RIOTING FOLLOWS SANDS DEATH. A hooded youth uses a slingshot to hurl stones at British soldiers while manning a barricade in the Falls Road area of Belfast in Northern Ireland Tuesday morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Authorities battle rioters following Sands' death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops and police fired live ammunition and plastic bullets to quell rioters in Belfast's Roman Catholic districts today hours after jailed IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands died in the 66th day of his hunger strike. At least 10 people were injured, authorities said.

Renewed violence flared in Catholic strongholds of Belfast as word came that up to 100 of the 440 Irish Republican Army guerrillas might join the hunger strike by three of their comrades at the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

Early today, Catholic housewives banged out a requiem for Sands with the lids of their garbage cans as the death of the IRA hunger striker elected to the British Parliament set off several more hours of violence in Catholic districts of Belfast and Londonderry.

"This is about what we expected," a police spokesman said. "We are prepared for it."

The 27-year-old IRA guerrilla died at 1:17 a.m. in the 66th day of his fast, demanding that the British government give imprisoned IRA members the special political-prisoner privileges it took away from them in 1976.

Sands had been an unknown prisoner for most of his nine years in the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, with no notable military exploits to his credit. But when he died on a prison hospital waterbed with a golden crucifix from Pope John Paul II in his emaciated hand, he became for supporters of the IRA and many other Catholics the newest martyr in their cause — the unification of the Protestant-dominated British province of Northern Ireland with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic.

Meanwhile, the IRA's fight for the special privileges Sands did not win was carried on by three other hunger strikers in the Maze. Visitors said one of them, Francis Hughes, 25, was within days of death after 52 days without food. Two other guerrillas in the 45th day of their fast were in less serious condition.

Despite pleas for calm from Catholic leaders and Sands' family, three days of mourning ordered by the IRA began with rioting by roving bands rampaging through the dark streets of Belfast and Londonderry, the province's two biggest cities.

Hundreds of extra police were deployed in the battle-scarred Catholic districts of West Belfast and Londonderry, intent on keeping the rioters from spilling over into neighboring Protestant districts and setting off a backlash by the extremists of the Protestant Ulster Defense Association.

The violence simmered down around dawn, and the Protestants were not involved.

The police fired six shots over the heads of rioters in Londonderry.

NATO endorses Reagan plan

ROME (AP) — NATO foreign ministers today officially endorsed the Reagan administration's decision to open European nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union this fall.

A communique issued at the conclusion of the 15 members' two-day conference said, "The Allies welcome the intention of the U.S. to begin negotiations on theater nuclear weapons arms control within the SALT framework by the end of the year."

The decision to start preliminary talks with the Soviets this fall was announced Monday by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. during a closed door meeting with the NATO ministers.

Haig said at a news conference today that the administration's decision to open European nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union does not mean it has abandoned concern about Soviet behavior around the world.

Haig reiterated that the future of the talks and other relations with the Soviet Union would depend on their behavior not just in Poland but in other trouble spots around the world.

He made special mention of "Soviet activity in the Third World" and said the decision to negotiate "does not for a moment mean we will abandon our concern."

"We are not entering theater nuclear arms discussions as a favor to the Soviet Union," he stressed, saying the willingness to negotiate reduction of medium-range nuclear weapons stationed in Europe is based on a desire to forge a meaningful arms agreement.

The Soviet Union expressed willingness last year to discuss reduction of nuclear missiles in Europe. Preliminary talks were held last fall without success.

Haig said preliminary talks will be held with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin in Washington and that he will meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at a U.N. General Assembly meeting in September. He earlier reported President Reagan sent a handwritten letter to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev a few days ago, reportedly stating his willingness to open negotiations.

Haig said as a result of the decision to negotiate, the alliance is now unanimously committed to deployment "despite the heavy level of propaganda flowing from the East."

The past day and a half has reaffirmed the indivisibility of the NATO alliance," Haig said of his closed door meeting with the NATO ministers on Monday. "There was clearly a consensus to make all resources available to strengthen the alliance."

To deter the 1,040 missiles the Soviets have deployed in batteries trained on Western Europe, NATO agreed in December 1979 that the United States in 1983 would begin deploying 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe unless the superpowers agreed otherwise before then.

Hitchhiker dies in fiery wreck

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

A young hitchhiker killed in a fiery one-car accident early today remained unidentified at press time today, while the Department of Public Safety officers continued to search for a second hitchhiker who reportedly walked away from the scene of the wreck.

A third victim in the wreck was in serious condition at an Amarillo hospital.

Reports were sketchy at press time today, but according to sources, at about 2:30 a.m. today, the vehicle was reportedly traveling at a high rate of speed at the intersection of U.S. 60 and U.S. 152, two miles east of Pampa, when the driver apparently lost control. The vehicle reportedly struck a culvert, became airborne and flew into a tree on the side of the highway.

Pampa firefighters and two fire units were called to the scene at 3 a.m. today where they doused the car fire and used the Hurst rescue tool to extract two of the vehicle's occupants. One man was dead at the scene.

The second victim was identified by hospital officials today as Don Silvernail, 20, of New York City, N.Y. He was treated at Highland General Hospital for multiple fractures to the pelvis and right wrist and severe bleeding before being transferred to the Northwest Texas Hospital Emergency Receiving Center in Amarillo, the spokesman said.

A spokesman for the Amarillo hospital said today that Silvernail was in serious condition in the intensive care unit.

Sources say a third person, also a hitchhiker, picked up earlier, had reportedly walked away from the scene of the accident.

The body of the unidentified man was taken to Smith-Ellis Funeral Home. A spokesman for the funeral home said today that DPS officials are checking the fingerprints of the man in an attempt to identify him. He described the victim as a white male, 16 to 20 years old, wearing a t-shirt with the word "Springfield" on it.

The spokesman said the two hitchhikers had been picked up at a roadside park in Oklahoma, where he thought their car had possibly broken down.

Officials were continuing their search for the missing third person believed to have been involved in the accident at press time today.

Brady satisfactory after third operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady, facing continued difficulty in his recovery from a gunshot wound to the brain, is resting comfortably after surgery to prevent potentially life-threatening blood clots from reaching his heart and lungs, officials say.

Brady was reported in satisfactory condition after the 2 1/2-hour operation late Monday night, said Emily Turk, a spokeswoman at George Washington University Hospital.

It was Brady's third operation since he was shot March 30 during an assassination attempt on President Reagan, in which Reagan and two law enforcement officers also were wounded. The first two operations were on Brady's bullet-pierced brain.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a spokesman at George Washington University Hospital, said doctors decided to operate after discovering several small clots in Brady's lung. He said, however, that the clots were in "no way" life-threatening.

O'Leary said the clots indicated that a channel was open between the leg and the lungs and "if a larger clot were to break off, it could be potentially life-threatening."

The surgery involved inserting an umbrella-shaped, sieve-like device with the diameter of a "fat ballpoint pen," in a vein carrying blood from the legs, where clots sometimes form, to the torso. The device is called a Kimray Greenfield or vena caval umbrella.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, who said the latest development "does not appear troublesome," described the device as a "net letting blood pass through but stopping any clot."

On April 22, Brady underwent hastily scheduled surgery to close passages that had been letting air seep into his brain.

Since last Monday, Brady, on doctors' orders, has remained in bed with his head elevated 20 degrees to help prevent further seepage. This was scheduled to last about 10 days.

Rains drench Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County Civil Defense officials have urged residents living near the San Jacinto River in northern Harris County to evacuate their homes before Lake Houston, swollen by two days of heavy rains, crested early today at about three feet above flood stage.

"We're encouraging people in the low-lying areas near the San Jacinto River to spend the night elsewhere," said John Caswell of the Harris County Civil Defense. "We're expecting a crest of about three feet over the spillway of Lake Houston."

Jim Green, director of the Harris County Flood Control District, said Monday night there was moderate flooding in the area but said the waters could recede within 24 hours if no more rain fell on the area.

Caswell said Civil Defense shelters were opened Monday night at the First Baptist Church of Highlands, Channelview High School and Bethel Baptist Church at New Caney to assist evacuees in the north part of the county.

More than nine inches of rain fell in the area Sunday and Monday, resulting in the death of at least one person and injuring at least 10 others.

Sunday's deluge sent bayous out of their banks, flooded freeways and many streets in Houston and officials said about 120 people were evacuated in southeastern sections of the county.

A series of twisters hit south of Houston in Brazoria County injuring 19 persons. A disaster center was opened at Alvin in Brazoria County to assist the victims.

The only confirmed fatality Sunday was 18-month old Jessie Peak, who wandered away from home and drowned on Houston's southside.

Democrats short on votes to change budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — As debate gives way to action, House Democratic leaders are conceding they can't match President Reagan's lobbying out and lack the votes to block the administration's budget cuts.

"It's a little bit like going into the ring and the other guy has got brass knuckles and all you've got 16-ounce gloves," said House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas. "We don't have any rewards bestowed, favors to withhold or punishment to mete out."

"The speaker (of the House) and the majority leader do not have anything except a hunting license to persuade, and we've been trying with varying degrees of success," Wright said Monday in an address to the National Press Club.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. was more direct.

"Am I getting commitments? The answer is no, be truthful on the thing," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "Have I got disappointments? The answer is yes."

The House was moving toward votes late today on amendments to a budget blueprint, with a final vote expected Wednesday.

In the Republican-controlled Senate, debate begins Wednesday or Thursday on a similar administration-backed plan approved by the Senate Budget Committee.

An Associated Press survey late last week found 29 House Democrats definitely supporting the president's plan instead of their own party's alternative and at least five others leaning that way. If Republicans stay solid, a switch of 26 Democrats would be necessary to give Reagan a victory. GOP leaders say they expect only one Republican to vote against the president.

O'Neill said Monday his count showed 175 of the 242 Democrats in the House standing firm. 41 votes short of what is needed. That assessment generally matched the prediction of Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, co-author of the substitute budget plan endorsed by Reagan, that 40 to 50 Democrats will vote with the president.

But in a last-ditch move to keep potential defectors in line, House Democratic leaders argued that a vote now will lock members into budget-cutting decisions they will regret later.

Reagan, meanwhile, was working hard to seal a victory.

Two dozen congressmen, mostly Southern Democrats, met with the president Monday at the White House, a few at a time. More were to be invited today and possibly Wednesday.

Among Monday's visitors was Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., who said he expected to vote for the administration-favored budget resolution sponsored by Gramm and Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio. Albosta said he was "basically" persuaded to do so when "the president agreed he'd look very seriously" at the Michigan congressman's complaints that his state was treated inequitably by formulas for handing out federal funds.

Rep. William H. Boner, D-Tenn., said Reagan "tried to inform us what he was trying to do ... and assure us that the problems we had (about specific appropriations) would be worked out."

In House debate Monday, however, a parade of Democratic committee chairmen argued that the administration-backed plan would force deeper cuts than those outlined in an alternative package approved earlier by the House Budget Committee.

Generally, the budget resolution merely sets guidelines for Congress to follow in making decisions on spending and taxes.

Administration considers helicopters for Guatemala

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may be willing to send helicopters and other aid to Guatemala to resist what is being labeled as a communist-armed "major insurgency," a State Department official says.

John A. Bushnell, acting assistant secretary of state, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday that Guatemala has not requested the aid but has "made feelers" for helicopters and spare parts.

"I think given the extent of the insurgency and the strong communist worldwide support for it, the administration is disposed to support Guatemala," Bushnell said.

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., said Guatemalan officials told him and two other senators two weeks ago that they might request $2 million to $2.5 million in U.S. "non-lethal" military aid.

"Bushnell said Guatemala is stronger than some of its neighbors and communist support of the insurgency there is small compared with El Salvador."

"On the other hand," he said, "it is very difficult for any small country ... to withstand a massive assault supplied by training and material from one of the superpowers and its assistants without help from the other."

