that when they need a church, or a place to come home to, the church is where they'll come."

Other churches of all denominations use the gym for sports activities. A current schedule sheet shows a list of 24 upcoming events, including band sectionals, health classes, a D-FY-IT luncheon, football, baseball, soccer, choir and cheerleader booster meetings and dinners; a debate team banquet and an ROTC parents meeting.

Every January, the center hosts Saturday morning Upward Basketball programs for 400 to 500 boys and girls in grades 1 through 6. For children who can't afford the fees for uniforms and incidental costs, church members and organizations fund scholarships. Last year there were 130 players on scholarship.

"This has proved to be a wonderful opportunity to reach out to children in the community," said Ron Schroeder, director of the family life center. He said the curriculum includes devotional time, practice and games, with every player participating in every game.

"We rotate the starting lineup and we have the players run through a door and onto the court through a smoke machine that we got from a strip club in Odessa, and we call their names as they come out and everybody applauds, and the kids just love it," said Schroeder.

"One morning, I had a call from the mother of a little boy who was scheduled to be in the starting lineup, and he was really sick. But his mother said he wanted so much to run out through the smoke that she would like to go ahead and have him suit up, and run onto the court and have his name called, then go home.

"So I said sure, bring him in, and she did, and then took him home to get well."

As any parent with teen-agers will readily point out, there are times when the volume gets a little too loud to be comfortable. The staff tries not to schedule high school activities too near the sanctuary during weddings or Midland Odessa Symphony performances, but for the most part, given the size of the plant at First Presbyterian, schedules can be worked out.

"We've had funeral receptions where we walked past Midland High kids having meetings, and it's worked out just fine," said Hilton. "Now and then there's a parking problem, but the staff at Midland High is very watchful about that."

Midland High staff call the family life center "the Midland High annex." Dennis Stratton, instructional services director at MHS, said the church has been the ideal neighbor.

"Of course the relationship between Midland High and First Presbyterian benefits us as a school because geographically, we're in a downtown location with limited space. We have had to seek other resources and we have purchased a building a block away, but many times the academic space, athletic space and the ability to meet group space requirements has simply been inadequate or inappropriate to what we wanted to do," he said.

"I have never asked for the use of a facility that they have not been very, very gracious, without ever expressing a desire to say anything about church.

"The nature of the relationship is such that I've never planned scheduled classes at First Pres, because it doesn't belong to us, but through cooperation and communication over the past 10 to 12 years, this has grown into a partnership that is of tremendous benefit to us.

"My position is that anything I can do for First Pres, I'll do."

SIMPSONS: Characters are microcosm of religious types

(From 1C)

The latest analysis, which was published last Saturday, claims — strange as it might seem — the cartoon "more accurately reflects the faith lives of Americans than any other show in the medium."

In "The Gospel According to The Simpsons" (Westminster John Knox), Mark I. Pinsky notes the characters regularly pray, attend worship and discuss humanity's inescapable religious questions. God's existence is unquestioned and He sometimes intervenes directly in the preposterous plots.

Pinsky, religion writer for the Orlando Sentinel, also notes, despite ridiculing everything in sight, the show is basically pro-family and usually lets a rough morality triumph.

"The Simpsons" may be irreverent toward churches and clergy, he says, but other institutions suffer more, particularly big business. (Montgomery Burns, owner of the nuclear power plant, is so money-hungry he once hatched a scheme to block out the sun, forcing everyone to buy more electricity).

Pinsky, an active Reform Jew, is not a big TV fan. But he was goaded into sampling "The Simpsons" by his children and got hooked. He can only hope now that the book replicates his publisher's 1965 title "The Gospel According to Peanuts" by divinity student Robert Short, which sold 10 million copies.

In that more innocent era "a lot of people were offended by putting something as holy as the Gospel together with a comic strip," says Short, now a Presbyterian minister in Monticello, Ark. The New York Times considered it "a perilous experiment."

Now preachers make frequent use of pop culture. But less often does pop culture, especially TV, treat religion.

With "The Simpsons," Pinsky says, early episodes featured bratty son Bart. But as the focus shifted more toward bumbling father Homer, the show began tackling deeper issues, Pinsky says. Besides, a series that marks episode 270 when the fall season begins Nov. 4 always needs new material, and religion is rich territory.

The Simpsons crew was sharp enough to realize this even though, according to Pinsky's estimate, 80 percent of the show's writers over the past dozen years have been either skeptics or atheists. Several, however, have called themselves believing Christians.

The characters they and creator Matt Groening have created for fictional Springfield are a microcosm of American religious — and particularly Protestant — types.

