Congress wants to have say

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 members of Congress have signed a letter to President Clinton asking him to seek prior congressional approval before committing U.S. troops to Haiti, its backers disclosed today.

"What unites us is quite simple," said Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo. "We believe the Constitution assigns to the Congress the power and responsibility to decide on the use of military force to replace the government of another country."

Six backers of the proposal representing both parties told a news conference they all opposed the use of force to restore constitutional rule in Haiti.

"I don't think Haiti is worth a single American life," said Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La.

The administration has said the invasion option is "on the table" but that a decision to send troops is probably weeks away.

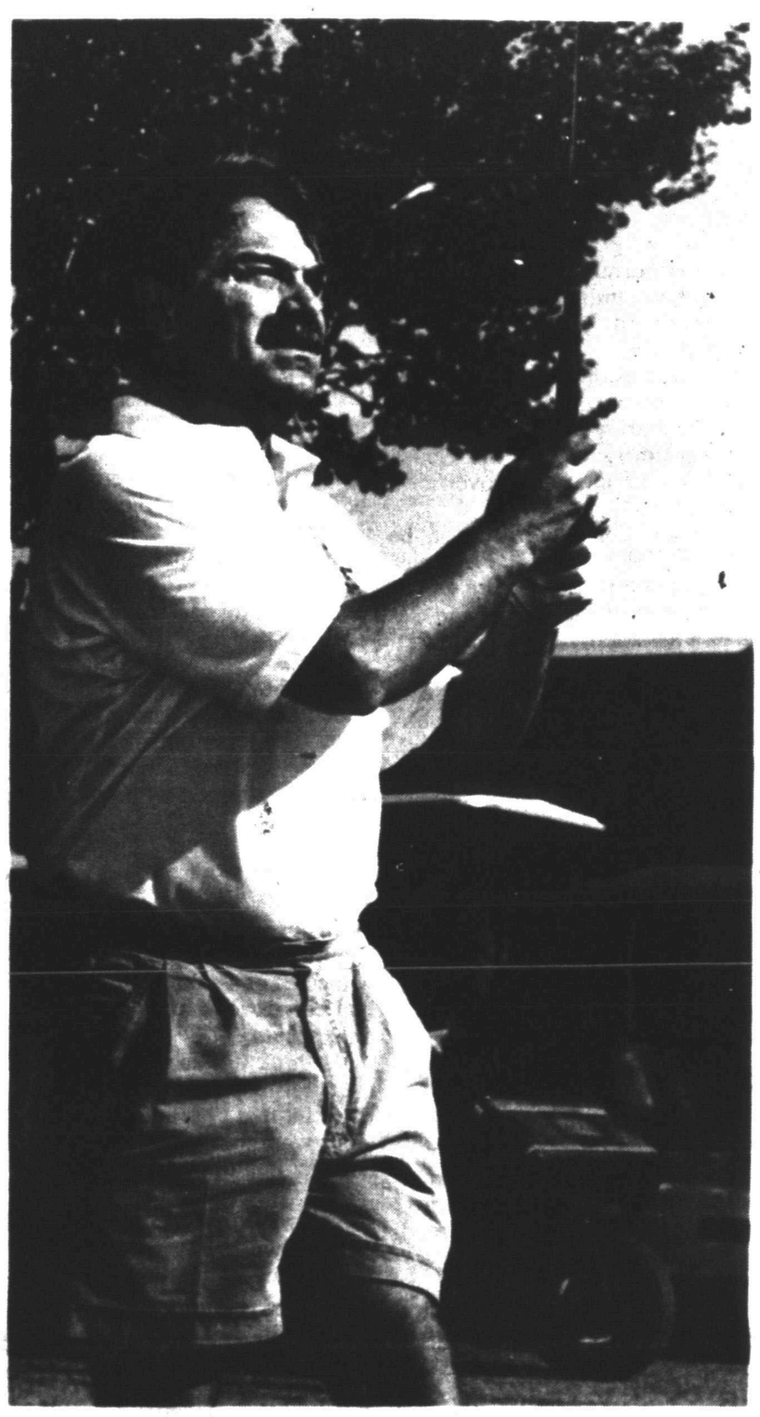
In other business, the DCOS board will consider the purchase of a label printer and associated software. Directors approved purchase of the equipment on April 25, for an estimated $250. Actual cost is $289.

Directors will also consider requests to purchase an answering machine and a proposal to set quarterly meetings.

Also to be considered is a request for a new community facts book.

Following their regular session, board members will meet in executive session to consider land acquisition.



RESOURCEFUL GOLFER — Mike Levens of Snyder demonstrates the wisdom of the popular saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, try again." After teeing off on Wednesday at the first hole of the college golf course and hitting a golf ball into the lake, Levens awarded himself a "mulligan" in the form of a second try moments later. $5,000...

BCD directors whittle budget

Scurry Board of County Development is sending county commissioners a proposed budget for 1995 that cuts expenses by $5,000.

BCD members on Wednesday decided to reduce its budget from $55,475 this year to $50,475 for 1995. In doing so, the board cut $4,000 from economic development projects and $1,000 from travel, promotions and advertising.

Those changes leave $44,500 for projects, $4,000 for travel and promotions, $1,375 for office supplies, $500 for postage and $100 for subscriptions.

The board also approved changes in the current budget, reflecting line-item expenditures. There was no change in the budget amount of $54,475; only the creation of account descriptions.

In other business, the BCD approved $2,000 to help support a project through the Big Country Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Area, Inc. to conduct research using recycled paper in the form of pellets applied to agricultural land. The RC&D has been approved for an Environmental Protection Agency grant for $11,500. The funds will allow continued evaluation of pellet research begun last year. The research is being conducted in Scurry County.

Tabled during the meeting was consideration of a development project for the county airport.

The board also tentatively agreed to set its business meetings on a quarterly basis, and hold other called meetings as needed. Development Corporation of Snyder executive director Doug Hutchinson, who proposed the change, said the board will still meet about once a month, but will handle bills and other routine business items on a less frequent basis.

Following Monday's brief meeting, BCD board members met with a prospective manufacturer of agriculture based products who is anticipating taking advantage of the pellet research being conducted, and who is looking to locate in the Scurry County area.

Present for the meeting were BCD members Mark McCormick, Pete Hester and chairman Max von Roeder, as well as Hutchinson. Board member Tim Riggan was absent.

Stunt show will publicize Cactus & Crude bike tour

By JOHN McMILLAN
SDN Staff Writer

Feats above the ground as well as on the ground will highlight this year's Cactus & Crude West Texas bike tour.

Snyder resident Randy Seaton, vice president of Reef Chemical Co. Inc. in Snyder, is expected to participate in an airplane stunt show from about 10:30 a.m. to 10:45 a.m. Friday at Winston Airfield that will publicize the charity bike-tour. The event is free and open to the general public.

Fina oil company, primary sponsor of the bike race, will provide the pilot for the stunt show, with Seaton as the passenger.

The finish line for this year's Cactus & Crude bike tour will be in front of National Guard Armory on the southern edge of Towle Park. Bicyclists participating in the race are expected to reach the finish line from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday.

This year marks the first time in the six-year history of the tour that Snyder will serve as the host city for the finish line.

In prior years, the "Cactus & Crude" bike tour and race concluded in Post.

The bike tour and race, proceeds from which will benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is scheduled to begin at the Claydesta Center in Midland at 7 a.m. Saturday.

Approximately 120 bicyclists and an additional group of about 130 support-staff members and relatives of the bicyclists are expected to participate in this year's tour.

"It's opening doors for Snyder to help the (town's) economy," said Steve Rich, whose employer, the Snyder-based Nowsco Well Service Inc., plans to provide a free lunch here Sunday for bike tour participants, their families and support staff.

Also as part of the bike-tour-related events here, the music band "The Shades" of Midland-Odessa is scheduled to perform from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at Towle Park. The concert will be free and open to the public.

Legislator, groups call for citizens to make law

AUSTIN (AP) — A state legislator says its time for Texans to take lawmaking into their own hands.

Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, said Wednesday that she will sponsor a bill in the 1995 Legislature that could give Texas voters the powers of initiative and referendum.

Her initiative and referendum measure would allow citizens to propose and approve laws through petitions and elections, and to vote to repeal laws through similar methods, she said.

"Our government is too accustomed to business as usual, where politicians make all the decisions and the voters are stuck with the consequences," Ms. Nelson said.