Union leader threatens to close US-Mexican border

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican labor union official, angered by delays in crossing the bridges from Juarez to El Paso, has threatened to blockade bridges if the process isn't accelerated.

Roberto Delgado Urias of the Confederacion Revolucionaria de Trabajadores, a 7-government union, said a representative of his group would meet soon with Immigration and Naturalization Service officials to discuss the evanes.

Delgado said automobile checks at the bridges are "time-consuming and besides being slow, you're humiliating."

Delgado said about 8,000 members of his union possess "green cards" that identify them as permanent resident aliens and allow them to work in the United States. They cross the border every day to work, he said.

He said Mexicans going into El Paso to work have been held up as long as two hours at the bridges, a delay that sometimes cost them their jobs.

Henry V. McGehee, supervisory immigration inspector in charge of El Paso, said he could not comprehend Delgado's criticism.

"I can't even understand what they're talking about," McGehee said, "because we've speeded it up tremendously already. I don't see how we could do any better."

McGehee said Delgado's group had not contacted INS officials to tell them of their complaints by late Monday.

McGehee said INS officials would be unable to do anything to prevent a blockade, adding that that decision would be up to police on both sides of the border.

"We wouldn't have the authority or the capability (to stop it)," he said. "We're strictly an inspection process."

"I don't know if anybody would be able to stop it," he said.

Juarez newspapers quoted Delgado as saying that he would give the INS eight days to speed up the process before initiating a blockade, but Delgado said later that the deadline wasn't firm.

In 1979, angry protestors blockaded the three bridges between downtown El Paso and downtown Juarez, creating a near-riot situation that led to the death of a 10-year old Juarez girl.

Police investigate child abuse

Pampa police today are investigating the reported abuse of a 10-month-old baby boy admitted to a Borger hospital late Monday, suffering from a fractured skull and numerous other injuries.

Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said today that the Pampa police department was notified of the child abuse case by the Borger police at 9:30 p.m. Monday.

The police chief said the baby boy had been brought for treatment at North Plains Hospital. In addition to the fractured skull, the child was suffering from four broken ribs and bruises and contusions over his entire body, he said.

The child is now in the protective custody of the Department of Human Resources, Ryzman said. He did not know the child's condition at press time today.

Investigation by police detectives Ken Neal and Patti Williams has shown the abuse incident occurred in Pampa, the police chief said.

At press time today, Pampa police said the child, reportedly in poor condition, had been transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo for further treatment.

Weather

The forecast calls for partly cloudy weather through Wednesday with a 20 percent possibility of thundershowers. The high for today will be near 70 degrees with overnight lows in the low 50s. The high for Wednesday will be in the mid 70s.

Government is rating cigarettes on carbon monoxide production

WASHINGTON (AP) - Smokers switching to low tar and nicotine brands also are likely to inhale less carbon monoxide, a contributor to heart and lung diseases and a possible threat to unborn babies, the government's latest cigarette rankings show. The Federal Trade Commission, for the first time, is rating cigarettes according to the carbon monoxide they produce, in addition to publishing figures on tar and nicotine levels. The results, published Monday, show that 11 of the 20 brands lowest in tar and nicotine also rank among the bottom 20 in carbon monoxide, a product of incomplete combustion that reduces the ability of the blood to carry oxygen. Six of the 20 brands with the highest concentrations of tar and nicotine also produced the largest amounts of carbon monoxide. The three most recent surgeon general's reports have suggested that carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke may be related to some of the most serious health consequences of smoking. The FTC said in a statement listing this year's test results for 187 American cigarette brands. The report quoted the surgeon general's office as concluding that "carbon monoxide may interfere with fetal development, increase symptoms in patients with heart and lung disease and contribute to hardening of the arteries." The surgeon general's office said carbon monoxide is particularly harmful to smokers because their nicotine intake is increasing the heart's oxygen needs at the same time that the blood's ability to carry oxygen to the heart is reduced. The FTC began testing for carbon monoxide last year in what the commission's former chairman, Michael Pertschuk, called another step aimed at "stimulating the development of progressively less hazardous cigarettes." Cigarette companies, under FTC pressure, have listed the tar and nicotine content of their products in advertisements since 1971. Whether they will do the same for carbon monoxide is not yet known. "We have not done an analysis yet to determine just what is a low carbon monoxide cigarette and what is a high one," said Dee Ellison, an FTC spokeswoman. The FTC said the latest test results show a significant increase in the number of cigarette brands with low tar and nicotine levels. Of the 187 brands tested, 125 have no more than 15 milligrams of tar per cigarette compared with 103 of 176 brands tested a year ago. The number of brands with one milligram or less of nicotine was 111, up from 101 reported in 1979.

Committee treats farm bill harshly

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's farm program, dismantled by a Senate panel last week, is getting even harsher treatment from the House Agriculture Committee. Despite strong indications that stringent spending targets will be approved by the full House, the committee has endorsed farm price-support plans well in excess of administration recommendations and the spending targets likely to be set by Congress. "I want to make sure that everybody knows we're going to be back in here trying to cut $2.5 billion out of programs we're considering now," said Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind. In its first day of work on commodity-support programs in the 1981 farm bill, the Democratic-controlled committee on Monday discarded Reagan's dairy, peanut and wool support plans for its own alternatives. Last week, in the Republican-dominated Senate, where more liberal dairy and peanut programs were endorsed, the administration's proposal on wool was at least generally accepted. The House committee versions of dairy and peanut supports are similar to those tentatively approved by the Senate but even more expensive. Although some cost of the price-support programs is recovered when loans are repaid or government bought commodities resold, the administration is concerned that its economic program would be thwarted if it had to come up with the initial money for loans. Although Congress supported Reagan in March by eliminating a scheduled April semiannual adjustment in dairy supports, saving some $147 million, the House committee, like its Senate counterpart, restored the semiannual adjustment for future years. As in the Senate, the House committee version sets minimum dairy supports at 75 percent of parity, the amount a commodity must sell for to give producers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914. But the House panel sets the semiannual adjustment at 75 percent of parity, while the Senate panel calls for only 70 percent. The administration wanted supports generally set at 70 percent with no semiannual adjustment. According to Agriculture Department estimates disputed by several committee members, the House version would cost some $5.6 billion over its four-year life, the Senate version about $4.4 billion and the administration's about $2.8 billion.

Resolution seeks judge's removal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler should be impeached, convicted and removed from the bench, a state representative says. Rep. Ken Riley, R-Corpus Christi, told the House State Affairs Committee late Monday night that Justice - whose far-reaching civil rights, bilingual education, and prison reform decisions have angered many people - has "created numerous problems for the Texas Department of Corrections and the taxpayers." The resolution asks the U.S. House of Representatives to impeach the judge for "abuse of power and usurping the rights of the people of Texas." The measure also calls on the U.S. Senate to "convict and remove him (Justice) from office." "An impeachable offense is whatever the House of Representatives says it is," Riley told the committee. In support of the resolution, Riley read excerpts from anonymous letters from three prison officials who said Justice's ruling in the inmates' civil rights case had created problems for them.

Pantex environment hearings set

As the result of a lawsuit filed against the Pantex plant in 1980 by the Panhandle Environmental Awareness Committee (PEAC) concerning worker and environmental safety at the Panhandle-based Pantex Plant the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) will be holding a discussion meeting on Thursday, May 28, at 1 p.m. and again at 7 p.m. in the Center Ballroom of the Amarillo Hilton Inn. The civil PEAC lawsuit asked the Amarillo District Court to declare unlawful the continued operation and the expansion of the Pantex Plant due to the radiation hazard to workers and residents of the Panhandle area. The PEAC lawsuit filed in May 1980 was settled and dismissed in March of 1981 with the stipulation that the DOE conduct an environmental study with a first draft to be released in October of 1982 and the final draft to be completed in 1983, according to Betty Wheeler Amarillo attorney for the Panhandle Environmental Awareness Committee (PEAC). The DOE had previously declined to perform a complete environmental impact statement to assess the possible dangers at Pantex and their effects on the employees and community, according to PEAC information. The DOE scoping meeting is being held as the first step in drafting an environmental impact statement regarding the continued operation of the Pantex Plant. The purpose of the meeting is to assist the DOE in identifying significant environmental issues and the appropriate scope of the environmental statement. Pantex is involved in operations primarily involving assembling and disassembling nuclear weapons and monitoring, maintaining and modifying weapons in the Nation's nuclear stockpile. Pantex is located in Carson County, 17 miles northeast of Amarillo on a 10,200 acre site and has been operated by the DOE and its predecessor agencies, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission since 1951. Persons who desire to present oral comments on the scoping meetings should provide advance notice to the DOE by calling or writing Alex R. Griego, Operational Safety Division, DOE Albuquerque Operations Office, P.O. Box 5400, Albuquerque, N.M. 87115. Telephone (505) 846-1108. In Amarillo, persons may contact Jimmie Owens, DOE Amarillo Area Office, telephone 335-1581 extension 2157. Requests must be received before 4:15 p.m. on May 22, 1981. Speakers who provide advance notice will be allotted ten minutes for their statements. Others requesting to speak at the meeting may do so only after the scheduled speakers, and may be limited in the time they can speak. Registration for small cars raised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Small car owners may save on gas but it will cost them more for license plates, if the Texas Senate has its way. The Senate passed on voice vote and sent to the House Monday a bill that would increase registration fees for cars up to 3,500 pounds from $12 to $17. Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, said county road and bridge funds would benefit from the increase by receiving up to $350,000 in each county, compared to a top of $175,000 that counties receive now for selling motor vehicle license plates. Traeger said the bill would give Texas counties an extra $22 million in 1982, plus adding $900,000 to the state general revenue fund. By 1986, Traeger said, local governments would be getting a revenue gain of $48.1 million while the state would gain $10 million. "Five dollars is not going to make any difference to drivers of small cars," Traeger said. "They can pay this and still save money from gasoline bills."

Three Texas cities among top boom towns

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - A Wall Street financial analyst has listed three Texas cities - Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth - among the nation's top 10 building boom cities because of their construction volume. "Dun & Bradstreet listed Houston as the nation's most active construction market. Texas' largest city issued construction permits totalling $2.4 billion in 1980, more than any other American city. Dallas occupied the number four position on the Dun & Bradstreet list with $1.1 billion in new construction. Fort Worth leaped from number 17 in 1979 to number 10 in 1980 after city officials approved more than $750 million in new construction. The nationwide financial and credit rating agency's annual list goes to lending institutions, chambers of commerce, professional organizations and many other organizations throughout the nation. Los Angeles occupied the number two spot on the list with $2.1 billion in construction, while New York city was third with $1.2 billion in permits. Others in the top ten list were Chicago, Honolulu, Phoenix, Philadelphia and San Diego.

Youth thrown from back of truck, injured

A 16-year-old Pampa youth suffered a concussion when he was thrown from the back of a pickup truck in the 1400 block of Oklahoma Street late Monday. The injured boy was identified by police as Roy Madrid Soto, 16, of 318 Hazel. He was taken to Highland General Hospital where he was treated for a mild concussion and released.

Police said Soto was tossed from the bed of a 1978 pickup truck, driven by David Lee Cain, 16, of 1209 S. Farley, when the vehicle struck a culvert in the 1400 block of Oklahoma. The vehicle was reportedly traveling west in the 1000 block of South Dwight when the accident occurred. No other injuries were reported.

High school choirs rate high at area festival

The Pampa High School Choirs performed in the Greater Southwest Music Festival last Saturday at Amarillo College. For the Concert Choir, this was their second major music competition in eight days, after competing in the Astroworld Choral Festival in Houston last week. The choirs again performed well, with the Concert Women and the Concert Choir receiving straight 1's from the panel of judges. The Concert Women were, in fact, the only girl's choir in the entire festival to receive straight 1's from the panel of judges. Two other mixed groups, Amarillo High and Farmington High joined the Concert Choir with straight 1's. The Concert Men and the Concert Women both received a 1 in the Sightreading room. The choirs will now go to work to prepare for the Choir Banquet, to be held on Tuesday, May 12, and the Choral Spring Festival, coming up on Friday, May 15.