Homer is the sort who regularly displays his religious ignorance (he calls God "omnivorous" instead of "omnipresent"), snoozes in church and prays largely in desperation. "God, if you really are God, you'll get me tickets to that game. Why do you mock me O Lord?" he moans in one show.

Long-suffering wife Marge is the solid saint who delivers the rare serious lines, for example: "There has to be more to life than just what we see, Lisa. Everyone needs something to believe in."

Precocious daughter Lisa is the mainline Protestant rationalist and preacher of social justice.

Next-door neighbor Flanders has his boys play Bible Bombardment board games and vacations at "America's Most Judgmental Religious Theme Park." His piety irritates people, but he's also one of the kindest characters in the series.

Then there's the Reverend Lovejoy, burned-out pastor of Springfield's community church, who veers from non-denominational blandness to fundamentalist rigidity. God is among those who find his unctuous sermons boring.

Non-Protestants don't come off perfectly, either. Krusty the Clown, the show's Jewish character, is a gruff, chain-smoking show-biz veteran, although he reunited with his Orthodox father, who wanted him to be a rabbi.

The depiction of workaholic Kwik-E-Mart manager Apu, a Hindu, has offended some Indian-Americans, partly because he's at once obsequious and overcharges customers.

Catholics are less visible, but the Catholic League has still found reason to protest. It objected, for instance, to a satirical commercial in which a scantily clad woman wearing a cross suggestively filled a car with gas as a voice-over said "The Catholic Church: We've made a few...changes."

Among all denominations, liberal Unitarianism — with its lack of doctrine — may fare the worst. "If that's the one true faith, I'll eat my hat," Homer exclaims.

For all its barbs, however, "The Simpsons" rarely mentions Jesus and steers clear of explicit Christian teachings, Pinsky says. He says that, in the end, the show may actually cloak a "sacred essence in the guise of profane storytelling."

He concludes "whether the series, once considered so anti-authoritarian, is subversive or supportive of faith is largely in the eye of the beholder."

Drawings by John Lennon on display in London for first time

LONDON — Thirteen drawings by John Lennon went on public display for the first time as part of a new exhibition to highlight the former Beatle's artistic talent.

The sketches, on loan by Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, are part of a larger display at a London gallery of 150 images created by Lennon between 1968 and 1980.

"The pictures show John's love for his family and attitude toward everyday life," said exhibition organizer Jonathan Poole. "They are amusing. They are meant to be funny and they shouldn't be taken too seriously."

The exhibition's main attraction is a sketch, "Multiple Self Portrait," which is made up of tiny line drawings. Other sketches show Lennon and his wife's famous "bed-in" when they spent a week in bed in 1969 in a public appeal for world harmony.

Another sketch, "I'm One of Your Biggest Fans," depicts Lennon chatting to a female fan on a New York street. It was drawn a year before Lennon was fatally shot outside his New York City apartment in 1980.

A selection of colorful children's pictures that Lennon drew for his son Sean are also on display.

The exhibition, which is free to the public, is being held at Harbour Yard. Some of the prints are for sale at prices ranging from $653 to $5,800.

NEW YORK — Aaliyah fans showed their appreciation for the late singer in the record stores, pushing her record to No. 1 on the Hot 100 Billboard chart.

Aaliyah's self-titled third album sold 306,000 copies in the week after her death, according to Soundscan, which monitors record sales nationwide.

The album was already certified gold, but had sold only 62,000 copies in the week before she died, Soundscan said.

The 22-year-old singer and actress was killed Aug. 25 when a small plane carrying her and eight others plunged shortly after takeoff. There were no survivors.

She was heading to Miami from the Bahamas, where she had been filming a video.

ATHENS, Greece — French actor Gerard Depardieu said he's eager to try some tragedy in the country that invented it.

Depardieu, 52, is in Greece for two performances of "Oedipus Rex" at the ancient theater of Epidaurus in southern Greece.

"Tragedy teaches you to live," he said Wednesday at a news conference in Athens. "I have always wanted to take advantage of what Greece has to offer with its theaters and history."

He was to narrate Igor Stravinsky's operatic adaptation of the ancient play on Friday and Saturday. Isabella Rossellini also was to appear at Epidaurus on those nights, giving separate performances in Stravinsky's "Persephone."

RAEFORD, N.C. — The winner of "Survivor: The Australian Outback" has logged another adventure: her first tandem parachute jump.

Tina Wesson, winner of the $1 million prize on the CBS show, was a guest Wednesday of the Army's Golden Knights parachute demonstration team.