"Passing initiative and referendum would turn that process around and make government more responsive to the needs of the people they are elected to represent," she said.

While the senator was announcing her proposal, a coalition of citizen groups was going her one better.

The groups, including officials of Ross Perot's United We Stand, the Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers and South Plains Area Residents Taxpayers Action Network (SPARTAN) announced plans for a petition drive to win Texas the rights of initiative, referendum and recall of sitting politicians.

The groups hope to collect 80,000 signatures within the next 90 days to place the question before voters.

Legislative researchers say that 24 states, including California and Florida, already have such laws.

Texans in more than 200 home-rule cities also have the power of initiative and referendum when it comes to local policies and ordinances.

Ms. Nelson's bill, if approved, would offer a constitutional amendment to give Texans a chance to vote on any approved initiative or referendum.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The economy is so bad in California that merchants are having a pre-earthquake sale."

When West Texas temperatures top the century mark, it is always tempting to dress more casually. You may recall back during the administration of Bill Clements, the Texas governor proclaimed short sleeves and no ties as official state attire.

One might think dress in the South Pacific would naturally be casual, but not so on the Marshall Islands, particularly if you want to do official business with the government.

Majuro is located some 2,300 miles southwest of Hawaii. Although standard business footwear is flip flops, and shirts with buttons are considered formal, the president of that government has decreed that all males entering the capital building must wear a tie.

Average temperate is 83 degrees, with humidity averaging 85 percent.

On the Marshall Islands, critics are complaining: only two things are certain. One is taxes, and you have to pay 'em while wearing a tie.

And this guy likely won't be part of O.J.'s defense team.

Lots of aspiring lawyers flunk the state bar exams. Some fail more than once, but a fellow by the name of Thomas Obermeyer in Alaska is heading for the book of records.

Since he began taking Alaska's biannual bar exam 10 years ago, the would-be lawyer is 0-17.

Mr. Obermeyer works as a paralegal in the Anchorage city attorney's office.

He remains philosophical about his failing experiences. "I think there's a book waiting to be written about all of this."

Plane that crashed 28 years ago found

LUBBOCK (AP) — The discovery of an empty airplane deep in Lake Michigan gives clues in the 28-year-old mystery of a Texas man's fate.

Divers Tuesday helped pull the twin-engine Piper Aztec airplane from the bottom of the lake, pried open its door and found no one inside.

"I'm sure they set it down there in the waves and got out of there," said Larry Corbell of Lubbock, son of the man who's been missing since 1966.

On Aug. 27, 1966, the Lubbock-to-Detroit flight vanished, along with Custer C. Corbell, 52; former Lubbock Police Chief Harold F. McInroe, 49; and the pilot, Lubbock businessman Jack L. Goodman, 33.

About a week after the plane was reported missing, McInroe's body washed ashore. But the recent discovery fueled speculation that bodies of Corbell and Goodman would still be aboard.

Seven weeks ago, two Chicago men found the plane while taking sonar images from the bottom of the lake.

Researchers and divers from the Michigan State Police, Coast Guard and University of Michigan searched an area about 14 miles offshore, northwest of New Buffalo, Mich. An underwater robot helped the search.

The craft was found in near-perfect condition in 210 feet of water, indicating that it was set down in the lake, not crashed. However, no bodies were found, indicating that all aboard drowned while attempting to swim ashore.

"This ends it. We're done," said state police Lt. John Behnke on Tuesday. "The divers went down there, and there's no one in it."

"Evidently, they just didn't make it," said Larry Corbell. "It's a relief in a lot of ways because now we know what happened."

Behnke said the National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the ditching. He would not speculate on what happened to the men aboard the craft.

But Corbell said they told him it appeared the plane had been ditched in the lake and those on board tried to swim ashore. Corbell said he was told that many Lake Michigan drowning victims are never found.

"I think we can pretty well put it to rest now," said Corbell. "It would have been nice to be able to [illegible] put flowers out, but bringing the bodies back would have caused a lot more grief. I think this finalizes it."

Morales gets $75,000 campaign donation from casino backer

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston man who has expressed interest in owning a casino has given Attorney General Dan Morales a $75,000 campaign contribution — 15 percent of his total contributions so far this year.

The attorney general's office is in the process of deciding a critical gambling issue.

Morales said Wednesday there is no conflict of interest in accepting the contribution from furniture store owner James McIngvale and his wife.

Any issue decided by his office is "irrelevant to what's going on on the campaign side," Morales said.

McIngvale said in an interview Wednesday with The Dallas Morning News that Morales approached him several months ago and that they met several times to discuss criminal justice issues.

McIngvale, known in Houston as "Mattress Mac" for dressing as a mattress in his TV commercials, said he wants to obtain a license if the Texas Legislature approves casino gambling. But he said he did not discuss gambling in his meetings with Morales.

"It was strictly just criminal justice," McIngvale said.

State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, asked last Dec. 13 for an attorney general's opinion whether permitting slot machines and other gaming in Texas would require a constitutional amendment.

If Morales decides casino gambling is not a constitutional issue, such a measure could be approved by a majority vote in the House and Senate and the governor's signature.

If the Constitution must be amended to provide for casinos, the measure would require a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate, plus approval by voters in a statewide election.

McIngvale said he gave $100,000 to Pat Lykos, a Republican candidate for attorney general, before she lost in April to Don Wittig, a Houston civil district court judge.

Afterward, he said, Morales came to visit him and solicit his support.

"Dan came to see me and I got to know him pretty well," he said.

In the last seven months, Morales also received $2,500 from Larry Meyer, a partner in a proposed casino on the Texas coast, and $500 from the Texas Quarterhorse political action committee, which opposes casinos.

Morales said that as a state legislator from 1985 to 1990, he voted against both pari-mutuel betting and the lottery.

Gambling interests have provided large contributions to other state leaders during the past seven months, according to records maintained by the Morning News.

Lotto Texas

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The ticket was worth an estimated $17 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 4-20-33-38-39-45.

Saturday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $25 million, said spokesman Steve Levine.

Trainer Ben Jones saddled six winners of the Kentucky Derby, a record.

Police chief quits grand jury

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Police Chief Henry Garrett, under fire for accepting an appointment to a Nueces County grand jury that often reviews police work, said he would resign from the panel Wednesday.

Garrett submitted his letter to state District Judge Eric Brown, who on July 7 empaneled Garrett and 23 others for two grand juries. Garrett's jury so far has returned 42 indictments, including one for murder.

Nueces County grand juries typically review many cases that were investigated by the Corpus Christi police.

Critics were concerned that the chief's presence would intimidate witnesses or set the stage for criminal convictions to be overturned on appeal.

"I think it was an opportunity of a lifetime," Garrett said. "I'm regretful that I have to do this. ... I don't want to do anything to slow down or bog the judicial system."

The jury on which Garrett served will continue with 11 people, Brown said. Only nine are needed for a quorum.

Parents' Yearbook Comments Cause Teens to Take Offense

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: "Savannah Parents" wrote to express their disapproval of the X-rated remarks their son's classmates had written in his yearbook, citing wisecracks and offensive comments. I received a variety of reader reactions:

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Savannah Parents," who disapproved of the X-rated comments written in their son's yearbook:

I am a junior in high school and have bought a yearbook each year. I, too, have had classmates write X-rated stuff in my yearbook, but it was meant for my eyes — not my parents'.

What's done has been done, but in the future, I'd let my parents see my yearbook first, then have my classmates sign it.

HEATHER CARNES, GAINESVILLE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I recently graduated from eighth grade, and I can understand how these parents might not have appreciated some of the comments written in their child's yearbook, but the book belongs to their child — not to them. Maybe he wanted to remember his friends the way they were. Perhaps that would include some off-color jokes, but the signatures and comments should be private memories. The parents said the comments ruined the whole yearbook. Well, the comments were not meant for them.

TALIA EPSTEIN

DEAR ABBY: I just got done reading the letter signed "Savannah Parents." They said their son's yearbook was ruined by some off-color language.

A few years ago, there was one particular student who wrote the rudest and grossest comments — covering two whole pages in my yearbook. When my parents saw this, they called the principal, and the boy who wrote that X-rated stuff had to buy me a new yearbook. Now when someone goes to sign my yearbook, I say, "If you are going to say something dirty, save it for your own yearbook!"