Officials say tape recordings link Chagra to judge's slaying

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The office of Gov. Bruce King has confirmed taped conversations between a former New Mexico State Penitentiary inmate and El Paso, Texas gambler Jimmy Chagra may link Chagra to the unsolved murder of a Texas federal judge nearly two years ago.

King was not available for comment Monday but officials in his office confirmed the governor had issued a pardon to an inmate identified as Jerry Ray James, who currently is being held at an undisclosed federal prison.

King's office said federal authorities, including U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson, agents of the FBI and Michael de Feo, a member of the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force, had asked King to grant James a pardon.

In return, King's office said, James is to cooperate with federal authorities in their investigation into the May 19, 1979 sniper killing of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood. James has been serving a life sentence for armed robbery.

James' attorney, Don Montoya of Santa Fe, said the Justice Department had in its possession tape recordings of conversations between Chagra and James which allegedly took place while both were incarcerated at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

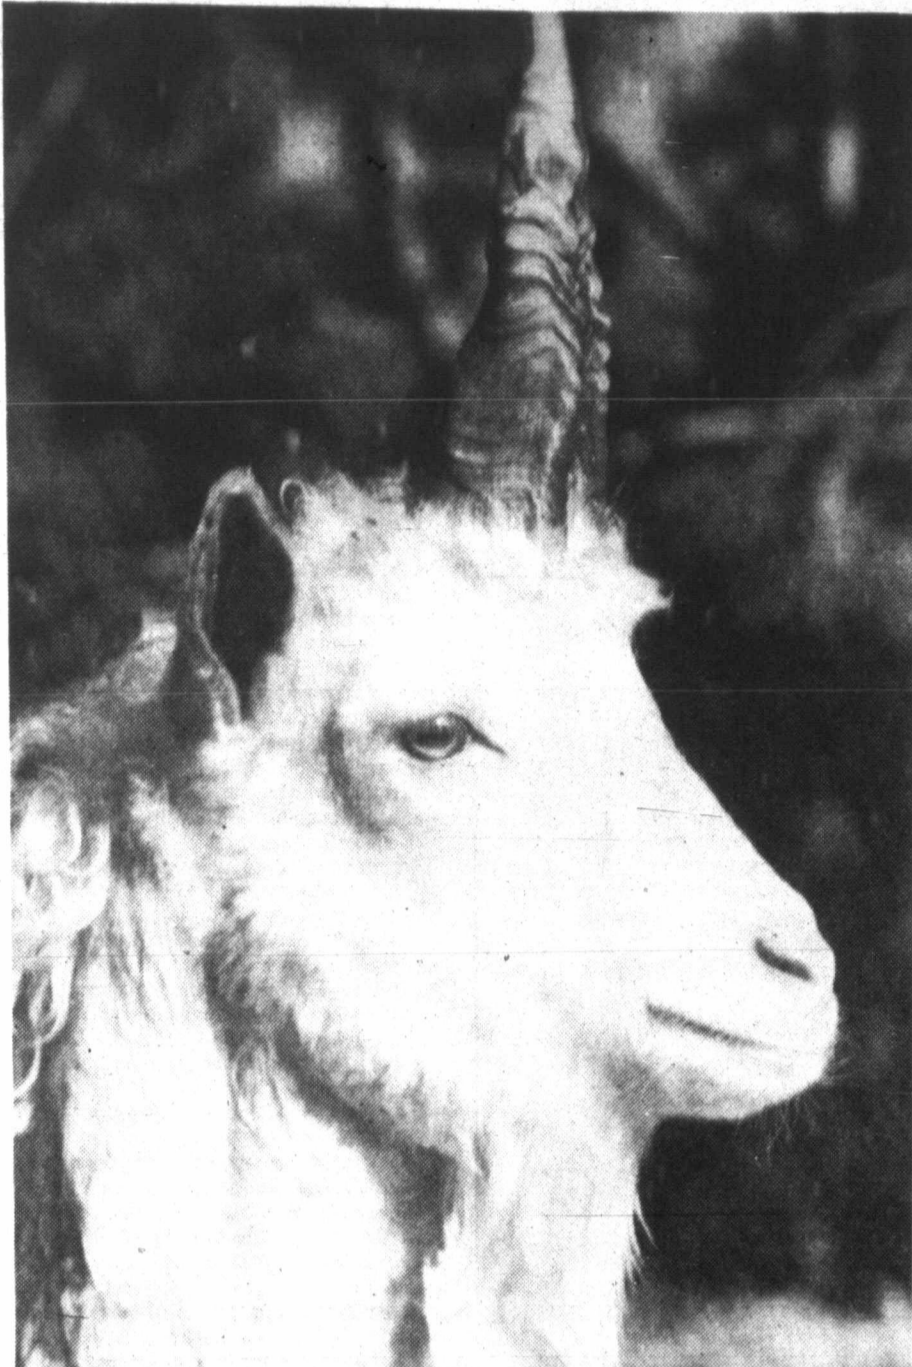

Montoya told reporters conversations between James and Chagra were taped during the period from August 1980 to February of this year. Montoya said those tapes contained evidence linking Chagra to the slaying of Wood in San Antonio, Texas.

"All the specifics as to the planning, how the assassination was to be carried out, the amount of money that was to be paid and to whom it was going to be paid were discussed," Montoya said Monday.

State officials said James was transferred to the federal prison at Leavenworth following the Feb. 23, 1980, riot at the New Mexico prison in which 33 inmates were killed. Montoya said Chagra and James became friends and Chagra allegedly made some comments about the assassination of Wood.

James, in turn, informed federal authorities of his conversation with Chagra, Montoya said.

Chagra was at Leavenworth following his conviction in 1979 on charges of smuggling drugs into the United States from Colombia.

HORNED RARITY. Lancelot, a one-year-old unicorn produced from goat stock, is being heralded as the first medieval unicorn in 500 years, according to naturalists Morning Glory, 33, and her 36-year-old husband, Otter G'zelle, who bred the animal in rural Mendocino County in California. Lancelot, with a single 10-inch horn in the middle of his forehead, is presently an attraction at Marine World near San Francisco. (AP Laserphoto)

Wiretap bill goes to Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The fate of Gov. Bill Clements' "war on drugs" wiretap bill now lies with a hostile Senate committee.

The measure passed the House on a voice vote Monday after representatives rejected amendments designed to limit the scope of the bill.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, introduced an amendment mandating expiration of the wiretap law on Sept. 1, 1983, unless it is extended by the Legislature.

"I don't want the right of privacy of the people in this state to die," he said.

The amendment was defeated, 51-72, after Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, said "Drug dealers would love it."

The bill would allow wiretapping or bugging with the approval of one of nine state district judges. Covert entry would be allowed to set up the taps or bugs.

A judge would have to satisfy himself that all other investigative methods had failed. The Department of Public Safety would supervise all electronic surveillance.

Garcia also attempted to remove the bill's covert entry provision, calling it "legal burglary, legal breaking and entering." The amendment was defeated 46-75.

The bill now goes to the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, where chairman Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, has promised a chilly reception. But opponents of the measure fear Mauzy's opposition might not be enough to block passage.

The bill, which tracks similar federal legislation, contains some safeguards. All tapped telephone calls would have to be recorded, and trial judges would receive and seal the tapes to prevent tampering. A judge could prohibit prosecutors from playing in court a tape on which innocent parties are named.

The bill provides two to 10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine for people who perform unauthorized electronic surveillance.

Legislators need own exclusive health spa

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas lawmakers are under so much pressure they need their own Capitol spa where they can "let off steam," and $2.5 million of tax money is not too much to pay, a representative says.

The bill by Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, would create a Capitol area "health facility," including a weight room, indoor track, massage parlor and sauna.

Hudson told the House State Affairs Committee Monday the facility is needed to "protect the taxpayers' investment in the health of their state officials."

Use of the facility would be limited to lawmakers and state employees who work in the Capitol complex.

"It would make for a happier Legislature and everything else," he said.

Questioned about the $2.5 million bill taxpayers would have to pay for the exclusive spa, Hudson first said he had been told the bill "would have no fiscal impact."

Then, he revised his opinion.

"Two-point-five million isn't so bad," he said, explaining that "the pressure on the Legislature and state officials is so bad they really need an outlet where they can let off steam."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Capitalism's new role in space out yonder

Astronaut John Young, after having stepped out of the space shuttle Columbia after his and Robert Crippen's making a perfect landing back on earth, spoke admiringly of the "flying machine" and said, "We're not all that far from going to the stars."

It is fascinating to think about what lies in the future along and beyond the trail the two men have blazed in space.

A new era that is sure to affect life on earth as no other period in the known history of our planet and mankind ever has - has been born.

The effect - the changes - may come faster than one can imagine. And they are sure to be greater, much greater, than the imagination of the farsighted can conjure, putting to rest the alarms of the dubious and the fears of the non-courageous.

Other astronauts, of course, in the American effort have been out there in the same space traversed by the shuttle, but they had to leave much of what they left the earth with to burn up in the "void" as they splashed down in an ocean on their return.

This time, though, the shuttle went out into space and back, and can be used for more trips. The success of the round trip is bound to trigger many to envision themselves as the "new pioneers" who, instead of setting out on a "westward ho!" odyssey, will in the early tomorrow shuttle into space to take advantage of and make a profit on the technological promise of the "void out yonder."

That will be when American capitalism seeks its place among the stars. There in the stellar-area frontier beyond the pull of earth's gravity and far from the imprisoning terrestrial "four corners" free-enterprising man will delve into whatever advantages the vacuum offers for human industry and progress. With the means of commuting from the home base - the earth - to laboratories and plants in space, man will find himself once more triumphant in his quest for a frontier to tame and to make useful and productive for earthlings.

That is the way it should be and must be, for all to turn out well in the American tradition. The role of our position in space as a protective factor in our remaining strong and growing stronger in defense should be minor, and probably will be after a few short years of experience in that direction. The strong function of earthy industry in a free market, using their own funds and being independent of government related and government - subsidized pure-science - related projects.

One may question the ability of private industry - free enterprise - to accomplish such colossal, costly and ambitious programs in space, but one must remember that the American corporate adventurism has no limits except those slapped upon it through shackling government regulation and road-blocking.

Once ingenious Americans in the private sector catch their breaths and realize fully the potential space offers to daring men now is in the same spirit the wilderness and Wild West offered opportunity to our continental pioneers, free enterprise is bound to savor the words of John Young: "We're not far from going to the stars," and seize the opportunity to explore and profit from space technology as American capitalism spreads its concepts along the way while it is reaching for first one and then another star out yonder beyond the frontier of the great vacuum.

Hollywood shootout not cowboy, indian

Hollywood is right to resist investigation by the House Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

You can't pick up a news or entertainment magazine these days without running across at least one article about the rampant drug abuse in Hollywood. If it's true, that's too bad, but it is Hollywood's problem, not Washington's.

Federal investigators should not be concerned about what the glamor kings and queens may be shooting, snorting or smoking.

"We are tired of people always starting their investigations with Hollywood just because it is prominent and will generate publicity," said Kim Fellner, spokeswoman for the Screen Actors' Guild. "We know that alcohol and drug abuse exist in our industry, but in no greater proportion than in the rest of society."

Maybe Ms. Fellner is right that Hollywood has no more alcohol or drug abuse than the rest of the country. That point is inconsequential next to the fact that Hollywood, second only to Washington, is among the country's most visible cities.

The committee began hearings Wednesday in an effort to "focus attention on a problem that has once again grown to epidemic proportions," said Phil Leshin, an aide to committee chairman Rep. Leo C. Zefferetti, D-N.Y.

"You don't have to hold hearings in Hollywood to focus attention on a problem that has once again grown to epidemic proportions." You could hold it in the cafeteria or gymnasium of any elementary, middle or high school in the country and have citizens nationwide all ears.