Wesson and her instructor, who was strapped to her back, had about 30 seconds of free fall before the parachute opened at 5,000 feet.

"It went so quickly, I didn't have enough time to think about it," she said. "The rush of wind was so fast, I could hardly breathe."

LINCOLN, Neb. — Regis Philbin, the host of "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?" has turned down a billionaire's invitation to attend the weekend's biggest college football game.

Philbin declined an offer from stock market investor Warren Buffett to attend the Notre Dame-Nebraska game in Lincoln because he had to tape an episode of the game show.

"I told Warren I'd take a pass on the 'Millionaire' show if he'd give me a couple of stock tips," Philbin said. "That ended that conversation right there."

A 1953 Notre Dame graduate and fervent Fighting Irish fan, Philbin aired Thursday's episode of his talk show, "Live! With Regis and Kelly," from the South Bend, Ind., campus.

VENICE, Italy — John Carpenter says his new sci-fi film, "Ghosts of Mars," is a Western in disguise.

Carpenter, director of 1978's "Halloween," told reporters at the Venice Film Festival that science fiction is taking over the territory once occupied by Westerns and adventure films.

"Ghosts of Mars" recently opened in the United States to withering reviews, but young fans of Carpenter's dark, campy style have given it a warm welcome in Venice.

The film, which stars Pam Grier and Ice Cube, is about human cops teaming up with criminals to fight an alien menace on Mars. It screened out of competition at the festival.

Carpenter seemed unfazed by the cool reception from American critics.

"I adore the critics," he joked.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Sept. 8, 2001:

As long as you know what you want, you'll be an unstoppable force. Adjust to professional changes, using these swings as an opportunity for growth. Greet innovative ideas positively, especially if they involve your health. Trust and go with the flow. Always choose to understand rather than to react. If you are single, you could find yourself intensely involved before you know it. If one relationship doesn't work for you, there is a better one around the corner. If you are attached, your relationship presents challenges, but if you emphasize the positive, you will grow. Don't worry so much about money. Schedule a special trip together. TAURUS helps you grow to a better level.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ A serious discussion focuses you. You plunge into your work, seeking new ways to increase your stature. Community presence plays a role. Only you can take charge of your life's direction. Use the next few months to establish the reputation you want. Tonight: Think in terms of gain.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Don't sit on your duff any longer waiting for others to make offers. Head out and flag down the opportunity you want. Though it might not occur this very day, it will soon. Someone you consider important lets you down. Tonight: Do what pleases you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Step back from the immediate and have a discussion that allows you to see your universe more creatively. If you aren't feeling appreciated or understood, you might allow others to come forward. In the next few weeks, you discover more. Tonight: Clear out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You might not be able to count on someone financially — at least right now. Don't let this issue get to your positive energy. Others flock toward you. Someone might inadvertently express anger or frustration in the next few weeks. Let it happen. Tonight: Play the weekend in.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Someone rebels as you try to lead. You might consider going in separate directions for the moment. Your interests diverge. Stay calm and cool in a conversation. Reveal your deeper feelings. Escape tension by getting into an exercise program. Tonight: Could be late.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Don't be shy with someone you put on a pedestal. Express what you hold close to your heart. Someone just might be in the mood to make your wish a reality. Involve a friend in a new hobby or pastime. Discover new ways of relaxing. Tonight: Go for what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ A family member goes on the warpath for the next few weeks. You wonder what you did to do deserve this behavior. Listen, and you will find out. A child could do the unexpected and upset you. Be generous with a friend. You will find that this attitude will be returned. Tonight: Find your best friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Defer to others right now, especially as someone close to you could be quite upset and in need of affirmation. Your focus on nurturing others allows better flow at home and elsewhere. Touch base with a neighbor or relative. Tonight: Run away for the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ What you do and how you approach others influence the outcome. What is ailing another might not be clear now, but you will, through patience, break this barrier. Invest more time in your finances. An opportunity knocks on your door. Tonight: Relax in a favorite way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Mars moves into your sign, bestowing high energy and physical charisma. Others' reactions might stun and delight you. Work toward a common goal with a loved one or partner. You burst with ideas. Tonight: Share your mischievous side.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You mean well, but somehow you upset the apple cart. A family member lets you know just how much. Be careful about swallowing your anger. Learn to say what you mean. Someone overwhelms you with chatter. Tonight: Play ostrich.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ A friend might push you harder than you would like. You know how to speak your mind. Get together with others, inviting someone along who might be almost a recluse. Once this person opens up, the bonding intensifies between the two of you. Tonight: At your favorite spot.