MIDDLE SCHOOLER IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: I have a question for "Savannah Parents," who were ticked off at the X-rated comments written in their son's yearbook: Parents, what were you doing looking in your son's yearbook in the first place?

As a teen-age girl, I find it absolutely aggravating that my parents "just have to" look through my yearbook.

If my friends feel like writing X-rated comments in my yearbook, then that's what they'll do! High school is the time for these things ... and you have no business deciding what should be in your son's yearbook. That is for him to decide.

What you call "cursing" wisecracks and off-color jokes are inside jokes and inside teen-age stuff. I am 15 years old, and when I have kids, I'm not going to look in their yearbooks!

LETITIA K. OPSON, SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: President Eisenhower stands in good company with many Americans in his frank and enlightening comments on war.

Gen. Omar Bradley said: "Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about war than we do about peace. We know more about killing than we do about living."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur said of himself: "Could I have but a line a century hence crediting a contribution to the advance of peace, I would gladly yield every honor which has been accorded me in war."

Nurse's ingenuity helps hospital ID mystery patient

CHICAGO (AP) — For weeks, Jane Doe lay comatose in a hospital bed after being hit by a truck. Doctors, police and the media fruitlessly tried to find out who she was.

But for one imaginative nurse, all it took to solve the mystery was a song.

On Tuesday, Loyola University Medical Center nurse Cheryl Wolfinger decided to try singing "The Nifty Fifties," a nursery rhyme that teaches the names of the 50 states. She got a reaction from the heavily sedated patient when Arizona came up.

Wolfinger began naming all the cities she knew in Arizona, and the woman, who has been drifting in and out of a coma since her June 29 accident, responded when Scottsdale was mentioned.

Then a doctor removed a breathing tube and got the victim to mouth a phone number, apparently of her former in-laws.

By Wednesday, they had a name. "She's Peggy Scott," said Jerry Kaelin, a hospital chaplain who spoke to her for a few minutes each day.

The woman, who is in her mid-thirties, was hit by a semi while crossing a street after stepping off a bus. She suffered severe head and internal injuries and broke her left leg.

But police could not identify her. She wore no jewelry, carried no wallet and had no tattoos, scars or birthmarks. Her belongings consisted of an empty, crumpled pack of Marlboro cigarettes, a white book of matches and three pennies.

A fingerprint check came up blank. Dozens of phone calls from people seeking missing loved ones turned up no leads. People, some from neighboring states, who came to room 4811 at the hospital in suburban Maywood also left disappointed.

"This is unusual because her clothes and hygiene lead us to believe she wasn't homeless, and she was young enough so that people would miss her," said Chicago Police Sgt. Bill Kaupert.

Kaelin said a cousin was heading to Chicago to make a positive identification.

The woman remains in critical but stable condition, and hospital officials believe her prognosis is good.

"This has really grabbed the staff," said Kaelin. "Here's somebody who was alone. She not only had the aloneness of a respiration machine and sedation, but no one seemed to care."

As carriers of plague, fleas [illegible] claimed more victims than all the wars ever fought.

Use your big gun wisely

What does the word "punch" mean to you? To a pugilist it is a means to an end: the end of his opponent's resistance. (Why do so many people inflict physical pain on others, human or animal?) An Englishman might think of the humorous Punch magazine, sadly now deceased. One of its former editors, Malcolm Muggeridge, defended his tenure by writing: "Good taste and humor are a contradiction in terms, like a chaste whore." But to a bridge player "punch" is forcing declarer to ruff and, hopefully, to lose trump control — as in today's deal.

After a straightforward auction, West has to choose a lead. Some would misguidedly select the singleton heart. They would argue that partner might have the ace; but it is unlikely on this auction. Or that partner might have the club jack as an entry and either the dummy or declarer hold only a singleton club. But if that is the position, there are only three defensive tricks: the spade ace, the club jack and one heart ruff.

Much more sensible is to lead a top club. And to continue leading clubs. After ruffing the third round, South plays a spade. Suppose West ducks this trick to check South's spade length and wins the next round with his ace. He forces declarer a second time with another club. This leaves both the dummy and South with one spade while West retains two. Whatever South does now, West must score a second trump trick — and his fourth in all — to defeat the contract.

I suppose, if I weren't above that level of humor, I'd add that West had clubbed South to death.

Huddleston descendants plan reunion

Descendants of J.W. and Mollie Huddleston will hold their 50th annual family reunion on Sunday, July 24, in the Baptist Student Center at Western Texas College.

The doors will open at 10 a.m. and lunch will be held 12 o'clock.

Friends and family members are invited to attend.

In 1713, England's Queen Anne ordered French descendants in Nova Scotia to take an oath of allegiance to her government within a year or leave.

Make summer travel fun for kids

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer is the season of the year when families are on the go. Extra hours of daylight make it possible to cram more into every day. And for many families, it's also vacation time.

"Whether you're going for a short ride to the park, a long trip to the beach or cross-country by jet, you need a game plan to make your summer outings more enjoyable for everyone," says Joanne Oppenheim, a child development specialist and president of the Oppenheim Toy Portfolio, a New York-based consumer organization.

Among Oppenheim's travel tips:

Infants: Many babies find the motion of a car soothing. If you're going on a long trip, try to schedule your departures with your baby's regular nap time. Among the travel toys for infants recommended by the Oppenheim Toy Portfolio: Car Seat Gallery (Wimmer-Ferguson, $11.95). A four-way pattern pocket chart that hangs on the back seat of the car. There are 20 different patterns in black-white and primary colors for baby to gaze at.

Toddlers: Familiar comforts from home are important to toddlers. Bring along a favorite huggable, music box and blanket. Among the recommended travel toys: Duplo Happy Time Suitcase (Lego, $19.99). A child-sized suitcase full of 30 chunky building blocks.

Preschool: Bring along a mix of things to be enjoyed on the way and those to be used when the family arrives at its destination. Include toys preschoolers can use by themselves as well as those that call for some "together" times with parents and older siblings.

Ages 5 to 10: Kids at this stage can entertain themselves for longer stretches of time. The trick is packing some of the kids' choices and also having some games that challenge their thinking skills. Among the recommended travel toys: Switchback (Binary Arts, $15). A handheld, self-contained marble game.

The summer issue of the "Oppenheim Toy Portfolio" includes a "basic travel gear checklist" for each age group, plus lists of books, videos and audio tapes; toys for outdoor fun; arts and crafts and family games. The publication, available by subscription, does not accept advertising or entry fees from manufacturers.

For subscription information ($12 a year), write to: Oppenheim Toy Portfolio, 40 E. 9th St., New York, N.Y. 10003.

Second-round 83 puts Lowrance in 4th place

ABILENE — Snyder's Brooke Lowrance turned in an 80 on Wednesday in the second round of play in the Todd Moore Memorial Junior Golf Tournament at Abilene Country Club.

Lowrance carries a 163 total, seven shots off the pace set by Oklahoman Stacy Rambin, into today's third and final round.

Rambin's 80-76--156 is trailed by a 160 on rounds of 83 and 77 by Dumas' Jamie McInturff, and a 79-82--161 from Ashley Huffman of Dallas.

BROOKE LOWRANCE

Lowrance, a three-time District 2-4A medalist for the Lady Tigers, fired a Tuesday 83 on the 6,310-yard layout at Abilene Country Club. The standout SHS golfer was in fourth place when she teed-off this morning at 11:40.

The boys' leader in the tournament is Amarillo's Ty Cox, who posted a Tuesday 76, followed by yesterday's 67 for a 36-hole 138. Enid, Okla. golfer Brooks Ratzlaff and Waco's Matt Naylor shared second after two rounds with identical 141s, and Andrews' Derrick Pursley was fourth at 144.

S'water trips Buffs for crown

SWEETWATER — The Snyder Buffs, led by power-hitting Gene Pollard, forced host Sweetwater to two games Wednesday, before falling in the District Junior Teenage League Baseball Tournament.

Sweetwater, an 18-8 loser in Wednesday's opener, rode a 13-strikeout performance by winning pitcher Kris Warner to a 10-1 victory in the nightcap.

Sweetwater will advance to the state tourney in Brownwood. The Buffs, champions of Snyder's Junior Teenage League, wound up their season with the loss.

Pollard started the Buffs off strong in the first game, ripping a 3-run first-inning homer that drove in Eric Gard, who singled, and Scott Sanders, who walked.