Such members of Screen Actors' Guild as Ed Asner (star of the "Lou Grant" TV series) have likened the drug hearings to Joe McCarthy's witch hunt for communists. We hope those who see this investigation as another industry purge through blackball are over-reacting, but we sympathize with their concern. It is unjust to single out one group when an entire nation is implicated.

"I Don't know why they're so paranoid," Rep. Thomas Railsback of Illinois told "People" magazine. "I think there must be a very serious problem."

His remark was either naive or facetious, neither of which befits a Congressman. But then an investigation that makes a few people appear as scapegoats for a problem caused by the many does not befit a Congress that should have the good of all the people at heart.

Letter to the president

An open letter to the President: LEAD ON, sir. LEAD ON! Don't be concerned about the bleeding heart Democrats still trying to fly in the face of the winds of change swirling in your wake. Another election is around the corner, and we're still out here waiting for another chance to cast our ballots as we did in the previous election.

Read with extreme skepticism the polls which are currently indicating that the majority of the American people don't agree with your administration's tax cut package. Those are the same polls that found the presidential election "too close to call." We may not get "polled," but we're still out here with our almighty ballots.

Lead on, sir, lead on. Please sign me:

Changes in social security

By ROBERT J. WAGMAN
WASHINGTON (NEA) - During the presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan's researchers identified the solvency of the Social Security system as a major issue on which Jimmy Carter should be attacked.

This tactic was abandoned once Carter assured Americans that the program was sound and that Reagan was just "trying to scare old folks."

But concern about the financial stability of Social Security intensified when Reagan's transition teams fanned out through the government in December. The Social Security team called for immediate action to avert a disaster that it deemed likely despite the steep rise in Social Security payroll taxes this year and another planned for next year and despite the Carter administration's assurance that it had put the system "on a sound basis for the future."

The Reagan team, headed by Hoover Institution fellow Rita Campbell, found that the Carter administration had merely eliminated the possibility of bankruptcy during fiscal 1981 by shifting money from the disability fund to the old age and survivors fund. Despite the higher Social Security taxes, the latter fund was still expected to go into the red in fiscal 1982 and to be in serious trouble by fiscal 1986. One set of figures estimated a $75 billion deficit by fiscal 1986.

It now appears that Reagan is preparing to send to Congress some proposed changes in Social Security that are certain to be significant and controversial.

One of the problems with changing Social Security is that every potential cure for its financial ills would antagonize some portion of the electorate. But the Reagan administration has decided to risk the political fallout rather than to accept the consequences of doing nothing or of making only cosmetic changes.

Sources close to the Health and Human Services task force working on Social Security say that the administration will offer five major proposals: raising the minimum age at which retirees can qualify for full benefits, reducing the annual cost-of-living increase by changing the way in which it is computed, allowing the three Social Security trust funds to transfer money back and forth as needed, bringing federal workers into the system for the first time by covering all new employees, and eliminating the surviving spouse's benefit in the next century.

To make these proposals more palatable, the administration will also seek to eliminate all limitations on the earnings of beneficiaries. This change would enable a retiree to get full benefits no matter how much he earned from other sources.

Reagan previously recommended in his economic package that Social Security save $2.5 billion by phasing out student benefits and the minimum benefit. The administration thinks that the new proposals coupled with what has already been suggested will restore the solvency of the system without any tax increases above those already approved by Congress.

The Social Security subcommittees of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee appear ready to accept substantive changes in the system. But whether they are ready to accept Reagan's changes is another matter.

The House subcommittee has tentatively approved a proposal to save $15 billion annually by raising the age at which a retiree qualifies for full benefits to 68 in steps beginning in 1990. The committee would still allow some benefits for women who retire at 63 and men who retire at 65.

The Reagan proposal is expected to be stricter. One early version that circulated at high levels called for a retirement age of 70 for men wishing to receive full benefits and for a shorter phase-in period.

The Social Security proposals will have to go before the same congressional committees that are considering Reagan's economic package. So, action on Social Security will probably not occur until sometime next year.

There can be little doubt that major changes in the system are coming - but only after a long and bitter political battle.

Protecting our guns

by ART BUCHWALD

Rumor has it that the military is asking to go ahead with the ABM system, which had been scrubbed as too expensive and not practical by two U.S. presidents and Congress.

The Pentagon says it needs the anti-ballistic missile system to protect its MX missile system, which is now being built.

It wouldn't surprise me if the next step would be a request to build a new system to protect the ABM system, so it could protect the MX system.

The military should not be criticized for wanting to build all the new systems. It is charged with guaranteeing our security, and it's very difficult for a civilian to say the military doesn't need what it's asking for.

Let me give you an example of how it works.

As part of our strategic defense, it was decided to build a 50-caliber machine gun emplacement in Utah manned by two soldiers, a PFC and a corporal.

Then someone in planning suggested that they put in an anti-aircraft gun to protect the machine gun. This was OK'd. But the Army officer pointed out that you couldn't have an anti-aircraft gun without infantry protection, and a battalion of GIs was ordered to build a perimeter around the anti-aircraft gun.

Air Force said you can't have a bunch of soldiers guarding a large gun without air protection, so the Army engineers were called in to build a fighter strip, and a squadron of F-16 planes was assigned to the area to give the GIs fighter cover.

As soon as the squadron was in place, strategic planners recommended an armored division to protect the planes against ground attack. But everyone knows an armored division is vulnerable without tactical nuclear weapons. So a top-secret tactical nuclear force was assigned to protect the tanks.

There was some nervousness in the Pentagon that the tactical nuclear weapons were subject to a surprise attack by the Russians, since they were only capable of firing ground-to-ground missiles. So the Air Force was assigned the job of digging silos for the ground-to-air missiles with the role of knocking down the Soviet missiles before they could wipe out a large part of Utah.

Pentagon intelligence got word that the Russians had the area pinpointed and told their bosses that, in a first-strike raid, they found the commies could knock out the ground-to-air missiles, endangering the armored division, the fighter strip, the anti-aircraft gun and the machine gun emplacement.

A meeting with the Joint Chiefs of Staff was called and it was recommended that a SAC bomber base be placed in the area as a warning to the Russians that we intended to protect out 50-caliber machine gun at any cost.

But there were those in the Pentagon who felt this would not be a strong enough deterrent. They recommended we build a MX missile system in Utah, making it possible to move our missiles around underground, so the Soviets would not know where they were. The cost was estimated at $30 billion, but because of inflation and delays, the true price placed on it was $60 billion.

To do it right, they would need 25 percent of Utah and Nevada for the construction site.

The president was all for it and said he wanted the project to proceed right away.

It was only after work started on the MX missile system, that a Pentagon task force came up with a report that the system had a weakness. Rather than pinpoint the target, the Soviets would now have to devastate two states for insurance.

The only answer was for the U.S. military to bring back the anti-ballistic missile system, and place it in the surrounding states as a means of stopping the Russian missiles from doing their job.

The probability of Congress buying this now is much greater that it was during detente, and the Pentagon feels if it doesn't get the ABM during this administration it never will.

As for the machine gun which started the entire ball rolling it's been sold to El Salvador where it is now guarding the presidential palace.

The auto crisis

The health of the U.S. auto industry may determine the outcome of the 1984 elections.

One out of every six people in the United States is employed in a business related to the auto industry. If that industry collapses, it will be a disaster for millions of people.

Unfortunately, neither the administration nor Congress seem to recognize the gravity of the situation.

The auto industry is in a deep and worsening crisis. Chrysler has lost $1.7 billion, Ford $1.5 billion, and General Motors $750 million.

That is only the tip of the iceberg. Hundreds of companies that provide supplies or services or that market automotive products have suffered crushing reverses.

The United Auto Workers Union, which dominates auto production in monopolistic fashion, had done terrible damage to the competitiveness of the American auto industry. It has extracted excessive wage settlements from the auto industry. Detroit's autoworkers earn twice as much as Japanese auto workers, and millions of Americans prefer the Japanese products.

Restoration of the auto industry will require massive concessions from the UAW. Wages must be lowered in order to make American cars competitive with Japanese vehicles. This will be hard on the American auto worker, but the alternative is the destruction of an industry. Nicholas von Hoffman, columnist, has accurately referred to the "half-demolished auto industry."

Many people believe that the auto workers won't accept lower wage levels if the Japanese are required to accept a quota on imports.

Others believe that the auto industry simply must have a breathing space, irrespective of what the UAW does. They hold that a discussion of wage levels will be academic if the flood of Japanese cars isn't brought under

The opponents of quotas raise the specter of protectionism. The proponents of quotas say it is absurd to speak of free trade in discussing the Japanese because Japan has a guided and directed economic system that's really unlike our free enterprise system.

Up to this point, the Reagan administration had declined to ask for a quota or even call for voluntary restraints. Demands for protection are increasing, however. U.S. Rep. Charles Wylie (R-Ohio) has described himself as a "born-again protectionist." Protectionism has a long and honorable history in his party.

Measures of a protectionist nature may become the centerpiece of political debate in the 1984 election. Congressmen have to deal with conditions, not theories. If the auto industry approaches ruin, there could be a tremendous public demand for relief from foreign imports. This already had happened in Europe. Italy allows only 2,200 Japanese cars into the country each year.

In this country, Sens. Danforth (R-Mo) and Bentsen (D-Tex) have introduced legislation to establish a quota on Japanese cars so as "to provide U.S. industry a small degree of breathing room while it retools."

This legislation is moving rapidly through a conservative period. The problem of dealing with Japan Inc. can't be handled with conventional free trade slogans. Indeed Ambassador Brock, the administration's new trade representative, discusses the issue in terms of fair trade.

That's what the United States must insist upon. If it isn't to adopt a quota, it at least must take a much tougher stand towards a trade competitor that doesn't play by our rules.

In the meantime, public pressure against the monopolistic UAW must be stepped up.

National Rifle Association official has record

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The executive vice president of the National Rifle Association says he has "nothing to hide" and refuses to discuss his 1931 murder conviction stemming from the shooting of a Mexican-American teen-ager.

Harlan D. Carter's conviction on a charge of murder without malice was reported by the Laredo Times' Monday editions.

The paper cited district court records that showed the conviction came in connection with the March 3, 1931 shotgun shooting death of Ramon Cassiano, 15. Carter was sentenced to three years in prison.

The 67-year-old former U.S. Border Patrol chief was re-elected to his post with the NRA at that group's 110th annual meeting of the group in Denver this weekend.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled later in 1931 that Carter's self-defense plea had been unfairly disallowed and remanded the case to Laredo for retrial.

The next mention of the case in court records or news accounts came in 1933 when the murder indictment was ordered dismissed. The ruling was signed by the judge who originally tried the case, 49th District Judge J.F. Mullally.

The dismissal stated that "several of the material witnesses for the state have been discredited, having been convicted of infamous crimes."

Carter could not be reached for comment in his Denver hotel room Monday night.

But in a story in the New York Times' Monday editions, he declined to talk about the incident when asked about it.

Carter said he was "not going to rehash that case or any other that does not relate to the NRA at this time."

According to accounts of the shooting that appeared in the Laredo paper in 1931, Carter had just returned from school when his mother told him she had seen three or four youngsters hanging around a shed behind the house.

The Carters' car had recently been stolen, and Mrs. Carter said she was afraid the youths were trying to steal a cow.

During the three-day trial in 49th District Court, Carter testified that he left the house carrying a single-barrel shotgun.

He said he found Cassiano and three friends about a block from the Carter house as they were returning from a nearby swimming area.

Carter said he tried to march the four boys home to be interrogated by his mother. The 15-year-old Cassiano refused and drew a knife, the paper said.

According to testimony at the trial, Carter said "You think I won't use this?" and fired the gun at point-blank range.

Cassiano was hit below the right shoulder.

As he lay on the ground, he extended his hand to Carter, saying, "You are my friend." Carter spurned the hand, according to testimony.

When Mrs. Carter arrived, Carter told her Cassiano was not badly hurt "because I aimed at the shoulder."

Cassiano was pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Carter, the son of a Border Patrol officer, left Laredo in 1933 and enrolled at the University of Texas. He later joined the Border Patrol and headed the agency.

He was elected executive vice-president of the NRA in 1977 in a coup in Cincinnati that resulted in the ouster of four of the association's five officers. He has been re-elected by the NRA membership annually since then.

He was elected to the NRA board of directors in 1951 and later joined its executive council. He was president of the NRA from 1965 to 1967 and once headed the NRA's Institute for Legislative Action, its powerful state and national lobby group.

He was director of the Border Patrol from 1950 to 1957 and served for a time as director of the San Antonio, Texas, district of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Boy, parents are reunited after two months absence

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — John and Nancy Ditmars were sure their two-month search for their runaway son was over when they walked into the offices of the Amarillo Globe Times last Friday.

"Our trail ends here," Mrs. Ditmars said in an interview then. "We know he was here on (April) 14th. It all keeps coming back to Amarillo."

It took another three days for the Yuma, Ariz., couple's confidence to be rewarded, but the Ditmars were right — their 14-year-old son Scott was in Amarillo.

The last time the Ditmars had last seen their son, he was riding his bike toward school.

But Scott never made it there.

"I was just going to ditch school," he said.

The quiet boy hitched a ride with a truck driver and ended up in Amarillo, where a man he met at the bus station took him to the Faith City Mission.

The mission gave him clothes and a job assignment.

"I loved it there," Scott said.

Meanwhile, Scott's parents traveled 2,000 miles, toting his dog, Buzz. They sought the help of police in five states in a desperate search for their son.

The interview they gave the Amarillo newspaper ran on the front page of Sunday's paper. The Ditmars headed back to Arizona before the story ran.

Ken Moore, the assistant superintendent of the mission, saw the article and called Amarillo police, who phoned the couple's home and talked to relatives. The Ditmars called home from Flagstaff, Ariz., and learned that Scott had been found.

"The first thing I wanted to know about was his mental attitude," Mrs. Ditmars said. "They said he was pretty shook up but he was all right."

The Ditmars say they will not force their son to return to Yuma, but emphasized they wanted him at home.

"I think he's going to decide to come home and I think this experience has taught him that when you get right down to it, your family is all you really have in this world," his mother said. "Their love and respect is something you can't replace."

Town reflects on tragedy, people draw closer together

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — On the main street of this tiny community nestled among the tapering pines of East Texas, sits a plain, brick Baptist church — a grim reminder and yet a source of comfort to those who survived a gunman's savage attack last summer.

No one is still sure why a former high school math teacher would don combat gear, arm himself with automatic weapons and storm a Sunday worship service killing five people and wounding 11 others. Perhaps not even the killer himself.

Regardless of the reason, Alvin Lee King III burst into the church, shouting "This is war!" and opened fire on men, women and children.

Townpeople say the events on the morning of June 22, 1980, have altered the course of their lives forever.

"There's been a drastic change in the community," says Police Chief J.R. Keene. "I hesitate to use the word paranoid... let's just say they are highly suspicious — very wary."

But the very place where their sorrow began also has been a place of solace. Since the shootings, the First Baptist Church, which had 300 in attendance that fatal morning, has increased its membership 20 percent has become a close-knit "family."

"The biggest thing is how much the church has touched so many lives," said Jana Truitt, daughter-in-law of Ken Truitt, one of the five killed.

Church members have "drawn closer together" and their faith in God has sustained them, she added.

"That's the only thing that has made this bearable. If it weren't for us believing in God, that he's (Ken Truitt) in a better place, I just don't know how people could handle it," she said.

And, although no one can say they really believe the horror could happen a second time, there are two men who sit outside the church now, and another two inside the foyer — just in case.

And as a precaution, the children have separate services in another building so that another child, such as 7-year-old Gina Linam, would not be killed.

"It is not a town gripped in fear, but a town continually coping with fear," Keene says.

King has been found incompetent to stand trial and still is under treatment at Rusk State Hospital. Physicians have said King performed well on several of the psychological tests but suffered "brain trauma" as the result of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

His lawyer says King will plead insanity if he ever comes to trial.

But most of the people here don't think King was insane at the time of the shooting.

"Al King is not crazy," Keene said. "He was very meticulous in planning the whole thing." And the self-inflicted wound the gunman received immediately after the shootings "was no more than a frontal lobotomy."

"He's far from being crazy... and he's intelligent enough to fool a lot of people," Keene added.

Chris Hall, the young man who wrested one of King's weapons away, says he believes the gunman "was totally possessed by Satan."

There were several reports that some church members had refused King's request to have them testify as witnesses in an upcoming trial on charges of incest filed by his daughter, now 21. King also was an avowed atheist.

For those who lived through the nightmarish ordeal, the memories have both scarred and strengthened them.

"Even though I had been a Christian all these years, I didn't realize how much Christ had already done for me," said Hall, who miraculously was not hurt after King fired at him point-blank and missed.

But Hall, who was awarded numerous citations for bravery for wrestling a weapon away from the gunman, says he still feels uncomfortable sitting with his back to the sanctuary doors.

"I don't feel that what I did was that great," said the former captain of the Daingerfield high school football team. "What Red (McDaniel) and Ken (Truitt) did was true heroism."

After Hall has managed to get one gun away from King, McDaniel grabbed the gunman and physically forced him from the church while King fired into McDaniel's stomach again and again.

Truitt was fatally shot in the chest while keeping the gunman from re-entering the church.

It hasn't been easy, but the families of Thelma Richardson, Ken Truitt, "Red" McDaniel, Gina Linam and Gene Gandy have learned to accept death, cling to memories, and go on with their lives.

The church where Truitt was killed is visible through the windows of Truitt Electric Company, a business run by father and sons before the elder man's death. A blurred snapshot of Truitt shows a big bear of a man, smiling proudly, with three of his grandsons. His tanned face is crinkled around his eyes. It is the face of a man who loved to laugh.

"It's hard to come in here and not see him at his desk," his daughter-in-law said.

Rock's operation plan advances

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's participation in a three-state deal to buy a 760-mile section of the old Rock Island Railroad line to provide continued rail service between the Texas Panhandle and Memphis, Tenn., has been approved by the Oklahoma Transportation Commission.

Gov. George Nigh has pledged to seek a $10 million legislative appropriation to finance the state's participation in a proposed joint project with Texas and Arkansas.

Jim Townsend, state rail plan coordinator, said he understands Arkansas officials are ready to sign the agreement, and negotiations are proceeding with Texas officials.

The commission voted Monday to authorize state Transportation Director R.A. Ward to sign an agreement with Arkansas and Texas officials and the president of the Santa Fe Railway Co., which would operate the east-west main line of the bankrupt Rock Island from Memphis to Amarillo, Texas.

The Santa Fe would have an option to buy the line as part of its agreement to operate.

Townsend and Jerry Chambers, state rail planner, said 368 miles of the 760-mile section are in Oklahoma. They estimate it would cost about $36 million for the three states to buy the 760 miles of track and right of way, with Oklahoma's share costing about $22 million.

The state already has $12 million available that was appropriated by the 1980 Legislature to help preserve rail service in Oklahoma.

Nigh said the acquisition is vital to Oklahoma because rail service is essential to its continued agricultural and industrial development.

"I don't know of any more critical need of the state of Oklahoma than saving the railroads," the governor said.

Brucellosis indemnity program being trimmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's indemnity program to help pay farmers for cattle slaughtered to control the spread of brucellosis is being cut 20 percent as an economy measure.

The Agriculture Department said Friday that the cutback, effective immediately, was "necessary to make sure indemnity funds were available through the remainder of the fiscal year," which ends Sept. 30.

Brucellosis in cattle is also called Bang's disease or contagious abortion. It is "an easily spread bacterial infection of domestic animals, especially, cattle and swine," said Paul Becton, director of the program.

The disease can be transmitted to humans, where it is known as undulant fever, but it is not considered a hazard to people who eat meat and pasteurized dairy products.

"If we had continued to pay brucellosis indemnities at existing rates, there would have been no funds to compensate owners of brucellosis reactor cattle during the last three months of the current fiscal year," Becton said.

The number of brucellosis cases has not increased dramatically, but the value of the animals — a major factor in determining the payments — has increased.

Also, officials said, the indemnity rate was boosted last summer. The 20 percent cut now "about wipes that increase out," one said.

Under the federal-state cooperative program, if tests show a positive reaction to the disease the cattle are slaughtered to prevent its spread.

Indemnities for purebred cattle are based on a percentage of each animal's appraised value, less the salvage paid when the animal is sent to slaughter. This percentage is 88.5 percent, but the indemnity calculated by that formula now is reduced by 20 percent.

Non-registered dairy cattle indemnities are fixed at a flat rate within each state, based on current market values. Those rates will be reduced by 20 percent, Becton said. Other non-registered cattle carried a rate of $62 per head, but under the spending cut the rate is reduced to $50 per head.

In the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1, the department's budget allowed $15.7 million for the brucellosis indemnity program, up from $13.4 million in 1979-80, officials said.

Last year, however, when indemnities were paid on 155,945 head of cattle, the average payment was about $86 per head.

During the first six months of this fiscal year, payments have been made on around 78,000 head, for an average of about $124 per head, according to the department's Animal Health and Plant Inspection Service.

That leaves only about $6 million in the fund to pay brucellosis indemnities over the remaining five months of this fiscal year.

Currently, there are 31 states that have been classified as "certified brucellosis free" under the program.

"Except for six counties in Florida and Louisiana and the Yellowstone National Park (in Wyoming), all remaining counties in the country are either certified free or in modified-certified status, which indicates they are progressing toward eradication," Becton said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Agriculture Department analyst says foreign competition may result in further shrinking of the U.S. share of world soybean trade.

The U.S. had about 90 percent of the world soybean trade in the late 1960s and early 1970s, with the remainder of the market divided between Brazil and China, Alan J. Webb said in a news report issued Friday.

Webb, who works in the department's Economics and Statistics Service, said since then China has ceased to be a significant soybean exporter while Brazil and, recently, Argentina and Paraguay, have begun "carving out larger shares" of the expanding world market.

Pesticide warnings

AUSTIN — With homeowners waging their annual war on insects, weeds and fungus, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown cautioned every user of pesticides to remember that these chemicals are dangerous unless they are used properly.

"Some of the worst offenders in the improper use of pesticides are urbanites," Brown said. Studies have shown that in 14 U.S. cities the pesticide levels in urban soil were higher than in adjacent cropland.

A Texas Department of Agriculture study performed in 1972-73 showed that residues of pesticides were in heaviest concentrations in silt and sediment of major Texas rivers below cities, rather than in rural areas upriver.

"It can take a company ten years and $15 to $20 million to get a safe product on the retail shelf," Brown said.

"The rates of application are set at levels which are effective, but not harmful to the applicator or most wildlife," Brown explained. "Yet some homeowners will buy a pesticide and figure that if a little does some good, a lot will do even better, and it is carelessness such as this that causes problems with applications."

The Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) registers 8,000 products from about 800 companies annually. Detailed information is required on the label which covers the chemicals included in the formulation, plants or insects designated for treatment and the proper procedures for use and storage.

Drive for sorghum farmers

LUBBOCK — An intensive farmer-to-farmer effort to reach and enlist every sorghum farmer in the nation in the National Grain Sorghum Producers Association (GSPA) has been announced by Mabry Foreman, association president.