Pollard, the winning pitcher in Game One, finished with three of the team's nine hits, including a fourth-inning double, two walks, three RBI and three runs scored.

The Buffs took advantage of 18 walks issued by Sweetwater pitchers Marty Smith and Scott Rhodes. In addition, Snyder got two runners on the bases after being hit by pitches.

Snyder scored three in the first and four in the second to claim a 7-0 lead before Sweetwater broke on the scoreboard with a single run in the third.

Snyder extended the lead to 11-1 with four more in the fourth. Sweetwater's big inning was the fifth when four runners crossed home plate, cutting the gap to 10-5.

The Buffs exploded for seven seventh-inning runs on singles by Pollard and Matt Melton, walks issued to Tyrel Sterling, John Border and Kevin Lacik, and a sacrifice by Kyle Beck.

Melton wound up the contest with two hits in four at-bats and two walks.

Pollard gave up 12 hits, fanned six and walked just three for he [illegible]

While Sweetwater pitchers had trouble finding the strike zone in the first game, that was not the case in the late contest.

Kris Warner posted 13 Ks while holding Snyder to just two hits.

Snyder took a 2-0 first-inning lead as Eric Gard, who reached on an error, and Sanders, who was hit by a pitch, both tagged home on a double from Pollard.

However, Warner knuckled down and gave up just one more base rap, another double by Pollard in the seventh.

Sweetwater scored three runs in the third to take the lead for good, then rolled for four in the fifth and one each in the sixth and seventh.

Losing pitcher Johnson whiffed eight and was touched for eight hits.

Pollard was once again the Buffs' leading offensive threat, bagging two hits in three tries, and driving in both runs.

Jarod Shelton was Sweetwater's leading hitter in the game, going 2-for-4 with a double and two runs scored.

Aikman content with Switzer

AUSTIN (AP) — The last time Troy Aikman played for Barry Switzer, at the University of Oklahoma, he left the Sooners after Switzer went to a run-oriented attack. He transferred to UCLA, polished his passing skills and eventually was the No. 1 pick in the draft.

Aikman needed no time in Sunday's Blue-White scrimmage of the Dallas Cowboys to remind Switzer of his throwing ability.

On the very first play of the scrimmage, Aikman hit Alvin Harper with a 46-yard pass. A few plays later, the all-pro quarterback found tight end Jay Novacek on a short scoring pass.

TROY AIKMAN

"He's something, isn't he?" Switzer marveled.

Now that they're reunited, Aikman is ready to do all he can for Switzer.

Aikman is at peace with the change that saw Switzer take over from Jimmy Johnson, he says.

"I owe a lot to coach Johnson, but everything will be fine with me and coach Switzer as long as we win," Aikman said. "I think everybody is over the shock of Barry being the coach. He is our head coach now and we accept it. I hope Barry has the answers."

Aikman sees Switzer adopting a role much like the one Johnson had.

"I think coach Switzer can be effective like coach Johnson," Aikman said. "Coach Johnson wasn't a big X and O guy. He let his assistants do that.

"But make no doubt, coach Johnson put his stamp on the team. He got the team motivated. Right now Barry is observing. Eventually, he has to put his stamp on the team. It will be tough on him."

Aikman said not only does Switzer have to learn the players, he has to mesh with the staff.

"These are assistants he inherited and he has to find a way to fit in," Aikman said. "It's tough on a new coach when he can't bring in his own assistants."

"As I get older, I throw less and less in the off-season," Aikman said. "In fact, I didn't throw at all unless we had a mini-camp or quarterback school and I didn't throw that much. My arm feels strong."

Aikman is working with new offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese, who turned the Los Angeles Rams into one of the most potent passing teams in the NFL.

Zampese also tutored Dan Fouts into several 3,000-yard pass years at San Diego.

Aikman said he's curious about Zampese's all-important play calling tempo.

"It got to the point where I knew what play Norv was going to call before he called it," Aikman said. "It's important for me and Ernie to be on the same page."

Aikman said he probably won't play a lot in the Cowboys preseason opener on July 31 against the Minnesota Vikings.

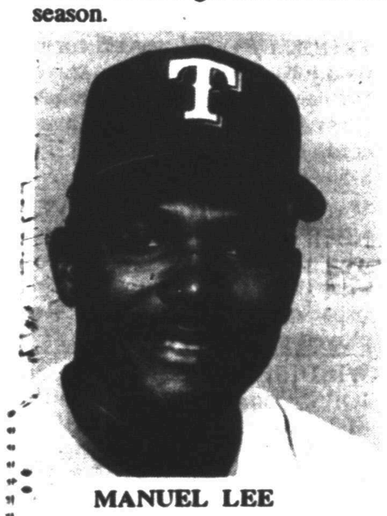
"But I'll be looking forward to our second preseason game so Ernie and I can get things going," Aikman said.

Lee, Gonzalez power Rangers to 13-11 extra-inning victory

CLEVELAND (AP) — Manuel Lee kept looking over his shoulder, fully expecting to be lifted for a pinch-hitter.

The Texas Rangers, however, decided to take their chances with Lee in the ninth inning Wednesday night, and he rewarded them with a three-run homer that forced extra innings in their 13-11 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Juan Gonzalez won it in the 14th inning with a two-run homer off Larry Casian (1-4), Gonzalez's second of the night and 16th of the season.



MANUEL LEE

"I thought they were going to put somebody else in to pinch hit," Lee said. "Will Clark was on the bench, so I was surprised. I said, 'Well, I've got to put the ball in play. I've got to make contact.' I got a pretty good pitch, and I got lucky and hit the ball out of the park."

The home run off Jeff Russell was Lee's first in 321 at bats since last Sept. 3, and only his 18th since coming to the majors in 1985.

Russell, acquired by Cleveland from Boston on July 1 to prevent exactly that sort of thing from happening, blew a save for the fourth time in 18 chances this season. It was his first blown save in three opportunities with Cleveland.

"Long game. Tough loss," said Paul Sorrento, who hit one of the Indians' five home runs. "We're up three runs going into the ninth with our closer, and Jeff's been doing a great job. It's just one of those things. We hit every night. They just out-hit us."

The game lasted five hours and 40 minutes, longest of the year for both teams, and featured 39 hits, 14 pitchers and eight home runs, five of them by the Indians.

The Rangers' 22 hits matched a team record.

"We've shown that we have the ability to come back time and time again," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "I know the league knows that, because we have that type of lineup."

So does Cleveland. Albert Belle, Eddie Murray, Jim Thome, Wayne Kirby and Sorrento homered for the Indians, who have hit 10 home runs in the last two games. Belle, who has appealed his 10-day suspension for using a corked bat last weekend, gave the Indians their biggest lead at 9-4 with his 28th home run in the fourth inning.

The Rangers twice closed within two after that before finally tying it on Lee's homer in the ninth.

Matt Whiteside got the last three outs for his first save.

The loss dropped Cleveland two games behind the White Sox.

Backup QB Salisbury happy in Oilers' camp

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sean Salisbury and Warren Moon traded places — kind of.

They've exchanged lockers. They've exchanged uniforms. The difference is Salisbury is now the backup quarterback for the Houston Oilers and Moon is the starter for the Minnesota Vikings.

But Salisbury isn't complaining.

"If I had to do it all over again, I'd still be here," Salisbury said under the beaming sun at the Oilers training camp. "Change is good sometimes and this change has been very positive for me."

Salisbury was a backup at Minnesota last season for Jim McMahon and when the Vikings traded for Moon, he decided it was time to move on.

"I'm coming to a team that's receptive, has tremendous offense, good coaches and a chance to compete and contribute," Salisbury said.

Salisbury completed 115 of 195 passes and nine touchdown passes with the Vikings last season and was negotiating a return to the Vikings until the Vikings obtained Moon in a trade with the Oilers.

He pondered his options and narrowed his choices to the Oilers and San Diego Chargers.

Now that he's with the Oilers, he sees a role for himself in the new offense that will include tight end and two-back alignments.

"What they're doing with the tight end in the offense is what I've been doing the last few years in Minnesota," he said.

"I feel quite comfortable with what we're doing with the run-and-shoot. When I was in Canada we ran a similar offense. It's just a matter of coupling them together and getting used to it.