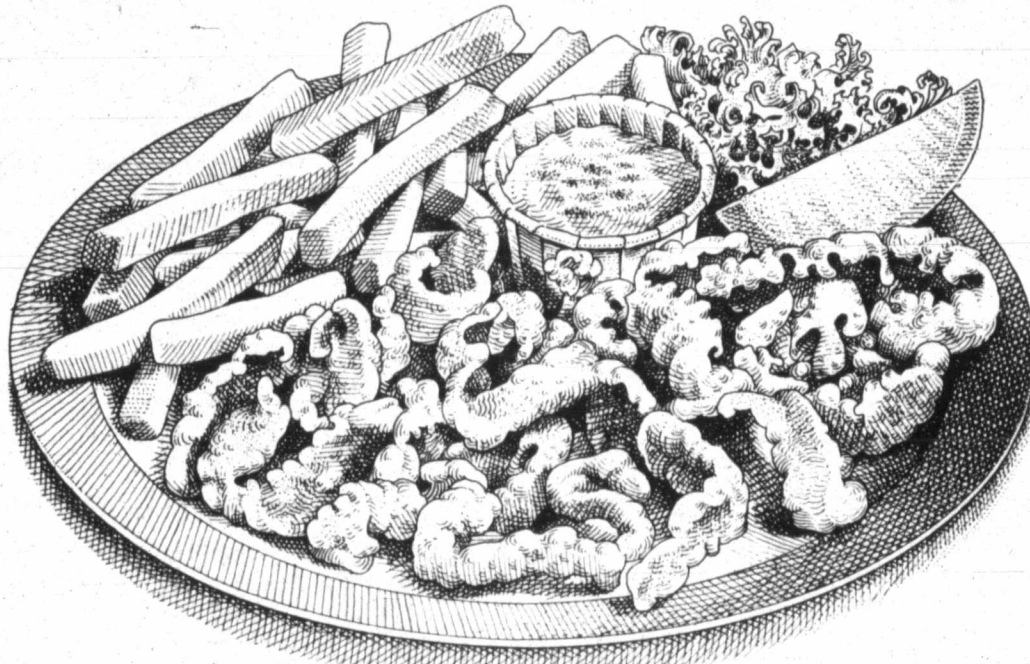

Foreman, an Oklahoma farmer and rancher, said it is essential that sorghum growers be represented in Washington, D.C., as feed grains provisions of the 1981 Farm Bill are written. "Never before, has it been so important for farmers to speak up," Foreman said. "Never before, has it been so necessary for them to combine their voices in unity to reach their common goals. The economic and political mood of the nation demands it."

"GSPA has operated for more than 25 years on a small budget," Foreman continued. "but it has been acclaimed as one of the most successful and effective farm organizations. In 25 years, the organization has added billions of dollars to sorghum farmers' incomes — $250 million last year alone. Every sorghum farmer in the nation has shared in these benefits and the time has come that we must have their support to continue the work."

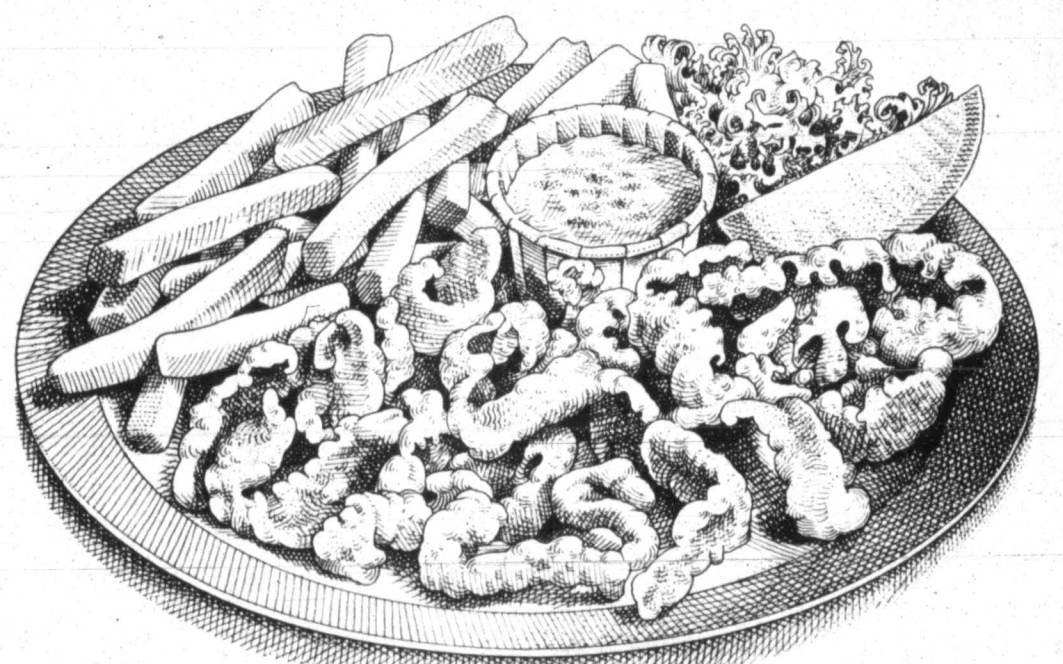

Foreman said every member of Grain Sorghum Producers Association will be asked to contact other sorghum farmers in his community, tell them about GSPA's work and ask them to help him keep it going. The success of GSPA's work is directly related to the participation of farmers.

"We expect this to be a landmark year in farm legislation, especially for feed grains. Export market development may be even more important," Foreman said. "We simply must not let sorghum farmers be ignored because they were not represented."

Inflation sends buyers to secondhand stores

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Bad times are good times for secondhand clothing stores.

"Sales have been increasing steadily for the past two years," said Mollie Haines, who is in charge of public relations for the Washington, D.C., chapter of Goodwill Industries of America.

"Consumers have a need to stretch their buying dollars," Ms. Haines said, adding that the Goodwill Thrift Shops traditionally do well in times of rising prices and high unemployment.

Virginia Knauer, President Reagan's consumer adviser, agreed. "There are some excellent clothing buys" in thrift shops, she said. "I feel this is a shopping alternative — especially if you have a lot of growing children."

There are two basic types of thrift shops — the ones whose merchandise is donated, and the kind which accept goods on consignment, giving the original owner of the clothing a share of the sales price. Many of the thrift shops are operated by charities like Goodwill, the Salvation Army, church groups and local hospitals.

The 167 local members of Goodwill Industries of America operate about 1,000 thrift shops across the country. Arlo Wagner, a spokesman for the organization, said 1980 sales were $143 million, up 14.4 percent from 1979.

By contrast, the Commerce Department said that retail sales of all kinds increased only 7 percent from 1979 to 1980. Major department store and discount chains generally reported sales increases of less than 10 percent for the fiscal year which ended Jan. 31, 1981.

There are eight Goodwill shops in the area around the nation's capital. They sell a wide range of products — someone once even donated a cemetery plot — but Ms.

Haines said that when people think of thrift shops they usually think of clothing.

Inflation not only has boosted business for thrift shops, it also has brought a new type of customer. "At one time there was a type of snob appeal that was working to keep the middle class and upper middle class out of thrift shops," Ms. Haines said. "There was a negative stigma."

Today, she said, buying in a thrift shop is "the mark of the savvy shopper." Ms. Haines estimated that 40 percent of the customers at the Goodwill Thrift Shops might be able to afford the prices in conventional stores, but prefer the secondhand outlets "simply because they are good shoppers."

Mrs. Knauer said that hospital thrift shops often offer particularly attractive bargains. "That's where the doctor's wives drop off their used clothes," she said. "I think a lot of people think this (shopping in thrift outlets) is just for poverty - level families and don't go looking," Mrs. Knauer said. "The more publicity it's given, the more chic it will become."

Col. Raymond Howell of the Salvation Army, which operates about 760 thrift shops around the country, agreed with Ms. Haines. Goodwill that "sales are increasing generally." I said part of the increase due to the fact that "we're charging more," reflecting the overall pattern of inflation, and part is due to increase in used clothing.

BEDWETTER

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

1 cup grated Parmesan cheese

SUPPER FARE

In a large skillet in the hot oil, with a fork crumble the beef and sausage until the beef loses its red color. Stir in the spaghetti sauce, tomato sauce and oregano; heat. Meanwhile, cook the lasagne according to package directions and drain. In a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan or a 14 by 8½ by 2-inch baking dish spread about 1 cup of the sauce, then alternate layers of lasagne, sauce, ricotta, Mozzarella and Parmesan, ending with sauce. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until hot — 40 minutes or so. Let stand about 10 minutes before cutting in squares and removing with a wide spatula. Makes 6 hearty servings.

ORANGE, chocolate and cinnamon flavors are subtly blended in a sauce that lends excitement to pork chops.

Surprise sauce perks up chops

CHICAGO — Now is an especially good time to expand a pork chop recipe file. These versatile chops are priced attractively this spring, especially when featured on sale as they often are.

An orange sauce flavored with chocolate syrup, as unusual as it sounds, makes an appealing accompaniment to braised pork chops. It also goes well with that favorite menu companion — sweet potatoes.

Pork chops, like all pork cuts, are a good source of many nutrients the body needs every day. The protein in pork is especially important because it contains all the essential amino acids that the body needs to build and repair tissues and fight infection and disease.

Pork is also a valuable contributor of some important vitamins and minerals. It is the leading source of the B-vitamin thiamin, containing three times as much as any other food. Thiamin helps the body digest food and release energy. In addition, it promotes normal appetite and is needed for a healthy nervous system. Also found in pork are the B-vitamins riboflavin, niacin, B-6 and B-12 and the minerals iron and zinc.

PORK CHOPS WITH SURPRISE SAUCE

6 pork rib or loin chops, cut ¾ to 1 inch thick
1 tablespoon cooking fat
Salt and pepper
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup water
¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons chocolate flavored syrup
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
Dash cinnamon
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon flour
Orange peel curls, if desired

Brown pork chops in cooking fat in large frying pan. Pour off drippings. Season chops with salt and pepper. Add onion and ¼ cup water, cover tightly and cook slowly 30 minutes. Combine orange juice, chocolate flavored syrup, grated orange peel and cinnamon; add to chops and continue cooking slowly, covered, 15 minutes or until meat is done. Remove chops to a warm platter.

Combine 2 tablespoons water with flour; stir into cooking liquid and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Garnish chops with orange peel curls, if desired. Serve sauce with pork chops. 6 servings.

Sweet potatoes and fresh green beans may be served with the chops, along with a salad of lettuce wedges topped with a favorite dressing. End on a refreshing note with strawberries served with cream.

Dr. Lamb

Pain may be migraine

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 45 years old and for the past 10 years have been having headaches either a few days before, with, or two days after my menstrual cycle. In the past two years they have gotten worse. Before the headache comes, my eyesight seems blurred and I feel my mind is less sharp than usual. The ache starts in the right eye and temple and I have sharp, shooting pains through my head. The blood vessel along my temple feels like it is enlarged and protruding but it looks the same.

The headache lasts from three to four days and I always feel nauseated. The doctor prescribed Valium and Fiorinal. This did kill the pain but I slept for 24 hours straight and was drowsy at least another 12. I can't work and use this medicine. The doctor said it sounded like a hormone imbalance and he might give me birth control pills. But I had my tubes tied to get off birth control pills five years ago and I had these headaches when I was taking the pill. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Ask for a consultation with a neurologist. Proper treatment depends upon the right diagnosis. Your story sounds like migraine headaches (the common type as opposed to the classical type). If that is so you can take other medicines that may be more useful and less disabling. These include ergotamine tartrate and Inderal. Some readers are confused because Inderal is also used for heart conditions but it works very well in some patients for migraine headaches.

The different causes and what can be done for most headaches are discussed in The Health Letter number 16-12, Headaches and What to Do about Them, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you have migraine headaches it is doubtful that birth control pills will help. In fact, in some cases they cause migraine headaches. Finally, you may be pleased to know that migraine headaches tend to decrease or even disappear after the menopause, so you may soon stop having them as often and as severe. There are some advantages to getting older for some people.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read somewhere that a boy can grow faster if he takes a certain vitamin. I can't remember which vitamin it is.

DEAR READER — One of the functions of many vitamins is to be incorporated in various enzymes or co-enzymes needed by your cells to break down food and release food energy. To support optimal growth you do need a balanced diet with an adequate amount of all vitamins and minerals.