"For me, it's just getting used to certain receivers and seeing how they break. Cris Carter does it different from Haywood Jeffires or Ernie Givins," Salisbury said.

Salisbury smiled at the irony of trading teams with Moon.

"We've talked about that when I was up there cleaning out my locker, which is now his locker," Salisbury said.

Salisbury expects to have a good working relationship with Carlson, like him, a frequent backup.

"When you're a backup quarterback, which we've both been, you kind of pull for backups," he said. "You watch them. So I've pulled for Cody to do well and now he's getting that opportunity, I think he richly deserves it."

Astros blank St. Louis 2-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Greg Swindell and John Hudek combined on a five-hitter, and Chris Donnels broke a scoreless tie with an RBI double in the sixth inning as Houston beat St. Louis 2-0 Wednesday.

Swindell (7-6) gave up all five St. Louis hits in eight innings and struck out six before giving way to Hudek. Hudek earned his 16th save in 17 opportunities by pitching a hitless ninth, striking out another Cardinal.

Houston has now won four of its last five games, while St. Louis has lost four of its last five and 13 of last 21 games.

With one out in the sixth, Steve Finley beat out an infield single to short, stole second and came home on Donnels' double down the right field line. Then, with two outs, Donnels tried to score from second on a single to deep third base but was thrown out at home.

The run was the first for the Astros in 16 1-3 innings, dating back to the sixth inning on Monday night.

Bob Tewksbury (10-9), who has lost eight of his last 10 decisions, struck out eight over 6 2-3 innings, while allowing eight hits and both Houston runs.

Houston added the second run in the seventh on an RBI single by rookie Orlando Miller.

Teams cut big name players to get under NFL salary cap

by The Associated Press

The NFL has taken parity to a new high, or low, thanks to the salary cap.

A veritable all-star team could be assembled using the high-priced players set adrift by teams unable to afford them due to the limits of the salary cap.

And the makings of an All-American team is sitting on the sidelines as training camps begin. Many rookies are unhappy with the limited money being offered by cash-strapped clubs.

Take the New Orleans Saints, for instance. They had three All-Pro linebackers last season. Had is the key word, since Vaughn Johnson was cut while in the hospital and Sam Mills and Rickey Jackson are missing. If either or both returns, it'll be for a lot less money than they commanded a year ago.

"The salary cap is squeezing a lot of good people out of the game or down in pay," the Saints' Les Miller said.

On the other side of the issue, there's Heath Shuler, a highly touted quarterback from Tennessee. Had he remained in college, he'd be among the front-runners for the Heisman Trophy this fall. It's looking increasingly like he won't be playing soon, given the distance between his wants and the offer made by the Washington Redskins.

Given this atmosphere, it's not surprising that running back Roger Craig plans to sign with the San Francisco 49ers — so he can then retire.

"I had made up my mind to retire," Craig told the Quad City (Iowa) Times. "I just didn't know how I wanted to announce it. I'm best known as a 49er and I had my best years there, so I've dreamed of going out with the 49ers."

Salary cap constraints and a decision to use part of the rookie pool money on veterans have cut into the 49ers' ability to sign draft choices. Both first-round picks, defensive lineman Bryant Young and fullback William Floyd, remain unsigned. Also unsigned are third-round picks Doug Brien, California's all-time leading kicker, and wide receiver Cory Fleming of Tennessee.

"The last couple of years, the rookies were signed on time and away we went," coach George Seifert said. "But this year the involvement with free agency and the cap, it just hasn't allowed us to operate quite as fast."

In the midst of all this, a note of sanity was injected by Don Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins and the career leader in victories. He is reportedly ready to sign a contract extension through 1996.

Elsewhere around the NFL:

Cowboys

Running back Lincoln Coleman has been told to lose weight and is being fined until he does. Coleman came to camp at 256 pounds and was fined $400. Dallas coach Barry Switzer wants him down to 240, and soon.

Oilers

Former Abilene Cooper linebacker Ray Berry ended his seven-year NFL career by announcing his retirement. Berry's announcement came following Wednesday morning workouts.

Berry, a former All-SWC performer at Baylor, began his pro stint in Minnesota. He was released by the Vikings last season, but was picked up by Seattle. He played the entire 1993-94 campaign with the Seahawks.

Berry was an unrestricted free agent when he signed with the Oilers on Friday.

Broncos

Denver lost two rookie offensive linemen, one to injury and one to early retirement. Kenny Hall dislocated his right shoulder during the afternoon practice, sidelining him indefinitely. Scott Vaughn quit after two days of two-a-days.

Steelers

Gary Anderson, one of the NFL's best kickers, is at odds with Pittsburgh management over — guess what — money. Anderson says he won't report to camp until the Steelers make good on a promise to make him one of the league's best-paid kickers. He wants $4.5 million over four years. The Steelers have responded by bringing free agent Charlie Baumann to training camp.

Lawmaker calls for lawmaking by citizens

AUSTIN (AP) — A state legislator says its time for Texans to take lawmaking into their own hands.

Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, said Wednesday that she will sponsor a bill in the 1995 Legislature that could give Texas voters the powers of initiative and referendum.

Her initiative and referendum measure would allow citizens to propose and approve laws through petitions and elections, and to vote to repeal laws through similar methods, she said.

"Our government is too accustomed to business as usual, where politicians make all the decisions and the voters are stuck with the consequences," Ms. Nelson said.

"Passing initiative and referendum would turn that process around and make government more responsive to the needs of the people they are elected to represent," she said.

Legislative researchers say that 24 states, including California and Florida, already have such laws.

Texans in more than 200 home-rule cities also have the power of initiative and referendum when it comes to local policies and ordinances.

Ms. Nelson's bill, if approved, would offer a constitutional amendment to give Texans a chance to vote on any approved initiative or referendum. Similar legislation died in committee in the 1993 Legislature.

"The power of the people should not be limited to whose name they check at the ballot box on election day," Ms. Nelson said.

While the senator was announcing her proposal, a coalition of citizen groups was going her one better.

The groups, including officials of Ross Perot's United We Stand and the Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers, announced plans for a petition drive to win Texas the rights of initiative, referendum and recall of sitting politicians.

The coalition is seeking 50,000 valid petition signatures to place the question before voters.

'NYPD' Blue tops Emmy nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The gritty police drama "NYPD Blue" collared a leading 26 nominations today for the 46th annual Prime Time Emmy Awards.

The ABC series was nominated as best drama and garnered bids for two stars, David Caruso and Dennis Franz.

CBS earned the leading number of network nominations with 91, followed by ABC with 73 and NBC with 66. HBO received 34 bids and PBS had 25.

Also nominated as best drama were "Law & Order," NBC; "Northern Exposure," CBS; "Picket Fences," CBS; and in an unusual recognition of a syndicated show, "Star Trek: The Next Generation."

Richardson and Academy of Television Arts & Sciences President Richard Frank read the top nominees in a pre-dawn ceremony. When Richardson read the nominees for best comedy actor she began, "Tim Allen, just kidding."

However, Allen's co-star, Patricia Richardson, did snare a bid as outstanding lead actress in a comedy for her role in the show.

Other nominees in that category were Annie Potts in CBS' "Love & War," Helen Hunt in NBC's "Mad About You," Candice Bergen in CBS' "Murphy Brown" and Roseanne in ABC's "Roseanne."

Nominated with "NYPD Blue" stars Caruso and Franz for lead actor in a drama were Peter Falk for ABC's "Columbo," Michael Moriarty for NBC's "Law & Order" and Tom Skerritt for CBS' "Picket Fences."

Besides "NYPD Blue," other shows that racked up numerous nominations include the HBO movie "And the Band Played On," the Bette Midler movie "Gypsy" on CBS, and the series "Seinfeld," "Frasier," and "Picket Fences."

Two PBS miniseries were among the nominees for that category: "Armistead Maupin's Tales of the City" and "Prime Suspect 3" which appeared as part of the "Mystery!" series. Other [illegible] CBS' "[illegible] ing Confederate Widow Tells All," ABC's "Stephen King's The Stand," and NBC's "World War II: When Lions Roared."

Nominees for best television movie were HBO's "And the Band Played On," CBS' "Breathing Lessons," CBS' "Gypsy," ABC's "A Place for Annie" and CBS' "To Dance With the White Dog."