Vitamins have other functions as well. Vitamin B-12 is necessary in forming new DNA to form new cells. So it is essential to growth.

Vitamin A was identified early in its history as a growth vitamin. Fats such as butter and egg yolk that contain vitamin A were noted to be associated with good growth while other fats were not.

But if you are getting enough vitamin A in your diet, and it is hard not to if you are on a balanced diet today, taking additional vitamin A will not increase your growth in any way. Taking too much vitamin A can cause toxic reactions including findings resembling brain tumor, so don't experiment and try to take it on your own. Milk and other foods have been enriched with vitamin A already.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Someone once told me there is a patron saint of women's underwear named St. Frederick. I never really believed this.

The person who told me said she used to pray to him all the time to keep her slip from creeping up on her like a venetian blind, and to give her courage when she crossed her legs and saw her pantyhose crotch around her knees.

I still don't know if such a saint exists, but if what I read is true about the garter belt coming back, then I have to take the chance.

Dear St. Frederick: (read with feeling)

As I have said so often, there is no other saint in your line of work so kind, so charitable and so caring. Who can forget how you, in your infinite compassion, gaveth us the one-size-fits-all and taketh away the girdle?

That is why I do not understand why you permit the return of the garter belt. Was it something I said? Did I go too far in my criticism of the pantyhose? Is there no one who wants to sit on the eggs anymore?

I beg not for myself, but for an entire generation of young people who saw Liza Minnelli in "Cabaret" and think garter belts are sexy.

They don't know garter belts as I know them. Without a top hat and starved legs, they're nothing! Garter belts are what happens when you assign a committee to design something to take your mind off your headache. The elastic band that cuts your waist in half supports two dangling marionette supporters that never warm up. They are positioned so that when you turn to reach the supporter in the back, they travel up to your waist. When you reach behind your waist, they fall to your knees.

They make ridges in your legs when you sit on them, and when you stand, sometimes release the very stockings they are supposed to hold up.

I beg you, St. Frederick, to intercede for women everywhere and arrange for an unfortunate accident to occur to garter belts on the comeback trail.

Naturally, we will live with thy will, but when 30 million women stand in front of their mirrors looking at themselves in garter belts, trust me, Freddie, you're going to work a seven-day week!

Dear Abby

Bride won't consummate marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister who has been married since last December, but our marriage has not as yet been consummated.

We spent our wedding night in a very nice motel in Salisbury, N.C., where I thought surely we would consummate our marriage, but she said, "Let's wait a night or two in case I get pregnant. I don't want people counting the days and saying we had premarital intercourse."

She put me off that way for a whole month. Then she said, "Plenty of babies are born in the seventh month — let's wait a little longer."

Abby, after putting up with her stalling for three months, I demanded my rights. She refused to go on the pill and rejected my offer to take all the responsibility of precautions. To this day, she continues to hold me off with one ridiculous excuse after another.

I am growing very impatient. What do you suggest?

GREENSBORO, N.C.

DEAR GREENSBORO: Insist that your reluctant bride see a gynecologist. She is obviously uninformed, frightened and totally unprepared for the physical part of marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My very efficient secretary, who had been with me for 12 years, retired recently.

After I tried several applicants who were brainless, our daughter sent a 26-year-old former college friend of hers to apply for the position. She was personable, qualified and eager to work, so I hired her. In the past months, she has shown promise of developing into a top-notch secretary. Meanwhile, my wife is furious with my daughter for sending this girl to me and she's angry with me for hiring her. The reason: The girl is well-endowed and she always goes braless.

Good secretaries are hard to find, and I mean to keep this one, short of breaking up my home. Her going braless doesn't bother me, and besides, I feel it is her business and nobody else's. What do you think?

NO HANKY-PANKY

DEAR NO HANKY: Tell your wife to run the house and let you run your office. Better a braless secretary than one who's brainless.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman signed NOT OK IN OKLAHOMA, who was sexually harassed on her job.

I am a female law student, currently writing a paper on sexual harassment. Your women readers should know that they do have legal remedies if they experience sexual harassment on their jobs. (Sexual harassment is not only physical abuse, it may also be verbal abuse.)

Sexual harassment can occur when a woman is fired, or forced to leave her job due to the sexual threats or demands of her bosses or co-workers. It can also happen when a woman is demoted and/or blocked from promotions at her place of employment.

The courts have awarded a wide assortment of legal remedies to victims. These have included reinstatement of the job (if the woman was fired), back pay, a promotion, and even the woman's attorney's fees (if she later chooses to hire a lawyer).

Women who have been victims of sexual harassment should go to their local Equal Employment Opportunity Office and file a complaint. They do not need a lawyer. They can do it themselves.

Household Hints

Try painting tea on raw wood for an inexpensive and natural-looking stain; seal it with shellac.

To whip cream more quickly, add a pinch of salt to the cream — this will strengthen the fat cells and make them more elastic, so the cream will stiffen more easily.

To remove tar from hands and feet, simply rub with cooking oil.

To make candles drip-proof, soak them in salt water for a few minutes.

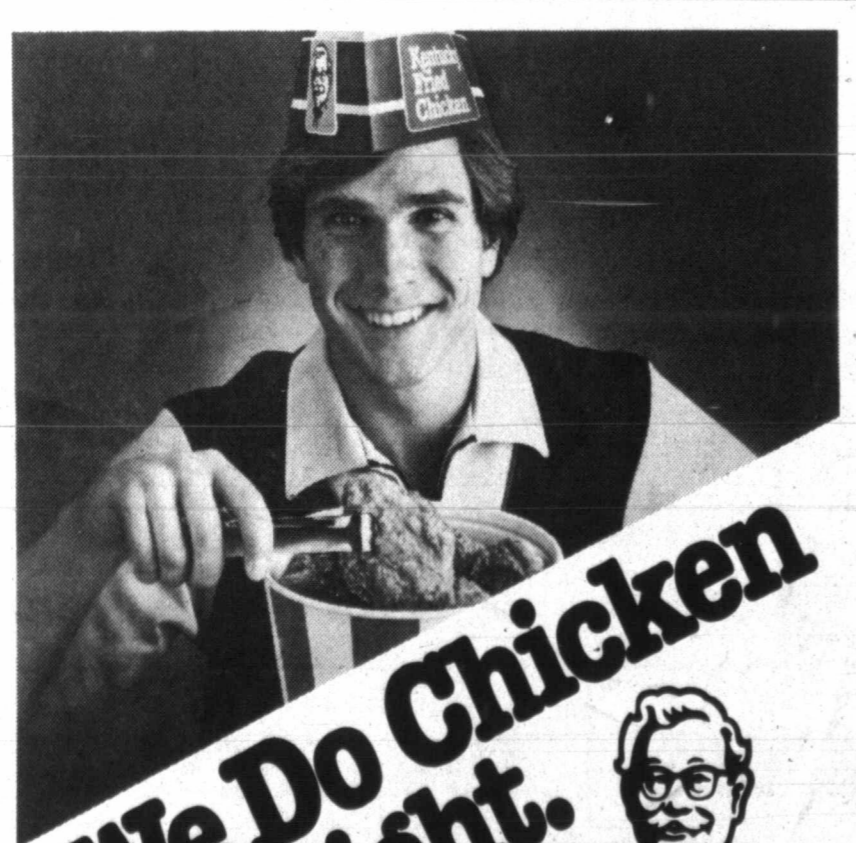

Tomatoes ripen better and more quickly if they are placed in a paper bag out of the sun.

A pinch of salt in the pan before frying will prevent spattering from hot grease.

To prevent mildew from spreading in the house open closet doors and improve ventilation in rooms.

To save energy, have sliding doors well insulated and glazed to attract the sun's rays.

Glossy paint is suitable for the kitchen because it withstands moisture better than flat paint. It can also be washed without damage.

We Do Chicken Right.

No one else does it tender and juicy the Colonel's way.

Check into situations this coming year where money can be made through terms which have mass appeal. There is a possibility you might find something interesting to sell.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sources which usually generate a return for you should be producers again today. Areas where you are betting on the unknown could turn out to be costly. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In partnership involvements today be sure the cohorts you select are equally as strong as you are. Wishywashty types will be more of a hindrance than a help.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Important tasks will be better performed today if you are left to your own devices. Even those who may want to help could unwittingly put obstacles in your path.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Weigh the source carefully today if someone comes to you with a choice piece of gossip. Before repeating it, do a little fact-finding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It would be unwise today to discuss your worth or achievements in front of persons who aren't as capable as you are. Beware of the green-eyed monster.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Adhere to logical and practical methods today in all that you strive to do. Forego hunches. They could lead you down the garden path.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Things should work out to your satisfaction today, provided you don't have unrealistic expectations. Be sensible regarding that which you hope to get.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a possibility today that those you deal with will be willing to do more for you than you will for them. Hold your end.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A lot can be accomplished today, but there is a chance you could let yourself get sidetracked too easily. Keep your eye on the target at all times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends appreciate you because you are frank and forthright, but you must be careful you don't let these qualities desert you today. Avoid subtleties.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) By being persistent in matters important to you materially you'll be able to work them out to your advantage. Don't be timid.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be sincere in commitments or promises today. If you feel there is something with which you can't comply, don't say you'll do it.

Killing of strays....

Horrible indictment of humans

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Every 2.4 seconds in the United States, about as often as an average person takes a breath, a lost or abandoned pet is put to death.

And the occurrence of "Be Kind to Animals Week," which began Sunday and ends Saturday, is unlikely to have any effect on a phenomenon that one expert termed an indictment of human beings. "The problem is horrendous. We're still killing from 12 million to 13 million homeless dogs and cats every year," said Phyllis Wright, director of animal control of the Humane Society of the United States.

"It's somewhat demoralizing and dehumanizing to society as a whole, and particularly to the people whose job it is daily to kill large numbers of dogs and cats," Michael Walters of the American Veterinary Medical Association said. "Loose animals are a major headache for city officials, according to Jay Mizychenko of the International City Management Association. He said that clearing the streets of the animals is not only a costly chore but also an emotional issue that often turns neighbor against neighbor. The bulk of these animals are not strays but pets allowed to run loose, which then end up in animal shelters and are never reclaimed by their owners, said Alan Beck, director of the Center for the Interaction of Animals and Society at the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine in Philadelphia.

"What I'm saying is a horrible indictment against human beings," Beck said. "The myth of the stray dog protects us from facing up to the fact that this country... is very ambivalent about animals and does some very inhumane things."

He said studies in New York, Baltimore and St. Louis indicate that the actual number of strays is so low that it would likely be non-existent if it were not for pets that are abandoned or escape.

Often, when people no longer want a pet, he said, they let it run loose rather than make a positive decision to take it to a shelter or a veterinarian. When the pet disappears, the owner simply says it escaped.

Beck compared the problem to the widespread custom of infanticide in Europe in the 1700s, when people took no overt action to kill a baby, but simply left it outside to die.

Also, he said of the owners of straying pets, "a lot of people leave them loose out of sheer stupidity. They really think the animal prefers it."

A dog prefers to be with the leader of its pack, and in the case of a pet, that leader is the human, Beck explained. The fantasy of freedom to roam is something humans think about, he said, but dogs don't need roaming.

Ms. Wright said the solution is simple: pet owners must control their animals and have them spayed or neutered.

Communities need to establish strong laws to control animals, particularly licensing requirements and inducements to have pets spayed or neutered, she said. And most importantly, people should carefully consider the drawbacks of pet ownership before they add one to the household.

"It is too easy to get a puppy from a pet store or a friend," Ms. Wright said, noting that up to 50 percent of animals handled at shelters are simply turned in by their owners.

TOO MANY STRAYS. A puppy glances mournfully at the photographer from the arms of a humane society volunteer in Tolpeka, Kan. There are about 12 million homeless dogs and cats that must be killed every year, according to Phyllis Wright, director of animal control of the Humane Society of the United States. Although May 3-9 is "Be Kind to Animals Week," it is unlikely to have any effect on the growing problem of strays and the large numbers which must be destroyed.