Jay Leno and David Letterman go head-to-head in the outstanding variety, music or comedy series category. Besides "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno," NBC, and "Late Show With David Letterman," CBS, nominees were "Dennis Miller Live" on HBO, "MTV Unplugged" on MTV; and NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

The shows nominated in the category for best variety, music or comedy special were "The 66th Annual Academy Awards," ABC; "Comic Relief VI," HBO; "The Kennedy Center Honors," CBS; "The Tony Awards," CBS; and "Tracey Ullman — Takes on New York," HBO.

A total of 343 nominations were announced.

Voting is done by Academy panels of directors, actors and writers. The awards ceremony will be broadcast Sept. 11 by ABC from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

ABC had an exclusive four-year Emmy broadcast deal but, because of protests from the other networks, agreed to relinquish its hold early. Starting in 1995, the ceremony will rotate annually among the networks.

Technical trophies will be awarded Sept. 10 in a non-televised ceremony.

More than 200 refugees buried in Zaire

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — Two crude crosses cut from a tree branch mark a burial pit filled with more than 200 bodies, among the first refugees to die of disease and starvation in this filthy, teeming camp.

French soldiers gathered dozens of corpses wrapped in reed mats and left on the streets Wednesday night. Cholera claimed its first victims, and doctors predicted one in every 100 refugees would be infected. Others are dying simply of hunger and thirst.

The desperate conditions didn't stop tens of thousands more Hutu refugees from fleeing into Zaire on Wednesday. In the past week, an estimated 1.7 million people have left Rwanda, fearing retribution from victorious Tutsi rebels.

"A lot of these people are going to die," said Dr. Jacques de Milliano, president of Doctors Without Borders, pointing to refugees camped near Goma's airport. "It is one of the biggest catastrophes I have ever faced."

Hutu military leaders are spurring the exodus, while threatening to regroup their forces in Zaire, said Brian Atwood, director of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The Hutu leaders say they are trying to buy arms and ammunition in Zaire, said Atwood, who was sent to assess the situation in Rwanda by President Clinton. He spoke from Nairobi, Kenya, on PBS's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour" and ABC's "Nightline."

As many as 700,000 people are estimated dead in the carnage in Rwanda, he said.

The refugee exodus continued despite assurances from the new government that innocent civilians had nothing to fear from the Tutsi-led rebels who toppled the Hutu government.

Those fleeing are virtually all Hutus, the ethnic majority in Rwanda.

Hutu militias are blamed for orchestrating hundreds of thousands of deaths, mostly of Tutsis, over the past three months.

Triple whammy completes comet's slam of Jupiter

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — A comet train's triple whammy that smashed into the cloud tops of Jupiter may actually be a quadruple hit because the first fragment broke into two parts, an astronomer said today.

Fragment Q2 hit the giant planet on Wednesday, but struck as two pieces only 12 degrees apart, Reta Beede, an astronomer at New Mexico State University told reporters at a news conference at the Goddard Space Center here.

Fragment R slammed into Jupiter 12 hours later, as expected.

"It may actually be a quadruple whammy" because of the two parts of Fragment Q hitting close together, Beede said during the news conference that lasted close to an hour and a half.

The final part of the comet's triple whammy was expected to hit later this morning, but data reflecting the actual proximity of the impact was not expected until as late as Friday morning.

Harold Weaver, an astronomer with the Space Telescope Institute, said 16 comet fragments have hit Jupiter and five remain. However, there could be an additional four fragments.

Eugene Shoemaker, co-discoverer of the comet, said the space particles have a way of "turning off" when they run into dust and particles and can't be reflected in the sunlight.

The triple whammy — three comet fragments hitting close together just 20 hours apart — was expected to create chemical reactions not seen during the single impacts earlier.

Each of the three pieces is only slightly smaller than fragment G, the largest of the comet shards. G exploded with a force estimated at about 6 million megatons of TNT, an explosive power far larger than all of the world's nuclear bombs put together. Impact points of earlier comet hits were still glowing with heat on Wednesday.

"We're really interested in seeing what happens when the fragments land almost on top of each other," said Lucy McFadden, a University of Maryland astronomer. "It could be a real boiling pot."

Steve Maran, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration astronomer, called the triple impact "the greatest one-two-three punch of all time."

McFadden said the three fragments will hit the top of Jupiter's cloud cover so close together that their "footprints," or impact marks, will overlap. She said the resulting circular scars should resemble three of the famed Olympic rings.

Envoys reject Bosnian Serbs' response to peace proposal

GENEVA (AP) — Mindful of the danger of escalating war, international envoys debated today how to punish Serbs for rejecting a proposed partition of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The five authors of the latest peace proposal for Bosnia had insisted on clear-cut approval from the warring factions, but the Serbs said Tuesday that they wanted to change the plan.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev of Russia and their counterparts from Britain, Germany and France will meet by month's end to decide what to do next.

In the meantime, their envoys met today to work on a list of sanctions against the Serbs and rewards for the Muslim-led government, which accepted the map unconditionally.

They presented a united front in Geneva, but there were rumblings from Russia that suggested Moscow might take up the cudgels for the Serbs, its traditional allies.

When the plan was presented two weeks ago, the sponsors warned that if it was not embraced, they might lift the arms embargo against the Bosnian government and its Croat allies, or intervene militarily to force Serb troops to pull back from Muslim areas.

They also threatened to tighten sanctions against the Serbs' patron, Yugoslavia.

The plan's five sponsors said the Serbs had attached too many conditions to a take-it-or-leave-it map.

"We felt the map we proposed did represent a reasonable balance that could then allow us to move towards an overall peace package," U.S. envoy Charles Redman said.

In Tirana, Albania, Defense Secretary William Perry warned that the Serb failure to accept the plan threatened to enlarge Bosnia's war. He confirmed that the ministers will consider tightening the sanctions on Serbia and exempting the Bosnian government from the arms embargo.

Serbs ignited the violence in Bosnia 27 months ago after majority Muslims and Croats voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. More than 200,000 people have been reported killed or missing.

Quick dialing saves child

AUSTIN (AP) — Cornered by fire in his home, 5-year-old Eduardo Jaimes grabbed the family's cordless phone, ran into a bathroom and dialed 911.

His quick thinking saved his life.

Eduardo told operator Reba Manor that he needed help but then hung up. Ms. Manor quickly called the boy back and asked him what kind of help he needed.

He said his house was on fire. She asked him to stay on the line so she could transfer him to the fire department, but he hung up again when Lt. Jim Sides answered the phone.

"You can usually tell when it is a prank because of the tone of the kid's voice," Sides said. "This kid had more of a desperate sound in his voice."

Fire trucks were dispatched at 9:05 a.m. Wednesday, less than a minute after the original call. Firefighters found Eduardo in the bathtub with the shower running, Sides said.

"Had he been there much longer he might not have survived," Sides said.

Cathy Brandewie, Fire Department spokeswoman, said the boy stopped breathing because of smoke inhalation but wasn't burned.

She said the fire, which caused an estimated $25,000 damage, started in the living room on a sofa where, the boy said, he had been playing with matches.

PD warns against purse theft

Noting the theft of two purses from area businesses this week, Snyder Police Department is urging women to make sure they are careful when shopping.

In stores where carts are used, women are cautioned not to leave the purse in the cart unattended, even for a moment.

If you should have your purse stolen, contact the store manager or a clerk as quickly as possible.

Mother is held in beating death

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas woman has been charged with capital murder in the beating death of her 21-month-old daughter, police said.

Longtime police officers characterized the death of Maria Isabel Romero as the most grievous case of child abuse in their memories.

"Kick, punch, slam, shake, belt, you name it," said Lt. Bill Walsh, who heads the child abuse unit. "It is probably the worst case I've ever seen. There was not a part of the kid's body that wasn't damaged."

Police said Cecilia Romero, 19, was charged under a new state law that regards murder of a child younger than age 6 as a capital crime.

Ms. Romero was being held at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on $350,000 bond Wednesday and could not be reached for comment.

According to police reports, Ms. Romero told paramedics who responded to her call for help Sunday night that she had hit the girl with her fists several times because she would not stop crying.

PRAIRIE VIEW (AP) — Prairie View A&M University students want to change a word in the historically black school's Latin motto because it can be translated to mean slavery.

School officials are asking regents to change the motto: "Recercare, Doctrina, Servitium," to the modern translation: "Research, Teaching, Service." A decision is expected this week, The Houston Post reported Wednesday.

Instead of "servitium," the word "officium" has been suggested. The substitute, in Latin, means duty, service or responsibility.

The 118-year-old Prairie View A&M, about 35 miles northwest of Houston, is part of the Texas A&M University System.

Julius W. Becton Jr., who officially steps down from the helm of the school Aug. 31, said students scrutinized "servitium" last semester after he challenged them to take a "hard look" at the school and what it could do better.

They found that the original Latin meaning of servitium is slavery.

Prairie View officials also want regents to change the date on the seal from 1878, the year the school opened, to 1876, the year the school was established by the state constitution.

University system officials have recommended the regents approve both changes.

"I think the students are right, basically, that the word servitium has the strong connotation of slavery," said Thomas Habinek, chairman of the Classics Department at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles. "I have no idea if that's what the people who put together the logo had in mind."

Learning to cope with Crohn's disease

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 46-year-old female recently diagnosed with Crohn's disease. I wasn't told what causes this. It was only suggested that I take Asacol 400 mg four times daily. What's this disease all about?

DEAR READER: Crohn's disease is a chronic inflammation that most commonly affects part of the small intestine, leading to diarrhea, abdominal pain, fever, weight loss, and an abdominal mass. The cause is unknown.

Crohn's disease is associated with intestinal abscesses, occasional obstruction and bleeding. Small bowel tumors may appear. The disorder will also lead to arthritis, eye inflammation, mouth ulcers, rash, and anemia.

Crohn's disease is diagnosed by X-ray and blood tests. There is no specific therapy, although antibiotics and steroids are helpful in treating acute flare-ups.

Asacol (mesalamine) is an anti-inflammatory drug used to combat the chronic inflammation of Crohn's disease; the product must be used cautiously in the presence of kidney disorders.

In my opinion, you should be under the care of a gastroenterologist in order to treat the complications that I mentioned, as well as to monitor for bowel cancer.

For further information, contact the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis, 112 North Hamlin Ave., Park Ridge, IL 60068; 1-800-343-3637.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 23-year-old daughter has been doctoring for allergies and asthma for years. A recent CT scan of her lungs revealed emphysema in a third of one lung. She's never smoked and has been a gymnast all her life. What can you tell us about this condition and her prognosis?

DEAR READER: Despite the protestations of some lung specialists, I believe that asthma can, in some instances, lead to emphysema, a chronic lung disorder marked by destruction of pulmonary tissue, resulting in pockets of stale air ("dead air space") that may compress a normal lung. This can cause breathlessness. This form of emphysema is not related to air pollution or physical activity.

For example, I was not drafted for the Vietnam War because the asthma I had as a youth caused emphysema in one lung. Nonetheless, I continue to engage in strenuous activity, without restrictions.

Therefore, I believe that your daughter's prognosis is excellent, providing her asthma and allergies are controlled by medicine, such as inhaled aerosols. If she continues to have symptoms of asthma (wheezing, coughing and difficulty breathing), her emphysema may progress, perhaps causing later respiratory disability.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Computer reports would be faster

AUSTIN (AP) — Although many of Texas' biggest political operations are eager to file campaign finance information electronically, the state agency in charge of the data will only accept paper reports.

The information is public record. But anyone who wants to see it must travel to Austin, sit in a small room and go through it page by page.

Gov. Ann Richards' current report of contributions and spending runs to 2,922 pages. Republican challenger George W. Bush filed a report last week that fills a big box.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp — who's running for re-election against Republican Teresa Doggett — said last week he was making his reports available on computer disk to anyone who wants them. He challenged other candidates from both parties to do the same.

According to a report Wednesday by the Houston Chronicle, several other candidates are interested in computer filing.

Land Commissioner candidate Marta Greytok keeps her records on computer and is willing to hand the disks over. Garry Mauro, the incumbent in that race, doesn't keep finance records on computer, aides said. But he said he "has no trouble with the concept" of filing by computer.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and his Republican opponent, Tex Lezar of Dallas, said they would be happy to hand over campaign finance records on computer. "That would be a great boon for voters," Lezar said.

Richards would be willing to file by computer if her opponent did the same, said spokeswoman Cindy Rugeley. But Karen Hughes, speaking for Bush, was hesitant.

"George indicated he feels all reports are available to any member of the public or the media," she said. "At this point, we do not intend to file electronically. The information is available, and it's easy to obtain."

Not all of the information would be available anyway, Hughes said. While the Bush campaign keeps contribution information on computer, expenditures are done manually on a typewriter, she said.

Putting the information on computers would make it available statewide to anyone with a computer and a phone line.

It would also speed up the process for specific analyses of candidates' campaign finances, such as how much money they raised out of state, or from political action committees.

And it would ease the chore of comparing one campaign with another, allowing voters and others to follow contributions from a particular individual or group to see which candidates were winning their support.

Information would be available, for example, on which candidates were getting money from casino interests or chiropractors or other groups.

That's possible now, but with most records on paper and microfilm, it's slow. And efforts to computerize the system are stuck — at least temporarily — in a technological bog.

"I feel like half the people want me to speed this up, and half want me to slow it down," said John Steiner, executive director of the Texas Ethics Commission, which collects and keeps campaign records for the state.

Presidential election lackluster six years after dramatic vote

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Honking cars and a masked superhero regularly led tens of thousands of noisy opposition supporters through Mexico City's streets during the 1988 presidential campaign.

But six years later, less than a month before the 1994 election, the streets are strangely quiet. The only impressive street demonstrations have been celebrations of the national soccer team's World Cup triumphs.

"The campaign this time has very little charisma," said Homero Aridjis, a prominent writer and environmental activist. "It's almost boring."

Much of the difference seems to be the economy.

In 1988, people were angry about soaring prices and widespread government layoffs.

"Mexicans in 1988 had expectations, they were angry," Aridjis said. "The campaigns reflected that anger with populist-type demonstrations."

Since then, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has tamed inflation from more than 150 percent to below 8 percent. Hundreds of state enterprises have been sold off and the North American Free Trade Agreement signed.

Although growth has slowed this year, Mexicans are generally content with their country's economy.

"As difficult as things have been over the past year and a half, Mexico is still growing," said M. Delal Baer of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

Political analysts say there is more at stake this time, and that the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) has a greater chance of losing its 65-year grip on power than at any other time in history.

But most Mexicans don't seem to care much, as long as the economy stays in good shape.

They see the two candidates leading in the polls — PRI candidate Ernesto Zedillo and Diego Fernandez de Cevallos of the conservative National Action Party — as economic reformers who will continue Salinas' free-market policies.

Analysts say Zedillo, the front-runner, will be the choice of voters happy with the economy, but who fear political change in a year marked by a violent rebel uprising and the assassination of a presidential candidate.

Fernandez is expected to appeal to voters who are happy with the economy but would like to the throw the ruling party out, analysts say.

"Diego is seen as a bit safer as a protest vote," Baer said.

Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the left-leaning Democratic Revolution Party, who channeled fears about the economy into an impressive opposition coalition in 1988, now frightens voters who fear he would return Mexico to a state-controlled economy.

In 1988, the economic crisis and the election were about the only thing people talked about. Campaign rallies were so large that Mexican media did studies to determine how many people could fit inside the capital's main plaza, the Zocalo. The conclusion: more than 200,000 people.

The main candidates filled the Zocalo many times.

Wearing his wrestler's red leotard and gold trunks, the paunchy superhero known as Super Barrio regularly led tens of thousands of chanting Cardenas marchers through the streets, his cape flying.

The National Action Party's Manual J. Clouthier marshaled considerable support from the economically hard-hit middle- and upper-classes. Supporters of the beefy, white-bearded businessman filled thoroughfares with late-model cars, honking horns and streaming the party's white and blue flags behind.

Salinas, the ruling party's candidate, didn't generate much popular support early on. But he campaigned hard and enjoyed the organization and resources of the party that has ruled Mexico since 1929.

By the time he closed his campaign in the Zocalo, hundreds of thousands of people were cheering him on.

Lisa Moore attends Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville

Lisa Moore, 14, the daughter of Clyde and Melissa Moore of Snyder, recently attended the Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville. Sponsored by the Snyder Lions Club, the camper enjoyed summer camp activities such as horseback riding, swimming and playing sports.

Established in 1949, the special camp has provided more than 43,000 children the opportunity to experience the joys of summer camp.