Another disastrous year for housing business

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Last year was a disaster for the housing industry, and few observers expect this year to be much better.

Some are urging the government to loosen up on the money supply to boost demand for homes, but a leading executive in the lumber industry argues that such an approach would do more harm than good.

John B. Fery, chairman of Boise Cascade Corp., the nation's fourth largest lumber producer, says the problem is not with demand for housing, the problem is that our economic troubles have left most people unable to afford homes.

While conceding the home-building industry will remain slow the rest of this year, Fery says loosening restrictions on the money supply to make more money available for home construction and mortgages would only increase inflation and weaken the economy and dropping interest rates to 13 percent or 14 percent will give Americans plenty of incentive to buy homes again, he contends.

"The difference between a good year and a not-so-good year for us is the economy," Fery says, noting his company's earnings were down 22 percent last year although sales broke the $3 billion level for the first time.

Although Boise Cascade expects new housing construction to remain slack the rest of the year, "we don't think the bloom is off the rose in housing at all," he says.

He expects housing construction to pick up next year and boom through the rest of the decade before slackening.

In the 1990s, there will be "a large inventory of older homes," he says. "We are going to see growth in the repair and remodeling market."

Fery points to Boise Cascade's plans to continue expanding its holdings in building material distribution centers. In 1975, it had 11 wholesale building centers and 32 distribution outlets. Now it has 15 wholesale outlets and 101 building material centers, with expansion mainly in the Sun Belt states and the Pacific Northwest.

"We see these distribution centers meeting increased demand for housing in the 1980s and for remodeling and repairs in the 1990s," he says.

Fery says the sluggish housing market has not been as hard on forest products firms as on homebuilders because North American lumber companies have modern and efficient plants that allow them to compete on the world market.

He predicts exports will rise through the decade, because much of the rest of the world does not have the plants, mills or forests to keep up with demand for building materials. Boise Cascade, for instance, exported almost no plywood in 1974; today it sends about 10 percent of its production abroad.

Astros hold off Cub comeback

CHICAGO (AP) — The Houston Astros used the Chicago Cubs as a stepping stone last year towards their National League West championship by winning 11 games in their 12 meetings.

"We did all right against them last year," said Astro manager Bill Virdon. "But this is another year and just because they're off to a bad start doesn't mean they're going to roll over and play dead."

Virdon was right. Although the Cubs dropped a 5-4 decision Monday for their 16th loss against only three victories, they forced a test of the Houston bullpen and found it wasn't lacking.

"We've got the best bullpen in the league," said Joe Sambito.

"It would have been an awful tough game to lose," said Frank LaCorte.

The two relief aces made sure it wasn't a lost cause, although the Cubs rallied for three runs in the ninth inning before LaCorte and Sambito closed the door.

Jose Cruz hit a three-run homer in the first inning and the Astros added a pair on singles by Alan Ashby and Kiko Garcia in the sixth.

Hector Cruz, Jose's brother, hit a solo homer for the Cubs in the bottom of the sixth and the game stood at 5-1 going into the ninth.

Tim Blackwell opened the Cub ninth by drawing a walk and Ivan DeJesus singled before Steve Dillard doubled both runners home. Scot Thompson drew a walk, and LaCorte took over for Bob Sprowl, who earlier had relieved winner Joaquin Andujar, 1-1.

LaCorte was credited with a strikeout when pinch batter Jerry Morales bunted foul on the third strike. But Bill Buckner drilled a single for his third hit to score Dillard and send Thompson to third with the tying run.

LaCorte stayed around to strike out Steve Henderson, whose nine game hitting streak came to an end, and Sambito came in and fanned Leon Durham to end the game.

The home runs by the Cruz brothers against each other was a baseball rarity and a first for them.

"We did it a few times in the winter league in Puerto Rico," said Jose, "but never in the big leagues. He hit his a lot harder but mine came with two men on. If it did not come with two on we would have been in trouble."

Asked if he was trying to show up his brother with his homer, which sailed over Jose's head in left field and landed on Waveland Avenue, Hector shook his head and said, "He got his with two men on. His made the difference."

The victory was the seventh in the last eight games for the Astros, who got off to a poor 3-13 start.

"If it weren't for our pitching, we could have been 0-15," said Virdon. "We've had good pitching all along. We just weren't getting any hitting. Jose is starting to hit now but he also was struggling at the start."

"I always have admired Billie Jean," she added. "She has done so much for women's sports. When you're an athlete, your life should be private. When something like this happens, all women in sports suffer. People condemn all of us."

Nancy said she was stunned by the recent revelations of Billie Jean King's homosexual affair with a former secretary.

"I always have admired Billie Jean," she added. "She has done so much for women's sports. When you're an athlete, your life should be private. When something like this happens, all women in sports suffer. People condemn all of us."

"Last year, I was undecided whether I wanted to continue in competitive golf or be a housewife," she said. "I didn't practice over the winter. I took two weeks off between tournaments so I could be home more with Tim."

"The result was I finished No. 4 behind Beth Daniel, Donna Caponi and Amy Alcott. You can't imagine the frustration I went through. It was agonizing being No. 4. So Tim and I discussed it. We both decided I should stick to the tour a while longer — and really work at it."

Meanwhile, Tim Melton's sportscasting job took him from Hershey, Pa. to Cincinnati, where the Meltons have established residence. Nancy has played in 13 of the first 16 tournaments this year, winning the rich Colgate-Dinah Shore Classic and going to the front in prize money with $93,646.

She said she would play in perhaps a dozen of the remaining events.

The pleasant, unaffected Tulsa University graduate covered a broad range of issues when she met the New York press Monday at a noon reception hosted by the sponsors of the Ridgewood event.

AL baseball roundup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Lately, when Ron Davis throws baseballs, nobody hits them. And no matter who pitches the ball, Barry Foote seems to hit them...out of the park.

That combination — along with Lou Piniella and rookie pitcher Gene Nelson — bedeviled the California Angels 4-2 Monday night.

Davis tied an American League record with eight consecutive strikeouts and, added to the five batters he struck to conclude a Yankee victory in Oakland Sunday, he struck out 13 of the last 14 men to face him.

Foote, acquired from the Chicago Cubs last week as a fill-in for injured catcher Rick Cerone, hit his fourth homer as a Yankee in the sixth inning after Piniella had homered earlier in the inning to put the Yanks on top 3-2.

Nelson, a 20-year-old rookie who is the youngest player in the majors, won his big league debut with six solid innings.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Baltimore over Minnesota 4-3 in 10 innings; Milwaukee besting Seattle 9-5, and Boston and Kansas City deadlocking 5-5 in a game suspended by curfew after 10 innings.

Orioles 4, Twins 3, 10 innings.
Pinch-hitting specialist Terry Crowley, a lifetime .300 hitter when coming off the bench, singled in the winning run for Baltimore off reliever Doug Corbett. The Orioles have won five of six and snapped a five-game Minnesota winning streak.

"I'd be stupid if I wanted to play every day," said Crowley, 34 and a 10-year veteran. "All I want to do is continue to make this club a pennant-winner."

"I get a chance to be designated hitter and I start at first base every one in a while. This keeps me sharp."

Brewers 9, Mariners 5
Robin Yount had a big night with two homers and four RBI and Gorman Thomas also homered for Milwaukee. Jerry Narron had a three-run shot for Seattle.

Prior to the game, Yount was hitting .210 with five RBI and no homers.

"I've always had good luck in this ballpark," said Yount. "I've always hit well here. I'm just trying to hit it solid. A game like this sure helps. It gave me a lot more confidence than I had before."

"I still need to work on my stroke. I don't feel that it is all that comfortable yet."

Red Sox 5, Royals 5, 10 innings suspended

Boston, which has lost seven in a row, scored in the top of the ninth on Jerry Remy's run-scoring single to go ahead 5-4. But the Royals got a leadoff triple from Ken Phelps and a sacrifice fly by Cesar Geronimo to tie the game, which will be picked up prior to tonight's regularly scheduled contest.

The start of the game was delayed two hours and 16 minutes by rain.

Lopez-Melton plans to be number one again

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It's tough for a young married woman with a rare sports talent to decide how much time to devote to home life and how much to the game.

Nancy Lopez-Melton doesn't duck the issue — she is just leaving it to a higher authority.

"God will tell me when the time comes and I'll know what to do," says the attractive, brown-eyed star of the women's golf tour. "God has given me this talent. I think I should use it as long as I can — and my husband, Tim, agrees."

"Golf has been my life a long time. But I've always dreamed of growing up, getting married and having children. I guess that sounds old-fashioned. My mother and father were old-fashioned. I admit I am old-fashioned."

"When the message comes, there will be a sharp break. Just like that. Right now, my aim is to be No. 1 in women's golf again."

Nancy was already an established star when she married sportscaster Tim Melton, Jan. 6, 1979 on her 22nd birthday. The previous season she had dominated the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour by winning nine tournaments, five in a row, and $189,813 for the No. 1 ranking. She virtually repeated in 1979.

"Last year, I was undecided whether I wanted to continue in competitive golf or be a housewife," she said. "I didn't practice over the winter. I took two weeks off between tournaments so I could be home more with Tim."

Braves down Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Horner slugged three hits and drove in three runs, including the tiebreaker in a three-run eighth inning, as the Atlanta Braves cooled off the St. Louis Cardinals 9-6 Monday night.

Horner doubled home the first run of the eighth to provide the Braves with a 5-4 lead. Atlanta scored two more runs in the inning on Glenn Hubbard's single and then added insurance in the ninth on Chris Chambliss' two-run base hit.

Bob Walk had taken a one-hitter into the seventh before retiring in favor of Larry Bradford, 2-0. Reliever Rick Camp gave up a two-run single by Keith Hernandez in the ninth before getting the last out for his fourth save.

The loss was only the second in the last 13 games for the Cardinals.

Bruce Sutter, 0-1, was the loser.

Field set for bowling classic

The 50-bowler field is complete for the second annual Pampa Merchants Bowling Classic May 16-17 at Harvester Lanes.

Entries are Benny Horton, Buddy Epperson, Dan Carter, Bob Shelton, Leon Harris, Bill Downs, Kevin Davis, Blaine Smythe, Jim Eakin, Tim Hill, Joe Wilson, Lonnie Parsley, Ronnie Parsley, Gordon Taylor, Luis Hernandez, Lonnie Nunley, Rickey Bryan, Howard Musgrave, Darrell Danner, Randy Morris, Forrest Cole, Joe Gallett, Fred O'Hara, Curtis Haynes, Donny Nail, Rick McElliott, Carrol Pettit, David Wortham, Arnel Bryan, Terry Dougherty, Louis Cox, Johnny Snuggs, Nathan Killough, Ralleg Rowland, David Hemphill, Roy Morris, Russell Eakin, Manny Holden, Pete Evans, Roy Don Stephens, Jerry Simpson, Dale Taylor, Mike Butler, Ted Erickson, Lonnie Loter, Alvin Achord, Danny Degner, Robert Jacobs, Ernie Byars, and Rick Pennington.

Qualifying begins at 3 p.m. May 16 while the five-man finals start at the same time Sunday.

It is a scratch tournament.

So far, eight Pampa merchants have contributed to a prize fund for the bowlers during the 10 qualifying rounds of the two-day tournament.

Bowlers who have the high game in each round will receive $17.50, although more money can be won if more merchants give to the prize fund. A bowler who wins one round is not eligible to receive prize money if he wins again.

Ties will be decided by a coin flip or a split of the prize money. If a bowler loses the flip, he will still be eligible to win the pot. Should the bowlers decide to split their winnings, neither would be eligible to win more prize money.

Contributing merchants are Harvester Lanes, Kramer Construction, Playmore Music, Dyer's Bar-B-Que, Texas Pipe and Metal, Gip's Barber Shop, Hilco, and Covalt Home Supply.