Children who are visually or hearing impaired or have physical disabilities, ages 7-16, attend. Camp programs are adapted, if necessary, so that everyone may participate. A well-trained staff supervises each camp activity at a ratio of one counselor to two campers.

The Texas Lions Camp is a non-profit organization founded by individuals interested in providing challenging programs for handicapped youths. There is never a fee for campers to attend.

For more information, or if you know of someone who can benefit from these programs, call your local Lions Club or wite to: Texas Lions Camp, P.O. Box 247, Kerrville 78029-0247. The phone number is 512-896-8500.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might rely more heavily on your feelings and intuition than on your logic and practicality. What you perceive intuitively could be erroneous, so move carefully.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might not be moderate, disciplined or prudent today in your social involvements. Guard against overindulgence or displays of behavior that could raise eyebrows.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be very careful you don't do anything that could reflect unfavorably on your honor or reputation. Today's blemishes could be difficult to remove.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't try to defend positions today that are not defensible. You could have everything to lose and nothing to gain by taking a futile stand.

Vitamins may not be cancer-fighters, new study reveals

BOSTON (AP) — A new study of vitamins and cancer casts more doubt on the popular idea that extra doses of the supplements offer a shortcut to good health.

The researchers tested whether people who were at high risk of colon cancer could reduce it by taking so-called antioxidant vitamins, which have been widely touted as a way to prevent malignancy.

They tested 864 men and women who had already been treated for colorectal adenomas, the polyps that precede cancer. Among the 751 who completed follow-up tests, they found no sign that the vitamins — beta carotene and vitamins C and E — stopped the people from getting more of these colon growths.

"A great deal of money is being spent to market the concept that taking additional vitamins will stop cancer. This particular study does not suggest that," said one of the researchers, Dr. John A. Coller of the Lahey Clinic in Burlington, Mass.

The study was published in the New England Journal of Medicine. Last April, the same journal carried a study showing that vitamin E and beta carotene, which is the vegetable form of vitamin A, failed to protect smokers from lung cancer. In fact, that study reached the surprising conclusion that beta carotene was associated with an increased risk of cancer.

Media mixed on morbid ad spots

HOUSTON (AP) — A cherub in black and white, her eyes swollen tight, deadpans her fear of her father's approaching car.

She details for television viewers how she has been punished with cigarette burns and that her parents have left her home alone. It finishes with her saying her father just came back from a local bar.

The last line, an emotional appeal for more adults to volunteer as foster parents, hits the jugular.

"Last night," the little girl tells viewers, "my dad murdered me."

The 60-second television ad for the Austin-based Arrow Project was meant to draw attention.

Arrow Project is a nonprofit organization with 33 employees working out of Houston, Austin, Corpus Christi and the Dallas-Fort Worth area. When state child workers exhaust its roster of foster homes and shelters in which to place children, the overflow goes to private operations like Arrow Project.

Since Arrow Project was launched in February 1992 in Austin, it has channeled 380 youths into foster homes, despite the shortage of foster parents in Texas.

However, reaction by the Houston media is mixed on whether the ad is too provocative.

KIKK-AM radio and KPRC-TV (Channel 2) ran "A Poem for Misty," in recent weeks. KHOU-TV (Channel 11) said it will run the ad, but during hours when children are not likely to be watching. KTRK-TV, Channel 13 said it has declined the ad.

The 30- and 60-second spots are getting the same reception in Houston that they got last month in Austin when the Arrow Project launched its statewide recruitment drive.

In Austin, the ad was turned down by a radio station and one of three television stations.

Some media executives say the ad is morbid, depressing and inappropriate for the very young.

"It was pretty bothersome," said KTRK General Manager Jim Masucci. "We felt it was too traumatic for kids to watch — too scary, too rough."

At KPRC, General Manager Steve Wasserman agreed that the ad is rather "traumatic," but not so much so as to be in "bad taste."

KPRC ran the ad one time during a 6 p.m. broadcast this past week.

4 Snyder teachers attend TCTA conference in Austin

Snyder ISD teachers Molly Kattes, Rita Wolf, Kathy Brooks and Charlotte Clifton were among the 400 members of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association sharpening their leadership skills at TCTA's 1994 Leadership Conference, held July 14-15 in Austin.

They are local officials of the Snyder Classroom Teachers Association. They attended conference training sessions designed to help TCTA leaders refine the skills needed to work for excellence in public education and the teaching profession. TCTA is a professional association representing more than 30,000 classroom teachers throughout Texas.

The conference was held at the Capitol Marriott Hotel in Austin. In addition to leadership training activities, conference events included sessions on effective member representation, local public relations, accessing information, public speaking and communication, and a six-hour preconference seminar on legislative issues. TCTA president Richard Gutierrez of El Paso presided over the gathering.

Former resident selected Fellow by Texas lawyers

Cheril Stevenson Hardy of Fort Worth has been selected as a Fellow of the Texas Bar Association. The election process is by invitation only. Each year only one-third of one percent of the State Bar of Texas membership may be elected as new Fellows.

Hardy is the daughter of Mal and Frances Stevenson of Snyder.

Selection as a Fellow is recognition of a lawyer whose professional, public and private career has demonstrated his or her outstanding dedication to the welfare of the community and state and the traditions of the profession.

The Texas Bar Foundation was organized in 1965 with the goal of furthering programs of legal education and research of mutual significance and benefit to the public and profession by supporting educational and charitable projects within its purposes.

The Foundation is made up of over, 3,900 Fellows, Life Fellows and Sustaining Life Fellows.

Administration helps kill plan to help disabled marry, work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Faye Waxman and Daniel Fiduccia want to marry. But because they are disabled, a twist in federal law keeps them apart.

Until recently, it looked like Congress was about to change the rules to make it easier for the California couple — and other severely disabled Americans — to work and have families without giving up federal health and welfare benefits.

But the Clinton administration intervened to oppose the provisions, saying Waxman's problems are better addressed through comprehensive health care reform than "tinkering" with federal disability programs.

House and Senate negotiators went along with the administration Wednesday, killing the measure to help Waxman and Fiduccia when they agreed to compromise legislation that would make Social Security an independent agency.

The bill now goes to the House and Senate floors for a final vote, and President Clinton is expected to sign it.

"I feel really betrayed by an administration that represented itself to be supportive of the independence, the full participation of disabled women and men," Waxman said.

The 39-year-old reproductive rights specialist has spinal muscular atrophy. She uses an electric wheelchair and a voice-activated computer on her job at the Los Angeles Regional Family Planning Council.

Her salary is low enough that the federal government pays the $36,000 annual costs of two ventilators and the personal attendants she needs to stay alive and go to work.

If she were to marry Fiduccia, a 38-year-old legal affairs consultant in San Jose, Calif., who survived cancer as a child and now has limited mobility, she would lose her health care benefits if he earned more than $256 a month.

But, Fiduccia says, they wouldn't make nearly enough to pay their bills — and without her portable ventilators she would be dead within two days.

Each makes less than $40,000 a year, while their medical bills combined top $50,000. What is left over, he said, wouldn't cover taxes, food, rent and other necessities, and they'd actually be in the hole.

Earlier this year, the House had voted to raise the income threshold, which varies from state to state and case to case, for Waxman and other couples in their situation as part of the Social Security bill.

Busby attends camp

John Busby of Snyder recently participated in an electricity camp sponsored by Southwestern Public Service Company. More than 125 4-H'ers from throughout the Texas South Plains attended the camp June 27-July 1 at Camp Scott Able, near Cloudcroft, N.M.

Students had opportunities to build their own "hands-on" projects. They also participated in demonstations and lectures on basic electricity, safety, wiring and electrical terminology.

County agents and SPS employees served as advisers and instructors.

Medical journal editor subpoenaed

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawyer wants to ask the New England Journal of Medicine's executive editor if the publication of an article was timed to influence the settlement of a breast implant case.

Edward Blizzard, a Houston attorney who represents about 150 women in pending cases against the makers of breast implants, has obtained a subpoena to take the oral deposition of Dr. Marcia Angell, executive editor of the prestigious medical journal.

But Dr. Jerome Kassirer, editor in chief of the journal, told the Houston Chronicle that Blizzard's allegation is baseless.

"It's ridiculous," Kassirer said. "We're in collusion with nobody."

Kassirer also said Ms. Angell had not yet been served with the subpoena.
